TIME! Who and what art thou? Thou seemest to turn this world of ours around day after day, causing to pass before our startled vision, the varied and peculiar scenes seemingly characteristic of this sphere of life! Unfolding the mystic future, and enshrouding in utter darkness the things of the past. We say: "The past has gone, the present is ours, the future belongs to God." We read: "Only remembered by what we have done." If "only remembered by what we have done," how careful we should be as to what we are doing, and may expect to do. An act once committed, is forever a thing of the past. The past contains a faithful record of all our deeds. Some of them may stand before us as ghastly spectres, hideous to behold, covered with the stain of evil, the blackness of sin. Their very presence is that of death. They are but a picture, made of the language of Paul: "To be carnally minded is death." Every wrong act throws the shadow of regret across our pathway; every good act sheds a ray of light and joy. It is both a law of nature and of God, that "Whatsoever a man sows, that shall he also reap." There is no escaping the inevitable result that so surely follows all our labors. The young man that sows "wild oats" can never reap a "tame crop." Any one is foolish to think otherwise. Evil deeds are but briars and thorns, that shall forever prick the conscience, the soul, with sore remorse and painful regret, and gloomy despair in the great hereafter, more so than in the present. The present suggests, advises; the past warns you; the future admonishes you. Every good deed, every kind word, is a gem of priceless value. They are seeds we sow, that in the future, when time shall have lifted the veil from the hidden past, we shall find are living in immortal bloom; flowers of richest hues and sweetest fragrance. We shall look upon them with joy, and great delight. They shall remain to inspire joyous thought, happy meditation.

Jesus asked: "Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?" Can any of us ever expect to reap any benefit from wrong doing? Can a careless, negligent, indifferently living "saint" expect that the reward of the faithful, the righteous, shall be given him? Every field sown with seeds of carelessness, unfaithfulness, negligence of duty, will produce a harvest of sadness, despondency, regret, sorrow and woe; it can not do otherwise. O, ye faithless, careless, prayerless ones, look at your souls, like fields divested of the products of wealth and spiritual fortune, and cry aloud in the anguish of your barrenness,

"O, what shall the harvest be?"

Arise, let your prayer be:

"More purity give me,
More strength to o'er come;
More freedom from earth-stains,
More longings for home;
More fit for the kingdom,
More used would I be;
More blessed and holy,
More, Savior, like thee."

Who is there, the past of whose life is as free from earth-stains as he would desire it was? But this is no reason why we should not strive to improve the time yet allotted to us by the hand of the Infinite. For

"Who shall at the Savior's feet,
Before the awful Judgment seat
Lay down for golden sheaves,
Nothing but leaves! nothing but leaves!"

Solemn thought! Question of great moment! Time hastens us on—and the past we know, be it filled with a strange intermixture of joy and sorrow, pleasure and regret, laughter and madness, smiles and frowns, light and shadow, peace and trouble, happiness and tears.

Turning away from personal matters, and viewing the past as best we may; we discover that it holds in its iron grasp the "rise and fall of nations." The great, the wise, the noble and the true; with all others it has laid in the silent dust. It has spread the veil of gloom and darkness o'er their tombs. They rest together. The king, the emperor, who swayed their scepters of good or evil, of limited liberty or absolute oppression, it has covered with dust—their names, their titles and their glory and favor, are gone—gone forever! We can but exclaim in the language of Bryant:

"Thou unrelenting Past!

Strong are the barriers around thy dark domain,
And fetters, sure and fast,
Hold all that enter thy unbreathing reign.

Far in thy realm withdrawn,
Old empires sit in sullenness and gloom;
And glorious ages gone
Lie deep within the shadow of thy womb.

My spirit yearns to bring
The lost ones back,—yearns with desire intense,
And struggles hard to wring
Thy bolts apart, and pluck thy captives thence.

The past presents to every heart scenes of sorrow. Times when loved ones' pale forms have been laid in the dark and silent grave. When our hearts have been wrung with anguish, our spirits drooped with care and gloom. When we seemed to exclaim in the hour of darkness, with all the power of sadness that death may bring: "My God, my God, hast thou forsaken me!"

And yet we feel that:

Every rainbow seen in cloud,
Every loved form clothed in shroud,
Bespeaks our Father's promises—
To restore all our earthly losses.

And furthermore, we can say in the language of Bryant to the Past:

"Thine for a space are they,
Yet shalt thou yield thy treasures up at last:

Thy gates shall yet give way,
Thy bolts shall fall, inexorable Past!

All shall come back; each tie.
Of pure affection shall be knit again;
Alone shall Evil die,
And Sorrow dwell a prisoner in thy reign."

Happy the day, unto the faithful soul, when God shall throw a ray of light and illumine the darkened past; bring loved ones back again, and disclose, happily for them, their everlasting reward. Sad, dark the day, when their light shall bring to view all the evils of the Past, and the dread penalty shown to be endured by those who have rejected the truth, or proven derelict in duty toward their Divine Master.

CHANGE OF TIME.

To the Saints and Brethren of South Eastern Illinois District:—By request of Elder Thomas W. Smith, and consent of a majority of the district, we have changed the time of holding our next conference from Friday evening before the Third Sunday in August, to Friday evening before the Second Sunday in August, (being one week earlier), to be held at White Cloud School-house in the Brush Creek Branch, to continue over Saturday and Sunday. A general attendance desired. Come prepared to have a good time, and remain over Sunday.

G. H. HILLIARD, District President.

CONFERENCE NOTICE.

A conference of the South Eastern Ohio and West Virginia District will be held in Centerville, Wayne county, W. Va., on the 18th and 19th of August, 1883, beginning at ten a.m. on Saturday, the 18th. Those coming by boat or train will come to Catlettsburg, Kentucky; then take boat or train up the Big Sandy river to mouth of Va. White's Creek, on which creek Centerville is situated.

DIED.

WATERMAN.—At Sacramento, California, of which branch she was a member, at the residence of her daughter, of old age and debility, May 3d, 1883, Sr. Sarah Waterman, aged eighty-three. She was born in Fauquier county, Virginia, in 1800. She rests in peace.

FARRAR.—At Newport, Los Angeles county, California, June 10th, 1883, of hemorrhage of the lungs, Bro. P. J. Farrar. He leaves a wife and five children to mourn his loss. Funeral sermon preached by Elder D. S. Mills.

HODGE.—At the residence of Bro. Charles M. Bootman, Marcellus, Michigan, June 18th, 1883, of consumption of the bowels, Bro. John Hodge, aged 81 years, 5 months; baptized July 4th, 1844, by Elder Rogers. His was an unfaltering faith in the gospel of Christ.

"No more a lonely wanderer, upon this earth to roam,
The Master, moved with pity, has called the wanderer home."

ROUNDY.—At Galland's Grove, Iowa, March 14th, 1883, Sister Annie L., daughter of Ashel and Sarah Roundy. Sister Annie was born at Galland's Grove, April 28th, 1856, and was baptized September 20th, 1880, by Elder M. T. Short. She was universally loved, and a large concourse of friends attended the funeral services, which were conducted by Elders John A. McIntosh and John Hawley, the latter preaching the sermon.

'Twas hard to say Farewell to one
So faithful, kind and true;
But well we know that death can not Long hide her from our view.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

If nothing occurs to prevent, Elder M. R. Scott of Scottsville, Indiana, will be at the Olive Branch, Ripley county, on Saturday, before the first Sunday in August; (August 4th); and thence, by way of Hall's Ridge, to the conference at Union, Jefferson county, Indiana, August 11th.

By card from Bro. R. M. Elvin, Nebraska City, Neb., we learn that Bro. Leslie Waldsmith, son of Bro. J. W. Waldsmith, of Nebraska City, a most estimable young man, fell from a cattle train on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, at Creston, Iowa, and was run over and killed. He was on his way to New York, we presume in charge of cattle, with others, and perhaps lost his footing while attending to his charge, and was killed. He was to be buried from the M. E. Church, July 18th; the Saints and citizens alike sympathizing with the family in their bereavement.

Bro. R. L. Young, aged, sick and infirm, and alone, at Chain Lake Center, Martin county, Minnesota, writes by the hand of another that he is beset by the forces of unbelief every day; and does not know at times whether he is growing better or worse. He longs for some hours of rest and peace, or as he expresses it "a few more comfortable days," while he stays on the earth. "I believe; how can I disbelieve," writes this aged Saint waiting for the quiet and peace of the beyond.

Bro. John C. Foss has been released from acting as presiding elder of the Independence, Missouri, Branch, by expiration of the term of service, and Bro. F. G. Pitt, formerly of Plano Branch, has been chosen to succeed him. During the past three months fifty-five have been added to the branch, twenty one by baptism and thirty-four by vote and letter of removal. Bro. Foss, and E. Curtis attended the Central Missouri District Conference, at which a good feeling prevailed. He had preached at Carrolton, where he had a good audience "Judge, lawyers, doctors and ministers of several churches." Bro. Foss was well received and would visit Armstrong, Kansas. He is now about free to take the general field, so he writes.

Bro. John H. Lake, wrote from Ridgetown, Ontario, July 16th, where he had preached a funeral sermon over the remains of the wife of Bro. George McKensie. Bro. Lake expected to be at Corinth, on the 22d. He baptized one at Chatham on the 13th, a Bro. Robert Tinck. Corinth will be Bro. Lake's address for a few days.

Bishop George A. Blakeslee expects to visit the Massachusetts District Conference, to be held at Providence, R. I., on the first Saturday and Sunday in September.

The whereabouts of James Thomas, formerly of Reese Creek, Gallatin county, Montana. He left Sweet Home, Nodaway county, Missouri, when last heard from, is wanted by James Bamber, Spring Hill, Missouri.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Can a Court of Elders, appointed by branch or district to try a member for charges preferred, proceed with the trial without first notifying the member to appear before them?

Ans.—No; unless notice of the time and place of the meeting of said court, was publicly given at a meeting at which the parties to it were present; or at the time the court was appointed, of which the defendant had notice.

Ques.—Can a court after once specifying the nature of the charges and the sustaining of them, and the member receiving the penalty therefor, then change the charges from what they were originally and make them appear different and entirely new?

Ans.—No. New charges may be preferred, before, or during the trial, if newly discovered; but after verdict can not be urged in the report, or the party subjected except on a new trial, for the new offences.

Ques.—Was Joseph Smith, the Seer, a Master Mason, or Free Mason, as some call it?

Ans.—We are informed that he belonged to the order of Free and accepted Masons, but to what degree he had passed we do not know.

Ques.—Is there any law in the Bible, or Book of Mormon, or any law governing the Church to prohibit the Saints joining the Masons?

Ans.—We know of no specific rule of law, or Church government forbidding those who choose from joining the Masons, or other secret society. But there are some passages that may easily be construed as discouraging such uniting. "Shun the very appearance of evil," is one of them. There is an appearance of evil in all secret or oath bound societies, the order of Masons included. There is in most of secret societies, Masons not excepted, duties imposed that demand the expenditure of time and money, that we think could be employed more advantageously and wisely than so expended. There is nothing good in any of the so-called secret orders, whether beneficiary, or purely social, that is enjoined upon their members by secret promises, or oaths, which is not enjoined in the gospel covenant; for this reason, any Latter Day Saint who takes such oath, or makes such promise, is adding an unnecessary burden to a covenant already as strong as it can be made, both for time and eternity. It is in this sense that the rule of the Church discourages joining any of the secret societies.

Ques.—Has the statement in the Inspired Translation that Cain was called Master Mahan, reference to Master Mason?

Ans.—We do not know that it has; some think so; we can not say.

The citizens of Frankfort, Dakota, made a dinner for certain officials of the Territory and the Dakota Central Railway; said dinner being prepared and served by the women folks of eminence and note of the place. Some gentlemen (?) decided that the guests should be regaled with wine, to which the women folks objected; the men, however, procured the wine in bottles and set them on the table just as dinner was ready. The ladies (God bless them) instantly rebelled. They met at once and resolved unanimously that the wine must be removed, or they would not serve the dinner. The "lords of creation" said. "Let it alone; we'll wait on the table ourselves." To this the ladies responded that they could do so if they liked, but washed their hands of the whole affair, if the wine remained. This brought these meddling gents to terms, and the wine was removed. The ladies then returned to their places and served the dinner, as intended at the first. The names of these brave women deserve to go down in poesy and song for the deed of them that day; read them faint hearted temperance workers and take courage: Mrs. Jacoby, Mrs. Hemingway, Mrs. Durham, Mrs. Smith, Mrs. Kaul, Mrs. Mulford, Mrs. Harvraand, Mrs. Fisher, Mrs. Skinner, Mrs. Foster, Mrs. Walbridge, and Miss Foster. All married women but one, and she deserves an honest, upright, sober man, for her integrity.

The Union Signal from which we take the items of the foregoing account says: "Honor these brave, true-hearted, noble women, who know the danger of looking upon the cup, and putting it to another's lips, and will not do it. Would to God that all women looked upon this danger as these ladies do."

THE test of the efficiency of the Edmunds' bill to cure the polygamic muddle of Utah, is to be made next month. The following will give a idea of the situation as seen by a member of the Commission.

St. Paul, Minn., July 5th. Gov. Ramsey, head of the Utah Commission, who has just returned from Salt Lake, said to a Tribune correspondent to-day, in speaking of the work of the commission: "The election to be held August 6th, is really the test of the whole matter. The election last November of a delegate to Congress didn't touch the hearts of the people, nor especially awaken their interest, but the August polling is for members of the Legislature, Probate Judges, Sheriffs, etc., officers which come directly home to local interests. Sec. 9 of Edmunds' bill, as you will see by reading it, defines the duties of the commission of which I am Chairman, and in two places by its wording evidently contemplates legislative enactments, which, if passed and carried into effect, would render the commission needless. The question is: Will the Legislature pass such laws—will they prohibit polygamists from voting, from sitting upon juries in cases where polygamy is a question in any way at issue—in short, will they enforce the same regulations against polygamy that the Commission are intrusted with carrying? But that the future will have to decide. When it came to a construction of the law as to who constituted polygamous persons the commission were compelled to give the language its broadest sense, and regard as polygamists, and consequently ineligible for registration and the franchise, all who had ever practiced polygamy at all, every one who had lived and cohabited with more than one and an undivorced woman as his wife. If this construction had not been put upon the law when the date for registration arrived the polygamists would have put away all but one wife and appeared with a claim of monogamy. When I left we had received returns from all the polling-places and had appointed judges, three to each precinct, in all the twenty-four counties, or between 500 and 600 in all. The next Legislature must be elected by monogamists, and none of the members can under the law be polygamists under the above construction of the meaning of the word in the Edmunds bill. We have personally been treated very civilly by Gentiles and Mormons, though of course the subject of much criticism, the latter claiming that the law was an intrenchment upon their territorial and personal rights, and that we had not enforced the law properly; and the extremists of the former averring that the law was of no use, not stringent enough. Moderate men say: 'Have patience; let the Territory have a chance by its Legislature to enact the needed laws. If you don't the Mormons will have a real grievance to lay before the liberal minds of the country.' I do not wish to be quoted as giving any opinion in the matter. I merely say that the August election is the important one."

The statement of Col. George L. Godfrey, also of the Commission, as made to a Tribune correspondent, is given below:

There are 160,000 people in Utah to-day," said Col. Godfrey. "Of these 140,000 are Mormons, and only 15,000 Mormons are polygamists. The operation of the Edmunds' bill is confined solely to those who practice polygamy. The professor of the Mormon religion with only one wife does not come within the scope of the law. The work of the Commission has been confined to disfranchising the polygamists. The law provides that every citizen shall be registered before he shall have the right to vote, and if his name does not appear on the register he has no appeal. As female suffrage is one of the institutions, a large number of women—more women, indeed, than men—have been omitted from the registry-lists along with their lords and masters. So far as possible the Commissioners have endeavored to keep the name of every polygamist from appearing on the lists. The Mormons are disposed to interpose every legal obstacle to the enforcement of a law which to them is extremely odious. They have made up ten test cases, which will be submitted to the courts as soon as possible, and the night before I started for the East the writs were served on the Commissioners. While there is no doubt that the courts will affirm the constitutionality of the law, the Mormons will leave no stone unturned to impede its operation. The suppression of polygamy is only a question of time. While the Edmunds' bill may not accomplish all that is claimed for it. I regard it as the entering-wedge which is destined to divide the Mormon Church. The power of naming officials has heretofore rested with the church as a whole, but when the law is enforced so that no polygamist can vote the voting class will determine the candidate, to the exclusion of those who fail to conform to the letter and spirit of the law. This of itself will ultimately break up polygamy. The railroads also accomplish much in this direction. With the railroads opening up the country, thousands of Gentiles pour in who will speedily outnumber the Mormons and get possession of the municipal offices, which are now held by the Mormons. When it becomes apparent that a polygamist can not rise to honor or profit the abridgment of the number of wives will speedily follow. As a people the Mormons are quiet and orderly, and police regulations are lived up to the same as elsewhere. Salt Lake City will compare favorably in this respect with any Eastern city of like population. Contrary to the general impression, licentious practices are not more prevalent than in Gentile communities. There are many wealthy Mormons, especially in Salt Lake City. These for the most part are content with one wife. It is due to the more refined classes to state that among them polygamy is gradually falling into disrepute. Those who till the barren soil of that region compose the poorer class, and among them a plurality of wives is quite common. Numbers of proselytes induced by missionaries to come from Europe arrive on every train. Most of them are ignorant and poverty-stricken. They hunt out the little valleys between the mountains and scratch the unproductive soil with rude implements, eking out a miserable subsistence. Numbers have entered Montana, Wyoming, Idaho, and Arizona, where they follow the course of the streams."

THE correctness of the acts of the Utah Commission is to be tried in the courts on complaints filed in the following cases, taken from a Tribune editorial.

The complaints are very similar in character, and are all in printed forms, with the blanks filled in to suit each individual case. The complaints first set forth the passage of the Edmunds act, the appointment of the Commissioners, their qualification according to the terms of the law, and the adoption by the Board of certain rules governing registration in Utah, and assert that the Board "willfully and maliciously made and published" certain rules, which are quoted in the complaint, including the oath prescribed to be sworn by the person applying for registration. All the rulings of the Commission are embodied in the complaint, from which each plaintiff in the suit makes his special complaint. The brief details of these ten complaints prove rather interesting reading just at this particular juncture:

Jane C. Richards, for instance, alleges that she never has been a bigamist or polygamist, nor a violator of the laws of the United States; was a first wife, and is now a widow; that her husband died Nov. 13, 1860; that he had a second wife who died Sept. 15, 1881.

Mary Ann M. Pratt affirms that she is the widow of Orson Pratt, Sr., and was never a bigamist or polygamist.

Bathsheba W. Smith alleges that she is the widow of George A. Smith; was his first wife, and was innocent of bigamy or polygamy.

Mary W. Musser alleges that she is the first wife of A. Milton Musser, is a taxpayer, etc.

Mildred E. Randall denies any polygamous relations, as also does Jesse J. Murphy of Ogden.

Susan M. Barlow affirms that she has been the only wife of James M. Barlow since two years prior to March 22, 1882, and that her husband has cohabited with no other woman but herself since the date above mentioned.

James M. Barlow alleges that he has not had more than one wife since July, 1862, and has not violated the law on bigamy or polygamy.

Zerubabel Snow affirms that he has not violated the law since 1862, in having married since then while having a wife living.

Ellen C. Clawson says she is the first wife of a person claimed to be a polygamist, with whom she lives and cohabits.

The "nub" of the complaints consists in the demand by each of the complainants that his or her name be placed on the list of qualified voters, and that they be awarded judgment in the sum of one thousand two hundred dollars against the Commissioners and the registration officers named as co-defendants in the several cases.

These ten suits are, of course, test cases, and the Mormons will strain every nerve to have them tried by picked Mormon Juries at the earliest possible date, in order that the benefit of the expected favorable verdict may operate not only to the advantage of these ten complainants, but all who are in the same boat with them, at the August elections. The progress of this attempt to "beat" the Edmunds law will naturally be watched with a considerable degree of interest not only in Utah, but elsewhere.

WE wonder if the Saints will know their own belief. We give a few items below, as stated by Rev. C. T. Phillips, of Stewartsville, in articles now being published from his pen in the Stewartsville, Missouri, Independent.

Their enemies are the American people or the Gentiles. The triumph of Mormonism is the downfall of America. Her reign the subjugation of this continent. These are strange dogmas, but they are believed by these men; who think that it is the duty of the Saints to literally prepare a kingdom for Christ to come to. Nor do they imagine either that it will be very long before he does thus come.

Joe Smith was the king, and is the king to this deluded people. Brigham only carried out what had been born in the brain of Joe Smith. You only need to become acquainted with Brigham's frequent reference to Joseph and his divine power, and his expectations, to be buried in Jackson county, Mo. Read his letter of instructions in regard to his funeral. He instructs how his coffin shall be made, how he should be dressed, how his family should be dressed, how the vault should be made and where it should be built. If he should depart this life in the mountains, "There is] where I want to be buried. But if I should live to get back to the church in Jackson county, Missouri, I want to be buried there." So you can see at a glance, it was Brigham's intention to come back to Missouri, and it was then and is now, the intention of the Mormon church to throw the citizens off their guard, by sending men to Washington to fight for the Edmunds Bill, and advertise all their service as anti-polygamous, until such times as they grow stronger, by shipping Saints from California and Utah, and deluding the ignorant and unlearned into their grasp. The impudence of the fanatic has already shown itself until citizens have told me they are afraid they may have a revelation, as they did under Smith—for they are Smithites still—that all the property of the Gentiles belongs to the Lord, and "the L. D. S. are all that God recognizes" says Joe, and so say his followers.

Again the prophecy of Joseph says: "Go to Missouri, for Independence is Zion, and take it. Go with 500, but if you can't get 500, get 300, &c., finally, go, if you can only get 50 men, purchase the land, if you can, but, if you can not purchase, take it though it cost you blood." So strongly are the Mormons infatuated with their religion, and the divinity of their prophet and his successors, that they think their salvation depends on their continued obedience. Such men are necessarily reckless of all consequences. All their safety consists in their obedience. This bond of obedience to the dictations and revelations of their prophets, is stronger than a link of steel, as closer prison than stone walls, retains them willing captives. The African flies not from his fetish-man; the children of the Orient never fled from their genii; the Roman can not escape the anathema of his priest; the Tartar cowers before the grand Lama; and the equally devoted Mormon shudders and groans, as I can detect when they talk to me, but still he remains faithful. Such is a fair specimen of Mormon fanaticism. That these deluded men are sincere; madly, absolutely sincere, there can be no doubt; but sincerity is not religion, therefore not always right. These men will fight, lie, rob or murder for Mormonism, if commanded, and really believe that they are doing God's service. As a proof of the assertion I refer you to the history of the Nauvoo Legion; organized by Joe Smith in 1840, which included the male saints from sixteen to fifty years of age. The same fanaticisms that characterizes their worship, or their labor, also signalizes their military evolutions. They will as blindly obey as the soldiers of Mohammed. The silk standard of Mormonism of Nauvoo, would be as firmly and furiously sustained as was the silver crescent of Mohammed. They even prayed for the time to come speedily when "the Lord shall arise as a man of war," "the nation and people that will not serve Thee shall perish," and the wicked shall say, "Let us not go up to the battle against Zion, for the inhabitants of Zion are terrible and we can not stand;" "when one shall chase a thousand and two shall put ten thousand to fight." Doc. and Cov., p. 136. This is what they believe and teach and hold themselves in readiness to accomplish. The Lord Jesus Christ said "my weapons are not carnal but spiritual—mighty to pull down the strong holds of sin.

Talk about the credulity of deluded Mormons. If it does not take more credulity to believe that the Saints of the Reorganized Church believe what the foregoing statements contain, we greatly mistake. And the idea that a live minister of the Methodist Church who lives not more than ninety miles from Lamoni, a man of some culture and brain, with good opportunities to inform himself should show himself to be so egregiously ignorant of the truths of our belief is very strange indeed. "None so blind as he who will not see."

What would the Rev. Phillips say, if the Herald should set about giving the faith and belief of the M. E. Church, and should state absurd and unjust things in regard to it? Would he not be justified in saying that the elders of the M. E. Church were themselves the best qualified to state the tenets of that church? We think so; and we think just so of the Latter Day Saints.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

The region round Hamburg, Fremont county, Iowa, was visited by a severe storm July 13th, of which Bro. L. C. Donaldson writes from Riverton:

To-day, a fearful storm of wind and hail passed over our county and did a vast amount of damage to crops. It beat off fruit, broke down the fruit trees and laid the grain crops flat. Crops will be cut short one half. Our little branch is somewhat scattered, but I trust we have some good Saints here yet.

The last advices from Bro. Joseph F. Burton, are:

I am on my way to a new field—am leaving an excellent feeling in the minds of the people generally in this place and vicinity. Quite a number are with us in faith, but not in practice yet. The question of Mormonism is stirring up the people for quite a distance, so I hear. The work is still prospering here.

Bro. Joseph C. Clapp writes from Moscow, Idaho, at a recent date:

All tolerable well, out in this healthy country. I am working very hard to extricate myself, so that I can go into the field again. I have no peace, day or night, "Thrust in thy sickle," is continually sounding in my ears. Love to all Saints.

THE year 1883 will be noted in respect to its disasters to life. See the following:

Nearly 3,000 persons, according to the New York Herald history—and this resume does not include the hundreds of unfortunate events wherein the loss of life was less than three—were sacrificed in the first six months of 1883 to accidents and calamitous occurrences of one kind and another. It has been thus far a year of almost unparalleled cruelty. Accidents have occurred by floods, by fire, by lightning, by explosions, by panic, by landslides, by snowslides, by storms at sea and storms on shore—dire happenings of every description—some in our midst and some in every part of the world. Only well defined happenings will be found in the list, and it must be left for the reader to picture the destruction of and estimate the lives lost by the long-continued floods in the Valleys of the Rhine and Danube, and the Mississippi, the Ohio, and other western rivers in our own country. The first half of the year has been prolific in such floods. It has been prolific, too, in tornadoes, in cyclones, and other of nature's agencies for destruction, from which the aggregate loss of life can scarcely be estimated.

When classified according to the months in which they were reported, the deaths are divided as follows:

| No. of Deaths |       | No. of Deaths. |     |
|---------------|-------|----------------|-----|
| January.....  | 966   | April.....     | 551 |
| February..... | 860   | May.....       | 254 |
| March.....    | 423   | June.....      | 341 |
| Total.....    | 2 895 |                |     |

Correspondence.

LEON, West Virginia,
July 9th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—It will be remembered that I made arrangements to hold a discussion some time ago, with a Rev. Cadle of the Baptists; said by himself, to be second to but one in his church. A few days before the time, he notified me, that he would not discuss with me, for the reason that I had not been preaching the doctrine but a short time; and therefore, he thought if we got the worst of it, the Saints would put in that plea; he therefore desired to meet Bro. L. R. Devore in discussion. So, on the 25th of May, we had the pleasure of seeing Bro. Devore among us. After staying with us a few days, and on four or five occasions presenting to good audiences the glorious things of the gospel restored; and after accepting an invitation to meet the champion in discussion on his return; he took his leave for his mission in Fayette county, where we are informed he had a pleasant time and baptized some. June 20th he returned here, he and I then filling some appointments that I had made in Jackson county. On Saturday night, and Sunday, 23d and 24th, we presented our plea, but after the forenoon services of the 24th the doors were closed against us. On the night of the 25th we each preached in the vicinity of where the discussion was to be held, although at different points. Tuesday the 26th came, and we met the champion Baptist, at Center Point, at nine in the forenoon. Considering it being harvest, there was a good attendance all through the discussion. After arranging the preliminaries, and agreeing to hold the discussion two days, of three sessions, of two hours each, the proposition being, "Resolved: That the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ is the same in faith, organization, practice, and blessings, as the Church organized by Christ." King James translation of the Scriptures the only evidence admitted. Affirmed by Elder L. R. Devore, denied by W. A. Cadle.

Bro. Devore opened with a speech of an hour, showing the prophecies pointing to this latter day work, the foretelling of the apostasy, and the coming forth of the Book of Mormon; bringing abundance of proof, then showing upon what the foundation of the Church is built, (the spirit of revelation), all of which was strongly denied; but the gentleman could bring no proof of any worth against the truths. Bro. Devore called upon the champion to make some reasonable disposal of the stick of Joseph in the hand of Ephraim; which he could not do; he also acknowledged he knew but very little concerning the literal gathering of Israel. Bro. Devore from time to time brought forth the plain declarations of the word of God, showing what the ancient organization consisted of. Showing also that it was intended to always be the same; and, without the officers

God set in the Church, it is not the Church of Christ. He then asked the gentleman to "show the authority for any change" which he of course could not do. Showing also the gifts and blessings that characterized the ancient Church; and that they were to continue, to a time yet in the future, (Eph. 4: 13), and if the gifts and blessings are not in the Church to-day, it is no more the Church of Christ than a human body is perfect minus its members. 1 Cor. 12. Bro. Devore showed also emphatically that baptism is in order to remission of sins, and not because of, as the champion affirmed. One of the grand proofs brought upon this point being Matthew 26: 28, showing that the for in it fills the place as the for in Acts 2: 38; hence, if they were to be baptized because their sins were forgiven, then Christ shed his blood because the sins of all the world were forgiven. And then the champion claimed that the principles of the doctrine of Christ, as enumerated in 6th of Hebrews were dead works; then probably seeing that would work injury to his craft he denied the assertion. After summing up all things our position is not in the least impaired. Some of the Baptist think they gained a victory, but I claim them to be incompetent judges for this reason; some of them would not stay in to hear some of the last speeches of Bro. Devore; and one acknowledged he was to prejudiced to give a just decision. All passed off peaceably. We were treated kindly by the people; we feel to invoke the blessings of God upon them. And this especially upon Bro. John F. Williams and Sr. Williams (his wife) for their untiring efforts to care for the Saints, and others that lodged with them during the discussion. When we went to part at the close, some of the citizens took us by the hand earnestly requesting us to return and preach the gospel to them, which I promised to do on the 7th and 8th of July. Bro. Devore at the close bore testimony in the name of Jesus Christ that he had presented unto them the truth, and that that audience in the day of accounts will witness of that truth. So the time came for me to visit the community in which the discussion was held, and there was many anxious ones out to hear the word, and after presenting the word of life to them on two occasions, bid them good bye; leaving three or four of them almost persuaded to obey the gospel. So after summing up the gains and losses in friends by the discussion it is about this: we lost one that had been friendly, and made several new ones. Bro. Devore's smooth temper and genteel Christian character, during the discussion, has left a lasting impression on the people. The Saints here are trying to live faithfully; may God bless them is my prayer. Remember us of Union Grove Branch, in our scattered and isolated condition.

Yours in the hope of eternal life,
JAMES MOLER.

Dear Herald:—Not until this day, July 10th, was I privileged to read the soul inspiring effusions in Herald for July 7th, of my esteemed friend who wanted to beat the Kirtland Conference, which I would like to examine at length; but will not think of such an intrusion. Let it therefore suffice to say, that it was like an eastern flash, radiant with light, cheering indeed to us (perhaps) benighted westerners. "In honor preferring one another," is a grand maxim. No danger of death by stagnation, suffocation, monotony or "sich," where my friend's voice can be heard. It seems that himself and co-laborers are marching along in a solid phalanx to do the Master's work. Success attend them, and may their most sanguine expectations be realized. I am indeed sorry that I missed his letter, but my loss will be his gain, as publicity of this matter will show that he is wont to affiliate with the illustrious—ahem! which will tend to bring him a prestige he needs, greatly increasing his usefulness, etc. The necessity for obeying the Master's injunction, viz: "If they wont receive you in one city, go to another," has so often occurred, and requests to forward mail disregarded, that my Christian patience has been severely taxed, through the loss, or missing mail matter, in this locality. "Where art thou?" writes my friend. Well, I have just slid down from Como, from an altitude of six to ten thousand feet. So elevated a position is rather repugnant, you know to one whose lamb like disposition yearns for the valley of humiliation; but a good place for those who could thrive on thin air. But as for me, my (valuable) shadow began to diminish with alarming rapidity; and being on the western side of life, good people, etc., and every avenue for preaching thoroughly blockaded, I came to Hutchinson to visit and confer with the few Saints, having serious thoughts of soon setting my face eastward. Please Mr. Herald, say this much to my friend and brother, it will suffice to enable to retain a proper equilibrium till I come, and then—

JAMES CAFFALL.

ROCKWELL CITY,
Calhoun Co., Iowa,

Bro. J. Smith:—It has been some time since I wrote you, either good or bad news, but I like to be standing among the sentinels on the Watch Tower. I now write. But have not a great deal of flourish, simply that I only ride a low horse; and this may be the reason why I am not so attractive as some others; hence can not report at the present time packed houses and many near the door of the Kingdom.

I came here by invitation, to do some preaching and to stay the summer. On the first Sunday in July I preached in the house of Bro. Joseph Knox, school being held there, the room was supplied with seats. Some of the neighbors came in to hear, good attention was paid. The theme was the Gospel of the Kingdom of God. Bro. Knox came home on the 3rd, and on the 5th, I baptized two in the waters of Twin Lake, two miles north, where there is much water, one man and a young lady, the daughter of Bro. Joseph Knox Jr. The holy spirit was present on the bank of that Lake, and there must have been joy in Heaven. In the evening we had confirmation meeting and quite a number were present. I preached a discourse of an hour's length, with excellent liberty of the Spirit.

We had sacrament Meeting on Sunday last, and Saints' Meeting. Bro. Knox and myself blessed three children, the Spirit being with us strengthening the hope of the Saints, of which they greatly stood in need.

We shall try to preach the Gospel in this vicinity while I am here. There are some more here who are believing. There are some people living five miles south of this place, friends to me, whom I shall visit, as soon as I can. My health is good. I am stopping with Mr John Haller. They are as kind to me as Saints ever were, and make me feel at home—they will come by and by.

I believe as long as I live humble and continue faithful, the Lord will raise up friends for me. My whole trip from Adelphi, Polk Co., cost me 15cts., to this place, one hundred and twenty miles. This is the good this little pony does. The last day I came forty five miles. I stopped with a man by the name of Stockwell. He found out that I was a preacher; before I started off in the morning, he wanted me to preach in his house; I told him I had no time, but he would not let me off, so I preached to him and his, for an hour—my bill was paid, when I came to settle with him. I have sent him three Heralds—They were very fine people. The Saints claim that they are in the Galland's Grove district. There are Saints living twelve miles from here, west, Clear Creek, I think.

Some of the crops are short. The best corn is about three feet high. Oats and wheat are good. This country is settling up very fast. The soil is rich, but somewhat too flat for wet weather; but by draining it can be made profitable.

I shall see you again one of these days. Tell the Saints to build that church, and large enough to hold at least one thousand people; for there is where the Lord will give a blessing—the greatest blessing the Church has had yet.

Yours,
N. STAMM.

Bro. Joseph and Dear Saints:—I have just returned from a little visit to Palo Alto county. Bro. Ford and wife were baptized by Bro. W. W. Whiting at Rush Lake. It is my most earnest prayer that more will obey the truth. A very pleasant time was enjoyed while there. Got acquainted with the people there. Five from our branch went up last Saturday, Bro. Ford met us at the station with a hearty shake of the hand, and his kind hearted wife gladly received us. Elder Whiting did not get there until ten o'clock Saturday night. He missed the train at Rolf. The reason of his delay was he had a sick boy at home, but the boy was better before he left. He has been well paid for his trip up there. Bro. Reed and wife and myself witnessed and felt God's Spirit poured out in great power in confirming Bro. Ford. I feel to rejoice that two more have obeyed the gospel of Christ; for it is the "power of God unto salvation." Elder Carrol and wife, and Elder E. C. Brown visited the Saints in these parts. The Saints are all well I believe. Desire an interest in your prayers.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., July 14th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I have just got home from Montserrat, where I preached twice with very good liberty and to some effect, as exhibited next day by it being favorably spoken of by the people there; declaring as they did, that they could find no fault with the consistency of our doctrine. The Congregational minister refused to debate the biblical constitution of our faith from a purely Bible standpoint, though he had said we could not prove our doctrine from the Bible.

To the Church of Christ in bonds,

CLARENCE ST. CLAIR.

LEWISTOWN, Illinois.

Dear Herald:—I am somewhat amused, not at my own smartness, for I claim no great amount of that article, but at the seeming earnestness of some so apt to see a mote in a brother's eye and not to discover anything, even the smallest speck, in theirs. Now, in all candor I must say, that when I wrote the article on cyclones, I wrote just what Bro. Stafford believed, and had not the remotest idea that any one held the same views. I find truly that some do not, and they do not hesitate to say so. Well, now, that is as it should be. But to be called a disputer when I fail to see wherein I have been one, is something out of place. The parties taking issue with the article are the disputers. If the article was not worth anything, as a thought, it should not have been noticed (let alone). But no. Both the Herald and the brother are taken to task for its appearance in the Herald. Bro. Stafford always thought he had a right to give his views of any thing within his legitimate sphere without asking permission. Two brothers, Preator and B Alden seem to think I am censurable for the ideas in the cyclone article, but fail to show me where I am wrong. There is a passage of Scripture somewhere that says a woe on those who watch for iniquity and make a man an offender for a word. I would not be of that class if I could help it. I am still of the opinion that Satan is the "Prince and power of the air." If he is a prince it must be of darkness; and if his power is in the air, it must be for no good, for no man ever knew a good deed perpetrated by Satan. I still claim that he was the power on the sea of Galilee in the case of the storm which Jesus rebuked; for it could not be that Christ would frustrate the works of his Father. Also the woman healed, called the daughter of Abraham, afflicted of Satan eighteen years. For Jesus says so. Who says he was mistaken.

Again. Scripture tells me, He (Christ) came to destroy the works of Satan. So he has been working, and if so, what kind of work. We know that God is love; never denied it. But to say that God is the author of crime of every kind, and disasters by sea and land would curtail a vast deal of his love as far as I am concerned. Who prompts two men to draw revolvers and shoot each other to destroy life? Who inspires men to waylay innocent men to kill them, either from malice or for plunder? Who inspires men to use dynamite for the destruction of life and property? Not God, surely. And when you quote Scripture to prove that God sends evil upon a city you want to specify the evil. When God rained fire down upon Sodom and Gomorrah, that was an evil, but not a sin. It is sin to murder. And Christ said that Satan was a murderer. So with judgments past and future. When God metes them out there will be no sin in the evil he visits upon them. But to lie, cheat, steal, murder, and all such is sin, and is the work of the devil, whether God knows it by telegraphy or not. I do not say, never did, that God could not do so and so. He is able to do any thing that he may see fit to do. He is also a providential God. But providence never implied destruction. We know that God sends, or lays his chastening hand upon his people for their good, and good for us will it be if we bear up under the chastening; otherwise we are bastards. It seems silly to ask who drowned the Egyptians; and such things as that. Neither does it cover the ground to say that we must not mix with the old deceiver, or Mother of Harlots. The Mother of Harlots teaches expressly that God is the author of all these things. So that Bro. Stafford is not in the same boat with them, but Bro. B. Alden is, inasmuch as he claims these to be judgments and God to be the author. Brethren must hunt up better proof than has been used so far. I would gladly let this job out, but felt impelled to it from a sense of right to myself.

One brother asks me "If God is not everywhere present?" I answer No, (No). And am ready to qualify. He is not in a gambling den, or a rumseller's domicile. He is not in the heart of a murderer. He is not present where intoxicating drinks are manufactured. But he is everywhere present as he sees fit to be. If he forbids you and me to gamble, he certainly would not be found at it. If he forbids you and me to drink, to swear, to lie, cheat or steal, he certainly is not to be found in company with those who do such things. It is God's spirit that is said to be present every-where. But we read that that spirit will not dwell in unholy temples. So you must see it is absent in such cases, and of course can not be present while absent. In conclusion I will say to the brethren, that I am neither raw, nor a new beginner; that I am amenable to the Church for all false doctrine, and shall obey the behests of my superiors in righteousness as long as God lets me live.

Love to all,

T. F. STAFFORD.

COLLINS, Iowa, July 15th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—We are alone here in the gospel, my wife, my brother, and I. It is my desire to do all the good I can. I have belonged to the glorious truth fifteen years and have learned some things by experience. The Lord has blessed me many times and still continues to bless me according to my faithfulness. I feel to say to the Saints, Study the Book of Covenants that they may not be led astray. We have some trials here with the enemies of the truth, but it is nothing more than we can expect. We get to Edenville about once a month, and we esteem it a great privilege. Truly it has been said, "In the world we have tribulation, but in Him we have peace."

Your brother in the gospel,

W. C. HIBY.

GREENVILLE, Pa., July 8th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—We are thankful for, and rejoice in the good news from the different parts of the vineyard which you bring to us each week, and we are encouraged to renewed efforts to "fight the good fight of faith." I do not think we can sufficiently estimate the vast amount of good which your issue as a weekly brings to the Saints, especially to those who, like we, have not the pleasure and blessings of Saints' meeting. Eternity alone will reveal it. May the kind Father continue to bless the efforts of his servants who are striving to make you instructive, and a comfort to his people.

I felt like exclaiming, "Well done, Bro. Robinson!" When I read aloud to my family this morning, among others, Bro. J. A. Robinson's letter from Decatur. It is refreshing to see the energy he manifests; and we are much edified and encouraged in reading his letters. It seems as if he has taken considerable of the "fire" from the Kirtland Conference out with him in his busy life. How is it, Bro. R.?

We have the deepest sympathy for Bro. Elvin in his controversy with Rev. Luse. If both were strangers to me, and I must judge alone from the writings of each, I should say Bro. Elvin is the Christian. Rev. Luse, from his letter, does not appear to be a gentleman, much less a Christian. But that is not so much to be wondered at. Men claiming to be Christian ministers seem to lay aside that character in argument with the Latter Day Saints, and use language and actions, such as they would not use towards the vilest criminal. Well, kindred spirits did the same in the days of the Savior and his Apostle. Ministers of the popular sects opposed them in every underhand way. "Say we not well of thee, thou hast a devil." "He casteth out devils by Beelzebub the Prince of Devils," etc. Accusing them falsely, and hiring witnesses to swear falsely against them. Any one acquainted personally with Bro. Elvin needs not to be told that he would not willfully misrepresent any one, or that he is not a consistent follower of Christ our Lord; but, "A prophet is not without honor save in his own country," etc., and when among those who hate the gospel of Christ, the saying increases from ten to a hundred fold in meaning, according to the degree of darkened intelligence and prejudice existing. No one who heard Bro. Elvin's testimony at the Kirtland Conference, and felt the spirit accompanying it, could doubt his sincerity, or earnestness and truthfulness; Rev. Luse to the contrary notwithstanding. A comparison of the spirit in which the letter of Bro. Elvin, in Herald for June 9th, and this one of Rev. Luse is written, will quickly enable one to decide which would be most likely to tell the solid truth, and which prevaricate. If all of that "baker's dozen" of lies" attributed to Bro. Elvin by Rev. Luse are like the two samples he gives us, he has woefully failed to make out a case, to my mind, notwithstanding all his bluster. Mere numbers does not manifest a healthy growth. There is a congregation here of the same denomination, as I understand that Rev. Luse formerly represented, the M. E., numbering between four and five hundred, who have members in good standing, regular attendants, and yet have never spoken to or noticed each other, except perhaps a nod of the head as a "good morning" in the church; outside the church they have no association with each other, yet all perfectly respectable in character. This has been going on for years; yet they have added to their membership every year, and I suppose Rev. Luse would call this "a healthy growth." I would not. In comparing the increase in membership of the M. E. Church and the Saints, Rev. Luse forgets to consider the vast difference in the positions each occupies. The M. E. Church is one of the most popular churches in the United States; (and I doubt not that congregation has increased by members received by letter from other churches and not actual converts there); while the Latter Day Saints, just the opposite, is one of the most unpopular; and when computing the growth of each this should be considered. There are several other points to notice, but my letter is already too long, but as I do not trouble you often, I trust I may be indulged this once.

We commend Sister Snow's article in this week's issue, entitled "Unconscious Influences," to a second and third reading; it will well repay memorizing, to those who have families especially. As many of your readers know, I was one of those privileged to attend the Conference at Kirtland, in company with wife and children; and we shall never forget it. To self and wife it seemed indeed a new beginning; and the renewing of the Spirit we received has cheered us since in the trials and discouragements incident to this life, while to our children, the three eldest especially, it has been a great blessing and they stoutly maintain the cause of the Saints, and wish we lived where there is a branch of the Church, so they could attend. I trust we may again be privileged a year from next April, to meet in the hallowed walls of the Kirtland Temple, and share in the blessings of God's people there.

Faithfully yours,

W. H. GARRETT.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—Our conference has closed and I for one feel benefitted by the assembling of ourselves together. We had a very good time considering all things. Our worthy brother A. J. Cato delivered some able discourses, and baptized one, Bro. Skinner's wife, at the close. Bro. H. L. Thompson has baptized one since, with a fair prospect of others uniting soon. We learn that Bro. H. C. Smith is on his way back here. We would be very thankful to see him make his appearance. We were sorry indeed when we heard Bro. W. T. Bozarth was not coming on this mission, as he was the one that first organized a branch here; we would gladly welcome him. Bro. Bays is also highly spoken of, both in and out of the Church; I think he would do a great deal of good if sent on this mission. The Herald is a welcome visitor with us, and we always feel better by a perusal of its columns. Ever praying that it may be the means of bringing many into the fold and presenting truths to those hungering after righteousness.

Yours in bonds,

G. W. BALLEW.

WEBB CITY, Mo., July 12th, 1883.

Brother Joseph.—We have been blessed with the privilege of having Bro. Heman C. Smith speak to us in the Webb City Hall. He preached four sermons, left us Wednesday morn. We were much strengthened and edified. There are some five or six very much interested, but the majority have no use for Mormonism. Some said, "That is the plainest preaching they ever heard." Others said, "We can not go back on the Scriptures, and all he said was Scripture." There were two baptized; they lived in Galesburg, and came over on the 9th on purpose to be baptized. We wish we had the opportunity of having preaching often. We have our branch meetings most every Sunday. I ask an interest in the prayers of all Saints that I may live more worthy, is the desire of your sister in Christ,

R. M. BRADLEY.

The saloons and hotel bars at Kansas City, Mo., remained closed yesterday in obedience to the requirements of the new Sunday law. In the central part of the city only one saloon kept open in defiance of the law.

Summary of News.

July 16th.—There were disturbances in various parts of France, Saturday, the national fete day, growing out of manifestations of sympathy with Louise Michel.

The saw mill, retorts, and chemical buildings of the Vulcan Furnace Company at Newberry, Mich., were destroyed by fire yesterday morning. Loss $100,000.

Cholera has made its appearance at Ghizeh, a suburb of Cairo, causing five deaths. A cordon has been established around the place, and great precautions are being taken to prevent the disease from entering Cairo. About 150 deaths from the epidemic occurred Saturday, of which fifty-one cases were in Mansourah and forty-three were at Damietta.

An English steamer was boarded by a French officer at Tamatave the 26th of June. The officer forbade the passengers of the steamer to go on shore, and only permitted the landing of the cargo on the payment of duty. A French sentry was placed on board while the cargo was being discharged. The French have been acting in Madagascar as if they wished to provoke a quarrel with England.

Fifty corpses of Zulu men, women, and children were seen June 30th at White River, on the border of Zululand. They were massacred in a hiding-place by Cetewayo's followers. It is said Chief Mapoch surrendered to the Boers.

Three hundred men were thrown out of employment by the burning of wire works at New Haven, Conn.

Charles Heywood Stratton, better known as "Gen. Tom Thumb," died at his residence at Middleboro, Mass., yesterday morning, of apoplexy. He had been slightly indisposed a few days, but nothing serious was anticipated. He was born January 4th, 1838.

The British troops here are ready to leave Cairo, Egypt, in the event of the outbreak of cholera.

During a rainstorm yesterday five children who had taken refuge in a culvert were drowned by a sudden rush of water. The corpses were swept a distance of two miles.

A bloody fight occurred at a picnic, about four miles from Newburg, O.; fully 200 of the men and women took part in it, and knives, chairs, benches, plates, clubs, beer-glasses, and bricks were the weapons used; some fifty persons were injured.

The black measles has broken out at St. Mary's Industrial School, a Catholic reformatory institution near Baltimore, Md., and in four days there have been ten deaths from the terrible disease. There are twelve other boys down with it now, and they have been removed to tents erected in a grove some distance from the institution. In nearly every instance death has resulted in eight or ten hours after contracting the disease.

July 17th,—one hundred and forty-six deaths from cholera are reported from the towns along the Eastern Nile between Cairo and the sea. The panic at Alexandria has revived. The disease is at the pyramids.

Four warehouses containing grain, flax, and oil were destroyed by fire at Hull, England, yesterday. Damage £100,000.

The Spanish Cabinet has considered favorably the project of France for the construction of a tunnel under the Strait of Gibraltar.

Twelve persons were wounded by an explosion in the Glens Falls Paper Mill, near Saratoga, N. Y., yesterday afternoon. The ruins of the mill caught fire. Two of the victims were fatally hurt.

Terrific storms of rain, wind and lightning, are reported yesterday. At Bloomington, Ills., for half an hour the wind blew furiously, and torrents of water fell. Great damage is done to shrubbery, buildings, gardens, and crops. At Joliet, Ill., for a time it seemed that a cyclone was imminent. Fences, trees, and telegraph poles were blown down. Small grain was flattened to the ground. Hay stacks and rye in the shock were scattered around badly. At Lewistown, Ills., it blew in the end of a large brick flouring mill that is being built in the south end of town. The damage to the mill is about $1,000. At Lincoln, Ill., one glass front was broken in, and several tin-roofs were torn off by the wind. The rain fell in torrents. At Litchfield, Ills., received the heaviest rain-storm ever experienced in this section. The north-western part of the city is one vast lake. Wagon bridges are rendered unsafe, and one railroad bridge washed away. The country north of Macomb, Ills., several farm-houses and barns were unroofed, and one barn is reported as torn to pieces. No person was injured. In the city the storm was severe. At Macon, Ills., a little girl was killed by lightning. At Pekin, Ills., the storm was more furious; the railroad depot was unroofed and the west side blown in. The Bemis House and the Pekin Plow Company's shops were unroofed, and the third stories blown in. The court-house yard is impassable from broken trees, while throughout the city chimneys, trees, and fences are literally demolished. At Shelbyville, Ills., the streets were turned into rivers. The sewers were choked, and the cellars flooded. Farmers are almost in despair for wheat still in the stacks. At Springfield, Ills., the Second Presbyterian Church was struck by lightning and slightly damaged. At Gibson City, Ills., yesterday afternoon a tornado struck this township, doing several thousand dollars' damage. A two-story brick dwelling, was demolished. Three women were in the house just before the storm came up, but knowing the building to be unsafe they went to a neighboring house, and thus probably saved their lives. At Hillsboro, Ills., a man was killed by lightning while closing a window.

Central Iowa was visited by a hurricane of terrific force yesterday morning at about two o'clock. At Des Moines, the wind attained a velocity of forty-eight miles an hour; the wind was something like the simoon that sometimes sweeps over the deserts of Africa and Arabia, being extremely dry and intensely hot. At Colfax, Iowa, outbuildings were blown down, one or two buildings unroofed, trees uprooted, broken off, and stripped of limbs, and great damage done to the growing crops. At Grinnell, Dexter, Newton and Burlington, Iowa, the storm seems to have been equally severe.

In Wisconsin, the storm was of greater fury, and more destructive, as copious reports from Fon du Lac, Fort Atkinson and Milwaukee, show.

The Louisville & Nashville Railway had 300 cars of watermelons in the Cincinnati yards yesterday, and sixty more cars were due last night.

July 18th.—The collapse in the barb wire fence trade has resulted in the shutting down of all the barb wire fence factories at Joliet, Ills., throwing about 600 men out of employment.

The exports of flour from San Francisco in June were the largest in the history of the port, reaching a total of 132,000 barrels.

An old Irish woman named Bridget Fox, living in an isolated shanty by herself, at Burlington, Iowa, was assaulted in the back yard of her house, knocked down and cruelly beaten, and then robbed of some $1,500 which she had concealed about her clothing.

An end of the strike of the ironworkers in North Staffordshire, Eng., is recorded. Eleven thousand men were out.

Immigration statistics show that the arrivals for the first half of 1883 were 592,324, against 770,422 during the same time last year.

Eight boilers exploded at Allentown, Pa., yesterday. Although the employes were outside the building resting in preparation for drawing off the molten iron, one man was killed, one fatally wounded, two severely hurt, and several slightly injured. The furnace was completely destroyed.

A second trial of the suit of Studebaker & Co., against the United States Express Company ended yesterday in a verdict of $5,475 for plaintiffs. Messrs. Studebaker transmitted by express a package of $5,000 from Cincinnati, O., to Bluffton, Ind. The package on arriving at Bluffton contained only strips of paper without value.

July 19th—eight towns and cities on the Eastern Nile report 167 deaths from cholera Tuesday, the 17th, the greatest mortality being at Menzaleh and Mansourah. Cairo had seventeen fatal cases.

The reports of deaths from cholera yesterday are as follows: At Damietta, 18; Mansurah, 45; Menzaleh, 42; Samanoud, 22; Chobar, 11; Cairo, 17; Chirbin, 6; and Talka, 6.

The actual loss of property by fire on the Pacific coast for the first six months of 1883 foots up to the extraordinary total of nearly $1,900,000.

No case of yellow-fever has this year made its appearance on shore in the United States. Mexican cities on the gulf coast have suffered from slight visitations.

It is said the intense heat in Montana recently so expanded the rails at certain places that they could not be worked with levers, and had to be driven over with sledges, after bending the rails.

Australians are much disappointed at the disinclination of the British Government to permit the annexation of New Guinea to Queensland.

L. Waldsmith, a highly-respected young man of Nebraska City, Neb., was killed at Creston, Iowa, yesterday morning by falling between the cars.

The Rev. Father O'Haran, pastor of St. Mary's Church, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., and the pastor of the Catholic Church at Plymouth have informed the Sunday-school children of their congregations that hereafter they will not be allowed to wear "bangs" or "frizzes" while attending divine service. If they do they will be sent home. Father O'Haran, in a lecture to the children, condemned the fashion of wearing "bangs" in severe terms, and said no young girl who ever expected to become a lady would be guilty of "banging" her hair. It is understood that a circular has been issued by Bishop O'Hara to all the clergy of the diocese calling their attention to the matter.

July 20th.—About ten thousand telegraph operators struck work yesterday in the United States.

In speaking of railroad accidents and the earth's rotation, R. Randolph shows that the defective force arising from the earth's rotation is entirely too small to determine derailments, and also that as an excess of right-handed derailments has been credited solely to north and south tracks, this proves it to be wholly imaginary, for the deflective force at any latitude is the same for all directions.

REUNION MEETING.

Report of committee on Reunion, meetings held at Council Bluffs, on the third day of July, 1883. The following districts were represented: Little Sioux, Galland's Grove, Pottawattamie, Fremont, Northern Nebraska, and Central Nebraska. Meeting organized in the upper room of Bro. Beebe's store, by calling Charles Derry to the chair.

After hearing the wishes of the several districts represented, as to the time and place of holding the Reunion Meeting in the Fall, it was unanimously resolved, that the place of such meeting be Leland's Grove, Shelby county, Iowa, and the time September 15th next, at eleven a.m., and to continue over Sunday the 23d.

Committee further resolved, that there should be no Saloons, Shows, Swings, or any other profane amusements allowed on the grounds, nor within the distance as prescribed by law. But the committee advise the brethren in the vicinity of the meeting, or the Salem Branch, to establish a place or places for boarding, and to furnish such refreshments as may be necessary. The Salem Spring Creek and Six Mile Grove Branches will furnish Wood and Hay free.

The committee extend a cordial invitation to all who may desire to participate in that meeting, and as cordially accept the promise of our beloved president to be present with a corps of Elders to break the Bread of Life on that occasion. The committee further invite all our brethren who may so desire, to be present with us on that occasion.

It was resolved to request the Presidency and Bishopric to obtain, if possible, special rates from all points to the towns of Portsmouth and Persia, situated on the line of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad. Leland's Grove is about thirty-five miles from Council Bluffs, and Persia is the station nearest the camp grounds on the road from Council Bluffs; and Portsmouth is the name of the last station as you come on that road from the east. Visitors from the east may take their choice; but the Presidency and Bishopric are requested to secure, if possible, the privilege of the trains carrying passengers, to stop and let the passengers going to the meeting get off at Leland's Grove Bridge. If such privilege is secured, the people need not stop either at Persia on the one side, or Portsmouth on the other.

For the success of the meeting, and the welfare of the work, we shall ever pray.

SERMON BY ELDER HEMAN C. SMITH

AT LAMONI, IOWA, APRIL 25TH, 1883.

I HAVE chosen to-night as a foundation to my remarks the 20th and 21st verses of the 13th chapter of Luke. "And again, He said whereunto shall I liken the kingdom of God. It is like leaven, which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened." I admit that this text has occupied my mind considerably, and the chain of thought has given me considerable comfort. Whether I shall be able to express these thoughts to you or not, as they appeared to me, I am not able to say, and if I should, I trust they will be made as clear to you as they have appeared to me. It may appear to some that the words of our text do not have any very particular significance.

But I believe it can be truly said that the human family are divided into three distinct divisions, or three classes of individuals. The first class are those who aspire to nothing that is good, all their thoughts are to do evil, groveling in their tendencies, they delight in tormenting and abusing their fellows. There is another class who aspire to something higher, nobler, would scorn to do an evil act, but they have no desire to worship a Supreme Being, or recognize that they have an immortal soul. And the third class are just as honest as are the others, and they delight in the service of God, they delight to be found worshipping the Creator, and all they see around them suggests the thought that they are dependent for life and happiness upon a being who is infinite, a being who has power to control the destinies of men, in whom they have trusted their lives, all that they have, remembering that that spirit which they entertain shall draw them to nobler spheres of action, if faithful, than they can attain to naturally. When the Lord was upon the earth, it was a significant fact, that at that time there were certain ones who were not permitted to go into the congregation of the Lord. If there was any physical blemish upon their persons they were not permitted to go in, if they were lame or blind they were excluded; and there were other individuals who fell within the pale of illegitimate proceeds, who were not recognized as the followers of God. Christ taught the idea, we believe, that the kingdom of God was open to all. It was calculated to reach all classes of society, that not only those who belonged to it—not only the high and the learned—but there was that in it that would reach down to those who had been in sin and iniquity. He not only rejected the thought in these, but in many other instances, by his practically destroying the assertion that the kingdom was to certain ones only, and establishing the fact that it was to all mankind, and that the kingdom of God was indeed like "leaven that would leaven the whole lump." You remember reading about an individual who was afflicted with leprosy, afflicted with that loathsome disease, and was not permitted to remain in the camp. He was taken out of the camp for several days, and after he was clean he was allowed to come back into society. But before cleansing ensued, whatever he touched was considered unclean, and whoever touched him was unclean also. When Christ came on earth he broke that rule also. We come down to the history of ten men who were afflicted with leprosy, "and they stood afar off, and cried, Jesus thou son of David, have mercy on us." We read that expression, "they stood afar off," and cried, "thou son of David have mercy on us," because if they had come to Jesus they would have been conducted back as unclean, and any one touching them would be counted unclean also; and He commanded them to go and show themselves unto the Priest, and as they went they were made whole. Another individual came who was afflicted with leprosy and he said, "Lord if thou wilt thou canst make me clean." Jesus turned and touched him; and said, "I will, be thou clean." According to the Jewish custom Jesus was made unclean, but nevertheless he turned and touched that leper. Another time we read of a woman who had been afflicted for twelve years. She was considered unclean, but she believed if she could only just touch the hem of his garment she would be made whole, so confident was she in this, that she waited, and as he passed, touched the hem of his garment, and was made whole. When she was caught in this act, perhaps like those men "that stood afar off," she thought she had done wrong in approaching so near, she confessed that it was her who had touched him, but he said, "Daughter be of good cheer; thy faith hath made thee whole." Her faith was so strong that it prompted her to go contrary to those traditions which had followed down to those days. Instead of rebuking or reproving her for what she had done, "He said, "Be of good comfort." There are many instances in his life that go to show by practical illustrations that the gospel was for all societies of men, and it is cheering to my heart that in the gospel of Jesus Christ are the elements that will bless all, and if they will live agreeably to the spirit of the gospel they will all be elevated to one common plane, no matter what the disposition of their heart may be, no matter how disposed they are to sin in their natural state; and by continuing to abide in well doing they may be prepared to enjoy happiness and peace, beyond anything that can be enjoyed by the natural man.

In the contemplation of this subject there have been many obstacles removed from my pathway. There have been some objections that were removed from my mind, and removed in such a beautiful manner that I rejoice, and many of those things I stumbled at when I was here before. That the latter day work was true I could not deny, for it brought evidence I had no difficulty in believing; but I came upon this earth at a time when there were factions, divisions, in the "dark and cloudy day," and just about the time I could think for myself I came in contact with the body I am now indentified with. There were things which I had not been taught that have since forced themselves upon me, and they afford the greatest happiness, that I contemplate in the latter day work. Sectarian ideas too were forced upon my mind that no matter what man believed he would be saved. I saw some plausibility in them. I could not but admit that men were differently constituted, that their minds were naturally different, that what one man considered right would be the very opposite to what another man considered right.

I saw it demonstrated that a phrenologist could tell by the examination of a man's head what denomination of religionists he belonged to. He could tell him whether he was a Baptist, or whether he was a Methodist, or a Presbyterian, or whatever other denomination he belonged to, and the argument is advanced that he can not help but believe as he does, because he is so constituted. I thought if God had made man in that style, he surely was not to blame for what he believed. When I came to examine what is called the latter day work, I found a church holding the claim that there was only one way, and that seemed logical too. I thought if a system originated with man, that it was born of and was a creature of his brain, that it would naturally attract to it just such individuals, who were of the same mind as those who originated it. If this brother should attempt to establish a theory of his own, he would attract just such individuals as were like himself; and if that brother should seek to establish another system entirely different, its adherents would be composed of just such characters as himself, and I thought, in that manner the different congregations extant, originated; and in that manner every one could tell what kind of a man it would take to make a Baptist, Presbyterian, or some other denomination.

I thought of a plan, originating in some higher intellect than man, far above the intelligence of mankind; it seemed to me it was simple, plain, and that all classes of individuals could understand it, that it might reach out to all these classes, and gather them into one, and I then could begin to understand the saying of Christ: "The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a woman who took leaven and hid it in three measures of meal," and I became thoroughly satisfied, as far as the Latter Day Saints were concerned, that those men who could tell what denomination the people belonged to, were lost when it came to them. I remember talking with a brother who is known to many in this house, who told me about going into Fowler and Wells Phrenological establishment in New York. They asked him what profession he followed. He told them that he was a minister of the gospel. A minister of the gospel! It is not the same we have in New York! He could not preach that kind of a gospel. They were well acquainted with the gospel preached there, and they knew what kind of an organism it took to preach in New York, and that man would not do. Every one may be classed, you and I may be classed as those who have embraced the theories of Luther, Wesley and other reformers, but if we have placed ourselves in such a position that the Spirit of God has felt after us that we may be gathered into one in Christ, no matter what kind of a body we may have belonged to, that Spirit which is in connection with the gospel of Jesus Christ will leaven the whole lump, no matter what may be the condition of our systems, or brains. In connection with these thoughts, there were other objections removed from my mind.

I became acquainted with an individual who belonged to the Quorum of the Twelve, an apostle of the Lamb. I became well acquainted with the man and knew something of his character, and I thought

I knew just what qualifications it took to make an apostle of Jesus Christ. By and by I became acquainted with another who belonged to the same quorum, and he was entirely another man, he was of a different disposition to the one I first became acquainted with. I thought, if that man has the requisite qualifications for an apostle the other one certainly has not, and if twelve men were called with contrary dispositions, they would be more of an hindrance than an advantage to the progress of the work, and I thought that one man would do more good than twelve men would. But when I became acquainted with the necessities of the position, I saw that twelve men, differently constituted, under the immediate direction of the Holy Spirit, submissive to the law of God, all the time being directed by the over-ruling power of the Father, could accomplish more good than if they were exactly alike, and the more I have studied on this matter the more thoroughly have I become convinced that God has chosen men that are calculated for this work. And when I study the record of the past, I find it was the way Christ did on the earth, in calling men to that high and holy calling. They were men of entirely different dispositions. The Apostle Peter was impetuous by nature, and differed widely in disposition to the Apostle John. In all the departments of the Church with which I have any acquaintance, I find that this distinction exists; and I have traveled in different parts of the world, of this country at least, and have mingled with those who embraced the gospel in the "Sunny South," and have mingled with those who embraced it in the North, and I have found a remarkable difference between the two classes. Their ways and customs are entirely different to yours. There is one point of harmony between you and them, there is one point of harmony everywhere where the Spirit is connected with this latter day work. I hear them bear the same testimony, "I know the work is of God," and the same testimony of the Spirit that has rested on me here, and everywhere, when in the line of duty, has rested on me there. It is not peculiar to any natural locality, but is found everywhere about the fold of Christ. I came to the understanding where the difference exists between those who come into the fold of Christ. It is not hard for men who are of congenial dispositions and circumstances to agree, but when people of different minds and circumstances come together, then there will be conflicts. It is natural to suppose that when an individual who has imbibed the Methodist theory, and another who has espoused the opposite, one that believes in the salvation of all men, and another that believes that some are foreordained to be damned, come together, there will be a war of opinions, but when the Spirit of God feels after these men the kingdom becomes unto them like leaven that leavens the whole lump. When these men come together they naturally bring their opinions with them; we may also naturally expect that there will be conflicts. If we do not bear with each other, if we can not, moved by the Spirit of God, deal kindly and forbearingly with each others opinions, we may always expect there will be trouble rising. It used to trouble me at times to see difficulties and differences of opinion arising in the Church, and I claimed that individuals who could believe in the Spirit of God could not get in such a dilemma, but I have for some time concluded it was a natural consequence.

If the system we have embraced had originated in the brain of Joseph Smith, or any other man, as we before said, it would have attracted just such minds for its adherents as were like the man, or men, who originated it, and being of like mind they would naturally get along better. But when we consider that the Spirit of God came in connection with this latter day work, that it originated with a being higher than man, that the Spirit reached out to all men, and brought together different descriptions of intellects, and differences of thought, and we failing to remember the law of God revealed to us in this particular, and do not bear and forbear with each other's differences, then we may expect that all these differences will grow wider and wider. But if we will recognize it as the law of God directs, bear with each other in all our different opinions, we may finally merge into a oneness in Christ; then when the leaven has had time to work, when it has had time to operate in our minds, when we have turned from our traditions and been placed firmly upon the Rock, then there will be unity and love. If while we recognize the fact that we bring our traditions with us, we are not willing to grant unto others the same rights that we claim for ourselves, then there is a chance for us to become embittered; and when we give way to our passions so that the Spirit of God has no more control over us, then we will go back to our former natural conditions, then the same conflicts as the natural man engages in will be exhibited in the Church of Christ.

An individual who has been prone to do evil can strive to do right, he may reform and become a better man; but if in the conflict he allows himself to become bitter and to partake of another spirit, then the natural man is asserted, he becomes as he was before he was born into the kingdom; he will partake of the same spirit that he had, and perhaps he may lose the narrow way altogether, and go down to destruction. I have noticed not only in the experiences of the past, but in the present, no matter whatever a man may have done, if he loses the spirit of the work he goes back to where the Spirit found him. Like Peter who went back to his old condition,—in that dark day when they thought all was lost,—he says, "I go a fishing," he went back to his old avocation; and if he had been left in that state of mind he would have gone back to the same disposition. If he was irritable and quarrelsome he would be very apt to be that kind of a man again. If John was of a better disposition, he would manifest that same disposition naturally, and there would have been the same difference between Peter and John as there was in the commencement, before they were led in the same direction by the spirit of the work, preaching the word. And these obstacles, as I remarked before, have been entirely removed from my mind.

I have learned to expect just what I may witness every day in the work. I have learned that men will differ in opinion, and I have learned that where they differ honestly and in good nature, they become wiser and better men in the work than they were before; but when they become bitter in their differences they go back to the same disposition that they received as natural men. In all that I have witnessed in the latter day work so far, my faith has been strengthened, and I feel thankful that differences exist. Men of different qualifications are called to the same office, where they have a general oversight over all the work, and it is expected that no opportunity shall escape them. When I see men of that kind called, my faith is strengthened in the divinity of their calling; but if they were all like the individual through whom the revelation came, I would doubt the revelation, or I would believe that the revelation was concocted in the brain of that individual. I find that some power has called them, and has chosen men of different constitutions, and none of them were like the man by whom they were called, and that they were so qualified by nature that they can attend to the work in all its different phases, and in them can especial supervision be had, when directed by the Spirit of God.

There is another thing I wish to mention. I had read considerable of the history of the man, under God, by whom this work was commenced, and thought that I had formed somewhat of a correct estimate of the true character of the man. When the claims of the different factions, and also those of the Reorganization were presented to me for my investigation, I saw that the individual who was called to be the successor of his father, in some respects was different, different in disposition; and I thought if one was called of God to fill a certain position, that it required the same qualifications in the other to fill the same position. But when I took into consideration the different circumstances that surrounded them, I thought, and I can see now that judgment was adapted to the circumstances in which they were placed, and I thought that an over-ruling power that I could not understand all of His workings, has been arranging and preparing men to the different spheres in which they are called, in this work that God has placed upon us.

I am thankful for that. While I am aware that I am peculiar myself, I am glad that notwithstanding I am differently constituted from others, I have a chance to stand upon this platform with those different dispositions, and with them I can pray, with them I can importune the throne of grace, and call upon God in the name of his Son until we shall obtain power to advance his kingdom, until it shall become like the leaven hid in three measures of meal.

There are many other thoughts in connection with this subject, but we do not wish to occupy your time, and all we have to say in conclusion is this, that whenever we see a difference existing between our brother and ourselves, let us remember we can never reconcile that difference by angry words; we can never get over the difference of opinion by the natural man, for that is what caused it. But if we will humble ourselves before the Almighty, and call upon him in prayer together, no matter how much the opinions of our brother may seem to us ridiculous and absurd, just think that our brother may think the same of us, and we will in due time merge into a oneness in Christ, and by and by, when we have manifested the disposition of Christ's followers for all mankind, bearing with each other as we expect others to bear with us, we will be fit subjects to reign with Christ when he shall come, and we will rejoice together that we have been instruments in God's hands of doing the work for the salvation of men. In conclusion we just simply say, we thank God for the leaven that leaveneth the whole lump.

A FAULT FINDING ARTICLE BY THE "DEVIL KILLER."

Dear Herald.—In a careful perusal of your columns, from time to time, gleaning from the wisest and purest minds of the age, rich gems of thought, freighted with light and encouragement for those who claim to be saints of God, beautifully harmonizing with the Scriptures, wherein is the true relation that we sustain to God and to each other clearly set forth. The picture is a beautiful one: the theory is grand and sublime. It would seem sufficiently attractive to arouse to life and action the latent good there is in man, to grasp the blessings that come as a present reward to all who faithfully comply with the divine requirements belonging to the relation sustained by virtue of obedience to the gospel of Christ. But when we essay to reduce this beautiful theory to practice, it seems that we make some egregious blunders, in that we show a lack of either wisdom, zeal, or confidence in the work. The great apostle of the Gentiles admonishes the saints to go on to perfection. But perhaps he was not as well posted in the definition of the term perfection as are some of the wise Latter Day Saints, who seem instead of following the correct line of policy as laid down in the divine chart, are bumping their wise heads against the two extremes. First: they declare that mortal man can not attain perfection, and at the same time are fretting and finding fault because every body else is not perfect. This self-righteous class of saints, who have spasmodic spells of bearing testimony of the truth of the work in which they are engaged, and for the time seem to understand their true relation to the church and to God, that they are individually responsible for their own acts, and that they can not enjoy the blessings of God in this life, nor be saved in the life to come, through the righteousness of others, neither will they be deprived of the blessings, nor of life eternal through the unrighteousness of others. So far, so good. But, anon, they see some brother or sister doing something that is not right, and lo, their testimony falls to the ground and they are ready to stultify themselves in the sight of saint and sinner. Why what is the matter, brother? Why are you not at your post? Why did you shake your head when the Sacred Emblems were being passed? Did you feel that you were unworthy? Did you feel that you had malice, or hatred in your heart towards any one?

"O, no! I felt all right myself. But there was Bro. A.; I don't think he is doing right. And there is Sr. B.; I hear that she told Sr. C. so and so; and I don't feel like partaking sacrament with such saints."

So, you propose to deprive yourself of the blessings of God, let your spirituality die out, make yourself miserable, because forsooth some one else does wrong. And thus you stand before the church and the world as a living libel on the testimony you have borne. Yours is a splendid argument. "Except ye eat my flesh and drink my blood, there is no life in you." Now my brother or sister, who ever you are, I want you to be consistent, and tell me who is being injured by such a course. According to your argument, if you see a brother get miffed and refuse to eat, why as a matter of course, you must starve yourself too. O, certainly; if you see a brother get a little tight, or hear him make use of profane or obscene language, or doing or saying anything that is unchristianlike, just you hie yourself to the nearest barbed wire fence and hang your righteous self across it, and there remain and refuse to be comforted, until your erring brother is cut off the church, or dead, or where he can not vex your righteous soul from day to day. And then, perhaps, you will attend church very regularly once or twice, and bear your forty ton testimony, and tell us how good you are and always have been and always will be. Dum vivimus, vivamus.

And now according to the heading of this article, I want to find a little fault with some of the Elders in Israel. Those of you who are always just going to do something in the line of your calling but never do it. Ah! memory brings you to my view; as away back in days of yore, when the voice of the Good Shepherd was heard, and the reorganization of the Church was effected, and ever since that time, at the district conferences, the sweet dulcet tones of your voices were heard loud and long, telling the church and the world that this is a great work; that you have done nothing yet, but are just going to. For years that has been the tune of men of the various quorums, to be heard of no more till the sitting of the next conference; then here they come again, take a length of time to report having done nothing. Bah! This class is the noisiest in conference. After devoting quite a length of time in telling that they have done nothing, then they deal out shovels full of wisdom to their brethren, telling them what is parliamentary, &c. They also spring silly questions in order to be heard speaking, to show how smart they are, while the band of humble workers have but little part in the farce of exhibiting their acumen, but in simple terms report their labors in few words. Among them are those who have sacrificed their all in the work, while that "just ago in to" kind have staid with their families and accumulated riches. Another class of Elders I must notice, they who in reporting their labors go all over creation, tell how they went up one hill and down another, with a long rigmarole of particulars, useless and uninteresting. If we are assigned a mission to some locality, the church expects us to fill it to the best of our ability, and to report results. The church does not care to know just how many times we preach, or the names of the school houses. Whether the door was in the west end, or south side; nor whether we got rained on on the way home, or whether the brother who so kindly entertained us chewed, or smoked, either long green or filthy plug. Or whether the good sister of the house had red hair, or whether she used her right hand or left in washing dishes, or what particular nail she hung the dish rag on. It seems to me that there is room for improvement in reporting, and there will be so soon as we tone down our bumps of self esteem, and see ourselves as others see us. One more class I must haul over the coals, and then I have done for the present. It is that class of correspondents, who for some unaccountable cause, try to make the impression that they are "big Indian heap." For instance, in looking over the correspondence columns of the Herald, I read something like the following: "Dear Bro. Joseph, &c., after leaving conference we labored so and so; we had good liberty in speaking, and we were kindly entertained," &c., &c. Again: "we are at home resting awhile." And so it goes. that irrepressible "we" is staring at me. For pity's sake, you double, treble, quadruple creatures of multitude, tell me how many there are of you.

Yours for the truth,

FROM† ELDER GURLEY.

Dear Herald.—In passing around I frequently hear the affirmation that the Book of Mormon is the "stick of Ephraim," that it contains, or at least contains a part of "the great things of my law to Ephraim," &c. Now I have no objections to this claim, provided it can be proved, but otherwise I have serious objections. I will give vent to some of my difficulties in endeavoring to prove that it is the stick of Ephraim. I once accepted the statements of elders that it was, but now will examine. Hosea 8: 12 was written one hundred and sixty years before Lehi left Jerusalem, and the verse is in the past tense—"I have written." Ezekiel 37 refers to the "stick of Judah" and "stick of Ephraim," also "stick of Joseph." I understand that the last two refer to the same "stick." I have heard it so preached, and I find no objection to their thus being classed. Now we are told that the record of the Bible was kept on parchments rolled on sticks, hence the term "stick," but notice the Book of Mormon was never so kept, but on plates, hence "stick" can not properly be applied to it. But now to the proper thought.

"Moreover, thou son of man, take the one stick and write upon it for Judah and for the children of Israel his companions; then take another stick and write upon it, for Joseph the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel his companions."—Ezek. 37: 16.

This language is not as definite as it might be; but you know the ten tribes were called the house of Israel after the kingdom was rent from Solomon, and ten tribes given to Jeroboam (an Ephraimite), and Rehoboam (son of Solomon) ruled the balance. See 1 Kings, 11 and 12 chapters. So that from the verse in Ezekiel cited, there are far more with Ephraim of the entire house of Israel than with Judah, because of the word all.

Verse 19: "Say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God; behold I will take the stick of Joseph which is in the hand of Ephraim and tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand.

Now you notice that when God puts the stick of Joseph (or Ephraim) with the stick of Judah, that the former is to be found in the "hands of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows."

Certainly this has never yet been fulfilled with the Book of Mormon, for though we admit that Joseph the Seer was of Ephraim, yet we fail utterly to find that "the tribes of Israel" were "his [Joseph's] fellows." But I am compelled to conclude that this grand prophecy has not yet been fulfilled. For further proof of the association of Israel and Ephraim proper together, first read Hosea 5th to 12th chapters inclusive, and you will see they are classed together and condemned for similar crimes, "whoredoms" etc., and in Hosea 9:3 and 11:5, 8-12, and numerous others, the land is pointed out. These prophecies were declared B. C. from 771 down to 740, and was evidently carried out in 721. See 2d Kings, 17 chapter, read careful; all went to some land. After this they evidently went into the "north country." Now I see this in relation to Ephraim proper. That they mixed with Israel as well as other nations, by which means they fulfilled Gen. 48:19 and Deut. 33:17, wherein Ephraim is promised to be the greater in numbers. But I can see no blessing of God specially in that, as God certainly condemns the means of its accomplishment, and Jacob simply reveals a future fact, "Ephraim he hath mixed himself among the people."—Hosea 7:8. Ephraim also is like a silly dove without heart: they call to Egypt, they go to Assyria; 11th v., and as Ezek. 37:19 has it "the tribes of Israel his (Ephraim's) fellows. Now you will see three divisions of the "seed of Abraham," 1st Judah, 2d Ephraim, and Israel his fellows, and 3d the "branch broken off." Ah! who are the latter? The Book of Mormon (and this book ought to be the special witness on this question) answers, Manasseh. Now see Plano edition of the book, pages and verses as follows: 65:5; 114:1; 131:9; 134:1; 135:6, 19; 136:3-6; 138:12; 192:10; 200:1; 175:1; 377:1; (Shiblon and Heleman were brothers, 301 and 307, heading of chapters, also 379:5); 420:1; 479:6, 7; 481:11; 482:1; 495:2. Moroni is the last writer, and you will notice that all the writers were Nephi 1st and his descendants. Notice, too, that the Book of Ether has nothing to do in the premises, as that people left the eastern land at the time of Babel, over 600 years before there was any Manasseh and Ephraim to dispute about. Now turn to page 230—1:1, and read, "Nephi who was the son of Lehi, who came out of the land of Jerusalem, who was a descendant of Manasseh, who was the son of Joseph who was sold into Egypt," etc.; you perceive that the "branch broken off" (pg. 46:1; 59:1, as in many other places), are of Manasseh, not Ephraim. Again, the stick of Joseph (or Ephraim) was to come from the largest number, (Ezek 37:19) not the smallest, as the people of the Book of Mormon were. In the Book of Mormon, pg. 452, you will learn of the third fold of the house of Israel, to whom Christ was still to visit: This third fold was not of this land, neither of the land of Jerusalem, nor in any part of that land whither he had been to minister, etc. Hence they must be separated from that land by a sea [wall], Gen. 49:22. On pg. 106, God, speaking through Nephi, declares of some, i. e., "other tribes which I have led away." See 8, 9, 10 verses of second book of Nephi, chapter 12, and you will get a larger idea of God's work perhaps, for he will speak unto all nations and they shall write it, but especially three books of the house of Israel, i. e., Jews, Nephites, and the "lost tribes of Israel." Each shall finally have the others "words," or books, and all shall be gathered in one. Three folds of "Israel," three books, and here I think of the parable of "leaven hid in three measures of meal," and as yet we have but two. Ezekiel speaking of but two does not preclude the third. Section 26 D. and C. does not say the "keys of the stick of Ephraim were given to Joseph," as the "to whom" refers to Moroni. Again, if we admit it was given to Joseph, the book could well be the "keys" of the stick and not the "stick," as the Bible (but not Ezek. 37) is the key to the Book of Mormon. God has often sent his Spirit to aid man defend the sacred book, but it by no means follows that every argument advanced is true. Tradition is quite liable to work in, on that subject as well as any other. So "try the spirits." "To the law and the testimony."

I am learning not to be so positive as I used to be, only on clearly revealed subjects. I hold myself as liable to err, and to be ready to receive instruction. So bring on your strong reasoning, and I will pledge myself to strive by all the light I have, to give you credit for every point made. "For that which makes manifest is of God."

In bonds,

To have a burden put on one's shoulders is to have the opportunity of developing strength to carry it and still stand upright; to have the darkness of sorrow cast over one's world of joy is to have also the joy of looking up into the heavens with a gaze the more penetrating because it follows one who has gone before; to be surrounded by difficulties is to have the grand training which turns aspiration into character, the faint hope of victory into positive conquest. We may make every trial a minister of strength, and draw from every sorrow the sweetness which is at the heart of immortality. Deaf, we may still strike with Beethoven the keys of deathless harmony; blind, we may still sing with Milton the everlasting songs of victory; smitten with disease, we may still march with Livingstone into the heart of new empires; dead, we may still rise with Christ into newness of life!

Conference Minutes.

MICHIGAN DISTRICT.

Conference of the Michigan district was held at the Saints' Chapel, Clear Lake, Steuben Co., Indiana, June 9, 10, and 11, 1883, W. H. Kelly president, Duncan Campbell and Wilson Teeters secretaries.

Branch reports.—Galien, number last report, 75, present 76; baptized 4, removed by letter 2, died 1, Cyrus Thurston president, G. A. Blakeslee Jun., clerk. Clear Lake, last report 63, present 65; baptized 2, A. J. Smith president, Henry A. Lord clerk. Coldwater, last report 55, present 56; baptized 2, died 1, Bradford Corless president, Wm. Lockerby clerk. Mill Creek, present number 20; baptized 1, received by letter 2, ordained 2, Levi Phelps president, Charles Wolvin clerk. Vassar, last report 12, present 10; removed by letter 2; Henry Hocknell president, James Barnes clerk. Hersey, last report 64, present 76; baptized 9, received by letter 3, Joseph W. Shippy president, Saleda D. Shippy clerk. Hopkins, present number 18, many of them scattered; S. I. Smith president. Lawrence, last report 54, present 46; baptized 1, removed by letter 2, expelled 5, died 2, H. Manee president, H. B. Hulse clerk. Reese, last report 23, present 24; baptized 1, Edwin E. Delong president, Aaron Britnell clerk. Forester, present number 21, Andrew Barr president and clerk. Lebanon, added by vote 5, J. J. Cornish president, Wm. Sinclair clerk.

Ministry reports.—W. H. Kelley, G. A. Blakeslee, Duncan Campbell, M. H. Bond, Bradford Corless, John Shook (baptized 2), A. J. Smith, reported in person, J. J. Cornish (baptized 8), Andrew Barr, S. I. Smith, James A. Carpenter, C. Scott, E. Delong, Willard J. Smith, and E. H. Gurley reported by letter; Wm. Lockerby Bishop's agent reported receipts of $232.16. Expenditures of $195.77, leaving a balance of $36.39. Alvin Patterson, G. A. Smith and Dudley Locke were appointed a committee to examine Bishop's Agent's report.

The following preamble and resolution passed unanimously.

Whereas, frequent complaints from various sources, and quarters, come to us of unsatisfactory ordinations having been made to the eldership and other offices in the church which tend to weaken and discourage, rather than strengthen and built up, and,

Whereas, it is evident that matters of such grave importance and so directly affecting the interests of the work should be kept under the direction and counsel of the chief spiritual authorities of the Church, as nearly as may be, as provided for in the law, therefore,

Resolved, That no Elder shall be ordained in this district, save by the direction of the district conference, or by the advice and counsel of the minister in charge of the mission.

Clear Lake Sunday School reported from April 1st, a total attendance of 443, an average attendance of 53; verses recited alphabetically 142; cash receipts $1.73.

Committee appointed to examine report of Bishop's Agent, reported finding the items as received and expended for the spread of the gospel and benefit of the poor, to be correct. Report adopted and committee discharged.

Bro. D. B. Teeters was chosen district secretary.

A motion that the next conference be held in the North Eastern part of the district, time and place to be designated by the president, prevailed.

On separate motions W. H. Kelley was sustained as district president; G. A. Blakeslee as Bishop, and Wm. Lockerby as Bishop's Agent of Michigan district.

A motion to sustain the brethren laboring in the district prevailed.

A motion to sustain the general authorities of the Church was carried unanimously.

A vote of thanks to the Saints of Clear Lake branch for their generous hospitality prevailed. One child was blessed, and conference closed with a season spent in testimony by the Saints, during which a rich degree of the spirit was enjoyed.

Preaching during the session by Elders Kelley, Bond, and Campbell.

Note.—Will the Saints of the North East part of the district consult together as to the best and most available place for the convening of the next District conference, and advise with the president of the district concerning it. For want of needed information, the last session of conference was not able to definitely settle upon time or place, (wishing to accommodate all interested, especially those living in the North and North Eastern parts of the District). Hence, further consideration of the matter was left with President of District. When, and where, shall the next session be held? Address Coldwater, Branch Co., Michigan.

W. H. KELLEY, Pres. of Dist.

DES MOINES DISTRICT.

Conference convened on Friday, June 22, 1883, at Edenville, Marshall county, Iowa; I. N. White presiding, John Sayer secretary. Conference opened with preaching by R. Etzenhouser.

Branch Reports.—Edenville; 76 members, including 11 Elders, 2 Priests, 2 Teachers, 1 Deacon, 1 ordination. Des Moines; 54 members including 3 Elders, 2 Priests, 2 Teachers, 2 Deacons, 7 baptized. Sheriden; report returned for correction. Newton and Des Moines Valley not reported.

Elders W. S. Loar, John X. Davis, and J. P. Knox reported. R. Etzenhouser states that he attended the General Conference as delegate of this district. Had labored in this district since, except a short time at Dubuque. I. N. White, reports that the work is opening well, and can there be a thorough ministry kept in the field there is no reason why the district should not increase in numbers and spirituality. I have received from the Sheriden Branch, $17.40, and have expended in rail-road fare, postage, &c., $13.98, leaving a balance unexpended of $3.42. J. S. Roth spent three months in Pennsylvania, tried to set forth the truth at different times and places. Priests D. C. White and C. F. Merrill, (baptized 8 and tried to fill his office), reported. Teacher Merrill, reported.

I. N. White, Bishop's Agent, reported receiving $34.47; paid to the ministry $8.00, leaving a balance on hand of $26.47.

District Treasurer, D. C. White, reported receiving $21.91, paid to R. Etzenhouser $10.97, and to J. F. McDowell $10.97, total $21.94.

June 14th, 1883. We the Sheriden Branch by resolution do ask the conference which will convene at Edenville, on June 22d, 1883, to grant us a Court of Elders to investigate and try to settle existing trouble in the branch.

Saturday, 3 p. m. session. Moved that we entertain the petition from the Sheriden Branch, and that we accept it as a matter of business. Brethren J. S. Roth and W. S. Loar were chosen to meet on the 14th of July, 1883, and endeavor to settle the difficulties existing in the branch.

Whereas, we as Latter Day Saints in conference assembled at Edenville, Iowa, representing the interest of our Church in Central Iowa, do believe in constitutional prohibition of the manufacture and sale of all intoxicating liquors as a beverage, as the only safe and true policy of both State and Church; Therefore be it resolved, That we as far as practical will not support by our voice and vote, any man, or party not in direct sympathy with the true spirit of prohibition. Moved by J. S. Roth, seconded by D. C. White, and prevailed.

Carried that we sustain I. N. White as district president, and John Sayer district secretary the next three months.

W. C. Nirk said that he had made arrangements to labor in the field the next quarter.

Moved that those laboring in the district do so under the direction of the president.

Carried that we sustain the spiritual authorities of the Church in righteousness.

Moved that we sustain I. N. White Bishop's Agent, also D. C. White as District Treasurer.

Sunday Exercises: Prayer meeting 9 a. m., J. S. Roth presiding. W. C. Nirk occupied the stand 11 a. m. Saints' meeting at 2:30 p. m., W. C. Nirk and D. C. White presiding. I. N. White preached at 7:30 p. m.

Four precious souls were admitted into the kingdom by baptism, J. S. Roth officiating. Three children were blessed by I. N. White and W. C. Nirk during the afternoon service.

Moved that when this conference adjourns it do so to meet at Des Moines.

Due notice as regards time of holding said conference will be given through the Herald.

A collection was taken up to defray the expenses of the district.

BIRMINGHAM DISTRICT.

Conference was held at Burton-on-Trent, England, February 24th and 25th, 1883.

Feb. 24th, 8 p. m. The secretary laid before the conference a letter he had received, containing the resignation of Elder John Seville, district president, and asked that the conference would take some action thereon. The president being absent, Elder Thomas Taylor was called to the chair. Elder T. Taylor gave a short address, and spoke very feelingly of our aged brother, J. Seville. He thought the best thing to do would be to deal at once with the District President's Resignation. Thereupon the Resignation was read and placed before the conference.

Resolved, That the Resignation of Elder J. Seville be accepted and the best thanks of this meeting, and also of the District, be given him for the true and attentive manner in which he has discharged his duties.

Resolved, That Elder C. H. Caton be appointed District President.

Thos. Taylor then vacated the chair. Bro. Caton took charge. Elder George S. Greenwood was chosen secretary.

Minutes of last conference read and confirmed.

Delegates were present as follows:—Birmingham, Temple Row Branch, C. H. Caton; Hanley Branch, J. D. Davies; Stafford Branch, Geo. S. Greenwood; Clay Cross Branch, not represented; Burton-on-Trent Branch, Geo. Potts; Birmingham, Sumerfield Branch, H. C. Crump.

Teachers' reports in person: W. Potts, J. E. Meredith. Deacons' report by letter: J. G. Cole. Deacons' reports in person: J. Bourne, C. Hickling. Secretary's report: G. S. Greenwood, reported.

Financial report.—The president submitted a Financial Report as follows: money received £1 1s 1d. Expended £1 1s 1d.

Resolved, That the report be accepted and spread on the minutes.

Clay Cross Branch. A question was asked by Bro. H. C. Crump, in reference to the Clay Cross Branch. What are we going to do with this Branch? When it was Resolved, That the District President and Secretary visit the Clay Cross Branch, and Bro. Pouiton, in person, if possible, and do what they can to re-organize that branch, and report to next conference.

A collection of 12s 9d was subscribed to defray expenses of said visit.

According to recommendations, several brethren were ordained to the offices of Elders, Priests, Teachers and Deacons.

Resolved, Those brethren who are not present for ordination, be ordained in their respective branches.

Afternoon session.—A good testimony meeting was had and enjoyed.

Evening session, 6 p. m. Preaching by Geo. S. Greenwood and C. H. Caton. We had a good time.

Later business session.—Authorities of the Church in America were sustained in all righteousness.

Resolved, That we sustain by our faith and prayers, the authorities of the English Mission in all righteousness.

Resolved, That we sustain by our faith and prayers, the authorities of this, the Birmingham District, in all righteousness.

Resolved, That the ministry of this district labor as circumstances permit, and report to the next conference.

Resolved, That we do give the best thanks of this conference to the brethren and sisters of Burton-on-Trent, for their kindness to visiting Saints.

Adjourned to meet at Birmingham, Temple Row Branch, on the first Saturday and Sunday in August, 1883.

ST. LOUIS DISTRICT.

Condensed minutes of the St. Louis District Conference of Sunday, July 8th, 1883. Richard D. Cottam president, John G. Smith clerk. Conference convened in the Saints' Hall, 1302 Broadway, St. Louis, Mo., on Sunday, July 8th, 1883, at 10 a. m.

Branch Reports.—St. Louis 173 members; including 6 Elders, 2 Priests, 2 Teachers, 2 Deacons; 1 baptized and 2 received by letter. Cheltenham 33 members, including 2 Elders and 1 Deacon; 1 baptized and 1 died. Boon Creek 19 members, including 2 Elders and one Priest. Caseyville 32 members, including 3 Elders, 1 Priest, 1 Teacher, 1 Deacon; 2 removed by letter. The other branches in this district did not report.

St. Louis financial report: Balance on hand March 25th, 1883, $89.09; received since $30.40; a total of $119.49. Expended for hall rent $20; leaving a balance on hand June 24th, 1883, of $99.49.

Elders' Reports.—Wm. Smith, Wm. Still, John Beaird, Noah N. Cooke, and B. V. Springer reported their labors during the past three months.

Elder B. V. Springer reported his action as the delegate of the St. Louis District, to the last General Conference, at Kirtland, Ohio.

On motion the report of our delegate was received, and a vote of thanks given.

Afternoon session. The sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered by Brn. Noah N. Cooke and C. J. Peat. Some time was then occupied in singing* and testifying of God and his goodness, and of the truth of the gospel we have embraced. The spirit of the Lord was freely enjoyed. A prophecy, also a tongue and its interpretation were given. An elderly lady, a member of some other sect, was so moved upon, she arose and testified that the spirit of the Lord was with us, and endorsed the prophecy as being true, "To fear not little flock, it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the Kingdom."

Elder John Beaird was duly elected President of the St. Louis District to serve the ensuing six months. John G. Smith was re-elected clerk of the district.

On motion, it was resolved that Charles J. Peat, sen., be ordained an Elder. Bro. Charles J. Peat sen., was then ordained to the office of an Elder by B. V. Springer assisted by Elder John Beaird.

President John Beaird nominated Elders Noah N. Cooke, and Charles J. Peat as his counsellors, and on motion, they were by the conference sustained as such.

Officers present.—1 Seventy, 7 Elders, 2 Priests, 2 Teachers and 1 Deacon.

A motion was made and seconded that John G. Smith be ordained to the office of an Elder.

Carried. John G. Smith was then ordained to the office of an Elder, by Elder William Smith, assisted by Elders B. V. Springer and Noah N. Cooke.

On motion, all the authorities of the Church were sustained in righteousness.

Adjourned to meet at the Saints' Hall, 1302 Broadway, St. Louis, Mo., on Saturday afternoon October 6th, 1883, for the transaction of business; and on Sunday morning, October 7th, 1883, at 10 o'clock, will meet for worship.

SOUTHERN INDIANA DISTRICT.

To the members comprising the Southern Indiana District. For as much as our last conference was a failure, in consequence of non attendance, we hereby give notice that our next conference will be held at Union, Jefferson county, Indiana, beginning Saturday, August 11th, 1883, at 10 a. m. We would like to see all the Elders, Priests, Teachers and Deacons, and as many of the private members as can possibly attend. "Come one, come all."

HARBERT SCOTT, Dist. Pres.

SCOTTSDALE, Ind., July 13th, 1883.

TO THE ELDERS.

Preparatory to the organization of the Fifth Quorum of Elders I have been instructed by the General Conference of the Church to enroll names to fill the number to the ninety-six required to make a full quorum. As the Secretary of the Church I have made a record of every quorum, and know who is now, or who has ever been a member of each quorum; and that all may know where they are enrolled, I will publish a list of each as at present constituted, and a list of those lost from each quorum. In several instances brethren have been enrolled in two quorums; but thus publishing full lists will obviate any more of the duplicating, and guide many who might not otherwise know where they and others stood. According to order I am prepared at any time to receive applications for membership in the Fifth Quorum. The following is the list of this quorum as at present enrolled.

There have been ten lost out of the Fourth Quorum by death, expulsion, or ordination, as follows:—J. Buckingham, R. D. Evans, Richard Groom, Joel Hall, J. K. Kent, A. B. Kuykendall, J. F. Mintun, J. W. Nichols, E. H. Webb, and D. J. Wetherbee; total 10.

If any one knows of further losses from the above lists of quorums of elders they will greatly oblige me by reporting the same, with dates of death or expulsion. If any of the losses named above are not known to the Quorum Secretaries, I will supply them with the facts on application.

Also, if those elders who are not yet enrolled will apply by card or letter, their names will be taken till the Fifth Quorum is filled, and after that they can be enrolled for the organization of the Sixth Quorum. If any wish to apply for membership in quorums already organized, the addresses of the Quorum Secretaries are as follows:—First Quorum, O. B. Thomas, Lamoni, Iowa; Second Quorum, Donald Maule, Magnolia, Iowa; Third Quorum, E. T. Dobson, St. Joseph, Mo.; Fourth Quorum, A. J. Cato, present address unknown.

I am also ready to enroll Priests, Teachers, and Deacons, as per the revelation of September, 1882, and the action of General Conference, at said sessions, so that quorums may be organized as early as enough can convene to do so.

Respectfully submitted,

HENRY A. STEBBINS,

Church Secretary and Recorder.

LAMONI, IOWA, July, 1883.

PITTSFIELD DISTRICT.

The Pittsfield District conference will convene with the Alma Branch, Schuyler county, Illinois, on Saturday, August 11th, 1883, at 10 o'clock a. m. Hope all that can will attend, and be there on time.

By order,

J. GOODALE.

BARRY, ILL, July 16th, 1883.

COALVILLE, Iowa, July 9th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Will you advertise Bro. W. Thomson's ordination. I see by a few lines he wrote me that he gave you the details of it. Bro. Thompson, I believe, will make a useful man in the Church.

NOTICE.

This is to certify that William Thompson was ordained to the office of an Elder, November 19th, 1882, in Coalville, Webster county, Iowa, by Brn. E. C. Brown, and James Allen. Sanctioned and ratified by the branch in Coalville, Webster Co., Iowa, November 19th, 1882.

JAMES ALLEN, clerk pro tem.

DIED.

MATTHEWS.—At Syracuse, Ohio, June 19th, 1883, Bro. David Matthews, Sen. The deceased was born at Swansey, South Wales, June 19th, 1816, making his age 67 at his death. Our beloved brother was sickly for nearly two years. We can not tell the nature of his disease, only we could see him as if he was wasting away by degrees. He bore it patiently to the last, thinking of that building of God, "a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens." He was well thought of by all that knew him. To him, to live was Christ, to die was gain. He left four sons and three daughters. Six were present at his death. Less than eight months ago the mother was taken from them; but thank God they are members of the Church, and if they will continue to fear him, he has promised to help them in time of need. Funeral service at the Presbyterian church, June 22d, 1883, to a large congregation. Sermon by Elder David Hopkins; Job 14:14; Elder David Thomas participating at the grave.

BELCHER.—Near Hearne, Robertson county, Texas, July 7th, 1883, of some unknown disease, Bro. W. W. Belcher, (age not known). Funeral by Elder A. J. Cato, assisted by Elder H. L. Thompson. Our brother was much esteemed by all, both in and out of the Church.

JONES.—At Cheltenham, Missouri, July 2d, 1883, of cholera infantum, David, son of Mr. David and Sr. Mary Jones, aged sixteen months. Funeral service by Elder B. V. Springer at the church, July 3d. "It is well with the child."

BAKER.—At Mount Hope, Nebraska, May 17th, 1883, of typhoid fever, Elmer, son of Bro. F. M. and Sr. Jane Baker, aged 5 years, 4 months and 13 days. Funeral sermon July 1st, by Elder Robert M. Elvin, to a full house; text Job 14:14.

EDMONDS.—At Livermore, Alameda county, California, June 23d, 1883, of old age, Bro. Joel Edmonds, aged 84 years, 2 months and 9 days. He appeared to be ready, and was willing to make the great change,—earth for the world to come.

McCALEB.—At Mason's Bay, Maine, June 17th, 1883, after an illness of six months, Bro. Andrew D. McCaleb, aged sixty-three years. So rest the aged and the worn—in the Lord.

MABIN.—At Philadelphia, Pennsylvania, June 14th, 1883, Sr. Emma Mabin, daughter of the late John and Rebecca Webb, late of Birmingham, England. Funeral sermon by Elder Joseph A. Stewart.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE shall publish in the next issue of the HERALD the open letter of Elder L. O. Littlefield, to Pres. Joseph Smith and others who attended the Conference at Kirtland, and will give the correspondence so far as it has occurred, either in the next succeeding issue, or soon thereafter, that the Elders may see what the controversy is, as some have asked that it be published, Mr. Littlefield also having requested that his letter be inserted in our paper.

We now have ready for distribution and on sale the "Reply to Rev. Robert Patterson," or the Spaulding Story re-examined, a sixteen page tract, which we offer for fifteen cents per dozen, or $1.00 per hundred.

We are also offering the Voice of Warning, nearly two thousand of which we have just received from the binders at fifteen cents a copy, or seven copies for one dollar.

Bro. Frank Hackett writes from North Freedom, Wisconsin, July 18th, that they were trying to keep the banner flying there. School and meeting every Lord's day. Quite a number have moved away from there.

BRO. JAMES CAFFALL, now at Hutchinson, Colorado, has small patience with those reverend gentlemen known as ministers of the gospel, who, taking advantage of their church pulpits as a rampart of defense, hurl invective and misrepresentation at those differing from them in theology. He gets after an opponent in a dodger about like this:

This third party persistently contradicted me and insisted that our books taught polygamy and disloyalty to the government, and I hereby challenge him to make good his statement on the public rostrum where I will have an equal chance. When disputations are necessary I prefer an open field in preference to be cornered where my defense would be construed into an insult. I have had some specimens of orthodox equity on this particular in Colorado, and soured on it. My stomach not thoroughly cleansed.

Como, Colorado, July 2d, 1883.

Bro. H. C. Bronson of Kewanee, Illinois, wrote July 23d:

All well at Kewanee. Good meetings in our new church yesterday, the one the branch recently purchased of the Primitive Methodists; a very neat, comfortable chapel. I go into Iowa this week to sound the gospel trump again in Babylon.

PERSONALLY, we have always been a heretic so far as the "divine right of kings to rule" was concerned. We have always been impressed with the idea that no part of the footstool of God was designed for the purpose that man should lord it over his fellow man. We believe that God gave Israel a king "in his wrath;" and we do not expect to be reconciled to the idea of a king until Christ reigns and rules in righteousness. To us then the spectacle of an attache of one of the families of the world's despots, asking another relic of a decaying dynasty to pray for the earthly benefit of one, who, whatever he may be personally, is the representative of a family of tyrants, the creating of which dynasty drenched the plains of the old world with blood, is an incongruity; and as the Chicago Tribune says in the extract given below, "a grim and revolting mockery."

Dying men may pray. There is something appropriate in the solemn "Lord, to thee do I commend my spirit," with which a good man may certify to his abiding trust in God. There is even pathos and sober restfulness in the contemplation of a man of the world acknowledging the existence of God, when standing on the verge of the grave, he says "God help me." But for assassins to ask fellow murderers to pray for them; or tyrants to beg fellow conspirators against the world's peace to importune God in their behalf, is almost sublime blasphemy. It is bad enough for professed ministers and good men to bow on the gallows and ask for pardon and mercy for criminals about to die, but to ask God to avert the fast falling blows by which the kingdoms of despots and tyrants are to be destroyed, is an exquisiteness of charity that republicanism can hardly realize.

THE LAST OF BOURBONISM.

There is something like a grim and almost revolting mockery in the request of the Comtesse de Chambord to ex-Queen Isabella of Spain that she should offer up her prayers for the moribund Comte de Chambord, her husband, who for so many years has played the empty role of Pretender to the throne of France—long since gone into kindling-wood—and boasted his descent from the most depraved family that has ever cursed the world—the House of Bourbon.

So long as it was in power the House of Bourbon wrought nothing but evil, and sought to crush out freedom. It has crowded prisons with its victims. It has stopped at no form of cruelty to enforce its edicts. It has leagued itself with absolute power to keep its subjects in ignorance and servile obedience while it reveled in luxury and vice. There is scarcely a member of its family who was not conspicuous for cruelty, sensuality, or bigotry. Its very excesses have gradually weakened its strength. The virus of disease has swept off its members until a mere handful are left, and these are so weakened and shriveled by the excesses of their predecessors that they are no longer capable of harm. There is no more insignificant figure in the world of politics than "Henry V." holding his mock court at his Chateau of Frohsdorf, prating to his followers of the beauty of the Bourbon lilies, and dying of gluttony.

What keener sarcasm will history record, what revenge more complete, what mockery more ludicrous than this spectacle of the Comtesse de Chambord appealing to Isabella for her prayers in behalf of the Bourbon Pretender? Who needs prayers more herself than Isabella of Spain, driven from her own country and throne for her vices, without respect or courtesy, an ancient wanderer through European Capitals, and bearing on her person the revenge which Nature takes for a life of excesses? What grimmer picture could engage the attention of the historical satirist than that of Isabella of Spain attempting to pray for the Comte de Chambord? What more pitiable than the feeble, impotent efforts of these noxious remnants of a noxious race to support and console each other, without a country, without a throne, the last of a venomous family, hideous in its immoralities and tainted with corruptions? The world will be better when they are all gone and it is spared the spectacle of a few individuals who seem to have been left for a time only as a warning how tenaciously Nature exacts her compensations, and how fearfully she punishes. There is nothing of the race left worth preserving or praying for, and the sooner it is under ground and out of sight the better for the world, in which it has done nothing that did not add to its sorrow or provoke its shame.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—A branch having an Elder, Priest, Teacher, and Deacon, elects the Priest president of the branch. In the absence of the president, whose duty is it to take charge of the meetings, the Elder or Teacher?

Ans.—The Deacon is in charge. He may lead himself, or call upon some one else to lead.

Ques.—Is it the duty of the Deacon to take charge of the meeting house, light lamps, fires, &c.?

Ans.—We so understand the duties of a Deacon. He may do these things in person, or see that they are done by another.

THE following account of a clerical fight at Hartford, Connecticut, will interest those who may fancy all is at peace in Sectarian Zion.

Hartford, Conn., June 28th.—The Rev. Dr. Parker and the Rev. Mr. Everts indulged in a fierce fight in the baptismal fount of the South Baptist church Sunday afternoon. For a long time Congregationalism had been striving to capture the church. The Rev. Mr. Everts is pastor of the much-coveted prize, while the Rev. Dr. Parker conceived the purpose of baptizing a score or two of young children in the baptistry of the South Baptist. He was possessed of this notion as his solemn duty, and he accordingly beguiled a large number of his parishoners and their children into his scheme. It was decided that it should be carried into effect at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon. At the appointed hour a procession was formed. At the head of the procession was a double quartette, led by a hand-organ, which had recently been repaired at considerable cost. Besides nearly two hundred children in the procession, there were fully that number of adults, men and women, mostly the parents of the children.

Arrived at the church, the doors of which were unlocked, the procession entered and took possession. By this time the sacristan had notified the Rev. Mr. Everts, who quickly sent for the deacons. Meanwhile the Rev. Dr. Parker and his crowd had turned on the water, which was rapidly filling the great tank used for baptisms. Children were being prepared for receiving the rite, and the Rev. Dr. Parker was excitedly spurring on his followers in what he called a battle for Congregationalism.

Presently the Rev. Mr. Everts arrived, followed by his deacons. He protested to Dr. Parker against the outrageous intrusion, but the reverend doctor simply replied that he was determined to finish what he had come to do. Before the great tank had filled, the spacious edifice was resounding with inquiries, protestations and reprimands. Ranged around the baptistry were the children whom Dr. Parker had now begun to baptize.

The invading party could not be persuaded to leave. It became painfully evident that a fierce strife was to take place. While the women and elders of the two congregations were making pandemonium of the place, the two ministers carried on a bitter war of words between themselves, Dr. Parker proceeding all the while baptizing the children who stood about him with blanched faces and forms that shook with fright.

Suddenly a struggle between the two sides broke out in earnest. An indescribable scimmage took place. The shrieks of children, the wailings of infants, and the implorings of women mingled with the angry cries of pastors and officers of the contending congregations. Many women fainted, and many had their Sunday clothes almost torn off them.

Dr. Parker and Mr. Everts had a terrible struggle. They beat each other and tore each other's hair frightfully, and finally fell into the immense tank, firmly grasping each other. Each strove to drown the other. So busy were the other fighters that they could not observe the accident that happened to their pastors.

Policemen could not be found, but a few sober-minded men of either parish combined to restore order. By this time the mad fight in the tank was discovered, and some of the peace-makers turned their attention to the struggling pastors. It was found impossible to tear them apart, so they were taken out locked in a fierce embrace and both unconscious. They were finally separated—though they clung to each other with the tenacity of drowning men—and resuscitated. After a little talking the ministers were reconciled, and it was a source of great rejoicing to the Baptists that Dr. Parker had been completely immersed.

A sad rumor prevailed that several of the young children were drowned in the baptistry, but a careful search of the premises discovered no bodies. That several were not killed in the fearful struggle is a miracle. Many are confined to their beds from the effects of the fright. Both clergymen are in a sad condition, mentally and physically. The unfortunate affair has scandalized the whole Christian community.

Bro. Joseph:—I am trying to teach the first principles of the gospel of Christ. By invitation I meet with the people five miles west of here, in quite a large building, built for school and church purposes. I meet with them the third Sunday in each month, the other Sundays it being filled with other persuasions. A Campbellite furnishes me a place to dinner and rest. Congregations large. Nothing yet flattering. Said Campbellite's father-in-law was a Saint in Nauvoo, went from there to Tennessee. All of them are Tennessee people. I have been favored with as good respect, order and attention as I ever saw any where; and above or superior to all other advantages at said meetings, I have been blest of the Spirit of God. I have made two visits.

Yours in the one faith,

B. A. ATWELL.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Enclosed find the letter from Salt Lake City, or rather a copy; also a copy of the answer. Hope you may find space in Herald to publish both. I think of moving my family to Independence, Mo., this fall, if all goes well; as I am away from home most of the time, and where we are we have no church privileges, as the nearest branch is about eighteen miles away, which is the Pleasant View Branch, in Cherokee county, Kansas.

Yours in gospel bonds,

A. P. FREE, ESQ, GIRARD, Kan.

MY DEAR COUSIN:—Your welcome favor of 20th April was duly received. I was very glad to get it for I had lost track of you. Though Mr. Short gave me your address last fall, it was misplaced, and I have been unable to reach you by mail since. You mistake my sentiments when you attribute my silence to indifference, because you joined the Josephites. That fact is all the more reason for taking interest in you and yours. I suppose I inherit the strong characteristic of the Free family—love for kindred—and though I am not as demonstrative as some of the members, it causes me to often feel as reverend and beloved grandpa used to say, "Blood is thicker than water." Grandpa died on the 23 day of July, 1882. I send you a paper containing the notice of it. Grandma is well and as prosperous and happy as usual, as are all our kindred, my own family, consisting of wife and two children, boy and girl, not excepted; and all desire to be remembered to you and yours.

In regard to your religious convictions, you maintain a very strong and sincere faith apparently, and I have no desire to even influence you, or yours to any belief, or to accept any doctrine in which you may not be just as sincere and just as earnest. It is true, I was disappointed when I learned that you had joined the Josephites, and I thought perhaps you would have done differently if I had remained longer with you, or had been able to visit you again. The reason I felt so is that I know that in my ministry I could lead you to all that you have obtained that is good and true, and perhaps to some other truths that they know nothing about; which are just as good, and produce just as much happiness, and are just as essential for salvation. I even hope to have the opportunity yet of bearing my testimony upon these points and of explaining them to you. Your honesty will not permit you to deny a truth, and for that reason I only desire to have the chance of explaining some points to you, which in our association together were only partially alluded to. I am not afraid to receive any truth God has revealed that appeals to my nature, my reason, or my heart. I believe you have the same feelings and if you have, I see no reason why we should not come to a unity of the faith and see alike. As to your reason for deciding in favor of the Josephites instead of the Brighamites. When you come to consider the authority, the one you name is not a very good reason, you will acknowledge, for whether the revelation on celestial marriage was ever delivered to Emma and whether she tore it up, burnt it or not, is of very little consequence, so far as manuscript is concerned. I am intimately acquainted with a lady in this city whom Emma Smith led to the altar and gave by her own hand to Joseph Smith, the prophet, to be his plural wife for time and eternity. Of course, Alexander and David knew before their mother's death that they had seen their father's plural wives; and told her so. She intimated as much to me herself when I conversed with her in the Nauvoo House in 1876.

Absalom, there is so much evidence of this being true that your leading elders who have examined the matter dare not attempt to deny, or refute it. When I put the question to Jason W. Briggs, in Illinois, he at one accused Joseph of being a fallen prophet. It is interesting to read the sermons of Joseph which I am republishing from the Times and Seasons delivered about the time when the hue and cry of his being a fallen prophet was raised. He never spoke more powerful in his life, or prophesied more truly than in those days. As to the manuscripts of any of the revelations. Just about as much is known of the one on celestial marriage as of any of them, or do your elders attempt to account for any of them? And what do they consider the proper manner for revelations to be received? The expression in your letter that if the highest exaltation can not be received without polygamy, then God ceases to be an unchangeable God, is drawing a conclusion that I don't understand. How is it Jesus Christ descended from David, through Solomon the son of a polygamous marriage? And the Savior declared that he was the offspring of David the bright and morning star. God gave Abraham the covenant by which he could become the father of the Faithful; and poor Lazarus when he went to his glory was seen reclining upon the bosom of Abraham. The Patriarchs of the twelve tribes of Israel were the twelve sons of Jacob by his four wives, and it is the names of these twelve which will be written upon the twelve gates of the New Jerusalem. I do not see, that if God honored these twelve polygamous children of Jacob enough to make them the founders of all the tribes of Israel, the chosen seed in which all the nations are to be blest in the early days of the world four thousand years ago, and honor them in the Millennium enough to cause that all men who enter the gates of the Holy City shall pass under the names of these twelve polygamous children; I say, I do not see that he proves himself to be a changeable God. It appears to me that he ought to make polygamy honorable in the latter days, or his children might object to going into the house he has saved so many former day polygamists in. The fact of history is, that whenever God revealed his will to his children, and gave them the gospel of salvation, polygamy was established upon the earth, and was so generally believed and practiced, that it was not in any way condemned as a principle; but was practiced by law. Of course, men sinned in its practice, they do to-day; and God condemns them for it. But when they are authorized by him to enter into that principle he protects them in it. And if they are faithful makes them honorable and honors them before all men. He did in former times and has done so in latter time. The greatest part of Joseph Smith's mission to this dispensation was performed after God revealed the principle of celestial marriage to him. I could show by evidence as good as any that I ever gave you to believe anything I ever told you, that this is true; but my letter is getting too long. It is getting dark and I must close. I hope you won't think I am trying to convert you to polygamy; you know the law is against it, I only wished to answer your objection to our claims to authority.

The enactment of the Edmunds' Law we consider a violation of constitutional guarantee of religious liberty. I believe in letting every man believe and practice what he is sincere in; so long as he does not interfere with the right of his neighbor. I also believe that was the kind of liberty the constitution was framed to secure to all the people in this land. Naturally, then, I consider it unconstitutional, as I know it is unjust and cruel for Congress to take away my liberty because you do not believe in my religion, and raise a great furore and cry against it. But then I know that Congress and the people whose prejudices compel Congress to be unjust, are in the hands of God. He will hold them to account, if we are right and are doing his will we are satisfied, and not at all alarmed; and are willing to await the issue. That is how our people feel.

Give my love to your little family. I am pained to hear of bright little Pearl's death. How happy a thought to know that little children are safe whatever may become of us. My regards to your wife and yourself.

Believe me always your friend and cousin,
JUNIOUS F. WELLS.

GIRARD, Kans., July 1st, 1883.

JUNIOUS F. WELLS, Salt Lake City, Utah.

DEAR COUSIN:—As my former letter was only a partial answer, I will endeavor to answer yours of May 9th. I shall not enter into detail or search the depths of Mormonism, but will call your attention to a few facts concerning the so-called revelation said to have been given to Joseph in July, 1843; about eleven months before his death. You say he never "spoke more powerful, nor prophesied more truly" than about the time, or after he received this revelation on celestial marriage. Now let us see. Just prior to his death he excommunicated J. C. Bennett for preaching this doctrine. Hyrum Smith denounced it, and called it the doctrine of devils. The gospel as revealed in Christ, and as given to the Church in its fulness in 1830, was and is "the power of God unto salvation;" and the vision given in February, 1832, revealed to Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon the fact that all who obeyed that gospel should come forth in the first resurrection and receive of God's glory, even the highest of all. Similar expressions confirmative of the same fact are contained in a revelation of December 27th, 1832, and also harmonize with the testimony of Christ and the Apostles. Now, in 1843 up comes a revelation, about eleven years after, that repeals the first, (i. e.) That those who obeyed the first should come forth in the first resurrection, and says, if they abide not the polygamic law they must be damned. This alone, sir, would make my claim hold good; (i. e.) that God became a changeable God. But we know he can not, hence the polygamic revelation is not of God. Also it is a complete denial of the efficacy of the power of the gospel, as quoted from the revelations of 1832; and as taught by the Church in its infancy, and by the Brighamite Church itself until 1852. For it is known that they, the Brighamites, condemned, denied and decried polygamy upon both continents, from 1844 to 1852; which surely takes the wind out of your sail, for witnesses. For, if Joseph Smith was guilty of receiving the revelation they are also guilty of lying about it, for eight long years and in the most solemn manner; possibly deceiving thousands of honest souls, trusting in them as living oracles. And you, dear cousin, will excuse me for not believing their testimony now, as the stain of eight years perjury is upon them; and has remained upon them unless they have seen fit to sit in sack cloth and ashes and have repented of their sins.

These facts are known to the Government is why you think Congress passed a Bill taking away your liberties, as you termed it. Mr. P. P. Pratt declared against polygamy in 1845, see Millennial Star, vol. 6, July, 1845, by calling it the doctrine of devil's, &c. Now, sir, let us sum up the whole thing in a nut shell and see how we come out. In 1830 the Mormon Church was organized and Book of Mormon published, in which polygamy was condemned. In 1831 the same doctrine is condemned in a revelation given to Joseph Smith which was afterwards published in Doctrine and Covenants. In July, 1843, the polygamous revelation is said to be given. In February 1844, polygamy publicly denounced by Joseph and Hiram. In March, 1844, the same practice again denounced by Hyrum Smith. In June, 1844, the death of Joseph and Hyrum. In 1845 the publication of the article on marriage in the Appendix to Doctrine and Covenants, in which polygamy is called a crime. In 1845 the polygamous doctrine of J. C. Bennett denounced in England by the English Mormon Conference. In 1848 polygamy and sexual resurrectionism severely denounced in Millennial Star; published at Liverpool England. In 1850, Apostle John Taylor denies polygamy in France, in a public debate. And yet in the face of all these facts, you say there is too much testimony in its favor. Away with such testimony for me. Now, dear cousin, don't ask me to believe in your polygamous revelation, nor your Adam-god theory, neither your blood atonement business. But believe me to be a true believer of the everlasting gospel, as given to Joseph Smith, which if obeyed and lived up to will save the human family without polygamy.

Your cousin, in gospel bonds,
A. P. FREE.

Bro. Joseph:—We are considerably excited over the Utah Commission, for it begins to appear that polygamy will have to go; for the thing is getting so exposed that the people begin to see that it is no part of the gospel, but a thing that has been added to cover up iniquity. I think it is getting pretty naked and will show its deformity and corruption to all who will look for the truth, for we must acknowledge that the majority of the people are honest hearted and when they can see the gospel in its purity they are most likely to let go of the Brigham cable; and if they do, look out for a breakage some where.

I remain your brother in the gospel,
JAMES GORF.

BUTLER COUNTY, Alabama,

July 17th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—The Alabama District Conference held here in the Butler Branch, on the 14th and 15th inst., was decided by all to have been the best one held in the district for a long time. As for me, I called it good. It was a spiritual and instructive session to me. The universal testimony was that the Spirit of the Lord was there. I pray that the Saints may have many such pleasant and peaceful seasons.

Before coming here, I spent the months of March and April, and part of May, in the Florida District. I visited some of the branches, but not all. I tried to instruct and encourage the Saints, and show the erring the better way; and I believe my efforts there were appreciated generally. I baptized four in the district, and on the 19th of May I left Cold Water for Volusia county, in South Florida. I had received an invitation to go there. The prospects seemed flattering there for good to be done. It was thought a good and effectual door would be opened there. It was a long way, and an experiment, a venture at least. I publicly stated this to the Saints in conference at Pleasant View Branch, Florida District, May 4th and 5th, and told them that I might succeed, and then I might fail; that it was a risk. So I went and found as others have done, that "all that glitters is not gold." I was gone four weeks on the trip. I passed through Jacksonville, the chief city of Florida. Traveled up the famous St. John's River fifty-two miles on a steamer, and from there by rail to Saint Augustine, on the Atlantic Ocean, where I rested most of one day and looked around, and took some notes of the many wonderful things in the ancient city of America. It is a city of flowers, and beautiful for situation. There are many things of interest there, that we can not mention in this. From there I went by stage forty-five miles, to Mitchell, the place where I was to tarry and preach. I was kindly received by Mr. and Sister Mitchell. I published my appointment to preach. Mr. Mitchell and his folks sent notices to the inhabitants afar off, of the time and place. Well, Bro. Caffall's experience in Colorado at a certain place, except a certain animal mentioned in his letter, describes the situation. The people were wonderfully anxious to have preaching until the time came, and just at that time I suppose it occurred to their minds that they did not want to hear. This is one of my experiences that I wish to notice very gently, and according to the good old hard-shell parson's text, "Pass on to Shunum." If any of the brethren want an exegesis of the text, I refer them to Bro. Moses Gaylord. I visited Daytona, on the Halifax river, fifteen miles from Mitchell. There are about five or six hundred inhabitants there. The Congregationalists hold meeting in a school-house, and the Episcopalians are building; but there was no place for us. One man told me that it might do very well to go out some place where the people were raising children and wanted something to frighten them with; but in that place they did not want anything of that sort. He said it was about all the people could do to make a living, without fooling time away with meetings. Sister Mitchell asked one Reverend for the use of the house he occupied. He told her there was no use for any more preachers there; that the people did not care for those that were there very much. Mr. Mitchell tried the leading men in Ormand, a little town nine miles from his place. They told him they had no use for any Mormonism there. He explained to them that we were not from Utah. They then concluded to consider the matter and let him know. I suppose they are still considering; for up to the time I left they had not let him know. About the only subject that interested the people I met with and talked to, was orange groves and hummock lands. I concluded they were out of my line, and so left the subject with them. If the people in that part of Florida were anxious to hear the gospel, they had gotten over it before I got there, or else I was the wrong man. I spent four weeks on, to me, that unfriendly shore, in the midst of mosquitos, sand, flies and fleas; when by the kindness of Mr. Mitchell I was permitted to turn westward toward the goodly land.

He loaned me ten dollars, which enabled me to retreat in good order, and of course I fell back on the reserve, and am proud to say the army is not demoralized, but ready for a forward movement. I arrived in this district on the 23d of June. Preached some in Pleasant Hill Branch; spent two Sundays there, and baptized one. Congregations were good, and seemed to be interested. Bro. G. T. Chute took me to Lone Star Branch. I did some talking there, and baptized five, all the fruits of others' labors. Bro. Bryant Hardee brought me to this place to conference. Will remain here until the 20th inst., then go back to Lone Star, and will spend two Sundays there. Then will attend the Florida District Conference, to be held at Salem Branch, Baldwin county, Alabama. Prospects are brightening. The cause is onward, and we thank and praise the Lord.

Your brother in Christ,

R. J. ANTHONY.

ALABAMA, July, 1883.

Brother Joseph:—In the Herald for July 7th, I have read the letter of the Rev. L. L. Luse, replying to some of "Bob Elvin's lies." There is one item in that letter in which my name is mentioned. I wish to call the attention of the readers of the Herald to that item. Robert Elvin stated in his letter that the Rev. Luse is replying to, "About four years ago the first of our faith was represented, and the reception that R. J. Anthony (I leave the Rev. off) received was that some of the leading church members wanted to hang him."

The Rev. Luse says, "The leading protestant organizations at that time were the Christian and United Brethren. How is that? I but speak the sentiment of the entire community, when I say with emphasis, let the character and moral standing of the members of the above named churches throw the groundless imputation back into Elvin's face with redoubled force; back to him from whom it came through Robert Elvin, 'the father of lies.' But I presume Elvin will say it is a revelation and must not be disputed."

At the time I commenced preaching in Wilber, there were two protestant organizations there, the Congregational and Methodist. Both churches had their ministers and held regular services in the Congregational Church. Whether they were leading ones or not, I am not prepared to say; but there is one point that I am prepared to speak advisedly upon; and that is, that a church member did tell me in Judge Davis' office that he "would lead a party now, and take me out and hang me to a tree;" pointing towards the timber on the Blue River. He further said that my "hands were dyed in the blood of the innocent women and children slain at Mountain Meadows." He made these statements before several persons that lived in Wilber, and I know some of them that are still living there and heard the statement. If he was not a leading church member, several church members did recognize him as a leader at that time in a crusade against me. At the close of my meetings this man, or the minister, one, or the other, would get up and read extracts from papers and make comments on them, invariably accusing the church with everything that was vile; rehashing the "Spaulding story" and walking on the water tale, until the good citizens of Wilber became disgusted. To the honor of some church members, as well as the citizens, they did not endorse the movement, and said it should be stopped. Robert Elvin needed no revelation upon that point. So far as that statement is concerned, it is true. There is nothing to hurl back. To the honor and credit of the man, not the minister, I wish to state that after that time he treated me with marked civility and respect.

I have known Robert Elvin long enough, and have been intimately connected with him in the ministry, to know him to be truthful and an honorable man.

H. O. TYPOS.

ALBION, Idaho,

July 15th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—On the 10th inst., we were visited by the worst hail storm known in these parts. It first struck my place on the west, and beat down a belt about twenty rods wide by eighty long, passing through about eight acres of grain. It beat our garden stuff, peas, beans, squash, melon and cucumber vines, and cabbage, &c., into the ground; and cut nearly all the leaves off the potato vines. The grain was wheat and oats on the track through my field. The wheat it left worthless except for hay; the oats at least half destroyed. It next struck Mr. Cook on the east, extending over the greatest part of his place. It almost destroyed his crop. Thence on to Mr. I. Parke's, and Gyles: The last named looks very bad; all the barley in its track was ruined; much of it will hardly make fair hay. The hail killed over eighty young chicks for us. The hail extended further south but not in such a body. I estimate my loss at $300 at least; Mr. Cook's at $700; do not know what those below have lost, but it has cut off in the neighborhood of about four thousand bushels of grain. "The hail lay three and four inches deep here, lots of them as large as dove's eggs.

I suppose we ought to be willing to share in the troubles which are being visited upon the people from time to time. Our part of this great country has been wonderfully blest in field and store, and I can see no reason why, "if weighed in the balance and found wanting," we should not be remembered when the rod passes over, even the nooks and corners may be remembered by Him who called them into form. I hope I am willing it shall be so. Even so.

Your brother in the one faith and hope,
C. L. ALBERTSON.

HINDSBORO, Illinois,

July 18th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I arrived here yesterday. I had hardly touched the platform, when I was grasped by the hand. Glad to see you. Going to preach for us? I promised I would, got out notice, having been supplied with the tract, "Gospel," paid two boys to put one in every house in town; bell rang, and a large congregation. (I don't see if the Lord intended me for a preacher, why he left me deficient in the organ of singing). Opened by reading and prayer. Preached for one and a half hours, on the Gospel of the Kingdom, with the best of liberty, to an audience of interested listeners. Have promised to come again, and preach on my next round. I think I will have some one with me, who can take up the work there. I speak Saturday night and Sunday, in Blue Mound.

Yours truly,

J. A. ROBINSON.

MAMMOTH SPRINGS, Fulton Co., Ark.,

July 20th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—I left Nebraska City, June 29th, having spent the time pleasantly with the Saints there. The road was in terrible condition, and we were five hours behind when we arrived at Atchison that night. The next morning I walked seven miles into the country to Good Intent, where I spent the time very pleasantly, until July 3d, preaching twice on Sunday the 1st. On the 3d arrived at Independence, Missouri, where I spent the 4th and was well pleased. The celebration was a grand success, and all parties seemed to enter into it heartily. As I saw the "Stars and Stripes," waving from nearly every house, wagon, and team, I could but contrast the difference between now and when war was raging on the border, and when here in Independence it was as much as a man's life was worth to hold the glorious old banner to the breeze. Thank God for peace. I staid at Independence till the 7th, and then left the kind hearted Saints there with regret. The same day I arrived at Webb City, where I found four families of Saints, who were glad to welcome me. Bro. Stephen Maloney and wife and brother, came over from Galesburg and spent Sunday with us, and I enjoyed talking to the people very much. Monday the 9th, just before night, some parties came from Galesburg to be baptized; and so, after preaching, we drove to Center Creek, near Orinogo, where in the still hours of night, I led Dr. Boas and the wife of Bro. Augustus Smith, into the waters of baptism; confirmed at the water, and bade them adieu, they to go home, and we to return to Webb City. I spoke again on Tuesday night, and on Wednesday Bro. Orson Sutherland procured a team and buggy, and went with me in search of a cousin of mine, whom I had never met. After some trouble in finding the road, we found her about fifteen miles south of Webb City. Bro. Orson returned home and I remained at my cousins two days, and was well received and entertained. Mr. Tombaugh, my cousin's husband, seems to be an honest, industrious and pleasant man. They are happy and contented, and prospering finely. I left them on the 13th, and the next day late I arrived at Augusta, where I remained for the night, and next morning, after about ten miles walk, I found Bro. James R. Jones, at whose house I now am.

I am in the land of "grand-pap and his fifty sons," who were so anxious to part company with Bro. Springer last winter. I have preached three times, and so far all has passed off pleasantly and peacefully; but from the reports which come to us, I suppose we are in constant danger. We are informed by one who claims to have seen it, that there is a paper in circulation, with several names attached, binding themselves to stand by each other in killing us all. They do not propose to give us any notice this time, nor lay hands on us, but to watch their chance, and take us from the brush. I lay no claim to being brave. I do not fancy such surroundings at all; but I have no intention of leaving until I get ready, unless specially directed. I feel as calm and peaceful as I ever did in my life, more so than usual. I do not believe we will be hurt, if we trust in Him who is able to save; but if the brethren persist in defending themselves by force of arms, I can not tell what the result will be; but my present impression is that the cloud will pass away, and we will be left to enjoy our rights. The prospects, so far, are not very flattering for good being done; but things may change. I hope so.

I thought from latest information that Bro. Springer would be with me, by this time; but he has not yet come. I do not know what is the matter, but I guess we will see him ere long. This is a terrible country. Rough and rocky; with here and there a little patch of land, which can be plowed. They say, however, that it is a good country for a poor man; and I am satisfied it is, providing he is willing to stay poor. Ticks and chiggers are very plentiful, and I am continually reminded of their presence on my person. I have welts all over me now smaller than hickorynuts. I have seen one thing which is worth looking at, and that is the Mammoth Spring. They say it discharges 65,000 cubic feet of water per minute, and men differ in regard to its depth all the way from seventy-five to three hundred feet. Call it seventy-five and it is a big spring. I told some parties by private letter that the volume of water was 36,000 cubic feet per minute; but I find I was mistaken, and it is 65,000. It makes quite a large river. There are other curiosities I want to see, if permitted.

If the Lord wills, I design being at the debate in Red River county, Texas, August 7th; and thence as I shall be given wisdom to decide. The condition of the work throughout the mission is not as good as I would like to report; but we are not without hope of success. Pray for us, all ye who love to pray.

More anon, if spared,

HEMAN C. SMITH.

The Indiana Baptist remarks: Dr. Stimson made a captial hit on Ingersoll at the Northeastern Association. He said: "The sun by day and the moon and stars by night shine on, and we never pay much attention to them, except, perhaps, to look up at the sun at about eleven o'clock to see if it is almost dinner time. But if a wild goose flies squawking through the air the whole neighborhood is out looking at it."

Summary of News.

July 19th.—The number of deaths at Cairo, Egypt, yesterday from Cholera was sixty-eight. Also during the same time there were twenty-one deaths from cholera at Damietta, thirty-two at Mansurah, twenty-four at Samanoud, thirty at Ghizeh, and twenty-two at Chibin.

A credit of 1,000,000 pesetas was voted by the Government of Spain to defray the cost of all possible measures to prevent the introduction of cholera into that country.

A supplementary report of the first quarter of this year announces that out of a population of 288,000 in Calcutta, India, nearly 600 have succumbed to the effects of the dreadful scourge. This is an excess of over 200 deaths for the corresponding quarter of 1882.

At Lima, South America, at half past two this morning, a strong and prolonged shock of earthquake was felt.

The contemplated strike of the Western Union Telegraph Operators began at 11:05 this morning. Before night many of the vacant places were filled by other men.

CROP REPORTS.

In the north of Italy crops are greatly damaged by storms.

The condition of the crops in Hungary, Germany, promises an average yield of wheat and rye throughout the country. It is expected barley will be below the average. Oats are everywhere good.

The harvest in Prussia promises well, especially in the northern provinces. There will be less in Pomerania and Brandenburg. Wheat in the former is below the average. In Schleswig-Holstein, Westphalia, and Rhenish, Prussia, the drouth did much damage. Fruits, beet-roots, and potatoes are everywhere good.

"The harvest year of 1882-'83" says the San Francisco Journal of Commerce, July 12, "has closed, and it has panned out gloriously. True, our wheat receipts have been less than those of the year preceding, yet prices have at all times been remunerative. Our wheat exports have exceeded 14,600,000 centals, valued at $25,000,000. Our exports of flour for the twelve months were 1,100,000 barrels, which is considerably in excess of that of the year preceding; and judging from the new flouring mills that have been erected and enlarged, and others projected, it is safe to say that in the near future we will ship abroad a much greater proportion of flour than wheat. Great Britain is our best flour customer, China second, Central America third, Hawaii fourth. Our barley exports during the year past have been small owing to the high speculative prices ruling at all times. This year's barley crop is now being harvested, and it promises to be both large and of good quality. New wheat and barley have both appeared in market, finding prompt sale; the latter, however, sold low, and for that reason we do not look for free deliveries for some time to come. The hold-over stock, both of old wheat and barley, is considerable, but the stock in the State has not yet been fully ascertained. Oats of the new crop have appeared in market and sold at high figures. The transactions for the last year at the two Call Boards aggregated $49,776,637. These are big figures for the first year's public operations, and are but a foretaste of the immensity of the traffic that is sure to follow in the near future."

In Iowa, Minnesota, Dakota, Illinois, and Wisconsin, crop prospects are better than usual.

The outlook in Michigan is gloomy, on account of rust.

Great numbers of cotton caterpillars, have made their appearance in Alabama, threatening great destruction to that crop.

Wheat in some parts of Indiana is thrashing out from ten to twenty bushels per acre, and is of good quality.

Crop reports from Ontario and Quebec show that the country has suffered no more from rains this season than in former seasons from other causes. Taking 100 as the basis of average, the percentage average crop is as follows: Fall wheat, 78; spring wheat, 90; barley, 90; oats, 90; peas, 89; rye, 93; hay, 122; potatoes, 95; corn, 74; roots, 93; apples, 64; other fruits, 80.

July 20th.—There were over 100 deaths from cholera at Cairo, Egypt. At Balak a special messenger counted eighty funerals between 8 and 11 Thursday morning. There are thirty deaths in the Shoobray quarter. Two deaths are officially reported at Abdin. Wednesday it is known twenty-five at least died. Patients in the worst stages of the disease are carried to the hospitals through the crowded streets. The people of Shirbin have protested against the improper observances of funeral regulations, and troops are summoned to prevent a threatened revolt against the authorities. It has been decided to form a cordon around Alexandria to prevent an influx of the refugees from the infected districts.

Official returns mention sixteen towns infected with cholera. It is stated that since the last returns 200 persons have died in the Bulak quarter of Cairo within twenty-four hours.

There were twenty-nine deaths from cholera yesterday at Mansurah, twenty-four at Samanoud, twenty-eight at Ghizeh, forty-four at Chierbin, and three at Damietta. There were sixteen deaths from the disease at Menzaleh, Tuesday.

At St. Petersburg there was an explosion of a powder mill yesterday. The mixing room was destroyed. Nine persons killed and three severely injured.

A village in Styria was recently burned while the inhabitants were absent from their homes to give welcome to the Emperor of Austria.

Business failures increased eleven in number last week, as compared with the preceding seven days. The total was 168.

Quarantine regulations against cholera are growing more severe in Europe. The deaths at Cairo rose to 140 to-day. Meantime, while America is thus threatened from the Atlantic coast, vessels laden with yellow fever are plying the waters of the gulf, anxious to land their deadly infection on our southern shores. The steamer City of Washington, for New York from Vera Cruz, was yesterday stopped at Havana with twenty-seven cases of the yellow plague on board.

Not since 1880 has the annual immigration into the United States been so small as the report of the Bureau of Statistics shows it was for the year ending June 30th, 1883. The number of immigrants arrived during the year was 599,114 being 189,878 less than during the preceding fiscal year, and 70,317 less than during the year ending June 30th, 1881. The greatest falling off has been in the arrivals from Germany, 191,647, against 249,161 in the preceding year; Canada, 64,971, against 93,029; Sweden, 34,596, against 64,276 and Ireland 63,720, against 76,252. The only foreign country from which there has been an increased arrival is Scotland which sent us 849 more immigrants in the last fiscal year than in the preceding twelve months.

This great decline is caused by the improved times in Europe—especially in Germany and Ireland—and the end of the "boom" in this country, followed by falling markets, dull demand for labor, failure of strikes, and other discouragements.

At Mount Carroll, Kankakee, Lincoln, Dwight, and Bureau, Ill., a severe rain and wind storm did much damage to crops and other property.

At Carrington, Dakota, a tornado destroyed 14 buildings, killed one man, and injured several other persons.

July 21st.—Several cases of cholera still exist in the east end of London, England.

Public feeling in France towards England is extremely bitter, and the relations of the two countries are becoming unpleasant and uncomfortable.

July 22d.—The ravages of the cholera in Egypt are spreading to an alarming degree. At Cairo Saturday there were 381 deaths, 33 at Mansourah, 93 at Shirbin, and over 150 deaths in other Egyptian towns. All efforts to confine the plague have proved so far unavailing. Fifteen hundred inhabitants of Bulak have removed up the Nile. The owners who have burned their houses will be indemnified. The natives oppose the removal of patients to hospitals. The disease is very sudden in its effects. People frequently fall dead in the streets. The epidemic is spreading northward as well as southward. The disease is spreading everywhere. The mortality increases hourly. The inhabitants were suddenly driven out of their homes by the police Friday and Saturday nights, and were huddled on board barges. Hundreds of them evaded the police and fled to the center of the city, taking with them their filthy bedding and rags. Eight hundred of them landed at Turah to-day. Gen. Woods' troops compelled others to return. Since then there has been a case of cholera among Gen. Woods' forces at Turah. The deaths at Cairo really numbered 481 between 8 a. m. and 6 p. m., Sunday, besides a fearful mortality among the Egyptian artillery. The natives of Abbasesey are panic stricken. The British officers have to bury the dead.

There were thirty-nine deaths from yellow fever at Havana, Cuba, last week.

The cholera is reported by a Mexican paper to have reached that country.

A house at Salt Mines, Avery's Island, near New Orleans, containing 1,000 pounds of dynamite, was struck by lightning yesterday, causing a terrific explosion. Much damage was done to buildings, cars, etc. No lives were lost. Windows in buildings a mile distant were shattered.

A tornado yesterday crossed Blue Earth, Waseka, Steele, Dodge, Olmstead, and Wabasha counties, Minn. The most serious damage so far reported is at Kasota, Blue Earth county, near Owatonna, Steele county, near Manterville, Dodge county, and at Elgin, in Wabasha county. The fury of the storm seems to have been exhausted before it crossed the Mississippi.

In Minnesota three persons were killed, and thirty-seven wounded. The same storm, before leaving Dakota, killed nine persons and wounded fifty. The passenger train on the Winoma and St. Peter Railroad was blown completely off the track, injuring twenty-five persons, some probably fatally.

A deluge of rain fell last night at Fon du Lac, Wis., sweeping the entire eastern portion of the city, submerging over two hundred houses, and carrying away light material of every description. Damage $25,000.

July 23d.—The reports of the deaths Sunday from cholera are as follows: At Damietta, 17; Mansurah, 10; Samanoud, 23; Tintah, 17; Chobar, 17; Chibin, 23; at nine other places, 78. There were 295 deaths from the disease at Cairo during the same time. The Khedive and his Ministers have gone to Cairo for the purpose of remedying the confusion in sanitary arrangements.

Advices from Egypt state that in addition to the outbreak of cholera at the Town of Fareskour, eight miles south-west of Damietta, leprosy has appeared there and is spreading rapidly. There are neither doctors nor medicines at Fareskour.

A serious outbreak of cholera is reported at Bombay, as there were thirty-seven sporadic cases of the disease there during last week.

The Mark Lane Express in a review of the British grain trade the last week says: "Constant rain checked the hitherto rather rapid progress of cereals. Native wheats were six-pence to two shillings higher and foreign wheats are steadier. Flour is firmer. Maize is three-pence lower. Barley is steady. Cargoes off coast are firmer with few buyers. There are twenty-two arrivals and four sales. Ten cargoes were withdrawn and thirteen remained, including three California cargoes. Cargoes on passage and for shipment are firmer, and trade is brisk. Sales of English wheat during the week 29,024 quarters at 42s 2d per quarter against 12,183 quarters at 49s 2d the corresponding week last year. The Times' crop report says the area of wheat planted in the United Kingdom is from 10 to 15 per cent below last year, and the yield will be below the average. Reports from the Continent are very similar in their conclusions.

The work of destruction caused by yesterday's flood at Fon du Lac, Wis., has made itself visible to-day in all its phases, and what is still more alarming is that it continues to rain. Every ravine and stream is overflowing, and the water from Lake Winnebago is backing up into the northern part of the city, flooding everything, and there seems to be no prospect of its letting up at present. North of Division every street as far as Scott street is flooded. The water has flowed over Merrill, Rees, Johnson, Follet, Arndt, McWilliam, and Sibley streets. It then tended west, covering Main street from Scott to Arndt, and backed up into that portion of the city in the bend of the river, overflowing Cannister, Doty, Juneau, and Brooke street. All over this portion of the city men were wading about. Some fortunately had boats, and others poled themselves around on floating crossings of the street.

At Appleton, Wis., $200,000 worth of property was destroyed by the same storm. At Little Chute, a number of buildings were thrown down. The damage around Plymouth, Wis., is beyond all estimate.

The Milwaukee River has risen over four feet and wholesale stores in Milwaukee are flooded in many places, and lumber is floating from yards near the mouth. The storm at Grand Rapids, Wis., caused the destruction of several buildings. At Madison a ball of fire danced about over the house-tops for some time, and finally struck the High School, doing considerable damage.

The severest storm ever known at Asbury Park, N. J., raged there this afternoon. The Madison, Gilsøy and Howard House were unroofed, and six carriages loaded with people upset and wrecked. A number of tents were blown down at Ocean Grove. An unknown colored man was blown out to sea in a boat.

A terrible wind and rain storm passed over Exeter, Ont., last evening, which created intense excitement. Hotels, churches and houses were damaged. There was no loss of life. The town to-day presents a most deplorable appearance.

Less than twenty per cent of our national debt is held by the people of Europe.

July 24th.—The cholera has broken out among the soldiers of the British Forty-second Regiment, which recently arrived at Suez from Cairo. Two members have died. It is reported that cholera has appeared among the British soldiers at the citadel in Cairo. One soldier died in the military hospital at Abassies. The Forty-sixth British Regiment has 116 sick out of 802. The remaining British troops have 476 sick out of over 6,000 men. During the twenty-four hours ending at 8 o'clock this morning there were 463 deaths from cholera at Cairo, twenty-three at Zifteh, sixteen at Tantah, nine at Shirbin, thirteen at Mansourah, 117 at Chibin, forty-three at Nehalet, ninety-five at Ghizeh, and seven at Chobar. The scene at Cairo to-night is a melancholy one. It is impossible to walk a hundred yards without meeting a coffin or ambulance. The evictions of inhabitants at Bulak and the burning of their dwellings continue. The evicted people are sent to Baerage, where a repetition of the Tourah horror is probable.

At New York and Washington the authorities are taking steps to prevent the introduction of yellow fever and cholera.

Fourteen persons have been committed for trial at Mullingar, Ireland, for complicity in the murder of Mrs. Smythe.

Spotswood, N. J., about nine miles west of South Amboy, was visited by a tornado yesterday. The Reformed Dutch Church and several dwellings were destroyed.

At noon Monday a fearful cyclone swept through Ingham county, Mich., killing three people, injuring many others, and doing vast damage to property. Hennesin, Mendota, and Kankakee, Ill., have all been visited by heavy rains, accompanied by unusual lightning and thunder. Lightning destroyed $2,000 worth of property. At Depere, and West Bend, Wis., heavy rains have fallen, raising the rivers washing away dams and other property. Huron, Dakota, and vicinity, for four or five days has been visited by terrific wind and hail-storms, destroying about one fourth of the small grain crop. Five persons were killed by Saturday's tornado at Altoura, Dakota.

July 25th.—The Khedive of Egypt visited all the cholera hospitals to-day.

In the last twelve hours there have been 367 deaths from cholera at Cairo, and seventy-one at Chibin.

Col. Sartorius reports that the carcasses of diseased cattle without skins are still floating in the Nile.

The number of deaths from cholera at Mansourah yesterday was 13, at Chibel 113, Zifteh 23, Mehalet 43, Ghizeh, 95, Tantah 16. Two hundred and eighty-four deaths occurred in Cairo within twelve hours.

No change is visible in general situation of the telegrapher's strike.

During the last twenty-four hours 558 deaths from cholera occurred at Cairo.

The bills of health which were given to vessels leaving London to-day declare that no cholera exists there.

One or two isolated cases of cholera are reported in Russia.

European powers generally, are arousing themselves to the protection of their countries against cholera. Quarantine against yellow fever is being enforced in the southern and eastern ports.

Catewayo, the noted king of the Zulus, died in South Africa.

Great floods have caused much damage in Buenos Ayres, South America.

Japan has been for some time studying the political history of Europe, and proposes with the aid of information thus gained, to establish a more perfect home government.

An earthquake was felt at Athens, Greece, yesterday.

The coal mines of Braidwood, Ill., were so badly flooded by the recent heavy rains that work has been suspended in consequence. The mines that are flooded the worst are those of Beard & Hickox, the Chicago & Wilmington Coal Company, the Wilmington & Springfield, Maltby's and the G. H. & I. shafts. Large pumps from Chicago are now at work.

Both Australia and New Zealand are making energetic efforts to provide for the naval and military defense of their shores.

FIRES AND ACCIDENTS.

July 19.—The soap factory at Joliet, Ill., burned; loss $10,000. Loss by fire near Joliet, $3,000. At Davenport, Iowa, $5,000. Three vessels and other property in Brooklyn, N. Y., were burned this morning, resulting in the death of one man, the injury of twelve others, and a loss estimated at a million dollars. In the excitement a captain's trunk was thrown overboard, and robbed of $6,000.

July 22.—Loss by fire in New York City, $163,000. At Brooklyn, Ill., $20,000. Hudson, Mich., $2,500. Milwaukee, Wis., $43,000. The Grand Trunk freight shed, at Seaford, Ont., was struck by lightning and consumed. Loss $30,000.

A twelve year-old girl named McDonald was found dead in the woods two miles from Cotulla, Tex., eight miles from home. She had been lost four days and five nights, and evidently died from fright and exhaustion. The mother was in Laredo with a little son who was bitten by a rattlesnake. During the last twelve months this lady has lost a son-in-law killed by accident, her husband died from a blow on the head, and her son shot his own brains out in her presence.

July 23.—At Braidwood, Ill., a mine and surroundings were burned, but no lives lost. Loss by fire at Leavenworth, Kan., $4,000.

About a month ago the company operating the salt mines at Avery's, on Petit Anse Island, La., received a large quantity of dynamite for blasting purposes. The same was stored in a magazine situated about 400 yards from the works. Large trees were in close proximity. Saturday, July 24, a few minutes after 12 o'clock, a terrific storm burst on the island. Torrents of rain fell and flash after flash of lightning rended the skies. The workmen had barely left and reached the boarding house, situated at some distance from the works, when the electricity struck the magazine, and immediately followed an awful explosion. For a few minutes all seemed entirely paralyzed. Recovering, some rushed out to ascertain the cause. It was then discovered that the whole of the building in which was stored the explosive compound had totally disappeared, and in its place was left a yawning chasm fifteen or twenty feet deep by about 100 feet in length. The trees surrounding were prostrated and shattered. One, two and a half feet in diameter, was carried by the immense power of the blast some two hundred yards from where it previously stood. Every building on the island contiguous to the mines was shaken in a terrible manner, causing every glass door and window to part with its glass. The buildings containing the mills and machinery were considerably damaged, preventing access to the shaft for the time being. Eight box cars, ready to be loaded, were entirely crushed in their upper part, the running gear remaining intact. Two persons, Mrs. Cooks and daughter, were slightly injured by falling pieces of glass.

Loss by fire at Memphis, Tenn., over $200,000. At Charlottetown, Prince Edward's Island, $20,000.

Near Baltimore, late Monday night, a rotten pier at a picnic resort gave way under the weight of a large number of people. They had crowded together with a view of securing a sure passage by a barge which was making her last trip for the night. It is thought that out of the 200 people who were thrown into the water seventy-seven were drowned. Sixty bodies have been recovered.

Seven women and children were drowned yesterday by the upsetting of a pleasure-boat on Lake Lugano, Switzerland.

About 9 o'clock Monday evening the most terrific rain-storm of the season occurred at Ottawa, Ill., in the vicinity of Marseilles and Seneca, stations on the Rock Island Railroad. The quantity of rain was so immense that it raised Fox River at this place some ten feet; and at the points named it laid acres of corn flat on the ground, and washed away the track of the Rock Island Road for many rods in a number of places, for a distance of twenty miles eastward, leaving in several instances the rails and ties hanging several feet above the deep depressions made by the rushing flood. Besides this the storm injured a number of buildings, and near Marseilles several houses were flooded two or three feet deep above the floors; and in that of Phillip Hale, near the river, the flood was so heavy and dashing that it swept Mr. Hale, wife, and child with it, drowning them all. Their bodies were found to-day some distance down the river, whither they had floated and lodged in a felled tree-top. At this point the 2:10 a. m. passenger-train from the West and four following passenger-trains were blockaded; in all some twenty-five passenger-coaches, containing over 800 passengers, where they remained until 6 o'clock this evening; and at the eastern end of the washouts at Seneca were a like number of passenger-trains thus delayed all day.

At Crawfordsville, Ind., a man was run over and killed by the cars, while attempting to pass in front of the moving train.

At Atlantic City, N. J., a girl 14 years old was drowned.

A carriage containing the skeletons of three grown persons and two children, sitting bolt upright, as if alive, was recently found under a large tree near the road in Llano county, Texas. The tree was shattered by lightning. It is supposed that the carriage sought shelter under the tree, and was struck, killing the horses and inmates.

July 25th.—Eight persons were drowned in the James River at Claremont, Va., Monday night. They were crossing in a boat on their way to a prayer-meeting.

A man was killed by lightning, near Chattanooga, Tenn.

Original Poetry.

O, THE ANGEL BRIGHT HAS COME.

DEDICATED TO BRO. COLUMBUS SCOTT.

TUNE.—"O, the beautiful world."

O, have you heard the gladsome news,
That angel hands have brought
The gospel plan again to earth,
The one that Jesus taught;
The gospel that he once declared,
That all the "world" should hear;
And as a "witness" to be preached,
That its sad "end" was near.
O, the angel bright has come,
O, the angel bright has come;
Before the gospel's glorious light,
The creeds of men grow dim,
And honest hearts confess to God,
And "fear" and "worship him."

Long has the earth in blindness walked,
And groped in error's night;
But now can tread in wisdom's ways,
And paths of heavenly light;
The gospel full again is preached,
Though old, yet ever new;
And all who will the truth obey,
Will find the "doctrine" true.

The things concerning Jesus Christ,
His reign on David's throne,
His coming, and his rule on earth,
And all that he has done;
His sufferings and his wondrous death,
His church in all its parts;
The "kingdom" and the "things" thereof,
Are taught to honest hearts.

And faith in God, in Christ, his Son,
And in the Holy Ghost,
Is now required, as in times past,
Of all earth's doubting hosts.
Repentance and baptism too,
That sins may be forgiven;
The Spirit-birth must men partake,
To seal them heirs of heaven.

The "signs" to follow the belief,
Of gospel truth to-day,
Because that God is still the same,
And yesterday—always.
The Spirit's "gifts" the Church attend
Through "laying on of hands;"
All blessings to all men belong,
Who keep the Lord's commands.

And John, in glorious vision, saw
An angel earthward speed,
With gospel light to men on earth,
Who of the truth had need.
The angel came, and men received
The priesthood as of old.
Then let the news of gospel grace
In all the world be told.

A FEW PLAIN WORDS TO A PLAIN PEOPLE.

BELIEVING that plainness is one of the characteristics of Deity and should be also of his servants and Saints, I undertake to write a plain essay upon a very plain subject to a plain people.

My field of labor is in what is termed a "new country." New, because it has not been settled hitherto by a civilized race, at least for many centuries, until the present day, when we see the "rivers"

"spoiling" the "land shadowing with wings," just as Isaiah in the eighteenth chapter of his vision or prophecy, declared they would. "These "rivers," or streams of humanity, flowing from the "many waters" or "nations," are filling up this land, or taking possession of it, for a "spoil;" thereby availing themselves of the generous offer of our government, viz: of one hundred and sixty acres of land to every man subscribing to the law governing this princely gift. They flow from almost every quarter of the globe, impelled by a desire to better their condition, temporarily, yet ignorant of the fact that God is the great cause of this universal movement; he having "determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation." (Acts 17:26).

As a people we believe that in harmony with his eternal purpose to establish his kingdom upon the earth, as intimated in "our Lord's Prayer," and declared by Daniel and other prophets, he has reserved this land for the commencement of the rolling forth of the "little stone" that was to be "cut out of the mountain without hands," that it might fill the whole earth, "and the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High." (Dan. 7).

We also believe that we have been called to be co-workers with him in the establishment of that kingdom, and that it is now being cut, as a "little stone, out of the mountain," and that our duty is to represent the kingdom to our fellow men, setting forth its nature, laws, ordinances, promises and privileges to be enjoyed in the present life, and the glory and exaltation to be realized hereafter. What a high and holy calling! How glorious! Can the honors of earth be compared to it? Compare the petty, frail, crumbling and corrupt kingdoms of this world with the pure and holy, life-giving, universal and eternally enduring kingdom of God, wherein dwelleth righteousness, peace and truth, and glory and honor forevermore, and it will be acknowledged, that as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are the honors of the service and kingdom of God, higher and greater, and more glorious than all the honor the world can afford. Such honors, such glory, are we called unto; such a glorious purpose are we called to be "co-workers with him" in.

In keeping with the greatness of our calling is the absolute necessity of our fitness for the same. How can we engage in so glorious a work without a proper preparation? The means of that preparation have already been revealed unto us. We have rendered a formal submission to, and acceptance of it, and in consequence have received a degree of light and blessings, as evidence of our acceptance by the great master of the work; but our successful preparation depends upon our keeping faithful to the covenant we have made, that we may secure and retain the indwelling monitor, the Holy Spirit, that is to guide us into all truth; and as that Spirit is holy, we must be holy.

I have no doubt all Latter Day Saints realize the foregoing truths, yet we may differ in the degree of appreciation of them. There are those who seem hardly to understand their force or meaning. We want to ask such, How are we to properly represent the kingdom of God, that the world may see its glories and beauties and be led to accept it, and become co-workers with God and ourselves? In answering this important question it will be necessary to remember that we are presenting something entirely new and strange to the world, foreign to their traditions and preconceived ideas, and utterly opposed to the spirit thereof. That it is intended to regenerate, purify and exalt mankind, making them better, purer, wiser and happier here, and thus fitting them for an eternity of joys, blessings and glories in the life to come. It must also be remembered that however ignorant they may be of the things of God, they are thinking and reasoning beings, used to comparing things with things, and drawing deductions of the fitness of things for a given purpose, by apparent or real results, as they appear to them. In other words, they will judge of a tree by its fruits; hence it will be necessary to convince them that that which we represent as the kingdom of God possesses that regenerating, purifying and glorifying power which we claim for it.

It will not do to ask them to wait for evidences beyond this life; there must be sufficient evidence here to convince them that at least it makes men better and purer. This evidence can not be presented by the preaching of the word alone. It will be looked for in the lives of its adherents, and if it is not found there, it will be vain, though a Demosthenes, a Paul, or even the angels bring all their eloquence to bear in setting forth its beauties. "The tree is known by its fruits," is an adage which will never grow old, but will always retain the vigor of eternal truth.

We will now look at facts as they are transpiring. This land is fast being filled by continuous "rivers" or streams of humanity from almost every nation. They are spreading abroad over the almost boundless wilds, following the track of the chariots of Nahum, or going before them and beckoning the "flaming torches" to follow, until the desert teems with civilized life, and the wilderness blossoms as the rose, and the land is filled with cities. Among the teeming thousands that are scattering over the land, many of our own people are found, wisely seeking to own and occupy the fair heritage spread out before them. This is as it should be. They are entitled to the bounties of the Government, and no doubt appreciate the princely offer; but underlying this desire to possess, I have no doubt will be found the leading of the Spirit of God; that in the midst of these teeming millions, his witnesses may be found to bear testimony of his marching kingdom, which is to become triumphant over all the earth. This is your calling and duty, ye Latter Day Saints, wherever found!

And now let me press home the grand question, How shall we represent that kingdom? It has no affinity with the world, i. e., it does not partake of corruption. It seeks not its pleasures, the pleasures of sin. It stands on the Rock of truth. It panders not to falsehood in any shape. Its characteristics are justice, truth, mercy, purity, wisdom and love. In these reposes its power to bless. Hence, if we are to represent it to our fellows, we must represent it in this light. And if we are a part of that kingdom these excellencies must shine in us, in our lives and persons. The tree must bring forth its fruits in us, or they will fail to see its beauties, and instead of representing we shall be found basely misrepresenting it; hence, traitors to its cause. Every word we utter, every deed we do, every habit we indulge in, and every manner of deportment will be taken into account, and will be used as evidence for or against the kingdom of God. Verily, "What manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness!"

While our trust is in God we must be self-reliant, not seeking to live off our neighbors, but be industrious. "Whatever our hands find to do, [in righteousness] do it with our might." We must be frugal, always living within our means; for if we live beyond them we are encroaching upon others, and depriving them of their rights. We must live honestly before all men. We must be kind to the erring, merciful to our enemies, lift up the fallen, and never crush a foe. We must bear and forbear, yet stand valiantly for the right, ever willing to yield what we demand from our fellows. Our appreciation of the gospel of the kingdom must be manifest by willing obedience thereunto. We must never be ashamed to confess Jesus Christ and his truth. Cowards are not the product of his kingdom. We must not be brawlers; "Can a man full of words be justified?" Our words must be seasoned with wisdom. We must not be contentious, engendering strife. "Blessed are the peace makers, for they shall be called the children of God." We must not be talebearers. "He that is of a faithful spirit concealeth the matter." "He that uttereth a slander is a fool." "A lying tongue is but for a moment." The "Liar shall have his portion in the lake." (Bible).

We must be decent in appearance. We shall hardly be clean of heart, if unclean in our persons. Cleanliness is undoubtedly a part of Godliness. Filth in our homes, in our persons, or in our clothing, will be a sure evidence of a neglect of those habits and proprieties that are essential to health, and that command for us a proper respect from those we meet. Poverty and filth are not necessarily boon companions. Christ for our sakes became poor; but his life and teachings forbid the thought that he was unclean in habits, person or dress; purity in all things was his motto, and this characteristic marked his whole life. We have seen poverty in its lowest depths, but it has been robbed of its repulsiveness, by clean habits and neatness of attire, and has commanded our esteem for those in straightened circumstances, who were thus manfully struggling with this common foe; while filth in our homes, persons, or attire, loathes and disgusts, and is evidence of loss of all self respect, and an utter disregard of the proprieties of life, and debars others from yielding that regard which would otherwise be our just due from all. It is impossible for a right minded person to withhold a respectful deference from the poor, who give evidence of clean and tidy habits, and right doing. On the other hand, it is next to impossible for him to yield such deference to the negligent slattern, or to the man who is the personification of filth. I am no advocate of extravagance in dress. I can admire humanity in calico, when neat and clean, even though it be well worn, as much and a little more than when decked in the finest and costliest apparel. The man in a clean, though patched coat, looks just as noble in my eyes as he who wears the finest broadcloth; and I am satisfied God has as much respect for him, but he can not esteem uncleanness. No man can properly represent this kingdom whose dress and manners are unclean and marked with neglect. He may burn with zeal, but is evidently lacking very essential knowledge. He may be loud in his vociferation about the beauties of the kingdom of God, but they shine not in him. His appearance will seem to give the lie to his utterances; and in spite of his protestations those whom he seeks to convince will be driven to disgust, rather than be attracted by his representations.

In the light of these truths how essential it is, that as members of the mystical body, we should see that we are in harmony with its nature and spirit; then we shall properly represent the Church and Kingdom of God. The lovers of truth will then be drawn toward us, and will see that truth shining forth in our words and ways. They will come nearer, and more closely examine the truths we teach, and will furnish other examples of the verity of the saying of Tertulian, "Whoever looked well into our holy religion, who did not embrace it?"

Then, dear Saints, one and all, rich and poor, in the crowded cities, or on the desert wilds, in the mansion or the cottage, in the forum or at the anvil, at the desk or the plow; and last, though not least, those whose sacred calling is to dispense the word, let us vie with each other in properly representing this glorious kingdom of God, under whose shadow all the "fowls of the air shall rest." "Be ye clean who bear the vessels of the Lord;" and let us see to it that we exhibit its beauties and excellencies in our lives. Let us labor together in meekness, never boasting of our faith, in humility avoiding the quicksands of pride, never yielding to vanity, in wisdom, truth, purity, diligence, steadfastness and love. Then shall we be acknowledged of heaven as co-workers with God and his Christ. Nor shall our labors be barren of noble results. We shall gain favor in the eyes of the just and pure, and inasmuch as we continue faithful, we shall realize the fulfillment of the promise, "The kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom, under the whole heavens shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, and they shall possess it forever and ever." Again, "Thou hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth. Amen and Amen.

CHARITY.

WE often hear this little word used in our prayer meetings. In our pulpits, in our social gatherings, and around our fire-side hearths, we read and talk of charity. It is here our little ones ask us the meaning of the word, and we tell them it is love; and while we thus satisfy their young minds with this information, does the answer find an echo in our hearts. Or do we tell them that charity means love simply because we are told so by our leader or by our church books? Is it not often we answer by habit? Do we ever take this little word with us into our secret closet alone with God, and ask him the meaning of it; and to write the fullness of it in our heart of hearts? Ah no! My dear friends, I fear not. If we did our hearts would enlarge with such precious seed that the Spirit would sow therein, till at last it would burst forth into a beautiful tree, bearing fruit an hundred fold, of the kind that angels smile to see. Now the fruits of love are peace, long-suffering, a willingness to bear each other's burdens, a desire to strengthen the weak, an ever ready hand stretched out to stay the falling, kind words, mercifully spoken to the tempted ones, beautiful feet that ever come to those who are tempted beyond their strength, bringing words of hope to the wayward ones, taking them by the hand and gently leading them back into the fold again. Blessed be that brother or sister whose heart contains this precious seed, for there are blessed fruits made mete for the Master; for these are they whose feet are swift to walk in the way of righteousness; these are they who know his commandments and do them, and surely their names are written in the "Lamb's Book of Life." But when we see among the Saints a disposition to back-bite, tattle, find fault, criticize, ridicule and sneer; a disposition to watch our brother or sister, to catch them in some evil, manifest a wish to part friends who were drawn together by some event or circumstance unknown by any one but themselves; minding other people's business more than their own, always trying to set other people right, forgetting in the meantime to right themselves. These things are the fruits of "spirit" also; but alas! it is not the spirit of love, but of hate, treachery, self-righteousness, easily puffed up, malice and jealousy. These fruits are not nurtured by the sunlight of truth, or by the water of life. They spring up in dark places, and they thrive upon slander, that most vicious of all evils. "And by their fruits ye shall know them." Better for us if when we find such fruits in our lives, that we seek earnestly for a new heart, one that is open to the bright sunlight of God's love, "charity." It has come under the observation of the writer many times, and I hope there has been gleaned a lesson, not to sit in judgment upon the action of another when it is not necessary. For if we, in accusing our brother or sister of evil, and should do so while they are innocent, thereby causing tears of pain from them, God will remember it against us in the day of judgment, and it will be remembered ten thousand fold for every innocent tear we have caused to flow by evil suspicion; for we are told to bind up broken hearts and not make them. We are journeying side by side in our race for eternal life. Let us look well to our footing lest we ourselves should fall. It does not pay to jostle each other on the way as we walk, neither does it help us along to say unkind things of each other, or cause tears to flow. It is better far to help our neighbor to rise up and resist temptation than by an unkind thrust to cause him to fall, perhaps never again to rise. There may be a day coming when we will hear these words, "Where is thy brother?" Could we say, "Ah, Lord," thou taughtest us that charity was love, and by the bonds of love I crowded him down the valley. "God forbid." May charity fill our hearts with love to all, is the prayer of your

 THE PRECIOUS METALS.

THE following is an abstract of the special report of Mr. Burchard, Director of the Mint, upon the production of the precious metals in the United States, which was ordered to be printed by the last Congress, and is now in the hands of the printer. The yield of the mines of the United States for the year 1882 was $32,500,000 in gold, $46,800,000 in silver, a total of $79,000,000. Compared with the previous year this shows a decline of $2,200,000 of gold, and an increase of $3,800,000 of silver.

The comparative decline in the production of gold was greater in California than in any other State or Territory—the yield being $1,400,000 less than in 1881. This resulted from the interruption of hydraulic mining in some of the northern and middle counties of the State, owing to litigation and also from a falling off in production of the quartz mines at Bodie.

In Oregon, where the mining is chiefly placer, there was a diminution, and also in Nevada, Idaho and Dakota.

In silver the principal increase was Idaho, Montana and New Mexico; Idaho showing an increase of $700,000, Montana $1,740,000 and New Mexico of $1,500,000.

Colorado furnished about $600,000 less silver than in 1881.

Of the bullion production of the country $30,964,958 of gold and 31,400,792 of silver were deposited at the mints and assay offices for coinage or return in bars to depositors.

Of the deposits of gold $5,600,000 were paid in bars for manufacturing purposes and the remainder went into coinage. $1,400,000 were furnished by private refineries for manufacturers' use, and there was an export of $175,000 contained in silver bars.

Of the total silver production $15,750,000 were exported, $5,994,000 furnished by the mints and assay offices to manufacturers, $350,000 by private refineries for the same purpose and $24,700,000 were used in coinage. The production of the country was from the States and Territories as follows:

|-------------------------|------------|--------------|
| Alaska .....            | $ 150,000 |              |
| Arizona .....           | 1,065,000  | $ 7,500,000 |
| California .....        | 16,800,000 | 845,000      |
| Colorado .....          | 3,360,000  | 16,500,000   |
| Dakota .....            | 3,300,000  | 175,000      |
| Georgia .....           | 250,000    |              |
| Idaho .....             | 1,500,000  | 2,000,000    |
| Montana .....           | 2,550,000  | 4,370,000    |
| Nevada .....            | 2,000,000  | 6,750,000    |
| New Mexico .....        | 150,000    | 1,800,000    |
| North Carolina .....    | 190,000    | 25,000       |
| Oregon .....            | 830,000    | 35,000       |
| South Carolina .....    | 25,000     |              |
| Utah .....              | 190,000    | 6,800,000    |
| Virginia .....          | 15,000     |              |
| Washington .....        | 120,000    |              |
| Wyoming .....           | 5,000      |              |

Total ..... $32,500,000 $46,800,000

The excess of production over consumption of the year added to the net imports of gold resulted in a net gain to the circulation of less than $200,000 in gold, but by coinage and net import of coin the metallic circulation gained nearly $39,700,000 in gold and about $27,600,000 in silver coin.

California still maintains the second place on the list of gold and silver producing States and Territories, and is likely to do so for some time to come. Its gold fields show no evidence of exhaustion. On the contrary the magnitude of the deposits in the ancient river beds, the number and permanence of quartz lodes, as well as the virgin ground yet undeveloped, insure a golden harvest for many years to come.

Nevada shows a decrease in gold and silver of about $1,500,000, which is chiefly due to the rapid decline in the yield of the great Comstock lode.

In Idaho the production of gold was slightly less than in the preceding year, but there was a notable increase in silver, due to the development of the mines of the portion of Acturas county known as the Wood River country.

In Montana, as in Idaho, the mining industry has increased in importance, the increased yield having been in silver, which from $2,630,000 in 1881, is in 1882, $4,370,000.

Utah shows an increased production of $400,000 in silver.

Arizona has maintained her large production of nearly $8,500,000.

New Mexico, the oldest mining section of the country, has not hitherto appeared as a large producer of bullion, but during the last two years rich discoveries have been made in the Black Range and Lake Valley regions, which have increased the annual production to $1,800,000.

In Colorado it has been claimed that there was a large excess of production in 1882 over that of 1881, but an examination of the reports of shipments of ore and bullion and of the smelting works shows that the increase has been in the value of the base metals.

A PREHISTORIC CEMETERY.

TWO MILES from Mandan, Morton county, Dakota, on the bluffs, near the junction of the Hart and Missouri rivers, is an old cemetery of fully one hundred acres in extent, filled with bones of a giant race. This vast city of the dead lies just east of the Fort Lincoln road. The ground has the appearance of having been filled with trenches piled full of dead bodies, both man and beast, and covered with several feet of earth. In many places mounds from eight to ten feet high, and some of them one hundred feet or more in length, have been thrown up and are filled with bones, broken pottery, vases of various bright-colored flint and agate. The pottery is of a dark material, beautifully decorated, delicate in finish, and as light as wood, showing the work of a people skilled in the arts, and possessed of a high state of civilization. This has evidently been a grand battle field, where thousands of men and horses have fallen. Nothing like a systematic exploration has been made, as only little holes two or three feet in depth have been dug in some of the mounds, but many parts of the anatomy of man and beast, and beautiful specimens of broken pottery and other curiosities, have been found in these feeble efforts at excavation. Five miles above Mandan, on the opposite side of the Missouri, is another vast cemetery, as yet unexplored. We asked an aged Indian what his people knew of these ancient graveyards. He answered: "We know nothing about them. They were here before the red man."—Missouri Pioneer.

THE FUTURE OF JUDAISM.

BEVIER, Mo., July 12th, 1883.

BRO. JOSEPH SMITH.—Herewith I send you an article clipped from the Kansas City Times, which has given me light on the subject, that the Church was not preserved long in its primitive state. By this article I find that the best principles of the Jewish Church were intended to be preserved; and of course the Aaronic priesthood, which was to be continued. According to this the synagogue and the church were one, the first generation of Christians was Jews, and the separation was the work of the enemy of God's chosen people, who came out boldly asserting that the Jewish church was a bad religion. Are those books referred to in print. If so, where are they to be had? * Hoping there is no offense in sending you this slip,

I am yours truly,

A FRIEND.

* [Can not say.—ED.]

WHAT M. ERNEST RENAN THINKS ABOUT THE FUTURE OF JUDAISM.

"At a recent meeting of the Society of Jewish Studies in Paris, M. Ernest Renan, presented by the Baron Alphonse de Rothschild, delivered a remarkable lecture on the subject of the original identity and gradual separation of Judaism and Christianity. M. Renan began by predicting a great future for the Society of Jewish Studies, one clause of whose studies permits gentiles to form part of the society. Doubtless Jewish studies belonged of right to the Jews, but they belong also to humanity. Researches relative to the Israelite past interest all the world. All beliefs find in the Jewish books the secret of their formation. The Bible has become the intellectual and moral nutriment of civilized humanity. The Jews have this incomparable privilege, that their book has become a book of the whole world—a privilege of universality which they share with the Greeks, a race which has imposed its literature on all centuries and all countries. M. Renan thanked the members of the Society of Jewish Studies for having admitted the gentiles, like good Samaritans, to work among them in a work that interests us all equally. Proceeding then to speak of the subject of his life's study, the origins of Christianity, M. Renan said that these origins ought to be placed at least 750 years before Christ, at the epoch of the great prophets, who created an entirely new idea of religion, and under whose influence was definitely accomplished the passage from primitive religion full of unwholesome superstitions to pure religion. After the captivity, in the sixth century B. C., the dream of the prophet of Israel is a worship that might suit all humanity, a worship consisting in the pure ideal of morality and virtue—in short the reign of justice. This idea constitutes the great originality of the prophets, and the true founders of Christianity, according to M. Renan, were these great prophets, who announced pure religion, freed from all coarse material practices and observances, and residing in the disposition of the mind and heart—a religion, consequently, which can and ought to be common to all, an ideal religion, consisting in the proclamation of the kingdom of God upon earth, and in the hope of an era of justice for poor humanity.

"M. Renan next proceeded to show that the first Christian generation is essentially Jewish. The epistles of St. James and St. Jude, representing the spirit of the first church, are altogether Jewish; St. Paul never thought of separating himself from the Jewish church. The Apocalypse of St. John, composed about A. D. 68 or 69, is a Jewish book, and the author is a passionate Jewish patriot. After the capture of Jerusalem comes the composition of the synoptical gospels. Here there is a division, and yet Luke, the least Jewish of the evangelists, insists upon the fact that Jesus observed all the ceremonies of the law. Toward 75 or 80 A. D. many books were written inspired by Jewish patriotism, such as the book of Judith, the Apocalypses of Ezra and of Baruch, and even the book of Tobias. There is nothing more Jewish than the book of Judith, for instance, and yet these books are lost among the Jews, and preserved only among the Christians. So true is it that the bond between the church and the synagogue was not yet broken when they appeared in the epistles and gospels attributed to St. John, and written about A. D. 125, the case is altogether different. In them Judaism is treated as an enemy, and they contain symptoms of the approach of the systems that will lead the Christians to deny their Jewish origin, such a agnosticism, for instance, which represents Christianity as being a reaction against Judaism, and utterly opposed to it, while Marcion goes still further, and declares Judaism to be a bad religion which Jesus came to abolish

"M. Renan remarked the singularity of such an error having been able to manifest itself only a century after the death of Christ, but insisted on the fact that in the Christian church agnosticism was like a lateral stream to a river. In the second century the orthodox church always considered itself bound in the most intimate manner to the synagogue. In the third century the schism becomes more pronounced under the influence of the school of Alexandria. Clement and Origen speaks with much injustice of Judaism, and the separation becomes complete when, under Constantine, Christianity becomes a state religion and official, while Judaism remains free. And yet Chrysostom was obliged to rebuke his congregation for going to the synagogue. Nevertheless, the separation really grows more profound; we enter the middle ages; the barbarians arrive, and then begins that deplorable ingratitude of humanity become Christian, toward Judaism. The crusades give the signal for the massacres of the Jews, while the scholastic philosophy largely contributed to embitter the hostility against them.

"Reviewing rapidly the condition of the Jews in France in the middle ages and subsequently, M. Renan arrived at "a more concoling epoch, that eighteenth century which proclaimed at length the rights of reason, the rights of man, the true theory of human society—that is to say, the state without official dogma, the state neutral in the midst of metaphysical and theological opinions. It is from that day equality of rights began for the Jews. It was the revolution that proclaimed the equality of the Jews with the other citizens of the state. The revolution found here the true solution with a sentiment of absolute justice, and everybody will come around to this opinion." "In point of fact," continued M. Renan, "the Jews had themselves prepared this solution; they had prepared it by their past, by their prophets, the great religious creators of Israel. The founders of the movements were Isaiah and his successor, then the Essenians, those poetical ascetics who announced an ideal of peace, of right and of fraternity. Christianity, too, has powerfully contributed to the progress of civilization, but Christianity was only the continuation of the Joseph prophets, and the glory of Christianity and the glory of Judaism are one. And now that these great things are accomplished, let us say with assurance, continued the speaker, that Judaism, which has done so much service in the past, will still serve in the future.

It will serve the true cause, the cause of liberalism, of the modern spirit.

"Every Jew is essentially a liberal. The enemies of Judaism, on the contrary, are generally enemies of the modern spirit. The creators of liberal dogma in rebellion are your old profits, the Sibyllines, the Jewish school of Alexandria, the first Christians who were continuers of the Jewish prophets. These are the true founders of the spirit of justice in the world, and in serving the modern justice the Jew, in reality, only serves the work to which he has contributed more than anybody in the past, and for which he has so much suffered. The true religion which we see in the future capable of binding together all humanity will be the realization of the religion of Isaiah, the ideal Jewish religion freed from all accumulated dross."

PEACE.

MAN is endowed with a desire for peace to the fullest extent. Physically, mentally, and spiritually, peace in his present state, and a knowledge of and peace in a future state. God, the creator of man with this inherent desire, must have had in contemplation at the time of creation, the satisfying of such desire. Knowing man's nature spiritually, he being "the Father of our spirits," (see Heb. 12:9), and physically forming man from the dust of the ground, (see Gen. 2:7). He knows what condition or conditions will be best calculated to answer this end, and the rule or rules by which the condition of peace may be attained. Peace is a condition, a state of rest, or relaxation from the state of anxiety or fear, and this being an effect, is produced by the operation of a law or laws; the perfect operation of which will and does express the nature of the being who gave them. The physical nature of man is supplied with peace, by the perfect operation of the laws of health; but with the present body, and the laws relating to its peace considered apart from the spirit, we have not desired to write in this article. We shall endeavor to speak of the laws relating to the peace of the soul,—body and spirit,—of man.

Man's present state is one of anxiety in regard to his present and future peace. Men's hearts are failing them for fear of the things coming upon the earth. One hour peace may appear in excess, and the next hour circumstances may have so changed as to cause great sorrow and sadness of heart. God knows, and has known, that man is in this state of non-enjoyment of peace, fightings without and fears within, and desires that all men may know, that in the gospel law, he has offered to him a means of redemption. He has devised in all his wisdom, the plan to meet the demands, and has sent his son to teach us these laws, or commandments, that there might be peace on earth. (see Luke 2:14), and that we might have glory, honor, and immortality, (see Rom. 2:7), and a knowledge of those things God has in store for those that love him. (see 1 Cor. 2:9, 10). Man would not have known what rule to have followed, or what to have done in order to satisfy the desire for peace within him; or to obtain a knowledge of the next state, or the knowledge how to make the next state a better one, unless this great messenger had brought light into the world, and now since he has come, we have a rule of action taught us by which if we walk, we shall obtain rest to our souls. We are invited to come to him, accept his teachings, and prove the effect.

Blessed are they that have a desire to obtain peace, and are willing to humiliate themselves to a law devised by him, who rules all things by his mighty power, for they shall be satisfied. If we reject this plan formed by God and revealed to us by his son, we virtually say to him who framed it, Thou hast no understanding, and set ourselves up as wiser than our creator, and judge without proof. If we reject it without proving whether it be true or not, we do not abide the oft repeated passage, used by unbelievers as well as believers, to "Prove all things: hold fast that which is good;" neither do we act with this as we do with any other offer made, or as we do when we have any other desire to satisfy for a benefit purely temporal. Did we not succeed in accomplishing the object in one way, we would endeavor to devise another way, or try one already devised. God has shown his friendship and love to us, in devising a plan for us, and then sending his son to tell us of it, and how to use it; and then invites us to come and partake freely, and promises, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free."

There is, I am aware, a great difficulty in the world to-day to contend with; for many are "teaching for doctrine the commandments of men." But the difficulty is not so great, when we "search the scriptures;" for "if they speak not according to these, it is because there is no light in them." Too many people in the world to-day, like as in the days of Christ, hire some one to do their thinking, and rest their salvation upon paying them for this thinking, instead of doing according to James' advice, "Go to God." And if any one should presume to go to God, and ask and receive, he is cried down as a man with a new revelation, imposing on the people, in desiring them to believe it, and especially is this true of the hireling priestcraft. The difficulty has been entirely removed in this our days, by God speaking from heaven, and declaring what the law upon which peace is established is, and is confirming the word of that law by heavenly evidences, by which means all who believe, and live in accordance with that word, can obtain a knowledge for themselves; and by obtaining such knowledge will enjoy themselves in the abundance of peace, having no anxiety as to the result of the future, because of a continuance in the word of truth as already received. And the peace brought will be a confirmation of the angel's declaration at the birth of Jesus,—“And on earth, peace; good will toward man.”

The opening of the treasures of peace in these last days, was the calming of the disturbed state of mind of Joseph Smith, when but a boy about fourteen years of age, while asking of God that he might receive; and because he did receive as God had before time promised, the hireling priestcraft and their followers have cried him down, from that day to this. But why should they cry him down? He had been hearing the different ways proclaimed as the true way by the different sects, the Baptists, Methodists, and Presbyterians, and not knowing which of these contradictory ways was right, he resolved to go to God, that he might receive some light from the fountain source, as he desired to find and obey that law that would be for his eternal welfare, and bring peace to his soul upon this subject. He claims to have received just what God had promised to those who should seek him; and because he announced that God had shown him that for which he asked, he was persecuted. Had he not received any light and announced so, he would have been right in their sight, although proving God a liar. Had he claimed to have received light that the Methodists were right, as he had thought before going to God, such intelligence could not have been received by them, because it is denied by them that God will reveal anything from his dwelling place in this day and age of the world. But because he received from God that for which he asked, light upon the question, which of the religious bodies was right, that they had all gone out of the way, it caused a grumbling in the midst of the religious world. They united against this boy and his announcement, and all those who would accept his announcement. While they should have been the means of endeavoring to instruct him as to his error in the spirit of love, they turned him away from them by the Spirit of hatred they showed him, and cast his name out as evil. Instead of leaving the ninety and nine which went not astray, according to their belief, and seeking to save the one who went astray, they cast off the one, and instructed the ninety and nine to do likewise.

God has sent the angel of peace as promised in Rev. 14:6, and it has been the means of speaking peace to the souls of many hundreds, who testify of the truth they have received, and say they know it is of God; for this they are cast out, but not forsaken, for God testifies of their gift, and their hearts are staid in Christ Jesus. God has revealed and is revealing to us by his Spirit, the things he hath prepared for them that love him. We as children of God and servants of the Most High, are offering to the world instruction concerning the gospel, by which they may obtain the same peace as we, by the knowledge it gives, and we invite them to accept it, and testify, having proven it, that it is what it claims to be,—the truth that shall make us free. May all who desire peace sue for it, and be willing to humiliate themselves to the higher powers, that by their humiliation, although their names may be cast out as evil, they may gain everlasting peace as revealed through the gospel of Jesus Christ, as again restored to earth by messengers of light and glory, is the prayer of one who has sued for peace and found it.

CUTLERITES.

THE inclosed clipping is from the Deseret News of July 19th, and will serve to show the reader how utterly unreliable the Utah Church Organ is when it serves up news items. It is a fact that a large proportion of the "Cutlerites" united with the Reorganized Church, among them many of Father Cutler's family, also many of the prominent men and women of that society, both in Iowa and Minnesota. Besides this, some of our Church members furnished a home and a place for meetings to some of the Utah missionaries in Minnesota last winter.

"Old Time 'Mormons.'—We have been enabled to peruse a letter to Brother Andrew Jenson, of this city, from Elder Charles M. Nelson, now laboring as a missionary in Minnesota. He states that he recently visited Girard, Otter Tail county, in that State, in company with Elder Buchanan. They held meeting in a school-house, the larger portion of the congregation being composed of former 'Mormons,' who left the Church in Nauvoo times and followed Alpheus Cutler. They first settled in Iowa, where Cutler died and another man was appointed in his stead. They next removed to Minnesota, and dwindled so that they decided to give up holding any religious services. The Josephites have tried to convert them to their views, but met with no success. The 'Cutlerites,' as they are called, appear, according to Brother Nelson, to be a kind and honest people, and were quite hospitable to the Elders. He also says that the remnant of Sidney Rigdon's following numbers about seven families, who are located about 200 miles from Girard, and have long since ceased to exist as a religious body.

Conference Minutes.

SOUTHERN NEBRASKA DISTRICT.

This district conference was held in Bro. Nicholas Trook's grove, Cass county, Nebraska, July 15th and 16th, 1883. Levi Anthony, president; Robert M. Elvin, secretary.

Sunday, 10 a.m., preaching by R. M. Elvin; 3 p.m., preaching by Joshua Armstrong; 8 p.m., preaching by R. M. Elvin.

Officials present: 4 Elders, 3 Priests, 3 Teachers, 1 Deacon.

Monday, 9 a.m.—President presented an outline of the work and its necessity, and urged that there be unity in all our actions.

Bishop's Agent's Report.—Received during the quarter $40.85; paid out $41.95. Delegate: April 1, balance on hand $1.90, collected $2.50; Paid out $4.40. J. W. Waldsmith agent.

Elders Levi Anthony, E. C. Brand, (baptized 5), Joshua Armstrong, J. W. Waldsmith (baptized 4), James Ervin, Robt. M. Elvin (baptized 3); Priests John Everett, sen., Martin Cain, Milton Ervin; Teachers Nicholas Trook, James Ferguson; and Deacon Jesse Ervin, reported.

Branch Reports.—Nebraska City 121; including 1 High Priest, 7 Elders, 4 Priests, 2 Teachers, 2 Deacons; 8 baptized, 1 received by Certificate of Baptism, 4 received by letter, 1 marriage. Palmyra 32; including 1 Elder, 2 Priests, 2 Deacons; 7 removed by vote. Blue River 69; including 2 Elders, 2 Priests, 2 Teachers, 2 Deacons; 3 marriages. Platte River 29; including 1 Elder, 2 Priests, 1 Teacher. Moroni 24; including 1 Elder, 2 Priests, 1 Teacher, 1 Deacon.

Whereas, we believe that the ordination of Bro. William B. Smith by Elders E. C. Brand and James Cazier was in violation of the resolution adopted July 7th, 1879, and that of January 8th, 1883; therefore, be it resolved, that we request the branch at Plattsmouth to withhold reporting the ordination until a decision of the legality thereof can be established; and that we further request Bro. William B. Smith to hold himself in abeyance to his office as a Priest, and not officiate in any act or capacity as an Elder.

Financial report of the Nebraska City Branch for six months: On hand and received $43.56; expended $42.95; balance on hand 61c.

Committee's Report.—In behalf of the committee appointed to visit the Plattsmouth Branch, I report that immediately after the close of last session we visited Plattsmouth. The president of that branch presented us with written charges against seven members. We held two preliminary meetings, explaining to the branch the object of our visit. Sitting as a Court of Elders, we heard evidence in six cases, and submitted our findings and recommendations to the branch, and recorded the same upon the minute book of the branch, and the branch on motion and vote accepted and endorsed what we had done.

Levi Anthony, chairman.

Resolved, That a committee of one be appointed in each branch to solicit means to pay the expenses of the district. The president appointed committees as per resolution. Nebraska City, J. W. Waldsmith, Platte River, John W. Holenbeck, Moroni, James Ervin, Plattsmouth, Wm. B. Smith, Blue River, Robt. White, Palmyra, Wm. Fields.

General and district authorities sustained.

Adjourned to meet with the Platte River Branch, October 14th, 1883, at 10:30 a.m.

CENTRAL NEBRASKA DISTRICT.

Conference met at Cedar Creek, Nebraska, Saturday, June 23d, 1883, at 2:30 p. m. Bro. Geo. S. Hyde chosen to preside, and Bro. J. F. Mintun secretary pro tem. Visiting brethren requested to take part in the proceedings.

Elders J. F. Mintun, Geo. S. Hyde, R. Wight and Chauncy Loomis reported in person; Levi Gamet by letter. Priests C. H. Derry reported in person, and Joseph Smith by letter.

Reports of Clear Water, Deer Creek and Cedar Creek were presented and accepted. Columbus report was delayed by washouts and high water.

Resolved that all members of a branch who have gone beyond the reach of the ministrations of the branch officers be reported as scattered members.

The subject of the Reunion Meeting was presented by Bro. Charles Derry when the following was offered.

Resolved, That the subject of Reunion Meetings in Western Iowa be considered favorably by this conference. The time of holding said meeting be September 15th, 1883, at Leland's Grove, Shelby county, Iowa, and that Bro. Charles Derry be authorized to represent the views of this district in conferring with other districts concerning the reunion meeting. Carried.

Resolved, That hereafter we hold our district conferences semi-annually. Carried.

Resolved, That when this conference adjourns it does so to meet the 1st and 2d days of September 1883 at Clearwater Branch. Carried.

Evening session, preaching by Bro. J. F. Mintun. Sunday morning preaching by Elder Chas. Derry; subject, Baptism.

On motion a two days' meeting was appointed at Deer Creek School-house, 7th, 8th of July and Bro. Chas. Derry was requested to preside over it. Carried.

Elders Robert Oering, H. O. Smith, O. Beebe,

E. C. Wildermuth, E. M. Wildermuth reported in person.

On motion Bro. Robert Oering was requested to visit the German settlement about four miles from Bro. Jacob Gier's, and preach the word.

Officers present 1 High Priest, 3 Seventies, 6 Elders, 3 Priests.

All the authorities of the Church were sustained in righteousness, both spiritual and temporal. Bro. Levi Gamet as president, and H. J. Hudson as secretary, were sustained.

Evening session. Preaching by Elder Charles Derry; subject, "The Hope of the Saints." Adjourned.

NORTHERN NEBRASKA DISTRICT.

Conference convened at Platte Valley, Neb., June 29th, 1883, at 8:30 p.m. W. Rumel, president; H. Nielson, clerk. Evening session devoted to prayer and testimony—a good spirit prevailed.

June 30th.—Visiting saints were invited to take part in the conference.

Branch Reports.—Union Branch at last report 29, present 30; baptized 1. Omaha (Scandinavian), no change. Douglas, no change. Plattford, last report 15, present 14; 1 received by Certificate of Baptism. Omaha (English), last report 69, present 70; 2 baptized, 1 received by certificate of baptism, and 1 by letter, 3 expelled. Pleasant Grove, last report 21, present 24; 3 baptized.

Elder's Reports.—W. Rumel reported by letter. He had attended General Conference at Kirtland, Ohio, as a delegate; and had been successful in having Brn. C. Derry, E. C. Brand and J. F. Mintun, to return to this district. Had labored in all parts of the district except Lake Shore. E. C. Brand (by letter) had preached 16 times, baptized 3. J. F. Mintun (by letter) preached 12 times, baptized 1. G. E. Deuel (by letter) had preached in several places and baptized 3. Ed. Rannie preached four times. N. Brown said he had done but little. H. Nielson reported the Omaha (Scandinavian) not in a good condition. Bro. Curtis, the Douglas in good condition. Matthew Sampson, Union Branch in good condition.

N. Brown and Ed Boulsen were appointed to act as deacons for the conference.

C. Derry, E. C. Brand and J. F. Mintun were appointed to be a standing committee of this conference to whom all things shall be referred which are necessary to refer to a committee.

C. Derry called attention to the proposed reunion meeting, a loss being sustained by the abandonment of the Fall General Conference, hence the object of holding a large meeting instead of the Conference. He asked conference to appoint a committee to meet him and others in Council Bluffs the 3d of July for the further arrangement as to place and time for holding such meeting.

Leland's Grove, Shelby county, Iowa, and the 14th of September was recommended as place and time for holding said meeting. W. M. Rumel chosen to represent this district thus in the place and time suggested. The district to defray his expenses.

An appeal from Ann Starkey was entertained, and referred to the adjudicating committee.

The Omaha (Scandinavian) Branch request to be disorganized was taken up.

The district president was requested to choose one or two to go with him to the Scandinavian Branch and adjust the difficulties existing there.

The president presented the names of four members who desired their names taken from the Church Record: John Talor, Mary Brown, Ella Brown and Richard Brown being the parties.

The district president, J. F. Mintun, and F. W. Curtis were appointed a Court of Elders to whom the matter of these members was referred.

W. M. Rumel was sustained as district president.

Report of committee.—We as a committee in the case of Sr. Ann Starkey wherein an appeal was taken by her from the decision of court held in the Omaha (English) Branch find nothing to justify us in sustaining the appeal. E. C. Brand, C. Derry, and J. F. Mintun.

Resolved that we request the several branches of the district to create a fund for the benefit of the district president, and send the means raised to him.

Appointment of two days' meetings. At the Pleasant Grove Branch the 13th and 14th of October. At Omaha the 17th and 18th of November.

Resolved that we appreciate the labors of Brn. E. C. Brand, C. Derry, and J. F. Mintun in this district.

Charges against the parties wishing to have their names taken from the Church Record were referred to the Court of Elders in charge of their case.

The district secretary was sustained. The temporal authorities of the Church were sustained.

Respecting missions look to resolution of last conference on the subject.

The conference requested Thos. W. Galley to be silenced.

Preaching Sunday morning, afternoon and evening by Ed. Rannie, C. Derry, and J. F. Mintun.

Adjourned to meet in Omaha the 1st of March, 1884, at 7:30 p. m.

NODAWAY DISTRICT.

The Nodaway District conference convened at the Ross Grove School House, Holt county, Missouri, Saturday, June 16th, 1883. Wm. Hawkins president, Joseph Flory secretary.

Visiting brethren were invited to participate in the proceedings of the conference.

Branch Reports.—Ross Grove 24 members, including 3 Elders, 1 Teacher and 2 Deacons. Eureka 17, including 1 Elder, 2 Priests, 1 Teacher, 1 Deacon; 2 received. Platte, last report 71, present number 70, including 9 Elders, 2 Priests, 2 Teachers and 2 Deacons; 2 received by letter and 3 removed by letter, 1 ordination.

Elders J. Flory, R. K. Ross, jr., A. Jacobson and Wm. Hawkins reported. Teachers R. K. Ross, Sen., and Jacob Nelson; and deacons L. C. Smith and Isaac Ross reported. Joseph Flory as one of a court of elders appointed at the last conference, reported that the court had not yet filled their appointment, the court was continued. Wm. Hawkins reported that the district had been reported to the conference at Kirtland, as by resolution of last conference. The following was moved and adopted.

Resolved, That from and after the sitting of this conference, all parties who have been tried or that may hereafter be tried by Elders' courts of branches, or district conferences, and who have been found guilty of the charges preferred and acknowledgements and repentance of the wrong be required, that such persons shall be required to make such acknowledgements within three months after such judgement is rendered. Or in cases where judgements have heretofore been rendered, in three months after the sitting of this conference, or they may be further dealt with and cast out.

Joseph Flory as delegate of the Ross Grove branch stated that that branch had refused to comply with the recommendation of the Court of Elders, as reported to the last conference in the case of the Ross Grove Branch versus Henry W. Smith. As the branch had had no notice of the time and place of the meeting of said court, no witnesses for the branch were called to testify in the case, and not even the charges were asked for which were preferred against Bro. Smith; and the branch did not recognize the report as being legal.

It was then agreed by mutual consent that if Bro. Smith was not satisfied with the action of the branch, that he should take steps to require his letter of removal from the branch.

Forty cents were allowed and paid as secretary's expenses. On separate motions, Bro. Wm. Hawkins was sustained as president; Joseph Flory as secretary and book agent; C. Christenson as Bishops' agent; and all of the general authorities of the church in righteousness.

Resolved, That when this conference does adjourn it does so to meet at Liberty School House, Nodaway county, Missouri, on Saturday, October 13th, 1883, at 11 o'clock, A. M.

Sunday 17th.—During the night a tremendous fall of rain had swollen all the streams far out over their banks, and the roads were impassable, so that no one could meet, and conference now stands adjourned till October 13th, 1883.

Miscellaneous.

BORN.

McCONLEY.—At Sterling, Colorado, April 8th, 1883, to Bro. George and Sr. Mattie McConley, a son.

God bless our darling child,
May he in truth abide,
And when his course is finished here,
With God in heaven reside.

MARRIED.

SMITH—BOWERS.—At the residence of the bride's parents, Plano, Illinois, June 17th, 1883, by Bro. Wentworth Vickery, Bro. John W. Smith, to Sr. Emma Bower, both of Plano Branch. May the blessing of the Lord attend them all the way along life's journey; and bring them the kingdom of God in peace.

DIED.

McKENZIE.—At Whitemouth, Manitoba, of inflammation, croup and diphtheria, May 31st, 1883, a son of Bro. and Sr. Julia A. McKenzie, aged 1 year, 6 months and 16 days.

HUMPHREY.—At Dennisport, Barnstable Co., Massachusetts, June 9th, 1883, Sister Hannah Humphrey, aged 75 years, 11 months, 19 days. She was conscious to the last, was fully aware of her near departure, and died full in the faith of a glorious resurrection through her Savior Jesus Christ. Funeral services over her remains were held in the Saints' chapel, near her home, Sunday, June 10th, 1883, by Elder John Smith; every seat in the chapel was filled with relatives and friends, many of whom expressed to the writer her worth as a woman of a large heart, and outspoken in behalf of the latter day work. "One by one we near the shores of eternity."

J. SMITH.

HUMES.—At Kansas City, Missouri, June 28th, 1883, Alma Alexander, infant son of T. H. and Sylvia A. N. Humes, aged 10 months, 25 days. Funeral service at the residence of the parents; sermon by Bro. Wm. Newton.

These little buds of earth
Are given for a day,
Then kindly taken up to heaven
To bloom and live alway.
They're leaving us—are blessings true,
Yes, blessings in disguise,
They draw our weary souls from earth,
And point to Paradise.
We think it very hard to bear
Their absence for a day;
Are not such trials in mercy sent
To help us on the way?
For surely, where our treasures are
There will our hearts be true,
And when the Father takes them hence
Our thoughts will follow too. M. C. O.

JAQUES.—William G. S., son of Bro. and Sr. Jaques, of West Belleville, Illinois, was born December 3d, 1871; died April 20th, 1883. He was crushed in the Rose Hill coal mine, by a mass of slate, of which injury he died on the spot. He was a regular attendant at the Church and Sunday School. Funeral service by Brn. Beard and Angel; many friends and children of the Church and Sunday School attending. "Blessed are they that mourn for they shall be comforted."

GRAYBILL.—At Wheeler's Grove, Pottawattamie county, Iowa, May 31st, 1883, Manly W. Graybill, son of John and Fannie Graybill, aged 8 months, 19 days. Funeral discourse by D. Hougas in the Saints' church.

"Now with reverence we bow
To the grief we find below;
For we have a portion now
Where the higher glories glow.
So we turn with sorrow shared,
To the hearts that still are spared,
With our thoughts drawn heavenward,
By our angel pure as snow."

BROWN.—In Cranston, Rhode Island, March 31st, 1883, of malignant diarrhæa, of which complaint he had been occasionally troubled, Elder Charles N. Brown, of Providence, Rhode Island, aged 45 years, 8 months and 3 days. He was born July 28th, 1837, in Hopkins, R. I., where his father, an only sister, two brothers, and other relatives still reside, and where his remains were taken for the final service and burial, after very interesting and appropriate services held in the Saints' Hall at Providence, on Tuesday, by his bosom companion in the work, Elder F. M. Sheehy; and the saints present proved both by act and deed that they realized their loss in our brother's death.

His early life was marked by that patient, loving, quiet spirit, that was so fully developed in after years, that to know him was only to love him. He gave his heart to the Lord, uniting with Second Seventh Day Baptist Church of his native place. At the age of nineteen, or twenty, he accepted and taught a difficult school at Tower Hill, South Kingston; also, a singing school as well, this being his first effort abroad. Subsequently, he lived at Mystic, Conn., Westerly and Providence. At the latter place while engaged with his brother in the saw business, his attention was called to the restored gospel by the daughter of his cousin, Horace Church, now Sister Carrie Thomas of Lamoni, if we mistake not; by whose pious and timely letters, the truth and light of present revelation dawned upon him and lit up his pathway, for some of his experiences were indeed marvelous. After a thorough investigation he decided it to be the Lord's work; and November 19th, 1867, left 146 Clinton street, New York, for Providence, thence to Dennisport, Mass., arriving the next day to receive the blessings there promised him in prophecy and tongues, (with interpretation), by yielding obedience to the gospel by baptism by Elder T. W. Smith, on Sunday, the 24th. Monday, 25th, he with two others was ordained to the office of Elders, making five ordinations.

Bro. Brown served in the capacity of Branch and District President, and was called and ordained one of the Seventy, in which latter office he served, but not satisfactory to himself. His ministry bore good fruit, for 189 names are standing on his baptismal list, many of whom he also confirmed, during a ministry of fourteen years. Of his resolves, (for he had many), one we must mention, it was this, "always to be cheerful; for though not given to much mirth, no matter what his trials or perplexities were, (and they were many), as a rule he was sure to meet you with a pleasant smile; and groans, sighs, or words of repining, were strangers to his lips; and much like the blessed Master, was he ever patient. Truly his life was a continual labor of love, self being ignored in his zeal to serve God and humanity. And while in loneliness we mourn our loss, yet we sorrow not as those without a hope, but feel that our loss is his eternal gain.

O! brother, dear brother, indeed hast thou left us!
Our sadness no more, can thy presence beguile—
In counsel no more, will thy pleasant voice greet us—
Or hearts that are lonely, be cheered by thy smile.
No more, will thou give us, the "Great Restoration,"
With power so angelic, bespeaking thy call.
Our hearts filled with love, for the plan of salvation,
Responding so freely—yes—Lord, we give all.
We know well, dear brother, thy work can not perish,
While language may fail of our sorrow, to tell—
Submit we to God—(thy mem'ry we cherish)—
For know we, in all things "He doeth them well."
I. S. B.

PROVIDENCE, July 1883.

GARNER.—James Garner, born April 20th, 1800, in Wheaton, Norfolk county, England, baptized November, 1874, died September 26th 1882. Funeral services by George M. Robinson, He once said to Bro. R. Warnock that the Lord revealed to him that "young Joseph" was "the right man in the right place" as the President of the Church. He lived and died a good man.

McKENZIE.—At Ridgetown, Ontario, June 19th, 1883, Mary Ann, wife of Bro. George McKenzie, aged 38 years, 5 months, 14 days. Baptized March 16th, 1883, by Elder Gordon E. Deuel. She was the mother of nine children, all daughters, four of whom survive to mourn her departure. Funeral sermon by Elder J. H. Lake, July 15th, 1883.

CATTELL.—At Kansas City, Missouri, June 28th, 1883, of consumption, Sister Catherine Cattell, aged 32 years, 10 months, 15 days. Sister Cattell was baptized by Bro. T. H. Humes, June 15th, 1883; she lived less than two weeks after obeying the gospel. Funeral services by Bro. Wm. Newton. M. C. O.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Editor left the sanctum July 28th for a trip to Bethany, the county seat of Harrison county, Missouri. An appointment had been given out for him at the Athæneum by Dr. J. C. Skinner, who had kindly sent a letter of invitation to fill such appointment. On arriving found appointments for Saturday evening the 21st, and for Sunday the 22d, at 11 a. m. and 8 p. m. These appointments the editor filled, to the best of his ability at the time. The attendance was not large Saturday evening and Sunday morning, but Sunday evening was better, there being a pretty fair audience present. The Editor was the guest of Mr. Andrew Fuller, of the druggist firm of Fuller and Newburn; and also dined and supped with S. O. Richardson who is of the faith. He was well treated, and does not regret having tried to preach the gospel at Bethany also. Mr. Fuller though making no profession of church relationship, is a free, fair thinking man; and extended the hospitality of his home with a cordiality and kindness calculated to make the Elder forget the odd and unpleasant features of the visit to the place. The Editor heard much less profanity and vulgarity than he had expected from rumors that he had heard. Those whom he met and conversed with were courteous and friendly, as men.

Elder H. A. Stebbins baptized six at Lamoni, Sunday, July 29, which makes twenty-five that have joined the Church by baptism at Lamoni during the last month. Two of those baptized were Brn. John Denio and Ferdinand McNutt of Warren's Mills, Wisconsin, in the Black River county. These brethren came to Lamoni for the purpose of uniting with the Reorganization. They received the gospel under the teaching of Pres. J. J. Strang, and like many others have been waiting for something good to come to Israel; but were finally satisfied that the truth lay with the Reorganized Church, and came to it. Bro. Denio was ordained to the eldership, and authorized to represent the Church and cause of Christ, to those who will hear him in the region whence he came. They left Lamoni, on the 30th rejoicing, and take with them the earnest wishes and blessings of their co-laborers here.

Bro. Z. H. Gurley delivered the Oration at the celebration of the Fourth, at Davis City, Iowa; and Bro. John D. Bennett at Minersville, Kansas.

Bro. B. V. Springer has been quite ill at Cheltenham, nigh unto death; but is now improved and starts on the 4th for the Ozark Mountains, Missouri, to open up the work there if the way should open, and receive the benefit of the mountain air, during the hot August term. We wish him a full return to health.

Bro. James P. Hunter wrote from Braidwood, Illinois, giving a few brief items of the disasters to the coal mining interests of that locality. It is a terrible record. July 23d, a flood stopped the works in one mine, and on the 24th five hundred men and boys were out of work. June 15th the wood buildings over shaft G took fire, and thirty-three mules were suffocated. Many of the items have been given in the News Summary.

The controversy at Stewartsville, Missouri, between Rev. C. T. Phillips, of the M. E. Church, and the Saints is growing quite warm. We hope it will turn out all well.

Sr. Sarah A. Rose, writes from Graysville, Ohio, that notwithstanding they have been sorely disappointed in the failure of some body, in not holding the two days' meeting advertized to be held there, they still regard the truth as the power of salvation, and propose to remain steadfast. We believe that the storms interfered with the meeting referred to. It is an old saying, "Man proposes, but God disposes." Let us be patient.

Bro. E. L. Kelley wrote from Kirtland, July 31st, that there were some to be baptized the next Sunday.

Brn. W. H. Kelley and C. Scott were to hold a series of meeting not far from Kirtland, to begin in a few days. It was expected that good would result from the efforts.

Sr. M. A. Christy wrote from Akron, Iowa, July 2d, asking the question of the Saints, "Is it possible that any of the Saints are deceiving themselves, and are living under the terrestrial law, and not under the celestial?" Her thoughts were led to this question by a sentence in a letter published in the HERALD for September, 1876, in which the statement is made, that at that day, many of the Saints were living only under the terrestrial while fancying themselves under the celestial. What say the Saints?

Bro. W. S. Loar, has removed from Kansas to Edenville, Iowa. He sends kind respects to all his associates in the district in Kansas which he lately left.

Elder J. S. Comstock, formerly of Boyne, has removed to Springport, Jackson county, Michigan, where forty-eight years ago last March he was the first to buy land and build in the township. His address will be at the last named place. He says: "I am quite lonely, and not only 'poor in spirit,' but every way; except I would be rich in faith and good works."

Bro. Blair wrote on the 23d of July: "I am to go to Ogden, Plain City, and so make on to Montana soon. Shall likely start before August 1st." Later advices show that he is en route for the settlements out from the city.

The Decatur county, Iowa, Journal, published at Leon, the county seat, has the following notice in its issue for July 26th: "Elder Thomas Wellington, Latter Day Saint, is holding regular services at the Holden School-house. He is said to be a good speaker. Several from the ranks of the Advents have lately been converted to his faith and baptized by him.

Mrs. O. C. Merrill wrote from Chatfield, Minnesota, expressive of sympathy for the laboring Elders in the field, and commendatory of the good she found in the correspondence columns of the HERALD.

Bro. Albert Haws succeeded in securing a flattering notice of the Reorganized Church, in an article on wine, published in the Rescue, a San Francisco, California, temperance paper; in its issue for July 4th, present year.

FROM the notice given below it will be seen what a persistent effort in preaching the gospel will do. Bro. Rudolph is a young man of limited experience, but full of energy which always wins a way.

LATTER DAY SAINT MEETINGS.—The meeting held at the Governor's Square the past Sunday, under the auspices of Elders I. N. White and R. Etzenhouser was a success. By reason of sickness in his family, Elder White was not present. A goodly concourse of people were present at each service. The leading feature of Elder Etzenhouser's discourse was insisting upon a return to primitive Christianity, and promising like blessings to follow. At the close of the 3:30 effort the distinction between Latter Day Saints and Utah Mormons was fully made. Reference was also made to a reception given by the people of Kirtland, Ohio, to the missionaries stationed there by the Reorganized Church. These people are finding favor with the public for their denunciation of the faith and practices of the Utah Mormons.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. T. J. Andrews wrote from San Francisco, California, July 24th:

I am happy to say we are all quite well. The work here seems to be reviving some. An interest in it is apparent from outsiders who meet with us at our regular meetings; and evidently they are much impressed with the truth as viewed from a scriptural standpoint. In fact, this is generally conceded, if but few obey. Our intention is to keep the flag flying anyway, and thus take comfort in the thought and fact, our duty is done. We have ceased worrying about numbers, as much as we would like to see such added as should be eternally saved, still we do believe that San Francisco will give us many worthy ones yet. The heaven is rapidly leavening the whole lump. The evidences are to be seen everywhere that God's truths as embodied in the latter day work are winning their way into the minds and brains of thinkers to the displacement of untruth of long standing.

Bro. C. W. Conat, writing from Manistee, Michigau, states that there is quite a number in that region, who will be pleased to receive a visit from some of the Elders. He thinks that there might be a fold of the Church established there by a little judicious labor. He is in a condition to help a laborer there in getting opportunities and in assisting in holding meetings. He says:

There are scattered sheep through this north country, and they are calling loudly for a shepherd to establish a fold here, wherein they may rest their weary souls, and feed upon the spiritual food of the kingdom of Christ.

Bro. Henry Green wrote from Neta-waka, Kansas, at a late date:

There is a feeling of reviving with the Saints around here. We think there will be some good done in this district the coming fall and winter.

Sr. Rebecca Dayton wrote from Kirtland, July 24th:

We have excellent meetings and rejoice in the work of the last days. We are expecting Bro. W. H. Kelley next Sabbath, to speak to us.

EXTRACTS FROM SERMON.

Now, I wish to say that I realize that there are some in our midst—whether they are in your midst in this Stake of Zion or not, I am not prepared to say with any certainty, for I can only judge of the condition of the people as I am informed from time to time—I say, there are some whom Satan would stir to disobedience and try to make an impression upon their minds that the system of plural marriage, and those things that pertain to the sealing of men and women for time and for eternity, and the revelation which has been read in our hearing, given through the Prophet Joseph pertaining to this subject—that it was the work of man and not the work of God. We have recently had published in some of the Utah papers some letters on this subject, and one from Joseph Smith, the eldest son of the Prophet, in which a great deal of sophistry is made use of, special pleading, such as the lawyer that he is, seems only capable of using. And the object of this special pleading and this sophistry is to try to leave an impression upon the ignorant, those who know no better, that plural marriage was not introduced and sanctioned and practised by his father, but that it has been an innovation of man, and does not belong to the system of religion which he believed and practised and taught the people. And there are some among us who would fain take this view of the subject; not that there are many who believe it, but there are some who would like to believe it. * * * * *

Well, now, in regard to those who are seeking for an excuse to reject plural marriage and are inclined to receive the statement of young Joseph Smith, I wish to say that I know that Joseph Smith is entirely ignorant of what he says, or he is a liar; for I know that he does not speak the truth. How far his mind has been blinded or how he has been influenced to look upon these things as correct, or to think that he speaks the truth, I do not know. But he is woefully in the dark if he thinks he does speak the truth in regard to this matter. I do not wish to accuse him of lying knowingly and intentionally. But there are multitudes of witnesses who know better, and know that when his father was murdered this son Joseph was in his eleventh year, and like other children of that age knew little either of his father's life or his teachings and the principles that governed his life. He knew but little of what was being taught among the people. But there are multitudes of witnesses that were older than he, and that were intimate with the Prophet Joseph, that know better. Now, those who take this other view, and are trying to convince themselves that this is an institution of man and not of God, bring forth the law that was given to the Nephites of old upon the American continent, which was given them by Jacob the brother of Nephi, and which you can read, as doubtless you have often read, in the Book of Mormon. Jacob arraigned some of the people because the men were giving way to the lusts of the flesh and the pride of life, and whoredoms, and they attempted to justify themselves in their whoredoms by referring to what is written in the Jewish Scriptures concerning David and Solomon and other men having many wives and concubines, which Jacob informed the Nephites was an abomination in the sight of the Lord, and gave unto them a commandment that not any man among them should have save it be one wife, and concubines they should have none saying that the Lord "delighteth in the chastity of women."

Now, there was a reason why the Lord gave this commandment to the Nephites. They were the only people on this vast continent of America, and the Lord was multiplying them to possess the land. But it was not so when the Lord called Abraham, and promised that his seed should be like the sand upon the sea shore for number. He recognized the righteousness of a plurality of wives, and never at any time did he restrict them from the days of Abraham until Christ, so far as we have any record in the Jewish Scriptures. But there were reasons, as I said before, why he restricted the Nephites, but in this restriction He intimated that when the time should come that He should raise up seed unto himself, He would command His people.

Now, when the Lord raised up the Prophet Joseph to lay the foundation of this church, He found monogamy instead of polygamy to be the rule of Christendom, and He enjoined, in the early revelations to this church, that every woman cleave unto her husband, and that every man cleave unto his wife and none else, saying that he that looketh upon a woman to lust after her who is not his wife hath committed adultery already with her in his heart.

THE foregoing extracts are from a Sermon preached by Apostle Erastus Snow, of the Utah Church, at Parowan, Utah, June 24th, 1883. We give them because of the hopeful tokens they contain; as also to notice a point or two in the argument. It is evident that there are some even in the Utah Church who begin to see that there is a possibility that they have been imposed upon in regard to this Celestial Marriage business; and who would be glad of an excuse to be freed from its incubus. Mr. Snow himself shows near to the close of his discourse, as will be seen, that the extra marriage business was "an innovation, and does not belong to the system of religion" which Joseph Smith "taught the people."

Mr. Snow endeavored to mislead the minds of his hearers in stating that it was Jacob who gave the law which he quotes from the Book of Jacob. It was the Lord who gave the command, Jacob being the instrument of transmission only. It was God who said that the "having of many wives and concubines was abominable."

And it is as much the word of God to Latter Day Saints as any of the teachings of the New Testament, or the revelations in the Book of Covenants.

Read the reason assigned by Elder Snow for the giving of that law to the Nephites. It was because they were the "only people on this vast continent," and God wished to "multiply them to possess the land." If Abraham was permitted to multiply wives in order to more rapidly multiply his seed, in a small territory as was the one he accepted when he divided with Lot, how much more was there a necessity for a multiplicity of wives in the peopling of a "vast continent;" and how much wiser it would have been for God to have given direct command to Lehi and his sons to take a half or a whole dozen, a hundred, or a thousand wives and concubines each into the new country, where there was yet no laws on the statute book against bigamy, than it was to give such a rule in a small country, where the people to whom it came were surrounded by unrighteous nations. And it is still more astonishingly strange that God should be so careless in observation, so deficient in foresight and judgment as to give a command so late as 1843, and in the United States, in every one of which at the time there were statutory enactments recognizing the one wife rule as the proper one to be preserved. God knew that the central portion of Zion had and would have such a law; that it was not likely to be repealed during the days of the church; that if the people should go to any territory then, or afterwards belonging to the United States, it would be controlled by territorial laws enacted under the recognized rule of monogamy, and that to practice polygamy would be to break or ignore such laws.

Yes, there were reasons why God, through Jacob, gave that restriction; these reasons were:—(1) The rule as given at the time marriage was instituted was monogamic. (2) The Nephites had disregarded the rule. So did David and Solomon. (3) God would not permit his people to practice polygamy without warning them. (4) God foreknew that after the Book of Mormon should be discovered and published the people to whom it would come, would forget its teachings, and drifting into polygamy would cite David and Solomon as examples. This he proposed to forestall by putting himself on record in the book as he had done in the revelations to the church that the two testimonies should agree.

With these evidences clearly discernible, it is very curious how so shrewd a man as Elder Erastus Snow should talk so foolishly as he does in these extracts.

MOORHEAD, Iowa, July 25th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—Like most others of this locality we are striving for the things that perish, yet I trust we have not forgotten the beauties of the plan of salvation. During the past four months I have been holding services in what is known as the "Infidel Settlement." Judging from the interest manifested in the attendance and attention paid, and from the liberty that at times I have enjoyed, I think the application should at least be limited. The thought here presents itself that perhaps we are sometimes too ready to call others infidels. While I confess that in this world we meet with all kinds of minds, and are often torn from the summit up which we had climbed in our eager search for knowledge by violent hands, or perchance we had gone farther than our intellectual ability was capable of sustaining us, I am not willing to admit that because the opinions of others run counter to our own it makes infidels of them.

Fraternally,

J. W. WIGHT.

ALLISTON, Ont., July 25th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I have just returned home for a few days after being in the field for a time, and go again, probably to-morrow, or by Monday, 30th inst., God willing, with the intention of remaining for the Summer, and until the Fall conference. I had the pleasure of baptizing two at Alliston, in the former part of this month. Made an opening at Collingwood, a new place thirty miles north of here, where I was permitted to use the Disciple house of worship, Sunday, July 15th, speaking twice that day. The forenoon they occupied in their own service, which did not take up much time. I being present, was called on by their officiating officer, in the absence of regular minister, to speak at the close of their service, which I essayed to do, occupying three fourths of an hour. We met by appointment at seven o'clock p. m., when a number assembled, probably fifty or sixty persons. I had excellent liberty in speaking. Continued our appointment by the kind permission of the trustees of that church, during the evenings of 16th, 17th and 18th, setting forth principles of the faith; made friends and was invited to return. An episode of frequent occurrence in my experience occurred. Two ministers of different faiths on learning that a "Mormon" was to hold forth in the Disciple church, occupied their time on Monday 16th, by going around warning their respective hearers to not attend our services.

I found two members of the Reorganized Church, a Bro. Thomas Griffin, and his daughter, (married), Sr. Ironsides, both strong in the faith. They were brought into the work through Bro. Joseph Luff, while preaching in Toronto, where Sr. Ironside was then living. Bro. Griffin had previously joined the Brighamites, together with his wife, an amiable lady, who, by the way, made me feel perfectly at home while tarrying with them. After Bro. Luff had baptized Sr. Ironside, she informed Bro. Robert Davis of her father, and his then connection with the Brighamites. The sequel is that he was baptized into the Reorganized Church, and has been faithful, and is a man well reported of by all who know him. I could not, however, do anything to show his wife the need of being baptized, as she says she believes the principles, has been baptized no less than three times, the last two for sins committed by the Utah clan; they came to Canada from England, never went to Utah. Mrs. Griffin never accepted and would not allow herself to believe in polygamy. Says she has been so dreadfully deceived once, that she fears to ever try anything further, but to continue to believe in God and the principles, &c.

I go west again in a day or two, and specially desire your prayers for myself, as I have great faith in you. May God bless you ever in all the rich fullness of wisdom, charity, &c.

Your brother in bonds,

J. A. McINTOSH.

ELKADER, Iowa, July 23d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—You will see by this writing that I am still at home. I was intending to have left last week, and had my valise all packed for the mission, but it has been noticeable for some three weeks past that the clouds have been charged with a good deal of electricity, and with intervals of light showers of rain, until at length, not being content in the business of dealing out the water in so small a portion, on last Friday, about two o'clock in the morning, the clouds opened a general avalanche and poured down big rivers of waters, and following down a little spring brook that passes near my house, it spread itself out almost as majestic as the great father of waters; and in passing my house it took along with it a light two horse wagon that I had for family use, and distributed it along the water branch as best it could for a general use up. In the morning we gathered the fragments, and found nothing left of the poor old thing but the rim of three of the wheels, the spokes all broken out. This was not all. This outpouring of such a body of water all at once, tore up some of my wire fence, taking posts out of the ground, "asking no questions for conscience's sake," and some rail fence that I suppose will soon find a lodgement in the Gulf of Mexico, in case the rails do not hitch up on the way in that direction, as all our little brooks in this part of Iowa, take for the Mississippi waters. This little home disaster helped to make up a little hindrance on my part about getting out from home as soon as I had arranged, as my help was needed on some repairs, to restore what the storm king had destroyed. I shall probably be able to leave here by the first of next week. You may be assured that I am not anxious to remain long out of the field. I shall most likely go on eastward, returning for the String Prairie district conference. I have a promise out for Dubuque, and shall visit that place, for I notice that the Dubuque Daily Times published an essay written by a lady, by name Mrs. Collier, and read before a literary society in that city, on Mormonism. The article contains some four or five falsehoods. In giving the history of Joseph Smith and the origin of the Book of Mormon she states, that "Joseph Smith was born of parents poor and illiterate, (lie No. 1). She also states that Joseph Smith, while young, early developed a genius for getting a living without work, (No. 2); and that he had a peep stone by which he pretended to find lost property, (No. 3); and that also he went about discovering places for sinking wells, (No. 4.) She also states that concerning the Book of Mormon and the history it gives of a people once the inhabitants of this country, is an idea that Joseph Smith had stolen from a manuscript written by one Solomon Spaulding, (No. 5). This old stereotyped Spaulding story, as you will see, is still on the shelf for missionary use. As this lady of whom I speak expresses great desire that the present efforts being made by the missionary board to regenerate fallen mormonism. It is quite enough to notice that while this missionary zeal is pending for the good of the public generally, that in getting the history of Joseph Smith and that of the Book of Mormon, that lies Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, and 5, as you will see marked at the statements we refer to as being falsehoods, present quite a qualification for a Christian missionary who would teach Mormons the right way truly, by prefacing their missionary designs and purposes by a batch of infamous falsehoods in regard to the history of Joseph Smith and the origin of the Book of Mormon. I would send you the article in question, but I intend to read it in Dubuque before the public and give my version of the subject in the presence of the people, where I think these misrepresentations have been given for special effect.

Your uncle,

W. B. SMITH.

CARSON CITY, Nevada,

June 26th, 1883.

Beloved President Joseph Smith:—I have been preaching in different places, and had large, attentive congregations; but there are very few who receive the gospel. I had a severe accident yesterday, by falling off a load of hay. The family wanted to get a doctor, which I refused, and said that I would be healed by the ordinance, or die in the faith. I had three of my ribs fractured. I told them of the healing powers that I had seen in England. A man by the name of William Lewis had his back bone dislocated in three places. The doctors said he could not be restored, and in four days, by the power of God, he was walking on the street. Another man by the name of Henry James, was burned by foul air in the mines, on one Friday morning, and the next Monday he was perfectly well, by the power of God. Another man in Wales by the name of William Price, had some disease in his leg, so that his leg was swollen as big as his body, and three of the Brighamite Elders were there and administered to him every day for one week, and no effect. The proprietor of the house said that he had a desire to have Bro. Johns come there, and the Brighamite Elders said that they were perfectly willing; and he came into Monmouthshire, and found me, and we started for his home that evening, and we reached there somewhere about midnight, and after we rested a few minutes, we prepared to administer the ordinance, and when we were ready I desired that the elders should assist in administering the ordinance, which they refused, and said that they thought it was of no use. Then I proceeded and took the oil, and while in the act of anointing, the swelling left the limb entirely. Then I laid my hands on him and prayed for him, and after I prayed for him, I told him to get up on his feet and walk round. He did so, and was perfectly well. The names of the elders are John E. Jones, who is in this vicinity, Phillip Sikes, and George Bywaters, who are in Salt Lake City.

Sometime ago we held a conference in Franktown, Washoe county, Nevada, a portion of us stopped with Mr. E. Twaddle. He has always been very kind to us, and when we were ready to start for our homes on the Monday morning, as we were going to start, the word came to me as follows: Before you leave this place you go to the barn, and tell Mr. Twaddle that you would like to leave a blessing with him before you leave. To this he replied, What blessing can you leave me, with a great laughter, and I replied and said, that I would like to have the privilege to administer to your child, that he might be made whole. To this he replied, with a sad countenance, if that can be done, it will be a great miracle. Go and do what you please with the child. Then I returned to the house, and called for the oil, and gave it to Bro. E. Penrod, and told him to anoint the child, and I was mouth in prayer, and in four days the child was perfectly well. Another case of healing in Franktown, Washoe county, Nevada, in Bro. John Twaddle's family. His son had been failing with some disease in his leg. At last after long suffering, the boy came to the conclusion to get a doctor from Virginia, and he said that the boy could not be cured, but by opening the front of the thigh and scraping the bone the pain would cease, but the leg would be of no use to him. His father consented to open the leg, and his mother objected. "Father, send for Bro. Johns, and I shall be made whole." The next day I was sent for. I had about twenty miles to go. Arrived there that evening, and administered to the child, and administered to him the next morning, and after I was gone the child got out of bed and went to play with the rest of the children. The doctor arrived there that day, looked at the bed, and said, where is the boy? His mother answered, and said, There he is, out playing with the boys, and the doctor said, How in hell did that come? His charge was one hundred dollars a visit.

ABEDNEGO JOHNS.

I have written this as my father spoke, and we feel to ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints, that our father may be soon restored.

A. D. JOHNS.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., July 23d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—We have a good branch, and increasing in numbers rapidly, and I believe also in spirituality. Unexpectedly to me I have been placed in charge. I find my long and varied experience in the Plano Branch now quite a benefit to me, and I believe your wise counsel was not altogether thrown away upon me. We have the same difficulties here as elsewhere, where there is a large number of Elders, but I am told that under Bro. Foss' direction the branch has made rapid improvement. The Saints here are very warm hearted.

Whether this is the time of gathering or not, the Saints are gathering here. Almost every day some one comes to look out a home. And why should they not come? Is it not true that

"Zion shall not be moved out of her place?" The people are willing and even anxious for the Saints to come. A beautiful place and plenty to do. I believe, Bro. Joseph, that if the true condition of this place was known, dozens would come where there is one now. I feel that a heavy responsibility has been placed upon me; but I am trying to do the best I can, and while I feel my weakness, and often wish I had the wisdom of some others, I feel thankful that I am permitted to do even a little in this glorious cause. I shall feel that my highest ambition has been attained, if it should ever be said to me, by the great Master, as he once said to another, "He hath done what he could."

Your brother in Christ,

F. G. PITT.

PLANO, Illinois,

July 23d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—We are still trying to hold the fort, and work for the Master, by presenting the word to the Saints (and friends) who come out to hear; in which we are at the present ably assisted by Bro. M. F. Cooper from Wisconsin, who has been with us for some time. The Saints are all well at present, so far as I have heard, and seem to be quite earnest in the faith. Our attendance at meetings averages very good; but still we wish for things to improve that we may be more united; for in "union there is strength." I feel an earnestness in this work that I have not felt before; that I ought to do more, that I should be more sober, candid and faithful to the Master, in days to come, than I have been in the past; which I mean to do, His grace assisting me. Do not forget us here. In love of God,

Brother Joseph Smith:—As I was writing to you on business with the Office, I thought, as I was becoming a permanent subscriber to the Herald, it might not be amiss, nor an offense to you, to give you the shortest possible autobiographical synopsis of your permanent subscriber. My father was one among the first High Priests of the Church, and one of the first emigrants to Independence, Missouri. I was baptized by Oliver Cowdery, near Independence, in the year 1831. I was confirmed by the laying on of hands of Oliver Cowdery on the "Temple Lot" in the woods; a large concourse of people was present. I never shall forget some of the words pronounced over me, my peculiar feelings at the time, nor the remarkable response by the ministry present upon that occasion. I am a living eye witness to all the troubles of Jackson, Clay and Caldwell counties, Missouri. When Joseph Smith the prophet visited Missouri, I was again specially blessed by him, Cowdery, and father. And in that blessing I was declared to be a minister of the New Covenant, an High Priest of our profession and an apostle of Jesus Christ. When father attended the dedication at Kirtland, Ohio, the same blessing was reiterated, written out at length and subscribed to by Joseph Smith the prophet, Sidney Rigdon and Robert Rathbun, my father. I received it with all due gravity and humility. Some of this blessing was for years forgotten, when four years ago I was called to remembrance of it by its peculiar fulfillment.

I well remember Haun's mill, on Shoal Creek, Caldwell county, Missouri, where I was shot and my right thigh broken. After I got well I went to Ohio. There I taught school, studied medicine, held meetings, &c., &c. I heard no more of the Saints, no more than though there were none in the world. In the course of events, I was ardently solicited by a minister of the United Brethren in Christ to join said church. I finally consented, was immediately licenced to preach the gospel of Christ, and in course of time was ordained to the office of an Elder by Bishop Edwards and two other Elders, by the laying on of hands. I was sent a missionary to Michigan. Here I heard all about the Mormons, so far as Brigham Young and Strang were concerned, but nothing more nor nothing less; and indeed that was bad enough, so I sought for nothing farther.

The Lord having appeared to me and warned me to get out from sectism entirely; I put forth the effort in 1860, and in 1862 I got entirely free, with all due honor too, as my papers show. Since then I have been laboring as an apostle and servant of our Lord Jesus Christ, having by him been so called, chosen and sent. Last year I took the Echo, published by the Evening News Company. In the second number I took I saw for the first time, an article giving some little information about yourself and the Reorganized Church. I sent immediately for the Herald; have been taking it ever since. I have attended one meeting; saw Bro. Kelley, Bro. Blakeslee and others, with all of whom I am well pleased. I gave them all an invitation to call on me, but no one has put in an appearance; would be glad if any one would call on me. If some of the able Elders could not call, some of the disabled Elders might; I do not know but I would prefer a disabled Elder, for instance, Bro. William Smith. We could talk over old times, and enjoy it wonderfully, you know birds of a feather will like to flock together. But then the old adage is "Beggars should not be choosers," and I have long since learned that it is always best to be pleased to accept any one the Lord may send. Even so, Lord Jesus, for so it seemeth thee good. "Not by might, nor by power, but by my Spirit, saith the Lord of hosts."

HIRAM RATHBUN.

CLARKSVILLE, Texas,
June 27th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—As I have been silent for some time, and officially disconnected with the Church, no doubt this communication will be surprising to many of your readers; but I hope, nevertheless, that it may find space in your columns, and not be wholly uninteresting. In the first place, I hope that the object prompting this letter may not be misconstrued; and furthermore I trust, with the most intense solicitude, that no word or sentence may be susceptible of hurtful interpretation, for if such constructions are observed, I will assure those, before whose eyes this may come, that it is an error of ignorance and not of design.

As there have gone out many reports concerning my imprisonment, and the nature of the crime for which I was tried and convicted, I desire to make a statement with reference to my case, and correct some of the errors that are afloat. In the first place, I desire to make a declaration of my innocence of the charge of forgery, for which I was convicted; and I am governed in that by the conscientious emotions of truth. It is very natural for any man, when charged with a criminal act, or any other allegation, the establishment of which would be a detriment to character, to answer all such charges in the negative. But I trust I may give such an answer, being conscientiously governed.

The most prevalent idea, methinks, respecting most criminals, is that they are not only guilty of alleged offenses, but are for the most part from low parentage, rarely above mediocre, and consequently unworthy the notice and consideration of the honest and intelligent. But your benevolent and judicious mind will not permit you to doubt that there are circumstances governing most crimes, which should be appreciated by those in whose power are the vindication and execution; what degree of amelioration would be the condition of many unfortunate criminals. It is not my object to exonerate myself from every charge, or every imperfection. I know that I have done wrong, like most men similarly circumstanced. And I now make restitution. And if there are any who retain wounded feelings on my account, or if I have, by words or actions, marred the happiness of a brother or sister, I now offer the amplest apology, and pray their forgiveness.

There has been, no doubt, a great deal said and written concerning my christian deportment, and it is very probable that I may not have deported myself in that spirit of Christian benevolence, on all occasions, to have that forbearance so characteristic with the apostles and early saints, would be almost Herculean. And again, those who are familiar with human nature must know its imperfections. If I have done anything contrary to the established rules of etiquette and good breeding, or have taught in my preaching anything antagonistic to the doctrine and covenants of the Church, I trust it will be attributed to an error of ignorance, and not of design. For I will assure you all, that during my career as an Elder, I endeavored to preach the word. My whole time has been given. I have exerted every faculty on all occasions, to promulgate what I conceived to be the law of God. And during my term of, imprisonment, (ten months), I have never ceased to talk and explain, and to show as best I could, the absolute necessity of the restoration of the ancient order of things. But on that subject I will forbear.

I desire, as I have been convicted to the Texas State Prison for a term of two years, to ask a kind favor of the Church. That is to restore me to the Elder's office, and send my license. I expect to teach, and that without ceasing, wherever I am; but would much prefer license. I pray the Church to take my case under notice, and hope the result of their investigations will be the restoration of my license. Hoping, with all imaginable solicitude, that the Church will kindly favor me with my request, I am yours, in the love of Christ,

J. O. STEWART.

HOLSTEIN, Ont., July 15th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph: I rejoice in this latter day work, and have great reason to thank my Heavenly Father for what he has done for me. Three years ago I would rather have traveled two or three miles as said a word for my Savior; but I thank God that I now can stand up and speak for Christ. We had a fine time here last winter, when Bro. Hicklin was with us. We had the finest meetings ever we had in our branch, or around this country. May God bless Bro. Hicklin, wherever he is, is my prayer.

Your brother in Christ,
JOHN A. KENNEDY.

ARCADIA, Kansas.

Bro. Joseph:—I think we are gaining some spiritually, but not so much as we would like. We feel encouraged in the hope of a better and healthier condition of the branch here in the future. Bro. Ezzell meets with us once a month, and breaks the bread of life to our hungering souls, in the power and Spirit of the Lord, which makes our hearts rejoice, and makes us feel that it is good to meet together and listen to the counsel of God's chosen servants. * Brother Ezzell is a good man and able expounder of the "faith once delivered to the Saints," and is a very earnest laborer in the cause of our Redeemer; but like all of God's servants he has his oppositions to meet. In all his preaching he is met by a Baptist minister who tries to begof the minds of the people by following Bro. Ezzell, abusing Joseph Smith and quoting John D. Lee's confession; thanks be to God there are people that can tell the difference between argument and slang. He is trying to force a discussion on the doctrine we advocate, but Bro. Ezzell does not wish to debate with him. He says he does not think it is the best way to get our views before the people. I would be glad to have some one meet him in debate if I thought a fair and honorable discussion could be had, as there are some here who say that our Elders are afraid to meet him. I have heard that he challenges any or all of our Elders to debate with him. If so, I think he ought to be accommodated.

Asking an interest in the prayers of God's people in behalf of the Saints at Arcadia Branch, that they may so live that they may live down all reproach and in the end receive the great reward, is the prayer of your brother in bonds,

HENRY HAINES.

Summary of News.

July 26th.—There were two deaths from cholera at Alexandria, Egypt, yesterday.

The Khedive returned to the city from Cairo to-day, and was received with much enthusiasm by the populace.

Four hundred and twenty-two deaths from cholera occurred in Cairo yesterday.

Deaths from cholera yesterday: At Damietta 5; Tanalap, 2; Metalla, 25; Chobar, 6; Samanoud, 7; Mehalet, 56; Zifitch, 21; Mansourah, 12; Ghizeh, 55; Menzaleh, 3.

Cholera is reported as Rostov, Germany, and several deaths have occurred.

A victim of yellow fever died at Philadelphia yesterday.

A dispatch from Tamatave Madagascar, dated the 13th inst., says a state of siege is strictly maintained. Four French men-of-war are in the harbor, and other French war ships are en route to Tamatave. The British war ships Dracon and Dryad have sailed for Tamatave, and the American man-of-war Enterprise has gone to Zanzibar. Six English missionaries with their families are detained in the interior and unable to reach Tamatave.

The Pope and Bismarck are ill. Cossacks recently made a raid on Peterhaf.

Frost in the White Mountains, New Hampshire, last night.

Since the 1st of last January sixty-five criminals have been hanged by due process of law, while seventy-one have been hanged or shot without it. In January there were six, in February fifteen, in March three, in April eleven, in May seven, in June nineteen, and thus far this month ten. The South furnishes thirty-six of these, and of this number twenty-two were negroes. Of the thirty-five lynched in the North, sixteen, or almost one-half, came to their end in parts of Montana where there is no law administered.

At Niles, O., the Ward Iron Company suspended yesterday, owing $250,000. A bank being involved in the failure, was also obliged to shut its doors.

July 27.—The number of deaths from cholera at Cairo yesterday was 311. A British Lieutenant and eight soldiers succumbed to the disease.

Fifty-six deaths occurred at Ghizeh yesterday, 48 at Chibin, 20 at Mehalla, 30 at Tantah, 12 at Mansourah, and 25 at Kafrelhamza.

It is officially reported that the total number of deaths from cholera in the British army in Egypt to date is twenty-five.

1,161 deaths from cholera occurred in the Bombay Presidency India, during the first week in July.

The Royal Geographical Society's expedition to Lake Victoria, Africa, was compelled to retreat May 5, when in latitude 3:05 north, longitude 39 east, in consequence of the hostile demonstrations of the natives. The expedition is now making another attempt to continue explorations.

The ravages by the cotton-worm and rapid rise of the Nile cause great anxiety at Alexandria, Egypt.

Commissioner Evans has given Secretary Folger his estimates of the effect of recent National legislation on the internal revenue of the country. He believes that the total receipts of the year ending June 30 next, will show that Congress made changes which cut down the internal income of the Administration $43,000,000.

Commercial failures increased twenty-two in number last week as compared with the previous seven days. Canada had thirty-one out of the total of 190.

July 29th.—The Town of Casamicciola, near Naples, Italy, was almost entirely destroyed by an earthquake last night. The neighboring Towns of Feria and Laccoameno were greatly damaged. One hundred persons more or less severely injured, have arrived at Naples by steamers. The number of people killed is not known.

Steamers loaded with injured people are constantly arriving at Naples from the scene of the calamity. The hospitals are already filled with the sufferers.

The shocks began at half-past 9 o'clock last night. At that hour the majority of the people of the upper classes were at the theatre. Nearly all of the houses in the town collapsed. It is estimated that 1,000 persons were killed and 800 injured. A number of steamers have been brought into service to carry the injured to Naples. The impression produced by the disaster is indescribable. Many of the victims belong to good families.

It is impossible to give the number of dead at Casamicciola. In the latest accounts the number is estimated at 3,000. The Hotel Piccola Sentinella sank into the earth and buried many of its inmates. Some of the inhabitants of the town escaped to the sea at the first shock and made their way to Naples with the news of the calamity. The centre of the area of the shock was the same as that of two years ago, but the radius was wider. The shock was felt at sea, and according to some accounts even at Naples. The ground opened in many places, while in other places there was no movement. The water gushed out of the springs. Several boilers in the bathing houses burst. The theatre, a wood-structure, was literally torn open, allowing the audience to escape. At Lacco there are many dead and wounded. At Feria the churches were ruined, but no one was killed. At Serrara fifteen were killed. The troops recovered the body of Lady Fiorentini, Perfect of Lassari. All the steamers plying between Ischia and the main land were immediately chartered by the Government to bring the wounded from the island. The excitement in Italy may be imagined from the fact that 2,000 visitors were in Ischia, including wealthy Roman and Neapolitan families and several Deputies taking baths there.

The relations of the French and English at Tamatave, Africa, are growing more unpleasant all the time, and war ships of both nations are preparing to rendezvous at that place.

The revolution has at length succeeded in Ecuador, South America. The final battle was fought July 9th. Before daylight the troops were in motion, and by 6 a. m. the positions and the hills were all in the hands of the revolutionists. The resistance was generally feeble, but the main fort held out vigorously. The townspeople received the troops with enthusiasm. Cheer after cheer resounded as Alfaro rode through the streets, although he had a narrow escape after the firing was all over. He was dismounting from his horse in front of the Colombian Consulate when a colored man fired at him with a rifle. The bullet grazed him and struck a young Colombian who was looking on. Veintemilla, accompanied by a number of officers and 200 soldiers, fled, and succeeded in reaching Payta, whence, it is reported, he has gone on to Lima. Alfaro at once organized a municipality, and before the day was over the city was quiet. Elections for President are to take place. It is almost certain that either Carbo or Alfaro will be elected. The latter has long been popular, but his recent successes have raised him immensely in the esteem of his countrymen, and they may insist on electing him.

Ireland is unusually quiet.

July 30th.—Four deaths from cholera occurred at Alexandria yesterday.

Analysis has been made of the water of the Nile, which shows that it is infected with putrid matter to above the cataracts.

Mr. Goodall, the recently appointed Sanitary Inspector of the Nile, has removed from the river and buried 400 carcasses of diseased cattle.

A telegram from Palma, in the Balearic Islands, announces that several cases of cholera have occurred there. Families are flying to Spain.

The lazarettos at Salamis, Delos and Corfu,

Greece, are full, and no more refugees from Egypt, will be received there.

There were 330 deaths from cholera at Cairo, Sunday, and 443 at twenty other places between Minyeh and the Mediterranean. The Government is considering a project for the partial burning of other dangerous quarters of the city like Bulak.

James Carey, the Irish informer, has been shot and killed on shipboard near South Cape, South Africa, by one of the Irish Invincibles. The murderer gave himself up.

It is now stated that the number of persons killed by the earthquake on the Island of Ischia last Saturday night was 2,000, and the number of wounded 1,000.

Prof. Palmieri, Director of the Meteorological Observatory on Mount Vesuvius, states that the disaster on the Island of Ischia last Saturday night was not due to an earthquake, but to the subsidence of the ground.

The scenes at Naples occasioned by the accident are heartrending. The hospitals are crowded with the wounded survivors, and the dead-houses are filled with the bodies of the victims. The bodies of several Neapolitan ladies have been recovered from the ruins. Only five houses remain standing at Casamicciola.

Cries for help can be heard coming from the ruins. Sappers are hard at work endeavoring to rescue the persons still alive. Boats from the island filled with dead bodies are arriving here constantly. Many women and children are among the victims.

The Roman newspapers appeared to-day with mourning borders. Many people injured in Ischia will be cripples for life. The dead at Feria number 300; at Laccoameno, 500; at Fontana Serrara, 200. Twenty-four children perished in the Misericordia Assylum. The King and Queen of Italy have subscribed 100,000 lire and the Pope 25,000 lire for the relief of the sufferers.

At Gilroy, Cal., two shocks of earthquake were felt to-day. A rumbling sound was distinctly heard.

While the Jewish cemetery at Ostrog, Russia, was being violated and the monuments being broken, the malefactors were surprised by the custodians of the place, whom they threatened with death if they gave information. Probably fearing that they would be arrested and punished for the outrage, they, a night or two afterwards, went to the houses of the caretakers, entered them by force, and, after barbarously torturing the inmates, murdered them with blows of hammers. To some of their victims they administered narcotics before dispatching them.

July 31.—In detailing the horrors of the earthquakes at Ischia no exaggeration seems to have been possible. The Neapolitan and Roman authorities have been vigilant (fearing the approach of the cholera) in their attempts to avert a pestilence. It is deemed unsafe to unearth the dead at Casamicciola, and the town will be inundated with lime-water and left—a true necropolis. The victims on the whole island numbered over 4,000 dead alone, but Vesuvius is throwing up lava, which is running to the south-west, and toward a town.

Two deaths from cholera occurred at Alexandria, yesterday. The number of deaths from the disease at Cairo yesterday was 275.

There were eight deaths at Alexandria from cholera to-day. A surgeon has died in the British camp at El Werdan.

The deaths from cholera among the British troops in Egypt Monday numbered six at Ismailia, one at Cairo, one at Helouan, and one at El Werdan. The deaths among the natives in Egypt exclusive of those at Cairo numbered 429, including seventeen at Rosetta.

The cholera is slowly marching toward the cities of Western Europe.

A steamer arrived at Marseilles, France, with the disease on board.

Another ship, with yellow fever on board, has arrived at New Orleans, La.

Shaw Bros., of Boston, have failed for $3,500,000. Many other firms, loaded down with the Shaw paper, have suspended, creating almost a panic.

August 2d.—Eleven thousand people have died in Egypt from the cholera so far during the Summer. The disease does not seem to be making alarming headway at Alexandria, but has reached the western mouth of the Nile. Eight hundred and eighty-seven people died in Egypt Wednesday. The disease still mows down nearly 300 a day at Cairo.

The victims of the disaster at Ischia, are now estimated at 8,000.

Monte-Christi, Ecuador, has recently been the scene of a bloody affair. A Colonel captured the town and imprisoned the prominent citizens. A rescuing party in turn captured the place, but found the prominent citizens murdered during the action. Such of the first capturing party as could be caught were then tried and four of them were publicly shot in the square.

Yellow fever is raging at Callao, Peru, and one case has occurred at New York.

The situation in the telegraphic contest is unchanged, and it is now only a question of endurance.

FIRES, STORMS, AND ACCIDENTS.

July 26th.—At Bridgeport, Conn., last night the works of the Howe Sewing-Machine Company were destroyed by fire with a loss of $350,000.

The severest thunder-storm of the season occurred at Milwaukee to-day. The rain flooded the streets, and considerable property was destroyed by lightning.

July 27th.—Details of the storm of Wednesday night at the outskirts of Fort Worth, Texas, show that it was disastrous all through the southwest. Three men were injured, perhaps fatally. Three buildings were blown from their foundations. Three unfinished structures were blown down. A number of sheds and outhouses were demolished, also a couple of residences and one warehouse were more or less damaged. A windmill toppled over, and a tent in use at the temporary hospital was carried away, leaving the patients at the mercy of the elements for some little time.

The Kalamazoo river, Mich., is flooding the country round it, washing out railroad tracks and county roads, making travel difficult and dangerous.

Loss by fire at Denver, Colo., $28,000. Ann Arbor, Mich., $3,000. Chicago Ill., $400.

Hot gas, coming in contact with cold air in the receiver at Grace furnace, Brier Hill, Youngstown, O., to-day, caused an explosion which wrecked the engine house. Several employes were slightly wounded by flying missiles and pieces, and engineer Benjamin Jones was buried in the debris. Both legs were horribly broken. One was amputated. It is thought he can not recover.

Nathan and Co's circus, while exhibiting at Portsmouth, Va., July 24th, took fire from the oil lamps, and in the excitement which followed many were badly injured, but no one killed outright.

Three persons were killed while attempting to cross the railroad track with a team, in Lancaster county, Pa. $20,000 worth of cars wrecked near Harrisburg, Pa., by running over a cow.

John Thomas, aged 13, was killed by the cars yesterday, at Scranton, Pa. His mother was so affected by the shock, that a babe she was nursing died in her arms with convulsions.

A 2,000 barrel tank at Olean, N. Y., belonging to the Acme Refining Company, was struck by lightning this afternoon, and is still burning.

July 30th.—Loss by fire at Minneapolis, Minn., $8,000. The Bolton Springs House, Ont., burned. Loss by fire at Kankakee, Ill., $2,000. Fort Wayne, Ind., $5,000. Tulare, Cal., $120,000.

The Coroner's inquest on the bodies of the killed in Friday's accident on the Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg Railroad, near Carlyon Station, New York, has brought out the fact that the freight car which caused the accident was blown 128 feet, with brakes set, by the fierce wind of Friday night. The wrecked train was the "steamboat express," running from Niagara Falls to the Thousand Islands. All the coaches were wrecked. Twenty-one persons were killed and over thirty seriously wounded.

At Watch Hill, R. I., two men were drowned by the capsizing of a boat.

July 31.—Loss by fire at Orangeville, Ont., $15,000. East Tawas, Mich., $60,000. Des Moines, Ia., $14,500. Elgin, Ill., $5,000. Belleville, Ill., $100,000. Utica, N. Y., $50,000. Albany, N. Y., $75,000. Nashville, Tenn., $65,000.

Two men were killed by falling from buildings, at Toledo, Ohio. A diver was drowned at Toronto, Ont.

Aug. 1.—Another shock of earthquake was felt on the Island of Ischia this afternoon. The search for victims of the late catastrophe, still continues, under the order of King Humbert.

Three hundred and twenty deaths from cholera at Cairo, yesterday, and 665 in Egypt outside of that place.

Near Council Bluffs, Ia., a hitherto unknown disease has broken out among horses and cattle, which in a week's time has caused the death of twenty-five cattle, and eleven horses. No animal taken with the disease has yet been saved. One man slightly cut himself while skinning a dead animal, and died in a short time from blood poison.

Aug. 1.—Two railroad trains collided, between Petersburg Junction and Pownal, Vt. Five men were killed, fifty cars derailed and piled on top of each other. The wreckage immediately took fire. A passenger train with four full cars was due five minutes after the wreck, and a brakeman with bleeding hands, face and head, went out and flagged it. Another train three miles from North Troy, Vt., was derailed, and four cars and one engine made a complete wreck. One person and fatally fourteen others seriously injured.

Loss by fire at McGregor, Iowa, $50,000.

CROP REPORTS.

July 26th.—Reports from the region in Minn., visited by the late storm are to the effect that the greatest injury to the crops in that section was inflicted by a terrific hailstorm Friday night, which leveled corn and small grain to the ground in certain localities, and in spots literally pounded the stalks into the earth. The hail-stones were of great size, and one case is reported where a hail-stone as large as a hen's egg was driven by the wind through a wire screen and a pane of glass in a window, and the velocity after passing through these impediments was sufficient to break a bottle standing on a table inside the room. The storm of Saturday morning did not do any special damage in Nicollet County outside of the towns of Hebron and Belgrade, near Mankato, on the Minnesota River, where the hail played havoc in limited districts. Outside of these the crops of all descriptions in that country never looked better.

Around Austin, Minn., small grain is in a critical condition. The grain should all soon be cut, but the deep mud prevents any work.

Crops in eastern Iowa are reported as better than for years. The wheat and rye around Rockford, Ill., are fully up to the average. The prospects for a corn crop in Platte County, Ill., are good. Wheat around Mascoutah, Ill., is thrashing out from two to twelve bushels per acre. Very little of it would grade No. 2. Corn looks well here, and oats are the largest crop ever raised. The hay crop is good.

A good woman was sadly annoyed by a termagant neighbor, who often visited her and provoked a quarrel. She at last sought the counsel of her pastor, who added sound common sense to his other good qualities. Having heard the story of her wrongs, he advised her to seat herself quietly in the chimney-corner when next visited, take the tongs in her hand, look steadily into the fire, and whenever a hard word came from her neighbor's lips gently snap the tongs, without uttering a word. A day or two afterwards the good woman came again to her pastor with a bright and laughing face, to communicate the effects of this new antidote for scolding. Her troubler had visited her, and as usual, commenced her tirade. Snap went the tongs. Another volley. Snap. Another still. Snap.

"Why don't you speak?" said the termagant, more enraged. Snap.

"Speak!" said she. Snap.

"Do speak; I shall split if you don't speak!" And away she went, cured of her malady by the magic power of SILENCE.

When people have outlived the passionate impatience of youth; when they have almost forgotten that strange, impetuous self of former days, it is easy to crush and brush away the bright bubbles which the children are making in their play.

The Religious Telescope remarks that "we forget the individual in our struggle for the masses. Christ took men one at a time. Every man is worth an honest, earnest, persistent, ceaseless, almost eternal effort upon the part of the church."

"HE SHALL KNOW."

WHERE knowledge exists there is no place for doubt. Uncertainty in matters of religion is extremely unsafe, especially when we believe that religion touches upon our eternal, spiritual, and temporal affairs. For one to assert that he knows he is right seems to be very dogmatical. Such a one is called bigoted, selfish, uncharitable! It presupposes—"I am right, you are wrong."

Christ never asked any one to close his eyes and read the Bible. His system of religion was based on evidence. He asked no one to believe in his Christship, his Godly Sonship, or even what he taught to be true, without the promise of unmistakable evidence that these leading, wonderful statements were true; and any one might receive the promised evidence if he would comply with certain specific requirements published by him. Christianity must be a unity. It can not be a system of variance, and antagonizing theories. God, Christ and the Holy Spirit, are one; one in power, truth, glory, etc. Hence the religion of this triune-unit must of necessity be a grand network of harmonious principles, truths and theories, and these formed into a system of religion perfect in its every part, the grand embodiment of all truth! Truth always presents its evidence, it is never without it. It establishes its claims beyond a question. It sparkles with infinite glory, and supreme beauty.

Christ said: "My doctrine is not mine, but His that sent me. If any man will do his will he shall know of the doctrine whether it be of God." Here we discover that Christ promised certainty. "The doctrine," of which it was promised that people should know was of God, is this: "That through this man is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins." Acts 13:38. The doctrine was violently fought in primitive times, and it is fought to-day by all classes of Bible ignorers. Apostle Peter declared that God had highly exalted Christ to be a Prince and Savior, for to give repentance to Israel and forgiveness of sins. Acts 5:31.

To-day, there is no principle of Christianity so vigorously attacked as "the forgiveness of sins" through the man Christ. It is called, "Placing a premium on crime," which of course is untrue. If this doctrine required some supernatural power by the way of manifestation to those who accepted thereof eighteen centuries ago, it needs as much, if not more, to-day. What professed ministers for Christ, and the laymen have to offer to a gainsaying world that "the doctrine" is true, I do not know. But one thing I do claim to know, that is, that Christ, the past and present Christ, has something to offer; all he asks is a fair trial test. No man, of all the the so-called saviors, has left upon record the grand, living test that the Bible Christ has left! He asked, and asks men to believe that God is, and that Christ is his Son, accept their proffered mercy; repent of your sins, by ceasing to commit them; be baptized for remission of sins; and then God will give the Holy Spirit in a manner not to be mistaken, and it shall bear witness that God has forgiven past sins; and will aid the individual in doing good, and cause him to "taste of the good things of heaven and of the powers of the world to come," by unmistakable manifestations of divine blessings! Christ has made certain statements, or propositions, and promises attaching thereto, and a person who complies with the requirements in full, receives the promised evidence, how can that person fail to know that the doctrine of "forgiveness of sins" through Christ was a doctrine of God?

We have people who tell us we can not know. They tell us that Christianity was established by divine manifestations and when established, such were no longer needed! What evidence has any man aside from traditionary teaching, and that of a poor quality, that the Bible record is a true one, in narrative, prophecy and doctrine? None. Can a record of miracles performed eighteen centuries ago adduce any evidence to a person to-day that the Christian religion is of divine origin? It can not. If fulfilled requirements produced certain results then, why not now? And the promise being wholly unlimited, we expect to receive as manifest evidence of the certainty of the doctrine as any one else in ages past. That somebody wrote that somebody else received such and such things when they obeyed certain principles, is no evidence to me that it is true! But if I obey the same principles, and the same result follows to me, then I, too, can "know of the doctrine!" Orthodoxy, "vainly so called," says: "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved." The person says, "I believe." "Now," says the preacher, "pray until your sins are forgiven you, and you find peace with God." All this leaves the "believer" in a state of uncertainty. Upon the other hand, if he believes, repents, is baptized, receives imposition of hands, he is certain of his acceptance with God, because he has fully complied with the requirements. No shadow of doubt can exist because of the perfection of the work.

We may tell the world that we have seen, heard and felt of God's power; they tell us they do not believe it, because they have believed, yet have witnessed no such things. They have professed faith, repentance, been baptized, sprinkled, poured or plunged, and there it ended. But we have believed, repented, been immersed for remission of sins, received laying on of hands, and we testify what God has wrought for us! The difference is this: they partly complied, we fully complied. They also disbelieved in the promised blessings; we fully believed them and craved them! The result follows only full and complete obedience. They are wholly unqualified to testify. There are people who have never seen snow. I might go to them and say I have seen snow; they ask, What is it? I tell them; they disbelieve my testimony because they have never seen it. The reason is they were born and raised under diverse climatical conditions from those under which I was born. I tell them I have seen, tasted, handled it, and therefore I know there is such a thing as snow. If they would place themselves under like climatic condition, they too, might know. A denial of my statement is adducing no proof to injure it. People never will, nor can know of the doctrine being divine who never fully obey its behests. It is folly for a man to sit in a cave and then complain that he receives no benefit from the sun. Think of a man closing all the window blinds and doors, and then in that darkened room, he wonders why the sun shines not upon him! 'Tis absurd for people to sit in the cave of carnality, and avow their disbelief in the statement of people who say they receive and enjoy the sunlight of God's power and blessings. Why should men howl in the dark when invited into a house filled with light. Why perish 'neath the chilling blasts of sin when there is life in righteousness! I challenge the right of any man to deny my statements or claims of what I may have seen, heard, and felt of God's power, who has never obeyed what I have obeyed, never believed what I have believed; never sought what I have sought, and claim to have found. No man can say that the doctrine of which we write is untrue who has never tested it. If any man will honestly, conscientiously believe and obey, and thereafter fails to receive the promised evidence, then, and not till then is he qualified to determine the truthfulness or falsity thereof. We make this statement boldly. In this age of brazen, defiant, blasphemous infidelity, we need a living God, a living Christ, and a manifesting Holy Spirit! Christianity has no "bolstering" properties about it, but it has its grand, unexcelled evidences to exhibit unto all who will honestly embrace its principles.

A certain person dreamed that all the "orthodox" churches of a certain city were preparing for a great feast, to be had in the largest hall the city owned. All things were gotten in readiness. Silver plate was seen on all the long tables; china ware adorned the boards; everything in the furnishing line was first class. The person gazed on all the tables, and lo! naught to eat but boiled potatoes and salt! Here we have the type of fashionable religion. Fine churches, with towering spires, cushioned pews, carpeted floors, pipe-organ and quartette; these are the silver and china, and the sermon-essays the potatoes! We will tell the world in the language of the poet:

"The king of heaven his table spreads,
And dainties crown the board.

It satisfies no hungry soul to read of Beltashazzar's feast. The New Testament contains but a few of the crumbs that have fallen from the Master's table. Bring your crumbs, compare with the "dainties" we, by the authority of Christ present to you, and you will find a true comparison to exist; come and eat, and live forever! How every soul throbs with divine life that has eaten at the table of the Lord in our day, "tasted, feasted on the good things of heaven and the powers of the world to come." Christ, and Christ only, is the hope of the world. He is the center of all history. All history converges toward, and diverges from him. Thus he stands pre-eminently above all, supremely in all, and centrally amidst all! Christ, the Lord of Lords, and King of Kings. We can but laud and magnify the name and titles of Christ, emulate his virtues, praise his noble traits of character, admire his benevolence, follow in his footsteps, fight as he fought, work as he wrought, pray as he would have us pray, do what he has kindly asked of us to do. He stands alone in all history. He has no rival, he has no peer. His grandeur and his glory outshine all that man ever possessed or exhibited. His patience and his love have never been seen in man. His character none can excel. His goodness and purity man may but faintly imitate. When we have such a Christ, such a power, such a life, such a character, who can, who dare to censure us for endeavoring to imitate, to follow and to love! No human heart ever pulsated with divine life as did his. No breast ever throbbed with kindness as did his. No life on earth has ever shone with such lustre and brilliancy, such excellency of moral and spiritual worth as did his. We adore thee, O thou admirable Savior! We would worship thee, thou most Precious One! As we close our tribute, hear him again: "My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me. If any many will do his will he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." "He that liveth and believeth in me, though he were dead, yet shall he live!"

AN OPEN LETTER, ADDRESSED TO

PRESIDENT JOSEPH SMITH, JR.,

Of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and others conspicuous at the Conference recently held in the Temple at Kirtland, Ohio.

GENTLEMEN:—Accounts have reached Utah of your Conference held in the Temple at Kirtland, Ohio, commencing April 6th, 1883. It seems but a few months since the writer saw in your paper, "The True Latter Day Saints' Herald," glowing accounts of a contemplated convention of your leading men at Independence, Jackson county, Missouri. You then held out flattering inducements by making that place your grand center of interest. The writer gave some attention to see how you would carry out the programme. For some cause the scenes were shifted and the theatre of your offered attractions was designated to be at Kirtland. Perhaps it was thought to be an easier task to patch up and repair the old Temple than to build a new one; and then, actual occupancy and some outlay in repairs, might be counted something in law favorable to your organization as to the ownership of the building. At all events, your conference convened there, and during its exercise the leading spirits thereof made certain false declarations calculated to deceive the world as to some of the doctrines and practices of the martyred Prophet and Seer, Joseph Smith, Jr., the founder, under heavenly guidance, of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

I will quote the following remarks of one of the speakers. It will serve to ventilate the spirit manifested on that occasion:

"The object of this grand old building was a good one. The intentions of its builders and promoters, however, have never been carried out. There has been a departure from that spirit that moved the erection of these walls. If our intentions be in harmony with the intent of the original builders of this Church, we will be upheld. I stand as a professor of principles. The dissenters from the original faith of our Church, people in Utah, men and women, have practiced the meanest things that ever disgraced the world. I am very sorry that such a thing exists as polygamy and that we are ever brought into connection with that curse as black as Egyptian darkness. Do not take stock in any religion that does not love the nation. I shall pray for an administration that separates us from that terrible curse in Utah, and shall support that political party that brings it about. Only recently we presented to Secretary Frelinghuysen an epitome of our faith for the purpose of our Church getting divorced from the black, filthy crew, whose headquarters are in Salt Lake City. If we succeed in this, every infidel and sceptic, even, will bid us God speed in our work. The doctrines of the Utah Mormons are the diabolicalisms of the nineteenth century. I would rather my child would die an infant than be a Utah Mormon, whose doctrine drags souls down to hell. God is the God of liberty, truth, justice and hope. The people will uphold us in our work. We bid God speed to every man and woman who is good and right, without regard to politics or religion. We hope the public and the government will draw the distinction between us and the Utah Mormons. We have no interests in common with the Utah Church, these full blooded apostates, whose practices are viler than the vilest. That we are true and loyal to our government is part of our faith. No man or woman is a Saint who violates the law of the land and the community. When such men claim to be Latter Day Saints they are but latter day devils. The Utah Mormons have engaged Judge Jere Black for their attorney, and are ready for the test. We are waiting for them, and will go into the fight without gloves."

The writer need not undertake to analyze all the items of this extract. It states, however, that "there has been a departure from that spirit that moved the erection of these [the temple] walls." Not on the part of the Utah "Mormons;" they have kept the spirit of temple building ever since their trowels rang upon those walls which now echo your denunciations.

By virtue of being a son of the great man who was the founder of this Church, your leader, it is inferred, claims to be a legitimate successor to the right of church government. He can certainly set up no other claim than this; his works will not justify it. I admit this blood relationship would have been no bar to the raising of the son to high distinction had his principles been consonant with the real faith and policy of his father. Instead of this, his declaration of principles published to the word and again enunciated by the speakers at your conference, are, many of them, in positive opposition to those which are well known to have been the doctrines and principles preached and practiced by that great man; principles for which he lost his life at Carthage jail, June 27th, 1844.

While the leader of the "Reorganized Church" was but a lad, whom many now living in Utah saw playing ball and eijoying youthful sport with his playmates, apparently taking no concern in the affairs that engrossed his father's chief attention, myself and others had advanced to mature years and had ample opportunities of becoming familiar with the Prophet's doctrine. We knew that he then both believed in and practiced polygamy. Your conference speakers labor to make the world believe that this was not the case; but with the incontrovertible evidence within your reach, do any of you believe that he did not? It seems inconsistent, impossible. On reaching manhood, your leader certainly had full opportunity to be correctly informed upon this matter. During his and his brothers' visits to this Territory, testimony which should place this matter beyond all doubt in their minds, was furnished them. Among other proofs, women of respectable and unimpeachable character here, testified to them that they were wives of the Prophet, their father. Such evidence no court with judicial functions could well reject. How can your leader ignore its force? How can he in opposition to it smother the light of truth it must have kindled upon the altar of his heart-convictions, and wilfully and persistently place his father before the world in a false attitude—in an attitude different from that in which he placed himself?

The doctrine of celestial marriage I have the best of reasons for believing was understood and believed by him away back in the days when he lived in Kirtland, when he and the Saints, in their poverty, were toiling to erect that sacred edifice wherein you now falsify him, seeking, by your unsupported declarations, to nullify his most sacred doctrines. Even there, as I believe, he was instructed of the Lord respecting the sacred ordinance of plural marriage; but he was not required to reveal it to the Church until some time during the residence of the saints at Nauvoo, where he received a revelation from the Lord setting forth in detail the results to be obtained by keeping inviolate all the laws connected with this sacred condition of things. And in consequence of the prejudices of the saints and the tide of persecution which he well knew he would have to encounter from the outside world, wherein his life would be endangered, he delayed as long as possible to make this principle known, except to a few of the most faithful and humble of the Saints. The boy Joseph, while playing in the streets and vacant lots of Nauvoo, very likely did not know of these things, nevertheless the writer knew that the elder

Joseph then practiced and taught (though not publicly) this doctrine. And further, he then knew some of those women to be his wives who subsequently, in Utah, reported themselves to his sons, Joseph and David, while here, as such wives. These young gentlemen found abundance of evidence when here on that point. If your leader was uninformed in relation to this while in his boyhood, he certainly has been furnished with sufficient evidence since he became a man, and to me and to thousands of others in this Territory, it would be a great source of gratification if he would be frank and honest enough to see these things as the Lord has really revealed them, and boldly and firmly hold up his father and his principles in their real character, that the world might see them as they are, and as his sons, though now in darkness, will behold them when they meet, on the shores of eternity, their illustrious sire. Would to God, that instead of organizing a faction, they were acting in concert with the church organized by their father, and that instead of following in the wake of Strang, McLellan and others, by the route of the Kirtland Temple, they were led to aid in building new Temples in the Stakes of Zion, letting the Kirtland Temple stand in its solitude till the time fully comes when the saints will repossess their inheritances and rebuild their cities and Temples of which the wicked have despoiled them. That Temple has answered the purpose for which it was erected. The Nauvoo Temple has done the same. President Brigham Young, speaking of leaving the last named edifice, which had been raised in the days of fierce persecution, said "We will go into the wilderness; we will take unto us the substance and leave the shadow behind." This referred directly to the keys of the Priesthood which the Saints had received therein as being the substance. And so they were, and it was to get lawful possession of these keys that the Temple was built. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints has completed, in the midst of these majestic mountains, one Temple, and three more, at the cost of millions, are in course of erection. Their labors in this direction did not cease with the Kirtland Temple, nor with the more costly one built at Nauvoo. Nor will it cease when those in progress here are completed. But this labor will be continued, and when they have sufficiently enlarged the borders of Zion, stretched out her curtains, gathered Israel from the nations and the hosts of the north country are led hither by their prophets, and when the Lord directs, they will build up the waste places which have been inhabited by God's people and the temples thereof will be built on the sacred sites designated by the finger of the Almighty.

Here I wish to ask one question. While all this work of temple building has been going on in these mountains, at such immense cost of labor and means, and our cities have dotted the valleys for over five hundred miles north and south, how many Temples has the "Reorganized Church" erected? Not one. But they now boast of their achievement in patching up and clearing away the cobwebs from the first building of this kind that this Church ever erected. As far as the writer is concerned, you are welcome to your present jubilee and to all the prestige it may give you in the eyes of the wicked. For righteousness sake the Prophet Joseph Smith was forced to leave that place to save his life. The writer is sorry to see his son operating there as the leader of a faction whose speakers employ words with which to court the smiles and plaudits of those who cast him out. From Jackson, Caldwell and Davis counties, Joseph and the Saints were subsequently driven and their property destroyed. Yes, Joseph, junior, and from Nauvoo your father desired to journey to these mountains that he might escape the oppression of his enemies, but his blood, and that of your worthy uncle, was shed at Carthage. And now if your thirst for applause is so great as to cause you to invite and accept it from such a source, you have certainly a sense of honor to which the writer is a stranger.

On August 6, 1842, in Nauvoo, Joseph delivered the following prophecy, as recorded in his history:

"I prophesied that the Saints would continue to suffer much affliction, and would be driven to the Rocky Mountains; many would apostatize, others would be put to death by our persecutors, or lose their lives in consequence of exposure or disease, and some of you will live to go and assist in making settlements and building cities, and see the Saints become a mighty people in the midst of the Rocky Mountains."

Now, I ask you candidly, has not this prediction been literally fulfilled? It has in every particular. In the meantime, what have you and your faction been doing? Instead of coming to these mountains and assisting in fulfilling his prediction, you have wandered east. What cities have arisen by dint of your enterprise? What Temples to the name of the Lord have been reared as monuments of your inspiration and knowledge concerning that stupendous work, revealed through

Joseph the Seer, yet to be performed for the redemption of millions of the dead? And now that you possess, without title, the old Temple in Kirtland, instead of trying to use it as a sanctuary wherein to administer the ordinances of the Priesthood, you court therein smooth paths wherein to travel, and while hurling false and vituperative epithets against the people of Utah, invite the union of infidels and sceptics with your faction, in abuse of those who were the defenders of the Prophet and who still hold his memory sacred by believing in the doctrines which were revealed through him by the inspiration of the Almighty. To your confusion and shame you can not fail to realize that the spirit which actuates you is not the Spirit of Christ who neither courted nor expected the praise of the world. Once in Nauvoo I heard the Prophet declare to the people how they might always know where to find the true Church. He gave it as a guide for them ever afterwards and said the day would come when they would need it. He said: "Factions and parties will arise out of this Church and apostates will lead away many. But in the midst of all this, keep with the majority, for the true leaders of God's people will always be able to have a majority; and the records of the Church will be with them. Keep with the majority, for where the carcass is, there will the eagles be gathered together." The Saints in these mountains are the majority. Here they are free from the dictum of demagogues and they have no need to importune Secretary Frelinghuysen to "divorce" them from any "black, filthy crew" that exists upon the face of the earth, which Mr. Gurley declared your church had recently done. God has divorced the Utah Saints from all such characters, and the bond of their release is stamped with the blood of the prophets. Here they are free to do the will of heaven. Here they are free to respect the rights of all men and "render unto Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's and unto God the things that are God's." Here they are free to keep all the constitutional laws of our country and raise the stars and stripes from the lofty mountain peaks. And when the Constitution is torn into fragments and its safeguards are sought to be wrested from the sacred compact, and they see fit to engage the services of one or more able and honest constitutional lawyers to elucidate to statesmen, to jurists and courts, what those rights are that are therein incorporated for the protection of every American citizen, they certainly have the privilege, the right and the power to so act. We are freemen here and profess to be gentlemen; not vain boasters nor bullies.

Gentlemen, from that primitive rostrum, built mostly by Utonians, your vindictive declamations hurled hitherward, come as froth and vain babblings, nothing more. You stand boastfully in that pulpit which the Saints built in their poverty nearly fifty years ago, and denounce as apostates and disloyal to our common country those who are beyond your reach. There let the son repudiate, for the sake of popularity, the most sacred doctrines of his father! Here we will maintain them. There you invoke the clemency of the nation and ask that a distinctive line be drawn between yourselves and us, a line that shall be international in its character, reaching over into lands beyond the seas and granting exclusive permits to your kind of "Mormons" to cross over without annoyance to the land of liberty. You solicit, with sordid motives, the consular powers to smooth the path for your emigration. Here we expect to gather Israel who are to come up through much tribulation. Gentlemen, your attitude is that of abject supplicants. Why not tell the world, as we do, that we solicit no favor, that we do not ask for people of every race, class, or nationality beneath the broad light of heaven. Petition for this, plead in your country's courts—for this, and if justice be granted certainly every freeman should be content—content because the Constitution authorizes it and the patriot fathers died to transmit it. Joseph Smith, the older was a patriot; he descended from an ancestry of patriots; he asked respectfully, yet boldly, for his rights, nothing more; why should Joseph Smith, the younger, fail to imitate his noble example? Our motto in Utah is: "Do what is right, let the consequence follow."

In conclusion I desire to say I entertain no feelings of malice toward you, gentlemen, whom I have so plainly addressed. I feel it to be a duty thus to communicate a portion of my views and a few items which have come within my knowledge during my travels of near half a century with this people. May they do you good, not harm, by causing you to catch a gleam of that light which the Spirit of the Lord imparts to the honest in heart. And may you be turned from error unto righteousness, and eventually be sheltered by the true fold of Christ. The elements of that kingdom spoken of in Daniel 2:44, are with the Church in these mountains, and we have nothing to fear as to the final result. It will eventually roll forth in majesty and might and fill the whole earth.

I testify that the kingdom is growing around the nucleus here, and its light is destined to shed its lustre over the earth and usher in the reign of peace on earth and good will to men.

Respectfully,

L. O. LITTLEFIELD.

LOGAN, Utah, April 27th, 1883.

THE TORNADO SEASON.

THE tornado season has fairly commenced, though not in the section of country where its most terrible ravages are usually experienced. Those which occurred early in the month at Hot Springs and Ozark, Ark., were comparatively harmless, though thirteen lives were lost and much property destroyed, but the Mississippi and Georgia affair was on a scale sufficient to entitle it to be called the inaugural of the season, and from now until August, or even September, we may look for similar recurrences in the south western part of the country. The signal service has investigated over 600 tornadoes with the result of the discovery that the late spring and summer are the periods when they are to be expected, the larger number occurring in June. This year they have commenced earlier than usual and at points further east than usual, for Kansas, Illinois, Missouri, and Iowa are the principal sufferers. Mississippi, Georgia and Alabama, and the borders of Tennessee and South Carolina are more or less ravaged by tornadoes, but—this spring being an exception—not with such disastrous results as attend those which originate in Texas and the Indian Territory, and travel their northeastern course through the States above mentioned.

Although it is early in the season, the recent tornado is one of the most destructive ever known in this country. As nearly as can be ascertained from the conflicting accounts this tornado entered the continent from the Gulf of Mexico, crossing the Mississippi a short distance below Natchez without doing any special damage in Louisiana; at this point it divided, one branch going southeast, the main funnel, however, keeping on its northeastern track, and inflicting the most terrible losses of life and property at Wesson and Beau-regard, in Copiah County. It passed Aberdeen, in the northeastern part of the State, crossed Alabama obliquely without doing much damage, and entered Georgia, in Harris County, crossing the Chattahoochee River, curiously enough, at the very point where every storm has entered Georgia since 1804, the first year in which a tornado was recorded. It is also curious that it divided on the Georgia line, just as it did on the Mississippi line, one branch keeping on its northeastern course, spending itself in South Carolina, while the other veered into Southwest Georgia. It will be seen, therefore, that it traversed an immense area of territory, its damage being spread over five States, though the heavy losses are confined to two. As compared with the damage occasioned by tornadoes in 1881 and 1882, the results are frightful. The whole number of lives lost in 1881 was 187. Last year they amounted to 369. By way of comparison a statement showing the losses of life occasioned by the worst tornadoes of 1882 will be of interest. In April, 50 lives were lost at Brownsville, Mo., and Monticello, La.; in May, 18 at McAllister, Tex.; in June, 100 at Grinnell, Ia., and 13 in Kansas; and in July, 25 at Coalville, Pa. As we have said, 369 lives were lost in all last year and 187 in 1881. The complete reports of the loss of life occasioned by the recent tornado have not yet been sent in, but it is already known that 190 persons were killed. As of the 283 injured many will die, and many counties swept by the tornado have not yet been heard from, it is reasonable to estimate that the total loss of life will reach at least 250, which is much larger than that occasioned by all the storms of 1881 and only one-third less than those of 1882, which was considered an exceptional tornado year. It will also be observed that it has inflicted a loss of life more than twice as great as that at Grinnell.

In view of such disasters as these and the certainty that they will occur in specified sections of the country at specified times, it is not creditable to science that these terrible phenomena of Nature are not better understood, and that some means for the protection of human life in the tornado area have not been suggested. Now that science says it has exploded Scriptural revelations and says it pretends it has made a myth of an overruling Providence, it would seem as if it might understand these natural phenomena and strip them of some of their destructive power, and no longer let the wind blow where it listeth. We fear, however, that it will always remain true that no man can tell whence it cometh or whither it goeth. The most the signal service has done is to recommend the building of under-ground dwellings as places of refuge, which is not always practical, and it may be remarked they do not always constitute places of refuge. The only man who has made a practical, well-sustained suggestion with regard to the origin of the tornado is Prof. Tice, of St. Louis, who, notwithstanding his vagaries as a weather prophet and his unfortunate place of residence, is a man of scientific attainment. His theory is to the effect that the tornado is a display of electrical energy, and that the manifestations of every tornado, such as denuding trees of their bark and reducing wood to fibres, are electrical in character, the splintering being occasioned by the passage of the electric current through the sap, which decomposes it into its constituent gases, expanding with terrific force. Whether Tice's theory be true or not, the subject deserves more thorough treatment than it has yet received from the hands of the savants. Who is the future philosopher who will bottle the tornado as Franklin bottled the lightning?

JOHN'S BAPTISM.

BRO. J. R. COOK:—I have read in the Herald of April 14th, saying that I asserted that John's baptism was not for remission of sins. Now, dear brother, your argument for its denial is not found in the Scriptures; and the word of God calls us to read them for proof. In John 5:30, Jesus said to the Pharisees: "Search the Scriptures." * * *

But in searching them we must strive to make the word of God true. Paul says: "For the word of God is yea, yea, and not yea and nay." (2 Cor. 20). It appears to me that you, while a priest, were ministering under the priesthood of Aaron, which Paul says was done away in Christ." (See 2 Cor. 3:7, 12. In Heb. 7:1-11, Paul is describing the Jewish tabernacle. Verse 11: But Christ being come a High Priest of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, not made with hands." Verse 17: "For where a covenant is there must also of necessity be the death of the victim, (17), for a covenant is of force after the victim is dead, otherwise it is of no strength at all while the victim liveth." Read chapter 10. He says, verse 4: "For it is not possible that the blood of bulls and goats could take away sins." Paul says, Gal. 3:21: "For if there had been a law given that could have given life, verily righteousness would have been by that law." In Col. 2:13, 14, Paul says: "He (Christ) took away the ordinances of the law that were contrary unto us, (not being able to take away sin,) and nailed them to the cross." Jesus, then, came to fulfill the law of Moses, (or Melchisedec priesthood promised in Deut. 18:17, 18). That is the covenant he came to fulfill; for that priesthood was taken from them, and its order only left with them. Aaron was made a high priest of that law. So when Jesus came, he had to come in at its gate, for as it was an appendage to the Melchisedec, it had to be united to its place; and that was the reason John was sent to prepare its way. So, dear brother, although a priest of the order of Aaron, it was united to the Melchisedec and when God's Lamb's blood was shed, he arose by the power of God, ascended up to the Father, into the holy place, made without hands, and received the priesthood of the Son of God, and the Melchisedec being an appendage to his priesthood, all the priesthoods he united in himself. (See Gen. 6: 62). "Even ye must be born again." Adam was born of the Holy Ghost before. (See chapter 28; see also chapter 6:9.) They were to become living souls. After he was baptized, he, God, said, "Ye are one in me. Thou art after the order of my son." But Adam could not delegate that life to others, which belonged to Christ. But we find that he gave him another law for his children. (Verse 59). Read from verse 57 to 61. So, brother, although a priest, you had it in Christ's priesthood united.

Again you say, and truly too, that John's mission was to go before the face of the Lord, to prepare his ways and to give knowledge of salvation unto the people, by remission of sins. That was the mission he was sent to do. To tell the Jews that there was one among them whose shoes he was not worthy to stoop down and loose; "He shall baptize you with fire, and the Holy Ghost. (That is what John could not do). And now, brother, we find that when Moses, who held the keys of the Melchisedec Priesthood, and Elias, who held the keys of the Levitical, came to Jesus with his three counselors, Peter, James and John, and received in order the keys; after that he had received the authority he sent out his apostles to preach and baptize. Did Christ then, with his disciples, baptize? Was it the same baptism of John, with the priesthood of Aaron, that belonged to laws that were carnal? Is it not more likely that Jesus and his apostles baptized with the priesthood that Moses had, (according to God's order). (See Deut. 18: 17, 18). For my part, I think that he would not leave the higher priesthood to minister in the lower. Now, hear John's answer to his disciples, when they saw that Jesus and his disciples were baptizing; (for it must be the baptism they were alluding to: "I told you," said John, "that I am not the Christ, but that I am sent before him;" verse 31; "He must increase, but I must decrease." Now, if he baptized with John's baptism, his baptism would also have decreased; but his (Jesus') baptism was to increase. Read John 3: 27 to end. But you ask, was baptism an ordinance of the law of Moses, which was a law of carnal commandments and ordinances? Now, I will give you an answer, and ask you to read the 24th chapter of Exodus, where the Lord called up Moses and Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, and seventy elders, into the mount with him, and they saw God, and did eat and drink in his presence. He kept Moses forty days and nights, instructing him, and by his own fingers wrote the laws of the priesthood that he gave him. I ask, were these laws that God himself wrote, carnal? I ask you to read 32d, 33rd, and 34th chapters of Exodus, and you will see the law of carnal commandments. See the 1st and 2d verses of chapter 34.

One other mistake. I made you say that I said Christ's blood took away the sins of the world, the plural number. To your mind it would have sounded better if I had used the singular number.

Christ's blood did put away the great sin of Adam's transgression; so that the way was opened, that we could approach unto God, and ask in the name of Jesus, forgiveness of our own individual sins. For he destroyed death, and him who had the power of death, the devil, see Heb. 2: 14, 15. Why did Peter say on the day of Pentecost to the repentant Jews, when they said what shall we do: "Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for remission of sins," (plural) Ananias said to Paul "And now, why tarriest thou, arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins," (plural).

I will ask you, and all who believe with you, to answer a few pertinent questions, and keep God's word true, that believers in the ordinances of the gospel, (for gospel is an untranslated word, in English it is good news), which is baptism for remission of sins, laying on of hands for the Holy Ghost; its ministers apostles, pastors, teachers, gifts, &c., before Christ, and as Paul says in 1 Cor. 12. If so, why did Paul say, verse 18, "But now hath God set the members every one of them in the body, as it hath pleased him," if they were in the Church always? Why is it said, "But now hath he set," etc. Likewise, if the ordinances of the gospel always were on earth, from the beginning, why did Paul say in Acts 14: 16, "Who in times past suffered all nations to walk in their own ways." Again, 17: 30, "At the times of this ignorance God winked, but now commandeth all men every where to repent." And again, what did Jesus mean when he said, "He who believeth on me; as the Scriptures hath said, out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water. But this spake he of the Spirit, which they who believe on him should receive; for the Holy Ghost was promised to them who believe, after that Jesus was glorified." Heb. 9: 8, "The Holy Ghost thus signifying that this way into the holiest of all was not yet made manifest, while as yet the first tabernacle was standing;" and in verse 16, "For where a covenant is, there must also of necessity be the death of the victim," 17, "for a covenant is of force after the victim is dead, otherwise it is of no strength at all while the victim is alive." Again, Matt. 3: 37, "And now also the ax is laid unto the root of the trees," (plural), at the roots of all the teachings and doctrines of men.

Now, if we would read those passages I have quoted in Acts 14: 16; 17: 30; Rom. 4: 15; "Because the law worketh wrath; for where no law is, there is no transgression." 5: 13, "For before the law, sin was in the world; yet sin is not imputed to them who have no law."

Now, I call upon all to answer these few questions, and keep God's word true. That is, if the priesthood that belongs to the gospel, (for as I said before, gospel is an untranslated word, which in English is good news, or glad tidings, that was preached from the day that Adam fell, namely, the seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent's head), he, God, told Adam, Gen. 5: 43, to end of chapter, that Christ would come in the meridian of time, (not then before it), and 6: 60.

If we could but open our eyes to see and our ears to hear, in reading our Bibles, we could see, that if Christ's priesthood was on earth from the days of Adam to this day, there would be no millenium reign of Christ; for Paul tells us that the gospel, through his ministers; for says he, "We are unto God a sweet savour of Christ, in them that are saved, and in them that perish. To the one we are the savour of death, unto death; and to the other the savour of life unto life," (eternal). 2 Cor. 2: 15, 16. And you must be aware that to sin against it there is no forgiveness. Heb. 6: 1-7. But Christ's kingdom is to give to those who had not the gospel laws, that they will have then, so that every mouth may be stopped from saying, God is not equitable, and that he is a respecter of persons.

Teachers J. M. Pickins, Fate Hawkins, reported.

Bishop's Agent, F. Vickery, had received and paid out ten dollars. On his request F. Vickery was released from acting as Bishop's Agent, and Bro. J. G. Vickery was appointed to fill the vacancy.

The general and local authorities of the Church were sustained.

A good feeling prevailed during the business session. Preaching by G. T. Chute, at early candle lighting.

Sunday's services were well attended; preaching at 11 a. m., and at 4 p. m., by Bro. R. J. Anthony.

A sacrament meeting was had at night. A good spirit pervaded all present.

Adjourned to meet at the Pleasant Hill Branch, on the 13th and 14th of October, 1883.

If you ask me the old question: Why are good men tried as by fire, their property destroyed, their homes broken up, their good names befouled, their bodies racked by disease? I can not tell, if you will not look beyond this life to the spiritual and eternal. For, if this life be all, the very least that we could ask of God would be that He should see to it that goodness received its reward here and wickedness its doom likewise. But we do find an answer when the Bible tells us: Your life consisteth not of the abundance of the things which you possess. Your life is hidden with Christ's in God. The favor of the Lord is better than life, and His loving kindness than all riches.

The jewel of assurance is best kept in the cabinet of a humble heart.

Miscellaneous.

WESTERN MAINE DISTRICT.

An Epistle to the Saints of the Western Maine District. Dear Brethren and Sisters in the Lord: As fellow laborers with you in the gospel of Christ, being appointed by General Conference to labor in the New England States under the direction of our beloved brother, Zenas H. Gurvey, of the twelve; after due thought and consideration of the work in this district, we have concluded to write you this epistle, as a voice of warning and exhortation. Warning that we "be not overcharged with surfeiting, and the cares of this world," or that we be found slumbering and asleep, not having our lamps trimmed and burning, thus being in an unprepared condition to meet the Master. To exhort you to faithfulness, steadfastness, and diligence, which are so much demanded of us, "So much the more as we see the day of the Lord approaching." The good seed of the kingdom has been sown in your hearts by faithful men, some of whom are still laboring in the vineyard of the Lord for the salvation of his fellow men, while some have passed away and are now enjoying that rest promised the faithful when their earth-life shall end. As others then have made sacrifice to bring the light of the gospel to us, so should we be willing to sacrifice for the good of others, thus fulfilling the injunction of the blessed Master, "Freely ye have received, so freely give." There is responsibility equally resting upon us for whatever talents we have received, and our negligence or faithfulness in bearing off that responsibility consequent upon the acceptance of such talents, will in a great measure determine the character of our future reward and condition. See Matthew 25th chapter: "When the Lord shall come to reckon with those servants." As your brethren having to a certain extent shared with you in the bitter trials and afflictions of life, having seen the workings of the "adversary of our souls," in his endeavor to hinder our spiritual progress, in many and devious ways—desire to extend our sympathies wherever sympathy may be properly demanded, and ask you, one and all, to arouse and arise once again, and put forth your energies to help roll forth this great latter day work unto its final consummation. We have read and heard with joy your past achievements in the gospel. Our souls have rejoiced at the victories you have obtained. O, let us seek to continue and not be "weary in well doing." Those of us who have come to a knowledge of the truth of this work can never consistently feed upon any thing else. Then what shall we do for our families? Shall we permit them to grow up in darkness without an effort on our part to train them up in the way they should go. How many souls around us are perishing for the word of life. Shall we hide our "light under a bushel?" We trust not. We hope to see all those who have been active in the past again with others earnest in the work. And to this end we invite you all to meet us in conference at Little Deer Isle, on the last Saturday and Sunday in August. We request that all will unite with us in earnest prayer and fasting, that we may come together in the love of Christ, determined to throw off the shackles that now bind us. "Shake off the coals from our garments, and arise in the strength of the Lord."

That we may work for the salvation of souls, and for the glory of God, we subscribe ourselves, your brethren in the love of Christ,

JOHN GILBERT,
FRANK M. SHEEHY.

NOTICE TO THE CHURCH.

Notice is hereby given to the Church, and all whom it may concern, that Elder T. J. Franklin, having proven himself unworthy the trust imposed in him by the Church, is hereby notified that his license as an Elder is demanded, and he is requested not to act in any sense as a representative of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. And further, the said T. J. Franklin is notified to appear, or report to his branch, that legal action may be had in charges now pending against him, on or before the 14th day of October next, or action will be had as if he were present. By order of

A. H. SMITH,

President of Missouri and Kansas Mission.

NORTH-WEST KANSAS DISTRICT.

Agreeable to the decision of the last district conference session, held June 2d, 3d, at Goshen, Clay county; the next session will convene at Prairie Home Branch, in Prairie Home Schoolhouse, August 18th, at 10 a. m., six miles east of Belleville on the Washington road. Delegates and visiting friends from Minerville and the west will pass through Belleville, and stop at Sr. Margaret Kelly's, five miles east, (half mile south of Washington road), where a committee will meet them, and see that they are provided for. Ample preparations will be made for the entertainment of all who come, and we hope none of the Church officials will be absent; but come, and induce as many gospel loving friends and enquirers as possible to come with them. Representatives from north, south and east, who arrive up to Friday evening, will find friends, rest, food and shelter as heretofore near Cuba. Come! and come prepared to do the Lord's work of love and good-will toward our fellow man.

JOHN D. BENNETT,

Pres. Prairie Home Branch.

NORTH-WEST KANSAS DISTRICT.

By virtue of a petition from the Blue Rapids and Goshen branches of said district, requesting that the next session of the quarterly conference be changed from Prairie Home, Republic county, to Blue Rapids, Marshall county, Kansas; therefore the Saints will meet with the Blue Rapids Saints, the 18th of August, at the hour of ten o'clock, a. m., as prayed for in petition.

A. KENT,

President of District.

INDEPENDENCE DISTRICT.

To the Independence District of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; Greeting: Circumstances of a serious nature having occurred to render the office of district president vacant, and two months yet remaining ere your regular meeting, I deem it wisdom to call a special conference of the district to fill the vacancy, and do whatever other business may be deemed necessary at the time. It is my wish therefore that you convene on the 11th day of August, 1883, at Independence, Jackson Co., Missouri, at 10 a. m.

A. H. SMITH,

President of Missouri and Kansas Mission of Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.

DIED.

WALDSMITH.—At Creston, Iowa, July 18th, 1883, Brother Leslie, only son, and eldest child of Bro. Jacob W. and sister Elizabeth Waldsmith of Nebraska City, Nebraska. He was born in Otoe county, Nebraska, January 17th, 1861, and was baptized October 23d, 1875, by Elder Mark H. Forscutt. He was on his way to New York and other points east, and fell from a stock car, at 11:17 p. m., on the 17th and lived about two and a half hours. The sad news was wired to his father, and soon a house of happiness was a house of lamentation; and in a few hours a whole city were united in mourning and sympathy. The mail and wires were soon put to use to carry the sad news. The body arrived on the 19th at 9 a. m. The affianced arrived at noon. The funeral services were held the 20th at the M. E. Church, one of the largest in the city; but many were unable to obtain an entrance. Bro. Mark H. Forscutt lined the hymns and preached the sermon, from 1 Cor. 15:44. Rev. W. K. Beans, pastor of the M. E. Church, read the 15 chapter 1 Corinthians and offered a beautiful and expressive prayer. The M. E. choir sang sweetly and pathetically; R. M. Elvin pronounced the benediction. The cortege was one of the largest that ever went out of this city. Thus closes the pilgrimage of 22 years, 6 months and 1 day, of one that never disobeyed his parents, who was true, upright and kind, and faithful to every trust reposed in him. Upon his obtaining his majority, his father admitted him to a partnership in business. He was the youngest member of the Board of Trade of this city. Also a very active and faithful worker in the Sabbath School.

PATTERSON.—Bro. William Patterson was born in Scotland, November 24th, 1812; came to this country in 1854, and followed the Brighamites so far as the plains; came back to Iowa and settled here on a little farm near Newton, Jasper county, and united to the Reorganized Church, August 1st, 1871. He was a good man and a member of the Newton Branch. He died in full faith of the gospel. [Date of death not given].

KEETON.—Near Jeffersonville, Illinois, May 11th, 1883, Bro. Calvin Keeton, aged 59 years. Bro. Keeton was born in Ohio; was married to Miss Sarah Farmer, December 11th, 1853. Was baptized, with his wife, March 26th, 1876, by Elder T. P. Green, and confirmed by the same. He was a member of the Deer Creek Branch. He was taken with paralysis, and lived but a few days. He knew from the first, that he would not live through it, and so informed Bro. Green, remarking that he knew that he had obeyed the true and everlasting gospel, and had received the blessing promised, and was prepared to pass away. His chief regret was, that he had not obeyed the gospel years before he did, so great had been the benefit received in obedience. Funeral services by Elders T. P. Green and Henry Walker, on June 17th, 1883.

The Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, 18th August, 1883.

LATTER DAY SAINTS should be careful not to deny plain Scriptural statements, while taking men to task for asserting that they believe the Scriptures when at the same time they refuse credence to what is written. The story of Jephthah's daughter is a case in point. The story is about this, in substance. Israel was in rather a sad strait during their warfare with the Ammonites, and made appeal to a noted soldier, Jephthah. He in turn laid the case before the Lord, making a vow that if success was given him in the ensuing battle, he would offer as a burnt offering to the Lord, whatever living thing should first meet him on his return home. He was victorious, and returning home was met by his daughter, with her companions celebrating his victorious return.

It is argued that this relation does not justify the belief that Jephthah sacrificed his daughter, as human sacrifices were not allowable at that time, or in fact at any time. Of this it may not perhaps be definitely stated; but a strong inference may be taken from the offering of Isaac, by Abraham, that under given circumstances human life was offered. How else did Abraham so unhesitatingly proceed to the altar with Isaac? If the offering of human life was not in any sense permissible, why did not Abraham resort to pleading, as he did in regard to the cities of Sodom where Lot dwelt? Were the lives of Lot and his family more precious in the eyes of Abraham than the life of Isaac? A case of nearly similar import is found in Numbers, chapter thirty-one, where a certain number of persons, women children and maidens, that had never known man by lying with him, were given to the priests to be made a heave offering to the Lord.

We are just as much opposed to the idea of bloodshed, priestcraft, human sacrifice, and all the other cruel and barbarous things that may have been practiced in Israel, or the heathen nations, as any one need to be; but we can see no necessity to deny that things plainly stated did not take place.

Israel was idolatrous, and limits to idolatry were difficult to set. Every species of excess was possible, from the sacrificing of children to Moloch, of the Phœnicians, or Baal, the sun god, the abomination of the Ammonites to the making and keeping of grave and ridiculous personal vows, similar in nature, if not in object, to the one under consideration. There is then nothing beyond belief in the thought that this general in Israel should have made the rash vow recorded of him. He may have had a favorite mastiff, or hound which in his mind was the likeliest to rush out of his gates at his approach to his home to greet him; or he may have thought that some one of the slaves of his house, old or young, would be the first to meet him before his house at his return. But it is not proper to suppose that he once thought of his only daughter in connection with his vow at the time when he made it. To this, his agitation and grief at meeting with his daughter, witnessed in the expression: "Alas, my daughter! Thou hast brought me very low; and thou art one of them that trouble me," give ample evidence.

The straight scriptural relation is this: "And Jephthah vowed a vow unto the Lord, and said, If thou shalt without fail deliver the children of Ammon into mine hand, then it shall be, that whatsoever cometh forth of the doors of mine house to meet me, when I return in peace from the children of Ammon, shall surely be the Lord's, and I will offer it up for a burnt offering." And Jephthah came to Mizpeh unto his house, and, behold, his daughter came out to meet him with timbrels and with dances. * * * And it came to pass when he saw her, that he rent his clothes, Alas, my daughter! thou hast brought me very low, and thou art one of them that trouble me; for I have opened my mouth unto the Lord, and I can not go back. And she said unto him, My father, if thou hast opened thy mouth unto the Lord, do to me according to that which hath proceeded out of thy mouth. * * * And she said unto her father, Let this thing be done for me: let me alone two months, that I may go up and down upon the mountains, and bewail my virginity, I and my fellows. And it came to pass at the end of two months, that she returned unto her father, who did with her according to his vow which he had vowed: and she knew no man."

In this relation the following points are quite clear to us: Jephthah vowed to sacrifice as a burnt offering the first thing of his own house that met him at his return from battle. This first thing was his daughter. He made known the character of his vow to her. She acquiesced in it, but asked two months in which to lament her unfortunate fate. At the end of the time, Jephthah kept his vow and sacrificed her as a burnt offering.

Whatever may be said about the cruelty and wickedness of the act does not change the facts in the case. The wrong was in making the vow. That the vow contemplated some living person or thing, is clearly inferred from the idea that it was to come forth from the doors of the house to meet Jephthah. That death was to be the result from the vow if executed, is seen in the pain and distress of both father and daughter. And that death did ensue is easily deducible from the statement that "Jephthah did with her according to his vow;" and the fact that the daughters of Israel made it a custom to yearly "lament for the daughter of Jephthah, the Gileadite." To us it is but the recital of one of the scenes that took place in the days of Israel's waywardness under the rule of kings and what followed after, of customs which should never have obtained. It was foolish for Jephthah to have made such a vow, involving as he must well have known had he stopped to think, the life of his only daughter. But the vow when made he dare not break; for the customs and traditions of the people, his own nation and others, made the keeping of vows a necessity. He could not break his vow without losing his reputation, notwithstanding it required the taking the life of his child. He must go forward, and did. And no matter what the opinion any one may hold respecting the morality of the act, it is not safe to deny the fact as it is clearly written.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—What would the testimony of a member of the Church be worth in regard to the doctrine of the Church if he should make this statement; that he did not know whether the doctrine was true or not, but believed it to be true; thought it to be true; but to say it was true, he could not?

Ans.—It would be worth his salvation if he continued faithful, enduring as seeing him who is invisible.

Q.—Is the secretary, as a district officer under all or any circumstances any part of the district presidency?

A.—Not unless he holds some other office beside that of secretary, as for instance, vice, or assistant president, or counselor to the president, in which case he would be part of the presidency. The secretary would have the right in the absence of the president of the district, at the convening of a session to call the meeting to order, and make the necessary moves to effect an organization.

Q.—Is it not the prerogative of all Elders (without respect to quorum attachment) especially when sent by conference, or the executive heads of Church, or missions,—to call meetings at their discretion,—preach, baptize and confirm, whether within, or without branch jurisdiction, without consulting local authorities?

A.—No. All appointees of Conferences, or the officers of the Church, should labor in harmony with local organizations, district, or branch. In all cases when laboring in organized districts, or branches, the traveling ministry should have a proper respect for the local officers, and should apprise them of their presence, places and times of labor, and so far as possible perform the duties of their calling and their appointment in harmony with the local church. All local officers should assist and aid the traveling ministry in ministerial labors, and when the traveling minister is superior in office by ordination or appointment, should recognize such superiority by seeking counsel and aid, and submission to dictation; unless some wrong is sought to be put upon the flock, in which case he should prevent injury to the flock, in the wisest and best way.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

A LETTER of removal issued by the Lake Shore Branch, signed by George W. Walters, Pres., and Wilson W. Walters, Priest, to John C. Stevens, together with a pocket book containing some money and papers, was lately found near Little Sioux, Iowa. The owner can learn further by writing J. B. Lytle, Little Sioux, Harrison county, Iowa.

Elder Thomas Venable, of Ogmore Branch, Wales, wrote July 18th, re-telling the "old, old story," of how the Truth found him and renewed the Holy Ghost within him after long and anxious inquiry.

Bro. Clarence St. Clair was visiting Lamoni, on business affairs, August 2d to 7th, and preached in the chapel on the evening of August 5th. We heard it spoken of as a good effort.

Bro. R. J. Anthony had baptized twenty-one during a series of meetings at the Lone Star Branch, Alabama, from the 20th to the 29th of July. He had baptized five there before, making twenty-six in all. He was assisted in his meetings by Bro. G. R. Scogin. He would, in connection with Bro. G. W. Chute, G. R. Scogin, Vickery, and W. J. Booker, hold some three or four protracted meetings at different points.

Bro. R. M. Elvin is engaged to discuss the question, "Resolved, that Joseph Smith taught and practiced polygamy;" against the affirmation of Rev. N. M. Allen. The discussion is to be held at Bottom School-house, or vicinity, Cass county, Nebraska, August 26th, 1883.

Bro. J. C. Hardman, wrote from Weston, Iowa, requesting the prayers of the Saints, for M. N. Morris, of Weston. He is very ill. Bro. Morris is a brother-in-law to Bro. T. E. Jenkins, of Wales. Some may know him of the old-time.

WE give below the out spoken sentiments of a Catholic priest, as clipped from the Chicago Tribune of a late issue.

UNAMERICAN METHODS OF THE ROMISH CHURCH.

The Rev. Mr. Corrigan, a Roman Catholic priest of Hoboken, N. J., has been telling his brother priests, and incidentally the public, some plain truths about the status and polity of the Papal Church in America. He has had the temerity to freely criticise the methods of some of his superiors, and for doing so has incurred grave ecclesiastical censure. He was probably prepared for this. The course he has taken is a bold but necessary one. Every person who reads his complaint and who is at all acquainted with the history of the Roman Catholic Church in this country will admit that it is a just one.

The American portion of the Roman Catholic priesthood has complained with good reason against the policy of the higher ecclesiastics. It has been essentially foreign and un-American. The Rev. Mr. Corrigan is not the first priest that has publicly complained. A few months ago a Milwaukee priest published a pamphlet in which certain matters contained in the Rev. Mr. Corrigan's publication were touched on. It was sought to suppress it at the time, and the attempt partly succeeded. The Rev. Mr. Corrigan's charges and criticisms are of a more radical and definite character than those made by the Milwaukee priests. Being the brother of an Archbishop who will in a few years, barring accidents, succeed the only American Cardinal, Mr. Corrigan can afford to be more radical than a poor curate connected with an archdiocese whose Metropolitan is a supporter of the methods and policies condemned. The Rev. Mr. Corrigan's position and connections, indeed lead to the belief that his course has the sanction of men higher in authority than he is.

The burden of the reverend gentleman's charges are:

1. That the government of the Roman Catholic Church in America is essentially foreign. Its methods and policy are therefore foreign.

2. The people have no voice, no influence even, in connection with the temporal affairs of the church.

3. Through the predominance of the foreign element among the higher ecclesiastics, the spirit of the church appears to be unamerican, and in some cases assumes a spirit of open hostility to American institutions, as in the case of free schools.

These, according to our New York dispatches, are the principal points in the Rev. Mr. Corrigan's criticisms.

The points are well taken. The criticisms have for their support a basis of solid fact and admitted truth. Nearly all the higher dignitaries of the Roman Catholic Church in the United States are foreigners who received their education and training in foreign countries. A very large percentage of them are unable to speak the language of the country with anything like fluency. They are as little acquainted with the affairs of our country, as little in sympathy with American ideas, as if they were living in Spain, Germany, or Italy. Even the few Americans who are appointed Bishops are Italians by education. The foreign element among the Roman Catholic dignitaries is not disposed to let go its hold. The church in America is not governed by canon law. By a fiction or superstition this is included among the missionary countries of the Roman Catholic world. This being so, the priests have no voice in the choice of their Bishops. The foreign Bishops are careful to perpetuate the foreign supremacy, and as they have the power in their own hands they select a foreign priest to fill vacancies in their ranks as they arise. Within the last two years two vacancies in an American archdiocese have been filled, notwithstanding the all but unanimous protest of the priests of both dioceses, by the appointment of two priests who can not speak English. In another case where the priests petitioned Rome to appoint an American priest as Bishop, the petition was treated with contempt, and some of the priests instrumental in getting it up were, it is said, summoned to Rome for discipline. The result is most injurious to the church. The foreign Bishop appoints as a matter of course foreign priests to all positions of importance in the church. Priests trained in America, born here, are tabooed and sent to obscure country parishes. The young men and women of the rising Catholic generation have to sit weekly under a pulpit whose occupant addresses them in broken or bad English.

The bad consequences of excluding the laity from all share in the management of the temporal affairs of the church have been so painfully apparent in the case of Archbishop Purcell, and in some degree in the case of Archbishop Wood and many parish priests throughout the country, that it is hardly necessary to refer to them at length. The financial methods of some Catholic Bishops have been a severe tax on the purses and on the patience of American Roman Catholics. Their methods have been unbusiness-like. The results have been what one would naturally expect.

The third indictment of the Rev. Mr. Corrigan follows naturally from the others. Clergymen as a class are conservative. Roman Catholic clergymen are especially so. Those of them who are foreigners are more than conservative. They are reactionary. They can not conceal their hostility to American progressive ideas. They are monarchists at heart. They frequently disparage American institutions and openly denounce the American free-school system. There is a striking contrast between the attitude of the Roman Catholic priests born in this country and those born in the old countries, on the subject of our public schools. The American-born priests have in most instances received their academical education in the public schools. They appreciate their advantages and their excellence. They are seldom or never heard denouncing them. The foreign priests, on the contrary, with few exceptions, condemn the public-school system, with whose character they have little or no acquaintance. They sneer at, if they do not denounce, other American institutions. The consequence is that the intelligent people pay no attention to what they have to say in temporal matters. These people have no confidence in their lay judgment. The church is injured.

The belief that the Roman Catholic Church suffers from the present state of things was no doubt the inspiring motive of the Rev. Mr. Corrigan's pamphlet. It is likely to create considerable dissension in church circles, and to lead to some radical changes of policy.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. John D. Bennett wrote July 24th, and sent the following; and says "it is about the condition of the work in his field of labor."

The prospect brightens every day,
And 'tis a time most cheering,
And they that watch and they that pray,
Can see the sky is clearing.

The Herald trump that gathers in,
Is long and loudly sounding,
To call the world from death and sin,
In which it is abounding.

Each honest soul is giving heed,—
Believing Christ's salvation,
And soon within the fold may feed,
Washed clean from condemnation.

Bro. R. L. Ware writes from Kingston, Missouri, as follows:

Bro. Joseph: Crops are pretty fair down here around old Far West. There is not much preaching being done here by our faith; some local preaching.

Bro. John Smith, of New Bedford, Mass., sends us as follows:

The following is from the "New Bedford Standard" of yesterday. We are trying to continue the battle for truth and right, for we must in the end gain the victory.

FAIR PLAY.

To the Editor of the Standard:

In your paper for Monday, July 23d, in the report of a meeting on the Common there is the following in relation to the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints:

"If they preach no other doctrine than that advanced at this out-door meeting, no fear need be expressed as to their perverting the scriptures or of the possibility of leading men astray."

In this is an implied insinuation that the Reorganized Church teaches principles which lead "men astray." Whoever gave you that report must be a religious bigot, for no person would ever be led "astray" that made the principles of this church the rule of his life and conduct. Persons who report for the press, seem to take a delight in misrepresenting this church and people, when it is well known by those who understand our faith, that we teach nothing that conflicts with the word of God. If your informant had consulted the Sunday notices which appear in your paper, he would have known where we met, without putting any one to the trouble of saying as your correspondent of the 24th inst. did, "that we are connected with no such thing," as though it was something to be abhorred and despised. I wish therefore to say that we teach no perverted doctrine, neither do we have a perverted ministry which "preaches for hire, and divines for money." JOHN SMITH.

THE Iowa State Fair will be held at Des Moines, August 31st to September 7th, 1883. The following are some of the principal features of attraction:

In all departments the premiums have been materially increased over former years. The offerings are the largest in the history of the Society, amounting to $23,000, classed as follows: Horses, $2,560; Speed, $7,100; (while this amount seems large to pay for speed it is a revenue to the Society); Cattle, $4,017; Hogs, $1,124; Sheep, $636; Poultry, $749; Implements, etc., $54; Grain and Seeds, $396; Vegetables, $391; Sweepstakes Grains and Seeds, $250; Apiary, $110; Pantry and Kitchen, $508; Butter and Cheese, $652; Fruits, $412; Plants and Flowers, $316; Fine Arts, Household, etc., $2,150; Educational, $200; Boys and Girls Department, $236; Natural History, etc., $203. Two new departments have been added—Educational and Mining. These departments promise to be attractive, interesting and instructive. For the best herd of thoroughbred beef cattle $500 is given for the first, $200 for the second, $100 for the third. Tuesday will be known as "Childrens' Day," and all under twelve years of age, accompanied by parent or guardian, will be admitted to the grounds free. Wednesday will be known as "Old Soldiers' Day." No gambling of any nature, or intoxicating drinks of any kind will be permitted on the ground.

FROM the following one must needs think that nearly all things have their uses. Were it not for the adulteration of nearly everything valuable, or in use, a body might be happy in the thought that nothing was made in vain.

The Hartford Times says that it has been found that worm-eaten and partly decayed logs make the best sounding-boards for pianos, and within a few years piano firms have sent agents through Connecticut to find fallen and partly decayed chestnut logs, and such timber has been sold at good prices after the owners had considered it entirely useless.

Times of general calamity and confusion have ever been productive of the greatest minds. The purest ore is produced from the hottest furnace, and the brightest thunderbolt is elicited from the darkest storm.

THE following is from the London Athenaeon.

M. de Nadaillac who published an excellent work on "Prehistoric America," says that in America as in Europe, all serious proof fails of the existence of man at an earlier period than the quaternary. "From these earliest times," he continues, "themselves so obscure, we see with some astonishment the civilizations of the old and new worlds developing themselves, so to speak, in parallel lines, following the same phases, and arriving at the same results. What have been the relations between these races? Here, also, we are confronted by difficult problems; but though we are often reduced to hypothesis to explain them, we can confidently affirm that these relations have existed, that America has been successively peopled by diverse races of very different types. Among the common elements the most important, in number and influence, are the Asiatic immigrations. These immigrations of yellow brachycephalous races are incontestable, and have certainly lasted for long ages. The greater part have taken place from the islands of the north; the several peoples of Nahautl race, descending successively toward the south, are the most direct consequences of these migrations. But before the arrival of these Americans other men occupied the American continent for a considerable time: the Esquimaux in the north, the Botocudos and Patagonians in the the south, may well be the representatives of this race, crowded back, like the Basques and Finns in our own continent, by conquering strangers. We do not seek to conceal how precarious these hypotheses still are, and what need there is for confirmation of the proofs we possess. After long and patient labors we must end in the words of the American savant, 'The New World is a great mystery.'"

Correspondence.

WALNUT RIDGE, Lawrence Co., Ark.,
August 1st, 1883.

Dear Herald:—Having passed through the danger I was in when I wrote last, I write to inform your readers of my experience. I preached several times at the house of Bro. James R. Jones, and sent an appointment to Shiloh school-house for Saturday night, July 21st. After arriving in the neighborhood, I was advised not to go to the house as violence was threatened. I went and preached without molestation. Some friends guarded me home, refusing to leave me until I was safe at my lodging; but saw nor heard anything from the enemy. Sunday 22d, I spoke again, and left an appointment for night; but lo, when we arrived there, we found the house nailed up. Some friends who felt enraged, burst open the window and opened the door; but learning the house was closed by authority from the man holding the deed for the land, I refused to enter, but repaired to Mr. Frank Grey's, and spoke there that night and the night following. So many were the threats, and so wild the excitement ran, people were afraid to come out nights, and so we thought it best to hold meeting in day time. The brethren and friends erected an arbor, by a nice cool spring, and there we broke the bread of life each succeeding day, to the few who had the courage and disposition to come out. Last Sunday, (the 29th), we had fair liberty and a good audience both morning and evening, and more interest was manifested than before. I think the ice is broken, and good may be done, if labor is bestowed wisely. On the 24th, two notices were handed me, which were found on a tree near Rock Springs. I will copy for the benefit of your readers:

"this is true"

"this July the 20 1883 We understand that old Springer is to Bee in 2 day and We understand that you have rub up youre guns and have Bin trainin for the Battle our old Gins is Eatten up By the rust the old Clost Clipper is all righe the rust Wont tackle hur She Shaved one old Mans old Ball headed hog thief and we think that She is good for old Smith an Springer and all the rest of the clan if they want any thing out of us Just Let them give us a Call and We Will See You in any Way that You Want Goo or Bad the rules of our band We Want The Mormons Mus quit travling down the Branch Way or you will hear the never more preach the for well Surmant to the Later day Saints and the Hog thief of oregon and How County We in Clud all Hog thieves in each County fulton oregon Howell Couuny."

Following this note is drawn the outline of a pistol. Notice number two is as follows:

we UndersTand that you say that When the Shilow boyes Comes this time You are redy to Steal all of the hogs that you can get to. Smith is the big gun but we will take the old haire Cutter and You Can Shoot your big gun the Mormon Can leave heare hin pese if they wish to if they dont leave Wea Can drive them off buy the forse of armies and we want Youens to Quit traviln down this hollar if you dont quit we will whip the * * * them Mormon amos Smith Can Sac at at home withe the reast of the Mormon and if They Want to reite to the boyes diret youre leater Wrem fork oregon Co Mo have them fixed grom We the Shilow boye Grandpap and his 50 sons."

The Amos Smith spoken of is a young man, not a member, but a friend. He has a pre-emption on a piece of Government land and a Baptist preacher has "jumped" a part of it. What think you, eh!

Saturday the 28th Mr. Wm. Jones and I walked down the "Branch Way" referred to, and found where some one had been lying in the grass, and stuck under the brush near by was a green hickory club, three feet long, three fourths of an inch in diameter at the smaller end, and two inches at the larger. Near by was another place where some one had hidden behind a bunch of bushes, and had a way cut out to the road, evidently to shoot through. This is on the way where we would be expected to pass, going from Bro. James R. Jones' to Shiloh, a week ago, and we thought the work appeared to be about a week old. I wish to say in behalf of the citizens of the country, that the better class do not endorse such proceedings. It is a low down set of ruffians, aided and abetted by a few hypocritical, Pharisaical religionists. The great cry is that the law will not protect us, and they can do as they please with us. If the Church has a few dollars to spare, I think it would be a good investment to arrest some of such larks; then admit of no compromise, but push them to the last extremity of the law. One or two examples would be sufficient, and perhaps save life.

Last night I spoke near Augusta, and this morning came here, where I am waiting for a train to carry me over the "Iron Mountain Railway" to ward Texas. To-morrow I think of being in Red River county, Texas, where I will tarry for a time, and attend the pending debate. I learn by letter that mob violence is again threatened there. So we will be in danger again. I am tired of having my life hunted like a wolf's. You who can lie down at night, secure from mob violence, ought to feel grateful indeed. Pray for our protection, and that we may keep the spirit of the Master. I have just heard the sad news of the death of Bro. W. W. Belcher, of Hearne, Texas. Our ranks are being weakened by death.

In bonds of gospel love,

HEMAN C. SMITH.

Bro. Joseph.—In Herald for this date, page 499, "A Friend," in transmitting "The Future of Judaism," he makes enquiry about certain books referred to by "M. Ernest Renan." These books may be found in the Apocrypha of the Old Testament, and given as follows: "Judith;" "The rest of the chapters of the Book of Esther, which are found neither in the Hebrew, nor in the Chaldee." To prove that this is the book referred to by M. Renan, as the Apocalypses of Ezra, it is only necessary to read the first chapter and tenth verse: "Therefore, hath he made two lots, one for the people of God, and another for all the Gentiles." Third is "Baruch." And the fourth is published as the book of "Tobit." These books while not admitted as authoritative, are nevertheless worth a careful reading.

In gospel bonds,

Dear Herald:—The church in this place is not flourishing as it ought, and yet, as a rule, the Saints here I am happy to say, seem to be determined to hold fast whereunto they have attained. For myself I have only this to say, that for many years I have been trying to walk carefully before the Lord, striving to make 'straight paths for my feet'; but sometimes that which is 'lame' gets turned out of the way, and then I feel a little discouraged. But I know of only one way to do when we transgress any of God's Holy commandments; and that is to repent,—humble ourselves before the Lord; seek until we obtain His pardoning favor—and then try 'again; trying with our might, never to commit that offense again. What do you think brethren and sisters of my plan?

Our Herald, as it comes to us every week, full of admonition and instruction; how we love it! It looks so pretty, too, in its neat new dress; and we are reminded of what an ancient writer said: "Dress does not make the gentleman or lady, but after they are 'made' they look better 'dressed up.'"

Our dear Herald was made a good while ago. Its birthplace Cincinnati, Ohio, its name, True Latter Day Saints' Herald, and its Editor, Elder Isaac Sheen, "honored and blest be his memory." We could not do without it; no, not for twice or thrice its price. I have been to see my granddaughter in Ft. Madison, recently, Mrs. Edith M. Fifer, and while there, herself and husband went with me to visit the Saints in Montrose. I want to tell about the Church in Montrose, "the Sister's Church," I mean. They, "the sisters," have their house nearly completed, and it looks nice, too. The painter, with his brush and oil pots was just giving it the finishing coat while we were there. How praise-worthy have been the untiring efforts of that small, though noble band of sisters. They have worked day and night, early and late. They have made and sold many, very many yards of carpet, pieced and quilted lots of quilts, and sold them too. Knit tidies, made chair cushions, and last, but not least, they have figured quite merrily in church festivals as well.

With love to all the Saints, I am, as ever,
MARY RUBY BALDWIN.

SHACKLEVILLE, Ala.,

August 1st, 1883.

Bro. Joseph.—Our conference convened on the 14th of July, and a more enjoyable one has not been held in the district in a long time; the attendance was very good. Bro. Anthony enjoyed excellent liberty in preaching. The people are well pleased with him. The saints feel strengthened and encouraged. Bro. Anthony is certainly the right man in the right place. On Sunday evening we had a social meeting, and it was soul cheering to every saint that was present. God's Spirit was there, and there were some strong testimonies borne. Persecution is on the wane here, and the people (outsiders) begin to see that we have a Bible doctrine. If the saints will live their religion, I think that the time will come, even here, that many will worship God in spirit and in truth.

Your brother,

J. M. PICKENS.

SUGAR VALLEY,

Pleasants Co., W. Va.,

July 14th, 1883.

Dear Herald.—It is with delight I hail you as a weekly visitor; for by reading your columns I am greatly strengthened and encouraged in the work of my Master. And it is for the first time I ask a space in your columns to speak a few words to my brothers and sisters in the gospel. It is a little more than two years since I have been a Latter Day Saint, was baptized by Bro. J. P. Knox, February 25th, 1881, here at the Sugar Creek Branch, being the last that united with them here, and as all the members of that branch moved away soon afterwards, I have not had the privilege of meeting with them since. But I am still firm in the faith that I have embraced. Of course I have the trials and temptations which all of Christ's followers have to endure, and have no one here to encourage me, (but many to discourage), to press forward; yet so far the grace of God has been sufficient, and has enabled me to overcome trials that I know it was not in my own power to do. Inasmuch as I comply with the teachings of God's word, I receive the blessings promised therein; and all the scorn and persecutions that I have to bear, are nothing when compared to the peaceful enjoyment of the love of God, that has been manifested toward me, and the hope that I have of an inheritance in his everlasting kingdom. It is with great joy I read in the Herald the letters from my brothers and sisters from the different parts of the world, showing the advancement of the cause of Christ; and my heart is filled with emotion when I see how nobly and zealously the gospel is defended by the Elders in the field, as well as by many others. May God ever work with them, is my prayer. I am yet young, and have many temptations to overcome, but my desire is, that as I advance in years I may grow in the knowledge of the truth as revealed in the gospel of Christ. I ask the Saints to pray for me, that I may ever live faithful to the cause of our Savior, and that I may be worthy to stand with all the redeemed when Christ shall come to claim his own.

Ever praying for the prosperity of Zion, I am your brother in the gospel, OKEY J. TARY.

CLEVELAND, Lucas Co., Iowa,

August 6th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—The strike among the coal miners here still continues,—the miners refusing to go to work, and the company refusing to restore the former system of screens. Most of the saints comprising the Lucas Branch are miners, and among the strikers, and are seriously affected thereby, both temporally and spiritually. The company has contrived to gather up some two or three hundred colored people to work in the stead of the white citizens located here. The company has expelled those that refuse to work from the company's houses, to make tenements for the colored people. What makes the state of feeling here more horrible, the colored people have shown a hostile disposition towards the white people. A great excitement was created here last Saturday night. The colored people, after spending the day in a sort of picnic celebration in commemoration of the annual day of their freedom from slavery, marched from East Cleveland to West Cleveland, cheering and shouting; and when they arrived at West Cleveland, some white people were standing to listen and look on at the lighted lamps and torches they carried in their procession. What words were exchanged between the whites and the colored people I do not know, but some shots were fired at the white people. Fortunately no one was hurt. One man says a ball passed very near his head. The above state of things seems to retard the work of God here at present. We need a united saints' effort.

Yours as ever,

THOMAS R. ALLEN.

NORTH BROOKSVILLE, Maine,

July 24th, 1883.

Dear Saints.—The Brooksville Branch has been convened at Bro. Levi Gray's, every Sabbath when the weather would permit, with the exception of conference, during the last two years. The branch now numbers over forty, and a good state of feeling is existing among its members. Have a small but prosperous Sabbath School, some attend regularly who are not connected with the Church. The sacrament is administered the first Sabbath of each month. Talk of commencing to build a small chapel after haying. May God prosper the work is our prayer; and we doubt not that it is the prayer of every earnest Saint. During the past year there have been several cases in which our sick have been blessed by the power of God in answer to the prayer of faith. We will give the most remarkable one in detail. Bro. Asa Caster was afflicted with a rose cancer on his under lip, which protruded nearly parallel with his nose and had commenced to eat badly. Two doctors pronounced it incurable unless it could be taken out—every particle. That he could not consent to, not because he lacked courage; but because he believed that God's power was sufficient, and if it was his will he would restore him; otherwise he was willing to die. Last September I saw the aged brother arise in meeting at Bro. E. Brown's, and heard him with trembling voice and tearful eye, make an eloquent though humble speech; at the close of which he desired administration for the healing of the cancer. Dear old Bro. Jonathan Eaton had come from his island home, eight miles distant, by the prompting of the Spirit, not knowing where the meeting was to be held until he reached the place. Our hearts were made glad with one another's presence, and better by the zealous remarks and earnest prayers that were offered. But to the subject. Bro. Caster had four children and their companions present, who are in the faith, one, Bro. Pert, our elder, who assisted by Brn. Jonathan and Samuel Eaton called upon the Lord to bless the afflicted one. The prayer of every Saint present went up in unison in his behalf. In a few hours we each returned to our homes which brought quite a distance between us. I could not hear from the afflicted brother so enquired of the Lord concerning him. Was shown in a dream that the cancer was healing on the edge, instead of spreading as before. Two months or more followed and no news from him. At length his son called on me and I learned that it was just as I had dreamed. It was revealed in like manner to others who were interested. Meanwhile Bro. Pert visited his father-in-law a distance of ten miles, or more, and administered to him again. I saw the old gentleman eight months after the first administration, and his lip was perfectly sound; one had to examine closely to even see the scar, and his face looked as fresh and vigorous as though he was not more than fifty, instead of more than seventy years of age. His heart seemed to be "all aflame with the love of Jesus' name."

We do know by this and other manifestations that God is the same Omnipotent Father, and Jesus the same loving Savior. Praise his holy name. Let us take him at his word and all will be well.

Your sister,

A. M. SNOW.

679 Purchase St., NEW BEDFORD, Mass.,

July 27th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—The following slip is from the New Bedford Signal. Is this a realization of the promise "Ye shall find favor in the eyes of the people." Why should a person be ashamed of being a Latter Day Saint, though once in a while we get snubbed because of our faith.

"John Smith, former agent of the north end cooperative store, has not only become an enterprising grocer merchant, an auctioneer and wood measurer, but is also engaged in the business of wood-sawing by machinery. Besides he attends to his duties as a minister of "The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." John has lost none of his perseverance and enterprise which characterized him as a resident of the great manufacturing city, where he was zealously engaged not only as an advocate of his religious tenets but as a labor and moral reformer, without flinching from duty. He was earnest also among the soldiery during the war of the great rebellion in defense of the glorious Union, cemented by the blood of the patriots of '76. On Saturday last Mr. Smith sold at auction to Barney McQuade for $96, a building for removal, standing on Hicks Street. The building belonged to John Robinson of Fall River.

Yours as ever,

JOHN SMITH.

DADEVILLE, Alabama,

July 31st, 1883.

MR. JOSEPH SMITH,—Dear Sir:—I have a kind brother-in-law, Mr. T. A. Johnston, who lives near Milton, Fla., who, being moved by a spirit of goodness, ever ready and anxious to herald the glorious truth of the gospel, sent me some of your papers—The Saints Herald, and a little book entitled, "The Voice of Warning." This book, and these papers I have read with much interest. I will here add, that I have been a very close and careful reader of the Old and New Testament Scriptures, for nearly twenty years, and I have carefully compared the doctrines which you proclaim through your papers and books, with those of the Old and New Testaments, and I find they are one and the same. When you speak of God, you speak of him as being a God of power, a God of mercy, a God of wisdom, and a God of love; one that can and will hear and answer the prayer of faith. When you speak of Jesus Christ, you speak of him as being the Redeemer of the world, who left nothing undone of all which he came here to do; and after having finished the work which his Father gave him to do. He ascended to the Father to prepare a place for all true believers, and who will come again in the glory of the eternal three, and receive them unto himself. When you speak of the Holy Ghost, you speak of the power and truth of God, which, if a man possesses, he can do all things which Christ and the apostles did in the name of Jesus of Nazareth. When you speak of the Holy Scriptures, you speak of it as containing the sacred revelations of God to man, and containing nothing but the truth of God. When you speak of a saint or believer in Christ, you speak of him as having been baptized with the Holy Ghost, and therefore holding a very near, and dear relationship with God through Jesus Christ. That is the kind of disciple, or Saint that may hope to have part in the first resurrection; and the God you write about, can and will uphold him in life, and save him from eternal death. When you speak of salvation, you speak of a free salvation, without money and without price; O my God, when will Israel go back and walk in the light, and truth of the gospel. When will the Methodists, the Baptists, the Presbyterians, and many other denominations, cease to preach and pray, and sing and act, as if God, the mighty God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, was of late years, a sickly, weakly, powerless, merciless kind of a God. When will they learn that it is man that has changed, and not God, and that God is the same yesterday, to-day and forever? Look back, O man, and think what great things God hath done. Look around you, cast your eyes heavenward, and behold the mighty power and wisdom of God; ask the rolling ocean, ask the sun, the moon, the stars, the earth, the mighty winds, all of which move by his command. If God has not all power yet, and asketh not wisdom of any man, think if you please how faithless, how fruitless, how worthless, how hopeless, how careless the children of men have grown. Compare our lives and our conduct with the lives of the apostles, and of the Saints, and you will not wonder that the days of miracles have ceased.

Let us turn our faces toward the Holy City, and pray mightily to God, to deliver us from this deathly stupor, into which we have plunged. If I knew it would be accepted as a contribution, I would write a Scriptural discourse with references; but not knowing, and remembering my weakness, I refrain; but before I close, allow me to assure you, that I want to be a member of the true Church of Christ, and that I ask an interest in the prayers of the Latter Day Saints, that my faith may be strengthened, that my sins may all be forgiven, and that I may be baptized with the Holy Ghost. Christ is the true vine, who are the branches? I believe there are many green branches in your church. I believe that brother in Florida, of whom I spoke, is a green, flourishing branch in Christ. Long may you, and long may he live and accomplish much good, in the name of Christ, Amen.

G. W. PITTS.

TUNNEL HILL, Ills.,

July 14th, 1883.

Dear Herald.—We are still hopeful in the cause, and although not able to do much for the work at present by way of preaching, our hearts are often made to rejoice on account of the soul-cheering news you bring us of the onward progress of the truth. We have also just received a visit from Bro. T. W. Smith, which I think will be productive of much good to the saints of our branch. We found Bro. Smith an able and energetic worker; one who "hews to the line," regardless of fear or favor, and condemns sin, whether found in saint or sinner. The saints had learned before he arrived that he took a decided stand against the use of tobacco, which is quite common here, and were somewhat prejudiced against him on that account; but after hearing him, I think some of the prejudice was removed, and many are glad that he took such a stand in favor of the "Word of Wisdom," while others, of course, will try to justify themselves in using that which God says is not good for man. If all of our Elders would be as strict about keeping and teaching the "Word of Wisdom" as Bro. T. W., it would surely result in good to the saints, even if some should get offended; for they will learn by and by that "the rebuke of a friend is better than the kisses of an enemy;" and when they learn this, they will feel thankful that the Elders in Israel had the courage to teach them the word of God in its fulness. Paul asked the saints in his day: "Am I therefore become your enemy because I tell you the truth!" And just so today, when the Elders stand in the pulpit and tell the Sectarians of their errors, and teach them the truth as taught by Christ and his Apostles, and show that they are inconsistent in claiming to believe the Bible, and at the same time disregard it. Are they therefore enemies to them? The saints all unite in saying, "No: they are their best friends." Just so! Now if these same Elders, by the same kind of reasoning, prove that many of the saints are just as inconsistent as the Sectarians, because they claim to believe in the revelations given through Joseph Smith, and at the same time disregard their plain teaching, why should they get offended? Would they have these Elders try to justify them, or simply shut their eyes and say nothing about it? Either, to my mind, would be dangerous, in view of the fact that God requires his Elders to teach the whole law, and keep back nothing that is profitable to his Church, or to the world. A man who is sent of God can not afford to compromise with that which God condemns; neither can he afford to sugar-coat God's word, in order to keep on good terms with those in the church, or those out of it. He must be faithful to Him who has called him.

May God bless his servants in teaching his law, and help his saints to be wise.

ISAAC M. SMITH.

FONTANELLE, Adair Co., Iowa,

July 31st, 1883.

Dear Herald.—This morning finds me in usual health, and the desire of my heart is, that your columns may be full of that good sense that will comfort the hearts of both the wise and the unwise, and instruct some of those that are wise in their own opinions. As to myself I have but little to say. You may tell your readers, that I have motes and beams in my own eyes as much as you please; but if I am not guilty of such weakness, it will do me no harm. I would like to say this, though years ago I gave the Devil leave to say just what he pleased about the old Mormon, and I think it is best to let the Herald have the same privilege. I would like to ask which is the worst enemy in a brother's eye, the mote or the beam? If he will call, I will give him an opportunity to examine, and if he finds either mote or beam, he may pull it out.

I notice you say there was no sin in raining fire and brimstone on Sodom. Was it sin for David to murder the man that refused to let him have something to eat when he was hungry? Was it sin for Nephi to use the sword of Laban, and cut off his head when he was drunken? You say it is sin to murder. Does it make any difference by whom it is done? You claim there are some places on earth where the Lord is not present. Such a place I never yet found. Christ says he is the light of the sun, moon and stars, and the light of all men on the earth. Now if God and Christ are both one, tell me why they are not to be found in all the places you have named? You talk as though it was wrong to have saloons and grog shops and the like. What difference is it to you what the Devil does, if you know how to take care of yourself? Liberty is a great blessing to mankind; especially to those who know how to use, or improve it. I am not of the class that finds it a duty to deny any man the privilege of eating that which is not for his good, nor deprive him of that which he likes. And if those that are born and raised here have not enough good sense to use their freedom so as to secure to themselves the principle of righteousness as it is now found in our land, is it just for us to persuade or tell them what they shall eat or drink? Are such acts loving our neighbors as ourselves? What says the 1113th hymn?

"Know then that every man is free
To choose his life, and what he'll be;
For this eternal truth is given.
That God will force no man to heaven."

Here is a principle that few men understand; but if you are disposed to mix up with Babylon, do so; but I know of one that knows better. His experience has taught him not to follow or believe any Prophet, Priest, or Elder that does not heed sound doctrine. I close, hoping that the brother will grow wiser and wiser, until he is perfect in all that is needful to secure eternal life. I am not ashamed of the gospel of Jesus Christ, which he has restored to the Gentiles on this land of American freedom, liberty and judgment. If any find fault, tell them to wait till eighty-seven years are past, then do so.

BRIGGS ALDEN.

CLEAR WATER, Nebraska,
August 5th, 1883.

Brother J. Smith.—The Lord, who blessed Abraham, continues to bestow his grace upon those who, like that ancient worthy, manifest their faith by their works. We Clear Water Saints feel cheered and comforted in the good work, having as we do, the blessed assurance that "He who doeth all things well" is for us, and not against us, so long as we abide the mandates of his just and holy law. To-day we were favored to meet with a goodly number of Saints and friends, and with them participate in the real enjoyment of spiritual worship of God. What privilege is more to be prized? What pleasure is so exquisite? Language can not describe the feeling of sweet peace and blissful contentment that permeates the soul of the child of God. Ah! this is life-eternal, life man can not give to his fellow man. The combined favor of the world of mankind is inadequate to the bestowal of this blessing upon a single creature. God alone has the right and the power to impart spiritual life. In him resides the reserved power, by which real joys are given to men. Should we not love to honor him, to serve him, to please him in simply doing that which is right? There is naught to forsake but evil, no sacrifice but what will prove a blessing, no labor but what is reasonable, and in the performance of which all needed strength will be given. O, that I could whisper to the understandings of those who know not the Lord nor his righteousness; that I could arouse the latent fire in the souls of immortal men; that I could appeal to the better nature and judgment of those susceptible to the enjoyment of a better, a higher sphere of life than that in which they now dwell. To this end I shall watch, pray, and labor.

I am confident, that as a church we are gaining favor with the people. A few seem interested and desire to hear. We try to respond to the calls. Next Sabbath I go to meet with those at Deer Creek, where recently several have obeyed. Bro. Jackson has been chosen and ordained as Teacher, and withal we hope the branch has received a new impetus, which will move on the good work of redemption and regeneration.

All things considered, our prospect for a Winter store of edibles is moderately fair. A severe hail storm some time ago injured the wheat in this immediate vicinity. If Jack Frost is not too aggressive this Fall, we shall get some corn, potatoes, beans, &c.

Individually, I have planned no future career for the accomplishment of some great work; but shall simply endeavor to "Hold the Fort," and advance now and then upon the enemy, as best I can, trusting that "By his own hand he leadeth me." Permit me to say that I enjoy reading the printed sermons delivered at Lamoni and elsewhere, by the Elders of Israel. They reflect the light of God. They give evidence of unbiased thought. They portray the wisdom, the love, the righteousness, of Jesus Christ. I am glad to be identified with the body of Christ, to associate with the noblest sons of earth, and to cast in my mite to the intellectual and spiritual store-house of the Lord. As we look upon past efforts to preach Christ with tongue and pen, we see they are not without blemish. Opaque spots mar the transparency of that sky we so fondly hoped to have made perfect. But had the efforts not been made, doubtless the powers of discrimination would have remained undeveloped. Hope, sweet hope, is smiling o'er us, giving fond assurance of blissful realms beyond.

"Thither we press with eager feet,
There shall our rest be long and sweet."
Love and fellowship to all the Saints of God.
G. S. HYDE.

Summary of News.

The date accompanying your name on the small colored label on each paper shows the time to which your subscription has been paid. When payments are made the date is changed, which answers for a receipt.

Aug. 4th.—Deaths in Egypt, Thursday, from cholera numbered 702, including 196 at Cairo. The weather at Cairo is intensely hot.

The long trial of Jews at Nyireghyaza, Hungary, accused of making Passover bread with the life-blood of a Christian girl, has ended in their acquittal, as had been long foreseen.

According to English correspondents in Hong Kong, war between France and China is still likely to ensue. French operations in Tonquin will begin in November, the earliest possible moment. Much sickness prevails among the younger soldiers of the French army. At Berlin the Chinese attache has been commanded to withdraw his recent expressions of a friendly feeling toward France.

The King of Annam, Asia, is dead.

A box of dynamite, to which a lighted fuse was attached, was discovered in a large linen factory at Cupar Fife, Scotland. The fuse was extinguished before it reached the explosive. The attempt to blow up the factory is attributed to Fenianism.

Earl Granville, Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, has instructed the British Minister to Morocco, to make an earnest appeal to the Sultan of Morocco to consider whether it is not time to place his Empire on a level with other civilized Powers by abolishing slavery.

Another Robesonism in the British navy. When the House of Commons was asked recently to appropriate $250,000 to repair the yacht Victoria and Albert, the Radicals objected on the ground that it was useless, and that the repairs of the same craft had already cost $2,090,000 in ten years, and in all that time it had not seen more than forty days' service. Fifty thousand dollars for each day's service! The $250,000 were appropriated.

Business failures during the last seven days numbered 182, a slight diminution as compared with the previous week.

The public debt of the United States decreased $7,900,000 during the month of July.

Two hundred persons are still on the trail of the Arkansas outlaws. Bloodhounds are being used in the chase. The desperadoes are hidden in the mountains of the south-western part of the State.

Throughout Central Iowa many evidences of the habitation of prehistoric man abound. In the vicinity of Des Moines these evidences are especially numerous. Mounds, supposed to be the burial-places of these peculiar people, are frequently encountered, and have often been explored. One in the vicinity of Desoto was opened to-day and the skulls of 126 skeletons exhumed. Critical examination of the relics of these supposed moundbuilders has not yet been made.

Mine Inspector Wilson has received reports from 132 coal mines of the state of Iowa, showing the tonnage of coal mined for the year ending June 30. The aggregate so far reported is 3,174,954 tons. From the number yet to report Mr. Wilson estimates the yield for the year named considerably above 3,500,000 tons. The product for 1882 was 2,127,700, and for 1881 it was 3,500,000. The yield is largely regulated by the demand, a mild winter being attended by a corresponding failing off in the amount mined.

Aug. 5th.—There were 870 deaths from cholera in Egypt Saturday. There were three deaths in Alexandria.

The Jewish inhabitants of Ekaterinoslav Russia, were attacked by a mob the 2d inst. The military were called out, and ten members of the mob were killed and thirteen wounded.

The telegraphers have resolved to make a further effort to bring the Western Union and Baltimore & Ohio Companies to their terms. A strike has been ordered of the railroad telegraphers employed on the railway systems controlled by Jay Gould and the Garretts commencing this morning. The strike will first take place on the Delaware & Lackawanna Road, which is controlled by Gould. The new order, if obeyed, will affect about 7,000 men. The telegraphers have it under advisement, so it is reported, whether the operators employed in connection with other rail-road systems of the country shall not be asked to join the strikers.

It is reported that a military rising has taken place in the Spanish Province of Badajoz, on the Portuguese frontier, and that the regular authorities have been arrested. The telegraph and railway lines between Badajoz and Portugal are interrupted.

The rising, which was in the Republican interest, was speedily suppressed by troops from Madrid.

The French have issued a proclamation to the Tonquinese, promising to punish their oppressors and destroy the city of Hue if necessary. A reconnaissance shows that Sontav is strongly fortified, the guns commanding the river. Probably a decisive blow will soon be struck, the troops attempting to capture the entire land force of Black Flags while the fleet attacks Hue.

Aug. 6th.—A dispatch from Hong Kong, China, says everything is ready for an attack on Hue. The heat is increasing. The batteries of the enemy cannonaded Hanoi without result on the 1st inst. Two Japanese attaches have arrived at the French camp.

The French Northern Squadron consists of two ironclads and two corvets, and a gunboat mounting fifty-five guns, and carrying 1,283 men. The fleet in the waters of Tonquin is stronger, but details are unknown. There are 7,000 troops in Tonquin, of whom 4,000 are at Hanoi. The Black Flags are reenforced by Chinese. The bombardment of Hue is being considered.

Great excitement prevails in Spain over the outbreak of the soldiers at Badajoz. Seven hundred of the troops proclaimed a republic, and were joined by a great number of citizens. The Spanish Government took prompt steps to suppress the rising, and the revolutionists took equally prompt steps for Portugal, which is close by. At the Portuguese frontier they will be disarmed and jailed.

The riots at Ekaterinoslav, Russia, caused by animosity against the Jews, were continued on the 3d instant. The mob attacked the Jewish quarter and destroyed many houses and liquor-stores belonging to the Jews. It is now reported that 100 persons were killed or wounded during the rioting in town.

According to the official returns there are in round numbers about a thousand deaths daily from cholera, of which more than half are at Cairo, Ghizeh, and Boulak. Hundreds of wretched people from Boulak who have been driven to the filthy barracks at Maadikheir are without food, doctors, or medicine. The task of burying the cholera patients at Cairo is said to be badly performed by the Prefect of Police. The bodies are allowed, it is declared, to lie about the streets until there are sufficient for a cartload. Strange to say, the panic has decreased as the cholera has increased, the steamers leaving having few passengers. Yesterday's mail steamer Tanjore for Brindisi had no passenger. The accounts of the Continent Lazzarettoes are so horrible that people prefer to run the risk of the disease here rather than there.

A congress of Socialists has been broken up by the police at Ravenna, Italy.

Recent discussion of the proposal to adopt a system of Government telegraphy in this country renders the facts regarding the English system of decided interest. The act authorizing the purchase of the English private lines was passed in July, 1868. In 1870 the purchases were completed, the Government being overcharged and swindled by the companies more than 30 millions of dollars. Decided additions were made to the conveniences of the line, which were largely increased in extent as well. In 1874 the rate for twenty words was fixed at a shilling (24 cents) for any distance, and the effect of the uniform tariff may be clearly seen from the following figures:

|            | Expenditure. | Revenue. |
|------------|---------------------|-----------------|
| 1873 ..... | £ 841,766           | £ 678,066       |
| 1874 ..... | 1,062,956           | 1,057,824       |
| 1875 ..... | 1,193,065           | 1,123,793       |
| 1876 ..... | 1,022,000           | 1,250,246       |
| 1877 ..... | 1,141,000           | 1,298,558       |
| 1878 ..... | 1,139,237           | 1,317,468       |
| 1879 ..... | 1,109,000           | 1,333,727       |
| 1880 ..... | 1,107,000           | 1,438,014       |
| 1881 ..... | 1,240,000           | 1,592,943       |

In Federal money the expenditure in 1882 was $6,830,000, which included 3 per cent interest on the purchase money of 48 millions of dollars paid to the telegraph companies for their old traps and franchises. The receipts for the same time were $8,058,000, showing a surplus of $1,255,000, being clear profit, part of which is used in extending the system, increasing the number of wires, poles, underground conduits, new instruments, etc. The net income for the ten years is nearly nine millions of dollars. In the United Kingdom there are now 5,595 telegraph offices. A bill has passed Parliament directing the telegraph tolls to be cut down to sixpence (12 cents) for a message sent any distance in the "three Kingdoms."

Proctor Knott, Democratic candidate, was elected Governor of Kentucky, by 45,000 majority. A solid democratic delegation was elected to the Senate and Legislature.

The election in Utah has resulted in favor of the Mormons, all the upper house of the Legislature being of that persuasion, and all but one of the lower house.

The Utah Commissioners were served with ten damage suits by parties whose votes were protested under the articles of the Edmunds bill. It is expected that when the cases come up in the United States District Court, great interest will attach, as the constitutionality of the bill will be tested.

Nearly one thousand children under five years of age died in Chicago during July. There were two hundred more deaths of all ages than in July, 1882, and four hundred less than occurred during July, 1881. The total deaths of July, 1883, was 1,470.

Aug. 7th.—Deaths from cholera in Egypt, on Monday, 598 in number, including 78 at Cairo.

The panic-stricken inhabitants of Alexandria are paying large sums of money to get away from the town.

The family of the Jew Scharf, the defendant in the Jewish trial at Nyireghyaza, was mobbed at Pesth, Hungary, yesterday. The police were called to disperse the mob.

Twenty thousand florins have been collected towards a permanent exhibition at Trieste, to be given the sufferers by the Ischia earthquake.

The United States Treasury reserve is $154,826,615.

Miscreants cut fifty-nine telegraph wires in New York City and its vicinity Monday night.

Disastrous effects continue in New England manufacturing centers, following the great leather failures of last week. The commercial storm center now seems to be at Lynn, Mass., where disturbing rumors of all kinds are afloat.

An Indian Territory special says at the election in the Cherokee Nation, yesterday, a principal Chief, Assistant Chief, three Judges for the Northern, Southern, and Middle Judicial Circuits; Judge, Clerk, Sheriff and Solicitor, for each of the districts comprising the Nation, fifty-eight members of the National, and sixteen members of the General Council were chosen. The Nation is divided into two parts, one of which, known as the National, presented Dennis W. Bushyhead the present incumbent as their candidate for Chief, and the other, styling itself the Union, supported the Hon. Charles Thompson. Returns thus far received indicate the election of Bushyhead for a four years' term. Three districts are yet to hear from and may change the result entirely. The canvass was fierce and exciting, and the vote polled is unusually large.

But a few Baltimore & Ohio operators obeyed the telegrapher's brotherhood's call to strike.

FIRES, STORMS AND ACCIDENTS.

Aug. 4th.—Loss by fire at Vincennes, Ind., $30,000. Fargo, D. T., $20,350. Minneapolis, Minn., $20,000. Peoria, Ill., $25,000. Marshall, Ill., $6,000. Vincennes, Ind., $5,000.

A fearful wind and rain-storm this evening at Midlothian, Tex., completely destroyed the hotel, burying several persons beneath the ruins. All were badly injured, but so far as learned no one was killed. A livery stable was blown down, and the contents of a lumber-yard scattered over the prairie for a great distance.

A few days ago Stephen Green, of Colleton Co., S. C., administered to his wife and two children morphine, supposing it to be quinine. A short time afterwards one of the children died, and while Green was attending the funeral the other child expired. It is feared that his wife will not recover.

A powder-mill explosion at Angouleme, France, killed six persons. Several were injured. Damage to property, 1,000,000 francs.

Two men were killed at Chicago, Ill.; one was run over by cars, the other jumped from a high window.

The northern part of Monroe county, N. Y., including the towns of Greece, Penfield, and Irondequoit, was swept last night with a terrible storm of wind, hail, and rain. Grain, and especially fruit, were badly damaged. Many farmers report the loss of from $300 to $1,000. Many grape vines are entirely ruined. The hail killed birds and fowls and brought blood from horses and stock. The belt traversed by the storm was two miles wide by ten or twelve miles long.

Aug. 5th.—Bush fires have spread over the whole of Victoria, B. C. The smoke is so dense the sun's rays can not break through. No rain for nearly three months.

Aug. 6th.—The incoming freight-train on the Chesapeake, Ohio & Southwestern Railroad was wrecked this morning near Kerrville, about twelve miles north of Memphis, Tenn. Fifteen cars were badly damaged, and a negro brakeman was injured. About 100 yards of the track were torn up, necessitating a transfer of passengers.

Sixty-five persons were seriously poisoned at Camden, S. C., Friday night from eating ice-cream at a church festival. The poison did not take effect until early Saturday morning, when the entire party were attacked with violent cramps and vomiting, followed by high fever. So long a time had elapsed before physicians were called in that the antidotes administered had but little effect. One young lady died yesterday, and about fifteen others are not expected to live. The symptoms are those of arsenic. A thorough investigation will be made.

Colored men near Sisterville, W. Va., were blasting rock yesterday when an explosion occurred, killing two and wounding three Italians. A race riot then began. No lives were lost in the fight.

At Austin, Minn., an entire brick block collapsed; loss $20,000.

Nine persons were drowned in Lincolnshire, England, by the upsetting of a boat yesterday.

Aug. 7th.—The most destructive fire Three Rivers, Mich., has ever experienced, occurred there to-day. Loss $36,000. Loss by fire at Boston, Mass., $35,000. Philadelphia, Pa., $75,000. East Saginaw, Mich., $8,000.

CROP REPORTS.

Aug. 5th.—The amount of wheat for export from California, will be 40 or 50 per cent greater than last year. Fruit is scarcer and higher priced than any previous year. The grape crop is larger than ever. It is now predicted that the average yield of wheat in the region around St. Paul, Minn., will be from 18 to 20 bushels per acre. Corn there is in a condition to insure a good crop. Around St. James, Minn., harvesting is being rapidly executed, and the yield of all kinds of grain will be very large. One third more wheat will be marketed in Morgan county, Minn., this year, than ever before. In Mitchell county, Iowa, the crop of wheat, oats, potatoes, corn and buckwheat, will be more than the average yield. Around Yankton, D. T., corn is growing nicely, and a good crop of oats will be harvested. Wheat will be about two-thirds of a crop in Mower county, Minn. Corn there is fully up to the average condition. Reports from all the country tributary to St. Vincent, Minn., show that there will be an average wheat crop of thirty bushels per acre. Rust is injuring the wheat in the vicinity of Waseca, Minn. Wheat and barley around Winona, Minn., are good. Cottonwood county, Minn., is blooming with magnificent crops. Reports from other sections of Minnesota are of the same general tenor.

Reports from Britt, Humboldt, Hamburg, Badger, Dayton, Lake Mills and Pilot Mound, Ia., show prospects for good crops of wheat, oats and corn, around those places.

Corn is growing well around Bloomington, Ill., but being late, it is feared much of it will be damaged by early frosts. The yield of oats in that vicinity is good. Around Cairo, Ill., a splendid corn crop is assured. Knox county, Ill., promises a fair crop. Around Greenville, Ill., the wheat crop is almost a failure. Oats only about half what was expected. Wheat is very poor around Hillsboro and Pana, Ill., the average being below ten bushels per acre, and the quality poor. Around Rochelle, Rushville and Steward, Ill., crops are fair.

Reports from a few of the counties of Michigan, indicate that there will be less than half a crop of corn, and that wheat is below the average.

In Indiana corn is backward and does not promise well. Oats and hay abundant, but damaged by rain. The corn crop of Wisconsin is not promising, and rust has injured the wheat to some extent. Barley is fair. In Arkansas, cotton will be more than an average crop, but corn will fall below that. Around Wyandotte, Kansas, wheat yields 17, and corn 40 bushels per acre. The apple crop is only one third as large as last year. There is probability of more than an average crop of corn throughout the state, if the weather is favorable. Texas corn crops are generally reported good. Reports from Missouri do not indicate more than half a corn crop. East of Montreal Can., there is a more abundant crop of everything than for twenty years past.

The London Times, reviewing the harvest prospects in England, estimates that wheat and barley will be below the average crop. H. F. Moore reports that the yield of wheat will be 8½ per cent below the Standard average per acre, and that of barley 6 per cent below the average. The yield of oats, he says, will be 6 per cent above, and that of potatoes 20 above.

LOCAL NEWS.

Sometime last April, the school board of the Independent District in which Lamoni is situated, let to Thomas Jacobs of Lamoni, for $2,600, the contract for building a school house in that town, the carpenter work of which is now nearly completed. The building is two stories high; the main part is 26½ x 53 feet. On the front is a room 10 x 40 feet, in each story of which is a coal bin at one end and a wardrobe at the other. The main part of the building is divided into two equally sized rooms in each story, with folding doors up stairs. Mr. A. Roy of Leon, has been hired as principal, at a salary of $65 per month. Several assistants will hereafter be hired. The school is to begin some time in September.

Nine masons are at work upon the walls of the church being erected in Lamoni, and six teams are engaged in hauling rock and sand.

Eugene Dancer of Lamoni, has sold six Plano self-binding reapers this season. N. M. Reeder of Lamoni, has sold five of the D. M. Osborne & Co.'s manufacture of self-binding reapers, and five threshing machines. Do not these sales indicate prosperity among the farmers?

Now do tell us who is Mr. Banta's opponent for representative. There are certainly plenty of good men in the Republican party for the place and it is time they were announced. We have heard E. Robinson, of Davis City, Z. H. Gurley, of Pleasanton, and Joseph Smith, of Lamoni, all mentioned for the nomination, and as they are good men and well known in the county they would make strong candidates.—Davis City Correspondence of Decatur County Journal.

The Narrow Gauge is pushing southward from Garden Grove, Iowa. Twenty-four more miles of grading was let last Tuesday, from Leon to Janesville in Harrison county, Mo., and it is the intention of the Company to have this grading done by the 1st of January. Mr. M. H. King of Des Moines, who is doing a large share of the grading, has taken the new contract.

The first load of wheat of the crop of 1883 to reach Des Moines came in last Friday, and sold for 70 cents per bushel. It was of better quality than had been offered in that market for two years.

S. R. Howe has sold the Ward's Hotel, of Leon to Messrs. Bay & Dorsey, of Chariton, possession to be given August 16th.

State Superintendent Akers had a fine audience to hear his lecture "Relations of Education to Industry," at the Christian Church at Leon, Tuesday evening. We learn it was a splendid effort, and raised the Superintendent high in the estimation of the teachers of Decatur county and all others, who heard him.

The Narrow Gauge line to Pleasanton, Iowa, has been cross sectioned as far as Little river. By request of the Cainsville committee on right of way to that place, the Engineer commenced his survey south and reached Fogleman's, six miles below Pleasanton. This enables the committee to work intelligently in regard to the right of way. The ridge route is the one selected. R. Richardson is "looking out" the route south for the company.

CLEANLINESS.—A neat, clean, fresh-aired, sweet, cheerful, well arranged house exerts a moral influence over its inmates, and makes the members of a family peaceable, and considerate of each other's feelings and happiness. On the contrary, filthy, squalid, noxious dwelling, in which none of the decencies of life are observed, contributes to make its inhabitants selfish, sensual, and regardless of the feeling of others; and the constant indulgence of such passions renders them reckless and brutal.

GROVE MEETING.

The Latter Day Saints of the Des Moines Valley Branch will hold a two days' meeting, August 18th, in the evening, and Sunday, 19th, at 11 o'clock a.m., 3 p.m., and 7:30 p.m. A basket dinner will be indulged in on Sunday, at Brocket School-house Grove. We earnestly invite all the living saints to come to this meeting who can come. Especial invitation is given to those of the Des Moines District.

JOSEPH SMITH'S REPLY.

PRESIDENT OF THE REORGANIZED CHURCH ANSWERS L. O. LITTLEFIELD'S OPEN LETTER.

MR. L. O. LITTLEFIELD,
Logan City, Utah:

SIR:—YOUR letter of April 27th, in the Logan Journal, affords me a surprise. You have been pleased to take the statement of one of the speakers at the late conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, in the Temple at Kirtland, Ohio, and upon that have predicated a letter to me; taking it for granted that the expressions of that speaker "ventilated" the spirit of the body there assembled. Would it not have been more in harmony with proper dealing to have quoted my own language upon that occasion, if I was to be the one to whom your letter and its arguments were to be directed? Or what might have been as properly done, to have quoted the address of my colleague, Elder W. W. Blair, who spoke upon the same occasion, the opening of our session? Mr. Blair is to be found at Salt Lake City, where he is stationed, and can be questioned as to the spirit of that assembly.

It is true that in the Spring of 1882, the body to which I belong held a session of conference at Independence, Missouri, which was quite well attended; and it is also true that the fact of "Mormons under the leadership of the son of the Mormon prophet, Joseph Smith, holding conference in the place whence the Saints were driven" in 1838, created a sensation in the newspaper world, but it is not true, as assumed by you, that we as a body, held out any "flattering inducements by making that place the grand center of interest," for none such were offered; nor were any statements made by us as a people in reference to that meeting not warranted by the facts. The same is true in regard to the meeting at Kirtland. That the latter meeting was invested with more than ordinary interest, both to well meaning and faithful Latter Day Saints, and the world outside around Kirtland, is decidedly true; nor is it a matter of reproach to me, nor a fact of which any of those assembled there can for a moment be ashamed, that we were met with cordiality by many, and respectful attention and curiosity by all.

Those who were present at the dedication of that Temple at Kirtland, Ohio, when it was offered to the worship of God by those who had builded it, in solemn and earnest prayer, and who were permitted to sit in the renovated pulpits from which the gospel of life as revealed to Joseph Smith a half century ago was again proclaimed, testified then, testify now, that the same hallowed Spirit pervaded the assembly last held in those sacred walls by these men and women of the Reorganized Church during the days from April 6th to 14th that was manifested at that dedication service. And men who heard the fathers teach the way of life in those walls in 1834-5, declare that the sons set forth the same teachings. And when you, Mr. Littlefield, who were not present in the Temple last April, presume to say that the "spirit of Temple building" is, or was the principle characteristic spirit, manifested by the Church in those early days, the keeping of which marks the "Utah Mormons" as the Church of Christ, you make the mistake which the Reorganization has so long and so openly accused the body under President B. Young and John Taylor of having made.

You are pleased to state that my "blood relationship" to my father "would not be a bar" to my rising to "high distinction," providing that my principles were "consonant with the real faith and policy of my father." You state further, that my "declaration of principles is in positive opposition to those which are well known to have been the doctrines and principles preached and practiced by that great man; principles for which he lost his life at Carthage jail, June 27th, 1844."

You have in the foregoing statement asserted much more than you can possibly prove; for my declaration of principles is precisely that which my father, Joseph Smith, the Seer, gave to I. Daniel Rupp, of Pennsylvania, for his "History of Religious Denominations" in the United States; and to John Wentworth, of Chicago, Illinois, for his paper the Democrat; and which you will find in the Times and Seasons, published in Nauvoo, Illinois, for March 1st, 1842, and signed by him. I send you an Epitome of our Faith, which you will find to agree with this referred to, with the exception to which I shall hereafter cite; and which doubtless forms the "Stone of offence" in my profession of belief.

No proof that Joseph Smith taught and practiced polygamy, (publicly or privately), of an "incontrovertible character" was ever presented to me; and from the nature of the subject and the facts connected with the introduction of the doctrine as a church tenet, it is doubtful if such proof exists.

Joseph Smith never placed himself in the "attitude of a polygamist before the world." All the public statements made by him in regard to the subject are condemnatory of it; including the Book of Mormon and the Book of Covenants, including every edition of the latter work, from 1834-5 to 1845, and the Liverpool edition for 1854. He, his brother Hyrum, and John Taylor are on record in 1842 and 1844, in the Times and Seasons, condemnatory of it; and President John Taylor's public denial and condemnation of it are as late as 1850, as you can verify by reading O. Pratt's works, including the discussion at Boulogne Sur Mer, France, of that year.

No woman ever testified to me in Salt Lake City, or anywhere else, that she was wife to Joseph Smith, my father, except Emma, my mother; and the only woman belonging to the Church in Utah, who ever talked to me on the subject of polygamy, stated that she was not wife or sealed woman, to either Joseph or Hyrum Smith; and was not then (1876) and had never been in polygamy at all. She affirmed at the first, as do you, that she knew, etc. But when cross-examined by me she admitted, that during Joseph Smith's lifetime she never saw him married, nor heard nor saw him treat any woman as wife in any sense, except Emma, his wife, my mother; and finally confessed that she knew nothing about it. A good brother in the Utah Church, whose name I can give if it is challenged, waited upon me in Salt Lake City; and he, also, knew all about it; but he too broke down upon cross-examination, and knew of his own personal knowledge nothing that would implicate Joseph Smith in the practice of polygamy. The distinction between celestial marriage, (if such a thing existed at all), as it may have been held in secret among a certain class of elders as early as 1844, and the plural, or polygamic marriage doctrine of Utah, must be made; nor will it do for you, or any other apologist or advocate of Utah's peculiar system, to affirm that the latter is identical with the former. And the very special plea made by you that "in consequence of the prejudices of the Saints and the tide of persecution he well knew he would have to encounter from the outside world, wherein his life would be endangered * * * he delayed to make known this (polygamic) principle," is a most contemptible charging of cowardice upon a man, who from his fifteenth year till he was finally butchered, had lived in constant and ever present danger, and had never shrunk from any duty imposed upon him through fear—shame! Besides this, while the “boy Joseph was playing in the streets of Nauvoo,” in unconscious ignorance of the existence of secretly practiced sin; for you say “it was taught, though not publicly,” he was not alone in his ignorance; for in conversation with hundreds who lived in Nauvoo at the same time, they have invariably stated that they knew nothing of it then. In connection with this, the affidavits of as eminent persons as there are in the church at Salt Lake City, can be shown to precisely the same condition of ignorance.

When the “boy Joseph” arrived at “maturer years,” and set about solving the question of his father’s complicity with polygamy, he found a great many stories and myths afloat about it; and he sifted story after story; and though having met and conversed with many whom he was told knew, has failed yet to meet one who positively knew, when subjected to crucial examination; and when you assert that any woman reported to me in Utah as the wife of Joseph Smith, you make a statement not founded in truth, for no such reporting was ever done. I was in Salt Lake City for three weeks in the fall and early winter of 1876 and spoke four times in the “Institute” there, and publicly threw the burden of proof upon those who affirmed such complicity with the doctrine of plural marriage.

The Lord declared in the Book of Mormon that the having of wives and concubines was an “abomination” in his sight. This was revealed by God to Joseph Smith, and through him to the Church. It is precisely in this revealed light that the sons of the man through whom this revelation was made, view the subject. Another revelation through the same source reveals the will of God to be that “one man should have one wife,” and one only, unless death intervene, when he is at liberty to marry again; and this, “that the earth might answer the end of its creation and be filled with the measure of man.” It is in this light precisely that the sons see what was revealed through their father; and these sons affirm that they see “these (polygamic) things, as the Lord has revealed them,” and in this light they have “boldly held them up” that others might see them as they are.

Why is it that Dr. W. E. McLellan, the followers of James J. Strang, and others, referred to by you as the ones whom the sons of Joseph Smith are following in the wake of, have been and are hostile to and at enmity with them? How is it that all of those whom you say these sons are following, denounce them? If there was an affinity of following there should be of fellowship, but there is none.

But suppose that it be granted, that Joseph Smith did secretly, (and it is not now claimed that it was publicly declared), teach and practice “celestial marriage,” or to make it as broad as you might wish it, “plural marriage,” by virtue of what rule of church procedure, what revelation properly authenticated and received by the Church did he do so? If it was secretly taught to a few and practiced by him and them, it was so done contrary to the laws of God then governing the Church, which were alleged to be in accordance with the revelation of Jesus Christ through Joseph Smith; and they and he, if teaching and doing contrary to those laws, privily, were transgressors against God’s will, as expressed by Him to His Church. And if it should be proved by any amount of reliable testimony that Joseph Smith did teach and practice as you assert, it proves only that he disregarded that rule governing the marriage relation that was given in 1831, “at the Ohio;” which rule, according to the statement made to the Church at Father Whitmer’s in New York state, was to be a “law to them, suitable to their then condition; and in the New Jerusalem;” and which was affirmed by Orson Pratt, the ablest of Utah’s Apostles, in a discourse delivered in the tabernacle at Salt Lake City, in October, 1869, to be a “righteous law;” and would not prove that the act of being privily celestially married was a correct and righteous act, and the doctrine by which it is defended was a principle of the faith of the Church. Nor does it make any difference who the persons so secretly married, or sealed were; they each would be criminal to the known law of the Church, and the law of the land.

It is no argument in your defense to urge that because Joseph Smith did practice “plural marriage,” and therefore it was and is right. God condemned it in bringing the Book of Mormon to light in 1830; Christ condemned it in the law of 1831; Joseph and Hyrum Smith condemned it in 1842 and ’44; John Taylor condemned it in 1844 and 1850; and I, for these and other reasons equally potent, have condemned it from my earliest entrance into public life to the present. I have organized no faction, but have raised the warning voice to Israel, worn and troubled, to return to the way in which Christ has promised peace, and so far as my opposition to the doctrine of “plural marriage” is concerned, I shall meet my “illustrious sire” without having been frightened or cajoled into a transgression of the law of the Divine Head of the Church, Christ, because it is asserted that he did. It is stated in the Book of Mormon that certain people sought to “excuse themselves” for certain practices because of “the things which were written concerning David and Solomon,” and for this that people were blamed; and when you seek to excuse yourself and your people, because of the things which Joseph and Hyrum did, of a like nature, your excuse is not good and you too fall under blame justly. Moses, Jacob, Jethro, Jephtha, David nor Solomon, could not sanctify evil in themselves nor Israel, nor could Joseph or Hyrum Smith or Brigham Young. And when I shall meet my father, all that I need feel concerned about is whether my acts will bear the light of the gospel revealed through him; not whether he has had one wife or many. If he transgressed the law of God, he will by it be judged and condemned; if he obeyed, he will be rewarded; and as I treat the subject from my own manhood’s standpoint and not his, I propose to take my chances with the laws accredited of God in my favor, as against any privily introduced and doubtful dogma.

Let me call your attention to some few facts, in connection with temples and temple building, and then I will reply to some of your questions. The Temple at Kirtland was built, it is credibly believed, by command, and was finished and dedicated to the worship of God; and in it, as the history of the Church amply shows, the only endowment the elders ever received was bestowed. The temple at Nauvoo, though begun at the direction of God, was not finished in any essential particular, excepting the baptismal font, according to the pattern given; and whoever presumes to congratulate himself upon any endowment bestowed in that building, must do so with the fact of its unfinished character before his eyes, and with the remembrance that there was no promise to its builders, unless it was completed within a limited time. This time expired and the building remained unfinished, was polluted, and now not one stone of superstructure or foundation remains as placed by the builders.

A more striking rebuke to the people who danced and frolicked within its walls in religion’s name, and who finally sold its desecrated shrine and site into Gentile hands, can scarcely be found; except in a similar destruction witnessed at Jerusalem. The Temple at Kirtland may have filled the purpose for which it was built; but certainly the one at Nauvoo never did; unless it was designed for destruction. The spirit of "temple building" has indeed been kept by you and your people; but unfortunately for you, those temples which have been built by you are not the temples of God; nor was that one at Nauvoo accepted of Him. Indeed, it could not be according to the terms of the commandment which authorized its erection, and granted only a period of time in which it was to be completed; and if not done in that time, it and the Church with it, and their baptisms for the dead were to be rejected. Not having been accepted, no warrant exists in His word for holding sacred endowments of either keys, or power said to have been conferred in it.

To show that the temples of which you boast in Utah are not temples of God, I cite you to the statement of Elder Orson Pratt, who, preaching in the 17th ward meeting house, Salt Lake City, December 10th, 1876, declared that "there has not yet been a temple built which God has accepted since the Saints left the Ohio; nor will there be until a temple shall be built in the land of Zion where God has designated. The temples that we are building in these valleys will not be the temples of God, will not be accepted of him, as they have not been commanded by him to be built. That house will be built, and while some are living who lived in 1832. Not all of those who are gathered in these mountains will go back there. That portion only who are pure and upright, keep the commandments of God. The prophecies of 1844 will have been fulfilled in coming to these mountains. The great body will leave these mountains, though some will remain."

You are not at liberty to deny these statements of Orson Pratt, as at the time he delivered this discourse, he was speaking for the body which you represent in your letter, and upon the subject of which you wrote. Joseph F. Smith occupied the stand with him, and I think John Henry Smith was also present. I was told afterward that the discourse was preached for my special benefit, and not having had occasion to use any of the extracts I took at the time, until now, I am profoundly grateful to Mr. Pratt for the item I have here quoted, for it is exactly in point.

To your question, "How many temples has the Reorganization erected?"

Not one of the many you have erected in Utah, (Salt Lake, Saint George, San Pete), has been built by command of God; hence, no more credit attaches to you for building them, than is due to any body of people who erect altars and build churches in which to worship God; only that your industry and zeal are worthy of praise, as they are also in your reclaiming the desert land, building towns, etc., and nothing more.

While you have been building temples that God did not command to be built, in a land away from the place that Mr. Pratt states is the one upon which The Temple of God is to be built, which temples can not be accepted of God any more than can any other tabernacles, or houses of worship built without command, the Reorganized Church has been preaching the gospel all over the land whence the Saints were driven, and have been building houses of worship, which are provided for in the law given upon the land of Zion, to be a law unto the people of God. In doing this the elders have been teaching the gospel in its simplicity and power, as the law of God given through the Martyr provided that it should be taught; and in accordance with the command and promise made to the weary, dejected band camped on Fishing River, Missouri, have not "talked judgment, or boasted of mighty faith," but have "carefully gathered together, as many in one region of country as consistent with the feelings of the people;" and have realized the promise, "You shall find favor in the eyes of the people." In doing this, the scattered ones of the flock who failed to discover in the voice of Pres. B. Young, the voice of the Shepherd, have been returning to their allegiance to the law and the Lord, and have been made to "rejoice in the Holy One of Israel;" in fulfillment of the prophecy.

The statement that Joseph Smith "desired to journey to the Rocky Mountains," is not borne out by the statements and events of the few days prior to his death; and it is easy of proof that no general exodus of the Church from Nauvoo and surrounding country to the Rocky Mountains was contemplated by him at any time, in any other sense than settlements west of the Mississippi might be made to prevent the ills that an overlarge gathering at Nauvoo might bring. Mr. Littlefield has only to read the Letter to Henry Clay, the Epistle of Brigham Young and the rest of the members of the Twelve, made immediately after the 27th of June, 1844, and recall the efforts to finish the Temple and Nauvoo House, at Nauvoo, to disprove his own position on this point.

I have no objection to the claim made by you that Joseph Smith did predict some of the Saints would go and "assist in making settlements and building cities;" or that some would live to see the Saints "become a mighty people in the midst of the Rocky Mountains." I have no more objection to the claim by you of the fulfillment of this prophecy in your settlement in Utah, than I have had to the claim made by Mr. Pratt and others of the Utah elders that the prophecy found in Isaiah 4th is also fulfilled in the plural marriage system; only premising that the reproach complained of rises from the condition and for the causes set forth in the 3d chapter. Nor is it necessarily to the credit of those in the mountains that the prediction is fulfilled. If fulfilled, it goes to the credit of the prophet, but not necessarily to the people. The same man predicted that polygamy would prove to be the destruction of the church; and that Brigham Young would lead the people astray; both of which predictions may have been fulfilled upon the same people.

The Reorganization possesses the Temple at Kirtland, with good title thereto; and in its rehabilitation and repairing, are rebuilding the spiritual waste places of Zion; and in the places where you and your co-workers have made the name of Joseph Smith and the doctrines he taught odious, we have made converts to the truth he died to attest.

If Joseph Smith ever uttered the prophecy which you assert respecting the charge to the people to "keep where the records" were, you have strangely confounded the word "records;" for, if the word "records" means anything to the Latter Day Saints it means the Bible, Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants, and has no reference to the records of names, or the Church history. To "keep with the records" is to remain in harmony with the teaching of the record of the Jews, and the record of Joseph; the teaching of Christ on both continents. In this sense the Reorganization is preeminently with the majority—God and Christ.

You are not free in Utah; not free from the laws of our common country; but are now teaching and practicing what is contrary to the laws of both God and the country. You are not free to practice what you seek to glorify as the "grand work of the latter-days;" but in the practice of plural marriage which you so improperly eulogise, you are compelled to covertly and secretly solemnize the rites of such marriages, instead of doing so in an open meeting, or at a "feast prepared for the occasion," as the Book of Covenants declares; and are forced to keep records of such marriages that you dare not produce in court; and obliged to refuse to answer plain questions when asked them in open court, or to evade the consequences of disobedience to the law of the United States by a resort to subterfuges and mental reservations unknown to Christ's law, and unbecoming in apostates, to say nothing of Saints.

The son of Joseph Smith repudiates no doctrine that his father laid down supported by the word of God as essential to life here and salvation hereafter; but he does now, and has for all his life, repudiated as a doctrine a system for which there is no provision in the law that father left on record to govern, direct and control the Church of Christ.

Mr. Cannon, whom you are not at liberty to dispute, answered to Mr. Reed, chairman of Committee before whom he appeared in Washington a year ago last winter, that the Latter Days Saints did not practice polygamy because of what was written in the Bible or Book of Mormon; but by reason of a "purported revelation to Joseph Smith authorizing it." This which you are pleased to say is the "most sacred doctrine" of my father; if it has sanction among you at all, must get it from that document; and I tell you that the word of Brigham Young alone is the only evidence you, or any of your body has that the document referred to is the one Joseph Smith had, if he ever had anything like it. And not until eight long years after Joseph Smith was dead, did Brigham Young testify, and then he says that the paper is a "copy of one that Emma Smith burned." No one else testified of the genuineness of it; and he only, after the long practice of the doctrine could not be further concealed or denied; and the witness then comes to the stand burdened with the consequences of his own indulgence in the practice. Go to your Church history and find how upon the 29th day of August, 1852, eight years and two months after Joseph and Hyrum Smith were laid in their graves, Brigham Young by the introduction of plural marriage, dared to curse the Church over which he had assumed a control never designed in his call as an Apostle, and to load the memory of my father with a charge of deceit, hypocrisy and cowardice, that his sons have borne in every hamlet, village, town and city where they have preached the Gospel of the Son of God; and not until those sons stand before God face to face with that father and Brigham Young, will I cease to defend the cause of Christ against that doctrine, so unjustly fastened on the faith; and against that charge upon that father's memory and their own heritage of a good name.

I am sir, yours,

JOSEPH SMITH.

COMMENDATORY.

HUTCHINSON, Colorado,
July 23d, 1883.

TO THE PRESIDENT AND CHURCH OF JESUS CHRIST OF LATTER DAY SAINTS, Greeting:

We, the members of the Rocky Mountain Branch, of above named church, wish to tender our sincere thanks to the whole body for sending to this mission such an able, outspoken and honorable man as Elder James Caffall, to represent the church here in Colorado.

Whereas, the time has come that he is about to leave this part of the mission assigned him by your honorable body, we wish to say to the church that we are well satisfied with the labors performed by him while here. We are happy to say that he is highly spoken of by some of the best men of Colorado, as being an able and good man. We feel he is worthy of our sincere thanks for the honorable manner in which he has conducted himself as a minister of the gospel, which we herewith tender him, with our earnest prayers for his future prosperity in the good cause. We would be glad if the church had many more such men, to go forth and preach the true gospel. Then we believe much good would be done, and more souls be led to glorify God.

We can say that he has labored energetically while in this State, not leaving one stone unturned that could possibly be moved to further the good cause. It is hard for us to say how much good has been done by the efforts made by him, not because of a lack of a great number added to the church. We can not boast of the numbers, but we hope to live to see the seed sown bring forth abundantly, that we may rejoice with our brother; and the few that have been added remain faithful to the end.

We know one thing, that our true position as a church has been clearly set forth by him, in the most widely circulated news papers of the state, to the people of Colorado. Ten articles have been written by him, showing the difference between us and the Utah Mormons, six of which have been published in the Denver Republican, having the largest circulation in Colorado; two in the Greeley Tribune, one in the Trinidad Times, and one in the Como Headlight. By this means thousands of people have been able to see the difference between us and them. We believe the people have been warned from one end of Colorado to the other; and we have done our duty in helping him with what little means was at our command in doing this work. Now we feel to leave the result of the past with God and the people. The people do not seem to care much about hearing the gospel preached, or the salvation of their souls. The most of them are most interested in getting gold, and that seems to be their God.

We herewith express our regret at the departure of our faithful and worthy brother, who so patiently and faithfully labored to present the truth as it is in Christ. We have seen with what patience and zeal he has labored with the people, and how nobly he has borne the cross in the cause he loves, forsaking home and loved ones cheerfully, going among strangers in a strange land, to be scorned and even insulted by the people, for whose benefit he labored. He has extended the banner of truth to all those who would come, that all might be without excuse. Nor has he been free from cares, vexations and difficulties, to which the heralds of the true gospel are generally exposed. No, his has not always been a bed of roses. Still his labors and zeal have not been slackened. The word without palliation has been presented to saint and sinner, though the aristocracy frowned upon him, and the pitiless storms of persecution and slander often hurled their venomous arrows at him. He battled bravely on, with unyielding determination which never forsook him, with visions of victory ahead. The veneration we ever will feel for his worth, silences our words, and restrains our actions; for to know him, is to love and esteem him, for his heart is the home of pious emotions. Now as he leaves for other fields, we desire our highest regards and warmest feelings of gratitude to be cherished by him, for the kind and wise counsel, which he has ever been willing and ready to give for our good. We hope the same appreciation of his worth will be cherished by those with whom he may associate in the future, that his way may be lightened of many cares and trials that we know not of. We would gladly say to our brother, stay with us, but duty calls him, and we must not be selfish.

Dear brother, we bid thee farewell for the present, with our prayers, that as you return to that home and loved ones from which you have been so long absent, that peace and pleasure that the world knows not of may be yours to enjoy.

We remain in hope, your Brethren and Sisters in Christ,

G. O. KENNEDY.

For the Rocky Mountain Branch.

INFIDEL AND BELIEVER.

THERE is food for reflection in the following incident:

At the base of Pike's Peak, in a little gurgling hamlet of Manito, I met, a few years since, an infidel, walking on the brink of the grave. His learning was wonderful, his talk most engaging, but he had always a sneer for sacred things. One evening, on the hotel porch, in the shadow of the grand mountain pile, he broke down every argument of well meaning opponents, and turning triumphantly to a lady who had been sitting silent, with her thin cheek resting on a transparent hand, he asked what she thought of his belief.

"I can not meet your arguments, sir, because they are human, and my understanding is not so great as yours, but I have faith, so calm and strong, that, however unsupported by learning, I believe it to be the gift of God."

"Madam, never doubt it," he answered, baring his head reverently. "God gives it to every mortal. Those men are cursed who despise the gift. Keep your faith. No learning can take its place. I have devoted my life to speculation. I can not get back the old faith. I would give everything I own on this earth to-day for the happiness and the certainty that once were mine."

QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

BEING a humble searcher after truth, and seeing several questions asked by the Saints, I will try and answer them through the Herald; and if I err, I hope and trust Bro. Joseph, or some other brother will comment, and put me and them to right. In Herald of March 10th, 1883, Sr. Almira M. Snow asked several questions. First, on Jephthah's vow. Answer: The offering up of human sacrifices was expressly forbidden by God. *See Deut. 12:30, 31; Ps. 106:37, 38; Jer. 7:31; Ezek. 16:20, 21. The offering of human sacrifices was one of the greatest sins of the heathen nations, for which God's fury was poured out upon them; and one of the great and awful sins for which they were cast out of Canaan and the land given to the Israelites. See Deut. 12:30, 31. When the Israelites themselves fell into this abomination, it brought upon them the same dreadful judgments from an avenging God. Ps. 106:37, 38. Jephthah knew the law of God on this subject, and he loved it. He was a man of prayer, sought counsel, and was strict in his religious duties. He was divinely inspired, for the Spirit of the Lord came upon Jephthah. See 11:29, 30-35. If then Jephthah knew the law of God concerning this thing, could he willfully and deliberately go and do otherwise? It was under the influence of the Spirit of God that Jephthah went forth to punish the Ammorites for human sacrifices; and he was divinely led to punish them for this sin. He could not in my opinion be led by the same spirit to practice the same sin himself. But the reader will inquire, Does not the text say that he will sacrifice his own daughter as a burnt offering? I reply no, it says no such thing. It says that which met him should be the Lord's. It should be devoted to him. Could a man full of inspiration and piety, entertain such a thought as offering up a daughter, father, mother, sister, or brother, as a burnt sacrifice? I answer, no; Jephthah did not do it. Judges 11:39.

Second: the morning stars sang at the creation. Answer. This singing took place at the creation, and they were witnesses of God's wondrous work. The occasion was one of wondrous joy and praise, and unfolds an interesting fact in God's proceedings. Dear reader, are you preparing yourself to sing that great anthem in that immense throng, at the consummation of all things? All the prophets, martyrs, elders and saints, washed white in the blood of the Lamb, will be there. Come. The sons of God here means holy angels. Adam was not created then. "Morning stars," expressive of glory and beauty, spirituality and holiness in their nature.

Pentecost day. Easter means festival, and takes the place of the Jewish Passover. It comes as a Moveable feast, as early as March 22d and as late as April 25th. It is generally understood that "Pentecost Day" occurred ten days after the ascension, and fifty days after Easter. Ark of the Covenant. I believe the ark and its sacred contents are, and will be preserved in remembrance of Israel's rebellion and God's chosen people, and for a testimony in the last days.

In the issue of July 7th, 1883, several more questions are asked, and call for answers. Are the calamities and disasters that are daily transpiring around us, taking life and property, the judgments of God, or mere frolics of the devil? Answer: Both. They are the judgments of God through disobedience to his laws and commandments; and the frolics of the devil through selfishness, carelessness and incompetency in the world's affairs. Does God know that they are going to transpire beforehand, or must he remain ignorant of the calamities till the mischief is done, and he gets a telegraph dispatch? Answer: Undoubtedly God must know all that is to transpire from all eternity, that will take place in the history of men or angels. If he did not, he could not be omniscient. Indeed, he would be ignorant respecting his moral government and in its administrations. God's foreknowledge of the human character does not form that character, and the human destiny; he does not force that destiny. They are just what they will be, if God was entirely ignorant of them. You know next Christmas will come, but your knowledge of its coming does not hasten it one particle. You know the sun will rise to-morrow morning, but your foreknowledge does not make it come. We are free to make our lives and characters what we choose; and if we ask God to help us by his grace and spirit, to make our lives very useful and happy, he will do it. If we don't we must stand the consequence. Where is the power obtained by which they are accomplished? One instance will suffice. "His head was on a pillow laid, and he was fast asleep." The evil one, knowing the Master was asleep on the sea in a ship, took the advantage of the situation to discourage his followers, and caused the elements to be restless. When the Master awoke by hearing his children cry, and said, "Peace, be still;" and the storm became a calm. The lion was turned to a lamb. Is God everywhere present? In person, I answer, No. He has ministering angels, messengers, ambassadors, &c., to do his bidding. Queen Victoria is the ruling sovereign of the United Kingdom, India, Canada, &c. You may as well ask: Can she be in all those countries at one time. And yet her officers, ambassadors, &c., rule and govern her dominion rightly.

Is any life destroyed, or person killed, without his knowledge, or notice, even to a sparrow? Answer. God knows all about it; and God knows whether you will be saved or lost. But notwithstanding all this knowledge, God is not the author of sin. "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life, through Jesus Christ our Lord." All the devils in hell can not prevent you from being saved, if you are determined to be saved. God informed Elijah, that he had "commanded the ravens to feed" him at a certain place.

And the Scriptures inform us, that he "marks the sparrow's fall." The Utah apostasy, and the "falling away in the last days" totally overthrow that Calvinistic doctrine,—“Once in grace, always in grace;” and loudly admonish all of us “to work out our salvation with fear and trembling.” God help us to do it.

Who holds all power in heaven and on earth? Who is judge of all the earth, and who has the right and power to mete out punishment, or reward in justice and mercy? Man will be rewarded or punished, according to the degree of good or evil they shall have done. The Creator, Maker, and Ruler of the universe, will be the Judge. I would refer the brother from Wisconsin, Chippewa Falls, to read “The Divine Calling of Joseph Smith Defended and Maintained.” Here he will find prophecy and events to transpire in almost every nation; calamities, of every kind, wars, famines, earthquakes, plagues, destruction, and desolation without end; and by what agency it came from, &c., &c.

INDIAN NEWS.

AN Indian Territory special says the result of the recent leasing by the Arrapahoes and Cheyennes of the western portion of their reservation for grazing purposes is likely to revolutionize the entire Indian question. The rental is nearly $63,000 per annum, payable semi-annually in cash and cattle. The first payment was made a few days ago at the agency, every man, woman and child in the tribes interested receiving five silver dollars. In connection with this lease the Indians have started the cattle business themselves, having this week taken the initiative step. They have some 800 head of cows and heifers with twenty-five blooded bulls on the range north of the Cheyenne Agency. The pasture embraces the Clear Creek and Kingfisher Valleys, and is claimed to be the finest grazing land in the world. The United States Government will aid the Indians in this enterprise, the Interior Department having consented to invest as much in cattle as the Indians themselves, and turn them into the common herd for this purpose. Congress will at the next session be asked to appropriate $50,000 or $100,000. With the number of cattle now in their possession, and with the number to be contributed by the Government and the lessees of the grazing land, the Indians calculate that at the end of ten years, when the grass-lease expires, their herd will be worth $3,000,000. This will be a practical solution of the Indian question, so far as the Arrapahoes and Cheyennes are concerned, as it will make the tribes self-supporting. The cattle now on the range are in good condition. The herd is under the management of an experienced white man. The employes are principally Indians. The enterprise is warmly indorsed by Secretary Teller; Commissioner-of-Indian-Affairs, Price; United States Agent, Hunt, and others, all of whom unite in pronouncing it a great stride in placing these tribes on a sustaining basis.

Selected Poetry.

PILATE'S WIFE'S DREAM.

BY M. N. PAXTON, OF PLATTE CITY, MO.

I stood on Salem's wall and saw
The soldiers crucify a Stranger;
The scene impressed my soul with awe,
And warned me of impending danger.
And as He hung upon the tree,
Mid crowds of scoffers from the city,
I thought He turned His eyes on me,
And spoke in tones of love and pity:
“Your husband found in me no wrong:
And yet he every right denied me;
He yielded to a heartless throng,
And scourged, condemned and crucified me.
On him will rest the curse of God,
But you shall know my gracious power;
Jerusalem shall feel my rod,
And at my bar my foes shall cower.”

He saved a contrite dying thief,
While Scribes and Pharisees derided,
And proved His power to bring relief
To all who in his grace confided.
Grim darkness on the land was spread,
Until I heard, “‘Tis finished!” spoken:
An earthquake raged,—the darkness fled,—
And then, it seemed, my dream was broken.

I dreamed again: Beside a lake,
My wretched husband sat despairing;
And thus he spoke: “With fears I quake,
And sink beneath the woes I'm bearing.
My guilty hands are stained with blood,
And death alone can quell my anguish!
I'll drown me, in this dismal flood;
For how can I in misery languish!”

He plunged beneath the stifling tide;
But death was not a tranquil pillow;
For yearly since that Stranger died,
He lifts his head above the billow,
And chafes his hands, to purge the stains,
And wash away his fatal error;
But when he finds the blood remains,
He sinks, again, with shrieks of terror.

Again I dreamed, and Salem's walls
With Roman legions were invested:
With fire and sword the city falls,
And on the people vengeance rested.
Giant famine and contagion rode
Where putrid heaps of dead were lying,
And pestilence, in mercy, strode
Among the doomed, to haste their dying.

I dreamed again: A great white throne
Appeared, surrounded by all nations.
That Stranger was the judge, alone,
Of earth in all its generations.
My husband on the left hand seemed;
He trembled, and his tears were streaming.
I heard the word “Depart;”—I screamed,
And rose to find that I was dreaming.

* Tradition informs us that Pilate's wife became a Christian; but he, himself, died a pagan. He is said to have drowned himself in the dark waters of the Lake Lucerne; and the neighboring peasants, at this day, aver, that he rises every anniversary of Christ's crucifixion, and goes through the ceremony of trying to wash the blood from his hands; and failing in this, he sinks with a shriek.

Bro. A. H. Smith was instructed to solicit means to liquidate the debt on the Independence church building, and $208.00 were subscribed for that purpose.

All the priesthood in the district were requested to labor as circumstances would permit.

Resolved, That we sustain all the spiritual authorities of the Church in righteousness.

A case of appeal was admitted, and a court of inquiry appointed, consisting of J. J. Kaster, F. J. Franklin, and Wm. Newton, who reported lack of time to investigate charges, whereupon they were continued.

Resolution passed February 28th, 1878 “That no person be considered a member of a branch in this district, except by vote of branch,” was rescinded.

Bro. J. J. Kaster was sustained as Bishop's Agent.

An election of officers resulted in a choice of F. J. Franklin, president, and F. G. Pitt, clerk.

Prayer meeting Sunday morning, 9:30, in charge of F. J. Franklin, and H. Faulk. Preaching at 11 o'clock by A. H. Smith. Sacrament at 3 p. m., in charge of brethren Newton and Foss. Preaching in the evening by Bro. Scarcliff.

A communication was read from Elder C. E. Malstrom, from Springville; and W. W. Huchins, and H. N. Hansen, from Beaver, reported their labors in the ministry. Elder Wm. Gibson, H. Mariot, John Grimet, Thomas Burt, Thatcher Hallet, E. Barrows and Joseph Luff, reported in person; also Priest Joseph Mariot.

Resolved, That Pres. Luff appoint the Elders who shall preach during conference.

Elder Gibson was appointed to preach at half-past seven in the evening.

April 7th, 2 p m.—Wm. P. Smith reported in person.

Bro. Joseph Luff was elected district president.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Elder Gibson for his services in the past.

Bro. Hansen moved that the Elders in the district labor under the direction of the district president, as circumstances will permit. Adopted.

Elder Hansen was appointed to preach at 7:30, and J. Grimet and E. Barrows at 10 a. m., on Sunday, 8th, and Elder Luff in the evening.

A vote was taken to sustain the Elders in this mission and the general authorities of the Reorganized Church, after which

It was resolved that the conference adjourn to meet at this place, on October 6th, 1883, at 10 a. m.

Miscellaneous.

PITTSBURG DISTRICT.

The Pittsburg conference will convene at Lampsville, Ohio, September 1st and 2d, commencing at 1:30 p. m. Those coming from the East on B. & O. R. JOSEPH SMITH - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, 25th August, 1883.

THE following is from a discourse delivered by Pres. John Taylor, of the Utah Mormon Church, at Manti, Utah, May 19th, 1883, as published in the Deseret News of June 12th:

There was a very painful circumstance occurred in my office a day or two ago. A certain man had apostatized—indeed, he had been an apostate a number of years; he had two wives, both of whom applied to me to be divorced from their husband. I asked them why they desired to be divorced, and they answered that their husband had apostatized from the church, and to all appearance would remain in that condition. The husband expressed his sorrow at having to part with his wives, and said he could not help his faith. I told him I did not wish to interfere with his faith, nor the religious views of any man; but that I would much rather see him a believer than a disbeliever. But I explained to him the position that his wives occupied. Said I, when you married them you were a member of the church, in full fellowship; you believed in God and the order of his holy house. Yes, he said, that is so. I then said, Let me tell you another thing, I have heard Joseph Smith say, and I presume you have—he was an old member of the church—that in this world we may pass along comparatively unknown, but when we appear behind the veil, we shall have to pass by the angels and the Gods, and this can only be done by the righteous and the pure. He stated that he had heard the same thing. I said further, you are the head of this family, and as such you ought to take the lead; but can you lead your wives past the angels and the Gods? No, I said, you can not do it, for unless you change your course you will not be there; you have trifled with the things of God, until, as you now see, a serious crisis is commencing to overtake you. The result was, he and they parted by signing the divorce. He said in a feeling way: "I can not forget my wives, they are dear to me," and again excused himself on the ground that he could not help his faith. But he might have helped it if he had kept the commandments;

but having trifled with the things of God, the Holy Spirit gradually withdrew, at last leaving him to himself. I really felt sorry for the man, and he too felt the position keenly. In parting with him I took him by the hand and said to him, "You have put yourself in this position, and I can not help it." No, he said, you have treated me right. But, I continued, if the time ever comes that I can be of use to you in leading you back in the paths of life, I shall be happy to serve you. He thanked me, and left.

We have carefully read through the so-called revelation on Plural Marriage, with a view to discover whether it contained any provisions for divorce, as between persons married according to its provisions. There are in said revelation no details of procedure, as to how marriages under it are to be solemnized. The rule which obtained in the church from 1830 to 1844, provides that marriages should be celebrated in a public meeting, or at a feast provided for the occasion; and the formula is given. Is it not fair to presume that if the revelation be construed into an authority, mandatory or permissive, to marry more than one woman, that it was intended that such marriages should be celebrated in accordance with the Article on Marriage; and not in any secret manner, in the nature of an endowment. There is certainly nothing inconsistent in the thought that in the solemnizing of the marriage rites between an unmarried man and an unmarried woman, each of whom had a legal right to contract in matrimony, such rites would be properly celebrated in a public meeting, or in a feast. The fact that all subsequent marriages by which wives are pluralized to the same man, are performed in the recesses of an Endowment House, is in itself an argument against the claim made for the origin of the revelation. Furthermore, those marriages which are authorized by the revelation, are to be only those commanded, or permitted, through the direct gift of God, by revelation; and wives are to be given only to those who have attained to a certain priesthood, and have proved themselves to be faithful. How then could such a case as the one referred to by Mr. Taylor, above recited, have occurred. This man had not proved faithful. He had received from somebody two wives.

Were they given him by a Samuel, Nathan, or Joseph Smith? Brigham Young was "not a prophet, nor the son of a prophet," so he said of himself. "Heber C. Kimball was his prophet;" but this man could not have received them from Heber. If those wives had been sealed "according to this holy ordinance for eternity," where did John Taylor obtain the authority to break up that marriage, although requested to do so by the wives themselves?

This needs explanation. For if the revelation in the carrying out of the system provides for such fast and loose "marrying and giving in marriage," as the case cited by Mr. Taylor shows to exist, such enquirers as we are can see nothing better in it than is found in the divorce laws of the State of Indiana, which are reported to be very lax.

But if the revelation does not provide for divorces, and it is the foundation and sanction of the plural wife system as claimed now, whence does Mr. Taylor derive the right to say to such a husband, who says "I love my wives,"—"You go hence; you are unfit to hold these wives; I will give them to another?"

Is not the conclusion inevitable, that wives in the Young-Taylor domain are meritorious credit marks given by a priestly autocrat for faithful servitude judged by personal bias; or withheld as a punishment for inattention, or uncourtier-like conduct. It so seems to us. If this man was an honest apostate from earnest conviction, and did not choose to separate from his wives of his own will, he was as much entitled to them, their care and wifely duty, in Utah, as is any devotee to the faith of John Taylor, however devout such devotee may be; and John Taylor has no more right to utter a decree of separation between them than a Justice of the Peace has to decree divorce in the State of Iowa. What think ye of this?

DURING the year 1882 eighty thousand acres in Ireland which were brought under cultivation were allowed to fall back into bog, or waste lands. In the same year, 114,039 acres under tillage were turned into pasture land, and there was a decrease of 34,000 acres in the land under flax cultivation. Thousands of those forced to emigrate from the congested districts might have found profitable occupation on these acres that have thus gone to waste.

The foregoing from the Tribune as an editorial pointer, will help the most casual reader and thinker to one of the reasons for the distresses into which Ireland has fallen. The grants of land in feudal times, by which families were formed into privileged classes, many of them from factitious circumstances, or the caprice of a conquering tyrant, divided the real estate of the United Realm among a few hundred families, who rule their respective estates to the sole benefit of themselves and their family dependents, and with but little regard to their tenantry, who have inherited nothing but the right to delve or starve. To be permitted to live on the land, at the will of aristocratic landlords is all that thousands can hope for; and when the whim to create parks, or huge pastures for game or fancy cattle takes a landed proprietor, even the poor hope to "live on the land" is denied to thousands. Surely the sins of the British Government cry aloud for redress in favor of the oppressed.

BRO. GEORGE A. BLAKESLEE spent ten days at Kirtland, settling for repairs on the Temple. He reports open doors all over that country. From August 1st to 7th seventy-three visitors to the Temple registered their names. Besides these a number of visitors neglected to register for lack of an invitation, no one being handy to show them about. Bro. Blakeslee had the stone steps relaid, they having settled away from the doors and become somewhat separated from each other; and had stone protectors put at the corners of the building, all of which he states adds much to the appearance of the building. Bro. Blakeslee expresses the belief that there ought to be three good men kept at Kirtland and vicinity to answer the calls for labor in the region.

Bro. A. J. Hinkle, writes from Lamoni, reviewing the question of Masonry. He feels quite satisfied that the idea of getting the Saints into secret societies, the Masonic order included, was used by the enemy as a means to destroy the unity and prevent the success of the good cause. Bro. Hinkle holds strong and radical grounds on the subject which are no doubt shared by many of the elders.

Uncle W. B. Smith was at Dubuque on Sunday the 5th, and was to be at Clinton the 12th of August, and at Montrose, Iowa, September 1st and 2d.

Bro. F. P. Scarcliff was at St. Louis, en route to the field at last advices.

The work on the Saints' meeting house at Lamoni is rapidly progressing. The members of the Church of the branch and vicinity will soon be asked for further subscriptions to pay for lumber and carpenter work. Subscriptions in work will be received. There must be now no laggards, as the work must go forward. It is too late to recede. Besides this it is absolutely incompatible with the good faith we owe to the work to withhold our hands now. The Saints abroad are regarding us with anxiety on the subject.

Sr. Sarah Cramer and her daughter Edith, of Plano, Illinois, who have for the last month been visiting Lamoni, the guests of Bro. John Scott and family, left for Kewanee, and home, August 10th.

Sr. James Crick, of Plano, mother of Bro. Wm. Crick of the Herald Office force, arrived at Lamoni on the 8th, with her sons, John and David, on a visit to her son William.

Bro. Alexander H. Smith was at Kansas City, Missouri, for Sunday the 5th. He reports a good feeling existing there.

Four were baptized at Clinton, Iowa, on the 5th, by Elder H. C. Bronson, president of Kewanee, Illinois, district. He and Bro. M. T. Short were laboring together for a while; he returned home to attend a two days' meeting there, but left Bro. Short at Maquoketa, fighting the good fight. One was baptized at Plano, Illinois, on the 5th inst. Five were baptized north of Richmondville, Michigan, also on the 5th by Bro. J. J. Cornish, making twenty-one altogether at that place.

Uncle Wm. B. Smith was at Clinton, Iowa, on the 12th of August. He left a decided impression at Dubuque, and was intending to tarry at Clinton for a while.

It is expected that dedication services will be held at Montrose, Lee county, Ia., September 1st and 2d, when the Saints' chapel will be set apart for the worship of God. The Saints at Montrose are entitled to much credit for the success of this enterprise.

Bro. Joshua Armstrong, wrote from Freeman, Nebraska, where he was trying to present the word. He had preached at Hooker, but owing to repairs being made in the school house, was stopped at that place. He proposed to go to Guide Rock in a few days.

Card from Bro. N. Stamm, from Pomeroy, Iowa, August 8th. He was to hold meeting on the 12th, in a school where he had held service once before. The people were attentive and respectful.

Sr. Mary E. McGuire, Allentown, New Jersey, sent a lot of clippings, for which our thanks are extended.

Bro. Blair wrote from Helena, Montana, on the way to Bozeman, August 9th. He expected to remain at Bozeman twenty days, thence to Willow Creek.

Bro. R. J. Anthony was at Magnolia, Alabama, August 5th to 9th, would be at Garland about the 15th, and will thence return home, according to arrangement when he went to the south-eastern field. Brn. Booker and Scogin accompanied him to Magnolia. Bro. Booker returned home on the 7th, and Bro. Scogin went to Swift's Camp to preach a funeral sermon on the 12th. Bro. Anthony stopped to preach a sermon over the remains of Sr. Levens, in the Baptist Church three miles south of Magnolia, on the same day.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. E. H. Gurley writing from Chatham, Ontario, August 8th, 1883, says:

In my article in Herald, page 484, 1st column, line 11, "to some land," should be "to same land," i. e., Assyria. Line 28, "seed of Abraham" was not intended to be in quotation marks, as I did intend to refer to Abram's succeeding generations. I should have written "children of Israel." I came here to-day. Expect to open up in the City Park to-morrow night. Shall be governed by interest, etc.

Bro. E. C. Brand writes from West Point, Cuming county, Nebraska, August 11th, 1883:

I came here last Saturday, have preached eight times, baptized two; there are more nearly ready.

Bro. Charles Derry wrote from Magnolia, August 6th:

My labors together with Bro. Mintun's, have been blest. There is a good prospect for the work on Elkhorn River and other places.

Bro. Henry Grim writes from Calthorpe, Texas, August 6th:

I have been trying to preach to people when I could get them together. A great many say that I belong to a church that believes in polygamy. I offer them my home, which is eighty acres of land, and every thing that I possess, if they will prove such charge. There are some hard cases here. I fear none of them. The good Spirit of the Master has been with me while I have been trying to sow the seed, the good word of God. I have found great joy in trying to do my duty before the world, and before God, in presenting the truth, as it is in Christ Jesus. None have come to the truth yet. I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ.

Bro. S. J. Madden wrote from Lorah, Cass county, Iowa, August 12th.

On the 7th of this month we had a cyclone, and the most terrific hail and rain storm at the same time that I ever saw. The crops are destroyed and some stock killed; one man and woman killed and others hurt. Bro. George

Green says he has lost about $1,500 dollars worth in the storm, and I have lost about $400. I have nothing left but my team and family, but for their safety I thank God. I will be compelled to move from here to where I can find work.

Bro. Joseph Luff wrote from Springville, Utah, August 11th:

Had the M. E. Church in Beaver; full house; splendid interest; glorious liberty, especially on that subject—Mystery, Secret Chambers, &c. I never was more blessed, nor ever was a congregation more attentive and appreciative of my preaching.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Q.—When it is plainly evident that an Elder is teaching a doctrine absolutely contrary to that set forth in the Bible, Book of Mormon and Book of Covenants, and endorsed as the accepted doctrines of the Church; is it proper to sustain him in a leading position of public trust?

A.—No, not if such doctrine is taught as the faith of the Church; but if it is expressed as the opinion of the Elder, given in the absence of testimony, or research on the subject. In the latter case he may because of his worth in a general sense be sustained.

Q.—Is Tullidge's "Life of the Prophet," accepted and endorsed as sufficiently reliable in historical fact and doctrine, to be used as a standard text book in any and every particular by the Church and its representatives?

A.—A portion of the Quorum of the Twelve, perhaps the majority, do not endorse the history named; as they stated at the last April Conference. No claim is made for it by any one as reliable in all particulars. It is a history written by an ardent admirer of the prophet; from sources of information open to him; and is perhaps correct so far as the information was correct. It was published first as the individual venture of Messrs. Tullidge and Crandall, the men who wrote and compiled it, and was purchased by the Board of Publication, revised and reissued by them in pursuance of a resolution of conference authorizing them to furnish a history of the Church. Personally we believe it to contain much that is good and valuable; but think it quite probable that there may be errors of style, and possibly of statement in it. It is not complete, or perfect; and there are not many histories that are. It is however the best the Church has of its kind; and will be replaced in time by one more comprehensive in reach and detail, and in style less objectionable to many of the elders, who desire to use history. Bro. Jason W. Briggs has been authorized to write a history of the Reorganization, which, when it is completed will probably be more acceptable; as his acquaintance with the events connected with the rise and progress of the movement more amply qualify him for the work.

Correspondence.

SOUTH RAWDON, Hants Co., N. S.,
August 8th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—July 6th, I went to Riverside, got the school house to preach in, and held meetings there and in Summerville until Sunday evening, 15th, to good sized and attentive congregations. On Monday we crossed the Avon river to Hantsport, and stayed with my step-mother, Emma nursing her until Saturday 28th, when she died, and on Monday morning we buried her alongside of father's grave, near two little graves marked Jennie and Josie, daughters of Joseph and Emma Burton, all to rest until the resurrection morn. Quiet, peaceful and calm seems the "city of the dead." The next morning we left the old home again, and the three children, (stepsisters, one, the eldest, married), and back to our work again. The farmers of Riverside country were very busy haying, so we concluded to leave them alone for a while. So with many requests to come back and preach some more, we left, having during our stay been very kindly entertained by Mr. Joseph Fielden. May God bless him and his companion for their kindness to two pilgrims who had wandered their way. The next day we arrived here, visited during the week, and found that the Saints had started a Sunday School. At 3 p. m., Sunday, I met with them; there were fourteen or fifteen scholars, two teachers, Bro. Alfred Wood chosen acting superintendent. I am much pleased with the thought that the Saints here are workers, and do not miss any opportunity of letting their light shine. May it continue to shine brighter and brighter unto the perfect day. The Saints of Delhaven are growing stronger as they continue the fight of faith, and with their armor bright are still conquerors. Sister Sophia Sanford was taken quite sick, splitting blood and heart disease, the same as Bro. G. N. Davison, her brother, died with. Her husband sent for the doctor, who, when he came, said it was too late. No power could save her life. Then the neighbors who had been so unneighborly since she had joined the Church, came in with offers of help, and great professions of christian love; but Sophia had sent for the Elders, and Bro. Holmes J. Davison went Saturday evening and administered to her. On Sunday she was better. He again administered to her, and Monday she got up, and was soon able to go about the house again. But what a change in the neighbors. They are angry at the doctor for deceiving them (?) and they say it was not old Joe Burton or Holmes Davison that healed Sophia, but the Lord did it. We willingly and gladly said amen to that. No more great professions of christian love from them, but evidence of hatred. No wonder there is an Ingersoll in the land.

Bro. Robert Newcomb is steadily and surely "sowing the seed by the wayside," to the men of the shipyard where he is foreman, and his wife, sister Tamzie, among her acquaintances quietly by the fireside; for the people are too pious to go to a meeting where one of these "Mormons" preach. But there, here, and in Hantsport, prejudice is giving way, and I expect when Bro. Joseph Lakeman visits us in the Fall, to hear him sound the gospel call in Churchill's Hall at Hantsport. We have many friends there. We expect to move out next week towards Truro, Parsborough and Cape Breton. The "Christians" where I have been seem to be in a strange situation. They have lost the spirit of worship, and are living only by form and a strange, earnest, eager apathy, or listlessness is with them, like the calm which precedes a hurricane at sea, when the ocean moans, and the flits of wind sigh and whistle, and the clouds gather heavy blackness, which all produces an earnest, eager, quiet suspense in the minds of all the mariners, especially the master. So it seems to me is the condition of the people here. Our faith seems to stun them, and while many who hear are willing to accept it as true, yet only a few are willing to awake out of their lethargy and obey. They are waiting and hoping for something, they know not what, neither can they define it. It is certain that the prediction made in General Conference September 22d, 1874, has its fulfillment in this land to-day. It was this: "Heresy is rife in all religious societies in the United States, and the spirit of anti-Christ will soon make such a scene of dismay and consternation among them, as has never been known since Christianity was first preached." I have never known of such a time as at present. The harvest so great, and laborers so few. The earth seems to groan, desiring to be freed from the tread of the workers of iniquity, apostates and hypocrites of all kinds. But the Lord of the harvest is true, and to each faithful laborer, whether at home or abroad, the welcome will be given, "Enter, no power can keep you out, and they that remain and are faithful, shall be changed with power and great glory." Who are they whom the "flaming swords" will bar out? O God, give me power to be faithful to the end, that I may be permitted to enter.

July 31st there was quite a hail storm here, in some places thick enough to be gathered off the ground, and in one place beat about one sixth of the growing oats off the stalks.

Yours in the gospel,

JOSEPH F. BURTON.

WASHINGTON, D. C.,
August 2d, 1883.

Dear Herald:—On the night of July 31st, I dreamed the following: I thought I stood with a printed sheet, about the size of the Saints' Advocate, in my right hand. The paper was beautiful and white, while the print was black, and very handsome, and stood out bold and distinct; and as I stood thinking how handsome, clean and beautiful, a voice to the right of me said, "Does your record in heaven stand as clear as that?" The question startled me, and instantly the thought occurred to me, If this worldly sheet is so beautiful and white, what ought my record to be in heaven.

Whether this dream has a spiritual significance, or not, I can not tell; but leave the readers of the Herald to judge for themselves. I think the question applicable to us all, and presents food for serious thought and reflection. May God bless us all, is the prayer of your humble brother,

WM. L. MILLER.

PLAINVILLE, Mass., August 1st, 1883.

Bro. Joseph.—I attended the Northern Indiana conference, spending three weeks with the Saints at Clear Lake and Coldwater, Michigan. In all these associations I have been blessed and comforted as I am in no other place or with any other people. Other associations may be questioned, but the gospel tie is clearly of divine origin. Was with the Pittsburg Saints three Sundays, and can assure you that they made it very hard for me to say good bye to them, by their unflinching courtesy and kindness. God has a people in Pittsburg. May he bless them always is my prayer. The Brooklyn Saints have thought best to give up their hall for reasons which are good, but have not abandoned the faith by any means; but hold meetings regularly and are at peace one with another, and enjoying the great blessings of the spirit of God. Was with the Saints two Sundays at Providence. The Saints at this place have a neat chapel. Their president, Bro. Chas. Coombs, with others, deserves credit and appreciation for their efforts and sacrifices for the cause of God in this country. Have preached at this place, Cumberland, Hebron, and once in Attleboro, with excellent liberty on most occasions, and have abundantly proved God's ability and willingness to stand by and aid, by the presence of the Comforter, his servants in the presentation of the gospel of his son. I testify that it is a success to trust in God and his word, as revealed in the revelations and commandments given in our day. "Study to show thyself approved," &c., is fully as necessary to successful ministry as in Paul's and Timothy's time. But this study should be had outside the day or hour of preaching. I expect to be in Boston next Sunday, and Dennisport the Sunday following, visiting Plymouth also. There are many calls that must remain unfilled because of lack of Elders who can go, and some perhaps who wont go. Am glad the Bishop is coming east. I hope he will not come alone. Brn. Gilbert and Sheehy are in Maine. The calls are many, laborers few.

Yours in defense of the truth,

M. H. BOND.

PLANO, Illinois,

August 14th, 1883.

Dear Saints.—We continue to have good meetings here in Plano. Last Sunday morning Bro. Whiteaker of North Freedom, Wisconsin, who is now residing here, assisted by Bro. Vickery, preached the good word, and the Saints were exhorted to lay aside every thing that tends to hinder them in their spiritual progress, and to run with patience the race set before us. Patience! glorious word! if we could only live up to its requirements, how happy and peaceful would be our life, even here, although we may have many trials, and meet with many misfortunes. Let us ever pray that we may be kept in the narrow way; and may we live, dear Saints, to see the time when our heart's desires shall be realized, and when all that have named Christ, and all the dear and precious ones, shall live in unity and love and peace, serving God with a pure heart.

We hope there will be an awakening among both old and young in the good cause everywhere. In it are centered all our hopes and all our happiness; and while as members of the Sunday School we are striving in our weak way to stand by the banner of Zion's Hopes, we trust that more of the parents will ere long find comfort and pleasure in being found leading and assisting and instructing the little ones in the nursery of the Church.

Your sister in the bonds of peace,

ABBIE AUGUSTA HORTON.

CHIPPEWA FALLS, August 9th, 1883.

Dear Herald.—I welcome the Herald, which I am pleased to see is willing to give each one's views without partiality, for each other's perusal, instruction, comfort or criticism, if done in a right spirit. Should I at any time write anything not in harmony with the spirit of the gospel, I hope some one will point out the error; thereby I may learn something, and try to do better next time.

In order that we may not be mistaken in regard to the power of the devil and his works, and charge him with something that we will be made accountable for, would it not be well for us to look into the Scriptures and see who he (the devil) is, and the nature of his power. Was he not once an angel of light, or an organized spirit in the spirit world, with an agency or will like unto us; and did he not fall from light to darkness through his rebellion, or using that agency or will, in opposition to the will of him who gave it. Now did he obtain an increase of power, or dominion, through or by his rebellion; or rather did he not forfeit and lose the privilege of obtaining a body and progressing, consequently diminishing his power, and awaits a still greater loss of power in the great, final judgment. As things on earth are a similitude of things in heaven, we must have acquired understanding and knowledge, little by little, through experience, as we do here; and no doubt made many blunders, and although not enough to debar us from progression, I believe we formed our own destiny in this life, by the use of the agency given to us there; hence predestination with its bounds and conditions. But that gives the devil no legitimate power over us here; but we have legitimate power over, or in advance of him. The body we inhabit is given to us as a reward, and proof that God approves of us, (notwithstanding we may have done some wrong), and by which to wield an increase of power, and work out our perfection by good works and words. But the devil has no body by which to do any physical work; hence we can wield a power that he is destitute of; hence he is always ready to influence man to use the body God has given him by which to become perfect, to do wrong. But if we, with the agency, or will, given to and invested in us, with this physical body do lie, steal, gamble, take a pistol and murder our fellow man, or commit any other sin, whether by our own choice, or the influence or request of the devil, then it is we that have done it, with the agency given to us, by wielding the power or using the body, our hands, feet or tongue, for evil instead of good; and not the devil, or the power of the devil. He is only responsible for the influence he may have used, and not for the deed, and we are the ones that will have to suffer the penalty, or be rewarded according to the deeds done in the body, whether they be good or bad. If all men would wield the power God has given to them for good, for God and his kingdom, we would find out that the power of the devil is very limited.

Yours for the truth,

RICHARD PREATOR.

Bro. Joseph.—I thank God, through our Lord Jesus Christ, that he has called me out of nature's darkness into the marvelous light of his gospel, and though I have felt as though the billows would at times overpower me, I have cried unto God, and he has delivered me; and though friends forsake and foes do rail, I know God's Spirit leads my every step into his ways; and though my pen may never more be used to write unto you, I give here my testimony unto the world, that I know this work is of God, and that I have been called to go forth and proclaim it unto his people. I therefore pray that God will bless his Church, down from you, Bro. Joseph, whom He has called to preside over it, to the least in His Church, which He has established upon the earth, never more to be taken from it. Hoping and trusting for your prayers on the behalf of the Saints in this portion of God's vineyard, not forgetting your humble servant, who is the least worthy to have been called to administer therein. To remain steadfast unto the end, is the heartfelt prayer of your brother in the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ,

WM. KENDRICK.

DECKERVILLE, Michigan,

August 7th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—I baptized five more last Sunday in the new place north of Richmondville. There have been twenty-one baptized up there since I commenced to preach there. We have commenced the church. Have a splendid stone and grout foundation. We organized a branch over the river west of Carsonville, two weeks ago, and ordained one Priest. Next Sunday I will be in Huron City, the next county north of Sanilac, to open up. There has been but little preaching in that county yet by us.

Yours,

J. J. CORNISH.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.,

Aug 6th, 1883.

Dear Brother.—I have just returned from my mission in York county, where I had the pleasure of preaching to some of the most intelligent people of that section, those they call the "big guns." I had the best attention this time I have ever had in that section since it was assigned to me, although it is a very bad season of the year to visit country places, as they are all busy with their harvesting. I remained there ten days, which I thought was long enough this time. Preached twelve times, three of which was in their sectarian strong hold, a place called Zion, where I never could get permission to preach before, as they said I was near enough. The people then had said that we were "polygamous Mormons," and that the first time I came there again, they would mob me, and run me off; but when I came among them they were as silent as midnight. The first time I preached at Zion (as they call it), which was on a Sunday afternoon, I drew a strong line between our Church and the Utah Church. I then spoke to them on the government of the Church, and our faith, and that we were not connected with the polygamous church in Utah. At 8 o'clock a large crowd assembled before the school-house was lighted. I preached on the first principles of the gospel, and after I was done, I put to vote whether they wished to hear me again, and it was unanimous in my favor; so I preached there again on the following Thursday evening, to a good house. I have agreed to go back in October, when I expect to baptize some that are convinced.

Beoved Saints:—As I read the Herald and meditate on the gospel of the Son of God, my heart is filled with inexpressible joy, and often goes out to God in silent prayer for those who have not as yet been made to taste of the good things of God. Especially do I beseech God in behalf of my companion, who as yet is not one with us; but who, I sometimes think, is very near the kingdom; at other times feel quite discouraged, but knowing that he is a prayer hearing and a prayer answering God, I will try to wait his time when he may see fit to bestow more light upon his darkened mind. I desire the prayers of the faithful in his behalf, that he may yet learn, and that ere long, to walk in wisdom's ways. Praying God to bless the honest in heart every where, and to bring them from darkness into light.

I remain a sister in Christ,

SARAH J. ROSS.

SOUTH RAWDON, N. S.

Dear Herald:—I hope your readers will not think it amiss for me to say a few words about tithing. It is a subject that I have always been interested in, and I have read with interest all that has been written to the Saints on that subject; but never could find among all the writings any that gave me a clear understanding of the law, and at the same time satisfied my conscience, until I read Bishop E. L. Kelley's sermon on Tithing, and from that on there seems to be no trouble to understand what the law requires. I have looked sharp to see if there were any exceptions made, but I find none. Consequently I do not feel myself exempt, even though I am a traveling Elder's wife, and a long way from home. It is true I have one child supported by the church fund, but is that any reason why I should not keep the law? I want to do what the Lord requires of me in this case; for I believe the law pertaining to salvation is an individual affair, and that we ourselves may not expect to be freed from the law, through the acts or position of another; or in other words, that I may not make a mistake in trusting to my husband's being a missionary to clear me from keeping the law. If I have a business whereby I can defray my own expenses, (although not sufficient to keep my family), is it not my privilege and duty, as the Lord has prospered me in that business, so to give? And if so, may I not receive the benefits of keeping the law, the same as another? I think so, and willingly act upon it.

SISTER EMMA.

Bro. Joseph:—I believe you have the "Problem of Life" by A. Wilford Hall, for sale at the Office. I would like to say to the brethren and sisters, that it is the grandest work of the age except those written by the dictation of the Spirit. Indeed it is a question whether a man could give utterance to such glorious thoughts concerning God's personality, and the doctrine of immortality, unless aided by the Holy Spirit.

Every family should possess it, and every Elder particularly, and they would learn from the greatest scientist of the day, that the theories of Darwin, Huxley, Helmholtze and others on "evolution," are veriest chaff—and are "Science falsely so called" merely "vain philosophy." His "Microcosm," a monthly magazine published at 23 Park Row, N. Y., is worth a hundred times its price (one dollar per annum) to the ministry of our Church. The harmony that Mr. Hall shows, in so many forms between true, rational Science, and the teachings of the Bible is simply beautiful, and for one my faith in the grand old book is strengthened greatly by perusing his works. I believe it to be my duty, and that I am benefitting my brethren by a hearty endorsement of these works.

Fraternally,

T. W. SMITH.

DUBUQUE, IOWA,

August 6th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Bro. M. T. Short was here about two weeks, and did considerable preaching. He obtained a new opening in East Dubuque, and I am keeping up meetings there. Bro. W. B. Smith came here last week and has been laboring in word and doctrine, and has awakened quite an interest in the minds of some of the people here, which I think will result in good. We all feel strengthened and encouraged by his testimony in regard to the rise of the Church.

Yours in bonds,

C. A. HALL.

DUBUQUE, IOWA, Aug. 6th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I have made good my promise, named in a previous letter, in regard to an article published in the Dubuque Daily Times, an essay written by a lady, by name Mrs. Collier, and read before a literary society of this city. On yesterday, Sunday, the churches of this place having been shut against the hearing of our faith, Bro. C. A. Hall having procured a permit of the mayor of the city to speak in the park, we repaired as per appointment, meeting having been advertised in the city papers, to the place of service at 4 p. m., and found a goodly number of citizens, ladies and gentlemen, gathered to hear what the brother of Joseph Smith had to say on the history and origin of the Book of Mormon. As it might be expected ventilation on this much calumniated question of Mormonism in regard to its history and origin, opened some of the windows, and let a little new light in on the subject. I read and replied to the 1st, 2d, 3d and 4th of the falsehoods written out by this Mrs. Collier on the history and character of Joseph Smith in early life, my personal experience being the touch stone of evidence. I was listened to with good attention for nearly one hour and a half; and in conclusion I gave out an invitation for the Editor of the Daily Tribune to send his reporter to my place of stopping, and that in case he would do this I would give him something to fill his paper with, besides publishing falsehoods for the purpose of injuring the character of an innocent and harmless people. This Spaulding story still helps to feed up the priestly cupidity of the age; and I do not know that it is any more ungentlemanly to reply to a lady that gives utterance to falsehood on Mormon history, than it would be for professed Christians to attempt to refute the scandal that the Right Reverend Bob. Ingersoll has conjured up against the character and mission of Jesus Christ in the world. Lies and falsehoods when told by persons living in fashionable society, have their effects among the more ignorant and credulous classes of people: and it is this ignorance of the doctrine believed and taught by the Latter Day Saints that causes the people to shut up their meeting houses from the hearing of our faith. And when these lies and falsehoods are handed out from the pulpit by the ministry who rule in this or any other city, especially for the purpose of closing up the eyes and ears of the people against hearing the truth, I believe in removing these nauseous chips of scandal, though they come from man or woman, by a fair and honest statement of facts; and by this means let the sin of their falsehoods rest upon the heads of those that manufacture them. After speaking to the crowd at the park, I spoke again in the evening at the house of Bro. C. A. Hall, to a listening audience not much over rated, for as there were but a few in, nevertheless I labored to feed them on the good word.

Dubuque is a nation of Catholics, and one traveling through the city, and looking at the Catholic Cathedrals and mammoth churches they have built, would imagine himself surrounded with some of the relics of the oriental nations, that had long since been lost in the double ruin of paganism long before the Christian era, and lost in forgetfulness to the memory of nations. Some other churches are numerous in this city, and they show their magnificent sectarian greatness by their front on the streets in the city. Daughters, not of Zion, but of the Mother Church. Such is the impression while noticing the character of religion in this city from my short acquaintance with these most pious Christians, who shut up chapels and meeting houses against Latter Day Saints. If Jesus Christ himself should come on a visit to these churches, he would have to be clothed with broad cloth, cap a pie, with a stove pipe hat, and a diploma from some sectarian missionary institute, or he would not be allowed to enter these pious sanctuaries, or permitted to sit upon one of the foot stools that these pious Pharisees put their feet upon, while they figure up sermons out of fables and death-head stories, to feed their flock upon, and call it gospel. One thousand tons of such trash, in a thousand churches like these, would not make one ounce of genuine gospel truth; and well might the Apostle say, that there should be false teachers in the last days, and that many should follow their pernicious ways, by reason of whom the way of truth should be evil spoken of, having itching ears, turned away from the truth, and being turned unto fables. In my visit here I have preached four discourses, found Bro. Hall and family good Saints, and zealous for the cause. Bro. Hall is a young man of good talents, and is, I think, treasuring up a store of knowledge which will qualify him for the work of the ministry, to which he has been ordained. Meetings are held at Bro. Hall's house every Sunday, and Sunday School. Bro. Hall also has appointments to fill at the city park. I was highly pleased and entertained in the Sunday School on yesterday by listening to the reading of the Scriptures, and the explanation that followed, all good. These Sunday Schools are a very great auxiliary to the growing prosperity of the Church of Latter Day Saints. No Saint that is able to do so, should be slow to add a V to help on in the good work. The Hope is wanted in all these Sunday Schools.

Accept of best wishes, and your uncle's prayers for prosperity in the good work.

WILLIAM B. SMITH.

BELLEVILLE, Illinois,
August 7th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I preached here Sunday and last night. Will leave for Kenton, Obine county, Tennessee, on the 9th inst. It was thought that a good long rest in Missouri would do me good. I have had it, but can not say that I am any stronger physically. While resting in Missouri, I endeavored to preach the word as opportunity offered, and my strength would admit.

Your brother in Christ,

FRANK P. SCARCLIFF.

KEWANEE, Illinois,
August 13th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Our Two Days' meetings closed last night; and a grand good time was enjoyed. Bro. J. R. Lambert was with us and preached some very instructive and edifying sermons. Bro. M. T. Short also added to the list of good works in presenting the word of life. Two were baptized yesterday morning. Every thing passed off pleasantly and harmoniously; and we think good was done. Bro. Short will continue to break the bread of life this evening in the Saints' Chapel. I shall start in a few days for Maroa, a Point in central Illinois, a place where Bro. Robinson informs me that through the influence of a sister in that place many are now believing. Bro. Robinson, out of the goodness of his heart and his love for the latter-day work, gave me the money to pay my expenses to the point of labor. Thus you see Bro. Joseph there are more ways than one of preaching the gospel.

H. C. BRONSON.

NEW PARK, Pennsylvania,
August 2d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Things are going well here now. Bro. Joseph A. Stewart was here with us a week, and he left us last Monday for Philadelphia. He was warmly received by all, and left the Saints having a good feeling towards him. He preached twelve times while here. The Spirit of Christ was with us all the time. They gave him a place to preach that we never could get before.

MONTRAVILLE O. MATTHEW.

DENNISPORT, Cape Cod, Mass.,
August 13th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Am still trying to spread the gospel truth. Truly yesterday I was blessed with great power and liberty in the presentation of the gospel as revealed to Paul, to Joseph, and to us, both day and in the evening. Had also good liberty in Boston. The great hindrance to the work is the carelessness of the Saints. This is a bad field in some respects, but Saints are kind, friends enough, and there is lots to do, and it's hard to get away from any place. More efficient laborers are wanted; men who can keep humble and not exalt themselves, and are led in their ministry by the mind of the Spirit. For such there are any amount of opportunities for doing good. Pray for me:

MYRON H. BOND.

MOUNT VERNON, Oregon,

July 22d, 1883

Bro. Joseph Smith:—The Saints of the Prairie City Branch, twelve in number, are generally well, though we all feel our spiritual weakness. I have been bothered with a catarrh in the head and throat, and as there are no Elders within over two hundred miles of me, and my hopes in the arm of flesh are vain, the Spirit tells me to ask yourself to pray for me, that I may be healed of my infirmities.

CHARLES E. ALDRICH.

Summary of News.

Aug 8th.—Tuesday 682 persons died from cholera in Egypt, including 70 at Cairo and 120 in the Province of Siout. Only four deaths were reported in the Province of Siout in the last return.

Advices from Ekaterinoslav, Russia, where the demonstrations against the Jews were made the 2d and 3d inst., state that three regiments of Cossacks had arrived for the preservation of order. Eighteen of the 100 persons arrested for participating in the demonstrations have already been placed on trial before a military tribunal. Many innocent persons who were wounded during the rioting have since died. It has transpired that no Jews were injured, as they escaped, having had timely warning of the attacks to be made upon them.

A gigantic system of piracy, practiced upon the Black Sea, has been discovered, which is said to have compromised several Russian officials. Vessels have frequently been stranded in fair weather, by collusion between the pilots and the pirates. Investigation is being made.

There are fresh outbreaks in Spain. A hastily-summoned Cabinet council has resolved to suspend the constitutional guarantees throughout the country and declare a state of siege wherever necessary.

The Spanish Republics of South America are still turbulent. Fresh risings are reported in Numancia.

Aug. 9th.—It is stated that the political situation in Spain is very grave. The Carlists are ready to begin a rebellion, and the Republicans are making many converts in the cities.

Four of the "Cork batch" of dynamite fiends were yesterday found guilty at Liverpool, Eng., and sentenced to penal servitude for life.

Forty-two Krupp cannon and other material of war from Russia have been landed in Bulgaria.

The English Government has decided to provide an additional £100,000 to aid Irish emigration. The money will be taken from the British Exchequer, instead of the church surplus fund.

A St. Petersburg dispatch says the coronation decree granting liberty of worship to dissenters only affects a million of the so-called registered dissenters. There are 14,000,000 still unrelieved of their religious disabilities.

There were 627 deaths from cholera in Egypt Wednesday, including seventy-eight at Cairo. Deaths from cholera in Egypt to date, 16,448, of which 6,366 died in Cairo.

Two fatal cases of cholera are reported to have occurred in England.

Wilton Junction, twelve miles from Muscatine, Iowa, is much agitated over an alarming fatality supposed at first to be cholera-infantum, but which, though mainly confined to children, has attacked grown persons. There were seven deaths yesterday, all children excepting one. Several grown persons are now seriously ill, including Dr. Sherwood, a prominent physician, and there are now, including children, nearly 100 persons down with the disease.

The sugar crop is short fully fifty per cent in St. Domingo. A serious monetary crisis prevails there.

The country is in a very agitated condition. Revolution is momentarily expected in Port-au-Prince. The Government is penniless, and business is at a stand still. Jacmel has pronounced in favor of the revolution and a pronunciamiento is expected at Cape Haytian. A great battle was fought before Jeremie, in which the Government troops were completely defeated. Seven of their Generals were taken and executed. The revolutionists are marching on Leogane. The Government is therefore raising the siege of Miragoane and covering Port-au-Prince, establishing its headquarters at Loagane.

A gigantic structure of very dark wood has been found packed in ice at the summit of the Mount Ararat of Scripture. The Turkish Commissioners believe that they have discovered Noah's Ark. It will be transported to America.

The Jews at Pesth, Hungary, are still persecuted by the populace. The principal witness against them in the recent trial there, has stated that his testimony given upon the trial is false.

The Zulu chief, Catewayo, is now reported to be alive.

Aug. 10th.—A riot against English doctors at Alexandria was quelled by troops. The old cry of "Death to Christians!" was repeated on the streets.

Twenty-two deaths from cholera occurred in Alexandria yesterday.

There were 795 deaths from cholera in Egypt Thursday, including thirty-nine at Cairo, 295 in the Province of Charkich, and 115 in the Province of Favoum.

Particulars of the revolt of the Spanish garrison at Seo de Urgel, in the province of Lerida, Spain, show that it was headed by a Lieutenant-Colonel. The outbreak occurred at 4 o'clock Thursday morning. The civil guard were not molested by the insurgents, and remained in their barracks. The rebels expelled the military Governor of the town. A large force of troops is marching to Seo de Urgel to repress the outbreak.

Bands of armed men have marched to the north, the object, it is presumed, being to concentrate at some selected point for a combined movement.

The sequestration by government authority of the warkingmen's paper at Vienna, Austria, has caused serious outbreaks among that class.

A fresh collision has occurred between the troops and populace at Ekaterinoslav, Russia. A hundred people were killed.

Six hundred French reinforcements are ordered to Tamatave, to enable the garrison to prevent the investment of the town on the land side.

At a meeting of people in favor of the deportation of the Irish poor in London, yesterday, "resolutions were provided" for the sending of 200,000 persons to Canada and other British colonies.

An explorer just returned from Itaska county, Minn., reports small pox making terrible work among the Indians in that county. He relates fearful stories of sufferings and privations. They are entirely without medical aid, and the terrible disease has full sway. Two small towns report eighty-five deaths.

Business failures the last seven days and the previous week were exactly the same in number, 182.

Six million dollars worth of opium have been smuggled into California in the last ten years.

The shooting of rebel sergeants in Spain has begun, and the insurrection is said to be partially quelled. Several Republican newspapers at Madrid have been suppressed, and some civilians arrested.

A riotous outbreak occurred day before yesterday in the Town of Chaves, Portugal, in connection with a local grievance. A peasant was killed and a Colonel wounded. Order has been restored.

Thirty-two persons died from cholera at Alexandria Saturday, including five Europeans. The deaths from cholera in the Egyptian provinces Friday are 926, including 235 in the Province of Dakalieh, 150 in the Province of Garbieh, and 235 in Ghizeh and Atfe. Saturday there were 789 deaths, including 30 in Cairo, 141 in Ghizeh and Atfe, and 295 in the Province of Siout. Hundreds of people have fled to Cairo from Alexandria. Cherif Pasha, President of the Egyptian Council of Ministers, arrived at Cairo from Alexandria Saturday. There have been no fresh cases of cholera among the British troops in Egypt, and their general health is excellent. Part of the apparent increase in the number of deaths from cholera in Upper Egypt is due to the official return, which contains arrears of death statistics.

There were twenty-nine deaths from yellow fever the last week at Havana, Cuba.

Elections were held throughout France yesterday for members of the Councils General. Seventy-one districts return Republicans and twenty-three Conservatives, and second ballots will be necessary in seventeen districts. The Republicans' net gain is two.

Reliable information concerning the recent earthquake in Ischia, an island twenty miles from Naples, Italy, reveals the following facts: The town of Cassamicciola, containing a resident population of over 4,000, and crowded with visitors, in fifteen or twenty seconds was converted into a heap of ruins, and over 4,000 persons buried in the debris. Only five houses were left standing. At Lacco Ameno, out of a population of 1,600, only five escaped. All the adjacent villages are in a like condition. The first shock was felt sometime between half past 9 and 10 o'clock, Saturday night. The first indication of the coming disturbance, according to the evidence of several survivors, was by a low, threatening, rumbling noise, which presently burst forth into one fearful roar, as though heavy artillery was being continuously fired in the immediate vicinity. In the next second the houses were rocked about like boats on a boisterous sea, and then were shaken into fragments. A few, but only a few, inmates reached the open air before the crash came. The vast majority lay buried in the ruins. For fifteen seconds the earth was tossed about with wild upheavels in all directions, many of the terror-stricken inhabitants flying shrieking to the shore, where they were overwhelmed in their flight and buried by the falling tenements or the tremendous quantities of debris flying about.

The violence of the shock once subsided, nothing could be heard but the shrieks of the wounded and terrified people. Every light had been extinguished. A dense cloud of dust, blinding and suffocating to the survivors, hung over the scene. To add to the horrors of the situation, houses half-shaken continued to fall upon the miserable people seeking for shelter from the general ruin.

Southwestern Iowa has thirty creameries, and yet the industry is but in its infancy. There are two principal reasons which specially fit this region for butter and cheese making—the abundance and cheapness of corn, grass, and other feed, as well as dairy labor, and its central position with reference to the commanding markets of the country. At the recent meeting of the Southwestern Iowa Creamery Association, Mr. R. P. Glincey, Secretary of the Elgin (Ill.) Board of Trade, recited the manner in which that organization secured a reputation for Elgin creamery products, and advised the Iowa dairymen to imitate its example—a suggestion which it seems is likely to be followed. It is unnecessary to add that the Elgin plan is to make good butter and cheese and spare no money in advertising the fact to the world.

The Board of Trade of the Southwestern Iowa Creamery Association, embracing sixteen counties in Southwestern Iowa, and twelve counties in Northwest Missouri, in which are situate about seventy-five creameries, was, at a meeting held at Villisca, Ia., Aug. 9th, located at Clarinda, Page county, Ia. The meeting and sale day of the board is Wednesday, beginning August 22d. Fifteen creameries are already represented on the board.

Crop reports from Minnesota and Dakota indicate that the grain yield will be greater than it has ever been before. In Southern Minnesota a splendid harvest is promised. The Wisconsin farmers are quite well satisfied with the prospects. The grain and corn crops of Nebraska are excellent. The reports from Michigan, Kansas, and Arkansas are also quite satisfactory.

FIRES, STORMS AND ACCIDENTS.

Aug. 8th.—Loss by fire at Baltimore, Md., over $100,000. Detroit, Mich., $20,000. Bangor, Me., 8,000 tons of ice and portion of a shipyard. Sharon, O., between $20,000 and $30,000. New York $50,000.

Last night a destructive hail-storm, accompanied by heavy rain and strong wind, destroyed the growing crops in the vicinity of Buck Creek Church and Lorah Station, in Carroll county, and Brayton, Audubon county, Iowa; also in Union, Massena Township, in Cass county. Near Brayton twenty-one head of cattle were killed by being stampeded. At Lorah nine freight-cars of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railroad were overturned and a grain house moved from its foundation. The total loss caused by the storm is over $100,000. Some of the fields of grain were insured in Des Moines company.

A water-spout and hail-storm passed through Sac county, Iowa, last night and destroyed all kinds of crops for five miles wide and forty long. The wind blew down one house, killing a woman and injuring her husband. Lightning burned up several barns. The hail is four feet deep in hollows at present.

A remarkably severe hail-storm of only a few minutes' duration occurred three miles north of Lincoln, Neb., this afternoon. The storm was local to a very small strip of territory, but the destruction wrought was almost complete. Hailstones fell the size of an egg, driving corn and other grain deeply into the ground. Nearly all vegetation was destroyed. Cattle, horses, and several individuals were injured. One man was badly cut about the head and had to call a physician. His companion saved himself from injury by placing a water-pail over his head. Nearly all those who were caught in the storm were more or less injured.

Thirteen people were drowned off Dover, Eng., yesterday. Two Norwegian barks collided and one sank, carrying down most of her crew.

Aug. 9th.—Loss by fire at Ottawa, Ont., $150,000. Danville, Va., $150,000. Vicksburg, Miss., $50,000. Ottawa, Ont., $100,000.

Further reports from the storm district in Western Iowa show that the first reports have underestimated the damage. It is estimated that in Cass county alone fully seventy-five farmers have lost all their crops and will be compelled to buy feed for their stock. The area covered by the storm was about 125 miles long and from two to five miles wide.

The severest storm ever known in that section struck Dodge City, Kansas, after midnight last night. The wind gauge at the signal office was blown down, but good judges estimate the velocity at ninety miles an hour. The roar of the tornado was deafening almost beyond belief. Owing to the permanent character of the buildings the damage was confined to the destruction of roofs, chimneys, stables, outhouses, and moving buildings from their foundations, but the losses will aggregate fully $10,000, divided among more than 200 individuals. The storm was accompanied by the grandest display of lightning ever witnessed there, it being one continuous sheet of angry flames. The rain was very heavy, and water stood over a foot deep on Front street.

Oshman was killed instantly and Shernibe will probably die.

A man was killed by the cars near Brighton, Michigan.

Aug. 10th.—Loss by fire at Midland, Ont., $100,000. New Holland, O., $12,000. Detroit, Mich., $30,000. Liverpool, England, $200,000.

A train was thrown from the track, and two men killed, near Massillon, Ohio. One man killed by falling under the wheels of a car, near Washington, Pa. Two trains collided near Wilksbarre, Pa., killing one man, injuring two others, and wrecking five cars and the caboose. An explosion of fire damp at Shenandoah, Pa., fatally injured two men. A steamer and schooner collided in Chesapeake bay, the latter sank and four lives were lost.

Aug. 12th.—Loss by fire at Vineyard Haven, Mass., yesterday, $190,000. One woman died from excitement, and all the stores but one in the village were burned down. Hotel property amounting to $1,000,000 destroyed at Atlanta, Ga. Loss by fire at Utica, N. Y., $100,000.

One hundred warehouses were destroyed by fire in Salonica, the principal town of Roumelia, Europe.

Aug. 13th.—Loss by fire, near Philadelphia, Penn., $75,000. Shelburne, N. S., $30,000. Atlantic City, N. J., $20,000. Near Springfield, Ill., one man was burned to death while sleeping in a barn.

Aug. 14th.—At Milwaukee, Wis., an unfinished hospital was burned. Loss by fire at Newcastle, N. B., $30,000.

A boy at Ames, and a man at Missouri Valley, Iowa, were killed. The former by attempting to board a moving train, and the latter while passing between two moving trains. Two trains collided at Cadet Station, Mo., wrecking both engines and several cars, killing one man and injuring four others, two of them perhaps fatally.

A car fell into a river in Cornwall, England, yesterday. Twelve men who went down with it perished instantly.

A cyclone swept through Chattanooga, Tenn., this afternoon. The Georgia and Alabama Great Southern Depots were unroofed. A large number of buildings were unroofed, and several blown down. Flying timber seriously injured J. H. Jenkins, going through a box car before it struck him. There were several other casualties. There was a heavy hail storm at the time, and some horses ran away. One man was killed and many injured. Only one telegraph wire out of this city remains intact. The telegraph business of the entire South is delayed here, and business is seriously interrupted.

Du Pin:—"Criticism is a kind of torch that lights and conducts us in the obscure tracts of antiquity, by making us able to distinguish truth from falsehood; history from fable; and antiquity from novelty. 'Tis by this means that in our times we have disengaged ourselves from an infinite number of very common errors, into which our fathers fell, for want of examining things by the rules of true criticism. For it is a surprising thing to consider how many spurious books we find in antiquity; nay, even in the first ages of the church."

L. O. LITTLEFIELD'S SECOND LETTER.

To Joseph Smith, President of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Lamoni, Iowa:

SIR:—Being an attache of the Utah Journal I have had access to the manuscript of your reply to my "Open Letter" addressed to you and others of the leading men of the Church over which you preside, and which appeared in that paper dated April 27th, 1883; hence it is that this communication appears in the same issue of the Journal which contains your reply to my first letter.

The account of your conference in the Kirtland Temple which appeared in the New York Herald, together with such brief telegraphic references to it as were published in the Associated Press dispatches, were the sources of information I had concerning it, and the sentiments expressed by the speakers. Presuming that your associates in the leadership of the Reorganized Church, who spoke at that conference, echoed your views, I addressed my "Open Letter" to you and to them conjointly. You assert that:

The same hallowed Spirit pervaded the assembly last held in those sacred walls by these men and women of the Reorganized Church during the days from April 6th to 14th, that was manifested at the dedication service.

In the life of Joseph Smith the Prophet, as written by himself, we have an account of the occurrences that took place on the dedication of the Kirtland Temple. During your late conference in that building did angels manifest their presence and mingle with the congregation? Were the sacred ordinances of washing and anointing introduced among the various quorums of your church, and were they administered to the members of those quorums? Did anything occur like the following, which is recorded as having taken place at the dedication?

Brother G. A. Smith arose and began to prophesy when a noise was heard like a mighty rushing wind, which filled the Temple, and all the congregation simultaneously arose being moved upon by an invisible power; many began to speak in tongues and prophesy; others saw glorious visions; and I beheld the Temple was filled with angels, which fact I declared to the congregation. The people of the neighborhood came running together, (hearing an unusual sound within, and seeing a bright-light like a pillar of fire resting upon the Temple), and were astonished at what was transpiring.

Did anything occur like what is described in the revelation which gives an account of the visit of the Savior, Moses and Elias, to the Prophet and Oliver Cowdery?

You declare that "No proof that Joseph Smith taught and practiced polygamy (publicly and privately) of an 'incontrovertible character,' was ever presented to you," and that "No woman ever testified to you, in Salt Lake City, or anywhere else, that she was wife to Joseph Smith, your father, except Emma, your mother."

It is not possible that, during your sojourn in Salt Lake City, you could have continued ignorant of the universally accepted report that there were, in that city, a number of ladies of the highest respectability who claimed to have been the plural wives of your father. The report to this effect was very much more than a mere rumor, for coupled with it were the names of ladies who were prominent in society and church circles, and widely known throughout Utah; and though this report had been current for many years, no contradiction of it by either of the ladies whose names were coupled with it, had ever been made. On the contrary some or all of them had, in public and in private, repeatedly testified of its truth, and thousands of the inhabitants of Utah had heard and were familiar with their statements and testimonies in this regard. All this you must, from the very necessities of the case, have learned before or during your visit to Salt Lake City, and if it is true that none of these ladies waited upon you personally, and testified in your hearing and presence, that they were married to your father, their failure to do so is no excuse for your discredence of a report which had been so long current and uncontradicted by the parties most interested,—but on the contrary so often confirmed by them,—that it amounted to evidence of the strongest character. Had you entertained a sincere desire to bring forth what you claim is the truth respecting the alleged marital relations of your father with these ladies whose names report must have made you perfectly familiar with, even if you had no other means of knowing who they were, you would have called upon them with a view to obtaining from them an authentic denial of the statement that they were or claimed to have been your father's wives. Your assumed character as the vindicator of your father's name, which you alleged to have been clouded by the imputation that he was the man who first introduced the doctrine and practice of plural marriage, made such a course incumbent upon you.

But your whole line of conduct during your stay in Salt Lake City proved that this was exactly what you were afraid to do, and that you purposely and studiously avoided them and all other persons competent to bear you a testimony based on personal knowledge, that your father taught and practiced plural marriage. Had you begun and prosecuted an investigation into the truth of that report said concerning the marital relations and teachings of your father, you would have been confronted with overwhelming and incontrovertible proof that he both taught and practiced plural marriage. You would have been presented with the testimony of:—(1.) The men who read, heard, wrote and copied the revelation of July, 1843, on Celestial Marriage. (2.) The men and women to whom Joseph Smith personally taught this principle. (3.) The men who officiated when the ceremony of sealing plural wives was performed. (4.) The witnesses who were present on the various occasions when the sealing ceremony took place. (6.) Women of unimpeachable veracity and unblemished reputation state they were the wives (with all that that name implies) of Joseph Smith, or of other brethren to whom Joseph gave them.

You refer to persons who were prominent in the Church at Nauvoo, who are yet willing to make affidavit that they were ignorant that the Prophet Joseph Smith ever taught or practiced plural marriage, but you give no names of such persons. But I will give you the names of a few persons who are now living who have made or are willing to make affidavit that they personally know that the Prophet Joseph Smith did both teach and practice that principle, and to whom you can refer at any time.

Following are the names of women who were the wives of Joseph Smith the Prophet, who, among others, are still alive: Eliza R. Snow, Eliza Partridge, Emily Partridge and Lucy Walker. A man who sealed women to Joseph by the Prophet's direction and command, Joseph B. Noble. The man who copied the revelation before Emma Smith burned the original, Joseph C. Kingsbury. Men to whom Joseph taught the principle of Celestial Marriage, President John Taylor, Elder Lorenzo Snow, Elder Erastus Snow and a host of others. If you want truthful, reliable information as to whether or not your father taught and practiced plural marriage, you can have it without stint, by applying to these parties, who were all reputable citizens in Nauvoo and are so to-day in Utah.

In reply to your reference to what you term "Pres. John Taylor's public denial and condemnation of" polygamy at Boulogne-Sur-Mer in 1850, I will say that President Taylor could now, as truthfully and sincerely as he did at Boulogne in 1850, deny the charges then made against the Church, and condemn the offensive and depraved practices with which it was falsely accused. His words were:

We are accused here of polygamy and actions the most indelicate, obscene and disgusting, such as none but a corrupt and depraved heart could have contrived. These things are too outrageous to admit of belief; therefore, leaving the "Sisters of the white veil" and "black veil" and all the other "veils," with those gentlemen to dispose of, together with their authors, as they may think best, I shall content myself by reading our views of charity and marriage, etc.

The things with which the Church was then charged were utterly false and entirely opposed to its teachings and practices, and were as different from the principles of Celestial Marriage as virtuous wedlock is from adultery. You mention that "the distinction between Celestial Marriage (if such a thing existed at all) * * and the plural or polygamic marriage doctrine of Utah must be made." I do not recognize the distinction here made by you, nor do I see the necessity for it. Such a distinction may suit your purposes, but I have nothing to say on that matter. In my "Open Letter" I remarked:

In consequence of the prejudices of the Saints and the tide of persecution which he well knew he would have to encounter from the outside world, wherein his life would be endangered, he delayed as long as possible to make this principle known except to a few of the most faithful and humble of the Saints.

You term this remark a "very special plea," and in reply say:

It is a most contemptible charging of cowardice upon a man who, from his fifteenth year till he was finally butchered, had lived in constant and ever present danger, and had never shrunk from any duty imposed upon him through fear—shame!

His delay in making known the principle of plural marriage was not due to motives of cowardice, but was in obedience to the commands of God, and no fair construction of my words would impute cowardice to him. The Psalmist says: "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will show them his covenant;" and Paul refers to a man whom he knew, who "was caught up into Paradise and heard unspeakable words which it is not lawful for man to utter." There are certain things that a Prophet may know which he is not permitted to disclose to others; it is the secret of the Lord, and must only be made known when and to whom the Lord gives permission. When the Twelve Apostles were first sent to England, they were commanded not to preach the gathering to those whom they baptized, in consequence of there being no place for them to gather to, and it is asserted by some that they were also forbidden to teach the doctrines contained in the Vision. In the History of Joseph Smith, under date of October 5th, 1843, we find the following:

Gave instructions to try those persons who were preaching, teaching or practicing the doctrine of plurality of wives; for according to the law I hold the keys of this power in the last days; for there is never but one on earth at a time on whom the power and its keys are conferred; and I have constantly said that no man shall have but one wife at a time unless the Lord directs otherwise.

From the foregoing it is evident that the principle of plurality of wives was more or less understood in the Church at that time. Joseph said he "held the keys of this power." What power? The power to give men a plurality of wives, which is plainly shown by the words with which the sentence closes: "I have constantly said that no man shall have but one wife at a time unless the Lord directs otherwise." Here provision is made for the Lord directing otherwise, which he did in the case of Joseph himself, and many of his brethren. You have been hunting for ignorance and have found it. There is never any difficulty in doing that. Millions of people can always be found who are entirely ignorant of any matter under consideration, whatever it may be. But I am prepared to supply you with the affidavits of scores of persons who resided in Nauvoo, who were not ignorant of this principle.

I am aware of the stress placed by you and your followers upon the words of the Prophet Jacob, wherein he reproves the Nephites for their wickedness in the sexual relations. The Nephites of the days of Jacob not only practiced polygamy without the command or sanction of heaven, but also in direct disobedience to the law given of God to their father Lehi; and they endeavored to excuse their disobedience, the ill treatment of their wives, and their whoredoms by referring to the Scriptures which recorded the doings of David and Solomon in these matters. This conduct, in all its details, was an abomination in the sight of the Lord. But the denunciations of the Prophet Jacob in no wise affect Latter Day Saints who practise the principle by divine command; who do not commit whoredoms, and who do not seek to justify their disobedience to any law of heaven by citing the actions of other men, either ancient or modern. The Lord has given that command which he foreshadowed by the mouth of Jacob on this same occasion: "For if I will, saith the Lord of Hosts, raise up seed unto me, I will command my people; otherwise they shall hearken unto these things;" and with all true Latter Day Saints, that is the end of all controversy. I quote from your letter:

But suppose that it be granted that Joseph Smith did secretly (and it is not now claimed that it was publicly declared) teach and practice "celestial marriage," or to make it as broad as you might wish it "plural marriage," by virtue of what rule of Church procedure, what revelation properly authenticated and received by the Church did he do so? If it was secretly taught to a few and practiced by him and them, it was so done contrary to the laws of God then governing the Church, which were alleged to be in accordance with the revelations of Jesus Christ through Joseph Smith; and they and he, if teaching and doing contrary to those laws privily, were transgressors against God's will, as expressed by Him to His Church.

The law of the Church is that if God can reveal one thing He can reveal another; and His Saints are required to live by every word that proceeds out of His mouth. If the Prophet went against Church procedure by receiving the revelations of God and acting upon them, then the Church shuts the mouth of God by such an arrangement; or Joseph by his course, became a fallen Prophet. If the latter, even from your standpoint, where did you get your authority? On the other hand, if Joseph did receive these revelations from God, then the Church to which the Latter Day Saints in Utah belong, is the true Church. You may accept which ever horn of the dilemma you choose. You say:

Another revelation through the same source [that through which the Book of Mormon came] reveals the will of God to be that "one man should have one wife," and one only, unless death intervene, when he is at liberty to marry again; and this "that the earth might answer the end of its creation, and be filled with the measure of man."

The revelation here quoted by you was given to certain brethren when they were sent to a sect who did not believe in marriage, as shown by the first verse:

Hearken unto my word, my servants Sidney, Parley, and Lemon, for behold, verily I say unto you, that I give unto you a commandment that you shall go and preach my gospel which ye have received, even as ye have received it, unto the Shakers.

The portion of this revelation, quoted by you, in its completeness, is as follows:

And again, I say unto you, that whoso forbiddeth to marry is not ordained of God, for marriage is ordained of God unto man; wherefore it is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh, and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation, and that it might be filled with the measure of man according to his creation before the world was made.

The "one only" is an interpolation of yours. What a pity it is that the Lord did not take the same view of the matter that you do, and reveal that a man should have but one wife, or one wife only.

"And I gave thee thy master's house, and thy master's wives into thy bosom, and gave thee the house of Israel and of Judah; and if that had been too little, I would moreover have given unto thee such and such things."—2 Sam. XII: 8.

From the foregoing is it not evident that to assert that plural marriage is a sin, is to say that God is a sinner? Terrible as this assertion may seem there is no way of getting out of the dilemma except by falsehood or subterfuge. The Prophet Nathan, the inspired servant of the Lord, bearing God's message to Israel's Shepherd King, and speaking in His holy name, says: "Verily thus saith the Lord * * * I gave unto thee thy master's house, and thy master's wives into thy bosom." Who gave David his master's wives into his bosom? "I, the Lord, Jehovah, the God of Israel." No one else. This is not a simple permission because of sinfulness, not a condescension to man's weakness, but a direct gift from God accompanied by no reproofs, no condemnation, no intimations that it is by sufferance. God gave the gift; I ask, can it possibly be a sin to accept God's gifts? If so, it may be a sin to accept of the conditions of the gospel, or the gift of eternal life. But God, by placing himself as the giver, not only permits but sanctions the practice of plural marriage; nay more, he encourages it, and it may be said, commands it; for in what position does a man place himself who refuses to receive the gifts of God? He subjects himself to all the evils of God's just displeasure, to the dangers of being left alone without Divine aid, to get along, in his weakness, as best he may, without these gifts. And to say that God by direct action, such as this, encourages a practice which is sinful, contains within it, to my mind, the essence of blasphemy. It does not help the matter to argue, as is sometimes done, that it was a practice in Bible lands and surrounding nations in those days for the incoming ruler to take to his bosom the wives of his predecessor. Who ever heard of God actively encouraging a wrong because it was popular or was a national custom? It was a custom in those days to cause children to pass through the fire to Moloch. Did God ever give any man's children for such a sacrifice? It was the custom to worship various gods with many licentious rites. Did God ever provide the women for these orgies? Were the practice of taking wives under proper conditions, (such as David observed, except in the one pitiable case of Bethsheba) the foul system that many assert, God would have been as justified in providing victims for these excesses, as wives for His servants. But it was not, and the very fact that the Lord gave His active co-operation in providing David with wives proves that it was not; or it proves the other thing, which is impossible, that the God of Israel aided and abetted, directed and encouraged sin, by providing the sinner with the direct means of sinning, and further, through His prophet, He acknowledges the part He had taken. There is no escape except by stultification from the conclusion that through the law under which David received his wives from God he was justified; and more than this, we have no record in the Bible that God ever condemned him, but have this not so very indirect approval, that He would not have been justified in refusing to take these women. It was only David's excesses, when he went outside God's law, that met the Divine condemnation. To say that a man can commit adultery by accepting a woman whom God has given him to wife, is to nullify the rights of the Creator. What right have we to condemn that which God approves? From what source do we obtain our authority to sit in judgment on Divinity? Either God has or He has not the right to give a man wives; if he has not then He is not God; for His powers are limited and His rights are circumscribed. But He is God, and as he is God he has the right—the right of the Father of all men and women—to give and unite in wedlock His sons and daughters by the eternal laws to which He has subjected his children, and no one has a right to prescribe the limits of His actions in this direction, or to say He shall give but one woman to one man.

It may be argued that these things are not God's doings but man's. But here in the case of David the Divine One assumes the undivided responsibility. How had he given David these wives? Through Nathan and others of His servants, on exactly the same principle, and by the same unchanging law that God's servants receive wives now. Perhaps David had asked for these wives. Very possibly he may have done so, but that does not alter the principle involved. If a son asks a father for any good thing, and the father ungrudgingly and willingly gives it, it is just as much a gift as though it were given unasked, and as far as God is concerned more in accordance with the Divine economy towards man, which causes the Lord to be pleased when his children ask for what they righteously desire; for we are told that the Lord loves to be entreated of his children.

In the endeavor to make it appear that the Nauvoo Temple never subserved the purposes contemplated by the commandment given to erect it, you say:

The Temple at Nauvoo, though begun at the direction of God, was not finished in any essential particular excepting the baptismal font, according to the pattern given; and whoever presumes to congratulate himself upon any endowment bestowed in that building, must do so with the fact of its unfinished character before his eyes, and with the remembrance that there was no promise to its builders unless it was completed within a limited time. This time expired and the building remained unfinished, was polluted, and now not one stone of superstructure or foundation remains as placed by the builders.

To the effect that the Nauvoo Temple "was not finished in any essential particular except the baptismal font," "that there was no promise to its builders unless it was completed within a limited time," and that "this time expired and the building remained unfinished," I have only your simple, unsupported assertions. Hundreds, on the other hand, can testify that they received their blessings in that house, and that power accompanied those blessings. Yours is the sole, unsupported testimony of one against hundreds, who by their personal experience know of what they testify. Where did you get your information that the Nauvoo Temple was not accepted? Has the Lord ever revealed it to you? I know of no such revelation. Is it not written:

Verily, verily, I say unto you, that when I give a commandment unto any of the sons of men, to do a work unto my name, and those sons of men go with all their might, and with all they have, to perform that work, and cease not their diligence, and their enemies come upon them and hinder them from performing that work; behold, it behooveth me to require that work no more at the hands of those sons of men, but to accept their offerings.

Does not this cover the entire ground? Again, when you say that the Saints in Utah have not been commanded by the Lord to build the Temples which they have reared and are rearing to His name, do you forget the words of the revelation which says:

Therefore, verily I say unto you, that your anointings, and your washings, and your baptisms for the dead, and your solemn assemblies, and your memorials for your sacrifices, by the sons of Levi, and for your oracles in your most holy places, wherein you receive conversations, and your statutes and judgments; for the begining of the revelations and the foundations of Zion, and for the glory, honor and endowment of all her municipals, are ordained by the ordinances of my holy house which my people are always commanded to build unto my holy name.

On reading your alleged quotation from a discourse preached by the late Elder Orson Pratt, in the Seventeenth Ward meeting house, Salt Lake City, December 10th, 1876, I was convinced that you had attributed ideas and language to him that he never expressed nor used. The sentiments of the quotation which you allege was part of a discourse on that occasion are so contrary to the views upon the subject of temple building which he had often expressed in public and taught to the people as a portion of the gospel, that I was morally certain you either misunderstood him at the time, or was now, from some motive, misrepresenting him. You state that among others, President Joseph F. Smith was on the stand at the time, and as a complete refutation of your assertions as to what Elder Pratt said upon that occasion regarding the Temples that the Saints in Utah had built or were building, I present the following:

SALT LAKE CITY, U. T.,
May 23d, 1883.

Elder L. O. Littlefield:

DEAR BROTHER:—Relative to the supposed quotation by Joseph Smith, of Lamoni, Iowa, from a discourse delivered by the late Elder Orson Pratt in the Seventeenth Ward meeting house, Salt Lake City, December 10th, 1876, I have to say that as Joseph states, I was at that meeting, and I carefully listened to the remarks of the speaker, knowing at the time that Joseph was present, and would if possible, as is usual with him and his followers, take advantage of anything which might be said to the profit of himself and his cause as against Bro. Pratt and the cause which he represents; and I am thoroughly satisfied that Joseph either entirely misunderstood or has wilfully misconstrued the remarks of Elder Pratt on that occasion in regard to Temple building. No such language as Joseph here quotes was ever used by Elder Orson Pratt either at that meeting or at any other in my hearing. Of this I am positive, for it is so much at variance with the general views and oft repeated teachings of not only Bro. Pratt himself, but all the authorities of the Church with which I have been familiar from my youth up that if Bro. Pratt had made use of any such language it could not have escaped my attention, nor that of the congregation. Such an announcement by Bro. Pratt or by any member of the Council of the Apostles at that time or at any time since I can remember would not only have created a sensation and an excitement among the people, but would have been promptly met and denounced as opposed to the general faith.

I have taken the liberty of submitting the extract purporting to be a quotation from Elder Pratt's discourse on December 10th, 1876, to Bro. John Tingey, now the Bishop of the 17th Ward, also to David L. Davis, Edward W. Davis, James W. Burbidge, Sen., Lehi S. Tingey, Wm. C. Spence, S. E. Davis, Jemima Davis, Marinda N. Hyde, Sarah W. Davis, Edith A. Smith, Juliett Pratt and Lucy B. Smith who were at the meeting referred to, and they unhesitatingly deny, as per their statement which I enclose, that Bro. Pratt used any language on that occasion in their hearing conveying any such idea as therein expressed. Bro. Pratt's views on the subject of Temple building, his earnest labors in Temple ordinances both for the living and the dead, are too well known by the people of Utah to accept as correct such statements from him as those alleged by Joseph. To every Latter Day Saint in Utah familiar with Bro. Pratt's labors, discourses and oft repeated views upon this subject, who reads Joseph's alleged quotation, it will be painfully evident that his "wish was father to the thought" therein expressed on this subject. For instance see "Journal of Discourses," vol. 19, page 30, the dedication of the Logan Temple grounds by Elder O. Pratt. Also page 13, in a discourse by Elder Pratt, delivered May 20th, 1877, in which he says: "We are commanded to build Temples," etc. See also Bro. Pratt's foot note to the last paragraph of verse 39, sec. 124, "Doctrine and Covenants," (N. E.) namely "a standing commandment."

I positively deny that Bro. Pratt said on the 10th day of December, 1876, or at any other time in my hearing that "There has not yet been a Temple built which God has accepted since the Saints left the Ohio, nor will there be until a Temple is built in the land of Zion where God has designated." I deny that Elder Orson Pratt said on the 10th day of December, 1876, or at any other time in my hearing that, "The Temples that we are building in these valleys will not be the Temples of God, will not be accepted of Him, as they have not been commanded by Him to be built."

What Bro. Pratt did say on that occasion to the best of my recollection was to the following effect: That the Temple which we are building in Salt Lake City, was not the Temple on which we expected the cloud would rest, which cloud should be even the glory of the Lord and should fill the whole house—nor that in which the sons of Moses and of Aaron should offer an acceptable offering and sacrifice, nor that to which "the Lord whom we seek even the messenger of the covenant whom we delight in," should "suddenly come" to "sit as a refiner and purifier of silver" to purify the sons of Levi as gold and silver that they may offer an offering in righteousness." Nor did we expect these glorious events to transpire in any of the Temples which we were now building or would build in Utah, but that the Temples in which these promises should be fulfilled should yet be built in Jackson county, Mo., as it is written and promised by the Lord and that not all that were living in 1832 should pass away until that Temple should be built, etc., etc.

I do not see the consistency of Joseph attempting to give a verbatim quotation of Bro. Pratt's remarks as he has done. I carefully observed him during the whole discourse, and to my knowledge he did not make a note, but sat quietly and seemed to pay respectful attention all the while Bro. Pratt was speaking. His memoranda must therefore have been made from memory after he returned to his lodgings, and hence perhaps his error in ascribing to Bro. Pratt the language which he has done.

Respectfully,

JOSEPH F. SMITH.

Following is the denial of the parties named in President Joseph F. Smith's letter:

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, May 24th, 1883.

We, the undersigned, residents of the 17th Ward, Salt Lake City, were present at the meeting held on Dec. 10th, 1876, alluded to by Joseph Smith of Lamoni, Iowa, and heard the remarks of the late Elder Orson Pratt on that occasion and we solemnly affirm that to the best of our recollection Bro. Pratt made no such remarks, and expressed no such sentiments in relation to Temple building as those Mr. Joseph Smith ascribes to him. And we are quite sure if he had advanced any such ideas, the fact could not have escaped our attention nor failed to have awakened in our minds very serious apprehension and alarm, occupying the position that he did as one of the Twelve Apostles. Signed,

John Tingey, David L. Davis,
Edward W. Davis, James W. Burbidge,
Sr. Lehi S. Tingey, William C. Spence,
S. E. Davis, Jemima Davis,
Marinda N. Hyde, Sarah W. Davis,
Edith A. Smith, Juliett Pratt,
Lucy B. Smith.

In the foregoing I think I have successfully replied to your letter, and have presented to you such evidences that your father was the man who first introduced the doctrine and practice of plural marriage under this dispensation of the gospel, and also that the erection of the Temples we are building or have built in Utah is in accordance with a standing commandment of God to the Church, as neither you nor any other person claiming a belief in the divinity of the work and mission of Joseph the Seer, can consistently refuse to accept. What I have written is respectfully submitted to your candid and honest consideration.

Believe me to be, most respectfully,

Your well wisher,

L. O. LITTLEFIELD.

Martin Luther:—"When God's word is by the fathers expounded, construed, and glossed, then, in my judgment, it is even like unto one that straineth milk through a coal sack; which must needs spoil the milk and make it black; even so, likewise, God's word of itself is sufficiently pure, clean, bright, and clear; but through the doctrines, books, and writings of the fathers, it is very surely darkened, falsified, and spoiled."

James Kent:—"The Bible is equally adapted to the wants and infirmities of every human being. No other book ever addressed itself so authoritatively, and so pathetically, to the judgment and moral sense of mankind."

THE FOURTH AT MINERSVILLE, KANSAS.

IN the absence of Messrs. Patterson and Jackson, the advertised orators, Mr. John D. Bennett was called to the stand and delivered the following address to an attentive audience, which was well received by well defined marks of approval.

After referring to the march of civilization and population of nations, their rise and fall, of our development, he said: Produce, manufactures, art, science, philosophy, religious and social equality, are everywhere conspicuous.

The fires where witches once burned have burned out; the quaker is no longer reviled by the vilest of the vile; their women are no longer dragged by the hair of their head, nor tied to cart tails and whipped from street to street; their preachers are no longer fined nor imprisoned in filthy, comfortless dungeons; persecution, superstition, and intolerance have faded away like frost before the morning sun. Free thought superceeds intolerance; superstition gives place to intelligence, and the rights of conscience have outlived persecution. The African is no longer the slave of the white man, but is free as the freest.

Our Literature.—Near the close of the seventeenth century only three books could be found in an entire colony, and they were of foreign production; and six years of the present century rolled away before the first circulating library was established in all New England.

To-day our presses are legion, and books, papers and periodicals are issued by multiplied thousands for distribution throughout the length and breadth of our land, and which go to circulate literature and establish libraries in every household. Of charming fiction writers we have Irving, Cooper and Hawthorne; of historians Bancroft, Prescott, and Motley; of poets, Bryant, Longfellow and Whittier, to which may be added a whole galaxy of writers and contributors of the highest merit, and of almost limitless variety and number.

Our farm and mineral productions, manufactures, arts, sciences, inventions, schools, colleges, and general schooling facilities are without a rival, and place us in the advance rank of the most enlightened and cultivated of civilized nations.

Liberty is written on every fold of our beautiful banner. How like a fulfillment of the prophet's utterance:

"I will crop off from the top of the highest cedar a tender twig: I will plant it on the top of a high mountain and eminent. It shall bring forth boughs and bear fruit and be a goodly cedar and under its shadow shall dwell all fowls of every wing." Was not England one of the most conspicuous of nations? Was it not of some of her best intellect her colonies were planted on this conspicuous land of America. Have not those colonial twigs spread out their branches inviting immigration from every land and clime to dwell beneath their shadow? Have not the spreading branches of industry borne the fruits of production, manufacture and commerce?

But we have so long listened to a recital of the mistakes made by mother England, that we have been led to magnify her faults and have well nigh persuaded ourselves and our posterity that our old mother made a very tyrannical nurse. We have overlooked the amount of blood and treasure spent in the defense of the colonies—the infant nation; the sacrifice of a brave general, Braddock and his command, the flower of England's army; the brave and noble General Wolfe, and the many victories won by England's arms in securing the colonies from the combined forces of French and Indian assailants. We have failed to accredit her with aiding us in perfecting some of our most brilliant schemes of science. We forget that England was one of the first and deepest sympathizers when two of our noblest presidents fell by the hand of the assassins. When we call to mind how much we are indebted to foreign aid in money and men to aid us in sustaining and perfecting our purposes of the three great war struggles through which we have had to pass, we should ask ourselves if there is not danger that we may boast extravagantly of our independence when so much was at stake, and so much depended upon the needed help.

While we write "liberty" on every page of history, let us not forget that it is the bond of brotherhood, nor should we allow contentious tendencies to divide us into cliques, castes or classes, which engender hatred and contention.

Nor should it ever be said that the power of catholicism is designed or destined to ruin our freedom as a people. For it is not so. The stalwart sons of catholic Ireland toiled on the battle plain, mingling their blood with our fathers' in redeeming our soil made thrice sacred by its baptism in blood. Catholic France has endeared herself to our hearts in lending us a helping hand when our fathers, struggling beneath the shadow of despair, to establish equal rights and liberty, and was the first to recognize the birth of our nation. Our Catholic friends, whether bearing the shoulder strap, the musket, or the saber, stood shoulder to shoulder with their protestant friends in defence of the flag of our union.

Then, fellow-citizens, whether we be Jew or barbarian, Christian or infidel, catholic or protestant, let us pledge ourselves to stand by each other in the one common cause of equality. Let us not forget that a providence produced a Franklin and a Hopkins, a Jefferson and a Rush, a Weatherspoon and a Paine, with their co-workers to give form, life and liberty to the constitution of our common country.

Look upon the glorious old flag that has floated on the breeze in peace and war for an hundred years as the emblem of union, equality, freedom, and strike hands in the bonds of a united brotherhood in the pursuit of life, liberty and happiness, and prove to the world that the principle of free government is eternal.

BORN.

KEMP.—At Hutchinson, Jefferson county, Colorado, March 17th, 1883, to Bro. James and Sr. Fannie Kemp, a son; blessed by Elder James Caffall, June 14th, 1883, and named Roy Leslie.

WHITE.—At Edenville, Iowa, August 5th, 1883, to Bro. and Sr. I. N. White, a girl; named Corda Victoria.

DIED.

HALLIDAY.—Born in Painswick, Gloucestershire, England, April 14th, 1826; departed this life on the early morning of August 3d, 1883, from paralysis of the lower portion of his body and limbs, caused by injuries received in his spine. Our brother obeyed the gospel in England, 1849, and there labored faithfully to spread the truth, until the year 1851, when he believed, it his duty to gather with the Saints, and hence he came to the United States in that year. While in Keokuk, Iowa, he was deprived of the wife of his youth, by death, being left with two children, one of whom, sister Annie Lytle, survives him. He went to "Winter Quarters," and from thence to Genoa, Nebraska. Here he met with and married his present wife, who now mourns his death, and with whom he lived some twenty-seven years. Their Union has been one of mingled adversity and prosperity, but sweetened with the blessedness of love and peace, and hence contentment, until at length prosperity had crowned their arduous toil. While at Genoa, (a settlement made under the direction of Brigham Young), he discovered to his sorrow, that that self appointed leader was leading the people of God to destruction. He found himself powerless, to successfully stem the tide of evil that was among them, and he turned sadly away determined to walk no more with them. He returned to Iowa, and became acquainted with the fact that God had renewed the work of the last days, and had called the son of the Martyr to lead the Church, he renewed his covenant to serve the Lord by being baptized into the Reorganized Church, by Elder B. L. Leland, at Harlan, Shelby Co., Iowa, on the first day of May, 1864, and confirmed on the 8th of May, of the same year, by Bro. B. V. Springer. Also on that day ordained an Elder under Bro. Springer's hands. He was afterwards called to preside over the Union Grove Branch, which office he filled with dignity and yet with meekness, for about two years, although he lived about seven miles from the Grove. He was always at his post, unless sickness or extremely severe weather detained him. In process of time, it was thought proper to organize a branch at Leland's Grove, (his place of residence), which duty was performed by the writer at request of the Saints there, numbering eighteen members. Bro. Halliday was the unanimous choice, I believe, for president, which office he has faithfully filled unto the time of his death. He has ever enjoyed the love and confidence of his brethren and sisters, and of all his neighbors, far and near. He always watched over the interests of the branch, as a true and faithful shepherd. None were too great for him to reprove in kindness, when there was need for reproof; nor were any too insignificant for his fatherly care. His rule was a rule of love, and here lay his great success. His people knew that he loved them, as much as his dear family knew that truth. He stood erect as a man of God, nor ever stooped to dishonor. He dealt with the world as with the Saints. The tempter never could buy his vote or influence. These could only be given where he felt duty demanded them. An old veteran who had been neighbor to him for twenty-nine years, said he had "Never seen a crooked look, or a crooked act, or heard a crooked word from him." His motto, as carried out in his life, was duty before pleasure. He hated none, malice dwelt not in his breast; but he sought and labored for the good of all. The branch over which he presided nearly fourteen years, and which, when organized numbered but eighteen members, numbered eighty-six at his death, irrespective of those who had moved away, or had been removed by death, and now they feel his loss. They feel as sheep without a shepherd, as a family without a father; and they sincerely mourn his departure, but his memory will ever be green in their hearts. In a word, they loved him because he loved them, and because they unitedly love truth and uprightness. Elder P. Cadwell conducted the funeral, T. W. Chatburn led in prayer, and the writer improved the occasion, from 2d Timothy 4: 7, 8. A large concourse of people present, and upon every countenance were the evidences of sorrow at the loss of one who was at once a father, counselor, brother, friend and neighbor. Nearly fifty well loaded teams followed to the grave. In my very heart I felt that our beloved brother had indeed "Fought a good fight, and had kept the faith," and that there was indeed "A crown laid up for him, to be given at the appearing of the Lord Jesus Christ." May God bless the family and branch that he has left behind. And may they heed his counsels, and follow his righteous example, that they may reign with him in glory. This is my earnest prayer for them and myself in the name of Jesus, Amen.

CHARLES DERRY.

KARR.—At Cameron, West Virginia, April 15th, 1883, of consumption, Sarah Dora M., daughter of Thomas and Sarah A. Karr, aged 8 years, 2 months and 3 days.

THOMAS.—At Magnolia, Iowa, two bright little girls, daughters of Bro. Edward and Sr. Diantha Thomas, of diphtheria; Diantha Luella, July 22d, 1883, aged 3 years, nine months and one day, and Susan Asenath, July 29th, 1883, aged 9 years, 5 months and 17 days. Funeral services by Elder J. F. Mintun, from Job 14:14.

Our two little children from earth have been called,
To dwell in the state of the blest;
'Tis a season of sorrow, yet, but a short one,—
We, too, will be called to our rest.

WILDERMUTH.—At Oakdale, Antelope county, Nebraska, July 30th, 1883, infant son of Bro. E. M. and Sr. C. P. Wildermuth (Perla Wild). He was perfect in form and feature, with a sweet peaceful expression that must have been angelic. Stayed six happy, apparently serenely healthful days, to brighten our weary way, wrestled one agonized day with the death messenger, then flitted away to the pure blissful realm of the blest, where the angels will give him a name. But can they love him better than we? And do they not pity us in our anguish of heart sorrow? Do they know how we miss him? And will they teach him to cherish our memory as we do his? 'Tis so hard to say, "Thy will be done;" and yet our God has not entirely forsaken us, although we were overtaken by this deep affliction. In a strange land, with only one of our own faith near us, strangers came and ministered to us in our days of need, with all the gentleness and care of tried and true Christian friends. May God bless them as they deserve.

LOYD.—At Richmond, Mo., December 25th, 1882, of pneumonia, Bro. Thomas Loyd. Born October 2d, 1841. Bro. Loyd in his dying hours, testified to the truth of the latter day work, and that he died in Christ.

BRONSON.—In Wisconsin, May, 1883, of old age, Elder Amos W. Bronson. Born February 5th, 1807. He was a member of the Church at an early day, at Princeton, Bureau county, Illinois, and became identified with the Reorganized Church among those who formed its earliest churches.

WANTED TO KNOW.

Information wanted of the whereabouts of Matthew Rodgers, or his wife Ginephor, or any of his descendants. They are natives of Cornwall, England, but left Plymouth for Australia, in the year 1845, or 1846, by William Harris, No. 237, Grant street, Youngstown, Ohio, U. S. A.

Guyot:—"The same divine hand which lifted up before the eyes of Daniel, and of Isaiah, the veil which covered the tableau of the time to come, unveiled before the eyes of the author of Genesis the earliest ages of the creation; and Moses was the prophet of the past, as Daniel and Isaiah, and many others, were the prophets of the future."

A FATAL ADMISSION.

THE system of plurality of wives is indeed an "intrinsic" part of Mormonism, taking that word as defined in the dictionary, and as commonly understood. It is an essential part of the theory; it is internal, genuine, native, fixed, inherent. If it is intended to convey the idea that there are many Mormons who have not a plurality of wives, which is a fact, the term used is improper; and so if the idea to be expressed is that plurality of wives was not always a part of the creed of the Mormons. There was a time when plurality of wives was not permitted in this church, as it is not now except under religious regulations, and in Utah. But ours is a progressive faith. Principle is added to principle, doctrine to doctrine, faith to faith. And every added tenet becomes, when received, an integral part of the creed, and an "intrinsic" feature of the system.

The foregoing is from an editorial of the Deseret News, of a late issue, and is a remarkably astute specimen of Utah Mormon argument. From it may be understood: first, that Mormonism once existed without the plural wife system; second, that it is now admitted to be a part of that system; third, that it is a part of such system, and essential, only in Utah.

Mormonism exists outside of and away from Utah, without the system of plural marriage; therefore, such system is not essential to the existence, perpetuation and extension of Mormonism. If many Mormons, in Utah, are not in the practice of plural marriage, then Mormonism exists in Utah without such system; therefore, the system is not essential to Mormonism even in Utah. Such being the case, plural marriage is not native to Mormonism, and does not inhere in it.

When Mormonism was first preached, say from 1830 to 1844, it was stated to be the gospel that was to be preached in all the world for the redemption of the race of man, and fit and prepare him for a residence in a Zion and a New Jerusalem, the central city of which should not be in Utah; therefore, those who practice plural marriage and dwell in Utah, the only place where it may be practiced are not of those who shall inherit Zion and Jerusalem, for such system does not inhere in those places. There should be no question then as to the course which those persons should pursue, who wish to dwell in Zion. Besides this, the restricting the practice of polygamy to "Utah," and there "under religious regulations," destroys at once the claim made for that practice, that it is "native, internal, fixed, inherent, and essential to Mormonism; for Mormonism in its best and purest sense, is of that character that it may be preached, and its principles made applicable in every nation, kindred, tongue, and people, under the whole heaven. This was the boasted excellence of the system known by the Elders as Mormonism. Alas! How has the "fine gold become dim." In the house of its pretended friends the principles of the Church of the Lamb are outraged, the proper effect and extent of the gospel abridged and denied, and the final glory of the kingdom which was to be upon Zion and her righteous inhabitants, and thence to shine on all the world "as a city set on a hill," is confined to Utah, where only a few can possibly form constellations of families in priesthood harems; and whence no glory can shine, for it is for Utah only. If it is possible for one inconsistency to be more inconsistent than another, this idea stated in the above editorial is the most inconsistent of inconsistencies.

AS WAS to be expected, the election held in Utah August 9th, resulted in the choosing of Mormons to the several offices voted for, notwithstanding that the election was held under the provisions of the Edmunds' Bill. The following cast of the vote for 1880, '82, and '83, will serve to point out one method by which the result was obtained.

This result has been cunningly achieved. Where polygamists were displaced from office under the Edmunds act, which provides for the depriving of all polygamists of the right of suffrage and of eligibility to office, their places were filled on the ticket by monogamists, from the same families, who are in favor of the extreme doctrines of the church, and the ticket was submitted to the church authorities and approved by them. The vote was not as large as in previous years. In 1880 the Mormon vote, including 10,000 women, was 18,568 and the Gentile 1,357. In 1882 the Mormon vote increased to 23,239, some 13,000 being women, and the Gentile vote to 4,908. At this election the total vote was only 15,000, of which 2,000 were Gentile.

ADVICES from Independence, Missouri, August 18th, indicate that Bro. J. C. Foss is in charge of the district, Bro. F. G. Pitt, of the branch. Bro. Foss will be assisted in his duties by Bro. J. W. Brackenbury. The district is fast increasing in importance, and strength; and wise counsel must needs prevail. Bro. A. H. Smith will have an oversight over all the mission, and these brethren of the Independence district and branch, may rely on his prudence and faithful watchcare.

One thing all officers of that and all other districts will do well to remember, that is, that criminals against the laws of the land are not to be screened from the just punishment of the law of the land. The law of the Church says that certain transgressors should be delivered up to the law of the land.

Bro. Foss baptized four Sunday morning, the 12th; Bro. A. H. Smith five in the afternoon; and Bro. Foss one on the 14th, ten in all. Bro. Foss reports that a goodly number are locating in and around Independence. He wishes to warn discontents and disturbers of peace, that they are not wanted in Zion, neither by Saints nor Gentiles. We say amen to that.

LATTER DAY SAINTS; please look at yourselves, a moment, in the glass that the following from a late paper will hold up before you. And when asked to contribute a few dollars for this or that church enterprise, or the spread of the gospel, think how generously New York city paid two athletes to maul each other.

The gross proceeds of the Sullivan-Slade affair were $15,140; net proceeds, $13,140. Mace filled a valise with $4,000 paid to him in gold and silver, Slade's share, and Sullivan took $9,140. The actual fight lasted eight minutes and twenty seconds. Sullivan, therefore, coined money at the rate of about $1,200 a minute, and Slade's punishment was at the rate of $500 a minute. This even beats the opera singers who have begun to count their gains at so much a breath. We doubt if Patti, with her rapacity could have the hardihood to exact dollars from the public at the rate of 1,200 a minute.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE church at Montrose, Iowa, will be dedicated September 2d, 1883. Brn. W. B. Smith and Joseph Smith expect to be present.

Bro. W. W. Blair expected to baptize a number at Bozeman, Montana, Aug. 19th.

Sr. Maria Sheffield wrote that there were only three or four of the Church at Payson, Utah, but they were faithful and anxious to do good to the cause. They seldom have any preaching.

Bro. M. R. Scott wrote from Paris, Indiana, August 15th, that there was a fair attendance at the conference of the district at Union; Saints were encouraged and the work looking up.

Bro. Lewis Fowler five miles east of Lamoni, will give some brother a good chance at burning lime. Apply to him by mail. Address Lamoni, Iowa.

Bro. T. W. Smith writes that the crops about Stewartsville, Missouri, are full better than last year, corn especially.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. E. L. Kelley, writing from Kirtland, says:

Since writing you last W. H. Kelley and Bishop G. A. Blakeslee, committee on Temple repairs, have visited Kirtland and looked after matters, preaching some and baptizing one. The building now is graveled around with walks, &c. Contributions of work in part by Kirtland citizens. Our audiences are still good; visitors many and a fine opportunity generally for doing good to the cause of Christ.

Mr. D. G. Graham, postmaster at Plano, Illinois, wrote the editor August 23d:

The friends here generally are well. The town is having quite a boom in building, business, &c. The post office is now next door west of old Herald Office, in the Mrs. Gibbons' building. A large nice Town House takes the place of the old one on south side. We have been repairing our church (Congregational) this summer. Have now over forty members, an increase of over thirty since a year ago March last. Have a regular pastor. Baptists have a nice building. Wish you were back with us again; need your influence socially, politically, religiously.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Q.—In regard to the place mentioned by our Savior in Luke 13th chap., 44th v., when he said to the dying thief, "To-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise,"—does this signify a place for the spirits of the departed righteous, or, does it mean, the "Paradise of God."

A.—Our understanding is that the place referred to was the intermediate state where the spirits of the departed righteous wait for the resurrection. He was, evidently, a disciple; Christ forgave his sin, and he was thus not to go to the place of the wicked.

Q.—Please explain the reference made to Melchisedec, in Hebrews 7th chapter. One of our neighbors thought that there is something miraculous about it; that an high priest should have neither father nor mother, beginning of days nor length of years. He gave the subject to the minister, thinking to get a satisfactory explanation; the minister, however, gave for answer that the reason for his being fatherless was that in those days, as now, people were neglectful, and by carelessness lost the record of their genealogy, so that they could not tell from whom they were descended; and thus it happened to be put down in that way. This is not satisfactory to my neighbor, hence this inquiry.

A.—If your neighbor will read the close of the 6th chapter in connection with all of the 7th, he will discover that the high priest of whose greatness Paul is writing, is Jesus Christ, and we know who his mother was. The king of Salem, Melchisedec, was also a priest (high priest) of the Most High God, and was a man called and chosen to this priesthood by the voice of God, acknowledged of the people by vote and submission. Any other man in the same position would have received the same honor from Abraham. Hence, it is the order of the priesthood that Melchisedec and Christ both held as high priests of God that is meant by Paul when he says it was without father and mother, beginning of days or length of years; for it was and is forever. Paul states this in the 5th chapter, where he reports of Christ that God should have said to him, "Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec." It was the priesthood, and not the men who held it, that was without father or mother, beginning of days or length of years. And in this sense it is easy to be understood.

A child of God should be a visible beatitudo for joy and happiness, and a living doxology for gratitude and adoration.

Great is he who enjoys his earthen-ware as if it were plate, and not less great is the man to whom all his plate is no more than earthenware.

A religion which can fill the heart with joy, even in the midst of persecutions, is beyond all price.

Correspondence.

CLINTON, IOWA,

August 22d, 1883.

Joseph:—I expect to leave Clinton to-day for Rock Island. I am told that there are a few scattered Saints in that city that would be glad to hear the good word. I am at this writing, at the house of Bro. Warren Turner. Since coming here, I have preached six discourses, besides attending one prayer meeting, held by the young folks. The church here, presided over by brother Turner, is in a prosperous condition as is most generally the case in branches of the church where the presiding officer is a zealous laborer; and where heart and spirit are deeply engaged in the Master's cause. Brother and sister Turner are accomplished Saints, not only in the Spirit of the Master's cause, but in the generous use of that needful that a laboring brother wants. More good perhaps might have been done in the preaching of the word during my stay in this place, had it not been a general time for spiritualism to make an exhibition of its skill. These strange Knights of the Cross, have been holding camp meeting in close proximity to Clinton. This has drawn much of the attention of the people. I heard one gentleman say while getting his ticket, to go home on the cars from this spiritual paradise, "Oh, said he, we have been having such a splendid time I don't want to leave." No doubt there are some honest people who believe in this so-called spiritualism. But what is it when it is all simmered down? Is there any reality in it?
W. B. SMITH.

KEIGHLEY, Butler Co., Kansas,

August 21st, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Brn. John T. Davies and Charles M. Fulks came here the 10th, and staid till the 20th, and preached nine times, held two prayer meetings, and organized a branch of eight members, John Richard presiding. Congregations large at the preaching. The people are reading and investigating.

Bro. Joseph, any Elder traveling through this part will find a home at our house. We live one quarter of a mile south of Keighley, on the St. Louis and San Francisco Railroad. There is land here to be had for $1.25 per acre. This is a good chance for the brethren to get homes. Crops are good here. Ever praying for the spread of the gospel,

I am your brother,

MOSES TURPEN.

WILBER, Neb., July 30th, 1883.

Editor Herald:—So long as you permit men to attack me in the Herald, you will not be so unfare as to shut me out. Through the courtesy of Dr. Anthony, I was permitted to read Mr. Garrett's sayings about the Elvin—Luse controversy, and was not a little amused at his style of argument and manner of reaching conclusions. So far as the matter in dispute between Mr. Elvin and myself is concerned, Mr. Garrett fires at too long a range to be either competent to write and express an opinion, or effective in doing so. If Mr. Elvin's friends wish to bolster him a little I have no objection to their doing it if they are eligible to the position by knowing whereof they affirm, and do not write at random.

The one thing in our controversy which seems to hurt most, judging from private letters that have been written, and from Mr. Garrett's article, is the plain manner in which I handled Mr. Elvin's statement to the effect that the Mormon church here was the "only body showing a healthy growth." Now, Mr. Editor, I am willing to submit the point in dispute to Dr. Levi Anthony. The doctor is a member of the Mormon Church, and if he will tell your readers that I was not correct in the main—a few minor things excepted—I will yield the controversy. The doctor lives here and he is personally acquainted with Mr. Elvin and myself; he knows all the facts and he will give you the truth of it. He is competent to testify. Isn't that fair friend Smith? I think he will tell you that I am not so incorrigible as some of your people have tried to make out. There is so much of Mr. Garrett's style of argument in your paper and indulged in on the platform by the men sent out by your church, I want to call especial attention to it and test it by stern logic. And the test will bear on the dispute between Mr. Elvin and myself. The M. E. C. have an organization in Wilber, the L. D. S. have none; therefore the L. D. S. is the "only body in Wilber showing a healthy growth." The M. E. C. have built a house of worship within the last five years, the L. D. S. have built none; therefore the L. D. S. is the "only body showing a healthy growth." The M. E. C. have a Sunday School numbering about one hundred, the L. D. S. have none; therefore the L. D. S. is the "only body here showing a healthy growth." The M. E. C. maintains regular preaching, the L. D. S. have preaching occasionally two miles south of Wilber; therefore the L. D. S. is the "only body having a healthy growth." The M. E. C. maintain a weekly prayer meeting, the L. D. S. have none, but an occasional member strays in to warm up a little by Methodist fire; therefore the L. D. S. is the "only body showing a healthy growth." The M. E. C. holds an increasing congregation, the L. D. S. have no congregation in town; therefore the L. D. S. is the "only body showing a healthy growth." In the above is a true statement of the facts, while the conclusions are Rev. Elvin's and Mr. Garrett's. But Mr. Garrett says these things are no evidences of a "healthy growth," but the contrary. In the name of reason and revelation what would be evidence of prosperity if this is not. "By their fruits ye shall know them," says the blessed Christ.

But let me look at Mr. Garrett's logic a little farther. I gave a true statement of the condition of the churches at Wilber, Mr. Elvin did not; therefore I am no "gentleman, much less a Christian," and Mr. Elvin will not "prevaricate." Another thing. I represent no denomination. I defend the tenets of no church. I do not belong to any church. I believe and try to practice a system of morality taught by Christ and his Apostles, broad and magnanimous in its principles and sympathy. Now then, if any man can show me—"I am not given over to hardness of heart * * * to be damned"—that the Mormon Church has the truth of Christ, clearer and fuller, than other denominations, or than is held by any man or set of men, in or out of church organization, in comparison with which all outside the Mormon Church are in darkness and lost, he will "save a soul from death." But sir, it can not be done by sophisms, or conclusions without premises, or by arguing at long range, or in a circle, nor by misrepresentation as per Elvin and Garrett.

As Mr. Elvin says in one of his opposition letters, that "We are willing to compare the doctrine of our church with any who will abide the rules of debate," I take it that he is willing to defend the doctrine of the Mormon Church against any. So I invite Bro. Elvin to a discussion of the following proposition. 1st. Resolved, That Joseph Smith, Sen., was a true prophet of God. 2d. Resolved, That Joseph Smith, Sen., was a deceiver. The battle ground to be the Book of Mormon. The discussion to be held with the pen in some paper hereafter agreed upon; to be continued a stated length of time; each disputant to have an equal number of articles of equal length; the affirmative to have half as much space as occupied by one of the articles extra and to close. Awaiting his reply, I am

Yours for the truth,

L. L. LUSE.

"LET ANOTHER SPEAK."

Editor Herald:—In your issue of August 4th, is another sly rebuke for your unfortunate, unwise, or erring brother. I refer to R. J. Anthony's letter. A query arises. Why did not Bro. Anthony write the Herald letter in the same spirit, and with the same bitter, biting, personal sarcasm, in which and with which he wrote a private letter to his brother at Wilber? Why? Because that would spoil his garb of Saint-hood somewhat, and show to the people a heart full of bitter animosity towards me, for calling things by their right names.

Another thing. R. J. Anthony credits me with saying that: "The leading protestant organizations at that time were the Christian and United Brethren." Thinking he has the semblance of an accusation against me in this, he proceeds to administer a sweet and gentle rebuke, by stating that "There were two organizations there, (referring to five years ago, when the leading church members wanted to hang him?), the Congregationalists and Methodists." Now if Mr. Anthony will turn to Mr. Elvin's famous letter in the Herald, he will see that it is this "truthful and honorable man" that says: "The leading protestant organizations at that time were the Christian and United Brethren." Truth will crop out sometimes, even when it is the intent to bolster a falsehood. If the friends who wish to throw anathemas at me would read a little more closely, and be a little more considerate, they would not write and talk so much at random, and would not make so many blunders.

When I was a boy in school, it was considered, even among the sporting youth, to be in very bad taste for two or three to attack one fellow at the same time. But in mature manhood, in the great battle between truth and falsehood, there is nothing to fear, though an advocate of truth be doubled or quadrupled; the promise being: "One shall chase a thousand, and two put ten thousand to flight." So, if any more of the Elders wish to join the army of Elvin advocates, I welcome them; all I ask is an "open field and a fair fight."

A word about Mr. Anthony's alleged persecutions. I have failed to find any one here who does not join me in saying, "throw the groundless imputation back," etc. When the hanging part of the story is stripped from its connections, and put in such a way as to lead people to believe that there lives a man, or men at Wilber, or ever did, that wanted to hang Mr. Anthony for preaching simply the faith of the "Reorganized Church," as they must inevitably infer from the statement of Mr. Elvin and Anthony, to draw it mild, it is a wicked perversion of facts. To give support to the meaning of Mr. Elvin's statement, Mr. Anthony disconnects the hanging part of the conversation from the Mountain Meadow tragedy. The truth of the matter is this. Growing out of Mr. Anthony's bantering way of putting things (which, excuse me for saying is too much the case with most of your preachers), a heated discussion ensued, when a man present said: "I believe your hands are dyed in the blood of the innocent women and children slain at Mountain Meadows. If I knew it, I would lead a party now, and take you out and hang you to a tree," or words to that effect. That being the connection in which the declaration was made, and the condition upon which the hang was threatened, so say I now; so say we all. And is there a member of the "Reorganized Church" that does not say the same? This phase of the matter puts quite a different face on the hanging part of the story from that presented by Mr. Elvin and Mr. Anthony. The fact is Mr. Elvin was a little pushed at that time, being in close quarters, and this bit of news was thrown in to regain lost sympathy, not thinking that it gave to Wilber's civic status a barbarous cast.

In Bro. Elvin's letter of May 26th, he asks you, Bro. Joseph, to permit me to "explain the reason of crawfishing." I will do so by stating that I am prepared to furnish a man to negate the two questions agreed upon by Dr. Anthony and myself, any time after Monday, Aug. 14th. Hoping the explanation will be satisfactory to Bro. Elvin, I will close by admonishing the brother to beware of his friend, C. R. Awfish.

Fraternally yours,

L. L. LUSE.

JOSEPH SMITH, Dear Sir:—Thanking you for the courtesy(?) as a gentleman and journalist you have shown me in permitting your roaming deceivers to attack me in your paper and refusing me a word in reply, I enclose stamps for the return of my manuscripts. You shall have the satisfaction of seeing them published in an honorable sheet. I perceive you are all off from one piece, a dastardly set of cowards, except where you know you are the stronger party. Shame on you! Why did you not publish the challenge to Elvin? Ah! sir, because you knew that Elvin dare not meet me.

Respectfully yours,

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. George Montague preached three discourses in our school house, with good liberty, and it has taken a good effect on the hearts of the people. I think if an Elder were here and preached a few times, there could be a branch built up without much trouble. The most of the people in this settlement are well pleased with the discourses that the brother delivered. I have heard of the people saying that if Bro. Montague does not come back here soon, they would send for him. It fills my heart with gladness to see the latter day work taking a start in my settlement. I am trying with all diligence to live religiously, asking the prayers of the saints. Yours in gospel bonds,

W. P. HARGRAVE.

CLEVELAND, Lucas Co., Iowa,

Bro. Joseph:—The strike here still continues, and is bearing down with serious and heavy consequences upon the poor and enterprising people of this neighborhood. The cause of difficulty here is the want of a universal system of screens, specified by law, which is as much a principle of justice to demand as to demand sixteen ounces to the pound or thirty-six inches to the yard. He who can palm an unjust weight or measure upon his laborers or his customers, can take the most advantage of his neighbor. He does not make an honest living by that means, but it creates internal strife and war. I think I know what is the just and reasonable size of a coal screen, and I will give my thoughts upon it. I think it will be admitted by men of experience, that a piece of coal one inch square, is a useful size, and as profitable in many instances, when used with larger sizes, as any. Therefore, any coal operator extracting pieces more than  $\frac{7}{8}$  of an inch from the miners labor, should be deemed guilty of swindling, and subject to a fine. And as the employer has the authority within himself to refuse employment to the unprincipled and inexperienced, he ought not to be allowed to put unjust burdens upon the well meaning and honest laborers.

Yours, as ever,

THOMAS R. ALLEN.

HANNIBAL, Missouri,

August 14th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I am still in the field, and trying to sow the seed, the word of God, the best I am able. I came to this place, Hannibal, last Friday, and found the few Saints here generally well, all but brother James Cross. We have a branch of the church here numbering about twenty-eight members, but only a few of them in Hannibal. Many of them are scattered out in other towns and counties, and hard to be found. The few that are here are doing very well, but have no hall to meet in. It seems to be very hard to get a place for preaching, as they ask such high rents for halls. But we are doing the best we can. I shall leave here again Saturday, the 18th, for Salt River, for a short time, and then from there to St. Catherine, on the 30th day of this month, according to appointment, where I have to hold a debate with a Methodist preacher, if he does not back out. The question is, was John's baptism a Christian baptism? I affirm; and after that the Book of Mormon. I think it will turn out good for the church and the people of that place, as I got a good opening in that place, and I feel sure that some will come into the church there. I have preached nine times there before, and made many friends to the church, and I shall try and make more. The good work is onward in this district. I have many calls from the outside to come and preach; and where I can and do so once, I am asked to come again. We held our district conference at Bevier, on the 4th and 5th of this month, and we felt that the Lord was present with us by the power of his Holy Spirit, and I think that good was done. I am trying to help roll on this great work, and in so doing I know that the Lord is blessing me in my labors, and I am feeling well. The more I can do in this work the better I feel. Brethren, one and all, let us be up and doing, and see if the Lord will not bless us, and I ask the prayers of the saints in my behalf.

I remain as ever your brother,

GEORGE HICKLIN.

P. S.—After I had this letter written I saw the report of Bro. Webb's death, in the Herald of June 23d, 1883. Bro. Dear Herald:—If any one will by history or logic, or by the Bible, or the whole combined, answer the following questions, he will confer a favor on the writer. "After this I saw in the night visions, and behold a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth, and it devoured and stamped the residue with the feet of it, and it was diverse from all the beasts that were before it. And it had ten horns. I considered the horns and behold there came up among them another little horn, before whom three of the first horns were plucked up by the roots." And the ten horns which were in his head, and of the other which came up and before whom, three fell, even of that horn that had eyes and a mouth that spake very great things, whose look was more stout than his fellows. "And the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings that shall arise; and another shall arise after them, and be diverse from the first, and he shall subdue three kings. And he shall speak great words against the Most High. And he shall ware out the Saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws. And they shall be given into his hand until a time and times, and dividing of time." What kingdom constitutes the eleventh horn, and what three kingdoms did it pluck up by the roots?

Bro. Joseph:—Our late conference held at Union, Jefferson county, Indiana, on the 11th, 12th, 13th, and 14th, was a success, although the district was not fully represented. Those who met with us seemed to be blessed, and to manifest a degree of encouragement and determination that they have not possessed for a long time. I think that the prospects for a brighter day for the cause in southern Indiana, begins to dawn. I returned home on Wednesday, the 15th, and on Saturday the 18th, delivered a funeral address at Pleasant Ridge, Clark county, Indiana, in memory of Manoah Goss, a brother to the sister Gosses, so well known as members of the Eden Branch. He was their only brother, and like Martha and Mary, they loved him dearly; and although he had not openly confessed the Savior; yet he was a good, kind hearted young man. There was quite a large congregation in attendance at his funeral.

My health is improving some little. I expect to visit the southern part of this district in the counties of Dubois, Crawford and Perry, as soon as my health will permit. I have not been able to do any preaching outside of our home circle this spring and summer. Our next conference will convene on the ninth of November at Union, Jefferson county, Indiana. We hope that Bro. T. W. Smith will be in this part of his mission before that time. Pray for me, that if in harmony with the will of God, I may be restored to health. Yours in bonds,

GUIDE ROCK, Nebraska,

August 22d, 1883.

Dear Herald:—I am here in wagon, with Bro. E. R. Hillman from Freeman, Nebraska, a distance of about one hundred and twenty miles. Nice country here to look at, and the crops look fine. It is a high and dry country. I am stopping here with Bro. and Sr. N. Fisk, the only Saints living in this part of the country; but south a ways in Kansas are a few Saints, I believe in Jewell county. I am laboring here every evening since I arrived. The people here are very stubborn and careless concerning the gospel; but the few that do turn out pay close attention. Some took it in hand night before last to disturb the meeting. One crowd gathered on the platform in front of the building where we were holding meeting, talking and making confusion; and there was at the same time a crowd gathered near the house, with brass horns, making all kinds of noise. But the meeting went on all the same. It is surprising to see men in a civilized community acting this way; but so it is. I do not find everything smooth and nice in battling for the gospel; and it is a great sacrifice to leave all, and go forth battling with the world; but nevertheless, I rejoice in the work, and desire to magnify my calling, that I may be blameless.

I am as ever your well wisher and friend,

JOSHUA ARMSTRONG.

STEWARTSVILLE, Missouri,
August 19th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I arrived home on Friday morning last for a short time, to see to matters requiring my attention on our little homestead. I expect to return to the field by first of October or sooner. I find that I have preached on an average one sermon a day since I left home last May, in the following places: Bevier, Mo.; Jeffersonville, Brush Creek, Dry Fork, in Wayne county, Ill.; Springerton, White county, Ill.; Tunnel Hill and vicinity, Johnson county, Ill.; and in Richland county, Ill. The work is in moderately fair condition in all these places; there is much room for improvement in the matter of spiritual life and enjoyment. There is everywhere a spirit of slumber affecting the majority of the ministry and laity. This is no evidence of fault in the doctrine, but rather is the result of supineness or apathy in the officers in the various branches. The neglect of the Priests to visit, and exhort the members; and the Teachers in seeing that the members do their duty, etc.; and the failure on the part of the presiding Elders to see that their subordinates do their work, as required by the law of the Church, is seen in the negligence of the members in observing many of the duties required at their hands. The Master certainly can not, and surely will not say to such in the day of his coming, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." If greater zeal and activity is not exhibited hereafter, it will not be because they were not reprov'd, rebuked, exhorted, and entreated. I did not baptize very many, but I believe the few were such as counted the cost, and were in earnest. I was told by many that they intended to unite with the Church, but were not quite ready. Some positively affirmed that they would join when I returned to their respective localities. In some places the churches were closed against us. The Christian (?) meeting houses were barred against us generally. The Methodists and Baptists were more charitable in some places. Bro. Hilliard and I offered in one place to enter into a written agreement to preach a dozen discourses in a "Christian Church," and teach no doctrine but what we would clearly support by abundance of plain, pertinent, and positive scripture teachings; and to confine ourselves solely to Bible proofs. But no, their "house was not open for the preaching of Mormon doctrine." But that meant according to the above proposal, that the word of God should not be preached in that house. There will be a squaring of this account in the day of judgment, and somebody will learn what the words "He that rejecteth you, rejecteth me, and he that rejecteth me rejecteth him that sent me," mean.

Bro. George H. Hilliard, who is an able speaker, and a man who is well thought of both in and out of the Church, as an honorable, and upright citizen; was president of the District until a recent conference, at which time Bro. Isaac

M. Smith was elected president. Bro. Isaac is a young Elder of excellent character, intelligent, and well versed in the Scriptures. He preached a very able discourse on the last night of conference. Bro. John W. Stone—formerly a "Christian preacher," now proposes to preach the doctrine of Christ, having now learned the "way of the Lord more perfectly," before knowing "only the baptism of John;" but unlike the Ephesians, he had "heard that there be a Holy Ghost," but like them having been "baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus," he claims to have received of the Holy Spirit. He says that when the words, "receive ye the Holy Ghost" were spoken, the power of God, came upon him in such a measure that it nearly raised him from the chair, a power that he had never felt before.

In the Rush Creek Branch, are Elders I. A. Morris, and J. B. Henson. In the Dry Fork Branch, Elder J. Thomas, Henry Walker and —Brown. In the Deer Creek Branch, H. P. Thomas, P. Green, beside Bro. Hilliard; at Springerton Elder Stone; at Tunnel Hill Elder Isaac M. Smith, and Elisha Webb, and Andrew Kelley. These brethren are all quite able preachers, although some of them have not had first rate chances to learn the wisdom of the world.

I found quite a number of families who were not able to take the Herald, although three or four times the cost of it is spent for that which is worth infinitely less, if not positively hurtful. But they offer this much encouragement: they say they will take it as soon as they are able. If they could only understand how much they are losing in intellectual and spiritual enjoyment, how much light, and comfort of the Spirit they deprive themselves of weekly, I think they would soon find a way, having once had the will to care for the mind as much as they do for the body. In several respects the field assigned me is far from being a pleasant or agreeable one. The people, however, are kind and hospitable, and treat the ministry with due consideration.

Yours for the work's sake,

T. W. S.

RUSHVILLE, Illinois,

August 19th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—We had our conference last Saturday and Sunday, and had three very good sermons from Bro. Goodale. He is the only Elder in the Pittsfield District that is able to preach; and it seems we are slighted by not having a missionary sent into these parts. I hope you will consider this matter, that we may have an Elder here part of the time. We are poor, and can't do much; but are willing to do what we can. The interest is good, and if we could have some one to preach steadily I believe many could be added to the Church. We have a little branch here composed of fifteen members, all nearly of three families, and we are doing what we can to keep our branch together; and it seems as though it takes preaching to keep us alive to the work. We thank God for the true gospel, and that we obeyed it; and hope we may so live as to come forth in the resurrection of the just.

Yours,

WM. J. CURRY.

Summary of News.

Aug. 16th.—Some scattered bands are still causing alarm in the north of Spain.

Quite a serious accident occurred at the shaft at Braceville, Ills., this morning. Through some mistake of the engineer, the engine got away from him and dropped the cage, containing five men, to the bottom of the shaft, a distance of 120 feet, with terrible force, severely injuring them all, and probably fatally injuring two of them.

At Agram, Austria, Tuesday, a mob attempted to tear from the Government offices a number of notices printed in the Hungarian language, which is offensive to the Croatsians. The military were called out and suppressed the rioting. Several people were wounded by the troops and many arrested. The rioting was renewed yesterday and the notices destroyed, when the windows of the Government Building were broken in. A mob of 500 men attacked the Jewish quarters in Prague, Austria, Wednesday night. The rioters were dispersed before doing much harm.

A British Jew, provided with the best of papers from his Government and the great financiers of London, was expelled from Russia by the authorities.

Count Tolstot, the Russian Minister of the Interior, has ordered the enforcement of the decree forbidding Jewish manufacturers from employing Christian workmen.

There were 467 deaths from cholera in Egypt, Wednesday.

Two thousand Bedouins attacked the sanitarium at Sinkat, Egypt, and were repulsed with a loss of sixty killed. The soldiers defending the place lost seven men and the civilians five.

A man died suddenly of Canadian cholera at Quebec yesterday.

Yellow fever has broken out at Pensacola, Fla.

According to a report just published by Postmaster-General Fawcett of England, the average number of letters per head written in the countries named is as follows: England 40, Scotland 30, United States 21, Ireland 16, France 15, Germany 13, Italy 6.

Aug. 17th.—Col. Baden, of the French army made a sortie on the 6th inst., supported by a gunboat. He proceeded northward and outflanked and drove off the enemy at Annam, Asia. On the 7th, with 1,200 men, he made a movement to the south and attacked the earthworks of the Annamites. The enemy made but slight resistance and abandoned the works in confusion. Their cannon was hauled off by elephants. The loss to the French was two killed and six wounded. The enemy's loss was heavy.

War with China is regarded as probable.

There were 433 deaths from cholera in Egypt, Thursday, including six at Cairo. Two hundred and two persons died from cholera at Bombay the last fortnight.

There are fresh risings in the vicinity of Seo de Urgel, Spain.

Advices from Vera Cruz are still startling. Indeed, over 300 persons a month are dying, and not half the deaths reported. There are no

Americans in the city; they can't live there. Among old residents the disease is very fatal, attacking those who have had the disease before. Business-men are stricken down but to die. The disease is also very fatal among the shipping. Whole crews are prostrated with the disease, and in one instance, on one vessel, four men died in one day. The weather is comparatively cool, which appears to increase the fatal character of the disease.

Twenty-nine days ago Frank Phillips' whistle rang out in the operating room of the Western Union Telegraph Company's office, at No. 195 Broadway, and signaled the beginning of one of the most extensive strikes ever known on this Continent, although the number of persons actually out of work has been greater in other trade strikes.

Soon after 2 o'clock this afternoon District Master-Workman John Campbell, by order of the Brotherhood of Telegraphers, sent to District-Secretary Thomas H. Hughes, at Pittsburg, Pa., the following message:

Send following to all assemblies: The Executive Board of the Brotherhood regrets to say that the strike is a failure. All members who can may return to work immediately. A circular follows by mail.

The Grain Exchange Committee have issued a statement showing the wheat yield of the various counties of California the present year to be 53,000,000 bushels, an increase of 14,000,000 over last year. The total barley yield this year is 15,000,000 bushels, an increase over last year of 2,500,000.

Aug. 19th.—The present position of the French and English Governments is somewhat doubtful. M. Waddington had an interview with Lord Granville yesterday, at which he communicated the statement and report of Consul Ledaux, of Zanzibar, on the Tamatave incident. There is a serious conflict between the French Consul and the statements of Commodore Johnson, the English missionary, and the British dispatches. Still graver questions were raised at the interview on the subject of the Franco-Chinese complications. M. Waddington declined to state the French policy. The blockade of the Chinese ports, which is imminent, he maintained was dependent on the attitude of Peking, unless the present difficulties between the two Governments were lessened.

The provinces in Spain are now all quiet.

It is stated that France has informed the Powers that any ships attempting to land arms in Annam will be liable to seizure. The Soir believes this is a warning principally leveled at the large exports of arms from American forts.

There were 310 deaths from cholera in Egypt Saturday, including fifty deaths at Cairo and thirty-two at Alexandria. A British soldier was one of the victims at the latter place.

Further anti-Jewish outbreaks are reported from Russia. They have in all instances been promptly suppressed.

Judge Jeremiah S. Black, of Pennsylvania, one of the most prominent public men of Pennsylvania for half a century, died at an early hour Aug. 20th, at his home, near York, Pa.

It cost 21.22 cents per bushel to send wheat from Chicago to Liverpool in 1873, last year it cost 7.74 cents per bushel, and this year the average cost is 9.08 cents. The freight charges on grain from Chicago to New York by lake canal, and rail have fallen off since 1868 on an average 66 per cent.

Of the grain received at Atlantic ports last year 80.2 per cent came by rail and 19.8 per cent by the lakes, canals, and the Hudson River. The tonnage on the New York canals fell off from 6,442,225 tons in 1868 to 5,467,423 tons in 1882, while the aggregate tonnage of the New York Central, Erie, and Pennsylvania Railroads increased from 10,476,857 tons in 1868 to 43,586,030 tons in 1882.

Of the amount appropriated by the last River and Harbor bill $5,434 remained unexpended the 1st of July. Of the 291 improvements appropriated for, 231 were in progress.

A St. Joseph, (Mo.,) hotel keeper has been fined $50 for keeping his bar-room open Sundays. He has taken an appeal, with the intention of testing the Downing License law, under which he was prosecuted.

Aug. 20th.—There were 182 deaths from cholera in Egypt Sunday, including those at Cairo. There were forty-three deaths from cholera in the Provinces of Ghizeh and Alfe the last four days.

Two policemen were seriously wounded while attempting to evict a tenant in Down Co., Ireland.

The Madrid newspapers are discussing the expediency of forming an alliance between Spain, Austria, and Germany, in order to check the influence of the French democracy in Spanish politics.

Colbridge, a town in Scotland, has been the theatre of great disorder for two days, the disturbances being similar in character to those which have in the past caused so much excitement in the Canadian cities and in New York. Saturday, in separating hostile parties of Catholics and Orangemen, two policemen were seriously hurt. This morning numbers of Catholics, armed with picks and hammers, paraded the town in search of the Orangemen. A force of police, both mounted and on foot, was required to disperse this assemblage.

The Mark Lane Express, in its review of the British grain trade the last week, says: The official returns show the wheat acreage in 1883 to be 13 per cent below that in 1882. Trade the last week was rather firmer. Flour is steady. Foreign wheat is quiet. Foreign flour is firmly held. Maize is higher. The prices of barley are in favor of sellers. Cargoes in all positions are inactive. There were sixteen arrivals and seven sales. Three cargoes were withdrawn, and fifteen remained. Two of the latter are California cargoes. Sales of English wheat during the week, 41,779 quarters, at 43s 10d per quarter, against 8,899 quarters, at 50s 5d the corresponding week last year. The Mark Lane Express also prints reports from 361 districts in England and Wales in regard to the harvest of 1883. In 239 districts the indications are the wheat crop will be under the average; in eighty-nine there will be an average yield; and in thirty-three the crop will be above the average. Many of the reports state the wheat is thin, blighted, and mildewed. The other crops are reported above the average.

The West Indies are still disturbed by bands of robbers.

The total cases of yellow-fever at the navy-yard at Pensacola, Fla., up to noon to-day were eight, and the deaths three.

One hundred and sixty persons have died of cholera in the little town of San Dionesio, Mex. The disease is not Asiatic cholera, but a local disease which exists in Mexico every summer.

The trial of Frank James, the noted outlaw, was begun at, Gallatin, Mo., to-day.

August 21st.—Socialistic pamphlets are horrifying the authorities at the popular watering-places of Austria. The Croats are still rioting.

War between France and China seems to be unavoidable. The interference of the former in the affairs of Annam, a dependency of the latter, is the cause. The French minister has withdrawn from Peking. The Chinese have 40,000 well drilled soldiers on the frontier. They have recently purchased in the United States, $250,000 muzzle-loading rifles and 16,000,000 rounds of ammunition. They are also hastening the construction of gunboats, proceeding in British and German dock-yards.

One hundred and forty deaths from cholera have occurred among the British troops in Egypt since the outbreak of the disease to date. Forty-three deaths from cholera occurred at Alexandria yesterday. There were 193 deaths from cholera in Egypt Monday, including three at Cairo.

In a fight at Zipoquirá, South America, between the National and Cienden-Maria troops the commandant of the latter was killed. The Federal troops were triumphant. Gen. Hurtado, President of Cauca, is named Minister of the Federal Government. Ex-President Reinales goes to Cauca as Commissioner of Instruction, Otalora having definitely renounced the candidacy for the Presidency. Gen. Witches will be supported by the Liberals against Nunez.

Columbia has prohibited the passage of arms to Ecuador.

The Chilean army will probably evacuate Lima Sept. 15th, and concentrate in Callao, Tacua, or Pisco. Iglesias has troops ready to proclaim his Government.

The Chilean Government has arranged with the French Steamship Company for the conveyance of emigrants from Europe. Three hundred are expected to arrive in October.

Aug. 22d.—The important port of Haiphong, Tonquin, has been captured by the French, and the Annamites have fled into the interior. The French got 150 cannon and $50,000 worth of Annam cash—nearly a barnful.

Thirty-seven deaths from cholera occurred in Egypt, yesterday. One of the victims was a British soldier. The deaths from cholera in Egypt Tuesday numbered 131, including one at Cairo.

Trouble is brewing between the Central American States of Guatemala and Honduras.

Porto Rico has experienced the worst storm of many years. The river rose and inundated part of the city. One life lost.

A severe battle was fought before Jacmel, West Indies, Aug. 3d. Hundreds of men were killed. The insurgents claim a great victory. The Government officials state that fourteen prisoners of war were shot by the insurgents. Miragoane, Jeremie, and Jacmel are closed to foreign commerce.

FIRES STORMS AND ACCIDENTS.

Aug. 16th.—Loss by fire at Augusta, Ga., $50,000. Albia, Ia., $16,000.

Aug. 17th.—At London, England, the premises of the Bonus Tea association burned yesterday.

One of the severest storms of the season occurred at Michigan City, Ind., today, resulting panied by terrific thunder and lightning. Considerable damage was done throughout the city, one house being shattered to pieces by an electric bolt. The lightning also came into the Western Union telegraph office, exploding in regular volleys like musketry and driving the operators from their instruments. The wire connections in the office were melted off in several places, and also the brass connections in the switchboards. The storm was accompanied by a densely black cloud, and for a short time the city was in darkness, it being necessary to light the gas throughout the town. It was a great shock to the citizens, many thinking the place was to be swept by a cyclone, but fortunately the worst of the storm passed over the lake.

Loss by fire at Leadville, Col., $40,000. Buffalo, N. Y., $40,000.

Two girls were drowned while bathing, at Chattanooga, Tenn. A young lady was fatally injured in the woolen mills near Wilkesbarre, Pa. A locomotive and four freight cars were wrecked near Petersburg, Va. One man was killed by a railroad collision near Charlotta, S. C.

The horrors of a railway wreck were united to those of a powder explosion at Winchester Crossing, on the Kentucky Central yesterday morning. Two men were killed and five wounded.

Near Calvary Cemetery a smash-up occurred on the Northwestern Road yesterday morning. A freight train ran into some heavily-loaded cars and made a bad wreck. The employees jumped from the train, but one man was seriously hurt.

Aug. 19th.—Loss by fire at Montreal, Quebec, $90,000. Braidwood, Ill., $33,000. Princeton, Ind., $20,000.

Aug. 20th.—Nine oil-tanks, a large number of stills, and a great amount of valuable machinery were burned at Franklin, Pa. Loss by fire at Elgin, Ill., $7,000. Trenton, N. J., $50,000. Oshkosh, Wis., $40,000. At Vickery, Ohio., a grocery store was struck by lightning, and burned to the ground. Loss by fire at Richmond, Me., $10,000. Keene, N. H., $23,000.

A terrific rainstorm, accompanied by thunder and lightning, visited the northwestern part of Ontario yesterday. At Listowel the water was two feet deep in the streets. Several buildings and bridges were carried away, and the destruction to property generally is very great. At Wingham the river rose twelve feet. The railway bridge and track were washed away, and the country road covered four feet with water. A large quantity of standing grain was destroyed.

A hurricane swept over Duluth, Minn., last night doing some damage at Agate Bay. Down the north shore the storm was heaviest. A dredge of Williams & Upham's, and a scow loaded with lumber belonging to Perton, Kimball & Borben, were wrecked and sunk. A watchman on the tug Ella S. Stone had a leg broken.

The schooner Sunnyside encountered a fearful squall off North Fox Island, in Lake Michigan, ran into another vessel, and went to the bottom with a full cargo of ore. She was valued at $25,000.

A cloud burst at the head of the canon near Salt Lake City, U., yesterday, and swept away Jones & Co.'s lumber-mill and a dwelling. A number of the settlers fled to the hills and were saved.

Lightning struck the Kennedy Oil Company's thousand-barrel tank at Garfield, Pa., at 4 o'clock. Seven hundred barrels of oil were destroyed.

During the prevalence of a thunder-storm at Dennison, O., to-day about noon lightning struck the house of a farmer named G. W. Bird, and instantly killed his 14-year-old daughter. The shock also affected several members of the family, but not fatally.

Aug. 21.—At Chicago the operating room of the Western Union Telegraph Company was destroyed by fire; loss $60,000. Loss by fire at Danforth, N. Y., $20,000. Goodland, Ind., $12,500. Milwaukee, Wis., $12,000.

A disastrous conflagration has occurred at Bersizo, in the Province of Como, Italy. Forty-four houses were burned.

At Cardiff, Wales, there was an explosion in a colliery by which thirty miners were killed.

In addition to the forest fires which have been raging in Maine several days, fires have broken out in several new places. Smoke like a heavy pall envelopes the country, and renders respiration difficult. A heavy fire has just broken out in the forest on the northwest side of Green Mountain. A gang of men are fighting the flames to keep them off the railroad and Summit House. So many and such destructive fires have been unknown for years there, and a large amount of valuable timber is doomed to destruction.

A heavy storm has been raging west and south of Minneapolis, Minn., to-day. Wires are down in both directions, and news is hard to obtain. A report comes from Kasson, on the Winona & St. Peter Railroad, that a cyclone passed over that place blowing down many buildings, killing two persons, and injuring several others. Hailstones fell measuring ten inches in circumference.

A great sawmill at Rat Portage, near Winnipeg, Man., is said to have been burned by incendiaries. The loss is put at $300,000. The loss at the Putnam Foundry in Connecticut is $60,000. A paper-mill near Chester, Pa., burned, destroying $80,000 worth of property. One man was killed and three hurt. At Long Island City, N. Y., two vast sheds where 1,000 Standard Oil men were employed in handling petroleum were burned with a loss which is estimated as high as $200,000. Eleven workmen were badly injured.

At Liverpool, Eng., fire in a cotton warehouse caused a loss of £40,000.

The extensive flour mills near Killucan, Westmeath, Ireland, have burned. Three persons perished. Loss £35,000.

There was a large conflagration the 7th inst., beginning in the educational institution of the Christian Brothers at Port au Prince, Hayti. Four blocks were destroyed. Loss $250,000.

So far as known about twenty-five people were killed at Rochester, Minn., in Tuesday's tornado. Three hundred houses were demolished and 200 damaged. A train was blown from the track between Owatonna and Zumbrota, and nine persons were killed and thirty-five seriously injured.

A cloud-burst emptied on the mining town called Silver King, in Arizona, and the Monarch of the Seas was filled with water and rocks in less than a minute. Other holes in the ground with equally grand designations were treated with similar disfavor. One man was drowned.

Four miles west of Forest City, Ark., a passenger-train on the Memphis & Little Rock Railroad fell through a trestle, killing three people, badly wounding one man, and slightly bruising the rest of the folks on board.

At Oakdale, Ill., a boiler explosion killed one man, and tore to atoms the engine room, boiler and engine, of the mill in that place.

LOCAL NEWS.

A company for the manufacture of cheese, was permanently organized at Lamoni, August 22d, with a capital stock of $300, with the privilege of $5,000. Mr. N. Riggs was chosen president, and Bro. O. B. Thomas secretary. Mr. A. N. Beard, has been hired to superintend the work of manufacturing. A small building has been erected for present use, and the work is to proceed for a short time this fall, for the purpose of advertising the institution. Permanent buildings are to be erected next year on a larger scale. It is proposed to manufacture nothing but full cream cheese. This is a move in the right direction. May it be crowned with abundant success.

A son of Mr. S. A. Ferguson, living near Lamoni, died from typhoid fever, August 21st. The house of Alexander Creveling probably worth $400, standing on the same section with Lamoni, was burned August 20th.

Superintendent Stivers was in town Monday and said the road would be in Leon, Sept. 15th. There is a good deal of work to be done between here and Decatur, but since harvest is over men and teams are plenty and a strong force will be put on. The right of way is being secured to the Eden line and two miles have been sub-let to farmers on the line. M. H. King has the contract and the work will be pushed rapidly.—Decatur County Journal.

TERRIBLE PLAGUES OF HISTORY.

The threatened cholera epidemic has called attention to the great plagues recorded in history, and a glance at some of the events may reconcile us to a grateful feeling of the comparative freedom from pestilence in late years. The earliest plagues of which there are any account are those described in Exodus, which occurred in Egypt 1481 B. C. In 534 B. C. there was a plague at Carthage so terrible that parents sacrificed their children to propitiate the gods. In 187 B. C., in the Greek Islands, Egypt and Syria, people died at the rate of 2000 a day. In Rome, A. D. 80, 10,000 persons died daily. Another plague in Rome, A. D. 256 took off 5000 a day. In 430, Britain was scourged so that the living were hardly able to bury the dead.

During the years 746 and 749 Constantinople lost 200,000 of its population. At Chichester, England, in 772, 34,000 people died, and in 954 Scotland lost 40,000 people. In 1407 London lost 30,000 citizens. There was a fearful pestilence at Oxford in 1471. The dreadful "sweating sickness" occurred in London in 1506 and again in 1517. In most of the towns half the people died, and Oxford was depopulated. In 1603-4, 30,578 people perished of plague in London. Constantinople again lost 200,000 people in 1611. In 1625 London lost 35,417 inhabitants. In 1632 Lyons lost 60,000. In 1356, 40,000 people died at Naples in six months. In 1764 London's great plague took off 68,596 inhabitants. In 1720, 60,000 people died at Marseilles. In 1773, 80,000 inhabitants of Bossora, Persia, died of plague. In 1792, 800,000 persons died of plague in Egypt. In Barbary 3000 people perished at Fez.

Asiatic cholera first appeared in England at Sunderland, October 26th, 1831, and in North America at Quebec, June 8th, 1832, and in New York June 22d, 1832. It revisited the United States in 1834, slightly in 1849, severely in 1855, and again lightly in 1866-67. In 1829-30 900,000 people died of cholera in Russia and Germany. In 1848-49 53,203 people died of it in England and Wales, and in 1854 these countries lost 20,097 and Naples 10,000 persons. In 1865 50,000 people died of cholera at Constantinople.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON KIRTLAND TEMPLE.

The committee appointed by the September Conference of 1882, to make repairs on the Kirtland Temple, beg leave to report the following as the work done and moneys received and paid out.

1. The floor has been raised about eleven inches, and leveled up as it was formerly, and a number of piers built of stone, and others of wood and stone, in order to support it in its place. The whole of the inside of the building, including the steeple, had to be raised in order to accomplish its work.

2. The Basement door-way, on the South side of the building, which had caved in and let in water from the ground on the outside, has been walled up with stone, and furnished with dressed stone steps, and covered with inclined folding doors.

3. Dressed stones that had fallen out of the wall near the foundation, have been restored to their places, and new ones supplied where they were missing: and the basement windows supplied with strong frames and iron bars. The work is nearly done and is strong and durable.

4. The steeple has been repaired and painted from roof to pinnacle. The decayed timbers that were found in the framework were removed, and new put in their places. This was difficult work, as nearly all of the timbers that gave it the main support, were found to be rotten, and had to be removed.

5. The entire roof has been covered and the gables, cornices and dormer windows thoroughly painted. This painting including that of the steeple, was attended with difficulty and danger. Some painters refused to work at all, elevated so high from the ground; others would work a day and quit. Fourteen hundred and seventy-five pounds white lead have been used thus far.

6. The windows have been glazed, the sashes traced, and frames painted. Something of the magnitude of this work may be seen when once acquainted with the fact, that there are 3,389 panes of glass in the building, a large number of which were broken out.

7. The lower audience room, or lower "inner court," yet needs a finishing coat of paint, chandeliers, curtains, and some minor unfinished work done, before it is complete. Its pulpits have been restored intact, with all of their wood ornaments, mouldings, tables, railing, lettering, etc., which had been taken away by curiosity hunters, sight-seers and other pillagers. This is the finest and most difficult work about the building, and the committee has been particular, and have insisted that every thing should be restored as it was. This was difficult, however, in some instances, as there was not a vestige of some things left, by which to be guided in the work. It is gratifying to be able to report however, that the repairing which has been done, is so nearly like the original, that none detect any material change. A lady visitor last week, who was able to identify the seat she occupied when the building was dedicated exclaimed, "It looks just as it did then."

8. The two steps of entrance have been reset to their former place.

9. The wall has been restored entire, except the seams and cracks in the outer plastering.

10. Two heating stoves have been placed in the building.

11. In the prosecution of the work of repairing, the committee has been greatly aided by Bro. E. L. Kelley, not only in assisting in superintending the work, but in performing labor also upon the building.

12. The Temple is not an exception to other buildings, so far as the work of repairing is concerned; for many things come to light that demand attention, only as the workmen proceed, such as decayed timbers not in sight, the removing of old rubbish, and the supplying of new material—all at an increased expense and labor, that could not be provided for with any degree of certainty previous to the work being begun. To enter into a more minute or detailed account of the work done, and repairs made, would be exceedingly tedious; and the committee believes it to be unnecessary; for it must be apparent to every one, that in the repairing of so large a building, which has stood vacant and uncared for, more or less, for thirty-five years, and has been marred and pillaged at the pleasure of those who had no regard for it, there are a thousand things that demand attention not essential to be particularized in a report.

The repairs made not only give permanence, support and protection to the building, with a pleasant place in which to worship, but its very appearance is improved, insomuch that it is a subject of remark by all who behold it. The Temple is, indeed, a monument of glory, standing to the memory of the cause of Christ, and the illustrious and faithful ones, who out of their penury, sacrifice and devotions, reared it to the worship and praise of God at an immense cost. And the Reorganization, sent to set in order the Church and call the saints back to the faith of their fathers, may well be proud, and lift their voices in gratitude to God, that he has put it into their hearts and given them the ability, that after the wastes of time have marred its walls, and the irreverent and lawless have pillaged its altars and courts, and carried away the trimmings and ornaments that gave them symmetry and beauty, they have manifested a willingness to contribute from their abundance to the restoring of the sacred edifice, and come and worship where Jehovah accepted the sacrifice of their fathers, and sealed them with the fire of his love.

The committee is sanguine in the belief, and each day's experience here upon the ground confirms this opinion, that there has been no work undertaken by the Saints upon which they will contemplate with such pleasure and delight in the future, than to reflect that they have contributed to the repairing and restoration of the "House of the Lord" to its former splendor and beauty—the only house upon the face of the whole earth in which God has deigned to put his name, and reveal himself to his people. Further, the influence produced on society by the restoring of the long neglected temple, is much greater than was anticipated by any, previous to the beginning of the work; and in the main is a most agreeable surprise. But notwithstanding what has been done, the work should be carried still further on the way to completion; for we have just reached the point where the finishing stroke must be given to some parts, and it is a matter of economy and credit to the Church that this be done. The lower audience room should be completed, and supplied with curtains and chandeliers. The vestibule should be repaired and the cracks in the outer plastering of the wall filled. The latter work however, will be but of small expense. The wall will then be complete and solid from basement to roof. The curtains should be restored, for the reasons: First, that in time of cold weather they may be lowered, and the room arranged to accommodate a large or small audience, without going to the expense, which is considerable, of heating so large a room at every service. Second, there are visitors coming constantly from various parts of the United States, the Territories, and Europe, to see the Temple. It is best that they be not too greatly disappointed. The more nearly that it is completed, the more favorable and weighty is the impression made upon them; and those interested in our success become encouraged in the thought that the Church is in earnest, and means to go forward. Accomplished facts are great things to lookers on; and strange as it may be, a grand and imposing building exerts a magical effect upon the masses of mankind; and more especially this one, when they are not certain but that in the moving forces that gave expression to this monument of a devoted people, the hand of God is hidden. Something of a disappointment is felt by those coming a long distance to view it, when their anticipations have been excited by the imposing outer appearance of the building, to swing open the doors and the second step brings them into the vestibule, where no repairs have been made, the plastering is off in many places, and the work of vandals is seen all along the stairs from lower to top floor. Invited to the main room and it is not completed. Third, the Temple is really doing the loudest preaching and giving the greatest prestige to the cause just now of anything else. It reaches the thousands everywhere. Then it is more of a key to the solution of the western problem than was anticipated until recently. The people may build temples in the valleys of the mountains, but their children have been heard to exclaim in the walls of this one, "I think more of this one than any of them." They know that the Lord met with his people here and put his Spirit into their hearts; and that he has never done either in temples elsewhere on this land; and these children are fast finding it out. Again, one Elder at the Temple is doing the work of ten, now, in the ordinary way; by preaching to the people on Sundays, and to visitors as they come during the week. It is necessary to keep one of the best men in the mission at the Temple, to reason with men and women of every name and faith that come to view it. In the last week the committee has seen as high as twenty-five or thirty at once in the building, and Bro. E. L. Kelley standing with text-books in hand, disputing and explaining with ministers and people. Every day the committee must stop work, some one of them, in order to conduct parties through the building, and talk and explain for hours. Fourth, the country is waking up in every direction, and free and fair minded men sympathize with our effort at restoring the Temple at Kirtland. Of course the devil is doing his work in the way of trying to hinder our progress, but this is a good sign. We are right where we must go forward for our own credit. Not to do it is loss and defeat.

In view of this urgent necessity, the Committee appeals to the Saints for further contributions, in order to carry along the work of repairing. The lower audience room and vestibule should be repaired at all events. It will cost one thousand dollars to do this work, or thereabouts.

The Committee has made an estimate of the amount it will cost to complete the building, and put it at three thousand dollars. This is what should be done, did the Church feel able to contribute so large an amount. The Committee believes this a large estimate of the cost, and that it will be all sufficient. Should the Church feel to respond to this call, either by making an effort to restore the building entire, or the completion of the lower audience room and vestibule, they can make their remittances, as before, to Bishop G. A. Blakeslee, Galien, Berrien Co., Michigan.

We append the following, which will doubtless be read with interest: From the 16th of May, when the new register began to be used, to August 8th, there were two hundred and forty-six visitors to the Temple who registered. Quite a number went away without registering. From August 1st to 8th, seventy-two names were registered. Quite a number purchased books, and all accepted tracts. The visitors are from all parts of the United States, Territories and Europe; and represent all classes of religions and various nationalities. Quite a sprinkling of ministers are found among the number. Among the most distinguished, and those most widely distributed as to residence who have lately visited the Temple, are the following: Mrs. Lucretia R. Garfield, Mentor, Ohio; Mrs. Catharine Hopley, London, England; Rev. C. S. Perceval, Cresco, Iowa; Mrs. Belle M. Sears, daughter of Bishop N. K. Whitney, and Miss Louie M. Wells, Salt Lake City, Utah; Rev. John E. Merrill, Painesville, Ohio; H. H. Riddell, New Orleans, Louisiana; M. R. Clark, Brooklyn, Long Island; Henry B. Blackwell and Mrs. Lucy Stone, Boston, Massachusetts; Mrs. Nellie I. Morrell, Henrietta, Pennsylvania; Reverend Mrs. Antionette Brown Blackwell, Fall River, Massachusetts; and Mrs. John Outhwaite, niece of Frederick G. Williams, Cleveland, Ohio.

The following is a list of contributors and amounts sent the Bishop, and expenses.

Total amount expended for material and labor, $2,015.05; leaving in hands of the Bishop, $145.15.

QUESTIONS ANSWERED BY BISHOP BLAKESLEE.

Ques.—If fifteen, twenty, or thirty families were to consecrate all they had, and put it in his hands to buy lands for an inheritance, and ask him to settle them upon it according to the law of consecration, would the Bishop do so, or would he not?

When an individual pays his surplus into the hands of the Bishop, or Agent, and the individual calls it surplus, ought it to be entered upon the books as surplus?

Ans.—Glad to learn that the Saints are looking after and discussing the law relating to duties in temporal things; for none can come to the right and proper understanding of this part, neither any other law relating to the kingdom of God, without interest and effort. Only let all our investigations be in a true spirit, and for the sake of knowledge, instead of, as is sometimes the case, for the sake of the mastery. Consecration signifies "a setting apart;" and consecration of properties would signify a setting apart for a particular purpose or use, a certain thing or portion of a thing. The law of consecration, then, would be the law providing this work of setting apart properties, the manner, amount, time, place, purpose, &c. This law may be under the head of "tithings," or it may be under the head of "Freewill Offerings," and an act under either of setting apart any certain sum, would be a consecration. Consecration does not mean a giving of "all," as some suppose; but simply a giving, or "setting apart." "Consecrate of thy properties." (Book of Covenants, sec. 42, par. 8.) And again: "That which thou hast to impart unto them." This does not refer to giving all of one's properties. The martyr in his letter of instruction, written from Kirtland to the Bishop in Zion, in 1836, says that "he, (the Bishop), will see to it that over zealous persons shall not be permitted to give all that they have; for such a course would work an injury to the work, rather than a good. The law of tithing is a definitive law, showing forth what is pleasing in the mind of our Heavenly Father that we should consecrate; hence consecration in a particular manner. In complying with the law of tithing, or free-will offering, there is always a consecration. But in consecration you do not necessarily comply with the law of tithing; for tithing is a consecration of a particular amount, or part, and anything less than this is not tithing in its true sense under the law, yet it may be a consecration

The revelation of 1861 makes it my duty to teach the law of tithing; and in doing this, I also teach necessarily, consecration, but not necessarily a definitive law of consecration, of all or a certain proportion of properties set forth as a distinct thing; for there is no such law laid down in the books, aside from tithings and freewill offerings. These two include the other, as showing how the proper consecrations may be made. The object of consecrations, as of freewill offerings and tithings, is to create a fund to be used for various purposes, and in various ways, chief of which are: preaching the gospel, caring for the poor, and laying the foundations of Zion; hence as soon as there is sufficient in the Bishop's hands to more fully carry out the law in this regard, the Bishop can and will as the Lord shall direct, proceed to provide for the inheritances. And to answer the question, whether I could or would purchase lands for parties, &c., did they put all of their properties in my hands," my answer is that I would not take their properties as a trustee, and not fulfill the terms of the trust. And if I did so, and did not so fulfill the trust, the law of the land would step in as it ought to, and compel me to carry out the trust, or take the means out of my private property. For this and other reasons I shall try and conform to the law, and for the present direct that the Saints comply with the law of tithing, and consecrate "of their properties," not all of their properties. Let us abide what we can and we will doubtless all grow better.

As to the question of surplus I will say that I am prepared to accept of and receipt for such surplus properties; but before doing this I must be fully satisfied it is surplus. It is not what a person may set apart and call "a surplus," that always is a surplus. The Bishop has a right to know, before he gives this receipt, what he is doing; because the receipt means something, and makes binding certain things, and he would not, could not properly give it, except upon a thorough understanding of the income, necessities, and surroundings of the party offering it; and then if he could not see it as the party offering sees it, the law provides that the matter shall be left to a court of High Priests to determine, and their decision would be binding. When the Church is in a position to properly administer this law, and the Lord shall direct, I shall gladly enter upon my duties in that regard; but who shall say I shall undertake it anyway, and of course make a failure, as person after person in the various factions has done. Let the Saints abide the law of tithing as directed, not undertaking to do more or less than they can do, and we shall all the better prosper. I am glad for one there is hope ahead. We have a desire to work. May the kind Father ever help us in this.

Your humble servant,
 G. A. BLAKESLEE,
Presiding Bishop.

It seems to me a fact, and an impressive one, that modern discoveries, instead of detracting from, increase the significance of the Bible symbolism. Every new revelation of the beautiful or useful properties of light, for instance, adds something significant to the meaning of our Lord's declaration: "I am the Light of the world," and to Paul's praise to the Philippians: "Among whom ye shine as lights in the world." It is better to believe that a man does possess good qualities than to assert that he does not!

"WHAT'S IN A NAME."

NAME is significant of a thing, order, creature, government, or church. The name is the first question that is asked concerning a thing, and then follows an explanation of the name in consideration. Church, kingdom, body, and bride, are terms used to convey the same meaning. We shall accept the most common.

CHURCH.

There are more than one order bearing that name; so we shall class them under three heads: The Church of Jesus Christ, the church of the devil, and the church of man. The Church of Jesus Christ presents itself first to notice, from the fact that He is the supposed Rock of all religious belief. Its peculiar name, tenets, organization, gifts, and powers, characterize it from all others. This we shall notice more particularly hereafter.

THE CHURCH OF THE DEVIL

Has at different times in the world's history, exercised a mighty power over the Church of Jesus Christ, more especially in the days of the Apostles. In those days it manifested itself through Pagan Rome, represented as "a great red dragon" (a). Afterwards uniting Church and State in the symbol of "a woman set upon a scarlet colored beast" (b), Papal Rome. The latter dates its Christian epoch from Constantine, better known to biblical readers as "Mystery, Babylon the Great, the mother of harlots and abominations of the whole earth" (c). And the great city which reigneth over the kings of the earth, is historically called Rome, where papacy has located the seat of its power, and by virtue of the keys claimed through Peter, has legalized all the subsequent changes that have occurred, and were it not for these anomalies, there might be some excuse for believing that she was the church. The statement made concerning her being the church of the devil, and all her progeny being harlots, is clearly set forth and defined in the Book of Mormon. "And it came to pass that I beheld this great and abominable church; and I saw the devil that he was the foundation of it—and I saw many harlots,—and the harlots are the desire of this great and abominable church. And he said unto me, behold there are save two churches only; the one is the Church of the Lamb of God, and the other is the church of the devil; wherefore, whoso belongeth not to the Church of the Lamb of God, belongeth to that great church, which is the mother of abominations; and she is the whore of all the earth."

(a) Rev. 12:14; (b) Rev. 17:1-6; (c) 1 Cor. 14:18

(d). This is explicit and confirms the statement of John the Revelator concerning her. And inasmuch as we are admonished to "Contend against no church, save it be the church of the devil" (e), we surely are justified in stating plainly, that the Catholic Church, with all her harlot daughters, composes the church of the devil.

SPIRITUALISM

In the abstract, never organized with constituted authority, and tenets of doctrine; but exists as spirit power, that which permeates and manifests to the masses who accept, irrespective of principles, or the moral condition of the medium. This power is the fountain spirit of the pageant church of the Devil; its office work is infecting the mind with the same faithless and anti-Christian dogmas; but like the fly, have no king nor head.

CHURCHES OF MEN

Evolved from the Catholic Church, claiming from her authority to organize, and incorporated by law, for mutual as well as spiritual benefits, known as man's devices, by name, namely, Lutheran's, St. John's, St. Peter's, &c.; organizations doing entirely away with God's appointed way and doctrine, that the gifts of the gospel are no longer needed. Thus these harlot daughters, like their illustrious mother, possess none of the characteristics that marked the Church of Jesus Christ; but seem satisfied with the old common saying, "It makes no difference which church you belong to, so you are sincere."

FIRST PROPOSITION CONSIDERED.

"What's in a name."—Shakespeare. Theology, speaking, says: "Be it known unto you all, and to all the people of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ,—neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven whereby we must be saved" (f). Jesus Christ, the authority, said: "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." (g). "And He said unto them, [Apostles] Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature" (h). The Apostles especially chosen and ordained, personified Jesus Christ, and acted for him; first in name, second in organization, third in the administration of the law, significant of the one body only; hence all other names significant of the orders or churches they designate, are in the abstract sense, impostors.

BUT WILL ANY NAME DO.

Suppose you commence a civil action at law against a party, is it necessary that you have the correct name? Again, suppose you wish a transfer of property, (by deed), is it essential to have your name properly inserted? Would a non de plume answer then? All transactions of a constitutionally organized, existing State, are done by the accredited officers, in the name of the State. Then where no State or Government exists de facto, no law can be administered in the supposed name; as there is no power except in the constitutional organization.

(d) B. M., 1st Nephi 3: 33-49. (e) D. C. Sec. 16: 4. (f) Acts 4: 10-12. (g) Math. 28: 17. (h) Mark 16: 14.

God organized but one church. That pattern can not be misunderstood, according to his immutable law; and it pleased him to distinguish it by that name, peculiar to its organization, Jesus Christ. God, through his revelator, while he was on the lonely Isle of Patmos, symbolizes his church by a woman, (i) which he designated as his wife: "And his wife hath made herself ready." (j) The other woman he symbolized as "Mystery, Babylon the Great, the Mother of Harlots and abominations of the earth." Jesus Christ's wife is recognized by her name and peculiar organization and powers. The Mother of Harlots, and all her harlot daughters, are recognized by their pseudo-character, and this first will be the distinguishing feature. The wife, true and lawful, proves the alliance as a recognized fact by the divinely established rule, "These signs shall follow them that believe." (k) The harlot daughters have invariably failed to produce one scintilla of material evidence that God has ever acknowledged them by that rule. "These signs shall follow them that believe," or angelic administration or spiritual manifestations.

Would it be in harmony with God's immutable will to own and accept a harlot with many lovers, and who disregards the sacred covenant ties, destroys all conjugal affinity, that should exist between husband and wife, producing discord, disunion, distrust, disease and death. Jesus Christ soon will come to claim his wife, (church), how will he know her? First by name. (Jesus Christ). Second by organization. Apostles, prophets evangelists, pastors and teachers. (l) Third by the gifts or powers she possesses, as knowledge, faith, wisdom, tongues, interpretation, discernment, healing, revelation. (m) These were some of her peculiar characteristics when he left her eighteen hundred years ago; and as he left her, so will he find her, and recognize her by these traits of character.

Reader, pause, reflect, consider whether this be true. Examine the church you belong to by God's only appointed way. Compare carefully, in name, organization, and powers, with his unchangeable law, and to your astonished mind you will find but one true and living church, organized according to God's own appointment in all the broad earth. Will you receive it? Remember there is something in a name.

(i) Rev. 12:1; (j) Rev. 19:7. (k) Mark 16:14, 21. (l) Eph. 4:12. (m) 1 Cor. 12.

WM. ANDERSON.

PECULIAR BRIEFS.

I BELIEVE religion iz gud in its place, but ther seems tu be a gud many mistakes about it. I wuntz herd related about tu men who alwaz tried tu get ahead ov each other, and finaly one ov the tu was called on tu die, so he left wurd to hav on hiz tumestone this: "Here I lie az snug az a bug in a rug." An when the other died he wanted to be buried opposite the other, with this on hizen: "Here I lie, snugger than that other bugger." It accords with human nature, evry one tryin tu get ahead of the other; an az there is such a variety of notions about religion, it iz easy to believe ther is a gud many mistakes, an az all iz different, tha all can't be correct. If the Bible iz tru, I think az sum infedels say, the Mormons haz got the truth, that is the Anti-Polygamy Mormons. For any consistent person tu compare the doctrine ov these latter named Mormons with the doctrine in the New Testament, must acnolege that it iz the same thing. An az I hav herd it sed that the saints who live up tu the doctrin will yet take the wurld, simply because the Lord will giv it tu them. I hav herd it sed by a energetic defender ov the faith that the Mormons iz like a mullen plant that haz gone to seed, an if you hit it a kick it scatters an springs up all over creation. An when the enemy ov this peculiar cause routed them by mobs, &c., tha scattered all over the world so tu da ther ar converts an teachers ov this peculiar faith in evry known land. It seems also thar ar tu powers in existence that iz higher than man the inferior at variance with the higher, an it haz been sed tu that this opponent haz changed his tacticks sum sence the big fite commenced az he finds he kan du more agin it inside now. I hav notized in the late law that all who hav been warned shud warn others an az these times waz tu be az the times ov Noe, the warnun iz the destruction ov the world by fire insted ov water. The ark not a huge boat but an order after the ancient pattern az a stone to grow az a mountain to fill the whol earth.

Then az one who haz thus ben warned I sa tu all yu who read this an ar on the halt in the matter, that in a few years from now this wurld will be destroyed by fire, an if you want tu be among the saved, consider the reasons you hav for believing thus, enter the ark, respect the rules, so yu may be ov them who will take the wurld when the Lord gives it tu them, after it haz ben cleanzed by fire an made a pleasant abode for all, great an small, peace an plenty in grate abundance. An tu all you who ar now in the ark, I hav only to say in konclusion try tu stay in till the end ov the war. And in order to not encourage the evil element let us unite so he can't work inside, an while he iz inventing sum other way we may git thro the mill, an be ready fur our share wich we ar told iz tu be tu each one az tha ar willin an able tu du, an not to get for what sum others hav dun, for God the great will never condemn any for not duing what tha waz not able tu.

INFERIOR.

P. S.—Fur infurmentation I will state a idea that I entertain. I beleve ther iz different grades ov spirits born into this wurld, sum celestial an sum terrestrial an sum telestial. An tho celestial spirits ar priveleged to gain celestial glory, yet if tha don't abide the celestial law, tha will hav to be content with sum lessser glory. An telestial spirits az don't cum up tu ther privelege will get no glory at all. I claim to be a telestial, I am convinced ov this from experience, hence I sine Inferior tu what I write.

THE BOOK OF MORMON IS THE STICK OF EPHRAIM.

Dear Herald:—Will you allow me a little space in your valuable columns to give some of my reasons for differing from Bro. E. H. Gurley, in his views set forth in Herald of July 28th, concerning the stick of Ephraim. I am one of those who believe, from what I consider the best of evidence, that the Book of Mormon is the Stick of Ephraim, spoken of in Ezekiel 37: 16. First I wish to notice some of Bro. Gurley's arguments, as he has presented them to us in Herald of July 28th. He first seems to object to the thought that the great things of God's law, spoken of in Hosea 8: 12, refer to the Book of Mormon; and the reason he gives us is, because Hosea wrote one hundred and sixty years before Lehi left Jerusalem, and says Hosea places it in the past tense.

Now if the brother will notice carefully the sayings of the prophets, and their manner of expressing themselves, he will be forced to admit that the prophets often spoke of events that were to transpire hundreds of years in the future, as though they had already taken place. Let me call the brother's attention to Isaiah 45: 1. "Thus saith the Lord to his anointed, [Cyrus], whose right hand I have upholden." We see here that the Lord speaks in the past tense, and surely the brother will not say that the event took place, or that the Lord upheld Cyrus' hand, until over one hundred years had past away. Again, in Isaiah 29: 1: "And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book," etc. Here the prophet speaks in the present tense, yet we know that the event did not take place for several hundred years subsequent to the time Isaiah made the prediction. And thus we find that the prophets often, as they were permitted by the Spirit of God to look down through time, and see the great events as they were to transpire, spake of them as though they had already taken place. The brother labors to prove to us that Ephraim and Israel are associated together in some far distant parts, and fixes Ephraim's locality away from America; and therefore the Book of Mormon can not be the Stick of Ephraim. Now let us see how far Ephraim is, or will be, from our land. Turn to Book of Covenants, sec. 108, par. 6. Here the Lord is speaking of the return of the Ten Tribes from the north country, which is Israel, with whom the brother says Ephraim was associated. The Lord says they shall come in remembrance before the Lord. * * * And an high way shall be cast up for them, &c. And they shall bring forth their rich treasures unto the children of Ephraim. It seems quite clear to me from the foregoing that Israel and Ephraim were not so closely associated as the brother would make it appear; for from this word we find that Israel is to come to Ephraim, not come with him. Again where was Ephraim to be when Israel came to him?

Read farther: "And the boundaries of the everlasting hills shall tremble at their presence." Where are the boundaries of the everlasting hills? According to Jacob's blessing upon Ephraim's head, geographically applied, they will be found in the land of America. So we find from the above that Ephraim is upon this land.

I do not wish to occupy too much space in noticing all the points in the brother's article, but will content myself by calling his attention to the word of the Lord, as found in Book of Covenants, sec. 26, par. 2, which, to my mind, should settle all controversy on this point. The Lord says: "Behold this is wisdom in me: wherefore marvel not; for the hour cometh that I will drink of the fruit of the vine with you on the earth, and with Moroni whom I have sent unto you, to reveal the Book of Mormon, containing the fulness of my everlasting gospel, to whom I have committed the keys of the record of the Stick of Ephraim." From the foregoing we gather this fact: Moroni, the servant of God, and Prophet on this land, now America, the one who was sent to Joseph Smith to reveal the Book of Mormon, also received the keys of the Stick of Ephraim.

As the brother was so particular about the past tense, let him here notice, that the keys of the record of the Stick of Ephraim have been committed to Moroni. But if the brother's view is correct, and the Stick of Ephraim is something that is to be revealed in the future, then the keys have not yet been committed to Moroni; for the keys evidently mean reveal, open, bring to light, &c. From the word revealed through Joseph, I can come to no other conclusion, but that the Book of Mormon is the Stick of Ephraim, spoken of in Ezekiel 37: 16. To my mind it certainly would be inconsistent to suppose for a moment, that Moroni would have the keys of the Book of Mormon, to be revealed to Joseph Smith here on this continent, and at the same time have the keys to reveal the Stick of Ephraim on some other far off land. But on the other hand, this Prophet Moroni held the keys of the record of the Stick of Ephraim, which is the Book of Mormon revealed to Joseph.

A NEW DECLARATION OF INDEPENDENCE.

[Read by Rev. F. O. Blair, at Lebanon, Ills., July 4, 1882, at a Temperance Picnic given by the W. C. T. U.]

WHEN in the course of human events, it becomes necessary for a people to dissolve their connection with the Government to which they have hitherto owed allegiance, a decent respect for the opinions of mankind demands that the causes should be clearly set forth, which impel them to the separation.

We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal; that they are endowed by their Creator with certain inalienable rights; that among these are life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness; that to secure these rights, governments are instituted among men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed; that, whenever any form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the right and duty of the people to alter, or to abolish it; that it is the first law of self-preservation that any State or Nation may, and of right, ought to do all those things which are necessary to perpetuate its own existence; and to abolish all those practices, and to counteract all those influences which are calculated to ruin the body politic, and destroy society.

For many years the inhabitants of this country have suffered from the cruel acts and oppressive measures instituted by King Alcohol, with the evident design to reduce them under an absolute despotism, and after long and patient endurance of flagrant wrongs, and after having made many and fruitless efforts to obtain redress, until it is plainly evident that nothing can be hoped from appeals to his justice or mercy, we, the people of these United States, having resolved to cast off the authority of this tyrant, do unite in this declaration of the causes and reasons which constrain us to take so important a step, and of the miseries and grievances which have been inflicted on us by him, until his government has become a burden too heavy to be longer borne. The history of his course toward us in the past is a history of repeated injuries and usurpations, all having in direct object the establishment of an absolute tyranny over these States, and the subjection of the people, through their depraved appetites and passions, to his complete control.

To prove this, let facts be submitted to a candid world:

He has refused his assent to laws the most wholesome and necessary for the public good.

He has caused the enactment of laws which have opened the sluice-ways of destruction, pouring forth upon the people of this land a dreadful tide of intemperance, with all the attendant evils of drunkenness, disease and death.

He has bribed in various ways, and under various disguises, the legislators, the Judges and the juries of the country to prevent the enactment and the execution of laws, however needful for the welfare of the public, which would interfere with his nefarious traffic in intoxicating liquors, or prevent the accumulation of wealth by himself at the expense of the comfort, the fortunes, the lives and the future well-being of his victims.

He has taken away our property, earned by patient, faithful labor, and reduced our families to beggary and want.

He has diverted the wealth of the Nation from its proper office to the support of the criminal, the pauper and the idiot, caused to become such by his blighting influence.

He has locked up vast sums of money from the legitimate uses of trade and commerce in the jails, the penitentiaries and the asylums, these having been made necessary by the vices and crimes he has stimulated into activity among the people.

He has extorted many millions from the laborers of the Nation to be expended in maintaining the police forces, the courts of justice, and all the machinery of Government, devoted largely to a vain effort to remedy the evils he himself has inflicted upon society.

He has transformed the fruits of the earth, given for the sustenance of man and beast, into a death-dealing poison, which changes men into demons.

He has diverted the labors of thousands from productive occupations to the preparation and distribution of the fiery flood which desolates our land.

He has smitten the people with insanity and idiocy, and filled our asylums with maniacs, and driveling idiots, as well as the prisons with our institutions for the feeble-minded with criminals.

He has enticed our boys from their homes, and sent them forth as tramps and vagabonds in the land, and, instead of good citizens, they have become the dangerous classes of society.

He has won our young men from lives of sobriety, industry and frugality, to a course of drunkenness, indolence and wastefulness.

He has drawn away our young women from the paths of virtue to dens of infamy and frightful depths of degradation.

He is responsible, directly or indirectly for three-fourths of all the crimes committed, and four-fifths of all the murders done.

He has dragged down the gifted and noble of all classes from positions of honor, trust and usefulness, and with ruined reputations, and names disgraced, has consigned them to a drunkard's grave and a drunkard's doom.

He has blighted the sunny, happy years of childhood, and caused the little ones to pass their lives in squalor, misery and want; and homes that might have been the abode of perennial happiness have been turned into habitations of infernal misery.

He has prostituted the public press to his purposes and uses, so that, too often, instead of nobly speaking out for justice and right, and the good of the people at large, it basely yields to his demands to be sustained in his efforts to crush and ruin our race.

He has infatuated very many of the office-seekers and office-holders with the belief that it is far more important to promote his interests than to labor for the welfare of the people at large.

He has changed, in many places, the Holy Sabbath, with its hours of peaceful quiet, a day devoted to religious observances and the worship of Almighty God, to a day of revelry, drunkenness and debauchery.

In every stage of these oppressions we have petitioned for redress in the most humble terms; our repeated petitions have been answered only by repeated injury. A ruler whose character is thus marked by every act which may define a tyrant is unfit to be the sovereign of a free people.

Nor have we been wanting in our attentions to those engaged in making and selling alcoholic drinks. We have implored them to have pity upon the suffering wife and the ragged, starving children; we have appealed to every sentiment of our common nature to induce them to withhold the deadly draught from our boys and young men, and the habitual drunkard, but all in vain. They, too, have been deaf to the voice of justice and humanity, and have laughed us to scorn.

We have exhausted all our resources in our endeavors to obtain relief from those engaged in the traffic in distilled and fermented liquors, and have utterly failed. The only course left us to pursue is to dissolve completely our connection with so unjust, so tyrannical, so oppressive a power.

We, therefore, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the Universe for the rectitude of our intentions, do solemnly publish and declare that the people of this land are, and of right ought to be, free and independent; that we are absolved from all allegiance to King Alcohol, and to all his adherents; that, as free and independent citizens of these United States, we have the right to break away from his control and to banish the tyrant from our land.

And for the support of this declaration and the accomplishment of our arduous undertaking, we earnestly invoke the aid and sympathy of the civilized world, the fervent prayers of all Christian people, and the help and guidance of Almighty God. And we mutually pledge to each other our lives, our fortunes and our sacred honor.

Love is the main principle of Christian life. Herein consists Christian liberty; a Christian is freed from the law, yet he does what the law requires, and more, because his obedience is not of the letter but of the Spirit.

The Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

DANIEL F. LAMBERT, ASSOCIATE.

Lamoni, Iowa, Sept. 8th., 1883.

THE Saints' Reunion Meeting will be held at Leland's Grove, Shelby county, Iowa, from September 15th to 23d. Persia, on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul Railway, is the station nearest the place selected by the committee for the camp ground. The Railway Company will give return tickets from Persia to all points on their line from which passengers come, for one-third full fare, provided that the passenger has paid full fare from such point of destination. Certificates will be issued to those attending the meeting who come over said line. Those coming from the far east, by the way of Chicago, can arrange to come over the Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul road, and can return to Chicago for one-third fare. Those in Illinois, Michigan and Wisconsin reaching Chicago can do the same thing.

We don't want every body to come; but every one who desires to, and can enjoy such a meeting, is wanted. All will be most cordially received. The local committee, with Bro. Wm. Chambers at its head, are doing all they can, and will do all they can, to make the meeting a success.

It is expected that a sufficient number of the leading ministry will be present to fill the various appointments for preaching to advantage.

We must give this meeting a big boom, so that if it be found profitable to the Saints, and thus to the cause, it may be repeated. If it be given a fair trial and be found unprofitable, the repetition of it would be unwise.

But somehow we feel that those who will gather at that meeting will have an excellent season of enjoyment. There will be time for making acquaintances; time for visiting; time for prayer and testimony; and time for preaching, and for praise. Come.

IN our last issue we published three letters from Rev. L. L. Luse. The first two were put on the copyhook for insertion when first received by us, but owing to the personal nature of them we thought others more important, forgetting the date of the challenge to Bro. R. M. Elvin; for which forgetfulness we apologize to Rev. Luse and to Bro. Elvin, as it would have been better that it should have appeared before the date named, August 14th.

We believe it to be unnecessary for further attacks upon, or references to Rev. Luse of a personal nature to be made by correspondents to the HERALD; and shall assume the responsibility of leaving out such references hereafter if they are made. We believe Bro. Elvin quite competent to decide and act for himself touching any matter of discussion offered him; whether by Rev. Luse, or others; and we were quite unaware of our knowledge that Bro. Elvin's courage was faulty, or lacking, until the closing one of the three published letters was received. We think, however, that the Master's cause may safely be left with his servants.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE think that some of our moneyed brethren would do well to form an association, the object of which should be to buy lands and resell to actual settlers, who may need aid to obtain homes in "the regions round about," securing the purchase money in such way that the person helped, may by industry, frugality and prompt repayment, aid some other needy like himself. We have the procedure of such an association all mapped out, and will cheerfully help those who may feel willing to put forth an effort in that direction. We suggested this to several some years ago, one of them is now ready to put a portion of money into such an enterprise. There is no question but what it may be so established and conducted that no one need to lose a dollar, but may put a part of God's bounty to him where it "will do the most good."

The Board of Publication has secured the services of Bro. Daniel F. Lambert as Associate Editor in the Herald Office. He has removed to Lamoni, and is in the discharge of his duties as associate.

The lumber for the frame of the meeting house at Lamoni, will be ordered this week. The rock work on the foundation and basement walls is approaching completion. Bro. John Keown, who worked on the Temple at Nauvoo, for two and a half years as a stone cutter, is at work cutting the stone for the angles of the basement. He is doing his work with a zest, too, as it is evidently in keeping with a manifestation to him that he should help to build a house unto the Lord, lately received.

Advices from Bro. Heman C. Smith indicate that the debate heretofore written of was successful, so far as it was permitted to go. Rev. Worly succeeded in arousing a feeling that resulted in driving Brn. Smith and Montague away before the finish, the Saints there being compelled to refuse entertainment to the Elders. Fourteen men warned Brn. Smith and Montague to leave, which they were constrained to do. Liberty of speech has not yet been obtained as a political right in some parts of the south as yet.

There are several school houses in the near vicinity of Lamoni, where the Elders are and will be well received. Who will occupy them.

Brn. J. H. Richey, Charles Church, and a Mr. Moon, are building houses on the west side, as it is known at Lamoni. Bro. S. V. Bailey's house is completed; and he will be in occupation and at home soon.

Bro. Israel L. Rogers is visiting at Lamoni. He expresses himself much pleased with the evidences of thrift and prosperity which he finds among the Saints. He is in good health and looks hearty. It is a great pleasure to the Saints to have him in their midst. He spoke at the morning service of August 26th, at the old church, following Elder Lewis Gaultier, at the request of presiding elder, H. A. Stebbins.

The HERALD contains a mistake in the notice of the death of Bro. Edward Thomas' two little girls, on page 551. Instead of "at Magnolia, Iowa," it should have read, "at Fremont, Nebraska."

BRO. W. ANDERSON thinks that Brn. Borley, Thornton, Shumate, and others of the Saints at Montrose, Iowa, with whom the idea of building the church there originated, and who were the movers and first aids in its erection, who have since died or removed from the village, should have a portion of the credit to be given for building it. This is true; nor does the fact that it has been called "The Sisters' Church" in the HERALD, from time to time, reflect any discredit on the brethren named by Bro. Anderson, or upon others connected with it. The Saints now at Montrose are not in fault for such name having been given it. The appellation was given by the Editor when referring to the church, from the consideration that the branch at Montrose has been for years composed principally of sisters; the men folks having died or removed. Brn. Borley, Thornton, Shumate and others having laid down their warfare in death; Brn. Alcott, Anderson, Doty and others, having removed elsewhere—very few were left. Sisters Eliza Newberry, Ruth Turner, Thornton, Crandall, Oman and others, have remained; and to them is due the later work of finishing the building. "Honor to whom honor is due," will accord to all their just meed of praise. Nor will a fair appreciation of the Sisters' finishing work, detract from those brethren who conceived the idea and gave largely of their time and means for its accomplishment.

WE clip from the Town and Country, a New South Wales paper, sent us by a brother in Sydney, a reprint from the Levant Herald, which if it should finally prove to be true, would be the most extraordinary discovery of the age, and would astonish as well as discomfit the scoffers at Noah's Ark and the deluge. Bro. Isaac Sheen used to express the belief that the ark was in existence, covered by ice and snow on Ararat, and would finally be disclosed, either by some great convulsion of nature which would throw it out of its resting place, or by the slow glacial processes which would send it down to the valley below the snow line.

One of the ships of the Ancient Vikings (Norsemen) was lately found in the ice and debris of a mountain torrent's bed, and has been preserved under the auspices of the Archæological Society at Christiana; and there is a possibility that just such a mute witness as the Ark would be, may have been preserved by the Almighty, to add its terrible testimony to the truth and wonders of the latter day work. But while we believe it to be possible that the Ark has been found, we shall wait for the test that time brings to all truths and errors. For if it be the Ark, and preserved as indicated in the account we print, it will last long enough for enthusiastic and curious people, including saints, to make a pilgrimage to it, and in its wooden walls to pay a tribute of speech and prayer and song to Him who leaves himself not without witnesses in the world.

REPORTED DISCOVERY OF NOAH'S ARK.

A recent Reuter's London telegram announced that "intelligence is to hand that a series of avalanches have occurred at Mount Ararat, in Armenia. A number of villages have been completely destroyed, and hundreds of people have been killed." It is surprising that no reference was made to a remarkable alleged discovery in connection with one of the storms of avalanches, and which is referred to in the following extract taken from the Levant Herald, just arrived, being nothing less than that of the supposed remains of Noah's Ark. Our contemporary says:—We have received from our correspondent at Trebizond intelligence of the return of the commissioners appointed by the Turkish Government to inquire into the destruction of Mushuk, Ashak, and Bayazid by avalanches, and to render relief to the distressed villagers in the glens of the Ararat ranges, who suffer so severely from the unusual inclemency of the season. They found the reports of the destruction to have not been exaggerated, and the distress to be very great. But the expedition was fortunate in making a discovery which can not fail to be of the deepest interest to the whole of the civilised world, for amid the fastnesses of one of the glens of Mount Ararat they came upon a gigantic structure of some very dark wood embedded at the foot of one of the glaciers, with one end protruding, and which they believed to be none other than the old ark in which Noah, with his family, navigated the waters of the deluge. The place where the discovery was made is about five days' journey from Trebizond, in the department Van in Armenia, and about four leagues from the Persian frontier. The glen is one of the resources of a tributary of the river Aras, which flows into the Caspian. The villagers of the Bayazid, which was situated about a league off, have seen this strange object for nearly six years, but were deterred, by a strong superstitious fear, from approaching it, as there was a rumour very generally believed that strange voices were heard within it; and it was said that some young men more daring than the others who had approached, had seen a spirit of fierce aspect gazing out of the hole or door in the upper portion of the structure. Nothing deterred by the fears of the villagers the commissioners, with their personal attendants, proceeded to examine it. The villagers positively refused to approach even the neighbourhood of the glacier in which it was embedded. The way led through a dense forest, and the travelers were obliged to follow the course of the stream, wading up to the waist in water from the melting glacier. After a toilsome journey of three or four hours, during which they incurred considerable danger from the masses of snow impending from the heights above, they were rewarded by the sight of a huge dark mass projecting 20 or 30ft from the glacier, on the left hand side of the ravine. They found that it was formed of a wood not grown in these elevated districts, nor nearer than in the low hot valleys of the Euphrate, where it is known by the natives as "izim," said to be the ancient gopher wood of Scripture. It was in a good state of preservation, being painted or stained on the outside with a dark brown pigment, and constructed of great strength. It was a good deal broken at the angles, from being subjected to somewhat rough usage by the moraines, during the slow descent of the glacier from the lofty peaks towering away beyond the head of the valley to a height of 17,000 ft, a process which, considering the nature of the country and the slow pace at which these snow rivers travel, especially in the higher altitudes, must have required thousands of years. The projecting portion seemed about 40 or 50 feet in height, but to what length it penetrated into the glacier they could form no estimate. Effecting an entrance through one of the broken corners, the explorers found it filled for the greater part with ice, the interior being partitioned off into compartments of about 12 or 15 feet high, into three of which alone they were able to make their way, owing to the mass of frozen substances with which these were filled, and also of their fear of the structure collapsing with the superincumbent and overhanging mass of huge glacier. The commissioners, one of whom is an Englishman, Captain Gascoyne, formerly attached to the British Embassy in this city, and well known as a scientific investigator, are fully confident that it is the Ark of Noah, and they support the position by maintaining that having been enveloped in snow, and frozen, it has been kept in a state of perfect preservation; that having rested on one of the peaks of Ararat range, as described in Scripture, the Ark must have been lying on the soil, for the waters had "covered the whole earth," and "the tops of the highest mountains," "and all the high hills that were under the whole heavens were covered, fifteen cubits upward did the water prevail, and the mountains were covered." In these circumstances the snow that ordinarily covers this lofty mountain, for it is 17,230 feet in height, would have been all melted away by the waters of the flood when Noah first grounded on the peak. But as the waters were slowly receding for some five months, and Noah and his family, following the receding waters, gradually made their way towards the low lands, the mountain would of course resume its great height over sea-level, and, in consequence, be again covered with snow, which must at once have enveloped the Ark as it lay—it may be supposed—on the slope, near the summit of the peak. As perpetual snow now covers Mount Ararat for more than halfway down, it is manifest that the Ark must have been kept in a perfect state of preservation while slowly, during the silent lapse of four or five thousand years, creeping down, after the manner of the glaciers, into the valley below, there to appear in these later ages to discomfit the scoffer, and confirm the sure word of revelation. The commissioners had already reported to his Majesty, and at the instance of the German Ambassador, prompt steps have been taken to protect from destruction and to preserve a relic so interesting to the whole world; as it was rumoured that an enterprising American traveler had opened negotiations, in the hope of purchasing the Ark from the Pasha of the district, in order to have it removed to the United States for exhibition. It is hoped that this most interesting relic may be preserved to the world, and as the surrounding country is of an exceedingly mountainous character, and the defiles leading towards either Trebizond or Batoum both narrow and intricate, that no attempt will be made to remove it out of the district, where there is no doubt every Government in the civilized world would contribute to its careful protection and preservation, as the most ancient and remarkable monument of antiquity to be found in any part of the world.

BRETHREN Clarence St. Clair and A. White, of Independence, Missouri, sent to the Editor a specimen of the fruit of the goodly land. It is an apple, and tips the post-masters's scales at one pound and a quarter. It is fair and smooth, rosy checked, and may be a Pound-pippin, or a Gloria-Mundi. But as the variety is not known to us, we can not state. Bro. Israel Rogers was with us when it came posting in, and he states that he believes that the region whence the apple came is the best fruit region in the United States. We thank Brn. St. Clair and White, and accept the apple as a sample of "fair Zion's fruits," and of the large heartedness of dwellers in Zion. We hope that when we shall sample the specimen by taste, as well as by sight, the flavor will not belie the appearance.

Bro. Joseph.—It is a very rare thing indeed for a Baptist minister to bear witness to a discourse by an Elder of our church, as was the case here last Sunday. I secured the Baptist Church for Brother Anthony to preach a funeral sermon in. The minister occupied the stand with him, and endorsed every word spoken, and said "it was sealed by the Spirit of God." It was the first sermon he ever heard by a Latter Day Saint. It was so different from what he expected to hear, that he told the congregation that he was very much disappointed. He said he came there expecting to hear a Mormon sermon preached from a Mormon Bible; but said he, "I have heard only what I have been trying to preach for twenty-seven years, and preached from the same Bible." He is a man of some influence in this community, and his statements there will be of great service to the cause. Brother Anthony preached two excellent discourses the Sunday before, in the grove near our place, to a fair sized and intelligent congregation, among them the Rev. Captain Tubbs of New York, of Methodist persuasion. Brother Anthony preached one night in our house, and once at the house of one of the neighbors. Conference put the right man in the right place when they assigned Brother Anthony to this mission. It is hoped that he will be continued here another year.

May God bless and prosper the work here and elsewhere, is the prayer of your sister in the gospel, MARY LEAVINS.

OAKLAND, Cal.,

Brother Joseph.—I have not been discoursing much of late, as I have been closely confined to business, which at present is quite necessary. However, I still do a little by way of scattering tracts among the street assemblies of the Salvation Army. I also fitted out Bro. James Steel for the Holiness Camp in the land of Beulah. A friend informed me since, that some one had been in the camp with the tract, ("Which is the Church,") and they all had them. Our meetings here and also in the city are good. Many strangers lend a listening ear; and I should say the truth has been ably presented; no excuse for its not being comprehended.

Bro. T. J. Andrews, the bishop's agent of this district has been here, instructing the faithful concerning the rendering of the law of tithing by the Bishop. That all gifts come under the head of tithing, and that all disbursements must be paid from that fund; and as every branch had its incidental expenses, one from its number should be chosen as custodian of the branch, and he act subject to the agent. Some of our old Elders think it commensurate with intricate working, and will require time to bring around this new regime.

The Herald contains this notice: "The Saints' Herald." "This is the official paper of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. It is explanatory of the faith of the Church and Promulgates the teachings of original Mormonism, in contradistinction of Utah Mormonism."

Bro. Joseph, would you be so kind as to inform me what Mormonism is? If the Herald explains the faith of the Church, is that not sufficient? Is it in keeping with ethics, independent of etiquette, that we dispense with euphemism and accept our enemies' slang? or should we not rather eschew it, not in esoteric, but proclaim it upon the house top to Jew and Gentile, that we do not accept the name of Mormon. Nor shall we, for we are the legitimate children of Jesus Christ by virtue of the law of adoption. I subscribe to no other, I acknowledge no other name. The name of Jesus Christ is good, it is significant of the name of this church; and I feel it is our duty to defend that fair name. I feel satisfied that you, with others, use the term Mormon as applied to the Church, with good intent. But our enemies use it to malign our character, as the name is held in utter abhorrence by them.

Did the Church ever pass an act prohibiting unbaptized children from partaking of the sacrament?

The influx of emigration has given our state a new impetus. Land has within the past two years doubled in price. The mining interest has proved a success in many parts, and many new discoveries have been made. A large acreage of fruit has been planted, and the yield has been enormous. Canning establishments are busily engaged in preparing it for market, which when ready is shipped to almost all parts of the world. We are now having a great gathering of the Knight Templars; they come from all parts of the States. I have never at any time seen so many strangers at once. Henry Ward Beecher is booked for this coast, to deliver his great literary master piece, entitled "Evolution." He no doubt is a great man, and has his peculiar way of seeking notoriety. His latest sensation, the most startling of all, is, "There is no Hell!" Ben Hogan, the reformed bruiser, gambler and gin miller, blows his gospel trumpet in our fair city, calling sinners to repentance. I think he sees more ready cash in his trumpet and less exercise in his muscle. Bro. Roberts is quite poorly. Bro. A. Haws has returned home.

Yours in bonds,

WM. ANDERSON.

Bro. Joseph.—A lady of this town, Mrs. Reney, left with us a scrap book, in which I find a description of Him who, to me, is God over all; and while you and I and thousands of others, cheerfully and freely confess him to be the Christ the Savior of men, I wait (shall I say impatiently or patiently) to see the coming day, when every knee shall bow, or bend, and every tongue confess his superior power, wisdom and authority, over all his works, in Heaven and on earth. Then we will see what will become of the infidel hosts. Ingersoll and his clan will not, I trust, be forgotten. I would like to know by which power it is done; by willingness, or by force, or compulsion. I shall enclose the description that was given of our Lord, when he was here on earth, hoping to see it soon in the Herald. Eleven days more and my eighty-seventh year will be filled.

Love and respects to all.

BRIGGS ALDEN.

ENFIELD, Middlesex, England,
August 10th, 1883.

Dear Bro. Joseph.—I wish in the plainest way to bear testimony to the truth of the gospel as taught by us. Before I entered the church, I was a member of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, and nothing, I said many times, would make me give up my belief; but when the truth was presented, I could but accept it. My poor mother had been very ill, and had been staying with my aunt, her sister; and she being a Latter Day Saint, preached Christ unto her. She being religiously inclined, accepted the truth, and was healed, and returned home to those who never thought of seeing her again. Through this I was led to the truth, and the moment I accepted it, my fellow Christians (so called) turned their backs upon me; but when some would come and try to get me to return, they went away with the truth preached unto them. But this I must confess, I was myself ofttime surprised at the truths I had told them, and things from the word would come into my mind that I never thought of. When they were gone I could not help praising God. I ofttime felt I should like to go out and preach to my neighbors; but my time had not then come.

I was baptized on the 24th August, 1879. Had a great desire to tell others the story as our Great Master taught it. So on the 14th of October, 1880, I was ordained to the office of Teacher, by Elder James Gerrard. But before this I had received the gift of prophecy, and this was a great help to me. I knew that God was pleased to accept me, and what joy fills our hearts if we will only look at the blessings of the Father. I labored on in the good cause, and on the 10th of July, 1881, I was ordained by Elder C. D. Norton to the office of a Priest, which I hold now, and feel well in the cause. The work here, in this branch, has a good deal to contend with, but the darkness seems to be breaking, and soon the light must shine, if we are faithful. I read with pleasure the Herald. My prayer is that the truth may spread still faster.

Yours in the hope of the truth,
JOSEPH A. KEMP.

CLINTON, Iowa, Aug. 24th. 1883.

Bro. Joseph.—For some time past my mind was greatly disturbed with regard to certain passages of the Book of Mormon, differing from the Inspired Translation. And at the request, and by the advice of Bro. M. T. Short, I wrote to Bro. Blair for information. Enclosed you will find his letter; and as it has greatly helped me in the matter, I will send it to the Herald for publication, and by that means help others. We have been having a season of rejoicing here; for within this past month there have been five members added to the church. Uncle William has been with us for the last week, and we all enjoyed his stay with us. He left for Rock Island on Wednesday. We have preaching twice on Sunday, in the morning and evening. Young folks prayer meeting on Tuesday evening, and the regular testimony meeting on Thursday evening. Pray for us that we may receive the blessing of God. With best wishes for the welfare of Zion. I remain your sister in the bonds of the covenant,

CARRIE E. BRIGGS.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah,
July 24th, 1883.

Sister Carrie E. Briggs.—Your letter of the 17th inst. is before me, and referring to the difference in the Lord's prayer in the Inspired Translation and in the Book of Mormon, I have to say, first of all, that verbal exactness, or similarity, is no final test of inspiration; but a want of exactness in facts and principles is evidence of want of inspiration. In proof of this, please compare Matt. 1:23 with Isa. 7:14. Micah 5:2 with Matt. 2:6. Amos 9:11, 12 with Acts 15:16, 17, &c., &c. In reproducing these prophecies, James and Matthew do not give the exact language, but simply the facts and principles in the case.

Whilst there is a verbal difference between the Lord's prayer as found in the Inspired Translation and in the Book of Mormon, the same sense, facts and principles, are found in both. There is also a verbal difference in the same prayer as found in King James' translation and in the Book of Mormon. So it can not be said the Book of Mormon was copied from the Bible. "Who," in the Book of Mormon, takes the place of "which," in Matt. 6:9. "Thy Kingdom come" is not in the Book of Mormon, for the very good reason that when Jesus taught the Nephites this prayer, his kingdom was fully organized on earth. At the time he taught that prayer to his people in Judea, he had not fully organized his kingdom on earth. Divine wisdom is here manifest. Again: "in earth;" Matt. 6:10, is "on earth," B. of M. Nephi 5:12; the latter the best. "Give us this day our daily bread," found both in the Inspired Translation and King James', is not in the Book of Mormon, probably for the reason that Jesus knew that the Nephite disciples had no need to make that petition. It would be folly to ask for that with which a person was well supplied. The Book of Mormon does not claim to give the same prayer which Jesus taught his disciples in Judea, word for word. The Inspired Translation does not profess to give the prayer in the Book of Mormon, but only a correct rendering of the prayer as found in the Bible.

The discrepancies, when examined critically, are proofs of the divine authenticity of both the Book of Mormon and the Inspired Translation. They are in harmony with sound doctrine and right reason. Remember, this work of correction and translation was done by an illiterate young man. This adds to its marvelousness, and is a proof of its divinity. I am glad to know you read critically and carefully. May the Lord, by his Spirit, greatly aid you.

Yours in the love of Christ,
W. W. BLAIR.

SANDWICH, Illinois,
August 26th, 1883.

Dear Saints.—For three Sundays back we have had good meetings. Bro. F. M. Cooper, from Plano, (his home is in Wisconsin), presiding over the meetings. But to-day he could not be with us, and consequently no meeting was held. How I long for the time when we shall have a presiding elder over this branch. We miss Bro. Pitt very much.

I love to read the Herald, and see the good that the Elders are doing. I love to think that those who have never known what it is to have the love of Christ in their hearts, are being brought to his fold. I am, as yet, young in the work; but as I grow older I desire to grow stronger in the strength of the Lord. I thank God for all his goodness to me. I desire an interest in your prayers, and I also exhort the Saints to pray for each other.

Your sister in gospel bonds,
LIZZIE A. HOWARD.

DECKERVILLE, Sanilac Co., Mich.,
August 10th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph.—I thank God that he gave me an understanding of the truth, and a heart to embrace the glorious gospel of Jesus Christ, which has brought to me peace, with an ardent desire to advance my steps, on that straight and narrow path, that grows brighter, until the perfect day. Ever since the way was pointed out to me by our brother, J. J. Cornish, I have had a desire to see you. I shall truly expect to see a man of God, a partaker of God's way. As it is impossible for me to see your father in the flesh, I live in the hope of meeting him in the sweet bye and bye.

I was baptized north of Richmondville nine months ago, by J. J. Cornish. He still speaks there once every four weeks. And as he is living about fifteen miles from the above place, he walked that distance on Sunday last, and preached to a well filled barn of hearers, and had the pleasure of baptizing five more precious souls.

This makes a total of twenty-two, nineteen of them heads of families, baptized by his hands in this place since August, 1882. They hold meetings there, (I am sorry I can not say we, as I now live eight miles from there), and are blessed with the same spirit that conveyed to our hearts the truth. Bro. A. Barr has also been kind enough to come occasionally and speak. We have been visited by Bro. E. H. Gurley and Eddie Delong. They spoke several times. We hope that many more such visitors may come. Welcome, welcome is our cry, to those who serve God in his own appointed way.

Your sister in the bonds of peace,
MRS. ADDIE SINCLAIR.

OENAVILLE, Bell Co., Texas,
August 23d, 1883.

Dear Herald.—On August 2d I arrived at Clarksville, Texas, where I was met by Bro. B. L. Billingsly, and accompanied him to his home near Manchester. I had been there only a few minutes when Bro. Montague put in an appearance, just from Young county. He reports good openings and fair prospects in Young. We heard much talk of the pending debate between Bro. Montague and C. A. Worley, of the Baptist persuasion, and excitement was running high.

On Sunday, the 5th, we preached twice in the Saints' new chapel, which by the way is a neat little structure, and reflects credit upon the branch.

On Tuesday, the 7th, we repaired to the arbor prepared for the debate; but Mr. Worley failed to appear. Two messengers were dispatched for him, and on the 8th, about 11 o'clock, they brought him in; and after a few preliminaries the work began. By request of Bro. Montague and consent of Mr. Worley, I acted as spokesman in the debate. We chose for our moderator a Mr. Moore, a member of the Christian Church, who proved himself to be a perfect gentleman. Mr. Worley chose a Mr. Rodgers, of the same church, and they chose a Mr. Cowen. The propositions agreed upon were as follows: 1st, "The people calling themselves the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, but by others commonly called Mormons, constitute the Church of Christ; and in their doctrine and polity agree with the teachings of the Bible." 2d, "The people commonly called Baptists, agree in doctrine and polity with the teachings of the Bible, and are the Church of Christ." 3d, "The Book of Mormon and the book called the "Doctrine and Covenants" and the statements therein contained that purport to be revelation given to Joseph Smith and others, are given by inspiration and are true."

We spent four hours the first day and four hours the second on the first proposition, and came out of it cheered and strengthened in the faith for which we contend. Five hours on the third day were all our opponent asked upon his affirmative, and that closed the debate. Mr. Worley was so sick he could not stay longer, though the third proposition was the one in which he was "particularly interested." You will all know how to sympathize with him in his sickness, when I tell you he was pleading law at Manchester the next day. The investigation of the second proposition convinced me more than ever that "Baptist succession" is a miserable farce. At the close of the debate, Bro. Montague and I went to Squire Hunt's to stay for the night, and after getting there we learned that a mob of twenty-three persons had surrounded Bro. Billingsly's wagon, and had forbidden him keeping us at his house. The next day we went to Bro. Billingsly's, where in the afternoon we were visited by a mob of fourteen persons, some of them members of different churches, and told us we could have until next evening to leave the settlement; if we did not they would put us out. They seemed to think they were doing some meritorious act, and we will give their names to the public that they may not be deprived of any honor accruing from the act. They are, W. A. Wilkins, Owen Willis, Hugh J. Rodgers, James Newberry, Nathan Gregory, J. L. White, James Jackson, S. S. S. Warren, Benton Gear, Robert Clark, Doc Moore, Douglas Huffman, John Woods and Jas. Wilkins. James Newberry is a Campbellite Elder, (the Christian brethren will excuse me for using the nickname in this case), and several others are members of the same church, while some were Baptists. We shall not hold these churches responsible, however, providing they deal with these members according to their deserts. After consultation, we concluded to go to Clarksville, enter complaint and have them prosecuted. Accordingly, we went; but after sounding the officials, we came to the conclusion that while the Judge seemed willing to see the law executed, the County Attorney wanted to dodge the issue; and not being able to employ counsel, we were forced to abandon the undertaking. We started back expecting to stay there and take the consequences whatever they might be; but on our way we met Bro. Billingsly, who informed us that to insure the safety of his family, he had agreed not to keep us for the present; and so as other brethren had already been alarmed into counseling us to go, we had no alternative. We went on to Bro. Billingsly's, got our effects, and through the kindness of brethren and friends we were enabled to reach this place in safety. Leaving there was very much against our feelings, and I can not help but regret it still. I feel some how that He whom we serve would have cared for us. I bear the brethren witness, however, that it was not for any want of love for us that they moved as they did; for we have had too many evidences of their respect for us, and love for the truth, to ever doubt them. They may have been right, and it maybe the natural man in me which revolts and says, I wot.

I am sorry to say that I am well satisfied that our late opponent, C. A. Worley, is responsible for all this trouble, and did all he could to encourage mobocracy. True he spoke publicly against it, and yet he threw out insinuations and made false statements, calculated to stir up the passions of these base men. Stated we were law abiding where there were only eight or ten of us; but when we were strong enough, we would defy the law. He tried to introduce a Brighamite Doctrine and Covenants in the debate as one of our standard books, and when I objected, actually appealed to the moderators to allow it, and had it not been for the manly protest of our moderator, Mr. Moore, he would have been permitted so to do. When failing in this, he circulated the report around privately, that we had the one to use in Utah and the other to present here. He also had a letter purporting to come from J. O. Stewart, claiming that we were in league with the Utah Church. This he was careful to hand round, so I am told, among the very worst element in the country. The last day of the debate he was so sick he could not eat dinner; but when I returned from my dinner, he had that mob element around him; and unobserved by him, I walked into the ring; and heard enough to satisfy me of his purpose.

Now let me in this connection whisper a word softly in the ears of our anti-prohibition brethren. Three years ago, when our brethren Bozarth and Wicks were so illy treated there, whiskey was sold at Manchester, afterwards local option obtained, and whiskey was excluded. Then I came into the neighborhood, went where I pleased, and preached at pleasure without molestation. Bro. Montague has been there all summer and no trouble was as much as hinted at that we know of. About July 1st, a saloon was again opened at Manchester, and you know the rest, how our lives have been periled, and the cause we love retarded. "Don't vote though to deprive them of their liberty; you have no right to say what they shall eat or drink!" Bah! I wish right here to place myself upon the record as an uncompromising opponent of the sale of whiskey; and furthermore, I will not knowingly receive a cent of the proceeds of its sale for the purpose of prosecuting gospel work.

Bro. Montague is with me, and will remain for a time before going home. Bro. Cato is at Elkhart sick. Will the Saints remember him. Breathing a prayer for Zion's weal, and asking special prayer for this mission,

I am in bonds of gospel love,
HEMAN C. SMITH.

NORTH CUTLER, Maine,
August 21st, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I am presiding Priest of this the Sea Side Branch, organized here by Bro. J. C. Foss. Our branch consisted of twenty-three members, two Priests, one Teacher, and one Deacon. Our branch has been almost broken up, only a few of us still holding on to the work. We have a nice little Sunday School, besides our meetings every Sunday afternoon when the weather is fine. We have been blest with a visit from Brn. John Gilbert and F. M. Sheehy. They preached ten evenings here, and then went over to visit Bro. Lakeman. I made several visits to the town of Trescutt, about sixteen miles from here. Think there might be some good done there if some of the Elders should go there and preach the gospel.

Your brother in the one faith,
J. J. HUNTLEY.

GRAYSVILLE, Ohio,
August 21st, 1883.

Brother Joseph:—I can sympathize with Bro. Heman C. Smith in his trials in battling for the truth. I have met with some of the same opposition, in Dodge and Richey counties, Va. I was rocked one evening on my road home from meeting. Spoke for a half hour in a school house when the rocks were coming against the house so that they could be heard some distance. At another appointment we found the house closed, and heard that a mob was coming with eggs and stones; but from it all we were delivered, and found some anxious to hear the truth. I spoke in a grove and other places, with very good liberty; and made friends to the cause. I have been laboring as best I could since the conference. Am at present preaching at the Faro Church, Monroe county, Ohio. There was a good attendance last evening. Will attend the conference at Lampsville, the first of September.

As ever, in bonds,
HIRAM ROBINSON.

DELL ROY, Ohio, August 23d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—We as Saints have felt the love of God, and do know that the work is true; and feel much for those that are in darkness. When I explain Christ to them, and the kingdom of God, and his dealings, blessings, etc.; they have told me that God fills all the world. This teaching I can not endorse.

We find when Cornelius was found praying, that his prayers went up to God, and that an angel brought the good news here. This shows me that God was not with Cornelius at the time he was praying. Also when Sodom and Gomorrah were in their wickedness, God was not there. He sends two angels there, with the power to destroy the city. When Nineveh was in its bad state, God was not there. He sent Jonah there. I am thankful too, that God does not fill all the world; that there is a little place left us. It is good for us that it is so. Many times we have hard trials to bear, but I hope and pray that it will turn very sweet in the last day.

Yours in the one faith,
GEORGE MASTERS.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa,
August 24th, 1883.

Brother Joseph Smith:—Since last writing to you, I have passed through many scenes, both of trials and joys, while ministering, in my way as assisted by God's divine guide, words of love and deeds of kindness, that others might be led to him who heareth and answereth the calls of those who are willing to comply with his eternal truths, and show that willingness by their works. I believe I can safely say that at times I have enjoyed some of the most exquisite pleasures of my lifetime, and some of the severest temptations from the power of darkness. How I have been made to know my Redeemer who liveth, and who leadeth his people! It is through him has come my joy, and through him my strength to overcome,—truly, I can say he is the "Hope of earth, and joy of Heaven." And when I have seen his children bowed with sorrows, or pains, a joy it is then to consider the experiences of the past, which utters in no mistakeable language, "He that asketh, receiveth," and thus, by such references encourages the Saints.

"O, 'tis good to be a Saint in latter days."

In my labors I have been upheld by the friends of the faith in all kindness. Have had a lack of nothing. The work in this mission is progressing, yet to me, it seems slow. The result of the labor I have done can not be measured by the number baptized, as those baptized by me, have principally been brought to see the light through the instrumentality of others. I can say I have watered, and may God give the increase. Elder Winters, of Waterloo, Neb., of the Christian denomination, who made such grave charges against the Saints and their doctrines through the Waterloo Gazette and to whom I submitted six propositions for discussion, has at last left the State of Nebraska, not answering to one of them as he agreed.

May God bless you and all the co-workers for Zion's cause, and help each to learn his several duties, and do them with an eye single to God's glory, and thus each bear a share of the burden as God has divided it to them.

Your brother in the truth,

J. F. MINTUN.

MAROA, Illinois,

August 24th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I arrived here one week ago yesterday, being the 17th inst. I opened out our batteries of truth on Sunday afternoon, at the M. E. Church. Again on Monday night in the Christian Church, and Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday nights in the K. P. Hall, and to-night again in the Christian Church; so you see I have quite a variety of openings. I shall continue here over Sunday, the 26th, by the request of my congregation, as they nearly all rose to their feet last night to manifest their desire for me to stop longer with them. Quite a number here are convinced of the truth, and the people seemed considerably exercised over the doctrine we preach, and say it is God's truth, and the best thing they ever heard. I expect to return home next week, and remain until our September Conference.

Yours in bonds,

H. C. BRONSON.

Summary of News.

Aug. 23d.—On August 15th the French army in Tonquin, Asia, had an engagement with the native forces known as "Black Flags," and though they succeeded in capturing Haiphong, a place of some importance as being the key to the approach to Hanoi, they were upon the whole repulsed, and consequently discouraged. The country in which the French are operating, is suffering from floods, which are causing immense destruction to life and property.

The official paper of Prince Bismarck, has in its late issues assumed a warlike attitude towards France, by declaring that the latter threatens the peace of Europe. The Reichstag of Germany has been called, and prices on the bourses of Paris, Vienna and Berlin have fallen. France it is said will shortly mobilize her eastern army corps, and if she does, Germany will make a counter demonstration.

There were 31 deaths from cholera in Alexandria yesterday.

A fearful massacre of Indians in Peru by Chillians is reported from Huancayo. The conquerors, alleging that the Indians meant to sack the city upon its evacuation, fell upon a body of 3,000 of those unfortunates, killed 400, and wounded 400 more.

Aug. 24th.—Something like the Bulgarian atrocities which gave an excuse for the wars of 1876 and 1877 is reported from Turkey once more. Ninety-two Christians have been murdered in one district of Albania. Twenty-three villages have been abandoned. The Turkish officials wink at the slaughter and persecute the Christian priests.

The Count de Chambor died at Vienna, Austria.

News of 209 deaths from cholera in Egypt are reported yesterday.

Advices received from Panama contain details of a volcanic eruption which has occurred at Ometepok, in Central America. Ometepok is a volcanic island on Lake Nicaragua, and consists of two densely-wooded mountains, one of which is more than 5000 feet high. For some months past the extinct volcano has given signs that it was about to burn into activity, and recently the most alarming indications have been witnessed. The lava first streamed from the new crater, and ran in the direction of Las Pilas, and succeeding days the sides of the mountain were alive with fire as the lava poured down, sweeping with it trees, rocks, and earth, whilst the continued bel-lowings and roarings struck terror into the hearts of all who heard them. The whole island was continually quaking. Many of the inhabitants fled, and the authorities made arrangements for the removal of every one from the island. At the end of the fourth day after the first outbreak the lava bed had covered the road, and two young men who had gone with others to watch the flow were buried under it. It continued to flow day after day in such an uninterrupted stream that a panic set in amongst the population, caused by the torrents of lava and incessant rumblings, and ships were sent to the island to transport the people to Granada, Rivas, and other cities. The inhabitants were cut off from their farms and pastures. The mountains and slopes are covered with boiling lava and mud, and the island was said to be in a continual tremor.

A dispatch from Simla says a general rising of the Ghilzais against the Ameer of Afghanistan, Asia, has occurred. The insurgents are under the lead of Mushki Alum.

The ill feeling against France and Germany was greatly aggravated by the appointment of Thibaudin as French Minister of War.

There were but 165 failures last week. The country has recovered from the temporary prostration caused by the heavy failures precipitated during the dullness of mid-summer.

Aug. 26th.—There were twenty-two deaths from cholera in Alexandria Saturday.

It is reported in London that cholera has broken out in the Island of Sumatra.

A French and an English vessel came into collision in the English Channel. The English steamer, the Woodburn, was disabled and sunk. Eighteen of her crew were drowned. The French steamer was badly damaged, but was enabled to land her own passengers and those saved from the Woodburn at Plymouth.

Two steamers came into collision off Ushant, in the German Ocean, during a thick fog. One of the vessels went down. Five lives were lost.

The row between the Orangemen and Catholics of Coatbridge, Scotland, was renewed Saturday. Twenty-two of the chaps were arrested.

That the harvest of the world, or the reaping of the cereal crops of the earth, takes place in different periods, on account of the different latitudes and consequent different seasons, is a well known fact; that these periods embrace altogether more than three-fourths of the year might not be known. In Australia, New Zealand, the greater part of Chili, and some districts of the Argentine Republic the harvest takes place in January; in the month of February it commences in East India, and progressing toward the North, terminates in March—Mexico, Egypt, Persia, and Syria harvest in April; the north of Asia Minor, China, Japan, Tunis, Algeria, Morocco, and Texas in May. The following countries reap their harvests in June: California, Spain, Portugal, Italy, Greece, and the South of France. In the other parts of France, in Austro-Hungary, the South of Russia, and the greater part of the United States the crop is gathered in July. In the month of August the following countries harvest: Belgium, Germany, England, the Netherlands, and Denmark; in September, Scotland, Sweden, Norway, Canada, the North of Russia, the latter continuing until October.

A farm-hand near Shelbyville, Ind., has found a giant. It differs from the Cardiff exhibit in that it is a skeleton instead of a single stone. The skeleton was found in a sitting posture six feet below the earth's surface. The gentleman who formerly sat in the bones which remain, if he existed at all, was nine feet high and weighed half a ton.

The total number of accidental deaths reported to the Board of Trade by the several English railway companies during the last year was 1,163, while 8,968 persons were injured. These totals comprise all the serious casualties on railways during the year. The rate of mortality among railway employes is very high, no fewer than 553 having been killed, and 2,576 injured in 1882. The number of passengers killed was 127; injured, 1,736; while 306 trespassers—including sixty-two cases of suicide—were killed and 155 injured. Among others who perished as victims to their own carelessness, forty-three persons were killed, 713, injured, when alighting from or getting into trains in motion. Again, seventy-two persons were killed and forty injured while passing over railways at level crossings—a fact which can not be too widely made known. The number of cases reported which involved no personal injury indicates the hairbreadth escapes which are being constantly met with. Thus there were no fewer than 1,149 failures of tires, any one of which might have entailed serious results; but it is only right to add that of these, 842 were on wagons belonging to owners other than the railway companies. The number of axles which failed was 451, of which 264 were engine-axles. In addition to these statistics, we notice that during the year thirty-four horses, sixty-three oxen and cows, 162 sheep, one donkey, and fifteen hounds were run over and killed; the number of trains concerned being 154; while two passengers and four servants were injured from this cause.

Aug. 27th.—Seventeen deaths from cholera occurred at Alexandria Sunday.

Eighty-one deaths from cholera in all Egypt, Sunday.

The Queen of Madagascar died July 13th.

Terrible popular persecutions of the Jews are constantly reported from Russia and Hungary. In the recent riots at Ekaterinoslav, Russia, twenty-eight lives were lost and 346 houses torn down. At Egerszeg, Hungary, a riot which lasted three days has just ended. Twenty soldiers were killed by the rioters, who resisted the troops with muskets and fought sturdily. The number slain in the mob is not stated.

The King of Annam is suing for peace with France. Negotiations are pending, which will probably close the war between the two powers.

An island near Java named Krakatoa is the scene of a volcanic eruption. The neighborhood is in total darkness during day and night. Communication with the mainland, close by, is cut off, and tidal waves are flooding the coast towns. The fate of the islanders is not yet known.

Aug. 28th.—Annams new Emperor is about to accept the terms which France has imposed at the point of the bayonet, but China's Government views the negotiations with increasing alarm.

The Prime Minister of Spain tendered King Alfonso the resignation of the ministry. The King has postponed his decision.

Large bands of peasants, armed with guns and axes, entered Zalaloevoe, Austria, to-day, and plundered thirteen Jewish shops. They subsequently left the place, but threatened to return. Troops have been summoned to prevent further disturbance. The annual fairs have been forbidden. A Government Commission has been ordered to inquire into the disorders.

Monday there were 165 deaths from cholera in Upper Egypt and six in Lower Egypt.

One new case of yellow fever at Pensacola, Fla., and one death.

The eruption of the volcano on the Island of Krakatoa continues. North Bantam, Java, is covered with ashes, mud, and stones. The crops are ruined and roads and bridges damaged. The European quarter in Anjer and the Chinese camp at Merak were swept away by the overflow of rivers. A tidal wave also swamped the lower quarters of Batavia.

Aug. 29th.—The treaty between France and Annam has been signed, giving the former all she asked. Preparations for war are reported in China.

Deaths from cholera in Egypt, Tuesday, 121.

The towns of Anjer, Tjiringine, and Celokhelong, Java, have been destroyed by the recent volcanic eruptions there.

The False Prophet has massed his troops for another struggle in Egypt.

A heavy north-east gale has made a terrible surf at Atlantic City, N. J., and the damage done by an exceptionally high tide is reckoned at $75,000. Houses and sheds on the beach have been swept into the ocean. Passengers by rail were yesterday compelled to get off a train and walk five miles to reach their destination, the tracks being wholly submerged.

FIRES, STORMS AND ACCIDENTS.

Aug. 23d.—Loss by fire at Louisville Ky., $12,500. 20 houses and a large barn were burned at St. Ignace, Mich. Loss by fire at Boston, Mass., $50,000. At Cincinnati, O., yesterday, $10,000. One person died from fright. Quincy, Ill., $20,000. 100 acres of wood, near Milford, Mass., have burned. Edgerton, Wis., $7,000. Fort Wayne, Ind., $10,000. Middleport, Ohio, $15,000. Paulding, O., $1,000. Port Edwards, Mich., a small steamer, valued at $3,000, burned.

Two men were killed by breathing foul air in a well near Knoxville, Tenn.

A passenger train of 4 cars was wrecked near Salamanca, Pa.

In Lexington, South Carolina, two persons were killed by lightning.

A hurricane swept through the Ottawa, Ontario, district last night, doing great damage to barns, fences, and crops. A man named Henshaw was killed by lightning.

During a heavy storm which passed over Hillsdale, Mich., yesterday evening the barn of Job Joles, in the Township of Ransom, was struck by lightning and set on fire, and burned with all that it contained. A fine pair of horses was burned, as was also Mr Joles' entire season's crop of oats, wheat, and hay. The loss will be at least $2,000.

During a violent storm last night lightning struck James Quick's barn in Milford Township, O., killing six horses and burning large quantities of hay and grain, besides costly machinery.

Five fine horses, owned by J. W. Mooney, were struck dead by lightning in a storm that passed over Erie, Pa. The animals had taken refuge under a tree, the identical one that presented the nearest point to the surcharged clouds. The lightning struck the tree and passed to the horses, who being huddled together formed a complete circuit. All five remained standing.

Fourteen persons were drowned in Wells, Me.

Aug. 24th.—East Tawas, Mich., 200 acres of choice timber burned.

Four people drowned by the undertow, at Wells' Beach, Me. John M. Hale, piano-maker, and son were drowned near Wheeling, W. Va.

By the falling of a scaffold at the King of Bavaria's new place at Lake Chiem twenty-three workmen were killed and seventeen injured.

The family of William Ludder, at Winsted, Minn., partook of luncheon at noon Wednesday containing cheese cooked in a brass kettle, and all were poisoned. Three have since died, and the others are not expected to recover.

Aug. 26th.—A fire broke out in a Boston tenement-house this morning. Four of the inmates were suffocated before a rescuing party could reach them. One man was fatally injured in jumping to escape.

Loss by fire in Detroit, Mich., $12,000. A hotel was burned, and one man killed by a falling beam, at Terre Haute, Ind.

At Parkdale, Col., one man was run over and killed by a freight train.

Aug. 27th.—This afternoon a large tank containing several thousand gallons of oil exploded in the South Brooklyn Oil Works. The burning oil ran in every direction. John Reynolds, an old man, was overtaken by the blazing stream, and is thought to be fatally burned; Joseph Dennis was burned about the face and Michael Cavanaugh about the body. Samuel Love, a fireman, was thrown from an engine on the way to the fire and severely injured. Before the firemen arrived another tank had exploded, setting fire to the entire works. The flames continued to spread until the buildings were in ruins. The loss on buildings, machinery, and stock is about $60,000. Hardly had the firemen reached the engine-houses when another alarm sounded. Sparks from the oil works had ignited the sulphur works, at Ninth street and Gowanus Canal. Before the flames were extinguished damage was done estimated at $25,000.

Loss by fire in New York City, $90,500. Williamsport, Pa., $500,000. San Antonio, Tex., $200,000. One man suffocated to death in a small fire in St. Louis, Mo. Montreal, Que., $20,000. Large Stone works burned at St. John, N. B. Loss by fire over $10,000 at Lowell, Mass.

A severe storm of lightning, thunder and rain, occurred at Chicago and vicinity, interfering with the telegraph and telephone wires considerably.

Aug. 28th.—A forest fire, ten miles from Bar Harbor, Me., has extended over two thousand acres. The fire has been surrounded with a ditch, and is believed to be under control.

Several flour and corn mills have been destroyed by fire at Toulouse, France. Damage, 2,000,000 francs.

At ten minutes of 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon the Hudson River steamer Riverdale while in midstream off Fourteenth street, New York City, in North River, exploded her boiler, capsize, floated to a point opposite Sixteenth street, and sank. One hundred persons were on board. About fifty of these were killed. Eight victims reached the shore in a horribly mangled condition and are now under treatment. Many of the passengers were blown far into the air with the debris of the boat's upper works. Later accounts put the probable loss of life lower.

In the storm of Monday night the schooner Lumberman was struck by lightning twelve miles out of Chicago harbor.

Yesterday afternoon the boiler of M. B. Paxton's sawmill and gin, situated on the Cuba Road, twelve miles north of Memphis, Tenn., exploded with disastrous results to life and property. A. J. Pike, a laborer, was instantly killed; W. J. Garvin, an employe, was severely injured; a colored man had an arm broken, and Mr. Paxton, the proprietor, who was acting engineer at the time received painful wounds. The loss will not fall short of $2,000.

Aug. 29th.—Loss by fire in Petersburg, Ind., $60,000. Dubuque, Ia., $25,000. Clinton, Ia., $15,000. An elevator and 2,000 bushels of wheat, 3,000 of corn, and 7,000 of oats, were burned at Lewis, Iowa. Philadelphia, Pa., $50,000. Roncerverte, Pa., $6,000. Chicago, Ill., $1,300.

A train was derailed near Clifton, Mo., and one man killed.

CROP REPORTS.

Aug. 24th.—John R. Shaffer, the Secretary of the Iowa State Agricultural Society, has received the crop reports from his correspondents up to Aug. 10th, from which we quote the following:

In the northern and central portions of Minnesota, nearly all the crops have been gathered, and the farmers claim a wheat yield of 20 bushels per acre. The other portions of the state will average 15 bushels per acre.

The indications in Nebraska, are that there will be an unusually large crop of corn, unless early frosts cut it short. Wheat, oats and barley, throughout the State average well.

In the Province of Manitoba, all kinds of crops are looking well, and an enormous yield is expected, if the weather continues favorable from this on.

Reports from many points in Illinois show that if frosts hold off quite late, the corn crop will be an average one.

Heavy rains in Ohio have greatly improved the prospect for corn.

The average yield of wheat in Indiana, so far as ascertained, is about ten bushels per acre. The corn crop in this state will be below the average, unless wetter weather and warmer nights intervene, and frost holds off very late.

A hail-storm damaged the tobacco crop of Rock County, Wisconsin, to the extent of $150,000.

The official estimates of the wheat and other crops in Russia show the yield to be generally satisfactory.

Wheat in Minnesota, is reported as being an almost unprecedented yield, and of most excellent quality. Long continued drouth in the South has materially reduced the cotton crop.

A STATEMENT TO THE PUBLIC.

On the evening of August 21st, a terrific cyclone struck our city, completely demolishing 135 dwellings and totally destroying their contents. A large number of others were unroofed and otherwise damaged. In the city, 19 persons were killed, (this is strictly accurate), and about 100 wounded, several of them fatally. The ruined houses were nearly all owned and occupied by mechanics and laborers, who have lost everything they had in the world except the clothing upon their persons and the naked lots. In many cases, the heads of families are injured. The cyclone entered the county at its western border, and in its course destroyed the crops and buildings on about 40 farms. Others lying contiguous were damaged, and five persons were killed outside the city. The relief committee has a detailed list of 124 families, in the city alone, entirely destitute. We appeal to the public for aid. The leading business men of the city are all heavy losers, and can not, therefore, do as much for the sufferers as they would wish. They have, however, contributed liberally. None of the public buildings have escaped damage. One school building destroyed, the court house is unroofed, the churches are seriously injured, one of them—the Methodist—demolished; the elevators and warehouses are all wholly or partially in ruins.

Provisions are plentiful. Money, clothing, and carpenters are needed. $100,000 expended in tools, lumber, etc., for the penniless, would scarcely put them on their feet sufficiently to enable them to help themselves. All contributions are placed in the hands of a thoroughly organized committee of 21 citizens, and may be forwarded to the undersigned.

JOSEPH SMITH'S SECOND REPLY.

MR. L. O. LITTLEFIELD, Logan, Utah.

SIR:—There were no ordinances of washing and anointing engaged in at the meeting at Kirtland; but the Spirit which testifies that Jesus is the Christ, was there; and the peace that Christ declared that he would give to his disciples, filled the hearts and controlled the minds of the worshipers.

In your first, you stated positively that there were those women in Utah who had stated to me and my brother that they were wives to my father. This I have shown to be untrue. If your statement was correct, would it not have been better to get one or more of those women to name the time and place where such statement was made?

There was no need for me to go to Salt Lake City to find proof, if I were under the necessity to receive "universally accepted reports." Such reports are plentiful outside of Salt Lake City, and are no better there than abroad. If I am to receive "universally accepted reports," Joseph Smith was a mountebank, Brigham Young a thief and an abettor of murder, Salt Lake City a place where lust and debauchery are at home and run riot. You are too shrewd to hold that I am to be concluded by "universally accepted reports." The reach of such reports is too wide. The effect upon not only Utah and her men, but upon the origin of the Church and its founders, too wide-spreading and ruinous for you to insist upon such an acceptance.

My course in Salt Lake City was this: I was upon the streets daily. I saw many of the men whom I had seen when a boy. I was introduced by Patriarch John Smith to many others of the citizens. I shunned no one. I declared publicly in the "Institute," in answer to the question whether my father did, or did not have a revelation commanding or permitting his Elders to have more than one wife, that I did not know. That the evidences I had so far received, had failed to convince me that he had. That I did not know whether he had or not practiced plural marriage. That I threw the burden of proof where it belonged, on those who affirmed that he had the revelation, and practiced the doctrine. This was done publicly and there were members of your church present and heard me.

The denial of John Taylor at Boulogne-Sur-Mer, was coupled with the reading of the article on marriage then published in the Doctrine and Covenants, but taken out by order of Pres. Brigham Young, without a vote of the Church, in 1876. The intent with which it was read was to deny the charge of having in practice in Utah a system by which men of the church had more wives (with all that the name implies) than one. The language of the book is clear. "We declare that we believe that one man should have one wife, and one woman but one husband, except in case of death, when either is at liberty to marry again."

There is no mistaking this denial of Mr. Taylor's. Taken with the article on Marriage, and it is conclusive. If at that time there was in operation a system by which men were married, or sealed to women as wives, other than the one legal wife, of such a momentous character that I am fighting against truth in opposing that system, Mr. Taylor was guilty of falsehood. Technically, Mr. Taylor's denial was true; the law of the church, as he well knew, was against him and his co-peers. It allowed of no such marriages. The formula given in the law, required the sanction of the marriages of the church to be "in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, and by virtue of the laws of the country."

The reason given in the article on Marriage for the declaration of belief is that, "Inasmuch as this Church of Christ has been reproached with the crime of fornication and (the crime of) polygamy, we declare," etc.

I am thankful for your honesty in saying that the things of which the Church was then accused were "utterly opposed to its teachings."—This, I and my co-workers have been studiously striving to show, and every admission such as yours, is in keeping with our position.

The delay in my father to declare the "principle" (plural marriage) was, and is by you attributed to the "consequence of the prejudices of the brethren, and the persecution which he well knew he would have to encounter from the outside world, wherein his life would be endangered." I do not construe this language. It is a plain declaration given as a reason why Joseph Smith did not make known the revelation if he had it. Was it for a like reason that Brigham Young took eight years and two months to get courage enough to make it known? You did not say that God commanded my father not to make it known, but that he delayed because he well knew that "his life would be endangered." Is not that charging him impliedly with being afraid? Whence came the prejudices of the brethren? What business had they to have prejudices against the word of the Lord? What gave rise to, or created those prejudices?

I was, as Elder Joseph F. Smith states, attentive to what Elder O. Pratt was saying in the discourse from which I quoted. I tried to conduct myself in a quiet, orderly and respectful way. I took notes of the entire sermon; and can give every important point in it from notes made at the time. I was intent to discover the talent and bent of the speaker; and was equally intent to "take advantage of anything that might be said to the profit of myself and the cause I represented." Is that a crime? If so, Elder L. O. Littlefield, and every other elder ever sent out by the Utah Church, including Joseph F. Smith, are guilty of the same crime. It is precisely what the latter has done in so sharply denying what I asserted was said by Elder O. Pratt, respecting temples. I gave it as I heard it, from notes made at the time; and I remember wondering if the statements made would be noticed and their possible effect upon me counteracted by those in charge of the meeting. When told the next day that the sermon was preached for my benefit, and asked, "What do you think of it?" as the person wished to make report of my reply to admirers of Mr. Pratt, I replied that I was pleased with it. That I had, I thought, learned one thing, and that was, that "Orson Pratt, left to himself, would tell the truth." All I have further to add is this; I may have mistaken Elder Pratt's words. The desire to discover any possible advantage may have made me too critical and perverted his meaning. Are Elder Joseph F. Smith and the others who state that they did not hear such statement, free from such partisan bias, as he seems to think troubled me? Is his memory of a sermon to which his attention may not before have been called since the day it was delivered, likely to be any clearer of defect because of freedom from undue zeal for his cause than mine? The question of veracity may rest here.

How much better for your plea against the meeting at Kirtland, and those who met there; and your defense of the temples you are building in Utah, is the statement of Joseph F. Smith as to what Elder Pratt did say? "That the temple which we were building in Salt Lake City, was not the Temple on which we expected the cloud would rest. Nor did we expect these glorious events to transpire in any of the temples which we were now building, or would build in Utah; but, that the temple in which these promises should be fulfilled should yet be built in Jackson county, Missouri. * * * And that not all that were living in 1832 should pass away until that temple should be built," etc., etc.

Some one of those present will remember that after the services I met Elder Pratt with two or three others and was presented to him on the street near to the meeting house, and remarked to him that having been born near the close of 1832, I could hope to be one of those that might be living when that temple to which he had referred should be built. To this he replied, that to have part in it would depend on qualifications as well as age. Is this also a mistake of memory?

The question between us is the one of plurality of wives. Is the doctrine and the practice in accordance with the principles of the Church of Christ, as such principles were revealed, and said Church founded by Joseph Smith.

This question is not decided by the statement that Joseph Smith taught and practiced such doctrine, or one similar to it, in secret. Nor am I concluded as an heretic and fighter against God or his word, when it is proven that he did secretly so teach to a few chosen ones, and secretly so practice.

The elders used to teach that if our forefathers, or our fathers did "once carry their corn to mill in one end of the bag, with a stone in the other end to balance it," it was no reason that we should do the same. That we were to do our own thinking, and whatever of doctrine was not in accord with the word of God, we were to discard. Just so.

The Bible gives the origin of the institution of marriage thus:

And the rib, which the Lord God had taken from man, made he a woman, and brought her unto man. Therefore, shall a man leave his father and his mother, and cleave unto his wife, and they twain shall be one flesh.

In the history of the life and generation of Adam as given in Genesis, there is no hint, or reference to but the one companion, one woman, one wife for him. Malachi seems to have referred to it in the language of the 14th and 15th verses of his second chapter:

Yet is she thy companion and the wife of thy covenant. And did not he make one? Yet had he the residue of the spirit. And wherefore one? That he might seek a godly seed.

Lamech departed from this rule and took two wives, and he became a murderer.

The commandment to Noah was completed in the saving of the means by which the earth was to be re-peopled—Noah and his wife; his three sons and one wife each—no more.

The New Testament shows the full endorsement of this by Christ:

For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave unto his wife; and they twain shall be one flesh.—Matt. 19: 5. Mark 10: 8. Eph. 5: 31.

The Book of Mormon history shows that when Lehi and his family left their land at the command of God, they went out prepared to keep his command; Lehi and his sons and Zoram having one wife each, and that only.

Here are three occasions when God has proposed to people, or repeople a land—twice the earth, and once a distant land from the old world—and each time he shows the pattern to be one man, one woman, one husband, one wife; twain and twain only, one flesh.

The Lord stated to Ezra Thayre and Northrop Sweet, October, 1830, that the Book of Mormon and the Holy Scriptures, were given for the instruction of his people: D. & C., page 208, Liverpool edition, 1854.

In section two of the same work, the Lord states that the Book of Mormon "Contains the fulness of the Gospel of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles and to the Jews also, which was given by inspiration."

In section four, paragraph eight, it is declared that because of light treatment of things that had been received, condemnation rested upon the Church. The language is as follows:

And this condemnation resteth upon the children of Zion, even all; and they shall remain under this condemnation until they repent and remember the New Covenant, even the Book of Mormon and the former commandments which I have given them, not only to say, but to do according to that which I have written, that they may bring forth fruit mete for their Father's kingdom, otherwise there remaineth a scourge and a judgment to be poured out upon the children of Zion; for, shall the children of the kingdom pollute my holy land? Verily, I say unto you, nay.—(Liverpool Edition).

The date of the revelation from which this is quoted, is given as September, 1832. Going back to find some of the former commandments we discover the following. "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shalt cleave unto her and none else."

Elder Orson Pratt stated in a discourse delivered in the Tabernacle at Salt Lake City, October, 1869, which was published in pamphlet form, "In the early rise of this Church, February, 1831, God gave a commandment to its members * * * wherein he says, thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else. It was given in 1831, when the one wife system prevailed among this people." In March, 1831, following, the word of the Lord came through the same man, and is as follows:

And again I say unto you, that whoso forbiddeth to marry is not ordained of God, for marriage is ordained of God; wherefore, (for this reason), it is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh, and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation, and that it might be filled with the measure of man, according to its creation before the world was.

These are of the former commandments, the disregard of which brought condemnation.

The fact that the revelation was given to men about to visit the Shakers, which body forbade to marry, does not prove that what is revealed is not to be taken in universal sense. And it is simply astonishing that you can so glibly dispose of its provisions. "It is lawful that he shall have one wife; and they twain." Can you make more than one out of this lawful provision? The revelation was given to the elders to go and preach to men who did not believe in marriage. In preparing them God declares two facts; one is that marriage was ordained of Him; the other, that it is lawful for man to have one wife. This is qualified and made plain, so that no one, not blinded can fail to see, by the words, "and they twain," the man and his one wife, "shall be one flesh."

The men to whom it came so understood it. So will any one to whom the book is handed, upon whom the blindness has not come by reason of having treated the commandments lightly. Farther than this, the same revelation warrants the belief that such was the order according to the creation of man. The words, "unless death intervene," I obtained from section 109, paragraph 4, "except in case of death, when either is at liberty to marry again." This shows that at the time the section on marriage was written, the understanding derived from the revelations was as I have stated "one only." The word "either" is in the singular number and means one of two contracting parties. I did not interpolate the words "one only." I quoted those portions that I took from the revelations and the church articles and covenants, and gave the sense of what was evidently conveyed as being the will of God.

You write, "What a pity it is that the Lord did not take the same view of the matter that you do."

He did, Mr. Littlefield, he did beyond question. He did at that time take precisely that view. Let us see

The elders shall teach the principles of my gospel, which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, in the which is the fulness of the gospel; and they shall observe the Covenants and Church Articles to do them.

But the word of God burthens me because of your grosser crimes. For behold, thus saith the Lord, this people begin to wax in iniquity; they understand not the Scriptures; for they seek to excuse themselves in committing whoredoms, because of the things which were written concerning David, and Solomon his son. Behold, David and Solomon truly had many wives and concubines, which thing was abominable before me, saith the Lord; wherefore, thus saith the Lord, I have led this people forth out of the land of Jerusalem by the power of mine arm, that I might raise up unto me a righteous branch from the fruit of the loins of Joseph. Wherefore, I the Lord God, will not suffer this people to do like unto them of old. Wherefore, my brethren, hear me, and hearken to the word of the Lord: For there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife, and concubines he shall have none.

Jacob's warrant for making this declaration is this: "Jacob, get thou up into the Temple on the morrow, and declare the word which I shall give thee unto this people."

This shows conclusively, that in 1830, when the Lord revealed the Book of Mormon, which was to become a part of the "law" of God, to "govern" his Church; and in 1830 and 1831, when the revelations I have quoted were given, He did take the same view that I do. And from what you have stated, if it be correct, He did not change His view until 1843.

You quote the revelation of God in which his will is set forth, and then immediately turn and justify the plural wife system "because of the things which were written of David," the very thing reprobated by the Lord as declared by Jacob.

Let us reverse the reasoning. You quote the language of Nathan:

And I gave thy master's house, and thy master's wives into thy bosom, and gave thee the house of Israel and of Judah; and if that had been too little I would moreover have given unto thee such and such things.

You then say: "From the foregoing is it not evident that to assert that plural marriage is a sin, is to say that God is a sinner?"

How much wiser and better is it, or how much more consistent to charge God with using duplicity and deceit? This you certainly do when you say, or intimate that the revelation "it is lawful that a man shall have one wife," was not intended as a restriction, as in the case of the woman, "but one husband." In the same way you charge God with duplicity, in evading the force of Jacob's declaration:

Wherefore, if I will raise up a righteous seed unto me, I will command my people; otherwise, they shall hearken unto these things.

In this there is no hint that God will change the rule then established. For my part, when you prove that God has dealt deceitfully with the Church, as such construction of implied, reserved and double meanings would certainly do if they were correct, you have proved Him to be a hypocrite, which you practically charge Him with being—and in such case He is no better than a sinner—of the two, a hypocrite is more despicable than a sinner.

I do not need to say that plural marriage is a sin on unjust or unfair grounds. God, through Jacob, declares positively that it is an abomination. "Truly, David and Solomon had many wives and concubines which thing was abominable before me." Jacob called it a "grosser crime." The section on marriage adopted by the assembled quorums of the Church in 1835, called it a "crime."

If he who commits a crime is not a sinner, pray tell me what is he? He who commands a crime is as guilty as he who commits it, if the command is obeyed. If God commanded Joseph Smith to take more wives than Emma, while she lived, He commanded a thing that He had forbidden by a revelation called by Orson Pratt in 1869, a "holy law." Mr. Pratt said:

If the members of the Church had undertaken to vary from the law given in 1831, to love their one wife with all their hearts, and to cleave to none other, they would have come under the curse and condemnation of God's holy law.

This holy law given of God was the exact counterpart of the one given to Lehi.

Mr. Pratt, (a Daniel come to judgment), said in 1869:

The Lord, through his servant Lehi, gave a command that they should have but one wife. By and by, after the death of Lehi, some of his posterity began to disregard the strict law that God had given to their father, and took more wives than one, and the Lord put them in mind, through his servant Jacob, one of the sons of Lehi, of this law, and told them that they were transgressing it, and then referred to David and Solomon as having committed abominations in His sight.

History repeats itself, for now, I, the son of Joseph Smith, through whom the "holy law" cited by Mr. Pratt came from God, which commanded the men of the Church to have but one wife each, now call the attention of a people claiming to be of that Church, and remind them that they are transgressing that law by taking more wives than one. I further declare to that people, in the language of the Book of Mormon, which that people are commanded to hear, the taking of more wives than one is "abominable" before God.

It is proved beyond question that this monogamic rule prevailed in the Church from 1830 to 1843, (at any rate), by command of God. Hence, if he acted like himself and is unchangeable, he could not in 1843, give a law contrary to it. If he did he must be changeable. This destroys his character as God. Besides this, the history shows that three separate times did God in starting the peopling of the world fix the status "one man, one woman, one husband, one wife." Christ, the lawgiver of this dispensation, sanctioned it in the New Testament, and in the Doctrine and Covenants; and hence is not a party to this new revelation that brands his father with being a changeable Jehovah.

Joseph F. Smith, yourself and others are alarmed and indignant at me when I put words into Elder O. Pratt's mouth that indicate a change of sentiment in him, and you argue that he could not have said what I stated that he did say, because it was not like him. Please be as consistent in your argument respecting God. "I am God and change not" is his own language concerning himself. Nor am I in fault if I hurl this argument back at you that was the rallying cry of the elders in my father's day. "God is unchangeable, hence the gospel is now what it was in Christ's day."

The history shows that the wives of David's master fell into his hands by the fortunes of war. As a conqueror he slept in the bed of his captive, or slain enemies and ruled in their seats of power. Nathan did not give them to David as President Young gave wives to his faithful adherents. The record does not show that any such giving took place. The house of Israel and the house of Judah with the wives of the captive kings were given in a similar sense, as were the house of Saul and his wives. But how fatal the gift. The same God before whom he had done abominable things would not permit that he should build a house unto him. His wives forsook him. His son betrayed him, and debauched his wives. The same Nathan who you state gave the wives of David's master to the king, took the same wives and gave them to David's neighbor. Shimei, the son of Gera, cursed him at the command of God on account of the "blood of the house of Saul" whose wives he had won by conquest. The dread consequences of his sin followed. The like result followed the successful son, for his wives drew his heart away from God and he perished as a foolish old man.

I thank you for the statement you quote from the history of Joseph Smith, of date October 5, 1843.

In this statement my father urges that persons teaching, or preaching, or practicing the doctrine of plurality of wives should be tried. What for? Because, as Hyrum wrote in 1844, "No such doctrine is taught here" (Nauvoo).

This statement agrees perfectly with the one made by Elder Wm. Marks, that some time before my father's death, he told him to go before the High Council, and there prefer charges against such men; and that he would go upon the stand and proclaim against the doctrine; as it was from the devil and would destroy the Church if it was not put down. This was either a piece of clerical duplicity and deceit, or was a genuine effort to put a stop to what was had in secret of which knowledge had come to him. Nor does it take on the form of implicating himself as one of the guilty ones. It does not warrant the conclusion that he was himself one of those to be proceeded against by President Marks before the Council. Nor is it common sense to say that Joseph Smith was so great a bungler as to go on the stand and publicly denounce what he was secretly practicing, if such practice was known.

The testimonies from the witnesses you offer I am familiar with; and many of them will not bear cross examination; as I could easily demonstrate if I had the witnesses in a court where hearsay, mental reservations and other men's statements can not be affirmed as knowledge.

It is unnecessary to attempt to prove that Joseph Smith secretly taught and practiced celestial or plural marriage, or polygamy. For when that is proved, the issue remains unchanged. All that could be effected by it, so far as I am concerned, would be to lessen my respect for him as a man, and give me one more heart pang to bear through life. And if it be proved that he dictated the alleged revelation, or the "copy" which is all that you can claim, it would not prove either the revelation, or the doctrine to be of God, or binding on Latter Day Saints. I am not so particularly strenuous to assert my father's innocence. He may have been guilty, I prefer not to believe it. But if he was, I shall not evade the issue, nor my duty as I know it because of that guilt. Sin is not made legal, or lovely in my eyes because my father did it.

I admit God's power to change. I do not admit His right to change His law, without reserving to myself the right to declare Him changeable against the teaching of His own word. I do not believe that God has the right to lie. I do not believe that Jesus Christ, His Son, has the right to lie. I do not believe that either has the right to say that one thing is heaven's law in 1831 and that another and contrary thing is heaven's law in 1843. I do not believe that the revelation, so called, came from God. But if it did, it is an unjust and cruel thing; so totally unlike the "new covenant," the Book of Mormon, that it makes God to stultify himself. The new covenant, the everlasting gospel, has provisions for life and salvation open to all. This revelation has provisions for only a few. The gospel provides for all men, this revelation for a few only.

But, suppose that it be conceded that the revelation came from God and that Joseph Smith "had the keys of the power" to administer in the things named in it. That he was the "only one on earth" at the time authorized to receive revelations from God as to who might, and to say who should not receive wives under its privileges. Who authorized Brigham Young to do it? He did not receive it from Joseph Smith. It was not conferred in the revelation on any one but Joseph Smith. Brigham's appointment by the people to be the president did not confer it. He declared that he "was not a prophet, nor the son of one." Who gave Joseph Smith's wives to be Brigham Young's wives? What business had he to take them to himself?

The lodging of such a power in one man's hands—that of dictating that one here may, or shall take such and such a woman, or such women to wife; and that one there may or shall not take any—is a most dangerous thing to do. It offers to such a man an opportunity and an inducement to prostitute his prophetic character to greed, love of power and the lust of the flesh, that may not be resisted. Joseph Smith may not long have been free from such influences; and it is possible that the eleven months that he exercised it, if your theory is a true one, witnessed his corruption. That Brigham young in the exercise of it for the twenty-five years between 1852 and 1877 was free from its baleful powers, is more than I believe, and were the history of its workings fully known, I feel assured its own friends would be appalled.

I deny that Brigham Young was ever lawfully called and authorized to act under the provisions of that revelation. Joseph Smith did not designate him as his successor. The laws of the Church as found in the Doctrine and Covenants at Joseph Smith's death did not confer such authority. The revelation itself did not confer it. Nor does it contain any provision for a successor: "And I have appointed unto my servant Joseph to hold this power in the last days." This is the precise language of the revelation itself and limits the powers to Joseph Smith and him alone. The manner in which the document came to the people was irregular. The way Brigham Young became gossessed of the "copy" is of doubtful propriety. From these and other reasons plainly to be deduced it is safe to conclude that if the revelation did come from God, it became inoperative at the death of Joseph Smith.

As conclusive proof that the "copy" did not come legitimately into the Church rules, I quote section 28, paragraphs 12 and 13, Doctrine and Covenants, Utah edition of 1876.

For, behold, these things have not been appointed unto him, neither shall anything be appointed unto any of this church contrary to the church covenants. For all things must be done in order, and by common consent in the Church, by the prayer of faith.

This revelation never passed the ordeal required. There is no pretence that it did. Orson Hyde quoted the language of Joseph Smith, at the trial of Sidney Rigdon in 1844. "Joseph gave us the plan. When all the quorums are assembled and organized in order, let the revelation be presented to the quorums. If it pass one, let it go to another, and if it pass that, to another, and so on until it has passed all the quorums; and if it pass the whole without running against a snag, you may know it is of God." Times and Seasons, vol. 5, pages 649, 665.

That Joseph Smith did not think that the Temple at Kirtland had filled the object of its building is seen by reading the prayer offered at its dedication. See Doctrine and Covenants, edition of 1876, sec. 109.

Hyrum Smith, writing from Nauvoo to a member in Kirtland, referred to it thus, as the saying of the Lord, "That I may hide you from mine indignation that shall scourge the wicked, and then I will send forth and build up Kirtland, and it shall be polished and refined according to my word."

In your first letter the inference was conveyed that the Reorganized Church was sadly derelict in duty, or in goodness because they had built no Temples. And that those in Utah were necessarily the people of God because they were building Temples. Let me repeat that no special revelation has commanded the erection of Temples at Manti, Logan, St. George and Salt Lake City. The authority claimed by you in your reply is said to be a general one. Whence came this general commandment? The rule was, that whenever any house was to be built to the Lord it was first commanded. This was the case of the Tabernacle, Solomon's Temple, the one at Kirtland and the one at Nauvoo; and the command given in 1841 does not read, "my people are always commanded to build Temples unto my name." The language of the command is special, and is of a similar nature to the one referred to by Jacob: "If I will raise up a righteous seed I will command my people," showing that the Lord purposes to be obeyed. This is seen by the text of sec. 124, par. 39, of your edition of the Doctrine and Covenants for 1876. This shows that the washings, baptisms, statutes and judgements, etc., are "ordained by the ordinance of my holy house which my people are always commanded to build unto my holy name."

The word house is singular, and in paragraph 40 the Lord said, "Let this house be built unto my name." This confines the command to the "house" at Nauvoo; and does not warrant one at Salt Lake City, Manti, St. George or Logan. It is not a general command to build Temples.

It is shown by the quotation that Elder Joseph F. Smith makes from Mr. Pratt for December 10th, 1876, that no one of the Temples in Utah is the one spoken of by the Prophet as the one to be built in Zion in the generation counting from 1832, or "while some are living who lived in that year." This shows that Utah is not Zion. But the law, the general one under which you claim to have been building declares that it is "in Zion and her stakes," that those places (houses) where baptisms for the dead, etc., are to be performed. The free and proper rendering of this statement, "which my people are always commanded to build;" is that the people shall not attempt to build, without a command including place and manner of building. That God's people shall not presume to build a house, a Temple unto the Lord, unless such house shall first be ordered by Him. If it is at any time essential to His purposes that one should be built he will command it to be done.

That you have built many does not prove that any one of them was commanded. If only one had been built, it might be a possible presumption that it had been ordered. The building of more than one renders the presumption good that none were commanded. Another thing that is indicative that the Temples in Utah are not accepted of God is this:

And if my people will hearken unto my voice, and unto the voice of my servants whom I have appointed to lead my people, behold, verily I say unto you, they shall not be moved out of their place.

The people were "moved out of their place." The only conclusion that can be drawn from this is that they did not hearken; that there was something done that was not commanded, or something commanded that was left undone. You can take which of these horns you please. The fact of disobedience remains.

If you will look up the sayings of Pres. Young, you will find the report of a sermon delivered at St. George, January 1st, 1877. In that you will find something like this:

We that are here are enjoying a privilege that we have no knowledge of any other people enjoying since the days of Adam, that is to have a Temple completed, wherein all the ordinances of the House of God can be bestowed upon His people. * * * We built one at Nauvoo. I could pick out several before me now that were there when it was built, and know just how much was finished and what was done. It is true we left brethren there with instructions to finish it, and they got it nearly completed before it was burned; but the Saints did not enjoy it.

Brigham Young knew that the Temple at Nauvoo was not finished. He knew that when it was burned it had been let to a company of men who proposed establishing a school of some sort in it. He knew that it had not been accepted according to the terms of the revelation by which it was authorized to be built. He knew also that no command to build Temples in Utah had been given. There is no general law by which the people were commanded to build Temples. Houses of worship they might erect. They were and are necessary for the spiritual well being of the people. In them the principles of the New Covenant, the Book of Mormon, the Gospel may be taught; but in them no secret endowments, nor oaths, nor vows, nor covenants, not provided for in the gospel, are to be administered.

The people of Utah are entitled to credit for the energy and industry they have displayed in the erection of those places for worship. So are the members of the Reorganization for the building of the houses of worship they have built.

"The law of the Church is that if God can reveal one thing He can another."

This is another of your mistakes; there is no such law. The teaching of the Church and the tradition of the elders was that if God had ever had the power and did reveal Himself to His people in any age, He could do so in any and every other age and dispensation. But that whenever He does reveal Himself, such revelation will be in harmony with all former revelations on the same subject. That He will not contradict Himself; that later revelations of His mind will not be in conflict with those before given expressive of His will.

This is "common sense." Such a position permits men to build upon the revelations of the Scriptures, the Book of Mormon, and the revelations in the Book of Covenants, without fear that in a day or two God may change His mind, and give a different and conflicting command making vain and void their work. If God can to-day reveal one thing as lawful and pleasing to Him, and next week reveal the opposite as being lawful and pleasing, there is an end to trust and constancy. If He can and does to-day declare that certain things are displeasing to him, that and tomorrow or next week He can declare other things are "abominable before Him," that these very things are lovely in His sight, what criterion is left to judge by in regard to what is pleasing to God. If He can make certain things lawful to-day and next year make them unlawful, He can not justly hold man accountable for disregarding His edicts; as there can be no certainty respecting them.

It is because of this claim for the changeable character of God and His laws that you and your compeers make, that I oppose the plural marriage system. The books and teachings of the Church up to the death of my father give me good warrant to deny such claim for changeability on God's part. If my father did what you charge him with doing, he changed from what he was when he translated the Book of Mormon. If God gave the revelation on plural marriage, as you construe it, he changed from what he was in 1830-31.

There are things which God can not do and still be God. He can not lie. He can not be ignorant of what he does. If he knew what he was doing in 1830-31 he knew what was righteous and true. If he gave the revelation of 1843, he knew that it made the law of 1831 void and foolish. If he gave it he knew it was contradictory of the rule given to Lehi and Joseph and to Northrop Sweet. If he did not know this, he was very forgetful of himself, and unmindful of the "prejudices of the brethren," prejudices born of the law already given. If he did not forget he knew that Nauvoo, Far West, Jackson county, were all in territory where the "holy law" of the one wife for one man had obtained, under a constitution written by wise men "raised up by him to do that very work." He knew if he had not forgotten it, that he had told the Church that "they had no need to break the law of the land" to keep the law of God. And I firmly believe that it was for the very purpose of defeating the treachery of the betrayer of the brethren that the protection of the United States was providentially thrown over the territory ceded by Mexico to the United States after the conquest of Scott, and the occupation of California by Commodore Stockton.

Your wishes that I might be brought to see the righteousness of the positions you occupy, I reciprocate. I would to God that you and all others of scattered Israel might see that the revelation of God to me by which my courses of opinion and life have been opposed to those of the one time associates of my father, was and is in harmony with His will as revealed to that father, and the rule by which he proposes to people the earth with a righteous people.

Yours,

JOSEPH SMITH.

SOMETHING FOR THE CONSIDERATION OF ALL SAINTS.

IN the last Herald, April 15, is an article written by some one, concerning a person that has lately appeared calling himself the prophet Elijah. Malachi says that Elijah the prophet shall be sent, and who can believe for a moment that it will be any other than Elijah himself. I don't see any thing impossible in his being sent, as he was translated; and when any man comes and claims that he is Elijah, I can not believe him. We find in the Book of Mormon that the devil shall have power to transform himself nigh unto an angel of light, and this writer says that this young man comes so near being like the Seer, and that no one but a Latter Day Saint could get up any thing like it, and further that he believes all the prophecies will be fulfilled. I don't see how any thoughtful Latter Day Saint can say this. If it is ever revealed at all what year our Savior will make his appearance, it will be to Joseph Smith, the son of the Seer. Don't be over zealous, brethren and sisters, but patiently wait, for the coming of Christ draweth nigh, and it is high time we awoke and looked about ourselves, "for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh." "But of the times and the seasons, brethren, ye have no need that I write unto you; for yourselves know perfectly, that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night; for when they shall say peace and safety, then sudden destruction cometh upon them as a woman with child, and they shall not escape. But ye, brethren, are not in darkness that that day should overtake you as a thief. Ye are all the children of the light, and the children of the day. We are not of the night, nor of darkness; therefore let us not sleep as others do, but let us watch and be sober." 2 Thes. 5: 1-6. Let us remember that there are many things to be accomplished before the coming of Christ, though God has promised to cut short his work in righteousness. Though we long for the coming of our Master, let us remember, that if any thing is to be revealed about that time, it will come, as you say you thought, to Joseph Smith, the son of the Seer. It surely will not come to any one outside of the Church of Christ; and as the devil can transform himself nigh unto an angel of light, whoever comes bringing something so very near the truth, that you can hardly tell the point of difference, be careful how you accept it. There is just this point of difference with me in regard to this prophet. He is not Elijah, and the midnight cry is outside of the proper channel from which it will come. Be careful, Sr. Mormonia, that you do not give heed to an uncertain sound and be deceived. There was a man here, a number of years ago, claiming to be sent of God to the members of the Church here. He soon proved himself to be an impostor. The Savior, when instructing the Apostles concerning his coming, told them that "many should arise and say I am Christ, and should deceive many." He spoke of wars, rumors of wars, nation rising against nation, kingdom against kingdom. "All these are the beginning of sorrows, but the end is not yet," neither will it be, until this gospel of the kingdom is preached in all the world for a witness to all nations. We find that the first was to be last, and the last to be first. The gospel was preached to the Jews. They rejected it and then it went to the Gentiles. In these last days it is first preached to the Gentiles, and then to the Jews. Has this been done yet. And it is to be preached to the house of Jacob or the Lamanites.

Dear brethren, let us watch. Surely if we do this, that day will not come upon us as a thief in the night. We need not be surprised that some may come saying, I am Elijah the Prophet; for I have no doubt before the genuine Elijah comes, false ones will come. Let us patiently wait for the coming of our Lord and Master; for they that patiently wait shall not be ashamed, nor their faces wax pale. The surest way to find out whether this man is a servant of God, is to present to him the gospel plan, as taught by this Church; for "If any come unto you and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed; for he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds." 2d epistle of John 10, 11. Let us watch and be sober, so that when that day comes, whether sooner or later, we shall be with our lamps trimmed and burning and oil in our vessels, that we may enter into the marriage supper of the Lamb. But don't let us be soon or easily shaken in mind, nor carried away with every wind of doctrine. It is a good thing that the heart be established. Let us remember the words of our beloved president a year or two ago, that the time was coming that everything that could be shaken would be. Let us pray for one another, that we may be found worthy to stand when our Savior comes.

Yours for truth,

S. C. HARVEY.

TRUTH CONFIRMED.

JOSIAH PRIEST'S Antiquities of America, published in 1833, gives the result of the labored researches of eminent antiquarians, on pages 172, 173. From reasonable conclusions it aims to give the era when the civilized nation of this continent became extinct. As a circumstance taking one of the many large mounds near Marietta, Ohio, with its growth of timber, as a means to ascertain the time of its desertion, which will serve as an index for the time of the desertion of all the rest of the mounds, which, according to the same author, are strewed from the Rocky Mountains to the Alleghenies, and from Canada to the Gulf of Mexico. He says the timber on this mound, when it was cleared off, was ascertained to be nearly five hundred years old by its concentric circles on the grain. Near them were found trees in decay, that had fallen from old age. He said: "If we were to conjecture from this sort of data, how great a lapse of years has ensued since the abandonment of this mound, we should pursue the following method. From the time the country became desolate of its (civilized) inhabitants, till trees and forests would begin to grow, can not well be reckoned less and 5 years. If then they are permitted to grow 500 years, till as large and as old as some of the trees were on the mound when it was cleared by the people of Marietta, from that time till their natural decay and fall to the earth, and reduced to decayed wood, as was found on the mound, could not be less than 300 years in decaying so as to fall, and then 50 years to rot in; this would give 855 years for the first growth of timber. From this time we reckon a second crop, which we will suppose was the one growing when the mound was cleared of its timber; which was, according to Mr. Atwater's statement, between 4 and 500 years old. Add this to the age of the first crop, say 450, and we have, in the whole, 1305 years, since it was deserted of its inhabitants. Then it will follow, taking out the time since Marrietta was settled, and the mound cleared of its timber, that the country was deserted about 500 years after the commencement of the Christian era." Taking this great lapse of time into consideration, this conjecture of the time of the exit of this great nation once inhabiting this country, would seem to sufficiently approximate the true time of the disappearing of the once enlightened nation on this continent. The remarkable coincidence of this statement announced in 1833, with that published to the world in 1830, contained on page 543, chapter 10, Book of Mormon, is worthy of notice. Moroni, the last survivor of the extinct race of the mound builders, gives the exact time of the destruction, 420 years, A. D., only 80 years between the true time of their exit and the conjectured time of antiquity. It is difficult to believe that an unprejudiced and enlightened understanding on this subject, can not see therein a divine design in these events. A. G.

FAITH, HOPE AND CHARITY.

SAINT Paul in 1 Cor. 13: 13, says: "And now abideth faith, hope and charity, these three; but the greatest of these is charity." There are some divines in our day, who exclude faith and hope from heaven, but charity is allowed to enter. The Apostle himself answers this query in the text; for he says, "And now abideth faith, hope and charity." Paul would never have said that all the three would abide, if two out of the three were soon to perish. But with the full view of eternity before him, he says the whole three abide. The three are grouped together in one category, because one is as durable as the other. What the Scriptures thus assert, philosophy sanctions and confirms; for both faith and hope must continue to be exercised in heaven; because the attainments and enjoyments of heaven are progressive, and will be eternally progressive. Faith is belief in something not yet seen, and hope is expectation of some good that is not yet possessed. Faith ceases only when there is nothing to be revealed; and hope ceases only when there is no future good to be enjoyed. Hence, all see the necessity of constant, divine revelation, and the fulness of the everlasting gospel, as taught by Christ and his Apostles.

Is this the case with souls now in heaven?

Assuredly not. Do not the souls of patriarchs, prophets, apostles, martyrs, and other saints now in heaven, believe in the rich promises of God in the resurrection through Jesus Christ our Lord? Assuredly they do. Do they not also hope to realize that promised good? And if they do, they must have faith and hope in heaven, as well as upon earth. I suppose that when poets sang, "In heaven faith would be lost in sight," they meant that what is now merely believed will then be actually seen. And when they say that "hope" will expire in "sweet fruition," they mean that the good which is merely hoped for now, will be actually enjoyed. But the things which are seen and enjoyed are no longer matters of faith and hope; but are a reality. I think this is true. But other truths may then become matters of faith, and other rich and good things, and blessings may then become objects of hope. For instance, take a testimony of a young convert. How it strengthens him and gives him fresh courage to press with vigor on. Indeed, I have not the least doubt that throughout the eternal ages, God will continue to reveal great truths to his saints here, and to the glorified. These revelations will of course be matters of faith. God will also continue to give additional promises of future good, and that good must be an object of future hope.

After one revelation is reduced to perfect knowledge, another revelation still brighter will be given; and before one promised good is realized by experience, other promises and blessings, richer, will be given. Thus faith and hope will be in constant exercise, and progressive. It fills our being with future knowledge and happiness. Endless attainments, and ever advancing blessedness.

Why is Charity the greatest? For several reasons:—1st. Love is the spring and motive of all acceptable obedience. 2d. Love makes our duty our delight. 3d. Love is the fulfilling of the law. 4th. Love is the great source of all our happiness. 5th. Love makes us more like God, for "God is love." 6th. "And he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him." 7th. Love is the brightest of the trio, and strengthens all the rest. So much can not be said of Faith and Hope, nevertheless "they must all three abide." Says faith, Look yonder, see the crown laid up in Heaven above. Says hope, It shortly shall be mine. I long to wear it, says love. But stop, says patience, wait awhile; the crown's for those that fight; the prize for those that win the race by faith and not by sight. Thus faith would take a pleasing view; hope waits; love sits and sings; desire flutters to be gone; but patience clips her wings.

DESCRIPTION OF CHRIST.

THE following epistle was taken by Napoleon from the public records of Rome, when he deprived that city of so many valuable manuscripts. It was written at the time and on the spot where Jesus Christ commenced his ministry by Publicus Lentulus, the governor of Judea, the senate of Rome—Cæsar, Emperor. It was the custom in those days for the governor to write home any event of importance which transpired while he held office:

"CONSCRIPT FATHERS.—There appeared in these our days a man named Jesus Christ, who is yet living among us, and of the gentiles is accepted as a prophet of great truth; but his own disciples call him the Son of God. He hath raised the dead, cured all manner of diseases. He is a man of stature somewhat tall and comely, with a very ruddy countenance, such as the beholder may both love and fear. His hair is the color of the filbert when fully ripe, plain to his ears, whence downward it is more orient of color, curling and waving about his shoulders; in the middle of his head is a seam or partition of long hair, after the manner of the Nazarites. His forehead is plain and delicate; his face without spot or wrinkle, beautiful with a comely red; his nose and mouth are exactly formed; his beard is of the color of his hair, and thick, not of any great height, but forked. In reproving he is terrible; in admonishing, courteous; in speaking, very modest and wise; in proportion of body, well shaped. None have seen him laugh, but many have seen him weep. A man, for his surpassing beauty, excelling the children of men.

WOMAN'S WORK.

Mrs. Robert Dale Owen asserts that more than half the work of the world is performed by women. She thinks that woman's work is not estimated in the expense of living. Every thousand dollars in money that comes into a house has two thousand added to it by her labor. All this vast amount of domestic work has to be done, and ought to be done well. There is no reason why it should not be held in as high estimation as esthetics, or why it should not be thought quite as respectable; and the only way to make it so is to preach it up as having a pecuniary and intrinsic value, and to make every girl feel, upon leaving school, that she ought to select at once some life-work for herself, and that unless she has some peculiar talent in another direction, domestic labor is as high and elevated as any. No young woman should be willing to marry unless she is able to support herself, and can feel that she does not choose a husband that she might become a dependent. She does not approve, however, of married women earning their own living. She thought it would ruin all the men in America if their wives supported themselves; their domestic duties, properly performed, were enough for them to do, and should be recognized at their proper value.

GEMS.

VARIOUS sentiments, devices, and names are transferred to rings and charms by means of a regular gem alphabet. Thus "love" is spelled by the following arrangement:

L apis lazulia,
O pal,
V erde antique,
E merald;

and if you add m alachite and another e merald the ring gives us "love me."

The Prince of Wales gave the Princess Alexandra a very costly ring representing his familiar name for her, Bertie. There is no end of the combinations that may be formed, but "dearest" and "regard" have always been the most popular.

January, the jacinth or hyacinth, sometimes the garnet. The garnet stands for health and joy, and is also an emblem of constancy.

February, the amethyst, emblematic of sobriety and presence of mind.

March, the blood-stone, emblem of courage and peace of mind.

April, the sapphire and diamond, standing for repentance and innocence.

May, the emerald, success in love.

June, the agate, emblematic of health and long life. The agate was believed to quench thirst, and when held in the mouth to allay the violence of fever. The ancients declared that it would render the wearer invisible.

July, the cornelian, symbolizing a contented mind and a good memory.

August, the sardonyx or onyx, emblematic of conjugal felicity. Rabbi Benoni, of the fourteenth century, tells us that the onyx is a dangerous stone, for it contains a little demon which comes out of it at sunset and fills the mind of the wearer with disturbing dreams. The parings from the nails of Venus fell into the Indus and were changed into onyx.

September, the chrysolite, emblematic of Mens sano in corpore sano.

October, the aqua-marine, opal, and beryl, standing for hope.

November, the topaz, emblematic of fidelity and friendship.

December, the turquoise or ruby, symbolizing prosperity and great success. The turquoise pales when the fortunes of its owner wane. The ruby was believed by the Burmese and Hindoos to ripen like the mango. They described it as turning successively yellow, green, blue, and, last of all, brilliant red.

Men are born with two eyes, but one tongue, in order that they should see twice as much as they say.

MOSAIC RECORDS.

DISCOVERY OF AN ANCIENT VERSION OF THE DECALOGUE.

The Sun's London cablegram says: A Mr. Shupira of Jerusalem, bookseller and dealer in antiquaries, has just deposited in the British Museum fifteen slips of black sheepskin leather, on which are written, in characters similar to those on the celebrated Moabite stone, portions of the book of Deuteronomy, differing materially from the received version. The date of the slips is the ninth century before Christ, or sixteen centuries older than any authentic manuscript of any part of the Old Testament. Mr. Shupira bought them from an Arab and he asks for them $5,000,000 from the British Museum. If genuine, the interest and importance of the discovery can not be overated and so far as the variations in sacred text are concerned, there is promise of one of the greatest controversies that scholars have ever entered upon. The Decalogue furnishes a good example for comparison with the received versions. I quote from the Shupira record:

I am God thy God, which liberated thee from the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage. Ye shall have no other gods. Ye shall not make to yourselves any graven image, nor any likeness that is in heaven above, or that is in the earth beneath, or that is in the waters under the earth. Ye shall not bow down to them nor serve them.

I am God thy God. In six days I have made the heaven and the earth and all that there is therein, and rested on the seventh day; therefore rest thou also, thou and thy cattle and all that thou hast.

I am God thy God. Honor thy father and thy mother.

I am God thy God. Thou shalt not kill the person of thy brother.

I am God thy God. Thou shalt not commit adultery with the wife of thy neighbor.

I am God thy God. Thou shalt not steal the property of thy brother.

I am God thy God. Thou shalt not swear by my name falsely, for I visit the iniquity of fathers upon the children unto the third and fourth generations of those who take my name in vain.

I am God thy God. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy brother.

I am God thy God. Thou shalt not covet his wife, or his man servant, or his maid servant, or anything that is his.

I am God thy God. Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thy heart.

I am God thy God. These ten words God spake.

Dr. Ginsburg, the eminent Jewish scholar, to whom Gladstone has just given £50 for the production of his work on the Masorah, has deciphered the above, and is busy completing the translation and determining, on behalf of the museum, the genuineness of the fragments.

Very much has been said about dying grace, or courage with which to arm ourselves for the last conflict, and doubtless much will be said till the end comes. This appears to be a waste of time and thought; if we fashion ourselves according to the precepts of the Master we need not fear for the final moments. He will take care of us then.

Woe to him who smiles not over a cradle, and weeps not over a tomb.

SALT LAKE DISTRICT.

Our conference convenes in the Mission Chapel, Salt Lake City, on the 6th day of October, 1883. A full representation is desired. Some branches have not been heard from for a considerable time, and others have reported in such an irregular way, as to render it impossible to keep the district and General Church records straight. Will the branch clerks please write to the Herald Office, and get a few copies of the branch statistical report blanks in time to fill them up and send, or bring them to our next conference, so that our system of reporting may be uniform and satisfactory; this is to be greatly desired.

The Providence Branch, of Cache Co., Utah, has no existence in fact, and where the members who once made up that branch are, we do not know. Will they, or some of them who may see this notice, please drop a few lines to Bro. H. A. Stebbins, Lamoni, Iowa, or to me, Box 1046, Salt Lake City, Utah, giving what information they can regarding the persons referred to. If they have moved away and united with other branches, we wish to have the transfers properly made on the records. Branch Clerks, all of you, please be sure to obtain statistical report blanks, and fill them out in time for conference.

JOSEPH LUFF, District President.

DIED.

BURT.—At Springville, Utah, June 10th, 1883, Sister Anne, wife of Bro. Thomas Burt. She was born at Uley, Gloucestershire, England, June 15th, 1833. Emigrated with her husband to Utah in 1862, and was baptized into the Reorganization February 12th, 1881. Her faith in Christ and in the Book of Mormon was abiding. On the eighth day of her illness, though speechless, she gave unmistakable evidence of the fact that death was sweet. The funeral discourse was delivered before a fair audience of interested listeners, in the Fourth Ward School House, Springville, July 8th, 1883, by Elder Joseph Luff.

KEMP.—At Enfield, Middlesex, England, July 12th, 1883, Bro. John Alfred Kemp. Born April 29th, 1858. Bro. Kemp was a Deacon, and was always prompt in the discharge of the duties of that office. Truly can it be said of him, his life was love always.

"Dear brother, thou art gone to rest!
We will not weep for thee;
For thou art where's off on earth,
Thy spirit long'd to be.
Dear brother, thou art gone to rest,
And this shall be our prayer,
That when we reach our journey's end,
Thy glory we may share.
Bereaved friends, weep not for him,
Whose place is vacant here;
Your loss is great, but he has gained
A brighter, happier sphere."

WOODINGTON.—At Moberly, Randolph county, Missouri, August 22d, 1883, of inflammation of brain, Frank Woodington, infant son of brother and sister Albert and Elizabeth Woodington, aged 1 year, 1 month and 15 days. Buried at Friendship Churchyard, Macon county, Missouri, on the 23 day of August, 1883; and funeral sermon by Elder George Hicklin, from Matt. 18:2.

GARLIC.—At her residence, Vancleave, Jackson county, Mississippi, July 23d, 1883, Nancy, wife of Joseph Garlic. She was born in Covington Co., Alabama, August 20th, 1846; aged at death 36 years, 11 months and 3 days. She was stricken instantly speechless, in a short time became helpless, and lay in that condition for seven and a half days, but seemingly quiet and peaceful, to meet her Savior in his glory, when he comes to call his elect. She leaves a husband and nine children to mourn her loss. Grave services by John Flurey, Methodist minister.

The Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH - - - EDITOR.

DANIEL F. LAMBERT, ASSOCIATE.

Lamoni, Iowa, Sept. 15th, 1883.

WE have intruded into THE HERALD articles the newspaper correspondence between Elder L. O. Littlefield, of Logan, Utah, of the Polygamic Church in Utah, and Joseph Smith, of Lamoni, of the Reorganized Church, on the subject of polygamy, for the following reasons: First. The open letter of Mr. Littlefield, published in the Utah Journal, was so direct an attack that we deemed it a duty to reply. To this duty we were urged by some of the leading elders of the church, upon the ground that it would be more satisfactory than if otherwise. The reply written by us was sent to the publishers of the Utah Journal, and was by them submitted to Mr. Littlefield for rebuttal, before insertion in that paper, and when it was inserted, Mr. Littlefield's answer was inserted with it. We then replied a second time, and our reply again appeared followed by Mr. Littlefield's answer. This seemed to show a plan to get the position assumed by us upon the question under consideration, before the Utah people, as the letters were reproduced in Deseret Evening News, published at Salt Lake City. This plan is almost confessed by the editor of the News in a leader upon the letters.

Second. A number of the readers of THE HERALD were in receipt of the Utah Journal, as large numbers of that paper were struck off for distribution. Some of these readers thought it advisable that the replies made to Mr. Littlefield should appear in THE HERALD. Others wished to see both letters and replies; deeming it to be the better way to show both sides. Mr. Littlefield also made the request that we give his letters place in THE HERALD.

Third. The principal evidences introduced by Eld. Littlefield have been known to most all of the readers of THE HERALD by rumor, and have in their rumored form been considered as terribly conclusive. In the light of these evidences, if as forceful as many supposed them to be, the positions assumed by us on the question at issue, seemed to be so anomalous that some doubt has been entertained as to their soundness. Whether they were sound or faulty could best be seen if put in direct contrast with the opposite positions urged by a defender of plural marriage.

Fourth. The shadow of this incubus on Mormonism, using that term to indicate the faith as originally proclaimed and held by the Church of Christ, has been very much larger than its bulk. Ugly and misshapen, it has sat over against the doors of progress, and disputed the way with zealous pertinacity, claiming particular sanctity for itself against the world, and security from our especial attack, because of its alleged paternity. If it was from God, we had no business to be found fighting against it. And if we had been clearly notified that it had celestial birth, we should have refrained from bearing arms against it. But we were convinced that the claim for divine parentage was a case of mistaken identity; and that to make this apparent it only needed to be put into such position that the light of the revelations before given to the church could be turned upon it, when the shadow would be reduced, and the thing itself be seen in its own peculiar unloveliness.

Fifth. The authorities of the Utah Church have studiously avoided an open discussion of the differences between it and the Reorganization. They have not only done this in person, but they have undoubtedly counselled their missionaries to do so. They have, so far as they could, prevented the elders of the Reorganization from getting a hearing before the masses in Utah. They have steadily referred to the Reorganized Church as being composed of apostates and renegade Mormons, whom they could well dispense with, and who were not worthy of notice—a few discontented and ambitious would-be leaders. They have regarded us as a degenerate son of a worthy sire; and as being led by improper personal influences. But recent events have either aroused them to the consideration that the handful of malcontents had grown worthy of notice, by reason of numbers, or the persistency of our attack has wearied them into a recognition, or inquiry from within their own ranks begins to startle them into the necessity for a better explanation of their defense against the charge of having gone into transgression. In either of these cases, if it is policy for them to put the position we occupy on the question before their own people, it was not for us to object, and policy would also dictate that what was presented by us on behalf of the Reorganized Church in those papers, before that people, should be presented to the members in our own organ, that all might understand alike. Some, of course, do not like to see a defense of polygamy in THE HERALD. Nor should we, either, like to see such defense, nor would we submit to it, if one of our own members should essay to present it as a doctrine of the faith; for it is not. But we can see no real harm to accrue to the cause by permitting the presentation of those views and their evidences, which we have so long been openly combatting, with the refutation of them to be read side by side. "But why permit such articles to appear in THE HERALD? It will be used against us by our enemies," say some. The things averred in them have been constantly affirmed by those in and out of Utah, who have been unfriendly to our course. A recognition of those allegations and our reasons for not accepting them can neither make them true nor false; while a failure to recognize them, or a fear to present them is construed into a confession that they must be true.

The editor of the Deseret News was once editor of the Ogden Function. In one of his leaders he asserted that we were fearful, and that we might as well "face the music." In a late leader in the News he perverts the statements made in our reply to Mr. Littlefield, and makes us say that God is a deceiver, a changeable being, etc. Should this charge be repeated abroad by the elders of Utah, taking their cue from the News, the elders of the Reorganization having the articles in their own papers can easily contradict.

These are some of the reasons why we have presumed to print both letters and replies in THE HERALD.

SELF-GOVERNMENT.

GOVERNMENTS in which the will of the sovereign, request or command, is the rule for the obedience of the subject are very perfect in their kind, and are conducive to the well being of society, or destructive to the liberties of the people, as the ruler is weak and wicked or wise and kind. In the one case he will think how he may do good to the governed; in the other he will only of himself.

An absolute monarchy is said to be the only perfect form of government. One where the will of the sovereign is the highest authority and final in all cases. But it must be conceded that the perfection referred to must be in regard to strength. And in this particular the only strength that any government can have is the power to enforce its own decrees.

In earthly governments the absolute monarchy has been tried and found wanting, because it has been found that while such government may be strong for the reason that there is no will to conflict with, or counteract, the will of the monarch, the best good of the whole has not been the rule for the adoption of, and the executing of the law; but rather that the good of the subject was dependent upon the strange vicissitudes of temper to which capricious men are liable. Men so governed become tyrants in turn, and rule below them when placed in power, with the same rigor, same cruelty, and uncertainty. Their interests become selfish, and the public weal is left to care for itself.

A government of the people, by the people, and for the people, like the political structure of the United States derives its strength, not from the carrying into effect the will of one man, but from the crystalizing the will of the whole for the good of all, and rendering that will effective by enforcing it. This strength is in the consent of the governed. So is the consent of the governed had in the case of a monarchy, but in the one it is a passive, hopeless consent; in the other an intelligent, helpful, and active consent.

The government of the church, if it is anything, is one in which the will of God is supreme, but derives its sovereignty, and power over its subjects from the consent of the people. Whatever benefits such a form of government may confer upon its subjects, those subjects are entitled to them only upon the conditions named, that of consent to the goodness of the law and submission to its demands. These conditions observed the unity between sovereign and subject is established and all and several of the blessings that such a government can bestow will be received.

Saints have consented to the law that it is good. They have, so far as an obedience to its first commands can do, pledged themselves to a continued observance of its demands upon them. There is not neither can there be any reasonable excuse for disregarding the mandatory provisions of the law. All of them are based in the goodness of the Supreme Lawgiver, and his expressed object to benefit those to whom the law is given. This is understood by those who have consented to the law. They are fully committed to this consideration. They have given their first allegiance upon this express condition. No after occurrence can so dispose the conditions surrounding them as to make the goodness, wisdom, and love of God, the ruler, less than at first. Nor can the responsibility which they voluntarily assumed in order to reap the harvest of good things promised be readily removed. It attached to them as a condition absolutely essential to their life in the government; a part of their citizenship. It can only be discharged and they absolved at the final adjustment of the governmental affairs at the close of the earthly term. This term is a provisional one. In it the preparatory work for the greater and perpetual reign is to be done. It is in this provisional government that the test of loyalty to the Ruler, subordination to the law, is to be applied, and here will the opportunity be given for the subjects of the law to bring themselves into harmony with the rules upon the perpetuity of which the future stability of their relation with the final and permanent government is to depend. Those who succeed most fully in bringing themselves into appreciative and intelligent accord with such rules, conforming both in consent of the mind and in action to them will necessarily be the most apt and ready to receive the fullest citizenship in the permanent government; and will be least inconvenienced by the passing away of the provisional forms. The transition from the last named to the first will not be to them of such abrupt and violent nature as to affect them unhappily. Those who have failed through disobedience to put themselves into immediate and close relationship with the provisional will be sadly inconvenienced by the passing away of that to which they have been partially accustomed, but have not fully appreciated, and the incoming of that for which they are ill-prepared. When that "which is perfect has come," the power to enforce the commands of the law fully acknowledged in the provisional form by all its subjects, but held in reserve because of its preparatory character, out of love for the good, and pity for the weakness of the governed, will be exercised. Those excuses for failure to observe the provisions and rules of the law in the preparatory state cannot be urged there. Command and performance; command and neglect and disobedience, punishment or reward will so closely follow that time for misapprehension or procrastination will not be given. The weakness both of the law and those governed by it will be past. Power to do having been conferred, no reason for refusal will exist. The realm for doubt uncertainty, and indecision is on this side. Over there to doubt will be condemnation. Here it is sometimes pardonable because of the imperfection of the channels through which commands have come. There hesitancy will be refusal. Here it is but the expression of a desire to be right before acting. There indecision cannot exist for one will only will prevail.

There is no really good reason why the provisional law should not be understood. Nor are there so good reasons for grave failure to obey the rules of the law as many suppose. The chief incentive to disregard and disobey the known rules is the selfish nature of the subject. He desires to retain his liberty to disobey or obey at pleasure, without forfeiting any of his claims upon the ruler. This he does, too, while in theory he admits that he cannot expect the blessings except upon obedience. He fills his life with desires and expectations based upon the blessings promised the believer in the carrying out the law, but looks to others for performance rather than to himself. He ventures upon the forbearance in executing the penalty upon the part of the ruler (upon what hypothesis it is difficult to see), and practically defies the power in the government, provisional, to inflict the penalty; while rigorously insisting upon the exercise of that power in the bestowment of the blessings permissible under it.

This provisional law is the gospel. The laws of the church are its supplementary rules. The Saints have consented unto its rule over them. No one of all the host of them has any right to reserve unto himself the natural rights held as citizens of the world outside of the church. Each one is amenable to the rules of the church government. The claims for consent and performance are equal to the promises made for privileges and blessings to be bestowed. Whoever proposes to retain as a citizen of the gospel government all the rights appertaining to a citizen of the world outside of such government must not complain if the full pleasures, and final perfection that pure self-abnegation would give are denied him.

Much of the failure to be subservient to the law of the church is founded on the mental reservation of certain fancied rights, the exercise of which cannot inhere in the life of a saint. Those rights cannot exist in a government like the United States with any degree of propriety, and cannot be held and exercised at all in an absolute monarchy. No matter whether such government be cruel and despotic, or wise and beneficent; the individual is swallowed up in the sovereign; one man in the case of the monarchy; the whole people in the case of the United States.

The Saints are taught to pray, "Thy Kingdom come; thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." To pray for an event to transpire for which the one who prays is not prepared, is inconsistent. To be prepared for the event prayed for one must be in accord with the principle which must prevail when such event has transpired. He who prays that the will of God may come, and he is not himself complying with such portion of God's will as is revealed, is in no condition to abide the condition of things that must exist when the Kingdom does come. Then his will must be entirely subservient to the rule of God's will. He must not, nor can he have or hold any reserved right. He must have so lived and schooled himself that he has an intimate acquaintance with the rules of that government. His habit of obedience must have been so formed that command and performance are one; and, indeed, it will be possible that performance may anticipate command. Rules that are now ignored or disregarded will then be observed with such fidelity and consistent appreciation as to need no repetition. The executive power of the government while incapable of destruction, will exist in such condition as to be seen in the majesty of the whole. The will of the subject will seem to be the rule of action. The will of the ruler and the ruled will be one.

Saints, let us antedate the day of our full obedience to the government of God, make the requirements of his law our rule of thought, will, and action, and so receive here what we wait to receive there.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. M. H. Bond wrote from Providence, R. I., August 25th. His address is for the present No. 61 Waverly street, Providence.

I am battling for the truth. I am tried and suffering, but am blessed of the Holy Spirit, my greatest comfort. I go to Attleboro, to-day, a new field. There are many things to discourage in the field, but the work is onward without any doubt. They are expecting a large attendance at conference next Saturday.

Bro. W. W. Blair wrote from Bozeman, Montana, August 21st:

We baptized three here last Sunday; others are near the kingdom. I may stay in Montana for the next six weeks. I go to Willow Creek, Gallatin county, after our conference of 26th and 27th inst. Storms are damaging crops in this valley, extensively; though on Reese Creek they have good crops, and they are safe yet. Had good meeting in Bozeman, last night.

And on August 27th:

We closed a pleasant conference here last night. Have had large and attentive congregations, and four have been baptized in the past ten days; many others are believing. Hail, freezing, and extreme heat, have damaged crops largely in this Territory; many fields of spring wheat and late oats are ruined. Business prospects, except in cattle and sheep, are dull. Many persons are out of employment. The Northern Pacific began running through trains to the Pacific yesterday.

Bro. J. J. Cornish wrote:

I have been up in Huron City, Michigan; made a good opening; baptized one; go their again soon. I have also visited Webberville; preached five times; baptized three, and left eight or ten others near the kingdom; could not stay longer.

RE-READ Bro. Heman C. Smith's letter in last HERALD. See what a sure plea is made for prohibiting the sale of intoxicating drinks. The probabilities are that Bro. Heman would not have been disturbed if the bigotry, and prejudices of the ill disposed and unfriendly persons in the congregation, had not been inflamed by drink. But fired by that element evil acts ensued. The Saints ought not only to be opposed to drunkenness, but should also be opposed, actively, to the granting of business facilities for making drunkards. If no drunkard can inherit the kingdom, and Saints help to make drunkards, or consent to their being made, are not they accessory to the terrible fate that must befall those excluded from the celestial city.

Saints should use every honorable means to prevent the stain of blood of this generation being found on their skirts in the fostering of the liquor traffic as in all the means of doing evil. Put a stop to the supply by education, and stop the business by restraint of law, vote for no man for office who is a drunkard, nor for any one who is not a sound and wise citizen in favor of putting away the evil.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE brethren of the Pittsburg, Pennsylvania District, have built a neat little church capable of seating two hundred and fifty, or three hundred persons. The church has been more especially built by and for the Benwood Branch of the Church. It was dedicated Sunday, August 26th. Bro. Joseph F. McDowell preaching the sermon. The services were in charge of Bro. Gomer T. Griffiths. The report given of the affair by the Wheeling Daily Intelligencer, was a very good one; a fair synopsis of the discourse being included.

Bro. Hyrum Bronson was at Maroa, Illinois, on August 25th. He had spoken there a number of times, had been interviewed by Elder Wetzell, of the Christian Church. It is possible that the claims of the respective churches will be discussed by them.

Sr. Jennie Murphy wrote from Marshalltown, Iowa, August 27th, ordering a copy of our Spaulding Story Re-examined, to the address of the Pastor of the Presbyterian Church, of the place where she resides. He has lately revamped the Spaulding Romance story for the origin of the Book of Mormon, for the benefit of his congregation. Sr. Marphy thinks he needs enlightening on the subject; hence her order.

By letter from Bro. Hiram P. Brown, of Oakland, California, August 29th, we learn that four have lately been added to the church by baptism, two at Oakland, August 26th, two at San Francisco, two or three weeks earlier.

Bro. Brown writes quite encouragingly of the prospects in San Francisco and Oakland, and is of the opinion that if some able man could be kept at work in the district, property supported, very great advancement could be made.

There is no question but what the Saints could by a sufficient sacrifice of means, support a minister in each large district. But it would require a constant supervision by somebody, who should bear such laborer in mind, and see that supplies of food and other supplies were had at the right time. If left to the care of no one especially, an elder would hardly be properly supplied.

Bro. Brown is also preparing a history of the priesthood, which will be ready to print in some months. Such a history is certainly needed, and Bro. Brown's knowledge and research fit him for the work required to prepare it.

THE following from the Sandwich, Illinois, paper tells us of the death of a good friend to the Church. Though he was not of it, he was a persistent defender of it; and so far as he could, aided the people where he went to a proper understanding of our position. He made many donations of books to the library, and assisted us to many more, at a pecuniary loss to himself:

"A telegram was received Monday afternoon announcing the death of Charles Nicholson. He left home about a week before to visit his sister in Sandusky, Ohio. He died at her house on Monday morning of inflammation of the bowels, having been sick but a few hours. He has been in declining health for several months. His wife at the time was visiting in Wisconsin, and returned home on receipt of the intelligence. Mr. Nicholson was well known through a considerable part of northern Illinois as dealer in old and rare books. He was a man of a good deal of general intelligence. His remains arrived in Sandwich, Illinois, on Wednesday. Mr. Nicholson was born in western New York in 1819, and came to Illinois in the fall of 1870. He leaves a wife and five children, two daughters and three sons.

WEBB CITY, Gasper Co., Mo.,
September 3d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I left home on the morning of the 17th, and came to Webb City. On the 18th Bro. S. Maloney came for me, and I went with him to Galesburgh. Sunday the 19th, we drove over to Mr. Hudson's Grove, in Kansas, some eighteen miles, and at 11 a. m. I spoke to quite a large congregation, and again at 2 p. m. Had good liberty. Monday we drove to Weir City, and called on Bro. D. S. Crawley. Afterwards we were kindly taken over into the Pleasant View school district, and was made welcome by Bro. and Sr. Moberly. In the evening I again held forth with good liberty. Tuesday, Bro. and Sr. Maloney still with me, we went to see Bro. Jasper Richards and was kindly received. Bro. Jap. is rather inclined to be argumentative; we enjoyed the visit. Wednesday, Bro. John Ross conveyed us to Arcadia, where we met Bro. Melvin Ross, an old timer. Here I was kindly granted the M. E. Church, for Thursday and Friday nights. Wednesday evening Bro. Stephen and I walked out of town a mile and a half or so, and met another old time couple, a brother and sister Watson. While in Arcadia, I was kindly entertained by Dr. Wallace, of the M. E. Church, and his wife who is a Saint. I preached on Thursday and Friday evenings with good flow of the Spirit. Saturday we returned to Bro. John T. Davies, near Pleasant View School-house. On Sunday morning we all repaired to the Pleasant View School-house, where I again occupied an hour and a little over, talking to the people. At 2 p. m. Bro. J. T. Davis favored us with one of his characteristic sermons. In the evening I was called upon to address the people again. The Spirit did not desert me, but was my strength again. Monday morning Bro. Charles Bird's team brought us to Galesburgh again. I rested here till Saturday morning, only preaching Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. Tuesday evening without the aid of the Spirit, but with a better effort on Wednesday evening. Saturday I came here, still accompanied by Bro. Maloney and wife, and yesterday I spoke in the morning at eleven, and evening at 7:30, and will again speak to-night. I shall likely return home on Thursday of this week as I have some business awaiting me at Independence, which must be done before the 15th. I would be glad if I could attend the Reunion Meeting in Western Iowa, and will if I can. I feel very much impressed that I ought to be there. I have never had a better flow of the Spirit altogether than on this trip, for which I am thankful. I intended to be at the Stewartville Basket Meeting, but had too much to do. Will visit them as soon as can make it convenient.

I remain your brother,

A. H. SMITH.

SALT RIVER, Macon Co., Mo.,
August 25th, 1883.

Brother Joseph Smith:—I came to this place last Saturday, August 18th, and have preached eight times, and meeting again this evening. The school-house is well filled every night, very good order is kept, and the good Spirit is present. I feel sure there are some very near the kingdom. Our aged brother, Robert Thrutchley, is the presiding elder here. He is a good man. He is not well at this time. Pray for him. I was called on to attend a funeral last Thursday of a child of Bro. Albert Woodington's in Moberly, Missouri, and I must say that the good Spirit of the Lord was present with us, and I think had good effect. Pray for me. I remain

Your brother,

GEORGE HICKLIN.

TABOR, Iowa, August 27th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—The work in this district is steadily improving. The demand for preaching is great. We held a two days' meeting at the Keystone Branch, Saturday and Sunday, August 18th, and 19th, and I think good was done by our worthy brethren, C. Derry, E. C. Briggs and R. M. Elvin. Bro. Deuel had preached some in the branch before the meeting. Two were added by baptism. The brethren of this branch had labored faithfully in fitting up a place in Bro. Shick's grove for the meetings; and the honorable sisters were not one whit behind the chief of saints in preparing for and making comfortable all visitors. Also, our two days' meeting at Farm Creek was well attended. Here our worthy brother, D. Hougas, and family, with the rest of the saints, did all in their power to make it a success. I must not to forget to mention the brethren of the Plum Hollow Branch: Father Goode, William Gaylord, George Kemp and Father Hershey, with some of the sisters who are among the "Sweet Singers of Israel." These brethren never tire; their zeal for the work never slackens. By invitation I visited the Wheeler's Grove Branch in the Pottawattamie District, and preached for them one week. The meetings were well attended. Here I baptized three. These saints are a noble band of faithful souls, who have the cause of God at heart. They kindly administered to my wants, for which I pray God to bless them. The most of the branches in this district need help. Brother Wilcox at Shenandoah, is doing the best he can; also, Bro. Taylor at Hamburg. The harvest truly is great, but the laborers few. I am afraid I shall not be able to do as much for the work, spiritually, as I would like, in consequence of losing my crop through the hail-storm, in common with many of my brethren in this branch.

Praying for the prosperity of the work, and for the blessing of God upon all his people, I still remain your brother in bonds,

HENRY KEMP.

OAKLAND, California,

August 25th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—This beautiful, serene Sabbath, we congregated at the bay for the purpose of baptizing two who had declared their intentions to cast their lot with us, one a Miss Bell Surndethurst, of Calaveras county, who has been an almost helpless invalid for a long time. Medical aid proved inadequate to restore her wasted form. She was kindly admonished to avail herself of the benefits of the Church, which she accepted, and requested administration by the Elders; but unfortunately distance intervened, and it was considered impracticable to go, she was administered to by proxy by Bro. H. P. Brown, she receiving sufficient heavenly aid to be removed to the city, and to-day was baptized. She appeared much better afterwards. Our united prayer to God has been and still is, that the sister may recover her wonted strength and health, and remain a blessing to the Church.

Our meetings continue interesting, and prospects are flattering for an ingathering of the honest.

The Knight Templars' Triennial Conclave has ended. It was a magnificent affair. Various estimates of the people who witnessed the procession placed it at 70,000. Some 5,000 Sir Knights were present. The city was beautifully festooned, and elaborately decorated with the various kinds of insignia representing the order. One more prominent than the rest with this inscription, "In hoc signo vinces," which is rendered to our understanding as "In this sign thou shalt conquer." Commandarie's from various states were present. Long trains of palice cars were used to transport this numerous host to our shore. Their beautiful costumes gave them the appearance of a noble order. Their solemn ritual was observed at the Pavilion on Sunday. It was variously estimated. Seven thousand participated in the service of prayers and chants. The weather was admirably adapted to their comfort.

It's a fact worthy of note, that many of the religious papers speak highly complimentary of the order of Sir Knights, and place them first in the great order of God. The "Pacific" is made to say:

"You will seek in vain for a higher morality than Masonry inculcates. I bear this testimony gladly, for it has rejoiced my heart to learn that Masonry grounds its morality * * * upon God's existence and man's accountability to him. It does not profess to have discovered its system, but to have derived it from the Bible. Their symbols and legends, have been conspicuously unfurled to the gaze of the spectators and thus they will increase the interest of the Christian religion."

To my mind all their devices, crosses, religious ceremonies, are only characteristic of that order of the mystic tie, and their principles and efforts will only eliminate the cause of Jesus Christ. All their shams of knightly names, and plumes of the ages of chivalry continued, repeats to us what they would do. To see the sham deceptiveness of those who could not belong to that order, (Jews and heathen Chinese), pandering to the morbid desire of the public, in handing out the insignium, "In hoc signo vinces," sickens me; but still I feel to pity frail humanity.

I think L. O. Littlefield's second letter a little too silly to notice. I fail to see where he has disproved a single statement of yours. I tell you something hurts them, they are getting uneasy. I do love to see your broadsiders hit them square where they live. Your letter in answer to Littlefield has found lodgings occasionally through the territory of Utah, and I opine it possessed leaven enough to stir the bile of their stomachs sufficiently to make them feel a little nausea. I say, Bro. Joseph, hit them square from the shoulder. You have the ability and may God bless you in the right.

Yours,

WM. ANDERSON.

Bro. Joseph:—Since I wrote before, I labored some at Galesburgh, Mo. One was baptized, Bro. I. R. Ross officiating. Soon after two more went from here to Webbville to meet H. C. Smith, and were baptized by him. Then I performed some labor at Opolis and other places in this county. Also in Cherokee and Labette counties. Here at Mound Valley town, I preached in the Christian Church to moderate congregations. They are very anxious for a discussion, at least we think they would like to enjoy, (not the Holy Ghost), but the feeling a body has when he comes out victorious in a debate; but of course they have not conquered yet, but would like to do so. Very well; will see to it. From thence to Greenwood county, Bro. C. M. Fulks in company. Found Bro. E. Keeler and wife doing good work, and wielding good influence as Sunday School teachers. God bless such labors. They are preparing the soil for the good seed. Preached several times, we think with good effect. Requested to come again. Thence to Elk county. Found what remains of the Indian Creek Branch. Helped them to strengthen their organization by appointing Bro. Otto Bomisgartle as president of the branch. I preached three times with good liberty and effect we think. With a promise to return we left for Buttler county, where we found several families of Saints from Lamoni, Iowa, anxiously waiting for the coming of some Elder to preach to them, which we tried to do over two Sundays, and during the week at three different school-houses, we are persuaded, with good effect. This is a new field and new country. Organized a branch with Bro. John Richards for president. Keighly Branch.

When I came home this week, I found Bro. A. H. Smith "holding forth" at Pleasant View Branch. He is gone now to Arcadia. Will be back here to-morrow. Bro. D. S. Crawley has been holding a basket meeting in a grove with force of the Pleasant View Branch. Good times reported. Bro. J. Thomas baptized three promising young men, the fruits of others' labors. Preaching at Galesburgh, Mo., lately, by J. A. and E. A. Davies, with good effect. Am thankful to the brethren and sisters that have invited me to preach. Will call if I come within calling distance. My address—is Box 240, Pittsburgh, Crawford Co., Kansas.

DAVIS CITY, Iowa,

Brother Joseph: I am pleased with the ideas expressed by Bro. Richard Preator in the HERALD of August 25th, 1883, wherein he expresses the thought that we are responsible for the manner in which we listen to the voice of the tempter, and that we need not think to place the responsibility of our evil deeds upon the devil, or any other being than ourselves; as in the judgment all will be judged according to the deeds done in their bodies, and that the devil has power over us only to just such a degree as we submit ourselves to him, as we are "subject to the spirit which we list to obey."

Jesus pointed a way of escape from the snares of the wicked one, when said: "Men should pray always lest they enter into temptation." We see the force of this injunction when we remember that the Spirit of the Lord cometh through prayer, and where the Spirit of the Lord is there the adversary has no power. We see this clearly illustrated in the case of Moroni, as recorded in the thirty-second paragraph, of the twenty-first chapter of the Book of Alma, in the Book of Mormon:

"Now the Nephites were taught to defend themselves against their enemies, even to the shedding of blood, if it were necessary; yea, and they were also taught never to give an offence; yea, and never to raise the sword, except it were against an enemy, except it were to preserve their lives; and this was their faith, that by so doing, God would prosper them in the land; or in other words, if they were faithful in keeping the commandments of God, that he would prosper them in the land; yea, warn them to flee, or prepare for war, according to their danger; and also that God would make it known unto them, whither they should go to defend themselves against their enemies; and by so doing the Lord would deliver them, and this was the faith of Moroni; and his heart did glory in it; not in the shedding of blood, but in doing good, in preserving his people; yea, in keeping the commandments of God; yea, and resisting iniquity. Yea, verily, verily I say unto you, if all men had been, and were, and ever would be, like unto Moroni, behold the very powers of hell would have been shaken forever; yea, the devil would never have power over the hearts of the children of men. Behold, he was a man like unto Ammon, the son of Mosiah, yea, and even the other sons of Mosiah; yea, and also Alma and his sons, for they were all men of God. Now behold, Helaman and his brethren were no less serviceable unto the people than was Moroni; for they did preach the word of God, and they did baptize unto repentance, all men whosoever would hearken unto their words."

My very soul delights in the Book of Mormon. A blessed, peaceful spirit accompanies its perusal. Its teachings are pure and holy. The prophecies and promises contained therein are being wonderfully fulfilled to the very letter. Notice the terrible earthquakes, cyclones, hail-storms, tempests, fires, and destructions by land and by sea, just as predicted in that book that should take place in the generation in which it should come forth.

On the other hand, notice the precious promiser made to those who should keep the commandments of the Lord on this land, that they should "prosper in the land." Having noticed this promise repeated several times in the book, I was induced last year to read the book entirely through, and note down the number of times this promise occurs, and I find it repeated nineteen times. Again notice the promise made to the righteous on this land, that they need not fear when these storms, and tempests, and judgments are going forth, "for they shall be protected." Therefore, if we are recognized as the righteous, we need not fear when we see the dark, black clouds arising, but can lay down in safety, trusting in him who is able to take up the islands as a very little thing, and cause the mountains to sink into the depths of the sea, as was the case on Monday, the 27th ult., in the island of Java.

Dear Herald:—Allow me to return thanks to all those who have expressed their confidence, and also to assure all, that so far, I have not felt the need of any "bolstering." Mr. Luse asks for an "open field and a fair fight." That is what I have asked for and it has been denied me, to wit, in The Opposition, the local paper of Wilber, in which office Mr. Luse earns his bread, Bro. Levi Anthony and I, May 10th, jointly had a one third column letter. May 17th, Mr. Luse, had almost a column. May 31st, I had a column. June 7th, Mr. Luse had one column and two-thirds; and June 14th, a column. June 19th I lodged in The Opposition office my reply to the two last articles of Mr. Luse, and on the 14th of July, per the hand of Bro. Levi Anthony, my reply was returned with the declamation of Mr. J. W. Wehn, Jr., publisher. July 17th I wrote Mr. Wehn and "most earnestly, respectfully and emphatically request that you give my letter place in your paper." To this Mr. Wehn replied, July 21st, "The discussion was getting to be a purely personal one, and each of you had had the same number of letters, and are even on that score." * * * "I have no objection to the language or anything said in the returned letter." To this reply I made answer July 24th, and clearly demonstrated that we were not even as to number of letters, and that Mr. Luse had occupied about "seven-elevenths more space in The Opposition than I had been permitted, and up to this date Mr. Wehn has made no reply.

I herewith respectfully decline the invitation of Mr. Luse to hold a "pen controversy," for the following reasons. 1st. He "represents no denomination." 2d. He "defends the tenets of no church." 3d. Because he belongs to no church.

I do not feel like wasting valuable time, or troubling any newspaper, by contending with irresponsible persons, even if not smitten with the leprosy of "hardness of heart." When I tell the truth Mr. Luse will not believe, or accept of it; therefore what would be the use of an encounter between us, better he should seek to be guided by the spirit of faith and love, than that of fight. I am still satisfied with the irrefragable truths of the gospel of Christ.

Brother Joseph:—I have been trying quite a while to get off for the eastern part of the Province, but the interest in this vicinity seemed to keep increasing, and the brethren persuaded me to stay until now. Last Sunday I had the pleasure of baptising two, W. O. Brien and Mrs. S. Haley. Bro. Holmes Davison and wife, and Sister Farnzie Newcomb, from Kingston, were with us. We had very enjoyable meetings, Bro. Davison preaching for us morning and afternoon, and in the evening after baptizing, we had sacrament, confirmation, and testimony meeting; large congregations each time. Friday night I preached at the Mines. Good congregation, and a good interest in the work in that vicinity. All through this section of country prejudice has given place to inquiry, and many are favorably inclined to our faith. We start this afternoon to the eastern part of the province. Whether we get so far as Cape Breton will depend on circumstances. Please remember us to the Master, that we may have wisdom to be faithful in all our duties.

Respectfully yours in the Gospel of Christ,
JOS. F. BURTON.

Editor of HERALD:—I would like to make a few plain statements concerning the Latter Day Saints' Sunday School in this branch. When that worthy brother, F. G. Pitt, removed from here, the school was left in a perilous condition. There seemed to be no one within the church who could or would shoulder the burden of the the superintendency of the school, and so at the earnest solicitation of some of the members, and rather than see the school go into the ground, I allowed myself to become a candidate for the office. I was elected by a vote of twenty out of a ballot of twenty-two. Ever since my election to that office, there have been a few who have stood afar off, and sent forth a dismal howl of discontent. There have been two business meetings of the school since my ascendancy to office. At which meetings all were invited to come and take part, but the croakers treated the invitation with contempt, and have never offered to shoulder the responsibility of the school, or to offer a remedy for the monstrous evil which they saw in the school, namely, one holding office who was not a "Mormon."

The faith and doctrines of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of the Latter Day Saints I hold to be true to the very letter; but the reason why I have not united with the church is a matter best known to myself. As those who are members of the church, and who before God are responsible for the bringing up of their children, do not take interest enough in the school, to either come to the school or send their children; and as the school is now free from all debt, at a special meeting called last evening, I resigned my position, and Elder Harry Fisher was chosen superintendent, and Bro. Reuben Atkins assistant. With good will toward all, and malice toward none, I remain ever an ardent admirer of the truth, as contained in the Gospel of Jesus Christ, as brought forth in these last days,

Dearly Beloved Brother Joseph:—I am laboring in the Kent and Elgin District at the present, and expect to do so for some time to come on account of temporal circumstances, as I am engaged through the week laboring with my hands, and making use of the Sabbath preaching. I believe I am doing as much ministerially as I have done with all my time engaged. Bro. W. S. Meddowcroft and myself have three appointments for Sundays. We walk four and a half miles west to a Union Church; then back in the forenoon at 10:30; then after returning, hold some services in Bro. Meddowcroft's house at 1 o'clock; then walk two and a half miles north to our third appointment, where we arrive to open at 6:30 p. m. The first of these appointments we intend to abandon for the present for lack of interest on the part of the people. At Wendigo, where Bro. M. lives, we have tried almost every lawful means to secure a public hall, there being two, Orange and Masonic. Never saw such a time. The old barrack, Orange Hall, has lain empty for seven years except when some picnic or similar occasion required its service, and no lock on the door; but as soon as we began to make inquiries for preaching in it, we were informed that it was a Union Orange and Temperance concern, for the use of all protestant denominations. Six trustees had to be hunted up; some for, some shy, some against. A lock was put on the door, etc. So Bro. M. opened his own house. At our third meeting-place we have most excellent attendance, and the greatest of respect shown us. Had the use of a union school; but after one discourse on, "These Signs shall Follow Them that Believe," a lock-out occurred there also. This is a union school-house, and when built was to be used for religious purposes; also Presbyterians, Methodists, and Disciples use it regularly, I am told; but after our one discourse, we were no longer permitted its use although I explained that I was a Canadian, and only demanded a Canadian's rights. However, when locked out there, a generous lady over the road a little from the school-house came up and offered her house, which I accepted, and held meeting there last Sunday with a splendid turnout, and good liberty. Continue this appointment for some time. We also intend opening among the Lamanites at Muncy town, where several tribes have long been settled, some of whom are quite intelligent, and speak English well. This is a new field for the Gospel all through. Expect good results at no distant date.

Brother Joseph:—I would like through the HERALD, to inform the missionary, Elder P. Brix, in Denmark, that just across the sea a few miles, there is a brother and an elder, by name, Jacob Pherson, Esperod Station, Skane, Sweden. He came from Utah many years ago, where he joined the Reorganization. Went back to his home and family, residing in place mentioned.

Yours truly,

MARTIN LUNDWALL.

Summary of News.

Aug. 30th.—Report from Batavia received to-night are of a more encouraging nature, although details of the horrors of the eruption continue to come. After the sudden subsidence of the disturbances in the Kingdom of Bantam Monday, the eruptions seemed to lose their force for a time, and the people of Batavia experienced a feeling of relief in the hope that the worst had passed. The quieter condition continued until about 10 o'clock when the craters once more began to send up great masses of destructive matter, although without the force of the former actions. The eruption seems to be more violent at night than during the day. By 11 o'clock the Papandayang, which is 7,034 feet high, was in a very active state of paroxysmal eruption. It was accompanied by detonations said to have been heard many miles away in Sumatra. Three distinct columns of flame were seen to rise from the mountain to vast height, and its whole surface soon appeared as if covered with fiery lava streams, which spread to great distances on all sides. Stones fell for miles around, and the black, fragmentary matter carried into the air caused total darkness. A whirlwind accompanied this eruption, by which houses, roofs, trees, and men and horses were carried into the air. The quantity of ashes ejected was such as to cover the ground and rooms of houses at Denamo to the depth of several inches. Off Point Caay the floating pumice on the sea formed a layer two feet thick, through which vessels forced their way with great difficulty. The rise of vapor produced the appearance of a column several thousand feet high, based on the edge of the crater. It appeared from a distance to consist of a mass of innumerable globular clouds of extreme whiteness, resembling vast balls of cotton, roiling one over the other as they ascended, impelled by the pressure of fresh supplies, incessantly urged upward by the continued explosions. At a great height the column dilated horizontally and spread into the dark and turbid circular cloud, shaped like an immense umbrella. Forked lightning of great vividness and beauty continually darted from different parts of the cloud. Suddenly the scene was changed. The mountain was split into seven parts without a moment's warning, and where Papandayang had stood alone there were now seven distinct peaks looming up to a great height. In the seams opened could be seen great balls of molten matter. From the fissures poured clouds of steam, and the black ejected lapillo flowed in steady streams and ran slowly down the mountain-sides, forming beds two or three hundred feet in extent. Exhalations of carbonic acid gas were so abundant that birds and animals in large numbers were killed by it, and a few human beings lost their lives in the same way. This proved to be the turning point in the eruption, for the great fissures opened seemed to act as safety valves, through which the streams of lava gently flowed down into the valleys. The volcanic fires, though still burning at last advices, had lost most of their fierceness, and the steam generated found vent without being forced through the comparatively narrow mouths of the old craters. One of the queer incidents was the sudden rising during Tuesday forenoon of fourteen new volcanic mountains in the Straits of Sunda, forming a complete chain in almost a straight line between Point St. Nicholas, on the Javanese coast, and Hoga Point, on the coast of Sumatra, almost on the tops of what had been the Merak and Middle Islands, which sank into the sea Monday. So serious are the changes in the coast, and the entire formation of the Straits of Sunda, that the British Government and the Lloyds this evening telegraphed from London to all foreign points warning vessels that navigation of these waters had become exceedingly dangerous.

In the City of Bantam, where 1,500 persons were at first supposed to have perished, the bodies of 2,800 have already been recovered. Some 900 inhabitants of the interior town of Waronge, are now known to have been killed, and at Tal-atra, on the coast, 300 bodies have been found. From all over the island come reports of loss of life and property, and it is thought at Batavia that the estimate, 75,000 killed, will not prove excessive. On the low lands of Batavia where the waters have receded and quieted down, hundreds of bruised and mangled bodies are lying exposed. A sanitary corps has been formed and the corpses are being removed and buried as fast as possible, in order to prevent the breeding and spread of contagion. While there is some cause for anxiety on this score, it is thought the greater number of bodies in the interior were so dried and scorched by the hot lava and stones that they will not putrify, and the bodies of those drowned by the tidal waves can be taken care of with reasonable facility by the coast sanitary corps, now rapidly getting to work.

Earthquake waves have been recorded at San Francisco, for several days.

A strong shock of earthquake has just been felt at Guayaquil, S. A., lasting about fifteen seconds.

There were thirteen deaths from cholera at Alexandria, yesterday.

Three new cases of yellow fever at Pensacola, Fla.

The United States of Colombia are again in trouble. Dom Pedro Solear Martinez has set up a little Government for himself at a town in the interior, and President Otorala has marched with 1,000 men to overthrow the insurgents.

Aug. 31st.—Severe penalties are to be visited on Jew-baiters in Hungary. Rioters are to be tried by court martial, and when sentenced to death are to die within three hours.

The treaty lately made between France and Annam, allows the former to station residents in all the chief towns, to construct forts on the Red River, to regulate taxation and commercial customs, and to control the finances. In fine, it establishes a protectorate over Tonquin and reduces that province to the same position which Tunis now holds with respect to France.

There were eleven deaths from cholera in Alexandria yesterday. Deaths from cholera Thursday, 327 in Upper Egypt and nine in Lower Egypt.

From dispatches received from Batavia, tonight, it appears that fears of further eruptions in the Island of Java within the immediate future have subsided, and all the efforts of the Government and the people are concentrated on the work of burying the dead and preserving the health of the living. All along the shores from Point Lampon to the River Paquaise, on the northern coast, and from the River Tjemanderie to Tsipankok, on the southern coast, there are found corpses thickly strewn. In the forests of the interior from the River Tjiedom to the River Tjietarrum, dead bodies are lying at short intervals apart, in some instances partially buried in sulphurous white mud or the hardened lava that flowed from the eruptive craters.

About daybreak, Wednesday morning, another of the startling incidents attendant upon the great disturbances was manifested. With the cessation of the paroxysm many emanations of the vapor evolved themselves. These vapors, as is usual, contain a variety of acids, and as the lava cooled down deposited saline incrustations. The acids of these vapors issuing from the fissures in the divided mountains of Papandayang caused unusually rapid decomposition on the exposed parts of the great rocks at the summits of the seven peaks. A number of them split apart suddenly Wednesday, releasing tons of depending earth. This caused several huge landslides during the morning, and they went crashing down into the valleys, carrying death and destruction with them. On the edge of the Town of Narra some fifteen or sixteen Chinese in a section of the sanitary corps were buried before they were aware of the cause of the deep rumbling around them.

Alarming reports of disasters to fishermen follow the news of Sunday's great storm on the banks of Newfoundland. The men lost were in small boats, and their number is recorded by some as high as eighty. A schooner in struggling to reach the coast passed a great number of capsized dories and much wreckage. It is understood that at least 2,000 of these small boats were exposed to the sudden gale which overtook them. Eight schooners are reported either wrecked or driven high on land. It is believed that from fifty to one hundred lives were lost.

Sep. 2d.—One hundred and forty-two deaths from cholera in Egypt, Saturday.

It is believed 100,000 persons perished in North Bantam, Java, in the recent calamity. It is also believed that the garrison and fort at Anjer were swept away.

An extensive plain of volcanic stone formed in the sea near Lampong, Sumatra, preventing communication with Telokbelong and Southwest Java.

The Government at The Hague has received accounts from Java which show that the disaster at Ischia was trivial compared to that which like causes had produced in Northern Bantam. Last Sunday, without any warning, there was a tremendous outburst of subterranean thunder, and the volcano of Krakatoa vomited forth an ink-black cloud, which spread over the clear, tropical sky with inconceivable quickness, involving the land in complete darkness. Then it began to rain scoræ and dust, and in a very few minutes the greater part of Northern Bantam, a very fertile and very populous country, was completely destroyed. Tremendous explosions followed, stones and volcanic matter being hurled to distances of from 200 to 300 miles. The sides of the great volcano were blown out into the sea, its structure collapsed, and the entire Island of Krakatoa slowly subsided into the water and disappeared. Monday morning there was not a vestige of it to be seen, the ocean having taken its place. The volcanic activity of the region was intense, but it was thought that the worst was over, when about noon the inhabitants of Merak coast and its prosperous settlements between Merak and Tjerigen were alarmed by the sudden receding of the ocean from the shore, and on looking out to sea they beheld a great wall of waters, varying in height from ninety to thirty feet, approaching the land. It destroyed everything in its path, overwhelming the entire coast, sweeping away all the dwellings, light-houses and Government buildings within reach, and retired charged with a vast freight of death and ruin. There is no estimate furnished in the fragmentary and panic-stricken dispatches of the loss of life, but according to the best information it must have been something appalling. The next day sixteen active volcanoes rose out of the sea between the site of Krakatoa and Libisic Island, and Thursday the great volcano of Sarugapan burst forth, collapsed, and resolved itself into five extinct volcanoes. New charts will have to be prepared of the entire coast. During the week the marine topography has been completely changed, deep channels have become dry land, and towering volcanoes stand where had been the open sea.

The most severe drouth of years is being experienced around San Saba, Tex.

Sept. 3d.—A great gale visited Paris, Sunday, spoiling the second fete at the garden of the Tuileries.

A violent storm is raging throughout Austria. Two iron electric light stands, twenty-five metres high, outside the electric exhibition building in Vienna were broken off close to the ground.

Further details of the wreck off Penzance, Saturday last of the British Bark, G. I. Jones, from Bull Run, S. C., for Falmouth, state that eleven of the crew were drowned, including Capt. Newton and the pilot.

Serious anti-Jewish rioting took place at Szigetvar, Hungary, last night, the mob committing terrible havoc upon property. One person was killed and four wounded. Troops are en route.

Two hundred prominent citizens of the Province of Girgenti, Sicily, including a priest, land-owners, and members of communal councils, have been arrested as brigands.

A shock of earthquake was felt at Frazziati, Italy, causing the people to flee from their houses. No damage ensued.

The Chinese government intends to issue a formal protest to the great powers declaring that the treaty of peace between France and Annam, signed at Hue is void, as the King of Annam was forced by the French to sign it.

A dispatch from Hong Kong states that it is reported that 15,000 Chinese troops have crossed the Mongkai, and will proceed to Naidong. Vessels are loading at Shanghai with troops, ammunition, and torpedoes.

A dispatch from Hong Kong states that the French General, Bouet, has demanded of the French war department additional re-enforcements of 5,000 men. The country is still suffering from floods. The French Admiral has issued a notice declaring all ports of Annam, including Saigon, in a state of blockade.

Prof. Lewis Swift has found a new comet.

Two new cases of yellow fever at Pensacola, Florida.

Sept. 4th.—The Count of Paris is more generally recognized by the Legitimists as their leader and King than was to have been expected. The boom is being worked by the aid of meetings of all kinds of royalists.

Further accounts of the horrors in Java and Sumatra arrive with every hour. A whole district is entirely inaccessible, and the population is supposed to have perished. Nothing can be heard from Lampong, the district of Sumatra nearest to Java. The tidal wave which swept over the Tjerigin province of Java drowned all the inhabitants, about 10,000 people.

Foreign advices are to the effect that the 15,000 Chinese troops massed on the frontier have crossed into Tonquin, and are already threatening the French force on the north, which was so severely repulsed a few days ago, and that other bodies of troops are rapidly passing through Hong Kong from Shanghai on their way south. That the French have at last realized their danger is shown by the action of the Cabinet in ordering large reinforcements from Algeria and other points to Tonquin.

A Cabinet council was held at Paris on receipt of the above gloomy news. Preparations were at once made for the dispatch of troops to Annam from Algeria and other provinces. However, the diplomats are busy once more. The Marquis Tseng went in haste from London to Paris. It is supposed that he has fresh powers from Li Hung Chang.

The Pesth correspondent of the Standard, describing the recent rioting in Agram, Karistadt, and other towns in Croatia, says that they arose from the strong anti-Magyar feeling prevailing among the Croats. New sign-boards containing, in accordance with the law, official names or notices in the Croatian and Hungarian languages, were affixed to all the tax-offices throughout Croatia. The sight of the Magyar inscriptions excited widespread indignation, and ere long the mob proceeded to attack the tax-offices. Several houses in Agram, including the residence of the chief of the tax department, were more or less completely wrecked, and there was a hot hand-to-hand fight in the streets of that capitol between the people and the police and infantry. In the melee forty of the inhabitants and six of the policemen were wounded. A number of arrests were made and the rioters lodged in prison. After this the mob re-assembled in increased force, broke in the doors of the jail, and set the arrested persons at liberty.

Three deaths from cholera in Alexandria, yesterday. The epidemic is now nearly extinct.

Yellow fever in Pensacola, Fla., has nearly subsided.

Yesterday the steamship William Edwards and her tow, the Golden Age and Paige, left Chicago harbor grain-laden for Buffalo. These vessels earn over $8,000 by the single passage, should it be made in safety.

The members of the Utah Commission have thought it necessary to send to the Interior Department a defense of the attacks upon them, in which they were arraigned for not having accomplished anything. They reply that the reverse is true, that they have accomplished a great deal, and all, in fact, that the anti-polygamy law will permit them to accomplish; that they have excluded 12,000 polygamists from the polls, and all polygamists from eligibility to office. Still it is admitted by members of the commission, privately, that the most vigorous enforcement of the Edmunds law would be utterly inadequate to accomplish the purpose of the framers.

The commission will undoubtedly recommend some stringent additions to the law, but even then there are grave doubts whether polygamy can be destroyed by legislation.

Sept. 5th.—Another earthquake is predicted at Ischia, to take place October 15. The professor who makes the prophecy is considered an authority on the subject.

Another article in the North German Gazette is couched in terms which imply the joy of Bismark that France is almost sure to go to war with China. Germany wishes France much good luck, "whenever she sees fit to assert her interests in a legitimate manner."

The French are intending to make a naval demonstration against China.

The Viceroy of China emphatically said: "China will not sanction the Franco-Annamite treaty. The French must make some proper arrangement with the Chinese Ambassador in Paris, or war is unavoidable."

Chinese troops continue to arrive in Tonquin from the north drilled in European fashion, and armed with modern weapons.

There were anti-Magyar disorders at Beduja, Hungary, to-day. The troops were called out, and the peasants drove back the troops of hussars, and then attacked a body of infantry. Several were killed and wounded on both sides.

An engagement took place at Colca, South America, Aug. 28, between a body of Montoneros and the Peruvian forces under Col. Duarte. Twenty Montoneros were killed and many

A telegram from the Governor-General of the Dutch East Indies says the bays within the area of the recent volcanic disturbances in the vicinity of Java are filled with banks of pumice-stone. The Temple of Boro Buddor, at Java, the largest Buddhist Temple in the East, was destroyed by falling rock.

Reports from Santa Barbara, Wilmington, and Los Angeles, Cal., announces sharp shocks of earthquake at 4:30 this morning. The vibrations were north-east to south-west.

FIRES, STORMS AND ACCIDENTS.

Aug. 30th.—Loss by fire at Vincennes, Ind., $40,000. Watertown, N. Y., $22,000. Fairview, Pa., $30,000. Madison, Ind., $5,000.

An express train which left Philadelphia, Pa., this morning was wrecked two hours later near Pleasantville, N. J. Eight cars were derailed and demolished. Between 200 and 300 people were on board. Although the passengers were all thrown into the wreck which followed, no one was either instantly killed or wounded so badly as to immediately threaten his life. Twenty persons were seriously hurt.

Aug. 31st.—Loss by fire at Green Bay, Wis., $170,000. Belleville, Ill., $4,000.

Sept. 2d.—Several million florins' worth of property was destroyed by fire at Vienna, Austria, yesterday.

Loss by fire at Sandy Creek, N. Y., $150,000. New Haven, Conn., $100,000. Watertown, Wis., $2,500. A forest fire is raging on Long Island. St. Louis, Mo., $15,000. Carmi, Ill., $12,000. Chicago, Ill., $12,800.

The fast train which left Boston as 1 p. m. Saturday came in collision with the fast New York express at Colchester, Vt. Thirteen persons were injured, some seriously, but none, it is thought fatally.

As a train from Berlin, Germany, was passing Steglitz it ran into a crowd of people who, intending to take the return train to Berlin, were pressing forward to enter the carriages on the wrong side. The number of people killed and wounded is estimated at forty.

A heavy gale prevailed throughout England Saturday night and Sunday, doing much damage to property. Many wrecks and some loss of life are reported.

Twelve lives were lost in the recent storm off the Massachusetts coast.

A railroad collision near Highland Park Station, Md., killed one man, and fatally injured another. A train was ditched at Crescent City, Ia, and two lives lost. A thrashing machine engine exploded near Frankfort, Dak., killing four men, probably fatally injuring three others, and seriously wounding two more. A collision of two freight trains occurred near Decatur, Ill., causing a loss of $4,000.

Sept. 3d.—Loss by fire at Cincinnati, O., $100,000. Five people killed. Steubenville, O., $20,000. Orford, N. H., $20,000. Fernandina, Fla., $30,000. Ft. Wayne, Ind., $4,000. Macomb, Ill., $20,000. Geneva Lake, Wis., $2,500. Buffalo, N. Y., $46,000. Lexington, Ky., $11,000.

A fire destroying $250,000 in property happened in Alexandria, Egypt, yesterday.

During a thunder storm at Gruma, Italy, the foundation of a house was inundated, causing it to fall out, burying eleven persons in the ruins.

Thirty-seven people were slaughtered in the extraordinary accident at Steglitz, near Berlin. No such railway horror has ever happened in America. In our cities the system of keeping the people away from the trains will gain adherents from the lesson of this catastrophe.

Sept. 4th.—One hundred and sixteen houses in the village of Battincourt, Belgium, burned Monday.

During the pyrotechnic display at Colombes, last evening, a bomb exploded among the spectators, killing two and badly wounding several others.

Nine women, it is feared, were burned to death in the warehouse fire at Cincinnati Monday.

Sept. 5th.—A mill and a tenement-house adjacent burned yesterday at St. Louis. A man lost his life in the mill and three or four people are missing who lived in the tenement.

Loss by fire at Chicago, Ill., between $25,000 and $35,000. Joliet, Ill., $5,300. Norway, Mich., $5,000. Near Charleston, Ill., $9,000.

CROP REPORTS.

The French harvest returns are unsatisfactory. Of eighty-five departments only thirty-seven report the crops above the average, while fifteen report average crops, and thirty-three crops below the average. It is certain large imports of cereals will again be necessary the coming winter.

Harvesting in Dakota Territory has been done in favorable weather, and the grain has been stacked in splendid condition. Very little treshing has been done; but the yield is expected to be greater than ever before. If frost holds off until September 15th, corn in that section will out of the way of frost, and will yield, it is expected, from 40 to 70 bushels per acre.

In the Republican Valley, Neb., crops of all kinds are reported good. Wheat is better than ever before known. The yield is fully one-third greater than last year. Oats from 50 to 70 bushels per acre. Barley and rye both good crops. The corn crop will be by far the largest ever raised in the Valley. Farmers are contemplating an average of from 60 to 70 bushels per acre.

Around Peoria, Illinois, the farmers are crying for rain, and unless it comes soon, the corn crop will be cut much shorter than was expected. The corn crop is doing well in Montgomery county, Ill. The prospects for a good corn crop around Lincoln, Ill., grow better every day. Corn around Elgin, Ill., is poor. In the vicinity of Henry, Ill., corn will not average over thirty bushels per acre. Around Havana, Ill., the wheat yield is large. Corn progressing slowly.

In Wisconsin, spring wheat is yielding well generally. Cool nights have retarded corn, which is prospectively poor.

The drouth in eastern New England, which has lasted five to six weeks, has become so serious that crops have been greatly injured, with prospects of still further damage if the drouth is not broken. Farmers are compelled to take cows from pastures and feed them upon winter hay.

In the north of Alabama corn and cotton are good, one-third below the average in the central, and a quarter to an eighth below in the southern portions.

Recent frosts have damaged the crops in Montana, but to what extent cannot be estimated. Ice an inch thick was frozen.

The recent storms almost totally destroyed the grain and other crops in south Ireland.

Sept. 4th.—Various parts of New England were visited by quite heavy frosts last night, which did considerable damage to crops.

Of 148 townships in 50 counties represented winter wheat at 14 bushels per acre, and spring wheat at the same. 744 townships in 99 counties represented the condition of corn at 94 per cent. 676 township in 99 counties represented oats at 34 bushels per acre. 456 townships in 98 counties represent the condition of buckwheat at 98 per cent. 745 townships in 99 counties represented potatoes at 110 per cent. 327 townships in 89 counties represent timothy seed at 5¼ bushels per acre. 683 townships in 99 counties represent hay at 1⅞ tons per acre. 687 townships in 99 counties give the market price at $3.93 per ton. 669 townships in 98 counties represent the condition of apples at 58 per cent. Other crops from a large portion of the State is represented by the following per cent; Flax 109; sorghum 90; sweet potatoes 91; onions 97; meadows 100; pasture 102; grapes 60.

ECONOMY DUE TO EMPLOYERS.

"WASTE not, want not," is a grand old proverb. "He that is faithful in little is faithful also in much." It is true enough that a person who takes no care of materials committed to his hands by an employer, will not be careful of his own property. Economy and wastefulness are habits that will influence us, whether with our own substance, or that of another. As a rule the man or boy who takes care of his employer's goods will be likely to look after his own, and is on the road to prosperity. Some men are worth much more than others simply because they waste nothing. If an employer be wealthy, and stock abundant, that is no excuse for waste and carelessness. Loss is loss, and robbery is robbery, whether it be in much or little. It is forcibly said that 'Heaven allows nothing to be destroyed.' There has not been a single drop of water wasted since the creation. The decomposed elements of the past autumn will supply aliment for the next spring. Economy, rigid economy, is one of the laws of nature; and we shall not realize the "good time coming" until we are careful and economical.

SIMPLE FAITH.

"God always hears when we scrape the bottom of a flour barrel." So said the child of a poor widow to his mother, one morning, after she had prayed as only the needy can, "Give us this day our daily bread." Beautiful faith of childhood! Why may it not be ours! God always hears the prayers of his children, and he knows when to answer. Our spiritual as well as temporal wants are known to him, and every sincere cry for help enters his compassionate ear. When we feel entirely our dependence on him; when our stock of pride and self-confidence is exhausted: when earthly friends and earthly comforts fail us; the humble cry of "O my Father," the oftenest brings the speedy answer, "Hear, my child." God always hears when we have reached the depths of need, and cry to him for help.

REUNION MEETING.

Parties coming to Reunion Meeting by train, can get off at Leland's Grove, two miles east of Persia. Parties should secure tickets to this point. We shall have a platform erected there to get off at. The Railroad Agent at Persia informed me that he would attend to having trains stop at this point. D. CHAMBERS.

THE RESURRECTION.

"BLESSED and holy is he who hath part in the First Resurrection."

The subject of the Resurrection is one that invites the careful study and investigation of all mankind, because it directly concerns us all, and is or should be the subject of all others that should engage our earnest attention. Why? Because it treats of our eternal welfare; because it was the crowning act in the mission of Him who died to save us; because it is the finale; because in it we receive that which all the poets sang about, all the Prophets spoke of, and looked forward to, as that beside which all else sinks into nothingness. It is that grand principle beside which all else pales; it is that grand triumphal act which gives us the victory over death, and restores to us our primeval body, perfected. It has ever been the looking forward to this principle that has consoled men, encouraged and enabled them to bear present trial with fortitude, and to bear up under the most trying circumstances. It is that which He who was the first fruits looked forward to as the culmination of His earthly sorrows, and the restoring him back to that which he had with His Father before the worlds were; for when His work is just finished, we hear him crying, "Father, glorify thou me with the glory that I had with thee before the worlds were," thus showing his thoughts to have been on that final triumph over death and the grave.

What is death? If we go back to the beginning, we find God created man in His own image. We find the clay man formed of the dust of the ground; but as yet inanimate; but God breathed the breath of life into his nostrils, and man became a living soul. We see that the man of clay could do nothing. He was simply an inanimate lump of clay (as we also have often seen), but just as soon as God breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, he became a living soul. He is no longer dead, hence death is simply a separation, dissolution, a tearing asunder of the mortal and the immortal, as Paul also said, a separating the "man from heaven," and the "man of clay;" and so the man of earth, earthy, goes back to dust, from whence he came; and the spirit back to God who gave it. Peter said to those who had killed the Lord and Redeemer, "Repent ye, therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and He shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you, whom the heavens must receive until the time of the restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets, since the world began."

We notice that the heavens are to retain Jesus, until the time of the restitution of all things. Now, restitution means restoring, or bringing back, reinstating, that is to say, that the man from heaven will have restored to him his body, raised incorruptible, and immortal, and the two make the perfect man who is to reign on earth, also restored to its primeval beauty, with Christ a thousand years. As Christ is to remain in heaven until the restoration, it follows that man will receive his body back at that time; for Paul says, every man will be raised in his own order; they that are Christ's at his coming. And so we have seen that death is a separating of the spirit and body, and that the resurrection will be a restoring or bringing together again.

We will now notice in what condition man will be, or rather what state of being. As we have already noticed, Paul says that "Jesus was the first fruits of them that slept." Now, if we can find the kind of body He had after His resurrection, we will understand what kind of a body we will have; for when He comes, we are to be like Him. As John says, "it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but this we know, that when He comes, we shall be like Him." 1st John, 3:2. In Luke 24:39, we read: "Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I, myself; handle me and see, for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have." As Jesus was the first fruits of the resurrection, and as we are to be like him, this ought to settle question as to what kind of a body we are to have; for in plain sight of the apostles, he ascended up into heaven with his resurrected body. He says, a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have; but he said nothing about blood. He had lost that perishable part—the mortal part, the blood—and was prepared to live forever. So, then, we will be like him. We will have no blood in our bodies, but a spiritual body. Not as some of our Christian friends say, raised spiritually, but a body alive with the spirit, filled with the spirit. 1st Cor., 15:44-51. "It is sown a natural body, is raised a spiritual body. Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural, and afterward that which is spiritual. Now, this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God; behold, I show unto you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but shall be changed; * * * for the trump shall sound, and the dead shall be raised, incorruptible, and we shall be changed." Ver. 52. Read the whole of the 15th chapter 1st Cor. Old father Job gives a very plain and unmistakable understanding of what the resurrection will be; hearken: "For I know that my redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God."

This, surely, ought to be enough to satisfy any reasonable mind that there is to be a literal resurrection of the body. Not only does this place the certainty of the resurrection beyond all reasonable doubt, but also that we will have back again the body of "flesh." He also corroborates the testimony of Jesus in giving us to understand that we will have flesh without blood. He did not say so, says the objector. True, but his speaking as he did, and not mentioning blood is evidence, taken with the testimony of Jesus, that there will be no blood in our redeemed bodies; and to settle the matter beyond controversy, we will take the testimony of the prophet Ezekiel, 37th chapter: "The hand of the Lord was upon me, and he carried me out in the Spirit of the Lord, and set me down in the midst of the valley which was filled with dry bones. * * And He said unto me, Son of man, can these bones live? And I answered, O Lord God, thou knowest. Again he said unto me, prophesy upon these bones, and say unto them, O, ye dry bones, hear ye the word of the Lord. Thus saith the Lord God unto these bones, behold I will cause breath to enter into you, and ye shall live; and I will lay sinews upon you, and will bring flesh upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath in you, and ye shall live; and ye shall know that I am the Lord. So I prophesied as I was commanded, and as I prophesied, there was a noise, and behold, a shaking, and the bones came together, bone to his bone. And while I beheld, lo, the sinews and flesh came upon them, and the skin covered them about, but there was no breath in them. Then said He unto me, prophesy unto the wind; prophesy, son of man, and say to the wind, thus saith the Lord, God: come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain, that they may live. So I prophesied as he commanded me, and the breath came, and they lived and stood upon their feet, an exceeding great army. Then said he unto me, son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel; behold they say our bones are dried, and our hope is lost, we are cut off from our parts. Therefore prophesy, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord God, behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel."

It seems to me that there could be no more positive proof given of the truth of the resurrection itself, and of how it is to be brought about. It is shown very clearly in the above, that it is not a spiritual resurrection, but a reality.

The germ for faith in God's power to bring to pass the resurrection is well laid in the parable of the seed sown in the ground. It corrupts, and dies, and afterwards springs up entire. Its death is disposition to life. John, 12:24. Also, Paul assays at the same thing, in 1 Cor., 15:36. He says: "Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened except it die." Ver. 38: "But God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body." So, when we consider the power of God to bring forth the corn and reproduce the body from the ground, we can grasp the truth of his being able to reproduce the body, and hence beget confidence in God's power. This simple and truthful figure is drawn by the great apostle, to simplify to the minds of the unbelieving in the resurrection, to bring it in much plainness before them, and present it in a superlatively comprehensible manner; and to explain it in the simplest way, God's power, and paint a vivid, comprehensible picture of how, and in what manner it would be, and with what body they would be raised up.

Now, to the text, "Blessed and holy is he who shall have part in the first resurrection, for on such the second death hath no power." Rev. 20:6. The fact of a resurrection, I believe, I have clearly set forth, and with what kind of a body we will be raised, to-wit: flesh and bones without blood. The text I have quoted clearly sets forth two resurrections. Now, it is part in the first that I desire to attain unto, and in order to do so I must be "holy." How shall I be "holy?" By living up to every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God; by complying with that law that he who was the "first fruits" of the resurrection brought, so as to come into possession of that spirit which raised up Jesus from the dead; for we have the promise, that "if that spirit dwell in us it will also raise us up at the last day." As Daniel also says: "And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." Dan., 12:2.

Before I conclude, I will notice the importance of the subject again. We have the vast importance of it shown to us by Paul, 1 Cor., 15:14: "And if Christ be not risen then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain. * * * Then they also which are fallen asleep in Christ are perished." And thus it is clearly shown to be the all-important, the result of a true well-spent probation, in the primary department, so to speak; for so it is. We are preparing for the better life to be attained through the gospel, and in that way only.

If I have thrown a ray of light on this subject, or if, through my effort, one who does not believe in the resurrection shall be brought to understand it, and his obligation to God, I shall have accomplished that for which I have labored, and that which I earnestly desire. May we who have covenanted to live by all the teachings of God, keep our covenant inviolate, is the prayer of your humble servant,

NEGLECT NOT TO ASSEMBLE.

THE intent of God in the beginning was that man should not be alone, but that he should have an associate or associates, whose minds should be kindred, and whose hearts should be in perfect rapport with his, and who should, by the principle of love, be as one with him in the enjoyment of life. See Gen., 1:27-28.

The desire to associate is inherent in man. The enjoyment of man would not, nor could not be perfect without the fulfillment of this desire. Hence the family, church, and state organizations in which man is made the participant of associations for his good, especially when kindred minds thus unite for the purpose of equal rights and privileges, and each fulfills his sphere for each other's good.

In the beginning God was with his children. He walked and talked with them, and fulfilled his sphere to minister to their enjoyment. So long as man fulfilled his sphere of action, by submitting to the law of love, he enjoyed the society of his Father, God. But when man fell in with an associate, having not a kindred spirit with God's, he became estranged from God, and the society of God by man was not enjoyed, however much desired it might have been; because there was no affiliation, and the band of love, of which both their spirits formerly partook, was broken; not by God, but by man. When God came to associate with man after his estrangement, he desired to hide himself. No longer an enjoyment to associate with his God. But what had caused this estrangement? Man had neglected the duty he owed to his creator, and had associated with another being, or beings, not in harmony with the mind of God. Man's spirit, by this association, became estranged from God's spirit, because the spirit of the being in whose company he had been was not in harmony with the spirit of God, but directly contrary thereto. Man drinking in of that spirit, drank in of that which caused the enjoyment which had before existed by the association of man with God to cease, because the agreement of their natures which had before existed had ceased. Man became carnal.

Had man continued his association with God, still followed the direction of his spirit, his desire to be with him, and the enjoyment of being with him would always have continued. While in the society of God continually, all was enjoyment, but as soon as he neglected to continue in the society of God, sorrow came. Man had sinned against his own nature. The being in whose company he had fallen was not in harmony with his nature.

Since man became estranged by the allurements of a being in rebellion to God and his own good, and the desire of God is that man might have joy continually and eternally. He has sent forth from the throne of his glory a message of peace, and good will, by which message man can be wholly reconciled to God, and enjoy his presence, and that man might enjoy the association of kindred spirits, and that those spirits might be brought and kept in perfect harmony, he ordained that an organization should exist, composed of those who had become reconciled, and had turned their minds heavenward, seeking to be delivered from the society and power of beings contrary to truth, and become participants of his presence and joy. This organization is known as the church or kingdom of God. See 1 Cor., 12:28; Acts, 8:12.

God has promised, in order that we might become acquainted with his mind and will, and be strengthened to overcome our carnal natures, and directed, that our natures may be like his, his Holy Spirit to meet with the subjects of his kingdom, his children. "Where two or three are met together in my name, there will I be in their midst." Not that he will be "in their midst" personally, but by the power of his Holy Spirit; for as yet we are not in that state to enjoy his presence. We as yet need instruction, and this Holy Spirit is sent to so educate us, that when he shall come in the fullness of his glory, we shall know him as he is, and enjoy the presence of our Father and God; then we shall be permitted to walk and talk with him.

To enjoy this guide we must be prepared. We must manifest our desire for it, by putting from us all that is contrary to it. Then we can enjoy it. It will come as a refreshing shower to the hungry soul, and we shall be filled. Should it come to us when we were not prepared it would give us sorrow by its reproofs. We should feel as though an unwelcome visitor had come; something as our first parents did after they had sinned, ashamed.

We must likewise meet. "Where two or three are met," is the condition upon which the promise is made. To meet signifies that there must be some place at which to meet; hence the building of churches. Then there must be some one appointed to have the charge of our assemblings, to whom God will manifest how to direct, that all spirit manifestations may be in perfect harmony with God's spirit, that indeed we may be blessed of God; and that all things may be done decently and in order. If decency and in order is not the spirit with and in which we have met, God will not be there to our enjoyment; and if God is there decency and order will prevail.

God has directed that places should be dedicated to meet in, and caused men to be ordained to have the charge of our assemblings, so that one thing only is left to be done in order to enjoy what is intended we shall enjoy, and that is for us to meet in the proper way. Paul gives us very pointed instructions upon this matter, such as cannot be misunderstood. "Not forsaking the assembling of yourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching." Heb., 10:25.

Our assemblings are for two specific purposes, our present enjoyment and future good. The latter of these is by far the most important. The first is more or less swallowed up in the latter. Present enjoyment tends to encourage us for future duties, and it strengthens us in the faith of God, in which faith we must endure to receive eternal bliss. Paul gives us instruction concerning the importance of our assembling, in very strong language: "For if we sin wilfully, after we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins, but a certain fearful looking for of judgment and fiery indignation, which shall devour the adversaries." Heb., 10:26, 27.

We know it is possible to turn from the truth, as we have seen verified in our day, and men, too, whom we have thought all hell could not shake. God, desiring that this should not be so, has established this means so that we might receive strength to fight the battle of faith, and to withstand the adversary.

We know, do we neglect to meet at the house of God, we become careless in regard to the truth, and seek the society of others, not of God, as our companions, and feel while in their company that we must do more or less as they would have us, just to please them, whether it pleases God or not, and thus our minds become estranged gradually from the worship of God, until finally we seem to have no desire to go to the house of prayer, or if we go, we do so not to enter into the duties of worship, but to see and be seen, or to hear what others have to say, and as we pass from the meeting, say, as I have heard many times, "They had a very poor meeting," or "They seemed to enjoy themselves," speaking as though they had no part nor lot in the worship. It sometimes happens that the feeling of shame is in the bosom of some, and they hardly know why. They feel as though they were unacquainted at the house of God. It is because while they had neglected to assemble at God's house, they had become affiliated with a spirit not of God, and hence adverse to the spirit that should fill the house of God, and those of his children who assemble there. We may be sure that if we go to the house of God, and our spirits are in a confused state, it is because we are not rightly prepared to enjoy the Spirit's presence. To further show the necessity of assembling, and the benefit we receive by assembling, God has given us instructions upon the subject in these last days: "And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day; for verily this (Sunday) is a day appointed you to rest from your labors, and to pay thy devotions to the Most High;" nevertheless thy vows shall be offered up in righteousness on all days and at all times; but remember that on this, the Lord's day, thou shalt offer thine oblations, and thy sacraments unto the Most High, confessing thy sins unto thy brethren, and before the Lord." This is plain that we must go, and that to a place where our brethren are, and that is "to the house of prayer." The reason why: "That thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world."

Is there any reason we should remain away from God's house? It is there he has promised to meet with us; not if we are clad so and so, bodily, but if we come with a broken heart, and a contrite spirit, as an offering to him. It is there we receive spiritual strength. It is there we receive encouragements. It is there we see God manifested to our souls' good.

O vain excuse! Excuses cannot satisfy the requirements of God, at least such as generally are made. For proofs see Luke, 9:62.

That we may receive strength for "the day approaching," and "more fully keep ourselves unspotted from the world" let each attend to the duties of our assemblings. "Not forsaking the assembling of yourselves together, as the manner of some is.

L. O. LITTLEFIELD MAKES ANOTHER REPLY TO JOSEPH SMITH.

MR. JOSEPH SMITH, Lamoni, Iowa.

SIR:—Your latest communication, though a long one, contains but few points that have not already been considered, and to my mind, satisfactorily disposed of. It reminds me of a lawyer's special plea in the ingenuity with which it "darkeneth counsel by words without knowledge." I shall not attempt to reply to your paragraphs seriatim, but will simply take up those that seem to require, from the manner in which they are presented, a passing consideration.

You claim that Adam, Noah and Lehi, were each the husbands of but one wife. We grant that we can not prove from the Scriptures that they had more than one, but we can prove that men equally beloved and favored of God, and bearing most important commissions to mankind, did observe the law of plural marriage; and further, that the Lord never rebuked or found fault with them because of this practice. You mention the dispensation of Lehi as being monogamic; in contradistinction we refer to the parallel work commenced by the founders of the Jaredite Nation, who were polygamists. God made the polygamist Abraham the father of his peculiar chosen people and gave him a promise that in him and his seed should all the families of the earth be blessed. He called the polygamist Moses to be its great leader and lawgiver, when he made Israel a nation; he conversed with both these men face to face, and never a word is to be found of condemnation from his divine lips because they had more than one wife. In fact, in the law of Moses, he sanctioned polygamy by express regulations. Think of it, ye who oppose polygamy, of God, regulating sin by law! What an outrage! What an absurdity! In one of his laws he says:

"If a man have two wives, one beloved and another hated, and they have borne him children, both the beloved and the hated; and if the first born son be hers that was hated: Then it shall be, when he maketh his sons to inherit that which he hath, that he may not make the son of the beloved first born before the son of the hated, which is indeed the first born: But he shall acknowledge the son of the hated for the first born, by giving him a double portion of all that he hath: for he is the beginning of his strength; the right of the first born is his.

God would not make a distinction with regard to polygamists; it is reserved for you to have the questionable honor of doing this thing.

I might go on piling up example to example of holy men of God, his chosen servants, who practiced this law, but it is unnecessary, as you must be acquainted with these instances as well as I am; but I venture the assertion that I can produce a dozen instances where it can be directly proven that the Lord's favored servants had more than one wife, to every one whom you can positively demonstrate to have been a monogamist. Polygamy was the rule, not the exception, in ancient Israel.

In your reference to Lamech you so word your sentence as to convey the idea that he was a murderer because he was a polygamist. If this was not the intent; why mention him at all? Or why mix up his blood-guiltiness and his polygamy? But you know better. The Translation of the Holy Scriptures, published by yourselves, (you individually being one of the Publishing Committee) gives the true reason; and you are well aware it had nothing to do with polygamy. And now I ask, what about Cain, the first murderer? Why not ascribe the bloody death of Abel to plural marriage? It would be quite as consistent as some of your other reasoning. Just as well make polygamy responsible for the death of Abel as for that of Lamech's victim. Or would it not be as good reasoning to ascribe it to monogamy? I think so. Indeed one American writer—and he not a "Mormon"—argues that such was the case, that monogamy was directly answerable for Cain's blood-thirstiness and crime.

You strongly urge that God would be a changeable Being if the law of celestial marriage emanated from him. I can not admit it. Your reasoning is imperfect. God has given such laws to his people for their guidance as were best adapted to their circumstances. He has fed them with milk or strong food as they were able to receive it. The Savior in his "sermon on the Mount" contrasts the law of the old and new dispensations. But had God changed because of the difference in the spirit of these instructions? Jesus, amongst other things on that occasion, said:

"Ye have heard that it hath been said, an eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth; but I say unto you, That ye resist not evil; but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also. * * * Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbor, and hate thine enemy. But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you."

Do these teaching show any duplicity in the Great Creator? You would scarcely assert such a thing, yet such would be the result of the position taken by you; neither do his instructions to different people, at different times, under different circumstances regarding the law of marriage make any change in him. The eternal principle is not changed; simply more or less is revealed as the people are prepared for it. Let me also cite you to the word of the Lord to Eli, High Priest of Israel:

"Wherefore, the Lord God of Israel saith, I said indeed that thy house, and the house of thy father, should walk before me forever: but now the Lord saith, Be it far from me; for them that honor me I will honor, and they that despise me shall be lightly esteemed. Behold, the days come, that I will cut off thine arm, and the arm of thy father's house, that there shall not be an old man in thine house."

There is a striking parallel between this word of the Lord to the house of Eli and that regarding plurality of wives, which came to the people of Lehi. Both were given because of the abuse of God's law. But in the latter case there is the remarkable proviso:

"For if I will, saith the Lord of Hosts, raise up seed unto me, I will command my people; otherwise they shall hearken unto these things."

Do you, Mr. Smith, mean to tell the world that God would use polygamy as a means to raise up a seed unto him if it were the abomination that you represent?

Yet this passage can mean nothing else than that for good and sufficient reasons, for the time being, monogamy was to be the law unto the Nephites, but when God's people were sufficiently advanced in the laws of life and the principles of Heaven, then the other command would be given for the express purpose of raising up a holy seed unto him. Until that higher law was given, the Nephites were to observe the monogamic law. If this is not so, what is the value of the expression, "otherwise they shall hearken to these things?" Furthermore, I am of the opinion that I can draw stronger indirect proof from the Book of Mormon that the law of plural marriage was revealed to and practiced by the Nephites in later years than you can to the contrary.

You claim that I have done the very thing foreshadowed by Jacob, when I refer to what is written in the Scriptures concerning David. You mistake. The Latter Day Saints do not ground their faith in the divinity of the law of celestial marriage on anything said to or done by David. We base it on the word of the Lord to your martyred father. But if we wished to appeal to God's holy word regarding those men, we should be doing nothing inconsistent or unlawful, or be in any wise acting as did the Nephites of Jacob's day. They sought "to excuse themselves in committing whoredoms, because of the things which were written concerning David and Solomon his son." We have no excuse to make for whoredoms. We well know that "the Lord God delighteth in the chastity of women," and no people in the world prize this virtue so highly as we do, or are as severe upon the adulterer and whoremonger. Nor can we find in the Scriptures handed down to us any excuses for this grievous sin. Therefore, the remarks of Jacob can not have reference to any people who act as we do. We simply appeal to God's word for support for obeying God's law.

It appears to me that your expression "fortunes of war," on which your argument hinges regarding the wives of Saul that were given to David, is a very inapt and unfortunate one. David did not succeed Saul as king of Israel by war or conquest, but by the holy anointing put upon him by Samuel, the prophet of God. He was no alien conqueror who drove the Israelitish ruler from his throne, but a youth of one of Israel's foremost tribes, who succeeded to the kingly state by divine right, and he then accepted nothing but what God bestowed upon him—kingdom, power, wives, people were all given him of heaven. God says, he gave David these wives; you argue to the contrary. It is you and the Lord for it; I prefer to believe him whose "word is truth." And again, let me ask, what means the Lord's statement to David, after telling him that He had given him his master's house, wives, etc.? "If that had been too little, I would moreover have given unto thee such and such things." According to your construction it would be necessary to have raised up another king unto Israel, and then have David conquer him and take his wives, or have permitted him by the "fortunes of war" to rob the monarchs of other lands of their families. Such a construction is preposterous, but the only escape, I perceive, out of the difficulty created by your unwillingness to accept the word of God as it is written. Let me also ask you what you are going to do about the "Lord's portion" of the captive women which were given by His command to certain persons mentioned in the thirty-first chapter of Numbers? If polygamy be an abomination, this is a very strange proceeding on His part. Further, you contend that David did not receive his wives by the same methods as the Elders of Israel do to day. This is another of your mistakes. David received his wives through Nathan and other servants of God appointed unto this power; the Elders of Latter Day Israel have received theirs through Joseph your father, and his successors in this ministry. There is not a shadow of difference between the two examples. David received his wives as we receive ours, or as Joash, the righteous young king of Israel received his from the hands of Jehoiada, God's High Priest. That is the way; if you are wise, walk ye in it. And remember when you speak of plural marriage as a crime, a sin against God, an abomination, and much else that is evil, you become a perverter of the Scriptures and are reviling that which, when observed according to God's law, has always had His approval; and never from Genesis to Revelation, from Nephi to Moroni, is there a word of condemnation of its practice, only of its abuse, when it was degraded and prostituted, as monogamy also frequently is, to gratify the passions of men, not to raise seed to the Lord. Are we to receive Jehovah's word, or yours? Are we to believe His plain and direct statement that He gave David the wives of Saul? Or are we to give credence to your feeble sophistries regarding the fortunes of a war that never took place? Saul was fighting the Philistines, not David when he was killed. If any one was entitled to his wives, according to the practice which you assert prevailed, it was the king of that people, not the man whom God had anointed as Saul's successor.

The law of celestial marriage is not for the world, but for God's people. All others are governed by the usages of the civilization in which they dwell, be it monogamic or polygamic. But polygamy without Jehovah's sanction is not celestial marriage. The world is constantly confounding the two systems. The essence and virtue of celestial marriage is that it extends beyond the veil into the eternal worlds; other marriage, single or plural, is of no force or binding power in the great hereafter; it is not recognized there because not performed by heaven's authority. Herein is the difference, and all polygamy (such as that denied by your father), illicit intercourse, unlawful connections or associations, are as repugnant to the gospel now, and worthy of our condemnation to-day as when stigmatized by Joseph and Hyrum Smith and denied by President John Taylor. Let me also remind you that the article on marriage that formerly appeared in the appendix to the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and which you misuse so largely in your argument, is not a revelation from God; it does not come with "thus saith the Lord," and has none of its binding force; at any rate I presume you will not argue that the Lord was bound by it; neither was His Church (even if your construction be correct) after a revelation had been given which modified its declarations. If there be a bidden meaning in it, then it is simply on a par with the policy which caused Abraham to say of Sarah, on certain perilous occasions, "She is my sister."

You take strong ground with regard to submitting the revelations of God to the various quorums of the priesthood for acceptance. There were many revelations given to your father of which you know nothing. Nor were they ever submitted to any but those whom they concerned. They were no less the word and will of the Lord for all that. But in the case of the revelation on celestial marriage it was submitted by your father to the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, and was accepted by the members of that quorum. Of that we have abundant testimony. It was also submitted to the High Council at Nauvoo and accepted by that body, though three of its members individually rejected it. On this point we have the testimony and affidavits of members of the Council who were present on the occasion, one of whom, Elder Thomas Grover, still lives in Utah, and he can be cross-examined if you wish to do so. The names of the members of the High Council of Nauvoo, who were present on that occasion, who make this affidavit, are David Fullmer, Thomas Grover, Aaron Johnson and James Allred, all men well known in Israel. The following is David Fullmer's statement:

TERRITORY OF UTAH. } ss.
COUNTY OF SALT LAKE. }

Be it remembered that on this fifteenth day of June, A. D., 1869, personally appeared before me, James Jack, a Notary Public in and for said county, David Fullmer, who was by me sworn in due form of law, and upon his oath saith, that on or about the twelfth day of August, A. D. 1843, while in meeting with the High Council, (he being a member thereof), in Hyrum Smith's brick office, in the city of Nauvoo, county of Hancock, state of Illinois, Dunbar Wilson made enquiry in relation to the subject of a plurality of wives, as there were rumors about, respecting it, and he was satisfied there was something in those remarks, and he wanted to know what it was, upon which Hyrum Smith stepped across the road to his residence, and soon returned bringing with him a copy of the revelation on celestial marriage, given to Joseph Smith, July 12, A. D. 1843, and read the same to the High Council, and bore testimony to its truth. The said David Fullmer further saith that, to the best of his memory and belief, the following named persons were present: Wm. Marks, Austin A. Cowles, Samuel Bent, Geo. W. Harris, Dunbar Wilson, Wm. Huntington, Levi Jackman, Aaron Johnson, Thomas Grover, David Fullmer, Phinehas Richards, James Allred, and Leonard Soby. And the said David Fullmer further saith that Wm. Marks, Austin A. Cowles and Leonard Soby were the only persons present who did not receive the testimony of Hyrum Smith, and that all the others did receive it from the teaching and testimony of the said Hyrum Smith. And further, that the copy of said Revelation on Celestial Marriage, published in the Deseret News extra of September fourteenth, A. D. 1852, is a true copy of the same.

DAVID FULLMER.

Subscribed and sworn to by the said David Fullmer the day and year first above written.

JAMES JACK, Notary Public.

You mention the fact that in early days God censured the people of His Church for not observing His commandments contained in the Book of Mormon, etc. Quite true: but how you can make this have any bearing on polygamy is the difficulty that presents itself to my mind; for polygamy was not practiced by the people at that time, and therefore they could not be under condemnation on that point, either one way or the other.

I think it would be rather a hard task for you, or any other man to disprove by cross-examination the fact that certain women were the wives of your father, as they have testified under oath. Surely they know, beyond peradventure, that the sealing ceremony was performed in their cases, and that they lived with him as his wives. You might as well try to argue a woman out of her existence, or identify as that she makes a mistake in matters of such vital importance to her as these. No sir; the chain of evidence is complete, and no cross examination will change the main facts; they were and are known to hundreds; and to tell us that they were not, is as wise in our eyes as if you were to tell us we dwelt on Mercury, or Mars, or were not men but birds, or fishes. All your arguments are as lost as that of the blind man who endeavored to persuade his neighbors blessed with good eyesight that the sun did not shine. They knew better, and so do we.

Your argument regarding the expression "they twain" seems to me without weight. It can be as truly said of a man and his second or third wife that "they twain shall be one flesh," as of a husband and his first consort. And to me the words of 1 Cor. 6: 16, "Know ye not that he which is joined to a harlot is one body? for two, saith he, shall be one flesh" prove that it has no relation to the subject of monogamic marriage. And now let me tell you, Mr. Smith, that God made man polygamic. The history of this world in all its generations proves it. To-day, three-quarters of the human family accept it as the natural law of marriage; the other quarter pretend not to believe in it; but it is only a pretence. Their actions prove to the contrary. They have adopted in place of honorable polygamy, a vile, a damnable and a God-accursed substitute which is corrupting the life streams and eating out the vitals of the self-styled monogamic communities. No amount of sophistry can palliate their hypocrisy, their sins have reached up to heaven and swift judgment will follow their disregard of nature's methods which are the methods of man's great Creator.

You denounce celestial marriage as a crime against mankind and a sin against God. We assert that God never has so denounced it; but has approved it, sanctioned it, encouraged it, legalized it and made special laws for its direction; that the polygamist child was always recognized as legitimate, and under the law of God, entitled to the blessings of His holy house, whilst the bastard could not enter therein until the tenth generation; and further that many children born in polygamy were the special subjects of God's care, or of His most abundant or special blessings. We need only refer to Joseph, Samuel, Solomon and even Ishmael, as cases in point. The prophets, the Savior himself, his apostles and disciples all ministered to a polygamic people; and whilst they denounced without stint the sexual crimes of those people they never uttered a sentence in reproof of their marriage institutions. And how do you account for it, if polygamy was so sinful in the sight of heaven as you assert, that the Almighty Father in selecting a lineage for His Son, chose one that was so well known to be polygamic.

I shall not now take up the question of the authority of Brigham Young as the successor of Joseph Smith; God has testified by his Holy Spirit to scores of thousands that he was the man, and this testimony and revelation are sufficient for us.

You have signally failed in all the leading points that you have attempted to combat. In the first place you have failed on the subject of polygamy; the fact still stands in unmistakable plainness that God did ordain it, that His prophets did give men wives, that he regulated it by His laws, and approved and blessed those who practised it.

You have, as a professed Latter Day Saint, tried to pervert the word of the Lord regarding Temple building, and because you have not fulfilled this law you seek to cast odium upon those who have done it; but the word of the Lord still remains, as in letters of living fire, unchanged and invulnerable:

"Therefore, verily I say unto you, that your anointings and your washings, and your baptisms for the dead, and your solemn assemblies, and your memorials for your sacrifices, by the sons of Levi, and for your oracles in your most holy places, wherein you receive conversations, and your statutes and judgments, for the beginning of the revelations and foundation of Zion, and for the glory, honor, and endowment of all her municipalities, are ordained by the ordinance of my holy house which my people are always commanded to build unto my holy name"

In your first letter you state: "The spirit of temple building has indeed been kept by you and your people." This is a high compliment paid to our devotion in living up to this standing commandment given by Jehovah to his people. I am truly sorry that as much can not be truthfully said of yourself and your adherents. It seems a little strange that while you ignore this as a general commandment of the Lord and by your acts and words make it nugatory, that you should be so elated with your good fortune in becoming the occupants of the old and first temple which the Saints in Utah ever erected, and from that sacred site anathematize us for our devotion, and say in effect that we should cease to build more temples until we reach the centre stake of Zion.

With regard to the prophecy of your father, quoted in my open letter, pertaining to the removal of the Saints from Nauvoo to these mountains, you seek to hide the true meaning of that prophecy by a superabundance of words, and by resorting to a mode of sophistical reasoning that seems peculiar to your style of writing. As a proof that this prophecy was to be fulfilled literally, you need only read the history of the Saints from the time of their exodus from Nauvoo until now, and then take a retrospective view of these many valleys filled with inhabitants, whose towns and cities reach from Idaho in the north, to Arizona and New Mexico in the south. And as an excuse why you and your organization have not been obedient to this prophecy and thus been helpers in developing the resources of this vast region, you allude to the revelation given on Fishing River, Missouri, June 22, 1834, to the members of Zion's Camp. Being myself a member of that camp, I am necessarily familiar with the condition of things at that time. The Saints had a short time previous, been expelled from Jackson County, and the Lord had called for the strength of his house to come to their aid by every honorable and just means. The movements of Zion's Camp excited the people of Jackson, Clay and Ray counties in Missouri, and to allay this intense excitement and that the Saints might find temporary refuge there, the Lord gave this revelation instructing the members of Zion's Camp as to the course to be taken by them to accomplish the desired object. The members of this camp were counselled in this revelation as follows:

"Talk not of judgment, neither boast of faith, nor of mighty works, but carefully gather together as much in one region as can be consistently with the feelings of the people; and behold, I will give unto you favor and grace in their eyes that you may rest in peace and safety, while you are saying unto the people, Execute judgment and justice for us according to law, and redress us of our wrongs."

Now it seems strange that the Reorganized Church, yourself its leader, should take this revelation, many years ago acted upon and fulfilled by the men to whom it was given, and refer to it as among the main reasons why you shirk the responsibility and hardships of journeying west in obedience to the plain prediction of the Prophet. This revelation was a counsel given to the members of Zion's Camp in 1834, and was fulfilled during that period; consequently it has no reference to you or your organization in 1883.

You claim to have from twenty to thirty thousand members in your organization. If so, it would be strange if some, perhaps very many of them, are not truly honest-hearted people. These, as well as yourself, the people of Utah would be most happy to be able to convince of the invalidity of their claims to that kingdom spoken of by Daniel, which is to be set up in the last days and stand forever. In your present condition, you can not be that people. Why? You place limits to the prerogatives of Jehovah; you express no faith in the doctrine of baptism for the dead. You say the dead are rejected and you denounce the building of Temples wherein a work can be performed for their redemption. In your midst the Lord has placed no mouth-piece holding the keys of "thus saith the Lord" to declare the mysteries of his will. You stop with the first principles of the gospel and hesitate to make further progress in the principles of a higher law for the advancement of the human race in the scale of those great principles which must exist in the bosom of the Almighty for the final redemption and elevation of intelligent beings to that society which is celestial and in which God himself mingles and associates.

Now, sir, the position taken in my open letter that Joseph Smith, your father, was a polygamist in belief and practice, I have sustained most amply by the introduction of testimony which you are unable to controvert. You have made unsupported allegations regarding your father's wives which are met with affidavits, years ago published to the world, and numerous others exist which can be furnished if deemed desirable. But if you still ask for more proof, you can have it. If all this fails to convince you I shall regard your obstinacy as not being a characteristic of a Latter Day Saint who is truly honest at heart. And as you are a son of that great man whom God has placed at the head of this dispensation, I regret much the spiritual barrenness of your mind, and desire that the Lord may enlighten you upon this matter. With this earnest solicitude for your enlightenment, the following passage in your second letter creates some unpleasant forebodings, for I infer from its wording that no matter how much proof may be laid before you, you will still be obstinate and refuse to yield the position you have assumed. You say:

"It is unnecessary to attempt to prove that Joseph Smith secretly taught and practiced celestial, or plural marriage or polygamy. For when that is proved the issue remains unchanged. All that could be effected by it, so far as I am concerned, would be to lessen my respect for him as a man, and give me one more heart pang to bear through life."

As you style yourself a Latter Day Saint and stand as a leader to your people, this seems to be unwarrantable ground for you to occupy. All who read these words, who desire to have respect for your love of truth, must be dismayed at their import. Though it be proved your father was a polygamist, still the "issue remains unchanged" and all that it could effect so far as you are concerned would be to lessen your respect for him as a man and give you one more heart pang! Then, Joseph Smith of Lamoni, these heart pangs will assuredly be felt and your respect for your illustrious father will be lessened. For if you are not convinced by what evidence is now presented, the day will assuredly come when you will be convinced. This passage I regret to see incorporated in your letter because it indicates in you a settled purpose not to be a true and faithful follower of your father. No truly honest-hearted Latter Day Saint would go so far as that. Does not personal pride, the love of position and a willingness to affiliate with the powers that be in political ranks, to win their applause, entice you to assume this unenviable attitude? I earnestly hope you will reconsider this clause in your letter and form more just and becoming resolutions.

I do not court this controversy for the sake of the mastery in discussion. I have a sincere desire that you may know, as I do, that your honored father was a polygamist. Utah is filled with witnesses upon this point, and it will be a fruitless labor for you, however much it may wound your pride, to establish your assertions that he was not a polygamist.

With sentiments of personal respect allow me to subscribe myself,

Yours truly,

L. O. LITTLEFIELD.

LOGAN, Utah, July 17th, 1883.

OGLIVE.—To Bro. George and sister Amanda Oglive, near North Branch, Jewel Co., Kansas, August 22d, 1883, a daughter, named Cora. Blest August 22d, 1883, by Elder Joshua Armstrong.

DIED.

THOMAS.—At Lansamlet, South Wales, August 4th, 1883, Elder Richard Thomas, aged 77 years. Funeral service by T. E. Jenkins. Bro. Thomas was a good, moral, religious man. He was a professor of religion for 45 years. For eighteen years he was a member of the Wesleyan Methodist Church, and a class leader for several years. After hearing the Latter Day Saints, he joined them; and when with the Brighamites, he presided over three different branches; viz, Morrilton, Ystradgunlais, Ystatypera. In 1866 he joined the Reorganization which he thought taught the same principles he believed in when he embraced the latter day work. He presided over the Lansamlet Branch for several years. He was not an influential preacher, but a useful Elder, and a good one to sell tracts. Some of his religious neighbors questioned him closely on his death bed, to see if his faith was shaken; but he continued strong in his testimony to the last. May he rest in peace. His reward is sure.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

TWELVE apples weighing thirteen and a quarter pounds arrived at Lamoni, on Tuesday, September 11th, to the address of the Editor. They were sent by Bro. C. St. Clair, from Independence, Missouri, to be distributed among several of the brethren at Lamoni. Each received his respective share except Bro. E. C. Dobson, who was absent on his way to the Reunion. The apples are of the Hunter's Delight variety, and are fine specimens of fruit from the land of Zion. Brn. E. Banta, D. Dancer, S. Bailey, W. Hudson, H. A. Stebbins, and Mr. Thomas Teale, Postmaster, of the town; Brn. J. Scott, A. S. Cochran, W. H. Deam, W. Crick, J. Silver, Sr. Nellie Barr, and the Editor, of the Herald Office, send kindly greeting to the donors for the remembrance extended in the gift.

Bro. Briggs Alden write from Fontanelle, Iowa, that his 87th year was fully passed and his 88th commenced on September 4th. He has lived to a ripe old age and now waits, not for the grim reaper, but for the sweet change from the trammels of time to the freedom of eternity.

Bro. Henry Grim, was at Coltharp, Houston county, Texas, Sunday, August 26th. He writes that he is laboring to the best of his ability.

Five have been baptized of late in the Pleasant Hill, Alabama Branch.

Three more baptized at the Montrose dedicatory meeting, September 2d last.

Bro. B. V. Springer was speaking every night to attentive audiences at Moselle, Mo., when last advices reached us. Health and spirits good.

The Editor left the sanctum for the Reunion meeting at Leland's Grove, September 14th, expecting to attend the church dedication services at Nebraska City, Nebraska, Sunday, September 30th, before his return.

Bro. J. W. Brackenbury, of Independence, Missouri, sent an apple of the same variety as those sent to the Herald Office, and grown eight miles south of Independence, to Bro. Richard Allen of San Bernardino, California, which measured sixteen inches round and weighed twenty-six and one half ounces. That may look to some like sending "coals to Newcastle," to send apples to California; but, notwithstanding all the newspaper bluster about the Golden State, the apples raised there do not compare favorable with, Kansas, Missouri, Michigan, or New York fruit.

Bro. J. C. Foss writes us that he sent notice of two day's meetings to be held in his district, which notice we failed to get. The meetings were to be held at the times and places named below. Wyandotte, Kansas, September 8th and 9th; Kansas City, Missouri, September 15th and 16th; Independence, September 22d and 23d; Armstrong, Kansas, September 29th and 30th, and Clear Fork, Kansas, October 6th and 7th, 1883.

A new style of preaching notices has been gotten up by Bro. T. W. Smith, which is both new and attractive. We are prepared to furnish them to Elders and branches at reasonable rates.

Bro. J. A. Robinson of Peoria, Illinois, informs us that he has hired the Kingman & Co., as traveling salesman for another year, at an advance of $300 per year over his last year's salary, he having last year made the best record of fourteen salesmen employed by the firm.

Bro. John W. F. Livings wrote from Passchristian, Miss., September 2d, narrating a manifestation to him in answer to prayer immediately after obeying the gospel, which we infer satisfied him of the validity of the claims of the Latter Day Saints, and the invalidity of the claims of other churches by which he was surrounded.

The stone work of the Lamoni Church is nearly completed.

BRO. H. C. BRONSON, is thus noticed by the Maroa, Illinois, News:

Elder Bronson's series of meetings came to a close last night. The elder quite earnestly defended the principle of "faith in God," "baptism for the remission of sins," and the "enjoying of the blessings of the Holy Ghost." He also emphatically denounces the doctrine of polygamy as "a hellish doctrine," and opposed to the faith of the Church of Latter Day Saints.

Bro. Bronson also offers the following proposition:

Editor News:—In a private interview with Elder David Wetzel, of Maroa, I understood from his remarks that he desired we would jointly discuss some of the points of contradistinction between us. I hereby, through your columns, submit the following propositions for his consideration:

1st. Is the Christian Church which Mr. Wetzel represents the true Church of God? If Mr. Wetzel will affirm the proposition I will deny.

2d. Is the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints the true Church of God? I will affirm if Mr. Wetzell will deny.

In discussing the above theories all the leading points of necessity will be involved. Awaiting an early reply, I remain

Yours respectfully,

ELDER H. C. BRONSON.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Blair wrote August 29th:

Hope to be in Deer Lodge City, Montana, by September 10th, and at Stuart, Montana, by the 15th to 20th September.

Bro. Richard Coburn wrote from Blenheim, Ontario, September 10th:

Bro. E. H. Gurley came here on the 15th of last month, and stayed till the 27th, preached six times, and I think did some good. But I think he left too soon, as the people were just finding out that there was an Elder here, and also that our doctrine was good and wholesome. Bro. Gurley was well liked and made a good impression here.

MR. CLARKSON advises the boys thus in the Iowa State Register.

The boys now content on the farms and aiding in raising the annual crops and acquiring an education during winter, are yet to be called to the most important stations where good and reliable men are wanted. When Rome was in trouble neither her Senators nor world renowned generals, who had had all the advantages of city life, were sufficient for the emergency. A man had to be sent for who had been content with the amusements and enjoyments under his father's roof, on a retired farm. We say to the noble sons of the farmers of Iowa, abide your time, and remain within the influence of good morals, and out of the degrading schools of whist parties, billiard tables, and clubs of doubtful composition. These flings at your positions and the real enjoyments you have, are not written by good men, nor is the advice they give profitable for you. When your physical systems are fully developed and moral character established, then if it be your choice, you can safely and successfully contest with any city reared youth or man, in any of the contests for wealth or position. But in the rural districts is beyond the least doubt the best place to lay the foundation for future prosperity and happiness.

THE following letter probably comes as near a report of the action of the Utah Commission on elections, and the effect of the "Edmunds Act" as we will get for awhile.

SALT LAKE CITY, Aug. 24.

To H. M. Teller, Secretary:

SIR:—I have the honor to inform you that the report on the registration vote in the last election for members of the Legislative Assembly and other offices was held on the 6th day of the present month, in this Territory, and that the full proceedings of this Commission in connection therewith will from necessity be delayed for a time. However, we think it will be proper to say now, in advance of our regular report, that the law known as the "Edmunds Act," so far as we have been responsible for its execution, has been carefully, but very rigidly, enforced this year, as it was last. No person living in polygamy has been permitted to vote at any election, and to be voted for for any office; and while only three convictions in prosecutions against polygamy have been secured, nearly or quite 15,000 have been disfranchised on account of polygamous practices through the operations of the law as administered by the Commission.

Ten suits for damage have been instituted against the Commission by certain Mormons whose names were rendered at the first registration and who were not permitted to vote at the election in November, 1882, because they refused to comply with the rules and regulations prescribed under the law by the Commission for proof of the eligibility of all voters. It is understood that these have been brought for the purpose, primarily, of testing the constitutionality of this law, and secondly, to determine the legality of our acts thereunder. The first hearing of these cases will be had early in October. It is deemed advisable to withhold our regular report until the court shall have heard and passed upon the cases. Moreover, certain phases of the general situation here have presented themselves through the recent election and in other ways in the present year, which will require to be carefully considered before the Commission will be bothered to make a full and comprehensive report, which the President and Congress will undoubtedly desire, and the Commission will wish to make such a report; and it will be prepared and forwarded in ample time for the use of the President in communicating with Congress at the commencement of its session in December next.

(Signed)

ALEX. RAMSEY.

By order of the Commission.

COL. SAMUEL BRANNAN, one of the Pioneer California settlers, has obtained a grant of Forty leagues of land from the Mexican Government, lying about one hundred and fifty miles from Guaymas, between the Towns of Comoripa and Sahuaripa. This tract the colonel proposes to colonize. An idea of the affair can be seen in the following copy of a circular sent us by Col. Brannan's order:

A GRANT OF LAND BY THE MEXICAN GOVERNMENT TO COL. SAMUEL BRANNAN.

On the Yaqui River, to be located on the West side, about 150 miles from Guaymas, between the towns of Comoripa and Sahuaripa, Sonora. A Town or Pueblo will be laid out, and a dam across the River Yaqui will be located next month (September, 1883) and colonists commence the settlement next October, 1883, 100 acres of the land, for the first 300 families, adjoining the Pueblo will be given to each family, they paying for survey and conveyance, also a town lot. Those wishing more land for cultivation can have the same, not exceeding 1,000 acres at $2 per acre, they paying for survey.

The Town is intended for manufacturing purposes, mining quartz, mills, etc. The Town will be located below the Dam, so it may furnish water for the City and irrigation at each end for the farming lands.

Mines of Gold, Silver, and Copper are in abundance in the foot Hills of the Sierra Madra Mountains not far from the Town. Guaymas will be the Sea Port of the Pacific and Tucson located on the Southern Pacific Railroad, the trading point for the interior.

A Railroad franchise will be granted by the Government, when the town is located about 100 miles (level ground) from the Sonora Railroad now completed and from 35 to 45 miles, from there to Guaymas on the Pacific. Guaymas and Tucson will be the headquarters of the Colony. The climate is good the year round and the soil is excellent, two crops can be produced a year. The Indian scare is at an end.

The following are a few Articles and sections of the Grant.

Contract entered into between the Secretary of Public Works, General Carlos Pacheco, representing the Executive of the Union and the Citizen Manuel Peniche, the representative of Mr. Samuel Brannan, for the Survey and Colonization of Public Lands in the State of Sonora:

Article 1. By virtue of the power given to the Executive by Section IV of Article First of the law of May 31, 1875, Mr. Samuel Brannan is authorized to survey (provided no other party has a better right thereto) up to seventy-five thousand hectares or 200,000 acres of public lands, situated to the west of the river Yaqui, between Comoripa and Sahuaripa, in the State of Sonora.

Art. 2. The expenses of survey, of division of lots, appraisement and description of the lands shall be made by the grantee.

Art. 3. The work referred to in the preceding article shall be done in accordance with the provisions of the law of August 2, 1863, as to the measurements of lands and shall be terminated within three years after the date hereinbefore mentioned.

Art. 14. The colonists that may settle on said lands shall enjoy for the period of ten years, and in accordance with said law the following privileges: Exemption from military duties and from all kinds of taxation, exclusive of municipal; from all kinds of import or interior duties for the provisions, agricultural implements, tools, machinery, chattels, materials for construction of dwellings, furniture for use, animals for work, breeding of blooded animals for the use of the colony, and a personal and unassignable exemption from the duties of exportation for the products of the soil that they may harvest; and lastly premiums and special protection for the introduction of new industry or manner of cultivation.

Art. 17. This contract shall not be assignable to any other parties, without previous consent from the Executive of the union thereof.

Art. 8. Mr Samuel Brannan is hereby authorized to colonize, within the term of five years from the date thereof, the lands that he may acquire with five hundred families, at least three-fourths thereof to be of Spanish origin, and he binds himself to place thereon at least fifty families within the first two years.

Art. 9. A family of settlers shall be understood to mean those who have a residence thereon, and who have begun to cultivate or work its lands.

Art. 10. A family within the meaning of this contract shall be:

I. A husband and wife, with or without children.
II. A father or mother, with one or more descendants dependent of the same.

III. Brothers or sisters, provided one of them has attained majority, and the rest are minors.

Art. 26. The grantee must have in the Capital a representative, duly authorized and empowered, with whom the Government may communicate with reference to all or any of the Mexico. June sixth, eighteen hundred and eighty-three.

THE following will give the readers of the HERALD an idea of what the fraternity of Free-thinkers is at.

The Free-thinkers Association's sixth annual national convention commences to-morrow (August 29th) in Rochester, N. Y., and will continue five days. The first convention was held at Wolcott, N. Y., six years ago, when the attendance was in inverse ratio to the boldness of the principles enunciated. The second convention was held at Chautauqua, to have been held at Hornellsville, and two at Watkin's Glen. At each assembling of the non-believers in preached doctrines the proceedings were given prominence by the participation of such people as Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, George W. Julian, of Indiana; James Parton, George Jacob Holyoake, Elizur Wright, Thaddeus B. Wakeman, Courtland Palmer, Elder F. W. Evans, Matilda Joslyn Gage, ex-Rev. J. H. Burnham, C. D. B. Mills, H. L. Green, and many others of liberal thoughts.

It is easy to become a member. One has merely to pay twenty-five cents annual dues and accept the doctrine of claims, no definite belief being required. The association's preamble declares "universal mental liberty" for all its members.

The membership of the association has increased quite rapidly since the first meeting in 1877, when the participants included only residents of the western counties of New York. At the gathering in 1878 the constitution was so changed as to include the whole state, and a subsequent change provided for the extension of the society so as to include within its scope the whole of the United States and Canada. The Secretary's list now includes the names of 2,280 members, of which 1,257 reside in New York state, 370 in Michigan, 480 in Pennsylvania, 120 in Ohio, 159 in Wisconsin, 116 in New Jersey, ninety-eight in Illinois, forty-eight in Indiana, forty-two in California, forty-three in Massachusetts, seventy in Iowa, sixty in Kansas, thirty-one in Louisiana, thirty-six in Nebraska, 112 in Texas, forty-two in Colorado, fourteen in Maine, eighteen in Minnesota, twenty-five in Wyoming Territory, fifty-two in Canada, and the others are scattered through the Southern States, Delaware being the only State that does not contain any members. Each year of the public exercises Christian ministers have been invited to attend and discuss with the members the subject of Christianity. The invitation has been accepted for the first time this year, and the Rev. Thomas Mitchell, a Methodist clergyman of Brooklyn, will uphold orthodoxy in a public debate against Thaddeus B. Wakeman, a New York lawyer, who will argue the tenets of the association.

LOS ANGELES, Cal.,
September 2nd, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Immediately in the vicinity of this city, the land is quite beautiful and fertile, being a succession of fruit orchards, vineyards, evergreens, etc. It may appear strange to some to know that, while much of the orange fruit is still on the trees, the young fruit is also on the same trees, maturing for next season; so that class of fruit is almost continuous. The fruit is not considered a full crop this year, still there is an abundance. The soil is varied. There is the fine and coarse sand, the gravel, and the black adobe, and considerable of alkali. All is good except the strong alkali. If water can be brought upon it, it is marvelous to see the amount that can be raised per acre, if properly cultivated.

This has been considered a very dry season, and crops very poor. There has been no change in the weather since about the 7th of May, being one continuous sunshine, after about nine o'clock, each day; no sign of a storm, or anything of the kind. On last evening I felt, for the first time, a shock of an earthquake. It was quite hard, but not sufficiently so to do any damage.

This city numbers about 20,000 inhabitants, in which are found representatives of most all nationalities. A great many eastern people are here, and almost all classes of society are represented; so that there is no difficulty in persons finding a grade to suit them. There are, as usual in cities of this size, the requisite number of churches, and I think, if possible, more than the usual number. Their buildings represent a great deal of richness and grandeur.

How long the great Ruler of the Universe will permit the pride and superstition in high places to prosper, I know not. It seems to me that the world is silently ripening for the great consumption foretold by the prophets. I can scarcely think of any of the leading churches but what is largely represented here. The Catholics, Jews, Adventists, and Protestant churches in great numbers. The Reorganized Church has no building as yet, but it is to be hoped that, in the near future, there will be a sufficient number of Saints to demand one, and obtain it. There are a few Saints here, quite a number at Gospel Swamp, among which is our esteemed Brother Mills, whom I have had the pleasure of hearing a few times. I have become acquainted with Brethren Howland, Schnell, Vanfleet, French, and Best, all splendid brethren, as far as I can see. There are many old Brighamite Mormons here, who have turned in with the Anti-Christ (Spiritualism), some of whom enjoyed the blessings in the early days at Kirtland. I am satisfied there will have to be a stand made here, and the testimony of the Gospel proclaimed in this city and surroundings; for there are many good people, and they must hear the warning voice of the good shepherd.

Southern California is very scarce of laborers, and who will be called upon to open the Gospel fight here, is more than I am prepared to say now. I prize the HERALD more than ever since coming here. I read with great interest all the communications.

I hope the Lord will bless and sustain all the shepherds and traveling ministry of his appointing, and give them patience, long suffering, and love, and all those things which characterized the Master.

I am your brother and co-laborer in the gospel,
J. R. BADHAM.

HAZEL, Ohio,
September 7th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—We are still striving to walk in the straight and narrow way. Although our numbers are small, we are thankful there are as many as there are. Since Bro. L. R. Devore and wife went away, we have not had much preaching in the branch; but we are still striving to do what we can in the glorious work of the Lord, and we are many times made to rejoice that the Good Father still recognizes us as his children. I feel like striving to do all that I can in the vineyard of the Lord. I ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints that God will give his Spirit to guide me in the way of truth.

Ever praying for the cause of truth, I remain your brother in the hope of eternal life,
J. W. MOORE.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass.,
September 4th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I am of the opinion that the HERALD grows better every time it is issued. I assure you it comes to me as a welcome visitor, laden as it is, with its rich treasures of information for both saint and sinner. To the saint it tells how God is wonderfully working with and blessing his people. To the sinner it tells the plain simple story of the cross, of the wonderful love of God, who "so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life. I thank God that my ears were ever saluted with the joyful sound of the gospel, because the joy and peace realized is beyond expression, and I feel to call upon all that is within me to praise "his holy name."

Last Sunday I went to the Congregational Sabbath-school, and was, of course, put into the minister's class. After the lesson was over, I got into conversation with the minister, Rev. A. H.

Heath, the outcome of which was I sold him a Book of Mormon. He seemed quite pleased with our explanation of the book, and what we as a church claim for it. He listened to all that I had to say, and treated me with marked respect, and invited me to come again. The work here is progressing very slowly, not because we do not hold forth, but because it is a hard place to break into. Still we continue to labor in connection with the president of the branch, Bro. John Smith, waiting the time when God's promise to us as a branch (that many shall come to a knowledge of the truth in this place) shall be fulfilled. Asking an interest in your prayers, and praying that the Lord will bless all his children, I remain your brother in gospel bonds,

Editor Herald:—Please announce that the Michigan District Conference is appointed to be held at the Leitch School-house, Sanilac county, Michigan, October 13th, 1883. It is four miles east of Deckerville Station, which is on the narrow gauge railway running from Port Huron to Sand Beach. Make connection at Port Huron at Eleven o'clock a.m., and arrive at Deckerville at One o'clock p.m. Enquire for Peter Provose, or Peter Edwards. Let all attend who can, without too much sacrifice. All of the branches and officials send reports. Hope to see brethren J. H. Lake and E. H. Gurley from Canada, and the laboring Elders of the district present. Possibly Bro. James Caffall, from the Colorado Mission, will be there also. Who knows? Let us meet in the interest of the cause, to have a peaceful, pleasant, and profitable time; that all may be confirmed and encouraged in the work.

WM. H. KELLEY, Pres. of Dist.

KANSAS CITY, Missouri,

Bro. J. Smith:—We are trying to hold up the standard, although like every other city, the opposition is strong; yet we are encouraged when we see occasionally one drop into line, and accept the terms as our Savior gave them. We are now receiving aid from able defenders of the truth, such as brethren A. H. Smith, J. C. Foss and others, with quite good attendance and excellent attention; and some are investigating, while many admit the doctrine is true. The Saints generally are trying to practice what they preach. Bro. F. C. Warnky has been here every fourth Lord's Day for several months, and has done us much good, for which we are very thankful. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, we close.

Bro. Joseph:—I have been three weeks from home at this date. Have preached at Leland, Amboy, and Cortland, and have just arrived at this place with the intention of making an effort, for the cause. So far I have had good health, good liberty, and good audiences. Some talk of uniting with us in the near future. I am working my way north, and may get to Wisconsin, if the needful is forthcoming.

Bro. Joseph:—We are having some very nice meetings. Brother Stone is with me every Sunday, working zealously for the cause, and the Lord blesses us with his Spirit. We have pretty good attendance generally; some few believers, but they seem loathe to obey.

I was aroused out of sleep by the ringing of my door-bell on Sunday morning at two o'clock, August 26th, to go to christen an infant two weeks old, which they said was dying. I told them I did not believe in that; the child was all right if it did die, but I would bless it in the name of the Lord. So I went about nine a.m., to the house. The child had gone blind, had spasms, and was given up for dead. I blessed and administered to her in the name of the Lord. Praise be to his holy name, to whom all power belongs, the babe's father called in a day or two after to say the child was getting along very well, with its sight restored. Her name is Elmira Lee. May the Lord still continue to add his blessing, inasmuch as we are humble and faithful is my prayer.

From your brother in Christ,

ABSOLOM GRIST.

INDEPENDENCE, MO.,

Dear Herald:—Since I was released as president of the branch, I have been preaching in different parts, including Kansas City, where I preached twice each month to small but appreciative congregations. In some places where I preach, an excellent feeling prevails toward us, and the word is received with gladness. In other places it is not so. Nearly all the school-houses are open for us, and many precious souls are hungering for the bread of life; and I am doing the best I can to feed them; and whereas I am well acquainted with the effect made in this country, I would suggest that our next General Conference instruct the appointees to avoid hanging around branches, but to go and preach the gospel to the world where there are no branches. I feel satisfied that it would result in great good to the Church, especially here in Zion. I just returned from Holden, Johnson county, where I was called by telegram to administer to our esteemed sister, Mattie Evans. We arrived Friday night, and notwithstanding that death was visible, our hearts were made glad, and our souls were filled with joy, for when we prayed for her, God heard our prayers and manifested himself in our midst, through her. She first began to bear testimony to the truth of the gospel of Christ, and that she was blessed, that she felt the power of God in her whole system from the crown of her head to the soles of her feet; and then she began to talk to all in the room (it being well filled with friends, mostly non-members), and let me here say that I never heard the sweet voice of inspiration to that extent that I did upon that occasion. Every eye was filled with tears, and every soul with love and praise to God. Such wise counsel I never heard from the lips of any mortal. She called to her side several relatives, and gave them instruction, amongst which was one that seemed to be in the habit of going to saloons. To him she delivered the word of life, and I bear testimony that it was the word of the Lord. After she had delivered her message from God, she gradually and quietly fell asleep in Jesus. The writer, at her request, conducted her funeral services in the Christian Church, on Sunday at three o'clock, and we were blessed in presenting to a very large congregation the hope of life. I wish to return thanks to the pastor, Rev. Lord, and the members of the Christian Church in Holden, for their kindness manifested unto me. I am trying to get an opening at Liberty. There is a large country around here, where the people have no correct idea of what the Latter Day Saints believe or preach. I have this summer baptized eleven, and blessed five children. My prayer is for the redemption of Zion.

I remain a lover of truth,

F. C. WARNKY.

CLEAR WATER, Nebraska,
September 5th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Our conference held on the first and second was, to my mind, a success. A goodly number was present, and the Spirit of peace distilled its mild and gracious blessings upon us. Like the fragrance of a lovely flower, these sweet influences linger with us yet. I love to reflect upon past enjoyments, tasting again and again of the good word of God, that has, that does, that ever will cheer our thirsty souls. Bro. Hudson and wife of Columbus were with us, and we were blessed, cheered, comforted, and strengthened by their saintly presence and testimony. May the Lord give strength, that with renewed diligence we may labor for Zion, the pure in heart. In bonds of sacred trust,

I remain yours in hope,

G. S. HYDE.

MONROE, Alabama,
September 10th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Commenced our meetings here Saturday night. Some of the good, pious people threatened to nail up the house last night whilst Bro. Chute was preaching. The devil was raging. There was considerable disturbance. A crew of things, not men, were determined to close us out. Bro. Page proposed to leave the matter to the people. Next Tuesday night we will take a vote on it. I was to examine J. D. Lee's book at that time. We expect to remain.

Your brother in Christ,

R. J. ANTHONY.

INDEPENDENCE, Missouri,
September 10th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Our two days meeting on Saturday and Sunday last was not in vain, Bro. E. Curtis spoke on Saturday evening, J. W. Brackenbury on Sunday morning. In the afternoon, forty-six grown persons, besides many of the young were present. We administered the sacrament and then instructed the brethren that long prayers and long speeches and too much singing in a social meeting, or for a few to rob others of their rights was not profitable, and if the instructions would be born in mind, we would have a good meeting. The meeting was held but one hour and a half. They remembered the advice, and out of the forty-six present, thirty-seven testimonies were given, and prayers offered by four. Much of the Spirit was present. J. C. Foss addressed an interested assembly in the evening. All parted with the best of feelings.

Yours truly,

J. C. FOSS.

CABOOL, Texas Co., Mo.,

Bro. Joseph:—Just returned from Wright county, by request of Geo. H. Campbell, who lives eight miles north of Mountain Grove. I visited him, preached four discourses in his vicinity to attentive listeners. Formed some acquaintance with Bro. W. H. Schofield, of Norwood, Wright county, Missouri. Called on the Editor of the Mountain Grove Prospect. He is a liberal minded gentleman; told me he would do as much for me as for any other persuasion. Wright county contains a large tract of Government land. Some in Texas county. Bro. Campbell says he could locate fifty or sixty Saints on one hundred and sixty acres apiece. This is a fine fruit growing country; tolerably good agricultural part of country.

Your brother in the one faith,

B. A. ATWELL.

NEWS SUMMARY.

September 6th.—The Zulus of South Africa are waging civil war.

Marquis Tseng, the Chinese ambassador, has, under the instructions of his government, demanded the withdrawal of France from the Hue treaty. Ferry, the French prime minister, refused to comply, but assured the Marquis Tseng that France is willing to give China the necessary guarantees for the integrity of her frontier.

"The flooded state of the country round Hanoi," says the Saigon correspondent of the London Daily News, "has effectually checked all further movements on the part of the French; nevertheless reinforcements have left Saigon for Haiphong, where they must remain inactive till the subsidence of the waters. Active operations cannot be undertaken before October, so that the French have ample time to prepare for emergencies. Both the press and the general public are unanimous in the opinion that the expeditionary force is fatally inadequate for the work that it may have to accomplish before the tricolor waves triumphantly over Tonquin. Neither does the appearance of the troops auger much for the success of the enterprise. Those whom I met in Saigon were for the most part beardless boys, pale and sickly to a degree, and appeared by no means able to withstand a climate that is trying even to well-seasoned individuals, while their slouching gait, and general air of indisciplined bore witness to the fact that they were mainly raw conscripts.

An Annamese from Hanoi says that the gunboats again advanced to Sontai and were repulsed. Twelve of the French were killed. The gunboats had no effect on the earthworks. This confirms the rumors reaching here to the same effect from Chinese sources.

Eight hundred workmen assembled in a suburb of Vienna to-day, and engaged in riotous demonstrations. They refused to disperse, whereupon the troops charged, scattering the mob.

Owing to the disclosures of informers the Spanish government possesses an exhaustive list of disaffected army officers. About 200 are already exiled.

The republicans have a majority now in eighty-two out of ninety of the principal assemblies in France.

Yellow-fever is on the increase at Pensacola, Florida. Six deaths in the twenty-four hours ending yesterday afternoon were reported.

Frank James was acquitted of the charge of murder yesterday by a jury of his peers. There was the greatest of joy among the banditti. He is remanded to jail to await trial on other indictments.

New Orleans is free from yellow-fever, but is full of small-pox, there having been since January 1st, 1,162 deaths from that disease in that city.

The steamer Canima struck on Gull Island, at the mouth of St. Mary's Bay, and sank almost instantly. A heavy sea was running. The passengers and crew had to leap for life. They saved nothing. The ship sank without giving time to procure provisions. Capt. Farquhar exhibited great skill and coolness. The safety of the lives of the passengers and crew are due to him.

The French bark Kermalo, with 9,000 quintals of codfish from St. Pierre to France, sank with all hands at the entrance of the River Girond.

The schooner Lizzie stranded to-day on the west side of Miquelon.

The French banker Augusta, just anchored in the roads, was severely damaged and lost six men.

The banker Emillie is reported gone down at anchor at the Great Banks with all on board.

The French bark Hortense is a total wreck at Sables Dolonne. The crew was saved.

The schooners disabled on Miquelon Island in the storm of Thursday of the French banking fleet are slowly arriving.

Since cabling the 4th inst. twenty-one more cases of loss of life on the banks are reported. All of the French fleet which have arrived at St. Johns, Newfoundland, report numbers of dismantled vessels outside and large quantities of floating wreckage.

The last French banker arriving in St. Pierre Roads accounts for another batch of fifty-four lives lost out of another batch of the French banking-fleet. One Dieppe vessel alone lost twelve men. The brig Gabriel, also a Dieppe vessel, rode out the two storms of Sunday and Thursday, but had both masts carried away and the decks swept clean of everything. The fate of the crew is unknown, but they are reported taken off.

The steamer Lampart arrived at Halifax, N. S., in distress, having experienced a most dreadful storm, and had 150 cattle swept from its decks by the waves.

The bark N. Boynton arrived at Boston, Mass., crippled, having encountered a severe hurricane on the passage from Manila.

The schooner Hyperion has arrived at Boston, Mass., from the Banks, and reports the loss of two dories and four men (natives of Cape Breton) in the storm of the 26th.

The bark David and entire cargo was recently lost at sea, only twelve persons out of a crew of twenty-five surviving.

September 7th.—The official report of the recent disaster in Java and Sumatra is not yet published. The number of natives killed at Bantam, Batavia, and Lampong is estimated at 30,000. The number of Europeans lost is unknown. The garrison and Dutch president at Telokbetong were saved. Terrible distress prevails at Telokbetong, as it is unapproachable by sea, owing to the bay being filled with banks of pumice-stone. The telegraph line from Batavia to Telokbetong is destroyed.

A telegram from Batavia says a famine is completing the havoc there.

The bark Windermere from Newcastle, New South Wales, is ashore at Fort Ross, Cal., a total wreck. The ship Raphael, in the terrible storm of August 29th, had three men and her captain badly injured.

Reports from all parts of Russia state that the cattle plague continues with unabated fury. Over a million cattle have fallen victims to the plague within the last four years in European Russia alone.

Tuesday the small Canadian schooner Explorer, while off South Hampton, Lake Huron, went down in a squall with all on board. Four persons were lost, one of them being Walter Crane, the son of Albert Crane, a real-estate agent at No. 116 Monroe street, Chicago. The young man was taking a pleasure trip.

September 9th.—An extensive plot has been discovered among the Cubans to free themselves from Spanish authority. Spain is excited and alarmed.

A crowd of persons yesterday smashed the windows of a cafe and several houses occupied by Jews at Agram. The military fired on the mob. Several rioters were arrested. The disorders were not suppressed until 2 o'clock this morning. The communal elections to-morrow are postponed through fear of further outbreaks. There were also collisions in country districts between peasants and gendarmes. Several of the former were killed and wounded.

LATER.—Investigation shows that the rioting was very serious. The infantry fired two volleys. The Hussars afterward cleared the streets, which were then picketed by troops all night. The rioting was renewed to-day, but the rioters were dispersed.

The German squadron has been ordered to Chinese waters.

The schooner Laura Belle has been wrecked.

The Utah Commission has agreed to recommend the enactment of a marriage law which will provide that all marriages in the territory shall be null and void unless solemnized publicly before witnesses. The witnesses and those who officiate and the contracting parties shall make affidavit in every case that they are not polygamists. Every marriage, and the circumstances connected with it, the names of witnesses, contracting parties, etc., shall be made a matter of public record. A heavy penalty is proposed for violators of this projected law. Col. Godfrey, of the commission, is sanguine as to the adoption of this law, and as to its efficacy after adoption.

Sep. 10th.—Thirty thousand people attended a mass-meeting held in the interests of the Irish National League at Waterford, Ireland, Sunday. Resolutions were adopted demanding for Erin a Government similar to that which has been granted to Canada. Michael Davitt denounced the Land Act of 1881 as entirely inadequate. Only one-sixth of the cases had been heard, he said, and the reductions had been only about $800,000 so far.

There was a tidal-wave in the harbor of St. Thomas, W. I., August 27. The water receded three times. A sharp earthquake shock was felt at 10 the following night. Aug. 30 two shocks were felt almost simultaneously—the first being light and the second severe. There was considerable alarm, but no damage was done.

There was an unusually strong earthquake this morning at 4: 10 at Lima, Peru. Its duration fifteen seconds.

Earthquake shocks were felt yesterday at Casamicciola, Ischia.

The Mark Lane Express, in its review of the British grain trade the last week, says: The harvest has progressed slowly. Trade in foreign wheat is slow, though there is no quotable decline in prices. Barley, maize, and linseed are cheaper. Trade in cargoes off coast is neglected. There were nine arrivals and two sales; twelve were withdrawn and eight remain on sale. Sales of English wheat the last week, 54,188 quarters at 4s 8d, against 42,243 quarters at 4s 9d the corresponding week last year.

Alarm is being created in Eastern Europe by the actions of Russia's agents on the Bulgarian frontier. An alliance between Russia, Bulgaria, Turkey and Montenegro is regarded as extremely probable. An alliance between Spain and Austria is reported as contemplated.

Friday night the steam-barge Clinton, with three barges in tow, all grain-laden, from Chicago, while off the Manitowish were struck by the great gale. The steamer became disabled, cut loose her tow, nearly foundered, and finally came to anchor with four feet of water in her hold. She reached Cheboygan yesterday morning with all of her crew safe, but badly fatigued from pumping. Nothing has been heard of the three barges. Full crews were on board.

Sep. 11th.—The Croatian rebellion grows to such importance that the Austrian Minister for Foreign Affairs has been forced to send a dispatch to all representatives abroad informing them of the precise character of the insurrection. He promises an immediate suppression of the uprising, which is general throughout the province.

There is undoubtedly a Russian ferment to the trouble.

Chinese hatred of foreigners caused a serious riot in Canton, China, which was finally suppressed by troops after raging for hours. Its origin is supposed to be the trouble between France and China.

At 11 o'clock last night at Zalalkoeve, Hungary, large bands of peasants from the neighborhood, armed with guns and axes, came into the town and plundered thirteen shops. They afterwards withdrew, threatening to return this evening.

There are numerous cholera attacks at Alexandria, Egypt, yet, but the daily deaths are reduced to four.

The cattle disease is spreading alarmingly throughout England.

Sept. 12th.—Austria and Germany are said to have made remonstrances at St. Petersburg concerning the designs of Russia in Bulgaria.

It is said that the arrival of the outgoing French troops at Port Said will be taken by China as the signal for an invasion of Tonquin.

In view of the many dangers threatening the peace of France an extra session of the Chamber of Deputies is deemed likely to be convened.

It is learned to-day that the Chinese mob at Canton yesterday burned thirteen buildings owned by European merchants. None of the Europeans were killed, but an Englishman was severely handled by the mob. The Chinese troops were called out, and after much difficulty succeeded in dispersing the angry crowd.

At Agram yesterday the police surprised some secret societies which have been endeavoring to direct the riots against the Jews. Several officers of the societies have been arrested.

There were six new cases of yellow fever at the navy yard at Pensacola, Fla., and two deaths.

Seventeen Pomeranian herring boats have been missing since the recent gales.

Off the coast of North Carolina the wind blew at the rate of ninety-three miles an hour, and thirteen vessels were wrecked.

Fifteen distressed seamen have arrived in New York. They were picked up at sea by the British steamer Llandoff City and transferred to the Pavonia, on which steamship they reached New York. The sailors composed the crew of the Norwegian bark Cariolan.

Sep. 13.—At 4: 30 a.m. yesterday the new Italian steamship Independente, built on the Clyde, went ashore in a heavy sea and during a thick fog at Jones' Inlet, Long Island Sound. She had 160 passengers and a crew on board. The passengers were taken off by the life-saving service. The vessel was completing her first voyage. She is the seventh which has stranded at that same place. The fate of the fine steamship was undecided at last accounts.

Bismarck is alarmingly ill.

The violence of the rebels against the landowners between Glin and Petrinia, Hungary, is increasing. The military force which was sent to the scene of the disturbance was compelled to fire into a dense mass of rioters at Jakobovacz, killing fifteen and wounding many others.

It is feared that the outbreak in Croatia is well organized, and additional troops will be needed to quell it.

The Hungarian Prime Minister has had an interview with the Croatian notables who were summoned to an audience. The interview was stormy. The notables, after excitedly detailing the wrongs under which Croatia suffered, promised to fulfill certain conditions proposed by the Hungarian Government, the details or character of which are not made known.

The disturbances in the interior grow more frequent. The conflicts with the troops are assuming a most serious character.

In a fight with Montero's band at Lima, S. A., eighteen persons were killed.

All the Chilean papers declare that the Minister at Washington has informed the Government of Chili that Gen. Iglesias will be recognized by the United States as President of Peru directly he holds command of Lima.

Guatemala has determined to build a railway to the Atlantic. Estimated cost $12,000,000.

In an affair at Zipacura sixty men were killed and wounded, when the rebels surrendered. Gen. Delgado was shot down before the fight began while attempting to parley with the rebels.

FIRES, STORMS AND ACCIDENTS.

September 6th.—Six miles east of Springfield, Ill., yesterday at noon, the house of John Everett was destroyed by fire. Mr. and Mrs. Everett were absent. Mrs. Everett's mother, Mrs. Hoyaland, an aged lady, and two little children were burned to death.

Loss by fire at Jacksonville, Ill., $75,000; Baltimore, Md., $100,000; Lakeport, Cal., $22,000; St. Louis, Mo., $4,000; East Saginaw, Mich., $15,000; Faribault, Minn., $10,000.

The boiler of a steam thrasher on the farm of Abram Overholtzer, in Dauphin county, Pa., exploded yesterday instantly killing Simon Brinser, the engineer, and Jacob J. Kline, both of Elizabethtown. The explosion was due to a lack of water in the boiler.

Two young girls lost their lives in the Raritan River, near New Brunswick, N. J., Wednesday night. One slipped into the water and the other heroically went to the rescue.

Near Waldron's Station, on the Cincinnati, Indianapolis, St. Louis & Chicago railroad this morning, one freight train ran into another, and also broke through a bridge. A brakeman already wounded and a brakeman on duty were killed.

September 7th.—Loss by fire at Columbus, O., $20,000, and 10,000 bushels of wheat.

A reign of terror exists at Lynchburg, Va., on account of fire fiends constantly attempting to burn the town. Detectives are entirely baffled.

Loss by fire at Hunter's Point, La., $60,000, and one life; Oshkosh, Wis., $5,000; Saratoga, N. Y., $12,000; New York City, $23,000; Chicago, Ill., $3,300; Wausau, Wis., $2,000.

September 9th.—Loss by fire at Utica, N. Y., $6,000; Watertown, Wis., $45,000; Norfolk, Va., $30,000; Auburn, Ky., $22,850; Scranton, Pa., $15,000.

Two serious railroad accidents occurred at Kenosha Mountain, Colorado, on the South Park Railroad Saturday afternoon, by which three men were injured, it is feared, fatally, and four others seriously. The accidents were caused by a heavy train getting the mastery over the engines in descending a steep grade.

Sept. 10th.—A rickety bridge on which a number of actors and "supes" were standing while rehearsing in Colville's Fourteenth Street Theatre, New York City, gave way yesterday, and the actors and "supes" fell about thirteen feet. Seven people were rather seriously hurt.

Colored people have attended another poisoned barbecue; this time in Beaufort County, South Carolina. Three persons are dead, and seven are likely to die from it.

Fire on High street, San Fernando, Trinidad, Aug. 29th destroyed forty houses. Loss estimated from £30,000 to £40,000 sterling.

Sep. 11th.—At Long Island City, N. Y., two trains collided, killing three men and seriously injuring fourteen others.

Two boilers exploded at Cleveland, O., yesterday, demolishing the building, and injuring six men.

Loss by fire at Dallas, Tex., $38,600. Belleville, Ill., $35,000. Racine, Wis., $10,000. Mason City, Ia., $3,000. Wilkesbarre, Pa., $50,000. St. Paul, Minn., $50,000. Taunton, Mass., $30,000.

Sep. 12th.—Loss by fire at Chicago, Ill., $20,000. Boston, Mass., $75,000. Fort Smith, Ark., $60,000. Lowell, Mass., $35,000. Columbus, Tex., $10,000.

Near Cheyenne, Wyoming Territory, two trains collided, wrecking eleven cars. At Andover, Conn., a section of a freight train parted from the train, was crashed into by a train immediately behind, and eight cars were wrecked, and several others derailed. A freight train was wrecked near Easton, Pa., and eight cars demolished.

Sept. 13th.—Loss by fire at Albert Lea, Minn., yesterday, $39,685. St. Louis, Mo., $20,000. Olympia, W. T., $60,000. Des Moines, $10,000.

The steamer Queen Victoria, burned near Chatham, Ontario. She was worth $13,000.

Twelve persons were drowned in the English Channel, yesterday, through the sinking of a Norwegian vessel in a collision.

CROP REPORTS.

Wet weather is greatly hindering the harvest work in England. Much grain is uncut. The position of ungathered crops is daily more critical.

The reports from Illinois are not generally favorable. The corn crop of the whole state averages about two weeks late, and only that in the extreme south can be said to be out of the way of great damage by immediate frosts. In the latitude of Springfield at least another week of good weather will be necessary, and in the northern part of the state three-fourths of the crop would be ruined by severe frosts any time before October. Some counties report an increased acreage. Taking all together, there is a moderate quantity of old corn on hand, perhaps one-eighth of the crop, or equal to a seven-weeks' supply at ordinary rates of consumption.

Iowa generally reports the prospect of a small increase in yield over last year. Much of the corn is already out of the way of frost, and ten days more of moderately warm weather will ripen it all. Some estimates are to the effect that if frost holds off till September 20—nearly two weeks longer—Iowa will have a corn crop of 200,000,000 bushels, which will considerably exceed that of last year. Iowa has not much corn on hand; it has been pretty closely used up in feeding.

The prospects in Nebraska are a little better than those in Iowa.

Kansas reports an increase of 11 per cent. in acreage, and expects a 10 per cent. increase in yield, giving an aggregate of nearly 190,000,000 bushels for the state. Favorable weather during the last few weeks has matured the crop, except a little near the northern boundary. There is a moderate quantity of old corn on hand.

Missouri reports favorably, nearly as well as Kansas in regard to early maturity, having little corn that is not out of the way of frost.

The corn crop in Ohio and Indiana is expected to fall short about 25 per cent., even if the frost should hold off ten days longer; and an early freeze would still further reduce the quantity. Louisville reports that Kentucky will show a decrease of 20 to 30 per cent., and is not yet frost-proof. In Michigan there seems to be little hope of gathering any corn that will be available for other uses than as fodder. New York is modest enough to expect a two-thirds yield if the frost holds off till the beginning of October.

On the night of September 8th a killing frost fell in parts of Illinois, Michigan, Iowa, Indiana, and Illinois, doing immense damage to the crops.

The frost, has worked havoc in Wisconsin and Michigan. Serious injury was done in the northern counties of Indiana, Illinois, and Iowa. South of a line drawn from Indianapolis to Des Moines the crops seem to have escaped injury. Sunday night's frost seems to have been the severest of all where it occurred, though confined almost exclusively within the northern belt.

There are times in every man's life when plain duty is often difficult to perform. Ease, comfort, luxury, inclination stand in the way. If duty is performed it must be at a sacrifice; but it always pays to take the hand of duty and let her lead, whether through storm or sunshine, darkness or light, grief or joy, life or death. Duty, duty; always first. Men have fought mighty battles, but even when they have yielded to sloth, or fear, or inclination, it has been at a loss; and when, triumphing over every obstacle, and apparent impossibility, they have obeyed the stern mandates of duty, it has paid them, gloriously paid them. It pays a man to do his duty. Truly, it pays; now, and for all time, it pays.

We are apt to see the clouds that hang over us, forgetting the clear blue sky beyond.

Envy is the baneful admission of self-inferiority.

A GREAT SPEECH BY CASTELAR.

Castelar's recent speech at Alcira on the "Relations Between Continental Democracy and Roman Catholicism" was one of the greatest efforts of his career. His argument was that modern civilization even at its dawn had attempted in vain to conciliate Catholic tradition. Had the Popes but hearkened to the overtures of the Council of Constance or the voice of Savonarola, they would have created a Christian democracy and constituted the Catholic Church as the spiritual basis of modern society. They would not have it so, and the church going from reaction to reaction, fell into the arms of Jesuitism, and Jesuitism, going from exaggeration to exaggeration, imposed upon the church the Syllabus and Papal Infallibility. At last, however, he rejoiced to believe that a halt had been called in this backward march. The new Pontiff represented an aspiration for conciliation which Castelar insisted should be eagerly welcomed by European democracy. "Never," said Castelar, "did I know a moment less opportune for quarreling with the church than at present. The policy of the French Republic appeared to him not only incomprehensible but even alarming, for it sprang from a Jacobin feeling, and 'every Robespierre was the predecessor of a Napoleon.'" The French Radical party, he declared, by its treatment of the religious orders, had departed from the principles of liberty which were in accord with modern democracy, and they had embarked on a useless agitation resulting in violence certain to end in injuring a democracy which hitherto had, by its exquisite prudence, deserved the admiration and sympathy of the whole civilized world. In religious matters the nation must leave every one to enjoy absolute liberty. Castelar concluded this oration by the following invocation: "O God of Liberty, who proclaimedst the dogma of religious equality on the sublime night of the last supper, and annointedst it with thy divine blood on the tempestuous evening of Calvary, do not refuse thy assistance and thy Providence to our good work, which seeks to apply thy eternal gospel to human societies; thy divine word to human intellects, and to realize thy spiritual kingdom on earth by means of liberty, equality, and fraternity!"

PRUDENCE.

Prudence is the nucleus of active philosophy. It teaches the study of all things whatever that are of solid use and benefit. If children were taught to practice its principles from their earliest years, they would on arriving at the age of maturity, be more knowing and judicious than most men now usually are at seventy. Prudence is the active faculty of directing actions morally good to their immediate ends. This immediate end of prudence is happiness. Prudence may be likened to a calm and sedate matron, who, living in the world, respects every law, by the observance of which her condition may be acquainted with them, that she may keep them, and enjoy the benefits that result from their observance.

Talent, like beauty, to be pardonable, must be obscure.

Believe half the ill, and credit twice the good, said of your neighbor.

The power of kindness, like space, is boundless.

SERMON BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT, OF LAMONI, IOWA,
AT SAINTS' CHAPEL, LAMONI.
DECEMBER 3d, 1882.

I HAVE been suffering for several days from a severe cold which may trouble me some in speaking to-night. I hope, for this reason, in addition to many others, that you will, so far as practicable, give me your undivided attention.

If those who are in the house will listen carefully, and not be disturbed by those who may come in, you will be sure not to disturb me; but if you will, by looking back, allow your attention to be divided, and drawn off from the preaching, it is quite likely that I shall not preach, judging from the experience of the past.

We design offering a few thoughts and evidences to-night on the restoration of the gospel, as believed and taught by the Latter Day Saints. And as a scriptural basis for these thoughts and evidences, your attention is called to Matthew 24:14: "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness to all nations, and then shall the end come."

This is the language of the Savior. There are two things in the text that seem to demand our attention while treating upon this subject: First, the Gospel, and the Kingdom of God. What are they?

Evidently, we can never know to a certainty whether the Gospel has been restored to us or not; or we shall not be able to know when it is restored, unless we have some adequate conception of what the Gospel is; of what the kingdom of God is.

It would be useless to start out in search of anything, unless we were so far acquainted with that object that we would know when we had found the object of our search. And as we learn from the reading of the history of the dealings of God with his people in all past ages, that very much depends upon the manner in which people have treated the messages of truth sent unto them, it is important, very important, that we should be able to determine when, if there is a promise of the restoration of the Gospel, that promise is fulfilled unto us.

The second thing that demands our attention is the prophecy contained in the verse. The whole verse is a prediction. "And this Gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto the nations, and then shall the end come."

We believe, and think our belief is substantiated by evidence, that Jesus Christ himself was a preacher of the Gospel. In taking this view we cannot help striking, whether wilfully or not, at the belief that the first Gospel sermon was preached on the day of Pentecost. It seems strange to us that Bible believers, and those who look unto Christ, and the important declarations that are made of his mission and work, should put him outside of the Christian ministry, when indeed, as we believe, he is the greatest and most perfect Gospel minister that ever stood upon the earth.

In the fourth chapter of this book of Matthew, and the twenty-third verse, we have the following: "And Jesus went about all Galilee teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom; and healing all manner of sicknesses, and all manner of diseases among the people." In the ninth chapter of the same book, and the thirty-fifth verse, we have a similar statement: "And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the Gospel of the kingdom; healing every sickness, and every disease among the people."

Note this, that while he was engaged in preaching the Gospel, there were certain ministrations of power in connection with that important work. The sick were healed; people were delivered from the power of disease.

We are not, however, justified in coming to the conclusion from these scriptures, that all who were afflicted were healed; that all who were sick were made well; for if we take this position, we take it in opposition to the history itself. But we are to understand that there was no sicknesses, but what the power of God, through Christ, reached that disease; that there was nothing, but what God through him, in the Gospel, accomplished. These powers were manifested and enjoyed.

We have some significant declarations concerning the work of Christ, recorded in Deuteronomy, 18th chapter. These predictions were made, according to the common system of chronology, some 1400 years before the birth of Christ. "I will raise them up a prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth; and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him. And it shall come to pass that whosoever will not hearken unto my words which he shall speak in my name, I will require it of him."

We notice first here that God is going to raise up this prophet. It is not the work of man. "I will raise them up a prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee." We notice, in the second place, that God will not only authorize this individual to do this important work, but he will qualify him for his mission and work. "I will put words into his mouth." That is, I will give unto him the very message that he shall declare unto the inhabitants of the earth. And in the third place, we notice that this individual prophetically described, will be faithful in his mission and calling. "He will declare unto them all the words that I give unto him. He shall speak unto them all that I shall command him." And in the fourth place, and it is very important, too, we notice that God will hold the people directly responsible for the manner in which they treat that message, and it will affect them for eternity. Hence the message itself is of saving power. It must be the means of salvation unto the people. "It shall come to pass that he who will not hear the words of that prophet I will require it of him."

We believe these declarations apply to Jesus Christ. They were so applied by Peter when preaching to the Jews. He said: "Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you from among your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall speak unto you. And it shall come to pass that he that will not hearken unto the words of that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people."

We believe that God intended that Christ should make a full representation of the truth unto the children of men; that they need not look back to the old law so far as salvation was concerned. At that time the way of life through Christ would be fully represented unto the children of men. And you should notice how wonderfully the statement of the Apostle Paul, though made in different language, harmonises with this declaration. Paul says, when writing to the Thessalonian Saints: "You who are troubled, rest with him, when the Lord Jesus Christ shall be revealed from heaven with all the holy angels, in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God and obey not the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ."

And if you ask for an item of language from the history of the past to prove that God will completely fulfill these declarations of the word, we call your attention to the fact "That Jesus came to his own, and his own received him not; but unto as many as received him gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believed on his name."

But the Jews as a people, among whom his personal labors were bestowed, rejected him. They rejected the message that he presented unto them; and because of this rejection, dire calamities overtook them. The Savior wept over their city. His love did not forsake him because of their obstinacy. His love did not forsake him because they would not receive him as the Christ, the Son of God. His great heart of sympathy was moved, and he knew when they were doing violence to the greatest expression of God's love to man, that the consequences were inevitable; These dire calamities must come; not because God is filled with revenge, and desires to execute his vengeance upon the people; but because in the Gospel of Jesus Christ is contained the highest expression of God's wisdom and love to man; and it cannot therefore be set aside without the most dire consequences upon our part. Said he: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem; thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them that are sent unto thee; how often would I have gathered you as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, but ye would not."

Here you discover that the Saviour admits that the people act upon their agency; and we believe there is greater power in this agency than has generally been supposed; that there is power in this agency that will rise above everything else, no matter what our peculiar physical or mental systems may be. If we are possessed with the degree of intelligence God intended, this agency may work out our reformation to our everlasting welfare.

But he could not gather them, and bless and save them. Why? Not because he did not desire to accomplish this work; but because they would not.

He also predicted that their city should be compassed about with armies, and they should fall by the edge of the sword; that they should be led away captive among all nations; that Jerusalem should be trodden under the feet of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles should be fulfilled, thus intimating that there would be a change about that time.

In accordance with this prediction the Jews suffered. Their city was compassed about by the armies of the Romans; they fell by the edge of the sword, by pestilence, and famine. The destruction was very great, and their sufferings were very intense, and they were scattered, and their sufferings have been of long, long duration, in accordance with the predictions of the prophets. Here then is a partial fulfillment of that word which says: "It shall come to pass that he who will not hearken unto that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people."

When will it receive its complete fulfillment? The Scripture already quoted informs us that Jesus Christ shall come not as the humble babe of Bethlehem; not to be crucified; not to be buffeted of men; but he shall come the second time in power, invested with the power of judgment, in glory, "taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ."

We might suggest right here, that it would be unjust in God, that it would be contrary to his ordinary dealings with the human family, to thus execute vengeance upon a people for their disobedience to a message which he had not authoritatively sent unto them. Hence before this great dispensation takes place, the Gospel must be authoritatively presented unto the people, and those who are competent witnesses must go out in the love of God, and plainly declare the truths of the everlasting gospel, as recorded in the scriptures, as a witness unto the people.

As further evidence of the character of this gospel, we call your attention to the teachings of the word that it originated with God. Jesus said upon one occasion, when speaking to the Jews, "My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me." It was a question of origin that was raised at that time. They marveled at the wisdom manifested through the teachings of Christ. And they asked, "Whence, whence hath this man this wisdom?" Having never learned letters, having never been educated in the usual way, "whence hath he this wisdom?" And he verily said unto them, "the doctrine that I teach did not originate with me; but it originated with my father who is in heaven." He told the Jews all along, that the doctrine that he presented to them was binding upon them; not simply because he taught it, but because it came from God, and he was sent to bear witness, as the brother said, to bear testimony to the truth; and he presented evidence to them from their own standard of belief, and asked them to receive it.

It originated with God. What is the character of God? He is an infinite and perfect being. He possesses the attributes of love, power, wisdom, knowledge, mercy, impartiality, and so forth in their fullness, in their fullness. He saw the end from the beginning. He was perfectly well aware of the effects of the fall. He knows all about the character of sin, and what it will do for us. He knows what will redeem us from the power of sin, as no other one does know. The gospel originated with him, and he is unchangeable in his character. The Apostle James says: "Every good and perfect gift cometh down from above, from the father of lights, with whom there is no variableness nor shadow of turning." His character is one eternal round. He does not move to the right nor to the left, because his ways are perfect. And you will remember the prophet in speaking to the Israelites, as recorded in Malachi, I believe, uses this significant language: "I am the Lord, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed." Unto the posterity of Jacob, many great and precious promises have been made; but they were rebellious and wicked. They did many things displeasing in the sight of God; and when we go into sin, into that which the Lord has forbidden, you know we lose our faith. That is the reason Latter Day Saints become weak in the faith. We have had a curiosity to investigate many individual cases of this kind, where faith has been lost, and we have become confirmed in the statement just made, that in every case the fault is with the individual. It is unfaithfulness upon his part that causes the loss of faith.

Well, they became discouraged; they could not see how the promises of God would be fulfilled unto them; but in the scripture just quoted, the only evidence that God gives through his prophet, that he will fulfill these promises unto them, although all the nations of the earth should be destroyed, that he would preserve that people, all the faithful among the house of Israel, that they should receive according to the promises of the eternal God is, "I am the Lord; I change not." As much as to say; I have made the promises, and I cannot change! You may expect them to be literally fulfilled; for I am God and not man, and I am not subject to change.

The Gospel originated with him. And its purpose was not to benefit any particular people, living in any special age of the world, or in any particular part of the world. Its objects and purposes are the redemption of the human family, the redemption of man; hence, as already stated, it is the highest expression of God's wisdom, knowledge, and love to humanity, and adapted to all people in all ages of the world, and in all parts of the world.

We think then, that the unchangeableness of the plan of salvation is proven from the character of God. With him it originated alone. But the gospel not only originated with God, but we read that "Christ became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." The gospel is made efficacious unto us through the work and sacrifice of Christ; hence he is the "author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him."

What is the character of Christ? He, too, is one of the God-head. He was sent into the world to declare this gospel unto the people. A statement already urged in your hearing, teaches that he did declare it unto the people. Our attention is called in the New Testament Scriptures frequently to the fact that Christ was the hope of God's people in all previous ages; that they looked down through the stream of time, and expected that a Saviour would come; and that to those who became obedient to the gospel and believed on Christ, the atonement was an actual fact before his blood was shed; and because of their faith, and because that God had ordained that this work should be done, they received salvation through obedience to the same immutable plan of salvation through faith in Christ.

Paul then makes this assertion concerning Christ, "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, to-day, and forever," "the same yesterday, to-day, and forever."

We notice briefly the facts that result from the atonement of Jesus Christ. First, through Christ the Adamic sin is taken away; and our agency through Christ according to the plan of God, restores unto us all that was lost in the transgression of Adam. It is all regained through the work and sacrifice of Christ, and we are placed again upon the platform of agency to act for ourselves.

You remember John said when he beheld the Saviour, "Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world."

There is a sin that is common to the whole world, and that sin is the result of the transgression of Adam; and by a well established law of descent, we partake of the fallen nature of our foreparents, hence are foreigners and strangers to God; all under the necessity of obedience to God's law. We need not murmur or complain, or talk about the injustice of God so long as he has planned a law of adoption, and provided a way by which it should be preached unto us, and placed within our reach its privileges, that we might enjoy them in this life and that which is to come.

He was the Lamb of God that should take away the sin of the world, and through this important sacrifice was to be brought about the resurrection of the dead, without any condition of obedience on our part. We were not guilty of the actual sin of our father Adam, or of mother Eve; but as already remarked, we partake of their sinful condition, hence God in his justice and love, takes away this sin. "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive, but every man in his own order; Christ the first fruits; afterwards they that are Christ's at his coming."

When the angel spake to Joseph of the prospective son that was to be born (Christ), he said, "Thou shalt call his name Jesus, that is, Savior; for he shall save his people from their sins." Here we discover that Jesus is to save his people only from their sins. Who are his people? When he was thronged upon one occasion and was told that his mother and his brethren stood without, and desired to speak unto him, he stretched forth his hand in a significant manner towards his disciples and said, "Who is my mother, and who are my brethren? Whosoever doeth the will of my father which is in heaven, the same is my mother, my sister, and my brother."

Those who comply with the requirements of the gospel of Jesus Christ, are heirs of God, and joint heirs with Jesus Christ, to the inheritance of the father. And they, and they only will be saved from their individual sins. He will save, not the whole from their individual sins, but his people will he save from their sins. "He was made perfect, and became the author of eternal salvation unto them that obey him."

Of the foregoing two grand results which flow from the atonement of Christ one affects the whole world, so that everyone shall stand in judgment before God, and be rewarded or punished according to the degree of good or evil that he shall have done in his life; and his people will he fully delivered from their individual sins, and receive the kind of life offered unto them in the gospel of Jesus Christ.

We should expect from these expressions and statements, that the Apostles, direct ambassadors of Christ, would teach the people the immutable character of the plan of salvation, and such, indeed, is the case. We turn to the first chapter of Galatians, and we have the following statement of Paul, "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ, unto another gospel; which is not another, but there be some that trouble you and would pervert the gospel of Christ; but though we, or an angel from heaven, preach unto you any other gospel than that which we have preached unto you let him be accursed."

It occurs sometimes to our skeptical friends that the Apostle Paul, and Jesus Christ were very harsh, and could not stand any opposition, and that they pronounced the vengeance of God upon all who should think a little differently from what they thought, but when we take the view already expressed of the gospel, that it is the highest expression of God's love to man, not his wrath, but his love, then we can easily see, that those who become acquainted with the gospel and set it aside, reject light, and the inevitable condemnation of God must rest upon them. The consequences are serious losses to ourselves. God remains a God of love; and still when we deprive ourselves of that which we might obtain through obedience to God, of course it is the curse of God in this light resting upon us, because of our own wanderings and disobedience.

The Scripture not only teaches the unchangeability of the gospel, but there is another thought in connection with it worth presenting perhaps. "I marvel," said Paul, "that ye are so soon removed from Him that called you into the grace of Christ, unto another gospel." Now if putting away the gospel of Jesus Christ in its fulness, and receiving a perverted one in its stead, removed them from God and the grace of Christ; then we argue that obedience to the gospel of Jesus Christ will take us near to God, and place us in such a condition that the grace of Christ will be extended to us. We have heard a great deal said about being saved by faith through Christ, or by Christ, through faith; but here we discover that it is taken in connection with the obedience to the gospel. If having become obedient to that plan, putting away that plan removes us from the grace of Christ; then receiving it and obeying it, places us in a condition to receive the grace of Christ. What is that grace? The gospel originated with God. "God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believed on him should not perish, but have everlasting life." This preparation was made for the benefit of man. It was seen that he was in a sinful condition, and the love of God was manifested in the gospel, and this gospel itself is the grace of Christ; and it is more than intimated in the declaration already quoted; for Paul says, "I marvel ye are so soon removed from the grace of Christ unto another gospel." Another gospel which is not the grace of Christ.

The favor then, or grace, is the gospel of Jesus Christ.

In the second epistle of John and ninth verse, we have language which, if it means anything, if it is of any worth to any people living in any age of the world, is of benefit to God's people living in all ages of the world. And if it means anything, and is of any value to any people, it establishes the immutability of the gospel of Jesus Christ. John says: "Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ; he hath both the Father and the Son."

O, we need not fear dear Saints, we need not fear, if we only comply with the requirements of the word of the Lord. Why need we fear if we only live near to God; for the evidence of his word, and the evidence of his Spirit is that God the Father and Christ the Son, are on our side. What need have we to fear? And the condition upon which these great blessings are secured is abiding in the gospel of Jesus Christ. Now, John did not write to the saints in this way: "You primitive saints have been favored with special blessings. You have some of you beheld Jesus Christ the Saviour. You have lived in the days, and are living in the days of the Apostles, when special powers of God are manifested for special purposes; the evidences are so abundant and so great that you cannot reject them; you cannot. You must if you are honest with yourselves and God, believe that Christ stands as the Son of God; that he is indeed the anointed that was to come into the world; and unless you abide in the doctrine of Christ, you can have neither the Father nor the Son. But if you abide in the doctrine of Christ, you shall have both the Father and the Son." That is not the way in which John addressed them, making this language apply to the people in that age of the world alone, but John says "whosoever." That means everybody, in all ages of the world. "Whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ, hath not God."

It is objected, you know, that we teach an exclusive salvation, quite frequently. Did you ever notice, that when we quote some of these Scriptures the strength of their accusations arises, not from any attack that we make upon them, but from the Scriptures themselves? The war, then is between that which they virtually accept as the standard of evidence, and their own opinions and traditions; and not between them and us. "Whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ hath not God; he that abideth in the doctrine of Christ hath both the Father and the Son." This seems to us in harmony with the character of God. In harmony with the thought that the gospel is the highest expression of his love and wisdom to man.

The gospel consists of facts and principles to be believed; of ordinances to be obeyed; and of promises to be received. Those promises may be included in two classes. Those which are to be enjoyed by God's people in this life, the lesser ones; and those which will be enjoyed in the life to come, the greater ones.

The highest and best evidence that we can have of God's willingness and ability to fulfill all his great and precious promises, which he has made unto his people for eternity, is the fulfillment unto us of his promises in time; and I am so constituted mentally, speaking of our peculiar mental make up, that if I become convinced that God's promises fail here in this life, I have no confidence that he will fulfill them unto me in the life which is to come, none whatever. I would feel like openly renouncing the doctrine that it was not of God, not consistent. That it would not bear the light of investigation, and it would not do to trust it.

But we have had quite a great amount of evidence presented to us to-day, that God fulfills his promises to his people. And we not only have these living evidences before us in the testimonies of intelligent men and women, which would be accepted, we think, by any court of justice on the earth; but we have like testimonies recorded in the records that God's people have made of his dealings with them in all ages of the past. Here is a cloud of witnesses, and it is made perfect unto us by the direct evidence of his Spirit, fulfilling all his promises unto us; that God is true; that he will fulfill all the promises of his word, when we faithfully comply with the conditions of those promises.

The principles of the gospel as taught in the days of the apostles, are enumerated by Paul as recorded in Hebrews, sixth chapter. Paul had been writing these Hebrew Saints, who, it seems had failed to abide as fully as they should have done in the doctrine of Christ. They had failed at least to make that progress that it was their privilege to make in the gospel work. Paul says: "While for the time ye ought to be teachers, ye have become such as need to be taught again which be the first principles of the oracles of God." It was necessary that they should become acquainted again with the first principles of the oracles of God. And in the same connection, in the beginning of the next chapter, he enumerates these as faith, repentance, the doctrine of baptisms, the laying on of hands, the resurrection of the dead, and the doctrine of eternal judgment. Here are six consecutive principles, denominated by Paul "the doctrine of Christ."

I remember once in a little discussion with a minister, when I was affirming the laying on of hands, he was driven to that strait that he took the strange position that these were parts of the old law, and that the baptisms referred to were the washings of the Jews under the old law of sacrifices in the days of Moses. We simply arose and said unto the people, that the position was a very strange one to us, a very strange one indeed. This man says that the principles here enumerated by Paul are parts of the old law; but Paul says they are the principles of the doctrine of Christ. One of these principles is faith, Paul says. Is that a part of the old law? Our opponent had taken the position, and correctly, too, that this law was fulfilled in Christ. If it was then you are under no obligations to exercise faith in God, nor in Christ; and my opponent, being a minister of the gospel, of course does not preach faith. Repentance is another principle enumerated. A part of the old law fulfilled in Christ, and of course, he does not preach that. Another principle enumerated is that of the resurrection, and it is yet in the future, in the hands of God; and of course, he does not preach that, for it is a part of the old law, and fulfilled in Christ. And another is the doctrine of eternal judgment, and he says nothing about that in his gospel sermons to the people, because it is not gospel, but a part of the old law, and it was fulfilled in Christ. Will this gentleman please arise before this people and tell them what kind of a gospel he does preach?

As to the promises of the gospel, they are very precious in their character, and if God is what he is represented to be by his servants, and the gospel is what his servants have represented it to be unto us and unto the people, then the great design of the gospel is to benefit man. Hence our position is, and we think, in strict harmony with the teachings of the word, that its object is to develop all that is good, all that is pure, all that is God-like in us. Our position is that there is some good in every individual. We believe that man is depraved, but not totally depraved, but that Christ is the true light that lightens every man that cometh into the world. And that if we will give place for the gospel in our hearts, though that purity may be very small, it will begin to grow, it will develop. And the evil will be limited, and finally the good will prevail, and we shall be prepared for the society of God and his son Jesus Christ, and the angels and the redeemed of all ages past. That preparation will begin here. We will see the effects and the benefits here. We will be made better parents, better children, better citizens, better members of society; we will be Saints indeed.

I have no apology to make for failures upon the part of those who bear the name. I simply call attention to the great object and purpose of the gospel when obeyed by the people. And we think our position is in harmony with the word; in harmony with the teachings of the Spirit unto all the faithful among the people of God. One of the great promises that we were to enjoy in this life, that we are enjoying in this life, if obedient to the gospel, is the reception and the enjoyment of God's Holy Spirit.

In the New Testament Scriptures the question is propounded by individuals a number of times, What must I do to be saved. What must we do. It was answered without hesitation by those who were chosen and ordained ministers of the gospel by Jesus Christ. They told them what to do. And when they told them what to do, they also as the ministers of Christ, made certain promises unto them. For instance on the day of Pentecost, when the great multitude were there, you will remember that they saw and they heard the manifestations of God's power in the gifts and blessings of the gospel. But all this did not convince them. God had chosen a better way. "Faith should come by hearing, and hearing by the word of God. And how can they hear without a preacher, and how can they preach except they be sent." And the Apostle Peter stood up and preached to them from their own standard of authority, from the Old Testament Scriptures, that Jesus was the Christ, the Son of the living God. After a time they cried out, "Men and brethren, what shall we do," evidently, What shall we do to be saved? I think we have grounds for saying that this is the interrogation that they made. They had faith, they had faith in Christ as he had been declared unto them. The apostle did not say like Paul to the jailor, who was not acquainted with the mission of Jesus Christ, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." But these people having been made acquainted with Christ, his mission and work, Peter answered and said to those anxious enquirers: "Repent every one of you, and be baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost; for the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." Here was the precious promise of the Holy Spirit made unto them by the Apostle Peter.

Jesus shows us in his teachings, and so does the Apostle Paul, the blessings that shall result from the operation of this Spirit upon the body, or Church of Christ. Jesus said, "It shall guide you into all truth; it shall bring to your remembrance whatsoever I have said unto you. It shall show you things to come. It shall take of the things of the Father and the Son, (this is the sentiment), and show them unto you."

Now if the design of the Father is, that we shall together live with the Father and Son, it is necessary that we shall become acquainted with them before we go there, else we might feel strange when we should get there, and might not enjoy ourselves. You know we can not enjoy ourselves with strangers, especially some of us. We need to be well acquainted before we can receive any high degree of enjoyment in their presence. We must become acquainted with God the Father and Jesus Christ, else we can not enjoy the bliss that is promised when we get there to live with them. This Spirit comes down from God. It always speaks in accordance with the mind of God and Christ. It takes of the things of the Father and the Son and reveals them unto us.

Our capacity for the enjoyment of that Spirit, depends largely upon the degree of faith and diligence that we exercise in keeping the laws and commandments of God. And as we exercise this faith and diligence our capacity enlarges, it grows greater and greater, and we receive more and more of that Spirit. Hence we are taught of God through the Holy Spirit of God, and prepared to enjoy his glory and his presence, and the reward in its fulness, which he has promised unto us in the gospel of his dear Son.

The gifts and blessings to result from that Spirit, are pointed out by the Apostle Paul, many of them, in the twelfth chapter of first Corinthians. He speaks of faith, extraordinary faith, as a gift of the Spirit. Wisdom, extraordinary wisdom, as a gift of the Spirit; knowledge, extraordinary knowledge; we are all required to have knowledge, faith and wisdom and knowledge; but these are gifts of the Spirit. He speaks of prophecy, speaking in tongues and the interpretation; discerning of spirits, gifts of healing, all resulting from the operation of this Spirit upon the body. Now then if we are entitled to the promise of the Holy Spirit, of course we are entitled to the effects it produces upon the body when we receive it. If I should make a promise to my son of a farm for an inheritance, he would not necessarily understand that he was to receive that farm, but that all that it should produce in coming time should go to some one else. He would expect that the farm, and the crops, and products belonged to him for an everlasting inheritance.

So we receive what God has promised to us, the Holy Spirit, and all the gifts and blessings that result from the operation of that Spirit upon the body. Is not this in harmony with the teachings of Jesus Christ? He sent his ambassadors into the world, and said unto them as recorded by Mark: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; and he that believeth not shall be damned, and these signs shall follow them that believe. The promise, then, of the enjoyment of these signs, or gifts, is co-extensive with the promise of salvation. Just as far as one reaches the other extends. Where you find the limit of one, there you find the end of the other. "This gospel," our text says, "shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto the nations, and then shall the end come." The word this is an adjective, and one of that peculiar class whose officework is to point out a noun in a definite manner. Hence the word this here can be applied to no other than the gospel as it was taught in the days of Christ and the Apostles. No other construction can be put upon it according to the use of the English language. "This gospel of the kingdom," the one preached by Jesus Christ and the apostles, "shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto the nations and then shall the end come."

Just a few thoughts with regard to the kingdom of God and the relation of the gospel of Jesus Christ thereto. The gospel is called a law. James calls it the "perfect law of liberty." He says: "Whoso looketh into the perfect law of liberty, and continueth therein, he being not a forgetful hearer, but a doer of the work, this man shall be blessed in his deeds." And he writes the important statement to the primitive Saints: "So speak ye, and so do, as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty."

We have often thought that this would be a very good passage of Scripture to be seriously considered by all who claim to be ministers of Jesus Christ. "So speak ye, and so do, as they that shall be judged by the law of liberty." Speak in harmony with that law, without regard to what men have taught. If you are called to preach the gospel at all, you are called to preach it as it is in Christ, without regard to the opinions of men; but you are under obligations to God to discharge that duty, and you must preach it in its purity and its fullness.

If the gospel then is a law, a perfect law, it is the law of the kingdom of God; and when the law of any government or kingdom is preached to any people, the government or kingdom itself must be represented. To illustrate: If we should send ambassadors from the United States to the Old World to declare the superiority of the laws of the United States over all other governments of the earth, they would necessarily call the attention of the European nations to the form of our government, and the officers that are placed therein. They could not fully call their attention to the beauty and the superiority of our laws without discharging this important duty. So when the servants of God go out and declare unto the people the gospel of Jesus Christ, they also declare unto them the kingdom of God.

It is argued that the organization as it exists, results from obedience to the law, which is a perfect organization; and also that it is designed of God to be perpetuated, and was adapted to the wants of man in all ages of the world.

A man by the name of Phillip, filled with the Holy Ghost, chosen by the church and ordained by the apostles, went down to samaria to preach Christ unto them. And when the people there believed Phillip, preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women. He declared unto them the kingdom of God; and they by some means obtained a correct view of that kingdom, and had a desire to enter therein. Hence they were baptized, both men and women. "When the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John, who when they came prayed for them that they might receive the Holy Ghost; for as yet he had fallen upon none of them, only they were baptized in the name of Jesus Christ. Then laid they their hands upon them, and they received the Holy Ghost."

We read that "Paul entered into the synagogues, and declared unto them the kingdom of God." Now whenever this text is fulfilled; whenever this prophetic promise is fulfilled unto the people, the gospel and kingdom of God will be preached among the inhabitants of the earth. What are the peculiarities of the organization of that kingdom? Paul compares the kingdom of God to a house. Well, there are essential parts to a house. We look for instance at a frame house, and we have joists and rafters, and the roof, floors and so forth. The rafters could not say to the joists, We have no need of you; nor can the joists say to the rafters, We have no need of you. The roof could not say to the floors, We have no need of you; nor the floors to the roof, We have no need of you. There is a mutual dependence between the parts, and they are all necessary to the construction of a perfect building.

The kingdom of God is figuratively compared to the body of a man, the physical body. In this body there are certain members. We need our eyes with which to see, and our ears with which to hear. Our hands we need for a thousand useful purposes. Our feet we need with which to walk. Now, in the kingdom of God Paul teaches us there are certain members, placed therein by God himself, just as these members are placed in the physical body. Hence they are essential there.

Speaking of this body, the organization of the church, Paul writes as follows: "Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular. And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, and diversities of tongues." Our good friends have sometimes said to us as evidence that our teachings are false, that they have traveled among all the Churches nearly, and they have never witnessed the enjoyment of these gifts and blessings of which we speak. O yes, but does not this word say how God organized his church? Does it not tell us that he placed therein, first, apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healing, helps, governments, and diversities of tongues? It is necessary that his Church should be organized according to his mind and will; that the officers placed therein by divine appointment should exist, authorized of God, as they were in ancient days, to preach the gospel, and to edify the body of Christ; not because they are anything superior to anybody else, but because it is a provision of God, and must be respected in the organization of his Church.

"This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come." But when shall it be preached? That it was preached in the days of Christ and the apostles, we admit; but that their preaching was a fulfillment of this prophetic declaration, we deny. In the first part of this chapter from which our text has been selected (Matthew 24), we read that at the Mount Olivet, the disciples came to Jesus privately, and after Jesus had spoken to them about the destruction of the temple, "that not one stone should be left upon another," etc., they propounded certain questions to him, saying, "Master, tell us, when shall these things be," that is, when shall the temple, and the Jews, and the city of Jerusalem be destroyed, "And what shall be the sign of thy coming and of the end of the world?" The Saviour proceeds to answer these questions, although the order in which they are answered may be somewhat deficient in the common version, as believed by many leading men, as well as by Latter Day Saints, yet the questions are answered. In speaking of the signs that should precede his second coming, and the end of the world, he tells them there "shall be earthquakes in divers places." If we had time we could show from a statistical account that there has been a very significant fulfillment of this; that there has been an annual increase of earthquakes from 1,700 years before Christ until the present time. "That nations shall rise up against nations, and there shall be wars and rumors of wars. That there shall be destruction among the nations, the sea and the waves roaring, and men's hearts failing them for fear of what is coming upon the earth." The signs spoken of by our brother in a discourse at this stand were to be literally fulfilled, but we consider the greatest one is found in the text; and when taken in connection with those, the proof becomes irrefutable. It cannot be resisted. Because, when speaking of this very same end coming, the Saviour says, "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto the nations, and then shall the end come."

Now, we do not say we are living in the last days simply because there are a great many earthquakes. We do not say we are living in the last days because there is a depression, financial or otherwise, among the nations of the earth. Not because of any of these signs; but because of the wonderful connection, and the fulfillment of them all in connection with this preaching of the gospel of the kingdom. It was to be preached, then, in a dispensation just previous to the second advent of Christ and the end of the world. And if we can learn what is meant here by the end of world, we shall be better prepared to understand the subject. In the thirteenth chapter of Matthew, where there are a number of parables illustrative of the kingdom of God, we have some declarations which throw light upon this part of our subject. And as you are supposed to be conversant with these parables, and one of them is quite lengthy, we will read the interpretation: "He that soweth the good seed (He is giving the interpretation of the parable of the wheat and tares), is the Son of man; the field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are the children of the wicked one; the enemy that sowed them is the devil; the harvest is the end of the world; and the reapers are the angels. As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of this world. The Son of Man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that do offend, and them which do iniquity."

Now mark you, this work of building up the kingdom of God goes on in the world, and the harvest is the end of the world. And at the time of harvest these tares are to be burned; and the solemn thought is here presented, that the kingdom of God is found upon the earth with those in it who offend and do wickedly. It shows at least this much, that the kingdom of God is on the earth at that time when the Saviour shall come. And he will pluck out of his kingdom those things which offend, and which do iniquity. And they shall be cast out and suffer with the wicked.

The same thought is presented in the parable of the net and fish: "The kingdom of heaven is like unto a net that was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind, which when it was full, they drew to shore, and sat down and gathered the good into vessels, but cast the bad away. So shall it be at the end of the world; the angels shall come forth and sever the wicked from among the just." The end of the world is the destruction of those who are denominated by Christ "the wicked." If you ask me who the wicked are, I will not make the broad application to every individual outside of Christ, but I believe, in Bible phraseology it usually applies, first, to those who have accepted the gospel, and transgressed the laws of God afterwards. They are the wicked in a primary sense; second, to those who rejected light, rejected evidence, and did wickedly; failed wilfully to receive it, and did that which is not in accordance with the will of God. These are the ones to which I understand the phrase in the Bible, "the wicked," was applied.

There are other scriptures which speak of the restoration of the gospel, and the time when it shall be accomplished. We turn to Acts, third chapter, and we have a report of the preaching of Peter to the Jews. When he spake to those Jews, he said unto them, "Repent and be converted that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord." What does this mean? He spake to them as individuals, but he spake of the promises that were made to them as a nation and a people; and I believe as an individual that he referred here to the promise that should be realized by them in after time, with the understanding, that if they were to partake of these great promises they must individually, when the gospel was presented to them, repent and turn from all that was wrong, and accept the gospel of Jesus Christ. With this understanding, I say, Peter spake, that the time when they as a nation in a glorious sense should enjoy these blessings, was yet in the future. "When the times of refreshing shall come from the presence of the Father;" mark the connection, "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you, whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution spoken of by all the holy prophets since the world began." He does not say until the time of restitution, but he uses it in the plural, "until the times of restitution." From which we infer that this restoration, part of it will precede the coming, and part of it will follow after the coming of the Lord Jesus Christ. That he will come in the midst of these times of restitution spoken of by all the holy prophets since the world began.

Now, is it not a little curious that at that very time spoken of by Peter our friends tell us that God will not reveal anything to us? Is it not a little curious that mankind have allowed themselves to be so far deceived as to teach that at the very time when God says he will restore something unto them, that which has been foretold by prophets from the foundation of the world, that God will not directly reveal anything to his people in that day? That that time has past once and forever? In connection with this we might call your attention to a statement, we think, found in the fortieth chapter of Isaiah.

There the prophet speaks of the restoration of Jerusalem and the people. If you will take the trouble to read it you will discover that he did not speak of the time when Christ lived, when great calamities, great destruction befell that people, and the city was destroyed; but of a time when words of comfort and consolation should be spoken unto them. "Comfort ye, comfort ye my people, saith your God." And in connection with this restoration which was for the house of Israel, the nations of the earth were to become acquainted with the gospel of Jesus Christ. We read, "That the Lord God shall come, and his reward is with him, and his work is before him." His work shall precede him. The time of reward is when Christ shall come. That is the time of giving rewards unto his people; but his work shall precede him. It was necessary when Jesus came as the humble babe of Bethlehem, that John, a preacher of righteousness, one sent of God to declare the gospel of Jesus Christ, should precede him. And those who rejected the preaching and baptism of John, rejected the counsel of God unto their condemnation. He was sent of God. That was just previous to the time when Jesus should come in his humility; when he should suffer and die on the cross. How much more necessary then, that before he shall come in glory, before he shall come in power, taking vengeance on them that know not God and obey not the gospel of Jesus Christ, that the gospel should be authoritatively sent unto the people by command of God. And that his servants, authorized to declare it in its fulness, should go forth unto the inhabitants of the earth, and preach all its principles and promises.

In harmony with the promises that our text speaks of, we find another Scripture in book of Revelations, 14th chapter, 6th and 7th verses. You will remember John was banished to the isle of Patmos for the gospel's sake. In vision there he saw many things that were to transpire. In the beginning of the 4th chapter he says: "I heard a voice saying Come up hither, and I will show you things which must be hereafter." He saw in these visions the apostasy of the Church, the great departure from the faith. He saw also the restoration of the gospel. In this chapter referred to he says: "I saw another angel flying in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell upon the earth." Our text says;

"This gospel of the kingdom," and John says that he saw this angel with the "everlasting gospel to preach to them that dwell upon the earth." To how many? "To every nation, kindred, tongue and people." It was to be preached to them all. And Jesus said it is to be preached as a witness unto the nations of the earth before the end shall come. What striking harmony there is between these two declarations! The same good, old, unchangeable gospel, is to be declared unto the people before the end shall come.

Now a people, or the character of their faith, is known by an examination of their claims. The Latter Day Saints claim that the angel has come in fulfillment of this promise. That the gospel has been restored to the young man who first made this claim. At first he presents us with evidence that it is the same gospel, presents the same promises for time and eternity. The same power of the gospel loomed up gloriously before all those who gave place in their hearts for it. They are rejoicing in that power to-day. They are rejoicing in the fulness of that gospel to-day. And the ministers of this Church, those who have been authorized to represent the work abroad among the people and everywhere, are preaching the same gospel that was taught in the days of Christ and the apostles, and the sacred records of the Church, accepted as direct revelation, in their statements and instructions to the ministry of the Church, harmonize with the record of the gospel as found in the New Testament Scriptures. And in one of the most important revelations given to the Church it says, "That the Elders, Priests, Teachers and Deacons, shall teach the principles of my gospel, as found in the Bible, and Book of Mormon, in which is the fulness of the gospel." This they could not do unless harmony existed upon the gospel of Jesus Christ, in the Bible and the Book of Mormon. This does exist. And mark you, the record of the gospel in the Bible is acknowledged as good, and the officers of the Church are under the most solemn obligations to preach the gospel as recorded therein. They were to do it as they were moved and influenced by the Holy Ghost. They were to be helped by this Holy Spirit in this important work. That Spirit has been the strength of the work from the day in which it was first declared until the present time. Here we find in the preface to this book, a very strange statement unto us, and it is wonderful evidence of the divinity of this work in which we are engaged.

The Lord says that the message is restored, and that it shall go forth. And those whom he had chosen to proclaim these things unto the people shall not be stayed; for says he, "I the Lord God have commanded them."

There are those who are acquainted with the history of the church much better than I am. They know the great opposition urged against the church from its inception. They know the great opposition that was brought to bear against the work that was entrusted to a few individuals at first. And after a little while, the Devil not only moved those outside to oppose it, but iniquity crept into the ranks of the church, and they began to fall away from the faith. Many of our friends outside rejoiced, saying this great delusion has gone at last, once and forever. And finally they succeeded in killing not only some of the innocent saints, but they succeeded in killing the one who was at the head of the church. Two of the leading men of the church were taken out of the way, and others were removed from their places. It was supposed the delusion was gone forever. But notwithstanding all this opposition, the work has constantly moved. There never has been a time, perhaps, but what the gospel was declared by some of the faithful elders of the church; and the work of reorganizing commenced as early as that great heresy commenced to be taught publicly. As early as it began to be taught in the west, from the time of reorganizing to the present time, the gospel has gone forth among the people, and notwithstanding our numbers are small, we rejoice in the progress that the work has made, and in the prospect before us, if we are only faithful to God and keep his commandments.

But in this same prophecy the Lord says: "For I the Lord can not look upon sin with the least degree of allowance." While he assures us that he is well pleased with the church as an organization, and that it should go forth, "Bright as the sun, and fair as the moon, and terrible as an army with banners," yet he also informs us that he speaks of the church collectively, and not as individuals; for he will not justify that which is wrong, that which his word has condemned. Hence the necessity of care upon our part.

These prophetic declarations have been wonderfully fulfilled. And the work has been perpetuated, and is likely to be perpetuated. I may fall by the way, and fail to secure the benefits of the law at the end of the race; but the work will move on. Others may possibly fall by the way, but the work of God will not be stayed; for he has assured us in his prophetic word, that it will triumph to the honor and glory of his name, and the salvation of those who trust in him, and become obedient to the message of eternal truth as restored and commanded of God to be preached to the nations of the earth.

Miscellaneous.

MARRIED.

GIBSON—GHRIEST.—At Emerson, Iowa, at her father's house, August 27th, 1883, by Rev. Read, Mr. T. Dick Gibson and Miss Drudie Ghriest, the grand daughter of Bro. Isaac Sheen, daughter of Thomas and Sr. Sarah Ghriest.

WICKS—LEWIS.—At the residence of Bro. D. W. Kennedy, near Logan, Harrison Co., Iowa, on Tuesday, July 24th, 1883, by Elder Wm. C. Cadwell, Bro. Charles A. Wicks and Sr. Minnie A. Lewis, both of Lamoni, Iowa. The bride is a sister of Sr. Kennedy, and both bride and groom are well known at Lamoni, where they reside, and will merit and receive the hearty congratulations of their many friends on the consummation of this happy event.

DIED.

STAFFORD.—At Lewistown, Illinois, August 20th, 1883, little Sarah, infant daughter of Bro. T. F. and Sr. M. Stafford, aged 5 months and 24 days. Little Sarah has gone to her rest, only a few short months could she stay. She is now with kindred little ones, enjoying God's smiles. Amen.

T. F. S.

JOHNSON.—At Grant Township, Nodaway Co., Mo., July 19th, 1883, Sr. Ann Magrethea Johnson. After several years lingering illness of much suffering and pain, she passed away from this life. Her suffering and pain will long be remembered by all who knew her. She was born April 23d, 1804, at Allmen, Viborg, Denmark, baptized 1870, by Ole Madison. Confirmed by W. Woodhead. Funeral conducted by Jacob Nielson, Teacher of Platte Branch, at the grave yard, near Barnard. Elder George Walters made a few remarks, saying the departed sister had fulfilled a law that we all have to fulfill. That it was a consolation to relatives and friends, that she had rendered obedience to the first principles of the gospel. August 19th, 1883, funeral service by Elder Wm. Woodhead.

CHRISTEN CHRISTENSON.

EVANS.—At Holden, Missouri, September 1st, 1883, Sr. Mattie, wife of Bro. N. Evans, daughter of Bro. H. Scarcliff, in her 23d year. She united with the Church in 1878, lived a faithful member and quietly fell asleep in Jesus. A few hours before her death, she called to be administered to, in which she was greatly blest with the Spirit, in bearing testimony to the truth of the gospel of Christ. She also spoke to her husband to be faithful, and that he was called to preach the gospel. She also gave wise counsel and instruction to her father, mother, uncle and aunt, and under the Spirit of inspiration, spoke to her father, and made a request which he granted. She also gave instruction in regard to her funeral, and then quietly passed away to the realms of bliss. Her funeral was preached by Bro. F. C. Warnky, in the Christian Church, to a very large congregation. She leaves a husband and four children, (two of which are twins seven days old). Twenty-four carriages followed her remains to her grave. Thus passed away one of God's elect.

SEEKING FOR THE TRUTH.

NEARLY everywhere men engaged in religious pursuits and controversies make the avowal that they are only seeking the truth. These also state that they want truth, and only truth. That they will acknowledge, receive, and prize truth no matter who may advance it, or with whom it may be found. In the past many of this class have accepted the gospel as preached by the Saints, have obeyed it and are rejoicing in what they have thus received. They still state that they love truth and are willing to receive it, let it be presented from any source.

The same classes of men, both in and out of the church, express the opinion that the truth will hurt no one. Or if it does, it should not. Or if the truth does hurt, it ought to those who are thus hurt by it. Or, in other words, if they cannot bear the truth, they ought to be hurt by it.

There are truths that are absolute. There are also truths that are relative. Absolute truth is that part of any subject, or thing, that is seen or perceived without the intervention of anything to prevent or distort the vision. Relative truth is that which is partially seen or perceived. Relative truth may be exaggerated or diminished according to the position of the beholder and the conditions surrounding him, whether they are conducive to correct observation or opposed to it.

In no other field is there a greater opportunity for misjudging the truth than in that of religious controversy, so wide and so varied are the theories advanced as true. In no one of these theories is there any better chance for mistakes than in the latter day work; and in none of them is there so large a percentage of absolute truth.

Among the Saints it is not an uncommon thing to hear the expression, "Let God be true though every man be found a liar." They "want the truth." To them do we commend the axiom, "Be patient."

The truth of the past, whatever it may be, in regard to the origin, growth, and extension of the great evil that has fallen upon the work, and the martyr's connection with that evil, can not hurt any one well grounded in the faith of Jesus Christ. The gospel of life is not changed by the bad acts of disciples now, any more than it was in Christ's day by the treachery and judgment of Judas. The truth will survive and live, no matter who may be found sinners. So it will if some men now clamorous in accusation be found liars.

THE talisman used by Jesus in his greatest necessities was not his extraordinary power as the Son of God. This he used when necessary to the good of mankind, but in his personal need he used a formula similar to the traditions of his race, exhibited in their phylacteries, worn on wrist and brow. He bore in mind the law, and "It is written" was his effectual answer against temptation. This answer was in itself a reminder and a safeguard. By it the cogent powers of the Father's word were brought to his own mind, and the dread responsibility resting upon all conscious intelligences by reason of that word, and the consequences of disobedience sure to follow were placed with vivid distinctness before the tempter.

"If thou wilt worship me," was Satan's cunning stratagem. "No," said Jesus, "It is written; thou shalt have no other gods before him, and him only shalt thou serve." "Command these stones to be made bread." This was a direct appeal to the faint and weary flesh. No. "It is written; man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God." This was the acknowledgment of a true heart, a faithful spirit. It was enough. "Cast thyself down, as it is written, he shall give his angels charge concerning thee, lest at any time thou strike thy foot against a stone."

This was a skillful turning of Jesus' tactics against himself. Again the answer, No. "It is also written," "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God."

In each of these conditions the appeal was made to the human weakness of Jesus. In each of them the answer was a resort to the word that lives, the written word. How much misery of mind, sorrow of heart, and anguish of spirit might have been saved to the Saints, if they had sturdily refuted the enemy that "came in like a flood" with the Savior's talismanic, "It is written." It is not now too late to make use of it in the retaining of the love of Christ. Let the Saints inform themselves of the word, and then "It is written" will be their safety.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. J. J. Huntley wrote from North Cutter, Kansas, September 13th, that he was still trying to do what he could for the cause. Bro. John Bemer had been with them, and preached a number of excellent sermons.

Bro. W. H. Kelley, was in charge at Kirtland, September 13th, and expected to remain there until relieved by some one else coming. He reports Bro. C. Scott in Michigan, Bro. E. L. Kelley east, and everything as going on well.

Sr. S. A. Rose wrote from Graysville, O., September 12th, exhorting the Saints to steadfastness and diligence in the discharge of all duties laid upon them as the children of God. She rejoices in the work, and the good things she finds in the HERALD, it being her only preacher, and wishes she could do much more than she has opportunity to do for the advancement of the work.

Bro. T. W. Smith expects to start for his field of labor, the 24th or 25th inst. He will be at Jeffersonville, Ill., from 1st to 15th of October. After that at Scottsville, Ind., until further notice.

In Editorial Items of September 15th HERALD, it was stated that the brethren of the Pittsburg District have a church in Benwood, etc. The facts are, as we learn by card from Bro. G. T. Griffiths, that the brethren of the District referred to, have contributed about $75 to the building of the Benwood church, which cost altogether about $1,200.

THE Philadelphia Press, of August 20th, sent us by the kindness of some one unknown, thus fairly and frankly states the positions of the Reorganization and the Polygamie church in Utah, and the spiritual condition and history of the branches of both organizations in Philadelphia:

LATTER DAY SAINTS.

Both branches of the Mormon Church hold services through the hot Sundays of August, with a vigor and fervor that might put some of the orthodox congregations to the blush. At the hall on the corner of Ninth and Callowhill, where the meetings of the Reorganized Branch of the Church are held, Elder Small occupied his usual place in the pulpit yesterday, and addressed the congregation with a few plain words as to their duties to the church and the society in which they were placed. He was feeling unwell and made impressive, informal talk take the place of a more elaborate sermon. After the services many of the older members gathered in a group for the study of the scriptures, and talked back and forth about the meanings of the different verses read. The Mormon Church, it could be seen, was to them the fulfillment of prophecies and the Savior's words.

This congregation which, with its mission branch, 2244 Ridge Avenue, represents the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints in this vicinity, was formed about the time that thinking men of the Mormon Church began to break away from the polygamie innovations, and it has continued worshipping, week by week, in the same hall ever since. The membership has never been large, nor has its growth been rapid, and the moving away of members and their families has almost balanced its annual accessions by annual losses. At present about fifty-nine members are enrolled on the membership books. Elder William Small presides over the congregation, assisted by a Priest, a Teacher and a Deacon. Joseph A. Stewart is Elder of the district. The government of the church and of the congregation is patterned after that of the New Testament Church. Joseph Smith, Jr., is president and the temporal head of the organization, and next to him comes the Council of Twelve, which represents directly the twelve apostles. The elders or heads of the congregations are gathered in groups of seventy, who meet somewhat after the form of presbyteries or conferences, and there is a territorial division into districts, over which an elder presides. The belief of the church is in the literal teachings of Christ and his apostles, as set forth in the New Testament and in the revelations of the Book of Mormon, made through Joseph Smith, as a priest of the order of Melchisedec. Faith, repentance, baptism by immersion, laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, resurrection of the body and eternal judgment, rewarding good and punishing evil, are prime articles in the creed. Polygamie is forbidden, both on the authority of the New Testament and the Book of Mormon. Orthodox people, in the opinion of Mormons, are condemned in the same manner as the Jews in the time of Christ. They live in darkness, though the light is near them. The heaven of the Mormons will be on this earth, which is to be renewed and purified, and hell will be banishment from the sight of God, instead of the Orthodox lake of fire and brimstone.

The polygamie branch of the church, whose congregation here meet in Caledonian Hall, have substantially the same belief as the Reorganized congregations, but in addition they accept the polygamie teachings of Brigham Young. Their mission, however, is to make proselytes and send them to Utah, while the Reorganized Church merely adds its converts to its membership anywhere. Polygamie is not practiced here, at least not in such a way as to bring it to public notice, and when Brigham Young, Jr., was in the city, some eight years ago, with a couple of Mrs. Youngs, he found the sentiment so decidedly against him that he cut his stay very short. The local elder of the polygamie branch of the church is Samuel Harrison, who is occasionally assisted by traveling missionaries. Neither branch of the church pays salaries to its elders, and even Joseph Smith himself had to provide for his own and his family's support.

FROM the Llanelly and County Guardian, published in South Wales, sent to Bro. H. A. Stebbins by Bro. Thomas Williams, we clip the following account of the sad death of Elder Benjamin Thomas, over seventy-one years of age:

After much agitation, the Great Western Railway Company a couple of years ago erected a footbridge over the crossing near the Llanelly Railway Station. But, rather than climb the steep ascent, scores daily prefer to watch and wait for the gaits below to open, and pass over the level crossing, as they used to do before the existence of the bridge. This custom, on Friday last, resulted in the death of an old man, Benjamin Thomas by name, who lived on the Dolau. He had been to town and was returning home shortly after eight o'clock. When he reached the crossing a goods train was shunting backwards and forwards. For over ten minutes he waited for the gates to open. The train was seen to pass through in the direction of the station, and after a few seconds the gates flew open, closing the line against the train. Several people from both sides, the deceased amongst them, were proceeding across when a truck came dashing through, driving the gates into their former position. The pedestrians at once hurried back. Thomas, however, seems to have gone too far to retrace his steps, and the gates closed upon him, forming a veritable trap. He was seen upon the rails under the wheels of the wagon, and when picked up, his head was found almost severed from his body.

MUST THE OLD TESTAMENT GO?

This is the title of a small volume of about 120 pages, by the Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, B. D., of Brooklyn, N. Y. The author first considers the extent of Biblical inspiration under the two questions: Is any Scripture inspired which does not inspire me? and, Is there any Scripture that does not inspire some minds? In answering the first question he shows that the theory that the inspiration of Scripture is to be judged by its immediate effect upon the reader reduces the Bible to mere shifting sand, inasmuch as there is an endless diversity in the experiences of different minds as to the impressions which they receive from different portions of Scripture. Under the second question he shows that some minds are favorably impressed by every portion of Scripture, and that, judging by such a standard, all Scripture is inspired. He then proceeds to establish the position that Christ recognizes the entire Old Testament as inspired. And in this connection he discusses the question, Did Ezra deceive Christ?—maintaining that if Ezra was the author of the so-called Mosaic ritual and the priest's code of the Pentateuch, Jesus must have been misled on this subject, and was therefore unworthy of confidence as a religious teacher. He further inquires, Will the new theories about the Old Testament bear the tests of logic? Did Christ abrogate the Old Testament laws? What was the teaching of Christ in regard to the Old Testament prophecies and imprecatory psalms? And, Are God's tenderness and man's immortality revealed in the Old Testament? Under these heads the author seems to show that the New Testament is indissolubly bound to the Old Testament, and that he who discards the Old must in consistency reject the New.

As a whole, this work of Dr. Crafts is well wrought out. He is evidently a scholarly and careful writer, and he deals telling blows against the more current phases of "the higher criticism." It will be much easier to sneer at his arguments than to answer them.

(Must the Old Testament Go? or, The Relation of the Old Testament to the life of today. By the Rev. Wilbur F. Crafts, B. D. Boston: James H. Earle. 40 cents.)

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Who are members of a branch council? Only the special officers of the branch or all the priesthood in the branch?

Ans.—Branch officers only. All officers of the Church may become members of branch council by courtesy; and may be at any time invited by the branch officers to take part in counsel. Branch business meetings are open to all members; but we presume, business meetings were not referred to in the question.

Q.—Ought Latter Day Saints to engage in politics?

A.—One of the injunctions found in the Church Articles is, "Ye shall seek to put good men in office," "and uphold that law of the land that is constitutional." These two important objects can not be attained without an intelligent conception of what the duties of a citizen of the country are; and some knowledge of and decided opinions upon the policy best to be pursued in the state for the well being of the citizens of it. All this can be done without engaging in politics in the sense of mixing oneself in the corrupt whirlpool of political jobbery and trickery, a thing no really honest man can do without losing a part of his own self-respect and endangering his reputation with the best and purest of society. Every citizen ought to have some conception of what he deems the best policy. This he must gain by reading and by study, aided by whatever he may gain by intuition and revelation as to what is right and what wrong. If it is intended to ask, should Latter Day Saints engage in the unseemly scramble for office and spoils, so frequently indulged in in the political strifes of the country, we say at once, No, keep out of them. If it is intended to ask, whether a man should serve his fellows in official capacity, if properly solicited and properly chosen, we say, Yes. Honest and sober representatives of the people and their interests are what are now needed.

THE following statistics we commend to the careful consideration of all who oppose Prohibition. If Prohibition destroys sin, the devil's delight, who that is on the side of righteousness, God's delight, can consistently oppose it.

The statistics of Edwards county, Illinois, should be a weapon of defense with the temperance reformers. In twenty-five years no liquor seller has been allowed to locate upon its soil, and it is asserted that during that time only one criminal has been sent to the Penitentiary from that county. This is a banner of light for the cause.

Correspondence.

PROSPECT LAKE, Michigan,
September 3d, 1883.

Brother Joseph:—Since my last writing I have labored in Lake and Osceola counties, this state, beginning with a grove meeting held on Bro. Cone's place, six miles south and east of Nirvana. This meeting was considered a success. Brethren Cleveland, Wheaton, Joseph and Saleda Shipley assisted in making it interesting. I was pleased to meet many Saints here whom I had formerly known in Canada, and highly gratified to note the decided improvement in their temporal condition. The part of the country in which they live is new, but seems well adapted to general farming purposes, and offers exceptional opportunities to poor but industrious people for securing homes. Land can be bought for a dollar per acre and upwards, mostly upwards, according to quality and advantages. On account of the numerous lumber camps and mills for the manufacture of lumber and shingles, there is a ready and profitable market for the large crops of potatoes and other vegetables raised, and the farmer finds abundance of remunerative employment during the intervals of home work. There is an abundance of good, clear, running water, rendering it well adapted to dairying purposes.

On the 12th of August I had the pleasure of being with Bro. Columbus Scott, at a grove meeting at Clear Lake, Indiana. The attendance was large, over one hundred and twenty buggies and wagons having been counted on the grounds. The wind blowing so high as to make it disagreeable for out-door preaching, the landlords of both hotels cordially offered the use of their ball-rooms. The offer of one was accepted for the forenoon, and the other for the afternoon meeting. The effort of Bro. Scott in the afternoon was well received and productive of much good. He succeeded admirably in showing the distinction between genuine Mormonism, and that practiced in the Salt Land. An effort will be made to keep up regular appointments at the Lake, it being quite a pleasure resort, and multitudes are reached in that way that could be in no other.

Yours in gospel bonds,
DUNCAN CAMPBELL.

PECATONICA, Winnebago Co., Ill.,
September 15th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Since I wrote you last, I have been laboring in McHenry county, in this state, and on Wednesday last had the pleasure of again troubling the waters, initiating four precious souls into the sheep fold. The event took place five miles north of Belvidere, on the North Western Railroad. They are all members of one family, named Marshall. The singular part of this affair is, that a married daughter of this same family attended our meetings ten years ago in London, England, and being then a member of the Brighamite Church, she became convinced of her error, and was about to be baptized; but concluded first to visit her parents, then living a few miles east of London, who were also members of the church in the West. I predicted that her visit home would result in preventing her from then joining the Church, which proved true; but she was subsequently baptized by Bro. Bradshaw, of London, and now resides near her parents in this country. Her name is Butcher. Now it falls to my lot to baptize the same parents who prevented me from baptizing the daughter in England, together with two of the family, a son and daughter, (both adults). "God moves in a mysterious way," to bring the honest into his true fold. Bro. David Brand of Marengo, who did much to bring them to the fold, was with me, and assisted in confirming them.

I am well, and feel like working. I shall hold forth at this place to-morrow. Will Bro. Thos. Bradshaw please send Sr. Butcher's certificate of removal to me, Box 596, Sandwich, DeKalk Co., Illinois, and oblige.

Your brother in bonds,
JOHN S. PATTERSON.

KIRKSVILLE, Missouri,
September 12th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—I do so rejoice to read your letters from different workers, who are out in the field, reaping the great harvest. Praise God for untiring and faithful workers, who do not get discouraged, though the devil with the world may hurl sneers of reproach, aimed at the heart. But bless God they miss their aim, and they fall at our feet. Why? Because we have the helmet of salvation, and have our feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, and therefore we are able to overcome any and every tempter that comes. I do so love this way. I am working for the Master with all my might and main. Am walking in the light, and Jesus is leading me by his hand. The Lord keep all of his children in perfect peace, and help them work.

Yours,
S. MARTIN CHASE.

LA FAYETTE, Contra Costa Co. Cal.,
September 8th, 1883.

Brother Joseph:—I feel it a great pleasure to be able to add my testimony in this glorious "Latter Day Work." Over five months have gone by since God by his Holy Spirit showed me the vanities of the world; and when my heart realized the unprofitableness of a life spent at its shrine, then the light of truth dawned upon me, revealing my nature, and showing me my true condition here.

I will give briefly my experience, to show how merciful God is. I am young, and my heart has ever been filled with gilded dreams of happiness. Now and then some rude shock would disturb for a little season, but still I would dream on. The greatest disturbance of my life, I felt, was the inclination of my parents toward the "Mormon" Church. I felt that no greater stigma could rest upon our fair name, and should it become known, my hopes of favor in the eyes of the world would be forever ruined. So I used every influence to discourage them; but my zeal, however, was poorly rewarded, for they would be "Mormons" in heart still. For the last few years I have felt somewhat relieved, for they have been much occupied with worldly affairs, and the subject of "religion" has been nearly a silent one. I had formed no religious ideas, though I had heard many great swelling words from various pulpits.

Near the close of the last year, I was making preparations to visit a young lady friend, and was quite joyous in expectation of the fine time that I should have. But in the midst of my frivolity came a still small voice, saying, "vanity, vanity;" and over my mind came a gloom, which I could not throw off. Then I realized for the first time the fearful condition of the world; the suffering of humanity; the vanity of earthly pleasure; and my own frailty. The world with all its charms was changed for me into a dark, hopeless prison, where death was my certain goal.

From day to day I became more and more hopeless. Death seemed ready for me on every turn, and I passed my time in fear and trembling. My folks became alarmed, and tried to arouse me from my condition, but to no avail. I could give no reasons. My health was perfectly good, and it was all a mystery to me as well as to them. I grew worse for over a month, when one evening, at the earnest protest of my mother, I made a last effort to throw off the gloom that oppressed me. I got my sewing and was sitting with the family, when a sensation so strange came over me, that my body and soul seemed to be separated. They did everything to arouse and restore me. After a while I commenced to shake in a most fearful manner, and kept it up for about ten minutes. I went about as one in a dream, until one night shortly after, a voice in my dream said, "Read Proverbs, and you will learn wisdom and be comforted." I obeyed that voice, and I found that "the fear of God is the beginning of wisdom." And with the fear of God came the love for his Son, the Blessed Sa-rior. Such a light and joy as flooded my soul, words cannot express.

I desired to obey his commands, and do his will; so I humbly petitioned him to guide me into the way of light, and if his church was upon the earth to lead me to, it. Then my heart was filled with love for all the Latter Day Saints in the world. I opened some books with reverence and read the "History of Joseph, the Prophet," and Book of Mormon, with full faith and a believing heart. In a short time I went with a rejoicing heart into the waters of baptism, and was confirmed into the Church of Jesus Christ. My mother, who has been waiting many years for the stumbling-blocks to be removed, went gladly with me. My father was baptized a good many years ago, by Bro. Blair when he was out here.

We are now very happy in the oneness of the faith. I rejoice daily that God has shown me this glorious light, and has blessed me with such faith, that never a doubt has entered my heart since I obeyed.

Yours in the hopes of eternal joy,
MINNIE JULIAN.

MANCHESTER, England,
August 31st, 1883.

President Joseph Smith, Dear Brother:—I have so far as my circumstances would permit, been actively engaged in the ministry during the past spring and summer, and have not lacked for openings and opportunities to make known the message of God to this generation. I have found many willing to hear and constrained to confess that our doctrine is in strict accord with the teachings and precepts of the gospel, as taught by our Lord, and his Apostles, according to New Testamental authority. Some have gone further than this, for they have come forward and gladly received and obeyed the truth.

As stated in my letter at the opening of the present year, the official brethren, both in branch and district, have, with few exceptions, proven themselves equal to the occasion, and have manifested a praiseworthy disposition in the prosecution of the work committed to our charge. Especially has this been so in the case of the brethren of Wigan, Sheffield, and Farnworth branches. I might add that the sisters generally have not been one whit behind the brethren in endeavoring to hold the gospel banner unfurled before the people. Elder John Austin, the president of the Sheffield branch, writes very encouragingly of the interest manifested by those outside of the kingdom in that place, and speaks with unqualified praise of the efforts of the brethren and sisters in that part of the vineyard. Elder Henry Greenwood, the president of the Manchester Branch, is unremitting in his efforts to strengthen and build up the Saints under his charge; and besides this he is ever ready to sacrifice ease and time in assisting in the work of the district whenever called upon.

The Farnworth Branch is at present under the temporary charge of Elder C. A. Hassall, a worthy man, with a worthy lieutenant in the person of Priest Joseph Ramsey, a man whom I believe to be of unswerving integrity, and an able minister of the gospel of Jesus. These brethren, with the assistance of the sisters and brethren of the branch, are doing a good work in the neighborhood of Bolton and Farnworth, and are instrumental in the gathering of some few into the fold, such as I trust shall be eternally saved.

The Wigan branch is under the presidency of Elder James Spayo, a humble, yet true and faithful servant of Christ. He is ably and courageously assisted by the brethren and sisters, all of whom are alive in the work of the Church, and are hourly making efforts for its welfare that are beyond all praise that I may accord them. They are indeed doing nobly for the cause. Though but few in numbers, they have recently opened a large meeting room capable of seating three hundred people. They have purchased seats and furniture for the same, and have done an amount of labor in connection therewith that will be to their everlasting credit. Indeed they seem to have been emulating the example of the brethren and sisters who built the Kirtland Temple in the days of "auld lang syne." I have been with them upon several occasions of late, and have enjoyed myself very much in their society. In fact I have felt "strengthened, helped by Spirit's power," in seeing them so humble, so mild, so teachable, and so zealously engaged in their labor of love. Who could doubt the ultimate triumph of the gospel, when it creates such love, such righteousness in the hearts of these poor men and women of Wigan—poor did I say, I mistake; they are not poor, for I have heard them testify, with tear-stained faces, that they had found in the gospel of Christ riches beyond all price—riches in comparison with which all temporalities fade into insignificance, and are but as the fleeting thought, here for the moment and then gone forever; while the riches the gospel gives shall remain forever. Truly, it is said, "A man's riches consist not in the multiplicity of his possessions, but in the fewness of his wants," and when a man or woman has the gospel of Christ and truly appreciates it, his or her wants are few indeed.

So far as my own labors are concerned, I may say that, in company with the district secretary, Elder James Baty, also Bro. Wm. Armstrong, Jr., son of Elder Armstrong, of the Manchester Branch, I have labored to the best of my ability, and it has indeed been a labor of love. I have, with the brethren named, preached in the open air and in the Saints' meeting rooms, many times during the spring and summer, administering the bread of life to good sized congregations two or three times on each Sabbath. Generally speaking, have met with a courteous reception from all sides. During the spring I attended a meeting at Wigan, held in the Miners' Hall, under the auspices of the "Free Thought Association," to hear "Mormonism" denounced. I heard all the old hash, from Solomon Spaulding to Ann Eliza, and at the close asked permission to reply, which was cheerfully accorded; and at the close I was invited to address them at some future time on the "Book of Mormon and its History," an invitation which I need hardly say was eagerly accepted. I addressed them accordingly, and had a large hearing, and at the close was accorded a unanimous vote of thanks, coupled with a statement by the gentleman who seconded it, that if ever he became a Christian he would be a Latter Day Saint, such as was represented by the Church the doctrines of which had been placed before them that evening. I have since received another invitation from the same society to address them upon the doctrines of our church, which invitation I shall avail myself of as soon as circumstances will permit. Some two or three weeks ago I received a challenge from a gentleman residing at Wigan (a preacher) to discuss the proposition: "Was Joseph Smith an Impositor;" he to affirm; I to deny. The challenge was accepted, arrangements made, and the discussion held, resulting in the utter discomfiture of the affirmer, and joy and delight of the brethren and sisters; for they had been told that their representative would be all but annihilated, and leave the meeting in shame.

I have been informed by the brethren that one of those baptized at Bolton within the last week or two, testifies that he was directed by a dream to the place where the gospel was being preached by the brethren; viz., on the steps of the town-hall at Bolton. A sister recently baptized at the same place also testifies, that in coming out of the waters of baptism she left behind her a disease of eight years' standing, pronounced by the doctors to be incurable. Thus is the Lord working through his servants, confirming the word with signs following the believers.

It may be of interest to some to know that we have organized the "Manchester District Latter Day Saints' Temperance Society," composed of members of the aforesaid branches, pledging ourselves that, with divine assistance, we will "abstain from all intoxicating liquors as beverages, and discountenance all the causes and practices of intemperance." Many of us have adopted the wearing of the blue ribbon, not as a mark of peculiarity, but to keep us in remembrance of the commandments of the Lord, according to his word, Numbers, 15: 38, 39. In advocating this matter I was much pleased to find that the brethren of one of the branches in this district were, and had been for some time, total abstainers, and consequently fully prepared to advocate and sustain the presidency of the district in every effort put forth in this direction; and though we may not all fully keep the "Word of Wisdom," as given to the Church in this dispensation, yet we are moving in the right direction, and hope with the divine blessing to yet fully overcome.

On Tuesday last I was in Liverpool, assisting in the embarkation of my youngest brother, who has been over here for some months as a missionary in the interests of the Utah Church, and was about returning to his home in Utah; and while so engaged I had the pleasure of being introduced to several of the elders of that body, all of whom, with but one exception met me in the most courteous manner, and conversed freely upon the differences between the Utah Church and ourselves. One of them, "Elder Evans," late president of the Sheffield Conference, said I was the first elder of the Reorganized Church that he had met with, and wished to ask me one or two questions in regard to our position and our feelings toward themselves. He seemed to be under the impression that there was a bitter hatred existing on the part of our people against them. This I assured him was not the case, except with people of extreme views, and no doubt such people were to be found upon either side; and when such meet together there is sure to be a collision. I pointed out to him that we had no quarrel with the Utah people; but so far as polygamy was concerned, we did strive to define our position in regard to the matter so that we might not be confounded with them. He also touched upon the question of authority. I endeavored to define our position in regard to the same, with the intimation that whenever they deemed it desirable we should always be upon hand to defend our views upon this and every other question wherein we differed from them; but personally I deprecated, and I believed that the President of our Church also deprecated any and every attack made upon them except conducted upon the lines of courteous and true gentlemanly deportment. We parted upon the best of terms, and without any ill feeling one towards the other, he having conducted himself throughout the whole conversation with gentlemanly feeling and breeding. I conversed with several others of the elders, compared our differences, and agreed to differ, each hoping that we should see eye to eye, and be found working shoulder to shoulder, for the advancement of the gospel, and the building up of the waste places of Zion. Personally I felt pleased and gratified with our interchange of views; for although they were apparently immovable on the main points, yet I found them prepared to concede many things in matters of detail, and to me these signs are hopeful, and I could say freely in my parting with them, God bless you, brethren; and may he speedily bring us together in the full knowledge of his truth. I was glad to hear from one of them who has been laboring in the London Conference that he had had the pleasure of conversing with the president of one of the London branches of our Church (Whitechapel, I think he said), and his wife, and spoke of them in terms of praise.

I also conversed with one of the elders released from the Welsh (Utah) Mission. He had been in converse with Elder Gibbs, president of the Welsh Mission in the interest of the Reorganized Church. He spoke of him favorably, although he thought Elder Gibbs accentuated a little too much on the question of polygamy.

I mention these matters to show that a change for the better in this direction has taken place with at least some of the members of the Utah Church, and I should like the brethren and sisters of the church of which I am a member not to be one whit behind in manifesting a spirit of kindness and conciliation in our intercourse with them. I do not mean that we should endorse any of those doctrines by which they are distinguished from us. Neither would I have any of us forget that these people, or many of them, are sincere in their profession of faith, quite as sincere as we are, and many of them have made great sacrifices, and are making great sacrifices for the same, and we are bound to concede to them the right to believe as they please, even though it may be wrong, for they, and not us, will have to abide the consequences. "A soft answer turneth away wrath, but grievous words stir up anger. The tongue of the wise useth knowledge aright, but the mouth of fools poureth out foolishness."

With admiration and esteem, I subscribe myself, your humble co-worker in the gospel of Christ,

JOSEPH DEWSNUP,

President of Manchester Dist., English Mission.

ANGUS, Boone Co., Iowa,

September 17th, 1883.

Brother Joseph:—This is a new mining town, and has now a population of something like 2,500 inhabitants. There are something like twelve saloons, and only one church in town, which is owned by Swedes. When I came here there were no Saints to be found in the place. I came here about the 11th day of May last. I commenced to preach on the 17th of June, in a school-house about a mile west of town, and then tried another, a mile east of town. But I have given them up for lack of interest. Prejudice runs high, but there are a few who are now investigating. I had the pleasure of baptizing one yesterday, and another, a lady seventy-two years of age, has given her name for baptism, whom I expect to baptize next Sunday. There are some more very near the kingdom.

Close to where I am living, they are building a Union Church and school-house, to which I and Bro. Bentham have contributed our mite, which I think will be completed about the middle of October, when we hope to hold forth the doctrine of Christ within its walls. There are three brethren here from Lucas, which makes five of us now in this place; and we enjoy the Spirit of the Lord in our assemblies.

I wish to say that if any of the traveling ministers would call at this place, and stay a while, I think they could do a great deal of good. I live in No. 15, Milwaukee settlement, and if any of the saints should come here, I would be very glad to do what I can for them. Should any elders call here, they can have the Swede Church in town any night in the week, except Wednesday night.

I realize that it is good to be a Saint in Latter Days. It is not quite two years yet since I obeyed the gospel, but I know that this work is the work of God, and though so much opposed by earth and hell combined, it shall stand forever.

Beloved Saints, let us examine ourselves, and do away with every filthy habit, shun the very appearance of evil, and seek good continually, so that the world may have no cause to point out to us this or that brother's or sister's uncleanness, whereby to reproach the Church of God. Precept is a very good thing, but example speaks louder than words. If we speak one thing and do another, who can place any confidence in what we say. We all have our weaknesses, but let us ask the Lord to help us overcome them. Pray for me that I may be preserved in righteousness.

I remain your brother in Christ,

WM. THOMPSON.

BOZEMAN, Montana,

August 31st, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I spent twenty days of late at Reese Creek, fifteen miles west of here, and though it was in the midst of haying and harvest, our meetings were largely attended, and a deep interest in them was manifested. Four were baptized, and some others are believing. I held one service in Bozeman, had full and attentive congregation.

Bro. Gomer Reese, president of the Montana District, contemplates moving to Lamoni this fall. The district will miss his able ministerial labors very much when he leaves it. Father J. E. Reese is still as zealous for the cause of Christ as ever, and this is true of many others there, who are willing helpers, and exemplary members. Bro. John Pritchard has disciplined an excellent choir of young singers. They sing finely, and make sweet melody, singing "with the Spirit and with the understanding also." Now that the North Pacific is finished, times are rather dull, and many are out of employment. Crops are light, and yet grain is low. We look to see many persons unite with our people in this district, by and by.

W. W. BLAIR.

PANSBRO, N. S.,

September 4th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—We are holding meetings here in a hall over the Skating Rink. Have tried to preach three evenings. A few boys disturb the meetings some. Quite a number seem to be interested. We have from fifty to seventy-five out each evening, but I never had such hard work to preach as here. I try again this evening. Emma's sister and her husband live here, and are quite anxious to learn the faith. We hope and expect they will obey. I hope the Lord will bless me for the people's sake. Please remember me in your petition.

Yours in bonds,

JOS. F. BURTON.

WHEELING, W. Va.,

Cor. Jacob and 48th Sts.,

September 11th, 1883.

Brother Joseph:—During the last three months I have been laboring continuously in the field, and have met with excellent success, considering all things. The work in this part of the vineyard, is in a prosperous condition, and the present aspects are bright. There have been nearly fifty baptized since the 1st of January, 1883, in Pittsburg District. Our quarterly conference convened at Lampsville, the first Saturday and Sunday of this month. It was acknowledged to have been the best held in the district for many years. The spirit of peace and harmony prevailed. Bro. J. F. McDowell and Richard Sal-yards did the preaching, which was attended by the Divine Spirit; hence it was edifying and encouraging to those who were privileged to hear. There were a goodly number present from abroad, all of whom went home refreshed, strengthened, and rejoicing in the Lord.

Our new chapel is completed. Bro. J. F. McDowell was in charge of the opening services, which were well attended by Saints from adjacent branches. Bro. McDowell ably defended our position. He was greatly blessed in his efforts. Truly, the Lord manifested by his presence, that he was well pleased with the effort of the Saints in the erection of the first chapel ever built in West Virginia. (If not the first please tell us.) Bro. McDowell has been laboring here over three weeks, during which time he has worked hard, both in preaching and beautifying our chapel. He has accomplished much good in setting forth the truth and removing prejudice from the minds of those who classed us with the Utah faction. He is a noble brother, and faithful worker. He has the presence of the Spirit with him, which is ample assurance to those who are in possession of the same divine influence that he is a servant of God.

I visited Byesville a short time ago, and baptized three, also made a new opening at Nicholson, where I believe a good work will be achieved by and by. I anticipate, no preventing providence, to visit the following places in the next ten weeks: West Wheeling, Belmont, Lampsville, Monroe, Buchtel (Athens-county), Nicholson, Ohio, and Clarksburg, W. Va. There was a resolution passed by our last Quarterly Conference, requesting the various branches in the district to send in their offerings to the Bishop's Agent, F. Criley, No. 9 Hazel Street, Pittsburg, Pa. Also another resolution adopted that the branches were authorized not to pay any money to traveling elders, and that those elders call upon the Bishop's Agent for sustenance. We hope that the Saints of Pittsburg District will pay strict attention to the above, and act accordingly, as we believe it will prove for the good of the work.

Your brother in the everlasting covenant,
G. T. GRIFFITHS.

STERLING, Colorado,
September 9th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—We have many obstacles to meet, but on the whole, I believe, we are gaining ground; very slowly at times though. There are seven Saints in this vicinity, three having joined with us a few weeks ago.

We receive HERALD every week as usual. The last one (September 1st) contains a very fair article referring to the Kirtland Temple. I think that every member in the church should contribute a little toward repairing a house built as it was by command of God, and will give this as my reason for so thinking: We read in the word of God that whatsoever we sow that we shall also reap, so if each member of the Church sows good, he may expect to reap good even in this world. I believe the opinion prevails to a great extent, to-day, that this saying has a meaning like this: Whatsoever ye sow we shall reap in the world to come. But as no limit or restriction was placed upon the sentence, it is but reasonable to suppose that we will reap the result of what we sow both in this and the other world. What a beautiful illustration we have of this recorded in the book of Doctrine and Covenants, when the Lord told Joseph that condemnation rested upon all the Church because of their sinful ways, showing that, of necessity, we as Saints are all bound together in bonds of love, unity, and affection; not only this, but that carelessness or wrong-doing on the part of a few may bring bad results on the church in general. Why? Simply because we are considered as being one house or family; so that acts, good or bad, on the part of a few affect the whole family. Let us arise and consider, and proceed to do that which is pleasing unto God, viz.: Love him and keep his commandments, that we may obtain eternal life. And if, while on the way, we may gain additional purity and strength, by helping the cause by word or deed, let us arise in the strength of God, that thereby we may obtain peace of mind, which is so much needed in these days of calamities and evil forebodings.

As ever, your brother in bonds,
GEO. E. MCCONLEY,

Summary of News.

Sept. 14th.—A terrific encounter between the French and the Black Flags has occurred. The French lost fifty-two soldiers and the pirates' loss is between 500 and 600.

China is growing more belligerent in her attitude towards France.

There is reason to believe the recent accessions to the Austro-German alliance will shortly result in Germany issuing a proposal for a general Congress of all European Powers, with a view of determining upon a general disarmament. Austria, Spain and Italy, it is said, have already signified a willingness to participate in such a Congress.

A Parliamentary return shows that the total number of families evicted throughout Ireland, in the quarter ending the 30th of June, was 1,247, these comprising 6,159 persons: 101 families (431 persons) were readmitted as tenants and 414 families (2,085 persons) as care-takers.

A great riot occurred, Thursday, at a coal-mine on the Upper Lehigh, near Hazelton, Pa. A fight began between Constables and roughs. A woman and a little girl were killed by stray bullets. Several officers and a number of roughs were wounded in the battle. The roughs were arrested and order was restored.

A few days ago Capt. Haines of Halifax, N. S., picked up a bottle containing a piece of paper, on which the following, as far as could be deciphered, was written: April 4, 1876.—My God! my God! This is twenty-five days at sea in this dory. We are from the good ship Catharine Jane, on our — London to Boston, and she foundered in a squall, March 10, in mid-ocean. Hands went down, but Elmer Jennison and I. Food is gone, and we are most dead for —. No sail in sight.

JOHN BELL.

The Catharine Jane was a brigantine of 166 tons, built at Pembroke, England, in 1858, and registered at Faversham, and owned by James Rigden, of Whitstable. Her name is omitted in recent years from the shipping registers.

Sept. 15th.—Anti-Jewish disturbances still continue in parts of Hungary.

It is reported from Paris that France and China have agreed to submit all questions of dispute and difference between them to the joint mediation of the United States and Great Britain.

The disturbance on the Banat frontier of Hungary is subsiding. Kemiz, a well-known agitator, is among the persons arrested in connection with the disturbance. A conflict between the military and the people has taken place at Kostainicza, in Croatia, many persons being killed and wounded.

There are now seven Chinese gunboats moored alongside the English and French men-of-war opposite the foreign concession at Canton, China. Placards on the walls threaten the destruction of all European property if the Government decides that an indemnity shall be paid for damage done to the property of Europeans during the recent riots.

The French are hastening the departure of reinforcements for Tonquin.

Disastrous floods are prevailing in the district of Taranto, Italy. Many lives have been lost and a large number of cattle swept away.

Four new cases of yellow fever at the navy yard, at Pensacola, Fla. The disease has also made its appearance in different parts of Mexico.

The seventy-third anniversary of Mexican independence was celebrated with great pomp in the City of Mexico, Saturday. There was a procession of societies, school-children, military, allegorical cars, etc. The procession was four hours passing a given point.

Sept. 17th.—Acheen and Sumatra, according to the official admissions of the king of the Netherlands, are in a serious state of disorder.

Gladstone will meet the Czar. There is, of course, the greatest interest at Berlin in so important a conference. Like boys at town-ball, the European nations must now choose sides. Gladstone yesterday dined with the royal family of Denmark at Copenhagen.

Turkey has made the announcement to Bismarck that in the event of war between France and Germany she will undertake to make diversions upon the French in Tunis and Algeria.

The emperor has approved Minister Tisza's proposals to treat the Croats and anti-Semites with great severity. Masses of troops are being sent into the rebellious districts in order to subdue the tumult that seems to be inspired by communism.

A dispatch received from Szigetvar states that at 11 o'clock yesterday evening a large number of people assembled at that place with the object of creating disturbances. During the night serious rioting occurred, the mob committing terrible havoc. One of the rioters was killed and four others were severely injured. A detachment of troops was dispatched from Siklos to restore order, and reinforcements will reach Szigetvar to-day.

A dispatch from Gross Gorica, in Croatia states that last night a number of peasants who had come to attend the market at that place tore down the Hungarian arms from the post-office and from the Gendarmery Barracks. The gendarmes fired at the rioters, killing one and injuring several others.

The troubles in Croatia are growing more and more serious. Yesterday there were regular fights in Krapina. More than two thousand peasants, in military organization, and armed, stormed the tax-office and other public offices. The troops fired several volleys, and many persons were wounded. In Agram also there were disturbances during the departure of the financial director, David, and the Hungarian coat of arms was torn down.

Fresh disturbances have occurred in the Zigorie district, where the peasants parade the country in bands singing the songs of 1848 and proclaiming communistic sentiments.

The Chinese press insists the Black Flags were victorious in the recent fight.

The Black Flags threaten the French out-posts which have withdrawn to Ha-Noi awaiting reinforcements.

One death from cholera at Cairo, Egypt, yesterday.

The English have sent troops to the scene of civil war in South Africa.

At St. Petersburg fresh arrests have been made of officers of the guards and officers of the navy, suspected of engaging in nihilistic operations.

The cattle plague is still spreading in England.

Fifty-thousand people attended an Irish mass meeting which was held at Carrick-on-Shannon Sunday.

The steam-berge Oakland, lumber-laden, from Bay City to Erie, foundered eight miles off Conneaut, O., this morning at 5 o'clock. Capt. Geo. L. Stevens, Robert S. Hanna, second engineer, Charles Dickson, and another man, a wheelman, name unknown, are probably lost.

The steamer Saginaw, which left Cleveland, O., Saturday night, is missing.

The bark Britannia went ashore on Sable Island, in the region of Halifax, and twelve persons were drowned.

It is now clearly established that the disease raging at Guaymas, Mex., is yellow-fever. All who can are fleeing from the city. The medical corps is being reinforced as rapidly as possible. Twelve of a lately arrived opera troupe have died. Eighteen deaths were reported yesterday. Many others were not reported. The streets are almost deserted, the only sounds heard being the rumbling of the death-carts. The Board of Health has issued orders that dead bodies be immediately removed and buried.

A party of twelve Americans who fled from Guaymas and arrived last night said the people were leaving the city by hundreds. There was hardly a house but contained some victim of the fever.

The authorities had given over the work of burying the dead to a pack of hybrid Indians, who went from house to house carrying the bodies of those they supposed to be dead or dying. The bodies were buried so rapidly that mistakes occurred. Many were put underground while still living. This was mainly due to the disease, which at the favorable turning-point leaves the patient in a comatose state, which was mistaken by the Indian undertakers as death.

The city of Pensacola, Fla., is still healthy. There are four new cases of yellow fever. Three deaths occurred to-day at the navy yard. Pensacola is quarantined against Mobile.

Two children died of small-pox in the Thirtieth District of Nashville, Tenn., and a negro who was removed from the county jail is in a dangerous condition. The people in the neighborhood where these deaths occurred are terror stricken. Efforts to have two or three patients removed to the pest-house have been unsuccessful.

Some idea of Chicago's colossal marine business, and likewise of the extraordinary delays, put upon pedestrians and traffic in its principal streets, is gained from the statement that in twenty-four hours ending at 9 o'clock last night 131 vessels arrived from and ninety-six cleared for ports of the Great Lakes.

Sept. 18.—Marquis Tseng will no longer confer with the French Minister of Foreign Affairs Challemeil-Lacour. Premier Ferry has taken the negotiations in hand.

Kavanagh, the car-driver, Hanlon, Smith, and others of the Phenix Park murderers, who saved their necks by informing and were shipped to Australia, where the people at various ports refused to receive them, have been reloaded for transportation back to England.

China has proposed to accept a French protectorate in Annam on the condition that the French evacuate Tonquin.

A Marseilles, France, dispatch says 3,000 shells, 50 guns, and 300,000 cartridges have been ordered sent to Tonquin.

The Admiralty has ordered the war-vessels Champion, Daring, Flying Fish, and Kestrel on the China station, which were ordered home to pay off their crews. They will be recommissioned at Hong Kong.

The American mercantile marine has received an intimation from France that all vessels carrying war materials to Tonquin will be captured as privateers by the French navy.

A battle in Ashantee, Africa, resulted in the defeat with great slaughter of the forces of King Koffee Kalealli. The King fled to Coomassie, his Capital, after the engagement.

It is reported from Huancayo, Peru, S. A., that 3,000 monteneros, who had collected near Tzuzhaca for the purpose of sacking that city, were attacked by a small body of men belonging to the Pacific forces. After a quarter of an hour's fighting the monteneros were defeated with a loss of 200 men. The department of Ica is in an entirely tranquil state.

The cattle plague still spreads in England.

Col. Clibborn, of the Salvation Army, has been expelled from the City of Geneva, Switzerland, and Miss Booth is imprisoned at Neufchatel for violating the order prohibiting salvation meetings.

The Treasury Department of England, in accordance with recent acts of Parliament, has canceled £75,000,000 of various stocks representing a portion of the national debt, and has issued terminable annuities therefor.

Direct taxes in Cuba have been increased 50 per cent. by the Spanish government.

About 7 o'clock yesterday morning the crew of the lost propeller Oakland were rescued from a raft by a tug on Lake Erie.

Two of the crew of the schooner Explorer, lost two weeks ago on Georgian Bay, were picked up yesterday alive.

Eight deaths from yellow fever at Guaymas, Texas.

European estimates of the population of China are being reduced. Behm and Wagner reduce their estimate of China and Corea from 434,500,000 to 379,500,000. Peterson reduces his estimate by 75,000,000, making the present total 350,000,000. Dr. Happer, missionary, believes this can safely be reduced another 50,000,000. Mr. Hipplesley, acting commissioner of customs, thinks 250,000,000 more nearly correct than 350,000,000. The losses by the Taeping and Mohammedan rebellions, and by the famine and pestilence which swept the provinces of Chili, Shantung, Shansi, Shensi, and Honan, are variously estimated at from 61,000,000 to 81,000,000.

Sept. 19th.—Ashton-under-Lyne, Eng., is the scene of a great weavers' strike, which is to last still another month.

Rains have checked the yellow fever in the Mexican cities.

A Government Trichina Commission will soon be in Chicago.

A Nihilist "newspaper" declares that the troops killed two hundred of the mob in the recent riots at Ekaterinoslav. The minister of the interior is called "Tolstoi, the hangman."

Three hundred and thirty sailors left Brest, France, for Tonquin, whence they embark for service in the French fleet in Tonquin waters.

The French at Tonquin are in difficulties through want of troops. Many Chinese are deserting to the Black Flags. Lau, their chief, is very powerful. France may have to negotiate with him. Foreigners have been seen fighting on the side of the Black Flags. Gen. Bouet admits he was unable to hold his position after the last fight. The French are still buying steamers and horses.

The Chinese government, through its representative, the Marquis Tseng, declares itself anxious to maintain peaceful relations with France.

The possible rupture of the Franco-Chinese relations creates keen interest at Berlin, not only on account of its influence on Franco-German affairs, but also in view of the extent of German commerce with the treaty ports, which ranks only second to that of England. The German squadron in Chinese waters, now numbering two coverts and two gunboats, under the command of Admiral Baron Goltz, will shortly be reinforced by the corvet Stein, which sailed some time ago with a relief crew. The corvet Stosch arrived at Hong Kon yesterday.

While the troubles in Croatia, Hungary, are ceasing, the agitation is spreading to Dalmatia. Proclamations have been distributed summoning the Dalmatians to make common cause with Croatia. Yesterday 400 peasants in Krapina were victorious in a fight with the gendarmes, and half a squadron of Hussars came to the rescue of the latter. The military also had to withdraw, but at last being reinforced in great numbers, they succeeded in dispersing the peasants. In several other places similar riots took place, and the leaders who had been arrested were liberated from prison. The intelligence received this morning from Zagorie represents the insurrectionary movement in that district as spreading, and states that regular encounters are taking place between the peasants and the gendarmes. In their conflicts with the rioters the troops were repulsed not only at Krapina and Toeplitz, but also at Sopo. There were several killed and wounded on both sides. Reinforcements have been dispatched to the disturbed districts.

During the last affray in Bednia Hungary, eighteen peasants were shot. The riots are extending on every side, and the inhabitants of the confines of Styria are anxious that the scene of action should cross the frontier. All night the inhabitants of several Styrian Mountain villages heard firing and shouting, and saw signal fires on many heights. The peasants declare openly everywhere that they will revolt. In the Styrian Lansberg the peasants attacked all persons known to defend the Hungarians. Of course, they also rob the houses and shops of those whose politics displease them. They march in procession behind the Croatian flag and sing their national songs.

CROP REPORTS.

Iowa does not hope to have over three-fourths of a corn crop. Frost has killed all the corn on the low lands in some of the counties.

No serious injury has been done to the growing crop in Dakota. Small grain in that Territory has yielded bountifully, many fields averaging thirty-five or forty bushels of wheat per acre.

The product of Kansas will exceed the most sanguine estimates heretofore made.

The reports of severe loss by frost in Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois, heretofore made, are confirmed.

Prof. Dodge, the Statistician of the Agricultural Department, adheres to his opinion that the corn crop will probably be as great as that of 1882. He says, however, that there is still one cause for fear—that is, that the corn of Ohio and Indiana may be injured by frost, though it escaped when the Michigan and Wisconsin fields suffered a few nights ago. "The corn in those States, he says, "owing to the lack of good seed at home, was grown from Missouri and Kansas seed, and it will take it two or three weeks longer to mature than if it had been from Ohio and Indiana seed. That has been the experience heretofore. The corn crop of that section—of the whole country, indeed—is somewhat late anyway, by reason of the cool weather, and with this difference in the length of time required for the maturity of corn from the Missouri and Kansas seed, there is some danger that the crop may yet be further damaged. However, we will hope for the best, and we may safely calculate that, without further damage by later frosts, we shall harvest as much corn in this country in 1883 as we did in 1882."

The wheat yield of Minnesota is estimated at thirty-five million bushels.

Sept. 17th.—Needed rains have fallen in Ohio and Michigan, enabling farmers to do their fall seeding.

Various points in Nebraska had light frosts last night.

The damage to Iowa crops by the frosts of 7th, 8th and 9th, is not nearly so great as at first reported.

Sept. 18th.—Illinois farmers are busily engaged in plowing for and sowing winter wheat.

More heavy frosts have visited the northern parts of Iowa, doing great damage to corn.

Reports from Michigan and Wisconsin confirm previous reports in regard to havoc by frost.

The yield of corn in Iowa is estimated at twenty-five per cent below an average.

FIRES, STORMS AND ACCIDENTS.

Sept. 14th.—Loss by fire at Brooklyn, N. Y., over $100,000. Des Moines, Ia., $25,000. Milwaukee, Wis., $40,000. Boston, Mass., $5,000. Atlanta, Ga., $50,000. In the destruction of a small residence at Appleton, Wis., a woman and two of her five children were horribly burned. Cortarchy Castle, near Forfar, Scotland, owned by the Earl of Airlie, was burned; the loss over £60,000.

At Schnettville, Indiana, last Tuesday, three young men lost their lives from fire damp in a foul well. At Quincy, Mich., a man was killed by the running away of his team. A runaway team at Milwaukee, Wis., caused the death of Mrs. Heiden. Two trains collided near Kansas City, and killed two men. A few miles west of Sioux Falls, Dak., a father and son were killed by lightning.

Sept. 15th.—Loss by fire at Oxford, Ala., $50,000. New Haven, Conn., $25,000. Chattanooga, Tenn., $15,000. Corning, O., $10,000. Elkhart, Ind., $5,000. Fort Wayne, Ind., $4,000. Milwaukee, Wis., $4,600.

Sept. 17th.—Loss by fire at Chicago, Ill., $300. Burlington, Iowa, $7,000. Elkhart, Ind., $2,500. Yuma, Arizona, $2,500.

Sept. 18th.—In New York last evening a fire broke out on Broadway, at Mercer street, which burned a large building and destroyed about $800,000 worth of property. Loss by fire at St. Louis, Mo., $90,000. Patterson, N. J., $45,000.

Sept. 19th.—Barn-burners are creating great alarm in Niagara county, New York.

The bark Oxford, at Havre, France, from New York, is on fire, and will probably burn to the water's edge. The cook was burned to death. The first mate is seriously and several others slightly injured.

Loss by fire at Cincinnati, O., $30,000. Benson, Arizona, destroyed, loss over $70,000. Fostoria, Ohio, $10,000. Chicago, Ill., $600. Scranton, Pa., $50,000. Philadelphia, Pa., $46,000.

A fire in the woods, under the influence of a strong wind, is rapidly approaching Bar Harbor, Maine. The inhabitants are fighting the fire.

At DeWitt, N. Y., a construction train with one hundred laborers on board, was wrecked, killing four men, injuring ten others seriously, several of whom can not recover.

At Chattanooga, Tenn., the falling of a scaffold killed one man, fatally injured another, and seriously wounded a third.

At one of the coal mines of Washington, Pa., lightning struck and followed the track laid underground, a distance of a thousand yards.

Daily and hourly do your duty; do it patiently and thoroughly. Do it as it presents itself; do it at the moment, and let it be its own reward. Never mind whether it is known and acknowledged or not, but do not fail to do it.

THE LATTER DAY SAINTS AND DISCIPLES IN WESTERN OHIO.

BY WM. H. KELLEY.

WHILE in the state of Ohio, through the kindness of Bro. I. Lamereaux, of Solon, a book was placed in my hands bearing the title,—“Early History of the Disciples in the Western Reserve, Ohio; with Biographical Sketches of the Principal Agents in their Religious Movement, by A. S. Hayden;” from which a few extracts have been taken, thought to be of interest to the readers of the Herald.

The writing of this history was authorized by the “Western Reserve Christian Preachers Association”—“twenty-two preachers present”—hence is endorsed.

The author is a Disciple, in spirit and creed, and an enemy to the Saints, as will appear from his writings. He labors to put Mr. Campbell and the Disciple Church forward prominently and in glowing colors, with all who supported that view of things; but when referring to others—especially the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and those who affiliated with it—his effort has been to berate, scandalize, and present them in the most odious and contemptible light possible.

These two societies were brought in contact with each other in 1830-36, and the strength of their respective positions was frequently tried by their representative men, which resulted, it would seem, as a rule, favorably to the Saints. The principle field of action was the Western Reserve.

The writer dwells at length upon the faith of the Saints, and some of the prominent men connected with it, in those early years, especially Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon. The latter will be especially considered in this article, as the Western Reserve was the place of his home when he first became acquainted with the Saints. This author in referring to the Saints, exhibits a personal pique and long standing grudge, in pretty much all that he has to say of them; hence, whatever he is made to say in favor, by reason of well known facts that came into his possession, which could not be disposed of only as creditable to them, wily as he is, can safely be relied upon as truth, as a witness is not very liable to testify against himself, neither is a writer apt to place any thing to the credit of those whom he takes pleasure in maligning.

That the Western Reserve was the theater, in those early years, of much agitation of thought upon religious questions and the breaking away from established creeds, is conceded; but the exciting cause that led to this awakening and enquiry is not so well established. However, we will give the view of the writer.

“It is probably illogical to refer this movement toward reform, so wide and active, to any one leading impulse. As in all similar general movements which have become permanent, it is probably more correct to assign the result to several concurrent causes. The peculiar character of the population of the Western Reserve, mostly from New England, with a liberal intermingling of people from other States, resulting in comparisons, often in collisions of views, was a powerful stimulus to investigation. Yet history would not be faithful to omit, as among the most direct evident causes and guides in this increasing demand for a restoration of the divinely established order of the gospel, the writings and personal labors of Alexander Campbell. His debate with Rev. John Walker, published in 1821, and that with Rev. W. L. McCalla, which appeared in 1824, * * served in some sort as a warrant to others equally inclined but less bold to burst the denominational shell in which they felt themselves confined.

“Added to these the ‘Christian Baptist,’ to which the preface was written the 4th of July, 1823, went forth monthly to advocate definitely and distinctly the restoration of the apostolic teaching and practice in all things; in faith, conversion, baptism, the office of the Holy Spirit, church order, and, summarily, every thing authorized by Jesus Christ, the author and finisher of the Christian religion.”

The reader will please note this quotation, as the Disciples, so called, have long since abandoned this tenable position, set up by the Reformed Baptists.

“Many were prepared to welcome the ‘Christian Baptist’ when it first appeared, in the year 1822-3. Eld. Bently discoursed frequently on such themes as “The Law,” “The Scriptures a sufficient Guide,” etc. Jacob Osborne, though young, was active and influential in promoting this search of the word for ‘things new and old.’ Sidney Rigdon added the persuasions of a very commanding and popular eloquence.”—Pages 20, 21. At a meeting of the Baptist Church, composed of members scattered over Nelson, Hiram and Mantua, as early as August 24th, 1824, a “resolution was passed, nearly unanimously, to remove the Philadelphia Confession of faith and the Church Articles, and to take the word of God for our rule of faith and practice.”—Pages 22-23.

It would seem that the spirit of reform was really actuating some individuals, as if preparing a people for coming events. Daring spirits from various denominations came to the front and took advanced ground. The most prominent were Sidney Rigdon, Walter Scott, Adamson Bently, Jacob Osborne, Alexander Campbell, Barton W. Stone and others, most of whom were identified with the Baptist Church. Scott and Stone formerly belonged to the Presbyterian denomination, but they left it and united with the Baptist Church. A number of Baptist Churches were established in the Western Reserve, which, in time, united in association, according to their custom, the chief of which was the “Mahoning Association.” Out from these societies and associations developed and grew the reform movement, concerning which our author endeavors to write in particular. “Associations among the Baptists are voluntary unions of churches, for mutual encouragement, for counsel in church affairs, and for protection against heresy and impostors. The Mahoning Association was formed on Wednesday, the 30th of August, 1820, in the Western Reserve.”—Page 56.

This became the famous Union, in and around which figured Sidney Rigdon, Walter Scott, Adamson Bently, Alexander Campbell, and others who attained to prominence and distinction. As early as 1820, perhaps, selected at the time of its organization, Sidney Rigdon was its leader and chief spokesman.

While it is the effort of Mr. Hayden to shade and keep in the back ground Sidney Rigdon, and make conspicuous and cover with glory Mr. Campbell and those who adhered to him, the evidences adduced by himself are quite sufficient to show that Rigdon was not a whit behind the most gifted of them; if, indeed, he was not the chief leader and brains of the reform movement.

Soon after the organization of this association, Sidney Rigdon and Adamson Bently made a visit to Kentucky, and called on A. Campbell. Mr. Campbell’s notice of this visit is as follows: “After tea in the evening, we commenced and prolonged our discourse till the next morning. Beginning with the baptism that John preached, we went back to Adam, and forward to the judgment. The dispensations or covenants—Adamic, Abrahamic, Jewish, and Christian—passed and and repassed before us. Mount Sinai, in Arabia, Mount Zion, Mount Calvary, Mount Tabor, the Red Sea, and the Jordan; the passover and the pentecosts; the law and gospel; but especially the ancient order of things and the modern. * * * At that time Sidney Rigdon was the great orator of the Mahoning Association," etc. Page 19.

Mr. Campbell received invitations from them to visit the Western Reserve, and the "Baptist churches within the sphere of their influence." In 1825, five years after, Mr. Campbell appeared for the first time in the Mahoning Association. Page 24.

"In August, 1826, the Mahoning Baptist Association was held in Canfield, then in Trumbull county. It convened in a barn belonging to David Hays, who was a pillar in the church. Adamson Bently was the moderator, and Joab Gaskill clerk.

"Among the ministers in attendance were A. Bently, Thomas Campbell, and Alexander Campbell, of Virginia; Walter Scott of Pittsburg; Sidney Rigdon, Thomas Miller, William West, Corbly Martin, and Jacob Osborne." On Saturday, Mr. Campbell preached to the "public," and on Sunday morning, "Rigdon and Scott preached." "Some having heard the eloquent preacher from Pittsburg (Rigdon), left the meeting supposing they had heard Mr. Campbell." Pages 34, 35.

It was while attending this Association that Mr. Campbell is credited with making the following statement, in one of his sermons, while dwelling upon the "glory of the gospel dispensation." "The day of light so illustrious in the beginning, became cloudy. The Papacy arose and darkened the heavens for a long period, obscuring the brightness of the risen glory of the Sun of Righteousness, so that men groped in darkness. By the reformation of the seventeenth century that dark cloud was broken in fragments; and though the heavens of gospel light are still obscured by many clouds—the sects of various names—the promise is that 'at evening-time there shall be light.' The primitive gospel in its effulgence and power is yet to shine out in its original splendor to regenerate the world." Pages 36, 37. Four years after this utterance the gospel was thundered abroad, but strange to say, Mr. Campbell never saw the light. Rigdon and others did.

"In June, 1821, the ministers' meeting was held in Warren. Mr. Campbell attended, and this was probably his first visit to the Western Reserve." Page 39.

In 1823, he made a visit to Pittsburg, and formed an acquaintance with Walter Scott, who cooperated with him, suggesting the name, in establishing the "Christian Baptist." Scott and Rigdon were both residents of Pittsburg at this time and Baptist preachers. "The two communions, that under Rigdon and the company to whom Scott preached, united together and became one body." Pages 63, 64.

It will be observed from these references, that Rigdon and Scott were the first and prime leaders and agitators in the reform movement, which led to the breaking away from creeds, about those times, and the occupying of higher, freer, and more independent ground. The work had been well begun and carried to an acknowledged success before Campbell's identification with the movement. He became a great auxiliary, and finally, after the disaffection set in, the leader of those who indorsed his Bible renderings.

Scott, who had but recently arrived in America, was tarrying in Pittsburg, where he became converted from the Presbyterian faith to that of the Baptist, and became intimately associated with Rigdon. Doubtless, too, he was then led to indorse the inspiring theme of the time, a return to primitive Christianity, for which Rigdon was the chief advocate. Campbell saw in Scott a man of strength and usefulness, and sought to identify him with his interests, which he succeeded in doing, and finally led him from his earlier and better thoughts to the indorsement of his cold and tangled theory of religious faith. This union formed the tower of strength, in time, to be posed against the now powerful, popular, and growing Rigdon, to ultimate in the blinding of the people, and the establishment of the sect known as the Disciple Church.

But events hastened on. The "Mahoning Association" met by regular appointment in New Lisbon, Columbia county, August 23, 1827. "Jacob Osborne was moderator and John Rudolph, Jr., clerk." Page 55.

This was a memorable meeting. Some sixteen churches were represented. Among the number of preachers present were Adamson Bently, Jacob Osborne, Alexander Campbell, Walter Scott, Sidney Rigdon, Samuel Holmes, and William West. The services of an evangelical preacher had been called for and were to be considered at this meeting. The action of the convention on this question was as follows: "Voted that all the teachers of Christianity present be a committee to nominate a person to travel and labor among the churches, and to suggest a plan for the support of the person so appointed. The preachers present composing this committee were the following: Adamson Bently, Joab Gaskill, Jacob Osborne, A. Campbell, Abijah Sturdevant, Walter Scott, Samuel Holmes, William West, Sidney Rigdon, J. Merrill, John Secrest, Joseph Gaston—twelve. The committee reported '1. That Bro. Walter Scott is a suitable person for the task, and he is willing, provided the association concur in his appointment, to devote his whole energies to the work.'" etc. Pages 55, 56, 57, 58.

It will be observed that as late as August 23, 1827, Sidney Rigdon was in good standing in this reform movement among the Baptist churches, and stood side by side with Scott, Campbell, and others. "The association," went so far as to "throw open its doors, and brought in as a composite element disciples of Christ, ministers of another ecclesiastical connection, making these ministers fully equal in its action; thus setting aside its denominational character, and standing on the broad, firm character of the Christian religion alone." Page 59.

Mr. Campbell was evidently quite a factor in this association, as it was through his influence, in some sense at least, that his fellow countryman, Walter Scott, was appointed to the position of evangelist. On Page 55 occurs the following: "Passing through Steubenville, he (Mr. Campbell) called on Walter Scott, principal of the academy in that place, and persuaded him to come to New Lisbon, with the intention of securing his appointment as the evangelist of the association."

After Scott's appointment he commenced his round among the churches, "The first distinctive position assumed was the union of Christians on apostolic grounds." Page 66.

At a meeting held at Braceville, "Scott, Bently, Osborne, and Atwater walked out together." Osborne, turning to Scott, asked him "if he had ever thought if baptism in the name of the Lord was for the remission of sins?" Holding himself somewhat in reserve, he intimated a desire for Osborne to proceed. "It is," said he, "certainly established for that purpose. It holds the same place under the gospel in relation to pardon that the positive institution of the altar held to forgiveness under the law of Moses; under that dispensation the sinner offered the prescribed victim on the altar, and was acquitted, pardoned through the merits of the sacrifice of Christ, of which his offering was a type. So under the gospel age, the sinner comes to the death of Christ, the meritorious ground of his salvation, through baptism, which is a symbol of the death, burial, and resurrection of Jesus Christ.' 'Very well,' replied Scott." Page 69.

"These three preachers were again together soon after the events narrated above, when Bro. Osborne again introduced the design of baptism in public discourse, and remarked that in the connection that the gift of the Holy Spirit is after conversion and baptism, and consequent upon them, citing the inspired words of the apostle Peter in Acts 2:38, as proof: 'Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.'

"After the meeting Scott said to Osborne, 'You are the boldest man I ever saw! Don't you think so, Bro. Bently?' 'How so?' said Bently. 'Why, he said in his sermon that no one had a right to expect the Holy Spirit till after baptism.' Scott was a genius, often eccentric, often profoundly meditative. It may not be necessary, as perhaps it would be impossible to tell whether Mr. Scott was leading them, or they him, in those days. It is certain, however, that he had now premises sufficient for a generalization, which was soon to produce the most brilliant and unexpected results. In the powers of analysis and combination, he has rarely been equaled. Under his classification the great elements of the gospel bearing on the conversion of sinners, assumed the following definite, rational, and scriptural order: (1) faith, (2) repentance, (3) baptism, (4) remission of sins, (5) the Holy Spirit, (6) eternal life, through a patient continuance in well-doing. This arrangement of these themes was so plain, so manifestly in harmony with soundest reason, and so clearly correct in a metaphysical point of view, as well as sustained by the Holy Scriptures, that Scott was transported with the discovery. The key of knowledge was now in his possession," etc. Pages 70, 71.

If this Scriptural order was so clearly correct then, that order is just as correct now. But the strange part of it is these parties let go that "Scriptural order" in the process of time, and followed after Campbellism, which teaches that no Spirit is given in this age. All of these having been associated with Rigdon, more or less, from three to five years, it is not difficult to divine as to who originated or brought to light, mainly, this "scriptural order." "Wherever Scott went, his theme was the 'Word of the Lord and Pentecost.'"

The Mahoning Baptist Association met in Warren in 1828. (Page 161.) Creeds were abandoned, and Methodists, Baptists, and Restorationists mingled freely together. (Page 162.) "Among the seniors" present "were Thomas Campbell and his son, Alexander, Adamson Bently, and Sidney Rigdon, with Walter Scott, to whom multitudes of the young disciples looked with the affection of children to a spiritual father." Page 163.

But some vain people would have us believe that Sidney Rigdon, while sitting as a spiritual Father in this grand conclave of ministers, was at the same time, intriguing and caucusing with Joseph Smith over in York state, with a view to getting up a new Bible and a new religion. Truly, facts beat the very Devil himself, and his lying crew.

Scott, in reporting his labors to the association for the year, remarked, "who cannot see that, by the blessing of God, the ancient gospel and the ancient order of the church must prevail, to the certain abolition of all those contumacious sects which now so woefully afflict mankind?" Again, "The millenium—the millenium described in Scripture—will doubtless be a wonder, a terrible wonder to ALL." Page 173.

Scott's re-appointment as the evangelist of the association brought on a long discussion, and finally "Rigdon, who had taken no part in this discussion, becoming weary of it, said: 'You are consuming too much time on this question. One of the old Jerusalem preacher would start out with his hunting shirt and moccasins, and convert half the world while you are discussing and settling plans.' Upon this, Bro. Scott arose with a genial smile, and remarked, 'Brethren, give me my Bible, my head, and Bro. William Hayden, and we will go out and convert the world.' Then Rigdon, 'I move we give Bro. Scott his Bible, his head, and Bro. William Hayden.'" Carried. Scott selected Hayden on account of his "powers of music." Page 174.

The association met in Sharon, August, 1829. But as there were no records kept, it is not stated whether Rigdon was in attendance or not. Page 270.

The next and final meeting of the Mahoning Association was at Austintown, in 1830. "Died of a moral apoplexy in a quarter of an hour." Rigdon, Campbell, and Scott were all present at this meeting. "It was only about two months previous to the fall of that star [Rigdon] from heaven." Pages 297, 298.

The writer has reference to Rigdon's uniting with the Saints. Since 1820 Rigdon had been a member and leader in this association; was well known and highly respected by its members. He followed its fortunes from the year 1820 to August, 1830, and was present at its dissolution and death.

But listen! During this period of time the Book of Mormon was published to the world, and the elders of the Latter Day Saints were sounding abroad the gospel of pentecost day in reality. What about Rigdon's being the originator of the Book of Mormon, then? Yet the very chronicler of these facts and events exhibits an anxiety to put him forth as its real author.

"The ardor of religious awakening, resulting from the new discoveries in the gospel was very much increased about the year 1830 by the hope that the millenium had now dawned, and that the long expected day of gospel glory would very soon be ushered in * * * and so would be established the kingdom of Jesus, in form, as well as in fact, on its New Testament basis. * * * The prospect was a glorious one. * * * This hope of Millennial glory was based on many passages of the Holy Scriptures. All such Scriptures as spoke of the ransomed of the Lord returning to Zion, with songs of everlasting joy upon their heads, that they should obtain joy and gladness, and that sorrow and sighing should flee away." (Page 183.) "Some of the leaders in these new discoveries, advancing less cautiously, as the ardor of discovery increased, began to form theories of the millenium. The fourteenth chapter of Zachariah was brought forward in proof—all considered it literal—that the most marvelous and stupendous physical and climatic changes were to be wrought in Palestine; and that Jesus Christ, the Messiah, was to reign literally in Jerusalem, and in Mt. Zion, and before his ancients gloriously. The glory and splendors of that august millennial kingdom were to surpass all vision, as the light of the moon was to be made equal to the light of the sun, and the light of the sun would be augmented 'sevenfold.' William Hayden went to New Lisbon to fill an appointment. Calling at Bro. Jacob Campbell's we found Bro. Scott. Mrs. Campbell was a Christian lady of much brilliancy of talent, and intelligent in the Holy Scriptures. Salutations over, she broke forth in an animated strain: 'Bro. Scott and I have been contemplating how joyful it will be in the millennium, mortals and immortals dwelling together.' Bro. Scott then, with great fluency, descanted upon the prophecies of Jeremiah and Ezekiel relating to the return of the Jews and their re-establishment in the Holy Land, the coming of the Lord, the resurrection of the saints, and the gathering together unto him on the Mount of Olives. Scott had a vein of enthusiasm, to which these millennial prospects were very congenial. * * Rigdon, who always caught and proclaimed the last word that fell from the lips of Scott or Campbell, seized these views, and with the wildness of his extravagant nature, heralded them everywhere." Pages 185, 186.

These zealous Bible students seem to have caught a glimpse of the true light; aimed at reform and restoration. Rigdon and Scott and others see eye to eye, why not go on? Here it is: "Many sagacious brethren perceived with regret the new turn things were taking. * * Some supposed Mr. Campbell to be in sympathy with these views; and, indeed, some plausibility was lent to this opinion by the title of the new periodical, The Millennial Harbinger. Mr. Campbell, whose eye was fully open to all, was not slow to perceive all this, and he felt called on to undertake the needed correction." (Page 188.) "The effect was salutary and remedy complete." Page 189.

Rigdon, then, did not gather these views from Campbell, for he did not believe them. Their discovery and annunciation lie with Rigdon and Scott. They were advocates of pentecostal religion in theory and in spirit, but Mr. Campbell held "The gospel the essential channel of spiritual influence in conversion; thus ignoring all reliance on abstract and immediate influence of the Holy Spirit, and calling the attention of inquirers away from dreams, visions, and impressions which are so liable to deceive." (Page 50.) Did not believe in a literal restoration of the Jews, or a Millennial reign on the earth of the Saints. How could Rigdon catch up these sentiments from Campbell, then, and herald them everywhere? This is too palpable for comment. But let us inquire further into the life and whereabouts of Rigdon previous to the year 1830-31, from the pen of his enemies: "The Baptist Church at Warren was formed September 3d, 1803, by Elder Chas. B. Smith." "This church was a parent of churches, Youngstown, Bagetta, Lordstown, and Howland, all sprang from it. January 11, 1815, thirteen members were dismissed on application to organize in Youngstown. * * Thomas Rigdon, J. Woodworth, and A. Bently officiating." "This Thomas Rigdon was a man of much prominence as a preacher, and was worthy of the distinction conferred on him. He served with acceptability a term in the Ohio Legislature. There were three brothers, Thomas, John, and Charles, all Baptist ministers. They all fully adopted the views of the reformation, and faithfully defended them. They were cousins of the famous Sidney Rigdon.

"December 4, 1819, the church granted the petition of eight members in Bazetta to form a church in that town. * * March 4th following, Sidney Rigdon was received into membership, and licensed April 1st to preach. He married Miss Phœba Brooks, and after two years moved to Pittsburg." Pages 91, 92.

In June, 1826, he was "residing in Bainbridge." At that time he was called to preach the funeral of Warner Goodall, the elder of the Baptist Church at Mentor, and Rigdon was called to serve "as its pastor in the fall of that year." "Sidney Rigdon was an orator of no inconsiderable abilities. In person he was full medium height, rotund in form; of countenance, while speaking, open and winning, with a little cast of melancholy. His action was graceful, his language copious, fluent in utterance, with articulation clear and musical. Yef he was an enthusiast, and unstable.

"His personal influence with an audience was very great. * * Whatever may be justly said of him after he had surrendered himself a victim and a leader of the Mormon delusion, it would scarcely be just to deny sincerity and candor to him, previous to the time when his bright star became permanently eclipsed under that dark cloud.

"In March, 1828, he visited Scott in Warren. He had been with him on former occasions, and had adopted fully his method of preaching Christ, and of calling the awakened and penitent believer to an immediate obedience of his faith for the remission of sins.

"Rigdon was transported with this discovery. On leaving Warren to return to Mentor, he persuaded his brother-in-law, Adamson Bently, to accompany him. This was a visit to that town of no ordinary importance. The trumpet which they blew gave no uncertain sound. It was the old jubilee trumpet, first sounded by the fishermen of Galilee on the day of Pentecost, announcing glad tidings to the nations. * * The whole community was aroused. Twenty persons were baptized the first time they repaired to the Jordan. * * From Mentor they went to Kirtland, where almost an equal ingathering awaited them." Sidney Rigdon became a member of the church at Mentor. "This congregation has long stood as a lighthouse. It was shaken as by a tempest under the out-break of Mormonism, but it is to be noted that few of its members were led astray. While the church in Kirtland, with less experience, and more immediately in Rigdon's power, became engulfed, and has never since been recovered." Pages 191, 192, 193, 194, 195.

"In March, 1828, in the great religious awakening in Mentor, under Rigdon and Bently, the amiable M. S. Clapp, was the first to yield." Page 198.

It does really seem from these evidences that the true light had shone, in some sense, upon Rigdon and his associates; and that they were unwittingly a kind of John the Baptist, preparing the way.

"In the fall of 1821, William Waite emigrated from Saratoga, New York, on the head waters of the Susquehanna, and settled on the plateau since known as Waite Hill, in Willoughby. He and his wife were Baptists. * * The next autumn his son-in-law, Dexter Otis, in his 28th year, arrived and settled in Kirtland. * * * When Elder S. Campbell came to Mentor soon after, these brethren, E. Waite and D. Otis, were so delighted with the new light that beamed on the gospel, that they pressed him to come to Waite Hill. * * * Rigdon coming in about that time, and following up the well begun work by his earnest and animating appeals, several were baptized, among whom was Alvin Waite, then in his twenty-sixth year. This was in 1829."—Page 204.

"Samuel Miller was born in Willoughby, August 30th, 1802, the first male white child born in that town. * * When in 1829, the great wave of religious reformation broke along the shore of the lake, he heard, examined, and with his usual independence, candor, and decision, he confessed the Lord. * * * When the overflowing scourge of Mormonism burst forth, these three men, with Otis and Waite, withstood the shock, though Rigdon himself, their leader to Christ, had reeled and fallen under its blow."—Page 207. "The church on Waite Hill was organized [through the agency of Sidney Rigdon] in 1830." D. Atwater states on page 239, that he was "ordained an elder of the church at Mantua, on March 21st, 1830." "Soon after this the great Mormon defection came on us. Sidney Rigdon preached for us, and not withstanding his extravagantly wild freaks, he was held in high repute by many.

"In the admiration of Sidney Rigdon, Oliver Snow and his family shared very largely; so when he came with his pretended humility, to lay all at the feet of Mormonism, it caused a great shock to the little church at Mantua." "Eliza Snow, afterwards so noted as the 'poetess' among the Mormons, led the way. Her parents and sisters, and three or four other members of the church, were finally carried away."—Page 240.

Here we have Mr. Rigdon with his home friends, highly respected and preaching for the church at Mantua, March 21, 1830. He continued in this labor until the very advent of the faith of the Saints in that community, and the presence of the Elders in their midst, in the fall of 1830. Two months and a half before, he was in the Mahoning Association, in Austintown, with Scott, and Campbell and others; he and Mr. Campbell having a "passage at arms," over the question of "laying all at the apostle's feet." Rigdon holding that if they were to follow the New Testament in every thing, they should have to move in something of this kind. Notwithstanding the spite and spleen manifested towards Rigdon, by those from whom he separated, this is the only thing that they have to harp about as bad about Rigdon. Yet it is a Bible fact—a thing that did exist—and all that can be said of it is, is it wise or important to inaugurate it again—mere opinion.

Where, now, is place, during all these years of ministerial labor, up to the advent of the messengers of the Saints in the fall of 1830, where Rigdon could have plotted and conspired with Smith to originate a new Bible?

Further: So popular, influential and well known was Rigdon, and so unexpected such an event, that it is said that it was a "shock" to the churches when he accepted the faith of the Saints; and that he "reeled and fell" under its influence. Not a shadow of chance, here, where Rigdon could have been even suspicioned as the instigator of that faith. His old accusers, clearly acquit him of that charge.

Chapter 9 opens with "The Advent of Mormonism." That the reader may see with what a spirit or pique and maliciousness the author writes, I will give some copious extracts.

"This was in the fall of 1830. This coarse imposture was not born of chance. Characterized by much that is gross, and accompanied by practices repulsive for their lowness and vulgarity, it yet had a plan and an aim, and it was led on by a master spirit of delusion. It marked out its own course, and premeditated its points of attack. Its advent in Mentor was not accidental. Its four emissaries to the 'Lamanites' in the West, like the four evil messengers from the Euphrates, (Rev 9: 15), had Rigdon in their eye before leaving Palmyra, N. Y. On his part, Rigdon with pompous pretense, was travelling with expectancy of some great event soon to be revealed to the surprise and astonishment of mankind." Scott, Bently, Osborn, Campbell were all talking that same thing. "Gifted with very fine powers of mind, an imagination at once fertile, glowing and wild to extravagance, with temperament tinged with sadness and bordering on credulity, he was prepared and preparing others for the voice of some mysterious event soon to come. The discomfiture he experienced at the hands of Mr. Campbell at Austin Town, when seeking to introduce his common property scheme, turned him away mortified, chagrined and alienated. This was only two and a half months before he received, in peace, the messengers of delusion. Another fact: A little after this, the same fall, and before the first emissaries of the Mormon prophet came to Mentor, Parley P. Pratt, a young preacher of some promise from Lorain county, a disciple under Rigdon's influence, passing through Palmyra, the prophet's home, turned aside to see this great sight. He became an easy convert. Immediately an embassy is prepared, composed of this same P. P. Pratt, Oliver Cowdery and two others, for the 'Lamanites.' The next scene opens in Mentor. About the middle of November, came two footmen with carpet bags filled with copies of the Book of Mormon, and stopped at Rigdon's. What passed that night between him and these young prophets no pen will reveal; but interpreting events came rapidly on. Next morning while Judge Clapp's family were at breakfast, in came Rigdon, and in an excited manner said: 'Two men came to my house last night on a c-u-r-i-o-u-s mission;' prolonging the words in a strange manner. He proceeded to narrate how some men in Palmyra, N. Y., had, by direction of an angel, certain plates inscribed with mysterious characters; that by the same heavenly visitant, a young man, ignorant of letters, had been led into the secret of deciphering the writing on the plates; that it made known the origin of the Indian tribes, with other matters of great interest to the world, and that the discovery would be of such importance as to open the way for the introduction of the Millennium. Amazement! * * 'Its all a lie,' cried out Matthew, quite disconcerting the half apostate Rigdon, and this future Aaron of the new prophet retired."

Matthew was evidently a good Campbellite, for they usually conclude before hearing the evidence.

[Concluded next week].

Error may be tolerated, if reason be left free to combat it.

JOSEPH SMITH'S THIRD LETTER.

HE DENIES THAT ABRAHAM AND MOSES WERE POLYGAMISTS.

Mr. L. O. Littlefield, Logan, Utah:

SIR:—You say in your last that you prefer the plain word of the Lord to any statement that I may make. Let me give you some plain words of the Lord:

"Behold, David and Solomon truly had many wives and concubines, which thing was abominable before me, saith the Lord."

* * "Hear me and hearken to the word of the Lord: For there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none; for I the Lord God delighteth in the chastity of women." B. of M., book of Jacob, 2:6. "Behold, the Lamanites, your brethren, whom ye hate, because of their filthiness, and the cursings which have come upon their skins, are more righteous than you, for they have not forgotten the commandment of the Lord, which was given unto our fathers, that they should have save it were one wife, and concubines they should have none." Book of Jacob, 2:8.

"And they shall remain under this condemnation until they repent and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon and the former commandments which I have given them, not only to say, but to do according to that which I have written." D. and Covenants, Sec. 4, par. 8, Liverpool Ed.

In none of your arguments have you attempted to answer these very "plain words." There is not a line of teaching from 1830 to June 27th, 1844, in the books of the church, the printed journals, or the published sermons or pamphlets of the Elders, that contains a reference to the marriage relation, but what contemplates it as monogamic.

You admit that you cannot prove from the Scriptures that Adam, Noah, or Lehi had more than one wife. Of what weight in the scale of argument is your statement that you can find other men named in the history who had. The Creator evidently knew just how he proposed to people the earth; and the fact that at the outset he formed but the two, Adam and Eve, should be conclusive evidence both as to the intention of Deity and the fact. How ignorantly you write when you state that "God made man polygamic." "The history of this world in all its generations proves it." With the ink scarcely dry in the sentence admitting that Adam was the creation of God, and Eve formed for his one companion, and that you cannot prove that either he, or Noah, or Lehi had more than more than one, you say "God created man polygamic." What new cosmos is this of which you write? Do you expect me to believe you sincere when you so pervert the very words of the history?

The very reason assigned for the destruction by the flood is a denunciation of polygamy. "The sons of God saw the daughters of men that they were fair; and they took them wives of all which they chose." Gen., 6:2.

This is the opening count in the indictment. The inspired translation by Joseph Smith states that the Lord told Noah, "The daughters of thy sons have sold themselves, for behold mine anger is kindled against the sons of men, for they will not hearken to my voice." Gen., 8:3.

The voice (word) of the Lord was "they twain shall be one flesh," in direct accord with the creation. The revelation to the church through Joseph, the Seer, was in keeping with this; "that it (the earth) might be filled with the measure of man, according to his creation, before the world was made." B. of C., Sec., 45, par. 3, Liverpool Ed. This proves plainly that when God made man he made him monogamic. But man corrupted his way before the Lord. The Lord's spirit quit striving with them. The flood came and destroyed them, except Noah, a man "perfect in his generations," who "walked with God." The generations of Noah were monogamic. God saved them that he might establish his covenant with them and thus preserve a righteous seed to people the earth. This is to me, and I think should be to all who deal honestly with the Bible, a condemnation of plural marriage.

How can you, Mr. Littlefield, take these two examples in the history of the world before your eyes, and say that God "created man polygamic?" The intent was to people the earth, and we are not to suppose that it was intended to people it with a corrupt seed. He chose the system and placed the two beings with whom he began the work upon the earth, and instituted marriage. He repeated the warning by actual demonstration in the selection of a family of monogamists, Noah and his wife, his three sons and one wife each. He led Lehi out of the midst of a people whom you say was polygamic, with the purpose stated, that he might seek a godly seed. He gave the rule first by example, Lehi and his wife, his sons and one wife each. He confirmed it, secondarily, by the command which I have quoted. And yet you have the hardihood to impugn the wisdom of such creation and such precept by declaring polygamy the rule. And you further say that God sanctioned polygamy.

If God designed plural marriage to be the rule, why did he not so make them at the outset? You are the one who is indulging in sophistry, not I. I give you the plain word and the examples in history; and you evade them by sophistry that is as dark as it must be damaging.

If you still urge that plural marriage is the natural law governing man, it is but proper for me to urge that you have no Scriptural ground upon which to defend the marriage institution, and the right of a man to have more wives than one, should insure the right of a woman to have more husbands than one—and the step to the absence of any restriction as founded in Scripture is not far removed. It will puzzle you to trace from any history in your possession, either sacred or profane, the exclusive right of man to choose his female companions to any direct revelation from God. If it is left to the decision of the natural appetites of man, promiscuity will be proven against you.

Your statement that "three quarters of the human family accept it (polygamy) as the natural law of marriage," is a singular one. Does that prove it right? The same proportion discards Jesus as the Christ, too; does that prove the statement that He is, untrue? What nation accepting the Bible and Christ accept polygamy as the natural law of marriage?

Your charge upon the other quarter of the human family that they have "adopted in place of honorable polygamy, a vile, a damnable and a God-accured substitute," is contemptible. You point to the exception in monogamic nations, and call it the rule. What you allude to, and what is known as "the social evil," is in monogamic nations the perversion of the rule, and opposed to law.

I quote from your letter: "You denounce celestial marriage as a crime against mankind and a sin against God. We assert that God never has so denounced it but has approved it, sanctioned it, encouraged it, legalized it and made special laws for its direction; that the polygamist child was always recognized as legitimate."

You certainly pervert the record. Take the instance of Abraham, one of your cases cited, in proof. No prophet gave Hagar to Abraham. Sarai, the patriarch's only wife grew jealous of her barrenness; she conceived the idea of obtaining a child by proxy, and so she took a slave, and put her in her place. Abram listened to his wife (so did Adam) and when fruit resulted from his connection with Hagar, Sarai bewailed her wrong. What was this wrong? If God had restrained her from bearing, was she in fault? No. Her wrong was in forgetting the sacredness of the marital relation. When the Lord speaks in regard to this son, he puts a very strange blessing upon him. To prevent the inheritance from going out in this fashion the Lord gave Sarah a son, Isaac. In him was the covenant established, though Ishmael was the first born. The Lord then speaks concerning this secondary wife, the slave-concubine, and tells Abraham to do as Sarah enjoined, "cast out this bond woman," which he did. Ishmael dwelt away from his father's house, and was a wild man.

Abraham was not a polygamist. He had no wife by the institution of marriage, but Sarah, while Sarah lived. Sarah was dead when Abraham married Keturah, by whom he also had children. But the history states that in order to put his evil example away from Isaac, Abraham sent the sons of the concubines he had away from his son to the east country, and they are not reckoned in his posterity. This disposal of the matter of Abraham's departure from the monogamic rule, is in favor of the thought that God did not approve of it. No prophet gave him a second wife while Sarah lived; nor does the record show that there had been a change from the rule as given at the first.

Isaac's life affords you no comfort. Rebecca must have ruled her house in respect to her husband's wives, as Joseph Smith's wife Emma, would have done, if he had not, as you assert, secretly sinned against her.

The case of Joseph is only favorable to your view in seeming. He was the son of Rachel, the only legal wife Jacob had. In the 46th chapter of Genesis, where the enumeration of Israel's children takes place, none is called Jacob's wife, but Rachel. Gen. 46:19. The blessing was with Joseph, Jacob's first born of his legal wife. No prophet gave Jacob his plural wives, or sealed his concubines to him. Nor is any law cited by which any such connection was authorized.

You are well aware that all the laws of Moses were given under the code and were called the "carnal commandments, which the Lord, in his wrath, caused to continue with the house of Aaron among the children of Israel till John." And Christ, speaking of the law of divorcement, a part of your polygamic creed, said:

"Moses, for the hardness of your hearts, wrote you this precept." It is equally clear from the traditions of the church that the law of carnal commandments, which you cite as regulating polygamy, was added "because of transgression." The hearts of Israel were hardened and God swore "in his wrath that they should not enter into his rest."

In reply to your question respecting the Lord's portion of the spoil named in Numbers, chapter thirty-five, I am quite willing that the portion that went to Eleazer should be "a heave offering to the Lord;" if you know what a "heave offering" was. Of the part that went to the Levites, the record is silent as to what the Levites did with them; but the inference that they were used as wives is far fetched. They were slaves taken in war, and the thought that they could only be used as wives, or as concubines, shows the lustful tendency of the polygamic mind.

I do not mean to tell you, or the world, that God ever used polygamy in any sense to raise up seed unto Him; but that in every instance where He attempted to raise up seed unto Him, the rule adopted by Him was one man one wife. It is because of that that He calls polygamy abominable. I do not consent that He ever used that means for that object, and fully believe that you can not show a single instance, or command, in proof except the so-called revelation of 1843, and that is of such doubtful parentage that I do not accept it as evidence in point.

Moses was not a polygamist. There is nothing in the history to show that Moses had any other wife than Zipporah. She was not of the Israelitish host, for he had obtained her of Jethro, the prince of Midian, a Cushite, or Ethiopian, and supposed to be a descendant of Abraham by Keturah. The presumption is fair that Zipporah and the Ethiopian woman are one and the same.

There is no question but what when you persistently cite David and Solomon as polygamic examples, that you do so for an excuse, whatever you may pretend to the contrary. And to show you how superficial has been the reading, in regard to David, let me detail a little of his history.

Saul was jealous of the praise bestowed upon David for slaying the Philistine, and made an attempt on his life with a javelin before he had yet become a married man. 1 Sam. 18:7-11. Saul offered him his elder daughter Merab to wife; but cheated him out of her, giving her to Adriel. Then Michal, another of Saul's daughters, loved David, and was his first wife, for whom he paid an hundred trophies taken from the Philistines. Notwithstanding this marriage Saul became more and more David's enemy. 1 Sam. 18:29. This hatred of Saul continued until Saul's death, before which David had twice spared Saul's life when the fortunes of war had placed him in his power, David having gathered numbers to his standard. Saul had taken Michal from David and given her to Phaltiel, and then David took Nabal's widow and Ahinoam; but there is no proof that Samuel, or Nathan had been the agent through whom he took these wives. David was crowned king of Judah and reigned seven years at Hebron. During this time war ensued between the armies of David and Saul's son Ishbosheth; Abner the general of Israel, Joab for David or Judah. The war between the house of David and the house of Saul was a long one. See 2 Sam. 3:1 and 6. More than this the war between these hosts did not cease until Ishbosheth was slain; then the tribes were united under the conqueror, and as such he reigned in Hebron seven years over Judah and in Jerusalem over Judah and Israel for thirty-three years. David would not treat with Abner until Michal, the daughter of Saul, married first to him, then to Phaltiel, had been re-delivered to him. Phaltiel, her second husband, followed the troop crying after his wife until Abner made him return. Here was one woman in Israel that had two husbands; and it was not Samuel or Nathan that gave them in either case.

Again; it is in proof that Abner had one of Saul's concubinal wives as his. Her name was Rispah. The record further states David gave unto Mephibosheth "all that pertained to Saul and to all his house." He did this in pursuance of his oath to Saul that he would not "cut off his seed," and Mephibosheth was the son of Jonathan, the grandson of Saul. 2 Sam. 9:9, 13. Ziba, "the servant of Saul," was doubtless the steward of his house; and as such was in charge of all that belonged to Saul; and he was made the witness of the transfer of the house (family and possessions, slaves, wives, concubines and all) of Saul to his legal representative. There is no evidence to show that David had any of the family of Saul as his wives, except Michal, Saul's daughter. I did not use the words "conqueror" and "fortunes of war" without good warrant; as any man among you, not a polygamist ingrain, will acknowledge, if he will read the record for himself.

If the example of David is good, permit me to enquire, who succeeded to the house of Pres. B. Young? He left houses, lands, wives and children. He did not die fighting the Philistines, in manhood's prime; in the din of battle; but in his bed after he had disposed of his worldly goods by will, leaving no portion of the moneys held by him as a ruler in Israel to the congregation of the Lord. Did Mr. Taylor inherit to his master's house? Did he receive the wives of Pres. Young to be his wives? To whom were the wives of Pres. H. C. Kimball married after his death? Who entered in upon the heritage of wives of Pres. G. A. Smith and Orson Pratt? Please tell me who obtained the wives of Joseph Smith? When and why?

One other will suffice for the present. If the question of your salvation, or mine depended upon the character of Joseph Smith, my father, rather than upon our own acts, then the sentence you think betrays my hardness of heart might never have been written by me; but when you reflect that whatever Joseph Smith may have been personally, good or bad, is not to be the test when you and I are to be tried, you must admit that the issue is not whether Joseph Smith was a polygamist; but, but is the doctrine of God?

I expect the truth to win in this controversy. If in the final arbitrament I am found in error, I shall submit. If in the right, as I now believe I am, I shall be content without being malicious.

Respectfully,

JOSEPH SMITH.

LAMONI, July 30th, 1883.

REUNION.

THE abandonment of the fall session of Conference was felt by the Saints of the western slope as a misfortune, and as they began to gather at Leland's Grove, on September 15th, it was with serious misgiving on the part of some, and anxious apprehension on that of others, while a few appeared confident and contented. Saturday, the day for meeting, was a rainy, cloud-overcast day. When the train stopped at the temporary platform erected by the committee of arrangements within a quarter of a mile of the camp-ground, and turned out twenty-three pilgrims from the south and west, including the Editor and Bro. Glaud Rodger from Lamoni, the sodden clouds overhead and the drenched roads under foot, offered sorry promise for a happy sojourning in the grove.

All day the rain came down. All day the Saints kept coming in. All day the notes of busy preparation for a week's stay went on. Blithely and happily the camps were formed; tents went up; horses were picketed; and temporary abiding-places made comfortable. The camp was placed on a hill gently sloping to the south, with a bold bluff jutting on the Mosquito creek right to the north. A space for assembly and camping purposes had been cleared on a piece of land belonging to the estate of Bro. B. F. Leland, deceased, by the kindness of Bro. Joseph Seddon, administrator of the estate. It was well sheltered from the winds from any quarter and answered quickly to the warmth of the unclouded sky. The arrangements of the committee had been good, so far as could be on so small a piece of land. Trains were to stop at the platform each way. Hay and wood had been provided. The only mistake discoverable, that the anticipation for a crowd had been too small, the attendance surprising everybody.

No meetings could be held Saturday, but on Sunday morning, September 16th, at nine o'clock, order was called by Bro. John Hawley, of Dow City, and on motion of Bro. Charles Derry, the President of the Church was chosen to take charge of the meetings during the session. Bro. J. Charles Jensen, of Mondamin, Iowa, was chosen to act as secretary. A season of prayer and testimony was had.

At eleven o'clock "Come thou Fount of Every Blessing" was sung, and the first grand camp-meeting of the Reorganized Church was begun. Prayer was offered by Bro. Edmund C. Briggs. A brief discourse on the general issues before us was given by the chairman. The session was closed by singing "Truth Reflects upon our Senses," and benediction.

In the afternoon, after a feeling prayer by Bro. Glaud Rodger, a most excellent and timely sermon was preached by Bro. E. C. Briggs. This was followed in the evening by one from Bro. Charles Derry.

At first it was determined not to appoint any police force, but the coming of a number of those who are not respecters of others' devotional rights, and the presence, in surreptitious form of whisky—that bane of good manners—Brn. Thomas Chatburn, acting sheriff of Shelby county, in which the meeting was held, Alma M. Newberry, Milton Dougherty, G. F. Skank, Abraham Crandal, Amazon Badham, and Hans N. Hansen, with the committee on grounds were appointed as police.

The following programme of procedure for each day's services was ordered, to be carried out or varied as wisdom and the elements might permit or decide:

At 9, meeting at the stand for prayer and testimony. At 10:30, the time from that till noon to be devoted to the preaching of the word; from 2 to 4 p. m., and from 7 to 9 to be devoted to preaching services. This plan was adhered to as closely as propriety dictated, without impairing the spirit of freedom that all delighted in.

On Monday (17th), the prayer service was in charge of Brn. John A. McIntosh and Glaud Rodger, and was much enjoyed. At 10:30 prayer was offered by Bro. Jas. Caffall, and Bro. Rudolph Etzenhouser, a young and rising minister for the Master, led in a good discourse upon the evidences of the present in favor of our work. He was followed by Bro. Thomas Nutt, a tried soldier, in well-chosen words of comfort and instruction.

A prayer and testimony meeting was held in the afternoon, the services being in charge of Brn. James Caffall and A. H. Smith. The evening sermon was by Bro. James Caffall, a compact and masterly effort in defense of the gospel. The inspiration and power of the Spirit, were clearly with the speaker, his words at times being clothed in fire in their import and eloquence. Under it the reserve and fear respecting the success of the reunion melted away. The key-note of content and enjoyment of spiritual association in Christ for the occasion was struck. The plane of brightness and cheerfulness for the Saints was reached, and maintained thereafter, during the entire session.

Tuesday (18th) was spent in a similar way, Brn. Parker and Hogaboom in charge of prayer-meeting. Bro. Gordon E. Deuel offered the prayer at the preaching service and Bro. Alexander H. Smith, of Independence, discussed in an entertaining and instructive manner the name which the Church and the Saints should bear. It was a spirited and timely effort and was well received by the now delighted congregation.

Bro. Colby Downs led the afternoon service in prayer. Bro. Glaud Rodger gave the sermon, a cheering and encouraging admonition to faithful performance of duty, followed by Bro. Joseph Smith, who also addressed the congregation in the evening. During the day Bishop G. A. Blakeslee arrived from the east, and he pronounced the benediction at the close of the day's services.

Wednesday (19th), the prayer service was in charge of Bro. John Hawley. The morning sermon was by Bro. John A. McIntosh, followed by remarks from Bro. Joseph Smith. "Uncle John's" recollections of his early ministrations, his unique and excellent experience, his long period of service and his faithful record all went to make this one of the most enjoyable sessions held on the ground.

The afternoon preaching was by Bro. Gordon E. Deuel, whose presentation and defense of the gospel was a pleasant and agreeable surprise to very many. His forty odd years of service, dating back in the days of Joseph, pressed the views he gave upon the attention of the hearers with good force. He was followed by Bro. J. Smith.

Bro. J. C. Crabb came in to-day, and was called to the stand in the evening. His presentation of the claims of the Church to the continued ministrations of Christ, in accordance with the word and dealings of God with men, was in keeping with the sermons before delivered, and was like a "nail driven by the master of ceremonies in a sure place." Bro. Smith followed him as he also did some others, in his way.

Pres. J. Smith presided at the morning prayer service. The session lasted one hour. During that hour prayer was offered by seventeen of the visiting Saints, joined by all in fervency and hearty amen.

Bro. John Hawley gave a good exhortation on the duty of Saints at the morning preaching hour. He was followed by Bro. J. Smith.

The names of several were given for baptism. At noon, adjournment was had until 2:30 for the purpose of attending to the ordinance. Bro. Edmund C. Briggs was put in charge of the service at the water, and Bro. Eli Clothier was appointed to perform the rite. At one p. m. over six hundred persons assembled at the water and the following were baptized by Bro. Clothier: Henry B. Engstedt, Charles Reams, Josephine Ticehurst, Mary Houghton, Pluma German, and John B. Baker. The confirmation services were held at 2:30. Upon the call to order, Bishop Blakeslee led in a spirited and feeling prayer; confirmation hymns were sung; and Brn. E. C. Briggs, Alexander Smith, James Caffall, and Joseph Smith officiated in the confirmation service. A most excellent overshadowing of the Spirit was felt and acknowledged by the Saints with gratefulness and praise.

The confirmation exercises concluded, Bro. Eli Clothier of Galland's Grove addressed the now quite large audience upon the subject of "The Sabbath," giving all something to think about. Many were much pleased, and the effort was worthy of consideration. The preacher for the evening session was Bro. J. F. Mintun of Magnolia, Iowa, one of the youngest of the elders in the field. His effort was a gospel one, and was well received.

Rain interfered with the morning prayer service on the 21st (Friday), but at 10:45 meeting was called, and Bro. J. Smith spoke to those who gathered at the stand, making his address to the Saints especially. He also spoke in the afternoon. The evening service was occupied by Bro. J. Caffall, largely upon the duties of Saints, both as officers and members, closing his remarks with a stirring appeal for the proper sustaining of the great work in its temporal and monetary departments. It was a most excellent appeal and productive of good thoughts among the listeners.

Saturday morning, the 22d, was wet and cold. There was a short prayer service only. In the afternoon, after some delay, the Saints assembled at the stand, and Bro. J. Smith made a direct and stirring appeal in behalf of the temperance side of Christian work. This was received with approbation, and met a hearty response from the people.

During the evening intermission Bro. Thomas Nutt baptized Jesse H. Johnson and his wife Annie E. Johnson, Joseph Goode, Evan O. Jones, and Peter Lawson. These were confirmed at the opening of the evening session by Brn. James Caffall, E. C. Briggs, Charles Derry, and Glauud Rodger. After these ceremonies were over, Bro. Alexander H. Smith delivered an address on the law of tithing, at the request of the Bishop, Blakeslee. The subject was presented in a strong and pleasant manner, and the good impression made by the speaker was confirmed by the Bishop in a short speech on the same topic. The Saints were edified and instructed.

The rain fell at intervals all Saturday night and until late Sunday morning, the 23d. It was not until nearly half-past ten that any meeting could be held at the stand, so constantly did the skies and rain-laden trees drop "their garnered fulness down." When at length call to assemble was made, the following resolution was offered by Brn. Charles Derry and Richard Farmer, and acted upon:

"Whereas, We, the Saints assembled in this Reunion meeting, have realized spiritual blessings and favor from God, and have enjoyed the communion and fellowship of each other since we assembled together, and believing as we do that great good will accrue to the Church generally as well as to us individually, in the continuation of these meetings; therefore, be it

Resolved, That we are in favor of holding a Reunion meeting annually, and that a committee of three be appointed and empowered to obtain control of the grounds where said meeting shall be held, and to let grounds for provision stands, and that the proceeds from the letting of said stands shall be used to defray the expenses of the meeting, reserving to the owner of land one stand for the sale of provisions. And be it further

Resolved, That no swings, shows, or intoxicating liquors shall be allowed on or nearer the grounds than is prescribed by law for such meetings. And we invite all districts who may desire to join with us in this movement for the advancement of the cause of Christ to cooperate with us in lifting high the standard of the cross, that the truth may be made known, our spiritual growth increased, and our God and Christ glorified."

This resolution was adopted. By further motion it was decided to meet on the premises of Bro. H. Garner, in Raglan township, Harrison county, Iowa, on the first Saturday in October, A. D. 1884, and to continue over two Lord's-days. Brn. James C. Crabb of Little Sioux, Henry Garner of Magnolia, and Donald Maule of Raglan were chosen as the committee of arrangements for the Reunion of 1884.

The Saints, on separate motions tendered vote of thanks to the one having charge of the land on which camp was located, the committee of arrangements, and to the officers of the Chicago, Milwaukee & Saint Paul railway, who carried passengers to and from the Grove at one and one-third rates. Bishop G. A. Blakeslee was appointed as a committee to obtain rates over the two roads leading to Mondamin, the nearest railway station to the ground for 1884.

This necessary business occupied the little time that was fair in the forenoon. In the afternoon it was fair, and a very large audience greeted Bro. Charles Derry who preached a noble and characteristic gospel sermon refreshing to all.

The evening service was opened in the usual way, a child was received and blessed by Brn. Charles Derry and Glauud Rodger. After this Bro. J. Smith spoke about twenty minutes on a suitable closing topic, when the rain began to fall to that degree that further service was abandoned, the benediction was pronounced, and the audience dismissed with a prayer for the safe-keeping of all.

Thus closed a series of services, which during their progress were productive of pleasantness and peace to all. There was nothing to mar or disturb. All entered heartily into the service of the hour. The song services were for the most part in the charge of Bro. Almon D. Hougas, of Emerson, Iowa. He was supported by many singers, among them Brn. P. Cadwell, George Kemp, Wm. Gaylord, A. White, J. C. Jensen, J. Caffall; Sisters Murphy, Shellhart, Chatburn, Caffall, Stuart, and a whole host of others from all the branches whence they came; all who could and had books joining in the service to the praise of God. During the intervals between the services at the stand the tents and fire-sides witnessed many happy groups eagerly singing the songs of Zion.

Profound peace prevailed in all hearts. Contentment and cheerfulness spread like a mantle over the camp. But few were sick upon the grounds, and most of these were helped by the anointing and laying on of hands. No murmuring, fault-finding, or grumbling were heard. Most came provided for rainy weather. The tents were so shielded by the woods that rain could not drift into tent openings, and except for the loss of four sessions after the meeting began the programme of each day was carried out.

The feeling to hold another camp-meeting next year was unanimous. The place and time were determined in the utmost good humor. The committee appointed for next year are well qualified for their task, and have the excellent example of the one acting this year to aid them. We did not get the names of all the committee, Brn. David and William Chambers and David Hall being all the ones we learned of, but we requested Bro. David Chambers to furnish us with a report of their procedure, or so much as they chose to make public, for insertion in the HERALD.

The leading ministers present were Brn. James Caffall, Alexander H. Smith, and E. C. Briggs, of the Twelve; Glauud Rodger, and J. F. Mintun, of the Seventy;

Bishop G. A. Blakeslee, Charles Derry, John A. McIntosh, Phineas Cadwell, J. W. Chatburn, of the High Priests; Eli Clothier, G. E. Deuel, R. Etzenhouser, I. N. White, A. White, John Hawley, Thomas Nutt, T. W. Chatburn, and a whole host of others whose names we do not now call to mind. Those not named must not feel hurt because their names are omitted, nor must those named feel elated over such mention, as neither flattery of one nor offense to the other is intended.

The weather for four days was wet, the ground damp, but the interest did not flag from first to last, and the verdict of those present is that the camp-meeting was a success.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. M. O. Matthews wrote from New Park, Pa., September 17th, that he was lately called to preach at Airville, twelve miles from there. The people of this place prior to his visit, had not understood the difference between us and the Polygamic Mormons. After learning our true position they were pleased, and have invited Bro. Matthews to return, with the assurance that he can have the Town Hall. One woman has given her name for baptism.

Bro. Simon Shearer, of Sedalia, Mo., writes of his joy and hope in the latter day work. Ever since he was baptized by Bro. J. H. Lake, the way has grown brighter to him, and he now desires to bear testimony that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of L. D. S. is the Church of Christ.

On receipt of a three cent postage stamp Bro. F. C. Warkey, of Independence, Jackson county, Mo., will furnish to any address, a hand book of Jackson county, Missouri.

Bro. John Shook wrote from Buchanan, Michigan, September 21st, saying he was going into the north part of Michigan the next week, to visit the different branches, and do all he could in the gospel work.

Correspondence.

LITTLE COMPTON, R. I.

September 17th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Since I last wrote you Bro. F. M. Sheehy and myself have visited and labored in the state of Maine. In the Western and Eastern Maine District; viz., Little Deer Isle, Brooksville, Sedgwick, Green's Landing, Jonesport, Indian River, Addison, Mason's Bay, Jonesborough, Little Kenebec, Holme's Bay, and Grand Manan, N. B. We found in the East very many good people. We were treated very respectfully and kindly by all. We did not find the work in some places in as good condition as we desired, but we think we discovered signs of improvement in many places, and think that with labor and the exercise of patience, the work there may again become prosperous. We met with the Saints of the Western Maine District in Conference at Little Deer Isle. A goodly number of them came together, and we believe good was accomplished. We spent seven weeks in Maine, and then returned to attend our District Conference held at Providence, R. I., and which we may chronicle as being a decided success. Two were baptized during its sessions. It was the largest gathering of Saints I think ever had in this Massachusetts District. Bishop Blakeslee and his counselor, E. L. Kelley, were in attendance. Their teachings on the "Temporal Law," were opportune, and were well received.

Bro. Sheehy has returned East, in company with Bro. Kelley, to attend the conference of the Eastern Maine District, held at Addison, and may labor some time there before he returns. I am preaching here every night, but how long I shall remain I can not tell; it will depend on the interest manifested. There are so many calls, so many want us to come and preach to them, that we hardly know which place to go to next, that will be for the best interest of the cause. We need grace to sustain and heavenly wisdom to direct, that the work may be done with the approval of the Master.

I have been much interested in your controversy with Elder L. O. Littlefield. So far the truthfulness of your position has lost nothing by the contrast. May you retain the Spirit of God, that you may continue to honor your calling, and thus be instrumental in leading back to the "Old Paths," wandering and scattered "Latter Day Israel."

Yours in the love of Christ,

JOHN GILBERT.

BUTTE CITY, Montana,

September 18th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I start home to-day, as I learn by letter from Bro. Joseph Luff that his bodily afflictions make it necessary for him to preach but little, and that he goes home at an early time. For the past two weeks I have been laboring in Deer Lodge Valley, near Stuart and Deer Lodge City. The farmers were busy haying, harvesting and threshing, yet we had good attendance at meetings on Sundays. Much interest was manifest in our exercises, and many kindnesses shown, both by our members and others. It is probable that many in and around Deer Lodge City will yet, and at an early day, unite with the Church. I had hoped to return to Deer Lodge and hold services in the court house which was kindly offered us, supplemented with a request to do so by Mr. Mills, editor of The New North West. I shall seek to have this opening supplied at an early time. I had intended to call on Brn. I. Price, R. Jenkin, and Wm. Jones, and families, near Keene Station, had I returned to Deer Lodge. I trust we have planted our work in many places in Montana where good results will follow. Here in Butte we made no special effort, as both time and opportunity were not favorable now. In closing I will add that, the Saints, and other friends in Montana have aided us liberally in our Rocky Mountain mission work. The prospects now are better than ever before for the increase of the Church in Montana.

Your correspondence with L. O. Littlefield is creating many favorable impressions in this mission. After this correspondence began to be published in the Herald, I saw you, in a night vision, come to a dark, troubled, rapid-running river, by which I was standing preparing to cross it, and you waded boldly into it at an angle downward of near forty-five degrees, and when you reached the middle of the stream the surging waters were up to your neck and you stopped, with your feet fixed solidly on the rocks, and pressed your left shoulder against the rushing waters, the waves rolling back powerless to move you, when moving on again you made your crossing successful and triumphant. Upon this I entered upon and began swimming in the same waters. I was filled with astonishment and admiration when I saw you keeping your feet securely on the rock beneath when the stream was beating against you so vehemently. Upon telling this to Bro. E. M. Bowen next morning, he said it related to the efforts going on by the Utah leaders against you, and this was how I had understood it. I have no fears but that you will keep your feet upon the solid rock of God's revealed truth in all this unpleasant controversy, and that you will triumph in the sight of heaven and all good people, while the dark "waters like a flood" of Brighamism, will prove powerless to move you from the right.

I look to see Congress take far more decided and effectual steps against "Brighamism" than at any time in the past. The storm is gathering, and the evils of Utah Mormonism will fall by it, if they are not soon put away. It has been gaining in volume and intensity very rapidly the past year, and only the blind fail to see it.

Yours,

W. W. BLAIR.

Brother Joseph Smith:—I arrived at this place on the 8th inst., and began preaching in the Mount Zion Church, said to be a Union Church. It was built with the express understanding that all denominations should have the privilege of preaching in it, and a four acre lot was deeded for that purpose. I preached in the house on the evening of the 8th, and Sunday morning at 11 o'clock; and at night, whilst brother G. T. Chute was preaching, some parties became very boisterous. I had forgotten to mention that the same party had threatened to shut us out of the house before we got here. Bro. Samuel Page went and talked with the party that had locked the door; he finally unlocked it. But Sunday night the devil raged. One man, "or shall I call him a thing," was seen with pistol in hand, making threats. One of the parties was baptized by Bro. H. C. Smith. Since that time he got religion, and joined the Methodist Church. As near as I can learn, there were five or six in their band. They claimed to be twenty-five strong. "Just half the number of grandpap's band." They were to be there on Tuesday night, to prevent us from preaching. At the appointed time we were there, and preached to a large congregation of respectable people. The opposing party was scarcely visible, three or four perhaps on the outside. On Sunday night, after the meeting was over, the leader of the mob agreed with Bro. Page to leave the matter to the people, and if they voted for us to continue, that was to settle the question. The vote was to be taken on Tuesday night. When we got to the meeting house on Tuesday night, the door was locked. The front door was fastened with a trace chain and locked. The two side doors were fastened, but not locked. They were opened and all the people went in, and I was invited in and asked to preach, and I did so. I was told that the man that opened the doors, was not a Church member, but had given liberally to build the house. Besides he did the carpenter work on it, and never got his pay for it. At the close of the service I took an expression of the people, and I told them if there were any that opposed our preaching to arise to their feet. Not one arose. I then asked those who favored the preaching to arise to their feet, when almost every one in the house arose. I then published my appointments for every night during the week, and twice for the next Sunday. On Wednesday night we went to fill our appointment, when we found all the doors fastened, and a notice on the door forbidding any person or persons from entering. That this day the Southern Methodist Episcopal Church had purchased the possession, and held absolute control. A goodly number of people assembled, and I stood under a cloudless sky, and in the light of the moon talked to them of the liberty of the gospel, and of the rights of free men. Told them how cruel tyrants had persecuted the Lord of Life and peace, and killed the prophets. Some four or five of the mobbers were sitting out some little distance. They had turned some away that were coming, telling them what they were going to do, provided the house was opened. One of the party that was so bitter, was a member of the Protestant Methodists. The others were members, some of the Northern M. E. Church, and others were of the Southern M. E. Church. There was one preacher in the gang, and one other that is trying to be. If he was not fully qualified for the ministry of that body before, he certainly is now. There is considerable feeling over the matter.

There had been a deed conveying four acres of land to the Church when it was first built there, and some way the deed was lost. It was never recorded, and last Tuesday the same man that deeded the four acres to the Church for a Union Church, deeded one acre that the house stands on to the Southern M. E. Church. He is a member of that Church. He told me and Bro. Page, that he did not want us shut out; but for one dollar he put it into the hands of men that did, and they accomplished their desires. We are now holding forth in a little school-house, about three or four miles from Mount Zion of the M. E. Church, south. The day we were closed out of Mount Zion, a member of the M. E. Church, north, came five miles to see me, and invited me to go and preach for them. He told me that a minister was at the head of the party that closed us out. He told me that he had talked with the trustees of their house about getting me to preach there, and they were all willing. He said he was one of the Trustees. That he had built the house and holds the deed to it until he gets his pay for building it. I am to commence operations there on the 17th. The name of that house is the Saw Dust Church. It is not like unto Mount Zion; but I hope it may prove to be a better Mount Zion than the other did.

I never felt better than I do now. God has blessed my ministry. I think of the persecutions of my blessed Lord, and of the terrible trials, persecutions and martyrdom of the ministers of Christ in the times that are past. I think too, of the goodness and love of God to them that persecuted and killed him, and that his loving hand was stretched out to a cruel hearted and gain-saying people. And when the gospel was restored by Joseph Smith in this dispensation, the same spirit that took possession of the people that killed the Savior and Prophets and Apostles, seized upon people professing to believe in Christ, the Lord, and claiming to be his followers, led by professed ministers and representatives of him and his gospel, they slew the prophets, robbed and mobbed the Saints, driving them from their peaceful homes like they would beasts of prey, because they taught just what Jesus and the Prophets and Apostles taught. They tell the same gospel story, present the same bright hope to erring and wayward men and women, and tell of the joy and power of the gospel, of its glory to men on earth, and of its eternal joys in the world to come. And for this, they too were driven, persecuted and killed. For this are the ministers of the Reorganized Church shut out, threatened with banishment and death, by lying priests and their bigoted and fanatical followers. I only speak of those who do these things. There are very many honorable men, who are ministers and members that would scorn such doings. The fanatics are few, but enough to do the devil's bidding.

I now expect to remain here until the latter part of October. Will then go directly home. I want to attend the Alabama District Conference, the 13th and 14th of October. Then attend the Florida District Conference on the 20th and 21st, and from there go directly home.

I think I can leave the mission in a fair, healthy condition. All the South Eastern Mission needs now is good, faithful laborers, and good returns for the labor done would be the result. This field ought to be looked after. In all my travels in the South, I have found a kind, generous people. There is less scepticism and infidelity here than there is in the west and north. I hope the Church will be able to strengthen this mission by the next General Conference. My mind is that some of our Elders here be appointed to labor under General Conference appointment. The Church has talent here as well as elsewhere, and men, too, that are willing to labor. We need some representative men in the South. My opinion is that great good would result from such a course. May the Lord bless and prosper his own glorious work.

I remain yours in gospel bonds,

R. J. ANTHONY.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Last evening I baptized two more into the Church. Our youngest daughter, Mrs. Lulu S. Schiefer; the other Bro. R. Ferris' eldest daughter. I preached at our Hall last evening to a good house. Enjoyed much of the good Spirit. Last Sunday Bro. Philips and myself preached to the Saints in Sacramento. A good spirit was there, and the love of God and of the brethren was manifest.

Bro. Joseph, you have struck the key note in your last reply to L. O. Littlefield, and every honest Latter Day Saint must feel to say, "God bless you, Joseph." I do, and pray God to sustain you; and whether your father did as they say or not, it makes no difference to you or the cause of Jesus Christ. God will not stultify himself and his law in this dispensation. "Let God be true, though every man a liar." Go ahead Joseph, and God bless and prosper you. They feel the force of your arguments, and they feel that they are on sandy ground. As long as they could make their dupes believe that your father sanctioned such a doctrine, they were sure to hold the people. If the Twelve had that revelation read to them, why did they have to whip poor Parley P. Pratt into the harness from time to time, on their exodus from Nauvoo? You have the prayers and good wishes of the Saints on this coast.

I remain yours in the gospel covenant,
H. P. BROWN.

Bro. Joseph:—Before we left Parrsborough, we had the pleasure of baptizing Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Layton. She is Emma's sister. I got the ice broken there before I left. I mean in Parrsborough; for I had excellent liberty in preaching Sunday. I think our Father heard some one's petition for me, and blessed me. There will be an excellent opening here soon. Some are now very much interested, although we have not had any public meetings. I had a very pleasant visit with Mr. J. A. Steele, the Baptist minister here. He is the first one I ever met, whose views on baptism agreed with the Doctrine and Covenants. He thought we ought to make our selves right as against the many "Encyclopedias," which certainly give a very erroneous statement of our faith etc., and is misleading many. I found him a fair, honorable, upright critic in our short conversation. May our Father lead him by his Spirit into all truth. I have had the pleasure of meeting many of my relatives here, and setting them right about our faith. We leave to-morrow, and will probably not make much stay on the road, until we get to Cape Breton. How bright the light of truth shines when placed side by side with the darkness of this land. Here they think they are rich, and have need of nothing, and know not that they are blind, and naked. O, for more laborers in the vineyard of the Lord, for the day is approaching fast. But truly, who but God can hasten the work in its time.

Yours,

J. F. BURTON.

Dear Herald:—I have been sick for the past week, and my mind has almost all the time been on this great latter day work; and although weak in body, I feel stronger in the faith. When I think of the trials those have passed through, and are still having to pass through, who have been the means of establishing this cause, I think how long, Oh Lord, wilt thou suffer the oppressors of thy cause to stand? No wonder the Angels cry to go forth, and consume the earth, but the time is not yet. But earthquakes, pestilence and fire, are doing their work. When we see these things, we know the day draweth nigh. These are only the beginning of sorrow.

I think if the Prophet Joseph could read those letters of L. O. Littlefield, he would feel like saying just as Jacob did when he spake unto the people of Nephi, Book of Mormon, Jacob 2:2, 3. Yes, the whole chapter. Also Doctrine and Covenants, page 77, 3rd verse; and page 313. Brother Alexander Smith baptized two before he left Webb, Bro. Fuller and wife. Let us not forget the promise we made at the waters of baptism, and may our race be run with patience, is the desire of your sister,

R. M. BRADLEY.

SPRINGFIELD, Nebraska,

Dear Herald:—I left home on the 14th inst., came by the way of Plattsmouth, stayed with the branch there and preached for them, I believe five discourses. I find them a good, lively branch, with Bro. Wm. B. Smith at the head. I enjoyed myself while there, and feel to thank them for their kindness to me. They have a very nice hall rented in which they hold their Sabbath services. A nice hall to preach in indeed. Thence I came here and expect to hold forth in the Congregational Church, or at least I have the promise, and I expect to make use of the opportunity. This is a new place, and I hope there will be some good done here, at least we shall try and sow the good seed, and leave the rest with him who doeth all things well.

In bonds and love for the Master's work,
JOSHUA ARMSTRONG.

KIMBALL, Ontario,

September 18th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I held no meeting in Chatham as expected in last notice from me; the circumstances would not then permit. August 14th I visited Puce River in answer to call of Bro. Leverton, (district president), and confirmed an old lady who had been baptized by Bro. E. Eaton. There are now six members at that place, all colored I believe. Bro. Eaton keeps sounding the tocsin. Quite a number of his countrymen are settled in there, but as he expressed it, "they were too much like Jonah, they would try hard to avoid doing God's will." I pray God to bless him, as I believe him to be earnestly devoted to the cause of truth.

I then went to Blenheim, remained twelve days and spoke six times. Whether any good was done or not I am not prepared to say; but was comforted in trying to preach the word. "The faith" shines out in golden letters, compared with other faiths; but I find the world generally wants but precious little of the Bible, especially that part of it that refers to the religion of Christ, as enjoyed by the early Christians.

Have been in Canada since the 28th of June, and my labors have been slow from a variety of causes, and I have at times almost committed the sin of getting rebellious. I do not want to preach where people do not want to hear.

When Bibles cost two or three dollars each, as they did years ago, and men would give a load of hay for a few chapters, as is testified of by a sister here as having occurred in Scotland, they set great price upon it, and not understanding it, they believed it; but now when a Bible can be bought for fifty cents, and good bound testament for a six pence, and if they can not buy one it is given to them by these societies, their value of it has decreased with its decrease in cost, especially so when one of these deluded, or deluding "Mormons" comes around and simplifies the religion of Christ to the understanding of unlearned as well as learned.

I came to this place the 1st inst., and since then have spoken fifteen times to small, but most of them attentive congregations. Most of the meetings held in the house of Bro. David W. Johnston, (brother of John and Robert of Lamoni), where I have an appointment out for to-night. On the whole, I have enjoyed good liberty; being confirmed in the belief, that as the day approaches and times get more and more perilous, God's power will uphold his servants for the cause's sake, and their comfort; yet I occasionally receive a gentle reminder of duty, and the source of all light. Justice demands the statement that a part of the cause of prejudice here grows out of unwise and bad acts and teaching by a few Saints in the past, as some seriously bad acts and "spirit" are known to some here. May God help the efforts for good every where and in this place, is my prayer.

The old idea that I think found its birth in dark ages, when superstition reigned supreme, that a person was either a child of God or of the devil with no alternative is quite incompatible with facts, the word, and spirit of gospel truth, as I can perceive; for the principle of degrees is so largely developed in all of God's works, animal, vegetable and mineral kingdoms; comporting with which is God's word for rewards, that I can not accept the old idea.

My sympathy quickly arose for those brethren who have been so badly misused. I refer to H. C. Smith, Montague and H. Robinson. May God grant them deliverance, and all others in like circumstances. I quickly thought of the experience of Bro. B. V. S. of last winter. Bro. A. Leverton of Ontario, can tell a good case of mob violence and of his deliverance without any hurt though he went through a window frame, glass and all.

I was very much pleased with a good portion of the "fault finding article" by B. V. S., and some of it hit me square. I can not say that I have profited by it yet; but I propose to. But the devil is not dead yet, nor bound either, but is hard at work no doubt.

I wish to say that if I ever saw wilfulness, certainly Utahism is carrying it out mightily in still persisting in those "damnable heresies," 2 Peter 2: 1, in fulfillment of 1 Tim. 4: 1, and what truth they may tell is badly obscured by those "lies," 1 Tim. 4: 2, and they no doubt have fulfilled Sec. 83: 8, Doc. and Cov., (Liverpool edition), because they failed to hearken to the voice of God in that paragraph; as also Sec. 42: 5, and Jerumiah 17: 5, 6, ought to stare them square in the face. The sophistry used by them ought to be sufficient to convince any one that proselyting will not be the straw that will break the head of the "beast." It seems plain to me that they cause the world at large "to worship the first beast." Rev. 13: 12. For because of Utahism, known to the world as "Mormonism," many stay out of the fold and hang to other churches, and thereby fulfill Rev. 13: 12; for it is evident to me that by sustaining the daughters they indirectly add power to the "mother," from which they sprung, and to which they are forced to go for a line of authority; and its a poor line, too, but so long as they think its good, it answers the purpose just as well.

I shall turn westward before many weeks, for my home, and should I be able to take the field this winter, I do not think it would be profitable to come to Ontario.

September 21st. Inclemency of the weather prevented me from holding but one service since writing the above, and as the matter is in a fair shape to leave I have concluded to drop it in this place for the present. I am pleased to state that some good has been accomplished, as a large bulk of the heretofore existing prejudice has been removed. This was all I dared hope for when I began. My treatment of the apostasy and restoration seemed to take pretty well. I am told that a pretty well learned Catholic liked the style of the sermon, but thought I did not prove the complete apostasy of the church. He admitted that if the Latter Day Saints succeeded in doing that, that their props were gone, and we were on the right road. Others thought I proved the apostasy complete, but some like to hold to the reformers.

I think I shall go to Oil City and Petrolia, and see what can be done there. The few Saints here now are striving to live their religion so far as known. Bro. Robb is not very quiet though, as he hammers all that gets within reach of his shots. Bro. David Johnston also defends the faith when good opportunity is offered. Also others. Still hoping for the emancipation of souls from "the traditions of men," to the light of Christ's glorious gospel,

I am your co-laborer,

E. H. GURLEY.

NEWS SUMMARY.

Sep. 20.—A death from cholera is reported to have occurred in the Slings Hospital, Ireland.

Disorders are feared by the Russian authorities on the day of Turgueneff's funeral.

The result of the parliamentary elections in Serbia is a complete triumph for Russia. The position of King Milan is thus greatly weakened. Despatches from Belgrade describe the situation in Eastern Europe as much worse than the English news authorities (from whom America receives all its telegraphic news) are willing to believe.

The Madrid, Spain, Government has given the frontier authorities of the Pyrenees and on the Portuguese border the strictest instructions to watch the movements of revolutionary agents and quell with unhesitating severity any attempt on the part of civilians or military to disturb the peace. In Madrid and in all the principal towns with garrisons, every night extra precautions are taken and the police are on the alert, because the government has received information from the diplomatic consular agents in France, Germany and Austria, especially Switzerland, to the effect that Ruiz Zorilla and other exiles are concocting and preparing actively another rising, which is to take place unless checked in time before King Alfonso returns to Spain and probably during his stay at Hamburg, when he will be with other sovereigns and Princes at the German manoeuvres.

The relations of Turkey and Germany are very cordial. Moukhtar Pasha has been commissioned to convey decorations to the Empress Augusta and Crown Prince Frederick William.

The Austro-German alliance seems to be directed against Russia and France. In the event of war between Germany and France, Austria is to maintain an armed neutrality. In the event of war between Austria and Russia, Germany is to do likewise. If a third power attack Germany or Austria the armed neutrality will be converted into active co-operation.

It is reported that French proposals upon the Tonquin question, have not proved acceptable to China.

At St. Petersburg the number of officers recently arrested in connection with the new Nihilist agitation was thirty-eight.

The Egyptian government is vigorously repressing the slave-trade. The police captured 250 slaves at Assiout and arrested a slaver at Cairo.

A serious difficulty has occurred at El Paso, Texas, between the police authorities of that town and the Mexican Consul, Escoban, which, it is feared will result in trouble with Mexico.

Reports are daily arriving that persons who fled from Guaymas, Tex., are dying in the interior. Ten deaths in the city have been reported the last twenty-four hours. It is reported that six hundred are down with the fever.

There are ten cases of yellow fever among the citizens at the navy-yard at Pensacola, Florida.

As the result of our treaty with the Kingdom of Hawaii, $15,630,000 in duties which that country should have paid to the United States have been remitted. In return for this we have sold to the Sandwich Islanders $17,139,511 worth of goods in all.

Two additional wrecks in the recent great gale are reported from Newfoundland. Thirteen lives were lost.

A statue of Gen. Zachary Taylor was unveiled at Louisville, Ky.

At Carmi, Ill., the Illinois Association of Veterans of the Mexican War is in session.

The offices of the Central and South American Telegraph Company will open in New York City tomorrow morning.

Christopher Columbus does not rest in his grave as quietly as William Shakspeare. The ashes of the great discoverer, first buried at Seville, Spain, have been moved about till they finally lie in the Cathedral of St. Domingo, and now they are to be turned out of their resting place and inclosed in a plate-glass urn. This urn is to hold the casket containing the actual ashes in such a manner that the remains will be plainly visible.

Sept. 21st.—Gladstone has returned to London. Ten thousand weavers are united in the long strike now going on in Lancashire, England.

It is asserted by the Parisian editors that Premier Ferry has asked for English mediation in the Chinese difficulty.

Six hundred peasants from Gradescz and Bell-over assembled at Farkaswinch yesterday, armed with muskets, axes, and cudgels, shouting: "We won't belong to Hungary." A small body of military attempted to disperse the mob, but were forced to withdraw. The reinforcements at midnight were received with a volley of stones and shots. The troops returned the fire, killing ten and wounding many of the mob. Two soldiers were wounded. Two companies of infantry have been sent to Farkasurnez to suppress the riot.

The question between France and China seems to be, shall Tonquin belong to China or France? If this question is solved all will be settled, but neither party will admit that this is its aim. In the memorandum submitted to the Chinese government France offers to establish a neutral zone in Tonquin.

The people of China demand that the Empress who does not seem to be energetic enough to suit the popular demand, shall abdicate in favor of Prince Tun, uncle of the emperor.

A farmer named Fitzpatrick was shot and seriously wounded in Clonmore, Ireland. It is an agrarian outrage. Two arrests have been made.

The feeling against the Jews is spreading to Switzerland, where it takes the form of calm and deliberate opposition to their extortionate practices.

The Dutch budget for 1884 estimates the deficit in the treasury at 30,000,000 florins. It proposes a loan of 50,000,000 florins to cover the deficiency and for other purposes.

The estimated expenses of the Russian army for 1884 are 7,000,000 rubles in excess of 1883.

Four new cases of yellow fever, and thirteen deaths have occurred at Guaymas, Texas, the last twenty-four hours.

Advic from Prof. Nordenskjold's expedition to Greenland have been received via Thurso, Scotland. They state that the expedition started from Auteleiksvick the 4th of September, and reached a distance of 360 kilometres inland, attaining a height of 7,000 feet above the sea. This is the first time human beings have penetrated so far into Greenland. The whole region is an ice desert, proving there is no open water inland. Very valuable scientific data have been obtained. Along the northwestern coast a cold stream flows which induces a very low temperature, but on the eastern shore weather is not so severe, and that coast is accessible to steamers in the autumn. The expedition will return via Keikivick. When the party was 140 kilometres east of the glacier a border of soft snow prevented them proceeding on sledges. The Laplanders were therefore sent on with snowshoes. The rest of the expedition visited the northwestern coast between Waigattel and Cape York. They were informed by the Esquimaux that two members of the American polar expedition had died and the rest had returned to Littleton Island. The 16th of August the expedition sailed south from Egedesmonde, making short stays at Ivigtht, Julianeshaub, and Fredricksdal, and tried to proceed eastward, three times through the sound north of Cape Farwell and once along the coast, but the ice prevented. They went outside the ice field to latitude sixty-six degrees, remaining continually in sight of land, having twice vainly tried to find the shore from the ice more to the southward. A band of drift ice was forced south of Cape Dan, and September 9 they anchored in a fiord newly visited by the Esquimaux where remains of the Norman period were found. This was the first time since the fifteenth century that a vessel has succeeded in anchoring on the east coast of Greenland south of the Polar Circle. After having tried vainly to anchor in another fiord to the north, they returned and arrived at Reikjarik September 6.

Dun's weekly report of trade is very satisfactory. At the chief jobbing centers a large and rapid absorption of goods is noticed, money is plenty, and collections are exceptionally easy. Even the dry goods men are again in good spirits. The number of failures of the week, however, it remains to say, was large, the figure being nearly 200 for the United States and Canada.

At San Francisco, the meeting of railway magnates has resulted in the formation of a pool of all the Southern roads west of the Missouri River. The Northern Pacific is understood to stand out at present, although that corporation is expected to come in when the terms suit.

At Milwaukee the National Liberal League is in session.

Four hundred and eight assessment Life Insurance Companies have collapsed in the past eight years. This kind of co-operation seems to be a failure.

Sept. 23d.—An international conference will soon be held at Rome, to arrange an international sanitary code.

King Alfonso's negotiations with Germany are greatly disliked by the Spanish Liberals and are likely to lead to trouble.

Russia is making extensive military preparations along the Austrian and German frontiers. Tenders have been asked for 36,000 military beds. All the railways have been ordered to have military cars in readiness. A list has been made of private steamers in the Black Sea and their Captains ordered to prepare for transporting ammunition, troops, and provisions. These vessels have ceased executing private orders, and the carriage of corn is thus interrupted. Enormous provision depots have been established along the frontier, and two army corps have been distributed between the Vistula and Big Rivers. A list has been made of all persons who, in the event of war, could be deported from Poland to the interior of Russia.

Advices from the South report a terrible battle fought last week before Miragoane, Hayti, the Government troops sustaining a serious defeat. Jeremie was surrounded by a force of 40,000 men. The besieged number 1,500. They are now fairly provisioned and anticipate success.

Jacmel and Jeremie are both completely in the hands of the insurgents. A large cargo of provisions was purchased in Kingston by agents of the rebels and shipped to Jacmel in sailing vessels. The iron steamer Eider was purchased from an English line running among the islands, and guards Jacmel against all vessels attempting to land or assist the Government forces.

An Ecclesiastical council of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York was opened yesterday with imposing ceremonies at the St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York City. Cardinal McCloskey presided, and the Bishops of Brooklyn, Buffalo, Albany, Rochester, Ogdensburg, Trenton, and Newark, and also Coadjutor Archbishop Gorrihan, were present.

The comet recently observed by Prof. Brooks will be visible in this country before Christmas. It is the comet of 1812.

One hundred and twenty-nine life convicts have been received at the Joliet, Ill., Prison since it started up in 1858, twenty-five years ago.

Sept. 24th.—France will restore the salaries of the Catholic priests and otherwise make peace with the Pope.

Catholic Bishops who were expelled from Prussia by Bismarck are directed by the Vatican to open negotiations for their return.

Servia's crisis is considered extremely grave, and King Milan seems in no hurry to go back to Belgrade. The Ministers, who have been repudiated by the people, have only forty adherents in the Parliament. They, however, have the right to appoint forty more, but this will not get them out of their difficulty. They stay in their office, giving the King's absence as an excuse for hanging on.

Dispatches from Tamatave Madagascar Sept. 6th report that the Hovas have retaken all the positions on the northwest coast of Madagascar except Majunga. Variances are reported to exist between the French civil and military authorities at Tamatave.

Advices from Madagascar state that large numbers of the French troops there have succumbed to fever, and reinforcements to the extent of several thousand men will be needed before the Hovas can be subdued. It will be impossible to continue operations for several months.

Notwithstanding the proclamation of the Government forbidding the holding of meetings in the counties of Clare and Limerick, Sunday, several thousand persons, headed by a priest, gathered in Milltown, Malbay, County Clare Ireland, yesterday, and attempted to hold an Irish National League meeting. A large police force was present and prevented the organization of the meeting. The magistrate read the prohibitory proclamation and the crowd dispersed, uttering groans for the Queen and shouting "God save Ireland."

Friday last the new telegraph line to South America was opened. The same day the cable through the South Atlantic Ocean broke, and all dispatches between South America and the Old World must now go by way of Valparaiso, Galveston, and New York.

The much-talked-of convention of colored men assembled at Louisville, Ky., yesterday. Twenty-seven states were represented by 243 delegates. Frederick Douglass was elected president of the body. No other business of importance was transacted.

Justice Field, of the United States Supreme Court, sitting on the bench with Judge Sawyer in the United States Circuit Court at San Francisco, has given final judgment against the Chinese. The act of Congress barred them out, and out they must stay. No evasion such as British citizenship will avail John. Until Congress shall repeal the act, no Chinese laborer can legally enter the territory of the United States.

Receipts at the Chicago customs district increased $1,500,000 last year.

The freight-elevator yesterday mangled its man at Lehmann & Kinsman's dry-goods store on State street, Chicago.

Cable-cars are running over the Brooklyn bridge. Sixty-four passengers went on the first trip across yesterday.

Sept. 25.—The trial of Tidewater Logan, charged with being concerned in originating the recent riots, began at Canton, China, to-day. The feeling of anxiety continues unabated. The native mob remains sullen, and only bides its time. Protection continues, and only force prevents an attack on the foreigners. A mere spark at any moment may cause a conflagration the extent of which it is impossible to foretell. Preparations at the forts continue. The foreigners are greatly irritated against the French for having caused the present anxious position of affairs.

The storm of last night and to-day was especially severe on Lake Erie. The wind during the night averaged over forty miles an hour, and for short periods blew much harder. Between two and three o'clock, for about ten minutes, it made the rate of fifty-four miles. Lake Erie was in such a rage as is seldom seen. Masters of vessels which arrived to-day unite in saying that it was one of the worst nights they ever experienced. Accompanying the high wind were rain squalls and thick weather, which made it impossible to see in any direction at times.

The steam-barge Buckeye, with wheat from Toledo, made port at 2:30 o'clock this morning in the height of the gale. Captain Jenks reported that his consort, the schooner York State, also grain laden, had broken away from the steamer a couple of hours before, and it was feared she had met with disaster. At daylight a vessel was seen about ten miles up the south shore flying a flag of distress. The tug J. L. Williams, with the life-saving crew and their surf-boat made her way to the vessel through the big sea, which proved to be the York State. She had both anchors out and was in about twenty-five feet of water, though there were rocks and shoals in the vicinity. On account of the sea, it was impossible to pull her away. The life-savers went aboard, and will remain with the vessel's crew all night. She was not leaking to speak of, and as the sea was going down towards night it is believed she will be brought into port the morning all right.

The schooner Fitzgerald, with wheat from Toledo, had a rough time outside. She lost her foresail, and gaff, and boat, and her bulwarks had to be cut away to free her from water. The Case, also from Toledo, lost her boat and bulwarks. The St. Peter, from Toledo, lost her squaresail and some of her bulwarks. The floating elevator Marquette broke from her mooring in the Erie Basin and crashed into the propeller St. Paul. The latter had one of her arches broken and was damaged considerably about her stern. It will take $2,000 to make good the damage. The steam barge, East Saginaw, went to pieces in the storm off Saginaw Bay.

Sept. 26.—The hurricane which visited Nassau, N. P., and that vicinity Tuesday the 7th inst., destroyed hundreds of vessels, and caused great loss of life. The list of lives lost can only be partially obtained. Fifty-three have been so far reported, but it is thought many more have perished.

Details of the recent anti-Jewish rioting at Nowomoskowski, Province of Jekaterinoslav, Russia, have been received. Only the synagogue and three Jewish houses escaped demolition. Two hundred families were rendered homeless. Order was restored after five rioters had been killed and thirty arrested. The trouble originated in the discovery that a Russian church had been plundered, which act was attributed to the Jews.

A fierce epidemic is announced near Naples, Italy. The symptoms indicate yellow-fever.

Anti-Jewish excesses are reported in the Verprim district, West Hungary. Several houses occupied by Jews in two villages were burned to the ground. Several persons have been arrested.

Advices from Colombo, Ceylon, state that the recent earthquake in Java caused a sudden subsidence of the sea at Colombo of fifteen feet. The 27th of August the water rose and fell violently for half an hour, when it resumed its normal condition. Several vessels broke from their moorings. No other damage is reported.

Ischia's earthquake, according to the official report, killed 1,990 and injured 374 persons.

Armed bands have appeared at several points on Spanish territory near the frontier, and the gendarmerie are pursuing them.

News was received at Boston yesterday of the wreck of eighteen vessels at St. Pierre, Martinique, September 4.

FIRES, STORMS AND ACCIDENTS.

Sept. 20th.—Loss by fire at Portland Dak., $40,000. On a farm near Portland, Dak., $2,000. Chicago, Ill., $1,000. Albany, N. Y., $50,000. Cairo, Ill., $2,500.

By an explosion of fire-damp Thursday in a mine near the Town of Unna, Westphalia, Prussia, fifteen miners were killed.

Shortly before two o'clock this afternoon a terrible boiler explosion in the works of Lyon, Shorb & Co., at Pittsburg, Pa., killed five and badly wounded ten men.

Sept. 21.—Loss by fire at New York City, $57,000. Chicago, Ill., $1,200. Hannibal, Mo., $50,000. Rochester N. Y., $30,000.

Near Chattanooga, Tenn., a lady near sixty years of age, was run over and killed by a train which was just rounding a curve.

Sept. 23.—Loss by fire at Santiago, West Indies, $80,000. The principal business portion of Brownwood, Tex., was destroyed by fire, and an aged lady, at the sight of the conflagration dropped dead.

Loss by fire at Marengo, Ill., $15,000. Kansas, Ill., $20,000. Evansville, Ind., $13,000. Rosemond, Ill., $5,000.

An explosion of fireworks at Pittsburg, Pa., resulted in the death of one man, the destruction of nine hundred feet of stabling, and three valuable horses.

The collision of two trains near Seymour, Ill., killed two persons and injured badly a number more. A young man supposed to be in liquor, was run over by a train and killed, at Oshkosh, Wis.

Sept. 24.—Loss by fire at Chicago, Ill., $9,500. Hailley, Idaho, a whole block of buildings. Manitowoc, Wis., $12,000. Hunter's Point, N. Y., $50,000. Napanee, Ind., $10,000. Columbus, O., $20,000. Auburndale, Wis., $3,000.

Forest fire at West Bay, Gouldsboro, Me., consumed the Union Church, the town-house, the residence of G. Guptill with the stables and furniture and a number of cattle. The fire is still raging, and other buildings are in imminent danger. President damage to buildings $8,000. Heavy damage was done in the forest.

The steam-barge Ontonagon was destroyed by fire near Star Island lighthouse, Michigan, last night.

Sept. 25.—Loss by fire in Chicago, Ill., from $8,000 to $10,000; Columbus, O., $25,000.

Immense fires are raging in the forests and ranches above Santa Cruz, Cal., and have already done terrible damage. A dispatch from Davenport Landing stated that the entire country was in flames. One hundred and forty men went from Santa Cruz to aid in the endeavor to arrest the progress of the flames. The Santa Cruz Water Company have fifty men fighting the fire. The flames are now within five miles of Santa Cruz, and the rapidity with which they have spread leads to fears being entertained for the safety of the city.

Forest fires raged along the New Brunswick railway, throughout York county, New Brunswick. Heavy fires near Maine destroyed the telegraph poles and wires. A schooner in a ship yard was burned. All yesterday the forest between Salisbury and Sussex on the Intercolonial Railway blazed, filling the air with smoke and cinders. At points along the northern division the smoke was so dense and the fire so close to the track that trains were compelled to move very slowly along. Loss by fire at Port Jervis, N. Y., $25,000; Fair Haven, Conn., $40,000; Pottsville, Pa., $10,000.

The railway train from Paris for Constantinople was thrown from the track near Verrierova, several carriages demolished, and many persons killed and wounded.

Sept. 26th.—Loss by fire at Buffalo, N. Y., $175,000. Dallas, Tex., $16,800. Des Moines, Iowa, $25,000. Chicago, Ill., $40,000. Battle Creek, Mich., $9,000. Troy, N. Y., $30,000. Fairfield, Me., $24,000. A fire in the Kadi Keri quarter of Constantinople, Tuesday night, destroyed 300 houses. The loss is about $1,000,000. Nearly one-third the buildings in the district are in ruins.

A severe storm at Limerick, Ireland, yesterday, blew down the town hall and several houses, and played havoc with a bridge over the Shannon.

The explosion of a thrashing machine boiler near Osakis, Minn., killed three men and wounded many others. The accidental lighting of some shellac, on a vessel at Boston, Mass., resulted in the death of one man, and severely injuring many others.

LOCAL NEWS.

LAMONI.—The Lamoni School has been organized with three departments: Primary, Grammar, and High School. The Primary department begins with the simplest blackboard exercises, and includes the First and Second Reader, spelling, simple arithmetic, drill on the punctuation marks, easy songs, writing, drawing, object lessons, distinction of colors, etc. The Grammar Department includes the Third and Fourth Reader, language, geography, writing, arithmetic, instruction in personal habits, cleanliness, purity of language, study of animals, hygiene, etc. The High School Department includes arithmetic, grammar, United States history, physiology, reading, writing, algebra, natural history, book-keeping, analysis, outlines of history, astronomy, literature, rhetoric, civil government, physical geography, composition, word analysis, natural philosophy, and botany.

The school began Tuesday, September 18th, with Mr. A. Roy as Principal, at a salary of $65 per month; Mrs. A. Roy as teacher of the Primary Department, at a salary of $30 per month. Miss Randall has been hired temporarily to teach the Grammar or Intermediate Department, that place not being yet permanently filled. There has been an attendance, we are informed, of not less than one hundred pupils per day since the opening of the school.

The cheese factory commenced work at the rate of one hundred pounds per day, and has worked with continually increasing speed, until last Saturday one hundred and ninety two pounds were manufactured. Some has been sold to private citizens, and by them tested and pronounced good. Eighty cents per hundred pounds is paid for milk, and the whey, after the manufacture of the cheese returned to the seller, which certainly affords a good business for the venders of milk, whether it does for the manufacturers of the cheese or not.

During the month of August, there were shipped from Lamoni, twelve cars, containing 243 cattle, and seven cars containing 431 hogs. From the first to the twenty-fifth of September, there were twelve cars containing 265 cattle, and three cars containing 187 hogs, shipped.

Bro. Wilson Hudson is adding an 8x48 feet addition to his store building, and raising the ceiling of the old part two feet, which will make his store room, when finished as now contemplated, 23x48 feet in the clear, with a ceiling twelve feet high.

Mr. H. L. Tilton is putting an addition to the rear end of his store room, which will be used for living purposes at present, and ultimately for the storage of flour, if business necessities demand it. This addition is 14x20 feet, one story high.

Mr. George Seely has built a small frame residence a short distance east of the Herald Office.

VARIOUS POINTS.—The Humeston, Wayne county, Academy, will open on Monday October 1st, 1883, with Prof. D. A. McMains as principal.

The public schools of Humeston opened Monday, September 24, with an attendance in all departments of one hundred and twelve.

The Leon, Decatur county, high-school has two literary societies connected with it.

The track on the Des Moines, Osceola & Southern railroad was laid to Leon September 25, and the train was run to the new depot, where it was welcomed by a large crowd. The road-grade will be completed to the Missouri line in fifteen days.

Rev. J. F. Adair, of Leon, of the Adventist Church, began a series of meetings two miles and a half northwest of Lamoni, in what is known as the Evans settlement, September 27th, which will continue for some time. Rev. Adair informs us that his people do not teach the observance of the seventh day, nor attempt to set the exact time when Christ will come, although they believe in his near approach.

THE LATTER DAY SAINTS AND DISCIPLES IN WESTERN OHIO.

BY WM. H. KELLEY.

"These two men who came to Rigdon's residence were the young preacher before named, P. P. Pratt, intimately acquainted with Rigdon, and therefore, doubtless, chosen to lead the mission, and Oliver Cowdery. Mr. Cowdery was one of the three original witnesses to the Book of Mormon. These men stayed with Rigdon all the week.

"The next Sunday Rigdon, accompanied by Pratt and Cowdery, went to Kirtland to his appointment. He attempted to preach, but the awful blasphemy in his heart, and the guilt of so shameless an apostasy on his conscience, how could he open his mouth in the name of the insulted Jesus? The eloquent lips which never stammered before, soon became speechless, and his tongue was dumb. The faithless watchman, covered with the shame of his fall, surrendered his pulpit and congregation to the prey of wolves. Cowdery and Pratt did most of the preaching; and that day both Mr. and Mrs. Rigdon, with many of the members of the Church in Kirtland, were baptized into the new faith.

"About three weeks after his adoption of the delusion, he went to Palmyra to see Smith. The Prophet was rejoiced at his coming, and had a revelation all ready for him, just suited to his own purpose and Rigdon's vanity. The beginning of it is here transcribed:

"A commandment to Joseph and Sidney, December 7, 1830, saying: Listen to the voice of the Lord, your God: I am Alpha and Omega. Behold! Verily, verily, I say unto my servant Sidney, I have looked upon thee and thy works. I have heard thy prayers and prepared thee for a greater work: thou art blessed, for thou shalt do great things. Behold, thou wast sent forth even as John, to prepare the way before me and Elijah, which should come, and thou knewest it not. Thou didst baptize with water unto repentance, but they secured not the Holy Ghost. But now I give unto you a commandment that thou shalt baptize with water and give the Holy Ghost by laying on of hands, even as the Apostles of old. And it shall come to pass that there shall be a great work in the land, even among the Gentiles."

By comparing this with the revelation as given in Book of Doctrine and Covenants, Sec. 34, page 125, it will be seen that it is but a garbled extract, falsified both in word and punctuation, which shows the corrupt and dishonest spirit and motive of the writer giving it. That it is not facts, truth, and justice that he wishes to reflect, but to hold up to ridicule the faith of the Latter Day Saints, and cover Smith and Rigdon with opprobrium. Hence all that he records in their favor is done so, because the overpowering facts compel him and he sees no way of evasion; hence we quote.

"Rigdon tarried with Smith about two months receiving revelations, preaching in the vicinity, and urging proof of the new religion. His knowledge of the Bible enabled him to pervert many scriptures to this end. Soon after his return to Ohio, Smith and several of his relatives arrived.

"The new delusion immediately assumed an aggressive attitude. * * Rigdon's reputation lifted it into notice.—New members, with incredible haste, were solemnly ordained to the eldership by the high priests, and sent out every where to propagate the new faith. Their gravity and apparent candor, coupled with a degree of ignorance which was ostentatiously paraded as evidence that they were not deceivers, gave them great credit with a superstitious class of people, who are ever ready to be duped by supernatural pretension.

"Though coming into Ohio first among the Disciples, and introduced to their attention in a well-planned and artful manner, very few of the leading members were for a moment deceived. * * Rigdon, Pratt, and Orson Hyde, the last two young and but little known, were the only preachers who gave it countenance. The opposition to it was quick on its feet, in rank. * * * But the misfortune governing the case was that many people, victims of excitement and credulity, and taught in nearly all pulpits to pray for faith, now found themselves met on their own grounds, and so finding an emotion or impulse answerable to an expected response from heaven, dared not dispute the answer to their own prayers, and were hurried into the vortex." Page 209 to 216.

This latter quotation scarcely needs comment. The wiley writer has evidently done the best he could towards disposing of the facts as they occurred, which were of too frequent occurrence and too well attested for him to pass them by in silence. He admits that the people received what was to them a "response from heaven" to their prayers. Not while praying for "faith," however, as he asserts, but while asking God concerning the truth of the strange work presented to them. Why should they not confide in that all-convincing answer coming from God, which he is pleased to call an "emotion or impulse?" From this writer's standpoint, it is dangerous to ask God for anything, lest a person might receive an "emotion or impulse" that would deceive him. Do the Disciples ever pray? If they do, they can't expect an answer. It might be an "emotion or impulse," which would inevitably deceive. People were "met on their own grounds" by the Saints, of praying and receiving response, good enough. But things brighten as we proceed in our narrative.

"Perhaps in no place, except Kirtland, did the doctrines of the 'Latter Day Saints' gain a more permanent footing than in Hiram. It entrenched itself there so strongly that its leaders felt assured of the capture of the town. Rigdon's former popularity in that region gave wings to their appeal, and many people, not avowed converts, were under a spell of wonder at the strange things sounded in their ears."

Rigdon seems to have been well known, was popular and held in high esteem, not only in Mentor and Kirtland, but Hiram and all through that country. People knew him, and knew of him all the way along from 1820 to the fall of 1830. The very sound of his name was like magic among the masses, and as music in every household. Honor and regard met him every where. Who can believe that this angel of light was transposed into an angel of the "bottomless pit," in a twinkling—just because his convictions led him to unite his fortunes, as to faith and the hope of heaven, with the Latter Day Saints? Is it not more reasonable that the intelligent Rigdon was right in his conclusions and course, than his easy going, dull and stupid maligners? Did not he, too, ask and receive a "response from heaven, all satisfactory?"

"The following is from Symonds Ryder, an old resident of Hiram:—

HIRAM, February 1st, 1868.

Dear Bro. Hayden:—To give particulars of the Mormon excitement of 1831, would require a volume—a few words must suffice. It has been stated that from the year 1815 to 1835, a period of twenty years, 'all sorts of doctrine, by all sorts of preachers had been plead,' and most of the people of Hiram had been disposed to turn out and hear. This went by the specious name of 'liberal.' The Mormons in Kirtland, being informed of this peculiar state of things, were soon prepared for the onset.

"In the winter of 1831, Joseph Smith, with others, had an appointment in the south school-house, in Hiram. Such was the apparent piety, sincerity and humility of the speakers, that many of the hearers were greatly affected, and thought it impossible that such preachers should lie in wait to deceive.

"During the next spring and summer several converts were made, and their success seemed to indicate an immediate triumph in Hiram.

"* * * A company was formed of citizens from Shalersville, Garrettsville, and Hiram, in March, 1832, and proceeded to headquarters in the darkness of the night and took Smith and Rigdon from their beds, and tarred and feathered them both, and let them go. This had the desired effect, which was to get rid of them. They soon left for Kirtland.

SYMONDS RYDER."

This Symonds Ryder was a Campbellite preacher, and headed the mob at the time to which he refers. The object of putting on the tar and feathers was to "get rid of them." Not being able to meet them on Bible ground and refute their position, though they are acknowledged to have been men of piety and candor, they resorted to the old tactics of their father "the devil," by using the thumb-screw, the rack, the cross and gibbet, in the mild form of "tar and feathers." It was indeed a "specious" kind of liberality that was cultivated at Hiram from the year "1815, to 1835." Had it not been for the strong arm of the law it is evident that these men—these Christian (?) men! would have killed in cold blood those on whom they only dared to put "tar and feathers."

Here in this broad and goodly land, where there is room enough for all, and where the cultivation of the splendid and godly sentiment,—“As ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them,” is the boast of the people: where liberty, freedom of thought and worship is guaranteed to all,—this calloused old sinner had the hardihood to narrate and gloat over his unchristian, uncivil and un-American act, as late as 1868; and kindred spirits donned him in the beautiful garb of a Christian. No wonder he felt the pain of a long and lingering disease, and died hard. Sympathizing friends may write glowingly of him, and parade him in history as a model to be imitated; but this infringement upon the rights of individuals and society; this strike at the lawfully guaranteed freedom of individual worship; this great transgression and sin against the noblest sentiment of the Christian religion, and attempt at tyrannizing over the consciences of men, will put his name and his co-workers with that of intolerant and cruel bigots, which will go down to posterity with contempt and execration. Had he repented, even in old age, our pen could have written softly of him. Do the Disciples yet boast of this infamous deed, and still claim to be Christians? Doing to others as they would have others do to them?

The Hiram church was organized April 18th, 1829. They were Baptists and organized under the reform movement that prompted the Mahoning Association.—Page 238.

“The history of the church of Disciples in Hiram is so intimately interwoven with that of its first, and long, its only elder, Bro. Symonds Ryder, that we shall follow the thread of his life in giving the history to our readers. In doing this, we shall draw freely from the biographical sermon delivered by Pres't. B. A. Hinsdale, of Hiram College, on the occasion of the funeral of Mr. Ryder, August 3d, 1870, slightly abridging some paragraphs. * * * The length of the sermon will not be considered objectionable, in view of the valuable lessons which it impresses from the life of the man of whom it speaks.”—Page 244.

“Extracts from a funeral sermon preached in Hiram, O., August 3d, 1870, on the life and character of Simonds Ryder, by B. A. Hinsdale. “Symonds Ryder was born in Hartford, Windsor county, Vermont, on the 20th of November, 1792.”—Page 245. “In the early history of Hiram, he was perhaps, the best educated man in the township.”—Page 246. “In 1829 he united with the Baptist Church at Hiram, under the preaching of those laboring in the reform movement. He was ordained the first overseer of the church at Hiram.” “From the moment Bro. Ryder obeyed the gospel, he expressed himself satisfied with the views taught by the Disciples on all points save one. He read in the New Testament of the gift of the Holy Spirit; and, in his mind, it was in some way associated with the laying on of hands, and with some special spiritual illumination. The words ‘These signs shall follow them that believe,’ seemed to him not yet to have been comprehended or realized. For years, this mystery of the word was the subject of frequent thought and conversation. I have been careful to state this as it furnishes a key to a remarkable episode in his life.”

Don't any one laugh while reading the above! It is a funeral occasion. The “mystery of the word” in regard to the signs following the believer and the receiving of the Spirit through the ordinance of laying on of hands, seems not to “have been comprehended” by those zealous Bible students. Can any one tell what part of it was not mystery to them? There was one thing decidedly clear to some of them, at least, and that was the great doctrine of “tar and feathers.” And stranger still, this was the first church established on “the Bible alone”—“in this part of the Western Reserve.”—Page 249.

“In the latter part of 1830, the founders of Mormonism began to effect a lodgment in northern Ohio. Sidney Rigdon, a preacher among the Disciples of great eloquence and power, had joined them, and commenced preaching their doctrine. Whatever we may say of the moral character of the author of Mormonism, it cannot be denied that Joseph Smith was a man of remarkable power—over others. Added to the stupendous claim of supernatural power, conferred by the direct gift of God, he exercised an almost magnetic power—an irresistible fascination—over those with whom he came in contact.

“Ezra Booth, of Mantua, a Methodist preacher of much more than ordinary culture, and with strong natural abilities, in company with his wife, Mr. and Mrs. Johnson, and some other citizens of this place, visited Smith at his home in Kirtland, in 1831. Mrs. Johnson had been afflicted for some time with a lame arm, and was not, at the time of the visit, able to lift her hand to her head. The party visited Smith partly out of curiosity, and partly to see for themselves what there might be in the new doctrine. During the interview the conversation turned on the object of supernatural gifts, such as were conferred in the days of the Apostles. Some one said, ‘Here is Mrs. Johnson with a lame arm; has God given any power to men now on earth to cure her?’ A few moments later, when the conversation turned in another direction, Smith rose, and walking across the room, taking Mrs. Johnson by the hand, said in the most solemn and impressive manner: ‘Woman, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, I command thee to be whole,’ and immediately left the room.

“The company were awe-stricken at the infinite presumption of the man, and the calm assurance with which he spoke. The sudden mental and moral shock—I know not how better to explain the well attested fact—electrified the rheumatic arm. Mrs. Johnson at once lifted it up with ease, and on her return home the next day she was able to do her washing without difficulty or pain.

“Ezra Booth became a convert and an elder, May, 1831. Coming to Hiram in the same month, he attended church, and at the conclusion of Elder Ryder's sermon, sought and obtained permission to make an address, in which he stated in the strong, clear language of impassioned enthusiasm, the grounds of his new faith, and the inspiring hopes which they gave him. A deep impression was made upon the minds of many who heard him. Elder Ryder was himself staggered, and ‘lest haply he should be found even to fight against God,’ he sat in silence, neither approving nor disapproving. * * He made a journey to Kirtland, and heard for himself. On his return he seemed for a short time to have rejected the claims of Mormonism; but in the month of June he read in a newspaper an account of the destruction of Pekin, in China, and he remembered that six weeks before, a young Mormon girl had predicted the destruction of that city. Shortly after this he openly professed his adhesion to the Mormon faith.

“It may seem strange that a man of Father Ryder's strong mind and honest heart, could even temporarily have fallen into the Mormon delusion. Let us not fail to remember, however, that Mormonism in northern Ohio, in 1831, was quite a different thing from Mormonism in Utah in 1870. It then gave no signs of the moral abomination which is now its most prominent characteristic.

“He lacked only the discipline of study and the culture of schools to fit him for prominence in any community.”—Pages 249, 250, 251, 252, 255.

The thing which staggered Ryder regarding the faith of the Saints, and over which he stumbled and fell; it is said, was the receiving of a commission to preach, and in it he found that his name was incorrectly spelled. This was too much for Ryder. The spirit of apostasy seized him at once. The healing of Mrs. Johnson's arm, the prophecy of the little girl concerning Pekin, China, candor and the witness of multitudes, and the solid and invulnerable ground upon which the Saints stood, all at once, to Ryder, appeared as myth and vain things. So Ryder, like the “sow that was washed (if he was washed) returned to wallowing in the mire,” over one misspelled word. Being destitute of facts and argument with which to meet the Saints in a fair and manly encounter upon the forum or stand, he seized a tar-bucket and some geese feathers, and started out at the head of a mob, to carry out (?) the great doctrine of the blessed and lowly Jesus, the conversion of men by moral suasion, by putting this nasty, sticky mixture upon their bare backs, in order to “get rid of them,” i. e., the principles and faith which they were advocating. This, with Ryder and his associates, was "uniting on the Bible alone."

It will be observed that the account given of Sidney Rigdon by Mr. Hayden, concerning his early public life, whereabouts, and connection with the Church of Latter Day Saints, does not differ materially from the account given by Rigdon himself, and as it is found in his father's family record.

Mr. Hayden did not wish to bring forward an array of evidence that would forever exonerate Rigdon from the accusation of his enemies of being engaged with Smith in originating the Book of Mormon and the founding of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, but he rather desired to fasten this upon him, hence, while he has sought to cover Rigdon with opprobrium and scandalize the Latter Day Saints, like Balaam, when he sought to curse Israel, he has invariably brought a blessing. Thus the facts cited by him weigh the more heavily in favor of Smith, Rigdon, and the Latter Day Saints.

Here is Rigdon's early life, whereabouts, occupation, and the circumstances under which he joined the Latter Day Saints, taken from the family record:

"He (S. Rigdon) was born on his father's farm, Piney Fork of Peter's Creek, St. Clair township, Alleghany county, Pa., February 19, 1793, where he lived till the winter of 1818 and 1819, and followed farming, and received a common English education. In the fall of 1817 he professed religion, and joined the regular Baptist Church of that place, and in the winter of 1818-19 he went to Beaver county, Pa., where he studied divinity with a Baptist preacher by the name of Clark, and was licensed to preach by the Conoquenessing Church (time not recollected), and went from there to Warren, Ohio, and was ordained a regular Baptist preacher, and returned to Pittsburg in the winter of 1821-2, and took the care of the First Regular Baptist Church, and there continued to preach till the Baptist Association met in Pittsburg (precise time not given, thought to have been in the fall of 1824), at which time they brought some charges against him for not being sound in the faith: brought him to trial, but denied him the liberty of speaking in self-defense, and he declared a non-fellowship with them, and began to preach Campbellism. * * * In the winter of 1827-28 he moved somewhere into the Western Reserve, in Ohio, and there continued to preach till the Latter Day Saints came to that part of the country, and he joined them, and continues to be an elder in that Church."—Spaulding Story, by John E. Page, page 8.

"The statement that Mr. Rigdon is one of the founders of the said religious (Latter Day Saint) sect is also incorrect. This sect was founded in the state of New York, while Mr. Rigdon resided in Ohio, several hundred miles distant. Mr. Rigdon embraced the doctrine through my instrumentality. I first presented the Book of Mormon to him. I stood upon the bank of the stream while he was baptized, and assisted to officiate in his ordination, and I myself was unacquainted with the system until some months after its organization, which was on the 6th of April, 1830, and I embraced it in September following.

Signed, P. P. PRATT."

The historical facts cited by Mr. Hayden, in his "History of the Disciples," agree perfectly with this plain statement of P. P. Pratt. Pratt as a friend of Smith and Rigdon and the Latter Day Saints, made his statement of the facts connected with Rigdon's uniting with the Church in order to correct a false report; and Hayden, an enemy to both the men and the faith, sustains the facts in every particular stated by Pratt, although he was not conscious of it at the time of writing. Where then, is there room for even surmising that Sidney Rigdon did not tell the simple and unvarnished truth when he declared that he never knew of Smith or the Book of Mormon until P. P. Pratt and Oliver Cowdery came to his house as missionaries, in the fall of 1830, and informed him of Smith and presented a Book of Mormon to him; and that he never heard of Solomon Spaulding "until D. P. Hulburt wrote his lie about him."

The incidents cited present us with a picture of the past, full of interest and of great importance to all who are desirous that the facts of history should prevail among men rather than the falsehoods of knaves.

1st. We find the Western Reserve, Ohio, to have been the place, in advance of all others, where, as early as 1820, the spirit of counsel and reform imbued a number of people, and they set about enquiring into the strength of their creeds and disciplines, and the burdens imposed upon them by men. Being free politically, they sought to be freed from all the yokes of bondage, and fetters fastened upon them by the tutelage of churches, for which there was no warrant in the word of God. The sunlight of the morning of progress and reform had reached them, and this became a field of conflict of ideas and discovery among the most famous in history. It was, indeed, the dawn of the latter-day awakening, unconscious as the main actors may have been concerning it. "God moves in a mysterious way, his wonders to perform." His guiding hand, with its gentle inspirations, had directed the "ship of state" to freedom and triumph; and now under the same inspiring wisdom the work of preparation goes on—to ultimate, in due time, in being crowned with a complete revelation of His will to man, and the restoration of the gospel of Pentecost day—the glad tidings of great joy—to earth again.

2d. The chief leaders and spokesmen that incited and led along this reform wave, in early years, were Sidney Rigdon and Walter Scott. They taught and contended for primitive Christianity—"the gospel as preached on Pentecost day." They looked for primitive usages, the primitive order of the church, the inspiration of the Spirit, and believed in the restoration of the Jews and the millennial reign on the earth. These views were reflected under their loud and animating appeals, and the country was awakened to a great expectancy that the time had come when God would again set up his kingdom on the earth. Is it not marvelous to think upon, after the mind has dwelt at length upon the events that so soon followed, in quick succession, their untiring labors? They animated and guided the great "Mahoning Association," the center of the reform movement, in search for light, and to success. The spirit of religious freedom and individual right of opinion was engendered every where. The country was awakened, and for want of room, they congregated in barns and groves, all walking in mystery—with the eye of faith—unconscious of the end to be attained.

3d. In 1825, Alexander Campbell, of West Virginia, visited with the "Mahoning Association." By reason of some debates held in which he took advanced ground, and the liberal views that appeared in a periodical published by him, he had become quite well known, and was warmly received by the "Association," he, too, being a Baptist. He became a great auxiliary to the reform movement, by way of giving it popularity, as he was a man of learning, and had a press at his command. He was inspired with the idea of breaking away from creeds, but with the advantages in his favor, he soon became possessed with an ambition to establish another. Whatever faith he had in the beginning, concerning the restoration of the gospel plan and order of the church, accompanied with the inspiration and power of the Spirit, he forsook it, and denied the possible return and existence of vision, dream, prophecy, the voice of angels and of God, to salute the ears of mortals in this age. No restoration of the primitive order of the church in its spirit and power. Did not believe in the literal rebuilding of Jerusalem, the restoration of the Jews, or the millennial reign, and believed that any body who wished, could start out and preach and build up churches acceptably to God, with or without an ordination, as fancy might lead. Having won Scott and identified him with his interests, aided by Barton, W. Stone, Bently, Osborne and others, who left their first and better thoughts he gained a following, and finally established the Disciple or Campbellite Church, without a vision or a dream, the voice of God or angels, or the inspiration of the Spirit, to authorize it. No wonder they never grow weary of picking at the Latter Day Saints.

4th. From the time of its organization, in the year 1820, Sidney Rigdon followed the fortunes of the "Mahoning Association," animating it with his presence and great eloquence, until its dissolution and death, in August, 1830. He stood by the side of Campbell, and Scott, and Osborne, and Bently, in a word,—all the leading lights of that time, and during his long ministerial career, no act of his brought a stain upon his character. The worst that his enemies can say of him, was that he differed from Campbell about the imperativeness or wisdom, of establishing the system that obtained with the ancient disciples, among the people now. See Acts 2:45. Rigdon seems to have been urgent to a fault, for New Testament order and methods.

He was well known in Pittsburg, Pennsylvania; and Warren, Ohio; at Bainbridge and Mentor; at Waite Hill and Mantua; at Kirtland and Hiram; and all over that section of country. Every church has listened to his stirring appeals and matchless eloquence. The older people looked to him as a tower of strength and a great leader; and the younger ones, as a "spiritual father." When the great religious wave swept along the lake shore in 1829 and 1830, Rigdon was in the midst of it, and aiding it along with his gifted tongue. In 1829 he organized and aided in the organizing of churches at Birmingham, Hamden and Perry, and took "the deacons away" from the Baptists at Mentor.—Pages 346 and 409, 465, 466.

In March, 1828, he took with him Bently, and repaired to Mentor, and with his astounding and animating theme, aroused and transported the whole community. "The trumpet which they blew gave no uncertain sound. It was the old jubilee trumpet, first sounded by the fishermen of Galilee on the day of Pentecost, announcing glad tidings to the nations that the year of release from bondage in sin had now come, and calling ransomed sinners to return, freely pardoned to their homes. They spoke with authority, for the word which they delivered was not theirs, but that of Jesus Christ. The whole community was quickly and thoroughly aroused. * * Twenty persons were baptized the first time they repaired to the Jordan. * * From Mentor they went to Kirtland, where almost an equal ingathering awaited them. * * The news of this great overturn spread quickly through the country, up and down the lake shore." Pages 193, 194.

Here Rigdon planted the work of reform. This was his home. Here he remained and preached at Mentor, and Kirtland, Waite Hill, and at Mantua as late as March 21st, 1830. In August following he was at Warren, in the great "Mahoning Association," with Campbell, Scott, Bently, Osborne, and others, disputing with them with reference to a return to primitive Christianity, and the propriety of adopting strictly the New Testament doctrine and methods in all things. He was well known, and his name was famous every where; in public, in private, among the few and the many, he was held in honor and esteem. So great was his fame and so honorable his name, that his most despicable traducers dared not, or had not the conscience, to say otherwise of him than,—"It would scarcely be just to deny sincerity and candor to him, previous to the time when his bright star became permanently eclipsed under that dark cloud."—Page 192.

Two and a half months after the dissolving of the Association in Warren, he was enveloped in this "dark [bright] cloud." Where, now, during all these years of this man's ministerial labor and toil, is there place—or chance—where he could have been in league with Joseph Smith, plotted and instigated a fraud for the purpose of palming it upon the world as the true religion? Or to purloin an old manuscript, written by one Solomon Spaulding, if there was ever one written, change and model it with that end in view? Did any one, during all these years, from 1820 to the fall of 1830, ever hear him say so much as a word, in public or private, in the heat of debate, in council, or in the calmest serenity of the mind, about Joseph Smith, Solomon Spaulding, Gold Bible, or Book of Mormon? No, not one. Not so much as a lisp was ever heard by mortal ear. Whence, then, comes this lie, that he fabricated the Book of Mormon and conspired with Smith to impose it upon the world as divine, in order to start a new religion? Ah! It is the machination of that same old devil and his emissaries, that slandered and lied about Christ and the Apostles and Saints of old; and who combatted and fought so vehemently against the spread of truth in the earth during the time of their personal ministry. Indeed, the opposer of the right in every age. Nothing exceedingly strange about this latter attempt after all.

5th. In the fall of 1830, through the agency of Parley P. Pratt and Oliver Cowdery, Sidney Rigdon united with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. It was at his own home, among his own people and neighbors, where much of his early labors had been bestowed. He had regular and stated places for preaching, and was borne along by the adulations of the people. For years he had been present in their midst, to respond personally to their requests. He had eaten at their tables, mingled with their children and officiated at their altars, only to be commended and revered. They believed him sent of God. He introduced the bearers of new light to his congregations, many of whom followed his example, united with the Church, and received for the first time an "expected response" from heaven to their prayers,—confirming their faith.

Soon after his baptism, Rigdon visited Joseph Smith in York State. This was the first time that they ever met. He tarried several weeks in search for more light. This celebrity who had moved multitudes to deeds of merit by his eloquence and learning, was now sitting at the feet of an illiterate and obscure youth, learning more perfectly of the kingdom of God, the gospel of peace, and their restoration to the earth again. He investigated only to be confirmed. The ancient faith in its true order and power was again made known. Imbued with the Spirit of Divinity, he returned to his home at Mentor, where with his gifted tongue he portrayed the glory and new light that had dawned upon the world—that which had so long been sought for.

The "eloquent tongue that never stammered" now seemed touched with increased sublimity of utterance, and the words fell from his lips with such emphasis and power that men and women listened only to be convinced that he had heard from God, and that his great theme was but the truth. His "former popularity gave wings to the new faith," and scores of the old followers united with the Church. Here upon the advanced ground of liberty and reform, where the people had been taught to break the bands of creeds, sneer at the shadows of superstition, and "contend earnestly for the faith once delivered to the Saints," under the vigilant eye of Rigdon, the Church of Jesus Christ found a resting place and thrived in spite of all her enemies.

In view of the great preparatory work done by Rigdon, by opening the way and preparing a people who received with gladness the message sent, who held up the hands of the Seer and faithful witnesses to the truth, and succored and aided the helpless and infirm, who can say—who dare say—that he was not a messenger “sent forth even as John, to prepare the way.” If any have had doubts hitherto, they should at once vanish on the reading of the account given by Hayden concerning Rigdon’s great career previous to his acquaintance with the Saints. The revelation, then, was not designed to feed his vanity, as his accusers affirm, but was a plain statement of facts as they occurred, made by one who could have known but little, at most, of Rigdon’s life and labor, and nothing of its purpose, except it had been divinely given him.

It is a fact, then, that Rigdon did prepare the way; and by reason of that preparation the work of God was planted and made successful, to a great degree, in the Western Reserve, the revelation in question having been given before the Saints’ rest there had become an accomplished fact, or even attempted; dispute it who may or can. Let us have faith, then, and go on.

6th. The faith was thus established in the Western Reserve. Its representatives were men of acknowledged “piety and candor.” Their faith was so clearly Biblical, and the facts rendered so plain that they were about to sweep the communities wherever they went. Designing men could no longer blind the eyes of the people. Error could not combat such an array of truth. The ancient faith and order of things had really come. The believers spoke in tongues. A little girl predicted the destruction of Peking, China; it came to pass. This was sneered at by some, but could not be explained. The maimed came to Smith to be healed. In open day-time, before the multitude, he commanded them “in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ to be whole,” and instantly they were restored to perfect soundness. It was a “well attested fact.” Could not be denied. This the old pious enemy characterized as “infinite presumption of the man.” The result, as the effect of a “sudden mental and moral shock,” which “electrified the rheumatic arm.” This, because “I know not how better to explain the well attested fact.” Why does not this enemy talk as he did in old time, and say “it is by Belzebub?” Because he has changed his tactics, now; and says, “I am no devil for there is none;” hence it must receive a scientific solution.

The truth confirmed, it soon became so formidable that its enemies trembled in fear of its mighty sweep among the communities, unable to meet it fairly and terrified by the bars of the law, from inaugurating wholesale killing, they banded together and procured some tar and feathers, and stealthily crept upon men in the darkness of the night, and plastered it upon their naked skins, to drive them from the community. It is confessed that there was nothing evil in the system of faith presented. “It then gave no signs of moral abomination.” Only good. Then these were desperadoes, and religious bigots, and knaves. Dare any Christian deny that this was the work of the devil and his coadjutors? That it was not a shame and a disgrace to the people and community who did it? Does Mr. Hayden and his Disciple friends boast of these kind of deeds and warfare? They are welcome to all of the glory there is connected with such service; and the Latter Day Saints may well be proud that it was only such actions and such a spirit that could be brought against their formidable array of truth. When the names of such actors shall have been forgotten, blotted from history for want of something of merit to commend them, those of Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon, and all of like faith and works, will be had in honor and shine undimmed upon the pages of history.

Respectfully,

WM. H. KELLY.

LITTLEFIELD'S REPLY TO JOSEPH SMITH'S THIRD LETTER.

MR. JOSEPH SMITH, Lamoni, Iowa:

SIR:—In the opening portion of your third letter you re-iterate your quotation from the words of the prophet Jacob wherein he, in the name and by the authority of Jehovah, forbids the Nephites to practice plural marriage. In a former letter I answered your arguments derived from the words of Jacob. I showed clearly the hopelessness of any attempt on your part to sustain your opposition to plural marriage from them. And yet you re-iterate the same quotations and the same arguments. You cling to these words of Jacob as a drowning man clings to a straw, and probably flatter yourself that in so doing great praise is due to you for holding on so firmly to the iron rod of God’s word.

Mr. Smith, you are not frank nor ingenuous in the use you make of the words of Jacob. You do not quote and apply them in full. You select the sentences that suit your purpose and weave them into an argument designed to sustain your position. You are like the man who declared that he could prove from the teachings of Paul that it was right to steal. When asked for the passage he quoted from Ephesians 4:28 the words: “Let him that stole, steal;” omitting the words “no more.”

It is true that Jacob reproveth the Nephites for their sexual corruption. The nature of that corruption I explained in a former letter. It consisted in part of fornication, whoredom, and adultery. But the marriage system, laws, and ordinances under which the patriarchs and prophets of the Hebrew race married plural wives, was unknown among the Nephites; hence it is impossible that the practice of that system could have been one of the sins for which Jacob so severely reproveth them.

There are two kinds of plural marriage. One is pure, holy, heavenly; it came from God, is controlled by his laws and ordinances and is designed to elevate, purify, refine and perfect the human race. The other is low, degrading, and corrupt; it had its origin in man’s wickedness, and is calculated to debase, pollute, and destroy mankind. They are as different in their natures and effects as light is from darkness, or virtue from vice. David for a long time practiced the former and was blessed; being tempted of the devil, he fell into the latter and was cursed with a sore cursing. Precisely so with Solomon. While he practiced righteous plural marriage he was favored of God as no man has ever been before or since; but when he took wives unlawfully, he too fell, and incurred the vengeance of God upon his head. What impartial reader of the Scriptures cannot see this great lesson in the lives of these two men, and the vast difference between right and wrong plural marriage? It was the latter and not the former which the Nephites practiced, and which Jacob forbade. I admit that the dispensation of the gospel through Jacob was a strictly monogamous one. I admit that under it, polygamy would have been a crime. But I do not admit that it was the dispensation of the fullness of times; that no later one should ever be given; nor that the marriage laws binding under it were designed to be thereafter binding upon all peoples and nations for all time to come. Indeed, Jacob himself forestalls such an idea. After the tremendous rebuke which he administers to the Nephites because of their sexual sins, and after laying down with the most rigid strictness, the monogamic law unto them, he prophesies unto them. He foretells that the system he has just laid down unto them is not to continue always. He predicts that in a future dispensation God will give further commandments to his people concerning their sexual relations. These are the words of his prophecy: "Wherefore, saith the Lord, if I will raise up seed unto me, I will command my people; otherwise they shall hearken unto these things." (i. e., the monogamic law just given). These words of Jacob immediately follow those you quote. Why did you not quote them too? Was it not because that to do so would be to remove the keystone of the arch of your argument, and suffer the whole to fall to the ground? This sentence is in the nature of a prophecy, a revelation, that under the dispensation of the gospel, in which God should choose to rear a peculiarly righteous seed unto himself, to accomplish his own purposes in the earth, he would reveal to his people new laws concerning marriage. In the face of such a prophecy how can you, Mr. Smith, make it consistent with your conscience to hold that the marriage laws of Jacob were never to be changed or added to, and that the Deity must be a changeable being if he has caused to be fulfilled this prophecy which he inspired his servant to utter?

I have fully and completely answered all your arguments drawn from the words of Jacob. Doubtless, however, you will still cling to them for comfort and solace in your opposition to plural marriage; for if you yield them up as one of your weapons, you will not be able to cite, in all the Scriptures that have been given for the instruction, profit, learning, comfort, and salvation of mankind, one single word, phrase, or sentence that indicates the plural marriage system of the Latter Day Saints of Utah to be in conflict with the will or law of God.

In the fifth paragraph of your letter you allude to Adam, Noah, and Lehi, and because no record has survived the mutations of time, proving that they, during the period of their lives, had each but one wife, you set it down as "the opening count in the indictment" substantiating your position that God never intended a plurality of wives to be practiced. It is true the Creator started the peopling of the earth with Adam and Eve. He chose to commence that stupendous work with the two beings, to whom, no doubt, the right belonged. The commencement was indeed small. From two, millions descended. The stream of life widened and deepened as it flowed through the coming ages. The source of this stream was pure, and that it was corrupted by the time it reached the days of Noah, by the abominations of men and women, is no argument against only just such a kind of polygamy as they themselves had introduced to accommodate their lascivious desires. They had inaugurated it. God was not known in the matter, hence his anger was kindled against them, and the flood resulted. With Noah, who is sometimes called the second Adam, the earth seemed again, in some respects, to resume its pristine condition. Noah and his sons had but one wife each, so far as the Bible gives an account, and Lehi was in the same condition. But all this argues nothing against polygamy. There were other righteous and good men who lived in various dispensations who did not hold the keys of this ministry. And, sir, I write of no new "cosmos" when I declare to you that if these men were not thus favored, that Joseph Smith, your father, did receive from the Lord a dispensation of this ministry. You say the revelation of 1843 on celestial marriage is of "doubtful parentage," and you cannot accept it in evidence. Nevertheless it is God's eternal truth revealed through your father. You undertake to deny its authenticity by assertions amounting to this: That this revelation was fabricated by President Brigham Young after your father's death, and hence your father was not a polygamist. In my last I sufficiently disproved this position of yours by the affidavit of Elder David Fullmer, concerning which you make no allusion. This affidavit positively states that "on or about the twelfth day of August, A. D. 1843," this revelation on celestial marriage was, by your father's knowledge and consent, read before the High Council on that date assembled in the city of Nauvoo, by your now deceased and honored uncle, Hyrum Smith. Your father's death occurred on the 27th day of June, 1844. These dates show that this reading took place a little less than one year previous to Joseph Smith's death. This plainly relieves President Young from your charge and establishes the fact that that revelation was given through the agency of the Prophet Joseph. I have given you the names of women who were his wives. These ladies live in Utah, and sustain the highest credibility. They are willing to speak for themselves. As you have been a student at law, you should know something of the nature of evidence. But there is a saying, which I hope can have no application to you, that "a man convinced against his will is of the same opinion still." Now, sir, do you admit that I have proven that your father did practice polygamy? I desire positively that you will answer this question. This was one of the main questions contemplated in my open letter. I there denied the position your conference took upon this point in the Kirtland Temple as being correct. You have introduced many side issues and seem disposed to dodge this main question. I call you back to it again. This and the question of temple building were among my original questions. Before you ramble quite all over creation, expecting me to follow, I ask you to say "yes" or "no" as to whether you are or are not convinced that your father practiced plurality.

Abraham was not a polygamist you declare. In contradiction to all historians and commentators who have left their testimony on the historic page, it has been reserved for Joseph Smith of Lamoni, to make this announcement. To prove that Abraham was a polygamist, let me call the attention of the reader to the sixteenth chapter of Genesis. The touching history of Hagar and the solicitude of the Heavenly father for the child Ishmael, and the fact that Ishmael was numbered among the seed of Abraham, all go to show that God recognized them as being of the family of Abraham. And to disprove your assertion that Hagar was given to Abraham by Sarai only, let me quote Josephus, Aut. B. 1, C. 10: "Accordingly Sarai, at God's command, brought to his bed one of her handmaids, a woman of Egyptian descent, in order to obtain children by her." As God commanded this the matter is disposed of in favor of polygamy.

And "Moses was not a polygamist," you say. From the second chapter of Exodus we learn that Moses took Zipporah to wife, and in the twelfth chapter of Numbers we read of his marrying an Ethiopian woman. I hope my readers will read these passages and satisfy themselves how unwarrantable is your assertion when you confound these two women together and say that they were one and the same person. These were the two wives of Moses, thus making him a polygamist, and when Aaron and Miriam took occasion to speak against Moses concerning this matter, the anger of the Lord was kindled against them and Miriam became leprous.

"Isaac's life affords you no comfort. Rebecca must have ruled her house in respect to her husband's wives, as Joseph Smith's wife, Emma, would have done, if he had not, as you assert, secretly sinned against her." Isaac's life affords me no discouragement, at least. How Rebecca ruled is not important for me to discuss.

How Emma Smith would have ruled, does not call for criticism from me; but the close of the sentence just quoted requires some explanation. I am not aware that anything I have written during this controversy will justify the implication that Joseph Smith, the Prophet, ever sinned secretly against his wife Emma, or any other being. I know not that in any transaction of his, in the order of celestial marriage, he sinned against your mother. Have you understood me to say, directly or indirectly, that your father took wives unknown to your mother? If he did so, I did not know concerning it. But I will positively state that during the residence at Nauvoo, your mother, Emma, was present when at least four of his wives were sealed to him, to which she gave her consent. Positive evidence can be produced to this effect. Here is a little of it: First, the statement of your cousin, Lovina Walker, the daughter of the Patriarch, Hyrum Smith:

CERTIFICATE.

I, Lovina Walker, hereby certify that while I was living with Aunt Emma Smith, in Fulton City, Fulton county, Illinois, in the year 1846, she told me that she Emma Smith, was present and witnessed the marrying or sealing of Eliza Partridge, Emily Partridge, Maria Lawrence, and Sarah Lawrence to her husband, Joseph Smith, and that she gave her consent thereto.

LOVINA WALKER.

We hereby witness that Lovina Walker made and signed the above statement on this 16th day of June, A. D. 1869, at Salt Lake City, Salt Lake county, Utah Territory, of her own free will and accord.

HYRUM S. WALKER.
SARAH E. SMITH.
JOS. F. SMITH.

And next the affidavit of one of the ladies mentioned in the above certificate confirming the fact of the presence of your mother at the time that she, the affiant, was sealed to your father:

AFFIDAVIT.

TERRITORY OF UTAH, }
County of Salt Lake, } ss.

Be it remembered that on this first day of May, A. D. 1869, personally appeared before me, Elias Smith, Judge of Probate for said county, Emily Dow Partridge Young, who was by me sworn in due form of law, and upon her oath, saith that on the eleventh day of May, A. D. 1843, at the city of Nauvoo, county of Hancock, state of Illinois, she was married or sealed to Joseph Smith, President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, by James Adams, a High Priest in said Church, according to the laws of the same regulating marriage, in the presence of Emma (Hale) Smith, and Eliza Maria Partridge (Lyman).

EMILY D. P. YOUNG.

Subscribed and sworn to by the said Emily D. P. Young, the day and year first above written.

E. SMITH, Probate Judge.

Hence the Prophet did not "secretly" sin against his wife, Emma.

You will observe that the above affiant states that she was married to your father on May 11, 1843, while the revelation on plural marriage, as subsequently published, bears date of July 12, 1843. By means of the revelation the law of plural marriage was given to the Church, but long prior to its date the principle was revealed to your father, and he was commanded to practice it.

"The case of Joseph is only favorable to your view in seeming. He was the son of Rachel, the only legal wife Jacob had." I am pleased that you thus admit Rachel was Jacob's legal wife; at the same time it is evident she was his second wife. Leah was Jacob's wife seven years before Rachel became his wife. Each of these wives had a handmaid, which they gave to their husband for wives. (Gen. 29:18-35; Chap. 30:3-12.) Hence Joseph's birth was polygamous, and yet the Lord had respect unto him and great blessings were placed upon him. Gen. 49:22-26.

Nothing that I have said in this debate gives you the right to infer that I hold that there is or ever was any law or rule in connection with the principle of plural marriage which makes it obligatory upon the successor of a king, or of an officer in the Church, to marry the widows of his predecessor. Among the Latter Day Saints of Utah, and under the system of plural marriage as they understand and practice it, a widow may marry whom she chooses, or refrain from marrying at her option, no matter what position her husband held. This is a sufficient reply to your inquiries respecting the widows of the prominent men to whom you refer.

Allow me here to conclude my present reply and subscribe myself,

Your well-wisher,

L. O. LITTLEFIELD.

LOGAN, Utah, September 5, 1883.

F. CRILEY, Agent.

The resignation of Sr. Hattie Griffiths, as District Secretary, was accepted.

The following portion of the report of the committee appointed by the Pittsburg Branch to inquire into the validity of Bro. Ephraim Thomas' eldership, was affirmed by this conference: 1st. Your committee find that Bro. E. Thomas was a member and an Elder in this Reorganized Church in Wales. He emigrated to Pittsburg. 2d. That about the time of his emigration, or shortly afterward, he was expelled by the Welsh Church from the body. 3d. That said Bro. Thomas united with this, the Pittsburg Branch, by re-baptism. 4th. That he received no ordination since re-baptism to any office in this church. That a Pittsburg District Conference did grant our brother an Elder's license; since which time he has acted in that calling. We as a committee state it as our opinion, that the action of the district was unwise, for the reason that he had received no ordination since re-baptism; and for the further reason that the action of expulsion by the Welsh Church stood unrepealed, and the well known fact that neither the Pittsburg Branch nor district was a competent court to reverse the finding of the court which expelled our brother, and so deposed him from the eldership. Our simple judgment is that Bro. E. Thomas is a lay member in good standing, and should only be so recognized.

T. E. Lloyd, Jacob Reese, for committee.

Resolved, That the priesthood who are not branch officers, shall only be required to report to District Conferences.

Resolved, That the resolution adopted at last conference, which reads "that Bro. G. T. Griffiths be authorized to ordain parties to the eldership," etc., be amended to read, "that he be authorized to ordain to the eldership persons who in his estimation are necessary, and capable of discharging the duties of said office; but that said authority shall only be permissive where no organization of the church exists."

Resolved, That a former resolution of this district, that no one be ordained to the eldership without the consent of the District Conference, be now re-affirmed.

Resolved, That the report of Sr. Hattie Griffiths be accepted, and that she be paid $5 by the Bishop's Agent for the work performed on the District Records.

Resolved, That Bro. J. F. McDowell be requested to labor in this district.

Resolved, That it be required of all persons performing ministerial labor in this district, to do so by the direction and consent of the district president.

Resolved, That all persons that can labor be authorized to labor as circumstances permit, by direction and consent of the district president.

Resolved, That all branches of the district be instructed to pay their funds to the Bishop's Agent, and not to any travelling ministers whatever.

Resolved, That the president, vice-president, and Bishop's Agent, be sustained by our faith, prayers and means.

Preaching Saturday evening by Elder J. F. McDowell. Sabbath services. Prayer meeting at 9 a. m. Preaching at 10:30 a. m., by Bro. R. S. Salyards assisted by Elder James Craig. Saints' meeting at 2 p. m. Preaching at 7 p. m., by Elder J. F. McDowell.

DES MOINES DISTRICT.

Conference was held at Des Moines, in the Saints' Church, on the 31st of August and the 1st and 2d of September, 1883.

Preaching by I. N. White.

Saturday, 1:30, conference assembled for the transaction of business. I. N. White presiding, John Sayer secretary.

Branch Reports.—Edenville 77, including 10 Elders, 2 Priests, 2 Teachers, 1 Deacon; 6 baptized, 5 removed by letter. Sheridan 46, including 1 Elder, 2 Priests, 2 Teachers, 1 Deacon; 1 dropped by her own request. Des Moines Valley 46, including 2 Elders, 1 Priest, 1 Teacher, 1 Deacon; 1 died. Newton 48, including 4 Elders, 2 Priests, 3 Teachers; 3 removed, 1 died. Des Moines 55, including 3 Elders, 2 Priests, 2 Teachers, 2 Deacons; 1 received by letter.

Elders' Reports.—Wm. C. Nirk, John Davis, George Walker, Moses Houghton, Samuel Longbottom, J. S. Roth (baptized 4), I. N. White, R. Etzenhouser, reported. Priests D. C. White (baptized 2), and Calvin Merrill, reported. Teacher Ezra Merrill, reported.

Report of the Elders' Committee chosen to examine the difficulties existing in the Sheridan Branch:

We, your committee appointed by the last district conference to investigate and try to adjust certain troubles in the Sheridan Branch, find, after visiting the parties concerned, and calling them together, that certain grievances existed, and after examination of which we endeavored to have them forgive; and we believe the troubles were settled, with one exception. His reason for not becoming reconciled to the branch was, he could not sustain what he claimed were improper appointments of branch officials. Yet we see no reason why they should not be sustained, and we recognized them as appointed. Now, we your committee ask our release.

On motion, the report was received, and the committee continued till next conference.

Resolved, That the president and secretary of district see to procuring a book for recording of minutes. Such expense to be raised by collection at this conference.

Resolved, That we sustain the Spiritual Authorities of the Church in righteousness.

Resolved, That we sustain I. N. White as president of the district, and John Sayer as district secretary, till next conference.

Preaching on Friday at 8 p. m. by I. N. White. Preaching Saturday at 8 p. m. by S. Longbottom, assisted by Moses Houghton.

Sunday exercises: Prayer and testimony at 9 a. m. Preaching at 10 a. m. at the Governor's Square, by J. S. Roth, assisted by R. Etzenhouser. Sacrament and fellowship meeting at 2 p. m. Preaching at 4 p. m. in the Governor's Square, by I. N. White, assisted by R. Etzenhouser. At 8 p. m. preaching in the Church by Wm. C. Nirk, assisted by Priest Jamison.

Resolved, That we sustain I. N. White as Bishop's Agent, D. C. White as district treasurer, till next conference.

Resolved, That the next conference be held at the Des Moines Valley Branch, on the 7th, 8th and 9th days of December, 1883, at 8 p. m.

BORN.

MILLER.—At Washington, D. C., September 14th, 1883, to Bro. William L. and Sr. Jennie Miller, a son; named William L.

DIED.

SCOTT.—At Lawrence, Michigan, August 29th, 1883, Velva Luetta, daughter of Bro. Columbus and Sr. Flora L. Scott, aged one year, one month and nineteen days. The physician pronounced her ailment meningitis. The first spasm was severe and in thirteen days, during which she was unconscious, her earthly life closed as peacefully as the fading of a summer eve. A large concourse of friends and neighbors met to sympathize with the bereaved parents on the funeral occasion.

D. C.

BERRIER.—At Nebraska City, Nebraska, September 12th, 1883, of dropsy, brother Mark Berrier. Born in Burke Co., N. C., February 5th, 1818, and at one time was a member of the Christian Church, in Carroll Co., Missouri, but for some years gave no attention to religious matters. This last sickness was of about six weeks' duration, and when satisfied that the end of his earthly pilgrimage was near, he sent for the Elders, who administered, and he received the promise of strength and time to obey the gospel, which he did August 28th, 1883, Bro. J. W. Waldsmith officiating. Funeral from the house. Elder Robt. M. Elvin preached the sermon from Hosea 13:14. Thus ended a life journey of 65 years, 7 months and 7 days. He left an aged companion and several married children.

GHREIST.—At Emerson, Iowa, August 31st, 1883, Sr. Sarah Jane Ghreist, daughter of Bro. Isaac and Sr. Drucilla A. Sheen, aged 41 years, 4 months and 7 days. She was born at Kirtland, Lake Co., Ohio. She has been a sufferer for many years. She has borne her sufferings, including her last sickness, which was protracted and severe, with Christian fortitude. At the place of her death she was held in high esteem, which was manifested by the large concourse of friends which assembled at her funeral. Funeral services conducted by the Pastor of the Presbyterian Church.

CROUCH.—Jane, wife of John Crouch was born on the 17th of April, 1829, in Oxfordshire, England, and died July 25th, 1883, in Harrison county, Missouri, of consumption, aged 54 years, 3 months and 8 days. She with her husband obeyed the ordinances of the gospel in June, 1849. They subsequently came to America, and in 1856 went to Utah; but, overwhelmed by the evils they found there, they came out in 1857, having remained eight months only. So far as known to the writer, she loved the truth to the close of her life, and was a faithful woman in the duties thereof. Funeral sermon by Henry A. Stebbins.

DEDICATION AT MONTROSE.

As had been previously arranged, we visited the Saints at Montrose, Lee county, Iowa, September 1 and 2, for the double purpose of attending the quarterly conference of the Nauvoo and String Prairie District, and to be present and assist in the dedication services of the Saints' Chapel there. We reached Montrose on the morning of the 1st, in company with a number of the Saints from Burlington, and found Uncle William Smith, B. F. Durfee, S. J. Salisbury and others already arrived.

The conference session began at 10:30, and was presided over by Elder B. F. Durfee, president of the district. Elders O. P. Dunham, W. D. Morton, Sen., J. R. Lambert, J. Lambert, T. Revell and a number of others were in attendance, and the business session passed off pleasantly. Bro. Joseph R. Lambert spoke in the evening to an excellent and well pleased audience.

On Sunday morning the house was filled at an early hour, Bro. B. F. Durfee was put in charge of the services. A number of the choir of the M. E. Church had agreed to assist in the singing service, and Sister Jennie, wife of Bro. Charles Newberry, sat at the organ. Appropriate hymns had been selected, and after the opening song and prayer we delivered the dedicatory discourse, the prayer was offered by Bro. William Smith.

The following brief relation of the circumstances of the building of the chapel was given in the discourse, and are placed before the HERALD readers because of the lesson of patient and persevering well doing which they teach.

The subscription list for funds to build with was started April 28th, 1871. The original list has the names of one hundred and twenty-eight subscribers, and a total of $472.50 as the starting fund. The leading names on the list are William Anderson, John Thornton, Nephi Shumate, F. Borley, Sarah A. Best, E. A. Newberry, Maggie Simpson and Martha Oman. The movement originated with the first two named. The first building committee was composed of J. Thornton, Wm. Anderson and N. Shumate. Under their charge the site was located and the building erected, so that services were held in it the Fall following. A subsequent list gave forty names and a little over $200 to the fund. During the next five years but little was done. Bro. Thornton died and Brn. Anderson and Shumate removed. Bro. Borley, of the original list also died. About seven years ago the sisters of the Branch, under the impression that the building would not be finished otherwise, conceived the idea of forming a society having for its object the finishing of the church. Sr. Eliza A. Newberry was chosen as its first president and held her place four years. Sr. Ruth Turner succeeded her for a year, and for the last two years Sr. Sarah Shroeder has been in charge.

The society began its efforts seven years ago last March, and by dint of patient toil raised means to enclose the lot, then to put the siding on, then the furnishing, and lastly the painting and window blinds. All this has been done in as many successive steps, as moneys were found to be in the treasury, the society having been determined to create no debt. Whenever funds sufficient were realized, a committee was appointed to attend to the work designed and make the outlay, Thomas Revell and Charles Newberry being the committee on siding; the committee on furnishing were E. A. Newberry and Sr. Reed.

The principal means employed by these sisters were, first the making and sale of all sorts of needle work, including articles of wearing apparel, ornaments, &c. At festivals held at intervals these were sold and the proceeds husbanded for the purpose designed. The meetings of the society were held weekly, and were kept from lapsing by the faithfulness of its members, any one or more of whom formed a quorum for business. In several instances the regular meeting was held with but one, two and three present; the services were prayer, reading of Scripture, then work, then dismissal.

The exhibition of determination to succeed made by the society, enlisted the sympathy of the citizens, and whenever they were permitted an opportunity they gladly helped the object, giving the comfort of their presence and substantial aid at all the festivals and public services of the Church in the interest of the building of the house.

The whole cost of the building is about $1200, nearly one half of which was raised and expended under the management of this sisters' society. And while those who originated the movement to build and gave it being and shape are justly entitled to great credit, those who took up the burden of completing it, after all efforts of the brethren had stagnated, leaving the building in an unfinished and unsightly condition, are much more entitled to credit. The first had the prestige of business enterprise and energy to back them, while the latter had to work against both. The men labored in what is supposed to be their sphere, the women out of it—as many good brethren suppose.

The society could have had the house finished long ago, if they would have consented to accept a debt to be afterwards worked out. This they would not consent to. They preferred to wait, and complete it by slow approaches all paid for as they advanced, rather than to feel the burden of debt.

If any of the Saints are striving to build elsewhere, let them take courage from the example afforded by the Saints of the Montrose Branch.

We preached in the chapel the evening after its dedication, and on Monday night listened to a good sermon in the same house from Uncle William Smith.

The attendance on Sunday all day, at the preaching morning and evening, and in the afternoon prayer and testimony meeting was very large, more than filling the house.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE arrived home and re-entered the HERALD rooms' October 5th, in good health and spirits, having attended the Reunion, preached in Omaha, lectured in Council Bluffs, and preached and lectured in Nebraska City, Nebraska, and preached in Shenandoah, Iowa, since September 13th.

Since the writing of his last letter published in the HERALD, Bro. R. J. Anthony has been locked out of the M. E. Church in north Alabama. The doors and windows were nailed. This action of those who controled the house, Bro. Anthony writes, hurt no body but themselves.

Bro. I. N. White writes us that he is at present in Grundy county, Iowa, laboring in connection with Bro. Roth. Also that he intends visiting north-east Iowa, and requests Saints desiring his labors, to address him at once at Edenville, Iowa.

Bro. E. C. Brown of Fonda, Iowa, writes us that on September 15th he was thrown from a horse, and narrowly escaped being killed. He has so far recovered that he expected to be in Plymouth county, October 5th, to administer to a sick sister residing there. He preached three times at Coalville the fore part of September.

Bro. H. P. Brown writes us that another was baptized at Oakland, California, September 23d, by Bro. Wm. Anderson. It was Sr. Hattie Shale, Bro. J. S. Julian's youngest daughter.

Bro. E. A. Dandall, of Elvaston, Ills., wrote September 25th, that Bro. Solomon Salisbury had visited the Elvaston Branch two weeks before, preached to them twice, and left a conditional promise to return and stay with them a few days in October. Bro. Dandall writes of his firm belief and hope in Christ, and his assurance that the bitterness we sometimes taste here, will be exchanged for sweets in the sweet by and by.

Decatur county, Iowa, now comes to the front on the apple question. Bro. Norman W. Smith, of Lamoni, has brought to the office four apples grown upon the farm of Father Green, a short distance from Lamoni, which weigh three pounds. Two of them are of the "Striped Sweet Pippin" variety. The variety to which the other two belong not known to the grower. All that Decatur needs to make it a good fruit producing county, is a little labor bestowed upon the planting and properly caring for trees.

Bro. M. B. Williams of Middletown, Butler Co., Ohio, on the 26th ult., wrote as follows: "I am holding meetings in Middletown every two weeks, in a private house; the attendance is small, but the attention good, and I think interest in the doctrine increasing."

The two-days' meetings at Armstrong, Kansas, and Kansas City, and Independence, Missouri, just closed, are reported as having been interesting and likely to produce good results.

Bro. A. J. Cato, under date of October 1st, informs us that he has opened a new place near Cook's Point, Texas. He had excellent liberty in preaching, and feels very well over the effort to preach to those who had never heard the gospel sound before.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. W. Vickery wrote from Plano, Illinois, October 1st:

We are all well, except Bro. John Rothard; he was hurt last Friday by the rupture of a blood vessel by a heavy lift. Quite a number of Saints have moved here, some from Wisconsin and some from Sandwich. We have fair congregations, quite as good if not better than a year ago. There was a Bro. Soule with us yesterday; he lives in Aurora and thinks he can get us a place to preach in that city. I have quite good liberty in presenting the Word. There is a good deal of building going on in Plano this Summer and Fall. A Town House, a double brick store, two stories high; and a large number of dwellings, some of them very fine ones.

THE following statement made by Governor Murray of Utah, in an interview in Chicago, published in the Chicago Tribune of September 19th, may be of interest to the readers of the HERALD:

Speaking of the results following the practical application of the Edmunds bill, Gov. Murray said: "It turned out just as I expected; Congress would not take the bull of polygamy squarely by the horns for fear of doing the Mormons injustice, and consequently, through fear of doing wrong, failed to do what was right. I believe the Commission under the Edmunds bill faithfully executed the terms of that statute in the disfranchisement of polygamists, but it had no effect upon the result. Not beyond twenty per cent of the Mormons are polygamists, but the remaining Mormons, or monogomists, as they are called, are largely in excess of the Gentile population, and as they stand ready to do the bidding of the Mormon Church, they can easily out-vote the Gentiles and control the election of members of the Territorial Legislature. This they did, carrying every district, and as a matter of fact, many polygamists are to-day holding office, who are denied the right to vote. These are those who held over under the terms of the law. If the evil is to be controlled and eradicated, Congress will have to come up to the sentiment of the country, and to my way of thinking on the subject, and give the President the power to appoint, and the Senate to confirm a Legislative Council or Commission, who may frame a code of laws for Utah in unison with the spirit of Christian civilization, the laws of Congress, and the adjudications of the Supreme Court of the United States, and not leave legislation, as it is now and has been for thirty years, in the hands of a body in theory elected by the people, but practically appointed by the head of the Mormon Church. There is precedent for such a course. The District of Columbia formerly had a Mayor and City Council, thereby governing itself; but Congress took away the right of self-government from the people of the District, and now they are governed by Commissioners appointed by the President. This, Congress can do with any Territory, and if something of this kind is not done in the case of Utah, and that speedily, other and more heroic remedies will have to be applied."

"Is Mormonism on the increase?"

"Yes; the Mormon immigration into Utah is very large and growing. Probably they increase in the proportion of three to one to the Gentiles. They are also settling in the adjacent States and Territories. The fact is Mormonism is to-day broader, deeper, and stronger than ever before. It is aggressive in every sense of the word, and must be dealt with in an aggressive manner."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Did Orson Hyde go to Palestine and pray on the Mount of Olives that the land may be blessed? Is it a part of our Church History?

Ans.—We do not know. It is so stated. It is not a part of our Church History. It is believed by some that he did not go, by others that he did.

FROM an interview with Rev. H. W. Beecher, published in the Kansas City Journal of September 24th, we clip the following:

"Have you investigated the Mormon problem?"

"Some, and I gained considerable knowledge of its inside history from ex-Mormons. Then I looked into the present condition of the people, and endeavored to find out how that religion kept its hold upon so many people. President Taylor called upon me and took me out to ride around their capital city, and I talked briefly with him on the subject. I also collected a great many documents, which I intend to use when I get home."

"What conclusion have you arrived at regarding the permanency of the institution?"

"I have no apprehensions at all in regard to the spread of polygamy. None in the least. The system will be worn out and worn away as the monuments in the garden of the gods. It is certain to be swept away."

"But there are 15,000 converts every year."

"No difference. Polygamy is bound to go under."

"On what do you base your prediction?"

"On my observations, which there is not time now to repeat."

"There are 200,000 now, when there were but 80,000 ten years ago, are there not?"

"Yes, the Mormons are increasing in numbers and as long as there is organized emigration there will more be transported and the industrial system of the Mormons will do those emigrants good. The man would have to be pretty low down though to be raised morally or spiritually by the institutions. Not more than one family out of ten are polygamous. Polygamy is the exception and not the rule. There is a difference of testimony in regard to this but I believe the statement just made is correct. I say that polygamy is bound to go down and young man if you live a few years longer mark my prediction.

THE following from the Nebraska City News of October 1st, 1883, will be as good a report of the Dedicatory services held at Nebraska City, on September 30th, as need be given.

GIVEN TO GOD.—IMPRESSIVE DEDICATORY SERVICES AT THE LATTER DAY SAINTS' CHURCH.

The dedicatory services held September 30th, by the Latter Day Saints, at their chapel, on Kansas street, were largely attended and were very interesting. The pulpit platform was occupied by the following persons from abroad:

Elders Joseph Smith, of Lamoni, Iowa; G. A. Blakeslee, of Galien, Mich.; A. H. Smith of Independence, Mo.; Edmund C. Briggs, of Carson, Iowa, and M. H. Forscutt, of St. Joseph, Mo. Members of the church were present from Ashland, Wilber, Syracuse, and the vicinity of the city for twenty miles, and from Tabor and Shenandoah, Iowa.

At 10:30 the services began, Elder Joseph Smith being in charge. He read a hymn beginning, "Oh bow thine ear, Eternal One," which was sung to the old tune of Duke Street. Bishop Blakeslee then led in a fervent prayer for divine guidance and protection, after which Elder Smith read psalm 91; another hymn was sung and the sermon was delivered.

The following is a brief synopsis of the discourse:

The groves were the first temples in which men worshipped. When men ceased to worship in them, however near or remote that period may have been, it was the result of disposition on the part of man to congregate together, and the dispersion into different parts of the earth, where men were compelled to exist under different conditions of climate and surroundings rendering the erection of tabernacles and covered altars necessary.

God's sanction to the building of sanctuaries was given in the command to build the Tabernacle. The sacred character of these sanctuaries is shadowed in the imperative nature of the command; "see that thou make all things according to the pattern shown thee on the mount." The tabernacle was typical of Christ, and its worship of that "sanctuary and the true tabernacle which God pitched, and not man," shown by the apostle in the 8th chapter of his letter to the Hebrews. This true tabernacle was pitched by Christ as the mediator of the better covenant which was to be established among men, as prophesied by Jeremiah in his 31st chapter, and as it is clearly declared by Paul in Hebrews.

This covenant is the gospel one, and is to be established with men as individuals. The means by which men may avail themselves of the benefits of that covenant is given in the revelation of Christ in the New Testament Scriptures. The conditions precedent are belief in Jesus as the Redeemer, and an obedience to his commands in yielding to the ordinances of the gospel, by which life in Christ and consequent salvation are obtained. Those who accept the terms are received of Christ and receive power to become the children of God, being heirs with Christ according to the covenant. "Met, Lord, to dedicate," was then sung to the tune of "Nearer my God to thee," when the dedicatory prayer, replete with pathos, expressiveness and solemnity was offered by Elder Forscutt.

The exercises closed with song and a benediction.

Thus did this people consecrate their altar place and tabernacle to the worship of God and the services and good of man, stating that the gospel of Christ should alone be preached from sacred desks.

The following will be of interest to the readers of The News. The branch of the church in this city was organized April 8th, 1866; Elder R. C. B. Elvin was its first presiding officer. The organization took place in a small, private dwelling, on the north side of the city, across the run, then occupied by Mr. Elvin.

The officer now presiding is J. W. Waldsmith, whom our citizens know. Since the organization the records show an enrollment of 300 members, 200 of which have been received by baptism. Of this number about 120 form the present membership; of the rest, some have died, some departed the faith, and many removed to other places. The society bought the building dedicated by them yesterday on December 1st, 1881. They have expended in its purchase and proper repairs something over $950, all of which has been paid by the society itself, no call for means having been made upon the public, either directly by subscription, or indirectly by festival or collection. The attendance was large and a good spirit and feeling seemed to prevail.

Services were held in the afternoon and evening, as announced, both of which were fully attended.

FROM the following treatise on the science and religion of the Aztecs of Merico, a reprint from the Chicago Times clipped from the Arizona Silver Belt, it is easy to gather that the Aztecs at the time the Spaniards conquered Mexico, were possessed of the remnants of a very high state of civilization; that they had once had a knowledge of the true Christian religion, but had fallen into transgression and adopted practices not in harmony therewith, and thus this religion had become distorted and dismembered, just as we find it among this people at the time Cortez invaded Mexico. The stern logic of events, which truth loves and error both hates and dreads, will unequivocally settle all questions by and by.

THE RELIGION OF THE AZTECS.

When Cortez conquered Mexico the world was surprised to find a civilization of so high an order in a land supposed to be inhabited by savages. The cities, houses, tables, dress, ornaments and luxuries, as well as the order of government, of this newly-found people compared well with the social and civil institutions of the opposite shores of the ocean. In some things the Mexicans were behind the Spaniards and the French. In some things they outshone the historic nations. It is singular, and hardly to be accounted for, that the Aztec had measured the solar year more accurately than the learned astronomers whose names were the great lights of science. Indeed, they had reached the solution of this difficult problem so nearly that the variation of their calculation from that of later scholars now accepted as final, was hardly more than two minutes of time, giving them a calendar that would not need the correction of a day for more than 700 years.

The religion of this people was in some respects quite as remarkable. Coming from what quarter of the globe no one knows beyond conjecture, they had attained knowledge and usages that, had they not been conjoined with practices of the most barbarous character, would stand alongside some of the beliefs and usages of the Christian world. They believed in one God, a spirit, the creator of all things, to whom they addressed prayers that would not dishonor the litanies of the Christian church. Man was as nothing. This "invisible, incorporeal one God, of perfect perfection and purity," was the all and in all of the universe, who dispensed judgments, showed mercy, and from whom proceeded all the power of man to walk in the path of truth and virtue. In language which any worshiper might use, they prayed in almost verbatim of Moses and the Psalmist: "Wilt Thou blot us out, O Lord, forever? Is this Thy chastisement sent for our destruction or for our reformation? Impart unto us of Thy mercy, Thy great gifts, which we are unworthy to receive through any merits of our own." This one God was the keeper and guardian of the good, and their avenger against their enemies. This simple monotheism, however, did not stand alone. This one supreme God had created inferior deities. The unity spread itself out into numerous divinities, whose work it was, in one department and another of the universe, to do the behests of the supreme deity. The Aztecs are regarded, therefore, by some as polytheists. They are so only in a limited sense, for no God was to them more than a servant of the Almighty. Some of the religious ceremonies of the Aztecs are very striking.

They baptized their children, and they had an idea of new birth and a salvation being in a way connected with it, much as Christians hold the same usage. Their priests encouraged confession after the manner of the Roman clergy, and like the Roman priest, pronounced an absolution which was regarded as binding in heaven and on earth. Indeed, it sometimes stepped in between the criminal and the penalty of the law, the spiritual subordinating the temporal power. They practiced penance, flagellations and pains. Their temples were numerous, some of them elegant and costly, as well as those more humble. The priesthood was very numerous, and almost each day being a festal day of some sort, the people were like the ancient Egyptians, used to perpetual religious ceremonies. Their temples being of pyramidal form, several stories high, and the altar on the top, the processions winding on from staircase to staircase and the acts of the officiating priests were seen from a great distance. Their view of the future world comprehended three estates. The brave, the heroes who fell in battle, and those who were offered in sacrifice, at death passed into the presence of the sun whom they followed in his course through the heavens, and then, after a suitable period, their spirits entered into birds and flowers and they floated off into paradise. The wicked, comprising the greater part of mankind, went away into everlasting darkness. The third estate, a sort of limbo, or negative existence, without pleasure and without pain, was reserved for those who died of certain diseases, which fantastically enough, and yet reminding one of old Hebrew usages, unfitted men for the pure heavenly world.

THE Omaha Bee, published for Council Bluffs, in its issue for September 28th, 1883, gave the following notice of the lecture of the Editor of the HERALD in Council Bluffs.

THE temperance address given by Elder Joseph Smith, president of the Church of Latter Day Saints, is pronounced by those who heard it as one of the best discussions on that subject ever delivered in this city. It is to be regretted that there were not more of our citizens present to hear it, for by staying away they lost much. Still there was a good sized audience, and their attention was held closely to the finish. It is also to be regretted that so able a discourse has been so misrepresented by The Nonpareil. It reports Elder Smith as expressing himself as not believing that intemperance could be checked or prohibited by law. On the contrary, he expressed himself as strictly in favor of a prohibitory law, and cited numerous instances to show that it could be enforced.—Omaha Bee.

Correspondence.

BIRDSEYE, Dubois Co., Ind.,
September 18th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I came to these parts some few days past, by the way of the Air Line Road, and I don't think it has its equal in this state in point of locality. In short it is from Louisville to this place, sixty-two miles, and from trestle into tunnel, and out of tunnel into cut, and then on to trestle near all the way to this point. Found Bro. Jas. Ferguson, one and a half miles from Birdseye. Made arrangements for meeting at this place for Sunday night, at a house used by all denominations, but claimed to belong to the Methodists. Bro. Ferguson went four miles, on to Anderson and announced meeting for Friday night. We went. Moderate turn out only, too short notice. Saturday went to Maryetta, in Crawford county, some twelve miles. Held meetings in school-house. Fair turn out. At night on Sunday at Wablock. Started from there to fill our appointment at Birdseye. On our way got a complete soaking, and at the meeting house the crowd began to gather, and all of a sudden in came Mr. Emmon, the Metho list sexton, and said, "Are you going to force your way here? I have come to let you know you can't have it." I said I am a stranger here, know no one. Do not desire to occupy it, if it will cause disturbance. Then the citizens, taking it into their hands, a private house, owned by Mr. Holowell, was seated, and then there was quite a procession marching from the old dilapidated church, to the new house of Mr. Holowell, Good attention and fair liberty. Meeting to-night at the same house.

The thinking and fair minded citizens of this place, propose to hear and decide for themselves. The men whom we have the most trouble with, are men that make the most noise about sanctification; and if set apart at all, to our mind it is to the work of the adversary. The Saints in these parts that we have seen, are well, though people seem to want to leave. Those two points, I understand, have never heard the doctrine of the Church before. Pray for me.

Yours, in the covenant,
M. R. SCOTT.

WHEELER'S GROVE, Iowa,
September 7th, 1883.

Brother Joseph:—The Holiness people in this place have just closed their camp meeting, which they held on our land about twenty rods from our house, as beautiful a grove as you ever saw. Their ministers say that it is the most beautiful place in the west for camp meeting purposes. The result of this meeting they claim is an increase of ninety-two who have been wholly sanctified. Besides this, they claim that two or three sick have been healed through faith and prayer.

There is a small band of Saints here, that is still striving for the Master's cause to the best of their ability. We have had some preaching here this summer. Bro. Henry Kemp came here in July, and staid a few days, and the result of his labors was three baptized. We think brother Kemp is a good man in the right place. Come again brother Henry. Brother Nutt has also been preaching in our branch every two or three weeks for the last three months. As the result of his labors, three more have been added to the Church by baptism, all grown people, for which we feel thankful to our Heavenly Father. Bro. Nutt is a very spiritually minded man, and is trying to do his duty. The desire of my heart is to do right. Please remember me in your prayers, and this little band of struggling Saints.

Yours for the truth,
S. C. SMITH.

OGMORE VALE, Wales,
September 12th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—I am now alone in the Ogmores Branch, with only my dear wife and daughter to hold meetings with. All the Saints of this branch except us three, have moved out of the valley to other places. We are only ten now on the branch record, and seven of them are scattered. But I am not disheartened, for all this; for we were told before it came to pass, that Satan would try us as he did Job, but the faithful should escape, and woe be to them that did fall back, for better had they never been born. This was given through the gifts of the Holy Ghost, by several of the branch; and when all seemed to be right. Since those revelations were given, one who indulged in taking too much strong drink, was hurled from the carriage in the pit to the bottom, in such a manner as caused great surprise to all others in the shaft of the pit at the same time, and not one of them was hurt a bit. Another emigrated to America and has died since. Another disregarded the order to be dutiful, being a Teacher, but neglected to do so, and went on Sunday to do that he ought not, and caught cold through getting wet which turned to a fever, and he died. Others had to be expelled for bad conduct and apostasy, so that Satan seems to get the best portion of the brethren who called themselves Saints; for he has done his best to destroy the work in this place. So under these circumstances I feel to do my best to get things to rights, by telling the people all about it; and I think by distributing a few tracts, and having the help of the Lord, to gain the victory, and to prove that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, is far above all such conduct as is practiced by these bad men.

Please take notice, Thomas Hardee has emigrated to America, and since he left the people ask me what is the difference between us and the Salt Lake saints, and thus I have an opportunity to tell them which seems to surprise them, they having taken us to be but one church, although they were told the difference many times.

On the 26th August I had the opportunity of defending the true faith before a large assembly, after one Elder Reese who is on a mission from Utah, and two others had told their tale. Reese said he was not sent to preach about polygamy, or that Adam was their God, for he did not believe such things; and they begged to withdraw. A Wesleyan Minister took occasion to run down Mormonism, and all concerned. But he soon found out he had, like Mr. Reese, made a mistake, and he begged to withdraw, to which the people consented. So I think the thin end of the wedge has entered, and by the help of the Lord will be driven home.

THOMAS VENABLES.

COOK'S POINT, Burseson Co., Texas,
September, 1883.

Dear Herald.—When I wrote to you last I was at Bandera, where Bro. Smith left us. While there we succeeded in getting the saints to meet together oftener than they had been doing, and those that did meet seemed to enjoy themselves. I think the principal cause of the lethargy among the saints there, as in other branches, is the officers' neglect of their duties. From Bandera we went to Oak Island, in Bro. Alexander Hays' wagon. We stayed there several days, preaching as circumstances would permit, and I think succeeded in awakening an interest at a school-house, known as Prairie Summit; and had it not been for some things taking place that made it necessary for us to leave there, I think more good might have been done. We went from Oak Island to the Live Oak Branch, in Bastrop county, which notwithstanding its infantile condition, was getting along well. We stayed there two or three weeks, preaching as often as we could; and while there I baptized four. From there we went to Bell county, to attend the quarterly conference of the Central Texas District, (Elmwood Branch). The conference passed off pleasantly with but two or three exceptions. On Monday evening one was baptized, the writer officiating. On Tuesday we were taken to Temple, by Bro. John Wilson. Went from there to Burseson county, and preached twice at a new place, but there was not sufficient interest to justify a continuation of the meeting; hence we left there and went to Bastrop county again, and preached a few times, all my labors being done under great difficulty, for I was afflicted mentally and physically to such a degree, that I began to think that I would have to succumb to that monster disease, and be a helpless invalid, or be consigned to my last earthly resting place. As a last resort, under the circumstances, I resolved to visit Dr. Hassell, a brother, in Anderson county, and see if he could do any thing for me.

So we parted with the Saints of the Live Oak Branch on the 3d of August, and on the morning of the 5th, arrived at Elkhart, and a walk of two miles brought us to Bro. Hassell's. On the next day he began to give me "physic," and now I can say that I am well, or as well as I have been for ten years. To God be all the praise. I will say to the brethren and friends whom I was with while sick, if I did or said anything to hurt their feelings, I ask their pardon, and also ask their prayers in my behalf, that I may never have to pass through another such ordeal. During all my afflictions the Lord did not entirely forsake me, for which I feel very thankful.

The prospects in the mission are not what we would like to see; yet we will work on, and leave the result with him who doeth all things well.

Bro. Joseph, you offer an apology for intruding (?) the letters of L. O. Littlefield, and your replies, into the Herald. I do not think it is any intrusion, if it is necessary to use all the Herald for two months to vindicate the cause of Christ, and put down the corrupt doctrines that are taught in Utah, I say amen to it. Your letters to Mr. Littlefield are splendid. Give it to him every time he needs it.

Yours in bonds,

A. J. CATO.

CABOOL, Texas Co., Mo.,

September 28th, 1883.

Bro. James Drown:—I will answer your questions through the Herald. Others may ask the same. The land I spoke of in Wright and Texas counties is uneven on surface, some level, some hilly, some living water on it, two-thirds without living water on it; timber land for all purposes. Most of the land has rock on it. Some quarter sections would not afford more than thirty or forty acres tillable land; some quarter sections two or three forties would do to cultivate. Bro. Schofield, of Norwood, could describe that part of the country better than I.

Your brother in the one faith,

B. A. ATWELL.

LAWRENCE, Michigan,

September 28th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—Some time during last May I wrote you from Kirtland, Ohio. I was blessed greatly while laboring in that section. A spirit of liberality is manifested toward our people in Kirtland and adjacent vicinities, that is indeed commendable. More openings for the preaching of the gospel may be procured there than can be attended to by the laborers at liberty to be there. I feel very thankful for the kindness shown me while in Ohio. In the latter part of June I was summoned home by the illness of our little babe. At my arrival home, she seemed to be recovering, and, in a few days, seemed to have fully recovered from the sickness. While at home, and on the first Sunday in July, I had the pleasure of baptizing wife's sister, Lulu Bass, here in the Lawrence Branch, who, we believe, will be an estimable Saint, and do good in the cause. We also labored at Hartford and vicinity in Michigan in the month of July, encouraging the Saints. On the 3d of August I went in company with Bro. D. Campbell to Galien, expecting to go on to Coldwater, Michigan, the next day; but the Saints did not agree to our passing on so rapidly, and being urged to stay over the following Sunday, we stayed, Bro. Campbell passing on to fill an appointment at Coldwater the same Sunday. We did the best we could, speaking morning and evening, to fair sized audiences. Before leaving Galien I had the pleasure of baptizing two—Sisters Howell and Harner—on Monday, the 6th of August. The confirmation meeting in the evening was a pleasant one. Passing on to Coldwater I joined Bro. Campbell again, and preached twice during the week at the Ball School House, to a house well filled, and most of them young. We were encouraged at these meetings, by the Spirit and the presence of so many. Bro. Campbell and I filled appointments at Clear Lake, Indiana, on August 13th. Bro. Campbell discoursed on the gradual development of the Christian character in the morning. We had a good time. Leaving Clear Lake on the 14th, along with Sister Kelley, who had kindly taken us down there in the carriage, we returned to Coldwater, and thence to Kirtland on the 17th, about sun set. I found a telegram awaiting me, announcing the severe illness of our babe, that terminated fatally on the 29th of August.

Having been on the sick list for the last four weeks, have done but little. Held a few meetings at Marcellus, in Cass county, lecturing twice in Centennial Hall on the Mormon question, to large audiences. Some of our Adventist friends at Marcellus confess to agree with us on spiritual gifts, making the discovery by studying Mark 16: 16-20; Acts 2: 39; 10: 44, 45; 1 Cor. 1: 1-8, with 1 Cor. 13: 8-13, that the gifts are conditionally promised till the Church "imperfect," or militant, becomes the Church triumphant, or "perfect." And further, that God's children, are under obligation to God by commandment, (see 1 Cor. 12: 31; and 14: 1, 12, 37, to seek to attain them). And that every preacher and prophet must "acknowledge" this to be commanded. One minister agreed with us publicly on this. I think of starting to-day for Lapeer and Sanilac counties, this State, to be in the field of labor.

As ever, your colaborer,

C. SCOTT.

HEARNE CITY, Texas,

September 23d, 1883.

Dear Herald:—To-day I am alone, sad and lonely for him who was dearer to me than life; God through his wisdom has called him home. It was in 1878 that Bro. A. J. Cato, traveling and preaching in this (the South-west) Mission, called on Mr. Belcher and myself. We then lived near Hearne. Bro. Cato preached as circumstances would permit, and when he left we were both believing. Bro. Cato returned to our house in May, 1879, and began to preach again, and on the 18th of May, 1879, he led Mr. Belcher and myself down into the water, and there we were baptized. In a few days Mr. Belcher received a great testimony by having a sore leg healed that had been sore for six years. He was ordained to the office of Elder by Bro. H. L. Thompson, February 22d, 1880. He did his duty as an Elder until the 27th of April, 1883, when he was taken sick. He received a great testimony, showing him his suffering in all the agonies the human body is subject to. We tried to persuade him that his work was not done here, but he said his vision was too clear that God had called him to a better work; and on the 7th day of July, he departed this life, aged 46 years and 25 days. His funeral was preached at the grave by Bro. Cato, assisted by Bro. Thompson. Mr. Belcher was rational to the last. He selected Revelations 14th for his funeral text.

Although I am left with six little children to mourn his loss, I do not feel discouraged in the work. I ask the prayers of the Saints, that I may be faithful to the end, and bring up my children to praise God's name.

Your sister in Christ,

FANNIE BELCHER.

GREEN'S LANDING, Maine,

September 17th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Our branch here has been in a very low state for some time, but of late the Saints seem to be awakening to the sense of their duty. We are not blessed with much preaching here, but lately we have organized a Sabbath school, and have prayer and testimony meetings every Sabbath.

There are good Saints here, desiring to be saved in the kingdom, and it seems to me hard that we can not have some one to help us in this great work. Brn. Gilbert and Sheehy visited our branch a few weeks ago. I think their labors were greatly blessed. They were good brethren, and seemed to encourage and strengthen the Saints very much. We were sorry to part with them, and we hope they will be sent this way again. May the Lord prosper his work in this part of the vineyard, is my prayer.

I remain your sister in the gospel,

LAURA EATON.

BEVIER, Macon Co., Mo.,

September 22d, 1883.

Dear Brother Joseph Smith:—I just returned home to Bevier day before yesterday. I have since I left home visited the Hannibal and Salt River branches, found all nearly right with them. Then to St. Catherines, Linn Co., Mo., where I was to debate. But the man has backed out, and says he was too hasty, and too much excited, and should not have spoken as he did at the time that I preached in the Methodist Church. I find that this made many friends for our church. The people show by their works; for when the two churches were closed against me by the two preachers in St. Catherine, and I went south to preach in Union Church, by request, some of the richest men in the town got the Temperance Hall for me, and sent me word that the hall was ready for me at any time. I made appointments, and the people turned out well and the Lord blest me in speaking. Good order was had. I feel sure that good was done. One lady went around to take up a collection for the Congregational minister, and she went to one of the richest men in town, and asked him what he was going to give; he told her he would not give anything, as they had closed the churches against the truth. What he had to give, he should give to the Mormon preacher, and he made his word good.

I am requested to return there again as soon as I can. I can have the Temperance Hall in that place at any time, and the school houses are open for me. I was sent for to the Walnut Township in the northwest corner of Macon county, Mo., where the school house was ready for us. Bro. David F. Winn, from Salt River, went with me. We had a good time, and made many friends, and I was requested to come back as soon as I could. Every place I go the Lord blesses me with his Holy Spirit. I feel assured that there will be an ingathering in these places before long, if they can be attended to.

I remain as ever in gospel bonds,

GEORGE HICKLIN.

KEIGHLEY, Butler Co., Kan.,

September 23d, 1883.

Dear Herald:—As I have received several letters of inquiry about this country, I take this way of answering them. The land for $1.25 per acre is close to settlement. We can raise corn, wheat, oats, and in fact every kind of crops that will grow in any country in the south-west. Soil is limestone. Winters mild, with very little snow. The $1.25 land is being settled fast; but there is $1.25 land from eight to ten miles from the railroad. There is no homestead land here. The one dollar and twenty-five cent land must be settled. You have to live on it six months. Then you can pay the $1.25 and get a deed. You can pay one-fourth down each year, till you pay it. You can deed only one hundred and sixty acres. There is deeded land that can be bought from six to forty dollars per acre, owing to the improvements and locality. We burn wood and coal. The coal is shipped here. The nearest coal bank is thirty miles from here. The cheapest lumber for building purposes is $2.50 per hundred feet. I don't know the rates from Chicago, as there is no agent at our depot yet; the railroad have just put it up in shape. This will do good. I am well satisfied with the country.

Your brother in the one faith,

MOSES TURPIN.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—Since I wrote you I have been laboring in some new places, one in particular with Bro. James G. Scott, at Marysville, Indiana, with good success; found an old-time saint, a sister; she had just heard of the Reorganization, and that you was at the head of the church. She said that she never expected to hear the sound of the gospel again; she felt rejoiced to welcome us to her house; she has two sons and two daughters at home. She was baptized by Elder Davis fifty years ago. Others here are believing the work.

Your brethren,

JAMES M. & JAMES G. SCOTT.

WARNOCK, Belmont Co., Ohio,

Bro. Joseph Smith:—About ten and one-fourth years ago, while laboring in a certain locality, I had determined to go to Bro. Jesse Sheldon's—but I received a letter from another place requesting me to come and preach. I hesitated, and inquired of the Lord what I should do, and the Spirit said: "Go to the place from whence you received the letter, you can go to Belmont county some time again." The "sometime" came this week. Often I have thought of it. I have been busily engaged in ministerial labors, and have been blest much with the presence of the Divine Spirit. I labored for some time in Pittsburgh, Pa., and God was with us. Bro. Geo. H. Hulmes, president of the branch, is a man of patience, wisdom and stern integrity. Bro. Richard Salyards, a Teacher, is a true specimen of a good worker—careful, deliberate. All the Saints with whom I met are alive, and earnest, honest workers. I wish to mention Bro. Ralph G. Smith as an example of those who are always seen at the services of God's house. He permits no small thing to preclude his attendance. He is also of the number who endeavor to live their profession. I do not say this by way of flattery, but as a hint to young Saints to do the same thing.

From there I went to Wheeling, and Benwood, where I labored for three weeks, preaching to attentive audiences. The Benwood Branch is young in the gospel work, but faithful. They have done a noble work—worthy of imitation by Saints elsewhere. They number about twenty, are not rich in this world's goods, but have made a successful effort in the erection of a church edifice, and on the 9th inst. opened a Sunday School with forty-six in attendance, and on the 16th there were fifty-five present. God has spoken comforting words to them, and has wisely forewarned them.

While at Wheeling, and in the delivery of my lecture on "Utah Mormonism, Its Doctrines and Usages," I made the following statement, during which it actually seemed to me that the roof opened and the power of God came down and completely enveloped me, and raised me from the floor. I know God was with me: "We, as a church, made the first blow at Utah polygamy, and by the help of the Infinite we mean to strike, and strike, and STRIKE at the accursed system, until it shall fall 'neath the anathema of Him who said: "It's a doctrine of hell! And inasmuch as we were the first to strike, we mean to be the last to leave, the last to quit!" It is blessed to know that the Lord confirms his own word, presenting the heavenly witness in its declaration. We can say to the Church: "The gospel has come to you, not in word only but in power and full assurance of the Holy Spirit."

Work in this district is on the improve. Bro. G. T. Griffiths is laboring with commendable zeal, attended by God's favor. He has done and is doing much good.

Yours in truth,

J. FRANK McDOWELL.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Last Wednesday evening I baptized and confirmed Bro. Jean Baramia, born at Bonashara Point, the southern portion of Hindoostan, Asia, in April, 1849. He was raised in the Isle of France, and speaks the French as well as Hindoo, Japanese and English languages. He also reads English. He is married to a colored lady. They were and she is now a member of the Catholic Church. About seven years ago he began to have manifestations that the church he belonged to was not right, and that there was and should be a church, teaching the gospel as anciently. He visited most of the protestant churches, and failed to find what he was seeking after. Falling in one day with Bro. James Steele, of our city, he instructed him in the gospel more perfectly. After attending our meetings and investigating some three or four months, he became anxious to obey. About two weeks before the Java earthquake, he came into my office and related a vision of the whole affair, which he had seen, and which was fulfilled literally about two weeks afterwards. He is the first convert from Hindoostan I ever saw. He is a bright fellow, with the appearance of a mild and quiet spirit.

Last night we elected branch officers; I was re-elected president, and accepted the trust.

Yours truly,

H. P. BROWN.

TURNBULL, Monroe Co., Alabama,

September 15th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I left Brn. Anthony and Chute last Sunday at Bro. Pagus', preaching at Mount Zion Church, of the Methodist persuasion. Bro. Anthony is doing a good work in our district. He baptized twenty-six in Lone Star Branch, five in Pleasant Hill, one in Bro. James Hawkins' neighborhood. He will preach here the 4th Sunday. We want him to return to this mission after the Spring Conference. Every body wants him to come back. He suits this mission. Both Saint and sinner wants him to come back. He has made friends every where, and the Lord is confirming his word with signs following.

Bro. Monroe Booker, of our branch, had a little boy thrown from a horse running at full speed down grade. In falling the horse jumped on him. The print of the hoof was left on the stomach and the points of three ribs. He sent for Brn. R. J. Anthony, G. R. Scogin and myself. We went and administered to him, and he was healed almost instantly. His bowels were badly swollen, and some of his ribs fractured. He got up the same evening, and next day was playing with the children. Never complained any more. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I remain your brother in gospel bonds,

W. J. BOOKER.

The schooner Pilot, for Chicago, was run down by another craft, and nearly disabled. Twelve miles south of Point Peter, Ont., the steamer Peerless was sunk. The barge Frontenac was struck by another vessel and sunk.

Sep. 28th.—Three shocks of earthquake were felt Thursday at Agram, Hungary, the Croatian Capital.

The Porte, in its note to the European Powers relative to the condition of affairs in Bulgaria, calls their attention to the armament of Bulgaria.

Dispatches from Hanoi state that Col. Bichot started the 17th with two battalions of troops to reconnoitre the country abandoned by the Black Flags and demolish their defenses. He will return to Hanoi by the left bank of the river. The negotiations in Tonquin will be conducted by Tricou, the French Minister to China, at Peking. The French legation at Hue is guarded by marines from the fleet. The Annamese Government has sent orders to the military Mandarins disbanding all Annamese troops who have not given their adhesion to the French authorities.

China claims both banks of the Red River, with the neutral zone south. The French Government has declared it cannot accept these terms, because to do so it would lose all the fruits of its expedition, obtaining neither the Delta of the Red River, the rich mining districts of Tonquin, nor a monopoly of trade with the southwest provinces of China.

Tidewater Logan, charged with having originated the recent riots at Canton, China, was found guilty of manslaughter and sentenced to seven years' penal servitude.

The Huntingdon (Pa.) Car and Car-Wheel Works have succumbed under financial pressure with liabilities at $200,000. The 400 employes who are thrown out of work have not been paid for two months.

Sep. 30th.—Twenty-one Croatians who were concerned in what they deemed to be the patriotic work of removing Hungarian escutcheons from public buildings at Agram were sentenced to terms of imprisonment varying from one week to six months, Saturday. They have appealed.

Gourkho, the Russian General, has returned to Warsaw after an inspection of the fortifications and of the railway lines converging on the Austro-German frontier. Orders have been given to the railways to have in readiness military cars and tenders and 50,000 ambulance beds. The captains of all private steamers on the Black Sea have been warned to be in readiness to transport munitions and troops, and war material, and to cease to execute private orders. Gen. Gourkho in conversation freely avows his belief that war will shortly break out.

Yesterday forty-one young Indians arrived at the Feehanville Training School, near Chicago, where they will receive an industrial education. Among the young braves is a son of Sitting-Bull, who is now in his twenty-third year, and who has a wife whom he left in Dakota.

The white people in the vicinity of St. John's Settlement, Dakota, are apprehensive of an Indian outbreak, growing out of the opposition of Little Bull and Little Shell to the Government survey defining the Chippewa Reservation.

A recently-published statement of the yield of precious metals shows that in 1882 the output of gold in the entire world was valued at $118,000,000 and of silver at $94,000,000. It is a fact not generally understood that Russia is the third greatest producer of gold, the yield of that country being $30,000,000, only $21,400,000 less than the United States, and $2,000,000 less than Australia. The United States is the greatest silver producer, the yield in 1882 being $16,950,000. Australia, though ranking second in the production of gold, contributes scarcely any silver to the world's supply, while Mexico, a great silver-producer, yields but little gold. The comparative data show that the United States is the only nation in which both of the precious metals are found in great abundance.

Oct. 1.—A small force of French troops has started from Harphong for Bac Ninh, where it will probably meet a French expedition from Hanoi. All is quiet at Canton.

Nihilistic circulars have been issued at St. Petersburg demanding that the Russian Government shall cease its cruel treatment of prisoners, especially women.

Alfonso left Paris this morning for Spain, and the mob were considerate enough to let him go in peace. Madrid is highly incensed over the insults offered the King Saturday, and Alfonso will be a perceptibly bigger man on his return than when he went away.

The Mark Lane Express, in its review of the British grain trade the last week, says: The cold and wet weather has hampered the gathering of the remnant of the harvest, and also been very unfavorable for the threshing of grain. The samples of new English wheat that have arrived are generally in bad condition. Damp samples are unsalable, and dry samples barely maintain previous rates. Flour is very dull. Foreign wheats are very depressed and supplies large. The arrivals of flour are heavy. Pacific coast flour does not appear suited for the London market. Maize is gradually cheapening. Mixed American, Friday was quoted at 26 shillings ex-ship. Cargoes off coast are lifeless. There were twenty-three arrivals and seven sales. Ten were withdrawn and eleven remain on sale. Trade forward is depressed. Sales of English wheat for the week, 72,844 quarters at 41 shillings per quarter, against 58,211 quarters at 40 shillings 4 pence per quarter for the corresponding week last year.

Fifteen thousand steel and iron workers of Glamorganshire and Monmouthshire, England, have struck against a reduction of ten per cent in wages. The employers urge, in view of English and American competition, that they must either close the works or reduce wages.

Proctor and Sons, corn-millers at Newcastle, England, failed yesterday for £150,000.

Twenty-seven of the leading clearing houses of the United States for the week ending Sept. 30 report aggregate clearings of $1,014,518,362, as against $950,389,162 the previous week, and $987,452,962 the week preceding. As compared with the same period last year the last week's clearings show a decrease of 20.8 per cent, against a decrease of 21.5 per cent for the week previous. The recent heavy failures in New York, the long drought, and hesitancy on the part of buyers have had much to do with the diminished returns. Colman Bros., a New York and San Francisco clothing firm, have failed for $600,000. The Glen Woolen Company at Hampden, Mass., is trying to settle with its creditors, with liabilities estimated at $65,000.

The yellow-fever patients on board the steamer Newbern at San Francisco are recovering and no new cases have been developed. Out of a population of 10,000 at Tapachula, Mex., 1,200 have died within the last few days from black small-pox.

The Ashton, England, weavers on a strike have returned to work.

Since November last the redemption of 3 per cent bonds has caused a contraction of the currency to the amount of $10,000,000, and the banks are trying to devise some means of relief.

A conference concerning contagious diseases among domestic animals has been called by Commissioner Loring, of the department of Agriculture, to be held in Chicago Nov. 15 and 16.

Oct. 2.—King Alfonso arrived at Madrid yesterday afternoon, and was enthusiastically welcomed by the Spanish people. A grand popular reception followed at the palace in the evening, at which 30,000 of his subjects were present.

The statement of the Imperial Bank of Germany shows a decrease in specie of 30,000,000 marks.

It is reported that the American steamship Chacorna is ashore near Manila and will be a total loss.

Secretary Folger is considering the feasibility of issuing 2 per cent bonds, to be used as a security for National Bank circulation.

At New York the clearing-house transactions for the fiscal year aggregated $41,362,138,453, the daily average being $137,704,402. The total transactions since the clearing-house was organized in 1853 amount to $715,201,540,337, with a daily average of $77,612,755.

Oct. 3.—Affairs in Canton, China, are in a very critical condition. The populace is greatly excited over the result of the Logan trial. Communication between the English quarter and the city is entirely cut off. Incendiary placards are posted on the walls of the Viceroy's palace daily, and are torn down by the police. They proclaim that should the French fleet threaten an attack, the mob, first of all, will kill all foreigners and destroy their property. The mob is ripe for rebellion. Mandarins of the highest rank are insulted and spat upon while going through the city. Troops are being drawn from the outlying forts to guard the palace of the Viceroy. The foreign quarter is safe, being under the cover of six gunboats, including the United States steamer Palos. The Juniata was expected in a few days last Saturday. Much uneasiness is felt by foreigners elsewhere. Even in Hong Kong precautions have been adopted. Arms for volunteers have been deposited in two banks, and the night patrols have been increased. Reports from many parts of the Empire state the Chinese are dissatisfied with their rulers, and signs of internal commotion are visible. A fleet of Chinese gunboats has been brought together before the forts on the islands at the entrance to the Canton River.

Advices from Madagascar state that the Makobo, commander of the Hovas, has offered rewards for the slaughter of the Captain of any French man-of-war which shall wreck or burn any vessel. The same advices report the French garrisons at Tamatave and Majurga virtually blockaded.

For several years that portion of West Virginia in and about Phillippi has been terrorized by a series of bold and aggressive robberies and outrages. The violations of law were so frequent and so successful that the people seemed paralyzed with fear. Valuable cattle were poisoned, barns burned, and other depredations committed. Recently, however, suspicion pointed to an organization known as "Red men," which had wigwags in various parts of the mountainous counties of the State. This organization claimed that it was organized to put down lawlessness in the counties where the arm of the law was weak. In it, and at its head, were many men prominent in their own community, and whose honesty and integrity were unquestioned. One of these men was Marion Howes, a whisky-gager in the employ of the United States, and Circuit Judge. Another was Noah Kittle, a prominent farmer. Albert Price, a Deputy United States Marshal, was also a high dignitary in the order, which had its headquarters at Philippi, a village of 200 people in the Allegheny Mountains, on Tygart's Valley River. The place was isolated, and afforded a fine field of operations for the band.

During the recent big gale the barge Treat was cast adrift on Lake Huron. She went to pieces yesterday, and her crew reached shore almost famishing after six days of the most terrible suffering.

Canterbury and Haskell, boot and shoe manufacturers at Boston, have failed for $190,000.

Snow is falling in Canada, and the weather is cold.

Value of imports of merchandise to the United States, for the twelve months ending August 31st, $706,804,564; for the previous twelve months, $742,008,913; decrease this year, $35,204,349; value of exports of merchandise for the twelve months ended August 31st, $820,710,919; for the previous twelve months, $737,325,758; increase, $83,385,161.

Small-pox has made its appearance in Charleston, Ill. Two persons have died.

At Hermosillo, Mexico, the death-rate from yellow-fever is about twenty a day. Many lives could be saved with proper medical treatment and nurses, of which there is great need.

A letter from Dr. Valladez, at Mazatlan, Mexico, states that between Aug. 15th and Sep. 16th, 380 deaths were reported in that city from yellow-fever. Another letter from the same place to a physician says the fever is moving south, and that Presidio, Concordia, Rosario, and Oualacan were visited by the disease. Out of one battalion of 600 soldiers 150 had died. At the date of writing the fever was abating for want of fresh material.

The patients aboard the steamer Newbern, in San Francisco, are reported improving, with the exception of the fireman, who is not expected to live. No appearance of any cases in the city has been reported.

FIRES, STORMS AND ACCIDENTS.

Sep. 27th.—Loss by fire at Chicago, Ill., $5,000. Kankakee, Ill., $13,000. New Hampton, Mo., $10,000. Galveston, Tex., $20,000. Charlevoix, Mich., $10,000.

Lime Rock, Ala., $10,000, and the life of one man. An aged colored woman was burned to death in a small house in Bloomington, Ind. At Chaska Hill, Minn., two freight trains collided, killing four men, almost an entire car load of cattle, and wrecking several cars. Near Valley City, Dak., a railroad collision killed two men, and wrecked an engine. Near Duluth, Minn., an engine ran into a freight train and seriously injured several men. Near Wheeling, W. Va., by the breaking of an axle, nine cars were smashed to pieces. One man had his arm broken. Near Boonville, Mo., a circus train was ditched, causing a loss of $15,000. Two men were badly injured. Near Shippensville, Pa., a freight train of two engines and fourteen cars went through a trestle, killing one man and seriously injuring three others. A steamboat boiler exploded at Albany, N. Y., yesterday, instantly killing three men and injuring several others.

The schooner David Vance crushed into a section of the Adams street viaduct, Chicago, yesterday afternoon, badly demolished that structure, crushed a teamster, who is not expected to live, and injured three others more or less seriously. There were several narrow escapes. It will cost the city $7,000 to repair the viaduct.

One street car running into another, in Milwaukee, Wis., killed one horse, and seriously injured a man and woman.

Sept. 30th.—Loss by fire at Milwaukee, Wis., $100,000. Three firemen were badly injured. Portsmouth, O., $14,000. Batavia, O., $10,000.

A powder mill explosion at San Francisco, Cal., blew to atoms forty Chinamen, and one white man. An oil tank explosion at Brooklyn, N. Y. caused a loss of $20,000. A house was maliciously fired at Shelbyville, Ind., and two of its inmates burned to death.

Capt. John Allen was by accident thrown off the deck of his schooner into the lake about two miles from Oswego, N. Y., Saturday night. His son jumped in to save him. Both were drowned.

Oct. 1.—At Amherst, N. H., lightning struck and burned a house, killing one of its occupants. Loss by fire at Trenton, Mo., $30,000. De Kalb, Ill., $15,000. Commonwealth, Wisconsin, $7,500. New York City $22,000. Mobile, Ala., $35,000.

Kansas and Missouri were visited by severe storms last night. Four persons were injured and much damage done to property. Indiana was also visited by a disastrous storm of hail and wind. Buildings were unroofed, whole orchards destroyed, and trees carried long distances by the wind. A cyclone struck Lexington, Ky., and did $5,000 worth of damage to the town, and $10,000 to the surrounding country.

Near Naples, Italy, a train was thrown from the track and five persons killed and forty injured.

Near Fort Plain, N. Y. two trains collided, killing one man and injuring several others.

Oct. 2.—The exposition building at Pittsburg, Pa., was entirely destroyed by fire. Loss by fire at Atlanta, Ga., $50,000. Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, $40,000. Carmi, Ill., $6,000.

In various parts of New England, in Virginia, Indiana, and Kansas, destructive storms of wind and rain occurred, blowing down telegraph poles, unroofing houses, etc.

A rope broke in a coal mine at Leigh, England, precipitating the cage to the bottom of the shaft and killing six miners.

Oct. 3.—The loss on the Pittsburg Exposition Building, burned yesterday, is about $1,000,000. The Neal Block at Oswego, N. Y., burned, injuring three persons. Loss by fire at New Orleans, La., $20,000. Quebec, Ont., $30,000. Attleboro, Mass., $20,000. Monmouth, Illinois, $3,500.

The steamer Carrie sank yesterday afternoon, near Petersburg, Va., during a heavy storm. The crew were picked up by a passing steamer, except the fireman, Alexander Peete, who was drowned. The crew were in the water for an hour before they were rescued.

The steamer Anderson encountered a severe storm fifteen miles from Decatur, Ala., yesterday, carrying away her upper decks and doing considerable other damage. Three deck-hands were drowned.

CROP REPORTS.

In some parts of Illinois the freeze was severe, and unripe corn was entirely destroyed. A terrible drouth is prevailing in Jackson County, Ills.

Wells are giving out, creeks drying up, and vegetation withering. In Mason County, Ill., corn is 65 to 70 per cent of a full crop. Wheat good. Fruit Scarce.

From some parts of Iowa reports come that the frost of September 26th, did no damage, and from other parts to the effect that it did great damage.

Fifty per cent of the corn grown in Dakota is ruined by the frost.

Much fall wheat has been sown in Indiana and Illinois. A hail storm of unusual severity swept over Carroll County, Ind., September 29th, doing great damage. The corn crop of Indiana has been greatly injured by frost, and what is not totally destroyed is of a very poor quality.

The Michigan apple crop is below the average, and of a very poor quality. The same is true of Indiana.

Louisiana is suffering from an excessive drouth. There has been but a single shower for three months. The crops are bent and parched for want of moisture and all the staples except rice have greatly deteriorated.

LOCAL NEWS.

LAMONI.—About eleven o'clock of Sunday night, September 30th, Mr. D. E. Bedell, living about seven miles northeast of here, was aroused from sleep by his little seven year old girl, who was sleeping by his side, who informed him that she had heard somebody hallooing. He paid but little attention to her, and was soon almost asleep again. The little girl, hearing a roaring noise, again called his attention, and this time he arose and went to the window, and to his astonishment discovered that his barn, located about fifty yards from the house, was all aflame. The fire had proceeded too far to control, and the building with its contents was almost entirely consumed. Three horses, valued at $700 were burned to death, and two others very badly injured. The loss is estimated at $1,400. Mr. Bedell is confident that the fire was the work of an incendiary. A strong smell of kerosene oil while the fire was raging and afterwards; the hallooing heard by the little girl; and the fact that some parties were heard to pass Mr. Fletcher's house, about half a mile from Bedell's, shortly after the time when the hallooing was heard, are some of the reasons for this belief. Five hundred dollars reward is offered by Mr. Bedell, for the arrest and delivery into proper custody of the guilty parties.

Mr. Eugene Dancer has built an extensive coal and wood shed, and a one story addition to his house, upon his property just south of the Herald Office.

Sr. Mattie Conover has started a restaurant and lunch house three doors from the Post Office.

In Eden Township, Decatur county, Frank Hamilton, a boy of twelve years of age, son of Dr. A. Hamilton, caught his arm in a cane mill, and tore the flesh from above the elbow to the shoulder. At last advices was getting better.

FINISH THY WORK.

Finish thy work; the time is short,
The sun is in the west.
The night is coming down; till then Think not of rest.

Finish thy work; then wipe thy brow,
Ungird thee from thy toil:
Take breath, and from each weary limb
Shake off the soil.

Finish thy work; then go in peace,
Life's battle fought and won;
Hear from the throne the Master's voice,
"Well done, well done!"

Always write the Business portion of your Letter on a separate piece of paper, and let it be brief and explicit.

MY DREAM OF HEAVEN.

One night, worn and weary, I went to my bed,
And my sorrows and cares hardly press'd,
When a beautiful vision came into my head,
And I dreamed I was safe with the blest.
No cares or sad thoughts overshadowed their brow,
They rejoiced in full glory above;
The light from the Lamb did brilliantly shine,
All full on the Saints of his love.

But how can I tell you the beauties of heaven,
Revealed unto me in my dream,
To mortals or angels it never was given
The power to describe the blest theme.
I'm longing to tell it, but feel at a loss,
So wonderful 'twas, and so grand;
And all upon earth seemed but refuse and dross,
When compared to that far better land.

But now, if my memory will serve me aright,
I will tell of my dreaming so fair,
Of the glories and beauties of this world so bright,
And the peace and the happiness there.
I saw the archangels with gossamer wings;
There did seraphs and cherubims raise
Their voices in rapture, as each one now sings
So sweetly his great Maker's praise.

I have seen the bright sun sink away in the west,
Like a flame of pure amber and gold;
But that, when compared with the Saints' happy rest,
Was as nothing at all to behold.
With rapturous awe I gazed all around,
New glories kept meeting my sight;
A stream of pure happiness constantly found,
In this beautiful heaven so bright.

Its gates of rich pearl did in grandeur surpass Far more than my thoughts could conceive;
Its streets of pure gold were like clear shining glass,
More glorious than man could believe.
Its high walls were studded with rich precious stones,
Like sapphires and rubies they shine;
In brilliance and beauty so matchless, they show
The Maker and Builder Divine.

In amaranthine bowers all clothed in white,
On their brows are inscribed the new name;
The white stone that glistens so lovely and bright,
Were the Saints with the emblems of fame.
On earth they were never ashamed of the cross,
And conquered through Christ's mighty love;
All worldly-sought gain they counted but loss,
And they reign now with riches above.

And some I saw there, who on earth were oppressed,
In troubles passed over life's race;
But in joy they arrived at the home of the blest,
And were saved by the riches of grace.
Their clothes, soiled and ragged, were taken away,
And white robes were supplied to each one;
In glory celestial reflecting Christ's ray,
In his image they shone like the sun.
I saw a clear river, so pure and so bright,

That flowed on, refreshing all there.
It dazzled my eyes as it streamed in the light,
And like chrysal resplendently fair.
The lamb to this river of water did lead,
The flock he redeemed with his blood,
In lovely green pastures his saints he did feed,
And his love comforts them in that place.

The blest tree of life was there bearing fruit,
Of its virtues all there could partake.
All blessings were there the righteous to suit,
And those who had lived for Christ's sake,
Who'd accomplished some mission for him upon earth,
To bring others to love him and praise,
And lead them to seek for the Spirit's new birth,
Who from death to a new life did raise.

My soul seemed enraptured with holy, sweet joy,
Seeing myriads of Saints walking there;

In hymns of loud praise their time they employ,
Singing sweet in that region so fair.
On a throne of bright jasper the Almighty King,
Displays the rich fund of His love;
The rainbow illumines, the choirs loudly sing,
And fill the whole heaven above.

One I loved I saw there with scars and with wounds;
Calm, holy rays beamed from his face;
With loud hallelujahs his temple resounds,
All his Saints now rejoice in his grace.
Sweet music arose now from trumpets and strings,
Flowing melody on my ear broke
In praise of their Savior, the great King of Kings,
While in extacy sweet from my dream I awoke.

THE IMMUTABILITY OF THE GOSPEL.

IS THE gospel of Christ a specific law and rule of action, by which all men may be saved in the kingdom of God? Yes, because it is the perfect law of the Lord. Ps. 19: 7. Again, it is the law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus, and it makes us free from the law of sin and death. Rom. 8: 2. Hence it is the perfect law of liberty. Jas. 1: 25.

Have we an assurance that God has not, and never will change this gospel plan of saving men? Yes, because it was, and is, and ever will be, the same, and it is as immutable as God himself, and there was not nor will be any other; and all that are saved, and all who will be saved, are saved by it. Is the foregoing answer in harmony with the revealed word of God? Yes. Paul certified that he received the gospel by revelation of Jesus Christ. Gal. 1: 11, and that it originated in eternity, before the world was. That God before he had framed the world, laid the scheme of life and salvation according to the good pleasure of his will, having predestinated us unto the adoption of children by Jesus Christ, to himself, wherein he hath made us accepted in the beloved, [Christ]. He had chosen us in him, Christ, "in whom we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins, wherein, [or in him], he hath abounded toward us in all wisdom and prudence."—Eph. 1: 4, 5, 6, 7, 8. That in him, Christ, men are to receive blessings and become children. Also the same apostle informs us, that "the gospel was preached before unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed."—Gal. 3: 8.

The foregoing quotation is in harmony with Genesis twelfth chapter, and according to the account given by Moses and the Psalmist it is plain that God had revealed the gospel to Abraham, with promise and by oath unto Isaac, and confirmed it unto Jacob. Gen. 22: 15-18; Ps. 105: 8-10; also Gen. 28: 14. So the promise was to Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, that in them and their seed all the families or nations of the earth should be blessed. Paul says, "to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He said not and to the seeds, as of many, but as of one, and to thy seed, which is Christ."—Gal. 5: 16. According to this explanation, the promise to Abraham and his seed stands in this light: that in thee, and in Christ thy seed, shall all the families of the earth be blessed. The foregoing settles the question who the seed was, and we must be particular to notice, that it is in Abraham and his seed, which is Christ, that all the families of the earth shall be blessed; and not out of them. Again, we can see by the foregoing, that it is not enough for us that we should be a regular descendant from Abraham to entitle us to the blessings of heaven, but we must be in his seed also, which is Christ. So to obtain eternal life, we must be both in Abraham and in Christ, also his seed. It is evident that Paul excludes the seed of Abraham according to the flesh from being the children of Abraham according to this promise. See Romans 9: 6-8. Only such could be saved as had faith like faithful Abraham, it matters not from whom they descended, whether they were Jew or Gentile, bond or free; for if through faith they were enabled to get into Christ Jesus, they would be Abraham's children, and heirs according to the promise. Paul in his epistle to the Galatians, solves the mystery concerning true believers being put into Christ, and becoming Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise. Hear him: "For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus, for as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise."—Gal. 3: 26-29. This explanation carries the gospel that Paul preached in his day, to its legitimate issue, and shows what it was that was preached to Abraham; and that it was that same plan that originated in eternity before the world was, wherein God purposed in himself to reinstate man into divine favor, which he had lost by sin and transgression, that they might be sons of God, and heirs of eternal life and immortality. This is the blessing spoken of in the promise made to Abraham, that God would confer upon all the families of the earth. And this, God's immutable plan of life and salvation, which was revealed to favored Abraham, and again to the world by Jesus Christ and his Apostles, having neither beginning of days nor end of years, it is as a mighty cable that reaches from eternity to eternity, and can not be broken, neither can strength be added to it or taken from it. Heaven and earth will pass away, but the gospel, the word of God, endureth forever; and every nation, kindred, tongue and people must hear it. The dead shall hear it.

Jesus says: "This gospel of the kingdom, [not another], shall be preached to the ends of the world, for a witness." From the testimony we have of the mind and will of God given in his revealed word, who can doubt, or who can admit the thought that he will at any period of the world save men in his kingdom by any other means than "this gospel of the kingdom," according to his promise made to Abraham, which God confirmed by an oath, and it is impossible for him to lie, and therefore it can not be repealed while there remains one son or daughter of Adam to be saved. This is in harmony with Paul's teaching. "Wherein God, willing more abundantly to show unto the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel, [gospel], confirmed it by an oath, that by two immutable things, in which it was impossible for God to lie, we might have a strong consolation, who have fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us, which hope we have as an anchor of the soul, both sure and steadfast."—Heb. 6: 17-20.

It may seem strange in the face of so much evidence of the immutability of God's perfect law, that wise men of the world will construe it to establish some new, or different theory, by which many different creeds are formed, which have a form of Godliness, but deny the power thereof. Let them take heed, every man's work shall be tried by fire. The apostles had learned of Jesus that God the Father was the author and finisher of the gospel scheme of life, and that he had not purposed to give it out to men that they might remodel and change, or ignore the ordinances at will, and make such improvements as they believed would be more convenient for their purposes. Many have taken this honor to themselves, notwithstanding Jesus had forewarned them of that fatal error. See Matt. 7: 21; 22: 23; also Matt. 15: 6-13. Paul well understood the immutability of the gospel he preached. Hear him all ye ends of the earth: "But though we, or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed."—Gal. 1: 8, 9.

The foregoing should be conclusive that there is but the one plan of saving men, and that it is the gospel of Christ. It is also evident that the apostles so understood Jesus, or Paul would not have said, if an angel preach any other gospel, let him be accursed. Note the commission given the apostles, Matt. 28: 18-20. Jesus said, All power was given him, and he commanded the apostles, "Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations." Why teach all nations? Because the promise was unto all the nations of earth. What were they to teach all nations? First, the gospel, for they were to baptize them (all nations) into Christ. Second, they were to teach them (all nations) to observe all things (not a part) whatsoever "I have commanded you, and lo I am with you always, even unto the end of the world." Mark tells us that they went forth and preached, and the Lord (according to his promise, "I am with you always") working with them, and "confirming the word (the gospel) with signs following."—Mark 16: 16. It may be asked here, what signs? I refer to the signs spoken of in Mark 16: 17, 18.

From the foregoing it may be safe to say, if men or an angel from heaven preach any gospel that these signs do not follow, it is not the gospel of Christ. It might be well to notice in this connection, that the gospel of Christ is a compendium of fixed principles. In Hebrews 6: 1, 2, Paul enumerates six principles of the doctrine of Christ: faith, repentance, baptism, the laying on of hands, the resurrection of the dead, and eternal judgment. In Romans 6: 17, he calls it "that form of doctrine which was delivered you." I understand the definition of form to be shape, method, order, which characterizes all God's laws.

There are three of these principles applicable to all true believers in Christ, and must be administered by one having authority from God. Faith is the first principle, and essential to salvation, because Jesus says, "He that believeth not, shall be damned."—Mark 16: 16. Repentance, the second principle, is also essential to salvation, because Jesus says, "Except ye repent, ye shall all perish."—Luke 13: 3. The third principle is baptism for the remission of sins. Acts 2: 28. It is essential to salvation, "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ."—Gal. 3: 27. And in Christ, the Beloved, we are made acceptable to God. In Christ we have redemption through his blood, the forgiveness of sins; and in Christ God will abound towards us in all wisdom and prudence. Eph. 1: 6-8. Or in Christ's words, "He will send the comforter, that will guide us into all truth, and shew us things to come."—John 16: 13. The fourth principle of the gospel is the laying on of hands. The importance of this principle few understand. By the laying on of hands by one having authority from God, we receive the Holy Ghost. Acts 18: 14-17. By the application of water, and by virtue of the blood of Christ, and the operation and power of the spirit that quickeneth, those three agree in one, and bear witness that we are born of the water and of the spirit, (1 John 5: 8), and are sealed with the Holy Spirit of promise, (Eph. 1: 13, 14), and receive the adoption of sons, "the Spirit itself bearing witness with our spirits, that we are the children of God; and if children, then heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ."—Rom. 8: 16, 17. Jesus says, "Except a man [not a child] be born of water and of the spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God."—John 5: 5.

In conclusion let me say with all due regard to the rights and liberty of all men to believe and choose for themselves, as they alone must be accountable to God; but to the honest in heart who are seeking after truth, if you would inherit God's kingdom, you must accept the same gospel Peter and Paul preached, and from the heart obey its mandates.

JOHN MATTHEWS.

VINCENNES, IOWA.

"I AM THE VINE, YE ARE THE BRANCHES."

THE foregoing Scripture is the words of Christ unto his disciples, endeavoring to show the close connection between himself and his disciples; the close proximity that should exist between himself and them, or the union that should be, to make them one. The figure taken is very illustrative of the unity that should exist between Christ and his Church; for he says, "I am the true vine, and my Father is the husbandman." And again: "Now ye are clean through the word which I have spoken unto you." "Abide in me, and I will abide in you. As the branch can not bear fruit of itself except it abide in the vine; no more can ye, except ye abide in me." To further show the oneness of Christ and his Church, we will quote Paul, or a portion of his third chapter to the Ephesians: "In stirring up their pure minds by way of remembrance; telling them to submit themselves one to another in the fear of God." And further he says: "Wives submit yourselves unto your own husbands, as unto the Lord. For the husband is the head of the wife, even as Christ is the head of the Church: and he is the Savior of the body. Therefore, as the Church is subject unto Christ, so let the wives be to their own husbands in every thing. Husbands, love your wives, even as Christ, also loved the Church, and gave himself for it, that he might sanctify and cleanse it, with the washing of water by the word: that he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing, but that it should be holy, and without blemish. So ought men to love their wives as their own bodies; he that loveth his wife loveth himself; for no man yet hated his own flesh, but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as the Lord the Church; for we are members of his body, of his flesh and of his bones. For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall be joined unto his wife, and they two shall be one flesh. This is a great mystery but I speak concerning Christ and the Church."

Thus Paul desires to impress on their minds this union, or oneness, that should exist between Christ and his Church, as a God-loving husband and wife, and says, "I speak concerning Christ and the Church." The vital force, or divine energy, by which Christ spoke and performed his wondrous works was evidently the Spirit of God. And that power which he promised the branches, or each individual member. He promised them ability to perform the same works he did, and greater, if they would abide in him. By what power were these works to be done? By the Comforter, the Spirit of Truth, which Spirit was to guide them into all truth, and show them things to come, and bring to their remembrance, whatsoever he had taught them. It was also to declare that which had not as yet been revealed. The Spirit is therefore the principle, or power of divine revelation. This comforting power was to be given to each individual member. Therefore it is necessary that each member of his body should be supplied with a portion, more or less, of this life sap from the vine, which is Christ.

Wherever you see a tree that is all alive and each branch of that tree clothed with beautiful foliage, and often laden with fruit, most assuredly that branch, or member of that tree, or vine, is abiding in the tree, or vine. So it is with the Church of Christ. Jesus Christ is the same yesterday, to-day and forever; therefore his Church is the same, and the gospel the same, and has the same foundation, which is revelation, or which the foundation rests upon.

"Apostles and prophets, evangelists, pastors and teachers." "Therefore the building is a perfect one, and rests upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone. The Church, as a building, with its foundation resting upon revelation, even the rock which Christ told his apostles that his Church was built upon. He saith, "Whosoever cometh to me and heareth my sayings, and doeth them, I will show you to whom he is like. He is like a man who built a house and digged deep, and laid the foundation on a rock." Now then, there is but one rock, but one foundation, but one building; and as Paul in another scripture says: "Endeavoring to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. In one body and one spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling. One Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God, and Father of all."

And again, Paul writing to the Corinthian brethren, says: "For I am jealous over you with godly jealousy; for I have espoused you to one husband, that I may present you as a chaste virgin to Christ." John saw when there would be a joyous union, or re-union of Christ and the church, not of the different churches, or bodies, that claim to have a form of godliness, but deny the power thereof. No, God forbid; for they are not the chaste virgin, but are many, and are diverse from each other. Christ has but one wife, and her name is one. John heard them saying, "Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him; for the marriage of the lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready. And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white; for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints. And he saith unto me, Write blessed are they which are called unto the marriage supper of the lamb. And he saith unto me, These are the true sayings of God."

Ever praying that that unity and oneness may exist that Christ prayed for, as recorded in the seventeenth of John's gospel. May peace and the love of God rest and abide with his people, Amen.

LETTER FROM ELDER MILLS.

Dear Herald:—Having been appointed a delegate from the Southern California District to General Conference, through the generous donations of the Saints in this district who so nobly contributed to send me on that long and expensive journey without the aid of the Bishop, I left home on the nineteenth of March, calling at the City of Angels, or Pueblo de Los Angeles, twelve miles from the Pacific Ocean, and built in the foot hills, is now fast extending westward from the old adobe part of the city, which is giving way to gorgeous and imposing structures, with modern improvements everywhere visible, on out through the beautiful green leaved orange groves, with the bright yellow golden fruit peeping from among the green foliage in clusters, more beautiful than painters' art can portray. Its zaujus, or water ditches from the Los Angeles river, winding and running around like silvery ribbons, furnish an adequate supply of water for irrigation. The city is fast filling up with eastern people. While standing upon Fort Hill, and gazing over city and valley, I noted the wondrous change since 1854, when I first gazed upon it from the same spot with P. P. Pratt and others, who have since passed away from earth.

My first night I staid at the hospitable home of Bro. Wm. Howland, at Green Meadows, six miles westward, with whom and his excellent family, with Saints and neighbors who congregated, had an enjoyable time, declaring the word one brief hour in evening. Early next morning, bidding all adieu, via Los Angeles, leaving Bro. Schnell, family, and many kind hearted Saints, took rail to San Bernardino, where I tarried a few hours with Brn. Allen, Harris, Holt, Aldrich, Ridley, and others too numerous to mention, whose names and works are recorded by angel pen and in the Lamb's Book of Life.

The parting over, I am seated in an emigrant car, with modern improvements, ticketed for Kansas City. Have plenty of room, only eleven persons in same car, some for Texas, others for Florida, and four for Eastern States, old Californians returning to visit former homes and friends. Stretched out on the adjustable seat for the night, I have hours for meditation, as we are fast whirling away from the Golden State, speeding on over desert and plain, waste and drear, known as the Great American Desert, nearly destitute of vegetation, the unfriendly abode of the roving, bloodthirsty Lamanite, the terror of the lone and weary traveler, or prospector, who so wearily treads its burning sands and thorny mazes, in search of the hidden treasures of the ancient mountains, or the "chief things of the lasting hills," whose tops are seen in the distance, towering heavenward. The eye wearies in gazing out upon this sea of desolation during the succeeding day till two o'clock, when Fort Yuma is shouted through the train, and every one is busy during the hour of our time-killing stay. Here rolls the quiet, muddy waters of the Colorado river, evidently under contract to fill up the Gulf of California, as the Sacramento river is the Bay of San Francisco. Yuma is an old military station, mostly adobe buildings, with low, flat dirt, or tile roofs; and some recently constructed wooden buildings. The depot is large and suitable, like most of the Pacific Railroad car buildings are, tasty and imposing. The grounds and improvements around the fort look quite warlike, and bear the impress of Uncle Sam, decidedly. The pretty green latticed quarters on the hill look cheerful. All around are crowds of half clad Lamanites, or Yuma Indians, selling pine nuts, canes, stones of doubtful value, buying of us oranges, apples and bread. Aside from the river this is a terribly dry and hot place. Even the little crested necked, horned toads looked almost roasted. A fearful neigh and snort of our iron horse, and we slowly pull out, and wind our way o'er extended desolation, marked as though the legendary fires of ghehenna had long done their work upon it. Just at night we pass two emigrant wagons, with ten souls, making slowly for the coveted mines, which they do not reach, for only twelve hours later they are all ruthlessly massacred by the relentless savage.

Passing this belt, we arrive at Pucson, (Tucson), one of the largest towns in Arizona. Near by is some excellent land. The irrigated crops look fine, barley is ready to cut for hay. A few orchards and vineyards are scattered about for quite a distance, with many adobe huts in sight, and small bands of cattle feeding on the wild grasses, chiefly gietta grass. The tunic bearing cacti abound. The natives indolent, and of Mexican descent, look dry, sere, and yellow, as if they subsisted chiefly upon chile con carna, (dried red pepper and beef pulverized and mixed equally), rendering them fire proof inside and out, hence the fiery rays of Sol can make no impression on them; while here and there the more provident white residents build with fly roofs and double walls, so a current of air can pass over and around their habitable ovens. But here we are at the dry looking town of Benson, the railroad junction to Guyamas, Mexico, and the nearest station to Tombstone, Arizona, (highly suggestive name). Another snort and puff, with sundry bumps and thumps, and we roll to Lordsburg, built of mountain pine, dry as tinder, droves and trains of ox and mule teams, freighting to the mines. Considerable silver bullion is corded and piled up at the depot. Much mining and milling machinery, amalgum pans, &c., all testifying of the chief industry of the country, and by which Ingersoll says every greenback can raise its hand and swear, I know that my redeemer liveth. Along here I was annoyed not a little by one passenger, the most ingenious and inveterate blasphemer I ever heard. His dialect was an unbroken chain of oaths and curses, fairly exhausting Satan's vocabulary. Finally I accosted him with "Where did you graduate, sir?" Answer, indignantly with an oath, "Perhaps you don't like swearing?" Replied, "I was thinking how it would read after the industrious angel had reported it all, and how would you like to hear me, sir, abuse your kind and good father, without any cause, if I were under the greatest obligations to him, and owed him my all, my life in his hands," &c. Blasphemer hesitated, looked down troubled, finally apologized to me, and ever after checked himself in conversation when using expletives. Oh! what a change will be wrought when the will of God is done in earth as in heaven.

From Wilua to Demming, a new and growing place, where I judge there is a strong enterprising spirit among the gamblers, as three of them were shot during our brief stay of half an hour, and no tears shed over it, apparently. Here we change cars, taking the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe road through New Mexico, Colorado, and Kansas, thence on to Rincon Junction. Killed half an hour here. Saw a train-load of the Mexican militia running down to Las Cruces, having on board a band of cattle-thieves, killed and captured by them up in the mountains. All were jubilant over it. The old commander was hilarious. It took two men to put him on the train. He acted like white men do when they are drunk; but perhaps he was aping this part of civilization. Rolling on at midnight, bang it goes, squeals, grunts, cries of help, and oaths, in the darkness, shattered lamps, and everything pitched on beam ends; nobody killed. It is only the daring cowcatcher of an iron horse in the rear, that has charged headlong into our rear car, demoralizing it, so turn outside the track, and on we go again better prepared to sleep than before. This is on the Rio Grande, or Large River, whose waters we are in sight of most of next day, and which might and should be utilized in irrigation, which would render the land very productive. This is the Lord's Day; no chance for preaching to fellow passengers, only one of them has any use for religion. Him I instructed and gave tracts to.

We pass San Marcial, Albuquerque, and several small Spanish towns of the same pattern, indeed, quite forbidding. There is much good government land here on the Rio Grande, which will ere long be taken up, and irrigated, especially along the line of the road. In the afternoon we pass opposite the old and famous trading-post of Santa Fe. It lies twenty miles off to our left, or northwest of us. Am told its thick-headed citizens opposed the road's passing through it, and now it is killed, left out in the cold, and feels quite sensible of it. We now start up the heavy grade in the Comanche Canon, so named from the Indians of that tribe, who used here to attack and rob the Santa Fe traders. On the summit we come to the small station of Glarietta, which we slowly reach by the aid of two heavy locomotives. Next we pass the ancient Pecos Mission. Some eighty rods to our left, in a quiet little valley, stands the old weather-beaten and time-honored church, with its two crumbling towers and chime of bells, and within whose walls, history tells us, the illustrious Montezuma was born. A long, narrow, underground passage once connected this building with an old fort near half a mile away. So I was informed by a venerable old Padre there. It is astonishing what an amount of labor in building the missions was done so long ago all over California and Mexico by Jesuit priests, and what control they obtained over the Indians universally. Their footprints are seen in every valley and on every stream. The fruit-trees were all of the same varieties, the small, black mission grape, large green pears, and black and white Smyrna figs, the pomegranate, and blood peach from Mexico, which grows wild in South America, and I think, is traceable to the Nephites. Last night our car is entered by three burly, ugly-looking, heavily-armed Mexicans, looking for coin. They were not agreeable companions, and so a good young Mexican from California with whom I am acquainted, occupying next berth, just sent them out, telling them we were all his friends, and were well armed, and were bravo, &c. We felt better when they left us untouched, though they took revenue from three or four other men in next car, and left. All this is pleasant to dream upon, as we trundle and thunder along. Occasionally the light of the conductor's lantern lights up our sleepy eyes, as he "recounts his worthies, stumbling in his walk." (Nahum). We pass the town of Las Vegas in the night, and La Trinidad on to La Junta, (Hunta), on the Arkansas river. Much good timber along the river, with moist pasture lands. Our first snow is seen to-day, all telling us we have passed from the semi tropic's perpetual summer, to a more rigid zone and clime. This is in Colorado. Even the small towns we are passing are of a very different style and structure. Herds of cattle and flocks of sheep, with plenty of feed, tell us of a growing and soon to be prosperous country, capable of supporting a large population. Good grain land, well watered, with plenty of coal and wood. On into Kansas, towns thrifty and more numerous as we proceed. Well cultivated farms cheer the eye.

Tuesday night had a good long visit with the gentlemanly and intelligent conductor, who seemed to be pleased with the gospel, and its work. Expect to see him in the kingdom. We parted with feeling words, and moist eyes. Leaving Emporia at eight in morning, mid rain and sleet, on through farms and villages, over a well cultivated region along the Caw river. The country is more and more lively, till afternoon we stop in the noisy, stirring, growing depot in Kansas City. After a short run again seated in a car, off for that appointed spot and city of Independence, Missouri, which old time Saints never tire in conversing about. As we now pass old fortifications in ruins, camps and battle grounds, pointed out by a fellow passenger, also saw marks of shot and shell among the trees. He told of many a poor fellow comrade who fell in the fratricidal war of the Rebellion, and related with a sigh his bloody experiences of those days of carnage and death, which it took to wipe the living lie from our banner of freedom. I could not refrain from telling him of the Lord's timely warning, given the nation through the Seer in 1832, and in 1840, when these scenes were plainly advertized, and again get rid of your slaves by the year 1850, either by emancipation or purchase, else you will pay their price in blood and in millions of treasure. Here was the warning given, and a means of escape pointed out, both of which were ruthlessly trodden under foot by the nation, both north and south. But his words did not pass away unfulfilled.

But here, in a broken, singularly picturesque country, we are at the depot in Independence. Quickly seated in the express wagon of Bro. John Brackenbury, which is in waiting, up the gravelly hill, past the far famed Temple Block, on some two hundred yards beyond, halt, and unload at the former residence of Bishop Partridge, nearly half a century ago; but now owned and occupied by our good brother F. C. Warnky and family, formerly from California, and by whom I was made welcome. In half an hour we were all in an excellent prayer meeting of the Saints, in their spacious new brick church. Here I found with these Saints, the same good Spirit enjoyed among the Saints in California. Here I enjoy the first sound night's sleep since leaving home, ten days before, and on the morrow am to do the city, and view its interesting features.

PROPHECY FULFILLING.

THE subjoined article from the New York Sun is another and startling evidence of the prophetic mission of Joseph Smith the Seer. In September, 1830, fifty-three years ago, he gave the following revelation:

"Wherefore, I, the Lord God, will send forth flies upon the face of the earth, which shall take hold of the inhabitants thereof, and shall eat their flesh, and shall cause maggots to come in upon them, and their tongues shall be stayed that they shall not utter against me."

Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 28: par. 5.

AN ALARMING DISEASE.—WORMS WHICH EAT UP PEOPLE ALIVE IN KANSAS.

A CORRESPONDENT of the New York Sun describes a new and horrible disease, at first confined to Texas cattle, but which has begun to attack human beings in Kansas. On the plains of Texas lives the screw worm fly, the terror of cattle. A fight between Texas cattle usually ends in one of them being wounded. The smell of the blood drifts down the wind, and the attracted screw-flies course upon the scent, anxious to deposit their eggs in the wound. The flies do not alight, but drop a glutinous substance which adheres to the wound. The substance contains hundreds of eggs, which hatch in twenty-four hours, when the worms burrow into the flesh and the animal is literally devoured alive.

The screw-worm is a little over half an inch long. It is corrugated and exceedingly hard. When put under the point of a knife and pressed upon, the worm slips from under the steel and flies through the air as though made of rubber. Imagine a white half-inch screw having a pointed head instead of the usual slotted one. That is a fair representation of the screw-worm.

The flies have been blown by south-west winds into Kansas, where they have attacked men and women. One case, reported in a medical journal, is worthy of note. The patient had long suffered from ozena. On the evening of August 22d, 1882, this man complained of a tickling sensation at the nose, that was promptly followed by exhaustive sneezing. This in its turn was followed by intense pain in the region of the eyes and cheeks. The physician in attendance mistakenly supposed that the pain was the result of ozena. The discharge from the nostrils was purulent and tinged with blood, and exceedingly offensive. The breath of the patient was revolting. It may be that his condition was so extremely offensive that the attending physician did not make an examination that would have revealed the presence of the disturbing cause. For two days the man suffered intense pain. All remedies administered failed to give relief. On the evening of the 24th of August there was a sudden and profuse discharge from both nostrils and the mouth. Instantly all pain ceased. There was no longer any involuntary discharge. The pus was with difficulty expectorated. The soft palate had been destroyed, and the tongue could no longer be used in speech. When this stage of the disease had been reached, a screw worm, much to the astonishment of the attending physician, fell from the mouth of the dying man. One after another, in obedience to the laws of their nature, full grown screw worms wiggled from his nostrils and mouth until 360 of them crawled from the honeycombed head and throat. The man died. An examination showed that the fishy part of the interior of his head had been almost devoured. By throwing back the head and depressing the swollen tongue, the vertebræ were exposed to view. There were other cases in which the worms were removed by forceps, and the patients, though dilapidated, recovered. All those attacked had catarrh.

Selections.

GOOD RESOLUTIONS.

PERSONS of gentle and yielding dispositions are startled when they come in contact with a rugged nature and iron will. For there are these giants of humanity who shape their resolves as the furnace and trip hammer shape masses of metal. They bear down all opposition, compelling weaker spirits into compliance. Yet the power and tenacity of purpose that surprise temperaments of a finer and frailer mold do not belong exclusively to the bold and the great, for even the most unobtrusive persons are capable of it at times. It is a trait of character in men to form their resolutions with fervor and impetuosity; but the milder and quieter spirit of woman comes silently and almost unconsciously to determinations that are not shaken or altered by the wear and tear of even a whole lifetime. Man is gifted with strength, woman with endurance. The difficulty for dispositions of average power and perseverance is found, not so much in coming to a resolution of sufficient intensity, but in keeping it for any length of time. The smooth water of an Alpine fountain may be frozen into a mass as hard, apparently, as glass, but the hot rays of summer soften it until it yields gradually, and at length finally melts away altogether. Bad habits take a long time to form, and they can not be thrown off without exertion. The good habit which replaces them can only be formed by a repetition of good acts. Drops of water falling from the roof of a cave, form, in the course of time, a stalactite, bright and strong to behold. The process, though, of this wonderful formation is slow and barely perceptible. So do single small acts of our will form themselves by repetition into lasting and unshaken habits.

Conference Minutes.

LITTLE SIOUX DISTRICT.

Met pursuant to adjournment at Moorehead School-house, Monona county, Iowa, at eleven o'clock a.m., Saturday, September 1st, 1883. Elders J. C. Crabb and Phineas Cadwell were elected president and assistant president, and Wm. C. Cadwell and J. W. Wight secretaries. The first forenoon was spent in listening to some well-timed remarks by Bro. Charles Derry.

Afternoon Session.—Branch Reports.—Union Center, same as at last report. Little Sioux 163; 2 baptized, 1 removed by letter. Magnolia 176; 1 gained by error in previous reports, 5 baptized, 1 received by letter, 1 removed by letter.

Official Reports.—J. Frank Mintun, of the seventy, by letter. Elders David Chambers (by letter), J. W. Wight, Z. S. Martin, Pryor Stevens (baptized 3), John Conyers, Wm. C. Cadwell, E. McEvers, Wm. Cowleshaw; High Priest, Charles Derry, baptized 2; Elder R. H. Wight, John Thomas of the Seventy; Elders J. M. Putney, E. R. Lanphear, Richard Farmer (by C. Derry); Priest, Wm. T. Fallon; Elders Edgar Sherman, Dorman Lewis; High Priests, Phineas Cadwell and J. C. Crabb, reported.

Elder Phineas Cadwell, on behalf of the committee appointed at last conference to investigate the matter of members of the old Morning Star Branch being as they alledged illegally cut off, reported that such a claim was made by them, and that some claimed to still be, and desired to be, recognized as members of the church; and recommended that Bro. Brigham Reynolds in particular be so recognized.

On motion, the report was received, committee continued, and recommendation with reference to Brother Reynolds adopted.

Resolved, That Brn. Lanphear and Farmer be continued in their present field of labor, on Willow.

Resolved, That branch clerks be requested when making reports to district conference, to name the title of brethren officiating in any of the ordinances named in said report.

On motion, a two days' meeting was appointed at Reynolds' School-house for Saturday and Sunday, October 13th and 14th, 1883; and Elder E. R. Lanphear was placed in charge.

Resolved, That when this conference adjourns, it does so to meet at Magnolia, the second Saturday in December, 1883, and continue over Sunday.

Prayer meetings were held during conference on Saturday and Sunday evenings. Preaching Sunday morning by Elder J. C. Crabb, and Sunday afternoon by Elder Charles Derry. One was baptized while conference was in session.

WYOMING VALLEY DISTRICT.

The general authorities of the Church were sustained in righteousness.

Adjourned to meet at Nanticoke, the last Saturday and Sunday in November, 1883.

INDEPENDENCE DISTRICT.

An extra session of conference of the above district was held in Saints' Chapel, at Independence, Mo., August 11th, 1883. Alexander Smith being called to the chair, stated that charges of a very grievous nature had been preferred against the president of the district, Bro. F. J. Franklin, which necessitated his demanding Bro. F. J. Franklin's license, thus leaving the district without a president. Bro. J. C. Foss was elected president of the district, and Bro. John Brackenbury vice-president.

The president of the district was directed to appoint two days' meetings in all the branches of the district, between this and October conference.

Adjourned to meet at Independence, Missouri, October 13th, 1883.

F. G. PITT, clerk.

MRS. H. C. SMITH, President.

SARAH C. BASS, Secretary.

MARY WHITE, Treasurer.

LAMONI, Sept., 13th, 1883.

BORN.

HART.—At West Oakland, California, September 14th, 1883, to Bro. and Sr. William Hart, a daughter. Mother and babe both doing well.

MARRIED.

KING—BROWN.—At the residence of the bride's mother at Watsonville, Cal., September 19th, 1883, by Elder Daniel Brown, Bro. Wm. P. King and Sr. Elizabeth R. Brown.

DIED.

SOUTHWICK.—At Delavan, Walworth county, Wisconsin, July 26th, 1883, of consumption, Miss Ida Bell Southwick, daughter of Bro. H. and L. E. Southwick. She had been long afflicted with this terrible disease, but had borne all her sufferings with patience. She was baptized by Bro. H. A. Stebbins in 1870, and adhered to the faith until her death. She was 23 years, 2 months and 7 days old. The funeral services were held at the house, Rev. Dr. Collie officiating. She was interred by the side of her brother and sisters. The funeral was largely attended.

Dead, in fresh young girlhood!
Gone home, in the prime of life!
Free, from the world's temptations,
Free from its care and strife.
The Savior looked with pitying eye,
Upon his weary child;
And then she heard his tender voice,
Calling in accents mild,—
"Come home! Come home!
You are weary at heart,
For the way has been dark,
And so lonely and wild,
Oh way weary child,
Come, oh come home."

Respectfully dedicated to Mr. and Mrs. H. Southwick in their bereavement, by

CYNTHIA WILLIS.

AGNER.—At Clarksburg, W. Va., September 2d, 1883, from a paralytic stroke received nearly two years before, Bro. Jacob Agner. He was baptized June 4th, 1883, and kept the faith until the end. Also at same place and time, Leona, infant daughter of Bro. W. F. and Sr. Elizabeth Wigner. Funeral sermon for both preached by Elder D. L. Shinn.

WILCOX.—At Shenandoah, Iowa, August 23d, 1883, Maggie E., daughter of Bro. E. S. and Sister C. A. Wilcox, aged one year, seven months and seven days. Funeral services by Rev. Cotton, of Christian Church, in the Saints' Church at Shenandoah, Iowa., at 10 a.m., August 25th. The heartfelt sympathy of the entire community is with the parents in this their sad affliction.

A bud of earth, transplanted
To Heaven's summer-land;
Thou'lt bloom in fragrant beauty,
Thy keepers, the angel band.

And when we meet thee, we'll joy on thy love;
We loved thee on earth, thou'lt love us above.

KERSTETTER.—At Topeka, Kansas, August 7th, 1883, of colic of the bowels, and infantile remittant fever, George Willard, infant son of Bro. Lewis and Sr. Matinda Kerstetter, aged one year, seven months and thirteen days. Funeral service by Elder William Lawrenson.

WILDER.—At his residence in York county, Nebraska, September 9th, 1883, Bro. Levi B. Wilder, in the 78th year of his age. He was stricken with paralysis on Wednesday, August 29th, and was unable to speak to his end. He united with the Church in 1835, and was a firm believer in the first principles of the gospel and a constant reader of the Herald.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Card from Bro. H. S. Dille, Lawton, Michigan, states as follows:

We are in good health, enjoying the ordinary blessings of life, though poor, and also a goodly portion of the Spirit of the Master. I remember with gratitude your many acts of kindness, and desire you to present my love to the brethren of the Herald Office, and to the many others with whom I have been pleasantly associated in the past. God bless you all.

Bro. John Smith wrote from New Bedford, Massachusetts, October 8th:

Brn. Z. H. Gurley and E. L. Kelley were here last week, their cheering words and noble speech did us good.

This indicates that Bro. Gurley is in the field and at work for the Master.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. C. A. Bass, of Beloit, Wisconsin, sends us a clipping from the Toledo Blade, of Toledo, Ohio, in which a correspondent rehearses the Spaulding Story for the benefit of Bro. H. C. Bronson, now preaching at Maroa, Illinois. Bro. Bronson will now have a chance for a reply to good effect.

Bro. and Sr. Sheba and Laura Bell, of Hutchinson, McLeod county, Minnesota, will gladly welcome an Elder there. They are six in family, and the only ones there of the faith, that they know of, and are desirous that the word shall be preached there.

Bro. W. R. Calhoun, of Cortland, DeKalb county, Illinois, desires the prayers of all the Saints. He is in poor health and wishes the aid derived from the sources of all strength to man, prayer and the answer from the Father of all good.

Bro. James W. Gillen was at Sandwich, Illinois, and spoke there Sunday, October 7th, morning and evening. Sr. Ruth Dennis reports it as having been spoken of as a good effort.

Bro. L. D. Ullom wrote from Benwood, West Virginia, October 6th, in an encouraging manner of the late successful effort to build a church there. He united with the Church after a good deal of reflection, being fully convinced that it was the Lord's work.

Bro. A. N. Bishop arrived at Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, a few weeks ago. He visited New Park, and preached twice on Sunday, on September 30th, to the New Park Saints. Bro. M. O. Matthews writes that the effort was well timed and well received. One was baptized during his visit.

THE sum of £78 7s 6d less £1 19s 9d, cost of draft, was received at the Herald Office, October 10th, 1883, from Sydney, Australia, subscribed by the persons and in the sums named below, for the purpose of assisting to pay the expenses of a missionary to be sent to that distant field.

This amount will be paid over to the Bishop subject to the object for which it is sent.

THE following sentiment was expressed by Brn. Charles Derry and Z. S. Martin, in the late conference of the Little Sioux District, and is fairly just and wise. One thing that increasing years helps men to understand and appreciate is the value of time and folly of wasting it in indirect talking. Hence the fewer and simpler the words, and the more direct the argument the more pleasing the speech.

Elders Charles Derry and Zachariah S. Martin spoke with reference to ministers of the word devoting their whole time to the work, and thought that the history of the latter day dispensation demonstrated that success in leading souls to Christ depended more on a plain, simple, presentation of the fundamental principles of the gospel, such as many if not all the ordained servants of God could do without necessarily taking too much of their time from their daily labor by which they must support their families, for study and research, rather than on those elaborate attempts at profundity and oratorical display which have characterized too much the efforts of many of the younger members of the priesthood in the latter stages of the work. They thanked God for the spirit of research that had taken root in the minds of many of our young Elders, but thought that it would be well for them to remember in presenting the results of their investigations into the deep things of God before the Church and the world, to dress their thoughts in as simple language as possible.

BRO. E. H. GURLEY wrote from Blenheim, Ontario, October 8th. Four had been baptized at Petrolia, two by Bro. J. N. Simmons and two by Bro. E. H. Gurley. Bro. Gurley was to return to Petrolia the following week. It appears that we made quite a mistake in Bro. Gurley's letter. We made him to state "when Bibles cost two, or three dollars each, and a man would give a load of hay for two or three chapters." He writes us that it should be, "when Bibles cost two hundred or three hundred dollars," &c. The mistake was an easy one to make, as the copy was "$200, or 300" without the points of enumeration, or the ciphers for cents. We apologize for the error and trust no harm was done.

Bro. Gurley also writes that "Bro. Lake is also battling for the right, with all the vehemence of his nature."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

LEON, Butler Co., Kansas,
September 18th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—I wish to ask through your columns: If an Elder in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, endorsing L. O. Littlefield's letters as published in Heralds of August 11th and 25th, or asserting, either publicly or privately that spiritual wifeism is ordained of God, be permitted to preach or officiate in the name of said Church? B. F. MILLER.

Ans.—There can be but one answer to the question of the foregoing letter. No officer of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, no matter who, or what his standing, is authorized to assert, or advocate any sort of spiritual wifery, as a doctrine, or tenet of the Church; nor to so state his own belief on the subject as to convey the impression that such was, or is, or is to be a tenet of the Church. A member of the Church, officer, or otherwise, is entitled to believe what he pleases, in respect to any and all subjects; but he is not at liberty to avow, teach, or advocate in the name of the Church, or as an officer or member of the Church, any doctrine or belief contrary to the accredited faith of the Church. His bond of membership demands that his private views and beliefs, while they may be sacred to him, must not invalidate his usefulness to the body, nor be presented to the disparagement of the known theories of the body; but must be subordinate to the expressed beliefs of the Church, on the subjects involved. The mere holding of an opinion or belief on any subject, not in exact harmony with the faith of the body, may not prevent a member or an officer from acting in the name of the Church, providing such view or belief is not expressed or taught as the faith of the Church, or advocated by such member in the name of the Church. Such holding of opinions and beliefs not in harmony with the body must if known militate against the member holding them, and very gravely affect his influence to his discredit, and as a consequence to the discredit of the Church. Any officer of the Church found teaching the dogma of polygamy or spiritual wifery, should be at once silenced and made to answer for his disregard of his bond of membership and good fellowship.

Ques.—Will all resurrected bodies be immortal?

Ans.—We do not know. And for the following reasons.

1. The subjects of the first (future) resurrection will not be subject to the second death; while those raised in the second (future) resurrection will be.

2. The Terms "life" and "immortality," as used by the apostle in the expression "Life and immortality are brought to light through Jesus Christ," are not used to signify the same condition.

3. The final condition of those who attain unto the first resurrection, and who have part in the thousand years secondary probation; and those who accept gospel terms elsewhere, and are relieved of the punishment of the thousand years exclusion from the "rest of the righteous," is that of an entrance into the "celestial city, and "access" to the "Tree of Life," that they may eat and live forever.

4. The word "immortal" as used in the dictionary and in common speech means, "not subject to death;" as opposed to "mortal" which means "subject to death." The word states that those who attain to the first resurrection will not be subject to the second death. The autithesis of this is that those who do not attain unto the first, but do rise in the second resurrection are subject to, and may die the second death. If the word "immortal" is to be understood as applying beyond the grave in the same sense as now used, and in regard to the second death, then those subject to that death will not be immortal, for they may die.

5. The second death is by many thought to be simply and only a banishment from God. By many others to be a dissolution of the body and spirit, similar to the first death. If the second death be a banishment from God with a perpetuation of life, immortality must mean something more than "life eternal," and those who die the second death (banishment from God) may have life without being immortal. If the second death be a dissolution of the spirit and the body, then clearly there will be resurrected persons who will not be immortal, because they are subject to death.

Our opinion is that those who through obedience to the gospel obtain remission of their sins (and retain that remission) and secure the better resurrection, will be permitted free access to the Tree of Life and will continue to live in immortality and eternal life. But those who refuse to obey, or fail to keep a remission of their sins, will not be permitted access to the Tree of Life, and hence will be subject to the second death, and will not be in a condition of immortality and eternal life.

Ques.—If a man should give his name as John Jones and join the Church under that name, and afterward say that was not his name but that his name is Charles Smith, is he a member of the Church, or does his giving the wrong name make it needful for him to be re-baptized.

Ans.—He is a member of the Church. The name should be corrected on the branch record, in accordance with the facts, upon a statement of the reasons for such change being given.

"When He bringeth in the first begotten into the world, He saith, And let all the Angels of God worship him. . . Thou hast loved righteousness, and hated iniquity; therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows."—Heb. 1: 6, 9.

Correspondence.

WEBBERVILLE, Ingham Co., Mich.,
September 9th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—Bro. Cornish came here August 25th; he preached five times with good liberty. We had the use of the school-house. There was a good turnout, and good order prevailed. There was a large number very much interested. He set the people to thinking. I think much good will be done. While Bro. Cornish was here he baptized three, and confirmed them, and blessed four children. We were blessed and encouraged. The Spirit of God was with us. We feel strong in the Lord, and in the latter day work. Some of the people here are very anxious for another Elder to come. They want to know more of the gospel as taught by our Elders. They think he is the smartest man ever preached in this place. Any Elder passing from Chicago to Detroit or back, please come here, and we will pay the extra expense. Some are finding the time long. We live on the Northern Lansing Railroad.

Your sister in the gospel,

MATILDA BILLINGSKY.

OSHKOSH, Wisconsin,

September 23d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I am glad that your and L. O. Littlefield's letters appeared in the Herald, for the same reasons that you gave in September 15th number. I am much pleased to see the work of God going on as much as it does. If we would all be willing to learn and practice economy and righteousness, there undoubtedly could and would be more than ten times the Elders out in the field than at present, and the work would blossom as the rose. Elders can not live from the wind, nor their families from charity. Many would be willing to sacrifice home, comforts of life, to go out and preach the gospel, and stand insults of the deepest kind almost daily, and very many hardships besides, if they had the means to do with. When will we learn to sacrifice all that we can consistently get along without, for the gospel's sake? How long will some of us live thus—use tobacco which is calculated for sick cattle and bruises, but not to make unclean subjects of ourselves, in spitting tobacco juice over our clothes and rooms, etc., and spending money for the miserable stuff, as also in smoking, which causes lots of fires, therefore destruction of property in two ways. God will not for any length of time after giving warning after warning, dwell in unholy temples. If we will treat the commands of God and words of wisdom with contempt, and thereby cause the young members of the church, and those of little faith to stumble. I ask myself as well as my brethren and sisters, if we care so little for the weak, how can the love of God be within us? How long will we for an excuse for not keeping the word of wisdom say, "Well, there are worse things than not to keep the word of wisdom. I only drink a glass of wine or strong drink once in a while when I meet with my friends, or I don't use very much tobacco, it don't cost me more than fifty cents per week; and besides I pay my own money for it, or I use tea or coffee very weak, and not very hot, or I only use very little meat in Summer, when it says, "And these [speaking of fowls, beasts and animals] hath God made for the use of man, only [remember only] in times of famine and excess of hunger."

I have heard so many flimsy excuses for not keeping those parts of the word of wisdom mentioned, and the other parts, as also very many other things, that I wrote as I did. I wrote with no hardness to any one whatever, and I do ask any one whom the coat fits to put it on at once, and not wait and sleep along with an everlasting sleep. We should be sober minded at all times, consistent in talk and action, fervent in prayer, and driving in business, telling the truth at all times. Not selfish or greedy, keeping mild tempered at all times, telling no evil, (which is my greatest fault), but only good, (or nothing if we know no good). We should teach the first principles of the gospel in all mildness to our children, when they are eight years old and continue to teach them so, and command them to keep every whit of the commandments of God, and to do things that are pleasing in the sight of God besides, out of their own free will. Above all we should try with all our hearts to do that which is pleasing in the sight of God at all times, and try and give no unjust offense.

Yours,

JOSEPH LAMPERT.

PORT SANILAC, Michigan,

September 4th, 1883.

Dear Beloved Saints:—Through searching and investigating for the truth, and hearing others tell their experience and give their reasons for believing the gospel, restored as in the days of Christ, and God gave me his Spirit, by which I yielded and came into obedience to that gospel. Now I can say to the world, that I know it is true, for God has given me his Spirit to testify of the same, as he has promised in his word, by which Spirit I have received a knowledge, which corroborates with the Scriptures. I can say I know the gifts and blessings are for the Saints, if they will only live for them. Pray for us, that I may grow stronger, also that my companion may embrace the gospel.

From your brother in Christ,

C. E. MEAD.

BUCHANAN, Henry Co., Tenn.,

September 26th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Since I wrote you from Bellville, Illinois, I have been laboring in Obion and Henry counties, Tennessee. Have generally enjoyed good liberty in presenting the word. Had the pleasure of baptizing two. My health has improved some. Intolerance and prejudice, I am sorry to say, still have a strong hold upon many of the people in Henry county. The inclosed threatening letter was received by Bro. Griffin while I was preaching at his house. Notwithstanding their threats, we continued to preach and as yet we have not been molested. Some of our congregation, however, hearing that there was talk of mobbing us, (or kukluxing as they called it), were afraid to come out, and our congregations were smaller in consequence. There are some very pious (?) people in this country, who never having heard any of our Elders preach, hate us supremely. Some of the preachers of different denominations encourage this feeling, and warn their congregations not to go out and hear us. "The truth shall make you free," but, sad thought, these people are not free to hear the truth. How sorrowful their condition, "The blind leading the blind." Apropos of what Bro. Heman C. Smith wrote from Texas about the opposing influence the liquor traffic exercises toward the gospel. Just before our meetings several jugs of whisky went into that neighborhood. Did whisky have any thing to do with writing that threatening letter? The Saints have many bitter enemies in this county, and within a mile of their chapel there is a distillery kept by a bitter opposer, who is happy to constantly renew the spiritual weakness of the enemies to the truth. As a people we can not with safety encourage intemperance; but as lovers of the true, the pure and the good, we will help to remove this block in the wheel of the world's progress.

The sad news came to us a short time ago that the spirit of our dear sister, Mrs. Mattie Evans, had gone to rest. We loved her, we still love her. Living unto God she is not dead. The inspiration of her dying hour, the hallowed look upon her face as she stepped from time into eternity, should encourage those dear to her, who remain—encourage them to love the kind Father who blessed the dear one in dying, encourage them to live for the happy meeting that awaits the children of God. "Thy will be done."

Your brother in Christ,

FRANK P. SCARCLIFF.

CLAY CENTER, Kansas,

October 4th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—I thank my Heavenly Father that I am still among the living, and enjoying the favor of the Lord, (or at least I feel so), and would like to say to my brethren that are imbued with the idea that there are no blessings for the people of God, except in Zion, (or Lamoni), that they are mistaken; for God is not slack in his blessing's to those that love him and keep his commandments, whether they be in Jury or in Kansas. We read that the pure in heart are Zion. If that be true, the living pure lives will make the heart pure, and fit it for Zion, or to dwell with the pure and the good. Now I can not see that the country will have anything to do with this work of purifying the heart. We have heard much about moving from this filthy place, to this and that place of purity. You may call me a skeptic, but I don't believe any of this nonsense. All places are alike as far as filthiness or purity of heart is concerned. They all belong to God's foot-stool, and were declared by him in the day he created it, as not only good, but very good.

While I may readily admit that some parts of the earth are surrounded with greater natural advantages, and are more inviting, yet when we think of those most favored spots, and there look for the pure in heart, will we find them any more plentiful than in a more unfavorable clime. We think not. The gospel is the power devised in the councils of heaven for purifying the hearts of the filthy inhabitants of the earth. The Lord said go preach it to every kindred, nation, and tongue under the heaven, "Saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him that made the heavens and the earth, and fountains of waters." There are none exempted. All must hear, from the cold and sterile north to the fruitful plains of the Sunny South. No compromise in this command. All must hear this trumpet; and it is he that fears him that made the heavens and the earth, (that obeys), that will be of the pure in heart. If they are the light to the world, the leaven that is to leaven all, they must be thoroughly mixed with the raw material, that the whole may become leavened. In this I perceive that, while the Saints are scattered and mixed up with society, they open the channels of gospel knowledge to those around them, not by living unholy lives, but by lives of holiness, and by others their good works are seen, and many are persuaded to turn from their filthiness, and to honor and glorify the name of our Heavenly Father.

Dear brethren, I don't want you to think by what I have written, that I disbelieve in a local Zion, and the gathering of the Saints. I heartily endorse the doctrine of the gathering of the Saints to Zion, the building of the Temple, and expect a cloud to rest upon it and the glory of the Lord to be revealed. But I ignore the idea that the land of Zion will make mens' hearts pure. If a man's heart is impure, and his habits are filthy, moving from Indiana or Florida to Zion, will not purify his heart, or cleanse his person or habits. And thus it is written, "He that is filthy will be filthy still." For this cause Zion's children were moved to the far west, to a desert land, that they should not pollute the consecrated spot by their abominations, nor bring disgrace upon it. I believe the time will come when the redeemed of the Lord will return to Zion, with songs of everlasting joy. But not until the land has been "redeemed by judgments, and her converts with righteousness," (that is by keeping the commandments of God), and we shall hail the coming of that day, and bid all God speed that are engaged in the great work of Zion's redemption. I remain as ever your brother in the gospel of "peace on earth and good will to men."

Dear Bro. Joseph:—I enclose you a copy of an unknown tongue, which it was the lot of the St. Louis saints to hear at their Testimony meeting Sunday last. I say it was their lot, and a happy one too.

I never felt the influence of the spirit so strongly before, with but one exception; that was a few weeks before. At that time I felt it so strongly that I could hardly arise to my feet, and after getting up could say nothing for some time. When I did speak I had said only a few words when the spirit prompted me to say that I know this work (the teachings of the Latter Day saints) is true. I had never made that statement before, and I restrained the promptings of the spirit at this time; obviously because I had always thought it not a good plan to say so unless I was positive that it was true, not from my own views, but from its having been revealed to me by the spirit.

I felt the spirit about as strongly again yesterday, and I arose not knowing what I was going to say. Before I sat down I bore my testimony to the truth of the work, and thank God for it. I do not think it would be out of place to state right here that my wife had been praying that I should have and bear this testimony, but she did it without my knowing it.

As for the saints—Bro. Reese was one of our number—they all felt good. They could not help it. After they had borne their testimonies they received the assurance that their worship was accepted, as see the unknown tongue on the separate sheet enclosed, and which please publish together with my letter if you have any room in the Herald.

Praying for the prosperity of the Sons and Daughters of Zion I subscribe myself, Your Brother in Christ, JOHN S. PARRISH.

UNKNOWN TONGUE GIVEN BY R. D. COTTAM, AND INTERPRETED BY NOAH N. COOKE.

"Yes my children, your worship is acceptable to me. Live together in love and I will bless you abundantly with my spirit, saith the Lord of Hosts. Live ye in the love wherein ye have been made free, and I will bless you abundantly. O my young servants! seek earnestly the best gifts. Live before me and I will bless you as I have promised, with an abundance of my Holy Spirit; and I will raise up others who shall have the power and demonstration of the Holy Spirit, and many shall be converted to me."

Brethren and sisters be steadfast. Remember, I speak by the power of the Holy Ghost that is in me. Remember this is the word of the Lord unto you; amen.

CHELLENHAM, Mo.,

October 4th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph.—I returned here on October 1st, from Franklin county, where I had been laboring through September in new fields, and left there fully confident that the foundation for a good work is laid. Shall return again in the near future, with the expectation of reaping where I have sown. When I arrived here on the night of the 1st, I went to Bro. Wm. Williams' store, and as it was raining I left my satchel, borrowed an umbrella, and went to my old stopping place, Bro. Thomas Williams', and stayed all night. Next day I went to the city and did not return until yesterday, when I found Bro. Williams' store in ashes, with all its contents. Three other buildings were burned. Several poor families saved nothing but their lives. The store building belonged to Sr. Maggie Davis, who lives in a cottage in the rear of the store, which was saved together with its contents, though in a somewhat damaged condition. The fire was supposed to be the work of an incendiary. My loss makes it necessary for me to go to the city and purchase a clean shirt, in order to a change. My large leather satchel was packed full of clothes, books, papers, &c., including my license and certificate of appointment, family pictures, &c. Shall remain in this section until after our district conference, and try to do for the best in the good work. Yours in hope,

B. V. SPRINGER.

DUNNVILLE, Dunn Co., Wisconsin,
September 25th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—I have seen in your columns a letter by J. Gallop, who wishes to know what power it is that is spoken of in Daniel 7:7: "After this I saw in the night visions, and behold a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth, it devoured and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it; and it was diverse from all the beasts that were before it, and it had ten horns." It is the fourth kingdom from the kingdom of Babylon, which is the kingdom raised up by Romulus, who builded the great city of Rome, the Roman pagan power. You will find another description of in Daniel 2. Read the interpretation from verse thirty-five. You will find that Nebuchadnezzar was the first king, the head of gold, the silver breasts the Medo-Persians; (these two powers God acknowledges, as you may see in verse 37, and Isa. 45:1-5). The third kingdom of brass is Greece, Alexander the Great, who by his own power conquered the world. It is said that he wept because there was not another world for him to conquer. The legs of this image were iron, the fourth kingdom. When Alexander died, the kingdoms of the world were divided between four generals of Alexander's kingdom. From the one of the east Romulus and his brother came, the feet of the iron legs, the fourth kingdom, and it is the same power of Dan. 7:7. John the Revelator had a vision of the same power, 13:11.

But this fourth beast still reigns, only has its name changed from Pagan to Christian, as I now will show: "And the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron; for as much as iron breaketh in pieces and subdueth all things, and as iron it breaketh all these, so shall it break in pieces and bruise. [The Roman power did subdue the world and the Jews also.] And whereas thou sawest the feet and toes part of potter's clay and part of iron, the kingdom shall be divided. But there shall be in it of the strength of the iron; forasmuch as thou sawest the iron mixed with miry clay, [the Pagan power was divided when Constantine became the head of the apostate gentile Christian church. But it kept the iron with it, for the feet were all iron. The toes only were mixed with clay]. And as the toes of the feet were part of iron and part of clay, so the kingdom shall be partly strong and partly weak. "And whereas thou sawest iron mixed with miry clay, they shall mingle themselves with the seed of men [mark they would mingle with men, but not with the seed of God], but they shall not cleave one to another, even as iron is not mixed with clay."—Dan. 2:40-43.

Now how literally this scripture is fulfilled in our day. It is the toes that will not mix. The toes did not make their appearance until after Luther and other Protestants separated from the iron feet of Popery; and they have divided and subdivided ever since. They have been striving to unite all the sects for the last fifty years. But every sect that separated still brought some of the iron with the clay, and they never can unite. Revelations 13:11, shows the Pagan power. The fourth kingdom (from the 11th verse to end) is the divided part of that power; and as the Pagans received their power from the dragon, (see verse 2), so the divided part receives that power from him. Verse 11: "And I beheld another beast, coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon; (12th verse), and he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, [now can any one show that these two powers are not one, I mean the old Pagan power and the present Popish power, that now reigns upon the seven mountains, kingdoms of this world], and causeth the earth and them who dwell therein to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed."

I will make a few remarks on this wounded head. The head that was wounded was the first head of the Pagan power, Romulus himself; when the Sabines came upon them to avenge their insult in stealing their young women for their wives. Romulus sent their wives to plead for their husbands, saying that they were kind and good to them. Had it not been for these women that interceded for them, the Roman-Pagan power would have been overthrown.

"And he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, bond and free, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads; and that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name."—Rev. 13:16, 17.

The name is the Holy Catholic Church. The mark of the beast is put on the forehead after the Priest sprinkles a few drops of water on the face. He then dips his fingers in oil, and puts the sign of the cross on the forehead. The sign on the right hand. One of the laws of the Roman Catholic Church is, that they are to have no dealings with heretics, if it can be avoided. But if they can not help doing it, they are to put between them the sign of the cross, before they transact any business. It is done by taking the finger of the right hand, and touching their left breast, then the right, then the forehead, then the pit of the stomach. It is done very quickly. This makes the sign of the cross. This is the mark on the right hand.

We will now come to Revelations seventeen. "The angel said unto him, Come up hither, I will show unto thee the judgment of the great whore that sitteth upon many waters."—v. 3. "So he carried me away in the spirit, . . . and I saw a woman sit upon a scarlet colored beast, full of names of blasphemy, having seven heads and ten horns." For this dragon, see chap. 12:4. This dragon is the devil. See verse 8, chap. 12. The same power that gave to the beast of chap. 13:2, his power and seat. So we find that the seven heads and ten horns belong to the devil, dragon, serpent; and he bestows them on those who will worship him. Here is the Church of the Devil.

This woman was arrayed in purple and scarlet colors and decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, having a golden cup in her hand. * * * This harlot church is not the glorious church John saw in Rev. 12, clothed with the sun, (the priesthood of the Son of God), the moon under her feet, (the kingdom), and on her head a crown of twelve stars, (the twelve tribes). See Joseph's dream, Gen. 37:9. The sun and moon and eleven stars made obeisance unto him. The priesthood belongs to Joseph. The woman that rides upon the red dragon, is the Gentile Church. John wrote to the seven churches in Asia that the Jewish Church was hidden in a place where she could be nourished. And Paul knew this. Read Romans 11:3-6; 8:17. "The beast that thou sawest was, and is not." That is to say, the beast thou sawest was, but is not yet what she will be. John saw the beast in its Pagan Power. And yet it is the same. The dragon that carried the woman is the devil. "And here is the mind that hath wisdom. The seven heads are seven mountains on which the whore sitteth. And the beast that was and is not, even he is the eighth, and is of the seven." This eighth head is Poperly. But we see he is of the seven. Rev. 17: 10, 11. This helps us to understand the words "was and is not," and yet is the same in all its changes. And the mountains Poperly sits upon, are kingdoms, and not the seven puny hills Rome is built upon.

Now, as I said at the commencement of this letter, that the beast of Rev. 13, is Pagan Rome, with the legs of Daniel 2, the iron legs of Daniel 7: 7, are in all these several figures, the self same power. The little horn of Dan. 7: 8, and the beast with the two horns like a lamb, of Rev. 13: 11-13, is Poperly. That is Pagan Poperly. If any man can separate Paganism from Poperly, he would oblige the writer.

JOHN MACAULEY.

TEMPLE, Bell Co., Texas,
October 2d, 1883.

Dear Herald:—Upon our arrival in Bell county, August 17th, we were made welcome by many tried and true Saints and friends, and we could but enjoy our surroundings, contrasted with our experience in Red River county. On the 18th, in company with Messrs. Charles and Thomas Norwood, I went to Belton, and attended the meeting of the Texas renowned evangelist Major Penn. I had tried to make some allowance for reports I had heard of him, but I was disappointed. He did not come up to my expectations; but if ever I hear him again he will come nearer to them, for I shall expect nothing, and do not think I will be disappointed. While there we were the guests of Elder Jerry Hensen of the Disciple faith, and were very kindly entertained.

Sunday night, the 19th, I attended a lecture of J. D. Shaw, at Temple. Mr. Shaw withdrew from the Methodist Church, of which he was a leading minister, sometime ago, because of a disbelief in some of their principal doctrines. The whole gist of his discourse shows him to be at present a disciple of Col. Ingersoll. He is a fluent and interesting speaker, and said some things damaging to popular orthodoxy; but did not cause a ripple upon the waters so far as the faith or Latter Day Saints is concerned.

Bro. Montague and I remained at Elmwood Branch until September 5th, during which time we held several meetings. On the 5th we started for Llano county with team and buggy, Mr. Charles Norwood furnishing team, and Bro. H. L. Thompson the buggy. We are under many obligations to them for their kindness. We arrived at Uncle Lamoni Wight's on the 8th, and had an enjoyable visit with Bro. Storm and family, and my relatives. In consequence of Methodist meetings in the neighborhood, we were unable to do much preaching; but on the 16th we had the great privilege of baptizing two. One of them my cousin, Miss Hattie Wight, the other Mr. Samuel W. Bird, a stepson of Bro. Storm. We returned to Elmwood arriving on the 27th, and preached twice there on last Sunday. Came here yesterday, and are striving for an opening. Prospects are favorable. Bro. Montague will continue with me a short time. While west, Uncle Lamoni, wife and child, Bro. Montague and I, went to Pedernales, and finished the wall around the grave yard, a work we have been engaged in for two years, and are at last able to say that our efforts are crowned with success.

September 22d, in company with Bro. Montague, Miss Nellie Ferguson and cousins Hattie, Sophie and Henry, I visited Honey Creek one of the old settlements of the Lyman Wight company. While Bro. Montague was looking round the old place the rest of us climbed Pack Saddle Mountain, and had a ramble over its rugged crest, from whence we had a fine view of the surrounding country, and returned much pleased with our trip. No trace of the old encampment remains, by which a stranger could locate the spot; but it is undoubtedly fresh in the minds of many who are now scattered upon the earth.

Bro. Cato is at Elkhart. We will all meet for the first time in the mission, at conference the 13th. We hear favorable news from Red River county. It is generally admitted that we proved all we proposed to in the debate, and many are anxious to hear the other proposition discussed. Will the readers of the Herald please remember this mission in prayer. We need your earnest and continued prayers. To the Saints in the mission I would say, let us arise to more activity, and shake off our apathy and coldness. The work is worthy our best efforts, and the field is wide and extending daily. We must be equal to the emergencies arising, or suffer loss. With anxious solicitude for the cause,

I am as ever,

HEMAN C. SMITH.

NEWS SUMMARY.

Oct. 4.—Anti-Jewish outbreaks in Ekaterinoslav and other districts in Southern Russia have led to the proclamation of martial law.

The Supreme Tribunal of Norway has impeached the whole Ministry of the country. Their trials began yesterday with the case of the Prime Minister.

While the French Government officials are still quarreling among themselves at Paris, it is reported that Spain, not content with the mere statement that President Grevy privately apologized to Alfonso, has resolved to ask for the publication of Grevy's apology in full in the official Journal. The French Government has ordered an official investigation into the incidents attendant upon Alfonso's visit, with a view to discovering who caused the disturbance on that occasion.

The following handbill has been distributed broadcast in China, lately: "The Europeans do not belong to the human race; they are the descendants of apes and geese; their appearance resembles that of apes; their heart that of the devil; for this reason they are called 'koul-tse' (European devils). This race of savages worships neither heaven nor earth, does not honor its parents, has no reverence for its ancestors. Besides this the sanctity of family ties is unknown. A veritable herd of dogs and pigs, their talk is of equality; they have no idea of social hierarchy, and know no distinction between father and son, King and subject. These famous English particularly, what are they? A small tribe confined in a corner of the sea, on an island not larger than a hand. Their sovereign may be male or female; half of their subjects are men, half animals.

You say, 'But if this race is so savage, how is it that they can manufacture steamers, railways, watches—none of which we, the sons of the celestial Empire are able to make?' You are simpletons! Do you not know that these Europeans, who come into our country under the pretext of preaching religion, in reality only come to snatch away the eyes and the brains of the dying, to extract blood from children? and with these eyes, these brains, and this blood they make medicinal pills, which they sell in their country, and so acquire ability to do all these things. Only those who have eaten of our Chinese substance, have their eyes opened sufficiently to make the discoveries of which they are so vain. But remember what our holy books say: 'The proud enemy shall without fail be conquered.' Their greatest confidence is in their steamboats. With these boats they have many a time offended the Spirit of the Sea. Let me have my way and I swear I will exterminate them all to the last, and none shall return home. If the Emperor only would send a few regiments against them! If a few are insufficient, let all the armies of the Empire be sent. Fortune may be inconstant, our patience will tire out, and we shall be victorious. You say yet, 'But if they are so dangerous why do our mandarins allow them to sojourn in our country?' Listen! Our mandarins do but tolerate an evil which they can not mend, but at the bottom of their hearts they suffer it but grumblingly. Quite recently, going to court, I had the opportunity to talk to a great dignitary, who frankly avowed that they were only waiting for an opportunity to exterminate this pest. And, in fact, it could be easily done. Of real European barbarians scattered throughout the Empire there are but very few; the immense majority only consists in false barbarians, disciples of their religion. Now, all the Empire is divided into districts, the districts into counties, having each its Chief of the National Guard. Well, let each district, each county, under the command of its Chief, begin to pursue all these savages. If they try to resist, let the alarm be sounded that all the districts, all the counties, may rise like a single man, let Mandarins and subjects unite in one common effort, that at last these barbarians may know that they can not without punishment brave the wrath of the whole Empire."

The French army, in the opinion of the most competent judges, has not progressed any in the last year.

Trade in the bleak and inhospitable clime of Northern Siberia, Asia, is on the increase.

The expulsion of the Salvation Army has been demanded at Neufchâtel, Switzerland.

A slave dealer is being tried by court martial at Cairo, Egypt.

At London, Messrs. Serse & Sibeth, East and West India merchants, have failed with liabilities of £250,000; and at Newcastle-on-Tyne, Joseph Pollard & Co., corn merchants, have failed with liabilities of £80,000.

A. S. Herman, manufacturer of knit and woolen goods, New York, failed for $50,000.

Leland Stanford, Moses Hopkins, Irving M. Scott and Gov. Perkins, appear among the Directors of the Pacific Steam Agricultural Manufacturing Company, incorporated at San Francisco, yesterday, with a capital of $5,000,000. The enterprise is said to be one of the most important ever started on the Pacific Coast.

The striking window glass workers at Pittsburgh are said to have formed a combination to compete with their late employers. Fourteen left for Belgium yesterday to work, declaring that they can make as much there as here.

A horrible tragedy occurred Wednesday, near Lampasas, Mexico, where an insane mother killed her five children and then committed suicide.

Fifty-six cases of smuggled opium were seized at San Francisco yesterday.

Clabe Young, one of the notorious Young brothers, desperadoes who have terrorized Southwestern Texas, has at last been captured.

The excitement in the vicinity of Philippi and Clarksburg, W. Va., over the exposure of the Red Men continues. Kittles, the man who confessed, this morning pleaded guilty on an "omnibus" charge and was sentenced to nine years and four months. He took his sentence calmly. Albert Price went up for ten years. Price was a prominent lawyer and Sunday School teacher. As the result of Kittles' confession the officers arrested Jacob T. Huffman, ex-County Treasurer, and he is in custody at Clarksburg. Other arrests will follow. The organization is said to number at least a hundred members. The company to which Kittles belonged was known as Company C, Regent's Tribe of Crows," but the private work was the same in all branches. Noms de plume and passwords were used. Signs and grips were in use to such an extent that a book of them was kept. Art. 9 of the constitution provided that all transactions of the lodge should be kept secret, and any violation should be punished with death with the concurrence of the lodge. Art. 10 provided that any one divulging the name of any party belonging to the society, either directly or indirectly, intentionally, should die. By Art. 13 any loss that any member should sustain unavoidably under orders of the lodge, all other members should share equally with him. Following is the roll of Company C: Spotted-Tail, President; Red-Cloud, Vice-President; Capt. Jack, Secretary; Every-Time, Captain; Wis-Kat, First-Lieutenant; Steadfast, Second-Lieutenant; Copperhead, First-Sergeant; Spunangle, Unmovable, George Devil, Slim-Jaws, Pop-Eye, Hackletown, Berkshire, Chickasaw, John Bull, Cherokee.

At Mazatlan, Mex., out of an opera company numbering thirty-one members seventeen died of yellow fever, including prima donna Peralta, in less than three weeks. Within two weeks more only five of the original troupe were left living. The medical men were all sick, and two of them died. The victims were buried hastily and uncoffined. Three hours was the usual interval between death and burial. For the last week the deaths have not averaged more than twenty a day. The disease is, however, sweeping interior towns like wildfire. The courts are all closed, the Judges having fled beyond the jurisdiction of Yellow Jack. The spread of the disease is believed to be largely due to the ignorance displayed by physicians as to the character of the fever. Only three deaths have occurred in the last two days at Guaymas, Mex. Twenty-six are reported from Hermosillo and all along the road are victims overtaken by the fever and unable to proceed further. News from the Yaqui River reports the spread of the fever among the Indians. A letter announces the death of two of a party who left Guaymas in August.

One man aboard a steamer at San Francisco, died of yellow fever.

Oct. 5th.—At a meeting of delegates at Manchester, England, representing 170,000 miners, it was determined to ask for an advance in wages of fifteen per cent.

A committee of Invincibles is said to have been formed at Dublin, having paid spies throughout the British colonies and in North and South America, to hunt down and exterminate all informers.

Max Wallstein, a New York dealer in knit goods, made an assignment yesterday, with nearly $70,000 of preferences. His liabilities are estimated at $100,000. The commercial agencies, which seem to have known Mr. Wallstein, did not rate him, believing that he was doing too much business.

Spain, through its Ambassador in Paris, has presented Premier Ferry and Challemeil-Lacour a note setting forth her grievances in connection with Alfonso's reception by the Parisian mob, and demanding the punishment of those who were so unkind as to hoot and hiss and cry "Down with the Uhlan King." It is reported that President Grevy's private apology to Alfonso for the conduct of the mob will be officially published, and the leaders in the demonstration punished. A Spanish mob at Saragossa took a hand in affairs yesterday, when they began to stone the French Consul's residence, in which pleasing diversion they were rudely interrupted by the police and driven away. Thibaudin, the French Minister of War, whose sympathies were rather with the anti-Alfonso crowd in Paris, is said to have resigned, and it is understood that President Grevy has accepted his resignation.

After a torchlight procession to-night in honor of Sir Stafford Northcote, at Belfast, Ireland, the Orangemen smashed the windows of a convent and two newspaper offices.

The leading weekly grain circular, of Liverpool, England, says: Wheat is quiet but steady. Previous prices are well maintained. Cargoes off coast are firmly held. One cargo of California brought rather more money. A few only remain unsold. To-day there was an average attendance at the market. There was a moderate business in wheat at about late rates. There was a fair retail demand for flour, but prices were not altered. Corn was in good request and prices one pence lower.

The most sanguinary encounter which has yet taken place in Croatia, Hungary, is reported from Farkasevee last night. About 600 peasants assembled with the intention of making a disturbance. Military aid was summoned from Kreuth, and seventeen men with one officer came. They were received by a storm of stones, and two men were dangerously wounded. After two summonses to disperse, which were not regarded, the officer in charge gave the order to fire, when ten peasants were killed and many wounded. Two companies of infantry left Agram for Farkasevee to-day. It is evident that only an overwhelming military force will be able to restore order in these provinces, but even this will be of no avail for a length of time. Moderation and leniency will be necessary to quiet the excited population. When the States Treaty was concluded Hungary granted Croatia as much self-government as possible, but it undertook to have the taxes collected by its own officials. Many Croatian districts, Zogorie especially, are exceedingly poor from being too thickly populated, and the taxes have lately been exacted mercilessly from even those whom bad harvests had reduced to misery. There is no wonder, therefore, that these people, who know the Hungarians in no other character than as tax-collectors or executing officers, should begin to hate Hungary. They have another cause for their antipathy, for before Bosnia was occupied a part of Croatia formed a section of the Empire's military frontier, and as frontier guardians the Croats of the bordering districts enjoyed many privileges. In return, however, each man was a soldier, and answered for the safety of the frontier with his life. As such, they followed the imperial banner. Now, at the instance of Hungary, the frontier has been dissolved where it borders on Bosnia. The Croats have been deprived of their honorable occupation, and for the imperial banner has been substituted the Hungarian flag. The ignorant people therefore consider themselves oppressed and ill-treated by the Hungarians, and this is the chief cause of their excitement, which will not abate soon.

The trials of the members of the Norwegian Ministry, who have been impeached by the Supreme Tribunal, have been postponed until the first of December.

A division of the Chilian army, infantry, cavalry, and artillery, has left Callao to attack Montero.

Twenty-two deaths from yellow fever at Hermosillo, Mexico. Three at Guaymas. The general health of yellow fever patients in Mexico is much improved by cooler weather.

A slight shock of earthquake at Salt Lake City.

Oct. 7th.—The students of the St. Petersburg University have been the instigators of Anti-Jewish riots at Dorpat and other places near the Russian Capital. They are also charged with being the authors of incendiary fires.

An Orange procession returning to Belfast from a meeting addressed by Sir Stafford Northcote, near that city, was attacked by the Catholics, Saturday. A desperate fight ensued, during which many on both sides were severely wounded.

Two thousand people at Neufchatel, yesterday, demanded the expulsion of the members of the English Salvation Army from Switzerland.

No confirmation has been received of the rumor that an outbreak had occurred at Canton, China, and that the United States Consul, Seymour, had been killed.

Negotiations between France and China are reported suspended. Preparations by the French for more vigorous, aggressive movements, in Tonquin, are being made.

Nihilistic proclamations have been issued solemnly sentencing the Czar of Russia to death, because he failed to grant liberty to the people.

Advices from Ica, in Peru, state that the chillians evacuated Chinchua September 28, and that preparations were being made for the evacuation of Tisca the 4th inst.

Mr. Warden, the Secretary of the London & River Platte Bank of London, Eng., has disappeared, taking with him $550,000 of securities lodged with his bank for safekeeping.

The principals of the large firm of accountants of Messrs. Waddell & Co., finding it inconvenient to pay a dividend in a liquidation under the existing Bankruptcy act, have sagaciously sought safety in flight.

Hardly had the city recovered from the shock caused by the disappearance of Messrs Waddell and Warden when a fresh blow was dealt by the failure of Suse & Sebets, one of the oldest firms of Lime-street. The liabilities are estimated at about £300,000.

The Socialists will meet at Pittsburg, Pa., in National Convention next Saturday, the 13th inst., and remain in session several days. Delegates are expected to be present from Boston, Baltimore, St. Louis, Omaha, St. Joseph, Mo., and other western cities. Herr Most will probably preside.

Oct. 8.—Advices by mail from Java and Sumatra corroborate the statements telegraphed at the time of the great volcanic disturbance.

Switzerland will soon protest that France is building fortifications in Savoy, in conflict with existing treaty engagements.

George Warden, the defaulting Manager and Secretary of the London & River Platte Bank, has been arrested at his sister's house in London, Eng.

Mark Miller & Co., stock-brokers, have failed owing to the defalcation of Warden. The other firms will probably be compelled to suspend from the same cause.

Simon Mack & Co., wholesale clothing dealers of 487 Broadway, New York City, made an assignment yesterday, giving preferences to creditors of $302,030. The debts of the firm amount to $700,000.

Last week's aggregate clearings reached over a billion dollars, but are considered to represent a serious decline in the volume of traffic expected at this season of the year. The business wave which now seems to have so far subsided started at this time in 1880. In that year the weekly total of the country's clearings began to increase in October, and by midsummer in 1881 had reached a figure not much below $1,700,000,000.

United States Consul Seymour has not been assassinated. The canard was started in an obscure town in the North of England.

In the Episcopal Convention at Philadelphia yesterday, Bishop Wilmer, of Alabama, denounced religious revivals as "wild orgies which possess a deadly fascination for the negroes."

Near Natchez, Miss., there have been sixteen deaths from small-pox. At Brewton, Ala., there have been seventeen cases of yellow fever, and two deaths. One case of yellow fever near Sumpterville, Fla.

Prof. A. H. Worthen, the State Geologist, from Springfield, has been at Chester, Ill., during the last week packing the recently found mastodon bones, and he has taken them to the State Museum at Springfield. The length of the skull is three feet; breadth, two feet; thigh-bone, three feet long; diameter of tusk at base, eight and a half inches; length of longest tusk preserved, five feet six inches. Then there is another tusk that was attached to the head, but was broken off three feet from the head. The shoulder-blades are immense, and measure about two feet six inches across. The leg-bones are from five to seven inches in diameter in the center. The specimen is well-preserved, but of course is not complete. Some pieces of ribs and a few bones of the feet were found, but sufficient of the remains have been found to construct or form an estimate of its immense size. Some idea may be formed by saying the bones so far preserved weigh nearly 1,000 pounds.

Oct. 9th.—The French claim a victory in Tonquin. The force which beat the Annamites numbered 550 men. France's agreement with the Black Flags in Tonquin grants them arrears of pay and free possession of the territory between Lao and Hung Hoa. Epidemics have decimated the forces of the Black Flags, and many more are deserting. They abandoned their works near Hanoi and retreated beyond Dai and the Rapids Canal towards Lao Kai. They have also partially evacuated Sontoy. The French troops are in excellent health and spirits.

The appointment of Gen. Campenon as French Minister of War, to succeed Gen. Thibaudin, is officially announced at Paris.

Lieut. Stoney, who was sent into Alaska bearing Government gifts to the Indians who succored the officers and crew of the burned Arctic steamer Rodgers, in 1881, believes he has discovered a river north of the Yukon, exceeding that great waterway in size and importance. The natives declared that the new stream was 1,500 miles long, and twenty miles wide in certain places. The Lieutenant hopes to be permitted to return to the north on a journey of exploration.

New York City loses $310,000 through the coupon frauds in the Controller's office.

Oct. 10th.—Five thousand miners are out on strike in Lanarkshire, Scotland.

France does not feel like making any further apology to Spain. The Spanish Ministers are divided as to the course which may be properly pursued, and a Cabinet crisis is not improbable.

The commander of the Black Flacks in Tonquin, Yang Fu, has issued a threatening proclamation in which he styles the French "sheep and dogs," and his soldiers, "heroes;" and also challenges the French army to come forth and meet him. Foreigners are still in danger at Canton, China. The new Chinese Viceroy is merely a converted cut-throat. In his youth he was the flourishing leader of a band of highwaymen. The Chinese Ambassador intends to ask the mediation of England as between France and China.

The Spanish Ministry has virtually resigned.

Two ocean steamers collided off Gravesend, England, and one of them was badly damaged. Two others collided off Gibraltar, and received damage estimated at £10,000.

In the election of Tuesday, October 9th, Ohio, as a state went Democratic, and Iowa Republican. Bro. E. Banta was elected as Representative from Decatur county, by a majority of 274.

The number of business failures in Canada during the last nine months was 329 as compared with 161 during the corresponding nine months of last year. This is an increase of over 100 per cent. The increase in the amount of the liabilities is much greater, being from $1,940,555, to $5,939,514. The Dominion financiers are naturally alarmed at this showing.

The Swiss State Council has issued a decree expelling Miss Booth and all foreigners suspected of an intention to organize Salvation-Army meetings.

At Lyons, France, the Anarchists yesterday poured a bucket of petroleum over a policeman and set it on fire. The man was terribly burned. The mob afterward attempted to fire the stables of the municipality.

At Pesth, Hungary the Lower House of the Diet yesterday, 187 to 105, passed the resolution of the Hungarian Prime Minister for the settlement of the escutcheon question in Croatia. It provides that the present Croatian inscriptions be retained and the Hungarian and bilingual be discontinued.

Three shocks of earthquake yesterday reminded San Francisco that the Pacific Slope is still a comparatively unsettled country.

A sudden fall in temperature, followed by snow, surprised the ranchmen on the plains to-day. About six inches of snow had fallen at eleven o'clock to night at Denver, and it is still snowing hard, with no wind blowing. Four inches of snow lies on the ground at Sidney to night, and it is still snowing, with the thermometer at 28. Between one and two inches of snow fell at Cheyenne at eleven o'clock to night, and a light, "still," fall continues.

FIRES, STORMS AND ACCIDENTS.

Oct. 4.—Pilling's woolen mill at Rochdale, England, burned last night. Loss, £25,000.

Loss by fire at Oshkosh, Wis., $60,000. Chicago, Ill., $200. Utica, N. Y., $12,000. Elmira, N. Y., $25,000. Beaumont, Tex., $15,000. Chatham, Ont., $50,000. The Neal Block fire of yesterday, at Oswego, N. Y., $50,000. Pittsfield, Mass., $35,000.

Near Tarport Station, Pa., a passenger train was wrecked, nine persons injured severely, and many more slightly. By the fall of the roof at White Oak Mines, Pa., this morning, Richard Caffer, and Anthony Curley, were instantly killed. The fall of a ladder at Providence, R. I., killed one man. Two men in Chicago were injured, probably fatally, by falling from trains.

Oct. 5th.—Loss by fire at Chicago Ill. $9,000. Sandy Lake, Pa., $50,000. Eau Claire, Wis., $45,000.

A boy fell from the third floor of a hotel at Indianapolis, Ind., and was killed. A Philadelphia and Reading train ran into a street-car in Philadelphia yesterday, killing four persons and injuring ten others more or less severely. The accident happened on the outskirts of the city, and was due to the neglect of the railroad company to provide a safety-gate at the crossing and to the fact that the driver was compelled to perform the double duty of driver and conductor. A section of a freight-train ran into the caboose of the other on the Newark Division of the Pan-Handle killed Thomas Cranshaw, brakeman, and injured another man.

Oct. 6th.—The large dry-goods house of Blowenstein & Bros., at Memphis, Tenn., was destroyed by fire. Some of the adjacent buildings were considerably damaged. The loss was about a quarter of a million.

The business portion of the Village of Passumpsic, Vt., was destroyed by fire. The loss is estimated at $20,000. The insurance is about $9,000.

Loss by fire at Minneapolis, Minn., $63,000. Logansport, Ind., $2,000. Near Poughkeepsie, N. Y., $60,000.

A car on the Western Dummy Road was derailed near Oak Park, Chicago. There were about fifty passengers in the car at the time, and many of them received very serious bruises.

Oct. 8.—A dispatch from Gevi Samika, Japan says that while a performance was going on in a theatre at that place Friday night a fire broke out and spread with such rapidity that seventy-five persons lost their lives in the flames and one hundred others were injured more or less seriously by being knocked down and trampled upon in the panic that ensued. A number of persons escaped by jumping from the windows.

Loss by fire at Memphis, Tenn., $170,000. Wishicot, Wis., $20,000. New York City, $50,000. Howard, Ia., $9,500. New Orleans, La., $30,000. Lasalle, Ill., $3,000. La Crosse, Wis., $1,000.

About 6 o'clock this morning lightning struck the barn of Joseph Mo, six miles north of St. Paul, Minn. The building with contents was entirely burned. Four men were in the barn at the time. One Robert Rarer was seriously injured, being insensible for several hours. Twenty-eight head of cattle and twenty horses were in the barn when struck. One man had just finished milking a cow when she fell dead. Another had just harnessed a horse that was killed. The loss is $3,000 to $5,000.

A large rick of hay, about twenty tons, belonging to J. W. Cooper, two miles north-east of St. Paul, Minn., was also struck and burned.

C. Jarl, a shoemaker of St. Paul, was on a farm in Traverse county, about ten miles from there, where the house was struck, and two children sleeping on the floor were killed. Another, a boy 15 years old, was dangerously injured, being left totally blind. A traveling-man reports the house of a blacksmith at Donnelly was struck and his wife killed and two children severely injured. It was the most fatal storm that has ever visited that part of the country.

A railroad accident near Lowell, Mass., caused a loss of $10,000.

Oct. 9.—A train on the Canada Pacific Railway was derailed near Deaux Rivers and four cars were smashed and burned. Two hundred passengers were on board, a number of whom were severely injured, and two killed.

A fire at Petrolia, Ont., caused the death of one man, and destroyed a large amount of property. A canning factory burned at Utica, N. Y., loss $30,000.

Oct. 10.—"Springhurst," near Grover's Hill, Conn., the summer residence of Thomas W. Pearsall, banker, of New York, burned yesterday. The loss is about $125,000. Loss by fire at Middleport, N. Y., $10,350. The fire is still raging, and the fire department from Albion, N. Y., has been summoned to their assistance.

Fouteen thrashers were sleeping under a granary near Moorhead, Minn., Tuesday night. The floor of the granary broke and 1,400 bushels of oats descended upon the sleepers, four of whom lost their lives.

A hand car accident near Wankan, Wis., instantly killed a little girl, and fatally injured three other persons.

CROP REPORTS.

The cotton crop report for September of the Memphis district, comprising Western Tennessee, Northern Arkansas and Northern Alabama, compiled from 344 responses, is as follows: "The summary indicates a decreased yield throughout the Memphis district of 30 per cent. as compared with the previous year. Last month a decrease of 20 per cent was foreshadowed, and in the July report a shortage of 12½ per cent. The increase in the percentage of loss is attributed to the unfavorable influences due to the hot, dry weather which prevailed from the latter portion of August to the middle of September. Long continued drouth deprived the plant of moisture needed for its full development, and hurried it forward to maturity, causing a heavy loss by rust and shedding. West Tennessee reports a decrease of 8 per cent. The percentage of loss in North Arkansas has grown from 30 to 40 per cent, while returns from North Mississippi and North Alabama remain about as before, indicating a decreased yield in those sections of 38 per cent. Several correspondents note a greater proportion of seed than usual, which, if general, will still further largely reduce the number of bales of lint produced in this district."

The corn crop around Bedford, Ind., is about safe from the frost, and will be an average one.

But one rain has fallen in Yazoo county, Miss., since last Spring. There is no water in the cisterns, and but for the river there would be much suffering.

The Minnesota State Statistician issues the following report of crops: Wheat is turning out better than anticipated. This is specially the case in the Central and North-western counties, which suffered more or less from drouth. The straw is short, and a fewer number of stacks gathered from fields than last year gave the appearance of a less crop. On threshing, however, it is reported that the yield is for the most part in excess of last year. Between 200 and 300 more bushels are claimed to have been thrashed from five stacks in Douglass County, this season than were obtained from eight stacks last year, the size of the stacks being the same.

The acreage in wheat as reported June 1st was 271,637, and returns received since October first, give an average yield of fourteen and eighty-nine hundredths bushels per acre, giving an aggregate crop of 38,305,373. As much as three per cent, however, has been destroyed by storms, which reduces the average per acre to fourteen and forty-five hundredths bushels per acre, or an aggregate of 37,156,211. Returns show a greater area in wheat by 64,466 acres than that given in the preliminary statement of the State Statistician.

There will be but half a crop of corn in the southern part of Rock County Wisconsin, and the northern part of Winnebago County, Illinois. The temperature has been freezing on a number of occasions and nearly every clear night lately ice has been formed. Some farmers whose corn has been spared from the early frosts think their seed will be worth $5 per bushel next spring, as many farmers will not have any seed-corn, or, in fact, any corn fit to crib.

PEACEMAKERS.

At the London School Board examination on Scriptural Knowledge, a boy, in his first year of apprenticeship, wrote the following brief but expressive answer to the question:

"What is the special blessing promised to the peacemakers?"

"They shall be called the children of God.' This promise is specially fitted for them because God is the souch of all true peace. We are also told that Christ is the Prince of Peace. Our Savior calls himself our elder brother; so, therefore, the peacemakers are truly called the children of God."

WISHES AND PRAYERS.

ONE reason why your prayers profit you so little is that you do not pray for what you want. You know that you do not pray for what you want. You know that your wishes are not in harmony with the divine will, and you hush your wishes to silence, and pray for what God will give to sincere seekers. But you are not—pardon our frankness—you are not a sincere seeker. You would blush to ask the thing you covet. Your foolish heart is set on the evil and frivolous, and for that only could you really pray. You must want what the good heaven offers you before your prayer will be effectual. It must be in harmony with two wills—yours and God's. Until it is in such harmony it may do you some service by fixing your attention upon the cause of your troubles. A worship in which the worshipper tries to bring his heart into acquiescence with the divine will may do him a great service; but it can not be effectual prayer. When prayer flows out of our true wishes and responds to the promise of our Lord, we "ask what we will and it is done unto us."

The man whose prayer is always answered is a man whose wishes revolve in the sacred circle of duty and honor. This man is hearty in his prayer and God is quick in answer because of the heartiness. Can anything be simpler or clearer than the logic of effectual prayer? The human wish is an answer to the divine order; the soul cries on earth for the things ordained for it in heaven. The preparation of the heart means "a heart in every thought renewed and full of love divine." Our Savior gave a Magna Charta to prayer, but he conditioned it by, "If ye abide in me and my words abide in you." "No great work is hard in the doing" was a lesson of our childhood. The great worker has learned to do easily what is beyond common hands. Nothing better illustrates the truth than prayer, wherein everything is easy when once the heart's wishes rest and play in the lap of sovereign Law.

You may have heard of the old colored man who dwelt in a little cottage alone. He had a habit of saying the same prayer every night without change of word or tone. One petition was, 'Oh, Lord, send de good angels, and take ole Lummis home.' Lummis was his name. The boys of the neighborhood, knowing that this was a stated request of the old man's prayer, stationed themselves near the door one night, waiting until he came to the place. Now a 'place' to come to in a prayer is not the best thing; no matter if it be a 'place' in a beautiful book of prayer, or a 'place' in the custom-made prayer of an old negro in his cabin. If any difference, the negro has the advantage. But on this occasion, just as the old man came to the words, 'Oh, Lord, send de good angels and take ole Lummis home,' one of the boys rapped on the door. 'Who's dar,' said Lummis, in considerable alarm. 'The good angel of the Lord, was the tender answer. 'Why, w—what dy'e want he'ah?' said Lummis. 'I've come, now, to take poor old Lummis home.' 'Why, bress you soul, honey,' said Lummis, in terrible trepidation, 'ole Lummis he move away from he'ah about three weeks ago.'—Selected.

"Honor the Lord with thy substance, and with the first fruits of all thine increase. So shall thy barns be filled with plenty, and thy presses shall burst out with new wine."—Prov. 3: 9, 10.

VOICES OF THE BLEST.

In the silent shades of night,
When we're past the cares of day,
When of those beyond we thought,
Thus they seemed to us to say:

"In our bright Elysian home,
We are gently calling, come
Oh ye well beloved of earth,
To our blest and happy home.

"We have passed adown the years,
Through the gateway, too, of time,
Now eternity is ours,
Soon, dear one, it will be thine.

"For the hours are fleeting past,
And the years are rolling by;
See to it, as thus they pass,
That your treasure is on high.

"Joys ye can not now conceive,
Are our happy portion here;
Lack we aught 'tis only this,
All these joys with you to share.

"Could we wish our earth-life back!
Come again with you to dwell?
Nay, 'tis past, as seemed Him good,
For He doeth all things well.

"What is death, a pang of pain,
To the righteous soul the door,
Opening wide to Paradise
And its glories evermore.

"Oh! then walk the shining way,
That we too in weakness tread;
Peace shall be your angel guide,
And it leadeth home to God.

"When your days of earth are past,
And the morn of heaven breaks;
'Mid the sweet seraphic sounds
Which the angelic host awakes,

"We shall wait to welcome you,
And our faces you shall see;
Oh! the joy to meet again,
Nevermore to parted be.

"Is not this well worth thy strife?
Doth not joy thy bosom swell?
Again we say, be faithful,
Trust in God, and all is well."

SERMON BY ELDER W. W. BLAIR,

AT THE OLD MEETING HOUSE,
LAMONI, APRIL 22d, 1883.

AFTER the singing of the closing hymn, Bro. Blair read the 10th chapter of John's gospel entire, and said: The thought that occupies my attention the most, is found in the 37th verse of this chapter. "If I do not the works of my Father believe me not." And it is thus that the Jews had evidence of the divinity of Jesus Christ, in the spiritual works that he wrought. It should be borne in mind that Jesus was teaching those that were Jews, professed believers in Moses and the prophets, that they believed that Christ was an impostor, and that they did not believe in the divinity of his mission. For the truthfulness of his words he refers them to the works he was doing, told them that they could see that the evidence of his divine authority, and the truthfulness, and righteousness of his work were before them.

All professing Christians think this a most potent argument, and they have reasoned upon it time and time again, condemnatory of the Jews, and proving Christ and his mission, they have done well; but the argument is just as good, we hold, in confirmation of God's work in these days, as it was for God's work in that age of the world, so that we may say to those who profess to be Christians, and believe in the works as related in the teaching of Christ, that there should be no difficulty in believing in this strange work in which we are engaged.

We often reason, as others have done before, to show the condition of the Jews, examine their history from its beginning to its close, in order to give evidence of the divinity of the Scriptures, and why? Because the promises and prophecies with regard to the Jews are, some of them, having their plain fulfillment at the present time. From the days of Abraham to this time, we see they have been having their literal, plain fulfillment. So we see in regard to John and Christ, as promised in the New Testament. The fulfillment of these things stands out as a striking evidence in proof of christianity, and the two taken together form important witnesses of the divinity of the same. Apply this rule to the marvelous work in which we are engaged; and when done the logic is unanswerable. If the christian world would use this argument they would find it equally potent in proof of this work, and also in regard to their own position before God.

There are many old Latter Day Saints who stand aloof, and will have nothing to do with the Reorganization, because they say it is a myth, and there is no truth in it. But they have not read their books, and studied them thoroughly, or they would have known through prophecy that the Reorganization was a necessity. They can not, or they will not, see that it is divine, that the work we have in hand is the work of God. We hold that from the commencement of time God's work has always been predicated on prophecy and promise, so that the people living in the different ages of the world, looking upon those promises, could see the light and avail themselves of the opportunity to walk in it. The Apostle Peter says in his time, "We have also a more sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye would do well to take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place until the day dawn," &c. Prophecy that was written aforetime was not so much for the benefit of those who lived at the time of the declaration, as for the benefit of those who live at the time it has its fulfillment.

The Jews had the word predicting Christ's advent on earth, and the works he should perform. He came doing those works, and hence you have evidence in the divinity of the word spoken, as well as the work Jesus came to do. People who have never been skeptical in their minds pass over it without considering the magnitude of the claims of Jesus. He claimed that he was the Son of God in the strongest sense of the term; he claimed that he was actually God, and refers the Jews back to their Scripture, in order that they may see that it was not inconsistent. "It is written in your Scriptures, I said that you were gods, and the Scriptures can not be broken," &c. They thought that he was a blasphemer. The Savior referred them back to their Scriptures to give them the benefit of them and their teaching. It was a great claim that the Savior made! He claimed to be the resurrection and the life; that his Father gave him power to lay down his life and to take it again. It was a marvelous claim. No wonder they thought he was an impostor, or mad. When we go back to the prophecies we discover that concerning the earlier periods of his life there were predictions made respecting the character of Christ, telling where, and when he should be born, his parentage, &c. Jesus came just in fulfillment of these scriptures; but the Jews, in general, being educated away from these scriptures they could not see the fitness of Christ in this regard. The Savior came in fulfillment of this prophecy! He was born of Israel, in the tribe of Judah; he came at a time when the sceptre had departed from Judah, and the lawgiver from between his feet; he came at the close of these prophetic particulars, when the Messiah should be manifest. Some of the Jews seemed to have a correct understanding of the prophecies in relation to Christ's first advent, and were looking for this Messiah, called Jesus. Not only the Jews, but the Samaritans also were looking for him; they were a people not of Israel, were strangers, originally brought from other lands, and were not natives of the place; they seemed to have light upon the subject and were expecting him. As for instance the woman at the well whom Jesus had conversation with, who replied to his sayings, "I know that Messiah cometh who is called Christ. When he is come he will tell us all things. Jesus said unto her, I that speaketh to thee am the Messiah." But when it was heralded by John the Baptist that Christ had come, they could not see that Jesus was the proper person. Born in a manger, of lowly, obscure parentage, the reputed son of the carpenter,—they could not endorse it! And to-day they say, "You talk of this work being of God, it began with a poor ignoramus away down in New York; began with a people that had no wealth, were obscure, low-born, ignorant and lazy." They can not bear the idea that God's work should come forth from such a source! There was good old Nathaniel, as good a man as he was, was very decided in his opinion that no good thing could come out of Nazareth. It could not be that the Messiah could come from there, that little, insignificant, despised place; he asks, "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?"

And so it is with people now, they can not believe that God would stoop so low to carry out his work from such a humble source, when the facts are that such is in accordance with God's doing in all the world. When he would commence his work with Israel, to bring them out of bandage and gather them to the land of their fathers, he takes a young man who had gone out of Egypt, fled a fugitive to the land of Midian, and was tending the flocks of Jethro, and while following his vocation the Lord appears to him and says, "I am the God of thy fathers, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob," &c.; and there commissioned him to go down into Egypt to deliver his people out of bondage. Again following the history of God's dealing along, we come to the time when Israel would have a king, which the Lord consented to, after telling them what a king would do for them. But he did not go to the high and lofty ones; there was a Saul, the son of Kish, a tall fellow in stature, who stood high above his fellows, the Lord selected him. In those days they used to go and consult with the Seer upon what seems to us very trivial things, but it appears it did not to them—Saul's father had lost his asses and sent his son to enquire of the seer their whereabouts, and he went to enquire, looking, no doubt, like a great many green boys would do now—and I am not prepared to say that God does not like these kind of men now—and when the seer saw the lad, he tells him he is the Lord's anointed. Saul could not believe that the Lord had called him, and he says, "Am not I a Benjaminite, the least of all the tribes in Israel, and my father's family the least of all the families of Benjamin;" but Samuel says to him, "You go down to the 'hill of God' and you will meet a company of prophets, with pipe and harp and they shall prophecy, and the Spirit of the Lord will come upon thee, and thou shalt be turned into another man." He went according to command, and after meeting the company the Spirit of the Lord came upon Saul and he began to prophesy, and the saying went abroad that Saul was among the prophets.

But says one, Why choose one so young and inexperienced; why not choose one of maturer years and riper wisdom? Because that such characters are tractable and teachable, and the Lord can teach such in his own way, better than he can the old stock, and they do not know any better than to take the Lord at his word, and do exactly as he commands them. The Savior says, "Don't put new wine into old bottles, lest the bottles burst and the wine is spilled. It is so with God's work now. You take one that is thoroughly established in his own estimation, and if God selects that man, before he gets through with him that man will want to counsel his God. In the case of David's calling we find the Lord selects an individual of humble origin. He tells Samuel to go to the house of Jesse, the Bethlehemite, for he had provided a king among his sons. Samuel did as commanded, had the seven sons of Jesse called, and looking upon Eliab's manly form, and fair exterior, declared "Surely the Lord's anointed is before me;" but the Lord told Samuel that man looked on the outward appearance, not so with the Lord, he looketh on the heart. Abinadab was next called, then Shammah, and all of the seven sons of Jesse, fine portly fellows, but the Lord had not chosen either of them. Samuel asked Jesse if he had not yet another son,—he knew that the Lord's anointed must come from that house. Yes, there is the youngest one, keeping the sheep. Send and fetch him. As soon as David came in the Lord said, "Arise and anoint him, for this is he!" The little shepherd lad was brought in, why? Because the Lord could train him up according to his design, to accomplish his will through him, and the Lord said, "Him have I chosen;" and the Spirit of God after the anointing rested upon David. The character of David is sadly marred, in some respects, by some of his actions, but taking the general make-up of that man's history from the time that God chose him, and he was one of earth's remarkable and wondrous men. The Lord always chose his servants from among the lowly ones of the earth. Christ and John the Baptist both came of lowly parentage, and they were made two of the principal instruments in glorifying God. This history agrees with Paul's statement, who says, "Not many mighty, not many noble were called, for God had chosen the weak things of earth to bring to naught things that are." And one of the reasons assigned was, that no flesh should glory in his presence. And now, if God acts consistently with himself, as he has done in all past ages, to establish his church and kingdom, he would begin with the lowly ones, the humble ones of earth, those who are not corrupted by prejudice; so that instead of being an evidence against the work, it is in favor of it largely, that God chose Joseph Smith and his followers, in their weakness, their poverty and the like.

Just so in regard to this Reorganization. When God essayed to again organize his Church, instead of revealing himself through High Priests, or an Apostle of the Church, or some who were prominent ministers of the Church, He commenced away up yonder in the borders of the people, with some of those noble men and women, the lowly ones of the earth; poor in this world's goods but rich in faith, who lived away from the business marts of the world, away up yonder in the hills of Wisconsin—I was going to say mountains, they came pretty near it. There is where God commenced the work of the Reorganization.

A few days since I heard a man—who was once an apostle—who said it was nonsense to say that the Reorganization had commenced with such a low class, the Lord would not commence his work in that kind of a style! If God would not do it he would not work in harmony with himself! When God commenced his work in the days of John the Baptist, he sent his angel to a lowly, poor Priest, who told him that his wife should have a son. Elizabeth received strong evidence, when the mother of our Lord went to visit her, and Zacharias also received strong evidence of the divinity of the work to be done by his son, after that he had been punished for his unbelief; and others there were who received evidence of the truthfulness of that work. And so it was with those who commenced this work in which we are engaged, in Zarahemla! They knew that the work was divine, not by the power of man, but of God, and the work began in the way it did in the days of Joseph the Seer, and that class of works—if they were works—performed by the people of God, were in harmony with what transpired in ages past. Now if the Lord had commenced his work with men of rare talent, and men who had a large amount of wealth, the skeptic would say, no wonder at all that these men could build up, they had the money to build up with. It is indeed, no wonder that that class of men could build up a work. But they can not say that of Moses' day, nor of the days of John the Baptist and the Savior, neither can they say it of the days of Joseph the Seer! We refer them right back to the origin of the work, and the character of its beginnings, in the influence and power of the Almighty, his overruling providence in behalf of his work, dispensing the spiritual power to his Saints, whereby they too could do the works of their Father, as evidence they were sent of him. "If I do not the works of my Father, believe me not," says Jesus. In the establishment of the latter-day work, was it not doing the works of the Almighty? We find in the prophecies, that God would commence a marvelous work, "A marvelous work and a wonder," says Isaiah, and he gave such evidence of it, that the people might not be deceived in regard to it. It was to come forth just before God would bless the land of Israel, and cause it to bring forth in its strength; and he tells them it will be in a day when men will honor God with their lips while their hearts would be removed far from him, and their fear towards him would be taught by the precepts of men. You and I have seen a good deal of this kind of work, it is quite common, honoring God with their lips while their hearts are away, very far from him. Men and women faithfully go to church, and pay the preacher, and help to build up their particular society, when to use a significant but not elegant phrase, they "don't care the ashes of a rye straw" about any religion. They say it is good enough for women, children and dolts; but it is too small for us, and they are heedless about it; still they will go to church and sing psalms with the choir, but their heart is not there. They honor God with their lips while their heart is far from him. I saw a little thing in proof of this,—or it will serve as an illustration,—while traveling with Bro. Banta to fill our mission assigned us in California. We went to see, and had gotten into the Pacific ocean, when Sabbath came—it is not so boisterous as the Atlantic, it was so stormy there, you know, they could not pray—and a fine day presented itself, and according to ship custom, prayers must be read. The Captain found out that Bro. Banta and I were ministers, and accosting

Bro. Banta [I was down below] he said, We would like you to read service for us to-day. Bro. Banta told him he hadn't done anything in that line. He found out from the brother where I was, and came down to me, and said, "Please come and read service for us. It is a rule that is imposed upon us, and must be complied with." I politely told him I was not accustomed to that manner of worship, and with all due respect, would have to decline. He then said, If you will not do it, I shall have to. After making some further enquiries—which on the spur of the moment I could not answer—he went to deck to make preparation for the services. The stars and stripes were flung to the breeze at the mast head, the bell rang, the people came in, and along came the captain, in his brusque nautical style, and he read the service, never stopping for periods, or stops of any kind, but seemed to want to get through in a hurry with a hard job as fast as he could, when through he picked up his cap and went on deck again.

I mention this to show the frivolity that is practiced all through the land. They have an apparent worship, but their heart is not in it, their soul is not in it; and just exactly as Isaiah said it should be in these days so it is. Their fear towards God is taught by the precepts of men, and they honor him with their lips, and their hearts are far from him. As we have before indicated, this should be in the day when this marvelous work should commence and the land of Judea should be brought into fruitfulness. We hear from that country tidings of the exact fulfillment of the prophecy, the land is yielding bountifully under God's blessing. We look abroad in the world and find that Israel is—with one exception and that is in Russia, and I think I can recognize the hand of the Lord in driving them out of there—gaining favor with all the world; but they also are drawing near to God with their lips, while their hearts are straying far from him,—and there may be such in our church, if there are, God pity them, or rather they ought to pity themselves.

We read that God should restore the work by an angel; and here comes a man, and testifies in the time indicated, that God had restored it in the manner described, by the means of a heavenly messenger: Is not this a great evidence of God's work? Say you so, you believe that God established his work with Joseph the Seer? Now the prophecies through him say that there should be a falling away, by the church, in these latter times. Well, says one, I never thought about that! And you had a Book of Covenants and never thought of it? We have been taught that when God commenced his kingdom it should not be left to other people. I believe that too, but you construe it one way, and I another. We believe that the membership should not be destroyed, but this does not say that the church should not be disorganized. Well, we never thought of it in that way before! The prophecies are very clear in regard to the latter-day apostasy. In the commencement of the latter-day work, the effort was made to have all the Saints gathered. That was the leading idea, but when the Reorganization should commence it would find the Saints scattered abroad. Mark you, evidently the gathering first, but through disobedience a scattering, and in this condition God's ministry was to find them. This indicated a latter-day work!

I suppose you would like to hear something about conference. We have been having a conference at Kirtland. It was there where the first stake was planted, where the church in its infancy first gathered to; there the Temple was reared; there the work had formed in a more complete sense than before; there the endowment was given, and from there men went out and in the strength of God did a mighty work. So that, mark you, Kirtland is a place of a great deal of importance to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. We held service for ten days. It was like building up the old waste places. In the Book of Covenants you read that the Saints shall return and build up the old waste places of Zion, and we think this implies that some of them shall be laid waste, and the prophecy was that the Saints should return and build them up, and it seems to us that the time had come to build up Kirtland. I went to Kirtland in 1860 and in the fall of that same year saw some rare specimens of spiritualistic power. Martin Harris was there, James Twist and family were there, who afterwards became identified with the Reorganization, and there I learned a great deal about the church's former history. There I saw as if it had been a cage of devils! Elder James Blakeslee was there, he had preceded me. I had been through Ohio, visiting some of the branches on the outskirts; while he came up through the central part of the state, and supposing that Kirtland would be a central place for preaching, had secured the Temple for the purpose. We went to look at the place, and I saw it was no place for me to preach in. Caricatures of every description almost, on the walls, and visitors had desecrated the walls and pulpits, and so defaced them that my soul was pained; some had even herded sheep in the assembly room; and my heart was sick as I looked on this picture, and I felt that I could not preach the gospel of Jesus Christ in such a polluted place. At this time we saw a power manifested that was anything but that of Christ! There was a kind of a called meeting to be held at the Temple; the invitation was circulated extensively, so that men from quite a distance were there, it was composed chiefly, we believe, of what they style themselves, free-religionists. Bro. Blakeslee and I attended the meeting, and were invited into the stand. A Mr. Todd attempted to speak, he spoke about five minutes, and was choked down, he could not speak, and this after coming several hundred miles for the purpose. Another gentleman arose with stern determination on his face, and began to tell them what they proposed to do. He appeared to be well advanced in years, and had talked about fifteen minutes, when up sprang a fellow with hair reaching to his shoulders, and a wild expression in his eye [I often think of it, it was like a "Jack in the box"] he sprang on his feet and shook his fists and down went the speaker. He came to the speaker's stand, and went through the same jesticulations—I was satisfied what ailed the man—Martin Harris came over to us with blanched face apparently frightened. I said to him, I guess the devil is in that man. I watched the man, I was satisfied from the first he was coming over to the speaker's desk, and I was questioning in my mind whether I should throw him off, or rebuke him, when the testimony of the Spirit came, "This is not your meeting, step out." I stepped out, Bro. Blakeslee did the same, and that man sprang upon the teacher's desk, then upon the pulpit, then sprang upon the second, and still higher till he reached the topmost pulpit, and upon reaching there, he took off his broad cloth coat and tore it into shreds. The people fled out of the house like sheep, and the men—they generally get the start if they can—went out first and left the ladies to get out as well as they could. There was a young woman there who, when the man sprang upon one of the pulpits and made a terrible hiss, fell down prone upon the floor. The women seemed to be very much frightened, and well they might

Bro. Blakeslee and myself, started up to see that no personal violence should occur, and when we got on the outside of the crowd, this poor creature was looking up, caught sight of the man, and immediately went into spasms. By the time they got her to the threshold of the Temple, my heart was touched, and Bro. Blakeslee coming up, we laid our hands on her, and she came to herself, the devil was rebuked. Well, we have been holding a conference in the interests of the Reorganized Church, and from the indications I saw, the time has never been so propitious as it is now. Greater unity, the finest preaching, the most talented preaching, it seemed as though it was systematic, it seemed it was like putting the stones in Solomon's Temple; in short, it seemed as though God superintended the chief part of it.

There was a gentleman, a leading man there, by the name of Carpenter, who, with his good lady was present during the most of the services, and a man says to him, "Well Carpenter, what do you think of it?" He replied, "If the Bible is true the Latter Day Saints are right. Think of it? I never saw in my life as fine a body of men, as has here assembled today!" A Representative—whether to the State legislature, or to Congress, I am not prepared to say—was present also, determined to see and know for himself all he could, he attended very regularly our meetings, and watched carefully the movement of things. A Reporter asked him what he thought of it. He spoke in the highest terms of the proceedings, and said our conference was decidedly a success. We were wonderfully blessed, not only with tongues, interpretation and prophecy, &c., but in all the phases of the conference, the Lord by his Spirit was with us.

Building on those old foundations is a manifestation for good, and we believe that the assembling at Kirtland in Conference capacity will be productive of great good to the cause. For my own part, I would like to see the work more vigorously prosecuted than ever. I would like to see less of bitterness and jealousies, and more unity and harmony prevailing, especially among the standard bearers in the kingdom of our God, which I believe would result in greater prosperity to the work on every hand. We have seen what some are pleased to call a reformation. We are going back to those old time places for this purpose, to build up and reform them, and that in fulfillment of God's word. I remember when Bro. Gillen and I first met in 1860 or 1861. We could get, probably, all in this room that belonged to the Church at that time. Our numbers were very limited, there was very little wealth among us, but I tell you God was there; and from that day to this the work has been steadily growing, sinking its roots deeper and deeper until we have reached our present condition. All speaks well for the condition of the work, and we must not despise these small things at the commencement of the work. Systems that have been built up by men will eventually go to the four winds. "Every plant that our heavenly Father hath not planted will be rooted out." God is the author of this work, it has been carried on thus far by his hand, and will be eventually carried off triumphant over all opposition. And now let me exhort the Saints to live together in unity and brotherly love, dealing kindly with each other, and with gentleness reproving the erring one, winning him back with love, and may the feeling of love be extended to all, out of the Church as well as in. The longer I live and see the experiences in the Church, the more I see the necessity of conquering by love. If that does not win them back nothing will. May God bless you all. I never felt better in the work, we have all to cheer and to encourage us to press steadily on, every one doing his duty to the world and to each other. May God bless you, Amen.

THE SITUATION.

SOME people are constitutionally full of confiding and exulting hope, while other some inhabit the bogs of black despair. The first named class is often victimized by misplaced confidence, but rally quickly and go on the shining way; while its more unfortunate neighbors forever dwell beneath the raven wing of their mental idol. Too much, "peace, for all is well in Zion," is a withering fanaticism that begets a fair flower, which is the forerunner of poison fruit. Animadversions, or jealous suspicions are annoying, hurtful or intolerable; but we are to "watch," as well as supplicate, and "prove" ere we embrace firmly. What I want to get at is simply, that I am not at all satisfied with the tardy progress of the cause we have espoused. I tell you something vital is out of tune, and how to get it in harmony is the grave problem before the house. We are not able to say as one of old, "I have labored more than they all;" but it does appear to me that some of the high officials can find the revenues of the Church oftener, and with a better grace than they can go into distant highways and preach to the poor, "without purse or scrip." When the inspired Jethro was instructing Moses how to reorganize the Hebrew commonwealth, he observed that their judges should be "such as fear God, men of truth, hating covetousness," for "the gift blindeth the wise, and perverteth the words of the righteous." Elisha refused the proffered reward of Captain Naaman, the Assyrian leper; and Daniel said to the generous king, "Let thy gifts be to thyself, and thy rewards to another." "It is more blessed to give than to receive;" but the major part of the folks prefer the minor blessing. Pecuniary substance and domestic felicity are towering influences; while an undue love for "filthy lucre" leads men and women to deplorable straits. The soldier looks for pay day; the rustic garners a portion of grain and fruit; the herd boy is entitled to his bowl of milk, and those that preach the gospel all the while should live therefrom. God cares "for oxen," but they should "tread" or wear a "muzzle." Heathen priests may "make merchandise of the gospel" and bring the profession into disrepute, but honest toil should be rewarded. The reigning pontiffs at Jerusalem were reveling in wealth, while the child of Mary had not where to lay his head. Many ancient worthies were spurned from the marts and thoroughfares of man, to wander in destitution; but when Constantine enriched the clergy, the corruption of the christian profession went on with renewed and accelerated vigor. In the infancy and purity of this Church they were poor; but as the years rolled by, numbers and strength flocked to the standard. That "root of all evil" grew in official ground, especially in the hearts of the first Twelve, to an alarming and ruinous extent. Like the wicked priests of King Noah's time, they oppress and rob the poor, and spend their hours of idleness in riotous living with harlots. When any one in the first organization spoke about, or tried to restrain the growing evils, they were warned to be submissive, or they would be ostracized as wicked apostates. Cajolery and promising positions of honor and trust, were means resorted to in order that the councils of authorities might whirl them into the vortex of lust, bloodshed and complete degradation. Among the rivals of commerce and trade, some have honestly and signally failed; while others have broken full handed. Ill gotten gains have not been wholly confined to slick fingered manipulators, in secular pursuits, but high churchmen have, too often, abused privileges, and thereby brought distrust and disaster upon religion. There is a current adage that in "times of peace we prepare for war," and I can not, for the life of me, see any detriment to progress to guard with jealous care the financial interests of the Church.

With the exception of the one hundred dollars I obtained to pay my way to, and from the Mecca of America, I have not drawn fifty dollars for all the eight years of active labor in the missionary field, while others have asked and received double that amount per month. These figures do not smack much of equality in temporal affairs. Those thus favored do not believe in a salaried ministry, and neither do we. It is not presumed that any are growing very rich that labor in word and doctrine; but lessons of economy and industry should be taught to the receiver as well as the giver, and thus maintain our equilibrium. We would not have any one to suppose that we have entirely subsisted upon faith and good wishes, during all these years of sacrifice and toil; for many a kind friend and generous Saint has come to our rescue. Perhaps some would feel honored to lavish their generosity upon the First Presidency or the Twelve, forgetting that those of low degree, who devote their time and talent, have to eat and wear, as also provide for their own household. When the Church asks a man to "thrust in his sickle," she should stand in his shoes, so far as the common comforts and necessary staples of life are concerned. Those that will not move out until they are well "heeled," should "heel it" to the corn field and learn the lesson that seed time precedes the harvest. You throw a stone violently into a pig pen, and the one that is hit does the squealing. I was hit last April when I was denied one hundred and fifty dollars to stay my wavering fortune for the ensuing year, and so you see I fancy that I have a right to squeal; and if not, why not? We do not claim to have found the panacea for every saintly disorder; but only to "speak that I may be refreshed."

I heartily deplore the customs of the Dark Ages, that paid the spiritual advisers in proportion to the rank and authority they held. If that stupid folly is repeated again in this latter day work, infidelity will sweep the communicants thereof, and distrust will rekindle throughout the world. I am sorry to know that through all this section our people, as a whole, spend vastly more for tobacco than for the work of God. They are often free to "testify;" howbeit, their own book says the weed "is not for the body" but for "all sick cattle," &c. From whence did the above advice emanate? For "man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Now, I would not say that a man or a woman can not use the forbidden stuff without entirely losing the Spirit of God; but it bores me no little to see the presiding officers of districts and branches insist by practice in being "filthy still." (Rev. 22:11). I would be pleased to refresh their pure minds (?) by a gentle reminder that the motion of a General Conference decided that detestable habit "expensive, injurious and filthy, and should be discouraged by the ministry." Almost every little wharf waif I see is either a miniature smoke stack, or looks like he had the mumps, or something of the kind.

Now, dear Saints, if we are not wise and judicious with the "mammon of unrighteousness," it is self evident that we will never attain to the "true riches," as also "saith the law." When any one, in these days of poverty, wants too much temporal assistance, let him resign his charges, and look after his own domestic affairs awhile. This church, however, should have ten times as many in the field as it has. It should cherish the hope that the missionary force may be indefinitely augmented, so that the work would be "cut short in righteousness." In fact, each member should feel a personal and continual responsibility; and embrace every opportunity to do good, with willing alacrity and cheerful zeal. "Words fitly spoken," as well as offices of kindness, are good investments; for they perish never, but vibrate and thrill with the accumulation of years. We can not afford to be parsimonious, for the "liberal soul shall be made fat;" and those who sow bountifully shall reap proportionately. One end of the scales might be termed the spiritual, and the other the temporal arm of the church, but each should receive proper attention and care, and thus bring around and perpetuate a glorious equipoise.

Bro. Edward's exegesis upon the law of tithing is lucid, masterly, manly and irrefragable. I am glad and thankful to behold the young man, with his talent, time and energy, engaged in such praiseworthy achievement. I hope his good health may remain intact, that the circle of divine knowledge may continue to expand, and that his precious life may be prolonged greatly. Bro. Blakeslee's industry, in his office and calling, is highly commendable; and his precedent, in practicing what he preaches, in tithing himself for the past year, is surely the proper line of conduct in our temporal guardian. Tithing, when properly understood, is a most merciful arrangement in the divine economy. It takes from the prosperous only in seasons of accumulating gains, and dispenses to the poor in times of adversity, and also for the building up of the kingdom of God's dear Son. Whenever the effects of a steward are yearly increased, the Master only asks for a tenth, and that, too, when the earth is the Lord's. That is the demand of an inflexible law, but gratitude and mercy provide a wider range. Strangers should be entertained, the sick nursed, the widows and orphans alleviated; the dying consoled and the dead buried. All such claims upon our charity come under the following, or kindred heads; viz, Free will offerings, oblations, donations, gifts, &c., and should be wisely and happily performed, with an eye single to the glory of God. The accumulation and dissolution of fortunes contaminate the generation that greedily collects, as well as their lineal successors that scatter abroad. Necessity draws out the latent forces, and develops will power, nerve and brain. Poverty is the grandest legacy the parent can bequeath, because money or position must be earned to be appreciated, and made subservient to the possessor. The person that devotes his or her whole time to manual toil, to the detriment of intellectual and spiritual development, makes a palpable mistake. With these and other parallel, stubborn facts before us, why will men wholly work and pray for "me and my wife, my son John and his wife, us four and no more; amen and amen?" It would surely be more wise and just, generous and tender, "to loose the bands of wickedness, to undo the heavy burdens, to let the oppressed go free, to deal thy bread to the hungry, and that thou bring the poor into thy house. When thou seest the naked to cover him." If these conditions are faithfully observed, "light," "health" and "glory" will all be forthcoming, and "then shalt thou call and the Lord will answer," thou shalt cry, and he shall say, "Here I am." We have endeavored to show that legacies bequeathed to children oftentimes render, or make them idle, effeminate, ungrateful, prodigal, vicious, and debaucherous. Why not then be open-handed in life? We can "give to the poor" and bring the Lord into the list of our debtors. We can establish and perpetuate seminaries of learning, endow charitable institutions, "cast into the treasury" of the church and build up the kingdom of God in all the world. Let me admonish some of our gray haired warriors to remember the work of God in their last will and testament. Humanitarians abound among the sects and the world's people. "The children of light" should be in the van in "every good word and work." When opportunities are neglected, they are lost; hence we can not afford to let them slip.

I believe in the nobility of labor, in both the mental and physical realm. The preacher that will not be industriously occupied, with mind or muscle, or both, should be sent adrift, afoot and alone, "with the buttered side of bread down." If evil is not rebuked, vice and virtue are brought on a level. If indolence is fostered, the hardy child of toil loses the meed of praise. We have not been writing to, or about any individual; hence if any good soul thinks I need hauling over the coals, let him please steer clear of the columns of the Herald, and write to me personally.

Better liberty in presenting the word I could scarcely ask for, but the result is hardly obvious, and your humble servant feels disconsolate and perplexed. There is almost a dead lock in the wheel of progress; but we mean to toil on, wait and pray. I am sensitive when I see swarms of the "young, the fair and the stony faced," whirl along the giddy avenues of life into premature death, and an insatiate hell. If Ingersoll and Beecher's "intellectual development" theory would only knock these sectarian pens to pieces, I would be glad. The operations of an infidel clergy; the upheavals of the priest-ridden laity, and the fiery eloquence of the liberals or skeptics, are engines of power playing upon the wavering walls of mystery Babylon. This "unclean and hateful bird" cage is to be burned, and if R. G. is to apply the lucifer, so mote it be. When the cage is "no more," perhaps we can get some of the liberated game, and cleanse them with the "washing of regeneration." Go it Bob., and knock the crazy old thing "higher than Gilderoy's kite;" and we will be out in the field and take some of the fragments on the fly. Every thing under the sun will be tested, and thoroughly tried to the core. The wood, hay, stubble, and chaff, or, in other words, the corruptible works of the world, will vanish before the winnowing, and shaking, purging, and weighing, purifying and refining ordeal of the Lord Almighty. As the scoffers multiply, and the gathering gloom lowers threateningly, let us use, in a dextrous manner, the shield of faith, and we will conquer; and thus saith,

M. T. SHORT.

We are not that we are, nor do we treat or esteem each other for such, but for that we are capable of being.

Neither worth nor wisdom comes an effort.

EVOLUTION.

THIS was the theme of the renowned Rev. Henry Ward Beecher's lecture in Oakland, September 5th. With his oratorical and philosophical proclivities, he was privileged to present to the vast audience of the intelligent, cultivated and refined of Oakland, the culmination and concentration of truths that have evolved in his richly stored and massive brain, during his long and eventful Christian life. His new revelation, or intuition, as he is pleased to term it, is in the abstract, the Darwinian theory moralized, and substituted for the Bible statement of the creating and peopling of the world. Mr. Beecher claimed for the Old Testament that it was the best thing that under the existing circumstances could be produced. But science has revealed the fact that this earth is one hundred thousand years, or more, old; and the old mythical theory of the Bible story concerning the creation of man, has been exploded. The hypothesis of evolution has already a sufficiency of material evidence for the justifying of the theory. Mr. Beecher said:

"This globe was once what the gases distribute; what nebulae are—duly fused, illy formed matter. Gradually condensed, it falls into a regular orbit, and commences at circulation. Passing through chemical changes, it becomes a solid globe. The atmospheric action upon the rocks is ground, afterwards enriched by vegetable matter, its condition is ripe for organic life. As in the vegetable so in the animal kingdom, the first germs of vegetable life are simple cells, and through the various changes of unfolding, developed vegetable life. The earliest animals were merely cells, coils, germs, slowly changing their forms; first cells, next worms, fish, birds, then the quadruped kingdom, after this bipeds. Man a modification of the anthropoid ape, by a special act of disseminating a portion of divine nature, constituting him a thinking, reasoning man."

Mr. Beecher's theory imposes upon our better judgment this difficulty. If the body of man was derived from the lowest brute, the mind must also have sprung from the same source. The experiment of learned scientists on the evolution theory, has proved that there is no such thing as spontaneous generation. If this be true, where does Mr. Beecher's theory begin, and whence comes the original germ of life. Again. There are no material facts to prove a passage from mere organism to sentient life. In Mr. Beecher's theory, the lower forms creating and developing into the higher, the lower must perish. But science tells us that there are now found all over the earth the lowest forms that ever existed in any age. All scientists have as yet failed to find any connecting link between man and the lower animals. According to the history

Resolved, That we sustain the authorities of the church by our faith and prayers.

Resolved, That we sustain W. W. Blair as of races, we are forced to the conclusion that the oldest remains discovered in the vallies of the Nile and Euphrates, in India or China, tell of advanced civilization, rather than savages. The earliest crania, as the Engis and Neandirthal skull, Huxley concedes denote no inferiority of mental capacity. Man in every stage, and in every place, gives evidence of capacity for improvement, possessing all the essentials of true humanity, as spirit, reason, and moral sense.

The true conception of progress shows us that condition of civilization is no criterion by which to measure the lapse of time, or the capabilities and powers of man as man. Civilization, which is the van of all that is of the past, and that which is particularly modern, has its source in the influence of the Spirit of the gospel.

Mr. Beecher's theory of unfolding destroys the Bible history of Christ, disregards the doctrine of the fall of man, and repudiates all revelation from God. The ordinances of the church he considers non-essential, and the whole plan of salvation as a kind of moral school. But he believes in a future of happiness, which man is destined to enjoy. But by a parity of his reasoning he can have no hope of the future, but a gradual unfolding, to a higher and better condition through countless ages. The inconsistency of the theory of man's evolving from nothing, and becoming a tower of wisdom, power, and glory, eternally, and intelligent men its advocates, is marvelous to a thinking mind.

Some of the divines of the Evangelical faith have waged a war against the Darwin Evolution theory, and claim that they have long since expunged the doctrine of there being a hell from their faith. That Beecher, a disciple of Col. R. G. Ingersoll, is not genuine orthodoxy. They are fearful of their rickety, tottering, man-made crafts, lest Beecher's lever might demolish their Christianity, and they lose their salaries.

DIED.

HEPWORTH.—Armstrong, Kansas, September 28th, 1883, Edith J., daughter of Bro. George and Sr. Elizabeth Hepworth, aged 5 years, and 7 months. Funeral services conducted by Elder J. C. Foss.

BRONSON.—Near Fillmore, Andrew County, Missouri, September 22d, 1883, Sister Amanda Bronson, in her 46th year. She united with the church and was baptized by Bro. G. E. Deuel, in 1868. Lived a faithful member until her death, when she quietly fell asleep in Jesus.

LOAR.—At Edenville, Iowa, September 9th, 1883, Parley Belle, daughter of Bro. W. S. and Sr. J. Loar, aged 5 years, 10 months and 27 days. Ah! how can we picture the faith and the trust, That held us in joyous control; Or the hopes that have faded forever to dust, The beauty that beamed from her soul. Or the love that illumined her wonderful eyes, Reluctant she faded away; Like the lingering light of the glorious skies, At close of a midsummer day. D. C. W.

DANIEL F. LAMBERT, ASSOCIATE.

Lamoni, Iowa, October 27th, 1883.

ON September 14th we mailed to the Utah Journal, a reply to the last published letter of Elder L. O. Littlefield, requesting the Journal Publishing Company to print it in that paper. The letter has been returned to us, declined, upon the ground, as stated by the Editor of the Journal, Mr. B. F. Cummings, Jr., that "sufficient of the controversy between yourself and Mr. Littlefield had been printed in the Journal, and that to continue it in our columns longer would surfeit subscribers with matter which was losing its interest to them." Mr. Cummings wishes us to believe that no disrespect to us is intended by the Journal management in declining to publish our letter.

We shall print the letter in our next issue, so that the readers of the HERALD may see what it was that would be likely to "surfeit" the subscribers of the Journal, if published in that paper.

THE WORLD MOVES.

MUCH is said now-a-days and much has been said in the late past, about breadth of platforms, and the world's moving; and the masses seem to find entire satisfaction in the belief that they stand upon broad platforms, and are moving in some direction rapidly, without inquiring whether the planks of which these platforms are composed are sound, or whether their movement is in a right or wrong direction—whether it leads to life or death.

The correct position seems to be this: Our platform should be broad, not because it comprehends any error but because it comprehends all truth. Our motion should be as rapid as is consistent with safety, provided we are first satisfied that we move in the right direction.

The world's history demonstrates the fact, that men possessing but little truth and yet desirous of sailing under a standard that should show breadth of platform, have always made up their deficiency in sound planks by the addition of unsound ones, and sometimes absolutely rotten ones; so that those who have trusted these platforms for salvation simply because they were broad, have found in the end, to their almost infinite sorrow and regret, that breadth without soundness can not save.

The present generation has two peculiarities written upon it in very bold and large letters,—great perceptive powers and small powers of generalization. The effect of these is to fill the world with a host of known facts in both science and religion, but to furnish no mind capable of organizing them into the grand army of truth, that shall march to certain and glorious conquest. Some superficial investigators, so soon as they have gone far enough to know that the world is possessed of an abundance of facts, with a satisfied air cease to enquire further, and seek to stop further inquiry and objections to their positions by answering with a knowing toss of the head, "The world moves," forgetful of the great and serious question before alluded to, Does it move in the right direction? This answer sets in a strong light the vanity of those who pretend to great knowledge; for of what use is it to him who desires to reach a certain port to know that his vessel moves, without further knowing in which direction it moves, and that said direction is the right one. The great cry that has saluted our ears for so many years, that the world moves, and that the platforms upon which social, political and religious organizations stand are broad, can serve but one useful purpose; viz: to start inquiry as to the direction in which progress is made, and as to the soundness of the planks of which these platforms are composed.

We hold that there must be somewhere an unchanging, basic principle of truth, else there can be no real progress. Suppose a company of men set about to erect the Temple of Truth, and succeed in their generation in only laying the foundation stones. Another company in the next generation, discovering what seem to them imperfections in the work of their predecessors, tear it down, and having less time than their predecessors to build up because of the additional labor of tearing down, they of course leave the building less advanced than the former workmen. Will some wise advocate of the "world moves" theory, please tell us how long it will take at this rate to push to its glorious completion the Temple of Truth?

The mistake in this cry about progression seems to be this: The discarding of one principle, and the acceptance of another, is regarded as progression, without ascertaining whether the principle discarded is of more or less value than the principle accepted. This is change, but not always progression.

The only wholesome change is from that which is imperfect toward that which is perfect; hence all things subject to this change are more or less imperfect and erroneous, and therefore could not have been adopted by a perfect God to the perfect salvation of man. The sum of this reasoning is that if all the principles of revealed religion, and science, are liable to be supplanted by others of a different and contradictory character, then none of them are from God; for if they were, they would not be liable to the charge of imperfection, and if not liable to that charge, then certainly not susceptible to change.

If no basic, unchanging principle can be found on which to build, then the world instead of progressing, travels in a circle, each succeeding generation first tearing down and then doing over the work of the preceding one.

To show that much of what man does is imperfect, and hence that there is great necessity for change, is to prove nothing in this controversy; for the claim made is that God, not man, is perfect, and that God's principles, not man's, are perfect also. When we acknowledge the perfection of God, and hence the perfection of his laws, how strange and contradictory to still hold that a change may make them still more perfect. When we acknowledge that the highest peak of the earth's mountain ranges has been reached, what folly to claim that by leaping into the air we may reach a higher. To argue as these advocates of change from that which is perfect to that which is more perfect do, is to destroy all connection between thought and our means of expressing it, and to set us adrift upon a shoreless sea, without vessel identity, without personal identity, without the identity of the world, the universe, or the God of the universe.

If there is no standard of perfection, there can be no progression toward perfection; for how can we go toward that which is not. If there is a standard of perfection, then there is nothing impossible, nothing improbable in the belief that it has been, somehow and somewhere, revealed to the world. Let investigation determine these questions, without being wheedled into the deceptive belief of security, by the idle cry, "The world moves."

BRO. W. W. BLAIR sends us the following for the Herald. It is apt and in time.

WHAT SHALL THE BOYS DO?

Parents are continually confronted with this question. Many parents answer it wrongly. The father desires that his sons shall not undergo the toil and self-denial that he has undergone, forgetting, or perhaps not realizing in any proper sense, that it was that toil and that self-denial that made him the man he is. The mother has her foolish notions about the respectability of certain grades of employment which enabled those following them to wear good clothes and exhibit a few of the superficial evidences of refinement and culture. The boy, with his inexperience and inability to look below the surface of things, is easily led to follow the well intended but foolish judgment of his parents, and commence life by swelling the list of bookkeepers without a ledger, doctors without patients, lawyers without clients and genteel clerks without employment.

The first thing the parent or teacher should do is to study carefully the boy's aptitudes. Having done this, he should be taught that any kind of honest labor is honorable and that what he could do best should be his calling, no matter whether it is to make shoes or carriages, to raise cattle or butcher them. Many a boy who might in time become a good farmer, owning a farm and home of his own, becomes an indifferent hand-to-mouth salesman in a store at a salary that will only barely keep soul and body together and provide no accumulations for sickness and age. Many a boy who, by learning the machinists' trade, could some day be at the head of a great manufactory, remains in obscurity and poverty because his parents thought the profession of bookkeeper would be more genteel.

A little study of the advertising columns in a great daily journal, or an inquiry among the leading business men of any thriving town, would cause a revelation that should serve to deter parents from making semidudes of their sons by crowding the already overcrowded positions of clerk and bookkeeper with them. In the city of New York there are at the present time 5,000 bookkeepers out of employment, and of the 25,000 who have more or less steady employment in that calling in that city very few receive $25 per week, while a far greater number are glad to accept $10 or $15. A business man of the city lately advertised for a clerk at $10 a week and had seven hundred applicants for the place. In view of these facts the parents of boys should urge them to learn trades, to go into the shops or on the farm, anywhere where honest work is to be done, and to avoid as they would the pestilence the semi-genteel callings, which are so overcrowded that the majority who are dependent on them have no hope of more than the bare subsistence while they remain in them.

Correspondence.

KEOKUK, Iowa,

October 2d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Bro. Wm. B. Smith and I remained at Montrose after you left, until Wednesday and baptized two more, making five altogether. Left there, came to Keokuk, held two meetings, then went to Farmington, held four meetings, and left a good impression there. Then came home to Keokuk, held five meetings, had a good time, got the saints wakened up, and had the best meetings we have had for a long time. Good feeling prevails in Keokuk. Three united with the branch, and think more will come in soon. This branch is in good condition at present. We have given our meeting house a new coat of paint, (white) with green blinds, and the little church looks fine, and the saints are enjoying the Spirit; and we have a good turnout. I am satisfied that the Lord helps them that help themselves.

Bro. Wm. B. Smith left for home last week, thinks of coming back this winter, and I hope he will, for he left a good impression in this branch, and at Farmington.

Bro. O. P. Dunham is still with us in Keokuk, doing some excellent fireside preaching, bringing about a good feeling among the saints.

Still remaining your Brother,

B. F. DURFEE.

KEELER, Mich., Oct. 9th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—I should like to hear from some of the brethren, through the Herald, on the parable of the unjust steward, in Luke 16, and especially the eighth and ninth verses. The ninth is a source of wonderment to me. My husband, daughter, and myself, are the only Saints here, where we are almost completely ostracised from society on account of our faith. We go six miles to Hartford to meeting every Sunday, the weather permitting. We have had a great many evidences of the healing power of the Lord in our family since we came into the Church, four years ago. I know this work is of the Lord. I know if we are faithful the Lord will verify his promises to us. I have been very much interested in the letters written by Bro. Joseph and L. O. Littlefield. I think Bro. Joseph is breaking down his strongholds.

Your sister in the one faith,

ANNA ROBERTSON.

MONSERRAT, Missouri,

October 11th, 1883.

Dear Brother Joseph:—The two days' meeting is over at this place. Brethren E. Curtis, J. Brackenbury, with myself spoke during the two days' meeting. Brother Curtis left us on Monday for home. Brother Brackenbury and myself have been speaking every evening so far this week, to attentive listeners. On Tuesday, the 9th, I baptized two, the wife of Brother Josiah. M. Curtis, she was a member of the Presbyterian Church; also George H. Harris, who was one of the roughest men of the place, so he told me; and at the close of Wednesday evening's meeting his old company tried to convert him back to the old habit in presenting him with a bottle of whisky; but like a man of God he said, "Boys, I know I've been with you, and done bad, but I've turned from that, and I don't want you to tempt me any more in giving me a bottle of whisky; for I'll never drink any more. I hope God will forgive you." The outsiders here say to Bro. Harris, "We're glad, George, you've taken the step you have." This must be good news to his brother who belongs to our Church in Tennessee. His wife will obey, no doubt. His boy fifteen years of age, is rejoicing over the steps his father has taken. Several are near the kingdom. Brother J. Curtis, president of the branch, with all the members, are feeling well; and I must say there is a good class of people here, in and out of the Church.

We leave for home to-day, to attend conference, and expect to visit this place soon again, and keep the camp fires blazing. I have more calls than I am able to fill.

Yours truly,

J. C. FOSS.

BLENHEIM, Ont.,

October 9th, 1883.

Dear Brother:—Some circumstances have prevented me from doing as much as I had anticipated doing when I left the Spring Conference. My health is usually good, and my desire for the spread of the gospel is not less, and my faith in its truthfulness seems fixed upon the rock, and grows stronger every day. As the different testimonies occur, in earthquakes and storms and tempests, and the other calamities that are daily transpiring, which were to follow the testimonies of the Lord's servants, but who received them as signs of the last days, "or the hour of God's judgment;" and I fear the saints don't regard them with that degree of interest and confidence, to arouse them to duty, that they may have oil in their lamps, and be ready to enter into the marriage supper.

There are no very serious troubles with the saints in this mission; but a drowsy, sleepy, careless indifference seems to lie upon them. But what can I do more than to preach the word, and cry repentance unto them. The work of the last days is God's work, and he will bring it to its ultimate triumph in his own way, and use the varied means and ways to bring it about in accordance with his purposes.

The conference at this place has just closed. We had a peaceful time. The preaching was in plainness, and in demonstration of the Spirit, and the saints have returned to their homes with renewed faith. Bro. Gurley is with me; expects to go with me to the Usborne Conference, on the 13th and 14th inst. Then we expect to labor for a while at Petrolia, and then he will return to his home. Bro. Deuel has not put in an appearance, and I presume he won't; he has not notified me. My missionary help has been very limited. The local laborers have helped some.

Was pleased to hear of the pleasant time at the Reunion Meeting. Hope they may be continued to the good of the saints and the glory of God. I think we might have some in the East. I hope Bro. W. H. Kelley will have one in Michigan. I think the Canada saints would be glad to unite with them in a union meeting.

I think that in your answers to Mr. Littlefield, you kept your feet on the rock. I have no fears so long as you shall remain there. His last letter is weak, where he has to resort to the idea that there are two laws for polygamy. I think it is far-fetched, and that he is out of argument. He has to multiply laws, as no doubt he would like to multiply wives unto himself. Their own sword will cut their heads off.

Joseph, use the pure stone, rock, word of God, and they must fall before it; and the sword, the word of the Lord, which they have had in their possession, must and will behead them. God speed the time. Shall try and do the best I can for the spread of the truth.

From your brother in the bonds of peace,

J. H. LAKE.

BLUE RAPIDS, Marshall Co., Kansas,
September 20th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—The last effort of L. O. Littlefield, of Utah, to fasten upon Joseph Smith the stigma of polluting the gospel of Christ, by introducing therewith the monstrous doctrine of polygamy, made me resolve to give to Israel everywhere a brief testimony of the reasons I have for faith in the Church, restored to that which is reasonable, respectable, pure and law-abiding. It seemed to me it would do no harm now, to set forth some things that at other times would be almost unlawful for man to speak. I will assure all who may take notice of this letter, that though I am a comparative stranger to many in the Church, yet I have been constantly working in and for a district of the Church ever since its erection as such, five years, since, in nearly every position of trust in the gift of my brethren, of said district. And now I wish to answer the question why I have thus worked, through trials, and sorrows, and sacrifices, which are unnecessary to state, but which must be evident to all must be made by a young man, in thus disinterestedly laboring for the prosperity of an apparently unfortunate and disgraced church and cause.

A few years since a member of our Church in high standing, alluded to certain names in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, which are there applied as being given by God to certain ones on earth, as fictitious names. The names thus alluded to seem to be of Hebraic origin. About three years since my own mother was alluded to, to me while impressed in the night by the spirit of God, by a name in the Hebrew language signifying a plant, or a plant of renown, and a short time after this I was warned in a dream or vision of being about to pull up a plant, at which time I was about to receive a deed to a large portion of my mother's estate. Remembering what I had been shown in the above in the above manner, the deed after being made out was left in my mother's possession to destroy if she wished to do so, until her death, and thus saved her from some uneasiness and trouble at least in her last years. Again, while receiving a premonition, as I believe, of the ruin and downfall of a certain branch of the Church, I was shown plainly printed across its pulpit desk the word, "Ichabod." Having to consult a dictionary to ascertain the meaning of this word, I found this also to be of Hebraic origin, signifying "the glory has departed." These two occurrences give me faith that those in the revelations of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants are by no means fictitious. I should probably have not alluded to the above, however, but for the reason that I may see around me less respect for some things contained in that book than there is elsewhere in the Church. The interpretation given, the first time I ever heard speaking in an unknown tongue in this country, was to the effect that, among other things which have since occurred, there would be many souls saved in the kingdom of God in the vicinity where I then resided, Clay county, Kansas. That tongue and its interpretation were declared to be true, to the writer of this letter by an audible voice from the heavens. The Goshen Branch of the Reorganized Church now flourishes there, having members in it following the different occupations and professions, some of whom have been elected to the highest positions of trust in that county. The Clay County Dispatch, the official paper of that county, in referring to the converts being made to the Church there, said: "If all the Latter Day Saints were as upright citizens as those who are joining the Church here, we should think one man's religion just as good as another, if not a little better." Let any one, whether he be in Utah sacrificing his efforts there to a cause which has been and is continually shadowed by the monstrous incubus of polygamy, whose ruin must eventually be wrought by it, or in the labyrinths of the world-wide darkness of Babylon, consider the above circumstance of evidence. An Elder of the Church of Christ, that church which this testimony is designed to aid, boldly prophesying in interpretation of an unknown tongue, that a great work of salvation would there be accomplished, all of which was declared to be true, in the ears of mortal man, by the same heavenly voice which was audibly heard by Saint Paul, which converted him to the faith of Christ; or if not the same voice, we know what we have above stated to be true, and that it occurred in the month of April, 1877. Does not the Bible in the twelfth chapter of first Corinthians, plainly state that prophets and the gift of prophecy and of tongues are some of the constituent elements of the Church of Christ, and having the above things so given to me and which I now testify of to all, is there left any room to doubt the conclusion that "the kingdom of God has come unto us."

When the Committee on Removal were engaged in selecting the present site of Lamoni for the headquarters of the Church, I received a testimony to which I will invite your attention, and then conclude. I seemed to be suddenly transported to the slope of a high range of mountains, which was covered with snow and ice. It seemed to be away to the north, an impression which would naturally arise by seeing snow as far as I could see around me. I was looking up toward the summit, when I saw, apparently, the first ones of a large company of people pressing toward me, and toward the south or east. The scene then suddenly changed, and I saw these same people coming through and almost filling the country round me, and pressing toward one common destination, and that was in the southern part of the State of Iowa. It was perfectly apparent to me that they were entering an inclosure through a gate, or door, which I could plainly see, and that was in Southern Iowa. I then went over near the place of entrance, and looked in and there I saw ranged in regular order this same company. The men seated by themselves looked the most patriarchal of any I ever saw. I doubt that the tribe of Levi could have furnished a more imposing and God-like company of men. In passing away, I saw at one side, separated from this company, it seemed, as they passed in the entrance, a large number of goats, very repulsive in their appearance, and their actions impressing me with one thing,—immorality.

These things have given me hope and faith, that the Church restored to its former trustworthy foundation, would succeed and yet be an asylum of safety to scattered and forsaken Israel, either from the north or west, and that it is in very truth the kingdom of God spoken of in the Book of Daniel, to be set up in the last days.

Let us also be faithful to the few things contained in our books, which may seem peculiar to some. If any should doubt the above testimony, I will establish my responsibility in testifying of them by furnishing certificates of appointment and election to various public positions of trust filled while receiving them, as well as recommendations in black and white as to my ability and character as a citizen and a neighbor. May God help us to always feel the sentiment that was inscribed on the banners of one of the crusades against the polygamic Mohammedans, who held possession of the holy city of Jerusalem, "Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thee be all the glory."

Your brother in faith and hope,

MAHLON SMITH.

LAMONI, Iowa, October 15th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph.—I thank you for your editorial advising moneyed men to associate their strength financially, so as to aid those wishing to gather into the "regions round about." I am ready to put in all my money and time and labor for such a work, if it can be gotten to work right away, and that the blessings of the Lord may be retained for his own work. Let me ask the brethren and sisters to reserve all their life and fire insurance money for this purpose. Let us remember that we are but stewards holding the blessings of the Lord in our hands, whatever it may be; and in this association, let us have a system of helping one another in times of loss. If we expect the Lord will use us in building a place of refuge that will stand the test of this increasing storm, we must be willing to spend our time and means for his work.

I would also say a word to the brethren that have advocated the common stock plan in the past. Let us do the best we can for the present to increase our light, and then let our steps be firm and steady in its brightness. Please let us hear from you on this matter through the Herald.

Yours in prayer for Zion's good,

M. N. COLE.

FONDA, Iowa, October 10th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph.—I have just returned from Portlandville, where I was called by two letters from Sister Christy, to come and administer to her, having been sick for nearly two years, and having lost all faith in the science of man, concluded to call on the higher power. I was to have been there on last Friday night, but got there on Thursday evening. I found her suffering intense pain in her head and right eye. I complied with James' instruction, and the next morning I found her up and at work, and Saturday evening rode four miles to town, and attended meeting, presided over by me. The Baptists of that place tendered the use of their neat little church for that purpose. They also did the singing, accompanied by the organ. I preached three discourses the best I could. Portlandville I learn has heretofore been ably represented by Brn. Lambert, Derry and Longbottom; and I felt rather skittish in opening my battery of small caliber on the same field. But I was urgently requested to come again.

I left Sister Christy feeling quite smart; I also found a Sister Smith there at my meetings, whose health is quite poor. My health has been poor for months.

With love to all the faithful, I am as ever,
Truly,

E. C. BROWN.

ELKADER, Iowa, October 7th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph.—Engaged as I am in a warfare against spiritual wickedness in high places, I need some of the weapons to fight with. The weapons I speak of are spiritual, not carnal, but "mighty through God, in putting down the strongholds of Satan." This weapon of warfare all Saints are entitled to enjoy, when they have their faith truly established in the gospel of Christ, which bringeth great blessings of joy and peace to the souls of all who are his faithful followers and believers in him who is not only able but willing to give good gifts unto all his children who diligently ask and seek after them. Such blessings come in the order of the promises and teachings of Christ to his Apostles, "ask and ye shall receive, seek and ye shall find." I am decidedly of the opinion, that if these rules advised by the Savior were more generally applied by persons doubting the divinity of Christ and of his written word, there would be less unbelief and fewer infidels in the world. The weakness of man is shown in the fact that "men love darkness rather than light, because their deeds are evil." The proof of Christ's words is to be realized by the application which is made of them; and if men become too proud to humble themselves and thus despise the injunction, "Ask and ye shall receive," nothing else could be expected but ignorance and unbelief, and consequently infidelity become the ruling sin of the world. This condition of things in the present age is remarkably lamentable, as this spirit of unbelief is stultifying the moral perceptibilities of the human heart, and with its criminal tendencies leading thousands of its votaries into the goal of sins, misery, debauchery and ruin. And it must be evident in looking at this state of things, that if God ever, in any age of the world, revealed himself to man to correct the sins of earth, the present state of things would seem to demand the attention of some divine power, to be set on foot to turn away the current of sin and evil that is sweeping like a mighty avalanche throughout this broad earth. And while men are teaching for doctrine the commandments of men, the sin of unbelief in the divine mission of Christ still remains unchecked.

It is no marvel then, that this Book of Mormon revelation, and the appointment God made in the mission of Joseph Smith as a prophet of God, have made their appearance in due time, to set the world thinking upon some of these strange things. The reason why the unbelieving world does not obtain the knowledge of God is, they do not ask for, nor do they seek to find it.

W. B. SMITH.

STARKVILLE, Colorado,

September 20th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph.—I have lived here about two years and a half. This is a coal mining town, belonging to the Carbon Coal and Coaking Company, made up of all classes of men, from almost all countries. When I first came here it was the worst place I ever saw. It seems that wherever I go, it is proclaimed before, or by the time I get there, that I am a Mormon Preacher; but here they had me reported to have seven wives. I had accepted the name of preacher, and of course could not be idle. I labored until I had a Sunday School, and I did some preaching, handed around tracts, Heralds, Hopes, the Life of Joseph, and some one has had them continually ever since. But when I was almost discouraged, brother James Caffall came, and labored here and vicinity some five or six weeks, and this was a great blessing to me, if not to the people. I am still living in hopes that the seed sown will yet bring forth fruit. If the Lord permits, I shall hold meetings again the first Lord's day in October. I expect brother James Kemp here on or before October 15th, and then we shall try and make the mountains ring again with the gospel trump. You may know something of my feelings, when I say that Bro. Caffall is the only Saint that I have seen since I have been in Colorado, and I thank the Lord that I have seen and known him. I ask an interest in the prayers of all the saints, that I may always be found in the Master's work. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion.
Your brother in Christ,

J. W. KENT.

GRAND MANAN, N. B.,

September 25th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph.—It is with pleasure I undertake to inform you of the success of our late conference held at Addison Point. The foundation for it was laid on the previous Thursday evening, by Bro. E. L. Kelley, at Jonesport, by the preaching of a very interesting and instructive sermon. On the following Saturday, p. m., met with the brethren at Addison for conference. Brn. Kelley and Sheehy were invited to take part with us, which they did; and the success of our conference was mainly attributable to their wise counsel. On Saturday evening we met a large congregation in Addison Point, and listened to a very interesting discourse by Bro. Kelley. On Sunday evening in same place, had the pleasure of listening to a very interesting and instructive discourse on finance by Bro. Kelley. Congregation very large and interested, and subject, so far as I have heard, entirely satisfactory. I hope that the impression may not be spasmodic, but may be followed with substantial results. Bro. Sheehy occupied the stand in the afternoon and with good liberty. Preaching again in the evening, with large attendance, and unabated interest. From what I can learn, the people in this district are becoming interested.

I have no fears or doubts as to the ultimate results, if wise counsel prevails; otherwise, ruin and disgrace. If we have any doubt as to what will be the effect produced by certain causes, we have only to call to mind the past, and as surely as "like begets like," so will be the result. "God is not mocked." I feel that the time is near when "two or three" will be agreed. Seemingly much precious time has been lost, because of misunderstanding. It is time we learned that God can not and will not bless our efforts if put forth in unrighteousness. I believe the time is near when the latter day work in this district will occupy a position before the world never before enjoyed by us. We want men approved of God; and when such men rule and direct according to the "law of the Lord," the people will cease to mourn.

So far as I know and have heard, the Elders sent into this district thus far have given entire satisfaction; and, as was recently said of them, "They are the right men in the right place." I understand that Bro. Gurley is coming into this district. We shall be pleased to meet him, and will do all we can to make his visit pleasant.

Yours in bonds,

JOS. LAKEMAN.

Summary of News.

Oct. 11th.—The revised estimates of the French budget are said to show a deficit of 55,000,000 francs, which the Minister of Finance proposes to cover by a reduction of the Governmental expenses.

It is reported that the Black Flags have quarreled with their allies, the Chinese regulars.

A Chilian force of 280 men surprised a band of Monteneros near Frias, South America, killing 150 men and capturing eighty horses. The Chilians suffered no loss.

Rebel bands entered the city of Port Au Prince, West Indies, pillaged the stores, set fire to the houses, and murdered all those resisting. Among the killed were two generals. The troops finally dispersed the rebels.

The accounts which are given of the Caspian oil district will abash even the most sanguine speculators in Western Pennsylvania. Mr. Marvin writes from Baku to the Morning Post, London, that he has witnessed the tapping of the 375th well, and that oil is spurting from it to the height of 300 feet and flowing at the rate of 2,000,000 gallons a day.

Twelve hundred Chinese left San Francisco yesterday for home. Nine hundred of them provided themselves with return certificates.

The deposits in the savings-banks of California the 1st of July last were $56,507,163, an increase of more than $3,000,000 within a year. The number of depositors Jan. 1st was 74,250, about one in twelve of the population.

Nearly half a million bushels of grain were taken out by the lake vessels to-day.

Off New York two small vessels collided, resulting in the sinking of one, and the sending of the other back to port for repairs.

Oct. 12.—A Roman Duke promises to the Pope 60,000 Catholics who "will strike" for the restoration of his temporal power. Spanish Politicians are busy constructing a new Cabinet.

A French transport has started for Tonquin with 790 men and a quantity of war material. Further fighting is thought to be necessary before Tonquin can be considered conquered by the French. The Yellow Flags are reported disbanded.

Two shocks of earthquake occurred at Agram and Zagorie, Hungary, Thursday evening.

The Village of Laestrella, Province of Tereul, Spain, is inundated. Sixteen houses are destroyed and over forty lives lost.

All the 3½ per cent bonds have not been sent in to be paid off, though, they have all been called. But revenue is pouring so fast into the National strong-box that secretary Folger announces that he will have to begin at once to pay off the 3s. A Washington dispatch states that it is not expected at the Treasury Department that the calls of 3s will disturb the National banks very much, as only a few of these bonds are held as security for circulation. It is on that account that the Bankers' Convention devoted so much of its deliberations to the question of how to prevent the contraction of circulation that was following the redemption of the bonds. At the date of the last report by the Controller of the Currency just one-half of the bank circulation was based on the 3s. The banks, the dispatch said, held $33,000,000 of 4½s, nearly $105,000,000 of 4s, $40,000,000 of 3½s, and $179,000,000 of 3s. All the 3½s have since been called, and the Secretary of the Treasury is about to begin the retirement of the 3s. As these are called the banks must either give up their circulation or must buy the 4s or 4½s at a high premium.

At Dubois, Pa., near Bradford, the Rochester & Pittsburg Railroad Company has a strike of miners on its hands which has reduced its shipments of soft coal from 300 cars a day to nothing. The strikers, through the use of brass bands and other terrifying devices, have bulldozed the whole region. Yesterday a special train with twenty-four formidable detectives arrived at Bradford and were taken to the theatre of disturbance.

A mining company was formed in millwaukee with a capital of $6,000,000.

Oct. 14th.—Placards have been posted throughout the Island of Hainan, off the Chinese coast, threatening Mandarins and foreigners. Serious rioting has broken out.

The suspension of negotiations between France and China is complete. The Government at Peking have instructed Tseng to hold aloof until the French Ministry is more consolidated. Their policy is to keep matters in statu quo until the Chambers meet under the impression that the determination of the Deputies to cut down all foreign expenses will make it much easier for the Chinese to negotiate. Meantime Challemlacour has instructed M. Patenotre, the new Envoy to China, to hasten his departure and to resume negotiations at Peking, where the Chinese Government is absolutely refusing to carry on any further negotiations with M. Tricon.

Franco Chinese merchants assert that France has only two courses to fall back on—the Bource treaty or to prepare to march on Peking.

A riot occurred at Foo Chow, China, owing to the French Consul's having objected to the burial in ground adjoining the foreign concession of a Chinaman who died from cholera. The temper of the Chinese at all treaty ports is dangerous.

The new Spanish Cabinet has been sworn in.

The revolution in Hayti West Indies, has reached an acute crisis. The City of Port au Prince, in that island, has been destroyed by fire, the work of sympathizers with revolutionists. The city is in the hands of a pillaging mob, and is being shelled by Government ships in the harbor. The foreign residents are in peril. Five gunboats belonging to European Governments are now in the harbor.

The majority against the prohibitory amendment in the Ohio election of Tuesday was 70,783.

Oct. 15.—Irving Bishop, the London mind-reader, who was bitterly attacked by Labouchere not long ago, failed four times in succession last Saturday night to give the number of a bank-note, and afterward fainted. He has since been dangerously ill of congestion of the brain.

The British Minister, Shaw, will receive an indemnity of 60,000 francs for the losses sustained by him at the hands of the French in Madagascar.

A farmer named Spence, living near Cork, Ireland, was attacked and murdered with pitch-forks. Ten persons are arrested.

The Black flags are massing at Bacninh. A fight is expected when the French reinforcements arrive.

There was a fierce gale on the coast of England to-day. Two of her Majesty's training brigs were driven into collision and subsequently went ashore near Plymouth where they remain in a dangerous position. Assistance has been sent them.

The new steamer Euripides, Capt. Herd, from New Orleans Sept. 17, via Falmouth for Elsinore, is ashore at Hjelmen. Assistance has been sent.

The training brigs which collided and subsequently went ashore near Plymouth in the gale yesterday are both safe.

The brother of Zlatpoliski, the Nihilist leader, in Russia, has been arrested.

A strong shock of earthquake, lasting eight to ten seconds, was felt on the Island of Chios yesterday. Several houses were destroyed and some persons injured. A shock was also felt at Syra and Smyrna. There was much damage and loss of life at Aivoli.

Dr. Koch, of the German commission which went to Egypt to investigate the cholera epidemic, reports that he has discovered that cholera is due to a living, threadlike microscopic organism, resembling that seen in cases of phthisis.

The Supreme Court of the United States decided unconstitutional the first and second sections of the act of congress known as the Civil Rights law of 1875. Cases were brought under the law to the highest legal tribunal from the States of Kansas, California, Missouri, New York, and Tennessee, and had been under consideration for a year. The complainants were colored men, and had been denied their rights as the law defined them in hotels, railroad-cars, restaurants, theatres, etc. The Supreme Court holds (Mr. Justice Bradley writing the opinion and Mr. Justice Harlan only dissenting) that Congress had no constitutional authority to pass the above sections under either the Thirteenth or Fourteenth Amendments. The Fourteenth Amendment is Prohibitory upon the states only—that is, it declares what the States shall not do, and does not allow Congress to sit as a State Legislature in those matters, passing original laws, but simply directs Congress to make corrective acts—to undo the effects of State laws, when they are repugnant to the spirit of the amendment. Thirteenth Amendment related only to slavery. As to the Territories and the District of Columbia, the Supreme Court holds the Legislative power of Congress in the premises is unlimited.

At length the business of the country, as reflected in the clearings, shows a genuine improvement, the large sum of $1,107,071,622 being given as last week's total for the country. Not many weeks ago the total was $400,000,000 less. It cannot be truly said that times are getting hard when eleven hundred millions in checks have gone through the clearing-houses in six business days of one week.

In 1866 the surplus of National revenues over expenditures was $37,000,000; in 1874 it was only $2,000,000; in 1881 it was over $100,000,000; in 1882 over $145,000,000; and in 1883 it was $133,000,000.

The blue laws of Connecticut were yesterday enforced at East Haven, where fourteen persons were fined $4 and costs for riding in a public highway Sunday.

Zembrona & Co., of Monterey, Mex., have failed, Liabilities, $800,000. Hyamas Brothers, of New York and San Francisco failed for $156,000.

Oct. 16th.—Messrs. Moody and Sankey opened their Gospel labors at Cork to-day. The doors were besieged by a mob, who derided those who entered the building. Policemen dispersed the rioters.

An outbreak of trichiniasis is reported in Ermleben, Prussian Saxony. One hundred and eighty persons are suffering. Four deaths have occurred. Four hundred persons are prostrated by trichiniasis in ten villages in Saxony. Sixty sufferers are in a hopeless condition. Deaths from the disease are occurring daily.

Prime-Minister Ferry, in a speech at Havre, foreshadowed the withdrawal of the present embargo upon the importation of American bacon.

The remnant of King Cetewayo's party having assembled with the intention of rescuing Cetewayo from the Inkankla Bush, where he has been in hiding, Chief Usibepu, whose forces have been watching the borders of the reserve near Babango, surprised them and slaughtered one-half their number. Cetewayo has surrendered to the British President, and will be conveyed to Natal.

It is said the French Government has resolved to act energetically against all agitators. The manager of the Drapeau Noir, an anarchist journal at Lyons, has been arrested, and other arrests of proprietors are expected.

The trial of eighteen Socialists on the charge of high treason has begun at Olmutz, Moravia.

A foreign Socialist, with a forged passport, has been arrested at Reval.

A sanguinary affray occurred yesterday at Mivava, Upper Hungary, between Slavs and Magyars. The troops were compelled to fire upon the rioters, and order was restored with much difficulty.

The English Society for Promoting State-Aided Emigration will inquire into the condition of the working classes in the East End of London, with the view of ascertaining how many persons may feel inclined to emigrate to North-western Canada. The results of the inquiry will be furnished the Government.

The strike of switchmen continues at St. Louis,

The yards of the railways centering at East St. Louis are full of cars, loaded and empty, creating a great freight blockade.

Pinkerton police in uniform patrol the mine works of the Rochester and Pittsburg mining companies at Beech Tree and Punxutawny, Pa., and the mines were working a full complement of men. Low grade miners between Dubois and Pittsburg are weakening, and it is thought the strike will soon be over. At Reynoldsville both sides are firm, and things look blue.

To-day's proceedings of the Illinois Presbyterian Synod, at Alton, Illinois, were of a missionary character, following the missionary sermon delivered by the Rev. H. H. Jessup, D. D., last night. About 125 delegates and nearly as many ladies from various points were present at the opening exercises in Presbyterian Church at nine o'clock. The church was decorated with flowers and plants, and a large and beautiful missionary map was stretched across the church just back of the pulpit.

The Episcopalians in their convention at Philadelphia Pennsylvania had a wrestle with each other to amend the Nicene Creed to suit certain liberal members of the ministry. The result is given below in a clipping from the report in the daily newspaper.

S. Corning Judd, of Chicago, found fault with the Nicene Creed. He said it was not the Nicene Creed. It had been altered in several places at the Council of Toledo 1,400 years ago. He did not want the work of two ecumenical councils meddled with, and this would be done if it was called the Nicene creed. He closed his remarks with a passionate burst: "I would rather obey God than man, and the universal church than one part of it. Leave it as it was in the old prayer-book. I will never repeat the felique."

Dr. Huntington said he was astonished at the gentleman's remarks, for the committee had fixed the rubric to suit Mr. Judd and his friends by putting in the expression, "Commonly so called."

"They are commonly so called only in the Angelican and Roman Catholic churches, and nowhere else in the world," hotly answered Mr. Judd.

A ripple of laughter was raised when the ever serene Secretary sweetly responded: "I believe that those are the communions with which we are the most familiar," and sat down.

Mr. Judd's proposition was voted down,

William H. Maffet, clerical deputy from Northern New Jersey, moved that the words "and; any churches may omit the words, 'He descended into Hell,' etc., to the end of the rubric, be struck out, and that there be a marginal note stating that "He went into the place of departed spirits" would be an equivalent expression.

Dr. Adams, a fiery low-church clergyman, at once objected to this omission as a tendency to make doctrinal changes. Dr. Fulton, of Missouri, claimed that the expression "He descended into Hell" was a condition under which the episcopate was founded by the English church in 786.

The amendment of the Rev. Mr. Moffet was voted down by a vote of 93 to 128.

Dr. Wakefield, of Indiana, wanted Hades instead of Hell, but found no supporters.

The Rev. Dr. James Rankine, of Western New York, moved that the word "and" be substituted for "or" in the rubric under discussion so that it would read: "Any churches may omit the words: 'He descended into Hell,' and may, instead of them, use the word 'etc.'" This would not allow the person to leave out either or both of the expressions as is now done under the present reading. The amendment was lost."

The Supreme Court of Massachusetts has sustained the decision of the Superior Court at Pittsfield that a common victualer at Great Barrington, licensed to sell liquor, was guilty of keeping a public bar. Under this decision and the understanding of the law it is alleged that the public bar of nearly every hotel in Massachusetts can be closed.

Two thieves shot each other to death in a New York saloon, at two this morning. Their names were John Walsh and John Irving.

A new cable company to lay ocean cables between America and England has been formed in New York.

There will be a small working Republican majority in the general assembly of Iowa this winter. A late telegram from Des Moines to the associated Press states. The outlook now is that a statute will not be passed, but that the halting members who got through by narrow majorities, and they are quite numerous, will take refuge in submission, and again formulate an amendment for ratification at the polls. This will be a shifting of the burden upon the shoulders of the people. Meanwhile the saloon interests in such cities as Des Moines and Ottumwa are crying for prohibition. They claim that the high license resorted to by several Iowa cities will certainly exterminate them. They know that in such cities under prohibition the power to tax them is taken away, and that the sale of liquor will be forever restrained. Here in Des Moines the Saloonkeepers were scarcely visible on election-day. Generally they are to be seen at the polls, and are interested workers. Their absence being unusual, inquiry among them elicited the universal answer that for them prohibition is preferable to the $1,000 license. The enactment of something like the Nebraska law by the forthcoming Assembly would be the triumph of the best moral forces of the State.

The address to the colored people adopted by the colored men in council at Springfield, Illinois, contains the following: "Individually we are weak, and pecuniarily we are poor, but by co-operation—by a joint union of effort and operation—we will be enabled to overcome the effects resulting from our weakness and poverty. We therefore urge upon our people the formation of cooperative organizations embracing every branch of legitimate business, and thereby concentrate our scanty earnings and combine our influence to the end that we may eventually take our rank and station among the nations of the earth."

Quassia chips are now used in the manufacture of lager beer in the place of hops; what next.

Lumber operators have entered into a coalition to curtail the production of that useful material. Half crews will be sent into the pineries. Higher prices will prevail as the result.

The latest issue of the "Blue Book," which gives the salaries of all Government officials, shows that there were in the year prior to its issue forty-seven Postmasters in the country whose salaries for the entire year were less than $1 each; eleven who received less than 25 cents for their year's work; and that Postmaster Sloan, of Perilla Post-Office, White county, Tenn., actually received the munificent salary of five cents for his entire year's labor in behalf of the community and the Post-Office Department.

Agriculture does not pay in England as it used to do, and the landlords are the sufferers. Lady Willoughby D'Evesby has seven farms of 2,500 acres on her hands in Lincolnshire. She loses probably $15,000 a year by this. A Rutlandshire landlord has an equal quantity of land untenanted.

Jacob Nelling has confessed to the killing of Ada Atkinson; but says he does not know why he did it. It is rumored that he will be lynched.

Zora Burns was murdered at Lincoln, Illinois. No traces of her murderer have yet been obtained.

Oct. 17th.—Thirty thousand miners at Wigan, Eng., have demanded an immediate increase of wages.

It is reported from Constantinople that 1,000 lives have recently been lost in earthquakes on the western coast of Asia Minor. The survivors are in a dreadful plight. Most of the houses collapsed at the first shock, burying their inmates. The people who escaped became panic-stricken, and sought the fields, where many are still huddled together in a starving condition and suffering from cold. Help for the stricken people is going forward from Smyrna. The Porte has issued a notice stating that 20,000 persons are homeless and pleading for immediate assistance. A Government commission will start as soon as possible to aid the local officials. The report that 1,000 perished is confirmed. The shocks completely destroyed six villages and seriously damaged many others.

Figaro publishes the narrative of a French officer of the particulars of a massacre of natives at Hue by French sailors. The story relates that after the natives ceased to resist they were driven from the burning village unarmed and then shot down in piles, the Frenchmen afterward murdering the wounded.

The Annamite envoys have arrived at Hanoi prepared to execute a treaty with France.

Trichiniasis is spreading in Saxony. Twenty deaths have occurred so far.

The Porte has ordered the peremptory collection of the obnoxious tithes on the Island of Crete. The Christians will resist payment and trouble is feared.

At St. Petersburg the trial of sixty-three members of the Nihilist Red Cross Society is concluded. All were sentenced to be sent to Siberia. The testimony of informers and others proved the society had ramifications in every part of the Empire.

An important move in cable telegraphy has been made by J. W. Mackey and James Gordon Bennett. They have at last signed a contract for two cables across the Atlantic Ocean with Siemens Bros., near London. The new lines are to be in operation next summer.

The schooner Petrel, built in 1847, water-logged near Sheboygan, Wis., yesterday, and sank in trying to enter the harbor. She has gone to pieces.

Hiram Exstein, a heavy dealer in men's furnishing goods at Buffalo, N. Y., failed yesterday for $350,000.

William W. Kirker, teller of the first national Bank of Ironton, Ohio, has disappeared. It is charged that he has absconded with $17,000 of the funds of the bank.

In New York the National Association of Wholesale Druggists began their annual session, electing officers and transacting the customary preliminary business.

At Owsley's Hall, on West Madison street, Chicago, the Northwestern Bee-Keepers' Society is holding its fourth annual convention. The members report a large yield of honey in this region this year.

FIRES, STORMS & ACCIDENTS.

Oct. 11th.—Loss by fire at Chioago, Ill., $10,000. Two firemen were badly injured. Butte, Mont., $5,000. A steamer valued at $18,000 burned at Portland, Maine.

A freight train smash up occurred at Hanover Junction, Wis., on the North Western Railway yesterday. Three engines were demolished. A fireman was killed. Ten passengers were injured by the derailing of a coach on the Texas Pacific road, near Marshall, Texas.

None of the injured in the late storm at Arcadia, Wis., will die. The storm struck the town at midnight. It came from the southwest, and upon its approach the air was so charged with electricity that lights could not be made to burn, and people rushed to their cellars in the darkness to avoid the danger which seemed imminent. The entire atmosphere was of a peculiar reddish-green color, with a strong sulphuric odor, and the deafening roar of the tornado is utterly indescribable. Barns and outbuildings were lifted from their foundations, torn to fragments, and scattered promiscuously in all directions. Broken boards, trees, bricks, and stones filled the air, and were hurled with such violence in some instances as to drive them through the sides of buildings. Damage was done amounting to thousands of dollars.

Oct. 14.—Loss by fire in Chicago, Ill., $1,500. At Saxton, Mo., the post office was destroyed. Brockton, Mass., $20,000. Needham, Mass., $34,000. Winnipeg, Manitoba, $100,000.

Twenty-three draft horses were suffocated at the Moerlein Brewery, Cincinnati, by the escape of pure ammonia used in cooling-cellars at a point under the brewery stables. The passengers in a street car passing about the time narrowly escaped being stifled.

Three men named Martin Koch, Charles Schworchorn, and Henry Carson were instantly killed at Castalia while trying to drive across a railroad track ahead of an Indiana, Bloomington & Western train. A boy named Thomas Lanman, who was in the wagon with the men, was badly hurt.

Oct. 15th.—Loss by fire at Pittsburg, Pa., $65,000. New York City, $61,000. Near Milwaukee, Wis., $3,500. Fonda, Iowa, $25,000.

A panic in a Jewish synagogue in Russia Saturday resulted in the death of forty women and the wounding of about thirty others. The crush was entirely in the women's gallery of the building.

A panic of school-children occurred at Waterbury, Conn., yesterday. Six hundred children rushed headlong down stairs, after the Sunderland fashion, but without horrible results, although many of the little people were badly bruised and one girl very seriously wounded. Too much attention cannot be given to the dangers surrounding the egress of children from the upper floors of crowded school-buildings.

Yesterday the two span bridges on the Central Road near Aguas Calientes, Mexico, fell with a construction train of eighteen cars and two engines. Engineer Dileury Hopkins and three Mexicans were killed. The train is a complete wreck.

Two engineers were struck by a train and dangerously injured at Baltimore, Md. At a curve north of Connellsville, Pa., a young woman and three children were struck and killed by a passenger train.

All the horses in the stable of the Moerlin brewery, where the ammonia pipe burst last night, that were not killed outright were so effected by the gas as to make it necessary to kill them. Sixty-one fine horses are lost by this singular accident.

Oct. 16th.—Loss by fire at Watseka, Ill., $15,000, accidental. 200,000 pounds of tobacco, with a factory and its machinery were burned at Lynchburg, Va.; loss over $45,000.

Oct. 17th.—Alegro, a town near Brescia, Italy, burned yesterday, and a thousand persons are homeless.

A passenger train going east on the Vandalia Road left the track near Hagarstown, Ill. The fireman was killed and the engineer badly hurt in the wreck.

CROP REPORTS.

The present condition of cotton assures a yield in the United States, of 5,800,000 bales, but, the plant being of perennial growth, it will continue to produce until killed by frost.

The corn and wheat crops have suffered somewhat during the last month from drouth and frost. The estimate of 1,600,000,000 bushels for corn, or twenty-three and a half bushels to the acre, will be verified, while the returns for wheat point to a yield of at least eleven bushels per acre or 415,000,000 bushels, 88,000,000 bushels less than last year.

At a meeting of the Louisiana Sugar-Planters' Association, Oct. 11th, reports were read from correspondents in all the sugar-producing parishes. These reports show a falling off of about 33 per cent on last year's crop, although there has been an increase of acreage. The best calculations are a product of 160,000 hogsheads, though this result is contingent upon the most favorable conditions, as an excess of rain following the prolonged drouth and succeeded by an early freeze will be likely to diminish the crop materially.

The leading weekly grain circular of Liverpool, Eng., under date of October 12th, says: "The grain trade is dull, with a tendency in favor of buyers. Business is restricted. There was an average attendance at to-day's market, and moderate business. Prices were occasionally one pence lower. In flour there was a fair trade at unchanged prices, and a good demand for mixed corn, which advanced one-half pence.

The reduction of the State average in the corn crop heretofore reported is now stated authoritatively as follows: Michigan, from 60 per cent to 45; Wisconsin, from 76 to 50; Ohio, from 82 to 63; New York, from 77 to 57. The reduction is seven points in Illinois and five in Indiana. The high September figures have been materially reduced by the frosts. The loss of condition from drouth has been more apparent, causing slight reductions in the September estimates of many Southern States. The general average condition is 78, six points less than Sept. 1st,—four from frosts in the North and two from drouth on the Atlantic seaboard and south of the frosted areas. It is five points below the October average of 82, while there is 4 per cent increase in area. It is twenty-one points lower than the October average of the census crop. The product of the year will be close to 1,600,000,000 bushels, with more soft corn than last year, mostly in the regions that consume their entire crop.

The returns of the yield of wheat per acre indicate a production of about two and a fourth bushels per acre less than the crop of last year. It is but nine and a half bushels per acre in Ohio, ten in Illinois, and but a fraction above ten in Indiana. It is above twelve in Michigan and thirteen in Minnesota, Iowa, and California. The Missouri average is twelve bushels; Dakota and Nebraska exceed sixteen, and Kansas averages about seventeen. These averages in the several States are based on systematically recorded results of thrashing. While a revision of the records of the season may cause slight local changes, it is certain the final average yield will not differ much from eleven and three-tenths bushels per acre. The aggregate will exceed 400,000,000 bushels, and may reach 420,000,000. The quality is not up to the average yield.

Oats are a full average of a series of years, or about twenty-eight bushels for the whole country.

The range of State averages in the West is from thirty in Missouri to forty-one in Kansas, about thirty-three in the Ohio Valley, and thirty-six in the Northwest.

Nebraska and Kansas have the largest yields. The crop will aggregate about 500,000,000 bushels and the quality is high, averaging 98; 100 being the standard.

The barley crop average is between one and two bushels per acre more than last year, approximating 50,000,000. California, New York, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Iowa, contribute three-fourths of the whole product.

The potato crop is in better condition than any year since 1875. The average is 93, while the October averages of 1882 and 1878 were each 99. The prospect is favorable for a crop above the medium.

The tobacco crop will be below the average. The average condition in Kentucky is 77; Virginia, 64. The Maryland crop will be good. The average of the seed-leaf States is low. The general average condition is 82.

Does your manner grow cold and forbidding as you grow older? Do the little children answer your questions with great timidity and avoid your presence as far as possible? It is a bad sign. It is not well for them nor for you. Come out into the sunlight. Make your life so bright that the little ones shall run with joy to greet you. Lead a merry, joyful, sunshiny life. And fill other lives with all the happiness you can. It does not pay to be morose. It does pay immensely to be a bright warm-hearted Christian.

If you cannot speak well of your neighbors, do not speak of them at all. A cross neighbor may be made kind by kind treatment. The true way to be happy is to make others happy. To be good is a luxury. If you are not better and wiser at the end of the day, that day is lost.

As daylight can be seen through very small holes, so little things will indicate a person's character. Indeed, character consists in little acts, habitually and honorably preferred; daily life being the quarry from which we build it up and rough-hew the habits that form it.

WHY DO IT?

JESUS said to the Jews, "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" And again, "It is not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, that shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven." What proportion of the will of God is required of those who claim that they can call Jesus Christ, Lord, "by the Holy Ghost?" Answer. "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." Not by every word that has proceeded out of the mouth of God, for this would not be reasonable, neither (in many cases) possible. Duties were required of the servants of God in other ages, which are not demanded at our hands, nor did the command apply to any body else, then or since. For instance, the command to Noah, to build the ark, after given dimensions; or the command to Moses to make a serpent of brass, and put it on a pole, to be seen by the snake-bitten Israelites, and the connected word of God, to them given, "Look and ye shall live." Or the command to Joshua to march the hosts of Israel around the walls of Jericho, seven days, with the promise that obedience would secure the downfall of the city. Or the command, by the mouth of the prophet Elisha, to Naaman, the leper, to dip himself "seven times in the river Jordan," and the promise, that he should be healed. Or the command of Jesus, "Go into the village * * * and find a colt tied, * * bring him to me." Or the command, "Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, nor yet for your bodies, what ye shall put on." Or the command, "Ye ought also to wash one another's feet." Or the command, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." And a host of commandments, and instructions given by the Almighty through prophets and apostles, and by the Lord Jesus himself, which were in their very nature, and under the then governing circumstances, clearly local in their application, and applied then and there, and at no other time or place. The same form of expression as that of Matt. 4:4, is found in a revelation, given to the Latter Day Saints, in September, 1832, and if any should seek to take advantage of the above reflections, and question the application of any "word of the Lord" given in other days, or to other people; yet the force and authority of present revelation ought not to be questioned, particularly when it evidently applies to the present generation, or the church of to-day, for the word reads, "And now I give unto you a commandment to beware concerning yourselves, to give diligent heed to the words of eternal life; for ye shall live by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God."

In the ages or dispensations of the past God revealed his will to the people, unfolding what was to them "present truth" to which they were not permitted to "add or diminish aught." "God," says Paul, "at sundry times and in divers manners, spake unto the fathers by the prophets."

Not only in Asia, but in America, and not only here, to the ancient inhabitants, the Nephites and others; but in "these last days" God has spoken; and his word is written, as well as in the Bible, and the Book of Mormon.

"The dead," says John the Revelator, "were judged out of the things which were written in the books, according to their works." Jesus says of those who receive not his word, "The word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him in the last day."

Who is it that receives Christ's words? "He that receiveth my law, and doeth it, the same is my disciple, and he that saith he receiveth it, and doeth it not, the same is not my disciple, and shall be cast out from among you." Again, "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed." "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things that I say?" Why do it? If it be the purpose of God to judge man by "the things written in the books," and that Christ's words, (which by the way, he says were his Father's words, or the words of God), shall judge men in the last day, and as we are to live by that "which proceedeth out of the mouth of God," or "present truth," (and if we do not live by it, we will certainly die or be condemned by it), then it is high time that we had begun to "remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon, and the former commandments, not only to say, but to do according to that which I have written."

Ignorance as to what the former commandments teach, is not excusable in any member of the church, much less in the priesthood; for God commands in the very first section of the Doctrine and Covenants, "Search these commandments, for they are true and faithful, and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall all be fulfilled," hence, ignorance in this matter is not justifiable, but is really transgression; for the command is, "search."

If admission into the kingdom of heaven is promised on the condition of doing the will of God, and that will is revealed in his commandment, it becomes the duty of every member of the church to read, or search the revelations of God, to learn what the will of God is. If there appear commandments which were evidently local in their application, that is, such as were given to individuals, requiring them to perform certain work, and which was, or was not performed by them as the case may have been, such local commandments of course could not be required of others, or if required of others, would necessitate a direct command to them. But such as are general in their application, or if given to another people, are by revelation to the church to-day, declared to be still in force, and applicable to us of the Reorganization surely must be heeded, or else the displeasure of the Almighty must be expected, as it will certainly be deserved.

If God has truly said that "The works and the designs and the purposes of God can not be frustrated, neither can they come to nought; for God doth not walk in crooked paths; neither doth he turn to the right hand nor to the left; neither doth he vary from that which he hath said; therefore his paths are straight and his course is one eternal round." If these are the words of God, then what excuse can any one offer for continual, persistent disregard of the things revealed as the "will of the Father." It is simply vain to say, that "if God commands me to do thus and so, or to give up this or that habit, I will do it." "It is not a commandment, but simply a word of wisdom." Yet is it not a revelation: is it not a "word that proceedeth from the mouth of God?" And is it not a commandment to "live by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God?"

Of what authority, therefore, is a preface to a revelation, saying that it is "not by commandment or constraint" in the face of the declaration, that the Saints "shall live by every word," &c.? I deny the right or authority of any man to weaken the force of the word of God, by way of apology; for he says expressly, "What I the Lord have spoken, I have spoken, and I excuse not myself." How much less then shall mortal man "excuse" the Almighty, by saying in substance that there is no one even constrained, much less directly commanded in the case. That is, no one is under constraint to observe the "thus saith the Lord;" or that they are not under obligation to "live by every word" of God, although it is said to be the "order and will of God in the temporal salvation of all Saints in the last days," and "adapted to the capacity of the weak, and the weakest of all Saints, who are or can be called Saints."

But even if it is only designed for "temporal salvation," what are the Saints to be saved from? "I the Lord, give unto them [who keep these sayings, &c.], a promise, that the destroying angel shall pass by them, as the children of Israel, and not slay them." That is, they shall live by the word of God, or if they disregard it, they have no promise; hence shall die; being disobedient.

But suppose that this "word of wisdom" is only a "covenant or church article," as some say. But then its observance is enjoined by a commandment; as see. "The Elders, Priests, and Teachers of this church * * shall observe the covenants, and church articles to do them, and these shall be their teachings, as they shall be directed by the Spirit." And right here I would give my opinion, that what is meant by the words "if ye receive not the Spirit ye shall not teach," is not preaching the gospel, but teaching the covenants and church articles, for it is evident that the Spirit should direct as to the times and seasons, or the proper occasions for teaching "these things." Jesus said something about casting pearls before swine. The Elders are to study to approve themselves workmen, to "preach the word; be instant in season, who are out of season," and to be "ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh" "a reason of the hope." The plain fact is, that the ministry are bound by a positive commandment, to not only teach, but to observe also themselves, the covenants and "church articles," and as to what may be called the law, if they do not keep that, then they are unworthy their calling; for they can not be Christ's disciples, and if a man is not worthy the name of a disciple, much less is he of being an ambassador of Christ.

Would not Paul have presented a consistent walk, and a lively spectacle, after exhorting the Saints to not "be conformed to this world," &c., to have lit a pipe, or called for a chew of tobacco, or have sailed into a saloon, with some boon companion, and taken a glass of beer or something stronger? A disciple of Christ! A follower of Jesus! What is the evidence of that relationship? "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me. And for a man to take up his cross is to deny himself all ungodliness, and every worldly lust, and keep my commandments."

In section 42, Doctrine and Covenants, God gives the church the "law," or sundry "commandments," if you please. Shall the Elders regard them? The Lord says to them, "Ye shall see that my law is kept." Suppose they do not, that is, suppose they suffer it to be trampled under foot, to be ignored, or at least disobeyed, what then? Clearly, they are transgressors themselves, they are unfaithful to their trust; are not worthy of their calling. "Ye shall see that my law is kept." "He that saith he receiveth it, (the law), and doeth it not, the same is not my disciple," &c.

What saith the law? How readest thou? "The Elders, Priests and Teachers of this church shall teach the principles of my gospel, which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon." "They shall observe the covenants, and church articles to do them, and these shall be their teachings, as they shall be directed by the Spirit." "Thou shalt not kill," "Thou shalt not steal, thou shalt not lie," "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her and none else." "Thou shalt not commit adultery," "Thou shalt not speak evil of thy neighbor, nor do him any harm." "And behold thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support." "Again, thou shalt not be proud in thy heart; let all thy garments be plain, and their beauty, the beauty of the work of thine own hands." Thou shalt not be idle. "And whosoever among you are sick, and have not faith to be healed, but believe, shall be nourished with all tenderness with herbs, and mild food, and that not by the hand of an enemy." "Thou shalt stand in the place of thy stewardship; thou shalt not take thy brother's garment; thou shalt pay for that which thou shalt receive of thy brother; and if thou obtainest more than would be for thy support, thou shalt give it unto my store-house, that all things may be done according to that which I have said;" "Thou shalt take the things which thou hast received, which have been given unto thee in my Scriptures for a law, to be my law, to govern my church, and he that doeth according to those things shall be saved, and he that doeth them not shall be damned, if he continues," &c. Please read. Again: "Every person who belongeth to this Church of Christ, shall observe to keep all the commandments, and covenants of the church.

"And if thy brother or sister offend thee, thou shalt take him or her, between him and her, and thee alone; and if he or she confess thou shalt be reconciled. And if he or she confess not, thou shalt deliver him or her unto the church, not to the members, but to the Elders. And it shall be done in a meeting, and that not before the world. And if thy brother or sister offend many, he or she shall be chastened before many. If any offend openly, he or she shall be rebuked openly, that he or she may be ashamed. And if he or she confess not, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law of God. If any shall offend in secret, he or she shall be rebuked in secret, that he or she may have opportunity to confess in secret to him or her, whom he or she has offended, and to God, that the church may not speak reproachfully of him or her. And thus shall ye conduct in all things." And beside these, all other commandments given the church, through the present Joseph, as well as those given through the Martyr. But after all, what will it avail? Hundreds will admit these sayings of the Spirit to be in truth "the word of the Lord," but who will hearken! The Lord said, "My people do not consider." They will say, "I know this to be the work of the Lord." "I am willing to do all that I can to further the work." And many cry Lord, Lord, both long and loud, but still do not the things that he says. The foolish virgins once had their lamps trimmed and burning. They were once ready to meet the Bridegroom, but alas, they failed to be ready at last. "It is not every one who saith unto me Lord, Lord, that shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father who is in heaven." "Why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" Why do it? What will it avail?

EPISTOLARY.

To the Saints scattered in Nebraska. Especially to those of the Northern District; Greeting: Having reason to believe that some irregularities exist which tend to interfere with your peace, and with no desire to be dictatorial, or to curtail your liberty, we respectfully submit the following: We are with you anxious for the preaching of the gospel;—believe it should be the primary object. But think there must be a system by which it may be accomplished. One of the most important works of a district conference is the inauguration of measures to spread the gospel wider and wider. The scarcity of laborers may lead presidents of branches and others, to receive any one that may come to them with a claim, without other evidences of being representatives of the Church. This should not be. Not that we would have you suspicious, or to look upon strangers with distrust. But precautionary measures have been thought expedient as a preventive to fraud or imposition. To which we think you ought to be aroused. To receive those sent by action of General, and your district conferences to labor among you in word and doctrine, is your duty, in which we would not see you behind any. And to know those who are thus, and those not so appointed is your duty. Will you see to it? You have read, or heard of wandering stars. One, among other characteristics of these wanderers, is having no special, or specific object or purpose in life. Yet always on the move, seeking whom they may impose on, or devour.

There is no district in Nebraska, Iowa, Kansas or Missouri but will give every Elder or Priest within its respective limits all the labor in traveling and preaching he may need. When therefore you see Elders skip over their own boundaries, exhibiting piety and unbounded love for the latter day work, and claiming to be under great apprehension of condemnation if they fail to preach the gospel; and who on invitation preach a sermon, and then ask you to pass the hat; or worse than that, assume the responsibility of going among the Saints, or to the Bishop's Agent, soliciting means, you may know that Elder is not using a liberty, but taking license, violating the order that the Church is seeking to maintain; and though feigning piety, is being governed by policy for selfish purposes. To the presidents of the respective branches we respectfully suggest the putting forth efforts to prevent such scandalous proceedings.

You may ask: Have we not a right to invite an Elder, not of our district, to preach? Yes, you have. But you should have other proof than his bare word, that he is an Elder. And then you must discriminate between those coming on a friendly visit, and those who want to make a profit of you because they are Elders. In view then of some past events, (which we have no wish to resurrect), we, in addition to the above, suggest the following. Your first duty is to sustain those appointed as above referred to, and to be kind and courteous to all, irrespective of creeds or nationalities. And to co-operate with the Bishopric in inducing the Saints to pay over their moneys to the Bishop, or his appointed agents. Should you know of any, especially those not appointed to labor in your district, seeking to collect money from the Saints, you should first admonish them to desist, and if they refuse, report them to the Bishop, his Agent, or those in charge of missions. To watch for iniquity is incompatible with our religion; but to be alive as watchmen on Zion's walls, is but our reasonable service.

We advise activity and unity among branch officials. For your consenting to accept positions in the body is tantamount to a covenant to acquit yourselves of duties incumbent on your respective positions. Unity and a thorough understanding among yourselves is most essential for success. And as a healthy spiritual condition of a branch is largely due to proper activity of officials' efforts ultimating in unity among yourselves, are imperative.

To our minds the practice of one Elder berating, and seeking to blast or tarnish the reputation of others is most despicable, and no greater evidence can be given of a barrenness of true manhood, to say nothing of the love, or Spirit of God. The resorting to such a practice disqualifies the one so acting as a proper representative of the Church. We trust due and prompt efforts will be made by you to check and prohibit such practice, if you should witness it. No matter who the individual may be,—do not tolerate it. If you do, you will be partially culpable for the evil growing out of so ungodly a practice. Let every head of a family resolve that his hearth-stone is one sacred spot, where the character of his brother shall not be tarnished or the tongue of the slanderer heard; and much, very much will be thus accomplished to prevent evil and promote peace. The teacher is commanded to see that there is no hardness or evil speaking, etc. What then would be thought of an Elder who would seek to tear down what he is commanded to build up, or practice what he is to strive to prevent. You must learn to be watchful, without being suspicious. For the practice of slandering or backbiting there is no justification or excuse. For however much one member may be wronged by another, the law provides a way for redress. And efforts to prevent infringements on the recognized laws of the Church are incumbent on you.

We learn that there exists at Lamoni a sewing society which meets at stated times, twenty or thirty sisters in number, at which times considerable sewing is done; and while none are gagged, there is a preventive to the practice of tattling or backbiting. And should any one so far forget herself as to say aught savoring of tattling, she is called to order. If so, every lover of peace will say, God bless the sewing society of Lamoni, for if they thus labor, much will be done to build up and keep peace within their borders.

You will learn that the giving of all the surplus property, as a beginning of tithing is deferred for the present; for the following reasons: 1st. The Church has prepared no suitable books. 2d. When the Church receives all the surplus property of its members, she must be prepared to give inheritances. Much remains to be done to reach this. You will also learn from instructions by the Bishopric, that in the mean time the Church is expected to bring offerings, tithings, or consecrations, as God has prospered them; and that Israel is to be his own exactors. Who needs to complain of that?

Thinking we may ere long visit and talk to some of you (at least) face to face, we let the above suffice for the present, ever wishing and praying for your welfare.

Respectfully, and in hope,

JAMES CAFFALL.

W. M. RUMEL, President of District.

TRUTH ACCEPTABLE WHEREVER IT MAY BE FOUND.

FRIEND HERALD.—My mind is oftentimes exercised, and I am really perplexed to know right from wrong, to draw the line of demarkation between truth and error, as these principles are found to exist in the politics, religion, and social habits of mankind. To my mind it is much more difficult than some may suppose. It has been argued that a revelation from God, expressive of his will in the delineation of right principles, is superfluous, or unnecessary, upon the ground that human wisdom or instinct, independent of Divine command, is a sufficient guide to those who desire to do right. That the law or principle of conscience constitutes a rudder by which we should steer our craft of moral selection and action is true, but it seems to me that the history of human experience verifies the belief, that conscience unaided by superior instruction, is inadequate to the proper determination of the real character of every principle. And shall we deny that even this inborn monitor of the human soul is in a measure flexible, subject to the bias of education? To my mind, like every function constituting a part of that wonderful blending, the inner or intellectual man, it is susceptible to education and development.

Aside from the germ of our individuality, we are made,—mentally, morally, and physically,—of the elements that have surrounded us in mortal life. Farther back than this I can not go consistently, nor do I care to peer into the mysteries of the mysterious past. A knowledge of the pre-existent past is not nearly so important as an understanding of future possibilities and present privileges and duties. Our convictions relative to everything pertaining to life will be found in exact ratio to our opportunities for learning and our aptness to learn. This places individual responsibility to God in proportion to privileges extended. "To him that knoweth to do good and doeth it not, to him it is sin."

We do not feel called upon to offer an apology for the sins of our race, but will express the belief, however, that many of the evils apparently cherished by men have been errors of the head rather than of the heart. While some are, perhaps, willingly and willfully blind, ignorance—a want of the knowledge of the truth—is the prime cause of much evil in the world. Could the veil that now separates fallen man from the future abode prepared for him be rent, the intellect moved by that intense inherent desire for happiness, could not fail to lead many aright who now under present conditions and influences go astray. Is it not possible, or rather probable, that though sinful as man seems prone to be, the picture illustrative of human depravity has been by some overdrawn? I maintain that humanity is not wholly responsible for the circumstances, conditions, and influences that surround it. Satan, that vile intelligence that delights only to do evil, was in the world before my eyes beheld the light of terrestrial dawn; and if I had anything to do with the event of bringing him here, it comes not with the radius of my knowledge. I herewith assert my desire to do all things that are right, just, good, and pleasing in the sight of our Heavenly Father, but must confess to coming far short of it; nevertheless I give full credence to the idea of accountability to him, and of future judgment "according to our works." It is a part of the Divine economy "in bringing many sons unto glory," that men shall be tried that their moral worth may be practically known, not only to God, but to other men and themselves.

Every day we are adding material to the superstructure of our future existence—so to speak, we are building the house in which we must live; and whether it be beautiful to behold, or rough and ungainly in appearance, we shall then know if we do not now, that that house is of our own building. The infidel, the schismatic, and the saint of God, each is erecting the building of his own choice. As it is impossible to frame a good substantial edifice from imperfect material, how needful that we select the very best available. There are no other people I love so well as those with whom my lot is cast—the Latter Day Saints; no church to which I give credence as being the one body of Christ but the one organized by divine command, April 6th, 1830; no gospel that I deem to be the gospel of Christ, but the one taught by Paul, by Peter, John, and Jesus Christ, the Head. Nor have I sought to compromise the truth with any for fear, or to gain favor; but I am free to confess that as I continue to mingle with Saints, would-be Christians, and non-professors, and learn to look upon both sides of every question without bias of mind, my views in a general way are subject to constant change, or modification. The boy who goes to school should not suppose that because he has a knowledge of the school's existence, his education is complete; nor should his brain become so filled with self-sufficiency as to leave no room for the entrance of useful instruction and information.

I am led to contemplate the Church of Christ. I think of her toils to win honest souls to the path of immortal glory; of the willing sacrifice many have made to advance the cause they knew to be true; but withal I can not forget the frequent demonstrations of human weaknesses, and the follies of those called to be children of God.

O, that we could ever be willing to learn, that we could be submissive to the Divine Will, that we could remain susceptible to the intuition of the Holy Spirit of God. Dear Lord, give us grace that we may see aright, wisdom that we may walk worthily before thee, love to blend our souls in sweet accord, strength to meet every fiery dart of the adversary, and bring our spirits into subjection to the mandates of thy just and equitable law! So shall our joy be perfect and our reward certain and secure. O, how grand, how noble is the calling of the saint of God, in the true representation of the interests of his kingdom. Like the Master they are as "lights to the world." The object of physical or spiritual light is to impart its radiance and blessing to every creature whom it may reach. Then I ask, is it reasonable to suppose that the church of Christ has been reflecting the light of God for these fifty years, while the rest of mankind outside of its pales remain unaffected and unbenefitted by its glorious influence? To my mind the world in its religious, political, scientific, educational, social, and domestic relations, has been more or less moved upon and influenced by the sacred power and enlightenment of a restored gospel. The success of the latter day work is not to be measured by the abstraction of numbers baptized into the church. It is to be comprehended by the influence it has upon society both in and out of the church. The general character of theology taught throughout the civilized world to-day, is of a higher moral character, and reflects a better light than did the religious teachings of men prior to 1830. And withal the hymns of modern origin are of a better cast with some exceptions, than those of bygone days. Think of the times of witchcraft, superstition, and religious intolerance, as compared with the moral character of to-day's religion. The facts are that religious bigotry and priestly despotism are giving place to the freedom, light, and liberty of the gospel of peace and life. What the culmination of religious creeds will be, we are not prepared to say. It seems sufficient to believe that "Truth is mighty and will prevail."

A sister asks in the Hope if it is right for her to take part in the exercises of a Union Sunday School.

How can it be wrong? Should we not encourage every effort to do good? The real essence of precept taught in these schools is, that the Bible is the word of God, that Jesus is the Savior of the world, in whom we must believe and trust for our salvation. And the youthful mind is encouraged to the belief that "Virtue has its own reward," while the practice of sin will result in punishment and abject sorrow. It does not depreciate the merits of a restored gospel for us to acknowledge and encourage the good we see in others not of our faith. Suppose there was no moral and religious teaching other than that done by the Latter Day Saints, what per cent of the people would be reached? What would the world of mankind know about God, Jesus, and a promise of salvation? and how many would be prepared to hear and obey the gospel when properly and authoritatively presented? I wish to ask my radical brethren (if there are any) why not go to the heathen Chinese, the mussel men of Arabia, or the Modoc of America to gain intelligent converts to the cause of Christ, if the Christian enlightenment of the "Sectarian world" is altogether falacious.

"Every one to their notion;" but your correspondent would much rather preach Christ as the Savior, and the Bible as containing the word of God, to those who have been thus led to believe, than to go where the rays of Bible truth never have shone. To my mind when the Elders of Israel go to the fair sons and daughters of America and Europe, with the super-excellency of revealed truth, winning them to a knowledge of the unchangeable God, they but exemplify the precept, "Other men have labored, and ye are entered into their labors."

I believe it is possible for even Saints to be egotistical, boastful and self-willed. Be our disposition as it may, the gospel is conservative in its character, and smiles encouragingly upon every effort toward intellectual and moral advancement. While seeking to evade the vanities and evils of this sinful world, we should exercise caution not to trample upon or cast from us the pearls of intellect and virtue that are found intermingled with much that is erroneous in character and harmful in its tendency. The command, "Contend against no church save it be the church of the devil," does not authorize us to shake hands with every sectarian idea and custom; neither does it warrant us in being aggressive and presumptuous in our manner of presenting the truths we hold sacred and dear. "Overcome evil with good," admonishes us that if we wish others to walk nearer to God, we must show them a better path than the one in which they now tread, rather than obstruct the one they have essayed to follow. Love for the sons of men is what we need. Could our preaching and example be like that of the Savior, then would our success be certain, and our reward eternal and secure.

May the kind Father of mercies grant us wisdom and light, direct our feet in the pathway of peace, and finally exalt us to His Celestial abode, we humbly pray, in the name of his Son Jesus Christ, Amen.

G. S. HYDE.

BURNETT, Neb., Aug. 27, 1883.

The following from the New York Sun of September 11th, 1883, and the statement we give after it from the Attleboro, Massachusetts, Advocate, of September 29th, will enable the Saints to dispose of the matter satisfactorily.

BRIGHAM YOUNG'S DISCIPLE.

MR. EVANS' ATTEMPT TO PRACTICE POLYGAMY IN A NEW ENGLAND VILLAGE.

AMOST within the sound of the voice of the leaders in Boston of other violent crusades against the institutions of Utah has stood undisturbed for many months a house dedicated to the worship of God according to the peculiar tenets of the Latter Day Saints. The village of Plainville is a section of Wrentham, four miles from the center of that town, and two miles from North Attleboro. It is completely isolated from railroad or telegraphic communication, but has become quite well known because of its large jewelry manufactories. The only church of any denomination in the village is that under the name of the "Plainville Branch of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." The church edifice is quite a large one, well built, and is located upon the main street. A large proportion of the money for the building was subscribed in Wrentham and Attleboro, some of whose people are of the Mormon faith. Three of the leaders of the movement were arrested a short time ago at the instance of some people who had become disgusted with the community, and wanted to break it up. These are Jackson L. Evans and Mrs. Catharine B. Cobb, each charged with polygamy, and Miss Kate L. Whitney, charged with immoral conduct. These parties had been active in making converts, having made many proselytes from among the Baptists and Methodists.

The Sun correspondent saw Evans in jail here this morning. He said he was converted to the faith of the Latter Day Saints some time ago. He was one of the foremost men in the organization of the church at Plainville. By permission of the School Committee the meetings were held first in the village school house. The church met with great hostility and calumny on account of the doctrines promulgated. After a while the people began to be enlightened, discarded their prejudices, and went to the meetings in large numbers. Many converts were made.

The church building was put up as soon as the secretary had raised enough money. It is paid for, and the regular attendance is large. The membership is constantly increasing. One of the elders is going to Washington as soon as Congress convenes to use his influence against any anti-Mormon legislation that may be introduced. In conclusion Mr. Evans said:

"The Utah Church is called 'The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints,' and the addition of the word 'Reorganized' constitutes our identity. We claim the privilege of worshiping God according to the dictates of our own consciences, and allow all persons the same privilege, let them worship how, where, or what they please."

When the prisoners were arraigned in court this afternoon the room was crowded. Many of the audience were women. Evans is about forty-five years of age, and of forbidding aspect. As he stepped into the dock he looked around at the eager faces, smiled faintly, crossed his arms over his breast, and assumed an air of injured innocence and martyrdom, occasionally giving his long black beard a complacent pull. Miss Whitney is a slender, dark woman of twenty-three years, with handsome black eyes, glossy raven locks, and a rather intellectual and attractive face. She came into court with a babe in her arms. Mrs. Cobb is about twenty-five years old, with a bright rosy complexion and a handsome face.

S. A. Cobb was the first witness. He testified Evans came to his house and held meetings there. Evans kissed and hugged all the women, including Cobb's wife. Evans became more and more familiar in his actions. He did not think much about it at that time, for he was full of the religion. He afterwards protested against the frequency of these demonstrations, when Evans said he could not help it. He then thought Elder Evans had a clean heart, and would do nothing wrong. Cobb finally discarded the faith.

James M. Cobb corroborated his son's testimony. He left the church when Evans told him that one day while reading his Bible he had a revelation that he must include more than one woman in his family. He had immediately begun to fulfill this mission, and had lived happily ever since.

Mrs. Cobb, for the defense, testified to her faith in the Mormon doctrines. Miss Whitney's testimony was to the same effect.

Evans testified that he was a Scriptural expounder, farmer, wheelwright, and a little of everything. It was pleasant at Cobb's, because he had so many seasons of prayer with the ladies.

District Attorney Benjamin said the proceedings were a disgrace to the town. Judge Rockwell made a strong charge to the jury. The jury agreed upon a verdict of guilty, after half an hour's deliberation, on all the charges.

DEDHAM, Mass., Sept. 10th, 1883.

From the Attleboro, Massachusetts, Advocate, September 29th, 1883:

LATTER DAY SAINTS VS. MORMONS.

To the Editor of the Advocate:

There appears in the New York Sun of September 11th, a series of statements with reference to the Saints' Church in Plainville, which are calculated to mislead people and do injustice to the citizens of Plainville in general, and members of the church referred to, in particular, which I wish as a representative of said church, with your permission through your columns, to correct. The Sun correspondent says: "The only church in the village of Plainville is that under the name of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," which is true; but he goes on to say that "three of the LEADERS of this 'Mormon movement' were arrested a short time ago at the instance of some people who had become disgusted with the community and wanted to break it up." The name of Jackson L. Evans and two women are given, charged with "polygamy and immoral conduct;" that these parties had been active in making converts, having made many proselytes from among the Baptists and Methodists, etc. The article goes on to state: "The Sun correspondent saw Evans in jail here this morning [Sept. 10th]. He said he was one of the foremost men in the organization of the church at Plainville." That one of the Elders was going to Washington as soon as Congress convenes to use his influence against any anti-Mormon legislation that may be introduced. "In conclusion Mr. Evans said: 'The Utah church is called the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and the word 'Reorganized' constitutes our identity. We claim the privilege of worshiping God according to the dictates of our own consciences and allow all persons the same privilege,'" etc., etc.,—this is what the Sun article says. Now for a few facts: Mr. Evans and the women referred to, so far from being "leaders" in the church at Plainville, are not now, nor ever have been, connected in any way with this people anywhere nor at any time, as the church records, and subjoined affidavits will show, or as Plainville citizens well know. Mr. Evans told the writer, yesterday, in Dedham, that he had never attended one of our meetings in Plainville or anywhere else; that he knew nothing of us only by report; never had any interview with the New York Sun or any other reporter upon the subject. Below is his affidavit together with that of the officer in charge of Dedham prison, Mr. Henry White, to whom I am indebted for courtesy and evident desire to see justice done to all.

DEDHAM JAIL, Mass., Sept. 20th, 1883.

"This is to certify that I am not now, nor ever have been, a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints at Plainville, Mass., or anywhere else. Have never been in any way connected with any Latter Day or Mormon church in my life, and the statements made in the New York Sun by its reporter, so far as they concern me in any way with the above people, are utterly without the truth or any foundation whatsoever. The New York Sun reporter, did not interview me in jail the morning of Sept. 10th, or upon any other occasion on this or any other subject; never saw him to my knowledge; furthermore, the officer of the prison, Mr. Henry White, states that no such interview ever took place.

(Signed) JACKSON L. EVANS."

"Witness, ULYSSES W. GREEN.

"Before me appeared the above named Jackson L. Evans, this 20th day of September, 1883, sworn and subscribed that the above statement is true.

HENRY WHITE, Justice of the Peace.

"I hereby certify that no such interview as described in the New York Sun of Sept. 11th, 1883, took place between any reporter of the New York Sun and Mr. Evans.

"HENRY WHITE, Officer in charge."

In conclusion, Mr. Editor, as a representative of the church, incorporated under the laws of our country, and known as the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, I wish to state that we are in no way connected with the people in the west, known as Utah Mormons, and have nothing to do with them save in condemnation of their polygamy and other kindred abominations. No Elder from Plainville or anywhere else in this church, proposes to favor in Washington or anywhere else, the crime of polygamy, no matter under what guise, whether in Utah or Massachusetts. "A rose by any other name would smell as sweet," says Shakespeare, and although we do ask the privilege of worshipping God according to the dictates of our own conscience and allow all men the same privilege, yet we do avow our belief that such worship shall not conflict with the law of God as revealed to this church of Christ up to the year 1844, nor the laws of the country in which we live, and through which we claim the right to be protected in our belief, so long as such belief does not interfere with the rights of others. It is a misfortune for which we are not to blame that we have to answer as a church to the name which the Utah people bear; but the burden of their crimes and apostasy from the original faith, we do not propose to rest under, or without protest submit to such misrepresentations on the part of the Sun reporter or anyone else. This man was given an epitome of our faith and has taken the liberty to manufacture a sensational story, for which the Sun is noted, and he probably was paid so much per word or line, at our expense.

Respectfully yours,

M. H. BOND.

UTAH DISTRICT.

Conference was held in Mission Chapel, October 6th and 7th, 1883. Elder W. W. Blair acting president, and Elder E. Barrows clerk. E. C. Brand chosen to report.

October 6th, morning session, 10 a. m. Elder Blair reviewing the progress of the Church in Utah during the past twenty years, showed that thousands had been redeemed from the errors of Utah Mormonism, most of whom had emigrated East. The odium that had been cast upon the work in the East, had also been removed, and the work was progressing in all directions.

Reports of Elders.—The following Elders reported in person: W. W. Blair, Joseph Luff, E. C. Brand, W. Gibson, T. Burt, John Taylor, John Eames, John Hart, Joseph Brown, John Weaver, Henry Marriott, Wm. Aird (by letter), and Henry Grimm.

Resolved, That Elders W. W. Blair and T. N. Hudson be appointed to act as delegates to represent the Utah District in the April Conference, to be held at Stewartsville, Mo., April 6th, 1884. Elder Joseph Luff then tendered his resignation as district president, on account of his intended departure for the East. He was released, and a vote of thanks tendered for efficient services.

E. C. Brand was elected to succeed him in the presidency of the district.

Elders Wm. Gibson and Thomas Burt were assigned missions in Central and Southern Utah. Elder John Eames was sustained in his labors at Cheyenne. All the ministry in the district requested to labor as their circumstances permit.

Evening session. Prayer meeting at 6:30, and preaching at 7:30 p. m. by Elder J. Luff.

Sunday, October 7th. Half-past ten a. m., preaching by Elder E. C. Brand. At one p. m., Sunday School, and at 2:30 Sacrament meeting. Prayer meeting at 6 p. m.; and at 7 o'clock farewell address by Elder J. Luff.

HOLENBECK.—Near Elmwood, Cass county, Nebraska, May 19th, 1883, to Bro. John W. and Mrs. Emma J. Holenbeck, a daughter. Blessed October 14th, 1883, by Elder Robert M. Elvin; named Oral.

THORNTON.—At Bushberry, Cass county, Nebraska, July 19th, 1883, to Bro. William W. and Sr. Flora E. Thornton, a daughter. Blessed October 15th, 1883, by Elder Robert M. Elvin, and named Nora Maud.

MARRIED.

BRAYTON—LEATHER.—At the residence of the bride's parents, Fall River, Massachusetts, October 11th, 1883, by Elder John Gilbert, Mr. Peter Brayton, to Miss Mary E. Leather. May the blessings of health, peace, and prosperity attend them.

DIED.

EVERETT.—At Liberty, Cass Co., Nebraska, April 15th, 1883, of inflammatory croup, Ida Ellen, eldest child of Bro. John and Sr. Rachel R. Everett, aged 3 years, 7 months and six days. Funeral sermon October 7th, 1883, by Elder R. M. Elvin.

ROBERTS.—At Johnson, Rhode Island, September 29th, 1883, of typhoid pneumonia, sister Mary A. Roberts, aged 28 years, 2 months and 3 days. She was baptized into the church November 20th, 1881, by Elder C. N. Brown. She was possessed of a sweet disposition, and was beloved by all who knew her, and died strong in the faith. A large assemblage of Saints and friends attended the funeral. Her husband and one child mourn her loss. Funeral services by Elder John Gilbert.

HARDWICK.—At Liberty, Cass Co., Nebraska, March 21st, 1883, of membranous croup, Rachel Alice, only daughter of Bro. George and Sr. Elizabeth Hardwick, aged 1 year, 11 months and 12 days. Funeral sermon October 7th, 1883, by Elder Robt. M. Elvin.

HIGGINS.—At Salt Lake City, Utah, October 12th, 1883, of diphtheria, Harald F., son of Dr. C. W. and Sr. Pauline Higgins, aged 3 years and 12 days.

"Go to thy rest, fair child!
Go to thy dreamless bed,
While yet so gentle, undefiled,
With blessings on thy head."

BABBITT.—At the residence of his son, L. L. Babbitt, near Stewartsville, Missouri, August 22d, 1883, High Priest Loren W. Babbitt. Father Babbitt, as he was familiarly called, was born September 19th, 1806, at New Malby, Berkshire county, Mass.; was baptized in 1832, and ordained one of the Seventy about the same time. He was with the church in her journeyings, her trials, and sufferings, and participated therein. He was present and took part in the Pentecostal season in the Kirtland Temple. Whenever he would recall and recount the glorious hours of spiritual light and life and liberty that were enjoyed on that memorable occasion, his face would light up with joy, and tears of gladness would fill his eyes, as he thought of those heavenly seasons. Following the fortunes of Brigham for a while, he became convinced that his place was not with the usurpation, and on April 6th, 1863, he was baptized by Elder Frank Reynolds at Amboy, Lee county, Illinois, and was confirmed by Elder E. C. Briggs. He was ordained a High Priest on April 7th, 1866, at Plano, Illinois, by Elder E. C. Briggs. He passed away without any visible sign of suffering. He closed his eyes and fell calmly to sleep. He was administered to a few hours before his death, and in fulfillment of the promise, his death was sweet unto him. Funeral discourse preached by Elder T. W. Smith, to a large congregation. Elders I. N. Roberts, D. J. Powell, L. D. Flanders and Thomas Worrell, taking part in the services.

NEWMAN.—At Lamoni, Iowa, September 22d, 1883, Mr. Stephen F. Newman, aged 73 years, 10 months and 14 days. He was born in 1809, in Seneca county, New York; but for the last fifty years was a resident of Chatauque county, where he was honored and esteemed for his integrity and uprightness. He also so trusted in the honesty of others that he lost the most of his property through men who proved unfaithful to their word and to his trust. Although he seemed to be strongly opposed to our faith in Christ, yet his last wishes showed that he was not without confidence in it. For after residing here last winter, he returned in the Spring to New York, and while there defended us in conversation, and in his last illness he desired to return to Lamoni, requesting that if he should not live to make the journey, that his body should be brought here for burial. His physician there said that he was sustained by this strong desire, and so the journey was made lying upon a bed, and he lived nearly a week after his arrival here. His wife, Sr. Lovina Newman, survives him, as do all of the five daughters who were born to them. Two of them are members of the Reorganized Church of Christ, namely, Sr. Kennedy of Logan, Iowa, and Sr. Wicks of Lamoni. Of Mr. Newman, as expressed by one of old, it may be said, "A good name is better than rubies." The funeral sermon was preached by Elder H. A. Stebbins.

JONES.—At Renick, Randolph county, Missouri, September 13th, 1883, of summer complaint, Hyrum, infant son of Bro. Richard and sister Margaret Jones, aged 1 year, 7 months and 20 days. Funeral service by Priest William Vincent.

Though your darling child is taken,
From your bosom to the urn,
Soon the sleeping dust will waken,
And its spirit will return.

GAITHER.—At Burlington, Iowa, September 25th, 1883, of a congestive chill, Sr. Sussia H., wife of Bro. B. R. Gaither, aged 51 years. Born in Maine, in 1832. Funeral sermon preached by Elder W. B. Smith, September 27th. Bro. Gaither has been sick ever since the death of his wife. He requests the prayers of the Saints in his behalf.

MATTHEWS.—At Shenandoah, Iowa, September 22d, 1883, of paralysis, Sr. Mariah M., wife of Bro. Wm. C. Matthews, aged 52 years, 11 months and 5 days. Was born at Avon, Washington Co., N. Y., and was baptized July 19th, 1868, by Elder S. S. Wilcox. She had suffered from sickness for the past eight years, but was considered almost recovered, when this sudden and unexpected visitation transferred her spirit to the paradise of God, to await the first resurrection. Funeral held in the Saints' chapel. The house was full. Sermon by Elder Robt. M. Elvin.

GREEN.—At his residence, near Lamoni, Iowa, October 4th, 1883, Elder A. J. Green. Born in the State of Maine, November 8th, 1814; married October 10th, 1847. Baptized and ordained an Elder June 13th, 1869, by Elder George Morey. In youth he was religiously inclined, and carried the New Testament in his pocket a great deal of the time. He visited Nauvoo after the death of Joseph the Martyr, for investigation of the gospel work; but hearing some utterances from B. Young, became disgusted, and returned to his home in the east. After the reorganization of the Church, he was found by Bro. Morey, in Iowa, and by him baptized and ordained. He died firm in the faith, and had for some time been under the conviction that his departure was at hand. He leaves a wife and three children. Funeral sermon preached at his residence, by Elder Charles Jones.

PETERSON.—At Grant Township, Nodaway Co. Mo., June 29th, 1883, of rheumatism, Sr. Dorthea Peterson. Was born 22d February, 1814, at Nastrup, Tusted Denmark. Baptized September, 1869, at Malad, Idaho, by David H. Smith. Confirmed by E. C. Brand. Funeral conducted by N. N. Bjerregaard, Priest of the branch, at the grave yard at Guilford. Elder A. N. Bjerregaard made a few remarks. Funeral services by Elder Wm. Woodhead, July 15th, 1883.

ROBERTS.—In Henry Co., Tennessee, March 9th, 1883, Sr. Nancy Roberts. She had been afflicted with a severe cough since 1867, and suffered a great deal. She was confined to her bed at intervals, until about two years before her death; after that she scarcely ever left it. She was born the 12th of January, 1802, in Roan Co., North Carolina, baptized in 1839, by Washington Brannan. She died in the hope of a glorious resurrection.

"I KNOW men, and I tell you that Jesus Christ is not a man." "Alexander, Cæsar, Charlemagne, and myself founded empires. But upon what did we rest the creations of our genius? Upon force. Jesus Christ alone founded his empire upon love; and at this hour millions of men would die for Him." "If you do not perceive that Jesus Christ is God, very well, then, I did wrong to make you a general." (To General Bertrand).—Napoleon Bonaparte.

SURFEITED.

WE publish in this issue the letter written in reply to Elder L. O. Littlefield's last published, which reply we sent to the Utah Journal, requesting its publication. It was sent back to us, with the statement that the Officers of the Journal Association were of the opinion that any further publication of the Smith-Littlefield controversy would be likely to "surfeit" the subscribers to that journal. Of course the Journal management must look after the mental and moral tastes of their readers, and when it is known that those readers have dainty and disordered mental and moral stomachs, any sort of mental food likely to be indigestible, and to bring on a paroxysm of moral nightmare, such as results from indigestion, it is their duty to have such weak digestion in regard, and by rejecting improper, or hard articles, prevent bad results.

The pith of this reason for declining to publish our last letter in the Utah Journal will be seen when it is contemplated that Mr. Littlefield is himself attached to the Journal Office, either on the editorial or working staff of employees, or is a joint stockholder and one of the management, or possibly both, which we are inclined to believe. He has had access to each reply we have sent the Journal, before its publication, and has carefully seen to it that not one of our letters has gone to the readers of the paper without the foil of his subsequent argument sent out with it. This he had the power to do, and we do not complain, as the opportunity for presenting our views on the vexing topic discussed was fully as fair as we expected from those holding the control.

The Editor of the Deseret News, while affecting to despise the weakness of our letters, came to the help of Mr. Littlefield, and added to that gentleman's effort the weight of his own argumentation, certainly giving to an observer the impression that there was some ground to fear lest some of the joint readers of the News and Journal might be led away by "Mr. Smith's sophistries."

The day was when Mormonism feared no investigation. That day, alas! passed away when somebody, under the shades of secrecy, introduced that which required darkness and double dealing to establish it, and now requires secrecy, *duplicit*y, and unfair dealing to perpetuate it.

Elder Littlefield expresses great anxiety that we may be able to see the error of our way, and retrace our steps to the acceptance of what we have been trying to overthrow. The News man also reads us a homily about being governed by antipathies, and convictions, forgetful of the fact that controls all men, what he loves he fosters and protects, what he hates he repels. The News man finds fault with us for acting upon our convictions in rejecting polygamy, but glorifies himself because that upon his convictions he received and advocates that doctrine.

Both Mr. Littlefield and the News man assume that we are and must be convinced, and that our continued denial and resistance are the result of sheer obstinacy and willfulness. Who is the best judge in regard to the convictions of one's own mind, the person stating his convictions, or the person holding adverse convictions. Suppose if we were to state that both Elder Littlefield and the Editor of the Deseret News knew that the doctrine of plural marriage was from the devil, originated with the ruler of the sulphurous regions, and that their present advocacy of it was due to their willful obstinacy, and against their convictions as to its origin and its ruinous tendencies, would they, would anybody else think us to be the proper judge of what those men really believed upon conviction.

It seems to be a mortifying and vexing fact to the leading men of the Utah Polygamic Church, that the wife, (legal and only wife), and sons of Joseph Smith have refused to bow the knee to the Baal of unrighteousness, set up in the valleys of the mountains, to be worshiped in practice only "in Utah," and not anywhere else. And in the frantic endeavors of these men of Utah to convince and overawe us into a cessation of opposition, if not into an acceptance of their pet dogma, they get exasperated, and shout: "Your father did it! Your father did it! You know he did! You know you are not honest when you deny it! We bear our testimony to you that he did! That ought to convince you; and it does!"

And when we state that we do not accept either testimony, or doctrine, they conclude we are altogether unbelieving, have not the spirit of our father, do not understand what he taught, &c.

It really seems to us from the tone of what is written and spoken by these men whose doctrine we are opposing, that they have so long indulged themselves with thinking themselves the repositories of all truth, all knowledge, all wisdom, that when they deign to speak, or write, it must be taken as the end of controversy; that their speech is the oracle from which there must be neither defection, nor variance; that the realm of fact must hold its breath, and all things stand proved when one of them says "I bear testimony." It has been stated, and it sometimes looks as if there was reason to believe it true, that the extraordinary importance with which these Utah Elders have invested their "holy priesthood," their "establishment of the kingdom," has led them to conclude that whatever they hold in regard to religion, law, politics, or social ethics, is the acme of all that is wise, rational, or just; and he who dares to hold contrary is a fool, or of the devil. We hope for the sake of common consistency that this idea is a wrong one, and that there is a sufficient amount of human goodness and frailty left in Utah to recognize the futility of claiming infallibility for the decrees of their priesthood in the face of the errors of their past record; and that there is also enough common sense left with the leaders to accord to other men earnestness of purpose and honesty of conviction though those men differ from them never so widely.

IN THE statistics of the Utah Church, as given by George Q. Cannon, at their late conference held at Salt Lake City, are the following significant figures. Membership in Utah 176,000; number of families 23,000; 2,300 were born during the last six months, one to every ten families; of this number 1,200 are males, 1,100 females. There are 12 apostles, 58 patriarchs, 3,885 seventies, 3,153 high priests, 11,005 elders, 1,500 bishops, and 4,400 deacons; number of priests and teachers not given. If these last average with the deacons, 4,400 priests and 4,400 teachers may be added; total officers 32,755. 2,005 more than half the male members of the church are officers; and more than one fourth of the entire membership are officials. The births are twelve male to eleven female, a bad, very bad statistical argument for polygamy, a strong protest made by nature against it. If this disparity between the sexes continues until these children arrive at marriageable age, and all marry, one man one woman, each husband one wife only, one hundred of the men will have no wives. If two hundred of the men, one fifth of the whole number, about the proportion now in polygamy, marry two wives each, then three hundred of these men will be without wives—better they had not been born, for they can never marry and be glorified.

The statistics of the census of 1860, 1870 and 1880, all point to the same protest. In 1860 there were 20,255 males, 20,018 females; in 1870, 44,121 males, 42,665 females; in 1880, 74,471 males, 69,436 females, an excess of 230 males in 1860, 1,456 in 1870, and 5,035 in 1880. The genius of polygamy, if the theory is worth anything, should long since have contrived some means of mending the methods of nature in this respect so contradictory of the ethics of the doctrine.

SAMUEL D. MOORE an elder of the Brighamite church, resident of Paysen, Utah, returning from a mission in the South passed through Lamoni, on his way home. He visited some of his relatives residing here, and at his return home reported his trip. Among the rest of the things are the following:

"On his way home he stopped a few days at Lamoni, Iowa, the head quarters of the Josephite Church, to visit some relatives residing there and was very kindly treated by members of that body.

He was offered the free use of their place of worship to preach in, but through appointments ahead was unable to accept the offer. Brother Moore states that it is the feeling among prominent members of the Josephite community that the two wings of the Church (as they term themselves and the Utah Saints) will eventually coalesce, through defection on one side or the other. Which one will take the initiative they do not say. It is reported that their President, Joseph Smith, claims to have seen in a vision the union of the two branches, but declines to state which is destined to give way to the influence and teachings of the other. It is also said that Joseph Smith intends visiting Utah at an early day."

The Editor of the Deseret News makes this addition to the report of elder Moore.

"We would remark, by way of addendum, that whatever may be the views of the Josephites and their leader in regard to the "coalition" of the two Churches, there is no doubt in the minds of the people of Utah as to which one of them will have to "give way."

We did not see elder Moore, nor do we know with whom he conversed while at Lamoni. But whoever it was either they misstated, or Elder Moore misunderstood, for Pres. Joseph Smith has never claimed to have seen a union of the two branches, and no one was authorized to so report.

So far as absorption by defection from one to the other may be concerned, it may be as well for the Editor of the News to reflect that there are hundreds apostatizing every year from the rule in Utah, and some of them reach the fold of the Reorganized Church. Nor has it been a very great while since this same Deseret News proclaimed to its readers that the Reorganized Church was made up of "back outs" "renegades" and "apostates" from the church which the News represents. There are enough of us to worry our Utah neighbors considerably any way.

We are sincerely glad that Elder Moore was well treated by the Saints at Lamoni, and hope that he will come again.

BRO. JOSEPH F. BURTON roused the ire of a Baptist deacon in one of the Nova Scotian Churches, who wrote to a friend calling him an "emissary of the devil." The friend wrote to the Christian Messenger; a "Religious" Newspaper, at Halifax, exposing Bro. Burton, as he called it. We publish two paragraphs from the letter, which was written by J. F. Kempton.

I am informed that this Mormon "saint" purposes soon to visit Cape Breton. The Lord deliver the churches and people from the wretched doctrine and delusion of this misguided man. Yes, and more. May he deliver the man himself from this snare of the devil, and lead him to the God of his sainted father for salvation. Our churches and people need to know more of Jesus Christ the Crucified. This would make them both better and happier; but they can well and wisely afford to shut out "Joe Smith" and "Brigham Young" and all their followers. Inquire for "the old paths," my brethren, and walk in them, and by-and-by you shall rejoice in the Latter Day glory.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE attended the Decatur County Fair, on the 18th of October, and among the things we saw there, the following attracted attention as representative of the products of the county. There was a very fine display of apples; among others the Ben Davis, Jonathan, Genetin, Bell-flower, Grimes Golden, Willow Twig and Roman Stem showed especially fine. The show of beets, turnips, potatoes, onions, corn and smaller garden truck was good. Two Mammoth squashes grown by Bro. George Thorp, of Pleasanton, weighed respectively 137 and 135 lbs. Who can beat that? Bro. Thorp proposes to sell the seed of these heroic squashes, and may be addressed at his home, Pleasanton, Decatur county, Iowa. Cattle, sheep, hogs and horses were as good as can be shown anywhere, or in any county in Iowa, notwithstanding the horrible hardpan stories told of Decatur county.

Some good brother sent us from Gallagher's Ranch, Texas, by mail, a specimen of the gray hanging moss that grows on the trees in the south. This specimen hangs from the twigs on which it grew, cut about six inches long, to the length of nearly five feet. It is in two strands, and looks like a braided net work of grey thread, or small twine, with long, small, spear-shaped leaves, spreading from the slender vine, like star points. The specimen must have been quite six feet long when it was cut from the tree, but by carrying in the mail, and our careless undoing of it before we found out what it was, broke off the lower part of it. We thank the brother for it. Sr. Smith has hung it among her flowers in her window.

The Deseret News of October 19th, 1883, contains the notice of the death of Edward Hunter, Presiding Bishop of the Utah Mormon Church, aged ninety years. He was born in Newton Township, Delaware county, Pennsylvania, June 23d, 1793. The News pays a glowing tribute to his memory; and we presume, from what we have been told, he was worthy, as he was long and favorably known among the people with whom he labored.

Bro. Hans N. Hansen and wife had arrived at Salt Lake City, at Bro. Blair's last writing. Bro. Hansen will labor in Utah for the Winter.

Bro. E. C. Brand reports an excellent conference in Salt Lake City. He is actively engaged in the work and thinks prospects good. He will make Ogden city his headquarters for some time and may be addressed there.

Utah has at last manifested one of the weaknesses attending upon civilization; "Bro. Wm. Reeve" of Centreville, Davis County, Utah, collector of county and State funds, has lost $3,000 in his accounts some way, and has disappeared.

The work still progresses in the Southern Nebraska District. Two have been baptized at Nebraska City lately. A discussion has been arranged to come off at Wilber, between Bro. E. L. Kelley on our part and Elder Clark Braden, of the Christian Church on the other part. So writes Bro. R. M. Elvin.

Bro. T. W. Smith had reached Springerton, Illinois, on his second tour through the field assigned him.

The Rev. John R. Fisher resigned a charge as a preacher in Jersey City, New Jersey, after nine years in the ministry, assigning as the reason for his action that there were "too many churches for the business in that city." This is an unique and very plausible reason for quitting the sectarian and denominational pulpit. We really think the business overdone.

Bro. Joseph Luff has returned from Utah, to his home at Independence, Jackson county, Missouri, which will be his address for the present. He was laboring at Armstrong, at last advices; health improving, and having good liberty.

Bro. R. J. Anthony is at home, arriving from the South Eastern Mission a few days ago.

Contents of November Advocate:—"The Rejection of the Church as viewed from the Church works," page 377-386. "Seed unto the Lord," page 387-392. Persons wishing copies of this number of the Advocate can procure them by ordering from this office, or from W. W. Blair, Salt Lake City, Utah.

THE Cheyenne Sun, published at Cheyenne, Wyoming, worked itself into a terrible rage the other day because Bro. E. C. Brand, in passing, called on Bro. John Eames, preached in Bro. Eames' house and baptized two or three in the waters of a lake near the town, at night. It does not appear that the Editor was mad because the baptizing was done at night, but because it was done at all. He closes his screed thus:

It is stated that the scamp will rustle around in Wyoming and Montana during the ensuing year. He works very secretly, but in case he is discovered in the perpetration of his missionary work it is suggested that he receive a practical demonstration of the virtues that lie dormant in a feather pillow and a bucket of tar.

In striking contrast to the terrible things suggested by the Sun, is the following from the Deer Lodge, Montana, New North-west, on a similar subject.

NO LUNATICS THERE.

It is said there is a Mormon apostle in Deer Lodge county trying to make proselytes to the Mormon faith.—Independent.

Who is he? There are a few lunatics in the insane asylum in this county and a few outside of it; but outside of those, if there are any of them, we do not think there are any Mormon apostles at work in Deer Lodge county. By this we mean polygamous Mormons. That for the past ten or twelve years there have been in this county a considerable number of people known as "Mormons" is well-known; but they are more bitterly opposed to the Utah Mormons and their peculiar doctrines than the average Montanian and are morally above reproach. The Independent may have heard of some crank not worth paying asylum fees on is running at large somewhere, it can rest assured that this will be a second Georgia to any responsible concubine catchers that turn up.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Heman C. Smith wrote card from Cook's Point:

All is well here. Bro. Montague is with me, Bro. Cato at Bandera. Our conference passed off pleasantly. Our colored brother, E. White, baptized a colored Baptist preacher of eighteen years' experience.

Correspondence.

WILBER, Nebraska,

October 19th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Have just arrived at home, after visiting some of the branches, and attending our district conference. I left Nebraska City, on Sunday morning, October 7th, in company with R. M. Elvin. Traveled fourteen miles, and met with the Moroni Branch at eleven o'clock. Bro. Elvin preached, after which we repaired to the water and he administered the ordinance of baptism to one. Assembled again at three o'clock. Bro. Elvin preached the funeral sermon of two children who had died some time since, after which we partook of the bread and wine. Bro. Elvin then returned home, I remaining. Held three meetings with good liberty. Hope some good may result from our labors. The Saints will please accept my thanks for temporal aid. I then visited Plattsmouth Branch. Found the Saints there enjoying a good degree of the Spirit, owing principally to the energetic labors and exemplary life of their president, Bro. W. B. Smith, who is the right man in the right place. Held three meetings, and was made to rejoice to see the advancement that had been made in so short a time. Six months ago, I in company with Bro. E. C. Brand and R. M. Elvin, visited this branch to adjust matters, and found them dead spiritually. I would not fail to give credit to the two last named brethren for labors done, that those may have honor to whom honor is due. On Saturday morning started for Elmwood, the place appointed for our conference. Met Bro. R. M. Elvin and J. Armstrong; also Bro. Wm. Good, of Tabor, Iowa. Had an enjoyable time with a gaining interest from without, which gave us crowded houses, brother Elvin doing the principal preaching with good liberty, the Spirit attending the word with power. We were requested by both Saint and sinner, to remain and preach to or for them, a week; but home duties forbade. So we left, brother R. M. Elvin agreeing to return soon. Upon the whole I feel much encouraged. As far as my knowledge extends, the work in this district is in a prosperous condition.

Yours in gospel bonds,

L. ANTHONY, Dist. Pres.

ARMSTRONG, Kansas,

October 22d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I reached home on the 12th inst., and preached at Independence on the 14th, to a large congregation, with very good liberty. I commenced, by request, a series of meetings at this place on the 17th, and so far have preached six times; have appointments out for to-night and to-morrow night, and may hold on if interest justifies. Our congregations were small, but are increasing in size.

The Saints here have exhibited commendable zeal in the erection of a neat and commodious house of worship. It is finished and looks well. May "peace on earth and good will to men," ever reign as an honored motto among them. Though weak in body, yet we have been blessed and strengthened so far, while laboring among them. Am much better in health than for some time. My address will be Independence, Mo., henceforth. Am much pleased to notice the class of people that have settled in Independence during the past year. There is an abundance of room for the energetic, diligent, frugal and God-fearing element, but no room nor demand for drones.

Hoping for strength and wisdom to labor acceptably, and praying for the triumph of truth, as ever,

JOSEPH LUFF.

Dear Bro. Joseph:—The work of the Lord in this city seems to be reviving, as one after another has obeyed from the heart the truth, and received the promised blessing, the gift of the Holy Spirit, they have let their light shine, so that others, too, are enquiring the way of life. Bro. John Gilbert was with us last Sabbath, and gave two able discourses which stirred up a deeper interest, and a desire to hear more. He will be with us providence permitting, next Sunday, when we expect a still larger number of hearers. If there could be continued efforts we might reasonably expect a harvest for the Master.

Last evening's prayer meeting was full of interest, the Holy Spirit being with us. Bro. Gilbert's remarks were timely and in power. Two expressed their desire to obey the gospel, and a brother presented the name of his son, which will make three to be baptized on the morrow. We expect Bro. Gurley to be with us on his return from the East.

Bro. Joseph, you may be assured that the church in this part of the vineyard is with you heart and soul in your noble defense of a pure gospel, the gospel of Christ, in which alone is salvation, against the corrupt doctrines of Satan. Whatever has been, or may be said by them, can not affect the truth as it is in Christ, the fruits of the Spirit as received through obedience of the gospel alone are manifest in the children of God. There is nothing better than eternal life in and through Christ.

Your brother in the gospel,
E. N. WEBSTER.

Editor of Herald:—Yesterday was election day here. The ladies prepared a free dinner in the Town Hall for all the voters without distinction of party. The prohibition ticket was elected in this town by over one hundred majority. Every thing was orderly and peaceable.

The weather is quite warm just now. Our meetings were well attended last Sabbath and we felt well in trying to interest the hearers. Quite a number are improving this fine weather in visiting the Temple. In the last week, Pennsylvania, Connecticut, Nebraska, California, Michigan, New York and this State, have been represented.

I notice that Mr. Littlefield has conceded considerable in his last effort. Hope you will look after the others sharply—their witnesses not excepted. Of course they can furnish living witnesses that will swear—to almost anything. Why did not Joseph present that purported revelation to some one who did not go to Utah and practice polygamy? It's too bad he did not. Or else it is too bad they never testified of it. Uncle William Smith was one of the Twelve, but he writes that his brother never taught him polygamy. He never saw the polygamist revelation in his brother's lifetime; yet it is said that it was presented to the Quorum of the Twelve. Who is lying? Which are the most credible witnesses? The interested parties—those who have testified on both sides of the question? or those who have had nothing to do with polygamy whatever—who only care for the facts in the case?

Glad of the good time had at the Reunion. I leave here this morning to attend the Michigan District Conference. E. L. expected to return next week. No one here for next Sabbath. May this find you well and encouraged. Hopefully,
WM. H. KELLEY.

Bro. Joseph:—We have just returned from Mission Branch, where we have been holding one of the best district conferences that it has been my privilege to be present at for a long time. Peace and good order prevailed, each one seemed to esteem and respect his brother as himself; that Spirit of oneness and love, without dissimulation, so much needed among Saints was present in a marked degree, and the time was profitable and enjoyable to all. The speakers also seemed to catch the hallowed influence, and dispensed the word with force and wisdom, and notwithstanding the unfavorableness of the weather, and bad roads, the house was crowded every meeting, and the Spirit spoke encouragingly.

Yours,
J. S. PATTERSON.

Dear Bro. Joseph:—I reached Richland county, Ill., on Saturday, the 6th inst. Spoke several times there, and reached Brush Creek Branch on last Sunday morning. Preached five times there. The people seem to be interested in our views, as the school houses are frequently over crowded; but scarcely any seem inclined to obey. I reached here on Friday night last just in time for meeting, as the train was forty-five minutes late. I had fasted at noon, of my own choice, and at supper time against my desire. But I think I was as clear headed as if I had eaten a hearty supper, if not a little more so. I expect to speak here till Wednesday, and then go to Indiana. My address for a few weeks will be Scottsville, Floyd county, Indiana, care Elder Harbert Scott.

Bro. Joseph:—I left home on the 13th, to attend conference held here with the Platte River Branch. The conference was a success. The business session was good. All in the unity of the spirit and good feeling; and the preaching was splendid. The word was spoken with power and demonstration of the Spirit. I go from here to labor with the Palmyra Branch. I expect to be away from home until near Christmas. Expect to attend the debate now contemplated at Wilber. I feel more like preaching the word than I ever did before. I realize the responsibility. I am often made to rejoice; for I know that His promises are sure. I am sacrificing my strength and means; but I know the reward is with Him, the giver of every good and perfect gift.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

ELKHORN CITY, Nebraska,

Dear Herald:—On the 12th of this month I entered upon the mission of saving souls in the State of Nebraska, by declaring to them the power of God to that end. Arriving at the city of Fremont in the afternoon of the same day, preaching to the Saints and friends who gathered in the house of Bro. Edward Thomas. On the morrow I was taken to the Beebe school house, where a two days' meeting had been appointed. There I met with Brn. William Rumel and James Caffall with the surrounding Saints, bringing with them their lunch baskets well filled with food. The branch in which the meeting was held is an exemplary one, composed mostly of Danish brethren and sisters, presided over by Elder James P. Ogard, who is sustained in unity by all in the branch. On Wednesday and Tuesday nights meetings were held at Fremont, in the Union Branch. Said branch being presided over by Elder M. W. Sampson, who is laboring to the best of his ability for unity among the Saints. The branch is struggling amongst influences that cause coldness to exist; and the Saints in zeal, are manifesting their desire for others to see as they do. On Wednesday came with the district president to the Douglas Branch, where we preached on Thursday and Friday nights. But little interest is manifested in hearing the word, yet some are near the kingdom. The president
