The Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, 6th January, 1883.

GREETING.

IN greeting the readers of the HERALD at the beginning of the year, we experience great pleasure. The old year has been filled with moving events, many of them closely connected with the work we are all trying to forward, and which is regarded by us as being a good work, worthy of all our powers. During the past year, the powers that rule over the destinies of the Church have, as we believe, been propitious to us; and out of the many strange events which have transpired while the year was passing, some have been full of interest to all the faithful, and fraught with import of good to them. Moral prestige has been obtained, and advancement made. Things that have been, and things that are, have been made to take on new significance, and he who ran read as he ran; and his heart was filled with joy.

The action of Congress last winter, and the forced recognition of the Reorganization in the controversy then waged in regard to the Utah affairs, were of great moment; and the far spread acknowledgement of the position the Church has from the first taken, have operated much to the advantage of the cause. The steady forward march of slow-moving truths has left some of the peculiar besetments of the latter day work high and dry, as way marks for the guidance of those who endure in the days to come. One or two of these we mention. The unfortunate ending of the W. K. Lay movement, with its peculiar fascination; the strange out-cropping of the post-script to the "letter of appointment," the foundation corner stone of the Beaver Island dynasty, under James J. Strang; the meeting of the April Conference on the historic ground at Independence, Missouri; the assembling of the Fall Session at Lamoni; and the prospective meeting at Kirtland, Ohio, have all had their effect for good, effectually establishing the fact that overruling providences have stayed the earlier happening of these events, that they might transpire with effective weight to aid in the grand progression.

We take leave of the year 1882 with gladness. No year has passed, of late, so quickly in seeming; nor been so fraught with pleasant recollections touching our good work. The faces so persistently set Zionward have glowed in the sunlight shining from the distant glory; and the hearts weighed down by sadness and sorrow through their long waiting, have been made to rejoice in the near approach of full deliverance.

The Church now stands on higher planes for development and hope of success than ever before. We begin the New Year with stronger determinations than ever to prosecute the work at our hands to do, with unabated zeal, and so far as we can with undiminished force.

So far as the peculiar place in the work occupied by the HERALD is concerned, it is that of a constant watchcare for and utilizer of whatever may aid centrally and spread abroad the truth as we comprehend it. The HERALD has reached the completion of its Twenty-ninth Volume, and begins the Thirtieth with fair prospects, so far as its journalistic existence is concerned; and in the form of a weekly proposes still to carry out the design of its institution, the dissemination of the principles of the gospel, as revealed to Joseph Smith and others, and taught by them prior to and until 1844. Whatever has been introduced since, or that is subversive of or antagonistic to that gospel will be steadfastly opposed. Whatever is believed to be conducive to the good of man and the work, will be advocated and defended; that which is believed to be erroneous, wrong, and tending to evil, will be condemned and opposed.

The high standard of truth and morality which it has been the endeavor of the Church to rear and uphold, it will be the constant aim to still maintain. No one need flatter himself that so far as the HERALD may do, anything will be left undone to keep its patrons advised of the onward sweep of favoring events; nor need any suppose that those having charge will be deterred from doing and saying what they believe duty demands, through fear; or that they will be moved unduly by favor.

TO-DAY.

IN September, 1831, a period in which all factions of the Latter Day Saints agree that Joseph Smith, the Martyr, was not yet fallen, if he ever fell, a revelation was given to the Church through him, in which commandments concerning the work specially before the Church, and certain leading men in it, were given; and certain instructions were given and truths announced that would of a necessity be applicable to them, the Church, during the time of its active work upon the earth IN TIME. We quote:

"Behold, now it is called to-day, (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned; (at his coming); for after to-day cometh the burning; this is speaking after the manner of the Lord; for verily I say, to-morrow all the proud and they that do wickedly shall be as stubble; and I will burn them up, for I am the Lord of Hosts; and I will not spare any that remaineth in Babylon. Wherefore, if ye believe me, ye will labor while it is called to-day."—Doc. & Cov. sec. 64, par. 5.

We have quoted nearly the larger part of the paragraph; for the purpose of seeing if there need to be any mistake in the application.

The especial burden of the paragraph seems to be to define the scope of the words "to-day," the present and passing day. Now when the disciples asked Jesus "When shall these things be?" he at once told them, and the time was clearly defined by what should take place. In the instance under consideration it is equally clear; for the time of the labor of the Church for the accomplishment of the design of its institution and establishment is fairly stated.

Let us see: "Behold, now it is called to-day." The definition, or the scope of the time meant by "to-day" is given to be "until the coming of the Son of Man." There can not be a shadow of doubt of this rendition of that part of the revelation being correct. That which follows, with this as a key must be equally clear. "Verily (truly) it is a day of sacrifice." This day, "to-day," that is to extend from that September day in 1831 to the first day of the coming of the Son of Man, was to be a day of sacrifice. There is no doubt of this rendition also being correct. Then again the same day, covering the same limit of time, was to be a "day for the tithing" of the people, called by Christ in this and other revelations, "My people," the "people of my Church," the "people of God," "my Church." There can be no doubt then in this rendition, that until the "coming of the Son of Man," the people, the church referred to, are to be governed in relation to their temporal support of the Church and its work, by "tithing."

Whatever view may be adopted by those who are inclined to believe that tithing has no place in the law to govern the Church, as to the methods, plans, or rules by which the Church should raise the funds necessary to carry on the preaching of the gospel, which must of necessity be done, or the intention of the creation of the Church is defeated; not one of those heretofore tried has in any single sense proved to be a success. The statement once made that "in the scattered condition of the Church" such and such rules could not be "carried out;" with the suggestion that a system of "freewill offerings" be adopted by the branches and districts, brought no relief of the monetary distress. The later advice that moneys accruing from tithes and offerings placed in the Bishop's Agent's hands should not be used for district gospel purposes, and that District Agents should be appointed by the various districts for the creation of a separate fund for use in gospel work in the district, gave no shekels to the Church's coffers; for it almost seemed as if the dollars in the endeavor to hit both the Church and district treasury, fell between them far from either. And so of others.

Whatever view may have been hitherto, or may now be taken by those who believe that the church should abide closely by the teaching of the law, or the "law of God," as the most of them would put it, one thing is decidedly clear to us, (and of course we think it should be to every other), there has been and is now a great reason why there should be "moneys in the treasury," "means in the store-house of the Lord," for the carrying on of the work. Hence everybody ought to be interested in securing that necessary end; and if everyone were to put the law, as he understands it, into active operation; or to use plainer terms, if everyone who has a notion of what ought to be done would himself do that, applying his view of the law to himself, and pay into the treasury what that view would demand, it would prove him to be sincere and something would be done,—there might be many ways, but each one of them would bring something to the store-house,—put them into execution, brethren please do.

In the mean time we deem it wise and fully practicable, to accept of the rendering of the Bishopric, who have a decided right to know and to speak in the premises, upon the question of the name to be given to the moneys and goods paid into the church coffers for the purpose of carrying on the work of the ministry. They call them "tithing," and we are of the opinion that the time of its application to the church, whether as a rule of the church, or as the law of God, is as we have herein stated now, and from now until the Son of Man shall come.

The view herein expressed as regards the applicability of the rule found in the revelation of September, 1831, to the church in its present condition; that is to say, its applicability in the present time, the now, will be more fully expressed in the discourses of Bishop G. A. Blakeslee and counsellor E. L. Kelley, which will appear in the HERALD, in its issues for January 13th and 20th, and for which we hereby bespeak a careful reading and hearty endorsement.

ELDERS JOHN T. CAINE and George Q. Cannon, of Salt Lake City, Utah, leading men in the Utah Church, are in Washington; the former to claim a seat as delegate from Utah; to succeed G. Q. Cannon, unseated the last session of Congress, and the latter as assistant and adviser. Mr. Caine is a reputed monogomist, and in this particular is not objectionable, or ineligible, and if properly elected should be seated. But, and if, and here lies the difficulty, Gov. E. H. Murray ordered no election to fill the vacancy caused by the unseating of Mr. Cannon; neither did the Electoral Commission order an election; but the people, of course under direction of their leaders, placed certain names upon their tickets, and among them Mr. Caine's for the office of delegate to Congress. It is said that he received some 35,000 votes. By virtue of this impromptu election Mr.

Caine presents himself to Congress and demands the right to sit as such elected delegate.

Mr. Moulton, of Illinois, presented the issue to Congress and the matter is committed to a sub-committee, of which Mr. Moulton is chairman for an examination and report; and he expresses the opinion in view of the state of public opinion against polygamy, and Utah as a consequence, it is probable that the technicalities of the case will be recognized, and Mr. John T. Caine be not allowed a seat in the present Congress as delegate from Utah.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

REV. JOSEPH COOK, took occasion while delivering a lecture in Denver, Colorado, not long since to state that "Mormonism created the degradation of woman." Bro. James Caffall, who is in Hutchinson, Colorado, writes to the Republican, at Denver, and "handles" the reverend gentleman "without gloves;" as the head lines to the letter state. Bro. Caffall aptly takes the ground that those who "knowingly misrepresent the principles held by others, which themselves do not believe," are either "ignorant or wilful." This is a sound conclusion, and it would be an excellent thing if Rev. Cook could read Bro. Caffall's plain revision of the statement made by that gentleman. Rev. Forester once said "of all the fools in this world, the learned fool is the most unbearable."

Bro. W. H. Kelley is in receipt of letters from Bro. Andrew Barr, of Forester, Michigan, and Bro. A. J. Hinkle, of Green Ridge, Manitoba, from both of whom good news comes. A case of healing is related by Bro. Barr as transpiring within his knowledge. Bro. Hinkle is quite anxious that some one shall visit them this Winter.

Bro. James Caffall was at Hutchinson, Colorado, at the date of his last letter to us, December 4th. He wrote to state that during the month of November some of his correspondences were lost in transmission through the mail, and he requests that if any have addressed him on things of import, that they will rewrite him, addressing him at Denver, or Hutchinson, Colorado.

The dwelling houses of Brn. David Dancer, E. Banta, and Norman W. Smith, at Lamoni, are rapidly nearing completion. Several others are being erected in the village now, and it is expected that more will go up in the Spring.

Bro. T. R. Hawkins sends us from his home, Dayton, Nevada, a copy of quite a number of hieroglyphic inscriptions, the originals of which are found in the flinty face of a mountain twenty miles from Dayton. Their appearance, Bro. Hawkins states, warrants the idea that they are of ancient date.

Bro. John Richards, writes that he has a copy of the Doctrine and Covenants, Book of Mormon, and all the tracts and pamphlets printed by the Church in Welsh; which, if any brother desires he will exchange for the books of the Church in English. His copies are well bound in calf and half calf bindings. Any one wanting them can address him at Beaumont, Kansas.

Senator Edmunds, from whom the Edmund's Bill takes its name, now proposes to help the enforcement of the law in Utah by making the lawful wife of a polygamous husband a competent witness in case of suit against him for bigamy, or polygamy. That is right.

Bro. J. W. Gillen went to Lucas, Lucas county, Iowa, on Monday, December 4th, in answer to a telegram from the branch there, to meet an elder of the Christian Church, J. D. Pegg by name, upon the Sunday, or First Day Sabbath question. A five days' discussion was held, the result of the debate has not yet transpired.

WE send a great many specimen copies of this issue, to many who have not their names on our subscription list. We do this as a request for them to subscribe. As heretofore stated, persons desiring the HERALD, are requested to send us their names, with the money is preferred as a matter of course; but if this can not readily be done at the time, send the names any way, and the money after a while. Presiding Elders of districts and branches, Elders in the field, are requested to solicit subscriptions; and the Bishopric, and Bishop's Agents, are requested also to receive subscriptions and forward moneys for the HERALD, HOPE and ADVOCATE. Don't be afraid; we are provided for a long list of subscribers. Send them along.

We have made present arrangements by which sermons of leading Elders will be reported for the HERALD, which will appear from time to time, beginning with one by Bro. Joseph R. Lambert.

BISHOP George A. Blakeslee, and Counsellors E. Banta and E. L. Kelley met in consultation at Lamoni, from December 7th to the 10th. We understand that an agreement was reached by them in reference to their work and the manner of conducting the business of the Bishopric. Brethren Blakeslee and Kelley addressed the Saints at Lamoni, at the New Chapel in the evening, and Bro. Kelley on the morning of Sunday the 10th, at the Old Church. These discourses were upon the finances of the Church, and the law that should govern in collecting and disbursing the funds of the Church by the Bishopric; and were reported for the HERALD, and will appear at an early date. This visit of these brethren, and their effort to teach the law were well received. The morning service was at the Old Church at eleven o'clock, a. m., and was quite well attended; at the evening service the house was filled to overflowing, and many staid away by reason of want of room. Brethren Blakeslee and Kelley spent Saturday and Sunday, December 2d and 3d with the Saints at Kewanee in their conference of that district, and went from Lamoni to meet with the Galland's Grove district, at Salem Branch, on the 16th and 17th of December.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Thomas W. Smith writes from Stewartville, at late date:

"I think there is a general desire on the part of the ministry and membership to arouse themselves and to be more diligent in keeping the law of God. I am surprised that the weekly should be sent for only thirty-five cents in addition to present price of Herald."

Bro. W. H. Kelley writing from Chicago, November 30th, says:

"I am glad that you have almost reached the weekly. We will help to make it a success."

Sr. M. A. Christy says of the HERALD, HOPE and ADVOCATE:

"I cherish the good reading in those papers, as better to me than gold, for gold could not satisfy my hungering and thirsting after righteousness, as the truths contained in them, and in the works of God. I love this latter day work, and rejoice in the truth, although I seldom see a Saint, or hear a song or sermon. But this is evidence of God's truth; it gives me constant peace and strength, such as nothing else in all this broad land can give."

Bro. W. W. Blair, wrote from Salt Lake City, December 2d, 1882:

"I go to-day to Sandy and Mill Creek, to aid Bro. Gibson in opening up two new places for preaching."

Bro. William Allen, writing from Oak Grove, Carroll county, Arkansas, November 20th, 1882, states:

"We have not heard a Saint preach, or seen one, for six years. I think that there could be good done here if an Elder would come here; but if they don't come, I trust that we will soon be able to go where we can enjoy the society of the Saints. We have people here, who 'know all about the Mormons,' that do not know anything at all about them. We have attended their meeting; they keep aloof from us in every way; but we hope that the day is not far distant that they may hear the truth and obey."

Bro. B. L. Billingsley wrote from Manchester, Red River county, Texas, November 26th, 1882:

"We are all well. Bro. Montague has been here since the 5th inst.; he has been preaching as opportunity offered. He and Bro. B. T. St. John left for Silver Hill, the 23d instant. On account of high waters and other hindrances, we are getting no mails now."

Bro. W. H. Kelley was on the 5th of December, in the city of Chicago. He was feeling well. An Italian by the name of Ellenger had given his name for baptism. The same one had translated the Epitome and "What is Truth," into the Italian language for publication. It seems to be well done. His Chicago address is 14 South Sheldon street. He says, November 30th:

"This thanksgiving finds me in the city. The day is one of feasting, merriment and pleasure. Bro. Z. H. Gurley was with us over Sunday last, and preached twice, morning and evening, in his usual pleasant and forcible way. The hearers were pleased with his efforts. He left yesterday for the east feeling well and sanguine of good results. May success crown his efforts. We are anxious and hopeful."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Do you understand a former act of General Conference, relating to members of the Church attaching themselves to the branches nearest to where they reside, to be a rule or law, and of that character that a violation of it will subject the disobedient to trial for fellowship?

No. It is a statement of what should be done in wisdom. If persons refuse, or neglect to so enroll themselves, the district can order their names enrolled on the proper branch record of names.

Should a branch covering quite an extensive territory for convenience sake, and in good feeling, divide into two or more branches, and draw geographical lines for their respective boundaries, would those who prefer on account of associations, (and who are in good standing or full fellowship with all concerned), to remain connected with the parent branch, be subject to labor if they objected to the removing of their names from the parent record?

No.

Would such a division, leaving the Saints to attach themselves to which division they prefer, they being in good standing in the Church, be in conflict with the act of General Conference referred to?

No.

Would it not be better to do without lines, and permit the Saints to record their names where they choose and where they prefer to meet, because of family or other associations; if consent of the respective branches interested is obtained?

Yes.

Is it lawful for a branch to receive members that have been once baptized into the Reorganized Church and then baptized into the Bickertonites?

Yes. The position assumed by the Reorganization is that "baptisms performed in any of the different factions of the Church, or the sects, as they confer nothing, can not take anything away." Therefore, persons legally baptized, may at any time thereafter connect themselves with the Church, unless properly excommunicated for cause.

Can a branch lawfully receive persons so baptized, without re-baptism?

Yes. The reason is the same as given in the answer preceding; the baptism of the Bickertonites if it could not confer anything, could not take anything away.

The item below cut from the Santa Ana, California, Herald, will tell the Saints what Bro. D. S. Mills is doing in the field partially:

"On Sunday, the 3d, at 11 a. m., at the Saints' Church, in the Swamp, there will be a discourse delivered on the Early Races of this Continent as viewed in the light of Prophecy, History and Archeology. All are invited. D. S. Mills, President of Southern California District of Church of Jesus Christ, L. D. S."

It has drifted along in its time, just as it might have been expected; see below:

"Beecher finally accepts the doctrine of evolution, and denies the fall of Adam and imputed sin to all his descendants; but he hesitates about accepting its logical consequence, the doing away with the divine scheme of salvation. But if there was no fall there was no need of a scheme of redemption that involved the sacrifice upon the cross of the incarnated Divinity. There is no escape from this conclusion. Either man fell from a state of perfection and 'brought sin into the world, and all our woe,' or the doctrine of the atonement is a surplusage of theology that should be abandoned. It is in vain to attempt to harmonize the scientific theory of creation with the theological tenet of the special creation and fall of man. The labors of all the ministers in the world can not harmonize the relations between them. Either the scientific theory is erroneous or the dogma is."

If you have any curiosity to know how subtle the devil is, you need not ask your neighbors. Just make a quiet survey of your own life and you will find out.

Every human creature is sensible to some infirmities of temper, which it should be his duty to correct and subdue.

Do what must be done as gracefully as possible.

Always write the Business portion of your Letter on a separate piece of paper, and let it be brief and explicit.

If you have anything to say to the Editor, or something you wish published, do not write it on the back of a business letter. Business is Business, and must be done in a business-like manner.

Correspondence.

BARDWELL, Ballard Co., Kentucky,

December 4th, 1882.

Dear Herald:—Through the providence of God, and the dispensation of his grace, I still "live, and have a being." My physical abilities are good, mental powers, I trust, are unimpaired, while spiritually I am blessed, and withal I entertain a strong desire to improve by a closer walk with my Heavenly Father. Deep in the recesses of my heart I feel a responsive echo to the rich blessings of God to the sons and daughters of men.

With pleasure I relate that the work of God under the auspices of a restored gospel, is receiving the attention and consideration of the people of this vicinity. The month's labor spent here last Winter seems not to have been in vain. Seed sown has germinated, resulting in anxious inquiry concerning the gospel "as we teach it." The field is widening, and, by solicitation, we have four appointments for preaching at as many places. We would not however, that you should think us entirely free from trials, perplexities, and disappointments; such are consequent upon mortal existence. Nor are we sanguine in hopes that all who hear, and even become interested in the gospel, are going to obey its requirements. Comparatively few there are with sufficient fortitude to "face a frowning world," and submit to the humiliation necessary in becoming a child of God. Mrs. Adair, an excellent and amiable lady, wife of Mr. S. B. Adair, resident at this place, was baptized recently, and now rejoices in the forgiveness of sins, and the hope of the glory of God. This family formerly resided in Graves county, where they heard the preaching of Brn. Clapp, Hansen, Anthony, Smith, and others. "Herein is the saying true, One soweth and another reapeth." "Paul plants, Apollos waters, but God giveth the increase." May we all so live and labor that "in the sweet by and by," we may "rejoice together."

My wife writes encouragingly of good health and the blessings of God in general; so I rejoice to be a "Saint of latter days," and believe me, I am encouraged to labor and to wait. Allow me once more to express the gratitude I owe and feel toward my Heavenly Father for his manifest mercies and blessings. I do rejoice in his work, I love his children. I am thankful for identification with the meek and humble of earth. O, that I could be more wise, loving, and kind; more solicitous for the good of others, and less concerned about the wants of self. Seldom, if ever, a day passes that does not develop some hitherto undiscovered weakness. We err, not willfully, but through ignorance. In a thousand crucibles the gold is tried; in each there is dross to consume.

Shall I tell you how I have suffered? Ah! none but those who have passed through the same "fiery trials" can know! Would to God the open confession of weaknesses and follies would remove the possibility of a recurrence.

Living in a world of sin, where Satanic influence pervades nearly every inch of space, surely nought but the grace of God can sustain even the most faithful. But he is a present helper in every time of need. "The soul that on Jesus shall lean for repose," never will be forgotten nor forsaken. We trust in him; we wait for his coming, when all shall receive according as their work shall be. The past with its failures and successes we can not recall. Of the future we know but little. But the present is ours to improve as we may. To "work, work for Jesus," shall be our motto; but only the future can reveal how well we shall succeed, or what the result will be.

Now, dear Herald, we rejoice in your temporal and spiritual prosperity. As a weekly, we shall gladly greet you, and methinks that thousands will welcome the progressive change. May your sacred columns—for so they are to me—remain unsullied,—free from vindictive language, or uncharitable insinuations; and we predict and pray that your future career may exceed, in usefulness and excellence, that of the past, though fraught with so much good, and with such happy results.

Sincerely, I remain your well wisher,

GEORGE S. HYDE.

STEWARTSVILLE, Missouri,

December 12th, 1882.

Dear Brother:—We returned home from a week's trip to the Delana Branch on Friday last. Held several interesting meetings; were hindered by storm last Wednesday. Bro. Bozarth was to resume labor on Saturday night last. Good attention and fair attendance while I was there. The Saints in Stewartsville want me to deliver a course of lectures in their new hall, beginning next Sunday night; with your concurrence I will accept the invitation. I will notice the Rev. Phillips in the discussion of "our views on the Marriage Question." I spoke last Sunday night in the new hall—the opening discourse; had good liberty in speaking to a full house, about one-third outsiders. I will be ready for Kansas after Christmas. Will be kept at work here till then. I dedicated our chapel last Sunday. Had a splendid time.

Your brother,

T. W. SMITH.

WASHINGTON CORNERS, Cal.,

December 7th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—I was glad to hear that the Herald was going to become a weekly, and an advertising medium, and have been an advocate of this for years. I think it is a grand move in advance. I am well aware that there are many of my brethren that think otherwise, and that the Herald should be strictly a religious organ, and that everything in its columns should be strictly orthodox. But can we expect such perfect orthodoxy until that which is perfect has come? For as long as men are imperfect, their writings and their talk will be imperfect. So it seems to me those that want the Herald perfectly orthodox are not looking at the imperfect condition of men, their writings, thoughts and ways. Does it not savor a little of the illiberal, to say that none but orthodox writers shall have place in the Herald?

Brethren, let us be liberal. Let us step up on a higher plane. If we have the truth, it will stand. Give every man a chance to give his views through the columns of the Herald, as long as there is room, and he complies with the common rules of respect. And also make it an advertising medium for everything that is honest and good, and by this means reach thousands that do not know there is such a paper as the Saints' Herald.

Men would take the Herald if they could advertise their business through its columns. I would ask if the advertising department of the paper will detract anything from the truths in the other departments of the paper? I hope every one will come forward with their adds., and their thoughts on paper on all subjects that will tend to enlighten the world, and make the Herald the best paper in the world, the most liberal, the most reliable and truthful, always pleading the cause of Zion, and the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.

A. HAWS.

WASHINGTON, D. C.,

December 9th, 1882.

Editor Herald:—After saying "good bye" to the friends associated with you, I pursued my journey eastward, making my first stop at Chicago, that great city of business and enterprise. There I met the friends of the faith, and was kindly treated and cared for by them, both member and non-member greeting me cordially. Bro. Wm. H. Kelley, whom I found actively engaged in the missionary work there, insisted in such a brotherly way that I should occupy the morning and evening hour on Sunday the 26th ult., that I yielded, speaking with fair liberty to attentive audiences. The hall our brethren occupy is well located, and comfortable withal. I found more anxiety, and what seemed to me genuine interest to hear the word preached, than I anticipated, and I see no reason why as good success will not attend the preaching of the word there as anywhere.

While there I called on Miss Bowman, Editor of the Home Visitor, a paper published at and in the interest of the Home for the Friendless, corner of Wabash Avenue and 20th street. While there, I was called on to make some remarks to the children, to which I responded as best I could, and afterwards joined in dinner with the corps of ladies in charge, at which time "Mormonism," &c., was discussed, as well as our relation to it. Miss "B." gave me several copies of North American Review, and suggested that some of us call on Mrs. Waite, who lives in Chicago, a lady who has written a book on "Mormonism," and whom I believe gave timely assistance to Bro. E. C. Briggs when in Utah, in 1863. I hope Bro. Kelley will attend to this. I was anxious to visit this "Home," as my Aunt, Mrs. L. Morris, was one of its charter members. I found it a noble institution.

From there I came to Galien, Michigan, where I was permitted to spend one night and Thanksgiving Day with Bro. George A. Blakeslee and his amiable family. I only regretted that I could not stay longer and visit the Saints in that vicinity. However, I was anxious to see Kirtland, so I pressed on, going via Solon, Ohio, to Chagrin Falls, at which latter place lives Samuel Robinson, my wife's uncle. Here I was well entertained, and was just in time to meet seventy-nine people at his house attending his golden wedding. Here again the "Mormon" question was discussed, and I believe with some good to us, as they were all Campbellites and fine people. One of their number, a lady, was the daughter of a Latter Day Saint, her parents having died in the faith; and though her face was against us, yet she wished us "success;" and one of the party applied for a Book of Mormon, which will be furnished. I scattered there a few epitomes. A friend took horse and cutter, and carried me to Kirtland and back.—I enjoyed the trip, and especially the short visit with the friends at "K." Sister Dayton who is eighty-five years old, hale and hearty, is a standing protest against every encroachment upon the primitive faith. For twenty years she has watched over the Temple, and after relating a vision she had many years ago, in which she saw a tree with fruit on, and presently new fruit crowded the old until it fell off, and a person told her it "represented the Church of Christ," and "that all which had come out of the old church must perish." She bore her testimony to its truth, saying, that "we must get back to the first platform, or primitive gospel, and there we would prosper." With this accords the testimony of sister Ells, who saw in vision and heard the voice of the Lord in 1846 or 47.—"I will take the children of my church to build up my work, for they will hearken unto my commandments." A brother in Lamoni had similar testimony some years since, and whatever it may signify, there is certainly an agreement in these testimonies.

I am satisfied that a good work will yet be done in Ohio; so let the subscription go on, until the Temple is fully repaired. I think it decidedly advisable for more reasons than time and space will permit in this communication.

Back I came to Solon, where I was generously entertained by brother J. Lamoreaux and family—thence on to Pittsburg, the great city of iron, coal, and smoke. Spent two nights there pleasantly, meeting with the brethren in "business meeting," all seemed joyous and glad to see me. All along I found a general satisfaction that conference was to be held at Kirtland.

Bro. Ells has been quite poorly, but was some better, hopes to attend General Conference. Bro. Parsons has been quite sick, but is convalescing, and he thinks he will recover, for which I pray.

Last night I reached the great city, quite tired, secured boarding place to-day, and will arrange for work at once: also saw Hon. Hepburn and Senator McDill, to whom I am indebted for "passes" to Senate and House. The political pot is a little warm just now, and we may look for good, solid work this winter.

As ever, and in bonds,

Z. H. GURLEY.

P. S.—Some writer to your paper asks for "Normal School." I like the idea—and let me say that in the Temple at Kirtland we have suitable building with good surroundings for that purpose.

Brother Joseph:—I thought a line or two from this locality might be of interest to some. If I thought I could say anything that would stimulate my brethren to more energetic action, I would gladly do it; for I do think we, as Latter Day Saints should be terribly in earnest, when we take into consideration the vast amount of work there is to do, and the short space of time that we have to labor in. For we all realize that this is the evening of time; but we learn that God will cut his work short in righteousness.

Bro. E. C. Brand has been with us, and labored some, and strengthened the Saints. I try to declare the everlasting truths of the gospel every Sunday. Our branch holds prayer and testimony meetings every Sunday and Wednesday nights, with the manifestation of the Spirit of God, and the gifts of the gospel.

For the prosperity of the work I ever pray,

Bro. Joseph:—The Saints here are all pretty well as a general thing, and I believe strong in the faith. I have been to sacrament meeting this afternoon, (we have ours on the first Sunday in the month), had a good time, and felt comforted and cheered on in the good way.

Since last writing to you there have been some changes made in our branch, which I will now mention. On the 22d of October I was ordained an Elder by Bro. George Hicklin, and chosen presiding Elder of the branch; and on the following Wednesday, Bro. Samuel H. Bawn was ordained a Priest, and chosen presiding Priest.

Bro. Deuel is up in Romney. He went from here last Thursday; Bro. Meriam and he have been preaching up there, and Bro. Deuel states that there is quite a good interest manifested. I hope God will bless their labors. We have good meetings in our branch here, and are blessed with God's Spirit, and the Saints are, I believe, trying to do their duty to God and their fellow men. Pray for us, that God may bless us.

Joseph Smith, Dear Brother:—I went on the 11th of November last, to the city of Bridgeport, Connecticut, as I had previously been influenced by the Spirit to go there, though I had no knowledge of what I had to do when there, till I arrived at the house of one of our sisters that is worthy of the name she bears. While there she stated to me and others, that she had been praying to the Lord for two weeks, that he would send one of his servants to that place; for she had labored hard to bring one soul into the kingdom of Christ. So I found out why I was directed to that place. On the evening I arrived I was invited to go to a prayer meeting, called by name the "Faith Mission." While there listening to the prayers of some, and the testimonies of others, I had some strange feelings come over me, and thoughts in quick succession. I felt that there were some in the meeting that the Lord was going to bring out into greater light; but who they were I could not tell, but I felt to wait patiently. I asked the privilege of speaking on the Tuesday evening following, in their hall. It was granted me, and a goodly number came out to hear, and there were three young men came to obey the command of Jesus, and were buried with him in baptism, and I hope have risen to a newness of life.

I would express my thanks to the Congregationalists of Bridgeport for their kindness to me while there, as they gave me the use of their baptismal font, and also the robe for the occasion. I felt thankful, as my health was very poor at the time. I stayed with them one week, and returned home leaving them rejoicing in the light of the gospel. I went again to see them on the 2d of December, and found them still in the hope and faith of the gospel. I gave them a father's instructions in regard to duty. As they were anxious to take the Lord's Supper, they requested I should visit them once a month. I was assisted by Bro. Stephen Stone, of New Canaan, Connecticut, whom I have found always ready to assist all he can. Hoping that I shall soon have to report others uniting with them, so that a branch can be organized there. Brother Joseph, I ask in their behalf an interest in your prayers for them. And I hope they will remember you always before the throne of grace. Hoping for the redemption of Israel.

LONDON, England,

DEAR BROTHER JOSEPH:—"Grace be unto you, and all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity and truth."

It is now many months since I wrote to the Herald; but though through pressure of business I have been too much occupied to write, I have had great pleasure in reading from time to time the letters, often of a very consoling nature, which appear from time to time in the Herald.

I certainly promised to send you an article either on music, phrenology or astronomy; but on mature deliberation I have come to the conclusion that a humble admonition to the Church on the subject of our dear Redeemer's doctrine, is of far more importance than either of the above subjects, and in the present condition of the Church, at least decidedly needed; for I often behold the remarkable spectacle of letters published in the Herald, denying and attacking doctrines which are clearly and definitely laid down in the very books we are taught to regard as sacred.

Not to refer to any of last year's Heralds for instances of what I mean, dear brother, I will draw your attention to a letter written by a certain brother, who a few numbers back in the Herald, writes that he has somewhere heard or seen the words, "Adam fell that men might be,"—and then proceeds in the course of a long letter to attack, and finally repudiate that doctrine; quite oblivious of the fact that it is distinctly taught in the Book of Mormon in several places; and in fact Lehi's last words, contain this very phrase; while his dying utterances are directed mainly towards explaining and vindicating God's mysterious operations in regard to this weighty and solemn doctrine.

Then again we have been besieged (not to say inundated) with letters in the official organ, the Herald, denying and deprecating in toto the very doctrine which the Lord Jesus revealed to the brother of Jared in the mount, and which the prophet Abinadi lost his life in affirming, namely, that "Christ is the very Eternal Father."—Ether 1:9; Mosiah 1:13, 14; 11:15, 16; Alma 8:10. The same doctrine is taught in no less than seventeen places in the Bible, and twenty-one in the Book of Mormon; and like Sister —, in her letter, I think it far safer to rely simply upon the language of inspiration as therein contained, than to try by our carnal reasoning to "find out the Almighty to perfection." (Job 11:7).

As my own mind is not decided on this wondrous and mysterious doctrine, I am of course willing to allow for any and every divergence of opinion; but let us no longer present the absurd and anomalous spectacle of a church engaging the services of Elders who positively take pains to cast reflections upon doctrines contained in the books which we and they (in common with the whole church), regard as sacred and inspired, therefore TRUE.

Personally, I rejoice to say I have evidence, both of a reasonable and miraculous character, regarding the genuineness and authenticity of the Book of Mormon. I am, therefore surprised beyond measure, when I read letters written by officers in the Church, positively heaping ridicule upon the doctrines taught in the very books which the Lord says are to be a "standard to this people."

The great philosopher Plato said, that "If a man wants to know his true character, let him ask his enemies what they think of him; not his friends, as the latter will probably flatter him, but his enemies are tolerably certain to tell him the truth, though they will be tolerably certain to offend him in doing so."

This great truth will, I think, be found equally applicable to communities as individuals, and I have in this letter placed myself, as it were, outside the pale of the Church, to view these things rather with the impartial eye of a disinterested observer, than that of an Elder and member of the Church. For this reason much of what I have said and may yet say, will appear harsh; but my only motive is that of love and solicitude for the whole Church in general. I again reiterate that my object in penning the present epistle is not simply to explain or call attention to my own views, because I am of opinion that the books are right, but merely to express my great surprise at the strange want of oneness characteristic of this Church. Judging, indeed, from this stand-point, it would appear to be not the Church of Christ at all; for does he not say, "Except ye are one, ye are none of mine?" And again, not only do the inspired books condemn us, but even the very hymn-book we use; for is there not at least one hymn as follows:

"Awake to union and be one,
Or, saith the Lord, ye are not mine,
Yea, like the Father and the Son,
Let all the Saints in union join."

And this very thing I am now writing against, dear brother, is the main, if not the entire cause of the disunion so sadly prevalent in the Church; for while Elders and others continue thus to write and teach, at utter variance with the books of the Lord, how can we expect the Church to be united? For my part, I firmly believe the Books to be right and these Elders wrong. The effect of all this confusion of teaching is already manifested in the numerous schisms in various branches, accompanied, in nearly every case, by the loss of more or less members on every such division. There appears to be too much human organization and influence; with the inevitable grave consequences of trusting in the "arm of flesh," rather than in that of Omnipotence; while the Galatian cry is again heard—"I am of Paul," "I of Apollos," "I of Cephas," and "I of Christ," but the names of these ancient Apostles are replaced by names of modern Elders, who, though not holding fast to the "Iron Rod" of God's word, are led astray into one or another form of error, while one Saint cries "I believe Elder so and so is right," and another says "No, Elder such and such is right." Whence arise words and contentions among the more part of the Saints, with the invariable result, that when we lend anxious inquirers our official organ to read, (hoping thereby to gain their union and assent to the doctrine), we are met in general by such a reply as the following: "Well, the principles of the gospel are certainly agreeable to those taught by Christ, and his church of old, but there is such an evident lack of power in the gifts, (of healing, &c.), and such a contradiction of teaching, even in your own organ, that we really can not see it to be the true church."

You will, therefore, pardon my writing in this strain, dear brother, for these constant expressions of opinion in the Herald antagonistic to the books I hold dear to my heart, are not only hindering greatly the work in this country, but grieving many of the Saints, and among them,

Your loving brother,
FRED. R. TUBB.

CHICAGO, Illinois,

Bro. Joseph:—You having heretofore allowed space in your Herald for reports and items regards the Branch and Sabbath School in Chicago, you will perhaps grant me the same privilege as a subscriber of the Herald and oblige. In answer to W. D. McKnight's last report will say, that the Sabbath School here, is at present as prosperous as it has been at any time in the past six months, and would be far more prosperous if we had a few less fault finders. Is it not more honorable and Christian like, to do all you can to build up the cause, than to talk and make discouraging reports? I think so!

Yours, &c.,
A SUPERINTENDENT OF S. SCHOOL.

MERLIN, Ontario,
December 5th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—As there are so many of the Saints desirous of knowing how the work is prospering in the different parts of the fields of labor assigned at General Conference, I take pleasure in adding our report to the present.

We arrived in Chatham, Canada, on October 30th. Did not know of any Saints living in Chatham. On walking through the city I met Bro. Hicklin on the street. Although having numerous relations there, it was more joy to me to meet him than any one I had seen. The next day met Bro. Deuel. We then attended conference at London, on 4th and 5th of November. Had a good time. Met Brn. Lake, McIntosh, A. McKenzie, and others, received some good instructions from Bro. Lake, given to the Elders under his charge, and was associated with Bro. Deuel in the western part of Canada.

On Monday the 6th, we took our departure from London for our field, not wishing to spend much time visiting, but would like to have gotten better acquainted with the Saints of the London District.

We arrived in Chatham in evening, Bro. Deuel going immediately to Blenheim. I remained in Chatham, giving out tracts, and talking to my old school mates, all expressing a desire to hear me preach, but could not get a house at that time; but have the promise of one immediately after the holidays.

Hon. Henry Smyth, M. P., and several others of my school mates, agree to furnish the house. On Thursday 9th, met Bro. A. McKenzie, and went with him to Merlin, and remained with them and preached in their school house on Sunday.

During the week following, Bro. Thomas Bad-der, wife and myself, went up the Lake Erie shore about twelve miles, and got the Romney town hall, an entirely new place. Bro. Deuel and myself have been at labor there ever since. Every one that says anything about that place, says it is a very hard one. The other church ministers have a very serious time to be heard, for the disturbance of the young folks. But I must say we have splendid attention, and after five times preaching there, we called a vote to see if they wanted any more preaching. All in the house held up hands to continue. The outlook is good so far, according to the people's saying at Romney. They are tired of Methodism, and such like.

There is a Rev. Hall living in the neighborhood of Romney, a Methodist, that preached on infant baptism; and after the people heard our preaching once, they were very anxious for Rev. Hall to meet us. They not believing any such stuff as he advanced; some saying they would give so much and so much to hear him get opposition. They came to us and wanted to know if we would meet Mr. Hall. We said yes, any time. Some of them waited on the gentleman. He said he would not have anything to do with us, and sent back a very ungentlemanly reply. We afterwards had a chance to hear him on the same subject.

Bro. Deuel will preach at the same place on Sunday. I expect to be away for about ten days, trying to get some new openings, with Bro. McKenzie. Bro. Thomas Badder drives his team up the lake to take us to our appointments. I wish we had many more such Saints as he and family; as also Bro. McKenzie.

Yours in bonds,

J. H. MERIAM.

Bro. Joseph:—Our last district conference, which was held at Hall's Ridge, this county, was a good one. We were much edified and strengthened by the labors of Brn. Blakeslee, E. L. Kelley, and Bond. I took leave of the brethren at Hall's Ridge on Thursday, Thanksgiving Day, and went into Ripley county and commenced a meeting on the next evening, Friday, December 1st, in the vicinity of the Olive Branch. We continued the meeting up to the 10th, leaving the results to appear hereafter. We are doing what we can to strengthen the work in those places where it has suffered loss. We hope to have God's grace to assist us.

Yours in hope of life,

Brother Joseph:—Most all rejoice at the final determination of the Board of Publication, to issue the Herald as a weekly. May it prove a success and a mighty engine for good, in the spread of gospel truth, is my humble wish and prayer. Yours in Christ,

ROBERT M. ELVIN.

Bro. Joseph:—Still operating in this and Crawford county. Full houses of attentive listeners; prospects brightening. Preachers begin to show fight. They throw clubs behind my back. I challenge them to face the music. One minister went for me last Sunday, in a two hours speech. I took notes and replied. Result, made a laughing stock of himself. Crowds increase; also interest. To God be all the glory. I speak at five points in two counties. Go to Leesburg to-day.

Summary of News.

December 8.—The city of London, England, has suffered within the past twenty-four hours from the greatest fire with which it has been afflicted since the great conflagration in Tooley street, in the Borough, about eighteen years ago, when immense warehouses filled with jute and other goods were destroyed.

The loss of property by the great fire in London, England—the largest which has occurred in that city in twenty years—is estimated at over fifteen million dollars. A whole square of buildings, covering more than two acres of ground, was destroyed, and as the property was amongst the most valuable in London, and the warehouses were filled with the most costly goods, the loss will probably be even greater than it is now estimated. A fireman was killed and several citizens were injured by falling walls.

December 12.—The business quarter of Kingston, Jamaica, burned yesterday. The loss is £6,000,000. Hundreds are homeless. Wharves, warehouses, stores, banks, and supplies are gone. Food supplies are needed.

December 13.—From the compendium of the Tenth Census it appears that the total number of deaths which were reported in the United States during the census year was 756,893, or a death rate of 15.1 per thousand. The actual number of deaths was probably 100,000 more. The male death-rate is placed at 15.35 per thousand and 14.81 for the female. Of 390,614 deaths of males, in which the ages were given, 96,894 were under 1 year of age, and 163,880 under 5 years. Of 363,874 deaths of females, of which the ages were given, 78,372 were less than 1 year old, and 138,920 less than five years. Thirty-eight thousand three hundred and ninety-eight persons are said to have died from diphtheria, 22,905 from typhoid, 20,261 from malarial fever, and 91,551 of consumption. This large mortality from consumption is startling, indeed, and shows how much still remains to be accomplished in the prevention of this pestilence.

December 14.—A battle between Government troops and revolutionists, at Panama, South America, resulted in favor of the former. The loss was heavy on both sides.

Sixty persons were killed by the explosion of a powder magazine in Guayaquil.

Letters from Chiapas, Mexico, state that cholera raged with such violence that in some places the owners of and laborers on plantations all died, and as it was not possible to bury them, the bodies were burned. Sixty deaths a day have occurred in Tonalá. A terrible panic ensued.

The Australasian mine in Creswick, Victoria, has been flooded, and twenty-two persons drowned.

The fire which broke out in the business quarter of the city of Kingston, Jamaica, Monday evening was not extinguished until Wednesday. The loss, which was at first put at £6,000,000, is now estimated at £3,000,000. The fire, which was of incendiary origin, began in a quantity of shingles in a lumber-yard, and, as a high wind prevailed, gained great proportions. All the warehouses, wharves, and stores were consumed. Four hundred stores in all were destroyed. Buildings regarded as fire-proof did not escape destruction, and nearly every one of that class which the fire attacked succumbed to the flames. The fire was attended with loss of life. Five persons are known to have been burned to death. A new law will be passed here prohibiting the use of shingles hereafter.

The official table furnished by the Census Bureau shows the condition of the manufacturing industries of the country for the census year of 1880. The footings of this table give the following results:

No. of establishments	253,840	252,148
Hands employed....	2,738,950	2,053,996
Capital.....	$2,790,223,506	$2,118,268,769
Wages paid.....	947,919,674	775,584,343
Value of materials.	3,394,340,029	2,488,427,242
Value of products..	5,309,667,706	4,232,325,442

Whatever may have been said as to the incompleteness of the census of 1870, the care taken through special Commissioners with the census of 1880, affords some reasonable grounds for assuming that the census figures of 1880 are approximately correct.

Computing the average working days of the year at only three hundred, the average wages paid according to this statement was $1.04 per day.

This table gives us some interesting particulars. Thus:

Paid for labor.....	$947,919,971
Paid for materials.....	$3,394,340,029
Value of products.....	$5,369,667,706
Deduct expenditures.....	$4,342,259,703
Profit.....	$1,027,408,003

Here we have a profit over expenditures of $1,027,408,003 on a capital of $2,790,223,500, or 40 per cent.

Included in the cost of operating and in the cost of materials are the employers' personal services, the cost of repairs, and of insurance, wear and tear, freight, etc.

On this showing made by the manufacturers themselves there was a net profit of 40 per cent. Of course this rate of profit was not universal, but it was the average profit of all the manufacturing factories reported by the census.

December 17.—Parnell, O'Connor, and Sexton arrived at Cork to-day. This evening a banquet was given Parnell. While the toasts were being offered a stranger present proposed the health of the Queen of the Belgians. An attempt was made to eject him, whereupon he drew a revolver. The weapon was wrested from him, and he was given into custody.

The officers of the Edison Electric Light Company have failed to demonstrate the cheapness of lighting cities by electricity. There are besides grave mechanical difficulties yet to be overcome. These relate to the maintenance of the current, and to the continuity of the electrical supply.

The systematic robbing of the mails between Denver and the East has been practiced for a long period, and the post office authorities are at a loss as to where to locate the thefts. Drafts, checks and money orders, to the amount of over $600,000 have disappeared, while the loss of money and valuables can not be estimated.

JANUARY.

First of the year! thy days we gladly hail,
 Though hearts are chilled by the north wind's gale,
 As through the trees it sadly grieves,
 In a low and mournful sound;
 And the snow weaves a shroud for the leaves
 That lie scattered o'er the ground;
 Ah! bright and joyous are thy cloudless days,
 Yet no song birds sing their sweet, affecting lays;
 But Fancy always builds her glowing towers
 In lands made bright with ever-blooming flowers.

January! thy days of snow and wind,
 Like youthful friends, will soon be left behind;
 Thy hours of care and days so fair,
 Like Summer flowers, will fade!
 In keen despair we'll visit where
 Thy grave is lowly, lowly made;
 For in Memory's bright and golden chain,
 Oft we will revisit thee again,
 And we'll sing a requiem soft and low,
 For the month of hopes and days of snow.—Selected.

SERMON BY ELDER J. R. LAMBERT,
 OF LAMONI, IOWA,
 AT THE SAINTS' CHAPEL, LAMONI,
 NOVEMBER 26TH, 1882.

WE will read a few verses found in the 18th chapter of John:

"Jesus answered, My kingdom is not of this world; if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews; but now is my kingdom not from hence. Pilate therefore said unto him, Art thou a king then? Jesus answered, Thou sayest that I am a king. To this end was I born, and for this cause came I into the world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Every one that is of the truth heareth my voice. Pilate saith unto him, What is truth? And when he had said this, he went out again unto the Jews, and saith unto them, I find in him no fault at all."

It is sometimes difficult for those who are not of our faith, or for those who are not earnestly engaged in the spirit of the work we advocate, to understand the feelings and responsibilities attached to those who are required to stand as representatives of the gospel faith that we teach.

Our opponents have published statements of this character: That it is wonderful how a system of religion, or a church, could be established or built up on such a fallacious or flimsy foundation as that upon which ours is built. They have asserted in papers and in books in our absence from the pulpit, that that which we teach in addition to that which is taught by the so-called orthodox world, is not true, is not of God. And when these same persons have been brought into juxtaposition with a fair presentation and defence of the truth, by its advocates and representatives, they have changed their policy, and asserted, that although we teach the doctrines of the Bible, and more of them than other religious bodies of the day, yet we have made a great mistake; for many things taught in the days of Christ and the Apostles were special in their character, designed for that age alone. And therefore, an attempt is made to meet our teachings upon this ground.

It is a significant fact well established, that the representatives of this faith in which we trust and which we teach, have ever challenged investigation. They have not complained of the people because they would not receive their assertions concerning this faith; but they have complained most, and feel to complain most at the present time, when the people refuse to listen and investigate.

The question, "What is truth," is very broad in its character. It is a very important one. The history of the world we think, is but a record of the experience of the world; and from that record we learn that truth alone has been of lasting benefit to man. And while we are prepared to believe that evil, or error, is useful as a servant, we are not prepared, nor do we believe, that it is for our welfare, timely or eternal, to submit to its demands as a master.

It was said in sentiment a long time ago, That "truth is mighty and will prevail," and the sentiment is as true to-day as when first uttered; and if true, is it not important that we should determine what the truth is, that we should answer its demands in our lives; for if it will finally prevail,—and the history of the past seems to indicate very plainly that it will,—those who have obeyed its demands will partake of its everlasting benefits; they will reap its everlasting reward; and those who have ignored its demands must suffer great loss, to say the least of it.

There are two grand sources from which we derive all knowledge: nature and revelation. And as we expect to view the question before us to-night strictly from a Bible stand-point,—although some of our remarks may be general in their character,—we assert that God is the author of both these sources; hence the lessons derived from them must harmonize; for there can, of necessity, be no inharmony between the lessons presented to us in nature, or science truly, and the revelations of God.

That which comes to us then, purporting to be revelation from God, in books, in manuscript form, or delivered orally, must harmonize with the known facts and truths of nature, and vice versa; when anything has been once established as God's word, it is truth; and that which is presented to us as science, must harmonize with that truth, else it is not science truly.

The world has ever been prone to extremes, and I am not prepared to say that it is free from this fault yet. We are apt to neglect some source of benefit or blessings to us. Those who claim that nature alone is a sufficient guide for man, deprive themselves of a vast amount of information and blessings we believe, which God has laid up for the faithful. On the other hand, those who have accepted the message of the gospel as recorded in the Bible, and ignored the lessons of nature, have done so to their hurt; have done so to the injury of the cause in which they are engaged, and to their loss.

That God intended that his people should learn many precious things from nature as well as from revelation, is reasonable, and is in striking harmony with the teachings of his word. That he should cause the sun to shine for our benefit and to give light by day, and the moon and stars by night; that he should cause the growth of vegetation, and reveal to us, indirectly at least, a wonderful set of laws, operating in this way, without presenting any lesson of instruction that should be beneficial to his people, we think is absurd. You will remember perhaps, that in the 19th chapter of the Book of Psalms it is written: "The heavens declare the glory of God, and the firmament showeth his handiwork. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge. No speech nor language can be if their voice is not heard."

These are utterances of a man that we believe was inspired of God. Also in the first chapter of Romans is contained a very significant statement made by the apostle Paul: "For God hath revealed unto them the invisible things of him from the creation of the world, which are clearly seen; things which are not seen being understood by the things which are made, through his eternal power and Godhead; so that they are without excuse."

I am not unaware, that in our age, leading skeptics, such as Ingersol and others, have attempted to remove the design argument in favor of the existence of a God. They have told us, that if design in nature proves the existence of a personal God, that the existence of this God proves the existence of another; for in him is seen design, hence there must have been a designer.

But it should be remembered by this class of skeptics, that it is claimed by the Bible, that it is claimed by God's people that human beings are finite; but that the God in whom we believe is infinite. That the God who knew all things and revealed himself to man, is omniscient and omnipotent. This same class of individuals tell us that all things are governed by law, had their existence, or operate by virtue of the existence of law, and that beyond this we can not go. The difference between them and us seems to be, that we go a step farther, and argue that law, its existence and operation, prove the existence of a legislative and executive power, whom we call God. That laws do not enact or execute themselves, and that design is in nature, and everywhere proves the existence of a designer; and we say that beyond this we can not go. And this God to whom we attribute all this work, is an infinite being; and for an infinite being to be the result of another cause, would be absurd; for if he was the result of another Creator, that Creator must be more than infinite, which would be impossible.

Nature teaches many important lessons, one of which is the necessity of obedience to law. If we plant grain or sow seed in the earth, there the law begins to operate upon it; and by virtue of the operation of this law, it comes forth and is developed. The chemical principle in the solar ray, causes the seed to germinate and come forth out of the earth; the luminous principle contained in the same ray gives it color and growth; and the calorific principle, or the principle of life, brings it to perfection, or produces grain. Now here is a combination of principles producing a grand result; and we can see at a glance, what the effect of striking one of these principles from the solar ray would be. For instance, should we take away the chemical principle the grain refuses to germinate and come forth; had we the power to strike out the luminous principle, there would be no growth; had we the ability to take away from the solar ray the calorific principle, there would be no fruit produced, hence no seed to sow, and no fruit to eat, and nothing to sustain animal life upon the earth.

Here then is an argument from nature in favor of a strict obedience to God's laws. And this is true in a political, or governmental sense. We may have the very best of laws in our nation, but they will be of no benefit to us unless obeyed. They are but a nullity unless obedience is rendered to them.

Now the Bible presents to us what is called the perfect law of liberty. Its object, its design by its Author, is that mankind should be, through obedience to its demands, delivered from the bondage of sin, and made free in Christ. This law of liberty is perfect in its character, absolutely so. Hence it will not do for us to interfere with it, either by adding to it or diminishing from it; for if we do so, we render it imperfect at once.

Should we have a perfect square, and add to any one side of that square, it would no longer be a perfect square. Should we diminish any one side, it would no longer be a perfect square. But you may say we could add a little to each side of it, and it would still be a perfect square. Yes. We could take a little from each side of it, and still it would be a perfect square. Yes. But when we take into consideration the character of God, and the statement of his word as found in the Gospel of Jesus Christ, we see at once that the Author of this law designed that it should accomplish a certain work: namely, the redemption of man. And it was ordained in infinite wisdom for this purpose; hence it is just large enough, but not any too large; there are just principles enough found in this Gospel, but not too many.

Obedience to all these principles of this perfect law of liberty, is essential, essential to our salvation.

The subject before us, when viewed from a Bible stand-point, becomes very important; because the phrase, "the truth," as used in the New Testament Scriptures, is synonymous with the Gospel, and hence is the means of salvation to man. When the Apostle Paul addressed the Ephesians in his letter, he wrote, when speaking of Christ: "In whom ye also trusted, after that ye heard the Word of Truth, the Gospel of your salvation." And in his letter to Timothy, too, when he was called and ordained to preach the Gospel, the word of life to the people he wrote: "Study to show thyself approved, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." "The word of truth." And Peter when writing of the atonement, informed those to whom he addressed the Epistle, That they were not redeemed by gold or silver, or any corruptible thing, but by the blood of Jesus Christ as ordained of God. He also states: "Seeing that ye have purified your souls in obeying the truth unto unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a pure heart, fervently; being born of God, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, by the word of truth, which liveth and abideth forever." The Savior also addressed the Jews upon one occasion, and when quite a number of the Jews professed faith in him, he informed them that the truth should make them free. The freedom of which the Savior speaks, as the context shows, is deliverance from the bondage of sin.

We might remark here for the benefit of our friends who believe in and advocate salvation by faith only, that Jesus did not even intimate to this people, that they were delivered from the bondage of sin because they had expressed faith in him. He had just been telling them that he should be lifted up and the people should know that he was the Christ; he had just informed them that he did all things in accordance with the will of his Father, and the historian says that many Jews believed on him. What did he say to them? I remember what was said to a large congregation in the City of Northfield, Minnesota, by a leading minister of one of the most popular churches of the day. Speaking upon the subject of faith, he informed his congregation that justification and salvation were synonymous terms. That the doctrine of salvation by faith was a most wholesome doctrine; for the time had come when the ministers of Jesus Christ should plainly teach this doctrine everywhere. But Jesus said to those Jews who believed in him, "If ye continue in my word then are ye my disciples indeed;" as much as to say, faith is all right, but it must be of that character that will move you in continued obedience to my word. "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed, and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." What! Were they not his disciples? No. Were they not free from the bondage of sin by virtue of exercising this faith in him? No. Nothing would deliver them from this bondage except obedience to the gospel of Jesus Christ, which would be the result of faith in God and Christ.

We assume that God is the Author of all truth, and nothing but truth. Hence, that which originates with him must harmonize with his character.

We will now present to you briefly some of the attributes of his character.

It seems to be necessary to be agreed upon one important matter. Who shall tell us what God is? Who have been authorized and qualified to represent to us God and his truth?

The Bible we understand to be a book of history, doctrine and prophecy; and we are not prepared to say that all its historical parts have been written by the commandment of God. Nor are we prepared to say, that those who have written by commandment of God have been entirely free from recording their own opinions concerning certain matters; hence the importance of the question, who are the proper representatives of God and his truth.

First, all who claim to be Christians must present Christ as the leader, the perfect, and the only absolutely perfect representative of God and his truth that ever stood upon the earth. That his mission was more than to suffer and to die, is evident from his testimony to the Jews, time after time; for he informed them that he received a commandment from the father, what he should say and what he should speak, and said he: "I know that his commandment is life everlasting." He came to do the will of God, "as it is written in the volume of the book." He did all things in accordance with the father's will. But when he instructed his Apostles after his resurrection, and opened their eyes to understand the Scriptures, he said to them, in sentiment at least, "Thus it behooved Christ to suffer and to die, and to rise the third day according to the Scriptures, that repentance and remission of sins might be preached in all the world, beginning at Jerusalem."

There was existing, then, a grand system of truth, which was to go out to the nations of the earth; and one of the leading objects of Christ's mission to humanity was, that it might be made efficacious, and be preached to all the inhabitants of the earth.

We do not wonder then that in that prayer he offered to the father a short time before his crucifixion, as recorded in John, 17th chapter, that he said, "Sanctify them through thy truth, thy word is truth."

Paul informs us that "Christ suffered not himself to be made an High Priest, but he that said unto him, Thou art my son, this day have I begotten thee, made him a High Priest forever after the order of Melchisedec." When made a High Priest after this order, Christ selected others for the work of the ministry. He said to them, "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you." That they were sent forth by the same authority by which he was sent, and with the same message to the inhabitants of the earth, is evident from his language to them. He said: "As my Father sent me into the world, even so, also, send I you into the world." And when he gave them the last great commission to go to the nations of the earth, he said: "All power is in my hands, in heaven and in earth; go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the father, and of the son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them" what? "Teaching them to observe all things, whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo, [that is upon this condition], I am with you unto the end of the world." And the Apostle Paul, who was called afterwards unto the ministry of Jesus Christ, states: "Now then we are ambassadors for Christ, as though God did beseech you by us, in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God." The apostle did not make the mistake that has been made, that God in the gospel had reconciled himself to the world.

We listened to a discourse preached by a minister upon a funeral occasion. He descanted upon the beauties of the gospel, and the love of God in the gift of his son, and informed his congregation that God had in this great and marvelous way reconciled himself to the world. We thought this was a great mistake. We thought that God was always reconciled to the world. We were sure that Jesus said, "God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." Mark, "He so loved the world." He looked upon it, saw it in its lost and ruined condition; saw the inhabitants thereof, strangers and foreigners to God; but his love did not fail, for he is a perfect being, and his nature is love. Hence he so loved the world, that a plan was introduced by which they might become citizens in the kingdom of God, heirs of God, joint heirs with Jesus Christ.

It is clear from the statement of the Apostle Paul that they were ambassadors of Christ, and besought the people in his stead to be reconciled to God; that they had received authority to teach and administer the law of the gospel; and we present then the apostles in connection with Christ as properly authorized and qualified representatives of God and his truth; and we may add right here, that a great deal of pains was taken by the Master that they should be qualified as well as authorized for this great work. They not only received precious instructions from his lips, but he, knowing their necessities, and knowing what alone could accomplish the work of God, promised that after his departure they should receive the spirit, the spirit of truth, of promise, whose office work was to guide them into all truth. It was to bring to their minds whatsoever he had said unto them, and to show them things to come. They received this Spirit according to the record, and afterwards went forth to the nations of the earth as the ambassadors of Christ.

The prophets also, so far as they were moved by the Holy Ghost, and spoke of the gospel of Christ, must be considered as proper representatives; and viewing the matter strictly from a Bible stand-point, we may present Christ, the apostles and prophets, as proper representatives of God and the gospel of Christ.

The first attribute to which we call attention is his love. It seems from the statement made by one of the apostles, that this love permeates his whole being. That in all he does he is moved by the principle of love. Says the Apostle John: "God is love." He teaches that this love of God was manifested to us before we manifested any love to God. That which originates with him must in the very nature of things, harmonize with this principle of love. It may not in the very nature of things do violence to this principle of love.

Another attribute of his character is power. Hence that which is divine must harmonize with the attribute of power, as presented to us in his word. Another is impartiality. His love is manifested to his people, to the inhabitants of the earth, as much in one age of the world as in another; as much to one people as another. He only requires certain conditions to be complied with upon their part, and then promises certain blessings, without regard to the age in which they live, or the locality where they may abide. The lesson of God's impartiality is quite a difficult one for God's people to learn. It seems to have been, and the Apostle Peter, though he was one of the old apostles, seems to have made a mistake in this matter; for after hearing the words of the Master, after being commissioned in connection with his brethren to preach the Gospel to the inhabitants of the earth, to every creature, with the promise, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; and he that believeth not shall be damned," or condemned; after receiving the Spirit upon the day of Pentecost, and presenting to them the conditions upon which they could be saved, and calling their attention to the promise, the terms of the promise itself, he says, "It is to you and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." When left to himself, as we believe, his old prejudice, the force of previous tradition, seemed to rise up in his mind, and it became necessary that there should be some miraculous manifestation, or some manifestation known to be from God, to convince him that the gospel was to be administered to the Gentiles as well as the Jews.

When he went down to the household of Cornelius, and discovered that God had been manifesting himself to him, he says: "I perceive of a truth, that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation, he that feareth him and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him." We have thought Peter felt a great deal better, when he made this discovery, than he did before. We have thought that when he once had it forcibly and firmly fixed in his mind, that the gospel was for all men, he was much better qualified for his work in the world than when he thought the salvation was exclusively for the Jews. And we believe that when an individual once has it fixed in his mind that the gospel we teach, the gospel of Jesus Christ, is for the nations of the earth, for the inhabitants of the world, that he feels vastly better than when the contemptible sentiment finds place in his heart, that it is for the Latter Day Saints only.

Another attribute of God's character is unchangeability. Whatever he was in ages past, he is to-day. Whatever his love was in the days of Christ and the apostles, or previously, it is to-day. Whatever his power was in one age of the world, it is to-day. Whatever means God ordained in one age of the world for the redemption of the human family, the salvation of individuals and nations, if it would be complied with, that is his plan for their salvation to-day, and essentially binding in all its parts. Whatever blessings might be secured through obedience to that gospel in this life, or the life to come, in any age of the past, the same blessings may be secured to-day. Whatever blessings were enjoyed by the people of God in the exercise of faith and diligence in keeping the commandments and laws of God, in any previous age of the world, are within our reach to-day.

When we present the gospel in this light, we place God before the people in his true character. Any other representation of the gospel reflects upon the character of God.

In this connection we say nothing about miracle working power, from the fact that we believe that there are certain things which should appear to the people in favor of that which is accepted as Divine, entirely aside from any miracles, or miracle working power. So far as your speaker is concerned, he would be entirely unwilling to accept anything as truth, or divine, though a stick should be turned into a serpent, or a serpent into a stick, unless there was some prima facie evidence in favor of that thing. If all that evidence seemed to be against it, as truth, as Divine, no miracle could make it true, never.

Miracles are all right, they are an important adjunct in the chain of evidence; but their object is to confirm the truth; hence it must be truth before any miracles are performed; and there must of necessity be some other kind of evidence in favor of it besides this.

These thoughts very naturally lead to another; namely, whatever has originated with God is in harmony with the previous revelations of his word. That which has been ascertained as truth, becomes a test which we may apply to the unknown. But here we should exercise a great deal of care. It should be remembered that when a proposition is once established by affirmative evidence, no amount of negative argument can disprove it. On the other hand, there is no proposition that is susceptible of demonstration by affirmative evidence, but what negative argument may be produced against it.

We as a people have accepted what we term the latter day work, the Gospel of Jesus Christ; and we claim that it has come to us by virtue of direct revelation, or restoration, in accordance with the promises of God as recorded in the Bible. And when closely investigated, these claims of ours will be found to be in strict harmony with the teachings of God as found in the Bible.

The first Elders of the Church did not present an ambiguous or equivocating message to the world; but informed them that the time had come when by the authority of God the Gospel was to be preached to the inhabitants of the earth. That this Gospel was the same one that was preached in the days of Christ and the apostles; that the people were not asked to receive anything new; but to come back into the perfect way in which alone peace and life could be secured. They were told that it is essential to exercise faith in God and Christ, and by exercising this faith as it was exercised anciently by the people of God, the same blessings might be enjoyed. They were told that because God had spoken, (not because they were preaching it), because God had spoken the people everywhere must repent. They proclaimed the very same sentiment of truth that was proclaimed by Paul when he was preaching to the Athenians. When he discovered their idolatry, their ignorance of the true God, he had an intense desire to speak of him to them, and he embraced the first opportunity of doing so. And when the opportunity was offered he said: "As I passed by, I beheld your devotions, an inscription written to the unknown God. Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you." But how did he find him out? He was a learned man. He was educated, brought up at the feet of Gamaliel, and well versed in the law; but he had not learned the character of God in that way. We say nothing against his education; but he had not learned the gospel of Jesus Christ in that way; for while possessed of all this learning alone, he persecuted the Saints of God for preaching Jesus as the Christ. But he received a revelation and light from heaven, and he was prepared to speak unto the people of the character of the true God, and the gospel of Jesus Christ. But while speaking unto them upon this occasion he said: "The times of this ignorance God winked at, but now commandeth all men everywhere to repent." Why? There were times when God, comparatively, winked at their ignorance, because he did not send unto them a message, and hence they were not directly responsible: the same responsibility was not resting upon them; but now he had an authorized ministry upon the earth; now light has dawned, and it makes manifest the darkness; righteousness is preached, and it makes manifest the unrighteousness; and as the Savior expressed it, they were guilty of sin because they would not believe the message which he taught.

So in the introduction of the Gospel in these last days; people were told that the time had come when the same Gospel in its fulness was to be preached, and because God had commanded that this way the work was to be done, great responsibilities were resting upon them; because the light was shining they were required to turn away from darkness and from error,—and embrace the truth. And when we look into the records that have been made since this dispensation was introduced, since the preaching of these first Elders of the Church, the Book of Mormon and the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, sacred records of the Church, we find that the same principles of the Gospel taught in the Bible are presented to us; the same promises are made if we will become obedient to the law of the Gospel; the same inheritance is promised upon the same conditions; but there is no promise of the enjoyment of God's Spirit in this life, or that which is to come, except upon the condition that we will humble ourselves before him, and trust in the merits of Jesus Christ, and become obedient to these principles of the Gospel.

Now here we think is evidence of Divinity, where we present it to the people. And so far as morality is concerned, it was taught in the days of Christ and the Apostles; the Gospel enjoins the highest standard of morality, and it has been and is taught in these days. It was and is included in the message we teach the people, and they were required according to the authoritative statements of these revelations, to turn away from all unrighteousness and sin.

By referring to the institution of marriage, it appears that in the morning of creation when Adam and Eve were placed in the garden, that God gave to the man one wife for his companion; it seems this had his sanction at that time. And the statement is recorded in Genesis: "For this cause shall a man leave both father and mother, and cleave unto his wife; and they twain shall be one flesh." We pass along to the days of Noah, when the earth had become corrupt, or the people thereon, and in the wisdom of God and his love to humanity at large as we believe, it became necessary that they should be temporarily destroyed, and by means of the flood they were swept off the earth; but Noah found grace in the sight of the Lord, and he and his family were preserved.

Unto Noah and his sons were preserved one companion each, one wife each, and this that the earth might be re-peopled. Now when it was first accepted as the work of God he gave one companion to father Adam, and we have a striking evidence in the case of Noah and his sons, that this institution with them was likewise of God. It seemed to be like him; he seemed to be acting just as he had in the beginning; as he designed that the earth should be peopled through monogamy and not through polygamy; so he designed that the earth should be re-peopled through monogamy, and not polygamy. We pass away along through the stream of time until the days of the Savior, and we find him advocating the same grand truth. The Apostle Paul informs us that he received the Gospel by revelation of Jesus Christ, and he teaches the same grand truth. We pass away along down from that day, eighteen centuries ago, until the present time, and we find an illiterate youth, claiming that God had by revelation revealed to him the gospel of Jesus Christ. In one year after the organization of the Church, it became necessary that some of the Elders should go to a people that disbelieved in the ordinance of marriage altogether; and it seems to have been very necessary and reasonable under such circumstances, that if the gospel had been restored, and God was just beginning his work, that in going to this strange people they should have some definite instructions to present to them; and the Lord by revelation says to them, in March, I think, 1831, "Whoso forbiddeth to marry is not ordained of God; for marriage is ordained of God unto man; wherefore it is lawful that he should have one wife and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation." This commandment then is in strict harmony with what God did in the morning of creation; in strict harmony with what God did in the days of Noah; in strict harmony with the teachings of Jesus Christ and the Apostles upon the institution of marriage.

We see but one means of escape here for our opponents: namely, that the first men of the Church, or this youth, who claimed that God had delivered unto him a message that was to be delivered unto the world, simply discovered these Bible truths by his own study and observation; that it by no means follows, that because Latter Day Saints are teaching the gospel as it was taught in the days of Christ and the apostles, that Joseph Smith received a revelation from God. It is true that two and two are four; but it does not follow from that that your speaker has received such information by direct revelation from God. With regard to this objection we have this to say: It seems a little strange that the ground should be occupied by leading religionists and ministers; that they should urge this objection. The man who made the claim referred to was in his youth, about fifteen years of age; illiterate, and many tell us he was not only illiterate, but they say he was very indolent and worthless; and it is a little strange that at this age, without the advantages of education, without the advantages which they had, he should discover the system of the gospel in its fulness, as taught in the days of Christ and the apostles; and still more strange that he should offer such tests of his mission, and the truth of that mission, to the inhabitants of the earth; for he said, claiming to be moved by the inspiration of God; claiming that he had received a revelation from God; that if the Elders would go forth and declare this gospel unto the people, and the inhabitants of the earth would open their hearts and receive it, that they should receive the same spirit which was enjoyed in the days of the apostles; that that should bear testimony with their spirits; that certain facts would result from obedience to the gospel, and its gifts and blessings would be enjoyed now as in ancient times. They went forth, and those who received the gospel soon began to testify.

They came from the different churches, they came from among the skeptics; and indeed there are quite a number found among the Latter Day Saints, whose mental organizations indicate very plainly that they are skeptical in their character; and they have testified, all who have endeavored to be faithful to God, as our observation and experience plainly teach us, testify that this is the work of God; that the same spirit is enjoyed; that they received through obedience to it blessings that they were not acquainted with before; and those who had been endeavoring to live a religious life, were acquainted with before in but a limited degree. And it is strange from another consideration, another point of view. It is claimed that this man, (by some, by many), not only made certain discoveries by himself, but that he suffered himself to be moved by evil influences; that he suffered himself to become a servant to the evil one in attempting to organize a church among the inhabitants of the earth, and promote a system of religion. That these evil thoughts suggested to him by the adversary of all truth, found place in his heart, and thus he became an emissary of the evil one in the world, instead of a servant of God. We discover that this same man developed certain things that were ignored by the leading ministers of the leading churches of the day. But many of these same things are now taught by the leading ministers of the day. They have discovered after the lapse of a few years that they will and are transpiring; and they are taught as the truths of heaven.

Is it possible that an emissary of the evil one, taught in advance of the servants of God the grand truths of heaven? Is it possible that the servants of the evil one would discover these grand truths and teach them to the inhabitants of the earth before the true servants of God had discovered them at all? If so, how will God ever establish his work in opposition to the evil one? How can it be accomplished?

There are certain results that are obtained through obedience to the truth, invariable results. For instance, if an individual was going to learn the carpenter's trade, he would work under a master workman as an apprentice. He would receive instruction from him, be made acquainted with certain rules, and be informed that they would produce certain results. Moved by the principle of faith, having confidence in this man's word, he goes to work, becomes obedient to these rules. He learns them, and discovers in a little while for himself, that they do indeed work out invariable results.

The gospel, as we have said before, is presented to us as a perfect law, and it consists of facts and principles which we are required to believe; of ordinances and commandments which we are required to obey; and of promises which it is our privilege to receive; promises in this life and in the life which is to come. Jesus said, "If any man will do his will (the father's) he shall know of the doctrine whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." And we apprehend that the manner in which the people were to receive this knowledge, is by realizing the promises contained in the gospel of Jesus Christ. That when they are verified to us, we have the evidence that the gospel has originated with God; for the promises are of such a character, that when they are enjoyed we know that they have come from God. Now the Saints in the age in which we live have testified that these promises are enjoyed, good men and good women,—not wanting in intelligence, have testified that these blessings are enjoyed. Here then is another evidence in favor of the gospel which we teach, in favor of the faith we present to the world.

I trust that we will consider it worth while to investigate the important subject before us; and that we shall be guided by that measure of wisdom, right desires and pure motives, that will enable us to comprehend the truth as it is in Christ.

I believe that the cause of great failure upon the part of the people when the truth is presented to them, is the condition in which they are found; that to appreciate and understand what is truth, our object must be truth alone. And that if we endeavor to live near to God; if we endeavor to live pure and holy lives, that we are fast qualifying ourselves to receive the message of the gospel when it is presented to us. I trust that the Latter Day Saints, who are as seriously affected by this question as others, if not more so, will be so faithful in their lives, that they may not only be guided by the light of God's word, but by the light and holy influences of his Spirit, that when those whom it has been prophetically announced should arise, false prophets, do arise to teach and lead astray, that they might be enabled to discover the spirit by which they are moved, and the character of their mission; and I am sure if I appeal to my own experience, if I am guided by it, that the more fully we are enabled to comprehend truth, and the better we shall be prepared to bear with those who are not answering its demands in their lives; the greater love we shall have for them; and though we may reject the things that are taught in order to our own safety or the glory of God, and for the advancement of his work, we will do it in love to all.

That God may confirm those who have received the truth by his spirit, and that others may be guided into its light, and receive it, and be sanctified and saved by it, is my desire and prayer.

MEDITATIONS.

THERE is something peculiar and pleasing in the hopes of the Saints of latter days, and it agrees so exactly with the hope of the former day Saints, I think it will do to risk. There is something about it that compares favorably with all the ills and discomfitures of the present life. If the weather is cold, disagreeable, dreary and changeable, we can profitably think of the time in the coming age, (which the Lord is pleased to call the great Millenium), when the elements, with all nature, will be regular, moderate,—no longer boisterous, wild, and extreme as now; but steady, pleasant, peaceable. No extreme cold, nor excessive heat; no sudden changes of temperature, nor wet seasons as now; no drouths or snow; nor impurities of the air, producing serious colds, disagreeable feelings and maladies, aches and pains of every sort; but all atmospheric phenomena so governed by the Creator to cause enjoyment of health to all, both great and small. How delightful is the hope. How beautiful and extensive is the thought and the assurance that a period of time is even now drawing near, when life on earth will be enjoyed by the children of God for the first time since the fall of our first parents in Eden, when life on earth shall more fully be enjoyed than has been by any one, by any people, or nation, since the expulsion of Adam and Eve from the garden of Eden, and to a greater extent of time, even a thousand years; and when the happiness and peace will be greater than it was in Eden, for good only will be set before them. Then without any evil, Satan being bound, will have no power on earth to tempt to disobedience, to entice to evil, strife, war and destruction. How beautiful the sentiment of the poet of latter days about this.

"No strife shall rage, nor hostile feuds
Disturb those peaceful years;
To plowshares men will beat their swords,
To pruning hooks their spears."

Again, another:

"Signs of which there's no mistaking,
Tells the day of glory near,
When Satan bound shall cease his conflict
With Saints throughout the thousand years."

INFERIOR.

"'Tis folly to be wise" in the ways of the world; hence, "ignorance is bliss" in such things.

WARNING TO BLASPHEMERS.

"Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain; for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain."—Ex. 20: 7.

DEAR READER:—Are you a swearer? If so, seriously reflect upon these words of an omniscient God, and take warning, lest here you read your untimely end.

Perhaps you do not consider the road in which a swearer is traveling is a dangerous one, and will finally lead him to a place of punishment. A few short days may pass; a few more oaths may roll from unhallowed lips, and then the swearer must bid adieu to all the pleasures a wicked world affords, and enter upon a scene of untried torment, and misery. Dreadful, O how dreadful, to think about, if death should find us violating the third commandment, "for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain."

Accurately to describe the place for which a swearer is destined, is beyond the power of mortals. Suffice it to say, it is a place the horror and misery of which no human tongue can tell, nor heart conceive. There the blasphemer must dwell, there he must be and feel the gnawing of the worm which never dies.

Swearer, if you feel any solicitude for your eternal welfare, if you wish for happiness in the world to come, I beseech, I conjure you to pause for a moment, and think of your awful situation. You stand as it were on the verge of a slippery precipice. Nothing separates you from an endless eternity, but a thin partition. Ask yourself, "How would it be with my poor soul, should I be called hence before the rising of to-morrow's sun?"

O swearer, if you could only realize your present position, you would no longer pursue the course contrary to your eternal happiness. Nevertheless, if you are determined to sin away the rest of your days, you know the dreadful sentence will be, "Depart from me ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." History tells us, when Saint Paul's Cathedral in London was being built, the architect, Sir Christopher Wren, had a notice put upon the walls to say, that if any one of his workmen was heard taking God's name in vain he should be discharged immediately.

It would be well if all the architects and masters followed his example. The proclamation was as follows:—"Notice.—Whereas, as among laborers and others, that ungodly custom of swearing is so frequently heard, to the dishonor of God and contempt of his authority; and to the end that such impiety may be utterly banished from these works, which are intended for the service of God and the honor of religion, it is so ordered, that any person's swearing shall be sufficient reason for discharge. Whosoever that comes to the call, the clerk of the books upon sufficient proof shall dismiss. By order of Christopher Wren."

A special conference of the Fremont District convened on the 25th and 26th of November, 1882, pursuant to the notice given in the Herald of November 15th, 1882. Conference opened by choosing George Kemp to act as chairman.

After some discussion adjourned to afternoon.

Branch Reports. Union Center 95; 1 baptized, 1 marriage. Spring Creek 42; removed by letter 3. Pleasant View (9 months) 19; 1 received by letter. Little Sioux 153; 3 baptized, 1 died. Magnolia 172; 11 baptized, 1 marriage.

Ministerial Reports.—Elders J. C. Crabb, Phineas Cadwell, (baptized 1), Wm. Cadwell, E. R. Lanphear, (baptized 7), J. B. Lytle, Donald Maule, Stephen Mahoney, J. M. Putney, Richard Farmer, Wm. Chambers, (by letter), and Priests B. Kester, B. M. Green, M. Daugherty, and Teachers R. Chatburn and W. I. Fallon, reported.

Several brethren having expressed themselves as not called upon to report to conference, inasmuch as Teachers and Deacons were properly speaking subject only to branch oversight, President Crabb stated that as he understood it the Book of Covenants provided, and President Joseph Smith had decided that Teachers and Deacons could preach; and that when such labor done at all was performed outside of branch authority, they should report to conference.

The matter of Magnolia meeting house being called up, it was on motion decided that the district secretary be requested to draw up a deed in conformity with instructions of President Joseph Smith, and present the same to the trustees of said house to be executed.

Bro. Wm. Cadwell on the part of delegates to Semi-Annual Conference, reported.

On motion report was received and adopted.

On motion it was decided that when we adjourn, we do so to meet at Little Sioux, on the first Sunday in March, 1883, at 11 o'clock, a. m., and continue over Monday for business.

Bro. James Emmerson, George Blackman and Stephen Mahoney, were appointed a preaching committee, and under their direction preaching meetings and speakers were provided as follows: Sunday morning, J. C. Crabb, Sunday afternoon, Benj. Kester, Sunday evening, J. C. Crabb.

Resolved, That Bro. Benj. Kester be ordained to the office of an Elder.

A very interesting prayer and testimony meeting was had Saturday evening, after which Bro. Benj. Kester was ordained to the office of an Elder by J. M. Putney, J. C. Crabb and Phineas Cadwell.

Adjourned to meet at Little Sioux, at 11 o'clock, a. m., Sunday, March 4th, 1883.

FAR WEST DISTRICT.

Conference convened at Stewartsville Branch, November 25th, 1882. J. T. Kinnaman president, J. M. Terry secretary. Opened in usual form. Report of last conference read and approved.

The report of committee on "order of business" was adopted.

Elders' Reports.—F. W. A. Riedell, D. J. Powell, D. E. Powell, J. M. Terry, Wm. Summerfield, J. T. Kinnaman, J. D. Craven, S. Butler, L. W. Babbitt, A. J. Seeley, T. W. Smith, W. T. Bozarth, L. L. Babbitt, Wm. Lewis, J. D. Flanders, Temme Hinderks, J. Burlington; Priests, Chas. Faul, John Wood, John Hardaker, reported in person.

Wm. Lewis, Bishop's Agent, reported.—Free-will offerings received, $4; subscribed on Kirtland Temple fund, $35; some branches not heard from yet. Many of the Saints think they will commence tithing on first of the year. (Why not commence now?—Secretary).

Branch Reports.—Reports were read from Stewartsville, Delana, Breckenridge, Center Prairie, German Stewartsville, and Pleasant Grove branches, showing total received by baptism 2; certificates of baptism 3; letter 3; 1 expelled. The spiritual condition of the branches reported was varied. Some were so scattered that a meeting was almost impossible. Others were in good prospering condition. The general condition of the district is good.

An appeal was presented by A. P. Smith, from an act of the St. Joseph Branch.

T. W. Smith, W. T. Bozarth, and J. D. Craven, were appointed a committee to investigate the propriety of entertaining the appeal, and reported as follows: "To the president and brethren in conference:—We your committee beg leave, and report, that we met with the appellant, and J. Burlington and S. Butler, representing the St. Joseph Branch, with Wm. Lewis called as a witness in his behalf, by said appellant, A. P. Smith, and after trial, and deliberation thereon, we recommend that as your committee were ready and willing to do him justice, or to recommend such measures to be adopted by the conference as would secure him justice, if it should appear that he had been illegally dealt with as asserted by him; yet as he ordered us to drop the matter, and proceed no further with it, and repeatedly asserted that he would have nothing more to do with it, that no notice be taken of the case hereafter by this body, and that we request higher bodies than this to disregard an appeal from him. Should he retract the accusations he has made, and become reconciled to the brethren, and manifest an humble, penitent and quiet spirit; and make proper restitution to all whom he has offended, we would recommend his forgiveness by individuals and the branch, and a restoration to membership by baptism, if desired by him. But while manifesting the bitterness he does we can not consider him worthy the fellowship of the Saints anywhere.

The president, vice president and secretary were made a standing committee to nominate laborers for specific fields of labor in the district.

Two-days' meetings were appointed in Pleasant Grove Branch first Saturday and Sunday in January, 1883; J. D. Flanders and J. T. Kinnaman to attend. Delana Branch, second Saturday and Sunday of June. Far West, third Saturday and Sunday in June, 1883.

She same officers are continued in district.

Sunday at 11 a. m., T. W. Smith spoke to a well filled house. At 2 p. m., W. T. Bozarth spoke on "There remaineth a rest to the people of God." The attendance was small, but a good, peaceful time was enjoyed.

Adjourned to meet in Stewartsville, Mo., on last Saturday [24th] in February, 1883.

NODAWAY DISTRICT.

Conference convened on Saturday the 25th of November, 1882, at the Ross Grove school house, Holt county, Mo. President Ole Madison not being present, the conference was opened by the secretary; I. N. Roberts was chosen president pro tem. The minutes of the last conference were read.

Branch Reports.—Ross Grove 24; including 3 Elders, 1 Teacher and 2 Deacons. Platte 69; including 9 Elders, 1 Priest, 2 Teachers and 2 Deacons; since last report 7 were baptized and 4 received by letter.

The request was granted, and I. N. Roberts, Wm. Hawkins, and R. K. Ross, jr., were appointed to hear the case, and report to the next conference.

Wm. Hawkins, district treasurer, reported having received nothing, and paid out nothing; and desired to be released. The report was accepted, and his request granted.

C. Christenson, Bishop's Agent, reported having received during the quarter, $10, and had sent to the Bishop $5; balance on hand $5. The report was accepted, and he was sustained in his office.

MILLER.—Near Providence, R. I., October 6th, 1882, of catarrhal consumption, Bro. Lewis E. Miller. He was born in Leeds, England, January 3d, 1824; joined the Utah Church in 1856, in Bradford, England; partaking of the gathering spirit peculiar to that institution, he immigrated to Utah in 1861, enduring the toils and hardships of a journey across the plains, expecting as a compensation, the association of the pure in heart in that land (falsely) called, Zion; but instead, to his dismay and disappointment, he found the abominations that are well known to exist there, under the garb of religion. About that time there appeared on the benighted horizon of Utahism, a ray of light from the east, in the form of the Elders of the Reorganization, with deliverance for the captives of the Latter Day Apostasy. But the light shone in darkness, and the darkness comprehended it not,—being obscured by the terrible power of priestcraft. While in doubt as to what course to pursue, Bro. Miller had a vision, in which he saw a room, where a few were gathered for religious worship; behind a small table stood a preacher, a stranger to him, encircled in a halo of light; and as he began to preach, there came from the heaven a beautiful white dove, and it flew towards him. The intelligence conveyed to Bro. Miller by the vision was that the preacher was recognized of God, and preached the truth in its purity. Subsequent to this he was invited to a meeting held in Bro. Walling's house, in Sugar Ward. There he saw the room, the table, the preacher, (Eld. J. W. Gillen of the Reorganization), just as was shown him in the vision. Shortly after he was baptized by Bro. Walling into the Church of Christ of Latter Day Saints. He moved from Utah to Missouri, after eight years' experience in Utah. After spending a while in Missouri and Kansas, he moved here to Providence, where he followed his trade, manufacturer of supplies for worsted goods, with good success. He died in the faith, with a hope of a resurrection with the just. He leaves a wife and seven children to mourn his loss. Funeral services by Eld. F. M. Sheehy.

The whereabouts of the following named brethren is wanted by Sr. Caroline Wayt, secretary of the Fairview Branch of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; address her at Glen Easton, Marshall county, West Virginia. Bealler Manning, Hannah E. Manning, Robert Davis, Margaret Davis and Sarah J. Hardwick.

ILL TEMPER.—A single person of sour, sullen temper,—what a dreadful thing it is to have such a one in a house! There is not myrrh and aloes and chloride of lime enough in the world to disinfect a single home of such a nuisance as that; no riches, no elegance of mein, no beauty of face can ever screen such persons from utter vulgarity. Ill temper is the vulgarist thing that the lowest born and illest bred can ever bring to his home. It is one of the worst forms of impiety. Peevishness in a home is not only a sin against the Holy Ghost, but sin against the Holy Ghost in the very temple of love.

The best of men and the most earnest workers will make enough mistakes to keep them humble. Thank God for mistakes, and take courage. Don't give up on account of mistakes.

The Saints' Herald.

JOSEPH SMITH - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, 13th January, 1883.

WE have been so constantly charged with being a heretic and under the influence of an evil spirit, by our Utah religionists that we have grown somewhat used to the charge; and hence, not so restrained from doing, or saying something now and then to cause the charge to be repeated. The Advocate for January, contains a sharp criticism upon the secret marriages of Utah; and suggests that Congress should take measures to compel the Mormons of Utah to respect the teachings of the Doctrine and Covenants, the discipline of rules and church articles adopted long time ago, when, as stated by the Deseret News for August 2d, 1882, "Plural marriage not being then a tenet of their creed, nor practiced by any of their number." (By the way; how innocently and inadvertently these men some times tell the truth).

This suggestion is made with a view to the article on marriage, contained in the Kirtland, Nauvoo, Liverpool and Cincinnati editions of the Doctrine and Covenants; but which the Utah Mormon leaders so sacrilegiously left out of their edition published in 1876 in Utah. This article provides for the open and public celebration of the rites of marriage under the provisions of the law of the land. The existence in the church of any other system of marriage than this, was denied strenuously as late as 1844 and 1850, by those who were recognized as leaders then and some of them are now, including Elder, now Pres. John Taylor. The remedy suggested is that Congress enact and enforce such laws as will make all marriages void and the parties thereto, including the officer before whom the rites are performed, punishable; unless those marriages are performed upon a licence obtained from the proper officer of a county court of record authorizing the solemnization of such marriage, and providing that such solemnization shall be performed in the presence of witnesses whose names shall appear of record.

The marriages, so called, in the endowment house in Salt Lake City, of which it is alleged no record is kept, are travesties, (and not solemn ones either but blasphemous) upon the sacred institution of marriage as given to the Church in 1831; and no provisions for such proceedings can be found, not even in the so called revelation permitting, or commanding plural marriage. The rule for celebrating the marriage rite, provides for a feast," or a public meeting;" and the secret farce of the Endowment House is neither; but is a mockery of the "holy law governing the Church as given in 1831," as that law of 1831 was designated by Elder Orson Pratt, in the 17th ward meeting house in December, 1876. Plural marriage if commanded of God at all, should be just as honestly celebrated and as publicly acknowledged as the ceremony that gives a woman a "legal husband," a man a "legal wife," and when Pres. Brigham Young stated in court that he had only one "legal wife," he told the untrammelled truth; for he had but one, in the law of God and men. Hence, if plural marriages are still to be contracted in Utah, Congress should provide that licences from the proper court should issue to the parties desiring to contract them, upon application therefor, and for a record in which the day and date of such marriage, could be kept, that a "feast" might be prepared, or the ceremony take place in a "public meeting" according to the "law of God."

As Bro. Blair states in the Advocate, we did consider the situation, and we did then and do now suggest a revision of the laws of Utah in regulation of the marriage relation in such a manner as to provide that all marriages must be consummated upon licences from some county court of record, in similar form to those in use in Illinois, Iowa, Missouri, and other states, of the United States, designating the officers of church and state who are authorized to solemnize marriage; and providing for the punishment of all persons who shall contract or attempt to contract in marriage in any other way; and also providing for any and all subterfuges and evasions of the plain provisions of the laws on Marriage.

PRIEST AND DEACON.

THE answer that we gave in the HERALD for December 15th, respecting the Deacon assisting the Priest, has drawn upon us letters and articles from several of the brethren, who call the answer in question, one of whom goes so far as to write: "I suppose you will at once see the mistake you have made and correct it."

All we have to add is this, that the law to which these various brethren cite us, states in reference to the duties of a Priest that he is to assist the Elder in all the duties laid down "if occasion requires." One of these duties is to take the lead of "meetings in the absence of the Elder." The very same provision is made in regard to the Teacher, for "he is to take the lead of meetings in the absence of the Elder or Priest, and is to be assisted always, in all his duties in the Church, by the Deacons, if occasion requires." In this it must be clearly observable that when the occasion may demand in the absence of the Elder, the Priest who may be in charge may be assisted in his duties by the Deacons; and in such circumstances the only question that may possibly rise is to cavil about whether the invoking the blessing on the bread and wine is the administration of the sacrament, or whether the passing of it is the administration of it. We believe in a correct rendition and teaching of the law, and the revelations; but we dislike to see overstrained construction of any law. Section 27, paragraph 22, gives us to understand what is called in the law the administration of the sacrament. "And the Elder or Priest shall administer it; and after this manner shall he administer it: he shall kneel with the Church and call upon the Father in solemn prayer, saying," &c. The form of the prayer follows, and not a word of teaching as to how the bread and wine are to reach the members; whether the officer is to take the plate and cup, and sitting in a convenient place have every one come to him and take of them as he holds them for their acceptance; or whether he shall carry them to them in person each one in succession, or pass the plate and cup from hand to hand. The teaching of Moroni is the same, and the testimony there given is that they "administered it according to the teaching of Christ." Precisely the same formula is given; and no instruction as to who shall pass it. The relation of the taking of the sacrament at Christ's visit to this land, by Nephi is simply that Christ brake and gave to his disciples and they to the multitude, he gave them the wine and they to the multitude. He told them then that "one should be ordained who should break bread and bless it, and give it unto the "people of my church." But no further instruction as to how the bread, or wine should be passed.

The Church has met in the various branches and the Elders have usually contented themselves with blessing the emblems, and have called Priests to the duty of passing them to the people, if the congregation was large several of them; and we believe that when the Priest should be left in charge, or be under the necessity of administering the sacrament, when no Elder is present, he may with equal propriety as he might act in passing the emblems to the people when blessed by the Elder, call a Deacon to his aid "if necessity requires."

It should be borne in mind by those who have volunteered to teach us the revelations on this point, that we distinctly stated in answer to the question that "if necessity required" the Deacon might do so and so. If there is no necessity, and can be none, no possible harm can come to the law. David eat the shew bread contrary to law, the disciples violated the Sabbath in plucking the ears of corn and rubbing them in their hands, and Jesus plead the necessity as the law and it is still good law.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—When trouble exists between members of a district not members of the same branch and some of no branch at all, and some of the parties wish to get the matter settled; whose duty is it to take hold of the matter?

Ans.—Those wishing the matter adjusted. All members of the church within the lines of an organized district are amenable to the district conference; and he may proceed upon proper information. No person is exempt from the labor and dealing of church officers.

Ques.—Is it acceptable to the Lord to train up in the children an appetite for fiction, which is no better than any religious novel if not true?

Ans.—The appetite for light reading is undoubtedly a dangerous one; and could the children be reached in any other way, it might be as well to avoid all fiction. But, as it can not be done, we must accept the issue and do the best we can. The Lord, so far as we have any knowledge of the books has not spoken regarding the subject queried of, except as it may be inferred. However, until such times as those of the Saints who are afraid of the influence of any kind of fiction, or created truths, shall furnish us with a sufficient amount of truth done up into palatable morsels, we shall continue to do the best we can.

Ques.—Are the stories of Maplewood Manor and The Sensible Girl, published in the Hope, true?

Ans.—In the sense in which the questioner undoubtedly intends the word truth to be understood, they are not true. But in the sense of correct principles taught in them they are faithfully true. If the reader has read these stories with attention he will have discovered that The Sensible Girl, taught the lesson of hatred to shams, and the love of an independent self dependence, rather than genteel beggary, such as hundreds of young women, raised by too indulgent mothers are raising up for ruined lives, even now; and there are some of these foolish mothers in the church too; and some young women, daughters of such mothers, who are offended to be called women, preferring to be called "ladies;" who are afraid of honest, hard work, that makes the hands strong and sometimes red, (and "vulgar looking," because red), but who think it no disgrace to let mother do the dirty work and drudgery, while they sip round from amusement to amusement with addle pated young "gentlemen," as soft and silly as themselves. A late exchange of the HERALD truly says: "The men of worth and stamina in the American nation are getting tired of the race of fashionable, watering place, society women; and are looking for help metes, not help eats alone." Maplewood Manor, will teach a similar lesson to the young readers of the Hope, if they heed what they read. Take the glint, and gloss and rythm and melody and brightness and glamour and twilight and dawn out of the world, and leave nothing but the broad, real sunlight, and the black darkness of night, it would be a sorry world to live in; so it would be if only hard, unrelenting unchanging truth, and the hideous realities of life were to be given to men, unblessed by the blandishment of hope, the rounding enchantments of distance and the bright, soft, and rosy colorings that love gives.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. M. O. Matthews, of New Park Branch, Pennsylvania, wrote us December 20th:

"I called a meeting yesterday evening; there were five members present. We opened by singing for God's grace, and while the five of us were singing, six voices were heard plainly by the majority; one was the voice of the Spirit singing with us. O how sweet that voice was."

Bro. James Moler wrote from Leon, Mason county, West Virginia, that at the close of late labors of himself and Bro. Williams, near his home, he baptized two from the Baptist Church, husband and wife; and adds:

"There are many calls for preaching in Mason and Jackson counties, from which places the cry

"Come over and help us," is heard. On the 13th of January, if the good Father will, I will present our plea in a new place."

Sr. E. G. Page wrote from Hudson, Wisconsin, lately:

"There is not much encouragement in trying to convince those who are so well joined to their idols as are the majority of the people here. Seven different denominations, besides infidels and sinners."

Bro. E. Penrod, writes December 19th, that:

"It is very sickly in Elko, Nevada; scarlet fever and pneumonia. But the Saints have all escaped so far, thanks to our Father."

Bro. E. C. Brand writes:

"I think the prospects here at Dorchester, Nebraska, are good; also eight miles from Plattsmouth, where I am requested to return after New Year."

Bro. H. C. Bronson wrote from Andalusia, Illinois, December 29th, 1882:

"I am now conducting a series of meetings at this place, with a fair prospect for good results. I shall continue here this week, and then go to other fields. Many inquiring for truth, but few to present it."

Bro. E. L. Kelley wrote from Galland's Grove, Iowa, December 20th:

"The Bishop is meeting with solid encouragements, both on the question of the temporal law generally, and the Temple fund, and we both feel better."

Bro. Richard Ferris writes from Oakland, California:

"Every one is much pleased at the prospect of the Herald becoming a weekly, and thinks that such enterprise on the part of its publishers betokens renewed activity in the great work of the gospel; and in consequence, portends a harvest of good results. That they may not be disappointed is the hearty wish of all."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Anti-Polygamy Standard of Salt Lake, Utah, publishes in its advertisement that it is the "Only Anti-polygamy journal in the United States." This journal is now about two and a half months old in its third volume, while the Herald, our own paper is now entering its thirtieth volume, and it is a wonder that the Standard never heard of our anti-polygamous proclivities. What an age it is for self-assertion.

Bro. F. P. Scarcliff writes from Magnolia Plantation, Alabama, December 19th, that Bro. Givens had baptized five and Bro. Entekin three, during the last month. He adds "The work is looking up in this district."

Bro. John A. White living at Butte City, Montana, is quite anxious that the work there should be revived. He thinks that the officers of branches, should call the Saints together; and if there be no branch organization, that officers in the church, in a locality where there are several Saints, ought to call them together from time to time; and if no preaching may be had, engage in prayer for the good of each other, and the welfare of the cause.

Bro. John Eames writes from Hartville, Wyoming, that on the 8th of December, 1882, at ten in the evening, he witnessed the first run of copper from their company smelter at Millersburg. The yield of copper from the ore was very good. In a ten hours' run 4,500 lbs of copper had been moulded into bullion bars, ready for shipment. Bro. Eames was in high hopes and good spirits. He expected to speak three times on Sunday, December 10th, to the miners, having an audience of about thirty at the Smelter. He also sent specimens of the ore, and the copper after smelting.

Our regular mail sent out for the first number of 1883, of the Herald, Hope and Advocate, weighed 501½ pounds, and was put up in 3,337 packages. The post office department furnishes us with sacks, and directs the routes we shall send them. Each sack is labelled by us, what office it is from, and where it is going. The following is the list of routes:

Bro. Joseph C. Clapp has lately been elected Justice of the Peace, at Moscow, Idaho; and writes, November 30th, that he thinks he will "administer justice, (according to my ideas of justice), and preach the gospel also this winter." He is in better health than for years. May Bro. Clapp's ideas of justice prevail unless he is changed from what he was when we saw him last, is our wish.

Sr. N. V. Pearson, living on a farm belonging to her brother Wat Ellis, on Elm Creek, ten miles east of Rancho, Gonzales county, Texas, would be glad to see some travelling elder; her husband and herself would make one welcome.

Bro. Alexander H. Smith, just returned from a ministerial visit to south-east Kansas, visited Lamon, December 19th to 22d, seemingly in good health and spirits. Bro. Stephen Maloney, writing from Galesburg, Missouri, says of Bro. Smith's visit to the Spring River District, "He did us great good, both by his good counsel and his kindly sympathy for us all."

Bro. Thomas R. Allen, wrote from Cleveland, Iowa, that five had lately been added to the Church there, one the wife of a good brother of the branch. He also reports good results from the Pegg and Gillen debate there.

Sr. Parthena Haskell wrote from Madison, Indiana, that she was an old time Saint, baptized in the Martyr's day, and was now rejoicing in the testimony of the gospel that she had received. She thinks a good work will yet be done in southeastern Indiana.

LIMIT YOUR WANTS.—From the nature of things, the income of most of the inhabitants of the earth must be limited, and, indeed, within very narrow bounds. The product of labor throughout the world, if equally divided, would not make the share of each individual large. It is impossible that every one should be what is called rich. But it is by no means impossible to be independent. And what is the way to compass this—as Burns appropriately designates it—"glorious privilege?" The method is very simple. It consists in one rule: Limit your wants. Make them few and inexpensive. To do this would interfere but little with your real enjoyment. It is mostly a matter of habit. You require more or you are satisfied with less, just as you have accustomed yourself to the one or the other. Limit your wants, estimate their cost, and never exceed it, taking pains always to keep it inside of your income. Thus you will secure your lasting independence. Young men, think of this. A great deal of the happiness of your lives depends upon it. After having made your money, spend it as you choose, honestly; but be sure you make it first.—Selected.

MAGNOLIA, Harrison Co., Iowa,

Dear Herald:—From your pages I learn that the reports of the Elders and correspondence of the Saints, are read with interest, and while I can not flatter myself that either my writings or my labors are worthy of great attention, yet, lest I should be thought remiss in my duties both to the work and to the Herald, I will drop you a word for the benefit of all who may desire to know what I am doing. In the discharge of my duty as a gospel minister, I left my home eight weeks ago to-morrow morning, for the state of Nebraska. I did not stop in the branches on my way, and if any offense was given in this, I humbly ask pardon for apparent neglect. Had I consulted my personal comfort I should certainly have done so, but I was sent to seek the "lost sheep," as well as to salt those who are in the fold. It is much more pleasant to find a cosy shelter in some branch, where good cheer is found in every house, and at your leisure deal out the bread of life to such as will receive it with gratitude, than it is to take your chance among those who are cold and indifferent to the truth, or even among the poor and destitute, who are "hungering and thirsting for righteousness;" and then when everything is pleasant around you, you can write so much better, tell a brighter story, and how glad you are to make sacrifices for the truth, etc. We are all willing to make greater sacrifices when everything is pleasant and prosperous, but when clouds of adversity lower over us, when the prospect before and behind looks cold and gloomy, and the hour for real sacrifice has come, how we shrink from the cup; and if our hearts are not made of the right stuff, and are not in the right place, we are apt to pine for the "leeks and onions," and the "flesh pots of Egypt." Yes, dear Herald, we are poor things when the trial comes, I know it, I have been there. But when God's inspiring love fills our hearts, come storm or sunshine, poverty or prosperity, cold or heat, friends or foes, we can brave all, and endure all, trusting in that upholding grace, which is dispensed to all who manfully labor and fight for the victory of truth over error, of light over darkness. But I must curb my pen, for it is wandering from the purpose of this letter. I crave forgiveness and return.

Arriving at Battle Creek in Nebraska, just before the sun was sinking from view, I shouldered my valise and started for "Yellow Banks," some four miles distant. I was running a race with the great orb of day; I wanted to cross the Elkhorn River at the above point, under his cheering rays; but it was like the old battle of the weak against the strong; and I never thought of commanding him to "stand still," so I was left "where Moses was when the candle was blown out." I laid down my burden at a house by the wayside to enquire how I could cross the river. Only a woman and little baby were at home and filled with fear (as I learned afterwards) lest I was "an old tramp." She curtly told me that when I got there some one would fetch me across. I got to the banks of the river and hallooed, and presently a voice rang out that I had once heard before; the man that owned that voice said, "That's Charles Derry." I bore testimony to that truth, and quickly Bro. Joseph Jackson brought two horses, one for me to ride over the Elkhorn. A hearty welcome, such as only Latter Day Saints can give, was given me, and I was very comfortably housed for the night, and every care taken of the poor "old tramp." The next morning he took me to the depot, and at night I found myself at Clear Water, enjoying the kind hospitality of Bro. and Sr. Hollenbeck. Here my labors began. Here is a knot of Latter Day Saints who had come here to lay a foundation for their future temporal well being. They commenced at the "bed rock;" and I am happy to say many of them have laid fair foundations, and are building upwards. This is the home of our brother, George S. Hyde, and he is about the wealthiest man among them; so you may know they are not overstocked with this world's goods. But they have large hearts, and strong and willing hands, and better than all, I believe truth reigns supreme in their hearts. While among them, I visited in the day and preached at night. I had good audiences, not only of Saints, but outsiders seemed to take a great interest, and I only fear I left them too soon; but I felt that if they truly hungered and thirsted after righteousness, there were those there who were duly authorized to break the bread of life, and well capable of doing so, while I must visit less favored places. Elder Levi Gamet is in charge here. While I was here the Saints met and made arrangements for building a small frame church, believing that it would better represent the character of the work than the poor dark sod house in which they have been accustomed to worship. I left this place to preach in the town of Oakdale, but the Methodists, poor things, thought it would desecrate their church, to have a Latter Day Saint preach in it, so after waiting in vain for a favorable answer, I passed on to Cedar Branch. Here I found a few Saints in the faith; I preached twice, and finding no desire among the outsiders, I continued my journey. My next stopping place was at Buffalo Creek, with a Mr. Nelson, whose wife belongs to the Church; I preached a number of times here and also in other places in this vicinity, during which time I enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. Nelson and wife. This man is believing in the latter day work, and attended my meetings, as far as ten miles away from his home.

I preached in Burnett; here is Elder Oscar Beebe, the blacksmith; he says he lost his license; and has applied in vain to the church authorities for another. He preaches occasionally, but the Saints do not know whether he has been properly ordained; he would have more influence for good if he could present his credentials.

I returned to Yellow Banks, and preached a number of times there. There seemed to be a good interest there. Here are three Latter Day Saints, Joseph Jackson, Sr. Roberts and Sr. Gillman; I was heartily welcomed by them all. I occupied three different places of worship while there. I visited Deer Creek and preached, but owing to the stormy weather only a few were present. The officers in charge seem a little slow, and the work does not progress there; but I was treated very kindly, and made welcome to their homes. From thence I went to Emerick. Here are two Latter Day Saints. I preached a number of times here; the third time I was told I could not have the school house any more, by the man who claimed to own the land on which it was built. This was a Class Leader in the M. E. Church. Two of the citizens immediately offered their houses. I accepted one; it was well seated and well filled. And the people confessed that I had preached more truth than they had heard before. One man declared it was the first gospel sermon he had ever heard. The people visited me in the day time to make further inquiry, and were loathe to have me leave. But letters from home told me I was needed there, as my wife was suffering from rheumatism, and the flour bin was empty, so I concluded to return. On my way home I attended the conference of the Northern Nebraska District. Attendance slim, but we had a good season together. Those who attended love the cause of God; but among the citizens of Columbus, outside of the Church, there seems to be no desire for anything but the God of this world. Even the fashionable churches can not attract them, only as they afford an opportunity of displaying their painted, made up forms and costly apparel. Surely the god of this world hath blinded their eyes.

Well, dear Herald, I thank God for the restoration of the gospel. After testing it for thirty-five years, comparing it with every creed, testing it by the crucible of infidelity in every form, watching it closely in its struggles with the iron bound creeds of the churches, and also with the cold, gloomy, blasphemous sneers of avowed skepticism, or "science falsely so called," I have found it victorious in every contest. I have never had to blush, or on suppliant knee apologize for its defects; but in every instance have felt to give praise and glory to God for inspiring the heart and mind of the Seer of the last days; and thereby enabling him to bring forth such a platform of eternal principles, that all the winds and storms of earth and hell can not shake. A platform broad enough for all humanity to stand upon, whose eternal principles comprehend God and the universe at large, and adapted to all the wants and conditions of the entire family of man. I humbly praise him that he has chosen poor me to be a messenger, a banner bearer of that gospel. It is not pleasant to flesh and blood to endure privations and the scorn and contempt of the world; but there is blessedness in the consciousness that we are enduring it for the cause of universal right, and joy in the realization that "truth must prevail," and that we are "laying up treasures where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, nor thieves break through and steal." All my care is that I may ever prove a valiant and a wise soldier, and thereby make my title clear to an eternal redemption through the blood of Christ.

Wishing you and your readers a good and prosperous New Year, with thousands of honest truth seekers added to your list, and God's light forever in the sanctum, and his blessing upon all the girls and boys in the office, I remain the friend of truth and humanity,

CHARLES DERRY.

STEWARTSVILLE, DeKalb Co., Missouri,
December 19th, 1882.

Brother Joseph.—The Stewartsville Branch met yesterday, and effected in a harmonious manner, a division of the branch. Many of the Saints living in the city have no conveyances of their own, and those that have can not carry all who wish to attend the meetings held in the chapel two and a half miles from town, and frequently the road is muddy or otherwise difficult to travel upon; and it was thought wise to organize a Sunday School in town, the majority of the children in the branch residing there, and the well being of the work in other ways seemed to indicate that regular and frequent services would be necessary. So the Saints living in town, and close vicinity, formed a new branch, numbering about fifty members, which will be called either the "City Branch of Stewartsville," or simply "Stewartsville Branch," if the parent branch will adopt another name. Bro. John M. Terry is president of the new branch, Bro. George E. Ross, Priest, Bro. George Leech, Teacher, James Smith, Deacon, Alexander McCallum, Secretary. There has been a hall, seating about one hundred, obtained, which the Saints of both branches have furnished, and will keep up. The parent branch elected Bro. D. J. Powell as its president, Bro. C. P. Faul continuing as Priest, Bro. Thomas McKee as Teacher, R. McKee and James Wood, Deacons. The chapel has been recently renovated inside, new benches or pews made, old ones repainted, new curtains put up, and platform enlarged. Bro. Burlington of St. Joe, has made us a present of a pair of tasty and valuable swinging lamps and fixtures. The old branch numbers about sixty members. There are four branches within a circle of twelve miles, numbering in all about two hundred and twenty-five members. Beside the Starfield Branch, six miles south of Stewartsville. The Delana Branch sixteen miles east, and the St. Joseph Branch twenty miles west. I spoke the past two Sundays in the chapel in the morning, and in the hall in town at night. Excellent liberty, and good audiences. I expect to deliver a series of discourses in town, commencing this Thursday night. I shall notice Rev. Phillips' philippic. Saints are moving into this region continually, and yet there is room; plenty of excellent farms for sale.

Your brother in Christ,

T. W. SMITH.

CHATFIELD, Minnesota,
November 30th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—I write to express my gratitude for past mercies, and for blessings which I now enjoy. I thank him who delighteth in mercy, and who giveth and upbraideth not, to all who ask him for divine favors. We love him because he first loved us; yet how unworthy I feel of love so great as His.

Truly,

MRS. O. C. MERRILL.

CRESTON, Iowa,

December 3d, 1882.

Dear Herald.—As I have not seen anything from the Hiland Branch in your columns, I will try in my weakness to write. We have a branch of fifteen members, organized some six months ago, with thirteen members. Two have been baptized since. We have Saint's meeting every two weeks; met for the purpose of holding branch meeting on Thanksgiving Eve; and as there was not much business to attend too, we thought best to hold a prayer meeting, with which the Lord was well pleased, as we realized by the presence of the Holy Spirit, by which we were strengthened. We were also made to realize the power of Satan to some extent, and given to understand that he (Satan) was trying to overcome some; but the promise is that through the faithfulness of the Saints, there will be a great work done in this place. May the time speedily come is the prayer of many.

There is a good faithful branch here, notwithstanding some of its members are young in the cause. We greatly desire that an Elder of ability may come in our midst this winter, and labor for a season. As we are a branch in the district, we claim some of the labor of that district, and hope the president will call on us, and give some encouraging exhortation. If an Elder should feel directed to come to our assistance, please come to Creston, and inquire for A. M. Bullard, living three miles south-east of the city, where they will be cared for.

Hoping that the work of the last dispensation may increase, and the sleeping children in Zion's cause may arouse from the slumber that hangs over them,

I remain as ever your brother in the covenant,
E. D. BULLARD.

RUNNELLS, Polk Co., Iowa,
December 19th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—Since last I wrote to you, I have been constantly engaged in the ministry. Bro. R. Etzenhouser has been in my company for about three weeks past. I find him "zealously affected in a good cause." He presents the message in good style, and is careful in his pulpit demeanor, as well as elsewhere. He should receive every needed encouragement—and proper inducements extended as incentives to encourage full future action in the field.

We, by request of friends, have been occupying Brown's Hall, at Runnells, since last Friday eve with good attendance, and intelligent, inviting auditors. Friends have defrayed expenses for hall, until eve of 20th inst., when we close efforts there for present.

We go next to Mahaska county, thence to Des Moines, to "hold a series of revivalistic services," thence to Adel, Dallas county.

I can truly say:

"All the way my Savior leads me;
What have I to ask beside?
Can I doubt his tender mercy,
Who through life has been my guide?"
His love and mercy, who can tell!

No pecuniary interest prompts me to ministerial labor. I have laid myself on the altar as a living burning sacrifice. I look afar into the starry heights, I see Christ in all his majesty, full of tender love and sympathy. He says: "Go, preach the gospel." I see the shining myriads of the redeemed; I see the souls of the martyrs of Jesus under the altar, they cry aloud: "Go, preach the gospel!" I hearken, and hear from behind me, away in the distance, voices of those who, through my labors have been made happy in the truth; to the right, to the left, and lo! before me, I see countless throngs inviting me to come; voices from all around, beneath, and voices from above salute my enraptured ears, their sound thrills my soul, saying: "Go, preach the gospel, through you, and such as you in Christ have made us happy—make others happy in God." Others saying: "Come, labor with us—as you have aided in saving others, so aid in saving us!" O, can any minister for Christ and humanity sit idly by, with all this sound of inviting and commissioning voices ringing in his soul, and ask: "What can I do?" All these must be heard. Don't you see eyes moistened with tears of joy, whose souls you have been instrumental in saving—begging you to go onward! Remember,

"Though tempted and tried,
The Savior who died,
Hath called thee to suffer and reign by his side;
His cross thou shalt bear,
And his crown thou shalt wear,
And forever, and ever, his glory shalt share."
Yours in bonds,

J. FRANK MCDOWELL.

MAGNOLIA, IOWA.

Bro. Joseph:—I came here last Saturday from the Fremont District. Was permitted to meet Brn. Geo. A. Blakeslee, E. L. Kelley, C. Derry, J. C. Crabb and P. Cadwell, as visitors to the conference, pronounced by some of the brethren, the best conference held in the district. The house was filled to overflowing three times on Sunday to hear the word of life spoken. I expect to remain in this vicinity during the present week.

Yours in bonds,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

HAYES, Nebraska,

December 2d, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—Leaving my home and loved ones on the 20th of last month, to fill the mission assigned me caused me to feel sad, having to leave under the present conditions of the church and myself. I felt, Oh, my Father and God, when will thy children arise and let their light shine: how long, O Lord, will thy mercy continue; can it be that the favored of the Lord shall be cast off for their slothfulness, and worldliness, and be the favored no more?" * And to labor to gather in, and see those already gathered in, straying from their Shepherd, by neglecting those duties of love, the fulfilling of which proves such a blessing to the one fulfilling them, seemed to me a double task, the fulfilling of which I felt I was not able to do. I almost faltered by the thought of the task before me. God gave me ability to make the start, and I find the task all I apprehended, and sometimes far more; but so far I have been able to fulfill all duties presented to my understanding as duties, but with what wisdom those duties have been accomplished is but known to Him who sees all we do.

Dear brother, was you not so well acquainted, if not better, with the present condition of the church, and the trials, with which a preacher of the word is surrounded, when leaving all near to them on earth by the ties of nature, and battle against Satan, and all his workings, I could write you more, but I am sad, doubly so, and this will suffice. One thing I have determined to do, and that is to serve God to the best of my ability, and to labor, only as I have faith that I can accomplish for good.

I labored at the Garner school-house, on the nights of the 20th, 21st, 22d with fair interest, receiving the help of friends on my way, arrived at Blair on the 24th, where I held a meeting with good interest, and a desire for my return in the near future by quite a number, which desire I hope to fulfill, as I feel that there is a people there almost persuaded, and after whom God is feeling. I came from Blair to the home of the much loved brother James Brown, at which place I preached on Sunday, the 26th, to a goodly number of Saints and friends congregated as by appointment of the Hayes Branch—the one organized on last September. The Saints of this branch are holding meetings every two weeks, and although laboring against odds, they have the respect of their neighbors generally, which I esteem as the best of sign of their endeavoring to live at peace as much as possible with all men,—a good trait in the character of a Saint.

I am now holding meetings at a school house, in the northern part of Douglas county. Quite an interest is manifested, and I believe good will be done to the cause. I continue here till Sunday night the 3d inst. From here I go to the Douglas Branch, of which Bro. Josiah Curtis is president. One thing I am greatly encouraged in the kindness with which I meet both from Saints and the world. I had like to have forgotten to state, that I had the pleasure of uniting in the bonds of wedlock the youngest daughter of Bro. James Brown, to Mr. Z. J. Brewster, both of which are favorable to our people. This was on Thanksgiving, and of course we had the turkey.

The Saints are greatly pleased that the Herald is soon to be made a weekly. I pray that our little Hope may soon become a weekly, and hope the Saints will try to give it all the encouragement they can, in their Sabbath Schools especially, and I think it can soon be accomplished. I have not met with any of the traveling brethren in Nebraska yet, but I pray for their success, and the success of all in the service of our God, until the accomplishment of all things spoken by all the holy prophets since the world began.

I am still continuing the discussion in the Waterloo Gazette, but Elder Winters has written his concluding article. I have not answered it yet. It has created some little interest to the detriment of the Elder as I hear that in some places the people think he has been too wilful in his remarks against your father, and in misquoting Scripture.

Yours in the labor of saving souls,

J. FRANK MINTUN.

LAMBERTA, Baldwin Co., Missouri,
November 30th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—Since I wrote last I have been endeavoring to magnify my calling. The Master has blest me both in study and in the presentation of the word.

The low condition of the work in the Florida District has made me feel very sad at times, but I have not despaired. Though pained, I have been cheered with rays of light from above. It is hard for us to look upon the faces of those whom we love, and see them pining in the mortal strife. It is hard for us to witness their struggles with death. But ah, it is harder if we have been made alive to the great issues of life, to see those for whom our hearts yearn, "dying unto righteousness." In the first instance, if they have died in Christ, we know "That from this twilight of God's love,

Will rise the glory of eternal life."

But the twilight of those who die unto righteousness, will deepen into a tempestuous night. Living unto God we shall meet the former, on that better shore; but the latter we must bid an eternal farewell. "For where God and his Christ are, they can not come, world's without end."

Our district conference at Coldwater, first Saturday and Sunday in November, though not largely attended, passed off pleasantly. There is a demand for preaching in almost every part of the district,—a demand only partially met.

Bro. Givens recently baptized three in Baldwin county, Alabama. He is getting advanced in years, infirm in body, and has to labor to support his family; but he loves the work, and preaches most of the Sabbaths during the year. He is an example worthy of imitation. More local labor in this district and the work would move on, and all concerned would have occasion to rejoice. I think Bro. Givens has baptized about a dozen during the past year. The secret of his success is his upright walk and conversation; and love, the strong love he has for his fellow man. My address is Lambertá, Baldwin county, Alabama.

Your brother in Christ,

FRANK P. SCARCLIFF.

SOUTH RAWDON, Hants Co., Nova Scotia,
December 14th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph; Dear Sir:—I received tracts Nos. 6, 11, and 20. Thanks to the donor. They were very acceptable, and are eagerly sought after by the people with whom I have been laboring.

I have been preaching this last month in two different places, preaching nearly every night, and twice or three times Sundays. Quite an interest among the people. Invitations from three other places have been extended to me, which I expect to accept soon after holidays.

This people are conservative; the work progresses slowly here. Orthodoxy is determined to stop it at once, and is making every exertion possible to "wipe it out," as they are pleased to express it. We pay no heed to them, keeping the even tenor of our way, preaching all we can, and every opportunity, publicly and privately, teaching that Jesus is the Christ, and his words are true, sowing the seed everywhere, leaving the result with the Lord of the harvest, praying he will give us sheaves for our hire if we are worthy.

The few Saints of Delhaven, are proving themselves Saints indeed, and to their neighbors are as a "city set on a hill," and as a "light on a table," the bright shining of which gives light in the room.

May God still more abundantly bless them. But they and we were made sad indeed when our Master called for one of our number. Bro. George N. Davison, of Scots Bay was buried November 29th. For five years he held the faith firm and unwavering among this people, alone, through trials, peculiarly strong temptations and difficulties, not to say persecutions; but proved that for the faith he was willing to give up all that might be required of him.

When he bid me good bye, October 31st, he said, "Probably I will not see you again in the flesh." I tried to encourage him, but felt it might be so. He slept quietly, and peacefully passed away. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." I feel more lonely since his death. What a dearth of laborers! Only one weak one to tell the story of the gospel's restoration to the thousand villages, towns and hamlets of Nova Scotia, and to that one the cry is, Come over into our neighborhood, from many places. May God in mercy to man send more laborers into the vineyard.

I am trying to do what I can. Have been reproved for not being faithful enough in the past. Have renewed my diligence, and hope to do better in the future. May God help me. Pray for me, Bro. Joseph. I want to do right, preach the gospel, be faithful, overcome, and receive the promise made me, "Enter, no power can hinder."

May God bless you and all the Israel of God.

Yours in the bonds of Christ,

JOSEPH F. BURTON.

No 14 S. Sheldon St., CHICAGO, Ills.,
December 20th, 1882.-

Bro. F. Smith:—We were glad to meet with Bro. J. R. Lambert, who arrived here safe last Thursday, the 14th instant. He preached at the hall occupied by the brethren here on Sunday, with freedom and force and with excellent effect on the hearers. May his stay here be a pleasant one, as well as profitable to those who may be privileged to hear him.

WM. H. KELLEY.

JEFFERSONVILLE, Illinois,
December 22d, 1882.

Dear Herald:—I have just been to Richland county with Bro. I. M. Smith on a preaching tour. We stayed five days, and preached six times to very attentive audiences. I think some good was done, although none obeyed. We also went to Springerton, White county. Preached five times. Left a good feeling, and got some to subscribe for the Herald. I hope the weekly issue may prove a success.

I expect to go to Johnson and Williamson counties soon, if my health will permit. My health has not been good this fall. There is not much being done in our district, for the want of more effective laborers. We have had no general missionary here since Bro. Derry. Bro. Lake never reached us, and Bro. Springer has not come yet. We will try to be doing something to advance the truth.

G. H. HILLIARD.

At the present moment in Russia the attention of the press and of society in all the large towns is painfully concentrated on the daily announcements of bank failures, speculation, embezzlement, frauds, and robberies of every kind. Scarcely a day passes without the news of some bank having been found insolvent or in a critical condition, or of some cashier of a government institution or benevolent society, having appropriated the funds and "cooked" the accounts.

The floods from the Rhine continue to fall, but it is feared that the intense frost which has set in will freeze the water on the submerged fields and thus greatly increase the mischief already done.

A band of Checote's men under Jim Larney, were going west, when about seven o'clock in the evening they were attacked by some two hundred of Spiechec's partisans under command of Mekarochee. The fight raged for an hour, when Checote's men fell back, but kept up a running fight for ten miles. Bob Carr, Dave Barrett and wife, and a man named Walsh are reported killed. The loss on the other side is not known. The whole country is rushing to arms on receipt of the news. A detachment of forty United States soldiers was ordered to the scene, and this morning they overtook and disarmed one hundred and fifty of Checote's men. This will be continued till all the men engaged on both sides are disarmed. There was no lightning or thunder at the time.

The attempt to light New York City by electricity is still likely to be a failure. It is said to be much dearer than gas, and much more injurious to the eyes.

May wisdom guide,
And love preside,
O'er this united pair.

DIED.

ROBY.—At New Egypt, New Jersey, on November 26th, 1882, after a lingering illness, Sister Annie E. Roby. Deceased was baptized in 1880, by Bro. Jos. A. Stewart, of Philadelphia. She was a widow, and leaves three children to mourn her loss.

MILIKIN.—At Colchester, McDonough county, Illinois, December 9th, 1882, Sr. Lucy, wife of Bro. Arthur Milikin, deceased, and sister of Joseph Smith, the Martyr. She was buried Monday afternoon, December 11th. Funeral sermon preached by Elder Solomon Salisbury, to a large and attentive audience, from 1st Corinthians, 15th chapter, 22d verse. She had been sick a long time, having most of the time suffered great pain. She with Christian fortitude endured the same patiently. Mother (Catharine Salisbury) and Uncle William Smith, still remain, of a family that have suffered as few are called upon to suffer; and strange to say, because they desired to better the condition of the human family. Their lives have been taken, mobbed, hated and reviled, because they feared God more than man. Few have loved them, many have hated them. The world to come certainly will be for them a rest; for here there was none found. They were pilgrims and strangers almost from childhood; they have all been since the gospel was espoused, any way.

S. J. SALISBURY.

"The midnight comes, and my lamp unfilled!"
(Black and stormy the night wanes on)
"Sisters, help! ere my hope be killed;
Give of your store that my lamp may be filled."
(The Bridegroom into the House hath gone).

"Sisters, help!" They have closed the door.
(Black and stormy the night wanes on).
Naught they gave of their brimming store,
Each one watching the lamp she bore.
(The Bridegroom into the House hath gone).

"I will knock, though the door be closed."
(Black and stormy the night wanes on).
"Lord, thy handmaid waits. Unclose!
Around me night like a river flows."

"Who knocks so late from the darkened East?"
(Black and stormy the night wanes on).
"Depart! I know not great nor least Who brings no light to the marriage feast."

Watch well thy lamp, that it light the gloom,
And show the way to the festal room.

SERMON BY ELDER E. L. KELLEY, OF GLENWOOD, IOWA,

AT THE OLD CHURCH, NEAR LAMONI,
DECEMBER 10th, 1882.

For our Scriptural lesson this morning, I invite your attention to the reading of the 9th chapter of Paul's second letter to the Corinthian Saints :

"For as touching the ministering to the Saints, it is superfluous for me to write to you: For I know the forwardness of your mind, for which I boast of you to them of Meccedonia, that Achaia was ready a year ago; and your zeal hath provoked very many. Yet have I sent the brethren, lest our boasting of you should be in vain in this behalf: that, as I said, ye may be ready: lest haply if they of Meccedonia come with me, and find you unprepared, we (that we say not ye), should be ashamed in this same confident boasting. Therefore I thought it necessary to exhort the brethren, that they would go before unto you, and make up beforehand your bounty, whereof ye had notice before, that the same might be ready as a matter of bounty, and not as of covetousness. But this I say, He which soweth sparingly, shall reap also sparingly: and he which soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully. Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver. And God is able to make all grace abound toward you; that ye, always having all sufficiency in all things, may abound to every good work: (As it is written, He hath dispersed abroad: he hath given to the poor: his righteousness remaineth forever. Now he that ministereth seed to the sower both minister bread for your food, and multiply your seed sown, and increase the fruits of your righteousness): Being enriched in everything to all bountifulness, which causeth through us thanksgiving to God. For the administration of this service not only supplyeth the want of the Saints, but is abundant also by many thanksgivings unto God: While by the experiment of this ministration they glorify God for your professed subjection unto the gospel of Christ, and for your liberal distribution unto them, and unto all men: And by their prayer for you, which long after you for the exceeding grace of God in you. Thanks be unto God for his unspeakable gift."

Beloved Saints:—I am glad this morning for this opportunity of talking to you upon the law of God as we find it revealed in his word that relates especially to the duties of the Saints as to temporal things. It seems that in the dealings of God with his people in every age of the world, that he has held in view the principle, that in his work every one who has an interest in that work, should work and labor in proportion to his interest. That in the building up of the work with regard to spiritual things and duties, and the gifts that come through the manifestations of the Spiritual law, there is given to every man, which covers the race as we understand it, a portion, or testimony of the Spirit to profit withal, that all under the ministrations of that Spirit that is promised unto his children, may be built upon the gospel that he has given; so that they may be indeed "lively stones" in the building, or the Church that he seeks to establish, in order that it may be ready when the Son of Man shall come.

But I do not only find it in his law with regard to spiritual things and the blessings of spiritual things; but also in the law of temporal things and duties. I find that every individual that has named his name, that has taken upon him the name of a child of him, has something to do in the great work that he has instituted, that all might have life and salvation who comply therewith. And that it is not that a few men should stand and in certain things bear all that is required in the building up of the Church and the sustaining of the Saints, of the poor and the needy, and of those who are promulgating the gospel; but he has required at the hands of every individual in the Church in proportion as he blesses such individuals.

This we might readily conclude from his approval of the mites that the widow threw into the treasury. It seems that as the master looked upon those who were throwing into the treasury here upon the earth at that time, or they who thought that they were giving into the treasury of the Lord, did not conclude that the widow had no right to give of her mite and cast it into the treasury; but he only approved of that and compared the gift that was brought by her with those brought by other individuals who could much more easily contribute of their gifts, though much larger as far as this world's goods were concerned, than the widow. Thus showing in accordance with the language of the chapter that I have read, that "as the Lord hath prospered" the brethren, so let them give. And then again that he requires these gifts in such a manner, and the performing of duties in regard to temporal things with such conscientious exactness, that it is not simply in the handing out of the means that the Church is to be benefitted, or the kingdom built up; but it is also in the training or disciplining of the soul in handing out the means that are given for the good of the work; so that the individuals themselves are benefitted in the giving, and the benefit is not all on the side of the Church.

Now I can conceive, that if it had been in the mind of the Savior a proper thing to do for the building up of his cause here upon the earth, that he should have treasures outside of the giving of the Saints, outside of what might be obtained of his people, that he could have instituted a plan to obtain those treasures. Not only that, but I think if it were possible that one individual in the Church should give such an amount to the building up of his cause as to preclude the necessity of any other individual in the Church giving anything for the promulgation of the truth and such building up, that it would not be for the interests of his kingdom.

You see in the chapter that I have read, that individuals are to be blest in the time that is to come when their inheritances will be made up, in proportion as they have done good works here. They are not only to be blest in proportion to their faithfulness pertaining to spiritual things; but also in proportion to their faithfulness in the duties pertaining to temporal things. And so if an individual has given to him but few things in this world, that when the Master comes to reckon with him he will require such an interest upon these few things as he does upon the many things delivered to some.

This idea you will find recorded in the 25th chapter of Matthew, where the Kingdom of Heaven is likened by Jesus unto a man that traveled into a far country, and who distributed in his journey goods to certain individuals. To one he distributed five talents, to another two, and to another one. Afterwards he returned to reckon with those individuals, as he had made them stewards for a particular thing and purpose; that is, for the keeping of his goods. He returned to reckon with them for the goods that he had left in their possession. And as he began to reckon with them, he came to the one to whom had been given but a few things, and that one had neglected to improve upon the talent that had been given to him, and the goods that had been placed in his hands, that he might deliver them up with interest to the Master when he should come.

This teaches that he ought to have accumulated upon it, and given the increase to the Lord, as he might have done had he put to good use the talent, or the goods that were left in his possession. Because he had not done this, it should be taken from him, even that which was originally given to him, and given to the individual that had given good use of his time here, and had improved upon that which the Lord had given into his hands.

I only give this as an illustration to show that it is not the fact, that in the requirements of the law of the Church the Lord requires only such things as we may have no occasion for, or that we can do without as well as we can do with. Because if it is a fact, that we are to be approved in the day that is coming on the account of our giving unto him, and if we give, or minister unto the least of these little ones, it is unto him, it will not be on account of our disbursing simply that which we do not know what to do with; but it will be also on account of disbursing something that has come into our hands that we do know what to do with, and could possibly use, and could possibly do good with. Not only that, but that we should not wait until we have accumulated as much as some of our brethren, or that we may give as much as they; but that if we only have one farthing to deliver unto him in the condition in which he is to-day as we believe, speaking with reference to the church and the promulgation of the gospel, that we ought as Saints to deliver that at once, and if we do that, we can stand approved of him in the time that is coming, when it will be said of them, "Inasmuch as you have done it unto the least of these my little ones, you have done it unto me." And while the passage in which he used this language, the 25th chapter of Matthew, refers the same claim to individuals who are not brethren; yet if you will turn to the 42d section of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and 8th paragraph, you will notice that he makes the same application to the Saints. When he comes to reckon with those stewards, that inasmuch as they have given in accordance with the blessings of God unto them in this world, unto his people, that he will say unto them that they have done it unto him; distinctly applying the language himself in the revelation that he uttered in the gospel recorded in Matthew, to the people who belong to his church here.

Now the idea of a Church treasury, and the temporal law going hand in hand with the spiritual law, is not a new doctrine to us as a people in the nineteenth century. It is one that was first instituted by our Savior. You can only harmonize some of the teachings that he made in accordance with the fact of his establishment of a treasury at the time that he was here, for the purpose of benefitting his Church, and those whom he had sent into all the world. One of his first acts was the establishment of a treasury; and that is the reason that we find him talking to the disciples in his sermon upon the mount, and teaching them with reference to their duties as they went into the world; particularly those whom he afterwards called and named the Twelve, and sent forth into the world to teach his law. In teaching upon the mount he says in the 24th verse of the 6th chapter of Matthew:

"No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one and love the other: or else he will hold to one and despise the other. Ye can not serve God and mammon. Therefore I say unto you, take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment?"

I would not have you understand as saints, that this language is addressed to every individual in the church. That they shall not take thought of the morrow, what they shall eat or what they shall drink. I do not believe that the Savior intended, or that he said any such thing unto the members of his church, or to any other individuals in that language than those whom he had called and sent forth to serve him in spiritual things: hence it is that he said unto them upon this occasion, "Ye can not serve both God and mammon," teaching those individuals whom he had sent forth to minister his spiritual law, that another provision would be made for them. That they could not serve in the interest of accumulating the things and necessities of this life, and also serve the work of the Master in building up the Kingdom of Heaven.

You will remember that the Apostle Paul, in teaching in regard to the duties of a man to his household, says: "He that provideth not for his own household, is worse than an infidel, having already denied the faith." Yet sometimes when we place it in connection with the teaching of the Savior, you are apt to think there is a contradiction, unless you take it in the sense in which it is taught by the Savior as we find it recorded here, that these individuals to whom he was speaking were the individuals that should go forth and seek to build the up kingdom of God, and to establish his righteousness; and then he says all these things, the word these preceding, all these things, that is the feeding you and clothing you, "all these things shall be added unto you."

Now when these things were to be added unto them, it was not as some have supposed, that they should go forth into the world, and risk that the world should do all these things for them; as they might have need. For he said unto these same individuals, instead of making the promise unto them that the world would feed them and clothe them and provide for their comfort, he said unto them, "Ye shall be brought before governors and rulers, and you shall be imprisoned for my sake," and their very lives he intimates shall be taken. But he said that their Heavenly Father had provided for them, for their households; in other words, that when it was necessary for them, when they had gone forth and reproved the world in going forth this way, that they might return and not receive the same reproof from the church that they had met in the world; but that they might receive from the church better things.

Hence it is said in the revelation to the church, and to the Elders of the church in our own day, that the day in which they stand in need of these things the church shall give it to them; thus defining the meaning of the Savior with regard to the way that these individuals would receive the things that they stood in need of as Christians, or they in the first ages of christianity.

When those parties who go forth into the world and leave the care of their families to the church, and have reproved the world, if they return to the church, and then the church would not provide for their necessities and wants, it would be a reproof to the church, as much as to the world to whom they had been sent.

Now it has been a question in this day and age of the world, not so much as to whether it was necessary to have a financial system and a treasury, and that the treasury should be filled, as it has been as to how that treasury shall be filled. What is the financial system of the church?

I shall not spend much time this morning in order to show you that it is as necessary for every individual to comply with the temporal law, as it is with the spiritual; for it seems to me the very fact that the same Creator has given the one that gave the other, and the fact that the same law that is handed to us that relates to our spiritual duties, was given through the Son and the Apostles after him as the spiritual law, ought to be sufficient to make every one of us know, that if the temporal law of the church, so far as that given of the Lord is concerned, is a failure, and is not for the interests of the church, we have no right to believe that the spiritual law is for the good of the church. Because if you prove to me that that which is given of the Lord in one instance is a failure, and not requisite to build up the kingdom of Christ, when he has associated it with the other part; then I can not have that implicit faith and confidence in the other part that I should have, in order to make me a member of his church in deed, that is in faith, that I may do my duty as a member of the body.

So it seems to me, that the moment we admit that the Lord has given unto us as a people a temporal law and a spiritual law, by which the kingdom might be built up in the day and age in which we live, and not only in this day, but related to the kingdom in the past; that it is just as necessary for individuals to obey and comply with the temporal law as the spiritual, and the spiritual as the temporal; and though we may shirk duties under both, yet it will not release us from the responsibility that we are under as Saints. Though we may shirk responsibilities and not comply in all things with the spiritual law, it may be such a shirking of duties and responsibilities that we could not be directly dealt with here. We could yet retain a membership in his church, but though we retain a membership in his church, we could not expect to receive the blessings when he comes to receive his church.

I will instance one example. Every individual who has complied with the outward ordinances of the church, is entitled to the reception of the sacrament, to the ministering of that ordinance that is also set in the church. But it is left with every individual in the church to decide for himself whether he will divest himself of all bias and prejudice in regard to his brethren and the world, and his neighbors and friends, before he puts forth his hand and partakes of the supper of the Lord. And though an individual might refuse to obey the requirements of the law in that he would not forgive a brother or a friend or a neighbor, and put forth his hand and partake of the Lord's Supper, yet the church could not see what was in his heart, and what the purposes would be of that individual, and they would be compelled to administer the ordinance; yet it would be to the demnation of the individual because he outwardly complied with the law, though he did not comply with it in his heart. He would not be entitled to the ministrations of the spiritual blessings in the church, nor would he be entitled to the spiritual blessings that are spoken of in regard to the regaining of health through the ministrations of the elders. But the elders would be apt to be called, and they would administer to that individual as to other individuals, but the Lord could not comply with his request, because he had not before complied with the request of the Lord unto him.

So it is in regard to the temporal law of the church. The Lord has said in his revelation that there is no individual in his church that is exempt from temporal things. That neither the Bishop of the Church nor any other, as I will read from the 70th section, 3d and 4th paragraphs of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. He goes on to show that neither the Bishop of the church nor his Counselors, nor any individual member of his church is exempt from complying with his law; and not only that, but the spiritual blessings of the church are given unto individuals in proportion also as they comply with the temporal law of the church.

"Behold, this is what the Lord requires of every man in his stewardship, even as I, the Lord have appointed, or shall hereafter appoint unto any man. And behold none are exempt from this law who belong to the church of the living God; yea, neither the Bishop, neither the Agent, who keepeth the Lord's store-house; neither he who is appointed in a stewardship over temporal things; he who is appointed to administer spiritual things, the same is worthy of his hire, even as those who are appointed to a stewardship to administer in temporal things; yea, even more abundantly, which abundance is multiplied unto them through the manifestations of the Spirit; nevertheless, in your temporal things you shall be equal, and this not grudgingly, otherwise the abundance of the manifestations shall be withheld."

Let the Saints remember this morning, that unless the temporal law is complied with as it is given unto us as a people, of God, that the manifestations of spiritual blessings shall be withheld. I believe this part of the law this morning as much as I believe any other part of the law; and I believe that in the economy of God, and in the promises that he has made unto us as a people, and in the day and under the circumstances under which we live, it is possible for us as a people to put forth our hands and attain both unto the spiritual blessings of his church, and the promises made through his word, with relation to temporal things, as it has been with relation to many other peoples that have lived upon the earth; and that it is in our province and in our power, to lay hold of the promises that he has promised unto us, obeying the law in such a manner that we may receive the great things that are spoken of in his law. And while I believe this, I believe it is also possible for us to put those promises behind us. It is possible that we may not prove ourselves worthy of the things that the Lord has promised unto us as a people, and we may as others have done, lose them, because the promises are not to those who will not obey; but to those who will obey, and will comply with his law.

Now as a member of the church, if I was not worthy to give more than the widow's mite, which she cast into the treasury of the Lord, I would think that it was a delightful thing that I was permitted to give that much, for the reason that in proportion as I do in accordance with that which God has given unto me here, so it will be when the King shall come, that the reward will be made up, and those things will be taken into consideration in the making up of that great reward, as well as other duties and other things that we regard as duties under the spiritual law.

There was a time after the ascension of the Savior, in which the temporal law of the church was dismissed, and under that dispensation the people just after the ascension of Christ for a year or two, the Saints seemed to be in such harmony, of one heart and one mind, that the people in their goodness of heart came together, and delivered all that they had and laid it at the apostles' feet, as we find it recorded in the 4th chapter of the Acts of the Apostles. So that it seemed for a time that they would have all things in common in this world. But that law, whether it was given by the Holy Spirit of the Savior or not, it seems did not meet with the approval of the Saints generally in a few years after the time that the apostles went forth to preach; for as early as the time of the preaching of the apostles, we find that this law was not complied with, it was left untaught also; and that the Apostle Paul, also the apostle Peter, teach the principles of the law to govern the church, and they were not of the same nature, as you will find recorded in the 5th and 6th chapters of the Acts of the Apostles. But they teach in accordance with the law revealed in the day and age in which we live. I invite your attention to the words of the apostle Paul, as you will find them recorded in the 16th chapter of his first letter to the Corinthian saints:

"Now concerning the collection for the Saints, as I have given order to the churches of Galatia, even so do ye. Upon the first day of the week let every one of you lay by in store, as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come."

You notice here in regard to the temporal law taught by the apostle Paul, that it is in keeping with the law that is given in our day, as we shall try to show as we proceed. That as God has prospered every individual in this world, so he requires at his hands. And it is not with the order of the church that seems to have been complied with immediately after the ascension of the Savior into heaven; but it is upon the other feature taught by the apostles, and that also that was revealed to Abraham from the beginning, "That as the Lord hath prospered every man, so let him give," that we have to do.

I believe also that there is such a thing as equality in the church, as taught in the revelation that I have read. And I will explain as I understand it, what this equality here refers to. He says in regard to spiritual manifestations, that these things shall be given, yea "even more abundantly, which abundance is multiplied unto you through the manifestations of the Spirit. Nevertheless in your temporal things you shall be equal, and this not grudgingly, otherwise the abundance of the manifestations of the spirit shall be withheld."

The equality that is spoken of there, is the equality that is recognized by God in the distribution of those things that come into the church. That an individual who has taken it upon him to minister the word, and who is under the necessity of receiving aid from the church, or may be disabled so that he is under the law of the church with regard to the disability of families, or the poor, that they shall be equal. Not that they shall receive exact amounts, but that they shall receive just in accordance with their wants, and no more.

If a certain family requires a certain amount in order that it may receive that which will sustain it, that amount may be greater or less than that required by some other family; yet the equality is in this, that they have distributed to them in accordance with their needs, their wants, and not in accordance with the number of the family, perhaps, or their position or standing; though the position and standing in the church is a matter that is recognized in the revelations.

Now in the imparting of the substance that comes into the hands of those who stand to receive such things in the church, we understand that there is equality taught in the revelations. But so far as the theory is concerned, that every individual shall give all that he has into the church treasury, and that afterwards we shall have all things in common in the church, it is neither taught in the Bible, nor is it taught in the revelations given us in the day in which we live.

I will read from a few of the revelations in order to show what is required. In sec. 42, par. 8, of Book of Doctrine and Covenants, you read thus:

"If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou hast to impart unto them, with a covenant and a deed that can not be broken."

Now you are not to give all that you have in this world into a common treasury under the revelations as they are here, but you are to "consecrate of thy properties" for the benefit and sustenance of those individuals in the church; and the manner in which you are to do it is set forth by the apostle Paul where he says: "As God hath prospered every one, so let him give."

It seems that it is in accordance with the measure of God's dealing out unto individuals, that he may justly require certain things at their hands. And he says here further, that inasmuch as we impart of our substance unto the poor, we do it unto him, and it shall be laid before the Bishop of the Church and his Counselors, and the Elders or High Priests, such as are appointed, or set apart for that purpose. In all the revelations in which the Lord speaks concerning their property and exacting it of them, you will find that the Lord speaks of it in that way: that they are to "consecrate of their properties," and for that particular purpose.

This is in accordance with the teachings of the apostle here; as you will find recorded in the 15th chapter of Paul's letter to the Roman saints. That it is upon that just principle, that as the Lord hath given individuals here, he may justly require at their hands; and he may require at their hands some part of that which is given here, whether they have much or little. Because if there are a few individuals in the church that are to give all the money that is needed for the good of the work and its support, then that few will receive all the blessings that will be given by the Lord as a reward for so doing. They will receive all the blessings that have been promised unto all the faithful in the church when he comes. He says:

"For it hath pleased them of Macedonia and Achaia to make a certain contribution for the poor saints which are at Jerusalem. It hath pleased them verily, and their debtors they are.

For if the Gentiles have been made partakers of their spiritual things, their duty is also to minister unto them in carnal things."

It is placed by the apostle Paul as a duty on the part of those who have received of spiritual things, that they should minister of those things which they have. And it was not only to the Gentiles, but it was to the Jews, to whom the gospel went before it was proclaimed to the Gentiles. And it was not only to the Jew and Gentile of that age, but the same principle has been revealed unto our own age. This principle we believe was the law that was required of faithful Abraham. Abraham was an individual that had received the law in such a manner that he could attain unto eternal life under that law. That he had received the gospel law, or spiritual law; and as recorded here in the 7th chapter of Hebrews, Abraham gave the tenth of the spoils. And he gave it to Melchisedec, who was an individual the Saints understand to whom Abraham owed allegiance.

This gospel, this law of temporal things, that seems to have been incumbent upon Abraham, afterwards was made incumbent upon all Israel; and not only all Israel, but it seems that the same law that God had recognized from the beginning, had recognized in Abraham's case, of which it is said in the law that the Levites paid tribute, was spoken of by Malachi the prophet, as being in force, and afterwards was by the Savior incorporated into the New Testament dispensation, or into the Christian dispensation, about the time of the establishment of his church at Jerusalem, and at the time that he established his church upon this continent.

It is said in Malachi with reference to the law of temporal things, that certain individuals of Israel in that day had robbed God, in that they had withheld from the church, withheld from God, that which it was incumbent upon them to give, and it is named here, tithes.

And the same thing you will find incorporated into the New Testament, or into the Christian dispensation by Jesus himself, when he administered upon this continent. After he had organized his church, called the Twelve and set them apart, then he delivers to them the same prophecy of Malachi, which you will find recorded in the Old Testament dispensation.

"Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me even this whole nation. Bring ye all the tithes into the store-house, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts. And all nations shall call you blessed; and ye shall be a delightful land, saith the Lord of hosts."

I believe that this law is in force with God's people to-day. That it was incorporated into the christian dispensation, as you will find by reading the account recorded in the Book of Mormon of His works upon this continent. It is binding upon individuals to-day, and it is in accordance with the law that is taught in the New Testament, in regard to the proportion that individuals shall give, in this that they shall give "as God hath prospered" them. That it is a little more definite, in this that it teaches the amount that God requires of individuals in order that they may comply with the law.

I do not believe now with reference to the law of the church, that the Bishop will ever go to an individual and command him to do a certain amount of work, or to give a certain thing, or a certain amount of property, and compel him to comply with that command. I do not believe that that is the way to administer the law that is given here. But it is left with every individual to decide for himself the proper amount that he ought to give under the law; and that he is the sole judge of that. That no individual in the church under the present law has a right to say just what I shall give, or what you shall give, or not give; but in accordance with the language of the apostle Paul, in the 3d verse of the 9th chapter of his second letter to the Corinthian saints, "Every man, according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give. Not grudgingly, or of necessity; for the Lord loveth a cheerful giver." So that whenever an individual gives anything in this church for the good of the work, he must give it from the heart. It must be given from within, instead of from without. It must be given because he desires to do some good thing for the cause, and not simply to be seen of men. Because if it is not given in this way, it does not fulfill the law, neither is it for the good of the individual who gives.

In regard to the dealings of the Lord and the work of the Lord with the people, there was a beautiful lesson came to my mind a short time ago, through the revelation that he gave with reference to the building of his house, the Temple, at Kirtland, Ohio. And if you will take the Book of Covenants and read in regard to the pattern of that house, and the way in which it was to be built, you will find in contradistinction to the way in which people generally go to work in the world, that he went to work just in the opposite way. Instead of giving the dimensions of the building in regard to the outer walls, that they should build it so many feet wide, long, deep, and so forth, you will find that he begins with the inner court, and that he gives the length and breadth of the inner court, and he comes from the inner court to the outer, and that the outer court is governed by the certain length and breadth of the inner court. So it was when we went there and measured the building on the outside, it was a puzzle why it was that the church should select that the building should be just fifty-nine feet broad and seventy-nine feet long, rather than have taken even numbers. And we could not understand this until we came to where the Lord, instead of beginning at the outside foundation of the building, had given a plan for the building of his house and had begun with the inner court first, and he worked from the inward part of the building to the outward part.

So it is I believe with the works of individuals, that they commence from the inward part of the individual; and not only is it so with individuals, but it is so with the church itself. And this is very forcibly illustrated in the teachings of Alma that we have in the Book of Mormon; and not only Alma, but others. That it is from the inward part of his church that he works outward, and that there must be works in order that his church be built up. The Lord has said in the revelations to us, that what would be pleasing in his sight for individuals to give, is a tenth, a tithe, and it is in regard to this tenth or tithe that I will talk to you this morning.

Just one week ago yesterday we were before a number of Saints in Illinois, who had been wronged at certain times out of all that they had with regard to temporal things. Who had been made destitute under the administration of this law; that is, the false administration of it. As I stood before them to talk, and the Bishop stood before them to talk, I wondered how these individuals would take the teachings of the church in regard to the temporal law, after they had suffered so much from the temporal law as it had been ministered and enforced upon them. I learned that after they had heard the teaching of the law as it is found in the books, and considered it, they were the first to rejoice and begin to comply with it. These were the Saints of Kewanee. Although many individuals there had been so misguided in regard to this law in the past, that they had even sold a feather bed that they had need of for their own use, in order to give a tithe, as it was called, to the church; yet these individuals, when they saw the real teachings of the law in regard to the temporal concerns of the church, they said if they had only seen this law in the past it would have saved them a great loss, and not only that, but many a heart ache.

So I am confirmed in going before the Saints to teach this law; for I recognize in this law as a foundation principle, justice. Where can we find any justice in that law, that requires that an individual should take the last morsel from his children, and throw it into the treasury of the Lord, to be dispensed to others? The principle of justice is wronged, rather than kept up.

But the fact that the temporal law has been abused in the past, is no reason that we should say that the temporal law should not be complied with to-day. The same argument would deny that the spiritual law should be observed. We do not think because the spiritual laws have been abused and misinterpreted, and mistaught, and corrupted in the past, that this is any reason that the spiritual law, as it is found in the books, should not be taught now.

So it is with the temporal law. It is no reason because certain individuals have abused their rights and teachings under the temporal law in the past, that it should not be taught and enforced to-day. When I say enforced, I mean enforced in accordance with the spirit of the gospel. An enforcement under the gospel is not the same as an enforcement under the laws of the land. That is that you can sue a man and make him pay so much; but an enforcement under the gospel is this: That if an individual refuses to comply with the law as God has given it; he refuses to comply with his request; and so it is we can only seek unto the promises after we have complied with his law fully, as his law has been made plain unto us now, by the revelation that he has given unto his people in this day and generation. It is said in the 64th section, and paragraph five of the Book of Covenants: from the reading of this paragraph, that I wish to call your attention to. The first is that the day in which the people should give their offerings, their tithings, was from the time in which this revelation was given, in 1831, until the coming of the Son of Man; and we claim that the coming of the Son of Man is yet in the future, as referred to in this revelation. And that he says that they that do wickedly shall be burned up, "For I will burn them up saith the Lord of hosts," as it is said here.

"Behold, now it is called to-day, (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned (at his coming); for after to-day cometh the burning; this is speaking after the manner of the Lord; for verily I say, to-morrow all the proud and they that do wickedly shall be as stubble; and I will burn them up, for I am the Lord of hosts; and I will not spare any that remaineth in Babylon."

There are two suggestions to my mind

So it is in the day in which we live. It is a day in which the same sacrifices are required of the church as were required of them in 1831; and that which is spoken of as the temporal things required of the church in this section, is a tithing. A tithe, as the word is defined under the law known as the law under the old Testament, was a tenth of the increase. That is a correct definition of the word. A tithe means a tenth, but the correct definition under the law is a tenth of the increase. This is spoken of as a tithe that is required at the hands of his people in this fifth paragraph. This is in accordance with the prophecy of Malachi, that these individuals should bring tithes into the store-house, and if they did, they could prove whether he had spoken those words, and he says that the promises were theirs; that he would rebuke the devourer that devoured the fruit of their land. That is the promise that he made unto the people.

We believe in the law of consecration, the law of tithing, given by God after this manner, and that it is in accordance with that with which you are blest, that the Lord requires of you. If you are blest with nothing, and you have done your whole duty, then I believe that the Lord will require nothing at your hands. But you must do your duty in order that you may be free under this law. For when he shall come, you will of necessity answer directly to him of the stewardship that has been committed into your hands.

There is another revelation here, section 106 of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, that has been misunderstood I believe somewhat in the past, for the reason that if we kept it a certain way, the way it has been kept in the past it would prevent us from receiving anything into the church at all. That because the exact wording of this revelation, or the exact wording of it in some things, is not applicable, that there should be no such thing as the law of consecration and tithing being taught to the church as binding upon the church at all; for we are not in a stake, or a city of the Saints in fact.

This is the construction that has been put upon it.

It is the revelation that speaks with regard to their surplus properties. This revelation was given in this wise. It seems that the church in 1838, came before the Lord and asked him what he required at their hands at that time, and he gave unto them the law in regard to that. The question is with regard to what he requires of them as tithing. He answers the question; and not only answers this question, but he answers the particular inquiry about what he required at their hands at that time, under the peculiar circumstances of the church at that time. I will read the question and the answer. In answer to the question:

"O Lord show unto thy servants how much thou requirest of the properties of thy people for a tithing? Verily, thus saith the Lord, I require all their surplus property to be put into the hands of the Bishop of my church of Zion, for the building of mine house, and the laying the foundation of Zion, and for the Priesthood, and for the debts of the Presidency of my church; and this shall be the beginning of the tithing of my people; and, after that, those who have thus been tithed shall pay one tenth of their interest annually; and this shall be a standing law unto them forever, for my holy priesthood, saith the Lord. Verily I say unto you, that all who gather unto the land of Zion shall be tithed of their surplus properties, and shall observe this law, or they shall not be found worthy to abide among you."

It is the second paragraph there that has made certain ones claim that this revelation is of no force upon the church at the present time; so that the Saints could not be required to give or consecrate of their properties in their scattered condition; but that that requirement will be had at the time that they are required to go to some other place.

It seems very reasonable, my brethren, to suppose that if we do not do anything to build up his church and people, so as to prepare them to go and occupy some other place, that the time will never come when we will go there. And, that the time will never come, when we will ever be required to give anything that we have to the church, if this construction is correct. If we keep it not, according to the revelation that I have already read that was given to his people in 1831, in which the day of tithing was to extend until the coming of the Son of Man, and that is in the future yet, we are to be burned with the wicked. So it seems to me that it is required from us. But this law in regard to special things, and for special purposes, that is given in the 106th section, would not be applicable now, because it was for the people, as I believe, to whom it was given at that time, with the special declaration, that after that time God, in accordance with the law of tithing to his church, would be governed by the general law of his church, not only given before unto this generation, but also taught by the Apostle Paul, that "as God hath prospered every man, so let him give."

I want you to remember the special purpose for which this revelation was given. First it was given for the building of the Lord's House and the laying of the foundation of Zion. It was given for the purpose of establishing a certain business in the land of Zion, and for the building up of manufacturing interests in the land of Zion, and for the establishment of schools, and for laying the foundation of Zion as required at their hands.

Then because he required this, as the history of the church shows, that all their surplus property be put into the Bishop's hands for the purposes of buying lands for them, that they might have an inheritance there, and the individual that would not comply with that law should not have an inheritance there. If in accordance with the law of the church at that time these properties should be laid out, for the purposes of the priesthood and the saints, and particularly for the redeeming of the land, is it in force in this way to-day? Shall every individual who wishes to tithe himself, and has any property, come and deliver it up to the Bishop of the Church, and thereby tie up the surplus property of the church so that we can not use it, and so that the individuals can not use it, not only for the good of the work, but for the good of the individuals in the church in establishing the different variety of interests, manufacturing or otherwise, that might be established for the good of the church?

I do not so understand it myself. But I understand that there were special things required of the church at that time, and that these surplus properties were for those purposes. It was but an exchange of the surplus properties then to those individuals that were outside of the boundaries of the church by those within, to place in the hands of certain individuals for the establishment of certain interests that would be for the good of the people in the land of Zion, or the laying of the foundation of Zion. It was changing the property from one hands to another for that particular purpose; but not in such a manner as to give them into the hands of the church, that they might be disposed of without the doing of certain things in a substantial manner for the good of all the people of the church.

So I do not believe the second paragraph of this refers to the time when we shall be called to Zion exclusively, and that nothing can be required of the people of the church in the way of tithing until they go to the land of Zion, or unto one of her stakes. Because the general law is, that as every individual is prospered so shall he consecrate of his properties unto the church, and if the time ever comes when the Lord requires more than a tenth of the interest, then he will be apt to speak as he has done here. If the Lord ever requires more than this for the building up of Zion or anything of that kind, he will be apt to reveal it unto us.

I believe there is a reason for the consecration of the property of the church as a law, distinct from the reason given in section 106. I find this reason in the following:

"In order to place the church in a position to carry on the promulgation of the gospel, and as a means of fulfilling the law, the Twelve will take measures in connection with the Bishop, to execute the law of tithing, and let them before God see to it, that the temporal means so obtained is truly used for the good of the church, and not as a weapon of power in the hands of one man for the oppression of others, or for the purposes of self-aggrandisement by any one, be he whomsoever he may be."

This revelation I believe is in exact harmony with the revelation in the 106th section of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, that it is for the specific purpose of building up and promulgating the principles of the church and the gospel, and placing the church in a position that it can carry the gospel to the nations.

I believe that the properties of the church are required to-day for the promulgation of the gospel and the building up of the kingdom of God, as well as the properties of the church were required in 1838 for the specific purposes named. I believe that if the law is complied with as it is written in the general law of the church with regard to the consecration of the properties of his church, "that as the Lord hath prospered every one so let him give," that there will be ample in the storehouse of the Lord to meet all the demands of the church, to do all that is required to be done in regard to the publishing of the gospel to the nations of the earth, and the taking care of the poor and needy in the church, and to do whatever the church is required to do.

I think it is incumbent upon everyone to give something for the good of the work, and there are two ways that have been instituted in the present day by which individuals are expected to contribute to the good of the church. One has been in the way of free-will offerings given into the treasury of the church in the different branches of the church from time to time, say monthly or weekly as the branches of the church have seen fit; and the other is under the law of consecration, one tenth part of that which the Lord hath prospered every one.

Now there may be individuals, that when they count up at the end of the year, will find instead of having anything on hands, that they have spent everything that has come into their hands that year. What is required of these individuals?

It seems to me that they will not be released from the law, but it is possible that they will be required to render an account of their stewardship, just as that individual who has taken as the Lord hath prospered him, and in that careful manner that the law requires a steward over his own house to act, has economically kept that that he ought to have kept, in order that he might have something to throw into the treasury of the Lord. So that when an individual has labored day by day, and each evening or each Saturday evening, shall squander all that shall come into his hands instead of giving something into the treasury of the Lord, I believe to be responsible unto God, and although he may squander his means as he goes along day by day, yet he can not come to the point where he has a right to squander the tenth part of that the Lord hath prospered him in; for that is the Lord's in fact. He ought to save this, though he squanders as he goes along that which he makes every day. He has no right to squander the tenth part of the increase as he goes along, that which God hath prospered him, that which is given into his hands over and above that which is necessary for his support during that time, and thus at the end of the time have nothing to give into the treasury of the Lord.

So in some instances it has been found that certain individuals could comply with the law of the church better by way of free-will offerings than they could by waiting until the period when they could reckon in the way in which God hath prospered them, and then set apart their offerings in accordance with that which God hath prospered them. So it is thus instituted, and I believe instituted in accordance with the law of God.

The law also looks to the fact that individuals should comply therewith in accordance as God hath prospered them; and he hath signified that it would be pleasing unto him, that they should give so much as a tenth part only of the increase or interest. Only the increase or interest is spoken of after they have been tithed of their surplus properties, as referred to in the revelation in the 106th section. But the giving of the surplus properties is not requisite in my mind, in order for a person to begin to tithe himself. That the tithe is not one tenth of the surplus, but it is one tenth of the increase. The surplus of an individual may be increased, and it may not be increased.

For instance, an individual begins on the first of January and he finds that he is $500 in debt. Then he goes to work and is economical through the year, and the Lord prospers him, so that by the end of the year he has been able to pay his indebtedness, so that he is just square with the world. Then how much should such an individual as that give into the treasury of the Lord? He has begun at the beginning of the year, we will say $500 in debt. And he has been able under the prospering circumstances that the Lord has surrounded him with, to say at the end of the year, that he is just even with the world. What is his surplus property? We might say his surplus would be nothing, but what would he be required to give under the law? "As the Lord hath prospered every individual, as the Lord hath prospered every one, so let him give."

It seems that it is the increase of that individual, which increase has been $500 that is to determine; and although he may be just even with the world, I believe he may give the one tenth of the increase at the end of the year, better than he could afford to give one dollar at the beginning of the year, since he has been prospered to himself $450, he is $450 ahead now at the end of the year of what he was at the beginning of the year. Should he say, Since I can make myself even by taking what belongs to the Lord, I will just apply what belongs to the Lord and make myself even?

Now suppose he owed just $450 to a certain individual at the beginning of the year, and the interest upon that would increase it to $500. But to another individual he owed $50. And at the end of the year he found that he could pay the one to whom he owed the larger amount, if he withheld from the other; but if he paid both he would be $50 behind. Had he not better pay so much as belongs to both individuals, being $50 behind, than not to do justice in withholding from one individual altogether?

So it is that if an individual at the beginning of the year has so much, and is so blest, "as God hath prospered him" over and above that which he requires to live upon, God prospers him, which is an interest upon his income so that he has so much at the end of the year, why should he say, Now I will just take that, I will not pay the Lord this time, I will wait until the next year before I pay him. I will pay my fellow man, I will straighten up my affairs, and if I make anything the next year I will pay the Lord what is due him this year. This year I will not pay him at all.

I do not understand that this would be the correct way to obtain the blessings under the law. I believe in these blessings promised under the law. When an individual will comply with the law he will be prospered, he will be prospered temporally, he will be prospered spiritually too. That he will be a better man under this law; that he will not be under the influences, or great temptations that he otherwise would be exposed to, if he does not comply with it. So it is that individuals should seek to know what their duties are under the law, what we ought to do in this respect, and wherein we are indebted to the great Creator of all.

As we understand we are indebted to him for all that we have here, why should we count it a great thing that we are required to give to him or into his storehouse one tenth of that? It seems a very small requirement when we come to examine into the law, that not one tenth of what we have in our hands, but one tenth of the increase is all that we are required to give, one tenth of what he blesses us with as we go along.

It seems to me it is upon a foundation of justice as no other system of collection is in the world to-day.

A short time ago I had occasion to pass into a church, one of what is termed the popular churches of the day; and just on the back of the seat ahead of me I noticed a pretty card, and upon that card were stated the requirements of the members of that church for that year. Upon every Sabbath morning there would be a collection taken up in that church, to defray the incidental expenses in the church, and for the purposes of keeping the church in repair and so forth. There were afterwards twelve distinct things to which the church was required to contribute. I took them down and have them in a book here, but I will not stop to read them this morning. Those twelve they called special contributions.

Now we have no such thing as those twelve special contributions. The law of the church is pointed, and plain and just to every individual in the church. It requires no more of an individual who has an accumulation of property in this world than to do his duty; but it does require this. And from the individual to whom much is given, much will be required, and from him to whom little is given, little will be required.

Now the manner in which this must be given is in a different manner from just giving because we think we have to give. I do not believe such contributions as that are acceptable to the Lord, or that the church can ever be built up by contributions that are compelled from the people. So that when we teach the law to you, we teach you that we do not want you to give, we do not want you to throw a cent into the treasury, unless you want to do that. God does not compel your offering from you. He wants your hearts to become educated up to the standard where you will desire to give. He has placed it in this way. Suppose that some of you had a child that was in great need, and that it had not wherewith to help itself, and that you had wherewith to impart to that child. Then it seems to me that there is not an individual in the church but what would say, why the necessity of requiring me to support that child and care for it in its present needs? I desire to do that, I prefer to do it. Would you say to us you have a right to withhold of your properties, and let it get along in the world the best it can? No, you would say, I want to give to my child, I prefer to do it. I will give to it because I would rather do it than keep my properties myself.

I believe if the people of the church give in this way to the church, that the cause will prosper, and it will grow until it will come to the time spoken of in the revelation here, "The Bride hath made herself ready." Now we can not make ourselves ready by being compelled to give of our substance. The revelation of the Lord as we have read to you says, "that it shall be done with a willing heart and mind," in accordance with the teaching of the apostle Paul, that we shall not give grudgingly, and so forth. The seventh paragraph of the sixty-fourth section of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants says:

"Behold, the Lord requireth the heart and a willing mind; and the willing and obedient shall eat the good of the land of Zion in these last days; and the rebellious shall be cut off out of the land of Zion, and shall be sent away, and shall not inherit the land; for, verily, I say that the rebellious are not of the blood of Ephraim, wherefore they shall be plucked out."

I want it distinctly understood, that where the Lord requires the consecration of the property of the people he does not compel it in any instance; but he wishes it to be given by a willing heart and a willing mind, just the same as you would obey one of the ordinances of the gospel in spiritual things. He does not compel you to be baptized, or to submit to the laying on of hands, or to partake of the sacrament; but if you put yourself in a position to understand his law, and then you desire to do that which he has commanded, then according to the saying of the apostle, you will "Delight in the law of the Lord." So it is in regard to temporal things.

It has been said in some instances in the past, that these properties have not been properly cared for, and there has not in all instances been a proper distribution of the same. I do not believe that any body in the church so far has made a grand good thing off the church. I speak with reference to the Reorganization. I do not know of any instance where we can point to a single individual that has gotten rich off the church, I mean one of the spiritual laborers of the church. Why there should be any suspicion in that regard I can not see. I do not believe this is necessary in order to keep the church on its proper basis. But if it were necessary, that necessity has been obviated, as you will find from the notice given by the First President of the church prior to last September with regard to the spiritual laborers of the church. That they should make known the needs of their families before the church sent them out, and took upon it the responsibility of supplying the wants of those individuals. That individuals who are going out now as missionaries of the church, are required to make known the wants and the necessities of their families, so that the church may have something upon which to determine beforehand, as a landmark to be guided by, so that they may know in proportion as these individuals may need from time to time. This I believe is a step toward equality under the law; that each individual shall have given unto him just so much as he needs and no more. Not only that, but in order to meet the criticism of some with reference to the fact that they do not know how their money is being used, there was another rule established, requiring all moneys put into the church treasury to be reported to the Bishop of the church; and that all those funds that are put into the hands of individuals, or into the hands of the agents of the church, must afterwards be published, together with the names of the individuals, or churches contributing the same. The names of individuals may be occasionally omitted in this manner: Suppose you in your branch of the church take a collection for the general benefit of the church once a month, and your treasurer should report that collection as a whole, and not give the names of the individual who contributed to it. Occasionally in this way the names of the contributors are omitted. In this case the collection would be a collection by your church and would appear as such, and there would be no opportunity of the Bishop to do anything but to give an account of every cent of the money that would come into his hands from you. So with every other church; so that if at any time the collections should not be in the minutes published with regard to the receipts of the church, the branch sending the collection would know it immediately. But wherever individuals comply with the law, and give the name and the amount, the name and the amount will be published to the church once a year under the rule. Not only this, but the amount that each man receives who has gone out to work in the ministry will be given; and this I claim is just, not only to the church, but to the individual. Because in the past individuals have been wronged, for certain persons have thought that money was being handed to them from time to time, of which they were not compelled to make an accounting to the Bishop of the Church. These means not being published, some have thought that Elders were getting more than they really were getting, and that some were getting rich off the church. And an individual might go around among the branches of the church, and individuals might hand him a dollar or two, and if he was not compelled to report it so that it might be accounted for, why he might go to another place where there were Saints and have so much given to him and so on, and the church would be wronged.

Under the present system no Latter Day Saint has a right to suppose for a moment that a brother who is laboring in the ministry is getting any more than that which is due him. Because certain officials of the church are set for the purpose of ascertaining what is required by these individuals, and if there is to be blame laid, it is to be laid at the doors of those individuals, who are looking after the things of these individuals, and who determine upon their needs. So you will begin to lay the blame at the doors of the Bishopric of the church perhaps, instead of at the doors of those spiritual travellers who are gone abroad; and here is where we want you to begin to lay it, because we want those spiritual travellers to be released from any charges and any suspicion that might be cast upon them, because they are required to report everything that they receive to the church. And they are required under the law of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants and the institution of this rule last year in September by General Conference; under the law of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants here it is said, that when they collect they should report it for the good of their families; and if they had not families, they should report what they had received to the church. That was under the first organization of the church, and the same rule is in vogue now. We have established no new thing, no new rule, except we have been trying to reduce to a system the law of the church as it is.

What is required of individuals to do, as we believe, is to begin to comply with the law of the church. And they may do so by appointing certain times to receive consecrations, or they may do so by paying a tenth of their increase and taking their receipts, and then you can not ask of them as a duty, even consecrations in the church thereafter that year. Yet if they wish to give or consecrate more, that is their own business. So we see that the law as it exists to-day is a law that ought to be complied with.

I have taken up more time than I thought I would, and perhaps I have been worrying your patience upon this. I thought to get as many of these things before you to-day as possible.

The law of the church then as we find it, and which is to be enforced to-day, is that each individual in the church, no matter who, is required to do something for the good of the cause. He is required to do something as it is pointed out in the law; and you must study the law as you comply with it. That as it is said in this revelation of 1861, that the Bishop and the Twelve shall do their duty, and see that the law of tithing is executed, and as they fulfill their duties in this regard, so shall they be "judged in the day of judgment."

We believe as individuals comply with this; as they purpose in their hearts; as they make up their minds to give, so shall they be "judged in the day of judgment." And if you do not interest yourselves in the law, and understand the law, it will be a loss to you in the same way, and to the same extent, as if you had neglected to make yourself acquainted with the spiritual laws, and not complied with them. We think it is the bounden duty of every individual in the church to make himself acquainted with the temporal law of the church, and comply with it, the same as he would the spiritual law. I thank you for your attention.

JOSEPH SMITH - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, 20th January, 1883.

A FISHERMAN, living on the Balsa Chica beach, near Westminster, California, reported to be a Mormon, some say of Utah stripe, some say of the Josephite order, Josiah B. Smith, by name, under the alleged plea of inspiration killed a son some thirteen years old, by stabbing him in the breast, making a cruel and fatal wound. A brother F. P. Schnell, who resides not far from the scene of the murder, called on the Editor of the Los Angeles Daily Times, and requested that a denial of the murderer's connection with the Reorganized Church, as it had been so stated in said paper. This correction the Times made, but stated that several contemporaries had asserted that Smith did belong to the monogamic branch of the church; but the man himself said that he had belonged to the Mormons in Utah.

What difference can it possibly make whether Josiah B. Smith was or was not a member of the Utah Mormons, or the Reorganized Church? Neither church teaches, or sanctions murder of the sort committed by this man. It appears that the man had become imbued with the idea that he and his family were to cease from working, and that they were to be fed by some good ministration sent from God; among these was to be a sum of money to be sent by mail from somewhere. The boy did not partake of this idea, but brought on to the island on which the family lived something to eat, for the mother and children; for this act the father claims that he was to sacrifice the life of the lad; so he took him aside and plunged the knife deep into his breast, burying him near to where he fell. The boy was missed; inquiry was made for him, and the father confessed to killing him.

These are the circumstances that gave rise to our brother's correction of the statement that the murderer belonged to the church. This was all right so far as to correct any assumption that the peculiar fanaticism of the man was the result of the religious teaching of the church, as possibly some may have made such. But, when it is conceded that in all religious bodies, there are and may be extremists upon nearly all topics; and that zeal and a faulty individual organization may and do result in personal fanaticism among all other sects, is it anything to be extremely wondered at, if these cases should occur among Latter Day Saints; we certainly think not.

Fanaticism may result to men in all walks, and if a religious body whose teaching, precepts and principles are free from inculcating murder, even self-murder, why should it be a stigma upon the name of that church for a devotee to commit such crime. More especially ought the Latter Day Saints to be safe from such an accusation, as they teach positively, that every man must account for his own personal deeds; whatever his surroundings he must commit no murder, for the "murderer hath no eternal life abiding in him." Hence, if this man under infatuation, slew his son, he is a murderer, no matter what church he may have been a member of so far as human verdict can make him a murderer. The Reorganization has always taught, what it is stated that Joseph Smith once affirmed in answer to the question, "Shall a murderer be received in baptism?" His reply was: "It is of no avail to baptize a murderer; for he must pay the penalty of his crime." This is the position of the Reorganized Church on this point, and hence no one need to seek the cover of the church as a cloak for such crime, as unto a "city of refuge," nor should any accuse the church of fostering such criminals; as individuals, persons in the law must every man answer; and officers and members of the church must aid and assist the proper officers of the county and state to bring such criminals to answer to the law of the land.

Bro. Schnell was right in denying such a man membership, if he indeed was not a member; for the inference carried by the statement that he was such a member was that his act was a result of his religious teaching. If it be true that the shedding of the blood of the transgressor, as an atonement for the sin he commits that he may not be damned, has been taught in Utah; it is possible that a man might be brought to think of the killing of a son, or daughter, or husband, or wife, or father, or mother, or anybody else for that matter, as a sacrificial act, by which the victim might be sanctified, or saved. Therefore, it is possible that if this man, Josiah B. Smith, had been a member of that body, and heard such teaching, he might have been led, by brooding over the boy's disobedience, to sacrifice him by slaying with the knife, as a sacrificial atonement for his crime, as he might regard it. The act was evidently a personal one, not induced by any teaching that the man ever heard from the pulpit, even in Utah; and hence no church is responsible in any sense for the killing of the boy so barbarously murdered on Balsa Chica beach; for such killing must be attributed to self-delusion, and not to church tenet, or principle of belief. Neither the church in Utah, nor the Reorganization in California or Iowa, should suffer ostracism, or censure, or opprobrium, for an individual personal crime; no more than the church to which Freeman, the child slayer of Cohasset, should be censured for the killing of Freeman's little girl, or the Methodist Church for the adultery of Hoffman, its criminal minister.

Church members should jealously guard the good name of the body of believers with which they are connected, against the effect of unjust aspersion in the alleging that criminals are of their number, when they are not, or in the accusation that such crimes are the result of church tenet, or teaching; but one of the safest defences that any people can offer is that of irreproachable individual lives.

We are in receipt of good letters from Brn. Joseph W. Vernon, Richard Coburn, R. Gould, James Goff, John Eames, Wm. Still, Arthur Allen, and several others, which must lie over for want of room.

FAITH CURES.

THERE is a man living in two and one half miles north-east of Bethany, the county seat of Harrison county, Missouri, whose name is Israel Phillebaum. He is evidently of German parentage, somewhere back in the past, and is now three score and ten past. He is the seventh son, and, it is said, blessed from his youth up with certain powers of healing, because of the peculiarities of his birth as such "seventh son." Among the diseases, for which his administrations are most efficacious, is that of goitre, or swelled neck; which it is alleged is cured by rubbing of the hands. He had treated numbers in the course of his seventy years of life, and he told us: "I can't say much about it; they come to me and I treat them, and they say that they get well."

The Editor lately spent a day and night with Mr. Phillebaum, who is by the way a Universalist in his religious belief, and while there two ladies from Bethany were there for treatment. His treatment is by rubbing the affected parts with the hands; and is to be administered, as we understood, before sunrise on the morning of the last three days of the first quarter of the new moon, for three successive moons, and is to be without charge, fee, or reward of any kind; it being especially incident to a successful cure that no pay is to be taken for the service.

Mr. Phillebaum states that he has no special faith himself, and it can not be that which works a cure if any follows; but that those who are treated by him are helped and cured, seems evident. It is then, he says, because there is faith in them.

Here is a chance for the skeptics in faith cure of any sort. The post office address is Isaac Phillebaum, Bethany, Harrison county, Missouri; and from him the names of persons treated by him in Ohio, and Missouri will be given, of whom inquiry may be made; now if cretin, or goitre is not akin to organic disease what is it?

A son of Mr. Phillebaum, himself a skeptic in religion, says that it is certain that those who have received treatment under the hands of his father have been cured. He does not account for it, nor deny it. "It may be faith, I don't know," is the way he dismisses the subject. We shall take notice what the result may be with the two ladies whom we found there at our visit.

We call attention to the reduced prices of our tracts. Consult the list and scatter a few "where they will do the most good."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Is it right for a member of the Church who has plenty of means to help the cause, and who will say that they will not give the Church a cent, to call the Elders to administer unto them?

Ans.—Yes. Why not. If the Lord can bless such persons, why should they not receive at his hands? There may be a doubt about the blessings following the administration of the Elders in such cases, we can not say. The Lord blesses whom he will, the Elders must ask for all, unless specially forbidden.

Ques.—How will you harmonize the latter clause of paragraph 11, page 96, section 17, last publication of Book of Doctrine and Covenants, with your answer to question on page 350, vol. 29, No. 24, the Saints' Herald, December 15th, 1882. Please answer in Herald.

Ans.—Precisely as you will the eating of the "shew bread" by David, when he "hungered;" by necessity; just as was stated in the HERALD. They may assist when necessary, in cases where they might not act independently. However, the question should have been, "How do you harmonize the answer with the law," &c.

Ques.—Reading Herald for December 15th, urging men to set a standard, causes me to ask the following. Though a man has set a high standard, should there come along those who are of a low character, and state that they want to do better, begging shelter and food, do you think that one is degrading himself to receive such and care for them, even though they may have been cut off the Church?

Ans.—To aid the erring, lift up the fallen, succor the perishing, are commanded of the Master. A man does not degrade himself by acts of kindness to any, no matter how low they may be; provided that the one showing the kindness does not become vitiated in conduct and character by contact with the low; but he who succors the bad and screens them from proper punishment, or harbors and abets them when unrepentant, does not elevate them, but does descend to their level, in a certain sense degrades himself. As for instance, if a man receive another who comes to him sick and destitute, and feeds and fosters such person, until he recover health and strength; and when such person be recovered and able to provide for himself, he neglects or refuses, or continues in evil ways from which he had been succored; if in such case his benefactor aids and harbors such evil person, he is degraded to a certain extent and must needs suffer from such contaminating influence. Or if such relieved person should secure and exercise an influence over his rescuer to make him ashamed of his faith, or to lead him into evil ways with himself, then is he disgraced indeed.

WE have been requested to publish the Rules on Representation as they now stand, which we do below. What was known as the Second Robinson and Gurdley amendment was at the Fall Conference of 1881, ruled out of order as not complying with the published notice required, and was not subsequently revived by notice in the HERALD; nor was it presented at the April or September session of 1882. This leaves the 4th proviso to paragraph 3, just as it was originally adopted; so that delegates chosen for districts may represent by one vote for each branch of six and one vote for each twenty members in excess of six that there may be in the branches of the districts they represent.

Whether the Committee on Credentials for the Fall session of 1882 observed this rule in this way, or in agreement with the amendment of paragraph 4, changing the number twenty to six, we can not state, as we are not informed; but presume that they complied with the rule as it stands.

1. That the General officers of the Church known as The Presidency, The Twelve, The High Council, The Seventy and The Bishopric (proper) are Ex officio members of Conference, and entitled to a voice and vote as representatives of the Spiritual Authorities of the Church at large.

2. That all High Priests and Elders are entitled to voice and vote in General Conference, when present.

3. That organized districts be authorized to appoint from their members, at their last quarterly session of District Conference next preceding the session of the Annual and Semi-Annual General Conferences, delegates to said Annual and Semi-Annual Sessions, who shall be entitled to represent said districts, which delegates so appointed shall be declared members of said General Conferences entitled to voice and vote.

Provided: That the choice and appointment by said districts shall be made by a majority of those present and voting, in regular or called session of District Conference, of the holding of which due notice shall have been given, as to time and place within the district, to each and every branch composing said district; together with a statement of any important business or action that is to be presented to, or likely to be had by said general session, affecting said district, and to which their consent or denial is desired, that instructions to said delegates may be given as to their action.

And provided further: That the only qualifications to eligibility to the office of delegate from District to General Conference shall be membership and good standing.

Provided further: That not less than one, nor more than five delegates may be sent from any one district; but that said delegate, or delegates, shall be entitled to voice and vote in such General Conferences to which they may be appointed, upon a presentation of a certificate from the Clerk of District Conference to the said General Conferences, upon their organization at the times specified for their assembling.

And provided further: That said delegate or delegates shall be entitled to cast one vote for each branch of six members; and one vote for each twenty members in excess of six, that there may be in the branches of their said districts, in all cases where such a vote may be necessary, or desired, to secure the common consent designed in the law; but that in the common routine of business said delegates may vote us units, each in his own right, and in cases of division, the majority of the delegation from a district shall cast the whole vote of said district.

4. That each branch of six or more members, not included in an organized district, be authorized to appoint one delegate to the General Conferences, who may or may not be a member of said branch, but who shall be a member of the Church and in good standing, whose qualifications to eligibility shall be the same as those required in districts, and who shall represent said branch and be entitled to voice and vote in said Conferences to which he may be appointed; and who shall be entitled to cast one vote for the six members required to appoint, and one for each six members in excess of six composing said branch.

Provided further: That two or more branches in near proximity to each other, not in organized district, may unite in choosing a delegate, who shall cast their vote, one vote for six members of each branch, and one vote for each six members in excess of the number six, multiplied by the number of branches represented; the manner of casting their votes in cases of importance and common routine of business to be as provided in cases of districts.

Provided further: That due general notice to the members of branches of the time and place of meeting for the choosing of said delegate be properly given, as required in cases of districts; Certificate of appointment of Branch delegate to be signed by the President or Clerk of said Branch, and to be presented as provided in cases of districts.

5. That in all questions of grave importance, affecting the polity and faith of the Church; districts and branches may instruct delegates to cast a majority and a minority vote, for and against; but in no case shall the number of the votes cast by said delegates so instructed, exceed the number to which the district appointing him or them shall be entitled as herein before provided, and in cases of a tie in districts or branches on questions presented to them, certified to said delegates, the votes of said districts or branches shall be cast in equal numbers by the delegates.

6. In all questions of debate, incidental motions, and routine business, Representatives, Ex officio, and Delegates, appointed, shall speak and vote as units and in their own separate and personal right.

Bro. Z. H. Gurley wrote from Philadelphia, January 4th:

"I baptized two here New Year's day. * * * Some enquiry prevails here, and more up in New Jersey The brethren seem well pleased with the labor performed, and are glad that confidence is being restored. I am well received by all. Many outside the Church seem anxious to contribute to my comfort—especially is this true in Jersey. The facts are that many act like 'sheep without a shepherd,' and say, 'Come and preach to us, and we will keep you.'"

LUCAS, Iowa, Dec. 15th, 1882.

Joseph Smith; Dear Brother:—Thinking that a few lines from this part of the Lord's vineyard would be of interest to some at least, and feeling in duty bound to make some mention of the efforts set forth in this place by some of the brethren from abroad, and especially of the five nights' discussion held at this place between Elder J. D. Pegg, Adventist, and Bro. J. W. Gillen, on the Sabbath question. Early last fall Elder Pegg came to Lucas and commenced a series of meetings in a tent, in which he set forth the doctrine of the society he represented in such a smooth, pleasing and able manner, as to gain considerable influence, and became pretty thoroughly established in the confidence of the people, so much so that some "desire to be under the law," and are observing the old Jewish Sabbath, the seventh day of the week.

Under this influence he became very demonstrative, and stated repeatedly that he would meet any one on these points; viz: The Sabbath question, and The unconscious state of the soul between death and the resurrection. Of course he knew that none of our local Elders cared to enter into a discussion with him. A committee was appointed to make arrangements with him, and to correspond with some of the brethren in case he should agree to enter into a discussion. The first brother that visited us was M. T. Short, who preached several times, including a discourse on the Sabbath question, attended by the Elder. Bro. M. T. Short challenged him to a discussion, which he refused to accept, but it had the effect of quieting him, at least while Bro. Short was around. But as soon as he left for Conference the Elder became wonderfully brave again, but found our committee very attentive, and ready to wait upon him at any moment.

The next to call was our estimable brother, R. J. Anthony, who labored in our branch for about a week, encouraging the Saints, and leaving behind him an influence for good. Bro. Anthony also extended an invitation to Elder Pegg to enter into an investigation of the differences existing between us; but as before, he refused, stating that he did not care to debate with the Latter Day Saint Elders, because they were clothed with too much priestly authority; but would prefer to discuss with some Christian minister, but would not discuss at all unless his congregation forced him to it. The Campbellites then challenged him on the Sabbath question, and he accepted; but the Campbellite for some cause did not turn up; so that put the Elder on his high horse again. Our faithful committee was on hand as usual to wait on the gentleman, and this time he accepted. The committee at once telegraphed to Bro. T. W. Smith, J. W. Gillen, C.

Scott and R. M. Elvin; Bro. J. W. Gillen responding in person. But the Elder had gone. Brother Gillen returned home, leaving word that he would come back when needed. When Elder Pegg returned, we notified Bro. Gillen. He came; they met, and arranged to discuss the following proposition: That the seventh day of the fourth commandment of the decalogue was and is binding on all men. Elder Pegg affirmed, J. W. Gillen denied.

The discussion commenced on the night of the 5th and closed on the 9th inst. Bro. Gillen made an able defense, completely routing the champion at every point, making his position so transparent that the intelligent part of the audience could see clear through it; and on the third night he got tired of waiting for the Elder, and took the lead, having no arguments to answer; while the Elder came dragging up behind in a rambling sort of a way, grinding over the old arguments of the nights previous, and bringing in as evidences the Catholic catechism, Herald, Doctrine and Covenants, scrap book, extracts from newspapers, and their own books, notwithstanding the agreement that King James' translation was to be the standard of evidence, and standard church histories as collateral. We believe the discussion has been productive of much good, thoroughly confirming the Saints, and gaining the approval of the intelligent portion of the community—those who are able to judge between argument and sophistry. The leading men of the place pronounce Bro. Gillen's effort a masterly defense, and would like to hear from him again, and make good his promise, namely, a discourse on "the mark of the beast." The Saints feel truly grateful to Bro. Gillen for the able and gentlemanly manner in which he defended the truth, and we all feel to say, Call again.

I am your brother in Christ,

S. W. POWELL.

GALIEN, Michigan,

January 2d, 1883.

Bro. J. Smith:—After leaving your place on Monday, December 11th, we met with the Saints at Lucas, where we had a good audience and a very pleasant time, thence to Council Bluffs, where we met with the Saints Wednesday evening. On Thursday evening met with the Saints at Omaha. On Friday we met the Saints from Galland's Grove in conference, near Bro. Halliday's. A large representation of their district was present. On our arrival there, we found quite a little opposition to our mission. We told Bro. Chatburn, (president of district), that we desired to talk to them on temporal law, and Saturday night was assigned us for that purpose, and we occupied about three hours, with most excellent liberty. After we were through speaking, we gave them an opportunity for questions, and quite a number were both asked and answered, after which the Saints manifested perfect satisfaction in our construction of the law, many manifesting a determination to comply with it.

Went from there to Galland's Grove, where we held three meetings, Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, with large and attentive audiences. From there we went to Mason Grove branch, where we spoke to them on Saturday evening, and remained with them until Monday the 25th, where we met with the Saints at service in the forenoon, after which a sumptuous dinner was served in the church by the Saints and others, of which we partook, and at two o'clock left for Logan, where we held services in the Baptist Church, with quite a large and attentive audience.

On Tuesday, Bro. P. Cadwell and Bro. Crabb went with us to Magnolia, where we met the Saints in their Church, and on Wednesday, together with Brn. Crabb and Charles Derry, we left for Little Sioux, where we met our old friend Bro. Gamet. We met with a goodly number of the Saints in their Church, and talked to them on the Temporal law, and much satisfaction was manifested by the Saints in our visit there.

Since I left you at Lamoni I have received many encouraging letters, pertaining to our mission.

In gospel bonds,

G. A. BLAKESLEE.

HORNERSTOWN, New Jersey,

December 30th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. Gurley has just left here for Philadelphia. He was here one week, and preached every night, and on Sunday last he preached twice. He has made a very good impression here, and I feel sure has convinced several of the truth of the doctrine. He had good liberty in presenting the word. He will soon return here, and then he purposes visiting New Egypt and Allentown, N. J., in order to hold up the standard in those places.

While Bro. Gurley was preaching here the little hall in which we hold meetings was crowded every night, and the best of attention was given the speaker.

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I remain yours in the one faith,

W. H. BROWN.

STEWARTSVILLE, Missouri,

January 1st, 1883.

Dear Bro. Joseph:—I am well pleased with the make up, and general appearance of the weekly Herald, (may it never be a weakly one).

I think it a good idea to publish sermons occasionally—especially on subjects that are particularly expository of our faith.

I endorse your ground on the subject of "Today" and its duties and obligations. I consider that tithing, or the "law of tithing," will answer fully the end that any and all money making schemes that have been or may be proposed, have in view. If tithing is not a part of the gospel, it is essentially connected with it. The clouds, and the rain, and the dew, are not portions of the organic structure of the grain called wheat or corn; but it strikes me that they sustain a very close relation to the grain nevertheless; indeed the relation is that of cause and effect.

The gospel must be preached—for the nations can not hear unless it is preached to them. Preachers must be sent. How can Bro. W. H. Kelley preach in Great Britain unless he be sent there? Now it does not say "How can he preach except he be called?" A man of course must be called to the priesthood; but when clothed with it, he must be sent thus empowered, or clothed upon with authority to the nations. The original Twelve were called to the Apostleship, and then sent, first to the Jews only, then "into all the world." But I hope I will not have "added" to me "the plagues written in the books" if I presume to add to Paul's question, How can they preach except they be sent; the query, How can they be sent without means to pay their expenses? And another, How can means be thus employed, unless the Church will furnish them? And another, What method is so just, and fully equal to the necessities of the case, as the God given order, called the law of tithing? Is not this the order, tithings paid, means sufficient, preachers sent, nations hear, many believe, some obey, and the persevering saved?

If the people can not hear without a preacher, and he can not preach to them unless sent to them, who will be held responsible in the day of judgment for this withholding from them of the bread of life? Is it not criminal to see a human being, or even a brute creature die with starvation, when we have it in our power to give it food, and save its life? Is it any less reprehensible to permit men and women to suffer and die through famine, not of meats that perish, but for want of the words of life,—the gospel? Our brother, i. e. the race, has need, and we shut our bowels of compassion or mercy. "How then dwells the love of God in us?"

We have some "artful dodgers" in the Church. A man has sixty or eighty acres of land, he argues that it is too much for one man to work, and not enough for two, so, instead of taking that portion above what he is able to work, and calling it a surplus, and giving it to the Lord, he buys twenty, thirty or forty acres more, (on credit often) and uses every dollar that he can raise for the next year to pay for the new purchase, and he says, I have no tithing—for I have no surplus, nor any increase, for I am in debt. Can such escape the burning, that those who are not tithed are to suffer? "He that receiveth my law, and doeth it, the same is my disciple: and he that sayeth he receiveth it, and doeth it not, the same is not my disciple, and shall be cast out from among you." He that rejects the law of tithing as binding on the Church, rejects not only revelations of September, 1831, and July 8th, 1838, but that of October 7th, 1861, given to the Reorganization. If the law of tithing is God's law, and who can deny it, and he who keeps not the law is not a disciple, how can the disobedient be worthy a place and standing in the Church? "Ye shall see that my law is kept."

T. W. SMITH.

PLEASANTON, Iowa,

January 2d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I have often thought I would write a few lines, and express the pleasure I experienced while attending our General Conference at Independence, Missouri, last Spring; the general good feeling and spirit which prevailed; also at Lamoni this Fall, as I do verily believe they were both held at the "right time in the right places." And although I had known for years that we would, at some future day, hold a meeting in the Temple, at Kirtland, Ohio, at which you would preside, yet when Bro. Lake made the motion at the Lamoni Conference, that our next General Conference be held on the 6th of next April, in the Temple in Kirtland, I asked myself, Is it possible the time is thus near for that meeting, but I voted cheerfully for the motion, and ever since, whenever I think of it, my heart burns within me, and I look forward with a great deal of pleasure to that meeting.

May we so live and walk, that we may be worthy to have the Lord meet with us on that occasion, and that good may be done in the name of the Lord Jesus, is the desire of your brother,

E. ROBINSON.

PITTSBURG, Pennsylvania,

December 21st, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—We arrived in this city on the 9th inst., in time for the Pittsburg District Conference. It passed off harmoniously, the spirit of peace prevailing throughout the entire session. Our aged and beloved brother, Josiah Ells, was in attendance, and his presence was highly appreciated by the Saints. Notwithstanding he is rapidly failing in physical strength, he is strong in spirit, also in the latter day work. He bore a faithful testimony to the authenticity of the gospel as restored to the earth in these latter days; also to your father's divine mission, and said he knew that your father was a prophet of the living God, and if he, (Bro. Ells), was faithful unto the end, he believed he would have the privilege of taking him by the hand in the Eternal world. Here I would state, that the power of God attended the remarks of the brother, and I am confident all the Saints present felt the force of his language. This branch is in a very good condition, and is presided over by Bro. George Hulmes, who, I believe, is a good, noble brother.

I had the pleasure of baptizing a man at Hyde Park, Pennsylvania, November 12th, who had been a Catholic for fifty-three years.

Yours in hope of Eternal Life,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

COLUMBUS, December 28th, 1882.

Dear Brother:—I have for a long time thought of writing a few lines to the Herald, but poor health and a trembling hand prevented. But I trust God will guide my hand, so my work may be read.

It is now nearly twelve years since I became a member of this Church, and though troubles of almost every kind have surrounded me, yet my faith has never failed; and I hope through the mercies of God, I shall ever be able to bear my testimony to the knowledge I have of his gospel. I desire an interest in the prayers of all Saints.

C. CRAIG.

14 Sheldon St., CHICAGO, Illinois,

January 2d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—We rejoice to know that the work in which we are engaged, in the degree and character of its progress, or triumphs over peculiar and strong opposition, has furnished us with additional evidences of its divinity; but we still mourn over the follies and transgressions of those who claim to be the people of God.

The mission of the Herald is an important one. May its usefulness increase with its age, and its weekly visits to the homes of the Saints and lovers of truth be pleasant and profitable.

I have been in Chicago nearly three weeks, preaching only on Sundays; congregations are not large, but I have felt well in presenting the word. There is a great deal of the most unpleasant and difficult part of the work to be done here, at present, as well as elsewhere; but after all, there is solid enjoyment to be found while laboring in any department of the Master's cause. I remember with gratitude to God, some of my experiences while laboring in the capacity of Teacher to adjust difficulties among the Saints. Sometimes after this kind of labor had been done, and while on my return home, the peace and blessing of God's Spirit would fill my heart, causing me to rejoice exceedingly, and giving to me evidences of the divinity of the work, and the provisions made for its establishment and perpetuity. Dear Saints, the great trouble with too many of us is we do not properly test the work. We expect too much from God with too little expenditure of labor on our part. Nor do we always labor in the right way. Pure motives, with but one object, and that the building up of the Church and Kingdom of God are what alone should actuate the people of God. I have become fully satisfied that my work is here at the present, and with the grace of God, I will do it as best I can.

I wish all the Saints a happy and useful New Year. May its fast fleeting moments be marked with the holy zeal and progressive triumph over evil of the Saints and servants of God.

Your brother in hope,

JOSEPH R. LAMBERT.

COLUMBIAVILLE, Michigan,

January 4th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I have commenced my labors. I have three new openings here; one, three, and six miles from the village. I am preaching nearly every night. The interest is better than I have seen as yet in opening new places; full houses, good order and attention, which is encouraging to me, and gives me a feeling to continue. About four weeks ago I passed through this place. I stopped and introduced the work in two different school houses, then on to Goodland. I called to visit an M. E. preacher, and exchange views on scripture. We did splendidly. Both of us fully consented that the same law and doctrine taught in the days of Christ and the Apostles must govern succeeding generations.

The doctrine is new all around here, nearly. I think it is time the people began to hear more about the fullness of the gospel. Can there be at least one more to labor in North Michigan.

Your brother,

E. DELONG.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah,

January 1st, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—As the year of 1882 has just expired, and I have a leisure moment, I have thought best to report, in a general way, the condition of this Rocky Mountain Mission. When Elders Derry, Luff, Deuel, Anthony and myself, entered upon it in the winter of 1879-80, we found it in a depressed and unpromising condition. That it should have made some progress in the past three years was to be expected, and it has made some, if not so great as could be wished. The field is a very peculiar one. In it you find many who were once most zealous Saints, and who would have staked all on their religion, who are to-day Spiritualists, or Atheists, or Deists, or luke warm Mormons—like the Laodiceans of Revelations 3:15, 16; and this latter class is as great a hindrance to the progress and triumph of truth and right as any other. They generally are found where there are the most "loaves, and fishes," the most fun and worldly honor, and the least sacrifice and labor for humanity.

There has been a fair number of additions to the churches in Montana, and the Saints generally in that district are in a growing, spiritual condition. There are a few exceptions only.

In Idaho there has been some progress, but not nearly so much as hoped for. Still the prospects are at least encouraging for that district.

What is needed there is steady, wise, persistent labor. As for Nevada and Wyoming, but little has been done in either, and that chiefly in Lander county, and where Bro. Eames has labored in Wyoming, and about Elko, where Brn. Penrod, Johns, and Hawkins have labored.

In Utah our gains in numbers and influence have been much the greatest, though bitterly and stubbornly opposed. Since the last election movements began, the Utah Mormons have been especially hostile to our Elders and people, because they favored the sentiments of the Liberal party and its candidate, Judge VanZile. They have drawn their lines very closely, and in some places the Bishops have brought their people into covenant to not attend "Josephite" meetings, etc. Such a course engenders bitterness toward our ministers and people, and hinders our work. How long it will continue it is difficult to tell.

Brn. Luff and Hansen are fairly at work, and we hope for excellent results from their labors. Brn. Gibson and Grimmett are doing well in Utah county; our local Elders are doing something also, and in spite of the fact that we have not had many baptisms in the past three months, the outlook is promising.

A fearful crisis is at hand for Utah Mormonism, and we are doing what we can to get the people from under the black clouds of wrath which are gathering, and pointing them to the safe refuge there is in faithful obedience to the law of the Lord.

It is a fact that the Utah Mormon priesthood now instruct their people to honor, uphold, defend and practice polygamy. They have made the issue direct with the nation, as they have done with the word of God for the past thirty-eight years, and the time for a final decision as to who will rule in the matter, is at hand. One hundred thousand people, (possibly less), arrayed against heaven and our great nation! Well, it is not difficult to predict who must yield, and that very soon.

It will doubtless seem strange that so few should dare oppose the will of our nation; but it must be remembered that the leaders who have led the people into this crime dare not back out of it now, lest there should be a mutiny against them by those they have deceived. This is not a fanciful conjecture. The writer was told as much by some living in polygamy. The condition of the Utah leaders is actually desperate, and they know it. Their money nor their cunning will shield them much longer.

The Reorganized Church will yet have it to say, that they did something, at least, from 1860 forward, to save the Utah Mormons from their past troubles and their impending tribulations. Like the blind zealots anciently among the Jews, they rush blindly on to their own shame and ruin, which is certainly nigh, except they repent and turn from blind leaders unto the Lord.

The influence of our mission work is seen in its effects for good among both Mormon and Gentile. It is also seen in the converts made from the ranks of Brighamism and elsewhere.

Twelve years ago all who bore the name of Mormons, or Latter Day Saints, were reckoned as polygamists, fanatics and disloyal, with but few exceptions. Now it is very different,—Mormonism proper is known as both monogamic and loyal. This point has been gained here and elsewhere by patient and persistent effort and sacrifice, and will yet tell for good. Our Mission Chapel is neat and comfortable, and is nearly all paid for. We look to see the mission thrive and grow. The Montana Saints have aided this district nobly in the past in keeping up its finances. Others have helped some, as will be reported and seen by and by.

Very truly,

W. W. BLAIR.

DES MOINES, IOWA,

December 26th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph; Dear Sir:—I am again in the field. Preached twice last Sunday in the Saints' Chapel for the first time. It is a neat little church, and it is a substantial and a warm house. In the evening I spoke on the goodness of God to a small audience, but attentive listeners. I had excellent liberty. I go from here to Midint Grove to see some of the Saints there, and perhaps try if I can do some preaching in that neighborhood. I shall have to labor by myself, on account of my deafness. I have baptized ten this year. It has been my best year since I have been in the ministry. Remember me before the throne of grace.

N. STAMM.

BRIDGMAN, Michigan,

December 28th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—At Harlem, Missouri, I spoke once, last fall, on my way to Conference, and at a school house near Allendale delivered a series of seven sermons. At Allendale spoke twice; then at Redding two or three times with, I hope, some good results. At the school house referred to, a good number were present, and some interest manifested.

By invitation of Bro. W. H. Kelly I stopped in Chicago for a week, and on Sunday delivered two sermons, which to me have been a source of strength and gratitude.

Yours for truth,

G. F. WESTON.

FONTANELLE, IOWA.

Dear Herald:—How is it that you who ought to be all, or always good and wise in religious matters, are so often seen saying that which to me appears as though you have some who contribute to your columns, doctrines that lead me to believe that they are wise in their own conceits; Who is wiser than him who said, "All power is given into my hand in Heaven and earth?"

Tell me what right you have to say, that love, affection, good will towards God and man, proceed from the brain? Has the fullness of the Gospel taught this doctrine to the wise Elders of the Church of Jesus Christ of these Last Days? Did our Savior make a mistake when he said, "From the heart proceedeth good and evil thoughts," not the brain? O science, get behind me; thou art an offense to all true lovers of Jesus Christ and his doctrines, unless you know more than I do.

Why Jesus Christ knew more when in the flesh than all the learned gentlemen of this age; and do you think, that he who holds the keys of death and hell is not as wise as the best of you to-day?

Let science stay, or stand in her own place, and Jesus Christ and his doctrines on his throne of power, as it is given unto us; and let us who have been called to officiate in preaching the fullness of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, not be found guilty of mixing the two principles together; for it will weaken the faith of some of the Saints, and the seekers after truth also.

Let us, the Saints of God, be wise; mix nothing with the Gospel of Jesus Christ, that does not belong to, or with it. But let Satan, the Devil, continue to mix truth and falsehood together as he has done and still continues to do; until the people find out who the Mother of Harlots is.

But those of us who know who she is, let us hear what is said to the Saints. "Come out of her. Who? My people, (Saints of God)?" Yes.

Let them mix their false doctrines, and their science, and their temperance, and their intemperance altogether as they like; but the Saints ought to separate themselves from all who will not acknowledge and confess Jesus Christ and his doctrines, as he has restored them to us, the Gentiles, in these last days, and this last dispensation of grace and mercy to the nations. But we ought to be known as a body, or class of people, that never mix truth and falsehood together, nor reproach one another for doing right.

One thing more and I will close. Who is to be the greatest in the kingdom of Heaven? Those that wear the finest and best broadcloth? Them that have the best living, make the tallest speeches, and wear finest watch chains; or the ones that are the most useful to the cause of Christ, and the most merciful and kind to those who do wrong to themselves and others?

Book of Covenants says: "You shall forgive all men their sins." So hold no grudge; but be wise, prudent and just to all.

December 9th.—To-day I write to ask another question which the last Conference has produced in my heart and head both. What right has a man or brother, to reproach or find fault with a superior in public or elsewhere?

My prayer, hereafter, I trust, will be for the wise and true ones, to have power over the unwise, such as try to pervert, make war and the like.

Respectfully,
BRIGGS ALDEN.

NERVANA, Michigan,
December 21st, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—The seed sown by Bro. Carns last Summer has commenced to grow. One Mr. Cone, our magistrate, went down to Hersey the other Saturday with me, and was baptized by Bro. Joseph Shippy; more of our neighbors will come in soon. May they continue to come, is the prayer of your brother in love,

SAMUEL C. REYNOLDS.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah,
January 4th, 1883.

Brother Joseph Smith:—I left home and loved ones December 6th, in accordance with my appointment at our last General Conference. Arrived at Ogden, Utah, December 8th. Since then I have been trying to labor for the good of our Master's cause among the people here, and have felt blest in my feeble efforts. I find the people here who claim to be Latter Day Saints, are very bitter against the Reorganized Church. They claim that we have united with their persecutors to bring trouble upon them, while it is their own rebellion against the laws of both God and man that brings punishment. But I find a few who are tired of following blind guides, who believe they are responsible for themselves, and are seeking for the old paths. Such have treated me with kindness, and I trust they may find all they seek in the pure gospel of Jesus Christ.

I realize that this mission is a responsible one, and pray that God may give me wisdom and strength to magnify my calling to his honor.

Your brother,
H. N. HANSEN.

RUSHVILLE, Schuyler Co., Ill.,
December 5th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—Brethren Goodale and Hendrix from Pike county, came to our branch here November 25th, Bro. Goodale preaching ten discourses at the Spunky Ridge School House; had good attendance, and excellent preaching; put many queries in the minds of the people.

Yours,
WM. J. CURRY.

CABIN RUN,
December 23d, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—Our beloved brother, L. R. Devore, arrived at our house on the second of this month, and remained here about two weeks. During this time he delivered five sermons. Was hindered some on account of bad weather, and the congregations were small on that account; but was blest with good liberty, and preached to some that had never heard, after which two were added to our number by baptism. We are organized into a branch.

Your brother in the gospel covenant,
C. G. RULEY.

COOK'S POINT, Burleson Co., Texas.

Dear Herald:—I recovered from my sickness, in strength, so slowly, that I have not been able to do any thing (except what was mentioned by Bro. Smith) until December 10th, I spoke in the Reid school house, near Paige.

On the 11th we started for the quarterly conference of the Texas Central District. We met Bro. Smith, and listened to a lecture on the Book of Mormon by him, and judging from what we heard that evening, and the succeeding evening, his succeeding lectures (which were four I believe) in connection with the ones we heard, were enough to convince any one that is willing to be convinced by testimony. Saturday, the 16th, conference convened, and adjourned on Monday. All present seemed to enjoy themselves.

The Saints in this mission seem to be learning their duties, and not only learning their duties, but they seem to understand their obligations to God better, and show a willingness to live more in conformity with their obligations. I think the work in this mission is gaining, though we can not boast of a great increase of numbers. We believe we are gaining more prestige with the public generally; our position is getting to be better understood, while prejudice is gradually waning. Since I have been with H. C. Smith I have found him a man of sound judgment, determined in what he believes to be right, unwavering in his decisions, impartial when with the Saints. He is not emotional, yet he has tender feelings. It seems there is to him no sacrifice too great to make for the cause of Christ, or for the good of his brethren; yet careful and considerate in all. I think he is the man for this mission.

We will gladly welcome the Herald as a weekly, and wish it abundant success.

Yours in bonds,
A. J. CATO.

NEWPORT, N. Y.,
December 30th, 1882.

Dear Son:—I have sent you the True Latter Day Saints' Herald, containing the gospel of Jesus Christ, and what he taught his Apostles to preach, and hope you will all embrace it.

Yours in Christ,
WILLIAM & HANNAH SPRING.

GENOA, Nevada.

President Smith:—I am sorry to tell you that our progress here is very small. But we have the privileges of all the school houses and court houses in the state of Nevada, wherever we have been.

They have built a new Methodist Church in Genoa. We have the privilege of that any time by a few days' notice. I have preached there and Bro. G. Rodger preached there.

Yours in love,
A. B. JOHNS.

Summary of News.

Jan. 2d—All traces of the quays and the banks of the Danube are lost at Vienna, Austria. Their places are merely marked by eddies in the torrent.

The Danube is still rising. At Frankenthal, Bavaria, 6,000 persons have abandoned their homes.

From Mayence, Germany, downward the entire plain between Mannheim and Worms is an immense lake.

The northeastern portion of North Brabant is submerged. There are hundreds homeless. Five hundred houses were destroyed by the floods in the villages around worms.

A boat conveying passengers to-day, from Oppan to Ludwigshafen was dashed against a tree. Thirty-five persons were drowned.

Advices from Cape Town, South Africa, to the Board of Health at Washington, state that during the last two months 9,000 people have been stricken with small-pox, and 2,400 died. The negroes object to vaccination.

The decrease in the public debt during the month of December was $15,413,223 and in the last six months of the year $81,370,783.

The total number of business failures in the United States in 1882 has been reported at 7,574, against 5,929 in 1881 and 4,350 in 1880. This means an increase of 1,645 last year over those of 1881—nearly 25 per cent. As may be inferred, much the larger proportion of the business wrecks were of small concerns. An abstract of Bradstreets' report on this subject is as follows:

Jan. 3d.—Robstadt with the exception of the church and the houses of the clergy, is deeply submerged. The water in many houses nearly reaches the roofs. In Frisenheim, on the Rhine, the scene beggars description.

The Rhine has reached the height of 5.76 metres at Mayence. With great effort a tramway has been laid to bring earth for the construction of a dam.

The market square is flooded at Dusseldorf.

Seventy houses have fallen at Badenheim in consequence of the floods. At Rexheim, Morsch, and Oppau 240 houses have fallen from the same cause. At Vienna the danger is serious, and preparations are making to sound the alarm bells directly if the dykes show signs of yielding.

The Danube has risen to the height of 4.70 centimetres, at Vienna. A thousand persons in the lower part of the city were compelled to quit their homes. Traffic on the railway connecting Vienna with Moravia is suspended. The large railway bridge over the Danube is demolished and the Vienna terminus of the road flooded.

The town of Mannheim appears to stand on an isthmus in the middle of a vast sea. The great Rhine dam gave way to-night. A steamer and forty-five boats rescued people by torchlight. The village of Triesenheim is deserted, and one-third of the inhabitants of Aphan have abandoned their homes. A central relief committee has been formed. It appeals for help for the sufferers.

Ten thousand persons are rendered homeless by the floods in the district near Worms. They are in danger of starvation. Three thousand persons are homeless at Ludwigshafen, 2,000 at Mannheim, and 2,000 at Worms. They are lodged in school-houses and churches. More dikes have broken at Mayence.

The railway between Geneva and Bellegarde in Switzerland, is washed away. Direct railway communication with France and Italy is interrupted.

A band of Indians committing depredations in the neighborhood of Saragossa, Mex., killed a boy, wounded citizens, and stole horses.

Jan. 4th.—The inundations in Germany are taking the form of a great public catastrophe. The distress is increasing hourly. The military and civil authorities are making the greatest exertions to mitigate the misery of disaster. There is no sign yet that the crisis of the calamity is reached. The high temperature and rains continue. At Ludwigshafen, opposite Mannheim, where the great Rhine dam gave way last night, the lives of hundreds of people are imperiled. A steamer rescued many hundreds. The deepest distress prevails.

The Rhine is beginning to fall. Thirteen persons were drowned at Freisenheim. In all sixty or seventy lives have been lost by the floods. Frequent robberies in houses abandoned on account of the floods, have induced the authorities to station troops at each deserted village, with orders to shoot persons attempting to escape when challenged by the guard. The Empress has sent 1,000 marks to the sufferers.

The Rivers Saone and Doubs have inundated several villages in France. Thirty-two houses have fallen at Longepierre. The Seine has again reached the level of the December flood.

The Paris and Lyons Railway, on the French frontier, is washed away. Direct railway service between Switzerland, France, and Italy is interrupted. The Danube has inundated Presburg, thirty-four miles from Vienna.

About two minutes before seven last evening, at Washington Heights, Cook county, Illinois, a very large meteor was seen to pass from the north-east to the south-west, at an angle of about forty degrees above the horizon. The meteor appeared to be as much as a degree in diameter, and reflected a bright white light. In a portion of its track it left a fiery substance, which remained visible for forty minutes.

Private letters from St. Petersburg state that the Czar, on Sunday, found in his bedroom, a letter from the Revolutionary Committee, demanding the commencement of the promised reforms, and adding that the committee possess the power to forcibly obtain concessions.

Jan. 5th.—The Rhine is falling slowly at Mayence, Coblenz, and Cologne, Germany. The Main and Cahn also are falling steadily. Navigation of the Neckar is reopened. The Grand Duke of Baden has given £500 for the relief of sufferers, and the Emperor specially ordered everything possible done for them. Wreckage and dead bodies of animals are drifting down the river.

A husband and wife starved to death at Ballinasloe, Ireland. Sanitary works are being started at Kilrush to afford relief. The Carrick-on-Shannon guardians show a large number of farmers, with holdings of from one to twenty acres, absolutely without stock or food.

Twenty bandits attacked a hacienda in Guarajata, Mexico, yesterday. They carried off a boy and plunder. Troops pursued, and one bandit was killed and the boy recaptured.

Jan. 7th.—Intelligence is just received that the Inman Line steamer City of Brussels, Capt. Land, from New York December 28th for Liverpool, was run down in St. George's Channel by a Glasgow steamer during a fog, and ten persons drowned.

A house to house collection will shortly be started throughout the Empire in aid of the sufferers in the flooded districts. The Prussian Government has already granted £25,000 for their relief, and the Government of Hesse has given the same amount. Subscriptions in Prussia reached £175,000. Large sums are arriving from England and America.

About 300 new cases of smallpox were reported last week in Baltimore, Md., and seventy-nine deaths. It is thought, however, that control of the disease is being gained, and the number of reported cases is falling off.

The Utah Commission met in Washington, December 15th, 1882, there being present Governor Ramsey, Colonel Godfrey and Judge Carleton. The proposed laws recommended by the Commission were framed and placed in the hands of Senator Edmunds. One bill repeals the law of the Utah Legislature which conferred on woman the right of suffrage, while another is for the purpose of aiding the judiciary of Utah in the trial of violation of the law. In an interview with Senator Edmunds he expressed himself favorably to the laws, and we may expect his aid in carrying them through the Senate. The Commission adjourned to meet in Washington, January 25th.

Loss by fire at Peoria, Ill., of $75,000. Near Brunville, Md., flouring mill worth $30,000 was destroyed by fire. $2,000 worth of property burned at Dubuque, Iowa. $60,000 at Newburg, N. Y. Rolling mills at Danversport, Mass., burned; loss $40,000.

Jan. 10th.—The Newhall, a six story hotel in Milwaukee, Wis., burned before daylight this morning, amid scenes the most heart-rending and terrible. Forty-five persons are known to have perished, twenty-four of whom jumped from the windows of the burning building; and the list may be swelled to a hundred. More particulars hereafter.

The town of Raab in Hungary, and the adjacent villages are inundated. At three o'clock yesterday morning the inhabitants were aroused by the alarm bells, and commenced rapid flight. Meanwhile the dykes breaking admitted a deluge, which soon reached the inner town, containing besides the ordinary inhabitants, 6,000 fugitives. A considerable number of lives were lost.

It is stated that the Czar has signed a decree, dissolving all the secret societies in Russia.

LINES SUGGESTED ON READING THE "HERALD."

Where are our ministers coming from?
Is the question of to-day.
The aged are closing their labors fast,
And peacefully passing away.

Where are the reapers coming from
To succeed the dear ones gone?
Would to God that each mother could say—
"Here, Lord, I furnish one."

For many a mother has looked and hoped,
And labored and prayed and taught:
That out of her darling babe and boy,
A reaper might be wrought.

One that would stand and nobly fight
Error and sin and crime.
Oh this would have been her crowning joy,
Had she lived to see the time.

But soon that mother goes down to rest,
And her prayers they cease to flow;
And then her boy looks up for help,
When he finds he has none below.

Oh may it not be thus with you.
Awake, young brethren, all;
Put on the armor of the Lord,—
Be ready for the call.

For Jesus said, and well he knew,
"My burden it is light."
"My yoke is easy unto all,
Who put it on aright."

Then O, awake, prepare your hearts
By sacrifice and prayer,
That when to duty you are called,
You'll not be wanting there.

IS THE AGE OF MIRACLES PAST?

"These signs shall follow them that believe."

—Christ.

Since the introduction of the latter day work, embracing the restoration of the gospel in its pristine beauty and grandeur, together with the discovery, translation, and publication of certain valuable records, descriptive of the origin, customs, arts, sciences, religion, &c., of America's "pre-historic race," modern pseudo-philosophy, with all its deceptive power, and inventive genius, has been brought to bear against the text, apparently with the view to render it in sentiment "these signs shall not follow them that believe." Fifty-two years, with their varied experiences of sorrow and happiness, retrogression and progression, have passed away since the authoritative proclamation was sent forth by divine decree to preach the gospel in its fulness, and still the text remains unchanged in letter, or spirit, possessing all its native force and meaning; infidelity, sectarianism, the flesh, and the devil, to the contrary notwithstanding. Like the handwriting on the wall of the "king's palace," it is the word of God, and means what it says, and may prove in part the "mene tekel" to those who "receive not the kingdom of God as a little child," that they may partake of his blessings in time, and so be prepared to dwell with him in eternity.

Although the text seems doubtful, and mysterious to modern "astrologers" and "soothsayers," it is full of rich meaning to those who love, serve, and pray to Daniel's "God of heaven." It involves consequences of the most serious character. If its meaning is diverse from what the language implies, and it contains no promise for the humble follower of Christ now, then thousands of honest seekers after truth have been deceived, simply by taking God at his word, and believing him to be a merciful, just, loving, and impartial being. I wonder if such a thought is really consoling to those who oppose the faith of the Saints. And vice versa, if they have sought the Lord in his own appointed way, and have found him to be just as the Bible represents, loving, impartial, and so forth; and the thousand testimonies borne by them relative to the fulfillment of this promise are true, how serious may be the consequence to those who have, and do oppose, by every foul means, the work of God.

The age is truly called a progressive one, as is attested by the grand improvements in facilities for locomotion, communication, education, and agricultural and other pursuits; and gladly would we note the same ratio of spiritual development that has marked every other department of life. Our hopes in this direction, however, are often changed to sorrow, by reason of the manner in which some oppose the doctrine and claims of the Latter Day Saints. If hatred, malice, envy, strife, evil surmising, and speaking false accusations, prejudice, and intolerance, are the marks of progression in those who cherish them; we confess that many are making rapid strides toward perfection.

Those who are acquainted with the modus operandi of the Saints, know that their position relative to the "signs" is, that, as a rule, they are to follow those who believe and obey only, being the legitimate result of the gift of the Holy Spirit. In view of this fact, is it right to demand a miracle of them in vindication of their belief in the promise of Christ, and their calling as ministers of his gospel? Were not those men eighteen hundred years ago, who doubted and hence asked a "sign," as justifiable as these who ask it under like circumstances now? It is argued by these men, that the Savior and his chosen disciples proved their mission by working miracles; and hence those now claiming the same authority should vindicate their calling by like means, seemingly forgetful of the fact, that upon the same parity of reasoning, the Pharisees demanded a "sign," and even his Satanic majesty took shelter behind this kind of logic, "If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread."

The whole tenor of the New Testament Scriptures goes to show that miracles wrought were the result of faith in Christ, their object being to confirm the believer, and they were not, as some suppose, a voluntary display of power to convert the people. "According to your faith shall it be unto you," "thy faith hath made thee whole," and so forth, were not spoken for the comfort and encouragement of sign seekers. "Jesus did not many mighty works in his own country because of their unbelief." Then the logical deduction would be, if none had believed in him, no miracles would have been wrought, and yet we see no reason why unbelievers then had not as much reason to expect a demonstration of power for their personal gratification as the same class have now, and in kindness I would call the reader's attention to the fact, that the miracles of which we have record were not the result of sign seeking. And furthermore, the idea that their prime object was the conversion of the people is shown to be erroneous from the statement of Christ to those whom he healed, "See thou tell no man." If this had been the object, the more notoriety that could have been given, the more effectual they would have been for the desired end. The Savior presented the gospel as a system, having its origin with God, and promised that by a proper application in principle and practice, it would demonstrate its truth, by bringing its happy recipient into near relationship with the Father by virtue of its internal element, revealing "both the Father and the Son." To the unregenerate the evidence of its divinity resided in the purity of its morals, together with the testimony of those who had proven its worth; and as it was then, so it is now, "And these signs shall follow," "confirming those who believe."

By their acts and words, men prove themselves to be either believers or unbelievers, in the religion of Jesus Christ; and it is logical to say, that he who requires a sign that he may believe now, would have made the same demand had his presence graced God's footstool a few hundred years ago. Says Mr. Ingersoll: "The church wishes us to believe. Let the church or one of her intellectual saints work a miracle, and we will believe." Now we are not surprised at this, coming as it does from an infidel source; but is it not rather strange? This is the very weapon with which all Christendom have sought to vanquish what they term "Mormonism." If it is infidel for Ingersoll to ask a sign, what does it denote in those professing Christianity? Sign seeking is an ungainly child, born of common parentage. Nominal Christianity fights the fire of infidelity with one hand and feeds the flame with the other. The reasoning and demand of Mr. Ingersoll are logical and right, based upon the standpoint given him by modern orthodoxy. He argues, and rightly, that if miracles were wrought primarily to convert unbelievers, the same means should be provided for the same ends now. There is nothing in infidelity desirable to us, but if Christianity proper was at so low an ebb as to be based upon presumption, and maintained in ignorance, we should be wont to exclaim, "Lord increase our faith."

The tendency of the age, due to the rapid advancement made in knowledge of the sciences, is to desire all things with which they have to do, to be proven by a showing of facts, and out of this has grown, in part, the idea that religion and science are diametrically opposed. One eminent Divine has expressed the thought that religion dealt with as a matter of plain facts, is unproductive;—that its vital force and moral worth are chiefly utilized by the powers of imagination. Science and true religion have one common origin, and hence agree. Each comprehends the revelation of certain laws for the government of the material creation. Religion, as a science, rises in majestic beauty and grandeur far above all others. It is the science of life,—yes, of eternal life, and is based upon the equitably adjusted principles of power, love, mercy and justice, being equally capable with all other sciences of proving its truthfulness and worth by a demonstration of facts. The medical science, (though badly abused), doubtless is based upon right principles, operating from cause to effect. The various productions of the mineral and vegetable kingdoms contain medicinal properties, which, when properly applied, assist nature in removing disease. The healing qualities of these are only proven by making a proper application; and we know of no one so foolish as to demand a medical cure, and still refuse to apply the remedy prescribed. Indeed, such an one would be regarded as a fit subject for the lunatic asylum; and yet, when the master science is presented, a panacea for all human ills, some so far lose reason and common courtesy as to demand a cure, (for an incurable disease), yet refusing, yes, scorning to make the necessary application. The curiosity of inconsistent ones was met in the Savior's day by the scathing rebuke, "An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign, and there shall no sign be given to it but the sign of the prophet Jonas;" which was in a measure allegorical of his prospective death, burial, and resurrection. When the event occurred, and he who "longed to gather them" was suffering on the cross, they said, "Let Christ the King of Israel descend now from the cross that we may see and believe." O, man, truly thou art a fallen creature! What foul deed hast thou not been guilty of committing! When the "vail of the temple" was rent in twain, the rocks were severed, and darkness spread her mantle o'er the earth, as though all nature was in deep sympathy with her sovereign Lord, they had a "sign,"—the sign of the prophet Jonas, but to their condemnation and woe. They had "built the tombs of the prophets," and "garnished the sepulchers of the righteous." They had said, "If we had been in the days of our fathers we would not have been partakers with them in the blood of the prophets;" but they excused themselves in crucifying him whom they had asked in vain for a sign. The deed being done under color of judicial authority, was rendered quite popular. The Roman soldiers were suborned to counteract the influence that might arise from the statements of those who testified relative to the resurrection; and so the masses remained in darkness, ignorant of the gospel, and destitute of its saving power. "He that rejecteth me, and receiveth not my words, hath one that judgeth him; the word that I have spoken, the same shall judge him at the last day."—Christ.

If men will not believe that God may manifest his power now, it is not because he has not promised. From Adam till St. John, the faithful enjoyed his blessings, and Paul teaches in Hebrews twelfth chapter that it was "by faith;" and hence, if people do not enjoy them now, it is because of a lack of "faith" in him; and it should be borne in mind that the promise of Christ in the commission extends to believers only. Peter, at Pentecost, made the same promise, substantially, as did the Savior, who commissioned him, adding, doubtless for our benefit, "For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." The only difference between the promise of Peter and that of Christ is, the former promised the Spirit, and the latter its fruits; each being limited only by the conditions upon which they were made; in fact they are one and the same promise, made by the servant and his Lord. It is considered orthodox to believe in the Spirit, but heterodox to enjoy its fruits. Many contend for the promise of Peter, but deny that of the Lord. Apparently the idea of "signs," and "present revelation," is very obnoxious to some; but what "sign" is it for one to pray to God for his Spirit, telling him that without his aid no good can be accomplished, and in preaching tell the people that inspiration is a thing of the past,—that revelation is "done away." Ask the clergymen of to-day relative to their call, and as a rule you are referred to the commission as found in Matthew 28 and Mark 16. Examine for yourself, and you will discover that the promises here are of two classes: those to be enjoyed in time, and others to be realized in eternity. Ask the minister by what authority he promises salvation, and you will be shown the text, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved." The succeeding lines may be carefully avoided, but read them, and you will see that he who said, "He that believeth * * * shall be saved," also promised "These signs shall follow them that believe." Seriously we ask, what right have these men to promise one and deny the other? Why should it be thought a "thing incredible" that God should work a miracle in time, even in the absence of any promise to this effect? Is it any more miraculous for him to cause his Spirit to operate salutarly upon the physical system, or to influence the mind to see "things to come", than to save him all together? If we can not trust him for the one, will he accept our faith, (unbelief), and perform the other? The promise of the signs is co-extensive with the promise of salvation, and if one is of specific application, the other is also, and there is no dodging this issue. And another important consideration is that if we do not realize the fulfillment of the first, we have no security of the second, as one is the "earnest" of the other. Is it right for us to ask for the Spirit, and deny its office work? In relation to its operation, the Savior said, "He that hath my commandments and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me; and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him." See John, 14th chapter. "Manifest," as used here, is a transitive verb, and is defined by Webster, "to make known." In the preceding verses we learn that the medium of this communication is the "Spirit of truth." Then the Spirit is a revelator, and yet we are told that "revelation is done away," because "no longer needed." In the 26th verse we read: "But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things." The "Spirit of truth," "the Comforter," and "the Holy Ghost," are synonymous terms, and denote the divine essence that flows from the presence of the Father, to gladden the hearts of his obedient children; and is it wise for finite man to presume to limit this spirit in its capacity as a "teacher." Nehemiah says "Thou gavest also thy good spirit to instruct them." It was an "instructor" to ancient Israel, and is a "teacher" to those who are so fortunate as to hear, believe, and obey the gospel of Christ. "But when the Comforter comes, he shall testify of me." "Testify" means to bear witness, or speak in relation to. "And he will show you things to come;" "for the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy." Again: "He that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life." Physical light is analogous of the spiritual, and serves to illustrate its effect, and it is as reasonable to say that the king of day is emitting his shining rays upon the children of earth, and still insist that they are in total darkness; as to claim the enjoyment of the Spirit of God, and say that revelation is done away. "There is a generation that are pure in their own eyes, and yet is not cleansed from their filthiness," because, "where there is no vision the people perish," and if "the blind lead the blind," will they not all "fall into the ditch together?" When the order of things is so changed that water ceases to quench thirst, and fire no longer emits heat, and the shining sun scintillates no rays of light, then, and not till then, may we be led to believe that the Spirit of God is not a principle of light and intelligence, revealing his will to those who truly follow him. John said that anti-Christ had gone out into the world, and we are inclined to believe it.

It is stated from the pulpit, we get it from the press, and even it is used as a kind of bait to the weary public, to read medical advertisements, that "the age of miracles is past." "God has done his work, and if any shall say he doeth a miracle now, believe it not," is the spirit of this generation. Notwithstanding the Saints have been charged with irreverence for the Bible, it is a fact, and should be understood, that their leading effort has been, and is now, to induce the people to read, believe, and obey its teachings, relying upon its author for the fulfillment of its promises; thus establishing its truthfulness, and the divinity of the doctrine of Christ. And we are confident in making the statement, that if the professing portion of humanity had discerned in the development of latter day events, the dealings of God in fulfillment of prophecy, and had been "obedient to the heavenly vision," instead of opposing the work of God, infidelity would have been far in the background to-day. Opposition to the doctrine of the true Latter Day Saints has not been the result of careful and prayerful investigation; but when "mercy and truth kissed each other," ignorance and superstition joined their lecherous hands, and hastened to oppose. When "Truth sprang out of the earth, and righteousness looked down from heaven," error and unrighteousness raised their ugly heads, brandished their swords, and threatened to inflict the most severe penalties upon all disloyal subjects. As much evidence exists in the events embracing the latter day work, in favor of revealed religion, as may be found in ancient history. The testimony of thousands of honest, law abiding citizens, who testify relative to gospel truth and happiness now, should have equal weight with similar testimonies recorded two thousand years ago. "Garnishing the sepulchers of the righteous," and "building the tombs of the [ancient] prophets," is not always an indication of genuine faith, based upon evidence. The Bible does teach, however, that people may preach, and believe for doctrine the traditions of men. As an instance of profound faith in the Bible, we call attention to the invincible argument of one professor, whose "tradition" would not admit baptism as a saving ordinance, who said, substantially, "there are only one or two places in the Bible where baptism is made essential, and I can find many places where it is not." The doctrine that the death of the apostles closed the era of miracles does violence, first, to reliable church history; second, to the plain statements of Jesus Christ, the prophets who preceded, and the apostles who succeeded him; and third, to reason, based upon a true conception of the character of God. History teaches that so long as the conditions specified in the commission were complied with, "These signs followed." Relative to the perpetuity of the spiritual power by which they are actuated, the Savior said, "I will be with you always, even unto the end of the world." Strange, indeed, that modern clergymen should quote this language as having direct application to them, and deny the operation of the spiritual power referred to. And stranger still, that some (not all, thank God) will stoop so low as to demand of a minister of the gospel, a demonstration of this power in vindication of his high and responsible calling, and belief in the promises of God. We are daily made conscious of the fact that wonders have not ceased, be the case as it may with regard to miracles.

"Therefore, behold the days come, saith the Lord, that it shall no more be said, the Lord liveth that brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; but the Lord liveth that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north, and from all the lands whither he had driven them, and I will bring them again into their land that I gave unto their fathers. Behold, I will send for many fishers, saith the Lord, and they shall fish them; and after will I send for many hunters and they shall hunt them from every mountain, and from every hill, and out of the holes of the rocks."—Jer. 16: 14-16.

None can say, truthfully, that the events described here have received a fulfillment. The circumstance of the delivery of the Jews from Egyptian bondage has ever been proverbial with them, but the text teaches that this display of God's providence, and power, will no longer be referred to by them, by reason of the greater manifestations in the event of gathering them in the last days. In view of the statement, "I will send for many fishers saith the Lord," we conclude that if the means of communication has become inoperative, reconstruction will take place, and once more men will be "called of God as was Aaron." Jesus interprets the parable of the wheat and tares thus: "He that soweth the good seed is the son of man; the field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are the children of the wicked one; the enemy that sowed them is the devil; the harvest is the end of the world, and the reapers are the angels. As therefore the tares are gathered, and burned in the fire, so shall it be in the end of this world. The Son of Man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity."

Now, whether the "angels" referred to are glorified beings from the Celestial domain, or ministers chosen and ordained from among men, does not affect the issue; the point is that these messengers will be sent of God, and we insist that revelation is essential to the call, and qualification of those entrusted to such labor as is here spoken of. It is generally known that the Jews were once prosperous, living in plenty upon the land of Palestine, and that shortly after their rejection of the Savior, they were dispersed among the heathen nations, while their land became sterile. Nearly all the prophets predict their gathering, and the restoration of the fertility of Palestine, and among them is Joel, who makes the climax of his prophecy relative to them. "And my people shall never be ashamed. And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh, and your sons and your daughters shall prophecy, your old men shall dream dreams, and your young men shall see visions, and also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my spirit."

The happy state of things described here will evidently take place in the near future, as recently Palestine has become a "fruitful field," and "Jacob," whose face no longer "waxes pale," looks with hopeful eye upon his native land. Of course it is urged by some that Joel's prophecy was fulfilled at Pentecost. For several reasons we can not adopt this view. First, Pentecost was nearly two thousand years prior to the time predicted for the fulfillment of the event. Second, the events recorded as having occurred at Pentecost do not furnish a fulfillment of the prophecy which specifies that the Spirit will be poured out upon all flesh, the result of which will be prophecy, visions and dreams; whereas, the gift of tongues only is recorded. And third, Peter did not say that Joel's prophecy had a complete fulfillment then. He simply said, "This is that (an elipsis occurs here which may be supplied by the word "Spirit") which was spoken [of] by the prophet Joel." If the events at Pentecost fulfilled it, why should Cornelius and his Gentile brethren, the Twelve at Ephesus, and many others afterward indulge in those things that were "done away;" and why should Paul address, an epistle first, "to the Church at Corinth," second, "to them  that are called to be Saints," and third, to "all that in every place, call upon the name of the Lord," exhorting them to "contend earnestly for the best gifts, but rather that ye prophecy." We have the direct statement of the Lord by his prophet Isaiah in the 24th chapter, that he will "do a marvelous work and a wonder," the time fixed for the execution of which is "a very little while before Lebanon, [Palestine] is turned into a fruitful field." We doubt whether any chapter in the Bible is fraught with any more plain and pointed declarations than this, and we have at least two reasons for believing them. First, we accept them as being the word of God, and second, modern history confirms every statement. The events predicted and confirmed by actual occurrence are as follows:—A "sealed book" was delivered to an unlearned man, who could not read it by his own wisdom; for he was "not learned," but by the gift of God the translation was rendered, being a "marvelous work and a wonder," causing "the wisdom of the wise to perish, [comparatively], and the understanding of the prudent to be hid." The "deaf have heard the words of the book" by reason of the mercies of God in extending the gifts of the gospel; also "the eyes of the blind have seen out of obscurity and darkness," causing "the meek to increase their joy in the Lord, and the poor among men to rejoice in the Holy One of Israel." "Lebanon is turned into a fruitful field," and "Jacob," or Israel, is gaining influence in nearly every part of the habitable world, while "they that have erred in spirit" are "coming to understanding," and "they that murmur" are "learning doctrine," through the faithful efforts of the Latter Day Saint Elders, in declaring "the whole counsel of God," by preaching "the gospel of the kingdom" in its "fullness." "And the Spirit and the bride say come, and let him that heareth say come, and let him that is a thirst come, and whosoever will let him take the water of life freely." G. S. HYDE.

EXPLANATORY.

Dear Herald:—Having had, because duty called, to do with the case of the Rocky Mountain Branch vs. F. C. Warnky; and learning that the matter was introduced to the Fall Conference contrary to my desires or expectation, I, with permission would like to have a little space in your columns.

Whether those who create a necessity for litigation, or those seeking to legitimately prosecute the same when a necessity exists therefor, are culpable, will in the future be made clear, if the matter is at present at all obscured.

One of the important works in this probationary condition in the divine life, is the prevention of wrong and evil doing, and preventives are better and more to be desired than cures. But what is left undone by those who live, move, and have a being on the earth, a standing in the Church making a profession, will be rectified when he shall come whose right it is to reign.

For the part I have taken in the matter, I have no apology to offer, having no personal interest to subserve, or spite to avenge. I am not wearing out my life in traveling around to make up cases or create trouble. What I have done I should do again if a like necessity exists. The choice I have made in the acceptance of the gospel does not license me to do what labor may be pleasant, and pass over the unpleasant. But calls for a following on with no cessation, through evil and good. And if there is any method by which we can follow the Master, save in the path of duty, I have failed to learn it. Shall I ever choose to work deceptively, by intrigue or policy, (and I may), I hope to lay by the livery of heaven, and so faithfully serve his satanic majesty as to leave him no room for jealousy, through, but a partial service. For the fiat has gone forth, that no man can serve two masters.

So far as I know, there are no silver slippers manufactured in which to glide smoothly and easily to heaven. Nor is the path leading to the dizzy heights of perfection altogether thornless.

But I may be thought digressing. From the moment I heard the decision of the committee of the Spring Conference, I desired to appeal the case to the High Council, and this procedure, as I learned from a motion which obtained at the Fall Conference, was suggested, which exhibited the good sense of the conference, the reason assigned being the fact of a General Conference having already legislated thereon. Very potent reason. So I was so far from being chagrined by the procedure of the conference, as to thank my lucky stars for the absence of a vote of censure.

Efforts to reach an ultimatum involves a necessity for preparatory steps. The ultimatum sought as above expressed, was an appeal to the High Council. Nor did I think but preparatory steps, to reach the coveted object, were plain, pointed and timely, but that was another time, when my expectations were blighted.

One so often meets with disappointment in this mortal life as to lead him sometimes to think that he is blessed who expects nothing; for he is never disappointed. But it sometimes happens that sorrow by disappointment is made so tolerable through joy received from unexpected events, to call forth thanks for the law of compensation, so wonderful in its operation, and certain in its results.

To write or speak; to convey to the reader or hearer, that which is in the mind of the writer or speaker, in a manner to preclude the possibility of any misconception, seems to require a proficiency that the writer does not possess. The necessity of reason being presented to some one or ones with power to decide whether they are valid for an appeal, or not, I think eminently proper. Otherwise appeals may obtain through whims, and proper decision be ignored. All of which, as I thought, was done. But subsequent thought reveals the facts, that in the presentation of reasons, etc., terms were used susceptible of explanation partially justifying, at least, a construction leading to a conclusion never dreamed of by the writer. In view of which fact, and to prevent litigation, which might lead to unpleasant results, I shoulder the responsibility of my blundering, and apologize to the Saints of the Rocky Mountain Branch, and all who might have been annoyed by the presentation of the matter to the late conference, where it did not belong.

Stumbling, blundering, and striving to balance; getting and retaining a proper equilibrium, recanting, repenting, and correcting are some of the works that demand our attention. Saying I regret this blundering does not help the matter, or call back the lost opportunity to reach a finality in this unfortunate and aggravating case; but under the circumstances 'tis all I can do—and shall it happen that an opportunity shall never occur, for a more thorough examination before earthly tribunals, we can well afford to submit the matter to the Great Arbitrator; wait for, and abide the issue. 'Tis not noble to err, blunder or commit wrong; nor is it ignoble to recant from, when a wrong has been perpetrated, and whether the thought is cheering or not, few, if any have reached an eminence, without mistakes and blunders.

JAMES CAFFALL.

WHO IS FROM HEAVEN?

"No man hath ascended to heaven, but he who came down from heaven, even the Son of Man, who is in heaven."—John 3:13.

While reading these words a few evenings since, the force of the language impressed my mind with a meaning, or interpretation, such as never did before, save once; and at that time I was not more impressed than at the present. It has been a source of perplexity to me, while reading this same passage, trying to fathom the great mystery connected with it; for it was a mystery, and no doubt is to this day. It is a mystery to a great many, how Christ could be on earth in person, and in heaven at the same time. And also, how he could be the Son of Man, and the Son of God at the same time. If man was his father, what man could it be? (I speak now of an earthly father). Some may say that David was his father. Perhaps he was, in an indirect way; but God proclaims himself his father in so many words. And the very language of Mary to the angel, conveys the idea that man was not father to Christ, (mortal man), for she says, "How can this be, seeing I know no man." And the fact of Joseph's attempting to put her away, supposing something wrong of her, and the Lord appearing in a dream to assure him that all was right, goes to show that Christ was really the Son of God, and not the Son of Man, as some appear to think.

That Christ was the Son of Man, according to his own words, and also the Son of Man who is in heaven. I desire to call attention to my belief, and if wrong, I pray God to set me right.

I ask, did the Savior ever go back to heaven after his birth, before his final ascension? If so, when? Was he in heaven at the time he made this assertion as found in the text? If it can be proven that he was in both places when he was speaking to Nicodemus, then I have no more to say; but if not, we want to know who this man was that was father to him. He says of himself that he came down from heaven, and that no man ever ascended there, but him. When did he ascend? No doubt many times in the age of the patriarchs, of the prophets, and at other times before his appearing in the flesh as the son of Mary. But no record is had of his going up from the time of his birth to his ascension after death. If it be said that his spirit was there, while his body was here, or again, that David was his father, and that David was in heaven, having been raised from his grave, we beg leave to say, that David was still in his sepulchre when Peter addressed the multitude on Pentecost; and no doubt is there to this day. Peter spoke by inspiration, as all must admit. So that some other explanation must be found. What can it be? We read in the sacred book, that God said, "Let us make man in our likeness, after our image."—Gen. 1:27. And it was so. Not in the moral image, as John Wesley claims, but in the image of God and his Son. And when Paul tells his Hebrew brethren, Hebrews 1:3, "That Christ was the express image of the Father," he tells them of a bona fide existence of God's Son in the body. Also, Christ in reply to Phillip's desire to be shown the Father, said that "he that hath seen me hath seen the Father." So that the Son must be like the Father and vice versa, the Father must be like the Son. Then it follows of necessity, that Christ calling himself the Son of Man, speaks of the Father in heaven exclusively. And the Son of Man who is in heaven, could be God, and to my mind no one else; but so infinitely more glorious than earthly being, that the tongue of mortals fails to express the difference.

The Savior on one occasion put a question to the Jews, wise ones of course, like this: "What think ye of Christ? Whose son is he?" Their reply was, "David's." He asked them how he was David's son, when David called him Lord. They could not solve the problem, and they remained in ignorance of the true solution of the question. And to this day the evil remains over them. Not only the Jews, but the Gentiles are as badly in the dark as the Jews, as far as regards this one great mystery. I call it a mystery. And Paul in 1 Corinthians 3:16, tells us why it is a mystery. "That God was manifest in the flesh, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory." God was manifest in the flesh. How so? By the appearance of Christ, who was the express image of the Father. And if as some of our orthodox friends claim, God has neither body nor parts, the Savior and his Apostles were certainly mistaken; for if God has neither body nor parts, and Christ was his express image while on earth, as quoted from the scriptures, it is a mystery, and one which all the wisdom of men can never fathom, looking at it from an orthodox stand point. It is a mystery of mysteries. But taking a proper view of the seemingly mysterious matter, from the records of truth, Christ was really the Son of Man which is in heaven,—God.

The creator of man, in his own image created he him, and he has never changed.

Does any one suppose that Jesus did not know whereof he spoke, when he calls himself the Son of Man in heaven? Was he dealing with mankind in words of no meaning? The Jews certainly did not understand him. The Saints did; at least, after the Spirit was poured out, they knew the connection that existed between the Father and Son. The Spirit was to guide them into all truth, and Paul declares one truth, in that he says that Christ was the express image of the Father, and God could not be manifest in the flesh, unless he could be seen; for to be manifest, is to be seen. Although he was in the world, the world knew him not. He was not manifested to them, as he was to them that believed on him. He gave one class power to become the sons of God; the other he left in darkness, because they chose to remain so.

Stephen, although in the flesh, was, by the Spirit permitted to see heaven open, and to see the Son of Man sitting at the right hand of God. When Nebuchadnezzar saw four persons in the fiery furnace, he saw one that was like the Son of God. How came he to know there was such a person? Only by having his eyes opened for the occasion by a higher power, as in the case of Elisha's servant. When the Prophet asked God to open his eyes that he might see God's host above them; and I firmly believe, that a spiritual man or woman is, and always has been permitted to see God and his Son, at particular times when it was God's will that they should do so. When men approximate to the faith and righteousness of Enoch, and other worthies of scriptural account, nothing can prevent them from knowing God and Christ, which is really the only true guarantee of life eternal.

T. F. STAFFORD.

IMMORTAL MORTAL.

THIS title may at first seem to be a contradiction in itself, and according to our traditions it is one; but if we accept the explanations in the Scriptures of man's earth existence of probation, we will find there is no contradiction in the term, nor absurdity either. It is thought that an immortal is one who, under no circumstances can die,—and a mortal one, who, of necessity must die. And under this idea many persons have fruitlessly sought to harmonize the word. Just so orthodoxy are, and have been, puzzling themselves with predestination and fore-ordination, not willing to receive the key, pre-existence, by which those principles may be understood

In the Book of Nephi, chapter 13, paragraph 3, Christ says to the three Nephites, "Ye shall never taste of death; * * * but when I shall come in my glory, ye shall be changed in the twinkling of an eye, from mortality to immortality." Are these immortal? No; for they are to meet with a change from their present condition to immortality. Are they mortal? No; for they are not to die. We may suppose that whatever change has taken place with them, their agency is left to them, and so it is possible they may not abide the conditions by which they received the blessing of remaining until Christ comes in his glory. Therefore, they are immortal, in the sense that they are not to die, and mortal in the sense that they may die; in other words, they are immortal mortals.

Then we may define an immortal as one who abiding certain conditions, will not die, but violating them, must die. And a mortal as one who, under certain conditions, must die; but relieved from them, will not die. John was a mortal under certain conditions, but was relieved from them, and is immortal, and continuing under these conditions, will not die, still is subject to death; for, by violating the conditions under which he remains, he would die; and the change has not yet taken place,—for Christ has not yet come in his glory,—by which he is to become an immortal of another state; in which perhaps he may have become immortal, in the sense that under no circumstance can he die.

Moroni says, Book of Mormon, chapter 4, paragraph 6:

"By Adam came the fall of man. And because of the fall of man, came Jesus Christ, * * * and because of Jesus Christ, came the redemption of man. And because of the redemption of man, which came by Jesus Christ, they are brought back into the presence of the Lord; yea, this is wherein all men are redeemed, because the death of Christ bringeth to pass the resurrection * * * being redeemed and loosed from this eternal band of death, which death is a temporal death."

Therefore the temporal death required a redeemer, which was required because of the fall which came by Adam; in other words, Christ's mission to earth, which was to bring to pass the resurrection of the dead, became necessary because of Adam's fall; but if Adam was mortal, in the sense that he would have died if he had not transgressed, then Christ's mission was not because of the fall, and Moroni errs, as also the Seer of this day; for in Doctrine and Covenants, section 28:11, we read:

"Wherefore, it came to pass, that the devil tempted Adam and he partook of the forbidden fruit, and transgressed the commandment, wherein he became subject to the will of the devil, because he yielded unto temptation. Wherefore, I, the Lord God, caused that he should be cast out from the garden of Eden, from my presence, because of his transgression; wherein he became spiritually dead, which is the first death."

From which we understand that Adam, transgressing the commands of God, became first spiritually dead, also subject to the will of the devil. If so, he was not subject to his will before transgressing, and from the tenor of all Scripture and experience, we believe his will always has been death to man, both spiritual and temporal.

If it is thought that his will has only been spiritual death to man, we are told that the very height of our exaltation depends upon being united to our bodies.

"The elements are eternal, and spirit and element inseparably connected, receiveth a fulness of joy; and when separated, man can not receive a fulness of joy."—Doc. & Cov., sec. 9:5.

Therefore, Adam by his transgression became subject to the will of the devil; and it must be apparent, that by his will death, temporal, came to man; for because of Adam's fall Christ must needs come to restore the body, that the element and spirit may be inseparably connected, that man may have a fullness of joy. Consequently, before the spiritual death which is and was the first death, Adam was an immortal. After his transgression, and because of it, he became subject to the will of the devil, and was therefore mortal. The wages of sin is always death, and in Adam all die. I do not die spiritually in Adam, or because of Adam's sin; but "Every spirit of man was innocent in the beginning, and God having redeemed man from the fall, men became again in their infant state, innocent before God. And that wicked one cometh and taketh away light and truth, through disobedience, from the children of men, and because of the tradition of their fathers."—Doc. and Cov. 90:6.

Infants, then, being innocent, are spiritually alive; but through disobedience they lose that state of innocency, and become spiritually dead; and we might term them then, spiritually mortal. Through obedience to the gospel they pass from death to life, and are, therefore, immortal, as to spiritual, eternal life; and only such can become mortal, as to eternal, spiritual death. See Doc. & Cov. 76:4.

The same definition, therefore, of immortal and mortal, as applied to the spirit. The spirits of infants are immortal, but subject to mortality, or spiritual death, by tradition of our parents, and disobedience; or by violating the conditions of eternal life. By violating these they become mortal, or die spiritually. Then by obedience to the gospel, they are made alive, spiritually, and are immortal,—"have passed from death unto life." I do not deem it absolutely necessary, for the spiritually, immortal infant to become spiritually mortal; perhaps Enoch did not; for he walked with God: and if he did not die spiritually, he continued under the conditions of spiritual immortality, and temporal death had no power over him, because he never became subject to the will of the devil. But I do deem it an absolute impossibility, for man to be spiritually mortal, without being also temporally mortal; therefore, Adam became mortal first spiritually; consequently mortal, second, temporally.

Whereas, The Lord called his people Zion, because they were of one heart and one mind, and dwelt in righteousness, and there were no poor among them, (Gen. 7th chapter, 23d verse, inspired translation); and, whereas, the Book of Mormon teaches that the Nephites lived according to this order for the space of two hundred years, and no greater blessings were ever enjoyed by a people than were enjoyed by them, (Book of the Disciple of Nephi the Disciple of Jesus Christ); and, whereas, the Church of Christ at Jerusalem had all things in common; and, whereas, the Lord gave us the Order of Enoch in the last days to govern us, as set forth in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, section 77; and, whereas, the law was given through the martyred Seer to the Church in these last days, as set forth in sections 51, 83, paragraph 8; and section 106, Book of Doctrine and Covenants; and, whereas, the martyred Joseph wrote to W. W. Phelps, November 27th, 1832, and gave the destiny of those who came up to Zion to keep the commandments of God, and yet receive not their inheritance by consecration, by order or deed from the Bishop, the man that God has appointed in a legal way agreeable to the law given to organize and regulate the Church, and all the affairs of the same, (Life of Joseph the Prophet, pages 807, 808 and 809). Therefore, be it resolved, that we request the Elders in this district to preach this law as contained in the books.

SALT LAKE CITY, January 1st, 1882.

RINGWORM CURE.

Bro. E. M. Bowen, of Butte, Montana, informed me that up to 1869 he had a ringworm on his face and neck that troubled him sorely, and which no remedy was found to cure, till he dreamed that Elder W. W. Blair, who was then in California, and whom he had never seen, came to him and told him to apply the white of an egg, spirits of turpentine, and salt, mixed together. Sister Bowen advised him to try it, which he did, and was wholly cured. He and Sr. Bowen told others similarly afflicted, who tried it and were healed.

This was a most singular and happy communication, and through publishing it in the Herald others may profit by it. W. W. B.

MARRIED.

TAYLOR—MORTON.—At the residence of the bride's guardian, (Bro. Anthony Sharron), Wabash Township, of Camden county, of Kent, Ontario, December, 27th, 1882, by Elder Arthur Leverton, Bro. William H. Taylor, to Sr. Mary Ann Morton.

William and Mary, they now are united
To travel together on life's rugged road;
We hope their union may never be blighted
By any of the evils to which they're exposed.
But may they in happiness go on together,
Until to the end of life's race they have run;
Then may their happiness be greater than ever,
By joining in heaven, with the blood washed through.

McREYNOLDS—DAWSON.—At the residence of the bride's mother, in Ione Valley, Amador county, California, September 5th, 1882, by Priest William N. Dawson, Mr. Wm. B. McReynolds, of Stockton City, to Sr. Rhoda S. Dawson, of Ione Valley.

God bless the love that binds with power,
Your young and noble hearts;
May blessings like a pleasant shower,
Descend on them forevermore,
And not on them only
But your friends the world o'er.

DIED.

BOND.—At Kirtland, Ohio, December 17th, 1882, Charlotte W., wife of Ira Bond, on her 79th birth day. Deceased was born at Honedye Falls, New York; was baptized by Brigham Young in 1833, and removed to Kirtland the following year, where she has since resided. For nearly fifty years she had an unwavering faith in the latter day work, and was a member of the Reorganized Church. She had been blind for over eleven years, and the latter portion of this time a helpless, suffering invalid, longing for release. Her aged companion, with whom she had lived over sixty years, still survives, with their six children, to mourn her loss.

Still, upon thy pulseless bosom,
Lie thy folded hands, at rest;
Freed, thy spirit mounts exulting,
By no mortal pain oppressed.
Now we hope that darkened vision
Which did vex thy spirit sore,
Drinks in all the "golden glory,"
Of that distant, unseen shore.
Rest thee, mother, slumber sweetly,
Not for once would we recall
That tried soul, so worn with beating
'Gainst its crumbling prison wall.

STRACK.—Near Cortland, DeKalk county, Illinois, November 28th, 1882, Michael Strack, aged 58 years, 6 months and 4 days. He was born in Ronwood, Hessen, Darmstadt, Germany, May 23d, 1824. Bro. Strack was not a member of the Church, for want of an opportunity, and an administrator; but he was a firm believer in the Book of Mormon. His German Book of Mormon, (bought last Spring), after reading it through, he sent it to Pennsylvania, to convince some of his old friends of its truth; and since its return has had it loaned out to some of his German friends near here; thus showing that he was not ashamed of his faith in that book, nor of letting his light shine. In talking with him soon after he got this book, he said it was the truth; then stamping his foot on the earth, while pointing and looking above, he said that we were founded on the rock. This much I could understand, though not spoken in my language; and more than once he has expressed his determination of obeying the gospel. His obsequies were of his own nationality. Thus one by one the Saints and those who believe the gospel, pass away.

Our brother dear lies 'neath the sod,
To moulder back to dust;
There to await the trump of God,
To call that body forth;
Then let his casket rest in peace,
Until this trump shall sound,
Which shall awake the righteous dead,
That sleep beneath the ground.
The Book of Mormon to him was bright
In which he saw the gospel light.

LEWIS.—At Providence, Rhode Island, August 30th, 1882, Bro. Silas Lewis. He was born September 24th, 1803; was a member of the Methodist Church for more than thirty years; accepted the latter day work, and was baptized May 26th, 1875. He was one with such a sublime faith in God and the latter day work, that when in his last brief illness, he was waiting patiently for the great change that was coming, his countenance would be illuminated with smiles of joy as he would think of the heavenly times he had enjoyed with the Saints. Funeral sermon by Elder F. A. Potter.

HUTCHERSON.—At Elmwood Branch, near Oenaville, Texas, December 9th, 1882, Sister Mary E. Hutcherson, aged 29 years, 4 months, and 3 days. She was born in De Soto Parish, Louisiana, August 6th, 1853; married to Mr. Benjamin Hutcherson, February 2d, 1878, and was baptized October 5th, 1882, by Elder H. L. Thompson, and was a faithful and consistent follower of the Master. Funeral services conducted by Elder H. L. Thompson. Sermon by Elder Heman C. Smith. She leaves an affectionate husband, and two small children. She rests well.

SHORT.—At Joplin, Jasper county, Missouri, December 18th, 1882, at 10:30 a. m., Elder C. W. Short. He was born near Summerset, Pulaski county, Kentucky, December 3d, 1808. The old warrior was stricken with pneumonia while assisting Bro. Alexander H. Smith, twelve miles north, at Galesburg, Missouri. He was brought home tenderly in special conveyance. The last days of his earthly career were replete with intense agony, that was very hurtful to behold; but praise to God, warnings to the wayward, exhortations to the Saints, and a firm reliance on the judgment, justice, mercy, power and glory of Jehovah, characterized the acts of the weary pilgrim. He was positive in his nature, aggressive in the cause of truth, confiding, forgiving and charitable. His veneration for the Supreme Being was unbounded; but the pride and vanities of life he detested thoroughly. He made a profession of religion and began exhorting and preaching when he was only eighteen years old. Elder D. S. Crawley unfolded the gospel to him, in its fullness and purity, and subsequently baptized and confirmed him, November 10th, 1873. He was ordained to the eldership December 1st, 1873, by W. W. Blair. Extreme delight filled his soul when the brethren of the holy priesthood would appear; but the love of the dying man gushed forth for all Saints and a perishing world. With firm reliance on the blessed Savior, and complete resignation to the decrees of Providence, he fell at his post. His three score and ten consort, three sons and a number of grandchildren, are left on the earth; whereas his only daughter and two sons have gone before him into eternity. The obsequies were duly conducted by Elder Stephen Maloney. He reposes in the family grave yard among infants and Saints that await the appearing of him that is the resurrection and the life, even the anointed of God.

Sorrowful, yet hopeful,

M. T. SHORT.

THOMAS.—At Cheltenham, Missouri, October 9th, 1882, of chronic diarrhea, Sr. Mary Thomas. She was born at Dudley, Staffordshire, England, February 13th, 1859; was baptized at Belleville, Illinois, by Joseph E. Betts, senior, October 23d, 1871; confirmed by George Hicklin. Sr. Mary bore a faithful testimony to the cause in word and deed, and passed away in hopes of a glorious resurrection.

Away from earth and Satan's snares
Her faith sufficient tried;
The casket only lieth here,
The gem's in paradise.

STONE.—At Amboy, Illinois, November 19th, 1882, Experience Stone, mother of Elder S. J. Stone. The deceased was born at Mansfield, Connecticut, July 9th, 1799. She united with the Church in June, 1844, at Vienna, Oneida Co., N. Y., and was baptized and confirmed by Elder Henry Leonard. She bore a miraculous testimony of the truth of this latter day work from time to time, as she was influenced by the Spirit of the living God. She leaves three children to mourn her loss, besides a large circle of friends and acquaintances. She will be sadly missed, but not lamented, for her work was finished. We feel satisfied she is at rest in the Paradise of God. Funeral services by Elder Edwin Cadwell, from St. John, 3d chapter.

COCHRIN.—At Nebraska City, Nebraska, December 23d, 1882, of croup, David Brown, son of Bro. Byron and Sr. Lucy M. E. Cochran, aged 2 years, 6 months and 16 days. Funeral sermon by Elder Robert M. Elvin.

HARDAKER.—Near Stewartsville, Mo., December 3d, 1882, Dilla Delphine, only child of Bro. John and Sr. Katharine Hardaker, aged 2 years, 9 months, and 17 days. Funeral services by J. M. Terry and Wm. Lewis.

We deplore the loss of our Dilla dear;
But mourn not as those who have no hope,— We'll meet again in the future near,
Where death with life will no more cope.

WHITE.—At Galien, Michigan, December 4th, 1882, of consumption, Bro. George W. White. He was born in the town of Vebron, New York, September 30th, 1851. Was conscious until the last moment; and spoke out, "I am almost there," and dropped to sleep. So rests those who trust in God, and who honor His law in life. He leaves a wife and one child, neither of whom is well. Funeral sermon by Elder Wm. H. Kelley.

NEWBERRY.—Near Wheeler's Grove, Iowa, October 17th, 1882, Mattie A., daughter of H. and M. A. Newberry, aged 1 year, 2 months, and 22 days.

Sleep, Mattie, sleep, and take thy rest;
God has called thee. He thought it best.

DILLION.—In the house of one of his sons, December 6th, 1882, of old age, Bro. Calvin Dillion, aged 83 years. JOSEPH SMITH - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, 27th January, 1883.

Not very long ago an Elder preached in a school house in the country, driving twenty-three miles in an open buggy with a comrade Elder, against a strong cold wind, to reach the appointment which had been left without his consent. When arrived he found that the people having gathered once before because of an appointment made by an Elder, who was prevented by rain from filling it, failed to come, he however continued the effort till the evening and had a few out to hear him; being encouraged he left an appointment for a month ahead and taking train at his home he went to within two miles of the school house. He was met at the station by a young man who had invited him to stop at his father's house and rest and then go on to the house; but, the good intentions of the lad were frustrated, for when he had told his parents what he had done in inviting the Latter Day Saint preacher home with him, they at once put a veto on that, declaring that no Mormon should come into the house. This was mortifying to the young man, and embarrassing to the Elder; however, he put the best construction on it and assured the young man that no harm was done. The lad kindly piloted the Elder to the school house, over a rough, snowy and slippery road, to find no assembly, and no fire. The appointment had been forgotten by some; and a protracted meeting some two miles away absorbed the interest. It was Saturday evening, so the Elder went to a neighbor's, where he was well entertained, and the next day at eleven met about fifteen, or twenty, to whom he tried to tell the story of faith. The evening's meeting was spoiled by a fierce northern and flying snow.

After the morning service the Elder visited an elderly man, whom the neighbors usually call "Grandpa," and spent the afternoon and evening in pleasant controversy, his host being a Universalist. The night was bitterly cold, and the Elder lay long, chilly and starved with the pinching cold before the seldom used bed in the guest chamber was warm enough for him to sleep.

On Monday morning the Elder availed himself of an opportune ride in an open wagon, two and a half miles to the railway station, ten minutes too late for the train; this made a three hour's wait, either in the frosty air or in an over heated waiting room. But time that waits not, brought the next one, and our Elder reached his home station after a cold ride of two miles more at the end of his car ride, chilled, weary and disgusted. He had spent two full days of time, $1.62 in rail way fares, and had been able to preach one discourse to a few people with scarcely a prospect of one of them being interested enough to ever give the matter a second thought.

This is only the history of one effort made by only one of the army of local occupation in the great field; but it is quite likely that it is duplicated many times in the year, here and there, over the wide field. The Elder says, "If I was certain the least good came to any one out of the effort made, I would be amply repaid, but—who can tell."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. J. F. Mintun, who has been travelling in the west, Nebraska and Kansas, gave some attention to the operation of the Prohibitory law of the latter state. From a late letter to us in regard to it he states:

"They are selling in some of the larger cities such as Topeka, Fort Scott, Atchison and others, in violation of the law, but where there were many places selling publicly in the past, there are but few now. The Brewer's Association only donated about $500 for the suppression of the law last year, where before they had donated thousands, showing their faith in its suppression is getting weaker. The last election would to an outside observer, seem a death blow to prohibition, but instead of that it was more a death blow to the idea of introducing this measure as a part of politics which Gov. St. Johns was doing. The prohibitionists are, I believe, as strong numerically, and a great deal stronger practically, than ever before. All new issues have met with disapproval at first, some of which are now fundamental laws of states, so I believe will the prohibitory law relating to liquors be. It is prohibition or nothing, with this as an evil as with all other evils."

A brother, an Elder, sends us a stirring, cheering letter from which we extract the following strong sentences. Let the fearful and timid take on a truer courage, "the storm, though fierce, will soon pass by."

"I have carefully considered the ground we occupy—looked at it from every point of view; examined it with scrutinizing care. I have at the same time, carefully compared it with most other systems of religion called Christian, as well as those we are pleased to call Pagan. Not feeling to stop here, I have laid the Christian system, as we teach it, along side of the Materialistic Philosophy, or Atheism. In these examinations, I have endeavored to rise to a plane far above that of the groveling partisan, and to take a comprehensive view of the whole question. As compared with every other system of religion, either Christian or Pagan, I find it to possess every possible excellence to be found in any one of them, or all of them combined, and some few not possessed by any of them. Upon a comparison with Infidelity, or Atheism, I find no common ground anywhere. On the one hand I find as emanating presumably from a divine source, a set of positive, or affirmative principles calculated in their very nature to elevate the race, and make men holier and happier, both in time and eternity. While on the other, I find a cold, cheerless philosophy, emanating, probably, from man's depraved nature, consisting of an incoherent set of negatives; not a single affirmative principle or proposition does it contain. Nowhere, from Voltaire to Ingersoll—and indeed, you may go back to the age when the first Sceptic, Infidel, Atheist, said "Thou shalt not surely die,"—has one of that school of philosophers ever added one page, one line, one word, to the ethical code. A philosophy which never evolved, never enunciated, distinctively, a system of morals, certainly can not be entrusted with the government of the world, or the preservation of its virtue.

Having thus taken into consideration the whole question, I am brought face to face with the fact that I have no where else to go. To whom could I go to find a more perfect code of morals, or a more blissful assurance of the "sweet bye and bye."

Hoping, praying, and expecting to be found laboring for the success and final triumph of a cause at once so cheering, so noble, so grand, I have the great pleasure to be yours in gospel bonds."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Will you please explain second and third paragraphs of section 59, in Book of Covenants. Especially the words "and thy sacraments," and all of third paragraph.

Ans.—The only thing in either of these paragraphs that can by any words known to us be made plainer is possibly in relation to what an oblation or a sacrament is. An oblation is anything offered in sacrifice, or worship. Prayer, praise, song, money, or other thing laid on the altar, or given for the spread of the work, maintaining the branch or the general work of the church, offered in faith and devotion, and all devotional exercises are oblations. A sacrament is a sacred ordinance, and means really a vow, or oath. Protestants usually apply the word to Baptism and the Lord's Supper; the Roman and Greek churches add confirmation, penance, holy orders, matrimony, and extreme unction. But as the word more properly means a rite, or ceremony, by which a vow, or oath, is commemorated or sealed, it is better for us to accept the sacraments to be baptism, confirmation, ordination, and the Lord's Supper, and if we add marriage, it may not be amiss. So far as the third paragraph is concerned it seems to be only a definitive sentence, providing that the things necessary to be done on the Lord's Day must be done with singleness of heart and true devotedness; and things not necessary to be done should be avoided. If persons choose to abstain from food a part, or all of the day, they should do so without engaging in every day labors to forget their accustomed meal, and the food with which they intend to break their fast should be prepared simply and frugally.

Ques.—In Herald, April 15th, page 122, may be found a statement concerning the partaking the sacrament, like this: "And they shall partake monthly." While I believe once a month sufficient, I would like your authority?

Ans.—Please read HERALD for May 1st, 1882, page 141, fourth paragraph from top: "And they shall partake worthily," instead of "monthly."

Ques.—Is Independence, Missouri, in the center of the stakes of Zion? I understand that Zion is fifteen hundred miles square. If so, does that inclose Salt Lake City with the boundary line, as some claim? I think not.

Ans.—We are not prepared to say that Independence is a stake, or to attempt to fix the boundary lines. If the area is fifteen hundred miles square, and the lines should be run in agreement with the lines of longitude and latitude, we think that Salt Lake City would be without on the western boundary. But who can say. America is the Land of Zion. The questioner volunteers an answer, as it appears.

WE perhaps should have added to the Rules on Representation, the following:

"That the foregoing Rules of Representation may be altered and amended at any General Conference of the Church, * * * Provided, that at least two months' notice of the nature of such amendment or amendments shall be given in the HERALD, before the date of the sitting of the session of conference at which such amendment or amendments will be presented, giving manner and form in which such amendments are desired."

Mr. Walter Sims, formerly of Detroit, but now of Bay City, Michigan, has been down (or up) into Sanilac county, where he had a discussion with Elder John J. Cornish; and is now quite anxious to meet and demolish more of the elders of the church. He advertised at Carsonville for January 4th, a lecture on the subject: "The Bible vs. Latter Day Saintism." Will not Bro. W. H. Kelley kindly look after the sheep up about that way, or this other shepherd may run them off.

A BROTHER sends us a Pittsburg Sunday Traveler, from which the following from Truth is taken.

PROGRESS IN PALESTINE.

While Salmi Morse is wrestling with obstacles to the production of his great dramatic tragedy in New York, Germany's emperor drinks wine from grapes grown on the rejuvenated hills of Palestine. Large tracts of abandoned land near the birthplace of the Man of Sorrows have been recently reclaimed by European carpet-baggers, and made richly productive.

The blight of twenty centuries, under the moving arms of modern genius and enterprise, seems to be disappearing from the soil cursed by the Crucifixion.

Locomotives snort through the streets of Jerusalem, where in Christ's time the slave, the ox and the ass were the only beasts of burden.

The naked hills between Bethlehem and Jerusalem, believed to be drenched with the blood of babes in Herod's time, are now bearing fruit and food for Jew and Gentile.

The sorrow-filled Garden of Gethsemane blooms as of old, still thronged with melancholy memories; but no modern Judas lurks among its shrubbery.

The dead Dead Sea is made alive with boats of modern make, and Commerce glides over its erstwhile useless surface.

The forked stick of Egypt is replaced by the glimmering plowshare of America.

Along the roads trod by the Savior roll the perfect four-wheeled vehicles of modern times.

Were Christ to bodily enter Jerusalem to-day, it need not be upon an ass.

A little while, and the self-binding harvester will replace the sickle of Holy Writ. The threshing machine will usurp the functions of the flail and goat. Great flouring mills will rise where women crushed corn in mortars for daily food.

Verily, the telegraph pole succeeds the Cross.

DR. H. W. THOMAS is reported to have written an article in the North American Review, in which he says:

"If all, or one-half of the progressive thinkers in the Orthodox churches of the land would come to the front and openly say what they honestly believe, the battle would be ended in a very short time."

On this a prominent journal comments, thus:

"This is the point, and here is just where men under our system of voluntary churches wince at the call for outspoken and fearless statements of the truth. The progressive thinkers in the regular churches look at the bread and butter and the snug parish, and are not sufficiently ready to heed Dr. Thomas' brave words: 'Be true; true to facts and to the laws of thought; and, with a confidence in truth that can know no doubt, follow where truth leads; and, if the way be dark and uncertain, wait for the morning.'"

"Progressive thinkers," sighing for the life giving forces of a religion that shall satisfy both the reason and the heart are not yet sufficiently progressive, however honest they may be, to accept the religion of the Nazarene, as instituted by him.

Mr. Ingersoll says that he does not attack the Christianity of the New Testament Scriptures, and Dr. Thomas shows that the Christianity which Mr. Ingersoll does not attack is not responsible for the harsh and cruel conceptions of God and the religion of Christ, that have grown up as accretions on the body of religion as held by the various regular churches of the day. But it is not at all probable that Mr. Ingersoll would accept primitive Christianity, believing himself not to be responsible to any body but R. G. Ingersoll, and hence in no need of saving grace. And it is very doubtful if Dr. Thomas, who so ably defends Christianity, as left by Christ and the Apostles, would be content to abandon all the loaves and fishes now available to him, for the pleasures and pains of teaching Christ as Paul taught him; he although a progressive thinker is not yet progressive enough for that.

In keeping somewhat with this sentiment is an editorial from some eastern paper, Boston Herald, we believe, which a brother lately sent us, and which we give below:

RELIGIOUS MOVEMENT TO-DAY.

No two periodicals have gathered up the tendencies of religious thought in America during the past year in better fashion, or with more practical results, than the Princeton and North American Reviews. It has been a period of visible movement, if not of violent agitation, and in the Protestant circles there has been manifest a tendency to go backward to the affirmations of primitive Christianity. These two Reviews have brought together the opinions of representative thinkers, and the substance of their opinions is that, while there is clearly a march of thought forward from what are called "orthodox" lines, a greater liberty of thinking and speaking than has heretofore existed, there is also to be plainly discerned a return to the larger beliefs of the earliest days of Christianity. This may seem a paradox demanding explanation. The return to a larger faith has been behind all the agitation connected with the Andover Theological Seminary, and means that the symbols of religious belief which have been current in New England no longer represent the present thought of many of the earnest men among the Congregationalists. There has been a desire to stand on some such simple statement of the facts of religious belief as is found in the apostles' creed, and the more "orthodox" have even gone further and accepted the Nicene symbol as their formulated thought of Christianity. And, behind this, there has been the consciousness that, contrary to all the teachings of Latin and mediæval theology, God is immanent in the world. He is not dead, nor gone on a journey, nor deaf in one ear, but is here and now in the consciousness of every man and in the movement and progressive life of the world, interested in the work every man is doing, and joined to the life of humanity in so many ways that he is not remote from even the solitary heart that withdraws from its fellows. This view is the converse that prevailed among the most numerous body of religionists in New England fifty years ago, but it is, nevertheless, the view that obtains to-day among the foremost thinkers and preachers in all the country. The new truth, or the backward movement toward truth, has been, perhaps, more felt out for among the Congregationalists than among any other people; but, even in the ranks of Baptists and Methodists, there are a few forward thinkers who are not content with repeating the shibboleths of dead dogmas. The religious movement is an attempt to escape from theological limitations and reach the simpler beliefs of the historical churches. It is not an out-reaching toward science as such, but it is the approach toward a broader theology at the same time that it is an attempt to realize the idea of God immanent in the world, in the way it was understood in the earlier Greek theology. It is hard to conceive how narrowing has been the scope of what is called Latin theology since St. Augustine, in the fourth century, formulated its distinctive positions. It has been a belief in God under severe limitations, and when Calvin, the great religious genius of the reformation, undertook to improve upon St. Augustine, while retaining his dogmatic spirit, the iron entered into men's souls, and a hard, legal, formal religion, in which God was deaf and distant, has been the result.

The revolt from this religion began with the Unitarian movement about the beginning of the century with us, and a little earlier in England. It began politically with the French revolution. It began in Germany with the new conception of the Christ as framed in the mind of David Strauss. It has been expressed in the English church through the volume called "Essays and Reviews," and through the teachings of Maurice and Principal Tulloch and Vice-Chancellor Jowett. It is expressed to-day, in the full flush of power, in the writings of Principal Hatch, the successor of Canon Liddon in the University of Oxford, and speaks with constant power through the chief English periodicals. Among ourselves it has had expression mostly through the Princeton and North American Reviews. The religious press, for the main part, is too weak to be the forcible expression of anything, and is partisan in the extreme, but these influential Reviews have dared to give representative men the opportunity for free utterance of their opinions, and this growing freedom of speaking is doing more for the progress of Christianity among us, in the ways through which it is to change the multitudinous lives of men to-day, than all the close preaching of 10,000 pulpits can effect for the transformation of human character. What Dr. Newman Smyth, or Dr. G. P. Fisher, or President Porter, or Mr. Beecher, or such new writers as Prof. Allen of the Cambridge Episcopal school have to say upon the points of belief which are now in a state of transition is of the first importance, and the march of the thought of the near future is from their point of view. Dr. Mulford's "Republic of God" has not passed through five American editions within a year and a half without exerting an influence, and the breaking up of the so-called denominational creeds, because they are discovered to be good for nothing, is one of the strongest signs of hastening change. But the strange thing about this drift is that it is not toward radicalism. Not that radical thought is not just as rampant as ever; not that there are not more free-thinkers in America to-day than ever before; but the tendency of present thought, with all its intense rationalism, is to-day conservative, or, better, constructive. The Unitarian body has been denounced as destructive in its theology, but even here the constructive process is to be traced. There is evidence in the current religious writing of the last year, of a movement which is very happily expressed by Dr. Allen, in his articles in the last two issues of the Princeton Review, as "The Theological Renaissance of the Nineteenth Century." "The flood of light," says he, "which has been thrown upon the age immediately succeeding that of the apostles, has discovered to us an older theology than that of Augustine, more refined and mature in the expression of its thought, more true to the idea of Christianity as expressed in the New Testament." The idea of God presented "in this earlier Greek theology is that of a being whose presence pervades the world, and with whose essential nature man has a constitutional kinship or relation." The thought of that age was that "revelation is a living process, superintended by a divine and ever-present teacher, who speaks to men made in the divine image and constituted for the truth, while human reason, conscience and experience are the ordained channels for its reception." Revelation was, in those enlightened days, understood as a living continuous process; God was living in the forces of nature and in the courses of human history; and it was left for the reason of men to discover what God had revealed, and was constantly revealing, to the human consciousness.

Dr. Allen has drawn out the relation of our own time to this early Greek theology with great distinctness, and finds in Dr. Mulford's "Republic of God" the best modern expression of it that has yet been presented to the world. Without knowing it, working blindly but honestly, the thought of men in the different Christian denominations of the country has been working backward to this same view. Coleridge struck this note; Wordsworth struck it; Goethe struck it; Carlyle, Maurice and the author of "Ecce Homo" have struck it; and it is the most powerful thought now at work in the intellectual Christian consciousness of America. Lessing said, well nigh 100 years ago: "I can no longer be satisfied with the orthodox conception of a God out of the world;" and the "orthodox" people of these days are no better satisfied than Lessing was. The opinion has been expressed that it is the mission of one of the historical churches, the Roman or the Anglican, to gradually absorb Protestant Christianity. But such a process is neither practicable nor desirable. The problem before the Christian thinkers of our day is to restore to the Christian church, as a whole, its intelligent, constructive beliefs, its great fundamental conceptions of God and Christ and humanity, and the present "theological renaissance" is important because it has just this end in view. There is a spontaneous movement in all our religious channels, and quite as truly outside of them, for something which is vaguely called "the church of the future," and which means the intense longing for the entirety of the Christian religion. Men want a whole God, a whole Christ, an entire humanity, and, in a way which is taught neither in the Latin nor in the Puritan theology, they desire to see this result brought about. Just how it is coming no man can say; but that it is coming, that it is in the air, that it is at the moment of dawning, is just as certain as the fact that the intelligent Christian people of America are rapidly walking away from their traditional religious convictions, and beginning to entertain new thoughts of God and man and human destiny. And this movement is as positive in affirmations as are the postulates of science, and the onward tread of the multitude who are in it is like the tramp of the Roman legions on the highways of that ancient empire.

Summary of News.

Jan. 11th.—The extent of the flooded country in the middle of the Rhine districts, exclusive of the tributaries of that river, is computed at 700 square kilometers, or nearly half as large again as the Lake of Constance. The King of Bavaria has given a second 10,000 marks for the relief of his distressed subjects.

Throughout the flooded districts of Hungary there will certainly be a famine unless assistance is prompt.

A portion of the City of Graat, on the Danube, is flooded. Eleven houses were demolished.

The entire Village of Ratahaza has been washed away.

The requirements of the refugees arriving at Raab in large numbers in a half-starved condition can not possibly be met at that place, although all are doing their utmost for their relief. Soldiers are placed along the dykes to prevent the people returning to their homes over dangerous ice. The repairing of dykes has been impossible since the frost set in. The whole Rhine Valley is frozen over.

Davitt, speaking at Birkenhead last night, referred to the distress in the west of Ireland. He said it was humiliating that Ireland should stand before the world time after time as a mendicant. The people of Ireland had had enough of futile agitation and semi-insurrections. They were going to fight it out this time.

A lively correspondence is again progressing between Egan and Pigott concerning the Irish Land League fund. Pigott declares £100,000 of funds are not accounted for.

The storm at Vera Cruz, Mexico, on Saturday was very disastrous. The American steamer James A. Gary and the schooner Theresa G. and a Mexican bark were lost, but the crews were saved. The steamer had already discharged her cargo. The roofs of the railroad warehouses were carried away and much damage was done to the goods. The works for harbor improvements were completely destroyed, and many lighters and small craft wrecked. The Mexican schooner Amadita went ashore near Anton Lizardo. The crew were saved.

The new Minister of Justice in Spain, announced at the Cabinet Council that he proposed to abolish the execution of women; also the suppression of newspapers, leaving suspension the highest press penalty.

Jan. 12th.—Parliamentary returns report the depreciation in the value of the crops in Ireland for the year 1882, in consequence of the unfavorable harvest, aggregated £5,118,167, as compared with the favorable year of 1881, and $2,557,664, as compared with the average of the preceding ten years. The bulk of the loss was on the potato crop, which was £4,317,687, as compared with the year 1881, and £2,274,531, as compared with the average for the preceding ten years.

Mr. Tuke writes that his committee has again begun emigration from the most distressed districts in the west of Ireland. It is necessary to supplement the Government grant from private sources. The committee requires £5,000 to effect its object.

Davitt, at Liverpool, referring to the proposal that Land-League funds be appropriated for relief of the distress in Ireland, said those funds were forwarded from America for the removal of landlordism, which was the cause of the existing famine. When England engaged in war with a powerful foe, that perhaps would be Ireland's opportunity.

A parcel containing dynamite was posted in the Limerick Post Office, Ireland, to-day. Not being addressed, it fortunately escaped being stamped, whereby a terrific explosion was avoided.

The waters are receding in Upper Hungary. They leave fearful devastations. At Raab and Grau large volumes of water are held back in the narrow rocky channels, above the iron gates, constituting great danger to the lowlands in South Hungary. Thousands of soldiers and workmen are employed on dams. Their labors are much impeded by frost, which, however, checks the flow of water into the tributaries of the River Theiss.

Twelve German square miles of territory are submerged at Raab.

At Grau 200 houses were submerged to the roof and several hundred families are destitute. The distress is fearful. The situation defies description.

Twenty-three bodies were found in garrets of houses at Asvany.

The Danube has fallen thirty-one centimetres since Wednesday. The water has broken the dams at Mosacs and Zombor.

The Emperor William, of Germany, at his own instance has increased the contribution from the imperial fund toward the relief of the distress by the floods.

The Emperor said, in making the increase, that it was intolerable to him to think of hundreds shivering from cold and hunger while he was sitting in a warm room.

A boat has been found off the harbor of Celte, France, containing the dead bodies of four persons belonging to a French coasting steamer, which, it is believed, foundered in a storm. There were twenty-two persons on board.

A portion of the crew of the British ship, British Empire, recently burned at sea, have landed at Cochin, India.

The British ship Pride of the Ocean, from Hamburg for New York, is supposed to have been lost off Harwich; as a boat and other wreckage evidently belonging to that vessel are washing ashore on the British coast.

In the Senate to-day at Madrid, Spain, Camacho, late Minister Finance, said when he entered the Ministry the debit account of the budget was 340,000,000 pesetas; credit account, 245,000,000; debit 94,000,000. On quitting office he left a budget surplus of 6,000,000 pesetas. The payment of interest on the public debt, he said, was secured, for future budgets would balance if his successor, Cuesta, would display great vigor in the collection of taxes.

The brig Goldfinder, Capt. Stuart, from St. Domingo for Boston, was towed in the Delaware breakwater yesterday, having four men frozen to death. The Captain was frostbitten, and only one man was fit for duty. The vessel was covered with ice, and was picked up at sea, eleven miles from Henlopen.

A bill was introduced in the Assembly in Tallahassee, Florida, to-day, incorporating the Florida Ship Canal Company, contemplating the construction of a ship canal from the Atlantic to the Gulf of Mexico across the peninsula. A powerful syndicate of promoters of the measure is here. It claims to represent ample capital. The capital stock is fixed at not less than $40,000,000, nor more than $60,000,000. The bill grants the right of way through and the right to acquire public lands under the existing laws.

Jan. 14th.—Incoming ocean steamers at New York, report disasters of various kinds at sea. The steamship Neckar of the North German Lloyds, which arrived to-day from Bremen after a stormy passage, brought seven men who were rescued from the burning brig Mary Lizzie of Newfoundland in latitude 43 30 and longitude 49 40 Jan. 10th. The Mary Lizzie was bound from St. John, N. F., to Brazil with a cargo of salt fish. In a heavy storm January 4th the ship caught fire from a lamp in the fore-castle, and the flames smoldered six days, all doors and hatches being battened tightly. At last they burst forth, and by good fortune the Neckar hove in sight. The crew were completely exhausted when they were taken on board, but under the kind treatment which they received they soon began to recover their strength. The Mary Lizzie was burning in several places when she was last seen. The lost vessel was built at Charleston, England, in 1868. The Captain estimates her value at $12,000 and that of the cargo at $16,000.

The British bark Lizzie Curry, Capt. Curry, which arrived from Marseilles to-day, brought the crew of the British bark Skerryvore, Capt. Sinnott, which was abandoned off the southern coast in a sinking condition on the morning of January 11th. Capt. Sinnott states that he sailed from Havana for Boston with a cargo of sugar December 25th. In the evening of January 9th, while in the Gulf stream, a heavy gale was blowing and an extremely high sea was tossing the vessel about badly. A leak was sprung, and all hands were sent to the pumps. The following day a tremendous wave struck the stern of the bark and carried away her steering-gear. She was then unmanageable and lay in the trough of the sea, while her decks were constantly swept by huge waves. The crew were obliged to lash themselves to the pumps, where they remained all day and during the following night. The weather was very cold and the men suffered greatly from exposure.

Early in the evening of January 10th a vessel was sighted to windward, but was too far distant to observe the disabled bark. No food could be cooked, and only one man at a time could be spared to hunt up a few cold morsels and to obtain some water. As day was beginning to break January 11th, a bark was sighted to the leeward and a torch was burned to attract attention. The rescuing bark proved to be the Lizzie Curry. This vessel, however, was short of provisions, having been sixty-six days out from Marseilles. A boat went to the sinking vessel and took off some provisions, which served to supply the wants of all.

The Abyssinia, of the Guion Line, which arrived from Liverpool to-day, was a fortnight in making the passage, owing to heavy westerly gales and high seas which prevailed the whole time. From Jan. 4th to 6th a severe hurricane blew with an extremely high sea prevailing. During the twenty-four hours which ended at noon on the 5th only forty miles were traveled.

The City of Paris, of the Inman Line, which arrived from Liverpool to-day, also had a very severe voyage. On the 5th and 6th a hurricane prevailed, and at 4:30 p. m. of the latter day a heavy sea boarded the ship on the port side, and stove in the door leading to the saloon, which was flooded with water.

The Notting Hill, the pioneer vessel of the new Hill Line, anchored at quarantine late to-day after a stormy passage of twenty-one days. She left Liverpool December 24th, and encountered a series of terrific gales, with heavy head seas.

The steam bark Mendoza, Capt. Tucker, which left Bath December 4th, and for a time was supposed to have been lost, reached this port to-day. Her coal ran out soon after leaving Bath and she was driven off the coast by northwesterly gales. She finally put into St. Thomas, which port she left December 31st.

Baltimore has suffered for some time from an epidemic of small-pox, which has assumed a most serious character and has been especially fatal among children.

It is estimated that the losses by the floods in Germany will reach 80,000,000 marks. Six spectators of the floods were drowned near Oppenheim. The total number of lives lost by the flood in the vicinity of Ludwigshofen is estimated at forty-one. Stringent military measures have effectually stopped the practice of bands of men going about in boats plundering inundated houses. Two miscreants were captured near Frankenthal while trying to cut dams, with the object of creating fresh opportunities for plunder. The soldiers repaired the mischief, thus avoiding a great disaster.

The reports of the early rising of Mussulmans in the mountain district of Eastern Roumelia is confirmed. The authorities seized several cases of Martini rifles sent by the "Young Turkey Committee" at Constantinople to the committee in Philippopolis. The Turkish troops, have been clandestinely massed on the Eastern Roumelian frontier.

January 15.—Circassians, on last Sunday, attempted to kill the Turkish Sultan. A woman divulged the plot. The Albanian body guard met and defeated the Circassians in the vicinity of the Sultan's apartments. Several men were killed in the encounter.

England has practically taken possession of Egypt, to the great dissatisfaction of France, who, however, contents herself, so far, with making only wry faces.

Murder, legal and illegal, fiery harangues, mobs, government arrests, starvation, and almost unmitigated gloom, still prevail in Ireland.

The President of the court trying the anarchists in Lyons, France, has received nineteen threatening letters, several from Switzerland, Germany, and Russia. At the trial to-day Prince Krapotkine, addressing the court in his own defense, sought to show that the so-called Internationale did not exist. Anarchical ideas, he declared, were spreading despite all efforts to suppress them. If he were condemned, the result would be to attract proselytes to the cause.

The Landtag, in Germany, adopted the bill to relieve the sufferers by inundation.

The police yesterday closed the Jesuit Church at Limberg. It is reported that the rector had received anonymous information that a Socialist demonstration was intended in the church yesterday. Another version of the report is that an attempt with bombs was contemplated.

The Danube has subsided everywhere above Mahacs, on the west arm of that river, but the fugitives can not return to their homes, as the houses are destroyed or filled with ice.

Six hundred houses in Mohacs flooded have fallen in.

Severe earthquake shocks occurred at Amoy and Hong Kong, China, during the middle of December.

The schooner, Favorita, trading from Colon to various points on the coast of South America, went ashore near Point Touro and became a total wreck. Two of the crew and two passengers, one a woman, were drowned.

Baron Walzogen, the German writer, is dead.

FIRES AND RAILROAD ACCIDENTS.

Jan. 11th.—At Miami, seven miles east of Kansas City, a train was wrecked, completely destroying four cars, and wounding three persons.

Fire at Des Moines, Iowa, with a probable loss of $200,000. At Belfast, Ireland, linen factory burned, loss £30,000.

Jan. 13th.—Property to the amount of $150,000 destroyed at Des Moines. At Kankakee, Illinois, $1,200. At Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, $3,000. Boston, Massachusetts, $50,000. The terrible fire at Milwaukee, briefly reported in last Herald, seems to have resulted in the death of sixty-seven persons. The identified dead number twenty-two, and forty-five are missing. The building is reported to have been a complete fire trap, and the proprietors are charged with criminal carelessness, in not taking the necessary steps to guard the building against destruction by fire. The burial of the dead began to-day; and to the horrifying sights of charred human remains, dug from the ruins of the burned building, were added the doleful sounds of tolling church bells, heard in many parts of the city simultaneously.

Jan. 14th.—The work of exhuming the dead from under the ruins of the Newhall House in Milwaukee, is not completed, before we hear the report of another hotel horror in St. Louis. At four o'clock this morning the Planter's House of this place was visited by fire, and damaged from $15,000 to $40,000. Three of the hotel servants were suffocated, and several others injured. The guests were all saved. Fire at Neenah, Wisconsin, occasioned the loss of $160,000; the most destructive fire that ever visited this place. At Stoughton, Wisconsin, a loss by fire of $100,000. At Uxbridge, Ontario, $50,000. Toronto, Ontario, $18,000. During a performance yesterday at the circus in Berditscheff, Russian Poland, a fire broke out, and before the operators could escape, the whole structure was ablaze. Three hundred persons perished.

A serious railway accident, in which several persons were killed, occurred near Camerlata, Italy.

Jan. 15th.—The burning of the circus in Russian Poland is now reported to have resulted in the death of four hundred people. The avenues of escape were blocked, and the crowd became a seething mass of flame. Chicago smelting works burned, loss $70,000. Fire at Stoughton, Wisconsin, loss $100,000. East Springfield, Ohio, $4,000. St. Louis, Missouri, $40,000. Oshkosh, Wisconsin, $3,000. Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, $40,000. Tarrytown, New York, $100,000.

Jan. 16th.—Tweddle Hall, at Albany, N. Y., burned; loss $160,000. Loss by fire at Lawrence, Ky., $40,000. The Calumet Iron and Steel Company's loss was $175,000. Loss at Plainville, Conn., $200,000. At Spencerville, O., $30,000. Fire occurred in a tenement house in Widegate street, London, England, last night; five persons were burned to death and four were injured. Armistad's flax warehouse burned at Dundee, Scotland; loss £50,000.

The incompetency of a newly imported locomotive engineer caused a smash-up on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad yesterday morning at Fifty-ninth street, Chicago. Five men were seriously injured, and some of them will probably die.

Jan. 16th.—There are two distinct secret societies in Dublin. One belongs to the old "Head Centre" Stephens Fenian party, which advocates open warfare, and the other is known as the "Senate" or "Council," a body which advocates murder.

At the trial of Anarchists at Lyons, France, today, most of the accused declared themselves ready to recommence operations if free.

Latest advices from Berditscheff give the number of lives lost from the burning of the circus there at 268. Considering that the building was of wood, and the space between the inner and outer walls was filled with straw, the loss of life might easily have been greater.

There were eleven shocks of earthquake to-day, in the Town of Archena, Spain, causing the greatest consternation. Mass was said in the fields, it being considered dangerous to occupy a church.

The beach from Harwich to Aldeburg, England, is strewn with wreckage from the British ship Pride of the Ocean, from Hamburg for New York. A case containing dynamite was found by the coast-guard. The fact that the wreckage is in exceedingly small pieces has led to the conjecture that the loss of the vessel was caused by the explosion of dynamite. All on board were lost.

BUCHANAN, Henry Co., Tenn.,
January 3d, 1883.

Friend Herald:—As you came to us in the new garb we noticed, first, the style of capitals in heading was changed. As a change, perhaps it may be well, but we think "the old is better."

Your editorial, New Year greeting, was fraught with pleasing reminiscences, cheering encouragement, and hopeful assurance. By comparison, we note that you have grown a little in size. Another feature with which we are pleased is the note of explanation under the heading of "Communications" as follows: "Articles under this head do not necessarily receive the endorsement of the Editor; writers are responsible for their own views." This leaves the reader to judge for himself as to the merits or demerits of thoughts, principles, or theories presented, without the prestige of supposed endorsement by the Editor. Bro. Anthony is giving us some spiritual preaching just now, and if the sun will only shine once more, think it will be typical of our spiritual prosperity. 'Tis good for me to be with such an one as Bro. A. He intends to start to Mobile on the 15th inst. There is a band of dearly beloved Saints here. Bro. Thomas has been with them some time, and blessed them with his presence.

For truth,
GEORGE S. HYDE.

OMAHA, Nebraska,
January 9th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Let me congratulate you on the appearance of our "Dear Herald" in its new form and weekly appearance; and above all let me say how pleased I was, and so also every one with whom I have conversed, with the article of Bro. Tubbs, of Hackney. It is "like an apple of gold in a picture of silver;" interpretation, a good letter in the Herald. I will do all I can for it. I start to-morrow for Blair.

Yours in bonds,
E. C. BRAND.

PITTSBURG, Pennsylvania,
January 1st, 1883.

Editor Herald:—The first number of your weekly issue has reached us. Allow me to congratulate you upon its appearance. I am proud of it, (no sin in that case I trust). Its mechanical appearance is second to none. Success to the printers "hands all around," may their numbers of necessity in their case increase.

Saints to the wheel, and spread the Herald far abroad. Its object is the cause of truth, and light, and life. The harbinger of that condition of things of which the prophets sang, when "The little one should become a thousand, and the small one a strong nation, I the Lord will hasten it in its time."

Brethren, while we wait let us be engaged to do our part of the hastening.

For sixty years of the past, I have been a reader of religious periodicals. In the early part of those by gone days opinions were all that could be dispensed to "the weary and heavy laden." The sigh ascended from lips devout, "O that I had lived in those days when men spake as moved by the Holy Ghost." Let us rejoice and be glad that such days are ours, a "day of salvation."

Our condition as a branch has changed for good. I learn by letter received from Brn. Robinson and Devore, that they are given liberty and open doors. No doubt they will report. Bro. and Sr. G. T. Griffiths spent a couple of weeks with us. The Saints were refreshed by their efforts. Now gone to join Br. Robinson. I am thankful to record that my health is good. I am free from aches and pains incident to age, but not from the debilitating weakness produced by the hand of time. My strength fails. Praying for Zion's weal.

Yours in the bonds of peace,
JOSIAH ELLS.

COLUMBIAVILLE, Michigan,
January 8th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I and wife are all the Saints here at present. Bro. Edward Delong has been here laboring, and has met with good success so far, although none have been baptized. There has been lively interest exhibited here. He has been here a week, and the people did not want him to go; he is coming back again next Sabbath, if the Lord permits. Last Thursday night he preached to the people in Lavelley school house. He had a good attendance. Mr. Lavelley wanted to know about Joe Smith, as he called him, and he talked until he got the people all disgusted with him, and they took Bro. Eddy home with them. Those that were in favor of him were the most influential part of the neighborhood, and they claim that he can have the school house when ever he may come, which they hoped would be soon.

JOHN COX.

DENNISPORT, Massachusetts,
January 9th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Our quarterly conference closed yesterday, and I consider it one of the best ever held in this district. Business was done harmoniously. On Sunday great crowds assembled in Ocean Hall, to hear the preaching. Much interest manifested. And we believe great good was done.

As ever yours in bonds,

JOHN GILBERT.

GLEN EASTON, Marshal Co., W. Va.,
January 12th, 1883.

Brother Joseph:—The Sunday before Christmas, I established the work again in West Wheeling. They have not had any meetings there before for two years, but are now holding prayer meetings Wednesdays and Sundays, and rejoicing in the truth. Brother G. T. Griffiths came to my assistance on Tuesday following. He went to Belmont. I have a good interest here. Had the pleasure of baptizing one, last Friday, and two on Sunday, in the clear waters of Fish Creek, in the presence of many who knew them. In the evening spoke to about one hundred and fifty attentive listeners. Brother Griffiths has come here to assist me. We expect to reap a good harvest before we leave.

We are not without our trials common to the ministers of Christ; but the Lord has been my friend and helper in time of need. And if he is with us, Who can prevail against us? Quite a number through here have quit the use of tobacco, coffee, and snuff, and they all testify that they are benefitted by so doing. There are others who would do well to follow the example. Brother Cregg has done some preaching lately, and I hope he may be able to do more, as there is plenty of work for all, and the harvest is very ripe. It is my desire to labor so that when the harvest is over, and the laborers are called to receive their reward, I may be one of the number.

Yours as ever, in hope of the eternal life,
HIRAM ROBINSON.

WAKENDA, Ray Co., Missouri,
December 19th, 1882.

Bro Joseph Smith:—I left Independence on the 25th of July, and went the same day to Scranton, Kansas. I preached a few times while there, once on the funeral occasion of a woman who was not a member of the Church.

Scranton is about twenty-one miles south-west Topeka, the capital of Kansas, and is a coal mining region. On leaving Scranton I stopped over night with a brother, William Lawrenson, in Topeka, who would like the Saints to call on him at any time when passing that way. He lives at 392 East Sixth Street. I arrived at Clay Center, Kansas, about a hundred miles farther west, and ten miles out to the house of Bro. Mahlon Smith, the same day. The next day I started with a company of the Saints for Republic county to attend conference. We had a very good conference, and it was quite well represented, considering the distance that quite a number came. Father and Mother Landers were present, and came two days' journey in a wagon to get there. Bro. Kent was in charge of conference. The blessings of the Lord were enjoyed throughout the session. I came back with Bro. Kent. Preached once. Left there the 8th of September, and stopped at Blue Rapids one Sabbath, and preached once. Came Monday, the 11th, to Netawaka, and thence on Saturday back twenty miles to the branch at Centralia, where I preached on Sabbath forenoon. The next Sabbath forenoon and at night, I preached at the same place. The school house was full, and some standing without, at night meeting. I had good liberty and the audience was very attentive. I left there September 25, and came to the Good Intent Branch, eight miles out, where I stopped over two Sabbaths, preaching twice on the first, and three times on the last. I was at the Stewartsville and the German Branch, preaching once in each branch, and the branch near Cameron, where I preached on Sabbath forenoon and at night. I was at Far West and Center Prairie Branches, near Kingston, and preached at school house one Wednesday night. While at those branches near Kingston, I visited the historical place of Far West; was on the Temple lot, also at the place where your father's house once stood. A couple of brick chimneys standing, still mark the place. I was at the branch near Breckenridge, over one Sabbath. I left Breckenridge December 7th, and came south to this branch, which is about twenty-five miles from there. I unexpectedly found their district conference about to reassemble, as it had already commenced. I preached Sabbath forenoon. Bro. Lawna Booker presided. I had the pleasure of meeting here our aged Father and Mother Prettymans.

I am now at the house of brother and sister James Milligan. Bro. Milligan has been a resident here since the year thirty-nine. Sister Milligan was here when the Saints were driven from this country. Though quite young at the time, she can remember well the exciting scenes that so much engaged the attention of the people.

I believe it is an excellent move of the Church, in taking steps to repair the Kirtland Temple.

My desires for the good of the cause, and Zion's weal are the same as have been, and believe all that has been written concerning her future triumph and glory.

As ever, yours in gospel bonds,
C. G. LANPHEAR.

PORT SANILAC, Mich.,
January 8th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—We are strong in the faith, and still growing stronger. There is a preacher, who calls himself an evangelist, preaching here, and he started of course to pitch into the Saints, to tear them to pieces, as he said. Bro. Cornish was on hand, and came out to meet the Goliath. They started to debate, and were getting along very well. Bro. Cornish becoming too much for him, he began to sink, and he caught a straw, and there he hung, and would go no farther. Closed the debate in a regular jangle. He would not consent to have a chairman, and of course there was poor order. Since then he has been abusing the Saints very much, calling them anything but Christians.

Yours in the gospel bonds,
WM. BURCH.

SAN BERNARDINO, California,
December 20th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph:—The work in this district is moving onward, faster than in the past. The Saints seem to manifest more interest in the cause, which soon gives the work a more healthy tone, and a greater desire in the world to hear. The change is not on account of any change in our leading officials; but is due to the bread that has been cast on the waters in the past, by our late presidents, and their co-laborers, which is now being carefully and wisely nourished by our highly esteemed president, Bro. Mills. May the Lord long spare him for the work "whereunto he has called him." Our branch here is in fair working order now, under the leadership of D. Harris, a worthy young man, zealous and faithful to the cause. I have not done much preaching in the past two years; have been closely tied to temporal duties, but thanks to him who ruleth, I think I am almost free. I intend to start soon for an indefinite length of time. I have lost valuable time, which probably should have been spent in the Master's service, but Bro. Joseph, I have gained something which is worth much, more faith in God's temporal promises. I have proved them and found them true, May the Lord help all the faithful of Israel to do his will, is the earnest desire of

HIRAM L. HOLT.

DOW CITY, December 5th, 1882.

Dear Herald:—Suffer me through your columns to just tell the Church where I think I stand. In the first place, the three standard books are my defense, and I shall endeavor to take a course that these three books will not witness against me when I am brought to stand before the great Judge. I don't feel justified in saying I do not believe them, or any part of them; but to say that I understand them, or all that is in them, would be saying too much. But as my understanding is, so my works must show, and so far as I love God they do show.

Why says one, do you not love God in all things he has commanded? I wish I could say that I did in truth; but my works do not say this in all he has said, for my works are what speak, and not my lips. They may lie, but my works do not, for they speak for or against. If I say I love God and keep not his commands, I am a liar. Therefore I must come to the conclusion that words and works must agree.

I am always glad to see the word of God presented in plainness to destroy theory and fine writing, as has been shown up, (as I think), in the last Herald, or that of the 1st of December, 1882. And this is the way I would love to have my brethren serve me. Should I make blunders, I want them to cut me all up into big mouthfuls, if they can, with the word of God; and I will take it all in good humor, or I should.

The only safeguard I can see for us as a Church, is to stand for the word of God, and call those who have departed from the word back; and to say to those who have not obeyed the gospel, to come to the word. If I should say any part of the word was incorrect, I would be setting myself up as judge, and I think I would then be standing on slippery ground. But to say I understand all that is contained in the three books, would be saying too much. My works must speak, and not my lips; for lips and works do not always agree, and works have the most weight with me. The revelations that have come unto us through the successor of the Seer, seem all very plain to me; but they may not to all, and I am led to think that the Northern Illinois District, according to the minutes of their last conference, published in the Herald, do not understand the revelation received at our last General Conference as I do, or they do not believe the revelation; for that satisfied me the Chicago Branch did not belong to their District, although I thought it did before the word of the Lord came. Suffice it to say, I have received the revelations through the President of the Church, and hope to ever stand by them, and shall as long as I see no conflict with those that came through his father.

I also understand, that the law of giving is very necessary. For me to give heed to tithing; for I see by this law, if I do not observe it, I am not found worthy to abide among the children of Zion, and to avoid the rich man's torment, that is lifting up his eyes in hell, being in torment. As this is the saying of our Savior, he that imparteth not his portion of that which God has given according to the gospel, shall lift his eyes in hell, being in torment.

To avoid that warm place, I intend to ever observe this law, and hope to see the Bishop's instructions lived up to universally, by all, rich or poor, and as God is no respecter of persons, the poor must obey the law as well as the rich; for where is their promise.

This I am satisfied will meet opposition; but I understand the law to be to both rich and poor; and my experience is that the poor are more willing than the rich.

I am not going to condemn any. We can all shun the warm place, if we choose. Our works will speak.

Now let me say to the writers of the Herald, be cautious how we accuse each other of being dishonest. Some of our brethren have been too free with their lips in accusing.

Bro. Joseph:—The work moves slowly. There is no one in this part of the district laboring very extensively at present. There does not seem to be many that wish to hear the gospel. The Saints of the Liberty Branch are striving to let the light shine, by keeping unspotted from the world. We have had some dark days to pass through, and light, sweet light, begins to shine once more, and all is peace and love. We have been making some effort to build a small Church. Have about three hundred dollars signed, and we hope to be able to complete the work in the near future. It is my desire to do all that I can to spread this work, that others may have the privilege of saving themselves by obeying the perfect law. Ever praying for the prosperity of the latter day work.

I remain its well wisher,

T. J. BEATTY.

P. S.—The weekly Herald will be a welcome visitor to us.

SEDGWICK, Maine,

December 27th, 1882.

Dear Herald:—The members of the Brooksville branch of the Western Maine District, met at the house of brother Levi Grey, on Christmas afternoon, to commemorate the birth of our Savior, and to show their love for one another in giving gifts. That spruce tree was well loaded. There was a new idea, at least to us, gotten up by sister Damaris Grey, that we make a birthday present to Christ. The Saints brought in their mites. There were fourteen dollars gathered, a Christmas present for the Lord, to be sent to the Bishop for the spread of the gospel. The Lord has blest the Saints of this branch, in that they are brought nearer to each other in the bonds of love. Where there was division a year and a half ago, there is now peace and union.

One of the brethren here had a dream, which I would like to write as a testimony of this work. He dreamed he saw in the east the moon. She was larger than full moon, and very much brighter. Near her were two clusters of very bright stars, while scattered over the heavens were many moons of a pale red, or smoky color. At the same time the words of Daniel came to his mind that "none of the wicked should understand, but the wise should understand," and he began to speak by the Spirit to them he thought stood near him, of the church in the Apostles' day, of the apostasy and rise of the Church in the latter days, and the coming of Christ. The bright moon was the church, "fair as the moon, bright as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners." The clusters of stars were the first organization under Joseph, and the reorganization. The dim moons are the sectarian churches.

Let us be steadfast, Saints, and victory shall be ours.

PITTSBURGH, January 2d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—The Pioneer Sabbath School of Latter Day Saints, held its quarterly meeting, and during the said meeting the Hope question came up, which has so long been spoken of, and yet nothing was done until the last meeting, that is, concerning the pieces that have been published from time to time in the Hope, such as "Maplewood Manor," and the "Sensible Girl," and other pieces of like character, which the Saints here object to on account of novel reading and fiction which is contained in them. They do not like to give their Hopes to outsiders, and they do not like to give them to their children; for they get enough of such reading without reading it in the Hope. They would like to have a change made in this respect. Some were in favor of stopping the Hope, but finally it was settled that the clerk of said meeting write to the Editor, and request as above mentioned, and also that an item be published in the Herald to this end, to show that we object to these pieces, and that there might be some historical events relating to the Bible, Church, etc., published instead.

Yours respectfully,

F. J. REESE,

Clerk of said meeting.

THE fact that you may feel depressed sometimes because your life and the work you have in hand falls so far short of your own ideal is no reason for discouragement. The best things of which we are capable will not be perfect, even in our own eyes. Our plans are so interlinked with those of others, and bear such a relation to the Divine purpose, that one can not measure now the result of what we do. Faithfulness is the present test of service.

IN THE struggle of life the hero and the coward, the conqueror and the conquered, need sympathy equally. Often the mind which upholds others needs itself to be upheld; the honest heart that seems to be bold and true is fainting from secret sorrow, dying from some little wound which sympathy would staunch.—Sel.

REMARKS OF BISHOP G. A. BLAKESLEE, OF GALIEN, MICHIGAN,
AT THE SAINT'S CHAPEL, LAMONI,
DECEMBER 10TH, 1882.

It is with some degree of embarrassment that I appear before you, and attempt to edify you on this great and important subject with which we are all engaged. Believing as I do that we are of like faith, that we believe in the same Lord and the same God, and profess the same religion, it is with a great deal of embarrassment that I attempt to make any remarks; especially when I look around and see so many that are so much better calculated to edify you than I am, and to instruct you upon this great subject known as the temporal law of the church.

I shall not attempt to entertain you but a few moments. I may perhaps bring some few thoughts for your consideration, and then I shall give way to my brother, who will address you more particularly upon the application of the law as it is laid down in the books.

In traveling over the country, and meeting with those of like faith, we find in many places that this law to which we are about to refer, has never been taught, and we find the Saints understand but very little about it. And from the manner in which it has been practiced in the past by some, we find that many have become disheartened and disgusted with attempting to keep the law, or attempting to administer it.

We find on investigating and examining this law, that it is just as easy to keep the temporal law as it is the spiritual law, as they go hand in hand together.

We find also in many places that a spirit of lethargy seems to be hanging over the Saints, a spirit of indifference as it were; it would seem as though they were in a spirit of deep sleep. It seems as though it had gathered over those whom we look upon as being the bright lights in the church, more especially those who have charge of the different churches. So much so that we find in many places they are not holding their regular meetings. It looks to us when we see Latter Day Saints, those who have entered into a covenant with God and have obeyed the gospel as it has been given unto us in this nineteenth century, and see them sleeping and slumbering, it certainly makes us reflect, not only backward, but forward also, and think that perhaps it might be near to the coming of the Son of Man.

Still we find in many places so many openings, so many opportunities to enter in and occupy in preaching the word. I think that I never have seen since I embraced this latter day work, the time when there was such an opportunity to present the word as to-day. People are anxious to hear, and invite us to come, and open their churches and their school houses, and ask us to come and occupy them, and give unto them the bread of life. When we reflect back and learn that we have what we believe is the gospel that has been taught to the children of men in the day and age in which we live; that everlasting gospel, by which and through which we can feed the people, we can entertain them by pointing them to the way of life. It seems there should be an effort made upon the part of those who have obeyed the gospel, to unloose the hands of those who are able to, and who are willing to go and present the bread of life to those who are willing to hear.

I learn from our secretary that we have now about fifteen hundred missionaries in this Reorganized Church.

When we look around and see how few there are that are putting forth an effort to preach the gospel unto the children of men, it makes us inquire what is the cause, why are they not at it. It would be well for us to inquire whether we are keeping the law, whether we are paying what are known as our tithes and offerings. Whether or not we are sustaining the temporal authorities that you have called to administer in those things, that those who would desire to go, and who are able to go, could go forth and declare peace and glad tidings of great joy unto the children of men. We find that in this matter there is a great lack. There are but few in comparison to the number of those who belong to the Reorganization, that are doing anything for the promulgation of this work. We find that it is carried on by but a few, that are putting forth an effort to spread the gospel. Whether this lack is because they do not understand their duty, or whether the law has not been previously taught to them, or where the difficulty lies, is yet to be inquired into.

I am aware that it is a very delicate point when we come to touch upon the finances of the people. But let us inquire, Who brought the gospel to us? Who sustained the missionaries while they were preaching the gospel to us? How were they sustained, and by whom? And is it not our duty to put forth our efforts to sustain those who desire to go forth, that they may be at liberty to declare the gospel unto those who are hungering and thirst-after righteousness?

It occurs to me that there never has been a time since I have been acquainted with this latter day work, when the time was so favorable for this people to enter in and occupy as to-day. The people are anxious to hear, and we are even being defended by some who would a few years ago have shunned to defend the truth which we teach.

Now it occurs to me if we were to put forth an effort which is reasonable, which we can all do, and cast our mites into the treasury that God hath organized, that the time is near at hand, or is at hand, when every missionary that we have will have his hands loosed, and he can go forth, and numbers will be added to the fold of God. We want to remember when we take upon ourselves the gospel, and enter into a covenant to keep the commandments of God, and go forth in obedience to that, that God gives unto us his Holy Spirit, wherein we are born of the water and of the Spirit, and we should remember that it does not stop there; but there are other duties that devolve upon us from day to day. We promise God that we will keep the commandments as they are made known unto us from day to day, and from time to time. That we will live by every word that proceedeth out of his mouth. Well, we can not do that by simply discharging our duties as Saints spiritually, but we must put forth our efforts temporally, and try to lay up of our substance that we may pay into the store house of God, that the work may roll forth, that we may through our means help to redeem others.

It is not simply the man that goes forth and declares the word that does all the preaching. It is those who sustain him; it is those who impart of their means to support and sustain him while abroad in the ministry, that receive a portion of the reward, when the day comes that he whose right it is to reign comes to reign, and to reckon up among men here upon the earth; it is those who impart of their substance; it is those who sustain the ministers; it is those who labor in this way that will receive a portion of the reward.

We find that the greater portion of the means that is put into the store-house of the Lord to-day, comes from those who have laid it up little by little, by their needle, and by their washing, and by their labors they have thrown in their little mites, until they could impart a little, and then they would forward it on to the store-house of the Lord, that it might be used for the spread of the work, and to take care of the poor of God's people, as the Lord has declared it should be. Now if we would all do that, there would be plenty for the support of the ministry.

It occurs to me, that if we would adopt throughout the different parts of the country, the plan that we have in our little branch in Michigan, that it would afford the necessary support to the work.

A few years ago Bro. Rogers said to me while I was acting as his agent, Bro. Blakeslee, why is it that your district is not doing anything for the spread of the work? It had not occurred to me but what we were doing something. When I came to reflect and inquire of myself, and look into the matter, I found we were doing nothing for the spread of this cause and for the sustaining of the ministry. I said to our people, let us turn over a new leaf. Let us the first Sabbath in every month bring in our tithes and our offerings into the store-house of the Lord. Let us try him, and see if he will not bless us. Let us see if he will not only multiply unto us, spiritual, but temporal blessings, that we may loosen the hands of those who desire to go forth, and that we may put forth our efforts, that we may be the means of winning souls unto God and his Christ. The result of it was this. We adopted that plan there, and finally had it adopted throughout the entire district. We went from branch to branch, and told them how it worked in our branch. On the first Sabbath of every month we assemble ourselves together, and when we have partaken of the sacrament, and have gotten through our testimonies, and the meeting is closed, then they come forth and hand in their morsels, their little offerings. And if your minds will reflect back to the year 1881, and you look at the district of Michigan and Northern Indiana, you will see by the little morsels that were put in, by the five cents, and the ten cents, and the twenty-five cents, you will see that it amounted, if my memory serves me rightly, to $696.61, from these little mites that were thrown in by the different individuals. More than sustained that district, and we had some to help others with.

Now it occurs to me that if we will adopt some such plan as that, and hand in our free-will offerings from time to time, that God will bless us, and there will be plenty in the store-house of God to send out these fifteen hundred missionaries as I am informed by our Secretary we now have. And they would be permitted to go forth, and the gospel would roll forth, and souls would be won unto the kingdom of God and his Christ. I am satisfied that we could do it. I am satisfied that there would be plenty.

But I find so many, though I have travelled over but a small portion of this territory, yet I find so many doing nothing. When we have the pleasure of presenting these ideas to them, they say we are going to labor, we are going to do something. They seem to wake up, and seem to realize the situation they stand in. They fear, perhaps, that when God shall come, when he shall come whose right it is to reign, to reckon among men upon the earth, that the blood of their neighbors may be found stained upon their garments, because they have withheld their substance from aiding to loosen the hands of those who are called to go forth to labor in the ministry.

Now my mind is, that when a man takes upon him the priesthood after the order of Melchisedec, he covenants by receiving that, he will go forth and declare the gospel as it is written. Yea, that he will declare it unto the children of men. But how can they go forth except their needs are supplied? How can they be released unless we come up and pay our tithes and offerings, as God has laid down in his law? That we shall pay in the interest thereof, that we shall tithe ourselves as God has told us, my brethren, and then the Lord will bless us as he has promised, yea, that there would not be room enough to contain it.

I feel interested in this cause, though I feel that I am not capable of presenting it properly. Yet I feel interested in it, and I feel interested in the salvation of man, and I desire that every son and daughter of Adam should be made acquainted with the gospel of Jesus Christ, with the plan of salvation, with this everlasting gospel that God hath taught unto us in this the nineteenth century.

I desire that they may be made acquainted with the plan that he has given unto us, through which our hearts have been made to rejoice in the Holy One of Israel. Why should we not put forth our efforts, that others may know by an experimental knowledge, and that they with us may be made to rejoice. That Zion may be redeemed, and that he may have a people that shall be pure in heart. A people zealous of good works, who shall be found keeping his commandments, and living by every word that proceedeth out of his mouth, when he shall come to make up his jewels here on earth among men; that he may find those with oil in their lamps, and with their lamps trimmed and burning, waiting for the Bridegroom when he comes. Let us see to it that we discharge our duties with an eye single to his glory, not only spiritually, but for the liberation of those who are called to preach the gospel, that their hands may be loosed. Not only lifting our voices in praise and adoration, but that we may labor with our hands and put forth our efforts by every means to loosen the hands of these men, that they may go forth, and that this country may be dotted with Latter Day Saints, for miles and miles around.

God is willing to-day to bless his people. He is prepared to bless his people in accordance with their obedience to his law, and their diligence in keeping his commandments. If they are diligent in obeying him he will bless them. I am satisfied that the time is coming and is now, when, if we will put forth our efforts to unloose the hands of our ministers, that God will bless his people as he has not in days that have gone by. He has so turned and overturned the hearts of the children of men, that they are defending us to-day with astonishment.

My brethren, why should we not step in and occupy while it is called to-day, that they with us may be made to rejoice in the Holy One of Israel, when that day comes that he shall make up his jewels among men upon the earth. That our garments may be clean from the blood of this generation. That it may not be said that we have robbed God. That we have withheld our tithes and offerings from his store-house, that those who would go forth, who would declare the gospel unto the children of men, that they have been withheld in consequence of their little ones and their families, it may be.

The Savior said, "He that will not forsake father, mother, wife and children, houses and lands, is not worthy of me." And it is said in another place, "He that neglects his own household is worse than an infidel, and has already denied the faith." These would seem perhaps contradictory here. No, verily no, they are not. God has provided means in his law, and set them apart, by which their hands are to be loosed. He has said how they should go forth, and he has provided in his church a way, and he has set in his church a law, and pointed out the means of administering that law, by which they can be provided for, and their hands loosed that they might go forth.

Now we come before you and ask you to consider this matter, and take it into deep consideration, and that you may realise your duty, and commence from this time on, if you have not done so in the past, to hand into the storehouse of God your means, that the treasury may be replenished, and that the work may go forth; that Zion may be redeemed, and that the people of God may inherit the land that God hath provided for them, in righteousness; for none but the pure in heart shall inherit the earth, and none but the pure in heart shall gather to Zion. None but the pure in heart shall be redeemed in that day when he shall come to make up his jewels here on earth.

Let us see to it, my brethren, that we keep these commandments, and that we put forth from this time henceforth, our endeavors, and that we realise our duties, and that we may live by every word that proceedeth out of his mouth; that we may discharge our duties from day to day, with an eye single to the glory of God, that God may bless us, and that he may sustain us and uphold us, my brethren, that we may receive the blessings that God has laid up in store for his people.

While down at Kirtland this last fall, I inquired of those who had lived there during the building of that temple, and my heart was led out with wonder and amazement, when I came to realize the history of the time when that house was built. When I looked upon that great edifice that cost $75,000, and was informed that when they commenced to build that house there were but thirty families that belonged to the church there, and after they commenced that house it never stopped from that time until it was completed, and they received the endowment that God had promised unto them. I inquired how is it? I was told that they were all poor, none rich among them, and I was informed by those who live there to-day, who lived there when that house was built, and who have remained there ever since, and who knew the history of it. I was informed by these that they would all work, both men and women, and when they would get to where it seemed they could not go any farther, Joseph would call them together, and they would have a prayer meeting, and they would lay the matter before God, and God would open the way, and means would be brought in by which the work would roll forth. Those Saints assembled themselves together as touching one thing, and as the old sister related it to me, it seemed to me as though the heavens were brought to bear in their behalf, and men were brought in whereby they got the means, and the work rolled on, and rolled on, and rolled on.

Now my friends, here are the Latter Day Saints, numbering, I presume I am safe in saying, thirty thousand souls who belong to this Reorganized Church to-day, and we can not keep our ministers in the field. Why is it? It is because we are not keeping the commandments of God.

Let us unite together, and live by every word of God. Let us live so that we can enjoy the Spirit of God in our hearts, and then we will love everybody and hate nobody. If we will only do this, our bodies will become fit temples for the indwelling of the holy Spirit of God. Then we will come before God united, and if we do that as touching one thing, nothing will stand before us, that it is reasonable and that it is right that we should have. God will make bare his arm in behalf of his people as he did back yonder.

It made my heart rejoice in the Holy One of Israel to think that I was numbered with the people of God; that I was numbered with a people of such faith, and that had accomplished such a marvelous work and a wonder, and so few of them. It made me look forth with a great deal of gratitude, to realize the work that we are engaged. That it was the work of God indeed. God has said that his work should roll forth, and if we do not roll it forth, God will remove us, and plant those who will carry it on, that the children of men who are perishing for the bread of life, that they may be fed, that they may have the privilege of coming into the kingdom of God.

Now let us see to it my friends, that we wake up from that lethargy that is languishing over us, and realize our duty, and let us realize our privileges, and live up to them, that we may receive those blessings that are laid up in store for the righteous and the good. Methinks if we put into practice the law, and live as they lived back yonder when they were building that temple that we have been trying to repair in the last few weeks, that this work would roll forth, and this people instead of being jarring and jangling as we find it in many places, would be united.

Whenever we find division, let us search our hearts, and let us go before God and see if there is not within us something that is wrong. Let us see if we have the Spirit of God dwelling within our hearts. My brethren, let us love everybody and hate nobody. And when we so love, our bodies will become fit temples for the indwelling of the Spirit of God. God dwells in such individuals, and he blesses them, and he inspires them to do that which is right. He enlightens their understandings, and brings past things to their remembrance, and shows unto them things to come to pass in the day and age in which we live, which causes their hearts to rejoice in God. I rejoice that to-night I have the privilege of standing in defense of this great and marvelous work, and stating it to the children of men. I know it is the gospel of Christ. I know it is the power of God unto salvation to every one who believes and obeys, and keeps the commandments of God. But the eternal life lies at the end of the race, and nothing short of that will satisfy our desires, that is to receive eternal life in the kingdom of our God and his Christ.

Now I do not desire to detain you longer, but will give way for my brother, who will present before you the law as it is laid down in the books, that you may see that it is easy to be kept. There is not an individual, neither a son or daughter, who has named the name of Christ, and has been born of the water and of the Spirit of God, but what can comply with that law. It is easy when it is understood. God requires nothing but what is reasonable. He requires nothing from any man but what he can live up to.

If we will adopt this law and live up to it, I feel to say to you to-night that God will bless you; he will sustain you, and he will multiply unto you, not only spiritual blessings, but temporal blessings also. Unitedly keep the commandments of God. Live day by day as though each day was the last. As though in case you should be called to-morrow to try the realities of another world, you can say: Come Lord Jesus,—come Lord I am ready. That you are prepared to pass through and receive that enjoyment that God has laid up for the righteous. Why the idea of death, the idea of passing from this world is not a terror to a saint of God, one who has embraced the gospel of Jesus Christ, and has been born of the water and of the Spirit of Christ. It is no terror to him, because he knows in whom he believes. He knows in whom he trusts. He knows that he will have eternal life, and that he will live when the day comes that the Archangel shall sound his trump, and the dead in Christ, who are the saints of God, shall rise first, and they shall be caught up to meet him together with those who shall live upon the earth when he shall come to make up his jewels among men. When he comes, they will be "changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye."

As I heard it remarked, we believe the time is not far distant when he will come and he will not tarry, but he will bring his reward to every one who is found worthy to receive it.

Let us see to it that when we are weighed in the balance we are not found wanting, but that we have been keeping the law of God both spiritual and temporal, and that we are prepared to enter into that joy and that rest that is unspeakable and full of glory, and which fadeth not away, which is prepared for the righteous, the noble, and the good. May God bless you in my prayer. Amen.

THE HOUR AND THE WORK.

God has set his hand again his Kingdom to prepare, Time's fullness, now is ushered in, it's signs are everywhere.
Dread desolation stalks abroad, with flood and fire and sword,
Grim pestilence sweeps through the world, the servant of the Lord.
Earthquakes shake the solid globe, all nature seems enraged,
And dreadful witness bears that God hath hurled his fiery gaze
Of battle, to the world of sin, in these the latter days.
For "truth" has fallen in the streets, and confidence has fled;
The sacred name of God is mock'd by those his hand has fed.
The wicked rule, the people mourn, corruption spreads abroad,
The masses do his counsels spurn, and thus reject their Lord.
Assassination's cruel hands, are reeking with the blood
Of innocence in every land, triumphant o'er the good;
And every heart is filled with dread of some impending doom,
Priest and people, ruler and ruled, share in the dismal gloom;
And craven souls who blench with fear, seek refuge in the grave,
As though to hide their foul career in dark oblivion's shade.
Nor are these all the signs that loom before the startled gaze.
Angels from heaven to earth have come, and mortals stand amazed.
"Fear God, and worship him," they cry, "who made the heavenly worlds,—
"The sea, the firmament on high, and earth's fair form did mould.
"Give glory to him while you live; obey his great command."
"Your sins though many he'll forgive, and shield you by his hand."
The gospel, precious sign of love, "Good will and peace to man," Christ's harbinger, comes from above, salvation's sacred plan.
Who shall bear the message forth? Where are the heralds brave
To carry it to all the earth, a sin crush'd world to save,
As witnesses that "God is love," "His word forever sure,
"In truth and justice he doth move," "his mercy doth endure,
"Though all may change, he changeth not," eternal ages through,
"His purpose he hath not forgot," but "proves his promise true?"
Gold is dross, pearls are dust, the richest gems will fade—
To nothingness before the prize that God in heaven hath laid
For those whose hearts, by love divine, are mov'd to bear the cross,
And spread the glad news abroad, to man defiled and lost.
As stars of glory shine around the great eternal throne.
So they shall shine, who humbly strive to make his glories known.
Redemption from the toils of sin, and its dread wages, death,

And life eternal they shall gain, through love's all conquering faith.
Our ears have heard the "joyful sound," Our hearts have been made glad,
We know his love, his peace, his truth; how then can we be sad?
And shall we now withhold the light? Shall we the jewel hide,
While millions grope in darkest night, with no kind hand to guide?
Say, shall we shrink from duty's path, while sin destroys our race,— Quail at the monster's fiendish wrath, and thus our lives disgrace—
Leaving humanity to writhe in the dread coils of sin,
Or calmly fold our arms at ease, amid the battle's din?
If so, "our love is colder far, than polar ice can be,"
And "our professions meaner are, than sin's dark mystery."
Ye chosen messengers of truth, the royal banner raise;
Of love divine give constant proof, and tell his power to save.
Proclaim aloud to old and young, that Christ the Lord will come,
With myriads of his ransomed throng to reign on earth their home.
Yes, he who died, now comes to reign, triumphant o'er the earth,
Sin to destroy, and banish pain, at nature's second birth.
Yes, tell the glad, the joyful news, of that sweet reign of peace,
Which angels sung when Christ was born to give the world release;
Tell the gospel's saving power, for all who will-obey,
Of Christ, the gracious rock and tower, on which our souls can stay
While thunders roll and tempests lower, and kingdoms melt away.
Tell them the Bridegroom comes to claim his ready, waiting bride,
Clad in habiliments of flame, and on the clouds doth ride.
He comes to judge the righteous poor, and give the meek their due,
And sweep oppressors from the earth; and tyrants proud subdue.
He comes! the King of glory comes! let every heart prepare
To meet him and be worthy then, his blissful reign to share.
Go forth and shrink not, though the world, your humble efforts scorn,
Or fiendish darts at you be hurl'd, and cause your hearts to mourn;
The valliant heart shall never lack for aid in time of need,
For God will foil each base attack, and be your strength indeed.
Trust in his word, it can not fail, his promise like his throne,
Is founded on eternal truth, nor can be overthrown.
His angels will before you go, his presence will remain,
To cheer your hearts, and make you know, his promise is not vain.
Then let us gird our armor on, and trusting in his power,
Work till the sacred task is done in this "eleventh hour."

ADAM.

"ADAM sinned that man might be," is the caption of an article in Herald for August 1st. The writer says he does not know where the passage is. I read in Book of Mormon, pages 57, 58:

"Now, behold, if Adam had not transgressed, he would not have fallen; but he would have remained in the garden of Eden. And all things which were created must have remained in the same state which they were, after they were created; and they must have remained forever; and had no end. And they would have had no children; wherefore they would have remained in a state of innocence, having no joy, for they knew no misery; doing no good, for they knew no sin. But behold, all things have been done in the wisdom of him who knoweth all things. Adam fell, that men might be, and men are, that they might have joy."

From the foregoing we learn that "Adam fell (sinned) that man might be." Did God intend that Adam should sin, in order that he might manifest his love the better, by providing a lamb for the slaughter, for the redemption of man? Could not God have raised up a spiritual, or a holy people, without the sin of Adam, and at the same time manifest his love, his glory, and his power? I believe that he could. That God could have raised up a "spiritual people," none will deny; but in doing so, he would have destroyed the agency of man; and if man's agency is destroyed, law must also be destroyed, and if law be destroyed, both happiness and misery are destroyed. We find by reading the fourth verse of the third chapter of Genesis, (I. T.):

"That Satan rebelled against God, and sought to destroy the agency of man, and for that cause was he cast out."

Again, in the 6th chapter and 57th verse, we find:

"And the Lord spake unto Adam, saying, Inasmuch as thy children are conceived in sin, even so, when they begin to grow up, sin conceiveth in their hearts, and they taste the bitter, that they may know to prize the good."

From the foregoing passages we learn: 1st, That it was the fall that caused the human race to have an existence in this state of probation; 2d, That it is the fall and redemption of man that is to bring honor and glory to God; 3d, It is the fall that enabled man to discern between good and evil. Hence, be rewarded for the good, or punished for the evil he shall have done. Therefore, I believe that God both foreknew it and designed it; yet I do not believe as some do, that God sent us here without our knowledge or consent; but on the contrary, I believe it an agreement that we make ere we come to this tabernacle, that we will do a certain work, as in the case of Jeremiah. (Jer. 1:5, I. T.; also, Mal. 3:1).

"Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me."

Here we find that a man is sent to do a particular work, and in the case of Jeremiah, he is ordained to do that work. In John's testimony, 1:5, 6:

"There was a man sent from God, whose name was John. The same came into the world for a witness, to bear witness of the light, to bear record of the gospel through the son, unto all, that through him men might believe."

Here are three instances in which men knew, before they came here, what they were to do. Well, as I am digressing somewhat from the point at issue, I will return to it. The writer again states that the purposes of God have been frustrated many, many times, by his creatures. To believe that, according to my view of the matter, is to believe that Satan and man have power co-equal with, if not greater than God; yet if I did believe that God's plan, or plans, had at any time since the creation been frustrated, I could not teach that the Jews would return to their own land, or that the Saints would be gathered to Zion; for there is nothing that I read of in the Scriptures that seems to be more impracticable, according to human reason. But thanks be to his name, the things which his prophets spake by the Holy Ghost are true; for the Comforter is the spirit of truth: and a trial of his word has enabled me to realize, in part, the promises of God, and causes me to look forward to the time when Zion will be redeemed, Israel gathered home, and the Saints shout their joyful hosanna's to God and the Lamb; and with Jesus as their king and lawgiver, reign a thousand years with him. O, glorious thought!

"The old argument, that God foreknew that man would sin, is worn out with me."

Here the brother has, I think, impaled himself upon the horn of a dilemma, that it will require some effort to extricate himself from.

"For all that dwell upon the earth shall worship him, whose names are not written in the book of life of the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world."—Rev. 13: 8.

The foundation of the earth must have been laid before it was finished and pronounced "very good;" and it was before man sinned, that the "only begotten" appeared before the Father, and said:

"Father, thy will be done, and the glory be thine forever."—Gen. 3: 3.

God certainly knew that man would sin, or he would not for one moment entertained such propositions as we find in the second and third verses of the third chapter of Genesis. Hence I believe if Mr. Wesley did say that "Adam sinned that man might be," he hit pretty close to the truth; and for us to oppose a saying, or a doctrine, simply because some sectarian teaches it, may involve us in some serious blunders. I believe we should oppose error wherever found. As I am not a very good writer, I will close this little article, not because there is no more to be said, but I might weary your patience, and waste much time myself.

A. J. CATO.

If all men were perfect, what a monotonous world this would be. The few that are perfect now would have nobody to find fault with or laugh at.

THE following is from the Christian Commonwealth, published in London, England; and might have been written by an Elder of the Church.

"BORN OF THE SPIRIT AND OF THE SPIRIT."

To the Editors of The Christian Commonwealth. DEAR SIRS,—In your issue of November 2d, 1882, "A Wesleyan Minister" comes to the defense of what most people with a reasonable amount of reverence for the Holy Scriptures must consider a shameful travesty, of the Savior's words to Nicodemus, by which He is made to say virtually, "Except a man be born of the Spirit and of the Spirit he can not enter into the Kingdom of God." That this deliberate attempt at mutilation of the sacred text is made in the interest of the Papal substitute for Baptism, needs no proof whatever. Consistency demands that there should be at least some show of agreement between the teaching of the Christ and the "practice of nearly the whole of Christendom," and as the substitute for Baptism which "nearly the whole of Christendom" brought with it from Rome has nothing in it which in the remotest sense resembles a birth of water, some change is considered necessary to give the appearance of harmony. But as the ministers themselves of "nearly the whole of Christendom" have received only the substitute, it, of course, can not be given up, for that would invalidate their ministry! The only alternative is to put the plain and solemn words of the Son of God into the theological press, and compel them to yield a meaning in harmony with the "practice of nearly the whole of Christendom." And when "A Wesleyan Minister" attempts this sacrilegious work, and is mildly rebuked for it, he assumes the air of injured innocence, and begs the sympathy of the editors of the Christian Commonwealth! Does he deserve that sympathy? or is it not rather the duty of all who rejoice in the freedom of an open Bible to be careful that our freedom shall not degenerate into licentiousness? Please notice carefully what it is "A Wesleyan Minister" asks the liberty of teaching through the columns of one of the most influential religious papers of our times, and at the same time claim exemption from the reproach of irreverence. Jesus said to Nicodemus: "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the Kingdom of God."

Now, "A Wesleyan Minister" tells us, in effect, that the words, "of water and" are not necessary in the text in order to convey to us the Savior's meaning; that if these words are omitted we will have the exact sense! The passage would then read: "Except a man be born of the Spirit he can not enter into the kingdom of God." "A Wesleyan Minister" may squirm a little over this, but it will help him to see himself as others see him. It is precisely what his criticism means. Three words in the Savior's answer to Nicodemus are deliberately struck out of the text, so as to make the remainder harmonize with the practice of "nearly the whole of Christendom!" Would it not be better to reform the "practice" and let the text alone? Had the Savior wished to say simply: "Except a man be born of the Spirit," he could have done so: but he chose to say: "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit." Now if these two expressions are precisely equivalent in meaning, will not "A Wesleyan Minister" tell us what was gained by the Savior's using the longer rather than the shorter form? Did he, in a private conversation with an earnest truth seeker, indulge in the rhythmical parallelism of the Hebrew poets, purposely using the term "water" for the pleasure of being able to explain in the same breath that he did not mean "water?" Thus, needlessly confusing the mind of Nicodemus and then blaming him for not understanding! Credat Judæus Appella! Non ego!

The notion that in Hebrew parallelism the latter clause is intended to furnish an "explanation" of the former clause, is too ridiculous to merit any notice.

But even if it could be shown that the word "and" has in some other place, and in some unusual form of speech, the meaning of "even," "that is," &c., would that determine its meaning here, in the text in hand? It might have an unusual meaning somewhere else and still retain its usual significance here. The principle of interpretation which allows an unusual meaning to be forced upon a word when its usual meaning makes good sense, is an exceedingly vicious one. By its use the sappers and miners of God's Word can render uncertain the meaning of any word or sentence in the Bible. Let us try a few instances of "parallelism" which have precisely the same claim to be classed with the parallelism of the Hebrew prophets as the one which "A Wesleyan Minister" is so anxious to put into that category.

"He brought forth bread, that is, wine."

"Hurt not the corn, that is, the wine."

"A land flowing with milk, that is, with honey."

"He that came by water, that is, by blood."

These out of a hundred instances that might be given, are sufficient to shew that the proposed parallelism would not only transmute "water" into "blood," and "milk" into "honey," and "bread" into "wine," but "heaven" becomes "earth," "earth" becomes "hell," "life" becomes "death," while love, joy, truth, purity, faith, pardon, are words that have lost their settled meaning, and may mean anything or nothing as the interpreter (?) may will! Let us place two notable passages side by side:—

"Born of water, that is, of the Spirit."

"Baptize with the Holy Ghost, that is, with fire."

Thus, while one man is figuring away the birth of water from one passage, another may be figuring away the baptism of the Holy Ghost from another passage! and by the time both partisans are through we shall have little of the Bible left.

But "A Wesleyan Minister" says that in the case of the dying thief, he has found an insuperable objection to the position that the Savior taught that a man must be baptized—born of water—in order to enter into the Kingdom of God. Will it relieve his anxiety if some one shall inform him that the thief, though saved, never did enter into the Kingdom of God? John the Baptist declared that the Kingdom (Church) was at hand, but he died without entering it, and all the disciples of John and of Jesus who died before the day of Pentecost, died outside the Kingdom, even though they were already prepared for entrance by a birth of water and Spirit. If all these could be saved without entering the Kingdom, could not the Savior save the thief without "breaking His word?"—Very truly,

M. D. TODD.

"HOLY BIBLE."

ONE summer's eve a few years ago, I was on one of the steamers plying between New York and Fall River; and not wishing to retire to rest, I thought I would spend the night in reading and writing. I entered the grand saloon, and found on the stand the "Holy Scriptures." On opening the sacred volume some way had written the following lines:—

"Here lies this holy book;
No soul with it communes;
While scores of people round me sit,
With 'Heralds' and 'Tribunes.'"

I thought then that the present observation would at one time be a subject for the Herald or Hope. And how true it has been verified. And I think now, as I thought then, What do the American people read?

Samuel Taylor Coleridge said, that "a picture is something between a thought and a thing. It is not a thought, because it is visible to the eye. It is not a thing, because beyond a combination of lights, lines, and colors, it has no existence." A newspaper is something between a voice and a book. It is not a voice, because it speaks inaudibly. It is not a book, because it is a mere sheet or leaf, which is scattered broadcast every day all over the land, and laid down, and its contents pondered over and forgotten. He that writes a book studies long, and weighs, and writes, and rewrites, and lays up his work till the whole is finished. He prints it, and if he sells a thousand copies, he is called a successful author. Many buy, and do not read; many read half, and never finish; and many read and do not understand. And the majority of books are alike in their sphere; their fate is the shelf, dust and oblivion.

But not so with the inspired scriptures! The Bible asserts and proves its own inspiration. It was "in divers manners" that God communicated truth, such as, first:—by direct infusions of ideas, 2 Samuel 23:2, 3; Matthew 10:20; Gallatians 1:11, 12. Second: by audible voices; Exodus 19:16, 19; Numbers 7:8, 9; Daniel 4:31; Acts 9:4; 2 Peter 1:17, 18. Third: by celestial messengers; Genesis 18:1, 2; Luke 1:11, 19; Revelations 1:13. Fourth: dreams and visions; Genesis 15:1; Numbers 12:6; Joel 2:28; Matthew 2:12, 13; Acts 10:10; 2 Corinthians 12:1, 4. Fifth: by gifts and blessings; 1 Corinthians 12:1, 11; 14:26; John 14:24; Acts 2:3; Matthew 28:19, 20; Mark 16:16. Sixth: by apostles and prophets; 1 Corinthians 12:28; Matthew 10:1; Acts 6:4; Ephesians 4:11; 2:20; Titus 1:5.

Even bad men, as Balaam, owned that a divine power controlled their tongues and pens; while good men, as Saint Paul ascribed their writings to the agency of the Holy Spirit.

The proof that the Bible is inspired, are the supernatural character of its truth; the harmony, unity, and purity of those truths; the prophecies always in fulfillment, though given by frail men and centuries apart; the miracles wrought and the people delivered, in attestation of its divine origin.

We must learn to distinguish between what is revealed, and what is merely detailed in the Bible; such as the unwise speeches of Job's friends, and the wicked sayings of Satan.

"Human truths are but pools;
Divine truths are fountains."

All inspired truths come from God. As Bro. Joseph the martyr, once said: "Everything that is good and leads to good, comes from God, for God is good; and everything that is evil and leads to evil, comes from the evil one; for he is the father of all lies."

Ecclesiastical tradition and human dictation, are deadly enemies to all God's truth.

The best and wisest and happiest of men and women, are those who have loved the Bible. The nations that teach, believe, and obey God's word are the most intelligent, enlightened, and prosperous.

Moses commanded the children of Israel concerning God's words, saying: "Thou shalt teach them diligently unto thy children, and shalt talk of them when thou sittest in thy house, and when thou walkest by the way."

"No book is like the Bible.
For childhood, youth and age,
Our duty, plain and simple,
We find on every page;
It came by inspiration;
A light to guide our way,
A voice from Him who gave it,
Reproving when we stray.

CHORUS:

No book is like the Bible,
The blessed book we love,
The pilgrims chart of glory,
It leads to God above.

It tells of man's creation,
His sad primeval fall;
It tells of man's redemption,
Thro' Christ, who died for all;
In sacred words of wisdom
It bids us watch and pray,
And early come to Jesus,
The Life, the Truth, the Way.

O, let us love the Bible,
And praise it more and more;
Our life is like a shadow,
Our days will soon be o'er;
But if we closely follow
The counsel God has given,
We then may hope with angels
To sing His praise in heaven."

"I am of the opinion that the Bible contains more true sublimity, more exquisite beauty, more pure morality, more important history, and finer strains of poetry and eloquence, than can be collected from all other books, in whatever age or language they may have been written."—Sir William Jones.

HEALTH AND TALENT.—It is no exaggeration to say that health is a large ingredient in what the world calls talent. A man without it may be a giant in intellect, but his deeds will be the deeds of a dwarf. On the contrary, let him have a quick circulation, a good digestion, the bulk, thews and sinews of a man, and he will set failure at defiance. A man has good reason to think himself well off in the lottery of life if he draws the prize of a healthy stomach without a mind rather than the prize of a fine intellect with a crazy stomach. But, of the two, a weak mind in a herculean frame is better than a giant mind with a crazy constitution. A pound of energy with an ounce of talent will achieve greater results than a pound of talent with an ounce of energy.

The first qualities wanted in all who deal with the education of children—patience, self-control, and a youthful heart that remembers its own early days.

Miscellaneous.

SOUTHERN NEBRASKA DISTRICT.

To the Presidents of the Branches of the Southern Nebraska District, Greeting:—Under instruction of a resolution of our late quarterly conference, I herewith request you, to immediately collect means and forward the same to the Bishop's Agent, J. W. Waldsmith, Nebraska City, Nebraska, for the purpose of bearing the expense of our delegate to the General Conference, to convene at Kirtland, Ohio, April 6th, 1883. I urge that there shall be more interest taken in the matter, and a greater effort put forth than there has been in the past.

I also appeal to the scattered members of the district that they too will aid in the financial needs of the district. And while upon the subject of finance permit me to say, there are a great many calls in this district for the preaching of the word, and we come short in responding to the calls, and the greatest cause of our inability to supply ministers is because of the lack of means for the support of those who are willing to travel in the interest of the gospel. I feel the weight and responsibility of the work in my charge, and I therefore make bold to ask of all the Saints, as God hath blessed you in store, that you contribute of the same, with a cheerful spirit and a liberal hand. That you may so act that God will richly bless you, both temporally and spiritually, that we may have the mutual satisfaction of seeing the work prosper and increase in this district, is the prayer of your humble servant in Christ, LEVI ANTHONY, District President.

Our darling is gone! God alone knoweth why we are thus bereaved. Funeral services by Elder J. B. Price.

DAVISON.—At Scott's Bay, Nova Scotia, November 27th, 1882, of heart disease, Elder George N. Davison, aged 45 years. Bro. Davison was baptized in San Benito, California, in 1873, ordained an Elder in 1874; came to Nova Scotia, his home, in 1876. He was earnest and zealous in the great latter day work, never missing an opportunity of bearing testimony of its truth. For six years he stood apparently alone in defense of the gospel of Christ in his native land, and rejoiced when, as the result of his labors, five of his kinfolds obeyed the truth; and just before his departure, hearing of the prosperity of the work in another part of the Province, he expressed this thought: "I can say like Simeon of old, 'Now, Lord, lettest thou thy servant depart in peace; for I see thy work prospering in this land, and that it will not cease, until the honest hearted will be brought out and prepared to meet the Lord at his coming.'" He was much respected for his integrity and christian virtues. He leaves a wife, five children, and many relatives and friends to mourn his departure. God grant that we all may so live, by obedience to the gospel of Christ, as to meet him in the realms of bliss.

NORTHCUTT.—At Plano, Illinois, December 27th, 1882, Julia Arena, daughter of Archibald and Eliza Northcutt, aged 2 years, 6 months, 19 days. She was taken sick on Monday evening with vomiting, and a fever set in which took her away the next evening. There was a smile on her face as she lay in death, as though she had passed away in peace, which she did, such having been alive in Christ from the foundation of the world. Funeral services at the house by Elder Wentworth Vickery.

JONES.—At her residence near Springerton, Illinois, November 9th, 1882, of dropsy, Sr. Louisa S. Jones, aged 67 years, 7 months, 25 days. Native of N. C., and was baptized by G. H. Hilliard, August 16th, 1874.

TAYLOR.—At her residence near Springerton, Illinois, October 18th, 1882, of old age and the effects of a broken limb, Sr. Magdaline C. Taylor, aged 80 years, 8 months, and 22 days. She was baptized about nine years ago, by G. H. Hilliard, and died in the faith of the latter day work.

MATTHEWS.—At Syracuse, Ohio, October 29th, 1882, Sr. Catharine, wife of Bro. David Matthews, aged 65 years, 9 months, and 29 days. Born at Cardigan, in Cardiganshire, South Wales, January 31st, 1817. Emigrated to America in 1857, arriving in August of the same year. The deceased had been afflicted for the last three years of her life with paralytic strokes, but was a woman of great faith, and always blessed when administered to. She was a faithful wife and a loving mother. She left an aged companion and four sons and three daughters to mourn her loss. All except one, are members of the Church. Funeral services, by Elder David Hopkins; text Romans 8:1.

LIFE'S MASQUERADE.

If we can only read each other's hearts we should be kinder to each other. If we knew the woes, and bitterness, and physical annoyances of our neighbors, we should make allowances for them which we do not now. We go about masked, uttering stereotyped sentiments, hiding our heart-pangs and our heartaches as carefully as we can; and yet we wonder that others do not discover them by intuition. We cover our best feelings from the light; we do not so conceal our resentments and our dislikes, of which we are prone to be proud. Often two people sit close together with "I love you" in either heart, and neither knows it. Each thinks "I could be fond, but what is the use of wasting fondness on one who does not care for it?" and so they part and go their ways alone. Life is a masquerade at which few unmask, even to their very dearest; and though there is need of much masking, it would be well if we dared show plainly our real faces from birth to death, for then some few at least would truly love each other.

BUSINESS FAILURES.

Bradstreet's furnishes the following figures relative to the business disasters of the year 1882. These figures lack the returns of the last two days of the year, but are nearly enough complete for the purpose of comparison. The total number of failures for the year is 7,574, against 5,929 last year and 4,350 in 1880. The total general liabilities are $93,509,936, and the total actual assets $47,267,674. There is an increase of about $17,000,000 in liabilities and $12,000,000 in assets, so that the percentage of the latter to the former is 50 per cent, as against 47 per cent last year. The showing of percentage of assets to liabilities is better in the United States than in Canada, for in the Dominion the percentage this year was only 49, as against 51 in 1881.

Divided by sections, the failures for the year are as follows: New England States, 1,193; Middle States, 1,752; Southern States, 1,532; Western States, 2,340; Pacific States, 616; Territories, 118. While the total number of failures in the Western States was the greatest, the total liabilities were $10,000,000 less than in the Middle States—$20,710,488, as against $30,636,022—and the assets $4,000,000 less—$10,556,840, as against $14,879,664. By quarters of the year the failures were: in the first quarter, 2,146; in the second, 1,503; in the third, 1,658; and in the fourth, 2,267.

The record of Canada and the provinces for the year was 642 failures, with liabilities of $8,131,285, and assets of $3,944,380. In speaking of the division by quarters of the total number of failures Bradstreet's says: "It will be noted that the number of trade disasters was exceptionally large in both the first and last quarters of the year, when the blunders of the twelvemonth have had time to culminate. The reaction that has been going on throughout the country must be regarded as a sign of returning health. There is now good reason for the belief that the country is returning, by gradual steps rather than by a violent movement, to a point where the swelling tide of trade will again bring a new excess of disasters.

When January 1st, or settlement-day, shall have been passed, we will be better able to judge as to the healthfulness of the conditions under which the new year must be entered upon. But while uncertainty abounds the outlook at the present writing can not be regarded as unfavorable. The percentages of assets to liabilities, based in part upon actual returns and upon well-advised estimates, is greater than for 1881. This may be regarded as evidence that the unsoundness of trade is not so great as has been feared.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THERE are in the Church Library the following works against Mormonism:—"Mormonism, its Leaders and Designs," by John Hyde, Jr. "Female Life among the Mormons." And "History of Mormonism," by E. D. Howe. We have also in our own library: "Rocky Mountain Saints," by Stenhouse; "The Mormon Country," by Codman; "New America," by J. Hepworth Dixon. In addition, we have as a loan from Bro. I. L. Rogers, a compilation of evidences concerning the troubles in Missouri, and Hunt's "Mormon War" sent us by Bro. John McKenzie of Jefferson City, Missouri. Any of the brethren who may have other works written against Mormonism will confer a favor by sending us word what they are, and the price; or whether they will loan us, or give them to the Church Library. We wish to get a full set of works of the kind.

A Mr. Luke Sharp writes us from Byesville, Guernsey county, Ohio, that he is anxious that some one of the Elders shall visit them at that place. He represents that there is an interest there which he has fostered, though not yet a member of the church, by a constant advocacy of the doctrine. Mr. Sharp has been a subscriber to the HERALD for several years, and from this has informed himself of the views of the church and its doctrines. He states that there is an outspoken Christian minister in Byesville, who is willing to exchange opinions with an Elder if one will visit them. That is good. No Christian should fear to offer to and receive from another reasons for the hope that men should have and hold for the life to come.

Read Bro. W. H. Kelley's letter in this issue. The position that he takes in regard to the sacrament and those who should receive it at the hands of and with the Church, we concur in as sound, rational and scriptural. If no man can see the kingdom unless he has been baptized, as Jesus affirmed to Nicodemus, then certainly no one can partake worthily who does not "discern (see) the Lord's Body," the Church.

Bro. William H. Deam, of the Herald Office, with the remaining members of his father's family, have lately lost by death their sister Luella, who departed this life in Blanchardsville, Wisconsin, at the home of her brother H. E. Deam, aged twenty-four years, two months and two days. Of her the local paper states: "Medical skill and the offices of kindness bestowed by kind hearts and willing hands were unavailing, save to soothe her last days on earth. The funeral took place on the 28th, the services being conducted by Rev. C. E. Eldred in a most impressive manner, in the presence of the largest congregation which ever assembled in Blanchardville on a similar occasion. Luella, you have gone to your long home, but your memory shall ever be green in our heart. Rest weary soul! Rest in peace."

Bro. George P. Lambert, of Adrian, Illinois, brother to Brn. Joseph and Daniel, visited Lamoni, during the week ending January 23d, leaving for his home on that day. He is the son of Elder Richard Lambert, of Rock Creek, one of the old time saints, and now a veteran in the Reorganization. He has a family of six sons and six daughters all living. Every one of this numerous family of sisters has six brothers and five sisters, while the sons have five brothers and six sisters each—and if that is not a host tell us where to find one.

Bro. Richard Ellis is hereby authorized to act as our agent in New South Wales, to solicit subscriptions for HERALD, receive collections for papers and books, and remit to the office. Bro. James W. Gillen makes the suggestion that this appointment will meet the approval of the Saints in Sydney and other places in the province.

Bro. O. A. Rickey, of North Platte, wrote January 15th, that the health of self and family was good. He is thinking to remove to Lamoni, or some other point east of the Missouri, in time; but first intends to secure, if he can, a competency, that all things may be "prepared before" him; in which preparation he devoutly believes. He is interested in a fire escape called the Thomas Fire Escape. This they are about to introduce to the notice of the large cities. If it should prove to be a success it will be a benefit to those places where great fires have caused loss of life this winter. We wish Bro. Rickey success.

Bro. Seth M. Bass and family of Lawrence, Michigan, and Bro. Thomas Bell and family, of Davis City, Iowa, are among the late arrivals of citizens at Lamoni.

Elder Cornelius Mills of Pittsfield, Illinois, fell December 30th last and broke a leg above the knee. The Pittsfield, Democratic Herald, of January 17th, states: "Mr. Cornelius Mills' broken leg, which at first was thought would not heal on account of Mr. Mills' age, is slowly mending, and he will regain the partial use of it." We regret to learn of this painful accident to Bro. Mills, so long and so faithfully has he upheld the banner of the cross in Pike county, where he lives.

Bro. Walter A. Head, of Creston, Iowa, visited Lamoni, last week. He reports great need for a preacher up there. Big town, big country but no Latter Day Saint preachers.

Bro. Charles A. Hall, living at Dubuque, Iowa, is anxious that some one of the army of Elders shall visit him. He is willing to care for one during a stay in the city; and will aid one in the conduct of meetings there, if an opening is made.

Bro. George Hicklin, of Bevier, Missouri, but traveling in the Canadian ministry wrote from Egremont, January 9th. He writes quite encouragingly

Bro. J. H. Lake had succeeded in getting an excellent feeling into the London, Ontario, Branch; so writes brother Evans, at a late date.

Bro. J. R. Lambert was at his post in Chicago, and it appears is well liked.

Bro. Z. H. Gurley was at New York last advices. Had begun labor there. Prospects fair. He had done a good work at Hornerstown, New Jersey. Bro. Joseph A. Stewart, of Philadelphia was with him.

We learn by card from Independence that Bro. A. H. Smith is in Grundy county, Missouri.

Bro. E. L. Kelley was at St. Joseph, Missouri, at last advices.

Bro. W. H. Kelley was at Chicago, then Galien, then Coldwater at last hearing from him.

Bro. E. Banta and Bro. E. Leaf were elected Justices of the Peace for Fayette Township, Decatur county, Iowa, last Fall election. Both qualified, but Bro. Banta has resigned, resignation to take effect, February 2d next.

Bro. Orlin B. Thomas, and Eli M. Wildermuth are teaching schools west, and Bro. Joseph A. Upton, east of Lamoni.

TATTLING, tale bearing and backbiting are some of the weapons that the adversary uses to destroy the work of God. Whenever these are manifest the observer may be sure that there has been a good work done which must be overthrown, if possible, by this arch enemy of mankind. And it is passing strange that a Saint, or any one trying to be good will permit himself to be drawn into the service of this enemy, and sow the poisonous tares that grow into confusion and strife.

Moral courage, the disposition and ability to say to these scandal mongers, "Get thee behind me, Satan," are worth untold wealth in their force to prevent the distress and disaster that follow in the footsteps of the "accuser of the brethren."

Many and many a branch, organized with the fairest prospects, has been ruined, and the influence of the Church and Eldership spoiled, by the habit of reiterating what one has heard disparaging of brother or sister, priest or layman, which if it had never been retold, would have died of its own natural depravity. No one should stop to hear tales of the kind, if any other should offer to tell them. He who hears unauthorized stories damaging to the character of another, without rebuke or reproof is partially criminal; and he who retells what is so heard, if listened to is wholly guilty. There are in the Church those to whom a member may go and make a proper complaint, the same as there are those officers of the law in the land whose duty it is to hear the complaints of the injured and summon offenders to answer for their misdoing.

Besides this, the persons in the Church who thus persist in telling and retelling scandalous stories injurious to the reputation of brother or sister, are utterly disregarding of the plain provision—"If thy brother offend thee tell it to him alone." It is not until this has been done and failed entirely in its effect, that any one offended has the commonest right of the law to tell it to another, and then the law says it must be to the Elders; the proper ones to hear and set the machinery for adjustment in motion.

Actions in themselves innocent, words spoken without thought, mistakes of hearing and understanding are all of them bruited from mouth to ear until the identity of story and authorship are both lost. The tale told assumes its legitimate existence and goes upon its devilish errand with the glee of a demon, and woe be to him who attempts to stay its progress. It is at once assumed that he is in the interest of the guilty party; that he wishes to hide the crimes of his co-laborer, or fellow church man. The stories have been accepted as conclusively proven and the influence of the assailed one is gone, no matter how innocent he may have been. No chance officially has been offered him to meet the unseen enemy that has been at work against him. No friendly voice has checked the slanderer, or the peddler of evil tidings. No kindly disposed one has come to him and telling him of his sin, has striven to lead him to the right. The one who has been sinned against has not been to him and calling him to the account provided for in the good Savior's teaching, given an opportunity for the confession and reparation demanded. But with a cruel disregard to the blessed privilege of winning back a brother, has gone from place to place telling everywhere to eager listeners the story of wrong, or surmising of evil. This devil's work has been done, over and over, until scarcely a heart bent on doing good to his fellow but what is burdened with sadness, and pained beyond expression to see the ruin wrought.

Why not stop it, brethren all, by kindly but firmly refusing to listen to, or circulate an evil tale about another.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Charles Derry wrote from Magnolia, Iowa, January 3d:

I have received the Herald for January 1st, and am more than pleased with its beautiful type, its arrangement, and especially the notice under the heading "Communications." I thank you for it. While I would not be so illiberal as to close the avenues of thought, or stop the freedom of speech, I heartily endorse the views of the English brother, "Tubb," respecting the contradictory views taught in this, the organ of the Church. Now we can point to our friends to the evidence that while we do not wish to gag any, we do not necessarily endorse all they say or write.

Ans.—No.

Ques.—Please explain 1 Timothy 5: 10, to-wit: "If she have washed the saints' feet?" How is this scripture to be reconciled with that ordinance belonging to the Twelve only?

Ans.—Read the passage "If she have washed the Saints clothes," as it is in the Inspired Translation, and the difficulty is removed at once. Even if she did wash the feet of some of the saints, she did not do it as administering an ordinance.

THE Deseret (Utah) Evening News of December 21st, has the following:

THE SENATE BILL DUPLICATED.

It is not surprising that in Mr. Cassidy, of Nevada, District Attorney Von Zile should find a willing hand to present in the House of Representatives the same bill which he induced Senator Edmunds to introduce in the Upper House, for further legislation against the "Mormons." Mr. Cassidy's course at the previous session prepared the minds of the people of Utah for any step on his part that would be to their disfavor, and so extreme a measure ought to find an extremist as its champion. Mr. Cassidy's career will do to watch, and it will be found that his decadence, in company with the long list of officially defunct "Mormon"-eaters who have gone into shame and oblivion, is only a question of a little time. There is nothing more certain than that public men who misrepresent and fight against the people called Latter-day Saints invariably go down to darkness or disgrace. Their doom is marked by the decree of Providence.

Threats are poor weapons to fight against defeat sure and certain; and predictions of wrath, are bad weapons to use—for "like chickens they come home to roost."

THE Maryville, Missouri, Republican, thus takes Mr. R. G. Ingersoll in hand; and justly condemns that gentleman's methods.

Col. Robert Ingersoll is the prince of skeptics. He is the "plumed knight" of the infidel world, and gaily rides into the lists amid the plaudits of admiring thousands. He strikes the shield of the Christian, not with the blunt end of his lance, but with sharp point, until "it rings again."

The challenge is to mortal combat. He strikes not at the follies or excesses of Christianity, but at the very foundations of religion. He is not the ablest free-thinker, but he is the most daring and renowned free-thinker of the age. As an orator he stands preeminent. There is but one Ingersoll on the platform.

We went to St. Joseph, last week, to hear Col. Ingersoll tell us what we had to do to be saved. The opera house was crowded from pit to gallery.

We went expecting to hear an orator. We heard one.

We went expecting to hear many grand, noble things. We heard them.

We went expecting to hear many bad, very bad ideas. We were not disappointed.

Ingersoll is a curious mixture of good and evil. He is a large, fine looking man, and the picture of health and good living. He takes his audience by storm, and they surrender without firing a gun. He moves them to tears and to laughter as he would move the "titularies" of the chess board.

Ingersoll does not argue. He adopts the same method that Alexander did in untying the Gordian knot. His epigrammatic sentences cut like a Damascus blade, and his sarcasm pierces like a dagger. With him the most sacred subjects are puppets made to dance, to excite the laughter of his audience.

While denouncing fanaticism, Col. Ingersoll is himself a fanatic of the broadest type. He is also as self-righteous as any Pharisee of old. If he were a church member he would belong to the holiness sect, and with the utmost assurance call upon the world to look at him—a man without sin. He would also, without mercy, send to hell by the first express train, every one who did not believe just as he did. In asking fairness and justice, he seems to be the last one willing to grant these things. He looks upon but one side of a question, and utterly refuses to look farther. He sees but one thing when he examines the Christian religion, and that is the crimes that have been committed in its name. To all other results he is utterly blind.

He would be just as justifiable in turning the pages of the history of the world, and pointing out every excess, every murder committed in the name of civil liberty, and saying: "There is your boasted liberty. See the crime she has committed! See the agony she has caused! See the oceans of blood that have been shed in her name, and then talk to me of the beauties of liberty. It is this talk of liberty that arrays man against man, brother against brother and the citizen against his country, and the very idea of civil liberty ought to be swept from the earth."

Just as consistent, just as logical would Col. Ingersoll be in this argument as he is in his philippics against the Christian religion.

Against bigotry and superstition, against narrow creeds and religious despotism, Ingersoll uttered language none too severe, and if it awakens the different churches to greater charity, and leads them to look more to man's daily walk than to loud professions of orthodox faith, he will do a great good. But the trouble with Ingersoll is, it is not only these imperfections he would sweep away but with them the very foundations of the whole Christian faith, and proposes nothing in return.

Right here in St. Joseph, the very night of his lecture, he could have seen sorrow enough to have cast a shadow over all the remaining days of his life, if he be so exceedingly sympathetic as he would have us believe. He would have found hundreds that, unlike him, would not have thanked God that they been born in the world. He would have found fair women poisoned by the leprous touch of lust, sunk in degradation and shame. He would have found hearts breaking in agony, eyes blinded with weeping cheeks scorched with burning tears. He would have found the guilty holding high carnival over the bleeding body of prostrated innocence. Gaunt poverty would have stared at him through the pinched features of half-starved children, and broken-hearted wives would have pointed in grim despair at their homes, and asked him of the joys of this world for them.

What does Col. Ingersoll's philosophy of fine clothes, and paintings, and statuary, and music do for these despairing souls? It is in these homes of sin, of misery, of despair, that many of the poor despised ministers of Christ, for whom Col. Ingersoll has nothing but sneers, are found doing the work of their humble Master. With tender touch they wipe away the burning tears; they raise the drooping hands toward heaven; into the despairing heart they pour words of consolation.

For one night's lecture Ingersoll received $1,000. Half of that sum would be a perfect Godsend to many of these faithful ministers for a whole year's work, and yet Col. Ingersoll would deprive them even of that. For shame!

And after this iconoclast has torn down all the religious belief, what would he place in its stead? Music, painting, statuary, love of home. Can folly be farther? Is Christianity opposed to music, to statuary, painting, to love? Is the home of the infidel happier than the home of the Christian? Is the mother who holds in her happy arms her darling babe, and as she presses it to her thrilling bosom and gazes into its eyes, and thinks she sees looking out from their depths the immortal soul of one destined to live forever and forever, less a mother than one who thinks she beholds her child a clod of earth, destined to perish, as it were, in a breath?

If fine houses, and paintings, and clothes, bring goodness and happiness, how good and happy Vanderbilt and Gould and the millionaires of earth must be. But, alas, it is a fact well known, that great riches too often canker the affections and harden the heart.

We are not sorry we heard Col. Ingersoll. He uttered many ennobling thoughts and said many things calculated to make man better. But he said oh! so many things that had better not have been said.

His beauty of language is hard to excel. The following metaphor is one of the most beautiful we ever heard:

"Life is a golden bridge spanning the river of time; one end resting on mists and the other on eternal shadows."

In speaking of the thought that this life might end all, he says:

"Next to eternal joy, next to being forever with those we love, and those who have loved us, next to this is to be wrapped in the dreamless drapery of eternal death. Upon the shadowy shore of death the sea of trouble casts no wave. Eyes that have been curtained by the everlasting dark will never know again the touch of tears. Lips that have been touched by the eternal silence will never utter another word of grief. Hearts of dust do not break. The dead do not weep."

Can any language be more exquisitely touching, tender, and sad? Every man to a greater or less extent is born a skeptic. The most devout of Christians often die in the darksome dungeons of Doubting Castle. The key of faith alone can open its heavy doors. Blessed is he who has this key, for it shall let him into the glorious sunlight of God's truth, God's love, God's mercy.

COLDWATER, Michigan,

January 16th, 1883.

President J. Smith, Dear Brother:—Your letter of the 14th inst., reached me at Chicago, where I spent the greater part of last week. Bro. Lambert is fairly in the work there, and seems to take in the situation; he is liked by all with whom I conversed. I spent two Sabbaths at Galien, and chatted to the people. An interest is still manifest in the cause there. Also, good results are reported from the efforts of a Sisters Social. The constitution forbids tattling, the meetings are opened with prayer, after which comes singing, reading, recitations, or conversation upon any topic of importance, or of general interest.

I do not know but what some took exceptions to some of the sentiments expressed in my last discourse delivered there, and consider me just a little iron-clad, selfish, and illiberal, for taking the ground that members of the Church only, are entitled to partake of the sacrament when administered in the Church. In our view, the Church of Christ stands alone in her authority and right to administer. She never compromises principle to please, and those who have been constituted members by due forms of law, are all the ones who are entitled to her privileges, or have the right to eat and drink at the Lord's table, when spread by the Church. Some of the brethren think otherwise, and have been in the habit of extending the sacrament to members of other denominations when present at the time of its administration. To this we decidedly objected as not being sound doctrine; and will take our chances of being justly called uncharitable and illiberal.

I find, by the way, that this supposed to be liberal and charitable sentiment is growing in the church; and has been, and is, practiced in a number of places. It must be remembered that the Saints risk their all in affirming that they represent the Church of Jesus Christ, and by His administrative authority, it is emphatically the Church. All are invited, as on Pentecost day to come to it. It compromises with none; but simply invites all to come to Christ through the due forms of law, administered by his authority. Yet the Church of Christ is the most liberal of all the churches. But how? says some one. Other denominations administer the sacrament to members of every persuasion, and will receive it from the Saints; how then, is she the most charitable? That which you call charity is only seeming, feigned liberality.

Suppose that members of every creed, and those belonging to none, should come to the Saints' Church and join with them in partaking of the sacrament, in order to manifest their exceeding charity for others, especially the Saints' belief—is it not agoing to have it otherwise than there are many roads to bliss—it would certainly have a beautiful outward appearance. But follow those same parties elsewhere, and listen to something after the following:—"I partook of the sacrament with those self-styled Saints. I don't believe a thing in their religion. It is a fraud and a humbug, and only believed in by silly dupes. I would not have one of them preach in our church for any thing. It would just be awful. Why, we would not think of allowing one of them to preach from one of our pulpits, they would defile the house. Their religion was gotten up by old Joe Smith, the biggest old fraud that ever lived; yet they believe that he was inspired, and that miracles are performed in this age. I believe the whole system is a fraud and an invention and ought to be put down by force." Where then would be the charitable side?

With me it savors nothing of charity, or sense, or even good breeding, for a man to sit down and eat and drink with me, and then go away and say that he does not believe one word in my religion; but rather believes it a gigantic fraud. That he "simply ate and drank with me to please and flatter me,—that he thought my religion just as good as his, that our differences of faith were nothing—were not worth contending about; after all he was satisfied the whole thing was a fraud and a delusion, and that I would finally go to hell with all who believe as I do. However, he thought it well to be charitable, and make believe that I was right." This looks too much like man-pleasing and hypocrisy.

Paul says: "Do I seek to please men? for if I yet pleased men, I should not be the servant of Christ." Says James, 4: 4, "The friendship of the world is enmity with God. Whosoever, therefore, will be a friend of the world is the enemy of God."

Of course this is to be understood in the sense that a man is not to sacrifice truth and right to purchase the friendship of the world; and not that it is not well to have the friendship of the world when it can be secured without the sacrifice of truth. To be charitable towards people is to tell them the truth, though it is not just what they wish to hear. In religion, be honest and frank; speak and act your convictions. To dissemble and feign that people are all right in their religious beliefs, or that they are even as well grounded as you are, when you are certain that they are not, is not only uncharitable, but has a decided look of cowardice, or hypocrisy, or both.

But wherein is the faith of the Saints the most liberal and tolerant of any system extant? In this. She finds no fault with people for having an individual opinion. She does not in any sense persecute people who honestly differ from her. She believes in proving all things. She joins with all socially; extends the friendly and neighborly hand to all; speaks with candor and declares for freedom of thought and enquiry. She declares for a free pulpit and free press. Holds that good comes from God. Does not proscribe or persecute, but fairly, respectfully and honestly differs, and but claims the right to give her reasons. She believes that there are honest men and women in ever system of faith, and those not belonging to any religious denomination, who will be judged and rewarded according to their works. She does not hold that all who honestly differ from her will be consigned to eternal burnings, ad infinitum; but that all will be passed upon in the light of their opportunities and real worth. She investigates the claims of every one, reasons with all, and quarrels with none; possesses courage and charity, and unswervingly declares, in the face of all opposition, what she holds to be the truth. Though differing, she invites all into her churches to express their opinions freely; and when done, says we honestly differ, but there is no cause for quarrel, ostracism, stigma, or blame. Come again; bring your wife and friends and we will talk over matters freely and fairly. Come in time for tea. Be what you are until convinced that there is a wiser, better, and more consistent course.

To the writer, this is the consistent, liberal, and charitable side; and looks far better than sitting down and eating and drinking where there is no unity of sentiment, theory or feeling, with a make believe that all is right, when it is but an outward show—not real.

But we are asked, does not the forty-sixth section of Book of Doctrine and Covenants say, "Ye shall not cast any out of your sacrament meetings, who is earnestly seeking the kingdom?" Yes; but it does not say you shall administer the sacrament to them. The next paragraph says, "you shall not cast those who are earnestly seeking the kingdom out of your confirmation meetings," yet none would take the ground that they should be confirmed previous to being baptized. The simple meaning is, those not of the Church, who are earnestly investigating, and so desire, may be present during the sacrament and confirmation services; but are not to participate in either. Jesus says, "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed." A tacit belief is not enough; it requires faith and works to entitle one to membership in the household of faith. A beautiful picture that, to see a Latter Day Saint, a Methodist, Baptist, Disciple, Presbyterian, Congregationalist, Quaker, Episcopalian, Lutheran, Catholic, Swedenborger, &c., all seated around the communion table, eating and drinking, with an air of confidence that each thought the other system of faith just as good as his, when there is wide, radical and uncompromising differences between them. Yet, each is feigning to the other, that he believes they are all members of the same household; all sailing in the same boat, and will finally achieve the same victory—just to be charitable.

Amen said, and they separate, to build up their respective theories, filled with so much charity that they will scarcely keep each others company, refuse the use of their churches to one another, unless it is some of the most powerful, from sheer policy; while some even harbor and cultivate the spirit of persecution, envy and hate, until another sacrament day, when all meet to put on charity, by eating and drinking together again, and pass another hour in make-believe; notwithstanding their envy, malice, strifes, oppositions, persecutions and unneighborly conduct manifest every where since their last meeting. While they eat and drink, each thinks of the other as an heretic and unbeliever, but the broad mantle of charity is so completely feigned and pulled over that the deformities of the faiths are literally obscured. It won't do. There is no real charity about it. Better be square and honest.

Appearances are one thing, and reality another. Those who refuse to comply with the rules of the house, can not be members of the household. They should eat and drink at their own tables—take the risks of their own faiths and habits, until willing to bring forth fruits meet for repentance and obey the commandments.

But does not Paul say, "let a man examine himself, and so let him eat." True. But that letter is expressly directed to the "Church of God;" the "sanctified in Christ"—"called to be Saints," &c.; in whom "the testimony of Christ was confirmed." Coupled with this was the injunction, "that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no division among you, but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and the same judgment." No sects and parties here. But the following: "Ye are the temple of the living God; wherefore come out from among them," &c. But this sacrament subject has diverted my mind from letter writing to a semi-sermonizing so will have to write my letter upon a separate sheet.

W. H. KELLEY.

LEWISTOWN, Illinois,

January 3d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I wish to express my sorrow through the columns of the Herald for offending certain ones in the article on Adam's fall. And I thank the sister who referred me to the passage in the Book of Mormon concerning the same. Bro. Patterson had the honor of first calling my attention to it.

But permit me to ask in a general way: Were the men who had to do with the Book of Mormon always under the influence of the Spirit of God? Is all the writing in that book inspired? I am a believer in the Book of Mormon, and believe the gospel to be set forth therein with plainness and simplicity; but I verily believe that some spoke after the manner of men, honestly too. I find it written also in the inspired translation. But so few of the Elders use it in public, that it seems as though fear had something to do with the not using it.

Now, I want all to understand, Bro. Tubb included, that I am not intending to breed discord or create schism in the rank and file. But to bring out for and against whatever may be true or false. And if the truth is to suffer from investigation, the quicker the better. I have my views as to the Godhead. But if some brother differs with me on that matter, I am not going to wear crape, but give him the privilege which I ask for myself.

The only place recorded in the Book of Mormon touching the matter in hand, is on pages 64 and 65, old edition, and the language is made use of by Lehi. He begins by saying: "I, Lehi, according to the things which are written, must needs suppose." Whoever heard of a man under the influence of God's Spirit, supposing anything, and giving it, (the supposition), as the word of God? I never did, neither will I take a supposition for a "thus saith the Lord." It is out of my line of business. Lehi supposes that an angel fell from Heaven from what he has read, and that because he fell, he became miserable, and was desirous to have all others become miserable. I suppose from reading both translations, that God intended peace and harmony; but Satan intended discord and trouble. And now, after all has been said that can be for or against the article, and though it may offend when no offence was intended, no brother or sister need expect to see a complete seeing "eye to eye" yet a while. But disagreements, large or small, will be the order of the day for some time yet. But that does not hinder brethren and sisters from praying for a union, or themselves from living so as to increase the principle, or rather to assist in bringing about the state of affairs they desire. I, for one, hope to see the day when union of hearts and sentiments may supercede the opposite, in the Church at least.

Bro. Stafford has preached the gospel all over this county, or nearly so. Elders of the Church as well as Saints have heard him. Not one yet has raised a voice against his preaching as not being the doctrines of the Reorganization. Tried to be at peace with all men, and pay his honest debts, to Gentile and Jew. But knowing his weaknesses, and sometimes follies, he does not claim perfection, nor anything like it. He sees through a glass darkly, and expects to do so, till the triumphant Church swallows up the Church militant.

With all good wishes for every brother and sister; far and near.

I am your brother in the gospel,
T. F. STAFFORD.

WIRT, Jefferson county, Indiana,
January 10th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—When last I wrote to you, I was to fill an appointment at Brooksbury. I went, spoke three times to quite good crowds. Three doctors were in attendance, one professor, also our Senator elect from this county. We spoke on the word Mormonism, showing from the Book of Mormon what Mormonism proper was. That Brighamism was as far from Mormonism as light is from darkness. The effort was blessed in removing prejudice. Some there want to hear more. The work is opening on all sides. The call is, come and preach to us; but we can spend but little time in the ministry on account of our circumstances, but desire to do all we can. Our little conference was a good one. We were strengthened and edified by the instructions of Brn. Blakeslee, Kelley and Bond. Come again, brethren. Bro. Scott our missionary, has labored some in this vicinity; we assisted him, and spoke once. I believe his effort did good here; he is not as noisy as some, but he is well loaded with wisdom and prudence and general information. Will move the cause wherever he goes.

I am yours for right,
V. D. BAGGERLY.

DES MOINES, Iowa,
January 17th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Bro. R. Etzenhouser and self went to Mahaska county on December 22d. Delivered in all nine discourses to full houses of attentive listeners. On the 27th ult., I received by mail, a document containing expression of moral filth, and cowardly threats. The contents purported to express the "sentiments of the neighborhood," and stated that "although we have not signed our names, it is not because we are afraid to have them made public, but will give them in full on application." (?) The letter was read publicly, except an obscene portion, and names were publicly demanded by us; but no one arose as evidence to its origin. I was threatened a "severe cowhiding, in the presence of my audience," and it was to be "beautifully done!" The document was a vile reproach upon our American liberty, a disgrace to Iowa's proud banner. We felt to use Iowa's motto: "Our liberties we prize, and our rights we will maintain!" The remarks following the obscene portion were: "Joseph, the ladies heartily endorse these sentiments." I told them that no lady in that community had so far lost sight of the true dignity, and bright honor, and virtues of noble womanhood, as to be guilty of stooping to the depths of such degraded expression of language, born of the slums of vice. That every young man owed it to the virtuous character of his sister; every husband owed it to the honor of his wife, to defend their characters against such assaults on their names and honor; a libel on their character. Any man who threatened an assault on a person, his physical inferior, was a vile coward, a wretch in human form! Moreover, I would test the matter, and ascertain if our liberty as ministers could be so trampled on, a gag placed on our throats in the face of the strong arm of law, that guaranteed to every citizen of the United States "life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness;" "free speech, free press, liberty of conscience."

It is the first document of the kind I have received in my twelve years of ministerial labor. The neighborhood was indignant, because it was not their expression; the man on whom suspicion strongly rests, has never attended a meeting at Olivet.

"We wiped our weeping eyes, (?)
And bid farewell—to every fear."

We feel to exclaim:

"O, Olivet! Dear, honored spot,
The fame of thy cowardice shall ne'er be forgot."

I left Olivet on the 30th ult. Bro. R. Etzenhouser remaining over Sunday. We commenced services here on December 31st, and continued them until eve of 14th inst. We had social service every afternoon, preaching in the evening. Our social services were blessed by unmistakable evidence of the Holy Spirit's presence; It would—

"Bring to mind things that were past,
And things to come unfold."

Many hearts were made glad, and Saints were encouraged. All our meetings were well attended, and proved a decided success; to say otherwise would be to offer an indignity to our Blessed Master, who so kindly conferred His cheering favors. Some were immersed in the baptism of the Saints' church. Bro. R. Etzenhouser has preceded me to Adell.

These partings are oftentimes sad, when we say: "Good by"—"good by." What strange memories cluster about that word, good by. Memories mingled with smiles and fears, joy and sadness, happiness and grief. Tears deluge the word. Darkness covers it. Clapsed hands pronounce a strange benediction upon it. What heart-felt anguish throngs the word when spoken by the dying, and to the dying! When uttered by the expiring saint,—good by is but the request for angel fingers to unlock the golden gates of everlasting glory, and immortal life, that the redeemed may enter into rest supreme, mid the unspeakable happiness of the blessed. When thinking about our mortal existence, I seem to believe that every soul is a world, where the storms of troubled thought and angry words are heard and felt; where the calm of peace is beheld; the balmy breezes of spiritual meditation are enjoyed; where the sunshine of joy and happiness sheds its genial rays; where clouds of doubt and fear are seen; where the dew of divine blessings comes to refreshen every part thereof; where the bellowing earthquakes of rage and fierceness are witnessed; where the cyclones of hatred and malice sweep their besom of destruction, tearing away every bond of charity, every flavor of kindness. Better still, it is a world where a temple of God may be reared, where angels may come, where heavenly music may be heard, and God's power be seen, felt and enjoyed.

I wish every member in the church would endorse the following language by a living attest:

"All our desire is to the Lord,
To know and do his holy word;
To live in joy and sweet accord
Till Jesus comes in glory."

Moreover:

"We'll daily strive to watch and pray,
To keep within the narrow way.
In this the trying latter day,
Till Jesus comes in glory."

Pray for us.

Yours,

J. F. McDOWELL.

EGERMONT, Ont., Canada,
January 9th, 1883.

Mr. Joseph Smith, Dear Bro:—Since I wrote you from Corinth, I have labored some in Cul-loden, London, Usborne, and in this part. I came to this place on Wednesday, January 3d, and met Bro. Willard J. Smith, from Michigan, and J. A. McIntosh. Good work is onward in this part, and I find that there can be many openings made for preaching. We expect to baptize two or three tomorrow. We are having preaching or prayer and testimony meeting nearly every evening in the week, and two or three meetings on Sunday. The good work is going onward, and quite a number turn out to hear the preaching, and we have the very best of order. The good spirit is with us, and I think is striving with the people for we feel it while speaking to them. I feel like pressing onward in the great work; for it surely is His work, and not mans.

I remain your brother in the bonds of Christ,
GEORGE HICKLIN.

CORINTH, Ont., January 13th, 1883.

Joseph Smith:—After the London Conference I came to this place, and helped the brethren on their church, which they are building at this place. I went to Walsingham, found the Saints all well, and learned that the labors done in that part of the country by Bro. E. H. Gurley, were not forgotten. Bro. Fish informs me that there are many inquiring when he will return, or some one, so they can hear more of the doctrine set forth by Bro. Gurley.

I now am on my way there, hoping I shall be enabled to water some of the good seed sown by our worthy brother. I spent my holidays at London. Attended their Sabbath School entertainment, on the evening of the 26th of December. It was a success. The church was crowded, the tree was laden with presents for young and old, and everything passed off pleasantly.

While I was at London, I received a note from Bro. Robert Brown, of Carlingford, requesting me to come to his place on the 3d of January, and solemnize a marriage for his daughter Jane, and Bro. William E. Hewett, both of Carlingford. There were twenty-five or thirty of the relatives and friends present. We had an enjoyable time, and at a late hour in the evening, the happy pair went to their home, with hearts cheered with the bright prospect of the future. May they ever be prosperous in all their ways.

Bro. Hicklin is at Egremont. There are some to be baptized there, the fruits of the labors of W. J. Smith, of Michigan. He came there to visit with his father-in-law, and while there, went into a new place and commenced preaching. The result of his labors is, three are to be baptized and more investigating. I wish some more would come to visit friends in Canada; if they would do likewise.

Bro. J. A. McIntosh is on his way east, to Picton. I have not heard from brethren Merriam and Deuel for some time.

Pray for us who are in the field, when you bow around your family altars, in your homes, with your loved ones with you, by your own fire-side, none "daring to molest or make you afraid," that God may strengthen and protect us from all evil and harm.

From your brother in the hope of Eternal Life.
J. H. LAKE.

RIVERTON, Iowa, January 18th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Some of the Saints are alive in the work, while others are not as energetic as they ought to be. The Methodists have closed their church against our preachers, though it was built by the people for all Christian denominations. I asked the privilege of holding a meeting in the church, but Rev. Mr. Hall said we were not a Christian church. I wrote out a challenge, but he said he would not debate with us. I preached last night, assisted by Bro. Mortimore, to a good sized audience. They voted for us to come again.

Yours in the gospel,
L. C. DONALDSON.

LONDON, Ont., January 16th, 1883.

Mr. Joseph Smith, Dear Bro:—I am still in the faith, and my faith is growing brighter. The more I study the good books and the signs of the times, the more confirmed I am in this great latter day work. When I contemplate the love and mercy of our Heavenly Father, in permitting me to live in this generation, in which the gospel in its fullness is delivered to the children of men, also that he has inclined my ears to hear, my heart to understand, and my better judgments to submit to its mandates, I am lost in wonder, love and praise. Language is inadequate to portray my gratitude to him; but all I can say is, "Here, Lord, I give myself away, 'Tis all that I can do."

May my words be watered by my actions.

The work in London and vicinity is in a prosperous condition, at least so far as I am able to discern. May it continue to advance till all the honest in heart are gathered out; for I still feel there are many honest ones here, but through the cunning craftiness of men, they remain in darkness. But I rejoice when I see the strong holds of Satan beginning to totter, and the man-made systems to tremble before the pure, simple, yet powerful word of God. May it wind its way to all the dark caverns of earth, and triumph over priestcraft, idolatry, and superstition, is my prayer.

Bro. John H. Lake has been with us for some time, and has just left. God has truly used him as an instrument to bring about an (almost) perfect unity in this Branch. He will be long and favorably remembered by the Saints in London. He is honored and respected as a man of integrity, even by those outside of the faith.

I am glad the Herald is a weekly. It is a welcome messenger to our home.

Your brother in bonds,
RICHARD C. EVANS.

SANTA ANA, Los Angeles Co., Cal.,
January 12th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Permit me to say that in my travels for the past year, I find the Saints mostly in this surrounding coast of California in possession of the same Spirit which makes them all see they are one in Christ Jesus wherever they be, aiming for the truth of the gospel which is most wholesome. They partake and are initiated into the fold by obedience. They look for the promised blessings. How pleasant when one family is agreed on one subject and of such eternal worth to our souls. Is it not gratifying to worship a God who hears and answers the cries of his children.

The good shepherd has been merciful to us, and permitted us with our trials and afflictions to live, and behold the year 1883, and so the wheel of time revolves. The great and marvelous work of the latter days moves steadily onward; but the machinery must needs be oiled, and kept in repair, lest rust and moth corrupt. This requires united effort on the part of the Saints universally. By this secret of unity which is strength, much has been achieved, and much yet remains to be accomplished. I imagine I hear all exclaim, We will make a renewed effort to uphold Bro. Joseph and all the priesthood in their several responsible callings, that strength and power may crown their efforts.

We welcome the new weekly Herald as a preacher, hopeful of much good to a world asleep and in darkness as to the truth. Does this recall to us that we should be up and doing, and that those who have light should not place it under a bushel. Pardon me if I say to the beloved Saints in Iowa and Kansas that I still remember the sacred and sweet seasons of communion and prayer I enjoyed with them. I ask them still to remember me. I love the dear old tried friends; they have gone through the furnace, and I trust will shine when the dross is all swept off the earth.

I have never regretted obeying the gospel, when a girl some thirty years ago. I love the good old story still. I will drop a word when I can to my neighbor. It is meat and drink and revives our spiritual strength. I am so weak and need more and more. O that I could come to the footstool of faith, and be made whole. We are told, "Ask what ye will in my name and it shall be granted." "My children come to me with all confidence and trust, nothing doubting," and yet we doubt and mistrust our Heavenly Parent. This reliance on faith and things not seen, is a mystery unsolved by many, and has oftentimes been a trial to me, inasmuch that I have exclaimed, Where art thou, O Lord, where is thy abode? Hast thou hidden thyself forever? Is there no light or blessing for me? Come with healing in thy wings, and place the finger of mercy upon me, and dwell again on this earth, and give power to thy servants that they may perform thy mighty works. Strengthen and renew us in thy marvelous love and compassion. Let us hope, beloved Saints, that when the trials and pains of this life are passing away, that we may be prepared to reign on earth with the righteous and our redeemer. Is it not worth striving for? Can we live as the Scriptures and Book of Covenants teach, spotless.

Your sister,
ESTHER ROHRER.

Summary of News.

Jan. 17.—Prince Jerome, who has lately published a manifesto to the French people, is now in jail awaiting trial. His conduct is characterized by the Parisian journals as stupid, and is not largely participated in by the Bonapartists.

The London Times, speaking of the Egyptian question says:—"The scheme formulated by the Egyptian Government, approved by Lord Dufferin, and transmitted to the Foreign Office, proposes that the Khedive shall have a Council of twelve responsible Ministers, and that a Legislative Council of fourteen members shall be formed, half of whom shall be nominated by the Khedive and half chosen by the system of double election, such as that for which abundant precedents exist in the American Constitution and others. An Elective Assembly of forty-four members is also proposed, to be convened to occasionally discuss special subjects. The latter will not participate in legislation, but will assist legislation by giving voice to classes hitherto inarticulate. The initiative of legislation rests wholly with the Council of Ministers, but its projects must be submitted to the Legislative Council before becoming laws. In event of irreconcilable differences between the two bodies, the decision will probably be left to the Khedive.

A gentleman who has just arrived from Japan communicates the following information of interest to Americans: The railroad built from Sapporo to the sea coast in Yesso, by Col. J. W. Crawford has proved economical and at the same time so satisfactory that it is reported to be the intention of the Japanese Colonization Department to adopt the American system of railroad building.

An important commercial undertaking has just been consummated in Japan in the shape of a union steamship company. This company is backed by private and Government capital, and it is intended to develop the trade of Japan, particularly at ports which hitherto have suffered from a lack of steam communication. The capital stock of $8,000,000, half of which is subscribed by the Government and half by Japanese merchants and farmers. The latter part has already been paid in. The company's fleet will at first consist of forty steamers, about half of which will be running within eighteen months. The company will extend its operations to Hong Kong and Chinese ports.

The documents accompanying a late letter of Bishop Duggan, of Ireland, to James Redpath, of the United States, show that already one-third of the population, numbering about three thousand, including artisans, mechanics, and laborers, are for want of employment, in a state of semi-starvation, and that in consequence of the artificial scarcity of fuel the poor suffer nearly as intensely from cold as from want of food.

January 18th.—A great landslip has occurred in the Valley of the Fouery, Switzerland. The Village of Mara is completely destroyed by an enormous mass of earth. Many rocks and trees were dislodged by the recent snow storm. The movement upon Mara was gradual, and the inhabitants were able to effect a hasty escape. The movement of the mountain still continues.

January 19th.—A Paris dispatch says: It is perfectly true that Baron De Charette, aided by Baudry D'Asson, member of the Chamber of Deputies for La Vendee, and others have organized from Finistere to Tours thirty-two legions of 1,000 men each, and begun to arm them. Six hundred horses have been purchased as a nucleus for insurgent cavalry stationed at different Chateaux. The recruits wear a small cross as a rallying signal. It is stated that the conspirators have 15,000,000 francs in London. This is no canard, but the result of Government inquiry. The police report as certain that Baron De Charette has in Paris 1,500 Pontifical Zouaves, fully armed.

The Count De Chambord, known to a faithful few as Henry V., King of France, is a very important public character. He is the chief of the elder branch of the Bourbon family, the direct descendant of Louis XVI., who lost his head by a stroke of the guillotine during the Reign of Terror. His father was Charles Ferdinand, Duc de Berri, the younger son of Charles X., who had to leave his throne fifty-two years ago. His mother was the famous Duchess de Berri, known before her marriage as the Princess Caroline Ferdinande Louise of Naples.

The schooner S. L. Carney is believed to be lost with her officers and crew.

Three terrific explosions took place today in the gunpowder manufactory in Muiden, Holland, where nearly all the houses were unroofed by the concussion. The neighboring towns and villages are much damaged. The loss of life is unknown, but it is feared that forty persons perished. Windows eight miles from Muiden, were broken. Twelve bodies, victims of the explosion, have been discovered. The workmen were in the building at the time of the explosion. The town was greatly damaged. The inhabitants are leaving their houses.

The whole North of Ireland is in a most wretched condition, owing to the complete destruction of the grain crops in September by the terrible tornado and the rotting of the entire potato crop caused by constant rain. In one place such general destitution prevails that twenty-two tons of Indian meal per week are required to keep people barely alive. Relief is coming slowly and despair is staring everybody in the face.

The Belgian steamer Waesland, from New York for Antwerp, is ashore at Flushing. The British steamer Fennie Otto, at Liverpool from Galveston, had her boats smashed. Her chief officer was killed on the passage. The steamship St. Dunstan, from Liverpool for Baltimore, has returned to Liverpool. She experienced a gale on the 13th inst. The chief officer was drowned and five sailors injured. The mainmast was broken off by the deck, and the cargo in two holds damaged.

January 21.—The steamer Creighton, Capt. York, from Leith December 18th for New York, and which put back to Greenock with her cargo shifted, sailing January 11th, has again returned to Clyde. She had her decks swept, the steering gear demoralized, and the boat-ladders smashed and five feet of water in the hold. Fifty sheep and ponies were washed overboard.

The General Transatlantic Company's steamer Labrador, Capt. Serwan, which sailed from New York, January 3d, has arrived at Havre, France. She brings the crew of the French steamer Picardie, which sank at sea last week. The Picardie, Capt. Portier, sailed from New York December 23d. She was spoken January 13th and 17th in distress, having lost their rudder. The Labrador came up with her before the 13th, and tried to bring her into port. After towing her a week, she was compelled to abandon her, having previously taken off all her passengers, officers, and crew.

Details of the Cimbria disaster show that the loss of life must have been fearful. A dispatch from Hamburg, sent by the Hamburg-American Steamship Company, says so far fifty-six persons from the Cimbria have been landed. A number of them are at the Weser Lighthouse. The names of these are not yet ascertained. The Cimbria left Hamburg Thursday with 380 passengers and a crew numbering 110. She ran aground before leaving the Elbe, but got off with flood tide, with the assistance of the steamer Hansa, without damage, and put out to sea at 2:30 in the afternoon. Friday morning she came into collision during a thick fog off Borkum with the steamer Sultan. The Cimbria sank in a short time. When a boat with thirty-nine passengers arrived the company sent out the steamer Hansa and four of the largest steamers available at Cuxhaven to search for the other boats of the Cimbria. The West Indian steamer Bavaria also left during the night with a similar object. The steamer Sultan, which suffered heavy damage in the collision, has arrived in the Elbe.

The fate of the remainder of the passengers and crew of the Cimbria has not yet been ascertained. The Chippeway Indians would have left by an earlier steamer but for the illness of one of their party, which delayed their embarkment. The Cimbria sustained such severe injuries in the collision that it at once became apparent that she must sink immediately. The officers, therefore, did all in their power to save lives. Without a moment's loss of time life belts were distributed among the passengers and an order given to lower the boats. This, however, in consequence of the vessel's keeling over on her side, was found to be very difficult on one side, and absolutely impossible on the other. As the second officer was still engaged in cutting the spars loose, so there should be as much driftwood as possible, for the people to cling to when the inevitable foundering should occur, the vessel went down under his feet. He seized a spar, but, as several other persons clung to it, was obliged to let go, and he swam to a boat. The boat was subsequently picked up by the Theta. The second officer steered the Theta to Cuxhaven. Seventeen other persons have been saved by the steamer Diamant, from Weser Lighthouse, making fifty-six thus far known to have been rescued.

A terrible blizzard raging in the surrounding country, reached its height in Chicago this morning, destroying a great many hogs and sheep, brought by the incoming trains.

A LITERARY CURIOSITY.

EXPLANATION.

The initials spell "My boast is in the glorious cross of Christ." The words in italics, when read from top to bottom and bottom to top, form "Our Lord's Prayer."

Make known the gospel truths, our Father King,
Yield up thy grace, dear Father, from above;
Bless us with hearts which feeling can sing,
Our life Thou art for-ever, "God of Love."
Assuage our grief, in love for Christ, we pray,
Since the bright Prince of Heaven and Glory died,
Took all our sins and hallowed the display.
Infant be-ing, first a man, and then was crucified.
Stupendous God: thy grace and power made known,
In Jesus' name let all the world rejoice.
Now labor in Thy heavenly Kingdom, own
That blessed kingdom for thy saints the choice.
How vile, to come to Thee, is all our cry.
Enemies to thy self and all that's thine,
Graceless our will, we live for vanity,
Loathing thy very be-ing, evil in design.
O, God, thy will be done, from earth to Heaven;
Reclining on the gospel let us live.
In earth from sin deliver-ed, and forgiven,
Oh! as thyself but teach us to forgive,
Unless its power temptation doth destroy,
Sure is our fall into the depths of woe;
Carnal in mind, we've not a glimpse of joy,
Raised against us heaven; in us hope we can flow.
O give us grace, and lead us on Thy way;
Shine on us with thy love, and give us peace.
Self and this sin that rise against us slay.
Oh! grant each day our trespass may cease,
Forgive our evil deeds that oft we do,
Convince us daily of them to our shame;
Help us with heavenly bread. Forgive us, too,
Recurrent lusts, and we will adore thy name
In the forgive-ness, we as saints can die,
Since for us and our trespasses so high,
Thy Son, our Savior, bled on Calvary.—SELECTED.

PERSECUTION.

THE last sob and groan of the persecuted will be hushed amid the terrible agonies and convulsive throes of an expiring world. The "red hand" has and doubtless will be shown, along the generations of fallen man. Sacred writ is the faithful chronicler of the remote ages. Faithful Abel perished from the hand of his avaricious brother. Enoch walked with and pleased God, on this defiled earth, till he was removed "that he should not see death." Righteous Noah beheld the spread of corruption, until the earth was filled with violence. Israel has often gone into captivity, wept in hard bondage, and faded in premature death, from their implacable foes. Judaism, reformed into the gospel, proclaimed its superior unity and enjoined universal obedience. Corrupt traditions of a benighted priesthood, with their sacrilegious ministrations, were set at naught, while the obscene mysteries of paganism were in no wise tolerated. The Jews, the heathens, and the rival sects, have been the instruments of diabolical vengeance.

It shall be the design of this effusion to take an abridged view of their three fold operations, with the accompanying effects. Herod the Tetrarch sentenced John the Baptist; the Jewish Sanhedrim, Stephen, the martyr; and Herod Agrippa, James, the apostolic brother of John. Our gracious Lord's motives were impugned and his life sacrificed in the house of his friends. Paul breathed "out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord" or "Saints at Jerusalem." This "havoc of the church" extended "even to strange cities." "Beyond measure I persecuted the church of God, and wasted it, binding and delivering into prison both men and women," till the celestial association were moved to send the Son of God, to counteract this mad, misguided zeal, and demand "why persecutest thou me?" Acts of kindness to "all the members of that one body," includes Christ, "the head;" while neglected opportunities will receive "everlasting punishment," according to Matthew 25:31-46. Jesus wept at Lazarus' grave, and likewise over Jerusalem, before he was perfected and glorified. Felix, the governor of Judea, and the pontiffs, or high priests, employed assassins to murder those that were obnoxious to them. Festus, the successor, had to figure with an avaricious pontiff, a seditious laity, and a foreign banditti. Albinus, a rapacious monster, was the next, and Florus was the last of Judea's governors. Tongue, or pen can never portray his rapine, cruelty, and oppression. When the whole country was subdued by the Roman legions, Jerusalem taken, the temple desecrated and burned, one million and a half of lives lost, and the living reduced to slavery, and dispersed through that vast empire; this brought abruptly to an end oppression from that quarter, i.e., the Jewish sects.

Nero's tyrannical operations were a short time before the overthrow of the Jewish nation. His historian, Tacitus, claimed that the "Christians deserved infamy for their hatred of mankind." The poor victims to heathen malice, were nailed to crosses, sewed up in the skins of wild animals and exposed to furious dogs, and besmeared with combustible material and burned at night, in the imperial gardens of Rome. The Christians were regarded as "atheists," and because they had no altars, temples or sacrifices, they were thought to be devoid of piety or religion. Emperors that were conscientiously devoted to the established rites and customs of mythology, were more virulent persecutors than those less humane. The saints' devotions were called a "depraved superstition," although they were loyal, truthful, refunded deposits, chaste, and opposed to theft. The celebrated Pliny, governor of Bithynia, executed Christians on their third avowal; but when they would renounce their profession, execrate Christ, worship the image of Trajan, their emperor, and the statues of the gods, they were released. A new religion was tolerable, for the pagan world held that a friendly intercommunication of the deities was founded in nature, but this "inflexible obstinacy" was criminal.

Periodical games, with accompanying festivities and ceremonies, while they kindled their devotions to a hideous mythology, dried up the fountain of human sympathy. The absence of the meek from the revelry and debauchery of those tributes to Bacchus, and all other similar occasions, rendered them odious; while all national or physical calamities were regarded as visitations of divine justice by their self appointed guardians. Ignatus, the pastor of Antioch, was sent to Rome, and torn with wild beasts, because his emperor happened to be in that city at the time of an earthquake.

In the siege foretold in Luke 21:20-24, a way to escape the desolation was provided, and accepted when the fugitives fled to Pella. There Simeon, the pastoral successor of James, became the object of imperial vengeance, for he was tortured and crucified when he was the age that Moses attained to.

Polycarp presided in Smyrna for eighty years, but was burned A. D. 166. In the beginning of the next century a prodigious number were swept away in western Europe and Africa. Marturus, a young convert of Lyons, was literally roasted in an iron chair, while the mocking rabble inhaled the stench of burning flesh. Blandina was scourged, burnt, put in a net, and tossed by a furious bull, and finally she was dispatched by a sword. The enraged populace charged the Christians with eating human flesh, and especially their infants. They tortured the living every conceivable way, mocked the dying by asking the whereabouts of their God, and lacerated, burned, and exposed to rapacious dogs the dead bodies, supposing thereby to defeat their resurrection. In Africa, as elsewhere, cotemporary events were transpiring. Delicate young females were incarcerated till a gala day, when they were brought forth from their starving babes, for the prey of beasts or beastly men. The suffering entailed from the idolatrous empire beggars description.

Historians have reckoned ten general persecutions under the following reigns; viz: First, Nero, A. D. 64; second, Domitian, A. D. 95; third, Trajan, A. D. 100; fourth, Antonius, A. D. 162; fifth, Severus, A. D. 202; sixth, Maximinus, A. D. 235; seventh, Decius, A. D. 250; eighth, Valerian, A. D. 257; ninth, Aurelian, A. D. 274; tenth, Diocletian A. D. 303.

During the first direful affliction the Holy Land swarmed with robbers and insurgents, while Jerusalem was thronged with false prophets, seditious aspirants, and would-be miracle workers. The last trouble continued a decade of years, but the seventh, under Decius, was the most dreadful. Authentic historians corroborate Dr. Chandler's graphic description of those sorrowful times. He studiously observed "That the most excessive and outrageous barbarities were made use of upon all who would not blaspheme Christ and offer incense to the imperial gods. They were publicly whipped, drawn by the heels through the streets of the cities, racked till every bone of their bodies was disjointed, had their teeth beat out, their noses, ears and hands cut off; sharp pointed spears run under their nails, were tortured with melted lead thrown on their naked bodies, had their eyes dug out, their limbs cut off, were condemned to the mines, ground between stones, stoned to death, burned alive, thrown headlong from high buildings, beheaded, smothered in caves or burning lime kilns, run through the body with sharp spears, destroyed with hunger, thirst and cold, thrown to wild beasts, broiled on gridirons with slow fires, cast by heaps into the sea, crucified, scraped to death with sharp shells, torn to pieces by the boughs of trees, and, in a word, destroyed by all the various methods that the most diabolical subtlety and malice could devise."

Athenagoras renounced the prevalent philosophy, and embraced the faith of the gospel, on searching the divine oracles. In his masterly apologies, that he addressed to the Roman monarchs, he refuted the charges of atheism, impiety, incest and cannibalism, that were saddled on the Christians, and avowed their virtue, generosity and fidelity. Many wise communications were sent to the "eternal city," but heathen priests had conspired to close the avenues of justice, and they filled the empire with death and mourning.

The pagan horrors virtually came to an end at the coronation of Constantine the Great, in the fourth year of the fourth century. From that event the corruption of the Christian profession made accelerated progress, for he converted it into a system of spiritual tyranny, superstitious pride, hypocritical domination, vile lust, and temporal power. Arius, a presbyter of Alexandria, held that Christ was distinct from and inferior to the Father, but the first and most noble of created beings, as also that the Holy Ghost was not God, but created by the power of the Son. The above views, enlarged upon and dogmatically disseminated, produced bitter controversies, and paved the way for the first general council, which convened at Nice, A. D. 325, under the supervision of Constantine. The Arian doctrine was denounced as vile heresy, and the founder anathematized, and banished a little while. Soon the decrees were revoked, and he was restored to the communion by an imperial edict; but death overtook him on the very threshold of victory.

Canons, royal decrees and the councils of the fathers took the place of persuasion and the word of God. The enriched clergy grew jealous and seditious, hence the election or restoration of bishops was frequently attended with slaughter. The dissenters were excommunicated, their writings burned, their churches confiscated, and their lives imperiled. The profound Gibbon says: "The patient and humble virtues of Jesus should not be confounded with the intolerant zeal of princes and bishops, who have disgraced the name of disciples. Athanasius, the Catholic prodigy of evangelical light, enjoined "restraint," and "universal hatred" on all that would not conform to orthodoxy, or "the confession of the fathers."

The decease of the great emperor was the cause of family troubles, which resulted in the death of two sons. The third, as the sole monarch, favored the Arian heresy.

A turbulent ministry stirred the rival factions to cabals, invectives, violence, rapine and murder. Clashing creeds and contending councils caused Nazianzen to say: "Their love of contention, and their lust of power are too great, even for words to express," while the next in the throne thought the Christians (?) more cruel than the savage beasts of prey. Beholding this sanguinary jargon, the disgusted ruler, styled Julian the apostate, became an ardent devotee of paganism. Heathen rites were restored and altars and temples were dedicated to the gods. While prosecuting a conquest in Persia, the lance of a common soldier terminated his brief career. With his bones were buried the fading glory of the idolatrous superstition.

The first conceptions of a monastic life were evolved from necessity, when the subjects were imprisoned, or banished to lonesome forests, caves, or deserts. Monkery proper, however, arose in Egypt, and spread rapidly over the "iron" kingdom. Penance, austerity, poverty, chastity and obedience, were the stupid concomitants. The authority and eloquence of the Latin and Greek fathers extolled the miraculous power of the monks, as well as the dust of Saints, and the tombs, coffins, urns and relics of martyrs. The veriest remains of reputed Saints, deposited in monastery or church, drew concourses to importune for health, children and prosperity; while the priest in charge, was enriched with numerous presents, money and land. Pope Gregory I. declared that "the bodies of the apostles Paul and Peter are so terrible by their miracles, that there is reason to apprehend danger, even in praying to them."

The fierce and warlike Alarac, king of the intrepid Goths, invaded the realm and pushed the conquest into the very heart of the proud, enervated "capital of the world." Rome, with its diverse assemblage of venerated objects, withered as the furious victors preyed upon virtue, gold, jewels, furniture, silks and mansions. The Vandal monarch, Genseric, pillaged the imperial city the second time, and bore away the golden table and candlestick that was taken at the destruction of Jerusalem. The martial prophet, Mahomet, set up at Mecca, A. D. 609. He was determined, uncompromising and aggressive by his arrogance, reason, or conquest.

Let us bid adieu to those sickening scenes of rivalry, anarchy and misery.

The Reformation in its incipient stages, was at work within the pales of the mother church. The famous Claud of Turin said of his brethren, "They worshipped and served the creature more than the Creator." He thought if it was right to adore, instead of bear the cross, we ought to worship virgins, mangers, rocks, fishing-boats, asses, lambs, lions, thorns and lances, because of Jesus' reference to or association with them. If running to Rome was repentance, why were these monastery stumbling stones? Intercession of saints was opposed to the oath of God, Ezekiel 14: 14, 20. Those only are apostolic who are the keepers and guardians of the apostolic doctrine. The apostolic benediction, from the spiritual court, he ignored, but withal, claimed the necessity of a true ministry, endowed with authority and power. It is maintained that his preaching and writing sowed the seeds of the kingdom in the vales of Piedmont. The truth, subjected to strange vicissitudes, arose to a degree of prominence under the fostering care of Peter Waldo, a rich merchant of Lyons, France. He sought to reduce the ecclesiastical government to its original simplicity and purity. Numerous hurtful innovations were contemned, as indulgences, which were termed the criminal inventions of sordid avarice. He translated a goodly portion of the New Testament into the French language; distributed his fortune among the poor, and preached for and gave form to the dissenters; hence the name Waldenses.

The triple crowned vicegerent, and his mischievous functionaries, have set on foot and carried into execution a series of the most heartless barbarities that blacken the annals of man. I will not enumerate the acts of base perfidy and the scenes of spoliation, banishment, torture and death, lest the head grows weary, and the heart becomes sickened. The very name of that diabolical Inquisition is inseparably connected with racks, flames and dying agonies. France and Spain were the chief theaters of human woe, in the grey dawn of the reformation, though Bohemia, Italy, the Netherlands, and the British Islands have witnessed the implacable hatred of rival priests. Innumerable hosts have sunk into untimely graves, to bring about the toleration that revives the hope of mankind.

The nuncios of the mother church, thought to rid the land of heretics by unrelenting and atrocious persecution. Protestant zeal burned brighter as the flames of martyrdom rolled along, and the instruments of cruelty made more converts than they destroyed. The fortitude and patience of the doomed won over concourses of proselytes, who in turn courted punishment. The Papists changed their tactics, and through flattery tried to get the dissenters to return to the bosom of the church. We observe that persecution should not be courted, but when it comes, to turn it into a good account by bearing it with silent resignation. "Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake, for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are you when men shall revile you and persecute you, and say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice and be exceeding glad, for great is your reward in heaven, for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you. But I say unto you, love your enemies; bless them that curse you; do good to them that hate you; and pray for them which despitefully use you and persecute you." Again: "The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me they will persecute you also." Stephen, the martyr, told the infuriated rabble: "Ye stiffnecked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost; as your fathers did so do ye. Which of the prophets have not your fathers persecuted? And they have slain them which showed before of the coming of the Just One, of whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers." "All that live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution," but "Charity suffereth long and is kind." While it "beareth all things" it "preventeth a multitude of sins."

Beloved, do not let crimination or retaliation be thought of. Remember that our safety is within the purview of God's holy law, and that our peace is in Christ the "Shepherd and Bishop of our souls." Though famine, pestilence, tempest, earthquake and war may come "the Lord is faithful, who will establish you and keep you from evil." "Wherefore, let them that suffer according to the will of God, commit the keeping of their souls to him in well doing, as unto a faithful creator." "And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God," and "keep my commandments."

Hopefully, tenderly, trustingly, and firmly,
M. T. SHORT.

THE FIRST WARNING NOTE OF THE MIDNIGHT CRY OF MATTHEW XXV.

Dear Saints:—The day of the Lord is at hand, the great day of his wrath is to be introduced between this and the convening of our next Annual Conference at Kirtland, Ohio, April 6th, 1883. By the next prophetic event, a shaking of the powers of the (temporal) heavens, (Matt. 24:30), which will cause the tribes of earth to mourn. The same event is prophesied of by Isaiah 13:9, 13, and again by Hagai 3:6, and again by Joel 3:16, and again by Paul in Hebrews 12:26-7, and still again by John the Revelator, Revelations 6:14; and this event stands next in order to the falling of the stars that took place in 1833, just fifty years ago.

And now science, agreeing with prophecy, predicts this mighty shaking to take place in March next, without believing in, or knowing that they are predicting the fulfilling of the prophecy of the Bible.

WIGGINS' BIG BLOW.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 1.—The president has the following communication from Professor E. Stone Wiggins, L. L. D., astronomer of the Canadian finance department, under date of Ottawa, November 27th:

On the 23d of September last, I announced through the Canadian press that a great storm would occur in March next; that it would first be felt in the northern Pacific, would appear in the Gulf of Mexico on the night of the 9th, and being deflected by the Rocky Mountains, would cross this meridian from the west at noon Sunday, March 11, 1883. No vessel, whatever her dimensions, will be safe out at sea and none of small tonnage can hope to survive the tidal wave and fury of this tempest. As the wind will blow from the southeast the planetary force will be sufficient to submerge the low lands of the American coast, especially those bordering on the Gulf of Mexico and washed by the gulf stream, while the air currents for several hundred miles along the east side of the Rocky Mountain range, owing to the great atmospheric pressure in those regions, will spread universal destruction. New England will also suffer severely from wind and floods. No point outside of harbor in the whole area of the Atlantic and especially north of the equator, will be a place of safety; for this will be pre-eminently the greatest storm that has visited this continent since the days of your illustrious first president. In view of this event therefore, I take the great liberty of representing to your excellency the advisability of ordering all United States ships into safe harbors not later than the fifth of March, till this storm be passed.

And when this event is fulfilled, the midnight cry is then due, and the great day of His wrath then begins, and who shall be able to stand? I say unto you by the word of the Lord, only those that abide in the entire gospel of Christ, (a part will not do), will then be able to stand.

GUY.

BORN AGAIN.

"EXCEPT a man be born again, he can not see the kingdom of God."—John 3:3. These words spoke Jesus to Nicodemus.

Mr. Moody said in one of his sermons, that Christ could not explain this declaration. We differ with him, and will make an effort to show that he did give him a full explanation in the 5th verse. Christ was capable of foreshadowing a great deal in a few words, using comparisons easy to be understood. We are too apt to be looking for some great mystery and overlook the simplicity of the word. In Mark 10:15, he says: "Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, shall not enter therein." The question naturally arises with every thinking person. How does a little child receive it, if it is not by its birth into the world. As soon as they are in the world, they are in the kingdom of God; for Jesus says, "Suffer little children to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of God." Luke 18:16. David said, "I was shapen in iniquity, and in sin did my mother conceive me."—Psalms 51:5. We believe some have mistook this scripture from the third article of the Presbyterian faith, as found in Buck's Theological Dictionary, page 487, which says, "That all Adam's family are totally depraved." Paul says, "We are his offspring."—Acts 17:28-29. Then, if we are totally depraved, God must be depraved, which we can not believe, for the child partakes of the nature of its parents; and as Adam was made out of the dust, the same material, our bodies are made of, and subject to passions as we are, as is evident from his yielding to temptation. If being conceived in sin makes that which is conceived sinful, then Christ and John the Baptist were sinners, which is not the case; and as Christ atoned for the sins of the world, children must be free, having committed no sin, hence heirs of the kingdom, by virtue of their birth. Then this must be the way they receive the kingdom of God.

If we receive it as a little child, it will be by being conceived in a watery element, and going through a change, and coming forth. The change is to be from sin to righteousness; for Paul says, "Ye were the servants of sin, but ye have obeyed from the heart, that form of doctrine which was delivered you, being then made free from sin ye become the servants of righteousness."—Rom. 6: 17-18. Peter said, "Be baptized every one of you for the remission of sins."—Acts 11: 28. This sin spoken of is the transgression of the laws of God taught us by our conscience, or the servants of God, Paul says, "Until the law, sin was not in the world, but sin is not imputed when there is no law." Rom. 5: 13. Whosoever committeth sin, transgresseth also the law.—1. John 3: 4. Paul says, "The Gentiles which had no law, do by nature the things contained in the law. Those having not the law, are a law unto themselves, which show the works of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts the meanwhile accusing them or excusing one another in the day when God shall judge the secrets of men by Jesus Christ according to my gospel."

Children are members of the kingdom until they transgress some known law of God as Adam did. Then they are cast out, and if they enter, they must be, born again, of the water and of the Spirit. Paul says to the Romans, "For the invisible things of him from the creation of the world, are clearly seen, being understood by things that are made, even his eternal power and Godhead. So they are without excuse."—Chapter 1: 20.

Everything that has life, both of the vegetable and animal kingdom, is born into the world, even the earth itself. "For the Spirit of the Lord moved upon the water, and the dry land appeared."

The first thing to be done to bring about the birth of a tree or plant, is to place the seed in the ground, or in the place where it is to come forth, or be born; then it has to be nourished, or a higher power operates upon it, to strengthen it until it comes forth from its dark place of concealment, to the light which strengthens it, and gives it its proper color, and fully prepares it for the purpose it was intended.

If natural things are to represent spiritual things, as Paul says; and as we believe Christ to be the Son of God, and the one who was with the father in designing, creating, and bringing man and every living thing into existence, as we learn from Gen. 1: 26: "Let us make man," showing there was a council held before the work was done, and Christ was "as a lamb, slain from the foundation of the world."—Rev. 13: 2. "The same was in the beginning with God."—John 1: 2. Speaking of Christ being with, and assisting in this work. And must understand it, hence his words to Nicodemus are true: "Except a man be born of water and of the spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God." We might as well say children can be in the world without being born, as to say we can be in the kingdom of God without coming forth out of water, by legal power and authority; for Paul says: "We are all baptized by one spirit into the one body." Christ says: "The Shepherd enters by the door, and the porter opens the door." He being the shepherd went to John, the porter. John, opening the door, which was baptism, being placed in the water, and coming forth, or being born of water, into the kingdom of God, receiving the spirit, which is life and light, he is a child of God, and will remain so, unless he partakes of the second death.

HIRAM ROBINSON.

SOME CURIOUS STATISTICS.

ALLOWING two square feet to each person, the entire population of Boston could stand on the public garden, with a good deal of room to spare. The entire population of the United States could stand in Boston proper (not including Brighton, Dorchester, and West Roxbury). The entire population of the world (now estimated at 1,440,000,000) could stand on the Island of Martha's Vineyard, or in the space occupied by the towns of Boston, Brookline, Newton, Needham, Dedham, Hyde Park, and Milton. The State of Massachusetts could in this way accommodate seventy times the present population of the world. The entire population of the world, placed side by side, and allowing two feet to each person, would encircle the earth twenty times. The States of Maine, New Hampshire and Vermont, taken together, are as large as England. Any one of the States of Georgia, Illinois, Iowa, and North Carolina, is as large as England. Kansas is as large as England and Scotland together. Ireland is about the size of Maine. France is more than twice as large as England, Wales, and Scotland together. Texas is thirty-five times as large as Massachusetts, or as large as Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Ohio, and Indiana combined. The entire population of the United States could be provided for in the State of Texas, allowing each man, woman, and child four acres of land. The entire population of the world could be provided for in the United States, allowing each person one and a half acres of land.

PRAYER.

"God is a prayer hearing and a prayer answering God." What is prayer; Let the poet answer:

"Prayer is the soul's sincere desire,
Uttered, or unexpressed;
The motion of a hidden fire
That trembles in the breast."

It may also be called the voice of faith, or the utterance of faith; for if we were perfectly destitute of faith, we should not attempt to pray; yet oftentimes our prayers are not properly seasoned with faith, and then they are but a hollow sound, or parrot-like repetition. When the mind is so wrought upon that the hands are uplifted, and we are led to call upon God from the depths of the soul, then it is that we realize that there is efficacy in prayer. Then it is that the witness is given, that our petition is heard, and we can cheerfully leave our burden at the feet of the great burden-bearer, and go on our way rejoicing, believing that in his time we shall receive what we desired. This has been the experience of every working Saint, from the beginning up to the present day. We will relate a little of our own experience:

Four years since, my husband experienced a severe run of typhoid fever. His son was just recovering from the same, and I was suffering very much from chronic troubles, and besides, want was strongly threatening us. Amid all this my husband exhibited every symptom of a relapse. I was shown by the Spirit that if I would call on the Great Physician, in fervent prayer in his behalf, the fever would abate. This I could easily have done in secret, but I must pray with him. It was a great cross for me to make the proposal, so I lay down to rest; but the sweet restorer would not come to my relief. I must arise and obey the Master's bidding. As soon as I made the attempt the cross was lifted, liberty was given in prayer, and a comforting witness bestowed. The fever abated that same hour, and nothing of the kind has returned to us since. As his strength returned, he expressed anxiety in regard to our pecuniary circumstances. My answer was: We will do the best we can with what we have, and trust in God. This was said three times, and with that ceased our anxiety in regard to our daily wants. We have been very comfortably provided for since, although we both have poor health, and our means is very limited. The most beautiful part is, we look up together and feel to thank him who feeds us. We could relate many similar instances of God's willingness to hear our cries, but fear it might be wearisome to the reader, so I give only this as a suggestion for him to glance over his own experience, and note how many times God has in like manner blessed him.

My heart goes out in love for the Saints, and I long for their society, but distance and circumstances deny me the privilege. Yet with Father's help I mean to hold on to the precious truths he has made known to me.

God bless all the Saints, and seal them heirs of the kingdom, is the prayer of your unworthy sister,

ALMIRA M. SNOW.

THE POLAR SEA.

ARCTIC travelers are all united in one opinion, says an English writer, that birds have told us of regions beyond the frozen seas of the North, where, from some cause or other, the climate is milder, and the ocean or soil more generous. This has been held by many navigators, and each succeeding explorer has confirmed the wonderful story. When Kane in his small brig penetrated, under unusually favorable circumstances, to the eightieth degree of latitude, he dispatched Mr. Merton with the sledges to reconnoiter, and that able man found, after many battles with the ice, that at the eighty-second degree the icebergs and icefloes over which he had been traveling became weaker, the surface rotten, and the snow-drifts softer, until the dogs, terror-stricken, refused to advance, and with much trouble and danger they made their escape to the coast. Mr. Merton then reflected that a great black line he had seen was open water far away to the north, and the unwonted appearance of wild fowl which had been strangers along the dreary ice-packs to the south, convinced him of the accuracy of his belief.

But the aquatic birds were here in thousands, and they seemed to be more numerous in the distant, mysterious North. The brent goose, the eider and the king duck were so closely packed together, that an Esquimaux who accompanied the little expedition killed two with a single rifle ball. Here we find a curious clew that the birds have given us to the great mystery of the North pole. From where this was seen to the North pole is about 480 nautical miles, and it may be that milder climates, shut out by mountains of ice-ranges, hide what would fill us with wonder. Brent geese, which seem to have prevailed in vast throngs, and may also be known by their wedge-shaped flights, live on marine plants and mollusca. They are not often seen inland, unless flying from one estuary to another, and their presence in these high latitudes is a sure indication of an open sea with feeding grounds, quite unknown further south, on the dreary ice regions that have so long baffled explorers.

POLYGAMY NOT MORMONISM.

KIND reader: This article contains but a small portion of testimony that we of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, the only true successor to, and continuation of the original Church, have to offer; but is enough to show you where we stand on the marriage question. The italics and comments are ours.

1. Polygamy condemned by the Book of Mormon.

"For, behold, thus saith the Lord, this people begin to wax in iniquity, they understand not the Scriptures [like them of Utah] for they seek to excuse themselves [so do they of the Utah Church] in committing whoredoms, because of the things written [in the Bible] concerning David and Solomon his son. Behold, David and Solomon truly had many wives and concubines which thing was ABOMINABLE before me saith the Lord."

"Wherefore, my brethren, hear me, and hearken unto the word of the Lord: For there shall not any man among you have save it be ONE WIFE and CONCUBINES HE SHALL HAVE NONE."

Hear now, dear reader, the cogent and all important reason.

"The Lord God delighteth in the CHASTITY of women. And whoredoms are an abomination before me: saith the Lord of hosts."—Book of Mormon, Jacob 2d chap., par. 6.

2. Polygamy condemned by Joseph Smith.

In "Times and Seasons," vol. 6, page 423, (the then Church organ), published in Nauvoo, Illinois, the number for February 1st, 1844, over the signatures of Joseph Smith, and Hyrum, his brother, there appeared a "Notice" reading thus:

"As we have lately been credibly informed that an Elder of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, by the name of Hyrum Brown, has been preaching polygamy and other FALSE and CORRUPT DOCTRINES, in the county of Lapeer, state of Michigan. This is to notify him, and the Church in general, that he has been cut off from the Church for his iniquity."

This was but five months before they were killed, and seven months after the date of the bogus revelation upon which the Utah Church bases her authority for the practice of what Joseph Smith calls "false and corrupt."

In a statement made by William Marks in "True Latter Day Saints' Herald," October 5th, 1859, he relates a conversation between Joseph and himself, which occurred but a few days before the former's death, by the hands of assassins at Carthage, Illinois, June 27th, 1844. Speaking of Joseph, he remarks thus: "He said he had long desired to have a talk with me on the subject of polygamy; he said it would eventually prove the overthrow of the Church. He was satisfied it was a curse doctrine, and every exertion must be made to put in down."

In a public discussion held July, 1850, at Boulogne-Sur-Mer, France, between himself and Rev. Messrs. Cleeve, Robertson and Cater, Mr. Taylor made these remarks:

"We are accused here of polygamy, and of actions the most indelicate, obscene, and disgusting; such that none but a corrupt and depraved heart could have contrived. These things are too outrageous to admit of belief; therefore, leaving the sisters of the "While Veil," the "Black Veil," and all other veils, with these gentlemen to dispose of, together with their authors, as they think best, I shall content myself by reading our views on chastity and marriage, from a work published by us, containing some of the articles of our faith. 'Doctrine and Covenants' page 330."

He then proceeded to read the "Church Article" on "Marriage." We have not space but for a part of it here. Taylor read it all.

The marriage "covenant" reads:

"You both mutually agree to be each others companion, husband and wife, observing the legal rights belonging to this condition; that is, keeping yourselves for each other, and from all others during your lives."

Another part reads thus:

"We declare, that we believe that one man should have one wife, and one woman but one husband, except in case of death, when either is at liberty to marry again."

Again, in "Times and Seasons" May 1st, 1845, of which said John Taylor was "editor and proprietor," he calls plurality of wives "iniquity," thus: "For once let us say that Cain who went to Nod, and taught the doctrine of plurality of wives, and the giants who practiced the same iniquity, and Nimrod who practiced the common stock system," &c. Again, in an editorial May 1st, 1844, Taylor said: "If any man writes to you, or preaches to you, doctrines contrary to the Bible, the Book of Mormon, or the Doctrine and Covenants, set him down as an impostor."

We have seen that polygamy, which Taylor now teaches and practices, is "contrary" to the "Book of Mormon," and you will notice soon, that it is contrary to the commandments found in the Doctrine and Covenants, and from Taylor's own quotation, it is already seen to be contrary to the "Church article" on marriage. And if so, is he not an "impostor?"

4. Polygamy opposed to the law and order of the original Church.

(a) Polygamy makes the violation of the laws of the land necessary, and Taylor and others justify their violation today; whereas the command of God to the Church reads thus: "Let no man break the laws of the land; for he that keepeth the laws of God, hath no need to break the laws of the land: wherefore, be subject to the powers that be, until He reigns whose right it is to reign, and subdues all enemies under his feet."—Doctrine and Covenants, page 117.

(b) Polygamy positively forbidden by the laws which were given to govern the Church permanently. Revelation of February, 1831, reads thus: "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shall cleave unto her, and none else; and he that looketh upon a woman to lust after her, shall deny the faith, and shall not have the Spirit." Please note the following, kind reader. Mr. Orson Pratt, one of the chief defenders of polygamy, in October, 1869, makes this remarkable confession concerning the law just quoted. Hear him: "That if the members of the Church had undertaken to vary from the law given in 1831, to love their one wife with all their hearts, and to cleave to none other, they would have come under the curse and condemnation of God's holy law."

How could he justify himself in practicing polygamy? you ask in astonishment. Why, by blindly and falsely asserting that God changed his mind, and in 1843, or twelve years after, gave a commandment to take other wives, etc. But this can not possibly be admitted, because the Bible, Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, besides the teaching of the ministry from 1830 till polygamy was first publicly taught, in Utah, in 1852, and by Taylor, Pratt and others, positively affirm, that God does not, can not "vary" or "change." The Book of Mormon plainly says, that "God changes not; if so, he ceaseth to be God," and like the Bible, says, "In whom is no variableness, neither shadow of turning." But one more quotation from the law, or doctrine of the Church. "Marriage is ordained of God unto man; wherefore, it is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain should be one flesh; and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation."—Doctrine and Covenants.

In conclusion, the query may arise, How did polygamy originate in the Church, or who was the author of the so called revelation upon which it is based? Brigham Young confessed, in a speech, June 21st, 1874, (see Deseret News of July 1st, of that year): "While we were in England, [he says], in 1839 or '40, I think, the Lord manifested to me by vision and His Spirit, things that I did not then understand. I never opened my mouth to any one concerning them until I returned to Nauvoo; Joseph had never mentioned this; there had never been a thought of it in the Church that I ever knew anything about at that time; but I had this for myself, and I kept it for myself." Again: "The revelation was given in 1843, but the doctrine was revealed before this." How long did Brigham keep this to himself and from the Church? Till 1852, or eight years after Joseph Smith's death, and then palmed it off as a revelation given through Smith in 1843, and when asked for the revelation, or the original document, he could only present a pretended copy, and asserted that the original was destroyed by Emma Smith, Joseph's wife, who on her part affirmed, till her dying hour, that she never saw it or heard of it, much less handled it. The whole revelation (so called) is full of historical statements that are not true; false predictions, "damnable heresies," and bears the impress of Satan throughout. Polygamy is condemned of God, of Christ, of the Holy Spirit, by the Church, by Joseph Smith, by some of the Utah leaders themselves, and by the Government of the United States; and is, and has been, in every way lawful and proper without cessation, fought as an abominable heresy by the Reorganized Church for thirty years, and over, as her history unmistakably shows. Polygamy is in no sense Mormonism.

Success.—There is nothing so abject as the worship of mere success, unless, indeed, it be the worship of mere wealth. There is nothing lower than to admire and flatter a man simply because he has got on, because he has carried his point, because he has come to be talked about in the way which he wished to be talked about, and to think scorn of others whose merits and efforts may have been equal to his, or very likely much greater, but whose merits and efforts have from some cause or other not been so lucky as his in gaining the object at which they aimed.

LAMONT, IOWA.

BORN.

McKENZIE.—To John and Clara McKenzie, at Drumbo, Ontario, December 23d, 1882, twins, both boys; named William and Willard.

DIED.

McKENZIE.—At Drumbo, Ontario, January 7th, 1883, Willard, son of John and Clara McKenzie, aged 15 days; also, on January 11th, 1883, William son of John and Clara McKenzie, aged 19 days.

OATLEY.—At his home, in Providence, R. I., Bro. James T. Oatley. Born at South Kingston, R. I., September 8th, 1842; baptized March 18th, 1878, by Elder William Bradbury. Bro. Oatley was a noble, generous-hearted man, who loved to do good, and is missed by the church and a large circle of friends, and deeply mourned by an aged mother and devoted companion and loving children. May He whose love never failed, care for and comfort them. Funeral services by Elder S. H. Morse and E. N. Webster.

SUTTON.—At Glencoe, Belmont county, Ohio, December 8th, 1882, Mary E., wife of M. S. Sutton. She was born in Washington county, Ohio, September 4th, 1848; baptized October 6th, 1878, at Belmont Branch by Thomas Sutton, and confirmed same day. She was taken on Friday with the quincy, and on Sunday was administered to. The pain all left her. She knelt by the bed and offered up a beautiful prayer, and said she was willing to trust in the promises of Christ. Called her family in to sing to her. While they were singing she went into a fit, and in ten minutes was asleep in Christ.

EUKES.—At Reese Creek, Montana, December 31st, 1882, Andrew James, infant son of Brother and Sr. M. J. Eukes, aged 2 months and 20 days.

Farewell father, farewell mother,
I am going to my rest;
Going to the realms of glory,
There to mingle with the blest.
Hark! I hear some heavenly music,
Gently floating on the air.
Yes; methinks it is the angels
Singing anthems loud and clear.
Dearest parents, do not murmur,
Though our parting gives you pain;
I will come with my Redeemer,
Here on earth to live again.

VALUE OF THE BIBLE.

If you destroy my confidence in the Bible, where am I? I know I go hence ere long, but what then? I take my place by the side of Socrates. Surely if there was ever a man who never knew the revealed word of God whose ideas are worthy of my respect, it is Socrates. I ask him about the future life, and in reply I hear him say: "I am to die, you are to live; but for which of us is the better none can tell. I think the lives of good men continue beyond; but of this wise men are confident." And that is the very best that the wisdom of the world can do for me. Destroy my confidence in the Bible, and the future which I must face is all darkness. I know well the burden of self-condemnation which I carry. I know where I shall stand if I am judged according to justice. I need nobody to tell me that. But when I am induced to give up the Bible, I know no more. I need a deliverance, but there is no deliverer. I need help, but there is no helper. I have been persuaded to give up the Bible, and I find nothing to take its place. The brightness and the blessedness of human hope have entered into total, disastrous, and perpetual eclipse.—Dr. S. H. Wiley.

PREACH CHRIST.

Bishop Lavington, addressing the clergy, somewhere about 1750, says: "My brethren, I beg you will rise up with me against moral preaching. We have long been attempting the reformation of the nation by discourses of this kind. With what success? None at all. On the contrary, we have dextrously preached the people into downright infidelity. We must change our voice. We must preach Christ and Him crucified. Nothing but the gospel is—nothing besides will be found to be—the power of God unto salvation. Let me therefore again and again request—may I not add, let me charge you—to preach Jesus and salvation through His name.

JOSEPH SMITH - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, 10th Feb'y, 1883.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Supreme Court of Iowa, have decided that the Prohibitory Amendment to the Constitution adopted by 30,000 majority vote of the people of the state at the election of June 27th, 1882, is invalid and void; because of a disagreement between the records of the two houses, the House and the Senate, thus causing a divergence from the resolution submitting the question to vote. This leaves all the preparatory work done by the Temperance element of the state to be done over again. It would appear that this intensely democratic people can not get their sovereign will though specifically expressed at the polls, carried into effect—a bench of lawyers being authorized to knock that expressed will in the head. Judge Beck dissented from the decision, but the majority of the bench were so upright in the law, that they, like the Indian's straight tree, leaned over the other way.

Bro. E. C. Brand preached nine evenings at Dorchester, Saline county, Nebraska, to attentive listeners. The Campbellites sent a minister to "create a diversion." This was done, but without the effect intended; Bro. Brand baptized one of the best of the misister's flock. Brand also baptized one at Mount Hope, formerly a Catholic.

Bro. J. J. Cornish wrote from Decker-ville, Michigan, that they were having good meetings, and the people were quite attentive. He held a debate with some one from Bay City, who it is reported, will return there to look after the Saints again. Bro. Cornish wishes that Bro. Kelley or Bro. Scott would come up to their help.

January 25th, Bro. W. H. Kelley was at his home at Coldwater, Michigan, confined to the house by sickness of several members of the family. He was almost without help, as the help hired had gone home sick. Cold weather and the necessity for action had driven off the blues.

Sr. Ruth A. Turner, of Montrose, Lee county, Iowa, has sent us a list of subscribers from that place. She says that she has solicited names without authority, but if she has erred she will not do so any more. We thank Sr. Turner for her efforts in behalf of the HERALD, and request her to continue them. For her authority please read, "Men shall of themselves seek to bring to pass much righteousness; for the power is in them."—D. & C.

Bro. Henry Palmer wrote us from Council Bluffs, Iowa, January 23d, assuring us of his still faithful devotion to the faith. He had distributed quite a number of tracts this Winter. He reports that Bishop Blakeslee and Counsellor E. L. Kelley, had paid the Saints of that city a visit.

We have on sale a limited number of copies of "Universalism Against Itself," by A. Wilford Hall, author of the "Problem of Human Life." Price postpaid, $1.

WE copy the following bit from a discourse delivered by Wilford Woodruff, at Kaysville, Utah, December 10th, 1883.

While in Winter Quarters, President Young had a dream in which the prophet Joseph Smith appeared to him and said: "Brother Young, you exhort this people to obtain the Holy Spirit; with it they can do anything that is necessary; without it they can not build up the kingdom of God." In one of my dreams while in Arizona, I had the same admonition from President Young. I thought he was attending one of our conferences. I said to him: "Can you speak to us?" "No," he replied, "I have done bearing my testimony in the flesh; I have merely come to see the people, to see you, to see what you are doing. But I want you to teach the Latter Day Saints to labor to obtain the Holy Spirit. It is one of the most important gifts that the Saints of the living God can possess. You all need this," he said, "in order to build up Zion. If you have not this Spirit—the Spirit of the Holy Ghost, the testimony of the Father and Son—you can not get along. But if you are in possession of this Spirit your minds will be open to comprehend the things of God."

"Straws show which way the wind blows," and so do these little items picked up here and there indicate more than the words seem to convey. Why should the ghost of Joseph Smith trouble Brigham, even as early as 1847, if not to plead for the people; to incite them again to the offices of the good spirit. It is said that the last words of Brigham Young were, "Oh! Joseph, Joseph." This has been taken by some as proof of the great regard that the dying man had for Joseph Smith. But who can tell whether the tone was deprecatory, sad, or joyful; or whether the spirit of the man most outraged by the dying chieftain was present to his alarmed faculties, and troubled his last moments. If we believe that the spirit of the martyr stood by the bedside of this ambitious man who entered and ruled by strong will, where the Spirit of God should have dwelt, we must also believe that it was to reproach, not to flatter, or palliate the wrong. Several of the dreams that are related as having been had by President Young point to a want of unity between the then living and the dead. Now both are in the far off world, so far and yet so nigh, and if they do not return to tell, only the Spirit can reveal the reckoning there. If there were ever a people that did need the Holy Spirit, then the Utah Church is that people.

A BOUND copy of the Reflector, a newspaper published at Palmyra, New York, in 1830, (we have the numbers from December 22d, to February 28th, 1831), has by lucky chance fallen into our hands, being presented to the Church Library. It is edited by O. Dogberry, Esq., evidently a cognomen only. We quote from the number for January 11th, 1830:

"GOLD BIBLE."

We inadvertently neglected in our remarks last week, respecting this wonderful work, to accompany them with the explanations requisite to a correct understanding of it. The appellation of "Gold Bible," is only a cant cognomen that has been given to it by the unbelievers—for be it known that this book, as well as the sacred volume which is held so valuable by all good Christians, is not without its revilers and unbelievers—by way of derision. The true title of the work, as appears from the copyright, is "The Book of Mormon"—comprising a great number of books, or parts, by different primary authors, all of which are divided into chapters. The first is the "First Book of Nephi," of which we gave an extract in our last, and is continued in the present number of our paper. The whole purports to be a compilation, in ancient hieroglyphics, on plates said to resemble plates of gold, by one of the chosen of the lost tribes, whose name was Mormon.

WE are permitted by Bro. Wm. Hopkins, of Lamoni, to copy the following from a letter to him, from his brother, Samuel Hopkins, of Hornerstown, New Jersey; which with the accompanying clipping from the Chicago Herald, we publish in the interest of our belief in faith cures.

"Joseph Hopkins' little girl lives with her aunts here in this town. She was taken sick with St. Anthony's dance, which caused her to have spells, and twitch and jerk. They sent for the doctor, as a matter of course, and he told them that was what ailed her, and it would be a long time before she got over it. So when Bro. Gurley came, she wanted to see him right away. So Sunday evening after church, he told Brown the little girl had requested to see him. So they went over, and he talked with her and made prayer, and then administered to her, and through the prayer of faith the child was healed. The doctor came next day; he was surprised to see her so well. He thought the change too sudden. Didn't think it would last, but it has all the same."

The following is from the Chicago Herald:

The latest sensation in religious circles in Chicago is a cure effected by the laying on of hands. The person who has been fortunate enough to recover health by this once popular but now much neglected method is a Mrs. James Constable, whose home is on Hubbard street.

A Herald reporter was told that a miracle had been performed somewhere on the West Side, and started out last evening with the intent to run it down. He called at the residence of a gentleman, who, he was informed, knew all about it, and was told by the very pretty young lady who came to the door that it was lodge night.

"Will he be back before long, do you think?" the somewhat embarrassed reporter asked her.

"No, I hardly think he will be home till late," she replied in a tone that implied that her questioner was not posted on lodge phenomena. The gentleman's wife appeared at this moment, and upon being questioned regarding the miraculous cure, said:

"O, I guess it's nothing but a fraud. The woman had a fit and got over it. That's about all, I guess."

A call was next made upon the Rev. Joseph R. Lambert, of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, as it was learned that the lady who had been cured was a member of his reorganized flock of saints. Mr. Lambert was found at 14 South Sheldon street. He had retired. He arose and put on his raiment, also his stockings and boots, and then lifted up his voice and said:

"I can tell you all I know about it. I have been here only a few weeks, and I never saw or heard of the lady before coming here. Since her recovery I have heard that she had been subject to fits, or something of that sort. I don't know how that is. I have not investigated the matter. I did not think much about it at the time, but have understood since that there is considerable excitement over the matter."

"Can you tell the circumstances attending the case?"

"Yes. Last Monday evening Mrs. Constable's husband called on me and said that his wife was sick and wanted me to go over and see her. I went, and found several of the neighbors there. The lady was unconscious when I got there, and they said that she had had three bad spells. I must explain to you that we have a practice in our church of calling in the elders to administer to the sick. By administering we mean prayer, anointing with oil and laying on hands."

"Were you called in in this case to administer and lay your hands on the woman?"

"Yes; her husband called me in for that purpose. It seems that he had called upon one of the other elders, but he had refused to go. I did not know anything about that, nor what the previous condition of the lady had been. I found her lying on the bed. She was unconscious, they said, and liable to another spell at any time. All left the room except Mr. and Mrs. H. R. Wallace, who are members of the society, and another gentleman and a lady, who I suppose, was his wife. After a short time I prayed and anointed the woman's head with oil—consecrated olive oil, set apart for the purpose. I then laid my hands on her head and prayed as I usually do, and when I got through that she had opened her eyes and got out of the condition that she was in. Her eyes looked a little wild, but changed fast to their normal condition. She wanted to arise and sit up. They raised her up, and she talked. She complained of being tired, but otherwise all right."

"Did she stay all right?"

"Yes. We had a prayer meeting last night at Mr. Good's 697 West Lake, and Mr. and Mrs. Constable were present. I asked her how she felt, and she said she was well. I noticed that quite a number of others asked her the same question."

"So you really think the woman was cured by the laying on of hands?"

"Yes, and for this reason. I have been called to administer a great many times, sometimes with good results, and at others with apparently none at all. When good results have followed I have always felt coming over me as I prayed, the influence of the Holy Spirit. Well, in this case I felt this influence strongly. I felt commissioned, and I rebuked the disease."

"I understand that at this time you did not think there was anything especially remarkable in this cure?"

"I did not. Such things occur frequently among people of our faith. I suppose this talk about the case was started by the gentleman who was present and whom I did not know. I heard him remark at the time, 'Well, if that don't beat anything.'"

"He is not a member of your church?"

"No. I was introduced to him, but cannot recall his name."

Such were the particulars as Mr. Lambert recounted them to the reporter. Upon being asked if it were not possible that the woman had simply happened to come out of her epileptic state while he was praying, Mr. Lambert said that of course that was a possibility. He however, believed that she was cured by faith. He had felt the influence of the spirit very strongly at the time. The lateness of the hour precluded the possibility of the reporter's finding Mrs. Constable, Mr. and Mrs. Wallace and others and getting their version of the affair. Indeed, it would have been perhaps impossible at that time of night to find Mrs. Constable, as Mr. Lambert did not remember the number of her residence on Hubbard street.

BRO. W. S. MEDDOWCROFT, sends us a Picton, Ontario, Times, for January 4th, 1883, which contains the whole of the Epitome of Faith, and the Court Decision, making a column and a half, and a curt editorial notice, which we give below:

"The attention of latter day Philistines is directed to the "Epitome of the Faith and Doctrines of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints" in our advertising columns. The Saints worship every Sabbath in the room over the store lately occupied by Mr. A. I. Corkindale. They take their tenets from the Book of Mormon, but maintain that that book does not uphold polygamy, and that the Utah Mormons are a corrupt offshoot of the true church."

Bro. Meddowcroft did well in getting so large a hold upon the readers of the Times; but is it not singular that with the Epitome right under his eye the Editor should so mistake the source from which the tenets were taken. We commend the brother's action in thus getting the matter before the public. Keep doing so, brethren.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—How shall a branch get rid of an unworthy member, when there is only one Elder, not enough to make a court?

Ans.—Try him before the branch, and if guilty of acts warranting it, disfellowship by vote of the branch.

Ques.—Where's the law for that?

Ans.—Have none, only the exigency of the case. If that is not enough to warrant the proceeding let the unruly member alone. He may destroy the work there; but is it not better to let the work be destroyed than to go without law. However, if the branch is in an organized district, report the case to the president of the district, or to the conference when it meets.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Zenas H. Gurley wrote from New York, January 16th:

I left many believing at Hornerstown. Have enjoyed good liberty of speech and in counsel. Expect to baptize some more at Philadelphia.

FROM the Freeport, Illinois, Bulletin, sent by Bro. Levi Cheney, we clip the following:

"The question of religiously anointing the sick, as indicated in the epistle of St. James, was referred to in a Presbyterian Church at San Rafael, California, by a member who believed in it. The elders called upon the presbytery for a decision, and the presbytery have called upon the synod, which will probably ask the general assembly to pronounce upon the subject.

Correspondence.

SACRAMENTO, California,
January 23d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Being prompted to write a few lines to you, I feel to obey. I was baptized in Manchester, England, July 24th, 1838, and am as firm now as I was when I first started, praying my Heavenly Father will give me that portion of his Holy Spirit, that will enable me to win the prize I set out for.

I reside in Sacramento. Will give some of the names and ages of some of our members and how we are situated. Our president, Bro. James Sloan, age I believe 92, and is so feeble, and living some miles from the city, can not attend. Bro. Webb, age 75, had to move to Oakland for his health. Bro. Wardell, 72, so crippled with rheumatism that he can not walk. We have sister Waterman, age 82; sister Wardell, 76; sister Bushby, 76; sister Rohrer, 76; sister Bag-nell, 72; sister Hunt, 65. We have had no permanent Elder since conference, but the sisters have met every Sunday, and we have had a goodly portion of God's Holy Spirit in our midst. We meet in prayer and testimony. Pray for us that the Lord may send us a good shepherd to take care of his sheep.

Your sister in the covenant,
S. HUNT.

CLEAR LAKE, Indiana,
January 21st, 1883.

Dear Herald:—Your columns as a weekly, are indeed a source of pleasure to me. It seems very gratifying, that at the end of each week's labor, we are blessed with a true gospel sermon, that may be preached, while seated around our pleasant fireside. Many times did I wish it might be so, and now, as my wishes are granted me, I feel to give Him the praise, from whom cometh all blessings.

Inasmuch as the harvest is very great and the laborers few, and the means quite limited whereby more might be sent into the great harvest field of the Lord, I feel assured that much good will be done through the wide spread circulation of the Herald. I think, too, that those that are not able to subscribe for it, should not be deprived of reading its valuable columns; but each one taking it should be charitable enough to lend it to his neighbor; for by so doing the good seed may spring up in the hearts of those that are yet in doubt.

The work in this part of the vineyard is progressing slowly. The Saints generally are trying to set good examples before the world, so that others, seeing their good-begun work, may also be led to glorify our Father which is in heaven.

Our branch has never been fully organized; therefore is not in so good a condition to work as those fully organized. I hope the time is not far distant, when it may please the Master to set apart such ones as he would have take hold of the work. Here, as elsewhere, the Macedonian cry is heard. It seems to me there never was such an hungering and thirsting after the true word of God; and yet our country is almost filled to overflowing with orthodox churches.

It is now nearly two years since I enlisted in this latter day work, and never for one moment have I regretted the step taken; though young, and many things to contend with. I have tried to be faithful, and honor the cause, although many times I may have come short of doing so. I ask an interest in the prayers of all God's people, that I may ever be faithful.

Your sister in gospel bonds,
ELLA A. HOUSMAN.

MUSES BOTTOM, Jackson Co., W. Va.,
January 12th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—We expected to have been in Wayne county, W. Va., by the twentieth of last month, but circumstances over which we had no control prevented; we stand ready when the way opens. My husband visited the Saints in Doddridge county, W. Va.; preached five times; baptized two. Since he returned home, has been preaching some in the neighborhood.

While he was away, one, J. D. Harris, of Ravenswood, W. Va., sent him a challenge to discuss the divine authenticity of the Book of Mormon; but it did not reach him. Other parties notified Harris that "Devore would not accept." It was then sent to Bro. James McMurray. He neither accepted nor rejected. On the 24th of December last, was the first we knew anything of it. We then learned by rumor that J. D. Harris and Bro. McMurray would commence the discussion at the Dewitts' Run school house, on the night of the 26th. On the morning of the 26th my husband accidentally met the said Harris; after some conversation, Harris informed him that he was the man to whom he had originally sent the challenge. Hearing this, he invited Harris and others to our house, that a proposition might be agreed upon, &c. They soon arranged that which read as follows: "Resolved: That the Book of Mormon is of divine origin, King James' translation of the Scriptures the standard of evidence. Affirmed by L. R. Devore, denied by J. D. Harris. The said Harris was once a United Brethren preacher, (now fallen from grace), but now a public prohibition lecturer.

Considerable advantage was taken of us, as all could see. The element seemed against us, however, we did not quake or fear. The debate began on the night of the 26th, and continued three evenings. The affirmative opened by a one hour's speech, with Scriptural evidence in the usual way, with much liberty. The negative followed, saying his opponent brought up Scripture from Genesis to Revelation, which in his opinion had no bearing on the subject, and he did not propose to spend his time in answering them; but contended himself in quoting a few passages, and reading as he said "The Mormon account of the finding of the golden plates," &c. The next night each one had two speeches of thirty minutes. Again the affirmative brought an abundance of Scripture evidence, but to our surprise the negative declared the Bible had nothing to do with it, and he would not spend time talking on that; but would show that the "Spaulding Romance" was the basis of the Book of Mormon, what Mormonism was and what grew out of it. He declared that Oliver Cowdery, Martin Harris, and David Whitmer had denied their testimony to the Book of Mormon, &c.; the failure of the Kirtland Bank, abusing (with words) Joseph Smith, in every way possible, and did it with such vim that many swallowed it, and wanted more. And thus ended the second night; the truth trampled upon; the word of God laid aside, the proposition discarded by Harris. We came home sad and weary; and I confess we suffered pain and sorrow for the pure work's sake. Yet not for one moment did we cease searching, reading, culling and praying, until next night.

The affirmative commenced, riddling the "Spaulding Romance" argument, and gave Harris a tangled web to unravel, which he has failed to do. He read the testimony of the wife and daughter of Spaulding, from Orson Pratt's works, Sidney Rigdon's testimony, David Whitmer's testimony from Herald, also of Martin Harris and Oliver Cowdery. The negative sat and writhed and sweat under it. He was unable to impeach the testimony produced by the affirmative. When he spoke, if ever Satan spoke, and looked through man on earth, he did through Harris that night, while on the other hand, light, and truth, and power shown in the face and speech of the affirmative. Harris' last resort was to portray the "Mountain Meadow's massacre," the driving out of Missouri and Illinois; classed the Josephites with the Brighamites, "all were thieves and robbers." He had his tale written, of cullings from various exposure books; yet he said the "American Encyclopedia" was his author, and said it was reliable, &c. The affirmative had the closing speech of fifteen minutes. Had given himself plenty of room to recapitulate, showing his scriptural argument remained untouched, and all his other arguments remained unimpeached. Showed that his opponent had failed in every point; instead of sound reasoning told fables and stories, to turn the people from the truth, as Paul said they would. Showing the act of untruthfulness, and lack of courtesy, by flying from the proposition, winding up by bearing a faithful testimony to the truth of the Book of Mormon, and challenging Harris to continue the discussion. Harris would not continue longer for his tale had ended. The chairman arose and tried to excuse Harris for leaving the proposition, or discarding the Bible; then our moderator arose and gave his view, or understanding of the matter; but while doing so, was set down. After this, Mr. Fitch, the other moderator, arose to explain, saying he was pleased with the course that Mr. Devore pursued, but he (Devore) was mistaken in some things: as he had lived near Kirtland until thirty-five years old, and was an eye witness. Then betrayed himself by asking whether there was ever more than one Hulbert belonged to the church. If he, (Fitch), was an eye witness, and knew all about it, why ask this question? The assembly became uneasy; the chairman had a spark of justice, and tried to get Mr. Fitch to sit down, but he still continued to talk. Harris came to my husband and said, "Do not think that I put this afloat." One of the directors arose, (once a Latter Day Saint), and demanded Fitch to sit down, saying, "If one man is not allowed to talk, another should not be;" Fitch continued. Women arose to their feet, some started for the door. A murmur ran through the crowd, the constable called, "Order." In a few minutes more men would have been fighting, and no telling where it would have ended. Some have declared since, not believers, that they would have given their lives for us. Mr. Fitch evidently saw the trouble arising, and sat down. The chairman arose, quieted the people, commended the affirmative for his noble conduct through the debate, honored him as a gentleman, and his wife as a lady, and proffered the friendship of a neighbor to us; then dismissed.

We since learn that all the thinking minded decided in favor of the affirmative, and say, "Mr. Devore is too much of a gentleman, and to honest, to debate with such a man." This much good it has done, the Saints are more firmly established, and strengthened; the friends of the cause are firmer, and our enemies treat us with a degree of courtesy.

It is upwards of two years since I last wrote, in the which I have been made to both weep and rejoice; have been right, and at others times wrong; have received truth, and believed error; been blessed and tried; through it all I am still a faithful witness, and helper in the work. We hail the Herald with joy. The same rich blessings we need our selves, and pray for, we ask for the church collectively.

Your sister in Christ,
ELLA R. DEVORE.

FALL RIVER, Mass.

The "Gospel Monitor," has for its motto, "Reprove not a scorner, lest he hate thee. Reprove a wise man and he will love thee."

Bro. Joseph:—I am surprised that you have so little discernment as to take the Monitor Editor for a wise man. If you handle coals, you may expect to have black hands. Remember, that "The tongue of the just is as choice silver: the heart of the wicked is little worth," and "He that reproveth a scorner, getteth to himself shame, and he that rebuketh a wicked man, getteth himself a blot."

I am your brother and friend,
JOHN POTTS.

OAKLAND, Alameda Co., Cal.,
January 19th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I wish for you and the "loved ones at home," your associates in the office, the Herald readers, and the whole household of faith, a very happy, prosperous New Year.

The second number of the weekly Herald has just come to hand. I am much pleased with its neat, orderly appearance, both in type and arrangement. It looks as bright as a new dollar. I have not yet had time to peruse its pages, but am longing to do so, feeling assured that they are richly laden with precious words of cheer for the earnest patient workers and watchers for the redemption of Zion. May God bless the Herald, and make it a faithful harbinger of heavenly light, life and peace, to all his Saints; and not to them alone, but to many who now sit in darkness, and in the shadows of death.

The Oakland Branch is in splendid working condition. Its spiritual horizon was never more bright and promising; not a cloud nor a speck in sight to disturb its tranquility. Its officers are duly impressed with the responsibility of their high and holy callings, and are diligently trying to discharge their duties with acceptance in the sight of God; while the Saints in general appear to fully realize the weight of their individual responsibility, and are striving to keep all the commandments, not forgetting the new commandment to "love one another." Our beloved president, D. J. Phillips, like the Roman sentinel, is always to be found at his post, and never caught napping while on duty. Brn. William Anderson, William Hart and Richard Ferris, are always found armed with the sword of the Spirit, and their coat pockets crammed full of the printed word. Bro. H. P. Brown is back in our ranks again, with his armor brightly gleaming as of yore. On last Sunday night he occupied the sacred desk, and delivered a very excellent discourse on the first principles of the gospel.

Our esteemed and aged brother and veteran soldier of the cross, Elder E. H. Webb, of Sacramento, came down here some weeks ago, to endeavor to recuperate his, for a long time, declining health, and we are thankful to say, that he has not only improved, but that he is almost rejuvenated; for on returning from prayer meeting, at which he had also been in attendance, I saw him leaping and skipping like a boy. He is still full of zeal and great love for the work; his first love for the gospel having never abated during his long and arduous service in the Master's cause. May God grant to lengthen out his days, according to the desires of his heart, and crown his declining years with a glorious foreshadowing of eternal life and felicity.

Next comes our dear old brother, Joseph Vernon. We can not pass him by without a kindly notice; for we love him for the integrity of his heart, and his abiding love for the Master's cause. Though deprived of his outward sense of hearing, by reason of great exposure and suffering, while he and his heroic spouse (Sister Vernon) in company with a belated company of "hand-cart" Saints, on their way to Great Salt Lake, were forced to battle with extreme cold and hunger, amidst the relentless frost and snows of the Rocky Mountains, in the, to them, dread Winter of 1857-58, our heavenly Father, in his abundant goodness, seemingly as a means of compensation for the loss of this faculty, has endowed our brother with a very remarkable degree of spiritual sensibility, or perceptibility, making his mind, as it were, a fountain of spiritual intelligence, and oftentimes the dark curtain of futurity is rolled up from before the quickened vision of his mind, unfolding to his enraptured gaze the mysteries and glories of the world to come.

The house is cram, jam full, every time we meet in prayer meeting, and that is every Wednesday evening, and the promise of the Savior, "There will I be in the midst of you," verified every time. About four weeks ago, a very estimable christian lady by special invitation, attended one of our prayer meetings; the Holy Spirit's presence was also with us. The result of course was that we had a glorious meeting. Several spoke in tongues. Some prayed and some prophesied, just as the Spirit gave them utterance. Toward the close of the meeting, our lady visitor arose, and with tears and words of joy, expressed her feelings of peace and delight, testifying that, although she had been a devout christian for about thirty years, she never before had enjoyed so great a spiritual feast; never had felt so much at home with any people. She is now reading the printed word, and already believes the latter day work with all her heart.

Believe me, as ever, your humble brother in Christ,
J. B. PRICE.

SOUTH RAWDON, Nova Scotia,
January 17th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I received your very welcome letter of December 27th. Bro. George Davison's widow wished to be baptized while I was home on a visit during holidays; but wished first to consult with her friends. She will be by and by, whether they are willing or not. I baptized Bro. Newcomb's daughter while home. Had some excellent meetings there; the Saints are letting their light shine, and that place is feeling the effects of it. I also baptized three persons here, and ordained Bro. J. W. Dimock, Priest. Expect to baptize some more soon.

Last evening I attended Baptist meeting. Afterwards I gave notice of meeting Sunday morning, and was refused by two trustees and people, who were encouraged by the minister. I am now going to another school house near, and will preach some more here; but will not stop to contend with people who do not wish to hear, while so many do desire to hear. I will see the few here who are anxious for truth, and then pass on.

I am glad the Herald is weekly. I feel somewhat encouraged in the fact that all things are so surely pointing to the consummation of all things; and think that perhaps, if I am faithful, I may hear the boatswain pipe all hands "Come home," as clearly as I did on the bright Sunday morning in Sacramento, California. God grant it to us all.

Wishing a happy New Year to all the Herald workers, I remain

Yours in bonds,
JOSEPH F. BURTON.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah,
January 20th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Last Wednesday, 17th inst., we buried from our chapel, the mortal remains of Sr. Sarah Browning, one of God's noble and brave hearted daughters. When in this city it required "holy boldness" to step out of the Brighamite Church, and into the Reorganized Church, she took up her cross, left many of her former associates, and valiantly followed her convictions of duty, and united with the persecuted "Josephites." Since then she has been an able and fearless advocate of the truth, a helper in many ways in the building up of the work in this city. With the consent and co-operation of her excellent husband, she made a pleasant home for many of our missionaries when in the city. Brn. Alexander and David Smith, E. C. Brand, R. J. Anthony, Wm. H. Kelley, Z. H. Gurley, and others, often shared their generous hospitality. The funeral services were largely attended by all classes. The writer had the general management of the services. Rev. Iliff, of the M. E. Church, by request, led in prayer, and Elder J. Luff preached a short but most appropriate and excellent sermon. The Apollo Club kindly volunteered to take charge of the music and singing, and they acquitted themselves in a highly creditable manner. Sister Browning left a husband and ten children, seven sons and three daughters, who are sorely stricken with their bereavement. Only the Lord can console and assuage.

On the 4th inst., by request, I preached the funeral sermon of your aunt, Levira Clark—Smith,—Amy. She died from strangulation, induced by sudden excitement, caused by sharp haps at her door, about 5 a. m. She was nominally a member of the Brighamite Church, but at heart was with the Reorganized Church. It is said she failed to unite with the latter, because the former had promised through its bishop, to pay her one thousand dollars on indebtedness to her last husband, and which she feared she might not get, if she was found a "Josephite." Such is the current rumor. Her daughter, Levira, who is the daughter of your late uncle, Samuel H. Smith, it is said by your cousin Samuel, her brother, went partially deranged after her mother's death, and is now, I hear, at St. Mary's (Catholic) Hospital in this city. She at one time was the wife of Joseph F. Smith, but she left him when he took his first plural wife, and then procured a divorce. Her case is indeed a pitiable one. Much might be written in respect to this case, showing the cursed, cruel, damning spirit of polygamy, and its concomitants; but we leave it to other hands, who will attend to that and others in the near future. But I can not close without stating the fact, that none of the Mormon papers have ever, to my knowledge, even mentioned the death or funeral of Sister Amy. If this does not evince the malice of bigotry, and the hatred of fanaticism, I am at a loss to know what it means. What a sham is this for Christianity!

We have had most beautiful weather this Winter till the past two days. Last night the mercury went down to twenty-one degrees below zero, and to-day we are having tolerable Manitoba weather. Those who think Utah can not equal Iowa, Illinois, and Nebraska for frost, had better revise their judgment, from present appearances.

There has been much sickness throughout this territory the past Fall, and so far this Winter, much of it fatal.

Bro. Luff went to Provo this morning, and expects to return here by February 1st, and then go to Malad City, to attend conference, February 4th and 5th. The writer now intends to start east by February 12th, and to be at Lamoni by March 1st, or before, and at Sandwich by March 15th.

W. W. BLAIR.

STEWARTSVILLE, Missouri,
January 22d, 1883.

Bro. F. Smith:—The Herald becoming a weekly is another evidence of God's favor to his people. These marks of Providential watchcare should be noticed and appreciated by his people.

The work in these regions I think, is still adding stability to its footing, by the constant influx of Saints from a distance, and the higher, nobler, lives and examples of those who have long resided here. The world is not so blind to righteousness but what it can, and does see, and appreciates noble traits of character in those whom they would without those traits despise, and spurn, and turn from their society.

We can not make the world see just as we do, neither need we expect them all to obey the gospel; but we can by a consistent walk, a gospel walk, cause them to acknowledge us to be an honest, frugal people; and while they may dislike our doctrine, they will admire our conduct.

The work here has received another impetus by the visit and efficient labors of Brn. A. H. Smith and E. L. Kelley, a combination of the spiritual and temporal. They both did the cause justice in their discourses, which were listened to with marked attention by both the Saints and the world. We can bid them God-speed, for they brought the ancient and true gospel, the same that Paul preached. As Saints we received good counsel, which if followed, will cause the work to move apace. Bro. Kelley brings encouraging news of the financial uplook of the Church. May his most sanguine expectations be more than realized.

Bro. Scott and family arrived safely from Indiana a few days ago, and will locate. Judging from reports we have heard, we have gained some good Saints to our number.

We are having very severe weather, the mercury has fallen as low as 18 degrees below zero.

Yours for truth,

J. M. TERRY.

WILBER, Nebraska,

January 19th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I came here about two weeks ago, to attend our quarterly conference, the weather was bitter cold, still we had a good, spiritual time, long to be remembered by those present. There were but nine officials present, but a good attendance of Saints and outsiders. I have held meetings in four school-houses in this vicinity, and was unable to fill half the calls. People turn out well, and are willing to hear our story of the gospel of salvation.

If this field was carefully and wisely canvassed, I am well satisfied that many would cheerfully enter the fold, and rejoice in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free.

On the 15th I entered the Blue, through a hole in the ice, and baptized Mrs. Mary J. Preston, an excellent lady, living two miles west of here. I frosted both of my cheeks this morning in a five mile ride, eighteen below zero. Will leave here to-morrow, for place of debate, with the Rev. N. M. Allen. I go trusting in the Lord, the only desire of my heart is the spread and establishment of the truth. More anon.

ROBERT M. ELVIN.

BUCHANAN, Michigan,

January 22d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I came to this place Monday the 15th inst., have held four meetings with fair attendance. The citizens of Buchanan, are rather hard to move religiously, in consequence of having been led to consider so many theories that have fallen far short of what they were expected to be, in merit and divinity; notably among them, are two or three different editions of Adventism. Brother John Shook who resides here, has labored zealously and faithfully, for about two years, to do something for the cause, by circulating his Herald and tracts among the people, (and they are read extensively too), and by having meetings conducted here as circumstances have permitted. We hope to see some good results in the time to come. I hope the Herald, as a weekly, will have abundant success. We like it often.

Our labors near Coldwater, and at Clear Lake, Indiana, during November and December, of last year, we learn are not without expected good results. We hope the expectation will be realized not long hence. May be able to visit Manistee and adjacent vicinities in the near future, as we are informed by brother William Kelley, that some in the region indicated desire some one to come and labor there for a season.

I hope our young brethren, in the missionary field, as well as the older ones, will continue to enrich the Herald with their lively compositions on the principles of the gospel, and the evidences of the position we occupy, as drawn from the Bible prophecies. Many persons read their written efforts who are not privileged of hearing them preach. Their efforts to those of the faith, are very strengthening and encouraging. We are just now in the height of the Polar Wave, with the mercury at 24 degrees below zero, and may not be able to do so much in the work as otherwise, till the weather moderates.

The signs of the times at home and abroad, admonish us that, faithfulness and diligence in performing every known duty, are safety and wisdom.

Yours in hope,

COLUMBUS SCOTT.

NORTH HENDERSON, Illinois,

January 24th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I go to-morrow to conduct a series of meetings in the Baptist Church at Taylor Ridge, Rock Island county. Last Thursday evening, at North Henderson, I was invited by Rev. Williams, pastor at that place, to fill his pulpit, and preach to his congregation, it being the commencement of a protracted meeting. I accepted the invitation. I mention this to show the gentlemanly and christian courtesy shown to us by Mr. Williams. If I had a congregation at that place, I should certainly extend the same to him. This certainly shows that prejudice is fast being removed, and we as a people are gaining the respect that is due us.

Yours in bonds,

H. C. BRONSON.

NORTH LACROSSE, Wisconsin,

January 26th, 1883.

Dear Brother:—I don't believe that I have been laboring and studying and sacrificing and praying and searching, for truth, the last twenty, or twenty-five years, so that when I have obtained the truth, to sit quietly down and let the fires of inspiration and spiritual life, smoulder and smother out, in idleness. I hope yet to be of some use in the vineyard, in helping to "cleanse the sanctuary," and at last to stand with the one hundred and forty-four thousand on Mount Zion, celestialized, or immortalized, which is the same thing.

JOB BROWN.

NEW SOUTH WALES,

January, 1883.

Dear Brother:—I am happy to say that the Saints here are all well, and in a prosperous state at present. I see by the last conference that no Elder is appointed for this mission, which we can not believe to be right, that we should be left without any one to take charge of this mission. You will do as you may judge for the best, and I pray that God will guide you by the influence of his Holy Spirit, that all things may be done in honor to his Holy Name, is the desire of your brother in the gospel of Christ.

LUTHER BALLARD.

SPRING CITY, Missouri,

January 22d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I arrived here on the 20th inst., after the most miserable ride of one hundred and thirty miles by hack, night and day. Suffered with cold. Have spoken once. Shall continue on nightly for a time. I am the first of our preachers in this county. What I shall be able to effect, remains to be told hereafter.

Please say through Herald, that my address till further notice, will be Warm Fork, Oregon Co., Missouri. Kind regards to all.

B. V. SPRINGER.

Summary of News.

January 23d—Gustave Dore, the famous French painter and designer, is dead.

Returns of the French vintage for 1882 show a decrease of 3,250,000 hectolitres as compared with 1881, and 16,000,000 hectolitres as compared with the average of the last ten years.

Jan. 24th.—During the excitement in France concerning the expulsion of the pretenders, Prince Napoleon seems to be entirely lost sight of. One would think the Orleans Princes were the only persons affected by the various proposals of the Government.

Royalist manifestations continue at Toulouse. White banners with the fleur-de-lis were hoisted in Nîmes Sunday.

The crisis in France has greatly disturbed the Berlin Bourse.

The progress of affairs in France is watched there with the keenest interest. It is thought great changes are likely to ensue sooner than is generally expected.

Information has been received at Brisbane, Queensland, that a three-masted schooner was lost near the mouth of Fly River, New Guinea, and that the crew, seventeen in number, were killed by savages, their heads being cut off and distributed among the native villages. Capt. Pennafather of the schooner Pearl, made search, but found only a lot of wreckage, with nothing to identify the vessel. His party were several times attacked by natives. One old woman confessed that the natives murdered the crew. Pennafather burnt the native villages and destroyed their canoes.

Jan. 25th.—A gunboat has gone to Innismurray Island, Ireland, with provisions for the inhabitants, reported starving.

Joseph Cowen (Radical), member of Parliament, telegraphed Davitt: "If you or Healy desire to give bail, I will become one of your bondsmen." Healy refuses to give bail, and will go to prison.

It is stated that important evidence has been obtained in regard to the perpetrators of the outrages of the last two years in the West of Ireland. The police anticipate capturing all the members of the organization which promoted the crimes, also the persons concerned in the murder of Lord Mountmorres. It is probable they will be indicted shortly. A man believed to have taken part in the murder of Blake and his servant Flynn, near Loughbrea, is now in America. He is being sought after, and, if found, it is surmised he will turn Queen's evidence and disclose the names and whereabouts of his associates.

Police are guarding the house of the informer Farrell, owing to threats against his mother and sister.

A hurricane at Limerick occasioned serious damage. Houses were blown down, vessels in the harbor suffered, trains from Galway to Dublin ran off the track, and an engine and six carriages were wrecked.

The Porte has sent a circular note to the Powers pointing out that the English note concerning Egypt is at variance with Turkey's admitted rights over the latter country. The Porte has also requested the Turkish Ministers abroad to call attention to the absolute necessity of the strict observance of the sovereign rights of the Porte. Germany has advised the Sultan to accept the English proposals, as they are in the interest of Turkey itself.

There is an evident determination on the part of the French Assembly to protect the Government from Princely conspirators who abuse the hospitality of the Republic. To-day the committee of the Chamber having the Floquet bill in charge adopted the proposition to exclude from France and its dependencies all members of families which have reigned in France—Bonapartists, Bourbons, and Orleanists alike. They are also to be deprived of their political rights and declared ineligible to hold office or to serve in the army. Fine and imprisonment await any pretender who returns to the country after being expelled.

The revolution in Ecuador, South America, continues. Guayaquil is still quiet, but the Government refuses to be responsible for the safety of foreigners and their property.

The grand jury in the Criminal Court at St. Louis, Mo., made a special report to Judge Van Wagoner this afternoon on the subject of city dramshops, which they were particularly charged to examine. They say they investigated the matter thoroughly and obtained incontestible proof that at least 80 per cent of crime and pauperism of the city came directly from the saloons.

Jan. 26th.—Premier Duclerg and Prince Napoleon are both reported as seriously ill, although the probability is that in the latter case at least the illness is a diplomatic one. There seems no doubt that the bill expelling all pretenders from France will be passed by a large majority in the Chamber.

A heavy gale prevails to-day, particularly at Southport and Liverpool, causing much damage to shipping and also to houses. A schooner was lost with all hands at Yarmouth. At Oldham two persons were killed, and six injured by the gale.

The explosion of gunpowder at the works of the Potentite Company, Liverpool, England, killed two men, injured three severely, and destroyed the building.

In consequence of the revelations made at the trial of the anarchists at Lyons, Gen. Mouravieff, the Public Prosecutor, has temporarily quitted St. Petersburg. On his return the Government will prosecute Kobozeff, who was connected with the construction of the mine in Little Garden street. Other prominent Nihilists will be prosecuted at the same time.

A secret revolutionary press has been discovered in Odessa, Russia. Several Nihilists have been arrested.

The twenty-one prisoners who were arraigned in the Police Court last Saturday, at Dublin, Ireland, on a charge of conspiracy to murder Government officers, and who were remanded for the week, will be reexamined to-morrow. The investigation will be held in Kilmainham Court-House, as the Government fears the prison van might be attacked if the accused were brought before the Police Court in Dublin. The court-house in Kilmainham, which adjoins the jail, is guarded by the military. It is reported that astounding disclosures will be made in regard to the Phenix Park murders, and that the evidence to be given will completely eclipse that obtained Saturday last.

The effects of the late severe snow-storm and extraordinary cold weather are beginning to be felt and made known. Reports arrive from Southern and Western Nebraska and Northwestern Kansas that the ranchmen are meeting with much loss to their herds. The outlook for them is extremely discouraging. Cattle in general had passed through the winter in a more than average condition, and every hope was expressed for an unusual drive for the spring. The cattle are seen to bunch together and huddle behind any object which shields them from the cold or forms a protection or shelter, while hundreds drop down exhausted, never to rise. They are compelled to force themselves through the snow to obtain food: but a few days of this makes their noses sore, and freezes them, and to touch them is sufficient to keep them from further search, and, discouraged, they die of hunger, weakness and cold.

Passengers coming from the Northern snow blockade to Des Moines, report great loss to live stock by the recent cold snap. One gentleman who was stormbound six days at Algona and two days getting here, reports that at Eagle Grove six car loads of hogs froze to death en route to market. He saw large numbers of cattle dead in the fields along the route, and farmers report great damage to stock by freezing.

A thorough inspection today of that portion of Wilkesbarre, Pa., which threatens to fall apart at any moment shows that the worst apprehensions as to the future exist. Careful mining engineers have driven over the grounds since morning, and while they can not just tell how dangerous matters are at present, they shake their heads ominously when questioned, and hesitate to give an opinion. The threatened district lies mostly on a sloping hillside which runs gradually down towards the Susquehanna River. It is dotted with all manner of residences, many of which were vacated by their occupants today. Until a thorough underground inspection is made no one can tell whether the surface will be sundered again or not. When the earth cracked on Wednesday morning the water pipes were torn apart, and the needful supply was at once shut off, and as there is no means of obtaining water save by going to the river, a mile and a half away, the situation of those who still remain in their houses is made more distressing. One of the greatest troubles is the inability of inhabitants who have deserted their dwellings to obtain shelter, as houses and tenements are scarce in the vicinity, and even in the city all are crowded to their full capacity.

Jan. 28.—Lyons, France, is in a state of excitement. It is rumored anarchists intend to storm the Prison St. Paul, where Prince Krapotkin is confined. Troops and police are posted in the neighborhood of the prison, and other precautions taken.

The steamer wrecked near Swansea was the Agnes Fack, from Sardinia, with lead. Witnesses of the disaster saw the crew of twelve men swept from the mast. The steamer was out of the reach of rockets and unapproachable by boats. All hands perished, including the Captain, who stripped to swim ashore.

A French aeronaut was killed by collision of the balloon with a housetop.

The Porte's reply to Granville's circular requests the conference to reassemble.

The convicts on Hanlbowl Island attacked the wardens and badly beat the police. Military quelled the meeting after several prisoners were hurt.

The Government organ of the State of Chiapas, Mexico, publishes a long article on the cholera, which has scourged the southern part of the State and which has not yet disappeared. The General Government is implored to render assistance, as the number of victims is immense, and misery and want reign supreme wherever the epidemic has raged fiercely. The Pueblo Libre says: Our State of Chiapas has suffered a series of misfortunes. Floods first swept away part of Capital, and in the hot zone (tierra caliente) crops and fields were destroyed. Then, in 1881, the locusts devoured everything that was green, and left our farms and forests a perfect desert. Then they returned and played the same havoc in 1882, to be shortly followed by the cholera scourge." A letter written from the same State early in December says: "Sanitary cordons were established round the tierra caliente (the hot region) where sporadic outbreak of cholera raged with fiercest intensity. The cold and temperate regions were not affected. Whole families died in a single night. On some plantations there are only three or four people left alive. Many bodies have been devoured by the dogs, because those who were stricken down were at once abandoned. The town of Tuxtla had 8,000 inhabitants, 600 of whom are dead. Of the 6,000 in Tonala upward of 1,000 are dead. This town suffered most severely, twenty to thirty persons dying daily. This horrible epidemic broke out in July, 1882, on a farm bordering on the River Chiapa; thence it extended to San Bartola, where it worked hard for a month, and then moved onwards, smiting Chiapa and Tuxtla almost on the same day. It remained in these towns about twelve or fourteen days, and then it went toward Tehuantepec; thence it penetrated to the Atlantic, and caused many deaths in Tabasco and other places. It is certain that it is a disease that only affects the hottest regions, as not a case occurred in San Cristobal las Casas, although many moved there from the infected region. Some think the outbreak occurred owing to an immense number of locusts having been buried at the farm near Chiapa River, where the epidemic broke out. They were not sufficiently covered, the hot weather cracked the ground, and pestilential exhalations followed, which may have bred the disease."

Jan. 29th.—A vessel, supposed to be the steamer Black Watch, is sunk off Mumbleshead. Twenty-six persons were drowned. She is 1,397 tons, and belongs to Cardiff. The storm continues.

The bark, Royal Tar, from Philadelphia for Liverpool, has been driven into Penarth Road. Her decks were swept, and other damage done. One man was lost. Ten bodies washed ashore near Penarth.

The bark, Rance, for Galveston, returned to Liverpool. The brig, Ceres, from Galveston, for Queenstown, has taken refuge at Whitehaven.

The heaviest floods in the British Lake District for twenty years now prevail. Lakes Derwentwater and Bassinthaite now join, and a portion of Keswick is submerged.

A steamer, thought to be the Quebec, is sighted at sea disabled.

A schooner-rigged steamer of 1,200 tons was wrecked off Tuscar Light. It is feared the crew was lost.

Another French Ministry has resigned and a new one has been formed, partly out of the ruins of the old one. It is reported that the new Cabinet will comprise all the old Ministers except M. Duclerc, who has been the most conspicuous failure as a Premier France has ever had, and M. Billot, Minister of War, and M. Jauriquibery, Minister of Marine, who would never agree to the retirement of the Orleansist Princes from the army which they have served so faithfully under the Republic. It is significant that M. Jules Ferry, one of the strongest men in France, declined to undertake the formation of the new Cabinet. That duty devolved upon M. Fallieres. He was a member of the old Cabinet. He has always kept his place in the Extreme Republican Left, which he took when he entered political life six years ago.

The attitude of China toward Japan is becoming unpleasant, if not actually hostile, the cause of the ill-feeling being the still unsettled Loo Choo question.

Official trade returns for 1882 show the total exports for Yokohama, Japan, to have been $26,000,000; total imports, $20,300,000. The exports increased $5,250,000 since the previous year, and the imports decreased upwards of $1,000,000. The principal exports were silk and tea, and the principal imports cotton, yarn, shirtings, sugar, and kerosene.

From present indications, it seems that the European powers are preparing once more to divide between them the Turkish domain. It seems it is intended to extend the south-eastern frontiers of Russia, confirm England in her possession of Egypt; and increase the political and territorial powers of Austria, all at the expense of Turkey.

A terrible wind storm visited Denver again at an early hour this morning. A dozen or more buildings were demolished, while the roofs of many more were torn off, and in some instances carried 250 feet. During the storm another electric light tower was blown down, and a car on the circle railroad was blown from the track. Several persons were seriously though none fatally injured. In several instances roofs and debris were blown in one direction, while in the immediate neighborhood others were carried in the opposite direction. A singular feature was that the wind came in gusts, each succeeded by a few moments of perfect calm.

Joliet, Illinois, is suffering from the continued idleness of its iron and steel workmen, nearly 4,000 of whom are without employment. Considerable destitution already exists, as the municipal appropriation for charitable relief is exhausted. Nothing is known as to the reopening of the iron and steel mills, which form the chief industry of the city, and the outlook is a very bad one. The men who are out of work have been employed in an industry specially favored by the protectionist tariff, but it does not seem to have protected them from starvation. Indeed, it has neither placed the workmen above the reach of want nor taught them provident habits, for official complaint is made that the greatest destitution exists among the families of those who have been receiving the highest wages which the tariff robbers are so fond of contrasting with the "pauper labor of Europe."

The Cook County, Illinois poor-house now contains eight hundred inmates.

Jan. 30th.—The gale which commenced Thursday night in Great Britain, still continues. In England, great loss has been caused both by the gale and the floods. A number of shipwrecks have been reported, and some loss of life. At Salisbury the wind was accompanied by violent rain, and there was much damage to property. The low-lying lands were flooded. The gale has continued with great violence throughout the east and north. At York, on Saturday, the temperature during the day and night was excessively low. Snow fell six inches on the wolds, floods covered the outlying districts, large trees were uprooted, sheep drowned or starved, and farm buildings blown down. The sea defenses at Bridlington were much damaged. A huge wall of brick and masonry at Driffeld was overturned. A considerable amount of damage was done at Bradford. At Preston walls were blown down and chimney-stacks were blown through the roofs of houses, injuring several of the inmates. At Fleetwood, which seemed to lie directly in the region of the cyclonic disturbance, the gale was felt most severely. A large chimney fell, demolishing a building. At Charley some buildings sustained great damage, and a chimney thirty yards high was blown down. At Chester the wind had the force of a hurricane. Snow fell during the morning and chimney-stacks were overturned. At Neston a church-tower was damaged and haystacks blown over. The Irish mails were delayed. Passengers across the Channel experienced most tempestuous weather. Snow fell for several hours on Saturday in North Wales, succeeded by a heavy down-pour of rain. Rivers overflowed their banks.

The low-lying country in the central and western parts of Ireland, particularly Tipperary and Queen's Counties, was inundated. At Waterford on Saturday night great damage was done to property. Several old houses were blown down, and the harbor was crowded with vessels seeking shelter. At Ennis the principal streets are flooded, the River Fergus having overflowed its banks. The main thoroughfare looks like a canal, and all business is suspended. The effects of the storm in the neighborhood of Enniskillen have been very great. Much damage has been done to the town. In Scotland, the waters of Lough Erne reached a great height, and the River Dee overflowed its banks. In the Vale of Llangallen many acres of land have been submerged. The inmates of the houses flooded by the waters had to leave their homes and find places of safety. In the course of last evening, or during the night, a fresh or strong gale blew on all the English coasts, and during the night and morning the storm in the midlands increased in violence. In the country districts trees were uprooted and thousands of acres laid under water. In Birmingham a phenomenal darkness prevails, and some of the streets are strewn with debris. At Stoke-on-Trent heavy rain has fallen without ceasing for the last twenty-four hours. In North Staffordshire the rivers along the Trent Valley and Churnet Valley overflowed in some places, and miles of land are submerged. At Newbury a terrific storm of wind and rain swept over that part of Berkshire last night, and up to eleven this morning there is no sign of abatement. The floods are rising rapidly. At Kennett Valley and Wakefield rain has fallen in torrents, accompanied by high winds. During the night and this morning the lower parts of the valley have been inundated, and the waters are still rising. The River Cald overflowed its banks, and the lower floors of some of the large grain warehouses and malt-kilns have been flooded. A terrific gale swept over the lower Severn Valley last night. Large tracts of land are inundated, and the floods threaten to become very serious. At Cardiff the storm continues, and several fresh casualties are reported. In Bristol Channel a steamer is said to have gone down with all hands off Porthcawl. There is much delay in telegraphic communication between Liverpool, Manchester, Newcastle, Scotland, and Ireland.

A genuine blizzard has prevailed in Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, Dakota, Michigan, Colorado, and elsewhere, blocking the highways and railroads, delaying travel, destroying stock, etc.

A most terrific wind storm occurred yesterday at Denver, Colorado, destroying over $200,000 worth of property, and injuring several persons.

The German papers urge the establishment of an International Court of Appeals to take cognizance of decisions in all maritime courts concerning collisions at sea, with a view to establishing international steering rules.

McCarthy, O'Donnell, and Callon, Irish members of Parliament, appeal to the English people to assist the starving Irish farmers and laborers. The Government is appealed to and the Lord Mayor asked to open a relief fund.

The Montoneros of South America to-day attacked Puirá, but were repulsed. Many were killed on both sides, including Juan Semirao and Chalaco Garcia, Montonero Chiefs. Maximilian Fria's house was burned, his brother wounded, and his cousin killed.

SERMON BY PRES. JOSEPH SMITH,
OF LAMONI, IOWA,
AT THE SAINTS' CHAPEL, LAMONI,
DECEMBER 17TH, 1882.

THE subject to which I desire to-night to call your attention and present some thoughts upon if I should be permitted a degree of liberty, is to answer the question why the religion I profess is any better than the religion professed by other men. What may be the reasons that the peculiar form of faith that binds us together is any better, founded in any deeper wisdom or fraught with any better results than the forms espoused by any other people.

One of the reasons why I present this subject to-night is this: Ever since the days of the Athenians there have always been classes of men in all nations and in all principle cities of all nations, whose business it has been to seek out something new. To get away from the dense and common channels in which men think, and delve out new truths, or to present new philosophies, enticing men away from those things with which they had become fully familiar.

Our own time is no exception to this rule by any means. And for some reason, doubtless known to the wisdom of the Almighty, and possibly designed in his economy, a spirit of unrest is abroad; and ever since the advent of spirit rappings at Rochester, New York, the rise of Andrew Jackson Davis, since the days of Swedenborg, a spiritual philosophy has been taught applying to the things of the border land; and men have arisen everywhere, in the Church and out of it, who have been ready to announce themselves as freethinkers. The legal fraternity has them, the medical societies have them, the schools of philosophy have them, and there are independent men found in the ranks of all the churches. And it seems curious, and it has been taken as one of the signs of the times that marks the strange degree of degradation into which the nations have fallen in the minds of some of those who have become strongly conservative in the church, that he who is the master of evil has sent out this spirit for the purpose of disturbing, if not wholly destroying the Christian faith.

We do no violence to the memory of any of them who have gone before, nor do we do violence to them that now live who style themselves freethinkers, if we assume the right, standing within the pale of a church, to say that we also are freethinkers, and that the principle of freethought does not consist in casting off all restraints, or in going out of the common channels in which men think, disregarding all the rules that may have been established in which thought may travel.

Sometimes to the mind of your speaker it is illustrated in this wise: A preacher at one time in the town of Princeville, Illinois, was expected to speak before a district conference, and had in the congregation which he was addressing one of these individuals. And he had publicly called in question some of the teachings of the speaker, and had given it notice among some of the brethren of the individual who was expected to speak. And in conversation in passing from the place of refreshment to where the conference was held, a number of boys were flying kites upon the square, the vacant lot there; and as a matter of course, as has been the strife in our own little town during the past summer, each individual was seeking to fly his kite the highest and the best, and make the best display with that which he had. The thought was suggested, why not discuss this question of freethought from this standpoint. Why not make an inquiry as to what are the reasons men throw off these restraints in thinking, and announce themselves as freethinkers, without any expressed and accepted rule of action by which their conduct is to be governed and controlled, and by which they expect to be measured?

So in the discussion which followed this question was raised, and the speaker made this statement: That as a matter of course he was a freethinker, but he proposed a new departure. He proposed to go out upon the commons with a kite in his hand and all the appurtenances, except the string, and announce there that he expected to fly his kite higher and better and make a better display with it than any other upon the ground. An individual noticing him says, "How is this, sir, you have no string to your kite?" "I don't need any string. Mine is a free kite and I propose to set it afloat in the wind, and as a matter of course it must fly. I will label it freethought, and it is bound to fly. It must fly because it is a free kite. It is to fly upon the principle of freethought. This principle by which a kite is confined to the ground and made to conserve a specific purpose only so far from the ground as it may go by reason of the string to which it is attached, must be removed and discarded at once, and the kite must inevitably fly.

Now there was not a boy on that square but what knew better than that. There is not one here that does not know better than that. But the individual who had labeled himself freethought, got angry and said the speaker was not honest.

Mr. Ingersoll says we theologians are not honest. He says, "If these preachers were to express their honest thoughts?" And he charges it home upon Lorimer, Thomas, and all the rest of the Chicago preachers, that they are not honest in their ways of thinking—"If they would only give voice to their honest convictions and thoughts?" It was a good reply one of them made in answering this question: "Is it not remarkable that a disciple of evolution of the survival of the fittest should admit that so long a time had been at work in evolving one man who had the grace and hardihood to speak his honest thought?"

Now it has ever been in the world and must be to-day, that just as soon as a man rushes out into the street, or gets upon the forum and announces himself as an honest man he should be watched—I have never seen a man or woman, and I never expect to see one who proclaims himself especially honest, better than his neighbors, but what will bear watching. They will bear it; if they are honest it wont hurt them, and if they are not they need it.

Your speaker began life considerable of a free thinker. He had been in early boyhood life baptized into the faith. But he grew up under the auspices of the Methodist Church, and listened to the claims made by the Presbyterian Church. Just as soon as the great questions of life began pressing upon him for solution, and the platform upon which he would stand and make his mark in the world, questions that every young man or woman must ultimately examine for themselves and determine what course they will pursue, were presented to him. He began to ask himself the question which way he would go. The law was open to him, and he read law from fifteen years up. But he found in the legal profession a great number of them who were profane men, individuals who disregarded the restraints of religion, both in their moral life and their conduct as citizens, and always when the question of religion was sprung.

He looked out upon the medical profession, but found that there too, all that seemed necessary to do to make a man a complete infidel so far as the truths of the Bible were concerned, was to give him a diploma in an authorized form from some one of the colleges to practice medicine. Somehow dealing with the physical natures of man has made unbelievers in the great advance of spiritual life.

He never adopted the false notion that he was not reponsible for his thoughts. He read Thomas Paine, Dr. Combe and Dr. Hall, O. S. Fowler, and for years was a regular subscriber to the Phrenological Journal and the advanced journals of the day. He took upon himself the idea of running a free lance against everything that came along, especially if it took the guise of a claim to religious teaching, and when that staunch defender of the Methodist faith then presiding over the conference from Canton, west to the Mississippi river, Richard Haney, one of the most staunch and radical defenders of the Methodist Episcopal Church it has ever had, the individual who was Chaplain of the 116th Illinois, and was called the fighting Chaplain, now something like eighty years of age, and when I met him last he had just finished presiding over a conference district comprising twenty-two congregations and had just held his last conference in the district. Attending his meeting one time he returned with my step-father to the house. I had had a connection with the temperance association held in the Methodist Church. In conversation with my step-father, Elder Haney expressed the thought that it would be an excellent thing if I would profess religion; and he said to me, putting the thought into action, "You are a well meaning young man, you have these moral reforms at heart, why not unite with us and take part in the church work as well as the temperance meetings? You have this cause at heart, why not unite with us?"

I said, "Mr. Haney, I would prefer not to tell you."

He insisted upon the answer. I was but a boy. Finally I told him that the principle reason was I could not believe the doctrine that he taught.

"O, tell us what peculiar doctrine it is, and perhaps this difficulty may be removed."

I told him plainly that I did not believe in the hell fire that he taught.

I had just listened to him, as he in connection with the local preachers had uttered the most fearful denunciations against the sinner, and had claimed that this term of probation ended at the grave, never allowing a chance for any body after that to repent or anything of the kind. If he left the life that now is, and passed away and had not made his choice, he must go down to the realms of darkness and despair; and these regions were pictured out as being a place where infants and all them that went out without a profession of Christ were to serve the pleasure of God in eternal torment forever and forever. When the probation here ended for an individual, and he had not accepted Christ in any form, it did not seem to be according to the character claimed for God, and a love for humanity, to consign him to hell fire. But if he accepted Christ in any specific form of religion, it did not seem to make any difference which one, why then he went immediately to the great realms of glory and peace, and there he was received into all that was good, and for the time remained there. But by and by he came back to earth and took up the body in the resurrection. I told him plainly that I did not believe that doctrine of hell fire. I did not know where my intense prejudice against it came from. I did not then, I know now where it came from. The underlying principle had been taught; the foundation of the thought had been laid.

After that when not accepting this philosophy, it was found impracticable for me to become utterly infidel or unbelieving so far as the existence of God was concerned, and I may just as well now tell you how I made this choice and the thing that brought it to pass.

I got interested in reading something about those wandering Bedouin Arabs, wandering Ishmaelites, who have not changed their form of government or manner of living since Ishmael became a wanderer, and are to-day a standing monument of the curse of the Almighty, showing their Ishmaelitish origin down to the present time; their habits and customs being just the same as Ishmael's must have been when he became a wanderer.

There happened to be one of those extraordinary beings over there called Franks. They called every white man a Frank then. They have learned better now. This Bedouin and Frank were traveling over the plains. But whenever evening came, this devoted Mohammedan knelt down and turned his face towards his Jerusalem and uttered his evening prayer to the Almighty. When the morning came, as the sun rose up in the far distant east, this man, this untutored savage of the plain, bowed down in worship to his God. The Frank for a while took no notice of it, only that it stopped him in his course. After a time he took notice of it, and asked the devotee if he did not know there was no use in that. Why? Because there is no God. This untutored heathen philosopher immediately rose to his feet as the morning sun came up in his grandeur, and after he had finished his orison, he said, looking up and sweeping his hand, as he in his native grandeur might do, "That sky, this earth," stamping his feet upon it to show how firm he felt it to be, "they never came by chance."

Here was a rebuke unto this man who had gone to him with what he deemed to be a better philosophy, teaching him there was no God. Yet that which had been spoken in the Psalms, "The heavens declare thy glory, and the earth speaketh forth thy praise," had found lodgment in the heart of this untutored wanderer of the plain, and with one grand sweep of his hand he had swept away the last vestige of doubt there might be of the existence of God.

I said to myself, I can not be an unbeliever. But as a matter of course I thought of it in an evil way. I thought of that which hundreds and thousands of other men must think of, which some of you must be thinking of at this time perhaps, that if there was a designer, a cause of these things, and it was all the result of the same Divine wisdom, there must be continued evil being designed. Hence these characteristics of ours inhere. He gave us these longings for the beyond, they come from the same Divine source, how are they to be gratified?

I never made the miserable mistake that some have made, (I call it miserable mistake, and if any here feel outraged by the expression when I have qualified it, I will make my bow and apologize therefor), I never made the miserable mistake to suppose that God in his mercy, when he had made such wondrous contrariety in unity out of all the grand and devious things by which man was surrounded, and placed within him such logical instincts, that all things connected with his every day life must be made to agree with the square and compass of his thought and brain; after he had so wisely ordered all these things, that he had left spiritual things that were related to the spiritual nature of man in such condition that anything would do for a religion. I never made that mistake. Now it is worth while sometimes to notice the transition from first one thing and then another. Just as soon as this had been decided in the mind, the question that arose in the early time of this latter day work came up, "Which one; O Lord, which one."

Well, as I had told Bro. Haney, I could not go into that one that taught hell fire in the way it was taught. Why? Because it did not seem to comply with that which was placed within, that God in his infinite mercy having created the earth and the inhabitants thereof, and placed the bounds in which they were to dwell, should make the Hottentot bound to one law, the European, the Caucasian, to another law; the citizens of the Cape of Good Hope, Caffreland, obedient to one law, and the citizens of the temperate climes subservient to another law. Or that away up in the frozen regions of the north there should be found a people recognizing no law like that they had in the governments south. That all of these, when they should come into the great judgment, were to be brought before him who sat upon the throne, that he was to open a specific law that had come unto the civilized Christian, and was out of that law to condemn the whole races of men.

There was one of the first things that struck me as discreditable in its presentation of God and the Lord Jesus Christ and the religion of the Bible. I do not wonder that there has been such a host of infidels made by such teaching. I can well echo what Professor Swing said, "I hold the church responsible for much of the infidelity that is in the world." It would have made an infidel of me, it would indeed, if I had been compelled to accept it. I could not do it.

Some people say we are not responsible for our thoughts, but I do not believe that either; because I am responsible for mine. I have ever been responsible for mine. I do not believe any man ever lived but what was responsible for his thoughts. Not in the sense that he can by any possibility prevent thought rising in his brain; but the very moment that he allows it to crystalize into a motive or act, he is responsible for it. Though Mr. Ingersoll made that the starting point for a discourse that he preached in Chicago not long since, he certainly made a great mistake. Ask him if a man is responsible for his conduct legally, and he will tell you he is. Why? Because the law holds no man ignorant of the law. As a consequence it does not matter what he thinks about the law. It does not matter what may be his thoughts concerning the law. He must know his duty as compared with the law itself. Therefore he is responsible for his thoughts.

Now I propose to try this for a moment and see whether it is true or not. I wanted to be a black-smith, and I am sorry now I did not make one. I had the smith part, and it would not have taken long to have made the black. But my step-father and mother had more ambitious views. I must be per force a lawyer. Now the question is, Was I responsible for the thoughts that afterward culminated in a life? As a matter of course I was. In what sense? Why I thought to be a black-smith and they would not let me. And then I thought to be a lawyer, and possibly spoiled a good preacher to make a poor lawyer. So far as that is concerned here is the difficulty. The way of choice was left out. Out of what? Out of the reach of the individual? No, clearly not. Let me tell you the individual made the choice of the channels in which his thought would go. Whether they would go in the channels of fashioning iron, and making the plastic material comport to the design or model in his mind, and cultivate nerve and brain until they came to produce that desired result, and make hard iron conform to that which was intended; or seek the channels that were of a legal character, and think according to law.

I do not know but what if I had been the seventh son I might have gone into the channels to make a preacher. I might have chosen that form of thought.

There is no individual present but what thinks in words or pictures; and they never think a picture but what they describe it in words just as soon as they have thought it. The thought goes into that channel, and they do it voluntarily and are responsible for their thoughts in that way. They adopt the channels in which their thoughts run.

The merchant seeks to turn his money into the channels from which it is expected to make a return. He makes choice of the channels of his thought. What are they? Those by which he can keep the capital which he has placed in his business intact, and increase it by legitimate means. And he thinks continually how to do it. If he is worth a button in his trade he will think what kind of calico will sell the best, and what grades of cloth of every description will take the market the best. If he thinks according to that which is correct he will make the most successful man. But if he does not think correctly what is the result? Loss must inevitably ensue.

If a man proposes to build a house he must see to it that he thinks in the channels of a building man; if he makes a mistake he can calculate that his building will tumble about his ears. Is he responsible for his thoughts?

Go and ask an architect for the form and character of a building according to your specifications, and if he gives you one that after you have erected the superstructure you dare not move into it, What do you think of him? Is he responsible for his thoughts? Take him into court and make him pay for not thinking straight.

Suppose I hire a mason to build me a foundation wall, and he goes to work and puts me up a wall, and after he has built it I have to go to work and prop up the sides of it, what about his thoughts? Is he responsible for them? He builds as he thought. If he had thought substantially he would have built substantially; but as he did not think substantially he as a consequence did not build substantially.

What has this to do with religion? Very much. I will tell you why.

When I a young man began to cast about to see what kind of religion would please me; there must be some in the world, some of course, because God in his infinite mercy must have made a religion to suit all classes of men as I heard a Congregationalist minister once say, and there must be a religion lying about that I might obtain. I could not find it in one church, because my probation ended at my death, and if I had not accepted Christ according to that specific form, I must forever go out and depart from his presence. I could not accept that. I could not accept it a bit more than Ingersoll or any other thinker of that class. The reasons are logical. Everybody can see them. They are logical according to our methods of thought. They are logical according to the ideas of common justice between man and man as individuals. The idea of bringing me before a great throne upon which an august being sat, who in his own hands held all the reins of the children of men and could move or unmove, fix or unfix everything as seemed to be suitable, and then judge me out of a law that I never heard, what an absurdity that was. I could not believe it.

I became acquainted with one of the most zealous and able of Presbyterian ministers. He went stark crazy over a picture that he had made indicating the character of the infernal regions. I don't know which he got it from, Milton or Dante. I never knew. He painted the dark realms so horrible that his own brain could not stand against it, and it became unsettled. They asked me to watch with him, and also asked me if I was afraid. I asked if he did anything more than talk. They said no. I told them it took more than the talk of a crazy man to frighten me. I knew him in his health, and I knew he could not handle me when he was well, and I thought he could not after he had been wasted with three or four weeks of disease. I went and watched with him. I did not hear anything extraordinary, but when he became uneasy and restless I laid my hand upon his forehead, when he grew quiet and went to sleep. He told the doctor the next day that an angel had been with him. He mistook me, that is all. I did not have any wings, by the way.

I looked out and thought I could not find rest there. I found something in the testimony of the scriptures that gave a starting point.

The Apostle Paul speaking of the time that was to come said that God would "Judge all men by that man of whom he hath given an assurance, in that he hath raised him from the dead." Here is the starting point. Now am I responsible as to what choice I may make as to the religion I may serve? Let us look at it closely.

I could not accept one because the great mass of mankind might be shut off. It seemed to be so cruel to judge and condemn men by a law that they never heard. It seemed to be so out of all proportion to the elements of justice that are found among our own selves, that I could not accept it. When I found this scripture it seemed like there was a ray of light there. Then I remembered the teachings of the fathers. What are they? "He that liveth without law shall be judged without law." The Apostle Paul speaking of the Gentiles says: "If they by nature do the things of the law, they are a law unto themselves."

Now here was a chance for a religion farther on. All men shall be judged for their deeds when the great Judge shall sit, as depicted in the revelations.

Now this seems to be in accordance with common sense and reason; that men should be judged out of the things written in the books, and those things written in the books were the deeds which they had done in the body. No man can find any fault with this platform of judgment, upon which men are to receive rewards for that which they have done that is good, and punishment for that which they have done that is evil, the deeds that they have done in the body.

Now we take it for granted that Mr. Ingersoll in explaining his faith as a free-thinker runs a common lance against us men within the pales of the churches, whatever may be the denominational lines drawn over us.

I am willing to admit right here that I accept the faith that I now espouse because I prefer it. I am willing to make the statement that I believe that which I have espoused, and given my life to, because I prefer to believe it. I do not prefer to disbelieve.

Having discarded that because I thought it too narrow, and did not give place for the whole race of the children of men, there is another stream, another religion that I might accept, that which saves all men. That suited my heart more. I liked that a great deal better.

One of the best preachers that I ever heard in my life, a man by the name of Westfall, I heard in the summer and fall of 1855, in the city of Canton, Illinois. How he would explain the saving of sinners from the depths of misery by the goodness of God, and all that sort of thing, was worth while for a man to hear.

But stop. I could not accept that. Why? Because my every day experience brought me into contact with men that were not worth saving, and it was throwing away the clemency of God to save them, and put them side by side with them that had all their life time conserved that which was good among their fellow men. For him to take the humanitarian; for him to take the lover of his race; for him to take the man of good deeds, or the woman of good deeds, of just and pure life, and put that individual side by side in the realms of glory with them that were covered with crime and infamy, that had sought to defraud their fellow men, or that had imbued their hands with the blood of their fellows, I could not do it, and I would not do it.

I learned that away back yonder somewhere in the march of time, he that had fashioned the world, had said, (and I believe he had it written everywhere, and had so written it that men recognized it), that he that doeth evil must be punished for it. You can find it in heathen lands; you can find it in civilized lands, in our own civilized land; there is a code, which if it be infringed brings the law of the governing land to bear upon the transgressor, and he must pay the penalty because there is no mercy in the law. There may be in the administrators, but there is none in the law.

Whence came this universal fiat against that which is evil and wrong? It must have had its origin with him who fashioned the nature and lives of men. Hence I could not accept that philosophy. There must be a golden mean somewhere between these. Lo and behold I find it in the latter day faith.

I am not abusing the Methodist friends because of their philosophy. I simply say I could not accept it. I am not abusing our friends of the Universalist Church because I express myself that I can not receive their belief. I give my reasons for it. It is not that I am prejudiced against the individuals, but the philosophy. I am responsible for my thoughts, and I propose to use them in the way that I may make a proper answer how I may have used them by and by.

What says Mormonism with regard to this question? First, that all men shall be judged according to the deeds done in the body. Unto whom shall they answer? Now mark you, and if I make a mistake here, let some of the brethren take me to one side, and whisper in my ear until I am correct. They answer unto God, and not to Jesus Christ. Hence when the apostle says "He shall judge all men by that man of whom he hath given an assurance, in that he hath raised him from the dead," he shows you the medium through whom he hath "brought life and immortality to light," not the judge. I am not going to confound Christ with the judge now. I may do it hereafter if it is necessary. But the subject to-night don't demand it.

The heathen man stands before God. The civilized man, the man of the civilized nations stands before God. The semi-civilized man stands before God, and all nations must answer unto him for that which they have done, and individuals must likewise answer to him. Now there is the first grand consideration.

By what law will he judge them? By the law which they have received; and as a consequence the man that dwells at south Good Hope, the Hottentott and the Caffre and the Digger Indian, or the Bushman, he holds them all accountable for that law that has come unto them so far as the purposes of this life are concerned. You that are citizens of the State of Iowa, he will hold you responsible for the law that has come unto you, which you have received; and he will make you answer according to the strictest requirements of your understanding of that law. Is there anything wrong about that philosophy? No. All men say that is right. That does not make a good man without any effort upon his part. No man can be good without any effort upon his part. It makes men all conform to the law which they have accepted as that which is good. It is the philosophy announced by the Apostle Paul when he says: "When I have consented unto the law, that it is good," then he hath put a barrier upon his conduct.

Now this first. Secondly, God was in the world in the meridian of time in Jesus Christ, in a great endeavor to reconcile this world of turmoil and trouble unto himself. I never read it that God was endeavoring to reconcile himself to the world. Why? Because that when God Almighty made the world, he made it just as good as it was possible for him to make it, and when he made man he made him the best and the crowning good of all that he had created, and he put him in the earth that he might continue to exercise dominion over it as his highest creation. That he had become unreconciled to that which he had made, or that there was any reason in himself why it was necessary that he should need the ministration of Jesus Christ, was a thing foreign to my thought. Let me see. I got the other way of it. God was in Christ reconciling the world unto himself. How? By teaching the law of God by which men might make themselves conform to the thoughts of God, and he has said, "My thoughts are not as your thoughts, and my ways are not as your ways."

I could accept that part of it. That seemed to be reasonable. So it must be to every man, to every individual who will endeavor to make the choice, or endeavor to make the choice and consider it as I did. How did I consider it? I will show you.

I looked out upon the world and I discovered that God's name was nowhere written. I could not find it upon the leaves of the tree. I could not see it upon the sands of the sea shore. Nor in the rocks that crowded the rapids of the river. I could not see his hand prints upon the ocean or in the lakes. I could not hear him in the thunder, nor see him in the wind, much as the poet said:

"Lo, the poor Indian, whose untutored mind, Hears God or sees him in the wind."

I could not do that. I could read in all things created by which I was surrounded, the grand power of an original designer, immaculate in himself; and as a consequence, that all things were perfect. I could discover that; but I could not discover the name, nor where he dwelt. But my soul went longing after him, and when I put myself in the way of thought I found that he had led me in this channel, and as a consequence in the scriptures of divine truth God's name was revealed unto me. To my inner consciousness there came the revelation of where I might find him. I could not find him any where else. He is not revealed in the history of any man. He is not revealed in the history of any people or nation, so far as their simple acts upon the earth are concerned. If we take the record of any of them there has been a great deal in them that was certainly not of God.

If this be true, that all nations must answer to him in some sense, in order that they may be successfully made to answer to him for any law that hath been broken, or that we may conform to him, we must first know his thought and will with respect to that law.

It will not do to say that God originally placed the law in the minds of those who are born into the world, for this reason. The Thugs of Asia will take charge of a traveler's person and goods, and they will contract with him to take him to a certain place, and they will keep their contract religiously, and defend him with their bodies and their every power against the attack of everybody else. But the moment he has crossed the border land, has crossed the line that marks the termination of their contract with him, they will slay him without mercy and take his goods, and it is considered to be according to the law that governs the Thug. Did God ordain that law? He will make these men answer for it. Did he ordain it? No. He did not ordain that any more than he did the refined sense that some individuals have that utterly precludes that they shall slay any thing, or destroy any life that may be in the earth. I have seen men so particular about the shedding of blood that they would not kill a chicken,—but they would eat it after it was killed.

I present this to show the wide diversity in the conscience revelation of law. We have all removed from the conscience of the Thug, but this cant against cruelty of any kind of which I speak is certainly uncalled for. That wont do. The law that must be revealed as a necessary consequence must teach individuals how they must think in order that their deeds may be of that character that when they shall come to be judged, they shall not be found wanting according to the general law of the Almighty. I am speaking now of mankind in its concrete sense, or abstract sense, whichever you may have it, as a race. If they are to be judged according to the deeds done in the body, there must be some rule by which they must be brought into it. What is it?

All over the broad earth, you can not find a single nation but what has laws enacted against the crime of murder. You can not over all the broad land find a single nation but what recognizes in some way the right of property. You can not find in all the regions of the whole earth any nation but what recognizes in some degree the sacredness of the person which must be held inviolate. How is that? It seems to me that the Almighty had intended that mankind should be answerable to a certain law, when they should come to be judged before his great throne, and he sitting to judge—all nations must be brought before him, brought into judgment before him likewise, and answer before him for their characters and the laws that they have obeyed.

I notice that these individuals living in the world are answerable unto a common law, unto a common judge, who has given them certain rules to govern their being; has given them a common rule, all over the earth. All the statute books of civilized nations go for their principles to the Code of Moses. You can not find one but what is based upon the Mosaic code, not one. I defy you to find a statute law anywhere, but what its root is in the Mosaic code.

I do not wonder that the apostle said they were written on tables of stone. They were to be as imperishable as the foundations of the earth. Just as imperishable as the law of the Almighty. They have never been done away, so far as the government of the world is concerned.

One of the reasons why we make mistakes concerning the dispensation of the Jews and the Christian dispensation is, we undertake to blend the law written on stone with the law taught under the gospel dispensation as binding upon the same persons. But we must draw the distinction. This Mosaic code is to have its bearing upon those who are in the world and not upon the Christian. How is that? I do not mean now the laws of the land, because we are all subject to them, I am speaking of it as a religious faith.

There is some thing that struck me too in my search after truth, and I found that taught in Mormonism. It was revealed in Jesus Christ.

But now came the grandest and best thought in the whole line of thought to your speaker. That was this: Christ came to dispense among the children of men the knowledge of something that would take them out of the provisions of this common law, and so far as God was concerned, make them amenable unto a different law in this sense. That he came to his people to declare what was the law of God concerning their moral natures and their spiritual affinities. I will use that term for the want of a better one. I will use a better one by and by. And by reason of this they might assimilate unto the character of them that dwell in the heavens to which they are tending. That seemed to go right home to me. It removed me at once from the consideration of the Mosaic code, and brought me to the consideration of a better system of ethics, by which the spiritual natures of men should be enabled to assimilate to the nature of God. And the grand exemplar of this principle was Jesus Christ. Hence Paul says, and says truly, "Of whom he hath given assurance, in that he hath raised him from the dead."

He is the only one that ever had the power to elevate himself from the realm of the grave. He is the only one that had power in himself. He has given power unto others, and will continue to give power unto others.

I saw that this was to bring my spirit into relation with Jesus Christ as a helper. Now I saw a way out of the difficulties that had environed me. It is not necessary for me to accept the theory that man's probation ends at death; and that if they shall not have bowed down and worshiped him in some specific form or organization known as a church, he hath no farther use for them, but in the realms of darkness and despair they shall wear out a never ending eternity. It is not necessary for me to accept that in order to believe in the punishment of the wicked, and that there will be a time of reckoning, when they shall give an account for that which is wrong. Neither is it necessary for me to believe that all men, without reference to what they may have done, should be placed in realms of safety and power and glory.

Why says my friend upon the right hand and on the left, it is the will of God that all men should be saved. Truly it is. I believe it was the will of Christ too that all men should be saved. But behold he wept bitter tears of agony when he came to those who should have received him, and said: "How oft would I have gathered you as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, but ye would not."

He recognized the power in them to refuse, and likewise recognizes the power in me to refuse any form of religion, and I recognize the power in myself to refuse any form of religion, or cast the whole aside. But then what?

My career would have been pictured in that of a man by the name of Brownson. He began life away up in Massachusetts somewhere, as a collegiate student of the Presbyterian Church. He graduated and went to preaching the Presbyterian faith. Somehow he drifted down near Boston and came into contact with esthetic culture there, and it did some damage to his Presbyterian notions, and he became a Congregationalist. After a while the rubbing and attrition that took place in that great hub of the universe, rubbed the Congregationalism out of him, and the result of it was that from this time on he discarded the whole realm of religion, and became a free thinker in that he discarded the whole of them. He thought a while and then changed his mind. The question he examined himself upon was this: He found himself in a state of restlessness, because he was looking for some power in the universe that like the great author should have power to say thus it is and thus it shall be in matters spiritual. He could not find it in any other church that he knew anything about, and so he died a member of the Catholic Church. Some will laugh at the idea; but he was looking for some power that had the right among the children of men to put a stop to religious controversy and say, Thus it shall be; and when he found this power he rested satisfied. Why? Because his theological kite could not fly without a string. It must have one. We must think according to channels. We must think according to that which we have chosen as the realm or the way in to which we should walk. Hence we find whether we are responsible for our thoughts or not.

I found liberty and freedom in Christ. There is one thing he did for me; I don't know whether he has done the same thing for the rest of you or not; that is this: He made me very charitable to those who had not reached the standard of goodness or excellence that I thought they ought to reach. Why? Because I became satisfied that if I demanded from among the children of men to be considered as being honest in my thought, I must not say my neighbor John or James was not honest in his thought, because he thought differently from me.

With respect to this principle, the Son of Man was the exemplar, the individual according to whom the Almighty is to judge the children of men. He says, I came not to judge the world; if any man hear me speak and believe me not, I came not to judge him. Why? Because he must stand in the great judgment day and answer to somebody else. That is why.

But this Christian philosophy taught by these Latter Day Saints, by this strange religion, was of that character that it gave me to understand that I might have freedom from this judgment in this sense. When the world should come into judgment in the great day before him, and I had essayed to serve him according to the law which he had come to declare, he would stand me in stead as my bail before God. As I had kept his law, I had loved God, I had lived and thought according to his law, and thereby I had won my crown. A crown of what? A crown against condemnation in the judgment of the Almighty God. To my mind that is a great thought. To me it is the grandest and the best in the Christian economy. As I prefer to serve him according to that which he had placed upon record as the law of the Almighty, I may so make him who had power over death, hell and the grave, my friend, and he would stand before the Almighty in the great day of judgment, and certify to him that sits upon the throne, "This is a child that thou gavest me out of the world." That stays the hand of the royal executioner, and gives life to the individual; for God has in Christ promised life and immortality.

Now when I certify to these freethinkers that I too am a freethinker, they have no business to say that I am not. I prefer to think Jesus Christ and him crucified. I prefer to believe him because it affords to me the best view of law that it is possible to have, or that has ever been presented to me; or that, so far as I can discover, has ever been presented to the children of men. I would not to-day, under any circumstances go out what may be called untrammelled, and teach the children of men absolute freedom from restraints. I would not dare to do it, because I believe that God has ordained some restraints under which all men may live, move and have a being, and reach the greatest possible heights to which they may aspire.

I have a few practical thoughts with regard to this question and I present them to you. There never has been but one Napoleon that I have read anything about. There never has been but one Alexander. There never was but one Cæsar. There never was but one Washington. There never was but one Lincoln, and but one Jesus Christ, the grandest character of all. He that was but a corporal in the French army was a different man from him that became the grand Emperor of the French. Cæsar as a citizen of the Roman republic was by no means the man that he was when he wore the imperial purple. The conditions of might changed them. If they were not responsible for their thoughts, how is the saying of Brutus produced that has been quoted over the whole earth, "Cæsar was ambitious, and because of his ambition I slew him?" His ambition was what ruined him. If he had been permitted to do as he proposed to do, then it would not have been without an answer to the question, "Upon what meat has this our Cæsar fed, that he has grown so great?" I say as a citizen of the great Roman republic he was not the man that he was when he wore the imperial robe. He did things then that he would have been ashamed of when he was a private citizen. Let me tell you, this condition of men has changed them. Tell me that they are not responsible for their thoughts when such things as these have occurred! It is but to tell me that God has designed that men may live everywhere without restraint, and without punishment because they have done wrong. The practical thought of this comes home to me here. That which shall characterize an individual in the world to come, is character, not belief. The character that an individual shall wear is that which shall characterize him by and by. I find no certificate by which an individual may attain a character that will bear inspection in the world to come, but in the Sacred Book. There is the place I find teaching upon what that character may be. It is not found in the teachings of the Mosaic code; for there it is an "eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth." But that which shall judge them in the world to come as a certificate of character is that which they shall bear, having brought themselves into subjection to the law of God, by which they have made their thoughts like unto the thoughts of the Almighty, and these have culminated in their deeds, and their deeds are their characters.

Now let us see. I ask the man of the world to consider with me for a moment the character of Jesus Christ. Was it the character of Confucius? By no means. Confucius was a wise man, and perhaps the founder of a religion quite old. But was Confucius any better a man than Loyola, General of the Jesuitical College? It is said that the world heralded with joy the time when the Jesuitic College was disarmed of its temporal power; when the rising power of individual political freedom in the state took captive that power behind the Papal throne. When any one of the countries was shut against the incursions of the Jesuits, it was because after the college was instituted and acquired power, the same transition took place that took place with Cæsar; and Loyola was not the same man while he was the grand head of that college that he was when as a repentant though successful military general he entered his cave of melancholy and despair. That is why. It was the general sentiment that made that institution moral; that made the inquisition possible. It was evil to think according to the corrupt standard which they had adopted.

Now my friends that is what has made me what I am. The thought that Jesus Christ has placed within my reach means by which I may make a character like unto his in all respects. And it was of so good, kind, strong and heavenly a nature, that not one man that ever lived before him, and not one that has lived since, has gone into the realms that are beyond with so good a certificate as his.

Let us see. I ask you now, and I would ask Ingersoll, if he would die for a fellow man. Under a moment of excitement he might. Hundreds have done its like in the warfare. Now and then an individual in peaceful life hath coolly and deliberately put himself in the way of being killed for a friend. The Savior gives the key. "For a righteous man, a man would scarcely die. But for a good man a man might give his life. But a man will give his life for his friend." These fathers and mothers here would give their lives for their offspring. These husbands would stand between their wives and death, at the expense of their own lives. They would do this because they love them. But there is Christ who gave his life not only for a ransom for his friends, but for them that might become such, though now his enemies; and he certifies his character upon the cross.

But says some one, there is a mistake, Elder. You teach us of Christ, and we are not certain that such a man ever lived. I remember the brother referred to it to-day. Let us examine it for a single moment.

Religious history and secular history both certify that there was such a man as Jesus Christ, and that he died, and that it was said that he rose from the dead; and religious history says he did rise from the dead. Has the Jewish nation a single record upon its annals to show that at any time these soldiers that kept that seal, when they returned and told the tale that was given to them to tell, that they ever brought them before the Roman tribunal and punished them for a serious infraction of military duty? Not one. Not a single line has ever been brought to bear to show any record of any trial of those poor forlorn disciples because they brought somebody and impersonated the Savior with him. Not one. The legal conclusion that I came to years ago, when I was told that there was no such man as Jesus Christ, that he did not die, and that he did not rise from the dead, was, that all the surroundings go to show that he did live, that he did die, and that he did rise from the dead; and the apostle Paul says that in him we also will triumph; because he rose, we shall rise.

Now there he gives me the clue to the triumph over death, that dread thing that so many have feared, and that hath made such sad inroads upon the human race: But O, from him who came to offer us this law we may receive a certificate of character by which we may stand before the Great Judge and be judged. And he has not only granted the law for our good; but he hath triumphed over this dread enemy, and has thus placed it within the reach of every individual to have that singular triumph in his heart, that he too may be unabashed when death shall reach him.

That is why I have chosen this profession of faith. To me it is the grandest and the best. I have given you some of the reasons. Of course there are many others that might be given. These are why I make that selection out of that which has been presented to me for my consideration. I do it willingly. I do it purposely. I do it because I prefer to do it. I do not do it because I am compelled to do it. I am unwilling to admit that men if they shall judge rightly shall be compelled in their belief. I know that individuals say they must be compelled; that no man can believe without being compelled. But I hear in the law that, "The willing and the obedient shall eat the fruit of the land." I believe that is true of the Beulah land, the happy land as well as it is this land, and that this is a spiritual law. The obedient will come far farther towards reaching the Celestial abode, than those unwilling servants that must needs be whipped every step they take in the Celestial journey. I do not care to go into his presence striped. I would rather go free from stripes. I do not care to go whipped and unwilling into his presence. I propose if it be practicable to go there a willing soldier, to show all the scars in front like good Manlius the Roman. He was said to have had a hundred scars that he had received in the defense of the Roman government, and not one of them but what was in the front. Now as a soldier I have one more thing to say and then I am done. I am sorry for having kept you in one sense of the word, and in another I am not.

We heard last Sunday morning and evening something about a law, and it was styled by the speakers a temporal law. I was pleased to hear that law expounded, and I wish to add what ought to be a crowning argument in the mind of every individual, that he that has given the law says specifically, "I have not at any time given a law unto you which is temporal, but spiritual."

I hold that every law that God has given to the church, every law that comes to us under the signet of Jesus Christ in the New Testament Scripture; every law that is given to the church in the present time by revelation, is a spiritual law. It may pertain to the things of this life, but it has that direct reference to the life which is to come; is of that nature that it is to shape and form our characters. They are of such nature that they help us to make our characters what they ought to be in the time when we shall be judged.

Now however short as an individual I may come of filling the great pattern set before us by Jesus Christ; however far I may fall short of reaching it, I shall at least be willing to be found striving to reach up unto it, and inciting the children of men to do likewise.

If you make the pattern small you can never gain much credit for exceeding it. If you set the mark high, you may possibly overreach, but it is not likely. If you place it too low, you will be certain if you miss it to fall below it, and fall very far short.

That you may receive light and intelligence, and be aided, strengthened, and furthered on in this life, and in this train of thought much better than I have presented it, is my desire.

THE TWO LIVES.

Beautiful is old age—beautiful is the slow-drooping, mellow autumn of a rich and glorious summer. In the old man, Nature has fulfilled her work; she loads him with the fruits of a well-spent life; and, surrounded by his children's children, she rocks him softly away to a grave to which he is followed with blessings.

God forbid we should not call it beautiful, but not the most beautiful. There is another life, hard, rough, and thorny, trodden with bleeding feet and aching brow; the life of which the cross is the symbol; a battle which no peace follows this side of the grave, which the grave gapes to finish before the victory is won; and, strange that it should be so, this is the highest life of man. Look along the great names of history; there are none whose life has been other than this.

It has been common to say that Scripture makes a mistake in speaking of the ant as storing up its food; that in reality it only stores up its eggs; but Colonel Sykes discovered at Poonah a species of ants (Atta Providens) which regularly stores up the seeds of millet for its food in stormy weather. The objectors did not know enough when they corrected the science of Scripture. They have been equally premature when they have objected to the Scripture statement regarding the ostrich abandoning its eggs, for late researches have proved that the ostrich quits her eggs during the day, and abandons them altogether if there has been any intrusion upon them, thus furnishing an admirable type of carelessness regarding offspring.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. W. A. Sinclair, wrote from Forester, Sanilac county, Michigan, January 26th, and gave a short account of the debate between Elder J. J. Cornish and Walter Sims, of Bay City, Michigan, an evangelist of the Christian Church; from which we gather the idea that Rev. Sims was not a very courteous debater.

Bro. H. R. Mills writes us from Pittsfield, Illinois, January 31st, that his father, Bro. C. Mills, was doing well. His broken leg was knitting together well, and he was in fair hopes of full recovery.

Bro. Joseph Luff was at last advices under the necessity to cancel some of his appointments and return to Salt Lake City, to recuperate from pleurisy and pain in his side.

Letters from Dr. J. A. Boyd, Farmington, Graves county, Kentucky, and Bro. A. D. Bower, of Plano, Illinois, were duly received. It is not practicable that we should publish them, as with others, want of room precludes.

In the statement of those teaching near to Lamoni, we should have named Bro. Earl Bailey, who is teaching north of the town.

THE Salt Lake Evening News, local church organ, has an Editorial, on the "assumptions of Congress." In this occurs the following: "The people of the Territories are not the 'property' of the United States."

This is quite true, but the territory on which those people live is the property of the United States, and the people living on that territory are tenants at will, and wards of the Government. There is no safer foundation for the exercise of governmental control and protection over the District of Columbia, over which Congress has exclusive jurisdiction in all cases, than for the exercise of like powers over Utah, or any other of the territory the common property of the states.

That the people of the territory of Utah are entitled to a "republican form of government," as the News also asserts, we believe. And Congress should see to it that such a form of government should be had there. It is upon this statement of the duty of Congress that we should insist that practices in church, or state, recognized and classed as crimes in any and all of the states composing the United States, owners of the public domain known as Utah, which states exist under a republican form of government, can not legally obtain as proper and right. It is this very fact that Congress is in duty bound to see that republican institutions, such as prevail in the states; and which constitute them the Republic, shall likewise prevail in all the territories of the United States, Utah always included.

SR. A. M. HALSTED, of Harrow, Ontario, wishes to learn whether the command to nurse those sick, who have not enough faith to be healed with mild herbs, and other kindly care, means the use of the bark, leaves and roots, known to possess curative properties, or plants and the leaves only. We are sure that we can not state positively, but believe that what was intended was that where persons were sick, whose sickness did not yield to faith, they should be treated by skillful nursing, and the use of plants, leaves, bark and roots, that were known to be available as antidotes to the disease; all being permissible.

One thing in this connection. When Saints are sick, it strikes us that they should have as much patience in permitting the remedy to take effect as when being treated by a physician, and with medicine. To illustrate: if one is taken with disease and sends for a doctor to be treated, the sick person is contented to take medicine from every hour to every four hours, or more seldom, and wait for the supposed effect to be wrought; and will be under the care of the same doctor for days, weeks, sometimes months, anticipating cure, and crawl back to health by slow and careful degrees, without blaming the doctor, or losing faith in the system of medicine, or the doctor that administers to him; but if the same one sends for the Elders who anoint with oil and pray for recovery, he expects an instantaneous and perfect cure. And many times when such perfect and present cure is not effected, the Elders who have administered are put down as not men of God, or distrust in the ordinance is felt.

The promise: "They shall lay hands on the sick and they shall recover," does not warrant the belief that instant and speedy miraculous cure shall follow the laying on of hands. This would be directly in the line of those cures wrought by the command of the Savior, and of the class referred to in the revelation: "Ask not for miracles except ye are commanded." The command of God, whenever it is given, is authority sufficient for the thing commanded, and when received should not be questioned. But the promise is "they shall recover." Safety from death here should be felt if the command be observed. This safety insured, full recovery to health might be waited for as patiently and confidently as from the effects of medicine, of the specific action of which physicians themselves are not sure, but have to wait for, and frequently wait in vain.

Is there not as much reason to discard a physician and a school of medical practice, and lose faith in the administration of medicine, when a father or mother, wife or husband, son or daughter, is sick and doctored until death fills the house and hearts with mourning, as there is to lose faith in God and the ordinances, when administration of the Elders fails to win back to life? We certainly think so.

Our twenty years' experience shows us that out of the number of Saints who have been sick and who have faithfully called for the administration of the Elders by anointing with oil and the laying on of hands, a far greater per centage of recoveries has resulted, than of the same number of those in or out of the church who have been sick and have trusted in medicine and the doctors. If any one of the different schools of medicine could show that a larger per centage of cures in any given number of persons sick of divers diseases resulted from the system of medicine and nursing adopted by physicians of that school, as compared with other systems, they would justly claim for that school the supremacy in the medical world; and mankind would not be slow in according practice and money to them. On the score of the greatest return of good in the greatest majority of cases, on common principles of reasoning in human affairs, aside from any moral obligation that may bind a believer, there would seem to be good ground to observe the faith cure.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Monroe E. Culver, has sent us the following letter of receipt and acceptance of a favor conferred by him.

THE CHICAGO PUBLIC LIBRARY,
Chicago, December 14th, 1882.

The Board of Directors of the Chicago Public Library has received your gift, consisting of Biographical Sketches of Joseph Smith, by Lucy Lmith. A Voice of Warning, by P. P. Pratt. The Book of Mormon, translated by Joseph Smith, Jr. Tracts on Mormonism, for which I am instructed to return a grateful acknowledgment.

Very Respectfully,

W. POOLE.

To M. E. CULVER, Esq.,
558 W. Indiana St., City.

The following views of the Bible we clip from the Deseret Evening News, sent us by Bro. W. W. Blair. It is evident that some hold the truth in unrighteousness.

The "Mormon" teaching in relation to the Bible is that Moses and the Prophets wrote their books by divine authority as well as by inspiration; that the inspiration was not verbal except that the language was exalted by the force of lofty ideas and divine sentiments; that much of the history related is given according to information naturally acquired, and is therefore not on a par with the authorized utterances of God's servants; that the predictions now fulfilled have had a literal accomplishment, and that foretold events which have not yet transpired will also come to pass literally; that though the language used abounded in metaphor and hyperbole, yet the occurrences pointed to were real, and not merely figurative, or what is sometimes mysteriously denominated "spiritual" in contradistinction to "literal." That the writings of some of the prophets have been re-written while all have been translated, and that the translation has been done by uninspired men who did not always grasp the full meaning of the text, and therefore their work was somewhat imperfect; that many prophetic books have been lost, and that plain and precious things have been omitted from those books which are called canonical; that the Bible is an imperfect collection of works of different kinds, written in different ages, principally for the benefit of the people living at the period when they were given, but preserved providentially for the good of all people in the latter times, as evidences of the character of Deity, His ways and works in former times among a certain race, and as a support to the testimony of His servants in other lands and down to the latest age.

THE Saints at Cheltenham, St Louis county, Missouri, dedicated their chapel not long ago. From the Globe Democrat report of the occasion we quote:

"The congregation numbers about thirty-five, and the contributors to the erection of the building, as shown by the report of the committee at the dedication ceremonies, were as follows: Wm. O. and Martha O. Thomas, each $432.22 1/2; Thomas Williams and Joseph Knowles, each $20; Hannah Knowles, David and Ann Thomas and Margaret Davis, each $5. There were realized from the sale of the old church building $100, and Wm. O. Thomas donated the lot on which the new structure stands, valued at $330, making a total of $1,354.45. Quite a number of visitors were present at the dedication from Illinois and other States. The services were simple and in very small degree different from those ordinarily conducted on less notable occasions. Elder B. V. Springer, of Davis City, Iowa, preached in the morning on "Baptism for Remission of Sin," and Elder J. A. Betts, of Belleville, Ill., discoursed in the afternoon on the "First Principles of the Gospel," as found in Hebrews 6: 1-2, the words being identical in the Joseph Smith version with those of the King James. The singing comprised dedicatory hymns from the "Saints' Harp," a volume compiled by Joseph Smith and two or three associates. Regular services will be held every Sunday afternoon. Elder Smith, of St. Louis, being temporarily in charge of the congregation.

Summary of News.

Jan. 31.—The illness of Premier Fallieres is likely to cause the breaking up of the French Cabinet.

Thebodin has been appointed Minister of War in France.

A report is current that the Orleans Princes have drawn up a manifesto in which they protest against the charges made against them, and declare their readiness to sacrifice their personal interests for France. It is stated that should the necessity arise they will publish the manifesto and at the same moment quit the country.

The Ansonia, a large Italian steamer, was wrecked yesterday on the coast of Tripoli, North Africa. Twenty of the crew perished. The rest of the crew and passengers were saved.

The vessel sunk off Mumbleshead, Wales, on the 29th inst. was not the Black Watch, but a steamer of similar tonnage, carrying a crew of twenty-six.

Another outbreak of convicts employed at the naval works, Hawlbowlne Island, has occurred. The mutiny is still progressing.

Famine prevails in the Government of Kheron, Russia. Several peasants have committed suicide to escape witnessing the misery of their starving families.

Last night, about three miles from Crested Butte, Colo., occurred one of the most disastrous snowslides ever known in Rocky Mountain regions. Late in the night thirty men employed in the Howard F. Smith anthracite-coal mine were startled from sleep by an ominous rumbling noise, and almost instantly the avalanche was upon them. The building in which they were sleeping was crushed to atoms and the human occupants hurled down the mountain-side. A rescuing party started out from Crested Butte as soon as the news was received, and after several hours' indefatigable labor, the men were all uncovered. Seven were found dead. Eighteen others were wounded, several fatally. All of the company's extensive machinery was destroyed.

A passenger-train yesterday, when within six miles of Crested Butte, divided, the engine going ahead to clear the track. When about four miles from where it left the coaches the engine was struck by a snowslide, ditched, and is now under about twenty feet of snow. A wrecking engine which left this morning could not get nearer than two miles of the coaches, and returned to-night for provisions for the starving passengers.

There was an earthquake this afternoon on the Bohemian Riesengebirge (Giant Mountains). This range separates Bohemia from Prussian Silesia. The Elbe rises on its south side.

Feb. 1.—In the French Chamber of Deputies, yesterday, Fabre's bill in relation to royal and imperial pretenders, was passed by a vote of nearly two to one. It was in the nature of a compromise between the Ministerial proposition and the sweeping measure offered by M. Floquet. Under it all scions of families which have reigned in France are prohibited from filling any civil or military position. The President of the Republic is empowered to order their expulsion by decree—presumably if he shall at any time judge their presence in the country to be dangerous to the Government—and the penalty for violation of such decree is from one to five years' imprisonment. It was stated that the Orleans Princes would be placed on the retired list, and a proposition to cashier those holding army positions was voted down by a large majority.

A steamer and two other vessels have been wrecked off Lundy Island. The crews were drowned. Assistance is impossible.

Twenty-three persons were killed and twenty-eight injured by a panic in a wool factory at Bombay, caused by dust blowing into the room.

Feb. 2.—Bismarck is still dangerously ill.

A heavy gale prevailed around the British coast today, and numerous casualties are reported. Two coasting vessels were wrecked on the Isle of Man, and the crews were drowned.

The gunboat Red Wing attempted to reach the Island of Innismurray, Ireland, with stores for the starving people, but heavy seas frustrated the effort. The gale continued last night. Several districts are flooded. There are many shipping disasters and lives lost.

There is a fearful gale at Paris, France. Much damage has been done in the neighborhood. One person was killed by the fall of the scaffolding on the new city-hall.

Serious disturbances have broken out among the Bheels at Bombay. The Government has ordered measures for the protection of the frontier at Rewah and Kantha.

Advices from Ecuador give particulars of the capture of Esmeraldas, the leading port on the coast, by the revolutionists. The attacking party had thirteen killed and twenty-six wounded, and the Dictator lost forty killed and an equal number of wounded. The defeated Government troops have landed at Guayaquil. The people generally are highly elated at the success of the revolution. A Government has already been nominated, with the Supreme Dictator Alfaro and four Ministers. The new Dictator will at once expel the Jesuites and establish restriction upon the clergy. Prior to abandoning Esmeraldas, the Dictator's troops plundered the port and set fire to it in three places. An American named Feros was killed. In Guayaquil a panic prevails, and the people are fleeing from the town. It is the last stronghold of the Dictator. He was impressing men, horses, and everything available to the military service.

Feb. 4.—Over 100 persons suspected of connection with secret organizations have fled from Dublin. It is believed they have not yet succeeded in quitting the Kingdom.

Ireland is again face to face with famine. Often as the spectre has visited her it now comes in a new shape. It comes, so to say, under Government protection, with an army of Land bills, Arrears bills, Repression bills at its back. So far from exorcising the ghost, Mr. Gladstone's legislation has armed it with novel terrors.

A solemn warning, printed on fine vellum, has reached the Czar and Cabinet, claiming universal suffrage, the right of the people to own land, freedom of conscience, press, public meeting, etc. If these demands are not granted before the coronation of the Czar as sovereign of Russia, the Revolutionary Committee sending the warning threaten violence.

The Danubian Conference has been postponed a week.

Dr. Ross, assistant editor of Chambers' Encyclopedia, is dead.

Russia is seeking a pretext in the Armenian troubles to extend her dominion over eastern Turkey.

The greatest excitement that has occurred in Titusville, Pa., since the great oil fire is now raging, the cause being the inundation of half of the city from the backing of waters from Oil Creek. The steady rain commencing late Friday night did not cease until this morning. The Pittsburg, Buffalo & Western Railway depot, situated a block and a half away from the banks of the creek, is four feet under water. All trains have been abandoned on this road as well as the Dunkirk & Allegheny Valley Railway, whose depot is afloat in three feet of water. Meat-shops, bakeries, grocery-stores, saloons, and iron manufacturing are all suffering alike. Row boats and hastily constructed rafts are being used to rescue the unfortunates who were forced to their upper apartments, and stand in danger from the huge ice cakes and driftwood as it comes down the stream. The Mayor called on the fire department, and with volunteer assistance they are fighting the rushing waters. Titusville has never experienced such a flood before. The gas-works are inundated, and the city is almost in total darkness. The water-works fires are all put out with six feet of water in the buildings. The Franklin street bridge, a heavy iron structure, was washed away at 2 p. m. Three young men went down with the bridge. If either gorge breaks more serious damage may be apprehended. Two abutments have just been carried away out of the Dunkirk & Allegheny Valley Railroad bridge at East Titusville. News from Franklin states the washing away of the two main spans from the upper bridge over French Creek at that point; also the lower suspension bridge has gone out. The creek has risen five feet.

The Scioto River has backed up and overflowed a great portion of Middletown, Ohio. Thousands of acres of land are overflowed by this river, the water extending out from the river the distance of a mile.

The Olentangy River is said to be eleven inches higher than it was fifteen years ago when it was the highest on record. The Scioto is six inches higher than ever known before.

At Cleveland, Ohio, the floods have done vast injury to lumbermen and others located on the low grounds.

Springfield Illinois, has been damaged $100,000 by the snow, rain and ice combined.

The most devastating flood ever known there, is now taking place in the Little Cuyanoga River, Ohio.

The scene presented on the streets of Lincoln, Ill., is without a parallel in the memory of the oldest inhabitant. The rain of yesterday, accompanied by thunder and lightning, froze as it fell; and soon weighed down and broke off with crashing noise, the boughs of trees all over the town, making travel upon the sidewalks dangerous. Telegraph and telephone wires are down, and the whole town is blockaded with fallen boughs.

Bloomington, Ill., has suffered from the same causes.

The Wabash river, Pa., is on the rampage, and has reached a higher mark than ever known before.

The Allegheny river has overflowed its banks and washed away houses, barns, and bridges.

The Sandusky river, O., is higher than ever known before, and freshets and washouts all over the state are reported. Railroad tracks are under water, and trains are entirely blocked, or running irregularly.

In Bradford, Pa., five hundred houses are submerged, and in some of the flooded parts the water has reached the depth of ten feet.

Acres of trees are broken down by the weight of the ice in Sandusky, Ohio.

The Lake Shore Railway bridge at Fremont, O., was so weakened by the rush of ice against the abutment that it went down with a freight-train. Conductor Isaac Parker and a brakeman were killed. The whole eastern portion of Fremont is flooded, and three or four persons are reported drowned. Ice damaged the Lake Shore Company's bridge at Huron so that trains can not cross. The Lake Erie and Western Company's bridge at Fostoria was carried away.

Ashtabula, O., is flooded, and a bridge there wrecked.

The streams near Champaign, Ill., are in many cases, higher than was ever known before.

Coldwater, Mich., and Elkhart, Ind., were both visited by this terrible ice storm.

At Remington, Ind., whole orchards are totally destroyed by the ice.

Mill Creek, at Marysville, is higher than ever known before.

At Shelbyville, Ind., the greatest floods ever known are prevailing.

The Great Miami, at this place, is higher than ever known before.

All over the flooded districts, families had to be rescued by boats; and in some cases, the water had risen so high, that they had been driven to the upper stories of their houses.

Although the weather is not exactly tropical, the product of the heated zone known as an earthquake is alleged to have manifested itself at Bloomington, Illinois, at an early hour yesterday morning. A prolonged rumbling and a decided shock were heard and felt.

Feb. 5th.—Damage in the region of Pittsburg, Pa., by the late flood will amount to over $300,000. Off to the south-east the storm seems to have been felt in unrestricted fury, and many streams were higher than ever known before. The Sandusky River poured out its torrents of wild waters, bearing masses of ice and debris, which carried before them houses occupied and vacant, bridges, fences, stock, and outbuildings.

It is understood that a collision took place between a freight and a passenger train, on the Dayton and Michigan road, in consequence of killed—five in which at least eight persons were the floods, train men and three passengers.

Fremont, Ohio, was visited with the greatest force of the flood last night and to-day. The Lake Shore Railroad bridge was carried away, and that of the Wheeling & Lake Erie damaged. A dispatch from that place to-day says that the water is three feet higher than was ever known before, and the damage to the property is many thousands of dollars. The Lake Shore bridge was washed away yesterday, and a portion of a train went into the river. The train-hands jumped and saved themselves. An engine and five cars got safely across before the bridge gave way. The flats above and below town are overflowed, and the water is in some houses in the second-story. Men with boats have been hard at work rescuing families, and about all are removed to places of safety. Old Mrs. Burgess was drowned in her house, and her daughter was rescued with much trouble. George Barkiller and wife slept on the roof of their house last night, nobody being able to go to them. Thousands of half-frantic people from all over the county and adjoining towns have visited the scene. There were three feet of water on the main business street yesterday, and the current six miles an hour. It is the hardest thing that ever befell Fremont, and many families are rendered homeless and destitute. The local authorities are doing all they can for the sufferers. Only three human lives have been lost as far as known, but considerable stock has perished. Some of the businessmen have lost heavily. Everything is too much confused to make definite statements. Farmers are bringing in provisions, and all that can be done in the hurry is being done.

At Defiance, Ohio, the water has risen to a height never before known, and the east side of the river is completely flooded for eighty rods back. People were taken from their houses in boats at midnight.

Napoleon, O., is flooded, and people are leaving their homes with their valuables, in boats.

The bridge connecting Herrs Island with the main land, near Pittsburg, has been carried away by the ice, and the whole island is flooded.

Loss in goods at Cleveland, O., will be about $200,000. This too is the smallest item of the loss that has been sustained.

The cause of the block at the New York, Pennsylvania & Ohio bridge is the schooner Acontias, of Detroit. The vessel lay at Humpy's dock, on the south bank of the river, and was carried down stream. It came down to the bridge broadside on, and was thrown up on the land. Now bow and stern rest on the banks from which the water has receded. Lumber has forced itself under the keel, and the schooner is in bad shape. Millions of feet are piled against her on one side, and the huge iron bridge holds her on the other. She may be a total wreck. Three other vessels are forced up on the docks, the old Concord barge, belonging to I. Sturtevant & Co., the Orontes, a barge owned by Sheldon & Co., and a Detroit barge, the B. M. Baker. Twelve bridges in the vicinity of Cleveland, O., have been swept away, including the iron bridge at Brecksville Station, which cost $5,000. The bridge loss of this vicinity outside the town will reach $100,000. Estimates of the loss at Cleveland show that it will be near $1,000,000.

The Ohio Canal is damaged $40,000.

It is impossible to give in our limited space, anything but a very meagre notice of this terrible flood. All along its line the sufferers have to be rescued by night and day, by means of boats; property of every description is washed away; railroad bridges and culverts are taken out; and the loss to property is alarmingly great.

Every residence in the northern part of Fort Wayne, Indiana, is flooded. People are living in the upper stories of their houses in Peru, Ind. Mills and stores in Chauncy, Ind., are flooded.

The storm of political revolution seems to be still gathering in France.

Ireland is still suffering from want of food, and actual starvation stares many in the face, who have for some time subsisted on the very scantiest of wild nature's products.

A severe shock of earthquake was experienced at Agram, Hungary, last evening.

Renewed shocks of earthquake were felt in Murcia, Spain, yesterday.

The Revolutionary or "Republican" party, as members style themselves, is triumphant in Ecuador, South America. Esmeraldas, the leading port on the coast, had been entrenched and the garrison of Government troops seemed determined to remain there in order to sustain the nominal power of the Dictator along the north coast. The Revolutionists understood that until they obtained possession of the port they could not operate with entire liberty. They attacked it last August and were defeated. Now they have succeeded. A report of the action has been sent to Senor Eloy Alfaro, who has been nominated Supreme Dictator of the Republic.

The revolutionists have appointed a provisional government, and the dictator is almost without resources to defend himself against them.

Feb. 6th.—A steamer of about 1,500 tons burden foundered off Cape Cornwall, Great Britain, Friday. It was impossible to render assistance.

The Emperor of China has telegraphed his congratulations to the Crown Prince of Germany, on the occasion of the silver wedding. This is the first telegram ever sent by the Chinese Sovereign to a European Prince.

A family of six persons living nine miles east of Peru, Ind., is reported drowned by the floods.

At several points in Illinois, Ohio, and Indiana, the hail and sleet storm has been renewed, and at other points rain, so that fears of more floods are entertained.

Feb. 7.—The steamer Kennure Castle, bound from London to Shanghai, foundered in the Bay of Biscay, and the Captain and thirty of the crew were lost.

Very serious floods continue to be reported from Ohio, Pennsylvania, and Indiana. Havre de Grace and other towns on the Susquehanna River are threatened with destruction, ice gorges having formed in the river, which are expected to work great havoc when they break. The reports received at Pittsburg in relation to the condition of the Monongahela are of the most alarming character.

The feeling of uneasiness continues in France. Business is stagnant.

The ship Brambletye, from San Francisco, lost four men in a hurricane.

The Egyptians in the Soudan are reported to have yielded to the false prophet.

The contending bands of Creek Indians in New Mexico are preparing to renew hostilities.

A boat marked "Utopia, Glasgow," has been found in Mevaggissey. The funnel of the steamer Utopia had no band, consequently the steamer reported foundered off Cape Cornwall, with a red band around the funnel, can not be the Utopia.

FIRES AND RAILROAD ACCIDENTS.

Jan. 31.—Loss by fire at Kansas City, Mo., $30,000. Fort Atkinson, Wis., $4,000. Elkhart, Ind., $2,000. Austin, Tex., $30,000. Weatherford, Tex., $25,000. Juniata, Neb., $20,000.

February 1st.—A large fire is raging at the docks near Canal street, New York. The sheds, stores, and shipping are all ablaze. The loss will be very heavy. Many fire-arms were sounded calling the firemen and apparatus from all parts of the city. Tugboats and Ferryboats are steaming up and down the river to the scene of the conflagration, in hopes of rescuing the imperiled ships. The river fire-boats are already at work, but the heat from the flames makes effective work difficult. The fire is at the Inman steamship dock. The steamship Egypt is being hauled out. She is apparently all on fire from stem to stern and from deck to royal top. The shipspars bear the blaze from one vessel to another. Some in danger may be saved, but it will be hard work. From the remotest parts up-town fire apparati are thundering down. More are now at the scene than can be well utilized. The loss will be up among the millions. Explosions are frequent, making the work of the firemen extremely perilous. The Egypt has been hauled out into the stream, and, blazing throughout the rigging, makes a grand spectacle. The fire on the dock is extending. Property there is abandoned to the flames. The Union Steamship Dock adjoins that of the Inman Line. The famous fast sailer Alaska is in her berth. Great efforts are making to save her. The destruction of the Inman Line Pier No. 36, North River, and the damage to vessels moored about it caused a loss now estimated at $415,000.

A railroad collision between Paris and Lyons killed one person and injured seven.

Loss by fire at Montreal, $107,000. Lockport, N. Y., $100,000. Oshkosh, Wis., $6,000. Vincennes, Ind., $50,000. Lawrence, Kan., $20,000. Toledo, O., $75,000.

Feb. 4.—The Standard Oil Company's refining works, at Cleveland, Ohio, covering sixty acres of ground, were almost entirely destroyed by fire; loss $300,000. Loss by fire at Troy, N. Y., $200,000. Nashville, Tenn., $200,000. Toronto, Canada, $100,000. Kenosha, Wis., $8,000.

A serious railway accident has occurred in Hungary. Six cars fell down a steep mountain. Seven women and some men were killed, and many injured. The accident happened on a railway running up a hill to the Salgo and Taranata coal mines. The teeth of the engine wheel broke and the train, which contained a number of miners and women, gained a fearful velocity down grade. Most of the miners jumped out in time to save their lives. The seven women killed remained in the train.

William Redding's stables and the large lumber yard contiguous, burned last night, Havana, Cuba. Nine valuable horses were burned. Over a hundred firemen were injured.

Hamline University, situated between Minneapolis and St. Paul, Minn., was totally destroyed by fire; loss $65,000. Loss by fire at Menasha, Wis., 8,000. Detroit, Mich., $10,000. St. Louis, Mo., $50,000. Cincinnati, O., $12,000. Norfolk, Va., $33,000.

The following letter, sent us by Bro. J. L. Bear, and written to him, after a little necessary clipping we insert with pleasure.

MATT ABERNANGEN, Thurgau,
Switzerland, Europe,
December 31, 1882.

1. "In thee, O Lord, do I put my trust, let me never be put to confusion."

2. "Deliver me in thy righteousness, and cause me to escape, incline thine ear unto me, and save me."

3. Be thou my strong habitation, whereunto I may continually resort; thou hast given commandments to save me, for thou art my rock and my fortress."

12. "O God, be not far from me; O, my God, make haste for my help."—Ps. 71.

In Jesus Christ, the beginner and perfecter of our faith, which is, and which was and which will be from eternity to eternity, unto whom be honor, praise, thanksgiving and worship forever and ever.

My Dear, Beloved Bro. Bear:—My first lines of the Psalm, announces to you already in what circumstances I am. This is my daily sigh and supplication. Our sufferings have not diminished; on the contrary are getting worse. Meseems, as though all seen and unseen spirits had united themselves with a full determination to ruin me; the incomes are so small, and the outlays much larger; our debts are increasing rapidly; if we tell anybody of our situation, then they say right before our face, why have you changed your faith? The Catholics make the sign of the cross before us, and especially since we did not get our baby baptized, who was born on the 5th of November. People look at us every where, like we were no human beings any more; in short we are a mockery of men and contempt of the people. We feel it is not good, when we have to apply to outsiders for help, as we are not wanting for reproach. And yet it is remarkable, that in all the distresses which press upon us, and hover around us like bees, still my wife and myself feel alike, which has made us to marvel very often. Our faith, our now knowledge, is engraven in our hearts like with an iron pen; no men, no devils, no distress, no death, and no persecutions are able to take away our faith, although we have to see, that the Saints in our days are not like those in the time of the Apostles of old, and as it is written in the Book of Mormon how they was in the first century after Christ.

It looks to me, that it is a difference between holy and holy; to be holy with words; or to be holy in word and in deed; is not the same. Is it not true my beloved? The Apostle James in his second epistle gives us to understand, what a true God pleasing holy is. Only baptism is not sufficient to make us Saints. It is only the beginning to keep the commandment of God. It is truly a weighty matter, which can not be taken so easy. Sanctification requires labor. We can only have the name that we live, and yet are spiritually dead. "Not every one, that says to me, Lord, Lord, can enter into the kingdom of God." It is not enough, when we only try to fulfill one of God's laws. We are not allowed to stand still. We ought to try to keep all the commandments. "Be ye perfect, like your Father in heaven is perfect," says Christ in his sermon on the mount; and in the second epistle of Peter, it is written: "But grow in grace and in the knowledge of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." When the righteous who seek and try all things to come to perfection hardly can stand the day of judgment, how can those stand who are satisfied with the name only. We are Latter Day Saints. We belong to the Church of Christ. O wo, and again wo, to those who do not seek to be found holy before God. It would have been better for such never to have been born.

Not long ago we got acquainted with a poor Brighamite family, who heard that I was also a Mormon, and had invited me to come to their meetings in Siernach, but I told them right away what spirit's child I was, and preached a good deal to them; rejected their polygamy, dancing, theatres and concerts, upon which they answered, that they commence all those things, with prayers, to which I responded, that this was an abominable way to serve God. That men could in the same way steal and kill with prayer, and that I would never join them. I gave the man the writings about polygamy to read; so he copied it, and sent it to Mr. Gasser in Bern, (a Utah Elder), with the declaration that he don't want to be any more a Brighamite. Mr. Gasser answered this writing in the Star (which they publish weekly), in which he affirms, that Joseph Smith himself had many wives, notwithstanding the forbidding in the Book of Mormon; and that at the present time goes a woman that Joseph Smith had, in Mr. Gasser's house in and out; and so they have brought that man with his family to their side again.

To the President, to the Bishop, yea, all the heads of the Church, and every honest soul, wishes a good, blessed New Year, in the name of Christ.

Their unworthy brother in the far distance,
JOHN BOSSART.

NEBRASKA CITY, Nebraska.

January 31st, 1883.

Dear Herald:—When I last wrote you, I was at Wilber, on my way to meet the Rev. N. M. Allen, of the Missionary Baptist Church. I remained one night at Wilber, and spoke to the Saints in the house of Dr. L. Anthony, enjoying a good degree of the Spirit. The next day started for home. Under ordinary circumstances this was but a four hours journey; but on account of storm and snow blockade, the train was more than eight hours late, so that I arrived after midnight, with the thermometer at thirty-eight degrees below zero. The Sabbath I spent with the Saints at Nebraska City, and for them, I feel permission to say, there is a better feeling, and a more spiritual and charitable condition than for years. The clouds are departing, and unity of action and hope, bringeth peace; and in much kindness gives cheering encouragement, confirming our faith, and preparing all for continuous and, we trust, approved efforts for good.

The 22d inst. found me at the place appointed for the discussion, time came, and telegram that Mr. Allen was snow-bound. So by vote, I spoke. On the next evening we began the debate as agreed upon. Mr. Charles Barrows of the neighborhood, acted as chairman for me, and Rev.

George Wolfe, of the Baptist Church, acted for Mr. Allen. I am pleased to state, that nothing harsh or unkind, entered into the debate. I publicly confessed that Mr. Allen made one point; he succeeded in keeping hidden what the Baptist Church believed. As for the questions under debate, if I accept of the judgment of those who belong not to either of the churches interested, Mr. Allen made a complete failure. For self, permit me to write, I am satisfied with the result, and from the deep recesses of my heart, thank God for the attendance of the Holy Spirit, and a church, whose organization, ordinances and spiritual gifts, stand forth in grander, nobler attractiveness, with an increase of beauty and strength, as the opposer seeketh to destroy; yea, with prayer and praise, I lift up both voice and heart to God, for his truth that is invincible to every dart of man, or devil; and while I pen these lines, here is the desire of my soul. Give me, O my God, wisdom, knowledge, understanding and faith, that I may be able to have meekness, and be found worthy to continue as a humble and acceptable servant of Christ.

The discussion closed on Monday evening; lasted six nights, as agreed upon. The house was filled to overflow every night, and good order prevailed, with a seemingly deep interest manifested. In one speech Bro. Allen lowered his dignity so far as to use this expression, "Joe Smith." We promptly but kindly reproved, when he stated, that as a reformer, he had no respect for Joseph Smith; but as a fellow mortal, no ill feeling; and further, that he believed that the blood of Joseph Smith stained the fair fame of Illinois. But that he taught and practiced polygamy, and that he could prove it. I took the liberty of entering my denial, and when he stated it the second time, I accepted the challenge, and requested the statement in writing; he would not retract, and I still deny. So we have agreed to discuss the question that Joseph Smith taught and practiced polygamy. After the debate closed, he desired to change the question. On the Sabbath we rested from the labors of debate, and I spoke once, baptized one, and blessed two children. I sincerely believe that good has and will result to the cause from this investigation in public. Hundreds of persons heard the gospel presented that could not have been induced to come out, under any other circumstances. At the close of the debate I distributed something over a hundred tracts, and more were asked for. While I labored in the zeal and earnestness of my soul for the triumph of the doctrine of Christ, I sought to do so in all kindness, and to God give all the honor and praise, for the little good he will permit me to accomplish, in the name of his Son, and for the spread of the gospel of the kingdom, that a people may be prepared, that the kingdom of our God and his Christ may be established, that peace and rest may be granted to the oppressed of all nations.

I remain, as ever,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

WEIR, Cherokee Co., Kansas,
December 15th, 1882.

Dear Herald:—It was a cold snowy morning we started (with Bro. J. T. Davis, horses and wagon) and in the evening reached the Mormon School House, so called because of a settlement, and worthy young lady teacher, Miss Mary Dutton, where by local assistance held five meetings,

Bro. J. T. principal speaker, and one sermon in Hallowell, by Bro. J. T. Davis, all with good effect, if words and actions are any proof, (for they were like the chap's apples, the last one every time said more.) Another appointment was left, but rain prevented; so on the 21st we started for Mound Valley, thirty-five miles drive over the bleak, raw prairie; found all well. At 7:30 preaching at the Emmons School House by Bro. J. T. West, thirty miles, Richland School House, at 11 a. m., by Bro. J. A. Davis; and at Emmons, at 7:30, by writer. Then ushered in holidays, we all enjoyed ourselves in feasting, and at the Christmas tree gathering announcements were made for preaching at the Prairie Hall School House, where Bro. J. T. held forth five nights; a new place, large and attentive congregations. When we began to feel that business and local labors were calling Bro. J. A. and writer home, on Sunday, 11 a. m., a goodly number of Saints met at another school house and had a social meeting, and there received the mind and will of God, by prophecy and revelation, acknowledging and promising to bless our efforts in righteousness at all times for good, which gladdened the hearts. On the following night the writer went some three miles west to announce meeting for the following week, as per request of Christian friends, so called. No meeting, so I had to go to an interested party, who said he would help and send for their preacher, Mr. J. Padget, Coffeetown, Montgomery county, Kansas, fourteen miles away, and if he did not come Monday he would go after him Tuesday, as he had been soft soaping them with the belief that truth only would save and benefit, and he was anxious to hear and get all the good he could, and debate the difference. So I rode all day Monday, January 1st, that there might be preaching, and O, how cold. Took dinner from some black haw bushes whilst pony rested, and after roaming from house to house, at moonlight kindled a fire, had the house comfortable, and a large congregation, who were addressed by Brn. J. A. and J. T. Davis, the latter on doctrine, and proposed discussion, &c. Tuesday, 7:30, met a full house, but no preacher. They said he could not come, and so one Mr. G. Nee presented a transcript of part of a letter he should have sent containing a proposition as follows: "That the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is a part of the Church of Christ organized by him and his apostles." Bro. Padget, representative of the so called Christian Church deny, and Bro. J. T. Davis, affirm, which he (Bro. Davis), said he would not do, for he nor his brethren never had preached such a doctrine, didn't believe it. But any and all doctrines set forth by the Church he would defend; and after an explanation of faith, doctrine, seal of appointment, &c., he as it were, pulled off his gloves and gave us one of his big sermons of near two hours in length, when they became very anxious for a discussion, and insisted on Bro. Davis writing a proposition, which he did as follows: "That the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the same in faith, organization and blessings, as the church organized by Christ." Bro. J. T. Davis affirm, and Bro. J. Padget deny. Also that Bro. J. Padget affirm that the so called Church of Christ is the same in faith, organization and blessing, as the church organized by Christ. Bro. J. T. Davis deny.

Bro. J. A. Davis and writer on the 6th set out on a twenty mile ride over the cold prairie, as per conference appointment to reorganize the Jacksonville Branch. On Sabbath morning Bro. N. Randall conveyed us six miles to the house of Bro. Staddon, where a goodly number of Saints was gathered for the above named purpose. We proceeded to reorganize, when it was agreed so to do; Bro. J. B. Graham was chosen president, and a good feeling prevailed.

Yours of the one faith, in bonds,

C. M. FULKS.

BOSTON, January 22d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—The church in Boston are still striving to hold up the faith, although not progressing as in times past; yet there is a good feeling among the Saints, and some who have been investigating are nearly ready to obey. We now have a nice hall to worship in, and live in hopes that some one will be sent by the general church authorities, whom the Lord may designate, that the word may be proclaimed in the spirit of the Master, and many souls be converted to the Lord. We are all poor as to the things of this world, but willing to do all we can. The Massachusetts District is alive to the importance of the work intrusted to its care, and the truth is advancing steadily, and the indications of the Spirit are that a good work will be done. The conference on the 6th and 7th inst., at Dennisport, Massachusetts, was a most excellent one, and much interest was manifested by the people. Hundreds came to hear the word, which was most ably set forth by Brn. Gilbert and Sheehy. The ministry are united and work together in love, and feel that the great and good Shepherd is watching over us for good. We are looking forward to the coming conference at Kirtland with fond anticipation, believing that great good will there be accomplished for the Church. Bro. M. H. Bond, of Michigan, is in the city. We feel his visit will prove good for us. He preached for us on Sunday and the Lord blessed him.

May the Lord bless you, and all your co-workers, is the prayer of your humble brother,

E. N. WEBSTER.

BUCHANAN, Henry Co., Tenn.,

January 30th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I am happy to say that I am free once more, made so by the laws of the land, and by the gospel of Jesus Christ, and am enjoying good health, and feeling well generally; for which I feel thankful to our Heavenly Father, and also for his watchcare over us as his children. I was arrested July 4th, 1881, at Foundry Branch, while delivering an oration on that day, by three officers, armed to the teeth. Carried to the town of Paris. There I gave a temporary bond to get released to go to Eagle Creek to get my bondsmen. A lawyer by the name of Rufus Ward was my voucher, until I made my bond. Then I was called to trial in the January Term of Court, 1882. Had a kind of hearing, was fined twenty-five dollars and costs, which would have amounted to one hundred dollars or more. We then appealed to the Supreme Court of the state, got a new hearing, was to have had a re-examination in the September Term, 1882; but the prosecuting attorney claimed he was not ready; notwithstanding my counselors claimed that the state had no shadow of a hope to convict me, nor a particle of evidence against me, the jury ruled the Court, and had the case put off until the January Term, 1883; and on the third day of Court the case was called up, and the witnesses all there ready. The prosecuting attorney arose, said it was very humiliating on his part, and asked the judge to dismiss the case, without examining a single witness. Under the circumstances we were compelled to employ three lawyers, which were Stacker Taylor, Rufus Ward, and Swincy. Their fees were fifteen dollars each, to fight the case from beginning to end. When the case was dismissed, many citizens of town and country, expressed their sympathy, and said they were glad that we had beaten the suit; and said it was a malicious affair, and should have been dismissed a year ago. I have never had any fears in the case; for I have trusted in a higher power than man. I feel that God has a watchcare over his people, and I yet feel firm in the gospel, and my faith is not shaken.

Bro. G. S. Hyde left for his home in Antelope county, Nebraska, last Thursday. Bro. Anthony does not expect to return to this part before March 15th. He requested that I should stay here until the first of April, and go with him to the General Conference. But I have written home several times, also to St. Louis, and can get no answers to my letters, so I shall be obliged to register this letter. That is the only way I can get any mail to and from. There are six families of the brethren of Eagle Creek Branch, going to leave in March for Nebraska; also some two or three outsiders, about sixty persons in all, and we can not advise them not to move; for the poverty of the country, and the motto to rule or ruin is yet prevailing in this part; though I have met with a great many warm, kind hearted friends, outside of the church, both in Tennessee and Kentucky. Bro. Hyde and the writer preached in Calloway county, Kentucky, together at two new places. Had a good hearing. Quite an interest manifest; also a new place in Graves county, Kentucky, at Wingo Station, on the Paducah road. Have made another opening at Buena Vista in same county; a great interest manifested, and a good prospect for a branch to be built up. Another place in Weakly county, Tennessee, three miles south west of Dukedom. I have been as busy as circumstances would permit. The weather has been very changeable and some severe cold, and great deal of rain. I am not fully decided as to what course I shall pursue; whether I shall return home, or wait for Bro. Anthony.

Your brother in the gospel bonds,
JOHN THOMAS.

FALK'S STORE, Ada Co., Idaho,
January 18th, 1883.

Dear Bro. Blair:—On March 27th, 1869, I was baptized by Bro. E. C. Brand, and on the 13th of November, in a conference in Carson City, I was ordained by you to the office of an Elder, and given a mission here to Payette Valley, where my brother and a few more Danish people live. I came here in the Spring of 1870, and have been here ever since.

I have preached the gospel of Christ, in the Danish language, and sometimes in the English; but I am not able in that language. My brother and myself have given the people tracts and books, so that they are acquainted with our faith and doctrine. I have baptized nine, all Danish. One of them is dead, and one lives in Salt Creek City, Utah; and the seven are scattered around here. I have blest thirteen children.

We all belong to the Mottsville Branch in Nevada, and by request of Bro. D. R. Jones, president of said Branch, I report to him twice a year. When you ordained me, the blessing was pronounced on my head, that I should lay hands on the sick, and they should recover. I bear my testimony that it has been fulfilled. I have administered to nine sick ones in this Valley, and the seven have been healed by the power of God and they themselves have borne that testimony.

We live a long way from other Saints; the nearest is in Malad Valley, over three hundred miles from here. The nearest point to the railroad is Kelton, two hundred and sixty miles from here. But the Herald and Advocate have been a great help to us. Every time they come, they give us, as it were, a new life. If an Elder that can preach in the English language, could come here, he would do good. But we are not able to pay his expenses. But if all goes well, in a year or two a railroad will come through here, which they are working on now.

I am over sixty-seven years old, and can not go around much; but in the fall and winter I keep sacrament meetings once a month. In the summer we can not come together because of high water in the river. My brother is over seventy years old, and has had very poor health for many years; but he has a good hope of eternal life.

My love to you and all who are in the true faith.
Your brother in the gospel of Christ,

JOHN F. CLENGBACK.

TUNNEL HILL, Illinois,

January 24th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—We are still trying to hold on to the "rod of iron," in order to make our "election sure." Our trials are many, our temptations strong, and our strength feeble; but we feel sure the Lord is on our side, and this gives us courage to labor in his cause. Bro. Hilliard has just closed a series of meetings here, which I have every reason to think, has been productive of much good. Three were baptized, and one received by letter during his stay, and the Saints were well instructed in regard to their duty, and seem encouraged and determined to put forth a more united and vigorous effort, to live their religion and glorify the cause of the Master. May the Lord help us all to put our good desires into good deeds.

Bro. Hilliard also held a discussion in Tunnel Hill, with one Mr. Nash, a phrenologist, on the following subjects: "Resolved, That Joseph Smith was a true prophet of God." "Resolved, That the Book of Mormon came forth in fulfillment of the prophecies of the Bible, and is as worthy of our belief as the Bible." The discussion lasted three days, during which Bro. Hilliard succeeded in getting many of the evidences in favor of the coming forth of this work before the people, in such a plain and forcible manner, that some were astonished, if not convinced. The negative was a failure. Mr. Nash seemed to be honest, but he knew nothing about the prophecies and other evidences favoring the coming forth of the latter day work, and could hardly try to answer them; indeed he did not to answer the scriptural evidences, only by saying that he did not agree with Mr. Hilliard's interpretations. He was not very well posted in the Bible; but he had a host of other books. These he was aiming to use, and perhaps would have used them, but when he brought his main witness, John D. Lee, on the stand first, and was shown some of his contradictory statements, and also some of Mr. Beadle's contradictions, it seemed to dishearten him, and he did not bring the rest of them. Those who hired him to tear up Mormonism, got sick of their bargain, and some of the leading ones quit attending before the discussion closed, thinking the cause of the failure was altogether in Mr. Nash, and failing to realize that it is hard to fight against the truth. They say now they will get a man who is able to meet this work and have this thing over; but I have my doubts about their finding their man. I think some good was done by the debate, as many came out and listened who would not attend our meetings nor investigate our doctrine. And thus the good work rolls on, and continues to spread and gather the honest in heart into the fold of Christ.

The work in this district, as in many other places, is languishing for want of laborers. It seems like we are almost forgotten by the General Conferences, as we have had no missionary here since Bro. Derry was here, in the Spring of 1879. But knowing that the laborers are few, and so many places to visit by the traveling elders, we will try to do what little we can, and not murmur nor find fault with those who are sacrificing their all for the advancement of this work. Bro. T. C. Kelley, of south-west Missouri, cousin to Wm. H. and E. L., was with us during the holidays, and for some time after, on a visit. He preached several times while here, with good effect, and his preaching will be long remembered by the Saints of this place.

May the Lord bless all the faithful and honest in heart.

ISAAC M. SMITH.

BOZEMAN, Montana,

January 7th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I would give through the Herald some information about Montana; answering a few questions.

As far as I know this country, it is no place for Latter Day Saints. If they think enough of their religion to teach it to their children, the privileges the Saints enjoy where there is a good branch, can not be had here; unless living near a branch, and they are few and far between. I know nothing concerning mines; never worked in them. The country is full of them. A few miles from Bozeman are coal mines just opened, and mines are being discovered all the time. This part of the country is a farming country; wages are $2.50 per day for laborers; but every thing is high. Summers are short, and winters long; and with a family, it takes all a man can make to get along; a single person can do better. The railroad will soon be here, and make a change. Everything will become cheaper, and wages lower. The climate is healthy to some, and to others it is not. It is very high, about 4,500 feet above the level of the sea. There is no malarial fever here; the atmosphere is dry and pure. Summer time days are not so warm as in the States; the nights are cool, one can sleep and rest comfortably. But the mining towns are dull at the present time; this I learn from newspapers. This is a little, lively town; three churches, not any too full any of them. Revival meetings have no attraction; but go to the saloons (and there are a good many of them) and you will find full houses.

With the best wishes for the success of the Herald and its readers, I remain a firm believer in the latter day work,

MARTIN LUDWALL.

PERRY, IOWA, December 25th, 1882.

Bro. Joseph.—I am young in the work, having only been baptized about four months ago. I was convinced of the truth of the gospel by the plain, earnest preaching of Bro. J. F. McDowell. God's Spirit has attended and greatly blessed me, since I obeyed the gospel; but I do not feel like sitting down and resting contented in the assurance that I am now identified with the true Church of Christ. My greatest desire, and longing are to do something for the Master; I want to bear some part, however humble, in this great latter day work. I realize there is a work for me to do, as there is for every true child of God. There are none of us but what can do something, if we have the will and disposition to try, that will be pleasing to our Heavenly Master, and at the same time make some weary heart glad.

We need not wait for an opportunity to perform some great act of benevolence which the world will applaud; for it is not so much what we do as the spirit in which we do it, that is pleasing unto the Lord. He says if we but give a cup of cold water in the name of a disciple, we shall not be without our reward.

Dear Saints, let us think about these things, and strive by our daily walk and conversation, to be worthy the name we bear. Let us be Latter Day Saints, in deed and in truth, and not in name only; for the name will not insure for us a home in the celestial kingdom. I have heard a great many Saints, in bearing testimony, and those who have been in the Church for years too, say that they do not feel as much love and zeal in the work as they did when they first believed. I have heard so much of this that it has caused me at times to experience a kind of fearful looking forward to the time when I too, perhaps, would lose in part the love and interest which I now feel for the cause; but my better judgment teaches me that such need not be the case. I think if we lose our first love for the precious gospel truth, it must be owing to our own faithlessness, and neglect of duty. I trust that the love which I now feel for the work may never diminish but increase; and that I may by my example and steadfastness, be the instrument in God's hands of bringing some precious soul out of darkness into this marvelous light. I do not wish to stop where I now am, in the spiritual life; I want to "go on to perfection, not laying again the foundation for repentance from dead works."

We may allow the "cares of this world and the deceitfulness of riches to enter in and choke the good word; and if we do this, of course it will become unfruitful. But we must watch and pray, that we enter not into temptation; and live our religion in our daily life. We will all no doubt have hours of severest trial, when Satan will tempt us to doubt even that which we have had the strongest evidence is true. But at such times let us not give place to the enemy, but pray earnestly to God to keep us from falling. Think of the many precious promises there are in the Scriptures for our encouragement. "My grace is sufficient for thee." "He will not suffer you to be tempted above that ye are able." I will never leave thee nor forsake thee." "In due season ye shall reap if ye faint not." "Behold we count them happy which endure." There are thousands of others we find in the New Testament Scriptures, which we may claim as our own. When I think of all these glorious promises, I wonder how I can ever doubt, or become discouraged, or cast down. But we must be tried; we are taught in the word of God, that the "trial of our faith is more precious than gold." If we never had a dark and gloomy day, we could not so well appreciate the bright ones.

Dear Saints, let us all give heed to the following beautiful lines of the poet:

"O, watch, and fight, and pray;
The battle ne'er give o'er;
Renew it boldly every day,
And help divine implore.
Ne'er think the victory won,
Nor once at ease sit down;
Thy arduous work will not be done
Till thou hast gained thy crown."

CHICASAHOOGUE, Alabama,

January 19th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—I have had the pleasure of seeing and reading the first weekly messenger in the form of the Herald. I was pleased with it in the past as it made its regular visits twice a month. It was anxiously and earnestly looked for by all, and all received comfort and cheer through its columns. It has been a spiritual feast to exiled Saints in the nooks and corners where little or no preaching is heard. I pray that its weekly visits may be as welcome to the Saints as before. May it scatter seeds of kindness, of peace and satisfaction to the hungering and thirsting ones. Some have found fault with it in the past. I wonder if they will increase as its visits become more frequent. As for me, I am thankful for its usefulness in the past, and have no fault to find. It has done me good from its rich flowers and sparkling gems. I have feasted from its bitter flowers, or what was thought to be so by some. I gleaned many sweets from them. They were not all tares, neither all dross. I shall hail its frequent visits with joy, and expect some of its talk will be sweet and soothing, and some may be spicy and highly seasoned, perhaps too much so for a poor wayfaring creature like I am; but I will feast on the plain parts, and try to glean from all. God speed the weekly Herald, messenger of peace and gladness.

I arrived at Bardwell, Kentucky, December 13th; I there met Bro. G. S. Hyde. We held a few meetings there, and then moved on to Farmington, Kentucky, where we were gladly received by the Saints and friends. We spent Christmas with them. Held a few meetings during our stay, but the rain prevented the people from coming out; the few that did attend seemed to be interested. Our next place to stop was Foundry Hill, Tennessee. Bro. Jefferson Turnbow sent us there with his team. God bless him. He was full of good works when I was here before, and his hand is stretched out still.

We spent New Years day at Foundry Hill, and the 2d we left for Eagle Creek. Brother William Seaton took us in his wagon. After arriving we went to the Saints' log chapel on the hill, and there tried to administer something to strengthen the inner man. We had fair liberty. We here met Bro. John Thomas. I felt glad to meet him, and while I took him by the hand and looked upon that tall, proud, erect form, with his long white beard, I could discern the lines had drawn deeper since I had last seen him. Persecution, bonds and trials have left their mark. He has been shamefully persecuted, falsely accused, and held in bonds because he dared to speak in defense of a restored gospel; because he dared oppose one of Tennessee's giant's, a minister by profession. It calls our minds back to the times of patriarchs, prophets and apostles, in imprisonments, in bonds, in dungeons, or at the stake. They were true to God, humanity, and themselves; amid scenes of this kind they went forth, and when Joseph Smith proclaimed the gospel restored by an angel from on high, he too, and his colaborers were beset with men possessed with the spirit of Demons. They were beaten, robbed and mobbed, until the prophets were slain; and yet they were not satisfied. Nothing will satiate that spirit. He will work until the Sun of Righteousness comes and treads the wine press. As we labor on and for this glorious cause, our hope increases, our prospects brighten, and we ask ourselves the question, Should we be fortunate enough to stand in the ranks of the redeemed, and gaze upon their blood-stained garments, and call to remembrance the stripes, the bonds, imprisonments, the rack and the stake, and the trials they passed through, and then see that we had escaped, how should we feel? Sometimes we think we should feel as though we had not been in the thickest of the battle, but in the midst of all this we feel to thank God, that we are counted worthy by our brethren to be an armor bearer, at least.

I held several meetings at Eagle Creek. The weather was very bad all the time I stayed there. It was almost impossible to get about for rain and mud. I bid them good bye there on the 15th inst., and arrived here on the morning of the 17th. It was raining when I landed, and has continued, and is still raining now. I am expecting to meet Bro. Scarcliff here. I have held two meetings here. They have been lightly attended. I must frankly confess, so far, my mission here has been a failure. The weather has been so dreadfully bad, that people could not come out to meetings. I can not speak of the prospects now in Tennessee and Kentucky. Bro. Hyde has been unceasing in his labors. He is loved and respected by all. He is a man I esteem very highly. Since Bro. Thomas returned here, he too has done all, and much more than a man of his years could be expected to do; and is still willing to do.

I am now in the sunny south. It is warm like Spring. Tar and turpentine furnishes occupation for the people here. The land is poor, and the people are poor, but rich in kindness, so far as I have been able to see. Pray for us here, that we may do good. This mission is a hard one for us, perhaps not for others. We shall do the best we can, trusting in the Master.

Your brother in the Lord,

R. J. ANTHONY.

KEOKUK, January 23d, 1883.

Dear Herald.—To-day finds me still strong in the faith of the gospel, and am reading the scriptures and history, and can find in them that this gospel is true, whether we live or die; but if we live in the gospel, death will bring life everlasting.

The Saints in Keokuk are about the same. We have meeting every Sunday two or three times, seem to be enjoying the meetings.

I like the Herald, and shall try to help make it prosper in its new style as a weekly, still hope to be faithful and do my duty the best I can.

Yours in faith,

B. F. DURFEE.

Editor Herald:—There are not, (so far as I know), any members of the new organization save myself and husband, nearer than Alton, a distance of near fifty miles. Yet there are within a few miles of us, some old time Saints, who have been taken in by the more popular churches of the day, among whom are some of the most noted business men of Girard.

We united with the Church in Wayne county, this state, one year ago last May. We then, having our visit out there, and being ready to start for home. From the morning thereafter until four weeks ago, we never so much as saw a Latter Day Saint, so you will readily suppose that we were delighted to have Elder I. A. Morris, (my husband's brother) and family visit us. While here the Elder preached three times and delivered two lectures. He had good liberty, excellent attention, and notwithstanding the severe weather, many came out. Some of course prompted by curiosity. The Methodist minister treated him very courteously, and kindly invited him to conclude for him at his regular eleven o'clock services, which he did, and announced his intention of entertaining them for a few evenings. This doctrine being entirely new here, and bearing the name it does, would naturally create quite a sensation. Yet I trust it may not be labor in vain; but that some may treasure up the truths presented. One worthy old gentleman, a member of the Christian Church, said he was so well pleased with the Elder's preaching, that he came near inviting him to preach in their Chapel; but says that he would not have had the lecture in defense of the Book of Mormon delivered in that Chapel for fifty dollars, no not for any sum; but adds that the Elder is an able speaker, and that if he had not spoilt it all the last night by lecturing on that Book of Mormon, he could not be beat. And so it is. Yet we take courage, bearing in mind that Paul said, "All that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution."

I grew up in the Methodist Church, became a member of that body when quite young, and its principles became so interwoven with my nature, that Methodism became, seemingly, a part of my very existence.

We have been taking the Herald for nearly a year, and find it a source of much comfort. And are now highly pleased with its weekly visits. If there are any Elders passing this way, we would be happy to have them call, as we feel that we need all the encouragement possible from those whom God hath chosen to minister to his flock. Inquire for B. A. Morris, one and one half miles east of McVey. McVey is on Litchfield and Jacksonville Railroad, sixteen miles from Litchfield. Please remember us in your prayers.

SCOTTSVILLE, Indiana,
February 3d, 1883.

Dear Brother Joseph:—We believe that we can say that we are holding the fort, with the banner to the breeze, and pickets on the advance.

One Mr. Wm. D. Morgan, a Methodist minister, who is conducting a revival meeting at Johnson's chapel, took an occasion to misrepresent the Saints, and to abuse Joseph the martyr. I was not allowed the privilege to reply at their meeting, therefore I have asked the reverend gentleman from New Albany to meet me, and publicly discuss the following propositions: That the Methodist Episcopal Church is identical with the New Testament Church, and I affirm the same of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. I don't know whether they will come to the front or not.

The Bethel Meeting House that was shut against Bro. David, now of Stewartsville, is now offered to us, to come and combat Ingersoll; they can't stand before him, they say. I don't think that sectarianism can.

Yours in the covenant,
M. R. SCOTT.

Dear Brother:—We are alive to the principles of the gospel, and think we are effectually preaching the principles of life and salvation to the people in these valleys, although we see but little results at the present time; but we are opening the eyes and minds of the people, and showing them where they have departed from the truth, if God is an unchangeable being, "in whom there is no variableness," or turning, nor varying from what he has said. If so, how can these people reconcile the law that was given in Ohio, for the government of the Church, which emphatically says that a man shall cleave to his wife and none else, and the elaborate revelation on polygamy, of 1843; or how Joseph Smith could after receiving so many revelations telling him of the one he would give them, when they assembled themselves at Ohio, to receive the law for the government of the church. I think if it was so, that Joseph Smith could not have had much faith in the word of the Lord. The worst dilemma of all, is the Lord altering his mind; for if that was possible, what foundation would the honest in heart have to build their faith upon? Faith could not exist on such a foundation. Hence I have to come to the conclusion, that the revelation given at Ohio, was really for the government of the church, and the 1843 revelation never came from God, but came through the lustful desires of men. I for one, can not have faith in a changeable God; therefore I have to believe in the unchangeableness of God, and accept the revelation given at Ohio.

The honest in heart are getting their eyes opened to the deceptions that have been practiced upon them, and are searching those books that the Lord told them had the fulness of the gospel in, and when they have convinced themselves of the truth of the principles in those books, it is their business whether they choose to practice those principles or not. The gospel of salvation is for the honest in heart, and the honest in heart know the voice of the Shepherd, and will follow.

WEBB CITY, Jasper Co., Missouri,

Bro. Joseph:—We now will sadly miss our beloved brother, Father Short, who has so often met with us, and spoken words of cheer and comfort in our meetings. But his work is now finished in this life, and we feel and know that he will reap a rich reward. I visited him in his sickness, and it was truly encouraging to see the love he felt, and the comfort he took in seeing the brothers and sisters in the one faith. He did not shrink from death, but looked forward as if he was prepared to depart to conference or some gathering of the Saints. It was a strong testimony to all who witnessed his love and zeal for the work.

We still feel to rejoice in the work we have espoused, and hope the way may be opened up so we can have more preaching in this place, as I think there will yet be much good accomplished in Webb. We are but few in numbers, but trust we will be the means of doing some good in the Master's cause.

I am very glad that the Herald has become a weekly, so we may not have a chance to lose an interest in it. It is like the meetings of the Saints. We are commanded to meet often that we may receive the promises.

May the choice blessings of heaven be with you, is the desire of your sister,
R. M. BRADLEY.

RIDGETOWN, Ontario,
January 20th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—As we have had the presence of Bro. Gordon E. Deuel laboring here, I feel thankful that he is of that kind who have great reasoning powers in doing good for his fellow men. He has made an inroad here through the many abominable stories that used to go around saying that we were in connection with B. Young. He has had good success so far.

When he first started there was only a few came out; but the people now are getting a better opinion of us, so that the hall we have here is getting filled up. The best of order is kept, and men come to hear that never go inside of a church door. The ministers and Catholic priests come. The brother asks them in kindness to come, and show him where he is wrong, and if they fail, for them to come and join him, and help to unfurl the blood-stained banner of King Emanuel. But they fail to say much to him yet, as he has caught a few of them on the street who try to scorn the truth. Brother Gordon is a faithful worker, and seems to be uneasy if he can not be talking or preaching to some body. I hope that before long his soul will be made to rejoice, when he sees some coming into the fold of Christ.

I some times wish we were better off temporarily, as it takes money to carry the cause through Canada. The people have their minds so locked up against us, for they think we are the same as those in Salt Lake. I hope something can be done for us, as we have the Town Hall here, but it costs us fifty cents each meeting, besides what it costs in the country through the week. We have two meetings on Sunday. The brother does not care about spending his own money, which he says he has to do. I think there can be good done here, and I am willing to put my shoulder to the wheel, with the rest of the Saints.

I remain yours in hope,
JAMES H. TYRRELL.

NORTH LACROSSE, Wisconsin,

Bro. Joseph:—I am well pleased with the Herald as a weekly visitor and counselor, and I can not see how I could get along without it. I value it very highly on account of the many precious truths it advocates so faithfully and fearlessly. But I prize it most of all on account of its toleration of the honest convictions of all its patrons and contributors. Some don't seem to like this, but are mourning for the "leeks and onions of Egypt," intolerance and suppression of every principle and doctrine, except those that just fit their little diminutive theological basket. Ignorance, intolerance and egotism, are twin imps of his satanic majesty, and darkness is their native home. But truth need not fear earnest investigation, and honest, friendly criticism. I not only believe, but positively know that genuine, true science and inspiration emanate from the same divine hand, and when properly understood, always agree. Therefore, let those that have put their hand to the "gospel plow" go on advocating true science and harmonizing it with both ancient and modern inspiration and revelation, unto the establishment of truth.

INFIDELITY.

ONE of the many striking phenomena visible at the present time is the general skepticism, or infidelity, becoming so rampant and uncompromisingly defiant, in its voracious onslaught upon everything of a religious character, in its present diversified aspect. It seems that although infidelity has ever been cotemporaneous with religious effort, and has never ceased in its untiring antagonism for dominance, that it, of the present century, is destined to carry away the palm of victory, for violent activity and probable success over theology; more so than that of any preceding age. We are led to doubt if any age of the world has furnished such an array of individuals, having as eminent reputations for intellectual attainment as those who now stand at the head, the acknowledged champions of infidelity. Our observation leads us to believe further, that as great as the visible list of outspoken ones seems to be, the list of the silent, who for many reasons hesitate to openly declare their positive convictions as against theology, is immeasurably greater.

It requires but little observation from those who interest themselves in watching the progressive developments of the age in its boundless diversity, to discover that the most studious and successful workers, the most towering intellects, the most untiring thinkers, and leaders in learning, fail, or avoid in their magnificent emanations to associate their views with the speculative conclusions of theology.

The tendency of the age is decidedly more materialistic than divine; in fact, the latter has been the theme of research, so long engaging, as it has done, so much of human effort, and fruitful only in an abundance of speculative philosophies that offers no demonstration, and leaves the solution still in the toils of actual uncertainty, and in the future, that suddenly humanity seems to be rising in a solid mass to declare its satiety and determination to pursue it no farther.

Evidently the objective of materialism is to crowd out theology. Why its votaries hope and expect to do this, is plainly seen in the following: "Simply because materialism is found to be a metaphysical theory, more susceptible of human comprehension than it, (theology), founded as it is upon the hypothesis that all matter both animate and inanimate, may be resolved into a modification through the operations of cause and effect, in its unceasing operations, ignoring not only the necessity of a Divine interference, but the existence of Deity itself."

Here we have the very essence and ground work upon which infidelity stands. It is in fact a bold and defiant challenge, that disquiets, alarms and disconcerts all theological effort at the present time. A perfect iconoclast, seeking with one fell swoop, to disprove and destroy the very central idea and foundation upon which our modern theological structure is reared. In this bold challenge may be seen the argument that not only now, but in every age, besides producing skepticism amongst men, it has produced this inevitable result whenever reason has asserted its throne, regardless of existing superstitions, that had warped and enthralled the general mind with conclusions, that had no foundation in fact.

The abstract fact of a living God, no person can candidly deny. Not even Ingersoll, in his most bitter onslaught, will scarcely venture upon such dangerous ground. How often we hear such assert that "infinity is something we can not comprehend." If it is something that is far beyond human comprehension, is it not a tacit admission of the possibility of the hidden fact existing? It is true that many men in different ages have attempted to assume the position, on various grounds, of positive denial; but it may be justly questioned, we think, if any one ever positively accepted the principle. Infidelity means now what it has meant in every age. Not an ignoring of the possible fact, but of the ordinary ideas and class of evidences, offered by theologians to establish the character and existence of Deity. In these he sees no suitable or sufficient demonstration to justify conclusions. Here seems to be and always has been, the bone of controversy between the infidel and theologian. The cry of the former has ever been that tradition and nature's phenomenal workings do not furnish a class of evidences that warrants the fact beyond all possible doubt. In the absence of such, after so much pretension by the theologian, he naturally inclines toward such conclusions as his own natural endowment leads him to arrive at. The infidel is honorable enough to admit that by his own natural understanding, unaided by some other class of proofs as yet not available to him, he can not find out God; and here we heartily endorse his outspoken sentiment, because it has the endorsement of the theologian's own standard of proof, the Divine word itself.

"Where is the wise? Where is the scribe? Where is the disputer of this world? Hath not God made foolish the wisdom of this world. For after that in the wisdom of God, the world by wisdom knew not God, it pleased God by the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe."—1 Cor. i: 20, 21.

And we have yet to learn how any man, in his own carnal nature, can claim more than human wisdom to aid him in his researches. The wisdom with which man is naturally endowed seems peculiarly adapted and capable to assist him in discovering the powers and forces of nature, or what is known as the metaphysical sciences. This is the natural man's proper element, and here he makes progress. There he deals solely with visible facts, demonstrated by experimental effort, to the satisfaction of his eye and conscience, and in the boundless work of cause and effect, continually exhibited before his vision, is he not justified in his assertion, that materialism is more susceptible of human comprehension than theology. We venture our opinion that he is, and we have always thought so; and however much we may regret his extravagances, and the absence of a better class of proofs, that would lead him into the actual knowledge of God, we admire him as an abhorrer of speculative proof, entirely unsusceptible of demonstration; conscious as he is, that cosmogony, ancient and modern, is nothing more than theories, that can not be demonstrated, he makes determined war upon it all, as an unwarrantable outgrowth of fanaticism, without actual facts to support it. We wish that infidel and theologian would harmonize their views, and thus prevent the constant war of words between them. We never expect to see it upon the radical view of the former, that because his human wisdom does not lead him into a demonstration, and thereby is tempted into the position of a denial of our existing Deity; neither upon the extravagant view of the latter, that speculative theories are positive demonstrations. A unity upon these extremes is absolutely impossible. But upon one point, theology could with good grace and honor meet the skeptic, and effectively bridge over the wide chasm that now keeps them asunder. Let the theologian admit that man, by his natural powers of mind, can not comprehend nor find out God. Here would be a candid support to what the Divine word says. Is it not a strange anomaly, that those the most eminent amongst men, who make no pretensions to a belief in that word, should be the first ones to discover and acknowledge its truth. With all the assurance assumed, and promised surety that religious conceptions pretend to give its followers, supported as they are by the evidence of tradition, and that of nature's resplendent works in earth and sky; with all this, we ask, is there not still a something lacking, an aching void in all human hearts, that rises up continually in the human conscience, breathing the question, Is there a God? The infidel feels, and we dare assert that every theologian and his follower feels it, and if we should express the true sentiment of our heart, it would be this, that it would be immeasurably better for the world that this one solemn, scriptural truth should prevail, and make all mankind one in sentiment and feeling, upon such a question, even if its accomplishment should be achieved by the sacrifice of every shade of superstition and cosmogony that now exists. Suppose it were possible to achieve such a victory for the Divine word, could it possibly bring man any nearer a solution than he was before? It would certainly seem profitless to hope for such a unity, without such a result following, and folly to destroy even a meagre faith on God, as now existing, unless thereby the world could be advanced into the actual knowledge of God.

Let us imagine the world united thus in respectful submission to what the word says, confessing its blind ignorance, and superstition in the past, what then! What are its present needs? It must be led into a new field of investigation, into a higher plane of thought, where it can enjoy a greater light, affording immeasurably better conditions in which cause and effect can be witnessed in greater demonstrative power than was ever seen by the metaphysical student; in fact where a class of proofs are evolved that the eye can see and conscience feels; in fact a sphere where God himself draws near, in a solemn nearness, leading on those that believe by his marvelous goodness and demonstrative powers, here a little and there a little, unto his own perfect knowledge and presence. Unto this mankind should seek. Unto this it ever has, and now is, seeking. All religious effort, all scientific effort, all human effort and aspirations, are blended in this direction. There is an innate thirst in the human mind for progressive development, a reaching out into the unexplored regions of knowledge. Mysteries! mysteries! are the world's talisman, and all knowledge and hidden mysteries belong to God, and by them he will draw the world unto himself. If infidel and theologian have failed to find it in the past, it has not been for the want of trying. But the lack of opportunity and direction has hindered. What both need to set them right, to enable both to see their way more clearly, is the gospel of the Son of God, to be born again into a newness of life, into a system that comes, not in word only, but in power, and much assurance, and in the demonstration of the Holy Ghost. By this means God has always manifested himself unto those who believe and enter into this new condition; by this they obtain a more excellent knowledge, and a lively hope. And here both infidel and theologian may find peace and rest from their bitter strife, and learn of God.

THOMAS J. ANDREWS.

THE ATONEMENT.

"As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive."—1 Cor. 15: 22.

By this we find that death passed upon all men by Adam's sin; and that all men will be brought to life by the death of Christ; and this bringing to life is to be without any conditions upon the part of man whatever. There are different degrees of life, as we find by reading 1 Cor. 15th chapter. God formed man, and placed him in a beautiful garden, made with God's own hands; a place filled with all that he could desire to make him happy. Giving him charge of all in it, he gave him intelligence and free agency. Now, he could not act upon or use this agency, unless he should be enticed by good or evil. We find both were placed before him. God gave him a strict charge, saying, that in the day he ate of the tree of knowledge, he should surely die. We also find that Satan came to him and said, that if he ate of it, he should not die, but should become as God, knowing good from evil. Hence the man was able to act for himself upon his agency. He, seeing that the fruit was good for food, and desirable to make one wise, (looking from a carnal standpoint), reached forth his hand and partook. One said that if he ate of it he should die; the other that he should not die. We believe that each spoke the truth.

The death pronounced upon Adam was of a two fold character, a spiritual and a temporal death; and while God referred to the spiritual, which took place the same day, Satan referred to the temporal, which did not take place for over nine hundred years after. This death affected the whole human race; for Paul said, "in Adam all die." By reading the history we find that man was placed in Eden, a place the most beautiful of earth, and that God at times came and walked up and down in it, and talked with the man, face to face. He enjoyed his society; there seemed to be a certain spot in Eden where God used to meet with Adam, and talk with him face to face, even as one man talks to another.

But now a change comes over the scene. He becomes carnal; his eyes are opened, he discovers that he is naked; he leaves this sacred spot, and goes among the trees to hide himself from his Maker, causing a vail between them. This place was no longer beautiful and desirable to him; for he sought another. We find that the Lord, walking through the garden, comes to this spot where he had often met the man before, and finds he is not there. The Lord calls to him, saying, "Adam, where art thou?" Mark the answer, "I heard thy voice, and I hid myself." What a change had come over him. The Lord finds that he does not desire to remain longer in this place, so he removes him from the garden, and places him outside, where he is shut out from all its enjoyments, and also from beholding his face. This is the spiritual death. He also said to him, that "dust he was, and unto dust he should return." This is the temporal death. This death consigned man to the grave, where his body would remain forever, while his soul or his spirit would be subject to the will of the Devil, by which he would be bound in chains of darkness, unless he should be delivered by a higher power than his own. Now, as man had plunged himself into this condition, having become subject unto death, it being impossible for him to deliver himself; if so, sin could be sacrificed for sin. This could not be. There must be a perfect sacrifice made to satisfy the demands of justice.

God, by his foreknowledge, knew that man would fall, because of his agency; so he prepared a means in the councils of heaven. Jesus Christ agreed to come to earth, and make an atonement, become sin for man. Hence, he became "as a Lamb slain from before the foundation of the world." Now, Paul says, "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." How, and by what means? We answer, by the resurrection. Christ proposes by his atonement to redeem all men from the grave, as a free gift, all having come under this penalty by the act of one, so all shall be redeemed by the act of one, which is Christ. Hence, we will not be punished for the sin of Adam. Christ restores all that was lost in Adam, and God is just,

We will have to answer for our own sins, and not for those of any other man. This being made alive, is the bringing man from the grave. Now, this is to be as universal as the death pronounced.

It is thought by some, that this justifies man in remaining in sin, or gives him license to continue therein. We do not see it in that light. Being raised from the dead, makes us immortal, so that we can not die any more as to the flesh. With this exception, we come forth in the same condition as we were in before, unless we repent of our sins in the spirit life, there being space granted between death and the resurrection for that purpose. Hence being raised from the dead does not forgive us of our sins. It simply brings us before the bar of justice, to answer for all our guilt. Therefore, I can not see wherein the sinner is justified in continuing in sin. It rather condemns him, and justifies him not at all. That there will be a resurrection from the dead of all men, we have much evidence to prove. John 12: 32; "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me." He will bring all men before him for judgment, and this must be by the resurrection. Chap. 5: 28. "Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth." Acts 24: 15, "That there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust." This means all. Rom. 5: 18, "Therefore, as by the offense of one, judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so, by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life." He says it is a free gift. In Chap. 14 he says, "We shall all stand before the judgment seat of Christ. Every knee shall bow, and every tongue shall confess to God." Does this not show, that all shall be raised from the dead. John tells us, that he is "the propitiation for the sins of the whole world." (1 John 2: 2). John the Baptist said at the waters of Jordan, pointing to Jesus, "Behold the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sin of the world." Now the sin of the world was the disobeying of God's law, thus bringing death upon man; and as he is to take the sin away, it will bring all from the grave. Hosea 13: 14, "I will ransom them from the power of the grave. I will redeem them from death. O death, I will be thy plagues; O grave, I will be thy destruction." We see that he will not only redeem men from the grave, but utterly destroy the grave and the principle of death, so none will remain therein. In Rev. 20th chapter, John saw "the dead small and great stand before God. The sea gave up the dead which were in it, and death and hell delivered up the dead which were in them, and were judged, every man according to their works."

Then the Apostle was right when he said, in Christ all should be made alive.

The atonement made by the Savior was not only to effect the temporal condition of man, but the spiritual also. We are told by the Apostle, that "with out shedding of blood, there could be no remission of sins." (Heb. 10: 22). Hence, the sacrifices of beasts and of birds by Moses, by which the sins of Israel were remitted from time to time, all pointed, as types, to the great sacrifice which was made by Jesus, by which the gospel might be of force, having power to remit sins; thus placing a means in his hands by which he might save himself, if he would "be born again into the kingdom of God," where he could see the glory and beauty thereof, and enjoy the presence of God, and thus be redeemed from his spiritual death.

We, by our own acts, cause this veil to hide us from the presence of God, by which we are deprived of partaking of the joys of that kingdom; and not by the acts of Adam. Sin is what separates us from our Maker. Jesus said, ye must be born again.

"How is it, that the temporal death effects all men; but the spiritual does not." If it was otherwise, our agency would be of no use to us. Man seems to be a sinner by nature. God has given him free agency, just as it was given to Adam in the beginning. Good and evil are placed before him, and it seems natural for him to choose evil; thus bringing upon himself condemnation. Therefore, by sin upon our part we separate ourselves from God, it being by our acts from choice; so by the same we must redeem ourselves, by the means placed in our hands, which is the gospel. "Ye must be born again." It seems from this that we were once in the kingdom of God; but by some means have got out of it, and in order to get into it, we must be born the second time.

How is this, says one, God said of Adam when he had formed him, that he was very good; so when man is born into the world he is pure. We are told by Christ, "That little children are redeemed from the foundation of the world." (Book of Mormon). He said to his disciples, that unless they should become like them, they could not enter into the kingdom of God. (Matt. 18: 3). And "of such was the kingdom of God." (Mark 10: 14). They are redeemed by the blood of Christ. They are pure and holy as the angels of God. Satan has no power to tempt them, until they come to years of understanding, knowing good from evil, when they are able to act upon that agency given. Hence, they are free from sin, therefore they are in the kingdom of God. Now, when they begin to act for themselves, being enticed by evil, they yield to it; and as they grow in years, they grow in sin, and so depart out of the kingdom; for no unclean thing can stay therein. So they spiritually die; consequently they must be born again of water and the Spirit.

Glory, honor and praise, be unto the Lamb of God, for providing a means by which we may be brought back to, and enjoy the society of all that are loving, pure and holy. The gospel is to be preached to every creature the Savior said. (Mark 16: 15). We believe that all men will eventually receive it. Many will reject it while in the body, not seeing the beauty nor use of it here, but will in the Spirit life. Some think that when the gospel is once offered to man, and he rejects it, that he will never have another chance. But what says Peter in regard to the matter? That Christ "was put to death in the flesh, but quickened by the Spirit, by which he went and preached to the spirits in prison, that were disobedient in the days of Noah." (2 Peter 3: 18). Then the gospel was preached to them by Noah, and they rejected it, for which the floods swept them off the earth, and he shut them up in prison, where Jesus, quickened by the Spirit, went and preached the gospel the second time to them. So this destroys, or should destroy that thought at once.

We believe that all men will be saved; but some will eventually be lost. A man is in a saved condition as soon as he receives the gospel, and receives the seal of his adoption by the Holy Spirit. (1 Cor. 1: 18, and 15: 2). In 2 Cor. 4: 3, he says: "If our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost." To whom does he refer? None could be lost, but them that had been saved. We can lose nothing that we did not once possess. The very language implies that they must have once been saved. Says Jesus:

"Verily I say unto you, all sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, and blasphemies, wheresoever they shall blaspheme. But he that shall blaspheme against the Holy Ghost hath never forgiveness, but is in danger of eternal damnation."—Mark 3: 28.

These must be those who are lost. None can commit this sin, but those who have partaken of this spirit; and this spirit only comes to those who obey the gospel. Acts 2: 38. Read the 12th chapter of Luke and 10th verse, which is in harmony with that of Mark. The apostle tells us who these characters are:

"For it is impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted of the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they fall away, to renew them to repentance; seeing they crucify to themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame."—Heb. 6:4, 5, 6.

Again, in chapter 10:26:

"For if we sin willfully, after that we have received the knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sins. * * * Who hath trodden under foot the Son of God, and hath counted the blood of the covenant wherewith he was sanctified, an unholy thing; and hath done despite unto the spirit of grace."

From these plain statements we learn that these must have once been saved, having received the testimony of Jesus Christ, but suffered themselves to be overcome by the devil, by whom they were dragged down from the kingdom of light, to the kingdom of darkness, to remain with the devil and his angels in eternity. We learn by reading Revelations 20th chapter, that after Satan is destroyed, when the great and last judgment has taken place when all men will have their portion meted out to them, that some will be cast into a lake of fire and brimstone, which is the second death.

Now we do not believe that this is a literal lake of fire, because he says it is the second death. This punishment is simply described as being a lake of fire. This must be a spiritual death; for man could not die any more, as pertaining to the flesh, having been redeemed from the grave, thus becoming immortal. This must be the class referred to by the apostle, when he said: "If our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost." There is a place mentioned by the Savior as being "outer darkness," (Matt. 22:13), also in Jude, where he speaks of a class who are "twice dead and plucked up by the roots, to whom is reserved the blackness of darkness forever." This outer darkness, and the blackness of darkness, is the punishment that will be inflicted upon this class of whom we are speaking, from the fact that Jude says that those which were twice dead and plucked up by the roots, were to partake of it, and who are they but those who had been purged from their sins, and had fallen away, thus becoming "twice dead," they that are lost. Then what is the second death? By understanding what the first death was, which was pronounced upon Adam, we are enabled to comprehend the second, which was banishment from all that was pure and good. This must be darkness. We learn this by reading the Book of Covenants, page 118:11:

"I, the Lord God, caused that he, (Adam), should be cast out of the garden of Eden from my presence, because of his transgression, wherein he became spiritually dead, which is the first death, even the same death which is the last death, which is spiritual, which shall be pronounced upon the wicked when I shall say, Depart ye cursed."

Hence these are the only ones that will be thus punished. That man will be punished for every sin committed by him against God's laws not repented of, we fully believe; but that it will be of an endless duration we do not believe. Jesus says, that "all manner of sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, but the sin against the Holy Ghost." Mark 3:28. Now when a sin is forgiven unto any one, it is no longer held against him. All of God's punishments are of a reformatory character, except this one, from which there is no deliverance. The Lord says that "He doth not afflict willingly, nor grieve the children of men." Neither does a parent afflict his child willingly, whom it loves. "God is love." Now, it matters not whether we call this place of punishment hell, or a prison house, both mean a place of confinement. We have in our land prison houses, in which all who transgress the laws may be confined, for different periods of time, according to the degree of their crime. But when they have served their time out, the doors are thrown open, and they come out, as free men. While they are in there, they have the privilege to reform their lives, so that when they come out, they may be better men; thus learning wisdom by the things they suffer.

Now, we understand God's punishments in the same manner. God has a place of confinement prepared for all who transgress his laws; and while there they have a chance to reform their lives by the gospel which will be offered to them there; and that they will all come out from the same in God's due time, we have much evidence. Isaiah in speaking of them, in 24:22, says, that "They shall be gathered together as prisoners are gathered in the pit, and shall be shut up in the prison; and after many days shall they be visited."

As Jesus Christ was to be sent to prepare the way for man's deliverance, and to lead the way in all things, he must be the first to enter the prison house, and declare liberty to the "captive." The same prophet, speaking of the mission of Christ says, that he would go, that "he might say to the prisoners Go forth, to them that are in darkness, Shew your selves" 49:9. Again, "The Spirit of the Lord God is upon me, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound." 61:1. The prophet Zachariah saw the Lord, 487 years before, coming to Jerusalem riding on the ass, having salvation, and says "by the blood of thy covenant I have sent forth thy prisoners out of the pit wherein is no water." "Turn to the strong hold ye prisoners of hope." Chap. 9:11. Now, we ask, if there was no hope for them, what sense would there be in saying, "turn to the strong hold: the Lord God shall save them in that day, as the flock of his people" 16 verse. Peter says that Jesus, after he was crucified, and while his body lay in the tomb, that by the spirit, he went and preached to the spirits in prison, who had been disobedient in the days of Noah. 2 Peter, 3:18.

Notwithstanding they were so wicked that they were swept off the earth, the Lord goes and preaches peace to them. Again, Peter says, "That they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to the will of God in the spirit." How can men say that there is no deliverance for such, when we have such clear evidence as this? The Savior, speaking of the prison, says, in Matt. 5:25, "deal with thine adversary quickly while thou art in the way with him, lest thou be cast into prison. Verily I say unto thee, thou shalt by no means come out thence, till thou hast paid the uttermost farthing." This shows that they would come out, when they had paid the last farthing, and while they were there, they would have a chance to work their way out.

Now, this being the case, there must be a means placed in their hands, by which they might be able to "pay" their way out; and is not this means the gospel? We read that Sodom was so wicked that the Lord sent fire from heaven and destroyed them from the earth. Notwithstanding they were so wicked, yet we find that the Jews were still more so; for the Savior said to the Jews, that "it would be more tolerable for the land of Sodom, in the day of judgment, than for them." Matt. 11:24. This gives us reason to believe, that the people of Sodom will receive forgiveness. It seems that the wickedness of the Jews was greater than that of the people of Sodom, or of those in the days of Noah; yet they will all be saved. They were guilty of every crime, except the sin against the Holy Ghost; but we hear Isaiah saying, that "though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool." Ezekiel saw the whole house of Israel come up out of their graves, and said that the Lord would put his spirit in them, and would place them in their own land. 37 chap.

Now, if he extends such mercy to them, why not to all others? for he is "no respecter of persons," and "his mercy endureth forever." All will have claim upon this "mercy," except those who have become "the sons of perdition;" having once partaken of it, but had spurned it from them; thus placing themselves outside of his mercy, and justice. These are "the only ones who shall not be redeemed in the due time of the Lord, after the sufferings of his wrath" "and [he] saves all the works of his hands, except those sons of perdition." (Book of Covenants, page 212.)

So will he finish his work, and be crowned in the midst of his people, and all men will have to say: Thy judgments are just, O God. Glory, honor and praise be unto thy holy name forever more.

SIGNS OF REFORM IN UTAH.

BY ELDER W. W. BLAIR.

WE herewith present lengthy extracts from a rather able sermon on tithing and offerings, by Franklin D. Richards, at Logan, Utah, Saturday afternoon, November 6th, 1882. This sermon gives evidence that the Utah Mormons are not satisfied with their former system, and it further shows that their leaders are gradually feeling their way back to the law and original usages of the church. Brigham Young, in 1844, said: "It is the law to give one tenth of what he has got, and then one tenth of his increase, or one tenth of his time."—Times and Seasons.—vol. 5, p. 694. Brigham and his fellows carried this out with the poor, as well as with others, so far as they had power; and the poor day laborer who could furnish but scanty support for his family, and the poor widow who could not well maintain herself, alike have had to pay a tenth of their poor possessions. In proof of this Pres. John Taylor, January 8th, 1871, said: "President Brigham Young had adopted the system of asking one tenth of the property of new comers in lieu of the surplus spoken of in the revelation;" and he then very properly said, alluding to the law given July, 1838: "no man has a right to change or modify this commandment." These quotations from John Taylor and F. D. Richards show that they are going back on "the system" adopted by Brigham, and they are advocating the strict application of the law. Will their acts agree with their words? We shall see in the future. The sermon is from the Deseret News.

THE SERMON.

"My dear brethren and sisters and friends, will you engage with me a few minutes, and consider the subject of tithing as the Lord has given it to us, and see if we can get to understand it; see if, peradventure, there is something in it worthy to be sought after? It is an institution from God. Does he give us a requirement that is not fraught with blessing and consolation to us? Not at all. Every requirement lived up to brings consolation and blessing. If I can have the liberty of the Spirit to dwell on the subject, I would like us to look at it, and see if there is not something in it which we have not found out and which is both desirable and profitable.

"I will read from the Doctrine and Covenants a short but very comprehensive revelation upon this subject; but before doing so let me say that wherever tithing is spoken about, the word offerings is frequently connected with it. For instance, the Lord by his prophet Malachi charged Israel with having robbed him of their tithes and offerings. These are words which although not strictly synonymous, are so nearly alike that they are frequently used together, and sometimes one for the other. But as used in the ancient scriptures, tithes are not offerings, and offerings are not tithes. It should be kept in mind that this church was organized more than eight years before the Lord gave to his people in this great and last dispensation a law on the subject of tithing. Let this be borne in mind as we proceed. The beginning of the work was founded in offerings and consecrations, by the people giving themselves and all they possessed to the work of God when they embraced it. In the building of the Temple at Kirtland, the law of tithing was not known, but every man went to work on that house after the manner of bees returning to their hive, and each bringing in the necessary material to enable them to carry on the work.

"When the first Bishop, Edward Partridge, was appointed to the high position of Bishop of the Church in Zion, his duty, as given by revelation, was not to deal with tithing. Indeed tithing was not even mentioned in the whole revelation, but he was required to receive the consecrations of the Saints, and to set off to them their inheritances. No revelation had yet been given upon the subject of tithing. When the Saints had gone up from Kirtland to Jackson county in Missouri and had been driven to Clay county, and from from Clay to Caldwell county, and when Brothers Joseph and Hyrum, David and Oliver, and the leading authorities of the priesthood at that time were congregated in Far West, the then gathering place of Israel, and where a Temple was appointed to be built, it was on the 8th of July, 1838, that the Lord gave for the first time to this people, through the prophet Joseph Smith, the law on the subject of tithing, and we should understand this in order to approach the subject in a correct and proper manner.

"Up to this time you will recollect that the Saints had gone to Missouri to receive inheritances according to the order of stewardships, consecrating all they had to the Bishop in Zion; and in turn he delivered to every man his stewardship and gave to him a written deed and covenant, in the name of the Lord, and in the authority of his holy ministerial calling which could not be broken; and as you well know, who are familiar with the history, the Saints were during the following winter of 1838-39 driven out from Missouri altogether.

"We will now look at this short 'revelation given through Joseph, the Prophet, at Far West, Missouri, July 8th, 1838,' in answer to a question, 'O Lord, show unto thy servants how much thou requirest of the properties of thy people for a tithing.'

"1. Verily, thus saith the Lord, I require all their surplus property, to be put into the hands of the Bishop of my Church of Zion,

"2. For the building of mine house, and for the laying of the foundation of Zion and for the Priesthood, and for the debts of the Presidency of my Church;

"3. And this shall be the beginning of the tithing of my people;

"4. And after that, those who have thus been tithed, shall pay one-tenth of all their interest annually; and this shall be a standing law unto them for ever, for my holy Priesthood, saith the Lord.

"5. Verily I say unto you, it shall come to pass, that all those who gather unto the land of Zion shall be tithed of their surplus properties, and shall observe this law, or they shall not be found worthy to abide among you.

"6. And I say unto you, if my people observe not this law, to keep it holy, and by this law sanctify the land of Zion unto me, that my statutes and my judgments may be kept thereon, that it may be most holy, behold, verily I say unto you, it shall not be a land of Zion unto you;

"7. And this shall be an ensample unto all the Stakes of Zion. Even so. Amen."

"Before going further I want to stop and consider the question asked by some what He means where the Lord requires the surplus property of his people as the beginning of their tithing. Let us consider for a moment this word 'surplus.' What does it mean when applied to a man and his property? Surplus can not mean that which is indispensably necessary for any given purpose, but what remains after supplying what is needed for that purpose. Is not the first and most necessary use of a man's property that he feed, clothe and provide a home for himself and family? This appears to be the great leading object for which we labor to acquire means, and as, until the time that this revelation was given, all public works and raising of all public funds had been by consecration; was not 'surplus property' that which was over and above a comfortable and necessary subsistence. In the light of what had transpired and of subsequent events, what else could it mean? Can we take any other view of it when we consider the circumstances under which it was given in Far West in July, 1838?

"I have been unable in studying this subject to find any other definition of the term surplus, as used in this revelation, than the one I have just given. I find that it was so understood and recorded by the Bishops and people in those days, as well as by the Prophet Joseph himself, who was unquestionably the ablest and best exponent of this revelation.

"Immediately following the persecutions of the Saints in the expulsion from the State of Missouri, the Prophet Joseph, in 1839, found the sickly town of Commerce so nearly depopulated by disease, that its remaining inhabitants were glad to sell out to him their sickly place, which afterwards became the delightful Nauvoo—for God blessed it and made the place healthy as well as beautiful. Soon a site was selected on which to build a Temple, as says the Lord 'which my people are always commanded to build unto my name.' The corner stones were laid and the gathered saints were diligently at work on the building.

"How did they build it? Here for the first time in this dispensation the principle of tithing was practiced by the Saints in the labor of building a Temple. Few if any in those days who came to Nauvoo had any surplus, and many had not a comfortable subsistence, consequently the tithing of the people on that Temple was mostly in labor as I well recollect—for I worked in the quarry every tenth day when I was not absent on missionary service. I remember very well that every man who was dependent on his daily labor went in good faith and performed the work assigned him, and it was considered and credited to him as his tithing. When brethren who had property gathered there they were tithed of their surplus property and then after that of their increase of the residue from that time on. So abundant was the spirit of consecration among the Saints in those days they voted rather than have the Temple fail of completion by the appointed time, they would appropriate their homes and the lots on which they stood for its accomplishment. After paying such surplus as the beginning of their tithing 'those who have thus been tithed shall pay one-tenth of all their interest annually; and this shall be a standing law unto them forever, for my holy Priesthood, saith the Lord.' Again, 'Verily, I say unto you, it shall come to pass, that all those who gather to the land of Zion shall be tithed of their surplus properties, and shall observe this law, or they shall not be found worthy to abide among you.' This is a command; it does not say it may or may not be, but they shall not be worthy to abide among you. 'And I say unto you, if my people observe not this law, to keep it holy, and by this law sanctify the land of Zion unto me, that my statutes and my judgments may be kept therein, that it may be most holy, behold, verily, I say unto you, it shall not be a land of Zion unto you.' This language is plain and free from ambiguity. 'And this shall be an ensample unto all the Stakes of Zion.'

"I call your attention to this that we may look at it and come to know what it really means to pay tithing. For I do believe that the majority of the brethren want to understand what is the mind of the Lord on this subject, because our blessings all depend upon our understanding what is his mind and will, and then carrying it out to the best of our ability. Some who pay their tithing think they ought not to be called upon for any offerings to the Temple or poor, and say, 'If I have to make donations I can not pay tithing;' and they act accordingly.

"I might go on to speak about a great variety of views which are taken of this subject, but suppose we take a look at what the Lord said and did about these things anciently. First, a word concerning offerings. People carry something to the poor because they feel it to be a requirement; but do they do it in the way that they may receive the blessings of the Lord that pertain to the giving of those offerings? There is a great deal more belonging to this than I shall attempt to explain now. The first manifestation of God's favor and of his disfavor to man over the matter of offerings was towards two of the sons of Adam—Abel and Cain; Abel brought the firstlings of his flock and of the fat thereof: such an offering was acceptable to the Lord, and because of this the favor and blessing of God was upon him. Cain, his own brother, child of the same parents, brought his offering to the Lord, but his offering the Lord could not accept, it was displeasing in his sight. The Bible does not give us the particular reasons for the acceptance of Abel's and the rejection of Cain's offering; but the Talmud, an ancient Jewish record, informs us that 'while Abel selected the finest and best conditioned animals of his flock; Cain offered fruit of an inferior quality, the poorest which the earth afforded. Therefore, Cain's offering was unheeded, while the fire of acceptance fell from heaven, consuming the gracious gift which his brother had presented to his Maker.

"Cain's offering did not represent that gratitude and acknowledgment which was witnessed in his brother Abel's. And while God could pour out his blessing and spirit upon Abel, accepting of his offering, He could not do so to Cain.

"If you were going to make an offering to the nobles of the earth, you would never think of presenting anything but the best and choicest of the kind of gift you were going to make. I do not want to speak lengthily upon this matter of offerings, but to merely remind you that when we make offerings we should do so in sincerity, imparting the best we have, as did Abel, and never presenting anything that our better nature would intimate to us would not be acceptable to God or His servants, that we may not share the lot of Cain.

"Let us now return more particularly to the subject of tithing. The Lord gave to his people anciently the law of tithing. It is recorded in the fourteenth chapter of Genesis, that Abraham, when he went out with three hundred and eighteen trained men, and in the power of God slew certain wicked kings, thereby winning the admiration of God's High Priest Melchisedek, who we are told, went out to meet him when he was returning home, and blessed him. Abraham turned over one-tenth of the spoils that he had taken to this man of God; he did not even take them home, so regardful was he to conform to this law, which he respected and honored, and the observance of which brought such great blessings upon his own head and upon the heads of his generations after him, who also observed this law. Paul, hundreds of years afterwards quoted it as an example for those of his day.

"The Bible informs us that Jacob, while servicing for his wives, [it is an error to say Jacob served for wives, for he served for one wife, only. He never served for Leah, at all. The crafty, unprincipled, idolatrous, money-loving Laban, by fraud forced Leah upon Jacob, and Jacob had to serve fourteen years for Rachel. (Gen. 29: 18, 20, 27, 30.) That Jacob served for only one wife, is confirmed by the prophet Hosea: 'Israel served for a wife, and for a wife he kept sheep.'—Hosea 12: 12.—W. W. B.], recognized this law, and said to the Lord: 'Of all that thou shalt give me I will surely give the tenth unto thee.' The Lord blessed him with the desires of his heart and prospered him exceedingly. He paid his tithing.

"So also the Prophet Joseph and other leading Elders of the Church in our own day have covenanted with the Lord and paid their tithing with most careful consideration. When Israel was being brought up from the land of Egypt, and the Lord established his law among them to make them his people, he gave them the following commandment in regard to tithing:

"All the tithe of the land, or of the fruit of the tree is the Lord's; it is holy unto the Lord. And if a man will at all redeem aught of his tithes, he shall add thereto the fifth part thereof. And concerning the tithe of the herd, or of the flock, even of whatever passeth under the rod, the tenth shall be holy unto the Lord."—Lev. 27: 30, 31.

"Whatsoever passeth under the rod?" Do you know what that means? I will relate the history as it has come down to us. When they came to pay their tithing the Lord told them it should not be the poorest, neither would he ask the best; therefore they put their flock or herd in a pen having an outlet just large enough for one to pass out at a time, and as the animals passed in single-file, the owner stood by with a rod in his hand that had been dipped in some sort of coloring material, counting them as they came out, and touching every tenth animal with his colored rod. He would not go in among them and pick them least his judgment might not be right, but the flock passed out according to their own inclination, and as they passed, the owner stood with the coloring rod and marked on the back of every tenth animal, and after all had passed out to an adjoining fold, those that were marked were then picked out from the flock.

"He shall not search whether it be good or bad, neither shall he change it; and if he change it at all, then both it and the change thereof shall be holy; it shall not be redeemed."—Lev. 27: 30.

"They were to take it as it came, not to pick the good nor the bad; this was the requirement, that they should give to the Lord tithes of all.

"The Lord our God wants us to sanctify this land unto him by paying our tithing and offerings, that he may bless it unto us and make it a blessed land upon the face of the earth, not only to us, but to our generations after us. He has gone so far as to say that kings should not rule over it, and that if the people who live upon it should become wicked, when the cup of their iniquity became full, they should be cut off. These are great promises made unto us if we carry out the requirements of the gospel. And yet, how little do we know of the great blessings that follow obedience to the law of tithing?

"There are some features of this subject which seem like a crowning climax of the text. After the Lord revealed to Israel the law of tithing, and after telling them how to keep the feast of the Passover, etc., he tells them another peculiar thing, to which I wish to call your attention, as it is connected with the subject; in Deuteronomy we read:

"When thou hast made an end of tithing all the tithes of thine increase the third year, which is the year of tithing, and hast given it unto the Levite, the stranger, the fatherless and the widow, that they may eat within thy gates, and be filled. Then thou shalt say before the Lord thy God, I have brought away the hallowed things out of mine house, and also have given them unto the Levite, and unto the stranger, and to the fatherless, and to the widow, according to all thy commandments which thou hast commanded me; I have not transgressed thy commandments, neither have I forgotten them; I have not eaten thereof in my mourning, neither have I taken away aught thereof for the dead; but I have hearkened to the voice of the Lord my God, and have done according to all that thou hast commanded me."—Deut. 26: 12-14.

"Brethren, since so exalted sentiments of charitable benevolence were given to the ancients under the law, shall we to whom the fulness of the gospel has come let these precepts pass by unheeded, without treasuring them up in good and honest hearts?

"I have but just begun to open the door, just commenced to enter into some details that environ this great and vastly important subject. I have only aimed at the importance and general bearing of this law upon the Saints, as touching all that the Lord gives unto us, not dealing in the least with the administration of his law.

"Let us consider—who is it that causes the grain to increase when we put it into the earth? Who makes our flocks and herds to increase? Who gives us the vitalizing air we breathe—the liberty we enjoy with all the hopes and promises of eternal life and glory through obedience to the everlasting gospel? God the giver of every good gift.

"From the foregoing we learn that the law of tithing is a strict commandment, a law which if obeyed faithfully by God's people will bring blessing, plenty, and sanctification of the land occupied by them unto God and his purposes, but if disobeyed, the disobedient 'shall not be found worthy to abide among the Saints, and this land shall not be a land of Zion unto them.'

"That the difference between tithing and offering is that tithing is designated, meaning one tenth, neither more nor less; while offerings are also required, the amount is left optional with the giver—the measure he metes will be measured to him again.

"That the tithing of all that the Lord gives unto us belongs unto Him, and it is our first duty to the Church to pay it, and after that the sacred precepts, teach offerings and a generous benevolence to the poor and needy, whether in gifts or loans—discouraging greed or covetousness of this world's goods, which is idolatry.

"I earnestly pray that the Spirit of God may enable us to master this and all other principles of the gospel, until we shall possess the riches of eternal life, the greatest gift of God to man. Amen."

Swarts was a church member about 55 years; first with the Methodists, then with the Christian order, and on Christmas day, 1879, he was inducted into the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ, through the ministrations of Elder L. R. Devore; and lived and died in the faith; and now rests for a short while, with the blessed assurance of part in the first resurrection. Funeral sermon by Elder T. J. Beaty.

JOSEPH SMITH - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, 24th Feb'y, 1883.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Saints at Lamoni have a Singing Class, with a hundred and three names on the class roll, mostly young people. Bro. Norman W. Smith is teaching the class, and the prospect is fair for an excellent band of singers to occupy the new church when it is done.

Bro. Charles Sheen visited a locality some eight miles south and west of Lamoni by invitation of the citizens there, some two years ago, and succeeded in getting an interest to hear started. By reason of stress of circumstances the effort was not kept up, but last summer or fall he began going there again in company with Bro. Moses McHarness of Lamoni. Since then an effort has occasionally been made at High Point, the place referred to. The last visit proved to be on the day referred to in a late editorial in which an elder was storm-stayed in Missouri, when Bro. Sheen and McHarness went to their appointment which they filled in the morning. But Bro. Sheen was to return home, Bro. McHarness to stop for a day or two: but when the time for Bro. Sheen to start home came it was so stormy and threatening that Mr. Browen, the kind gentleman with whom they were stopping would not consent that the brother should start; he insisted on taking care of the brethren, together with the team; even the dog of Bro. Sheen that had followed him on the trip was not forgotten by the kind host, who fed and cared for them all. This evident kindness and absence from prejudice is very gratifying to the brethren.

Bro. W. W. Blair reached Lamoni, Friday, February 9th, having come east thus early at our request, with a view to arrange for the April session of conference now less than two months away.

"Ye Editor" left the sanctum for Harlan, Iowa, Thursday, February 15th, to dedicate a church there on Sunday, February 18th. Thence he goes to Michigan, and probably other parts farther east.

Bro. A. H. Smith and E. L. Kelley were at Bevier, Macon County, Missouri, February 11th, and would go thence eastward, stopping at Colchester, Illinois, on the way.

Bro. W. W. Blair was at Lamoni, February 11th, and spoke in the chapel at that place. House too full for comfort; it is getting to be altogether too small to meet in.

Bro. A. H. Smith was on the 9th, and earlier in the month, traveling in the Independence and other districts, with Bro. E. L. Kelley, of the Bishopric.

Bro. H. J. Hudson has been appointed Post Master at Columbus, Nebraska, a most appropriate and worthy appointment. Long may he continue; faithful and true, as he is every where known to be, to conviction and duty. The Columbus Democrat states that the appointment gives general satisfaction.

At last advices Bro. Z. H. Gurley was at Hornerstown, New Jersey, en route for Washington, where he expected to be on February 16th, or at Philadelphia, not yet fully determined.

Sister Meriam writes from Lewisville, Canada, of the good work done there by brethren Lake, Gurley, Meriam, and others. Sr. Meriam has been distributing tracts in the depots and on the cars, and otherwise aiding and defending the work. Let her example be imitated by others.

Chicago is in some danger from a flood, to be caused by a sudden thaw and heavy rain if it come. What will avert it is not known, since at present writing (February 12th) it does not appear that Prof. Wiggins' promised storm for the 9th instant was being realized. It is not long since Chicago was severely destroyed by fire—a sort of baptism by fire, and now if perchance she should be visited by a flood, as feared, it might be like a baptism of water. If the bad moral elements of the great and wicked city could be drowned and burned out, by fire and flood destruction of its material, so that the better could survive regenerated, then might some good come out of their disasters.

BRO. JOHN THOMAS, who was arrested and held to bail for his appearance in court, in Tennessee, was on hand at the opening of court and declared himself ready for trial. The Prosecuting Attorney, satisfied that no case could be made out against Bro. Thomas, abandoned the charge, and our aged brother was set at liberty without day. But the trial has imposed a burden on Bro. Thomas by the way of costs of maintenance and for defense, that we believe the Saints will be willing that the Bishop should pay out of church moneys, as they were incurred while our brother was doing his duty as a missionary in the South. Of this trial Bro. R. J. Anthony says, in his letter found in the last Herald:

"I felt glad to meet him, and while I took him by the hand and looked upon that tall, proud, erect form, with his long white beard, I could discern the lines had drawn deeper since I had last seen him. Persecution, bonds and trials have left their mark. He has been shamefully persecuted, falsely accused, and held in bonds because he dared to speak in defense of a restored gospel; because he dared oppose one of Tennessee's giants, a minister by profession."

BRO. CHENEY sends us the Malta (Illinois) Journal, with the following under the head of correspondence from Cortland, Illinois, by "Buttercup":

"Mormon services were held in this place last Sunday by Rev. Patterson, of Sandwich. [It seems queer that the Mormons should commence work in Illinois now. Probably 'Buttercup' has mistaken the Latter Day Saints, between which sect and the Mormons there is a great difference. —Ed.]

This Editor seems to be clear headed and correctly posted, having learned to make a proper distinction between the Reorganization and the church in Utah.

THE Page County (Iowa) Democrat, sent us by some one, contains the following:

"A Washington telegram of the 28th says Delegate-elect Singiser, of Idaho, was authority for the statement that Mormonism was making inroads in his Territory, and in the present Legislature there were ten followers of Joseph Smith. Mr. Singiser maintained that radical measures were necessary, as proselyting was carried on openly, and converts were taught to disrespect the laws of the country and offer insult to the American flag."

Mr. Singiser is evidently mistaken in pronouncing these men followers of Joseph Smith; for all people were taught by him to love righteousness, hate iniquity, and always be subject to the powers that be.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. L. D. Hoisington, of Dresden, Nebraska, says:

"When I was about sixteen years old, and was passing through an open sugar camp with my brother, we heard a voice seeming to be above the trees. We stood still while we heard the glorious voice that we never heard before, and I asked him what the words were, and he said: 'That awful day will surely come, the appointed hour makes haste; when you must stand before your Judge, and pass the solemn test.' I told him that they were the same words that I heard, and we both had the evidence of its being an angel."

He continues by exhorting the Saints to observe the law of tithing, whether they can give much or only little, and expresses the conviction that should they do so, the good work would roll on.

Bro. Thomas E. Jenkins, writing from Dowlais, South Wales, Jan. 17th, says:

"The first number of the weekly Herald came to hand, and if Elder Lambert's sermon is a type of what is to come, we shall hail with great joy its weekly issue. May God bless the Editor, and all that are connected with the Herald, that it may be an instrument of doing immense good in the year 1883, is the desire of your true brother."

Sister E. Ray wrote from Des Moines, Iowa, February 4th, as follows:

"We have had services in the Saints' Church here for two weeks, conducted by brethren Eitzenhouser and McDowell. Social service every afternoon, preaching every evening. We were comforted and blessed. We were taught many valuable things by the outpouring of the Spirit of God."

Sr. Mary Norton wrote from Alpine, Michigan January 30th:

"I am very much pleased to have the Herald a weekly, and wish it abundant success. Living alone as I do, it is almost my only connection with the church."

Bro. A. J. Smith wrote from Clear Lake, Indiana, January 13th:

"We are still striving to work for the Master. We had a short visit from Bro. and Sr. Scott. Bro. Scott stayed with us about ten days, and did us good in the way of strengthening the Saints. Bro. E. L. Kelley has been with us in the past, and he is a faithful worker in the cause of Christ. We would be glad to see him again, and hear him talk of work that should interest every true Latter Day Saint. We are having good meetings now every Sabbath, and Tuesday evenings. Have had the best meetings lately that we ever had in this branch. God is fulfilling his promises to us by the gifts of his Spirit."

Bro. W. Clow, of Armstrong, Kansas, wrote to Bro. W. Crick, of the Herald Office force, February 6th:

"Bro. E. L. Kelley was at Independence last Sunday, at Wyandotte last night, and is to be at Kansas City to night. He is accompanied by Bro. A. H. Smith, and is doing a good work. The Armstrong Saints are about unanimous for the law of tithing. His discourse was unusually well received, and I think will be generally complied with. I expect by the time you hear from Armstrong again, we will have a branch here, and I think we will build a church this summer. Bro. and Sr. Berg are giving a lot and $50, and I think we will be able to raise $300 more; of course we will not build a large one."

Bro. H. C. Bronson wrote from North Henderson, Illinois, February 4th, as follows:

"I have just returned from Taylor Ridge, where I have been holding a series of meetings to large and attentive audiences."

Bro. E. H. Roberts wrote from Farmington, Iowa, January 30th, as follows:

"I am well pleased with the change in the Herald, and hope that it may induce many to take it. It is a great comfort to me. I love the cause, and am glad to hear that it is still onward. May the Lord bless and protect you in the work in which you are called."

THE Editor was chosen by the Decatur County Temperance Convention, which met at Leon, the county seat, February 3d, one of the delegates from the county to the State Convention, to meet at Des Moines, February 7th. He attended with five others, was made chairman of the county delegation, and cast the vote of the county in the State Convention.

The Convention met according to the call and passed by a vote of 491 to 243, the following:

WHEREAS, The majority of the voters of this state have twice declared it their will that the traffic in intoxicating liquors be made a crime in morals, and that such traffic shall be prohibited under suitable penalties: and

WHEREAS, The majority of the Supreme Court of the state has rendered inoperative the expressed will of the people: therefore

Resolved, That we assert our unswerving allegiance to the principles of legal prohibition, and that legal prohibition is the only practicable way of controlling, and removing this evil

Resolved, That we maintain that all political power is inherent in the people and that the expressed will of a majority thereof should be the law, and that all departments of the government should use all means in their power to make effectual such expressed will.

Resolved, That it is the deliberate judgment of this convention that the executive and the general assembly should immediately take steps to put in force and effect the will of the people as expressed by the vote of the 27th day of June last, by providing by an extra session called at as early a date as can legally be done—

1. For a submission of a prohibitory amendment to the constitution of Iowa.

2. For such other relief by statutory law as will relieve the people and the homes of the state from the curse of the liquor traffic.

Resolved, that as the law must be enacted and enforced by state officials, who are elected by the people, and who ought to be their representatives, we pledge our support at the polls only to such men as are unreservedly pledged to carry out in good faith the expressed will of the people.

An effort was made to stave off any further action until the election of next Assembly, but this by no means met the sentiment of the great majority of the delegates present, who were decidedly in favor of directly asking the Governor to call a special session of the present Assembly, that it might rectify the error found by the Supreme Court to have been made under its administration. Whether the Governor will heed the request, and call such special session is not certain; but this is certain, that the people demand it, and generally agree that it should be done.

The Convention was a fine looking body of men; and from the character of the delegates it would appear as if each locality had picked out and sent to the center of the State for present action on this main question, the best men of their respective communities.

MR. HENRY CLAY DEAN, in a lecture review of R. G. Ingersoll, gets in this clever hit:

"Ingersoll says no man can control his thoughts, and is therefore not responsible for them. This, if true, would deprive men of responsibility for thought and then desire (which follows thought), and then action, and would send every criminal to the insane asylum instead of the prison. Indeed, no man would be more responsible than is the hyena, prairie wolf or tiger, which has blood the same as man, and eats and breathes as he does."

THE framer of lies and misconceptions is at work as usual. Somebody writes to the Chicago papers from Cleveland, Ohio, as follows:

"The Mormons of Kirtland are making great preparations for their reunion of April 6th. The work of repairing the old weather-beaten Temple is nearly completed. The quaint old structure is losing its identity by which it has so long been known, and, instead of taking form and shape of the more modern houses of worship, seems rather to be fashioned after its original construction. The peculiar and yet eminently fitting location of the great temple first impresses the visitor. It can be approached from each of the four principal points of the compass. The most frequented road is the one reaching it from the north, and that leaves the main east and west road 200 yards west of the beautiful residence of the late President. Capacity seems to have been aimed at in its reconstruction. Each of the three stories occupies all the space between the walls. It looks like a huge Romish Cathedral. Inscriptions in Greek line the interior. The huge curtain which hung in the center of the Temple in the time of Joseph Smith is being renewed, and in a few days will hang in its place. Just what will be the programme of the great union is as yet a little uncertain. Every day, however, swells the magnitude of the approaching event. The representation from the Mormon Capital that will be present at the grand reunion is now placed at 1,200. Many of them are descendants of those who were conspicuously identified with the struggles of the church for existence in Kirtland, and in their letters express an anxiety to look upon the historic ground. Mormons here say that the 6th of April commemorates no feast day in the history of the church, but has been set aside for this event by the Salt Lake authorities. From Salt Lake and Plano all the money comes, and all the details of the jubilee are arranged."

Correspondence.

FALL RIVER, Mass.,
February 5th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—As time passes, we are admonished to keep pace with our surroundings. The changes of the past, the prospects of the present, with the possible developments of the future, crowd in upon the mind, revealing the fact, that our duty lies in the ever present, calling forth our latent energies into action to meet the exigencies as they occur. For the last seventeen years I have prized the Herald as an ever welcome visitor, and my heart has often been made to rejoice in reading over its pages, especially to learn "how the gospel wends its way;" also to read of the trials, conflicts and disappointments, together with grace bestowed, obstacles overcome and victory obtained by the "standard-bearers" of the Church in their ministry.

On Wednesday, January 17th, in a driving snow storm, I arrived in Little Compton, Rhode Island, the place where Bro. John Smith created quite a stir over twelve years ago, (subsequently Bro. T. W. Smith preached there also.) I spoke to the people in the Stone School-house on Thursday, Friday and Saturday evening at the Potter's School-house. Sunday I spoke twice. In the evening the school-house was completely packed. I had excellent liberty, and good attention paid. I preached again Monday and Tuesday evenings. I was agreeably surprised to see Bro. Halstead and McKee, who had come from Fall River to notify me of Bro. Gurley's coming. I returned home with them, and the day following I had the pleasure of meeting Bro. Zenas H. Gurley, and heard him preach twice in the Saints' Chapel, where he acquitted himself nobly; it being clearly manifested to all, that he is eminently fitted for the work assigned him, and is an able representative of the faith. We parted reluctantly with Bro. Gurley on Saturday, he going to Plainville to dedicate the new Chapel of the Saints there. I stayed and endeavored to preach to the Church on Sunday. Tuesday, January 30th, I was again at Little Compton. Our friends had secured the Odd Fellows' Hall for me, at what is known as the Commons. There are two fine churches there, one Congregational the other Methodist. Their respective ministers were awfully shocked at what they termed Mormonism coming into their midst. They wanted the trustees to shut me out of the school-houses, but they would not. They insinuated that when we had made converts we would carry them off to Utah, &c., but their talk did us no harm. The people came out just the same. On Thursday I understand it was the regular meeting night for the Methodist Society. I was told by those who were there that they had four present. The minister read a portion of scripture, then prayed that the people might not be let astray, then dismissed them and they all came over to the hall where I was. The minister bolted as soon as he had pronounced the benediction, or they said they would have brought him too. I occupied the hall three nights, and on Friday night I preached again at the Stone School-house. The house was full. On Saturday morning I left them. While there I was kindly treated, and many are interested. Several told me they intended to go forward in baptism. Some of them are now members of other churches. I am in hopes to go there again before long. I was brought by Mr. Rosse Pierce on my way through a driving rain storm, cold and chilly, the rain becoming ice almost as soon as it touched the ground. We were met on the way by Bro. A. O. Tripp, who took me to his home in Westport, where I spent a pleasant evening with his family, while the rain fell in torrents without.

On Sunday morning we proceeded to New Bedford, and met with the Saints there, and I preached to them at their Hall. In the evening we had an excellent Saints' meeting, at which the voice of the Spirit was heard, encouraging us on in our work for the Master, bidding me to further faithfulness and perseverance, at which I felt to take fresh courage. I returned home this morning, found my family all well, thank God, and will prepare to be off again for labor in the great harvest field.

In bonds,

JOHN GILBERT.

MAGNOLIA, IOWA,
February 8th, 1883.

Dear Brother Joseph:—Because of the extreme cold and stormy weather I could do nothing, so returned home to await better weather. Out of five appointments made during the eight days I was gone, I only was able to fill three.

Infidelity is the stronghold of Nebraska. It is bold and daring in many instances. Generally, infidelity in Nebraska is of the out and out kind, and a great deal more honorable thus to be, than to say "I believe," and still not believe; but show a life of unbelief, and deny the power of "faith once delivered to the Saints." One fact with which I feel pleased in regard to these matters is, that most of the ideas warred against by infidel arguments are only damaging to the hireling priesthood and their doctrine, falsely called Bible doctrines. The outgrowth of this is that the two contending churches are being drawn up in battle array, face to face, and the honest in heart are becoming seekers for truth, that they may be found with the whole armor on, when they may be called to try the realities of that which must come sooner or later, that they may be found on the side of King Emanuel, the captian of our salvation; and awaking the Saints out of their sleep. They begin to see the enemy advancing in all his prodigiousness; and well may they begin to awake, for the day's at hand when no sluggard need apply for the bounty offered by the giver of all good to those who would fight the battle of faith.

J. F. MINTUN.

MENOMINE, Dunn Co., Wis.,
January 15th, 1883.

Brother Joseph:—As I see by the Herald that John's baptism for the remission of sins is increasing, and they say was so from the beginning. John baptized for repentance. So also did the Nephites in this land. But we find it was to unite them in a covenant to keep the law of God, and look forward for the Messiah who was to come.

Now, in the first place, let us see what the Scripture repentance is. The Methodists and other sects, think it is weeping, mourning and crying to God to pardon their sins; and going up to the mourner's bench to be prayed for. This is all vain; for we find that God, by the blood of Jesus, his own spotless Lamb, has put away the sins of the world. John 1:29; 2 Cor. 5:19. It reads God is in Christ, reconciling the world unto himself; not imputing their tresspasses unto them. Now, before he could put away the sins of the world by the blood of his Son, his blood had to be shed. Paul says, Heb. 9:17, "For a covenant is of force after the victim is dead, otherwise it is of no strength at all while the victim liveth. [Neither could it be under the law, see verse 18]. And because he could not put away sin he did not impute sin to the world." John 15:22: "If I had not come, they had not known sin." Rom. 4:15, Paul says sin is not imputed where there is no law. 5:13, "For where there is no law, there is no transgression." Acts 14, said Paul at Lystra, because he and Barnabas healed a cripple, believing them to be God's, the people were about to offer sacrifice to them. Paul said, verse 15, "Who in times past suffered all nations to walk in their own ways." Also in Acts 17:30, he said to the Ephesians, "And the times of this ignorance God winked at; but now commandeth all men every where to repent," turn from the worship of your unknown God and worship the true and living God.

When Jesus came the first time, it was to the Jews. John the Baptist also; so that the law given to Moses might be fulfilled, so that the new and everlasting covenant might be given to the world, to Jew and Gentile; and when he first sent out his Apostles, their mission was to them alone. Read Matt. 10th chapter. And of course their baptisms (Christ's and John's) at this time were one: And we find when Christ and his Apostles began to baptize, it alarmed John's Apostles. They came to him and said, "Rabbi, he who was with thee, baptizeth, and all men come to Him." But John said, "He that is of the earth, speaketh of the earth; but he that cometh from heaven is above all things. I must decrease, but he will increase." Baptism of course he alludes to. Here then is a time they are not one. After John's baptism decreases, (or ceaseth), which it did when Christ arose, for He gave His Apostles a new mission: "Go ye therefore into all the world, and preach the glad tidings to all the world." Here

John's baptism ceases with the law. Here is Christ's commission to his Apostles, after he arose. John 20th, "He came unto His Apostles and stood in their midst, and said, Peace be unto you; 20, and when he had so said, he showed himself unto them, * * 21, "then said Jesus unto them again, Peace be unto you: As my Father hath sent me; even so send I you: and when He had said this, He breathed on them, and said, Receive the Holy Ghost: 23, Whosoever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them: and whosoever sins ye retain, they are retained" After the victim's death, is given to his Apostles the mission of baptism for the remission of sins. Luke 24. He condemns them for not believing the Prophets. 25, "He says ought not Christ to have suffered these things and to enter into His glory?" 44, "Then opened He their understanding, that they might understand the scriptures:" 45, "And said unto them, Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer, and to rise from the dead the third day." 46, "And that repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem."

Now I call upon my brethren who hold John's baptism to be for the remission of sins, to give me their Scripture texts for so doing as fully as I have given mine: Permit me to ask them to answer me one question: Was not John sent (and I say from heaven too) with the keys only of the law to the Jews, who were under a school-master, the Aaronic Priesthood; whose ordinances Paul said could never take away sins. Be so good as to let me know how, and to keep the word of God true, for His word is yea, yea, and not nay and yea.

I love God's holy truth. It stirs me up to write to the Saints in answer to what I think, (yea I know), is error. I do not blame my brethren for writing their views, neither do I agree with those who are for no contradiction. I think it is quite right that both sides should go through the Herald. How, I ask, can we become one, if we are to keep every one his own belief, like the Campbellite Christians; we would be a babel, like them. We, although the only church God acknowledges, yet we are far from being perfect. God has given unto us his unadulterated word. But all our former opinions and creeds we must put away, and like a new born babe, desire the pure milk of His word. Let us search the Scriptures, with prayerful hearts. We must not tempt God by asking him continually what is the meaning of such and such passages. It is there written. Let your view be known through the Herald. Others will give theirs; thus let us be helpers of each other, and may give understanding to His Saints.

Your brother and fellow laborer in the kingdom of God.

JOHN MACAULEY.

NEW PARK BRANCH, Maryland,
January 10th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—We are still receiving blessings from God. I am at Bro. Joshua Fowler's now. I came here Monday the 8th. He is living with his mother about eight miles from the branch. She is a member of the Presbyterian Church, who is very much afflicted with the heart disease, and other ailments. Was taken very ill yesterday morning, and was getting worse all day. In the evening, about six o'clock, we knelt before God in fervent prayer, in the name of Jesus Christ, for his healing power to come upon her, and she raised to her feet in common health. Glory to God. I thank him. May God bless all, in my prayer, in the name of Jesus Christ, amen.

Yours in Christ,

M. O. MATTHEWS.

BLACKWATER, January 16th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—There is but one Elder here that does much preaching, and the cry to him is come and preach for us. More calls than he can fill. He loves to preach and the people love to hear him. The second Saturday in December my husband and I went with him seventeen miles up the river to fill his appointment. We expect Bro. Scarcliff soon.

Dear Saints, remember us, although there are but few and in a scattered condition. That the Lord may be with us to own and to bless, is the prayer of,

Your sister in the one faith,

CORNELIA S. CARR.

GREELEY, Colorado,

January 28th, 1883.

Dear Bro. Joseph Smith:—We have many things here to contend with; yet I think if we contend lawfully, and in a manner pleasing in the sight of God, that eventually good will be the result.

I have been a Saint a little over a year, and I find by experience, that Satan is working in the strength of his despairing, to overcome every person that takes upon him the name of Christ. But I also find, that with the persevering, it is good to have opposing forces to contend with, as it has a tendency to create in the Saints a desire to overcome and be faithful in defending the cause, that souls may perhaps be gained to a knowledge of the truth. The prospects in this place are rather gloomy; but by valiant fighting the victory may yet be ours.

I notice by reading history, that where two armies are fighting, that each general strives to strengthen the weak parts of his forces, so that they may be able to win the battle. Just so it should be with the Saints. They should be ever ready to help one another. But the question arises, How can this be done? In many ways. We are commanded by Christ to pray for one another, and by the apostles of old, we are taught to not only love one another, but to have brotherly kindness, charity, patience, &c. If we are filled with "perfect love," we will surely love our neighbor as ourself. And if we love our fellowman as we should, we will do what we can to help reach them and sympathize with our brother in trials that are afflicting him.

In last Herald (27th Jan. 83), Bro. Blakeslee gives very good instruction in regard to tithing. I think the Saints should adhere more strictly to this part of the law.

God will surely reward us according to the deeds performed in the body. Then we should remember this; and not only this, but we should bear in mind, that God provides us with all of the blessings we receive in this world. Then should we withhold from giving, for the advance of the "cause" and welfare of Zion?

I think we have cause to rejoice; for when looking out upon the field, we see such progress: Saints striving to do better, people calling for the gospel to be preached unto them. To be sure we have cause to lament, because there are so few laborers. But for my part, I would rather lament because of the few laborers, than to have too many, and no fields for them.

There are places in the field where the people have not yet awakened to a realization of their danger, and I think that this place is no exception.

But by efforts put forth by Brn. James Caffall and John Eames, since the 25th of June last, I have hopes that eventually good will be done, and no doubt many other places are in the same condition. But let the Elders keep on; for it may be that the place where no interest is manifested, is like casting "thy bread upon the waters to be gathered many days hence."

I am yours, in bonds,

GEO. E. MCCONLEY.

NEW PARK BRANCH, Maryland,
January 10th, 1883.

Dear Brother:—I thought as Bro. Matthews was writing to you, I would say that what he said is the fact; for my mother was relieved directly, and she says that we surely are on the right path. She belongs to the Presbyterians, but she has our belief, and when Bro. Z. H. Gurley comes I want him to come to my house, and hold meetings; for it seems that we can with the help of God start another branch here.

From your humble brother in Christ,

JOSHUA P. FOWLER.

CORTLAND, DeKalb county, Ills.,
January 22d, 1883.

Beloved Brother Joseph:—We, (the Saints here), feel to thank the Lord that Cortland is not entirely forsaken of Him, and left out in the cold, (so far as gospel privileges are concerned), for while some of us were ruminating as to the ultimatum of Cortland, and the cause of Christ; and while the writer was thinking of paying a visit to Sandwich and Plano, to get a little gospel food, to strengthen and encourage him in the gospel race, our worthy and esteemed brother, John S. Patterson, called on us. On his arrival here, January 18th, we made an effort to secure the Baptist Church, north east of here; then the hall in town, in both of which we failed. We then determined that our beloved brother's visit should not be in vain if we could help it; so Friday evening we held a prayer meeting, in which more than one of us was made to rejoice, in which eight of the twelve present, belonged to the faith. Then we appointed preaching for Sunday morning at Bro. Cherry's, in which eight of the sixteen present belonged to the church. Then preaching in the evening at my sister's, and of the fourteen present, seven were of the household of the faith. While at both meetings, if we count one who has given in his name for baptism as a member, and count the speaker, then eleven, or half of the number who were present, were church members. A little peculiar, that the half of each meeting, and the half of both combined were brothers and sisters in the gospel; and I have counted none but adults.

We have now ten members in and near Cortland, and when three more, who have as good as given us their names for membership have united, will be thirteen. While the first church, or branch organized April the 6th, A. D. 1830, had less than half that number. Could we not have a branch organized here; and would it not result in good to us and the cause? Certainly, if we were faithful. But would it not encourage us to put forth greater exertions to be faithful and engage in the best and the noblest cause, with which the earth is blest? True, we can now meet together occasionally in a prayer meeting capacity; but will we? And if we do, can we ever in our isolated condition be permitted to partake of the sacrament? No, never, save when some Elder may chance to pay us a visit; nor will we then be likely to have the materials on hand.

Brother, my faith is in this work, and I trust always will be. God bless you, and all over whom he has given you the watch-care, is the prayer of your brother in Christ.

W. R. CALHOON.

FREEMAN, Gage Co., Nebraska,
February 1st, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I have taken the Herald for a year, and can say that I would not know how to do without it. I am away out here in Gage county, Nebraska, almost alone from any of the Saints. Sister Foreman, Sister Wilson and myself are all the Saints that are in this neighborhood. I would like to have an Elder come and preach to us, and the people of this vicinity. We have been looking for Bro. R. M. Elvin for some time. There has not been an Elder here since last summer. I have been a member of the Christian Union Church. Was baptized by immersion. I thought that I belonged to the church that was the nearest right; but when I heard Bro. R. M. Elvin preach, and I examined the Doctrine of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, I changed my mind altogether. I now belong to the church that is right, not the nearest right. The Saints preach and practice that which is taught in the Bible.

I ask the prayers of the Saints.

P. M. ROUSH.

CAMERON, Missouri,
January 23d, 1883.

Dear Herald:—Twice in your columns I have noticed college mentioned, and it strikes me so favorably that I thought I would drop a word concerning it. As the first writer asks why not have one at Lamoni, could not some of the brethren who have means invest in an enterprise of this kind, that would be of untold worth to coming generations? Could not something of the kind be gotten up that would be to a certain extent self-sustaining, for instance there is plenty of good land around Lamoni; also good, healthy climate. Why not have a school with a farm attached, workshops, &c., and let the time be divided between mental and physical development? "The poor have the gospel preached unto them," and the poor also embrace the gospel as a rule. They also have, perhaps, as great a desire to educate their offspring and fit them for usefulness here and hereafter, as any. But their finances will not permit them to send their sons and daughters away to college. But if there was a chance for them to work their way through, many would gladly accept of it; and to our mind the physical organism had just as well be developed, cultivating corn and potatoes, making plows, wagons, &c., as by playing base ball. If there are those who prefer to play ball, and have the means, very good; but give those a chance who are thirsting for knowledge, and whose only hope of obtaining it is by their own exertions.

Again, how necessary it is that our young be educated under proper influences. To my mind Catholicism owes a great deal of her strength to the way in which her offspring is reared. Then should not we, who boast of having the truth, the pure gospel of Christ, strive by every means in our power to bring up our children under its influences? A great deal more might be said, but I just wish to drop a few thoughts, hoping that those who have the ability, both mental and financial, may be induced to canvass the subject.

Why not make the Hope a weekly as well as the Herald? And further, if every family of Saints would subscribe for it, we might perhaps ask the question with more propriety, as we think the Editor would be willing, if it could be done without bankruptcy.

Praying God's blessings to attend you in your visits to his people, I remain your co-laborer in the cause of Christ,

J. S. CONSTANCE.

CLARINDA, Page Co., Iowa,
January 21st, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I am glad the Herald has been made a weekly, and would be fully as well pleased, if not more, to see the Hope a weekly also. For the reason that the minds of children become tired of waiting during such long intervals. And the books of the Church are hard for them to read and understand, consequently not interesting to them; therefore they go without the instruction needful during a large portion of the time. Hoping that the Hope will soon be a weekly also, I remain your brother and friend for truth,

B. W. DEMPSTER.

DELHAVEN, Nova Scotia,
January 24th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I was somewhat pained in reading in the Herald the clipping from the Halifax Mail, especially if it was to be accepted as a criterion of "Joseph Burton's work."

No doubt whoever sent the clipping to the office for publication, did so from a good motive, though one half of the article is utterly false, and very much misrepresents both the sister that was baptized and he who instructed her in the word of the Lord. It is true that a "worthy lady" was the next baptized, but the Halifax Mail, or the Kingsport correspondent anticipated the baptism; for the article is dated September 5th, and the lady was not baptized till October 8th. The whole story of being made a prophetess, and receiving a revelation, and delivering the same is a fabrication. No one has ever made any such pretensions, as receiving such a revelation, neither has any such message been delivered to any one. The whole fabrication shows that the correspondent was a stranger to the doctrines taught by the Latter Day Saints. Neither was there any attempt made to establish a mission in Canning other than a hall was hired, and three discourses preached, which were well attended and well liked; and when the citizens of Canning who attended the meetings learned that the Elder traveled and preached without a salary, and also had hired the hall at his own expense, they generously assisted in paying the hire.

However glaring the misrepresentations in the above named article, they are tame in comparison with much that is in circulation concerning us and the church we represent, and the doctrines we teach. But whoever are not prepared to endure calmly all that may or can be brought to bear against them, and have "all manner of evil spoken against them falsely," are, to say the least, not prepared to take a mission to Nova Scotia, or be a Saint in Delhaven, where bigotry and priestcraft hold sway. But, thank God, there are some good ones there, and his love will find them. The few Saints in Delhaven have rejoiced in the knowledge they have received, and have been much blessed, though their trials have been and still are all they can stand, isolated as they are from all Saints, with enemies on all sides, and foes of their own household.

The Baptist Church, which comprises nearly the whole community in Delhaven, have taken their stand against the work, and resolved, both individually and collectively, to "stamp it out," as they say, and not allow it to go any farther; and indeed they display a zeal worthy of a better cause. "Man proposes, but God disposes."

A FRIEND.

SCOTTSVILLE, Indiana,
January 28th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—When I last communicated to you, I was at Union, Jefferson county, Indiana. I remained there over one week, conducting seven meetings. I enjoyed myself quite well in the ministry, considering my very poor health. I did what I could to build up the Saints in the most holy faith, and to point sinners to the Lamb of God, revealed through the gospel. For we understand that Christ is a "Minister of the sanctuary, and of the true tabernacle, which the Lord pitched, and not man." Heb. 8:2.

There are some in the vicinity of the Union Branch who are convinced of the truth of the gospel, but withhold their obedience to Christ from some cause which perhaps looks reasonable to them; but for the life of me I can not see why any individual should shut himself out from the glorious light and heat of the sun, simply because God lets his sun shine upon those that they think are not as worthy as they should be. This principle reminds me very much of the one possessed by the man who cut off his nose to spite his face. I left the Saints of Union in a better condition, I think, than they have been for some time. They seem to be determined to make progress in the divine life. May the Lord sustain them in every good word and work.

I returned home on the 22d of December, and in harmony with a resolution passed at the district conference proceeded to hold an Elders' Court at New Albany, Floyd county, Indiana, on the 6th of January, 1883; the report of which will appear at our next district conference. Since January the 10th, I have been confined to my room most of the time; but am feeling some better now. I should have been off to Crawford and Perry counties before this had my health permitted.

I wish to say to the Saints at Hall's Ridge, Olive and Union, that I feel grateful to them for the kindness manifested towards me, while I was with them in my weakness; and I further say that when you bow at the throne of grace, remember me. I have not been permitted to meet with the Eden Branch but once since my return home. The few that remain are in a better condition than they have been for several years; but then we are so scattered. I believe that about eighteen or nineteen of those that once held membership

In this branch have moved to the western country, leaving behind them those who were not prepared to go. While we think of these things, we remember with fondness the following poetry:

They have gone, they have all passed by,
They in whose wars I have borne my part;
They who have loved with a brother's heart,
They have left us here to die.

May the peace of God which passeth understanding be with his people, now and forever, is my prayer.

HARBERT SCOTT.

OAKLAND, Cal.,

February 3d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. Hiram P. Brown has again buckled on the harness, and is found at his post preaching; next Sunday he is booked for the city; he preaches well. Phrenegar is going to move to the swamp soon; he has bought an interest there. Bro. T. J. Andrews has been appealing quite forcibly to the Saints for means to repair the Kirtland Temple, and I think there has been a liberal response in northern California. We are trying to interest the people in the city. Bro. George has scattered thousands of tracts, and I lend him a little help occasionally, by way of furnishing tracts, scattering tracts, and preaching. Quite a number of strangers frequent their hall, and manifest a desire to hear more. After the wet weather subsides, we are going to make an effort to open up new places to preach. Bro. H. P. Brown is willing to assist in preaching; also, Bro. J. B. Price and Albert Haws. Our branch is in quite a good condition. A good spirit seems to permeate in all our gatherings, and the Saints generally are trying to live rightly. There are many calls from a distance to preach, but we are all so tied up, that it seems impossible to extricate ourselves sufficiently long from our business to make a start. After our next conference I hope some may be found to respond to the calls.

There is an opening at Tecoma, Washington Territory, for preaching, I have been informed. Possibly some one can be found to go there next summer. I hear of many old Saints scattered through Arizona, and many Brighamites are located there. But it is foolishness to talk of away off, when so many calls are unfilled so near home. I do hope something will take place to put us in a better condition for work.

As ever, I remain yours in bonds,

WM. ANDERSON.

WEIR CITY, Kansas,

January 31st, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—At Emons the people were anxious that I should meet a minister of the Christian Church in a debate; I told them if they so desired, that I would try it. So they sent for him while I was yet preaching there; but the first day he could not come, the second he could not come, but sent some kind of a proposition that did not suit me nor the people; so they wanted me to offer propositions, and I submitted these:

1st. That the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the same in faith, organization, and blessings, as the Apostolic Church of the New Testament.

2nd. That the so called Christian Church is the same in faith, organization, and blessings, as the Apostolic Church of the New Testament.

I to affirm the first and deny the second, and he to deny the first and affirm the second. Then I left for Columbus branch, thirty miles, and the people took the proposition to Elder J. Padget of Coffeyville, and he gladly accepted, and they sent for me. So on the 10th inst., I returned and met their man, and we completed arrangements to have four sessions to each proposition, of two hours each, each session divided into half hour speeches. We commenced the debate on the 11th inst., and finished on the night of the 16th. I can not begin to give you any items, more than to say that we could not wish for a better victory for the cause. We think the brother was twice glad—glad to go into it, and very, very glad to get out of it. We don't think he will forget us and the Saints as long as he lives. He never had such experience before, though he had held many debates, but none with the Saints. He is a fair scholar, and of fair talent, and I was told had a standing challenge for the world, &c.

We appreciate the visit of Bro. A. H. Smith and M. T. Short, but feel the loss of Bro. Dutton and Bro. C. W. Short from the ministry by death. The field is large and promising. Can not begin to fill all the calls for preaching.

Your brother, &c,

J. T. DAVIS.

BLUE RAPIDS, Kansas,

January 20th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—We have a membership of fifty-four in all. Twelve of them do not live in this district. Of some I do not know their whereabouts. Our branch president is Father John Landers, aged 88 years; faithful old soldier is he. We have six Elders besides him. Some of them are too old to preach much. Some are too poor to spend their time in preaching. I want the branch clerk, Newton, Iowa, to send me his post-office address.

B. H. CASE.

BLOWOUT, Blanco Co., Texas,

February 4th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—After writing you from Graham, November 28th, I rode fifteen miles with Bro. Wm. Hargrave, to his home, where I remained for the night; and the next day I rode to Breckenridge, and returned the horse I borrowed of Bro. Craig. I was solicited by different men in Breckenridge, to remain and hold some meetings, but could not do so on account of prior engagements. I was kindly received when here before by many, including Judge Wheeler, Judge Walker, Marberg and son, and other prominent men of the place; and my meetings were well attended. Bro. J. H. Hansen will remember having met Mr. Marberg in Maysfield, Kentucky.

On the 30th I arrived at Elmwood Branch, and remained with them about a month, during which time I delivered nine lectures on the authenticity of the Book of Mormon, and preached several times, once upon the funeral occasion of Sr. Hutcherson, whose death has been published in the Herald.

Conference passed off without much to disturb the good feeling prevailing among the Saints. I think we are all learning, and being benefitted by what we do learn.

At conference I met my co-laborer, Bro. Cato, and in company with himself and wife, arrived at Cook's Point, on December 26th, where we spent a few days pleasantly with Bro. Sherrill, Mr. Norcross and their families.

Our next stopping place was at Paige, where I had not been since my discussion with Mr. Lincoln, over one year ago. Quite a change has taken place here. No members were here when I left, but now I find a little band of twelve Saints, under the watchcare of Bro. W. G. Allen, who is learning to love the work as all do, who look well into the doctrines and privileges of the children of God. Inclement weather hindered us much, but we preached several times at the house of Bro. Marion Roe, and once at Mr. Hismitlis, and had the pleasure of baptizing one,—Sr. Mary Allsup. We then went to the Williams School-house, where we were kindly received by friends, and preached four discourses.

January 16th, we preached at the residence of Bro. M. G. Sherrill, near McDade, and the next day we (Bro. Cato and I) started for this place, via Austin and Burnet, arriving at the latter place about noon of the 18th, expecting we would meet my cousin, Wm. Wight; but failing to find him, we looked around for some means of getting to our destination, which was yet twenty-eight miles distant. The cheapest conveyance we could find was eight dollars, and putting our means together, we found we had just $3.90, so had no choice but to walk, which we essayed to do; which was not a very hard task for me. I enjoyed the scenery, with here and there a mountain rising on either side covered with the green cedar; while every little distance the clear, sparkling brook would glide swiftly across our way, all serving to break the monotony of the trip, and lend enchantment to our experience; but not so with my companion. The mountains, the evergreens, the brooks, had no charms for him; but as he came jolting over the rocks, with his two hundred and forty pounds of avoirdupois, he was at once an object of pity and laughter; but to his credit be it said, he kept in splendid humor, and allowed me to laugh and enjoy myself to my hearts content; only wishing that he might live to see me weigh three hundred pounds. Well, we made our way over nine miles of the road that afternoon, and tarried for the night with a Mr. Wallis, whom we hired to take us seven miles on our way the next morning. We then had twoje miles more to walk; but after walking eight miles, Bro. Cato gave completely out, declaring he could not go fifty yards farther. Leaving him at the roadside with our baggage, I walked on to my uncle's, got a team, went back and brought him in. We have held six meetings in this vicinity, and the Lord has blessed us in presenting the word of life. What the final result will be, we of course can not tell; but we feel glad that we made the effort. May God water the seed sown by the dews of heaven, that it may bring forth an hundred fold in the own due time of him who sent us to sow the seed of life.

To say that our work in this mission is not attended by severe trials, and some danger, would be to misrepresent; but through all we see some hope of the result we have so long waited for; and are more and more convinced of the ultimate triumph of the principles for which we suffer and labor.

The local brethren are doing what from their standpoint seems necessary. I learn that Bro. H. L. Thompson went to the place mentioned in my last, but a storm prevented him from filling the appointment. He is very zealous, and does as much labor as could be required from one of his age. Brn. Land and Belcher still hope to see their way into the field, bye and bye. Bro. Grim was warring with the elements of opposition in his country, when last heard from.

Bro. J. W. Bryan has quite recently left the state of single blessedness, and what the result will be upon his future usefulness, remains to be determined. I hope it will be good. I have not visited north Texas and Arkansas of late; but Bro. Montague has been looking after matters there; and in him I can repose the utmost confidence. Bro. Cato and I, one or both of us, will go west soon.

I expect I will be under obligations to return home in the Spring, and if able would be glad to attend the Kirtland conference.

I am much pleased with the weekly Herald. May it continue to prosper.

COFFEYVILLE, Kansas,

January 23d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph.—We Saints of the Mound Valley Branch are feeling well in the cause at present. We hold meetings regularly, and enjoy the gifts to some extent. We have a good president, Bro. Richard Davis. He is always prompt to duty, and has the cause of Christ at heart.

Bro. J. T. Davis and J. Padget met in discussion on the 11th inst. Mr. Padget found a great deal of fault with the name, and laid great stress on the Reorganized and Latter Day Saint part of it. When he got tired of that, he read several passages in the Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, trying to make fun of the same, and then to wind up brought up Stenhouse's History of Mormonism, reading what he could find bad about Joseph Smith, and part of the polygamic revelation. Meanwhile Bro. Davis set forth the principles and doctrines of Christ, in so plain a manner that all that wished to see the truth could see. I think he established his side of the proposition firmly. On affirming his proposition Mr. Padget managed to keep away from it pretty well—to be short, I think he make an entire failure. When Bro. Davis showed the emptiness of the systems of men, Mr. Padget got rather warm at times, but Bro. Davis kept cool and in the bounds of reason. When through, the people said we had a Christian minister, and some shook hands with him and asked him to come and preach again, and so say I. The discussion had four sessions to each proposition, two hours each. House was crowded.

I know of a surety this is the work of the Lord, and am thankful to him for this knowledge. I like the change of the Herald, and love to read the good instructions given through it, and Hope and Advocate.

Your brother,

JAMES L. HART.

Summary of News.

Feb. 8th.—Davitt, Healy and Quinn, arrested some time ago for making inflammatory speeches, have refused to give bail, and this morning were lodged in Kilmainham Jail, Dublin, Ireland, for a term of six months.

The survivors of the disaster of the steamer Kenmore Castle, which foundered in the Bay of Biscay on the 2d inst., existed three days by chewing flannel vests. The third officer became staving mad and jumped overboard, but was rescued.

A schooner has been wrecked near Portaferry, Ireland, and another near Shetland Island, Scotland. In the first, five sailors were drowned, and in the latter the whole crew perished.

The Montenegrin Government announces a rupture of relations between Montenegro and Turkey, because the latter failed to agree to a cession of territory.

The Council of the Ministers at Madrid, Spain, has decided favorably on the proposition of the Minister of the Colonies to treat as free men 40,000 slaves who were not liberated by their owners in Cuba in 1870.

There are thirty cremating associations in Italy in active and regular operation.

Feb. 9th.—Prince Napoleon was liberated in France at half-past three this afternoon, the tribunal having quashed the indictment against him.

A steamer was wrecked this morning off Harwich. Crew lost.

In the shaft of the Severn Tunnel works in England, to-day, four men were killed outright, and several so seriously mangled that they are expected to die.

The First Regiment of Bombay Grenadiers and a mountain battery have been ordered immediately to All Rajpooor, Bombay, to suppress the insurrection of the Bheels.

The Minister of War at St. Petersburg was recently advised that Nihilistic ideas possessed the officers of the army of the Caucasus. A strict inquiry having proved the correctness of the information, the incriminated persons were arrested. Positive signs of disaffection are reported among the Ural Cossacks.

The floods of Pennsylvania and Ohio have reached Louisville, Ky., and the river is rising at the rate of two to three inches per hour. Already it has risen so as to cover the lower floors of a great number of houses on Front street and back half a block. Many families and business people have been driven out of their homes, and still the waters are rising. A large and populous district known as the Point, and containing a population of 3,000 to 4,000 people, is entirely submerged, and many factories located there are largely damaged. Corn-shocks, logs, and other articles of property are constantly passing.

The Wabash River at Vincennes, Ind., is booming, and reports from above give the cheerless information that it is still rising. Bottom lands are inundated and property destroyed by the wholesale. Fences, corn-cribs, lumber and wood are going down stream.

Five men were killed and two mortally wounded by a boiler explosion at Taylorville, Ills., to day. A similar fatality at Charlotte, Mich., cost two lives.

The Iowa Board of Railroad Commissioners to day decided that shippers have a right to select the route by which they will forward goods, and that railroads must accept such freight and bill it as the owner desires. This decision will prevent railroads in Iowa from making arbitrary rules as to receiving freight from connecting lines, and is an important victory for shippers.

Feb. 11th.—The Ohio river is still rising, and fear of the most serious consequences is spreading over the city. At nine o'clock the water works gage showed within one inch of sixty-two feet. The water is rising at the rate of from one and one-half to two inches per hour. The news from Portsmouth, Ironton and Catlettsburgh, is that the river is still rising at these points as rapidly as it is here. The inundated portion of the city comprises a strip seven miles in length and from two to five squares in width. A raging torrent is flowing along Water street. North Front street is three feet under water, and the water is knee deep in places on Second street. The street cars over the suspension bridge stopped this morning. A foot bridge was then constructed extending from the Cincinnati end of the bridge to dry ground, some distance up Walnut street. This was much used until two o'clock, when it floated away. Since that time the people have been carried to and from the bridge in express wagons and skiffs. The tobacco warehouses are all flooded, and many hundreds of hogsheads were removed to-day to higher ground. Before it was all out the drays had to be abandoned, and only wagons with beds high up from the ground could be used. A warehouse on Front street, in which lime was stored, took fire. The engines to get to it had to pass through water three feet deep, and their fires were put out, and the fuel so soaked that it would not burn. Fortunately the warehouse in which the fire was in the meantime raging was so situated that other property was not endangered.

At a meeting of the Iowa horticultural society, Mr. Thompson, of Grundy county, exhibited a choice variety of Iowa apples. One of the heaviest fruit raisers in the State is John Dixon, of Mahaska county. He has 110 acres in orchards, on which he raised three years ago 38,000 bushels of apples.

Feb. 12th.—A heavy gale, scarcely less destructive than the recent hurricane, prevailed almost all over England and Scotland on Friday night, inflicting immense damage to shipping round the entire coast, and involving in some instances loss of life. The advent of this storm was preceded in England by heavy rain, which continued to fall incessantly until noon to-day, causing serious floods, and in Scotland by furious snow-drifts, rendering the roads impassable for trains or vehicles, and completely breaking down telegraph communication.

The exceptional severity of the storm seems to have been most felt on the shores of the West of England. Port Crissia, Bay St. Mary's, is strewn with wreckage, a portion of which shows that a brig had been dashed to pieces. Nothing has been seen of the crew, and it is feared that they have been drowned to a man. Signs of distress were seen on a vessel off Lowestoft. The life-boat went out, but returned without seeing a vestige of the ship, which evidently foundered with all hands.

On Saturday no train arrived or was reported from the north. The train from Perth was imbedded in the snow between Dalnahime and Dalnaspidal.

Transatlantic steamers arriving in the Clyde report extremely rough passages.

The full strength of the gale was experienced in the metropolis early on Saturday morning, and many parts of the suburbs were flooded yesterday. A house at Homertown was unroofed by the force of the wind, the occupants barely escaping with their lives.

There is hardly a town in England untouched by the effects of the storm, either flood or wind; the sodden condition of the land preventing farmers sowing, while others had the seed completely spoiled.

The Mark Lane Express, in its review of the British grain trade for the past week, says: "Prices of wheat were firmly maintained, and sound samples improved a shilling. Foreign wheat was firm and 6d better. Cargoes firm; red winter advanced 1s 9d. Eight arrivals and three sails were reported. Flour was firm. Foreign flour was dull and unchanged. Barley and oats were unchanged. Foreign barley was dearer. Foreign oats were dull and declined. Maize unchanged and firmly held. Sales of English wheat for the last week were 53,130 quarters at 40s 8d per quarter; against 45,182 quarters at 46s 5d the corresponding period of last year.

The council of Ministers of Egypt, adopted the remaining clauses of the new charter for Egypt, embodying the proposals made by Lord Dufferin, of England.

Feb. 13.—The river at Cincinnati, O., is now higher by ten inches than ever before since the first settlers arrived, and the conditions of yesterday remain, only that suffering and loss of property have increased. Just before noon a portion of the passenger and freight depots of the Cincinnati Southern Railway went down in the flood. There may be somebody buried under the ruins and flood, but there is no one reported as missing. The track in approaching the depot was parallel to McLean avenue. Both the avenue and the railroad track are on a high fill. Mill Creek is on the west, and there was a deep pit on the east several rods in width, the opposite side being formed by made ground, upon which residences have been built. The pressure from the flood in Mill Creek became so great that the grades upon which the railway track ran, and which formed the avenue, gave way. Part of the depot was carried off and part of the freight-house. Several loaded freight-cars went down in the flood. The whole thing happened in a twinkling, and where the track and avenue were there are now twenty feet of water. The floor of that part of the freight-depot which was not wrecked has been invaded by water, and boxes of merchandise were floating thickly over the water in all directions. If no one was drowned it was a miracle, for a large number of persons were about the depot but a few minutes before. Ryan's restaurant went down about a minute before the depot fell. The noise had attracted attention, and people were running toward the restaurant when the depot accident occurred.

The inundation of Spring Grove Cemetery, which is eight miles from the Ohio River, has increased, until one of the most beautiful burial places in the country is a vast pond of dirty water and drift.

The six river wards of Cincinnati, O., are two-thirds under water. They contain a population of 30,000. The people driven from their homes are in an almost starving condition.

In Newport, Kentucky, the trouble is hourly growing worse. Those still remaining in the flooded district, and those having friends and relatives there, are becoming half-crazed. The Chief of Police and members of the force are besieged by parties asking as to the safety or whereabouts of friends and relatives. It is out of the question to give the desired information in many cases, as the families forced to leave are scattered to the four winds. City-Engineer Morton, after a close calculation this morning, put the number of acres now under water in Newport at 2,060. One thousand houses are inundated, and 2,500 families rendered homeless.

A reporter writes thus of a relief expedition at Louisville, Ky.: Your reporter accompanied the relieving expedition, and heard the exclamations of joy and thanksgiving uttered spontaneously on the approach of succor. The wild scream of fear that we would not see the particular case, the tear drop of relief and joy, were all visible everywhere, and filled many hearts with solemnity at the awe-inspiring surroundings. For full ten hours these gentlemen staid upon their feet anxiously looking out for needy cases to minister to, and at last all the districts had been reached and relieved. The steamer was in the hands of Capt. Varble, the oldest and most thorough of all our "falls" pilots, and wherever a district was inundated he took the steamer. She plowed unhesitatingly over fences, across lots, up streets of closely-built houses, her boiler deck being on a level with the ground and in some cases third-story windows. She would turn a street-corner as carefully and easily as a few days ago the wagons had.

From five to eight thousand persons are rendered homeless at this place. The river has been six inches higher than ever known before.

At New Albany, Ind., the distress is proportionately as great as at Louisville, Ky., and the damage in cash value possibly even greater, and all business is suspended and held in subservience to the great task of taking care of the homeless and feeding the hungry.

At eleven o'clock last night the break came at Louisville. The cut-off dam, overcome by the terrific weight of water from above gave way, and instantly with a loud roar the flood rushed over. It may be imagined with what force the waters came, when they had a fall of from fifteen to eighteen feet to the low ground beneath. In less time than it takes to tell, the yellow tide was sweeping in from all points, and the unfortunate people were surprised in their houses. A mighty rush of water swept from square to square rapidly rising in the houses, and severing many of them from their foundations. The scene was awful; the roar of the waters could not drown the screams of the terrified ones, who were escaping from the doomed dwellings. Skiffs shot about from window to window. Men, women, and children waded through the advancing waters, each with whatever household goods he could lay hands on. Bonfires gleamed from the higher ground, which the poor outcasts had gained, and hundreds of people shivered in their wet clothing about smoky fires.

Fully two thirds of Jeffersonville, Indiana, is inundated.

All the members of the Cabinet of France have resigned in consequence of the action of the Senate on the Expulsion bill. President Grevy has requested them to remain at their posts for the present.

President Grevy has summoned De Freycinet to form a Ministry. The latter hesitates to undertake the task.

Tradesmen are signing petitions for a Ministry under the Presidency of De Freycinet.

The report that the Bara garrison had surrendered to the False Prophet is confirmed. Good judges consider that Obeid and other places in Soudan must follow. The situation is very serious.

Feb. 14.—Judging from the present indications a conflict between the two French Chambers is inevitable. Neither will recede from the position assumed, each claiming to have pushed conciliation to the last limit. It is difficult to say how the matter will end, but it seems impossible that the lower chamber can accept the Waddington-Say project. It simply insures immunity to the Orleanist plotters, for, according to the terms of the project, nothing but an overt act of rebellion can bring them within the operations of the law. Rochefort affirms this morning in his organ that Say only presented his amendment after a conference at Chantilly with the Duc D'Aumale. There seems scarcely a doubt that it will be at once rejected by the Deputies. If so, legislation on the subject will be adjourned over for three months, as no law relating to it can be introduced in either House during that period. The resignation of the Ministry brings the rival claims of Ferry and Freycinet on the tapis. The former, who has been actively intriguing in view of it for weeks back, can not secure a majority in the Lower Chamber, and is sure to meet with bitter antagonism from all parties in the Upper Chamber. This fact, taken in connection with the President's well-known partiality for Freycinet and his acceptability to all the factions of the Republican party except the Extreme Left, indicates him as the coming man.

Two fishing smacks have been lost at Yarmouth. The crews, numbering fourteen persons, were drowned.

The steamer, Nestorian, at Greenock, from Portland, lost fifty-six head of cattle. Many of the crew were frost-bitten.

The tug, searching for the steamer, Quebec, from Portland for Liverpool, failed to find the steamer. She reports fearful weather outside.

The river in Cincinnati, Ohio, has reached sixty-six feet. This is twenty-one inches higher than ever known before. Rain is still falling. The depot disaster reported here yesterday, caused the death of at least four, and probably thirteen. All the organizations in the city are at work relieving the sufferers.

At 214 Water street an old lady was found who was almost dead from starvation. A police-boat rowed up with a load of bread and furnished her with a loaf. She grasped and ate ravenously.

Opposite to 214 Water street an old man was housed up in an attic without fire and food, and was nearly frozen and starved. He was too proud to call for help. Coal and food were furnished him.

Further down the street a family of sixteen children were crying piteously for food. They hadn't had anything to eat since yesterday morning. The associated charities' boat relieved them.

Along Elm, Plum and Central Avenues, the people are in a terrible condition of suffering. Their goods are floating around in the rooms below unheeded, while they are suffering above for want of food and fire.

People all over the flooded parts of the town are wild with hunger, and loss of life is reported. Churches and school-houses are crowded with the sufferers.

Laurenceburg, twenty miles below Cincinnati, is entirely flooded, and one half of Newport. The water is level with the second story windows.

Five persons have been drowned at Louisville, Ky., and the rise continues. The river here is eighteen inches higher than ever known before. The loss it is thought will be a million dollars.

Shippingsport and Portland, suburbs of Louisville, are under water; in the latter fifteen hundred people are homeless.

At Madison, Ind., the destruction and suffering are incalculable.

Shawneetown and Decatur, Ills., are both partially flooded.

THE PRAYER OF AGE.

"Forsake me not when my strength faileth."

Forsake me not—the day of life declines,
My sun hath nearly reached the horizon's brim.
Faint on my path its fading glory shines,
The shadows lengthen, and the way grows dim.

Forsake me not—wrapped in a golden haze,
The morning lies, in its pure light serene
How far away! yet memory's hand will raise,
The time-wrought curtain which hath dropped between.

Forsake me not—my step is weak and slow,
Slow to obey the mandate of my will;
My hand hath half forgot its cunning now;
And falters in the task it would fulfill.

My pulse beats feebly, youth's impetuous fire
Sweeps through my veins no more with sudden force;
High thoughts and ardent dreams no more inspire,
And sluggish life runs on its destined course.

Forsake me not—when all the light is gone,
Oh lead me gently to my last repose,
And bid me wake on that Eternal morn,
Which neither waning light nor sunset knows.

THE GRAFTING IN OF THE GENTILES AND RESTORATION OF ISRAEL.

IN reading the eleventh chapter of Romans, I was led to think upon God's dealings with the children of Abraham. How surely his words have been fulfilled to them in the past. And as we look upon them to-day, we find them a peculiar people, distinct from all other peoples upon the face of the earth, waiting for the fulfilling of the promise made to their father, Abraham, and the coming of their long looked for Messiah. For like Paul himself, who was an example unto them that hereafter should come, they will not believe, until they see him in his glory, that is as a nation. But there was a remnant that believed in Paul's day, and of them I will speak again.

God said unto Abraham, "Get thee out from thy father's house," to a land which he would show him, which land he afterwards promised to his seed for an everlasting inheritance. And at another time he said unto him, "Look to the northward and to the southward, and eastward and westward, all the land thou seest, to thee and to thy seed will I give it forever." But we do not see that promise yet fulfilled; for as in Paul's day their hardness of heart and unbelief led them to reject Christ, and they were left still in darkness, and their house, which was the temple, was left to them desolate, for the glory of God that once rested there, was taken away, and they were to be scattered in all nations, and the promised land came into the possession of other nations. But like as God's promise to Abraham that he should have a son, even Isaac; though he waited until he was an hundred years old, and Sarah long past the age of woman to bear, yet was his promise redeemed. And so sure as he remembered his promise then, will he redeem Israel when the set time shall come, and Israel shall be gathered to his inheritance for ever.

Moses, in the fourth chapter of Deuteronomy, warns them that through disobedience they should be scattered among the nations; but that God would remember them in the latter days. "For the Lord, thy God, is a merciful God, he will not forsake, neither destroy thee, nor forget the covenant of thy fathers, which he swore unto them." The salvation through Christ was shown unto Abraham; for in his seed all the families of the earth should be blest. And unto Moses, also, was the gospel shown, but Israel would not receive it, because of their blindness, and God gave them the law for a school master, to bring them to Christ. But neither did the people of Israel understand the types and shadows of the rites, sacrifices and ceremonies of the law, nor the voice of the prophets. If they had they would not have been found with the blood of the Messiah upon their hands; for they said unto Pilate, "His blood be upon us, and upon our children. We have no king but Cæsar. And again, in the eleventh chapter of Romans, twelfth verse, Paul says: "Now if the fall of them be the riches of the world, and the diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles, how much more their fulness." And again, fifteenth verse: "For if the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be, but life from the dead."

Then there shall come a time when Israel's fullness shall come in, and it shall be such a blessing to the world that it shall be like "life from the dead." And Paul says again: "For I would not have you ignorant, that blindness in part has happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. And so all Israel shall be saved, as it is written, There shall come out of Zion the deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob. For this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins." Jesus also says, in Luke, twenty-first chapter: "And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled."

Then surely when those times shall end, Jerusalem shall be redeemed. But when did the times of the Gentiles commence? When the Jews as a nation rejected the gospel, and it was given to the Gentiles, or in other words, when the branches of the tame olive were broken off, and the branches of the wild, or the Gentiles, were grafted in. But how were they grafted in, and how were the natural branches broken off? They were broken off through unbelief, or lack of faith and by disobedience, while on the other hand, the Gentiles were grafted in through faith and obedience unto God.

I would say just here, that as Paul compared Israel to an olive tree, that it seems to me that the twelve tribes were the branches. If so, ten of them were broken off some seven or eight hundred years before Christ, and carried away captive into Assyria, and are lost to the world, but not so to God; for they are the people of promise. When Judah and Benjamin as tribes would not receive Jesus as the Messiah, the other two were broken off. And now what represents the trunk of the trees, into which the Gentiles were to be grafted?

When Christ commenced his ministry, he first chose the twelve, afterwards the seventy. And he sent them not unto the Gentiles, nor unto the Samaritans; but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel; for the gospel must first be offered to them, and the church must first be gathered out of literal Israel, and before the gospel was offered to the Gentiles. There must have been many gathered here, for there were three thousand assembled on the day of Pentecost. Thus was the church first formed of the literal seed of Abraham, with its Apostles, Prophets, Pastors, Teachers, and spiritual gifts; and upon this were the Gentiles to be grafted. And by what process, and unto what were the Gentiles to be obedient in order to be ingrafted into the stock of Abraham? The plan of adoption through Christ, or obedience unto the first principles of the gospel: faith, repentance, baptism, laying on of hands, and to believe in the resurrection of the dead, and eternal judgment. As the Apostles went forth preaching the gospel to the Gentiles, they that heard them came to a knowledge of Christ. Now, knowledge is the first step towards heaven; for how can we have faith in God and his son Jesus Christ, if we never heard of them? Knowledge of Christ bringeth faith in him as our Savior. Thus "faith cometh by hearing and hearing by the word of God." And Paul says again, in Romans, tenth chapter: "For how then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed; and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard, and how shall they hear without a preacher, and how shall they preach except they be sent." So they that preach the gospel must be sent of God. "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, and the evidence of things not seen; and faith is the first principle of all things, for by it God created the worlds. There is a measure of faith born in, or inherent in the bosom of every person, to build, or make, or plant, or sow, or gather, or to do any of the works of men. But when through knowledge that faith becomes centered in God, it becomes a mighty lever for good. Like as the sun warms the seed we plant in the earth, and makes it spring up and bear fruit, so the Spirit of God through our obedience, makes the faith within us grow, until it becomes God-given faith. So with love, until it becomes fervent charity.

Now if the same measure of faith in God to-day does not bring the same fruits that it did eighteen hundred years ago, then God must be a changeable being, which we know is not true, for "in him there is no variableness nor shadow of turning." Without faith it is impossible to please God, and by it we receive every blessing. Faith in God bringeth us to repentance, and repentance is a turning away from all that is evil, and a striving to do good; and brings us to that state of mind, that we are willing to be obedient to God.

Christ came down from the glory he had with the Father, to be an example unto us that we might follow him, as well as to be a propitiation for us. Then if we would be followers of the Master, we must go down into the waters of baptism, and as John had authority from God to baptize, so must they that officiate in this ordinance now. Most of the religious teachers of the day, teach that baptism is non-essential; but I fear they are not called of God, or they would not teach so. The New Testament is called to-day, by those same teachers, the rule of faith, and that plainly teaches that none were admitted into the church or to the fellowship of the saints without it. By it we begin to put on Christ. Peter on the day of Pentecost, being filled with the Holy Spirit, tells us plainly what to do to be saved: "Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sin, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. For the promise is unto you and your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call. It is "the baptism of repentance for remission of sins." Therefore, "what

And again, all blessings were conferred in the days of the Apostles, by the laying on of hands. Indeed, it is a principle of the gospel and shows that those who officiate in the ordinances of the gospel must have authority from God. After baptism, the candidate received the laying on of hands by the Elders, that he might receive the Holy Ghost, and thereby be confirmed into the church. By the laying on of hands men were ordained to the ministry, and to do any especial work in the priesthood. By the laying on of hands the sick were healed and children blessed. By this ordinance did the old patriarchs bless their sons, and Moses was commanded of God to ordain Joshua to succeed him. By it power was given to do the work appointed, and to receive the blessing.

The Saints and Apostles looked forward to the resurrection, as the time when they would receive their final reward. And so sure as our Savior arose literally from the dead, so shall we, he being an example unto us in all things, and the first fruits from the dead.

If we go into a field of wheat that is ripening, and take of the first ripe ears and rub them out, and examine them, we shall see a type of what the harvest shall be. Through Christ we shall be redeemed from the power of death. "O death, where is thy sting; O grave, where is thy victory? "It is appointed unto men once to die, and after that the judgment."

It was by obedience unto these things, that the Gentiles were grafted into the stock of Abraham. Even as Abraham became the father of the faithful, by believing God's word, and being obedient to him.

In the twelfth chapter of first Corinthians and the fourth chapter of Ephesians, is plainly shown how the church was organized, with Apostles, Prophets, Pastors, Teachers, and spiritual gifts. It is compared to a body, of which Christ was head. Now cut off the connection with the head, which we must do if we say there is no more spiritual gifts, or no more inspiration; for if that is the case, Apostles must cease, Prophets and all spiritual gifts and teachers, must teach by their learning, and by the wisdom of man, which is not a sufficient guide in religious matters. Those gifts were given for the perfecting of the Saints, for the work of the ministry, and that the Saints should not be blown about by every wind of doctrine. To say that they were taken out, is to say it ceased to be the Church of Christ. It is a matter of history, that the Church did dwindle away in unbelief, and merged into and became the Roman Catholic Church, and lost, through disobedience and unbelief, her spiritual gifts, and the God-given authority of her priesthood.

In the twelfth chapter of Revelations we see a representation of the Church of Christ, clothed with the sun, which is the fulness of the gospel; with the moon under her feet, which is the law of Moses; crowned with a crown of twelve stars, which represents her God given priesthood; for none but God can create stars, man can not. Also in the seventeenth chapter of Revelations is a representation of the church after she had apostatized from Christ, and was supported by the kings and governments of this world. We find her clothed with scarlet, and purple, which is the vesture of kings and emperors, showing that she received her power from them; decked with gold and precious stones and pearls, which represents her man-made priesthood; for all of these things are the gift and workmanship of man; having in her hand a golden cup, which represents her splendid cathedrals, massive churches and monasteries, resplendent with golden gifts, but filled with abominable idolatries. She is represented as drunken with the blood of the saints, which shows her bloody nature; and as wine makes us drunken, and to see things different from what they really are; so her teachings have turned men away from the truth unto fables, and make it so hard for men to receive the truth to-day.

Paul saw by the eye of prophecy, that after his "departure, grevous wolves should come in, not sparing the flock," and they should "heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears. And they should turn away their ears from the truth, unto fables."

Paul also saw beyond his day, that there should be another dispensation. Now a dispensation is when God makes, or renews his covenant with the children of men. In Ephesians, first chapter tenth verse: "That in the dispensation of the fulness of time, he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth. Peter, also, speaking of Christ, says: "Whom the heavens must receive, until the times of restitution of all things," or restoration of all things. Then if the gospel has been lost to the earth, it will be again restored, with all its gifts and blessings, and the Jews to their inheritance; and in the final outcome, the earth will be restored to its Eden beauty, as the dwelling place of all

God's people. As at first the gospel was offered to the Jews, and went from them unto the Gentiles; so now, in the restoration, it must first be given to the Gentiles, and from them go to the Jews; for "the last shall be first, and the first last."

And now I would ask if the authority to administer in the things of God, to preach, teach and baptize, and to lay on hands was lost to the earth, how could it be restored? Can men take it to themselves, and attempt to build up the Church of Christ? Or could the whole world confer the authority upon one man? I say no, most emphatically. It must be done by the power of God, and by the ministering of angels. The reformers, Luther, Calvin and others, came out from the old mother church, and protested against her works. Others joined them, and not being led by the one spirit, they became divided into many parties, sects, and orders. I ask, was this the Church of Christ, with its Apostles, Prophets and spiritual gifts. To be sure, good was done. The power of old Babylon was weakened, and she became divided, and the iron became mixed with clay.

As the reformers based their authority upon that given to the apostles, and attempted to build up churches upon that, were they not trying to put new wine into old bottles? or, in other words, attempting to build up a new organization by the authority given to the old, not understanding that new wine must be put into new bottles?

But, says one, do you not believe God called the reformers to do that work? Yes, in the same way he called a Washington, a Columbus, a Cyrus, or any other great man who has done a certain work in the earth. But not that he called them or gave them authority to build his Church. Through the work of the Protestant Churches, the Bible has been given unto men, to read for themselves; and therefore, the light of the written word, has been spread abroad, and the world enlightened thereby. And it was by them that this country, the land of America, was settled, and to them, by the blessings of God, the constitution, which guarantees to every man to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience. For it was upon this land of free America, this "land shadowing with wings," which is "beyond the rivers of Ethiopia," where the ensign was to be raised, and the trumpet blown. And from here ambassadors sent to a land "which the rivers have spoiled." Zephaniah says, "From beyond the rivers of Ethiopia my suppliants, even the daughter of my dispersed bring mine offering." The lifting up of the ensign, was the organizing of his Church, the blowing of the trumpet is the preaching of the word.

On the sixth day of April, 1830, by Joseph Smith and others that were associated with him, the Church was organized, and the call again given to the Gentiles, to be engrafted, or adopted again into Israel, by the very same plan of adoption as at first, and the very same gifts and blessings were given through faith and obedience, as thousands are ready to testify, with joy and gratitude unto God for the restoration of the gospel.

The gospel as it was given to the Apostles over eighteen hundred years ago, was like the sun shining in his strength. As the church dwindled away in unbelief, or drifted away from the truth, it was like the twilight; and when it became the Roman Catholic, or Apostate Church, spiritual darkness or night settled down over the earth; and when the reformers commenced their work, and the Bible was again given to the world, it was the dawn of the light which grew brighter, as religious liberty was given unto men, until by the power of God, the glorious sun of the gospel arose, in this the land of promise, and it is not far distant, when the branches of Israel, that have been broken off, will be grafted in again; for, says Paul, "If the casting away of them be the reconciling of the world, what shall the receiving of them be but life from the dead? For there shall come out of Sion the deliverer, even Jesus Christ, who shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob." Then shall he sit upon the throne of David. Then shall the promise made to Abraham be verified, in the everlasting inheritance. Even so, come Lord Jesus, and sit upon the throne of thy glory.

TALMAGE ON EVOLUTION.

AT THE Brooklyn Tabernacle, Dr. Talmage began a series of sermons in opposition to the theories of modern evolutionists, taking views diametrically opposed to those recently advocated by Mr. Beecher. He promised to dilate more fully upon the deceptions of infidelity, and then to reply in a future sermon to the arguments of Dr. Heber Newton in favor of an expurgated Bible. His remarks yesterday, (Jan. 14), were devoted to proving that evolution is contrary to the Bible, to science, and to common sense. There is no opposition, said he, between genuine science and revelation. The same God who by the hand of the prophet wrote on parchment, by the hand of the storm wrote on the rocks. But between science falsely so called and revelation, there is an uncompromising war, and one or the other must go under. At the present time the air is filled with social and pulpit talk about evolution. It is high time that people understand that evolution is up and down and out infidelity. It is contrary to the facts of science, and brutalizing in its tendencies. Thomas Paine and Voltaire no more disbelieved in the Holy Scriptures than do the leading scientists who believe in evolution. This evolution is only an attempt to eject God and put him clear out of reach. Who made the primal germ? Most evolutionists say, "We don't know." [Laughter.] There is no one that will openly say God made it. Here comes Huxley with a pail of protoplasm. Dear Mr. Huxley, who made the protoplasm? Thousands of species from four germs! Statements contradicting not only the Bible, but the very A B C of science. A species never developed into anything but its own species. A species never crosses over. If there be an attempt at that, then it is a hybrid, and the hybrid is always sterile and has no descendants. When common observation and science corroborate the Bible I will not stultify myself by surrendering to the elaborate guess of the evolutionists. I place also the account of how the worlds were made beside the evolutionists' account. Away back in the ages there was a fire-mist or star-dust, which cooled off into granite, and was then shaped into mountains, and valleys, and seas. Who made the fire-mist? You push God some 60,000 or 70,000 miles from the earth, but he is too near yet for the health of evolution. For a great while the evolutionists thought that they had found the very stuff out of which worlds were made—a nebula of simple gas; but spectroscopes were invented by which they found that the nebula was not a simple gas, but a compound, which had to be supplied from some other source, and that implied a God.

But I am very glad to know that while some scientists go into evolution there are more that do not believe in it. Among them Agassiz says there is in nature no such thing as change in organized beings actually taking place; there is no such thing on record. I know that the few men who have adopted the theory make more noise than the thousands who have rejected it.

There is one tenet of evolution which we are asked to adopt—natural selection, the survival of the fittest. There has been no natural progress. There is vast improvement, but from another source. The human race started with men ten feet high, and now the average is about five feet six inches. Much progress we have made, haven't we? [Laughter.] The Chinese nation, where not invaded by the gospel, has not made one five hundred thousand millionth of an inch of advancement. Evolution is not upward: it is always downward. What is remarkable about evolution is that it is all the time developing its dishonesty. Evolution is ascribed to Charles Darwin and Herbert Spencer. It was known and advocated hundreds of years before these gentlemen began to be evolved. They drag this old putrefaction of three thousand years old around the earth, boasting that it is their originality. At Delmonico's is given a dinner in honor of Herbert Spencer, to whom is ascribed the origin of evolution. And the banqueters sit around eating their own relatives—[laughter]—slicing up their cousins—[laughter]—bedaubing mustard all over their loved ones—[great laughter]—while they declare it is the voice of God when Herbert Spencer reads a patronizing lecture to Americans. There is only one thing worse than English snobbery, and that is American snobbery. [Laughter.] There is one kind ofocracy developing in this country that excites my contempt, and that is snobocracy.

SIGNS of the times, wonders in the heavens and on the earth, indicate the coming of the Lord to reign on the earth, when all things will be restored, and the earth will be turned into Heaven.

"Where the faded flower shall freshen,
Freshen nevermore to fade;
Where the faded sky shall brighten,
Brighten nevermore to shade.
Where the sun-blaze never scorches,
Where the star-beams cease to chill,
Where no tempest stirs the echoes,
Of the wood, or wave, or hill.
Where the morn shall wake in gladness,
And the moon the joy prolong;
Where the daylight dies in fragrance,
'Mid the burst of holy song."

The poor and the meek of the earth shall inherit it, when nothing shall hurt or destroy.

"Where no shadow shall bewilder,
Where life's vain parade is o'er,
Where the sleep of sin is broken,
Where the dreamer dreams no more.
Where the bond is never severed,
Partings, claspings, sob and moan;
Midnight waking, twilight weeping,
Heavy noontide—all are done.
Where the child has found its mother,
Where the mother finds her child;
Where dear families are gathered,
That were scattered on the wild."

May we all there meet and rest, 'mid the holy and the blest. W. C. L.

Every man ought to endeavor at eminence, not by pulling others down, but by raising himself, and enjoy the pleasures of his own superiority, whether imaginary or real, without interrupting others in the same felicity.

POLYGAMY CONDEMNED BY J. J. STRANG.

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 31st, 1883.

Editor Herald:—I enclose herewith some extracts from Strang's Voree Herald, which go to prove that polygamy was opposed by the Voree Mormons, and considered no part of the true doctrines of the church.

CHAS. J. STRANG.

From the Voree Herald, January 14th, 1847:

The Chicago Daily Mail, speaking of the Voree Mormons, says: "They also aver that they abominate the spiritual wife system, and totally disfellowship it. They charge their opposers with trying to build up Brighamism instead of the true church."

February 4th, 1847, John Greenhow, President of the High Priest's Quorum, writing of certain apostates, said:

"They also endeavored to corrupt our well beloved Patriarch; but he, having a knowledge of their abominations, had long since determined to separate himself from sinners, and assured them that their spiritual wifery could find no place in his breast. And I can assure you, that as soon as it makes its appearance at Voree, it is instantly trampled to dust, never to be gathered up again."

Extracts from an article entitled "Polygamy not possible in a free Government":

"* * * Polygamy can only be sustained in an arbitrary, or despotic government. * * * Should any government whatever, adopt and sustain the practice of polygamy, it would of necessity be compelled to enact coercive laws to enforce the collection of a grievous taxation of those who had neither wife, wives, nor progeny, to sustain those who might have many. Such an order of things would inevitably throw a portion of mankind into a state of menial servitude, as much to be regretted as the condition of the slaves of the Southern States. That there is an attempt to introduce such an order of things in some regions of the west, is too well known to be denied by the intelligent part of the community; in the western part of the country beyond the Mississippi river. Let those who are under the influence of what is falsely called camp of Israel, read and take the hint and beware."—Voree Herald, July 22d, 1847.

From Voree Herald, August 5th, 1847:

"TO THE SAINTS—GREETING.

"Our eyes and ears are sometimes saluted with communications from abroad, that there are persons who profess to be adherents to Pres. J. J. Strang, who are privately teaching, and some practicing, what is called the 'western camp doctrine,' or in other words, spiritual wifery, or polygamy. We also hear that there are some persons who do Pres. Strang the injustice to say that he justifies the principle above stated. * * * We have talked hours, yea, even days, with Pres. Strang on the subject of the temporal and moral condition and character of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and we find to our utmost satisfaction, that he does not believe in, or cherish the doctrine of polygamy in any manner, shape, or form imaginable whatever. * * * The letter of the law of the church will be the track of Pres. Strang and his associate authorities to pursue. * * * 'Every person who belongeth to this church of Christ shall observe to keep all the commandments and covenants of the church.' * * * Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 109, par. 4. 'Inasmuch as this Church of Christ has been reproached with the crime of fornication and polygamy, we declare that we believe that one man should have one wife,' etc.

From Voree Herald, August 12th, 1847:

"Elder John E. Page has referred to me an article in No. 20, addressed 'To the Saints—Greeting.' In the remarks he has made he has justly and truly represented my sentiments. I am only astonished that it should be necessary to state them at all. Within three years I have, in the work of the ministry, traveled over 16,000 miles, visited all the States north of the Carolinas but three,—most of them several times,—preached to large congregations in all the principal cities, and in most of the large branches in the country, and I have uniformly and most distinctly discarded and declared heretical the so-called 'spiritual wife system,' and everything connected therewith. * * * I now say distinctly and I defy contradiction, that the man or woman does not exist on earth, or under the earth, who ever heard me say one word, or saw me do one act, savoring in the least of spiritual wifery, or any of the attending abominations. My opinions on this subject are unchanged, and I regard them as unchangeable. They are established on a full consideration of all the Scripture, both ancient and modern, and the discipline of the church shall conform thereto. * * *

"JAMES J. STRANG, President of the Church."

From Voree Herald, Sept. 2d, 1847:

"BINATE MARRIAGES.

"The first marriages among men were binate; Adam had but one wife. All Scripture mentions Adam's wife in the singular,—wife not wives. * * * The Scriptures do not show a single case of polygamy previous to the flood, and but one case of bigamy, to-wit: that of Lamech, a descendant of Cain. Gen. 4:19. Gen. 5 gives the generations of Adam, in the patriarchal or priestly line, down to the flood, without an intimation that any one of them had more than one wife. The fact that Lamech had two wives, standing out of the order as it does, and without a parallel on the record, certainly marks it as an extraordinary event; and its origin in the family of Cain does not commend it to a favorable consideration. * * * With the ever existing proportion of males and females, as they come into the world, if some men have many wives, others must have none, which would be manifest impropriety and injustice."

"At the October conference, 1847, John C. Bennett, H. P. and M. C., James M. Adams, Apostle, and B. C. Ellsworth, were "excommunicated for teaching and practicing the spiritual wife system. Delivered over to the buffetings of Satan, till the day of the coming of the Lord. And the whole congregation lifted their hands against them."

From Voree Herald, Sept. 7th, 1848:

"SPIRITUAL WIFERY.

"The saints are hereby instructed that it is their duty, and privilege, to withdraw their fellowship and support from any and every person, that in any form whatever sanctions poly-amy, or what is called the 'spiritual wife' system! Have nothing to do with the unfruitful works of darkness, born of hell, and begotten of the devil.

"Polygamy and 'consecration' are of the devil, and will take to the devil all who practice them." J. J. Strang, to an inquirer about the morals of Beaver Island, in Spring of 1851."

SHORT SERMON ON GRACE.

"By grace are ye saved through faith."—Paul. The text resolves itself under two heads, namely, "By what are we saved," and how can we avail ourselves of the salvation as offered through Christ." Both propositions are answered in the text; but theologians do not all agree in their interpretations. In the first, the issue hinges upon the prime meaning of the term "grace," which Webster defines as "favor, divine favor." What are we to understand by "divine favor." Is it anything more or less than God's recognition and supply of our various wants? Who gave the pure air we breathe? Who caused the sun to shine? Who covered the earth with rich foliage, making it a suitable habitation for man and beast? Did we purchase them, or are they the "free gift" of God? You will say the latter. Then are not these gifts strongly suggestive of, and do they not elucidate the principle of "grace," or "divine favor?" In them we recognize the bestowal of that which we had neither power to create nor purchase; hence we may very properly say they are the "free gift" of God. Their benefits as touching us, are conditional, however; which conditions, as divinely specified, are that "man shall earn his bread by the sweat of his brow."

As relating to the plan of salvation, the term "grace" signifies the means generously proffered for our redemption. Disrobe this much abused term of the garb of mystery, theologically woven around it, and it simply means the gospel. The sentiment then, of this portion of our text, is "By the gospel are ye saved." The matter then resolves itself into the question, "What is the gospel?" We ask. Is it multiform or multifarious? Is it an effort upon the part of Deity to compromise with disobedient and erring children? Or is it not rather the embodiment of certain divinely fixed principles, all of which are essential to its perfection, and obedience to which can alone secure to man the benefits and safety vouchsafed in this "perfect law." Law comprehends system, inaugurated and maintained as a means of safety and protection to the subjects it is designed to govern; and to claim or anticipate its benefits, without yielding obedience to its requirements, would be simply absurd. It is not the province of law to bend to the feelings or notions of its subjects; such an act would work confusion and discord,—elements foreign to heaven. Laws enacted are supposed to be right, and if not, amendments should be made; and forasmuch as the right to amend is vested only in the powers from whence the law originates, we presume that if improvement to the original gospel plan is to be made, the matter should be left with God alone. Evidently all will agree, that the grace of God as manifest in the gospel, is an eternal principle—that the gospel has not, nor can it undergo any change whatever. "By grace are ye saved."

In the second proposition, "How can we avail ourselves of the salvation offered through Christ," the matter seems to rest altogether upon the real intent of the term, "faith." That we are saved "by grace through faith," should not be controverted; but the latitude given by some to the noun "faith" seems to us to be unwarranted.

Faith in God as inspired by the gospel, is a recognition of the verity and true work of the plan devised by the Lord for the salvation of the human family. It is the golden fruit of evidence; and to be efficient, must be based upon a right conception of God's character and manner of dealing with his creatures. It contemplates action, and inspires ungratified obedience. It recognizes the existence of an object not yet possessed, and gives hope of its attainment. It is the mainspring of action, and the incentive to all well directed and profitable labor. Its virtues are not executed by imagination alone, but honest and faithful labor, directed in accordance with a given pattern, are the means by which its powers are utilized, and its possessor benefited. Hence, faith in Christ unaccompanied by corresponding acceptance of and obedience to the precepts enunciated and exemplified by him, can only bring to its recipients the unhappy fruits of bitter disappointment.

The first step towards regeneration is to accept Christ as our Savior; but the far more important one is to induce him to accept us. Presumptuous faith may possibly secure the first condition, but absolute conformity to his will and ways can alone bring us into the happy relationship so beautifully described by the compound phrase, "Heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ." It is a grave mistake to suppose that conversion is synonymous with salvation. The former is the blossom, while the latter is its golden fruits. As the bloom or even the growing fruit may be blasted by an untimely wind; so our hope of heaven, unless nurtured by the conditions that promote growth, may be destroyed, and we suffer loss.

Dear friends, what is earth without the hope of heaven? A dreary waste, with nought but present meagre gratification to encourage. With this blissful hope, earth seems lovely; life is worth the living.

There is a God; there is a heaven; and a hope for all who will seek for truth and obey its requirements. As a witness to these facts, I set my name, and bear my testimony to all the world.

WE earnestly commend to the mothers and nurses of the Church the good sense found in the following extract from the Scientific American.

WARM MILK AS A HEALTH RESTORER.

Considerable has been lately said in medical journals concerning the value of warm milk as a remedial agent in certain diseases. The Christian at Work, referring to an interesting article on this subject which lately appeared in the London Milk Journal states, on the authority of Dr. Benjamin Clarke, that in the East Indies warm milk is used to a great extent as a specific for diarrhea. A pint every four hours will check the most violent diarrhea, stomach-ache, incipient cholera, and dysentery. The milk should never be boiled, but only heated sufficiently to be agreeably warm, not too hot to drink. Milk which has been boiled is unfit for use. This writer gives several instances in arresting the disease, among which is the following:

The writer says: "It has never failed in curing in six or twelve hours, and I have tried it, I should think, fifty times. I have also given it to a dying man who had been subject to dysentery eight months, latterly accompanied by one continued diarrhea, and it acted on him like a charm. In two days his diarrhea was gone; in three weeks he became a hale, hearty man; and now, nothing that may hereafter occur will shake his faith in hot milk. A writer has also communicated to the Medical Times and Gazette a statement of the value of milk in twenty-six cases of typhoid fever, in every one of which its great value was apparent. It checks diarrhea, and nourishes and cools the body. People suffering from diseases need food quite as much as those in health, and much more so in certain diseases where there is a rapid waste of the system. Frequently all ordinary food, in certain diseases, is rejected by the stomach, and even loathed by the patient; but nature, ever beneficent, has furnished food that in all diseases is beneficial—some directly curative. Such food is milk." The writer in the journal last quoted, Dr. Alexander Yale, after giving particular observations upon the point above mentioned, its action in checking diarrhea, its nourishing properties, and its action in soothing the body, says: "We believe that milk nourishes in fever, promotes sleep, wards off delirium, soothes the intestines, and, in fine, is the sine qua non in typhoid fever."

We have lately tested the value of milk in scarlet fever, and learn that it is now recommended by the medical faculty in all cases of this often very distressing children's disease. Give all the milk the patient will take, even during the period of greatest fever. It keeps up the strength of the patient, acts well upon the stomach, and is in this way a blessed thing in this sickness.

A YEAR'S DISASTERS.

THE year 1882 may be set down as conspicuously as a year of great disasters by flood and field, by sea and rail, in mines and by explosions, by fire, powder, tornado, and other elements of destruction, both in the Old World and the New. From the Old World we only receive tidings of the most disastrous calamities, so that the total of lives lost by disasters such as we have intimated can not be estimated, but a few of the more prominent will give an idea how human beings have been swept away. In January an earthquake at Kanchon, China, destroyed 250 lives; an explosion of dynamite at Porte Vendres, France, 16; a gale at Astrakhan, 600; and a flood at Calais, France, 30. In February, 76 persons were killed in England by colliery explosions. In March a ferry-boat was upset on the African coast and 47 persons were drowned, and a mining disaster in Teplitz, Austria, killed 40. In April 40 persons were killed by a mine explosion in Sunderland, England, and in May 56 were killed in a similar manner in Westphalia. In June a poor-house was burned at Oesthammer, in Sweden, and 20 lives were lost, and a flood at Vensees, in Hungary, swept away 44. In July 20 persons were killed by a gas explosion in Paris, 178 by a railroad disaster in Russia, and 47 by floods in Bohemia. In September 100 persons were killed by a railroad accident near Hugstetten in Bavaria, 30 by a similar disaster at Agram in Austria, 20 by a mine explosion in Westphalia, 32 by a torpedo explosion in Odessa, and 26 by a flood in the Tyrol. In October a flood at Verona, Italy, drowned 30, and in the New World floods and tidal waves at San Blas, Mexico, and in Cuba, destroyed 106. In November the Manila typhoon killed 100, a mine explosion at Derbyshire, England, 50, and a railroad collision at Aberdeenshire, England, 14, besides 31 burned in a poor-house at Halifax, Nova Scotia. This month 22 lives were lost in a mine at Creswick, Austria, 60 by a powder explosion at Guayaquil, and 36 by the fall of a mill chimney in Bradford, England. The whole list sums up 2,085.

In our own country the following table gives the list of disasters occurring from various causes, as telegraphed to the Tribune during the year:

Tornadoes.....	369
Boiler explosions.....	198
Fire.....	128
Powder explosions.....	83
Floods.....	163
Mining explosions.....	132

Explosions of fireworks.....	43

The most prominent disasters of the year have been the following: January, fire in New York, 9 lives; February, coal-mine explosion near Richmond, Va., 32 lives, and fireworks explosion at Chester, Pa., 29 lives; March, snow-slides in Nevada and California, 56 lives, blizzard in Dakota, 21 lives; April, gale in Georgia, 10 lives, floods in Louisiana, 11 lives, tornado at Brownsville, Mo., 25 lives, tornado at Monticello, La., 25 lives; May, tornado at McAllister, Tex., 18 lives; June, flood at Winchester, Ky., 11 lives, tornado at Grinnell, Ia., 100 lives, tornado in Kansas, 13 lives; July, tornado at Coalville, Pa., 25 lives, fall of a building at Texarkana, Ark., 30 lives; August, flood in the Licking River, 16 lives, flood at Beneficklin, Tex., 60 lives; December, boiler explosions at Canton and Shawneetown, Ill., 18 lives.

The railroads of this country have done their share towards the destruction of human life, though there have been fewer large disasters than usual. The total number of persons reported by telegraph to the Tribune as killed during the year has been 820, which is 227 less than last year. The seriously injured foot up 1,115, which is 588 more than last year. It has been a marked peculiarity of railroad accidents that very few have been killed, but a great many injured, as will be seen by reference to the following, which are the most prominent disasters of the year: Jan. 1, collision on Pennsylvania Railroad, 4 killed and 3 injured; Jan. 2, broken bridge on Boston & Maine Railroad, 2 killed and 71 injured; Jan. 13, collision at Spuyten Duyvil, N. Y., 9 killed and 11 injured; Jan. 16, St. Louis express at Lansing, Ia., 3 killed and 23 injured; March 17, accident on Cleveland & Marietta Road, 3 killed and 10 injured; March 22d, Northern Pacific, near Bismarck, 10 killed, 21 injured; June 15, Clarksburg & West Virginia Railroad, 4 killed and 15 injured; June 25, Manitoba & St. Paul Railroad, 17 killed, number of injured not reported; June 29, Long Branch Railroad, 4 killed and 80 injured; Aug. 4, Cranberry Coal Railroad, 6 killed and 13 injured; Aug. 21, Wabash Railroad, 7 killed and 11 injured; Sept. 28, tunnel collision, New York, 3 killed and 18 injured; Oct. 21, State Road, Massachusetts, 11 killed and 23 injured. Another very noticeable feature of the disasters in this country is the very large number of persons killed by boiler explosions, which is 198, as against 148 last year.

It is not an easy matter to keep anything like a record of the number of lives lost in marine disasters. On the great lakes, however, over 100 wrecks have occurred and over 150 lives have been lost, while elsewhere the most appalling disasters have been the following: January, six English steamers, 210 lives; February, four English steamers and five Gloucester fishing schooners, 137; March, the steamer Golden City, burned at Memphis, 30; April, steamer Druro, 50, and six more Gloucester vessels containing, all told, 102 men; May, the steamer Manitoulin, burned near Collingwood, 25; June, steamer Escambia, sunk near San Francisco, 25; July, the Dutch ironclad Adder, 80, the steamer Scioto, sunk near Mingo Junction, on the Ohio River, 57, and the steamer Gold Dust, near Hickman, Ky., 35; September, steamer Asia, foundered in the Georgian Bay, 120; October, steamer Robert E. Lee, burned near Vicksburg, 21; November, steamer Angelica, North Sea, 40, and steamer Winton, sunk on the French coast, 30. So far as reported, about 2,000 lives have been lost upon the ocean, 150 upon the lakes, 820 by railroads, and 1,306 by other disasters in this country, and 2,085 in the Old World, making over 6,000 lives lost as reported by telegraph. It is not far out of the way to estimate that as many more have been killed by "visitation of Providence," as human neglect is called.

Miscellaneous.

The date accompanying your name on the small colored label on each paper shows the time to which your subscription has been paid. When payments are made the date is changed, which answers for a receipt.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Who will attend? But this is not so essential in point of preparations, as how many? Will the officers of the several branches, or some members of the same, consult with the members of their respective branches, and ascertain the number that expects to attend, and report the same to the committee? To ask each one to write individually, would render it a task to look over the mail. Those not circumstanced to report their names along with others, please write individually. We wish to approximate, as nearly as possible, to the number that will be in attendance, in order to aid in the preparations to be made. The committee wishes to make ample preparations, but do not wish to overdo the matter, so as to incur unnecessary expense.

Suppose there are 200 in attendance, it will take 100 beds; 500 will call for 250 beds; 1000 for 500 beds. Which will it be? More? Or less? Who can bring mattresses, comforters, sheets, quilts, pillows, straw ticks, or any kind of bedding? The people resident at Kirtland will not be able to entertain a whole conference. They will help what they can. To what extent we will learn in due time, and if need be, report it. A large number will not be able to carry anything in the line of articles mentioned. Others can, if they only think to do so. Please write and let us know. Those bringing anything for use, should put their names on whatever article it may be.

We hope to make the lodgings free, and charge each individual for his meals. Meals will be served at as low a price as can be afforded. Somewhere between twenty and fifty cents. It would make much difference any way; what is over will go into the Bishop's hands. It will be a little like attending a popular church festival, where they have a ring in the cake. The guests contribute to the glory of the Lord, but are careful to get the worth of their money in cake. Here you will get your meals, and if you pay for a little more than you get, it will go into the Lord's treasury. If you pay for just what you get, then you will be about even. Of course no one will fall below even.

We will issue another notice about the 20th of March, when we hope to be able to speak definitely of all items of interest relating to attending the Conference. Address all communications to William H. Kelley, Kirtland, Lake county, Ohio. He expects to reach Kirtland by the 1st of March, or before, and remain until after the Conference.

Respectfully,

Committee { Z. H. GURLEY,
W. H. KELLEY.

Elder Luff baptized him the 6th of April, 1880, and ordained him a Priest the same day. Afterwards he was ordained an Elder. He leaves a wife and one son, and five daughters to mourn his loss. He died in the blessed hope of the Saints. I hope I may live so I can meet my father. Funeral services by the Rev. Mr. Leonard, Presbyterian.

KARR.—Near Cameron, Marshall county, West Virginia, December 17th, 1882, Thomas Karr. Born at Wainsburg, Green county, Penn., October 19th, 1826; baptized May 21st, 1876, by James Brown, and confirmed same day. JOSEPH SMITH - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, 3d March, 1883.

FROM HOME.

THE Editor left Lamoni, Thursday, February 15th, to visit Harlan, Shelby county, Iowa, to assist the Saints of that branch to dedicate their new chapel. Stopping at Lucas, Lucas county, he met with the Saints of the two towns—Cleveland and Lucas—which are one mile apart, in the funeral services of a citizen of Lucas, a friend to the cause, at three o'clock in the afternoon, in their chapel. This chapel is a neat and commodious one, pleasantly located in Lucas proper, and is 32 x 40 feet in size. On the funeral occasion referred to, it was quite well filled, and at the gospel service in the evening, was crowded. A delay in trains caused a nine hours' wait at Lucas, but a visit with Brn. J. R. Evans, J. Harris and E. Morgan, at the home of Bro. Loach, made the stay not unpleasant. The branch is in charge of Bro. George Spencer, who had charge of both meetings held in Lucas, and the Editor was met with welcome and cordiality. But an all night ride brought the traveler to Council Bluffs, where the Editor called on Bro. C. A. Beebe and his family for breakfast and a rest. At a little after noon of the 17th, found the Editor, and a number of Saints gathered in by the way to Harlan, which is reached on the rail by means of a stub road from Avoca, a station on the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railway. Bro. Jonas W. Chatburn is in charge of the branch at Harlan. They have lately built a very neat chapel 26 by 50 feet, which has been finished and furnished complete. Brn. J. W. Chatburn, John Swain and J. C. Hardman were the building committee, and they have done their work well.

Services were held on Sunday, February 18th, at eleven in the forenoon, in which the house was dedicated to the worship of God; arrangements having been fully made by the committee to pay all the costs of erection, so that the building was practically free from incumbrance. The sisters of the Branch furnished matting, chandeliers and pulpit chairs, as we understood it. Services were held in the afternoon at three and in the evening at seven and a half, the house being well filled each time. The singing was good, and all passed off pleasantly. Brn. N. Booth and F. A. Smith acted as ushers during the Sunday services, and the singing was in charge of Bro. T. W. Chatburn and J. Swain's families. The Saints deserve great credit for the effort they have made, the house is a good one, easy to speak in, is neat and will prove amply commodious for some time to come.

On Monday evening the Editor addressed the people, by invitation of several citizens, in the Congregational Church, on the temperance question. The Pastor of the church, Rev. Sherman, a brother of Buren R. Sherman, Governor of Iowa, was present and introduced the speaker.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

FROM the Fremont, Nebraska, Tribune, of February 16th, sent us by Brother A. Sinamark, we learn that the proposed discussion between Elder J. Frank Mintun, and Elder A. J. Cudney, Adventist, took place at the appointed time. No results are reported.

The Saint's Advocate for March first contains the following articles: "The Successor;" "Polygamy of Abraham and Sarah;" "Utah Endowment;" "A card from President Joseph Smith." This was first published in the Democratic Press, published at Nauvoo, Ill., in June, 1860; "The General Epistle of President Joseph Smith."—This was first published in the Herald for July, 1861. "Gospel Testimony;" "The Elect;" "Sister Mary Page—Eaton on Polygamy." "Advice to the Saints, a poem by David H. Smith."

At the request of Bro. W. W. Blair, we call the attention of all who are interested in the above topics to the fact, that a large number of extra copies of this number of the Advocate will be printed, and kept on sale at this office at the nominal price of five cents per single copy, or eight copies for twenty-five cents.

In Herald of January 13th, 1883, instead of "North West Missouri District," read "North Central Kansas District."

From the Pleasanton items in Decatur County Journal, we learn that "Elder Duncan Campbell is confined to the house through sickness."

A correspondent from Burrell Township, in Decatur County Journal, says: "We would be pleased to have preaching at our school-house, and will give a good audience and good attention." Can not some of the numerous High Priests, Seventies, Elders, Priests, Teachers, or Deacons of Decatur county, fill this call?

Bro. B. W. Denister, of Clarinda, Iowa, has been "scattering tracts, Heralds and books," and loaning his own Herald, preparing the way for an Elder to preach the gospel effectively to his neighbors. He is twenty miles from the nearest branch, and will be glad when some one can come into his neighborhood and preach.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Joseph F. Burton writes from South Rawdon, Nova Scotia, February 10th, as follows:

I am still holding meetings and visiting among this people. There are plenty of meetings lately, Methodists, Baptists, Episcopalians and Latter Day Saints, all endeavoring to present their views to the people. I baptized two persons last Sunday; expect to baptize to-morrow again. Many are interested in the latter day work here.

Bro. Geo. Millikin, of Colchester, Illinois, writes as follows, under date of February 19th:

Alexander and Bro. Kelley left here on Friday night last, for Sandwich. Preached four nights here. The attendance was slim, but I think some good has been done.

Bro. William H. Marsland writes from Johnston, R. I., February 16th, 1883:

Although I have not had the privilege of attending any meetings since last December, yet I am stronger in the faith than ever I was before. I glory in this latter day work. I have heard that one of my neighbors would not have me in his house because I was a Mormon. Glory to God that he has permitted me through his infinite mercy to become a member of his church. I am determined by the help and guidance of God's Holy Spirit to press forward to the mark and prize of my high calling which is in Christ Jesus.

Bro. Joshua P. Fowler writes from The Rocks, P. O., Hartford county, Maryland, February 8th:

I am trying to do my duty. I have meeting in my house every Sabbath, and the Lord is with us to help us, and there are good prospects of a whole family joining, for they say that they never heard the gospel so plain, and they say that the Lord must be with us, or we would not be able to explain the gospel so plainly. I have been to the Branch at New Park, and they are getting along nicely, for the Lord is with them.

Bro. Fowler is a Teacher, and seems to have learned what many seem to be too slow to learn, that Teachers and Deacons have the right, and at times it is their imperative duty to preach.

FROM the Fremont (Nebraska) Herald we clip the following:

"Elder Cudney, of the Adventists, and Rev. Mintun, of the Church of Latter Day Saints, (Mormons), are about to hold a joint discussion on the merits of their respective faith, with the Bible as authority. This important debate will take place at the Adventist Church in West Fremont."

The debate was to commence Wednesday, February 14th, and continue three days. The question agreed upon is: "Resolved, That the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord, and is binding upon Christians at the present time." Elder Cudney affirms, and Elder Mintun denies.

The following is an exotic from the hot bed of the mountains, and shows decidedly unique growth.

WANTS TO BE CUT OFF.

NO MORE KINGDOM OF JOHN TAYLOR FOR COREY.

Editor Salt Lake Tribune: Allow me to ask the assistance of your valuable paper, which is so often given to those struggling to free themselves from the fetters of Mormon slavery. I ask your assistance as I am almost wearied in spirit and worn out in my struggle. There is nothing in the Edmunds bill touching the point that I can find, but I wish publicly to notify John Taylor & Co., that I desire my name at once erased from the list of members of the Mormon Church, that it may no longer make me feel downhearted at the idea that my name is disgraced by remaining on that roll. Years ago I told John Bigbee and John Priest, that I no longer wished any standing in this law-defying church; but no attention was paid to my request, and now I publicly demand of his Abominable Highness and Archpriest John Taylor to take my name from the roll, and if he still refuses, I will try and gain my point by a suit in the courts to compel him to do so.

When a mere lad I was forced into this organization; yet now being a man, I have for years been connected with the party who upheld American institutions and true freedom of religion as well as of political opinions; and yet these Mormon priests have insisted on keeping my name against my wish and demand, and as I want no part or parcel with them, neither lot nor inheritance in their Satanic kingdom, or in any kingdom where "lust exalteth a man and prostitution raises a woman," I ask this of John Taylor through the columns of the Tribune, which of course he always reads.

My financial standing with this so-called Church of J. C. of L. D. S. is as follows: Church of J. C. of L. D. S. to W. W. Corey, Dr.

Driving team six months to Omaha, for pilgrims, at $40 per month.....$240
To cash, for patriarchal blessing.....$ 2

$242

Credit by patriarchal blessing—was told it was worth four-fold, so will credit the account.....$ 8

To balance.....$234

I will sell the above debt cheap for cash. The blessing is A No. 1, with all the attachments and latest improvements, but it must go, as I want to get all my stock in trade out of the business. I have also a few hymns I will throw in as an inducement to purchasers.

If you will please make the above announcement you will confer a favor on yours truly,

WILLIAM W. COREY.

CARE OF FARMING IMPLEMENTS.

The Ohio Farmer says: We have noticed that plows last, on an average, about three years; wagons, eight to ten years; reapers, five to eight; drills, eight to ten. We think these figures are fully as large as the truth warrants. We know of many implements that have not lasted so long, and of many which have lasted much longer. We to-day can point to wagons that have been in constant and hard use for twenty years, reapers that have stood the wear and tear of liberal use for more than fifteen years, drills that have been in use as long, and other agricultural implements. These implements were not made of unusually good materials, nor were they suffered to lie idle. They were put to constant use. What, then, is the secret of their greater endurance? It is simply this—they were taken care of. When not in use they were put away, and put away properly.

These implements not only lasted longer, but while they were in use they very rarely failed. They were always ready for work. The reapers did not break down in the middle of harvest and compel all hands to lie idle while some one went to the rail-way station to get repairs; the drills did not fail just when the wheat ought to be sown; the wagons were not always breaking down and occasioning delays and vexation. Another thing may be said in their favor, and that is that they always did good work. The reapers cut a smooth stubble and put the grain down in good condition; the plows did not refuse to scour; the drills put the wheat in just as a first class drill would; and those implements did good work not only while they were new, but till the last year they were in use.

A BRIEF REVIEW OF MORMONISM.

In your issue of yesterday I observe an article signed "Fair Play," criticizing what I said previously in regard to the Latter Day Saints. I never said that they were going to either lease or buy the Baptist Church. I only said that it was surmised so, from the fact that they had the use of the church, a circumstance almost unknown among the orthodox congregations. "Fair Play" says that the hymns, whether sung by Mormon, Latter Day Saint, or Baptist, either separately or conjointly, show a spirit of Christianity, and says this is as it should be. Before we swallow with our eyes shut this accommodating brotherly dose, let us take a retrospective view, and examine candidly, each one for himself, what Mormons have been as a law-abiding people, and what they are to-day. We will pass by the iniquities perpetrated at Nauvoo—the murder of Col. George Davenport, in 1845, which was traced to that hotbed of theft and murder, and will commence with the settlement of Salt Lake in 1848. In 1850 the government of the United States admitted the region occupied by the Mormons as a territory under the name of Utah, and we are sorry to state that Brigham Young was appointed Governor by President Fillmore. District Judges were also appointed by the United States government the same year; but the Saints that "Fair Play" loves to sing with, didn't want any judges, and drove them out of the territory in 1851. Brigham Young was then removed from the office of Governor, and Col. Steptoe, of the United States army was appointed in his stead. He arrived there in 1854, but soon found out that if he did not wish to be a martyr, he had better get down and out, and by the year 1856 all the officers and troops were forced to flee from the territory. Then they had it all their own way; and what was their next exploit? In 1857, John D. Lee, a bishop, led a gang of Mormons and Indians, and butchered in cold blood one hundred and fifty Americans who were emigrating out West, at Mountain Meadows—no quarter given to women or children. None of them were ever brought to justice until the death of Brigham Young in 1877, twenty years after the crime was committed, when J. D. Lee was brought to trial, found guilty and executed for a crime almost unparalleled in the history of the world, and certainly unequalled since the massacre of Glencoe in 1692, almost two centuries ago. Things began to look desperate, and in 1857 Alfred Cumming was appointed Governor, with a force of 2,500 troops to enforce obedience to the laws. The Saints, whom "Fair Play" loves so well, attacked the supply trains and compelled them to winter at a considerable distance from Salt Lake. In 1861 polygamy was declared to be a criminal offense, but the Saints have set that law at defiance, as they have all the laws of the United States, and they continue to do so even unto this day. Such is a concise and true history of the Latter Day Saints, who are mostly gathered from the ignorant and debased classes from all over Europe, and they are reaping a plentiful harvest. The Mormon Bishop, Henry Lunt, says: "Our church has only been organized fifty years, and yet behold its wealth and power. We look forward with perfect confidence to the day when we will hold the reins of the United States government. This is our present temporal aim. We intend to have Utah recognized as a state, and to-day we hold the balance of power in Utah, and in a short time we will have Wyoming and Arizona." The question now is, Can we as American citizens, who love our country and its laws, take by the hand in brotherly love a people who boast that they are and will defy our most cherished institutions? Some will say that our Latter Day Saints here are not like the Latter Day Saints of Salt Lake. Elder Bronson may say so, but it is no new thing to steal the livery of heaven to serve the devil in. It is a distinction without a difference.

NORVAL, JR.

The foregoing is taken from the Daily Union, Rock Island, Illinois, sent us by Bro. F. G. Dungee. It is very strange that anybody living in Illinois so near to where the Saints of the Reorganized Church have lived so long, should be so ignorant respecting that body as "Norval, Jr.," has in article quoted above proven himself to be.

The date at which "Norval" begins the record of hateful things against Mormonism, ought of itself to vindicate the Reorganized Church; and if "Norval, Jr.," is so desirous of doing service for the truth, he would do well to go to Kewanee, on the east of Rock Island, to Davenport and West Buffalo, Scott county, Iowa, on the west, and to Millersburgh, in Illinois, south of Rock Island, and near enough to be in the near neighborhood and learn the character of the people he defames by connecting them with the crimes of Utah, before he so industriously traduces them. If "Norval, Jr.," will send his address to the HERALD Office we will send him a copy of a journal now in its twenty-third year, which is and has been ever in opposition to the Utah Church.

Bro. Hiram C. Bronson, is himself a positive denial of the accusation of "Norval, Jr." Raised in Illinois, his father an old-time Saint, and his family always refusing affiliation with Brigham Young. Let those who choose to investigate before denouncing a people go to Princeville, Peoria county, Illinois, and make inquiry there of the Reorganized Saints, if they want the truth of the matter.

IS INTOLERANCE the attribute of Christian (so-called) countries and influences, or not? See below:

MOHAMMEDANISM.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Jan. 8.—While the popular idea in the Western mind is that the Turk has a great contempt for all other religions but his own, and that the presence of Christians, tolerated in the palmy days of Ottoman rule on account of their usefulness to the State, is now only supported from necessity, nothing can be further from the truth than to suppose that the Founder of Christianity is not held in high respect by the dominant cast, or that any man is hindered in the practice of his faith, whatever it may be.

There is no religious intolerance among the Turks, although it exists to such a degree among the members of rival Christian churches that a parent would prefer to see his offspring become "followers of the Prophet" than adopt other tenets than those of the creed in which they were baptized. The persecuted for their faith's sake of all countries have found a home in Turkey, and while the descendants of Huguenot refugees are to be found in the present day among the Levantine families registered in the British and Dutch Consulates, the Jewish communities that have sprung from the Spanish outcasts form no mean item of the sum total of the population. One of the things that struck me most, among the many anomalous sights to be seen at Constantinople, was a Catholic procession guarded by Turkish soldiers. It was the "fete Dieu," and ahead of the banners and sacred emblems marched a company of red-fezzed riflemen, while another brought up the rear, to prevent insult, as I afterward learned, being shown to this demonstration of the Latin Church, not by Mohammedan scoffers outside the pale of Christianity, but intolerant Greeks within. No tourist from the West can have visited Jerusalem during the holy week without being impressed with the position held by the Turks at the sacred shrines of the Christian faith. They are the real guardians of what the piety of the past ages has raised in commemoration of the scenes in the life of Christ, as but for the armed interference on more than one occasion, of Moslem soldiery, all would have been swept away in the fierce struggle for possession by the pilgrims of the rival creeds. No Turk ever mentions the name of Christ (Issa) without the prefix of "Hazretteri," the same reverential term as is applied to all the prophets, and no Christian in Turkish employ is ever expected to work on Sundays. No greater proof of the religious toleration of the Turk can be given to the stranger visiting the City of the Sultan than by pointing out to him the spire of the British Memorial Church, standing side by side with the minaret of a mosque, the courtyard of which was taken away to furnish the necessary site for the Christian edifice.

FOR the benefit of many of the readers of the HERALD, who are interested in the question of the liabilities and corporate rights of railway companies, we quote a decision of the Supreme Court, of New York, bearing upon it:

The order of Judge Haight was made at a special term of the Supreme Court of New York last summer granting the petitions and orders to show cause why a peremptory mandamus should not issue to compel certain railroad companies to receive and deliver promptly all such freight and other property as might be offered to or received by them for transportation at the usual or reasonable rates. The suit was that of the people upon the relation of the Attorney-General against the New York Central & Hudson River Railroad Company and the New York, Lake Erie & Western Railroad Company. The complaint alleged that these roads had uniformly delayed and sometimes peremptorily refused to receive and deliver freight and to transport it, thereby causing great loss to the people of the State, for which there was no adequate remedy in damages; and that the trade and commerce of the city of New York was greatly injured by this conduct of the railways. The ground upon which the defendants relied on their motion to quash was that they were unable to receive, load, and discharge freight efficiently because they were compelled to employ unskilled men, as their freight-handlers had refused to work for their pay of seventeen cents an hour, demanding twenty cents an hour, which sum they refused to pay. On the hearing against the objection of the counsel for the people, the defendants were allowed to open and close the argument. An appeal was taken to the general term of the Supreme Court, who reversed the decision of Judge Haight in every part. Judge Davis, in his opinion, said: "The question on the facts shown in the papers before us is this: Can railroad corporations refuse or neglect to perform a public duty upon a controversy with their employes over the cost and expense of doing them? We think this question admits of but one answer: The excuse has in law no validity. The duties imposed must be discharged at whatever cost. They can not be laid down, or abandoned, or suspended without the legally-expressed consent of the State. Railroads are in every essential quality public highways, created for public use, but permitted to be owned, controlled, and managed by private persons. But for this quality the railroads of the respondents could not lawfully exist. Their construction depended upon the exercise of the right of eminent domain, which belongs to the State in its corporate capacity alone, and can not be conferred except upon a public use. The corporation by accepting its charter takes upon it the trusts imposed by it; it becomes an agency of the State to perform public functions which might otherwise devolve upon public officers, as is the case with regard to other public highways. The fact that individuals may have private remedies for the damage done them does not deprive the State of its right to a mandamus. The right of the State to compel the performance of every step necessary to bring a corporation into a condition of readiness to perform its functions is not doubted, and it is strangely illogical to assert that the State is powerless to compel the doing of the acts for which the corporation was created. The quashing of the motion was a novel proceeding. Such action is taken by the courts in disposing of writs of process, not in deciding applications to obtain them. And the right of the Attorney-General to open and close the argument, he being the moving party, is not questioned.

We have long regarded railway corporations as creations of the state, owing their existence to the peculiar methods in which the lands of the state and individuals, are taken into the use of the companies for the good of the public, thus forming the road beds out of public and private property for the use of the public, but to the benefit of individuals. The state by legislative acts creates these incorporations, and it is a foolish thing to say that a state can create a private corporation which it can not control.

The principle announced by the decision is a sound one, and other states will do well to follow the example of New York, in this regard. If public carriers refuse or neglect to perform the functions for which they were endowed by the state, then the state should compel them.

Correspondence.

COLDWATER, Mich.,
February 12th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I have written and accepted the challenges of Mr. Sims, of Michigan, and Mr. McBroom, of Ohio. The latter wishes a little time to think over it; the former not heard from; as he has not re-appeared in the section where he was wont to devour the faithful. Perhaps this comet does not appear only at long intervals. Bro. C. Scott is doing well at Galien and Buchanan. Sr. Kate Lock is very sick—not expected to live. She is one of our most worthy and highly esteemed Saints here. I regret the death of Sr. Sarah Browning, of Salt Lake City. Herself, husband and family, made me welcome at their home in 1875, when I was a missionary in that uninviting country. More than once her happy disposition, extra conversational powers, and rare good sense, have united to drive away the blues while there, and make life endurable, even in a salt land. But few, if any, are more worthy to stay; and perhaps none better prepared to go. I sympathize with the bereaved.

We are gaining here at home. Hope to be all right in a few days.

Hastily,
WM. H. KELLEY.

SHARON, Papeete, Tahite,
January 2d, 1883.

To the President of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, Lamoni, Iowa:—The blessings of God Almighty be upon you! We, the undersigned members of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, desire to express to you our sincere thanks for the very kind and paternal letter which we have just received from you. It was read over to us in Tahitian last Sunday, by Mr. Barff, government interpreter, in our chapel at Sharon, on the outskirts of Papeete. We all endeavor to obey, and to act in accordance with the rules and regulations of our Church, as dictated by our Lord himself.

As we are anxious that the different islands of the Society group should not remain ignorant of the contents of your kind pastoral letters and papers, we have had them all translated into our language by Mr. Barff, so that now, all members of our religion can read for themselves, and see the wonderful works of the Lord now being carried on among us. There is a regular mail which leaves this town twice every week, so that communication between the different parts of the Island is carried on easily, and we are able to write to one another and give all the news. Please to write often, and give us your instructions respecting matters connected with the Church.

We have sent two brethren to the more distant islands of the Paumotu group. (Dangerous Archipelago). There are more than thirty islands in this group, some of which are very populous. The laws and regulations of our church were fully explained to them, and every thing went on in a very satisfactory manner. We count there 364 in full church membership. Some of the people in the island of Aana, objected to them, saying, that no prophet has risen in these latter days, and that no communication had been received from the Most High. We will continue to communicate to them your letters and papers, if peradventure they may repent and return to our fold. Here in town, we are in full peace and quietness, and endeavor, as far as we are able, to instruct one another in the word of God. The local government is kind and considerate, and gives us no trouble. We feel more and more that we are doing the work of the Lord, and that it is prospering in our hands. This is from Tehopea, your friend and servant and co-laborer in the work of the Lord. "The prayer of a righteous man availeth much." We count one hundred and forty-two members in Papeete, but we have very many visitors every Lord's day. In the Paurnester Island, we are very, very numerous. Write to us as often as you can. It gives us great pleasure to receive your letters. Shall we all finally attain the Heavenly Zion? Pray that it may be so as it is stated in Jeremiah 31: 1-6.

Again, beseeching an interest in your prayers, I am, Reverend Sir, in the name and on behalf of the Church,

Your friend and fellow laborer,
TEHOPEA.

OAKLAND, California,
February 2d, 1883.

Dear Brother Joseph:—I am happy to inform you that the work is onward in Oakland. It seems that the instruction from the Bishop and his counsel has put new life into the Saints in a temporal point of view. The Saints here have been alive to their duty in spiritual things. Many have already expressed their desire to keep the laws of God, temporal as well as spiritual. Of late we had an invitation to go and preach in private houses. They could not come to church. This is Bro. R. Ferris' labors while going from house to house with his milk. There is another place at Walnut Creek. Bro. Samuel Walden wants us to go over there to preach. We shall go there as soon as we can. We had a prayer meeting last night, and it was good old times as the old-time Saints call it. Sunday is the hardest day with me during the week. At 11 a. m. Superintendent Sunday School; 1:30 p. m. sacrament meeting; 7:30 preaching meeting, arrive home about ten p. m.

Yours in gospel bonds,
D. J. PHILLIPS.

BOSTON, Mass.,
February 3d, 1883.

Editor Herald:—Leaving the good Saints at Philadelphia, and Hornerstown, N. J., in company with Bro. Stewart I wended my way to Brooklyn, where I was permitted the pleasure of meeting quite a number of Saints who seemed pleased to meet me. The branch was in a somewhat disordered condition, which by the assistance of the brethren was again organized, and set to work with apparent good feeling. A variety of causes in the past had contributed to the distress of this branch; but I hope it may have better sailing hereafter, as the members are bright and pleasant, and plenty of ability in the officers and eldership, having had a varied and extensive experience. Bro. Joseph Squires was made president, with the promise from Elder W. B. Owen to assist in declaring the word. This last name Bro. J. W. Briggs will remember, as he met him in England. To me it seemed desirable that circumstances might so move, that Bro. Owen be liberated, that his whole time be spent in preaching the word.

From thence I came to Bridgeport, Connecticut, via steamer up Long Island Sound, which by the way is a beautiful sheet of water, with pretty towns interspersed all along shore. There I met sister Vincent and her two daughters, spending one night with them. Also some young converts, who seemed pleased to meet me. Bro. Squires has been laboring there, and it needs a continuous effort, as I am satisfied that more will be added if the work is kept up. From thence to Providence where we met many friends, of which number I had previously met Brn. Yerrington, and Sheehy. Bro. Sheehy is president of this branch, which numbers about one hundred and seventy souls, to whom I had the pleasure of speaking twice on Sunday, the 21st, meeting with them Monday eve in prayer and testimony, which comforted me. On Tuesday evening, in company with Brn. Sheehy and Potter, I attended an expose of spiritualism, by Stuart Cumberland, which was rich indeed, showing the "tricks" of spiritism and demonstrating "mind reading" sufficiently to indemnify the conclusion, that at least the major portion of the mysterious acts of mediums, was purely and entirely human, and without the aid of any supernatural power, or help of the departed. There may be a little of the supernatural in it—in fact I think there is some—but precious little, and that of no special benefit.

From Providence I came to Boston, speaking to the Saints on Wednesday eve, the 31st ult., at the house of Bro. E. N. Webster, the presiding elder, and on Thursday departed for Fall River, where I spoke that and succeeding nights to full houses; here I met Bro. John Potts, the presiding elder, Bro. John Smith, president of district, and Bro. John Gilbert, district missionary, all of whom seemed active, hopeful and joyful. From here on Saturday, I passed through Providence, and in company with Bro. Frank M. Sheehy, et al, passed on to Plainville, where we have a branch of fifty Saints, Bro. Charles Coombs, presiding, who had just completed a chapel, where on Sunday, the 28th ult., I took part in dedication, occupying the stand in the evening upon the issues which separate us from that foul organization in the West, known as Utah Mormons. In the afternoon Bro. Sheehy addressed the people in a very pleasant and instructive manner, and on Monday morning a pleasant and enjoyable time was had, by way of prayer and testimony.

This little band of Saints at Plainville, has erected and mostly paid for their chapel, which cost them $1,100 dollars. The same is true of the Saints at Fall River, whose chapel will accommodate two hundred people or over, and cost about $2,000 dollars. These people, as a rule, and I am inclined to believe all, are laborers in factories, shops, &c., who have no great sums of money laid up, but depend on their daily labor for their bread, yet for all this, do accomplish such work as this, and that too, without asking the Saints generally to help them. If all the branches of the church would pursue this course, the work of God would spread far and wide, and be permanently established in various parts of the earth, as locality does not figure in the worship of God; for one spot of earth is as holy as another, so far as the earth is concerned.

On Tuesday, the 30th ult., returned to Boston, and the next evening met the Saints here in prayer and testimony meeting, Bro. M. H. Bond, of Michigan, being present. On Thursday was interviewed by Herald reporter of this city for one hour or more, whose relatives in England had been Mormons, some going to Utah. He seemed to hate the whole thing with an everlasting hatred, and I don't wonder either. Whether we will get any notice has not yet appeared. If we do, I will send copy. I am well pleased with my visit here, and the general outlook of the work.

The Church should now sustain a mission constantly in the New England States, as but few of the millions living in the East comprehend our faith; and in connection with this I find a strong demand in this country for Brn. Frank Sheehy and John Gilbert to labor constantly as missionaries. Massachusetts District alone has some eight or nine branches, with a membership of near six hundred, and a growing demand for our faith.

I should like it if I could have reached Maine, but have not the time, as I must return so as to reach Washington by the middle of this month, to finish up the work commenced there. The general outlook is good, and I believe the day is not far distant when the Government and the public will relieve us from the stench and curse attached to the term "Mormon," because of the heresies of Utah.

So far as I am able to observe as a general rule, what the Saints most need is to "covet earnestly the best gifts." "Tongues" and "prophecy" are good in their place, but "wisdom" and "knowledge" are so much superior, that when and where possessed the work is immovable and solid; and above all things, "charity, out of a pure heart." If these gifts are earnestly sought and patiently waited for, then in that case we may have less prophecies or manifestations of tongues, but more accessions to the Church, more blessings and more faith in the body of Christ, working harmoniously with law and order, "peace on earth, and good will to men." I exhort all to "covet earnestly the best gifts," and not to be over anxious over any matter, as of ourselves we can not "add one cubit," or make "one hair white or black;" but in patience to possess our souls, knowing that the "recompense of reward" is both sure and steadfast to those who wait upon the Lord.

Hornerstown, N. J., Feb. 12th.—Last Tuesday I said good bye to the Saints of Massachusetts District, who seem alive in the work. The only difficulty I encountered there, was in getting away; they have such a pleasant but effectual way of holding on to their friends.

Coming on to Brooklyn, we found the Saints there revived, having hired a hall, and made arrangements for regular service. May God bless their efforts.

On to this village Friday last, holding services as usual; since which time three have been added to the Church here, two by baptism, and one upon her original baptism, administered in the early days of the Church, by Bro. Benjamin Winchester. Many more seem "almost persuaded," and I almost wonder why they don't unite—"but God giveth the increase."

To-day I move to Philadelphia, and then in a few days back to Washington to finish up my work there. I feel rather pleased with the outlook "along the line" in this Eastern Mission, and desire that every soul may be impressed with the one thought, "What shall the harvest be?"

I see from the Herald of roth inst., the account of the death of Sister Browning, of Salt Lake City. My eyes welled with tears as I read this; for Oh, what a loss to her family and friends. Her's was a generous soul, a ready hand to help all who needed, and under their hospitable "roof-tree" the writer has often been made a welcome visitor. But to hearts bowed down with grief, robbed of a loving wife and mother, words are empty things, and I can only pray that he who "doeth all things well," will, in the abundance of his goodness remember and comfort these sad and sorrowing souls by the presence of the divine spirit, showing them still more clearly the existence of another and better world.

"Thou, then, the longing heart that breaketh,
Stealing the treasures one by one;
I'll call thee blessed, when thou makest
The parted—one."

In bonds, as ever,

Z. H. GURLEY.

GLENCOE, Ohio, Feb. 7th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—On the 26th of December we left Pittsburg for Warnock, Ohio, arriving there the same day; and on the night of the 27th held a meeting with the Saints in Bro. Sheldon's house, about two miles from Warnock Station, and the next night commenced preaching, and kept on for ten nights incessantly; also in the meantime preached the funeral sermon of Bro. William Lucas' child, of West Wheeling, West Virginia. Had crowded houses and excellent liberty in speaking. I sincerely believe that the seed sown will bring forth fruit in the Lord's own time. There were a number who were interested when we left, some of whom, I think, will be one with us ere long.

I intended to labor somewhat longer, but was told by the Spirit that my labors were required in Glen Easton, West Virginia; hence on the 9th of January we started for that place. Here we met Bro. H. Robinson, who had been preaching over a week, and had baptized three on the 15th of January. He left for Glencoe and we still held the fort; delivered eighteen sermons to large audiences; was greatly blest by the Spirit in preaching; held eight meetings with the Saints; blest five children; baptized and confirmed five persons; with the three Bro. Robinson baptized making eight additions to the Branch, all heads of families. One of those I baptized had been a Bickertonite, about seventeen years; but had never been a member of the Reorganization.

The branch when we went there had but one officer, Elder A. Harris, the president; but in the last meeting we held, the Lord called two to the office of Teacher, and Bro. Amos Dobbs (a Priest) to act as presiding Priest of branch. So we left the branch in good working order, and the Saints were feeling strong in the latter day work. They promised to be more assiduous and faithful in the future.

Bro. Joseph, there is ample place for preaching in West Virginia and this State. I have nine or ten places where they want to hear the word of life. The people as a rule, are very good to attend our meetings. I have had crowded houses ever since I came to this mission. The good work is onward, in spite of the evil powers and the opposition that is brought to bear against it. I never felt more determined to help extend the glorious cause of my Redeemer, than I do at the present time. It seems the longer I am in this great work, the more I am willing to labor and sacrifice to promote it in the earth. My desire is to be humble, inflexible, diligent and faithful.

I leave here to-day for Warnock, where I anticipate lifting the standard of the gospel tomorrow eve at the station.

Yours in the one faith,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

MANCHESTER, England,

January 27th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—Your issue as a weekly came duly to hand. You have always been a welcome visitor to us during the six years and over of our acquaintance; but never more appreciated than you are at the present time. In the perusal of your pages, we are made glad, and our spirits are cheered with the good things given, and the promise of more to come. Your determination to continue the assault upon the strongholds of bigotry, intolerance and priestcraft, strikes a responsive chord within our breast, and reminds us that the warfare is not over. Our armor must not be put aside, nor our vigilance slackened. Your Clarion notes brace us for the fray, like the rataplau of the drum the warrior, or the sound of the horn the hunter. Our blood courses through our veins more quickly, and we are reminded of the terms of our engagement, faithful until death. We start forth with the new year with renewed vigor, gratefully acknowledging the accomplished, but still discerning much yet to be done, before the battle's over, the victory won.

This year in its opening, promises well for the faith of the Saints in this land. The influence and knowledge of the Church is extending, and the Saints' understanding. Our ministry are determined to make plain the issue betwixt them and that Church, which has and is endeavoring to fasten the stain of polygamy and its kindred heresies upon the name of Latter Day Saints; and God helping us, as we know, so also shall others know,—that those who advocate such pernicious doctrines, have not the authority to speak in the name of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. We do, and will continue to declare them apostates from the doctrines of that Church, as taught in pulpit and press by the authorized Elders, during the life and ministry of our martyred prophet, and we deny their ability to prove to the contrary, the standard and official works of the Church during that period being the judge betwixt us.

Dear Herald, we court the issue, but the Utah Elders tell us that they do not wish to contend, as they do not come here to discuss, but to teach. What a miserable subterfuge, coming as it does from the lips of those who are ever ready to attack any and every creed, except the one they affect to despise most, i. e. the Reorganization.

In a revelation in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, certain of the Elders are commanded to call upon their opponents to bring forth their strong reasons against the doctrine of the Church; and the Lord promised those elders, that if they did this, trusting in him, he would confound all who opposed them and bring every weapon formed against them, to nought. Yet these Utah teachers continue to whine out, "We do not wish to discuss with you Josephites, because you are in darkness." "How are the mighty fallen." What a profound exhibition of faith in God's word. (?) If these men have, as they say they have, more light than we of the Reorganized Church, why are they afraid to contrast it with our darkness, for light is truth, and truth is mighty and will prevail. Why not endeavor to convict us out of the "law and the testimony," by which we both profess to be governed. I would to God that they would do so, honestly and sincerely, and with us be prepared to abide the issue. They profess to "know all." They know that polygamy is ordained of God for the salvation of the human race. (?) They know that the late Brigham was a prophet of God, and the legal successor of the martyred Joseph (?) although he himself declared that he was "neither a prophet nor the son of a prophet." They know that John Taylor is the legal successor of Joseph and Brigham, and divinely appointed by God to lead the Church of Christ. (?) They know that Utah is appointed of God as the gathering place of the Saints; but they do not seem to know that God had already appointed the place, in Jackson county, Missouri, and declared by revelation to Joseph, as given in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants that no other place shall be appointed until the place named be full, and then, (not till then), will he appoint other places, which shall be for the "curtain and strength of Zion." And yet, with all the knowledge they boast of, they are afraid to make the appeal to the "law and the testimony," because they well know that they do not "speak according to this word." Therefore "they have no light in them."

I have been in their meetings, have heard, and taken exceptions to their statements, and have been told, "we could shew you, but we are not here to discuss. If you will not receive our testimony, you must take the consequences," &c. Surely this is not in keeping with the apostolic injunction, "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good." For these men, prove nothing, and if you question that which they state, you are met with bare assertion, bluster, and brag, the natural outcome of ignorance and gross superstition. "These are springs without water, and mists driven by a storm; for whom the blackness of darkness hath been reserved. For uttering great swelling words of vanity, they entice in the lusts of the flesh by lasciviousness, those who are just escaping from them that live in error; promising them liberty, while they themselves are bond-servants of corruption; for of whom a man is overcome, of the same is he also brought into bondage." 2 Peter 2:17-19 verse. (Revised Edition, 1881). Surely these are they who are alluded to by the Apostle in the same chapter, verses 1 and 2: "But there arose false prophets also among the people, as among you also there shall be false teachers, who shall privily bring in destructive heresies, denying even the Master that bought them, (i. e., Adam our father and our God), bringing upon themselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their lascivious doings, (i. e., Poly-amy), by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of."

But we have the promise that these shepherds who fatten upon their flocks, (extortionate tithing), shall be brought to judgment, and receive reward according to their works.

Dear Herald, the time is fast approaching in this country, when these false teachers will have to face the music, or retire from the field. I believe that a good work will be accomplished here by the time the year is brought to a close. We are adding a few to our numbers, men and women, whom I believe are of sterling integrity, working with a single eye to the salvation of souls, and the upbuilding of the Church.

The issue of the "Herald" as a weekly, has, so far as I can ascertain, given general satisfaction to the membership here, and I feel assured that your labors are appreciated, and much good will result therefrom.

With kindly thoughts and feelings towards the whole household of faith, of which you are the representative, I remain, dear Herald, a firm believer in the divinity, and consequently ultimate success of the work you so worthily represent.

Yours in the covenant of peace,
JOSEPH DEWSNUP.

GLEN EASTON, Marshal Co., W. Va.,
February 9th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Brother Hiram Robinson came here in November, and built up the few Saints that were here, and then he went to Pittsburg to quarterly conference, and during his absence, Bro. J. Craig paid us a visit, and we were all glad to see him, and hear him break the bread of life once more to saint and sinner. And in December Bro. H. Robinson returned, and preached several sermons, and had the pleasure of baptizing three; and then Bro. and Sr. Griffiths came, and we have had quite a good time during their stay. They left us yesterday. We feel quite lost without them; they are noble Saints. Bro. Griffiths preached a number of splendid discourses, and baptized five, and left several others convinced of the truth.

I feel more encouraged than ever to try to be faithful. It is past five years since I covenanted with the Lord to do his will, and I have been severely tried at different times, and in various ways; but the good Father has been my help in every time of need. And now I feel to rejoice that I have had the privilege of seeing my husband, with seven others, added to the kingdom. The Lord has promised great things to his people here, if they are faithful. I feel truly thankful that this work is prospering everywhere. I have had many testimonies of its truthfulness, and by the help of the good Father, I want to live worthy of the blessings promised to the faithful. Your sister in the hope of eternal life,

CAROLINE WAYT.

TABOR, IOWA.

Bro. Joseph:—The Saints here feel better in the work than they have been feeling for some time past. Bro. E. L. Kelley's preaching suited the folks well. He preached two grand sermons, one on the spiritual things of the kingdom, the other on the temporal. All expressed themselves highly edified, and greatly blessed.

Your brother, as ever,
HENRY KEMP.

14 S. Sheldon St., CHICAGO, Ill.,
February 9th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I would not like to be held responsible for the wording and sentiment of some of my answers to the reporter of the Chicago Herald, as represented by him and republished in the last issue of the Saints' Herald. These reporters have a peculiar way of coloring things to suit their purpose, and sometimes they blunder for want of understanding the answers given to their questions. I shall not occupy your space by pointing out the several errors found in this publication.

The number of outside attendants at our meetings here, has been increasing some of late; but the chances for early conversions look gloomy. I shall continue to do my duty to the best of my ability, and leave results with God. I do not think it wisdom, and hence not necessary, to state through the Herald, at present, the greatest difficulties that lie in the way of prosecuting the work at Chicago. May God speed the day when they shall be removed. I have been blest in preaching the word, but my health is poor. It is, perhaps, providential that I am not under the necessity of traveling this winter, for I am certainly not able to stand it; but I hope the time will never come when the Church will assign me, or anybody else for that matter, to special work, at any special place, solely because of physical inability to go elsewhere. I would rather drop out of the ranks of the active ministry than to labor under the embarrassment that such an appointment would bring upon me. My belief is that no man ought to be assigned to any place, or department of labor, in this Church of Christ, unless he is deemed competent and worthy. The interests of God's work are too precious to be trifled with, or jeopardized by any foolish or superficial act of the Church!

May we grow in wisdom as we grow in years, is the prayer of your co-worker for Christ,
JOSEPH R. LAMBERT.

COLUMBIAVILLE, Michigan,
February 9th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I expect to remain here until after the Sabbath; the people feel quite interested in hearing the gospel preached by those having authority, and I feel anxious in the matter. I hope their interest to hear and my anxiety for them, may solve the great problem, and bring the honest to the true light of the everlasting gospel.

The people around here are in a rather promiscuous condition. They are mixed up with so many different faiths and doctrines, that no harmony, or unity prevails among any of them; hence division and strife. Paul states such ought not to be. I want them to build on the foundation laid by the Savior, and see "eye to eye."

I have been laboring with Bro. Hemingway for the last two weeks. We felt blessed together. This morning we parted. He went home; I am here hoping to do good. May God aid and strengthen the work everywhere. While laboring around Goodland with the Saints, Bro. James Carpenter immersed one. We feel the example will be endorsed by others there.

Bro. Joseph, if I should attempt to tell of the work needed to be done in Michigan, the calls for hearing the word, I would continue my pen for hours,

The Saints are well pleased with the Herald becoming a weekly and much interested with the contents of the late numbers on finance, especially the sound reasoning of Bishop Blakeslee.

Write on, Bro. Blakeslee. Good Saints read your letter with heavenly zeal, feeling the spirit of the work, and the weight of the Spirit while reading it. May we all give it a hearty endorsement, is my prayer.

From your brother,

EDWARD DELONG.

LINDLEY, Grundy Co., Missouri,
February 10th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph.—Some three weeks ago I came to this county. I met with Bro. A. H. Smith, E. L. Kelley, and J. T. Kinneman, near Buttsville, where I listened to them preach some excellent sermons. I think they did good and removed some prejudice. I continued the meetings for about a week, with considerable interest. I then came to this place in company with Brn. McVay and Morisen. We found Bro. E. Moorman and family here. We began meeting here the night that we arrived, at the Methodist Church. I have preached nine times here, and I think with good effect. I found three preachers here, two Methodist and one Advent. They all came out to hear, and one of the Methodists thought to expose what he was pleased to call Mormonism. I reviewed him, and did it without gloves; for I thought plain talk was necessary. After this attempt to expose us, he quieted down and left to fill other appointments. The people were very much opposed to his conduct and censured him very strongly for unchristian conduct. The Advent, Mr. Long I believe, came to all of our meetings. Also met me at Bro. Moorman's and we had a pleasant talk. I think him a gentleman. This is the first time that the latter day work has been presented here. I have invitation to visit other places in this vicinity. I find a spirit of liberty and investigation.

Ever fighting for Zion's triumph, I am your brother in hope,

W. T. BOZARTH.

JEFFERSONVILLE, Illinois,
February 8th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—The work in this district is moving very slowly. There are but few Elders here, and most of us have to provide for families, and consequently can spare but little time for preaching. I have been out considerably this winter. Bro. I. M. Smith, District President, has been doing the greater part of the traveling that has been done for the last year or two, Bro. I. A. Morris going occasionally; others doing local labor to some extent. We expected Bro. B. V. Springer to visit us, but he has not come yet. We still hope he may.

I held a debate at Tunnel Hill, in Johnson county, in January. The Methodists, Baptists, and some outsiders employed a Mr. Nash, who came into the neighborhood lecturing on science, to meet the Mormon. He proposed to prove that Joseph Smith was an impostor, and the Book of Mormon false, and challenged me to meet him. I told him I would take the burden of the work, and affirm that Joseph Smith was a true prophet, and that the Book of Mormon came forth in fulfillment of the prophecies of the Bible, and was as worthy of our belief as the Bible. It lasted three days, and would have lasted four, but the parties on the other side got tired. The gentleman failed to do all they expected, and some of his employers deserted him in the heat of the battle.

I don't think we lost anything by the discussion. I still hope to do something. I think the articles in the Herald on finance timely and wise. For the success of the work, all must be carried out.

G. H. HILLIARD.

RAY, Steuben Co., Indiana,

February 15th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph.—The weekly Herald is a welcome visitor. Our branch is in a prosperous condition. We have not had any preaching for two months. Am in hopes of some one of our Elders calling soon, as there are many investigators at the present time. Expect Bro. Kelley soon. Keep up our Sabbath School every Sabbath with a good attendance. Prayer meetings every Sabbath at the church, and once a week at some of our brothers' houses; good attendance, with good results.

I anticipate a good time for all who will be permitted to meet at the Kirtland Temple, on the 6th of April. How I long for that time to come, as I well remember when but a child, of many of my little playmates leaving their homes, with their parents, from Tompkins county, New York, for Kirtland, Ohio, where the Mormons in those days congregated to worship the true and living God, and follow the precepts as taught by the Savior. What a solemn thought, that God in his kind mercies has spared me, and given me light that I have lived, and after a careful investigation, have become a firm believer in the true teachings of our blessed Savior. I united a little more than two years ago with the Saints, and am a full believer in the faith. I expect to meet many of the Saints at Kirtland, on the 6th of April, and I ask an interest in all of their prayers, that I may perform the duties imposed upon me.

Your brother in the faith,

ALVIN PATTERSON.

Feb. 15.—The French Chamber of Deputies has receded from its bold stand on the Expulsion bill and accepts M. Barbey's amendment, which has also been accepted by M. Floquet, retiring the Orleanist Princes on half-pay and rendering all members of the dynasties liable to expulsion by decree of the President. It is believed that this action will be acceptable to the Senate, and that a settlement will be arrived at which will avoid the necessity of a change in the Cabinet.

At one o'clock this morning the people in the vicinity of No. 50 Wilstach street, Cincinnati, O., on the border of the inundated district in the western part of the city, were startled by a loud explosion, which broke the glass in windows in the neighborhood. A three-story brick building, occupied by four families numbering seventeen persons, was found in ruins. The explosion was from fire-damp or sewer-gas in the cellar, and all of the seventeen people were buried in the debris. A scene of terror followed. It was supposed that the explosion was caused by the pressure of water in the sewer, and the people thought that other explosions would follow. Many left their houses in the utmost alarm, and fled thinly clad to places of safety. A fire alarm was turned in, which added to the consternation, and the Fire Department responded promptly. Finding no fire, the men began the work of rescuing the unfortunate victims, three of whom were found dead and nearly all the others more or less injured.

In the town of Dayton, Ky., which is nine-tenths under water, people have abolished the practice of paying for boating services. If any one demanded pay for carrying people or provisions to houses, his boat was confiscated. The same is true in Columbia and other smaller suburbs. People devote the whole time to assisting each other. In many houses the last rise has invaded parlors, and pianos have been swung to the ceiling. The most horrible calamity in the history of coal mining in the United States occurred to-day at the Diamond shaft, about three miles from Braidwood, Ill. About 300 men and boys were at work as usual, when without a note of warning a mass of earth overhead about forty by ninety feet caved in, and was followed by a torrent of water, which almost instantly flooded that portion of the mine beneath. Efforts were made by those who escaped and by the workmen at adjoining mines to dig out their entombed brethren, but the attempt was abandoned owing to the inpouring of the water, which at dusk was almost on a level with the mouth of the main shaft. It may be weeks before the bodies can be recovered. Sixty-eight men and six boys lie dead in the mine. This accident made forty-six women widows, and forty-nine children fatherless.

So far all the bridges on the main line are in safe condition, though several are strained to their utmost. All trains are taken off except the passengers. The Lake Erie line has suspended entirely. Mackinaw bridge, of the Indiana, Bloomington & Western at Mackinaw, is submerged beyond the danger point, and it is doubtful if an attempt to cross it will be made to-night. Scarcely a country road leading to Bloomington is passable. The creeks are booming full, and scores of county bridges are washing out by streams flowing on either side of the road. An alarm of fire in a New York Parochial school, caused the death of sixteen children, aged between seven and twelve. The children gathered in a crowd at the head of a stairway, the railing gave way, and a mass of struggling children was precipitated to the floor below, falling in a mass from four to five feet deep. The heart rending scenes which followed the discovery by parents of their lifeless little ones, can better be imagined than described. The fire was a trifling one, and did no damage.

THE OLD YEAR.

Alone, wrapt in thoughtful regret,
I sit in the twilight's gray dawn;
While round me dim ghosts of the past,
Rise up from the year that has gone;
Weird ghosts of sweet pleasures and joys,
And pastimes so gilded and gay,
From out of the depths of the past,
Throng round me in spectral array.

Sweet visions of happiness, clear
As Heaven's own beams of sunlight,
Float o'er me, and lose their fair tints,
In the birth of the cold, moonless night.
O bright and lowing visions of bliss,
I watch you fast fade with a sigh;
Like all this life's bliss and best hopes,
You, too, quickly perish and die.

Fond hopes, that were born but to die;
Fond longings, so full of sweet pain;
With spectres of sadness and doubt,
Move past me in memory's train.
Visions of gilded temptations,
And hours of weakness and sin,
Followed by penance and darkness,
And prayers for the light to shine in.

Sweep past me in silence and gloom,
And fade with a fierce scowling might,
While tears of repentance and shame,
Fall fast down my cheeks at the sight.
In anguish of soul I cry, Lord,
O keep me from doubts, fears and woes,
That triumph o'er each sin and wrong,
With coming years' crown at their close.

THE THIEF IN THE KINGDOM.

Editor Herald:—In your issue of the 27th of January, pages 60 and 61, appears a very excellent article on the popular perversions of Scripture texts, notably that relating to baptism of water and the Spirit, taught by the Savior to Nicodemus; but in the concluding lines the writer goes wide of the truth, when he assumes that "the kingdom" was not entered by any one till the day of Pentecost, and that, therefore, the penitent thief did not enter it.

First, as to the kingdom. It is clear that it existed in fact in the time of John the Baptist, and that persons did enter it then, and thenceforward. Not a few interpreters confuse the Scriptures on this, as upon other points, misleading both themselves and others.

It should be remembered that the kingdom of God may exist both in heaven and on earth at one and the same time, though in a different state of development; hence some scripture texts relate to it as it exists on earth, while others relate to it as it is in heaven, and still others relate to it as it will exist in the world to come. The texts and their contexts should decide that point.

That the kingdom of God existed on earth in the days of John the Baptist, is seen in the following texts and their like:

"In those days came John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judea, and saying, Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."—Matt. 3:12. "From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."—Matt. 4:17. These texts show that the kingdom was then at hand, or present. Both John and Jesus held the authority of the kingdom, were members of the kingdom, were teaching the gospel of the kingdom and were inducting members into it by its laws and ordinances. Again: "From the days of John the Baptist until now, the kingdom of God suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force."—Matt. 11:12. John, and doubtless some of his disciples, likewise Jesus and some of his disciples, had suffered persecution in various forms up to that time, and John had been beheaded. Jesus said to the Jews, "The kingdom of God is within you;" or as the literal and true rendering has it, "among you."—Luke 17:21. That is, it was then within the Jewish nation, and was not to come with great pomp and outward display, as looked for by blind leaders and their blind followers. All the chief elements of the kingdom were then in their midst as the "mustard seed," and "the leaven," and the "treasure hid in a field." It had been established in the days of John and of Jesus, and had been growing and developing; but the wicked Jews did not "see" it. And Jesus tells them, "The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."—Matt. 21:43. In the 31st verse he says: "Verily I say unto you, that the publicans and the harlots go into the kingdom of God before you." And again: "But woe unto you, Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men; for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in."—Matt. 23:13. All of which proves that the kingdom was then on the earth, and among the Jewish people. Jesus said further to the wicked Jews: "The law and the prophets were until John; since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it."—Luke 16:16. So then, from the time of John, persons of all ranks had been pressing "into it."

As for the thief not entering the kingdom of God, as claimed by the writer, we disagree with him, and believe he did; and that he was a baptized, well instructed, and intelligent believer in Christ, though he gave way to evil and stole, and suffered for it. That he was a disciple of Christ may be gathered from the facts: (1), that he knew of Christ's pure life and conduct, (2), because he called him "Lord," (3), because of his perfect and sublime faith in the divinity and power and saving mercy of Christ, as seen in the following:

"And one of the malefactors which were hanged railed on him, saying, If thou be Christ, save thyself and us. But the other answering, rebuked him, saying, Dost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation? And we indeed justly; for we receive the due reward of our deeds; but this man hath done nothing amiss. And he said unto Jesus, Lord, remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom."—Luke 23:39-43.

Such faith under such circumstances, pertains to well instructed disciples.

W. W. BLAIR.

SERMON BY ELDER DUNCAN CAMPBELL, OF PLEASANTON, IOWA,

AT THE SAINTS' CHAPEL, LAMONI,
DECEMBER 2D, 1882.

SINCE it was suggested to me to-night that I should make an effort to address you, I have been casting about in my mind for some subject, for some text upon which to base my remarks: but so far I have been unsuccessful. I am willing however to make the effort as the spirit shall give utterance, trusting that I may have your prayers, and be enabled to speak those things that are for your good and mine.

We are all laborers together I suppose in the vineyard of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, at least those of us who have been called to be saints: and a good question for us to ask ourselves to-night is, How much does that mean?

If it is a fact that we have as a body pledged ourselves to the service of Christ, does it mean a full surrender of all that we are, of all that we have, and of all that we expect to be, to the service of him who loved us and gave himself for us? Or does it mean that we keep back a part of the price, and serve God when it is convenient so to do, and ourselves the rest of the time?

The apostle in writing to a certain church said: "Ye are no more your own, ye are bought with a price: not with such corruptible things as silver and gold, but with the precious blood of Jesus Christ." If we are no more our own, then it strikes me that this implies that all our service is due to him, to our Master who bought us with his own blood.

It seems that it would be well for us to take this matter into our consideration: to judge our thoughts more particularly by this thought, and to ask ourselves as in the sight of God, What is the prime motive of our actions? What are the motives that lead us to act in the various relations of life, in all the capacities in which we are called upon to act?

If we have set ourselves apart for this service of Christ, and recognize him as our Master, it seems that there must be some means of communication between us and the Master, in order that we may know his will, that we may carry out that will, and be able to discharge the obligations that we have taken upon ourselves. If there is no communication between the Master and his servants, how does the servant know whether he is fulfilling the commands, desires, and wishes of his Master, or not.

Christ as a wise Master over his own household, has taken pains to provide for this. He has set in his church a means by which those who desire to serve him in spirit and truth may know his will; that they may do the same and be saved in the kingdom of God. For we read in the gospel, that "Not every one that saith unto me Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my father who is in heaven."

The question that should arise in the minds of those who have supposed that they have set themselves apart for the service of Christ, is this: Am I in possession of this means of communication between my Master and myself; or have I availed myself of this plan by which communication may be had with my Master, that I may know his will and that I may do the same.

Christ is recognized in the Scriptures as our Lord and Master, and we are instructed to recognize and call no one else our Master but Christ. Another Scripture says, "And they shall be taught of God." And it is predicted also when it is said that "None shall need to say to his neighbor, Know ye the Lord, for all shall know him from the least to the greatest." Besides all this it is said also, "The law of God shall be written on the minds and in the hearts of his people." If this be so, I think this promise has been verified and fulfilled in our experience; we know that we are learning the will of God and that of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

There is a great deal said to-day about our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. A great many invitations are extended to those who are said to be without God and Christ in the world, to come unto Christ. There is a great deal said about it, showing very clearly how this is to be brought about, how people are to attain this very desirable end, and become acquainted with the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, to find him and to know him, "Whom to know is life eternal." We have been speaking about this setting apart of ourselves to the service of Christ, of our entire hearts to that sanctification which is the result of obedience to God's truth. Christ it seems prayed: "Sanctify them through thy truth, thy word is truth."

Then we have here present before us the means by which we are to be set apart, to be sanctified and dedicated to the service of Christ, and the question is, How are we to make these means available to the end in view? Will simply hearing the word of God accomplish this sanctification, this setting apart to do the will of Christ, that we may receive the reward of the righteous, and of those who obey the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ?

The word sanctification according to the dictionaries, is said to imply freedom from sin, freedom from the power and dominion of sin. And Peter in writing his epistle says to the brethren to whom that was addressed: "Seeing ye have purified yourselves in obeying the truth to unfeigned love of the brethren, see that ye love one another with a true heart fervently, being born again, not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible by the word of God, which liveth and abideth forever; and this is the word which by the Gospel is preached unto you." Hence, we find that it is by rendering obedience to the "word of life," the "word of truth" that we are sanctified and set apart to the service of Christ. Hence we understand that there is somewhat of difference between sanctification and salvation, so to speak. Sanctification seems to me to be at the beginning of the race, and salvation at the end, for this Paul says: "Having received the end of your faith, the salvation of your souls."

Then I understand sanctification to mean the setting apart of ourselves to run this race, as the apostle in writing to the Hebrews says: "Wherefore, seeing that ye are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and run with patience the race which is set before us, looking unto Jesus as the great author and finisher of our faith."

The apostle doubtless in this expression refers to the Olympic games that used to be practiced in Greece. In those days games were held every four years, in which the competitors received a crown of fading laurel, but still it was considered a very great honor. Paul in comparing these races to the Christian race says: "Know ye that in a race all run, and but one receiveth the prize." But speaking of the Christian race he says "all that run faithfully to the end of the race receive prizes."

But there is another point in the races in those days as well as in these days. There are certain rules and regulations to be complied with in order that a person might strive lawfully.

Suppose an individual should enter upon the ground to take part in one of those races, and he said nothing to those who kept the gate, to those who kept the records of the names of those who were to take part in those races, but of his own accord entered upon the races and outstripped all his competitors and was the first to the winning post so to speak, think you the reward would be granted him? When he presented himself for the reward, it would be at once suggested, where is your name? Here is the record, where is your name? Where is the proof that you have complied with the regulations? Have you striven lawfully, in other words? And of course if he could not show by the record that he had striven lawfully, that he had complied with the regulations in regard to those races, in other words had striven lawfully, he would be entitled to no share in the prize. We understand it is the same in the Christian course, unless a man strive lawfully, he is not crowned. Unless a man's name is recorded in the Lamb's book of life; unless he complies with the regulations by which a man may enter the Christian race, he is not considered as striving lawfully, hence his name will not be considered as one of those who are entitled to a reward. In entering upon this race then, I apprehend that this sanctifying power is in us in order that we may strive lawfully, "Laying aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, we may run with patience the race that is set before us, ever looking unto Jesus the great Author and Finisher of our faith."

* It is true that these words were written to those who had already entered the Christian course; but it seems to me that the same rule will apply to those who have not entered the Christian course. They must strip themselves of everything that militates against their running in the Christian course, so that they may strive lawfully and be crowned at the end of the race, and be recognized as those who have entered the race lawfully, and have a right to the tree of life and to enter through the gates into the city. All organizations, of whatever nature they may be, have always prescribed some rules and regulations by which those who have part in the benefits are initiated and become a part of the body corporate.

The body of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, known as the church, is no exception to this rule. He as the great Master, has prescribed rules and regulations, by which we, if we expect to run this race and enjoy the blessings belonging to this body, must comply in order that we may run lawfully and be crowned at the end of the race.

Then in what condition do we find ourselves, and how are we to pass through the gate by which we enter upon the race course?

There is a door, a gate by which we enter upon this course as well as all other race courses. It is not free to every one to run over this course, so to speak, and be crowned at the end of the race unless he strives lawfully, unless he complies with the rules and regulations; because we read that in the great day of crowning, "The books shall be opened and another book shall be opened, which is the Lamb's book of life," and those books shall be referred to in order to know who are those that strive lawfully; who are entitled lawfully to receive the prize which is promised to those who run with patience the race which is set before them.

We are conceded to be sinners both by nature and by practice. It is said, "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." Eternal life being the great gift of God which lies at the end of this race, the great promise to all those who will obey the gospel of Jesus Christ, and whereas as we have already quoted, it is by strict obedience to the word of eternal truth, that God has given, that Christ has given, by which the Christian may be sanctified, may be set free, free from the dominion of sin and from the power and thralldom thereof.

In our natural condition we are in a state of unrest; but Jesus came that we might have rest. He says, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." And it is said in another place, "Therefore there remaineth a rest for the people of God."

This rest then is at the end of the race, not at the beginning, but at the end.

Now this does not imply that we are to go to any particular individual and by simply saying the word we are to have rest; but it is by obedience to the requisitions of the gospel of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ by which we are to have rest.

The nation of Israelites when promised a land of rest were obliged to pass through certain forms, certain ceremonies so to speak, to pass from the land of Egypt through the wilderness to the promised land. They had to undergo certain forms and obey certain modes of procedure.

In the same way those that would enter into the rest that Christ has prepared for those who love him and obey him, they must on the same principle render obedience to the truth as it is in Jesus Christ. And not only to a part of the truth; for "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God."

As Latter Day Saints we are all well acquainted with the conditions that are laid down in the word of truth, by which this sanctification is achieved, at least this preliminary sanctification by which we set ourselves apart to an entrance upon the Christian race; and afterwards I understand, that as fast as the will of God is made known to us, as fast as we are ready to run in the way of his commandments, this pledge which we have made binds us to fulfill that will with all the powers that we have both of body and mind. To render full obedience to the commands of Christ.

We read that Jesus came preaching the gospel of the kingdom, saying, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." We read that those who repented and were baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of their sins, were thus made free from the dominion of sin. As Paul puts it, "They were sanctified and cleansed by the washing of water by the word." Then after they were sanctified and cleansed through God's ordinance, and set apart to serve him, they received the ordinance by which the means of communication might be opened, that they might learn his will.

The laying on of hands was instituted that God's Holy Spirit might be given, that communication might be had between the servant and the Master, the servant and his Lord, that we might know his will, that thus we might from day to day, as his will was made known to us, sanctify ourselves by obedience to that truth, the whole truth of God, to all his commands, and to all his law concerning us.

There are commandments that are common to all mankind, so to speak. Thus the preliminary requirements of the gospel are common to all mankind, to all those who would serve the Lord Jesus Christ as their Lord and Master.

We have past these, and as each one of us has some particular work to do, for we are not called into the vineyard of the Lord to be idlers there, it is necessary that we have a means by which we can hold communication with our Master, that we may from day to day and from hour to hour learn his will concerning what he would have us to do.

The great question with those who desire to serve the Lord Jesus Christ as their Lord and Master is, What shall we do? How shall that question be answered to our satisfaction, to the satisfaction of any person, if there is no means of communication between the Lord and Master and his servants? In other words, if there is no means of communication the service of the Master would be all a matter of conjecture, mere guess-work. But our Lord and Master was not unmindful of this fact, and therefore he has promised the Holy Spirit to those who are willing to obey him and keep his commandments, that they might have this spirit that should guide them into all truth, and by obedience to which they might sanctify themselves fully to the service of Christ and comply with his rules and requirements, that they might have a reward at the end of the race.

If this means of communication is closed to the world, how are we to serve our Lord and Master, if we do not know his will? Where are we to go to ascertain that will? If each one of us has a special work to do, it will not do to refer to the communications given to Paul and to Peter and to John, or to any body else, unless we are called, and know that we are called to do the very same work that they did; and this is impossible, because the circumstances under which they labored and acted for Christ have past away with them, and we find ourselves in a different age of the world, surrounded by different circumstances, and required to take part in new scenes, and on a new stage of action.

What are we to do then if there is no means of communication between ourselves and our Master? We are like a ship on the ocean, driven to and fro, without a rudder to guide her, left to be the sport of the winds and the waves so to speak, having no helm to guide her.

But if we receive this means of communication that God has provided for in the gospel of his Son, then we may know of a surety whether we are in the service of Christ or not, and whether or not that which we render is acceptable to him. For if we render full obedience to the precepts which he has given to us from day to day and from hour to hour, God will by the power of his spirit make the path of duty plain to us by vision, by revelation, or by dream. Simply by watching his actions in the works of his providence, as daily placed before us in our daily walk and conduct, as we are desirous of serving him and are looking for the straight and narrow way in which to serve him, we may discern by the light of his Holy Spirit the way in which to serve him. I understand when this is given unto us in plainness, it is as good a revelation as we need, if we wish to serve our Lord and Master, if we wish to do so with full purpose of heart. This then is one reason why I believe that a means of communication is necessary. That the church must be deficient in the service of God, must work at a great disadvantage, at a terrible disadvantage, if this means is closed up, this means by which the members of the church may not only know as a body, but each individual know what the will of the Master is concerning him.

My brother, my sister, is this means of communication open to you to-night? Is it clear to you to-night that you are enjoying the Spirit of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, the Spirit of the Master, by which his will is intelligible to you, so that you may be able to feel satisfied that your feet are in the way of life, that your feet are in the way which leads toward the prize which is set before us, that it may be said to us in the day of final reckoning, "Well done, good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Brethren, I do not feel to lengthen my remarks as the time is far spent; but it is my desire for myself and for all my brethren, that we may sanctify ourselves more fully to the service of Christ, and if his blessings do not follow us as we would expect they would, let us see to it where the trouble is; whether we have been serving Christ as fully as we pledged ourselves to do, when in the waters of baptism we first sanctified ourselves to the service of Christ, being washed from our connection with the world and its service, and set apart to do the will of God and his Christ, to be servants in deed and in truth. May God bless us, is my prayer for Christ's sake, amen.

Reported for the HERALD.

NOT BORN IN SIN.

DEAR HERALD:—I have read Bro. Hiram Robinson's article, "Born Again," in Herald of February 3d, wherein he quotes the statement of David, found in Psalms 51:5: "Behold, I was shapen in iniquity; and in sin did my mother conceive me."

The misunderstanding of this scripture has brought about a conception of God and humanity, that is humiliating in the extreme, both to man and his Creator, that I think no other verse in the scripture has attained to. It is the bulwark of the doctrine of total depravity, so universally believed in by the self-styled Orthodox Churches. It has disgraced the honor of the pure mothers of our race; it has made humanity to think less nobly of one of the holiest of sacraments; has degraded the Creator; and with Bro. Robinson I believe would demand a depraved Creator. We will analyze this wonderful statement. "In sin did my mother conceive me." What is sin? "Sin is the transgression of the law."—1 John 3:4. Did David's mother conceive him in sin? If so she transgressed some law. What law? Genesis 2:24; Matt. 19:5; Mark 10:7, 8; 1 Cor. 6:16; Eph. 5:31.

"For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife, and they twain shall be one flesh." "This is the Lord's doings, and it is marvelous in our eyes." "That which God has joined together," &c. For the perpetuity of the race, the law of marriage was instituted. It was a royal law. One man for one woman, and one woman for one man. A departure from this royal law would be a transgression of the law, sin. Why royal? Because God, the king of kings and Lord of lords, was its author. Jesus endorsed it; Paul, as one born out of due time, taught it; and Joseph Smith confirmed it to the Saints in latter days; while Jacob, in Book of Mormon, commanded obedience to it in his day. A departure from it was not only a sin, but a crime. Even John Taylor, fallen as he is, confirmed the testimony of Jacob in the Book of Mormon, (in 1850), and called the charge of polygamy and fornication, a crime.

Now, from the foregoing, if David was conceived in sin, he must have been conceived through the transgression of the marriage law; therefore born in polygamy, or concubinage.

Let us see why such a statement was made by the Psalmist. He is visited by the prophet Nathan. The story of the little ewe lamb is told to David. David's anger is aroused. "The man that did that shall die," he exclaims. The trap was skillfully set; he has stepped squarely upon it, and the spring is closed with, "Thou art the man." You had Saul's wives, and all that your appetite desired. You put poor Uriah in the battle's front; you have slain the man; you have taken his wife, in transgression of the law, "The king shall not multiply wives."—Deut. 17:14-20. Twice one is two. This is multiplication; and for the express purpose that "his heart be not turned away." David finds no way to retreat; he stands before the prophet of God a condemned criminal. Then hear his whimpering excuse: "Don't condemn me for my lustful desires. I received them, or inherited them from my mother. She conceived me in sin. I was brought into existence under like circumstances, a transgression of the marriage contract." Consequently David was illegitimate. A correct understanding of the true position of things removes many of the mists and fogs of the past.

If David was born in sin, I was not. My father and mother were God-given husband and wife. If Solomon was born in sin, my children were not, for I and my partner in life are God-given husband and wife. The law of our being has been obeyed, and our children are conceived and born pure as an angel; for an angel can do no more than purely obey the law of his being. God has designed the marriage relation, that the earth might answer the end of its creation.

Polygamy, concubinage, is the transgression of that law; hence the conclusion to the matter is, that those who are born in polygamy, are born in sin, or conceived in sin rather. All those born in lawful wedlock, monogamy, are born and conceived pure as an angel; hence, of such are the kingdom of heaven. Christ atoned for original guilt; hence the sin of the parents can not be answered upon the head of the child; but man must answer for his own transgression. As the child grows up, sin conceives in its heart, it inheriting the proclivities of the parents. Hence David's whimpering excuse. O, Utah! how thy follies and sin become manifest.

TO THE SISTERS OF THE LAMONI BRANCH.

I HAVE been thinking for some time about writing a few words upon a subject we all ought to be interested in. That is the financial condition of our branch. We frequently hear our presiding officers in the stand, call for means to help forward the work. It does seem to me that the sisters might help a little. Are we not interested? Have we not the work at heart? If we make no sacrifice can we expect any blessings? Then let us respond to the call with willing hands. The most of us are poor, but pence makes shillings, and shillings make dollars. Suppose there are one hundred and fifty sisters, young and old in this branch. A nickel a piece would count $7.50, and ten cents each would be $15.

I believe in having order in all things. Now why can not we give a certain sum monthly, commencing with the year. I can do so little I have hesitated about saying anything, but the "widow's mite" was accepted, and why should I withhold, even though I give but little. I suppose we might give our branch treasurer a paper with our names and the amount each one would pay; then he could give us credit each month as it was paid. I will give ten cents a month. Who will help? May be the brethren will take pattern, and do likewise.

A SISTER.

LETTER FROM ELDER J. D. PEGG.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE SAINTS' HERALD, LAMONI, IOWA.

Kind Sir:—My attention has been called to an article in your paper, of late date, from the pen of S. W. Powell, of Lucas, Iowa, with the request that I offer a correction, and the confident statement that you would have liberality to extend space to me for that purpose.

The writer states that our success in convincing the people of Lucas that our view of the Sabbath question was correct, caused us to be demonstrative, and willing to meet any one in discussion on these questions; but when Elder Short challenged us to discuss with him, we refused, and his challenge had a quieting effect upon us.

Now, the facts in the case are, that when Elder Short came the first time, and challenged us, we had but just given a few discourses on the Sabbath question, and so far as I know, there were none who had decided to adopt the observance of the "Seventh Day" Sabbath. So that the cause of our alleged boldness had not yet appeared when Elder Short challenged us. And when he did we did not refuse, but stated that after we were through our course of meetings, if the people there wished to hear a debate on the points wherein we might differ, we would accommodate them; but that we were not favorable to discussions as they are often conducted. To all of which Elder Short consented. Shortly afterward Elder Short went to attend Conference, and some of his brethren came to me, and stated that they had a high regard for Elder Short, but that he and I were so differently organized, that they would prefer some other minister in this special case; not but what Elder Short could ably represent his cause, but for the above reason alone. After Elder Short returned, he again renewed the request that we enter at once upon a discussion of the Sabbath question, he taking the opportunity to preach on the subject; and as a closing argument, stated that the Latter Day Saint Church had received special revelation that the first day of the week was the day to be observed. After hearing the above, we feared that the Latter Day Saints were not in a condition to listen, without prejudice, to any Bible argument that might be offered, and as the Christian people had asked us to meet a man whom they had selected, who held substantially the same view as the Saints, we felt predisposed to accept their invitation. However, we arranged a proposition with Elder Short, and we agreed to submit to a vote of my congregation; and if they said by a majority vote that they wished us to commence immediately, and canvass our views together, we would commence the next night. That evening we stated, as nearly as we could, to our congregation, the substance of the conversation we had had upon the subject, and called for a rising vote, which stood two for and the mass of the congregation against the discussion. The Christian minister, who was at once notified, happened at that time to be prostrated with rheumatism, and could not come at the time; but I am quite certain would have been perfectly willing to have accommodated his brethren if he had been able.

About this time we closed our meeting; but not without being accused of being afraid to risk our views before an intelligent opponent. At the close, however, we stated again that we had no desire to debate with any one, and would rather avoid it; but if the people still wished a discussion, to have a man ready in three or four weeks from that time, when we would have time to accommodate them. At which time Elder Gillen was secured, and we had a pleasant discussion, lasting five evenings.

As to the result of the discussion we were not disappointed, knowing that some would not be able to see any argument on one side, and some equally blind on the other. We are willing to let time and eternity tell who is right.

And now, Mr. Editor, if your readers would enjoy reading a discussion, and you can give space for one, I will affirm the same question:—"The Seventh Day Sabbath enjoined in the fourth commandment of the decalogue, was and is binding on all men," and let Elder Gillen, or any one who has candor and ability, deny, and your readers can all have the benefit of the information thus derived:

Let me remark in closing, that I entertain kindly feelings toward Elder Gillen, and the branch at Lucas, and will say for them, that they have shown many marks of Christian charity and courtesy to others, that commend them to the world; and I would be the last person to wish them ill.

I remain as ever, yours respectfully,

J. D. PEGG.

MARSHALLTOWN, IOWA, (Box 1549), Feb. 7th, 1883.

A DEFENSE, AND AN INCIDENT.

Bro. Joseph:—I am surprised to find in reading my Herald for Jan. 27th, 1883, the step that the Pioneer Sabbath School has taken against the continued pieces in Zion's Hope. I have always understood that most of the continued pieces inserted were written by a sister in the Church (Perla Wild), containing facts, and truths, &c., from observation in life. According to the letters of the little buds, who have read "Maplewood Manor," "Sensible Girl," "Woodman and his Dog," they seem pleased, and instructed thereby. And how many of our fathers and mothers can inform us of the good lessons founded in the Dainsbury House, Susan Gray, Dairyman's Daughter, Bunyan's Pilgrim's Progress, Uncle Tom's Cabin, and The Shepherd's Daughter, of Salsbury Plain; who could look up to heaven, and thank God for giving them so much salt to their potatoes, while a great many had none. Let us not be ungrateful for what we enjoy; but let us be thankful for a Sabbath School paper, second to none, while hundreds of Sabbath School papers do not contain as much salt as ours. "Ye are the salt of the earth; but if the salt have lost its savor, wherewith shall it be salted?"—Matt. 5:13. Read also the 22d chapter of Matt., 8, 9, 10, 11, and 12th verses; Ephesians 4:5-13.

I did not hear of any one saying that there is a perfect Sabbath School paper. I hope and trust we may all learn wisdom from St. Paul, who told the Saints that strong meat was the proper food for men and women, and milk was the proper food for babes.

Upwards of ten years ago I paid the Old Bay State my maiden visit. After fulfilling and obeying the commandments, and working in the mills a few years, and communing with the Saints, the time of my departure was at hand. Bidding the Saints at Fall River good bye, I proceeded to the boat, accompanied by Bro. William Marsland. Just before parting on the boat he handed me a Sabbath School paper in its infancy, entitled "Zion's Hope," with a request that I should contribute to its pages. Why he should ask me at that time I did not know, but in an instant the heavenly visitant, (Holy Spirit), made its influence felt, and by its power I informed him, As long as I live I will. Years of trials, within and without, temptations, etc., interspersed with love, joy and peace, adversity, and prosperity, mingled with abundant testimonies of the latter day work, have passed away since then. But thanks be to God, "Zion's Hope" lives. Out of a family of thirteen, I am the only one the world delights to call a deluded Mormon; and since Jay Cooke failed in New York, and the depression of trade has been heralded throughout the length and breadth of the land, I have never wanted for a meal's victuals, except it has been my own fault; though I have been discharged on several occasions for my belief and in holding up for what I knew to be just and true, by manufacturers, who would rob God, and the poor of a dollar, and give fourteen hundred dollars for three cows.

I have a brother in Danville, Pennsylvania, who is a Baptist minister. When he took charge of a church, he wrote to me, saying that as far as man was concerned, he was ordained. Why did he not say as far as God's word was concerned, He was ordained? I thanked him, and thought he was honest.

Brothers and sisters, I reveal these truths not to boast, I have nothing to boast of only my weakness. Let us pray for "one another," and help to strengthen those who are in authority. Who contribute to and take our church papers?

Yours,

WILLIAM STREET.

MEDITATIONS.

I have been entertained with the promise given by our Savior, that all who learn (imitate his example) of him to be meek and humble "shall find rest to their souls. This coupled with another, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth," and with one in the 37th Psalm, "The meek shall inherit the earth, and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace," seems to be sufficient to encourage every believer in Christ and sacred writ, to live peaceably with all, forgiving, and not be puffed up. The promise to all such is, they shall find rest to their souls, on the earth, when every man shall be a brother and a friend, build and inhabit, plant and eat, "sit under their own vine and fig tree," long enjoy the work of their own hands, when the spirit of intelligence and love shall be poured out from God on all, "nothing to hurt, destroy, or make afraid."

These promises to my mind are the best the Lord has given in this or any other age of the world. And we might ask, Who is there that so believes, that is not going to work for such big pay? And where can we find one but has some discomforture, through ailment, loss or disappointment, during the few years of this probation? And if one should be so fortunate, favored, or successful in his undertakings, that life would almost be as one day of happiness, would it pay for such a one to indulge in idleness, and thus lose a thousand years of solid comfort and undisturbed peace, when by being willing to work for it now, by practicing every day to live as meek and lowly as he is able, he would earn such a great reward as wages for such labor of love? Then it seems that any sacrifice would be small, any burden light, any toil easy, temptation weak, and the longest life of misery and woe would be short, in comparison with the pay for the work; viz: a thousand years of happiness on the earth.

INFERIOR.

ELECTRICITY IN THE PRESS-ROOM.

WE looked into the press-room of one of Boston's large printing establishments this week. The foreman was furious and the proprietor sorrowful. Frictional electricity in the printed sheets of paper as they left the presses was the immediate cause of their trouble. It is an interesting and not uncommon phenomenon, and is not easily explained nor easily controlled. It has puzzled Profs. Bell and Wadman and the best electricians we have about here. The packing upon the press cylinder seems to act as an inductor, and the paper leaves the press thoroughly electrified. We watched a press running off 1,700 per hour. Suddenly the printed sheet clung about the cylinder as though pasted upon it, and had to be torn off in strips. Again, we lifted a few freshly printed leaves, and they ripped and cracked like the stitches of an old coat. Then we saw a lot of card-board being printed. The sheets stuck together as solid as a brick, and could not be separated until the electricity had partly passed off. A piece of printer's brass rule placed in this pile of cardboard with an end projecting, threw off sparks when approached within an inch by another piece of rule. Two sheets sucked together when held fourteen inches apart. Wet rags placed around the delivery-table and led into a bucket of water charged the water with electricity in forty minutes so that a positive shock was felt upon a hand being immersed in the pail. Electrical currents were felt in the hands and arms upon handling a pile of paper eight minutes after being printed. These are only a few of many curious experiences. The bother to the printer is a considerable one. It entails inconvenience and a serious loss. Valuable work is frequently spoiled by the electricity packing the leaves so closely as to offset the fresh ink. Then the presses have to be slow-speeded, with frequent stoppages. Nothing so demoralizes the press-room as this mystery of frictional electricity when under full headway. The theories for controlling it don't seem to work, when applied, worth a cent.

Boston Correspondent to "Paper Trade World."

Electrical phenomena of the character above described, have been experienced many times by the printers in the Herald Office. The sheets of paper become so charged that they adhere to the cylinder of the press, and are when in this condition, a source of great vexation and annoyance. The printers inform us that at times there is so much electricity present, that in lifting a pile of the paper used upon the press, it produces so violent a shock as to almost cause the person to release his hold. The adherence of one sheet of coarse pencil paper to another, to such an extent that several may be partially, or at times wholly lifted by taking hold of but one, is a phenomenon with which those in the editorial room are perfectly familiar. The interesting question is, Whence comes this electricity? Who will answer?

WATCH AND PRAY.

"WATCH and pray, that ye enter not into temptation."—Matt. 14:38.

Thus spake our Lord and Master on a certain occasion, to Simon Peter. The words were uttered in the garden of Gethsemane, to which place Jesus and his disciples had just come from the Mount of Olives.

After telling his disciples to seat themselves, he took Peter, James and John, and began to be greatly amazed and sorely troubled. And he told them that his soul was exceedingly sorrowful, even unto death, and to abide there and watch. Then he went a little further on, and fell on the ground, and prayed that if it were possible the hour might pass away from him. After praying he returned to his disciples, and found them sleeping. Addressing Peter he said, "Simon, sleepest thou?" Then he commanded him to watch and pray, that he might not enter into temptation. The Master seemed to have been grieved because he found his disciples sleeping. And O, do we ever think how it must grieve him, at all times, to see his followers sleeping when they ought to be watching and praying and laboring for the good of his cause? We are commanded to pray without ceasing. And we read of faithful ones of old who wrestled in prayer for hours at a time.

Brethren, do we pray as frequently and as earnestly as we ought? Perhaps many of us pray often enough; but are our prayers mixed with faith? Do we actually believe that we need what we ask for, and that we will receive the blessing? Alas! I fear that often, yea, very often, such is not the case. There is so much formality in the prayers of those who are really God's people. One brother or sister will frequently imitate another in praying, using many of the same expressions. Such persons do not pray in faith. How different were the prayers of Christ and the Apostles of old, from the cold, formal, studied prayers of many ministers of modern Christendom!

In petitioning the throne of grace, we should strive to avoid all formality; but just going to the father in faith we should simply ask him for the things we need, knowing that he is ever willing to give good gifts unto his children. He does not give them stones when they ask for bread. Our heavenly parent knows what things we have need of before we ask him for them; but it is necessary for us to exercise faith, in order to obtain them.

Beloved Saints, it is to be feared that many of our prayers do not get higher than our heads.

Many of us have heard of the old woman who was so unfortunate as to have a mountain in front of her house. One night she prayed that the mountain might be removed, and in the morning when she arose and went to the window, the first words that escaped her were, "Well there's the mountain, just as I expected." We are told to watch and pray for a specific purpose, viz: that we be not led into temptation. And O, in how many ways does Satan seek to tempt the people of God. Let every Saint of God ask himself this question: Is not Satan tempting me in some manner every day,—yea, every hour of my life. Remember brothers and sisters, when you are tempted to do wrong, that you have a friend who is an advocate with the Father, and who is ever willing to plead your cause before the high court of heaven.

A great preacher in England once said to his congregation: "Get you on your knees, brethren, for on your knees you conquer."

Let us remember that if we truly believe on the Son of God, and exercise faith in his name, he has promised to give all things unto us. Said Jesus: "Ask and ye shall receive; seek and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you."

DIED.

ALLEN.—At Sandwich, Illinois, January 27th, 1883, of scarlet fever, Emma Maud, daughter of brother and sister Ira Allen; aged 9 months and 13 days. Funeral services by Elder F. G. Pitt.

COOK.—At the residence of her son-in-law, James W. Temple, on the morning of the 25th of January, 1883, sister Abiel, wife of Giles Cook. She had entered her nintieth year. They were natives of New Hampshire. Was married January 2d, 1821, by Rev. David Sutherland, she being a member of his church, and remained so for several years. They soon after marriage settled in Vermont, where they remained till Elders Orson Pratt and L. E. Johnson came there. Then for the first time she heard the gospel preached in its purity. She soon became a firm believer. At the first opportunity she offered herself for baptism, immediately followed by her husband and some seven others, all connected with the Methodist Church, and among their most substantial members. Soon the number increased to sixteen, all from that society except sister Cook. Then abuse and persecution commenced, but all remained firm. In less than a year, she with family was in Kirtland. She remained a firm believer as long as her rational faculties remained. When the church left Kirtland, she with her family came as far as Illinois, on their way west; but owing to circumstances they stopped by the way. Soon many brethren congregated in the vicinity, among whom she made herself useful. Was esteemed by those acquainted. Some twenty years since her mind became impaired, at times much so. For the last few years she has been very quiet; her bodily health good for one of her age, until a very short time before her death, when she appeared to have taken a slight cold, for the first during the fall or winter. They gave her some mild treatment, after which she rested quietly through the night, but before they were through morning chores, they discovered she had ceased to breathe, and that without a struggle, she went quietly to rest. She leaves a husband passed eighty-four years old, a numerous family of children, grand, and great-grand children.

SONESTINE.—At Blue Rapids, Kansas, January 31st, 1883, of disease caused from chicken-pox, Mahana Alice, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Sonestine, aged 1 year, 3 months and 12 days. Funeral sermon by John Landers, in which he assured them that the child would come forth in the resurrection, and those that would meet it again, would have to obey the gospel.

HULL.—At Onokama, Michigan, January 17th, 1883, Mrs. Abi Hull, aged 63 years, 1 month, and 2 days.

HOLMES.—At Shenandoah, Iowa, February 1st, 1883, of consumption, Joseph H. Holmes, aged 26 years and 11 days. He held to the faith to the last, and testified of his hope to the last.

SORTOR.—At Cambridge, Iowa, February 7th, 1883, of lung fever, William, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Sortor. Funeral services by Elder I. N. White. God blessed the effort.

EMBEZZLEMENT.

LAWRENCE CONOVER, the Secretary and Book-keeper of the Board of Publication, absconded on Monday the 26th ult., robbing the office of funds, amounting to $2,000 and upwards; and no clue has yet been obtained to his whereabouts.

He claimed to be going to Leon, the county seat, to pay the taxes for the office and to purchase a suit of clothes, and none suspected him.

He for the past four years had attended upon his duties strictly and in a most efficient manner. His correct moral deportment won the confidence of nearly all who knew him. Implicit trust was placed in him, not only by the executive officers of the board, but by all who transacted business with him.

The president and business manager were in Washington, D. C., the treasurer in Illinois, and taking advantage of the occasion, the embezzlement and escape were effected. The land is full of such evils, and the usual vigilance and safeguards of business fail to prevent losses by negligence, fraud, and violence.

We feel sorrowful over the moral ruin wrought by and in this man who possessed so many commendable qualities; we feel grieved over the bitterness his perfidy has entailed upon his young wife and two little babes; we regret the losses involved through his heartless villainy, and that the Church and others should have their confidence shaken by the dishonesty of an important Church employee.

The business affairs of the office are moving forward, though rather slowly at present; and our patrons and business friends will please be patient till the broken and disarranged threads can be taken up and adjusted, when all, we trust, will go onward again prosperously.

WE look for Bishop Blakeslee, Pres. of Board of Publication, at an early time.

Treasurer W. H. Curwen came on the 2d inst., and Bro. P. Cadwell on the 3d inst.

Bro. W. W. Blair was called by telegram and came here from Sandwich, Ill., the 1st inst. These are members of the Board of Publication, and will look after its interests and the affairs of the Herald Office until the coming of President Blakeslee.

ORDERS for books, tracts and papers will be filled as soon as possible. Conover's defalcation causes delay and disappointment. Be patient and all will be put in order.

FIVE HUNDRED DOLLARS REWARD will be paid for the apprehension and safe delivery of Lawrence Conover into the custody of the Sheriff of Decatur County, Iowa, at Leon, in said county, on the charge of having embezzled from the Herald Office, at Lamoni, Iowa, February 26th, 1883, moneys and valuables to the amount of $2,000 and upwards.

Said Conover is about forty years old, is near five feet six inches in height, hair dark and smooth, beard full and dark, eyes dark blue or light gray, pleasant address, blinks his eyes when conversing warmly, has marine marks tattooed on right hand—possibly on both, dresses neatly in black.

W. W. BLAIR, in charge.

From the Harlan (Iowa) Herald of February 22d, we clip the following pleasant notice of Bro. Robert M. Elvin:

We received a pleasant call Tuesday from Elder Robert Elvin, of the Latter Day Saints Church. He will preach in the new church here during the week.

Bro. J. Clapp informed us in a recent letter that he has things moving in Moscow, Idaho. That place is to have a free church soon.

REV. H. W. THOMAS has reviewed the last sermon of Mr. R. G. Ingersoll, which we reproduce for the benefit of the Elders, especially. One of the principal ideas once prevalently taught by the Elders of the church was that as all truth emanated from God, so the Elders and people were entitled to examine what claimed* to be truth, and accept whatever proved to be true. "For, said they,

'Truth is truth, where'er 'tis found,
On heathen, or on Christian ground.'

Whatever the influences that may be at work, out in the world among the "wise men and the prudent men," which lead them away from the teaching and traditions of the schools in which they were trained theologically, those who say that they are occupying advanced ground, by reason of the light reflected from on high having led them into the better way, surely ought to be willing to grant them credit for what truth they may have found; and not only give them the credit due to the truth they hold, but admit the men into relationship to truth and bid them, so far, "Good speed." It must be that the Good Spirit working at the bidding of the Master, is abroad in the world, entering and occupying every avenue that opens for the accomplishment of the proposed design; and if so, it is not far away from a fair conclusion to think that this may be one of the means employed to bring men unto the great truth finally.

There ought to be many, very many among men in the world, who are sincere in the worship they are paying to God, as they have learned and know him, and who devoutly read the word; and some of these may be found among the wise and learned, here and there one. When any of these are found by those who say that they have the greater truth, or greater truths, would it not be well to admit that the advanced views they hold are the result of the Spirit's leading, or guidance. It can not detract any thing from the truth that any may hold, to believe it possible that others may have a truth, or truths worth the knowing; and certainly it is not wise to set a limit to the power of God or the Spirit, and say that these can not lead other men than ourselves. Who hath taken him captive that he can not do his own will?

To us it is a most comforting reflection, that in view of the universal reign of the Prince of Peace, to which we all are looking forward, a great preparation will be made; and that in this preparation, not only the lands, hills, valleys, rivers, lakes and seas will receive of the kindness, care and culture of the Spirit to fit them for the existence of the changed Saint; but men of the Gentiles will be ready to aid, help build up. So let these outcroppings of the workings of the Spirit be welcomed.

A HISTORICAL REMINISCENCE.

BRO. EBENEZER ROBINSON called on us Tuesday, the 16th of January; and after narrating some experiences had while the Saints were being driven out from Missouri, and the sickness and privations which followed, said:

"In the month of May, 1839, I got so I could walk from my house to the office, a few rods. One afternoon as I was walking from my house to the office, the Lord spoke to me, and gave me a communication such as I never received the like, neither before nor since. It seemed as though a ball of fire came right down into the top of my head and thence down into my heart. I never experienced such a thing, neither before nor since. And he said for me to tell Joseph and Carlos, that if Joseph would furnish two hundred dollars in money, we would furnish two hundred, and we would get the Book of Mormon stereotyped. And showed me just how to proceed to do it. To go to Cincinnati, and as the plates were being stereotyped hire a press and get the books struck off form by form, so that when the last set of plates was done, the books should be ready for delivery. The books had formerly sold for a dollar and a quarter, which had been the universal price. I was to send circulars to the different branches, that for every hundred dollars they would send us, we would send them one hundred and ten copies of the Book of Mormon, and in that same ratio throughout. God promised that by the time we got the books out we would have money enough to pay for them; at least we would be able to meet the expense in that way. The matter was made so plain that I knew all about it. From that minute I knew just what to do. I went right into the office, and I don't know as I had sat down at all, until Joseph, (your father), stepped into the office; and I said to him, "Bro. Joseph, if you will raise two hundred dollars, Carlos and I will raise two hundred, and we will go to Cincinnati and get the Book of Mormon stereotyped. We will give you the plates for the consideration of the two hundred dollars, and the privilege of printing two thousand copies." He dropped his head and put his hand up to it just like that, (standing on the floor, and showing how it was done), and he says, "Well, I will do it. When will you want it?" "Within two weeks." To this he agreed. Then I says, "That will be the understanding." Carlos says, "Yes;" and it passed off. We went to work to try and hire our part of the money. We found a brother, (I am so forgetful about names, I knew the man well), who loaned us one hundred and twenty-five dollars, at thirty-five per cent interest, incorporated the interest in the note, payable in a year, and all to draw six per cent interest, if not paid when due. We took the money and glad to get it at that rate. I took it home and put it in my trunk. We tried our best to raise the balance of the two hundred, and could not do it. In a few days your father came into the office, and says: "If you get the Book of Mormon stereotyped, you and Carlos will have to do it; for I can not raise the two hundred dollars." I says, "Joseph, give us the right to print four thousand copies, and we will do it." He says, "I will do that." We tried our best to raise more money. We got from that same man, I think it was twenty dollars more, at the same rate, making one hundred and forty-five dollars we got from the same man, at thirty-five per cent interest. That is all the money we could get, and our creditors were pressing upon us, and we began to draw upon that money, a dollar here and a dollar there to pay around, and I told Carlos that would never do, to be paying thirty-five per cent interest on money to pay little dribs of debts with. Finally I says, for it was like fire shut up in my bones: "If you will let me go to Cincinnati with that money, I will get the Book of Mormon stereotyped." But no one believed a word of it. Carlos says one day, "You had better go to Cincinnati and lay in what supplies we need of paper, and so forth." I says: "All right, but I never will come home until the Book of Mormon is stereotyped." "O, pshaw," he says, "that is ridiculous." Says I, "No matter, you will see." He says, "You can not do it." And your Uncle Hyrum thought I could not do it, but your father says, "God bless you."

Your father and I sat down; we took the Palmyra edition and the Kirtland edition, of which latter I helped to set the type, (those were the only two editions that had been printed then), and we compared them, reading the book entirely through, and there is only just one sentence in that book that is not in the other, in what is called the Nauvoo edition, and all the editions since. That is the only one that is not in the Palmyra edition. It is in Nephi's second book I believe. He put a few words there in parenthesis, when he refers to the waters of Judah or the waters of Baptism, he put a few words there in parenthesis. That is the only thing, excepting some little ungrammatical expressions that were altered.

I went to Cincinnati by steamboat, and when I got there I got the paper we wanted and sent it back to Carlos, and had my trunk taken off the boat. Then the devil popped in. He is generally on hands when anything is to be done; that has been my experience. He says, "Now you just turn around and go home, you simple fool, thinking of getting the Book of Mormon stereotyped with no more money than you have." I says, "I never will go back until it is done, you need not be uneasy, you need not trouble me on that score."

I went into one of the stereotype foundries, and it was like a dungeon to me, bless your soul, it seemed as though I could not live in there. I asked him what he would charge to stereotype a book of about five hundred pages, and showed him the size of the pages, but did not show him the book at all. He says so much a thousand M's. I understood that as well as he did. I says, "Is this the only stereotype foundry there is?" He says "No," and directed me to where there was another, belonging to Gleason and Shepherd. I says, "I will go around and see them." I went there and walked in, and I saw a man standing by the desk, and I says, "Is Mr. Gleason in?" The man stepped up, and says, "That is my name." I says, "I have come to get the Book of Mormon stereotyped." Shepherd stepped forward with, "When that book is stereotyped, I am the man to stereotype it." "All right," I says, "here is the book, let us see what you will do it for." I told him I wanted it in new brevier type. He went to the case and set up a line of brevier type, and figured it up, and then he stated, "We will furnish you the plates for five hundred and fifty dollars." "Very well," I says, "I will pay you a hundred dollars in hand, and two hundred and fifty dollars while the work is being done, and the balance three months after it is finished." He says, "All right, I will do it." He sat down, wrote a contract, which we signed; I have that contract still at home. The other man was now Sterns, Gleason had sold out, so it was now Shepherd and Sterns.

I says, "I am a printer, and I want to stay right here, and I will read the proof with you, but you must pay me for it." says, "I will pay you a quarter of a dollar an hour, for all the time you work for me." I remained, and we read all the proof by copy. "Now," I says, "I want to find a book-binder." He took me by the arm, and we went up Main street, and he says, "I will take you to a book-binder." We went to the book-binder's, and I told him I wanted two thousand copies of the Book of Mormon bound, and took the book along to show him about the size. He says, "I will bind them for two hundred and fifty dollars, twelve cents and a half a book, in good leather binding." I says, "Just make out your contract. I will pay you eighty dollars while you are doing the work, so much within so many days, after I could get a certain number of copies, specifying the time of every payment." He wrote out his contract, and he signed it and I signed it, and I have that contract also. "Now," I says, "we have to arrange for the paper." Here was eight hundred dollars already, and only one hundred to go on. We went down to the paper warehouse man, to see him. His name was Shepherd also. He was not in, so we left word for him to call up at the stereotype foundry, and he came the next morning, and I contracted with him for the paper. He was the first man that said anything about security. He said, "You are a stranger here of course, and it is customary to demand in such cases City references." Mr. Shepherd stepped up, and says, "I am Mr. Robinson's backer," and so that was all arranged.

The work of getting out the plates was begun at once, and I engaged my board with Mr. Oliver until they should finish the plates. I only had at this time, after sending the paper home, and paying Mr. Shepherd the one hundred dollars, six and one fourth cents. It passed along several weeks, and I got no word from anybody, and my board bill was due and I had only a sixpence to go on, and the nine hundred dollars debts, and it began to look a little blue. Directly I got a letter from Carlos with a twenty dollar bill in it on an Indiana bank. I paid my board, and directly I began to get orders. There was a brother sent me a draft on New York City for ninety-six dollars. The draft was worth ten or twelve per cent premium, to be paid in books, and I could put it into currency and that would pay my debts there, dollar for dollar. Money came in until I paid Mr. Shepherd his two hundred and fifty dollars before it was due; and eighty dollars to the book binder before he struck a lick at the work. When I got ready for printing, instead of doing press work myself, as I had thought of doing, I hired the books printed on a power press; and as the paper man was not quite ready with his paper, I went and bought paper and paid the money down for it. I paid the whole thing, and Mr. Shepherd got all his money according to contract.

When we got all through and settled up, I bought his type, and machinery for a stereotyping foundry, and took his plate finisher, and started a foundry in Nauvoo that winter. Mr. Shepherd endorsed my note for material, to be paid in February, amounting to four hundred dollars. A year from that time I went back and settled all up with him, and paid him something over a thousand dollars.

When we had settled every thing up fair and square, "Now" says he, "Do you want me to tell you why I did as I did when you came here last year?" It was no way for a business man to do. "I did it, not because of any thing that I saw in you, but because of what I felt in here," (laying his hand upon his heart).

When we got all through reading the proof of the Book of Mormon, I says, "What do you think of it?" "Well" he says, "I will tell you. It is either a true book, or it is the greatest imposition that was ever palmed upon mortals." I says, "Mr. Shepherd, it is a true book." So I know from this experience as well as others that the Book of Mormon is true.

Question by Joseph Smith: Was there at the time of the publication of Howe's "Mormonism Unveiled," any denial of its contents by the Saints at Kirtland?

A. It was denied of course; but whether there was any publication of the denial or not, I do not know."

[The denial in print will be found in the Messenger and Advocate. Ed].

The following is from the Christian Commonwealth, London, England. Are men looking with fear for what is coming upon the earth?

SEVEN ABNORMAL YEARS.

A cycle of storm years. Indeed! Who says so? Science. We shall see. Time will prove. For ourselves we believe that we are suffering from national wickedness. "Waiting for a change of the moon," you say. Ah, sirs, the moon affects us less than our morals. The atmosphere is heavily charged with our national sins—e.g., selfish luxury, intemperance, licent-iousness, blasphemy, the opium traffic, &c. These are the erratic comets which lade the heavens with banks of dark, black clouds. Can any one shew us why the sun should shine upon these conditions? They represent "moral midnight." Surely the charming sunlight ought to be withholden. We believe that in the physical as well as in the moral world, sin and iniquity produce their fruits. If men "sow to the wind, they will reap the whirlwind."

The following from the Harlan Hub, (Iowa), of February 22d, breathes a spirit of freedom and toleration gratifying indeed.

"CONSECRATED TO CHRIST.

DEDICATION OF THE LATTER DAY SAINTS' CHURCH, ON SUNDAY, FEBRUARY 18.

At an early hour on Sunday morning last, the people were seen thronging the streets leading to the new church of the Latter Day Saints, which, previously announced, was to be dedicated on that day. Before the time for beginning the service the seats were packed and no standing room could be secured while many were compelled to forego the pleasure of witnessing the ceremonies being unable to get within the doors.

The exercises began by singing. The choir rendering with fine effect the anthem, "Peace be within thy walls, and prosperity."

Judge Chatburn then read the opening hymn, the first stanza of which is:

"Behold thy temple God of grace,
The home that we have reared for thee;
Regard it as thy resting place,
And fill it with thy majesty."

The singing was followed by the reading of the fifteenth psalm by Elder Joseph Smith and a prayer by J. W. Chatburn, who then read the hymn beginning:

"Lord of Hosts to thee we raise,
Here a house of prayer and praise;
Thou thy people's hearts prepare,
Here to meet for praise and prayer."

After the singing J. W. Chatburn, introduced Elder Joseph Smith who proceeded to preach, without choosing a text, from the chapter read during the opening exercises, a plain practical sermon which was listened to with profound attention from beginning to end. The Elder is a plain, unassuming man, who gains and holds the attention more by his logical reasoning than by his eloquence although his language is simple, pure and precise and his manner of speaking quiet rather than vehement.

If any went to the meeting expecting to hear doctrines discussed, or invectives hurled against other churches they were disappointed, for the speaker showed a spirit of toleration seldom exhibited and never excelled among orthodox ministers of the present time. It would be impossible for us to give a full synopsis of the sermon as space will not permit, but some of the points we have noted as outlining the course of his thoughts. He began by saying: "The instinct to worship is inherent in man," showing that all classes of human beings have some form of worship. "Whatever may be the opinions of men with regard to the creator, His character is positive, fixed, unchangeable, and the individuals who have the best conceptions of Him are nearest right in their worship."

He then proceeded to speak of places of worship and the causes which led to the erection of churches.

"The groves were God's first temples."

"The nature of man from the creation has been to congregate." After the flood the people gathered together and planned to build there the great tower.

There are those outside the fold of christianity who regard us in much the same light as we regard those who have gone before us. After the confounding of the languages, came the differences of doctrines, and this led to the construction of places of worship within and upon which were placed those things that indicated the character of the worshipers, culminating in the great temple of the wise man at Jerusalem. There is in our worship a strange mixture of emotions from that which catches the eye to that which appeals to the fearful side of our nature. The cultivated man may stand beside the Bedouin of the desert, and as the first rays of the morning sun fall upon them from the eastern horizon the native falls upon his knees in devotion, and while the traveller may not join with him in his idolatry he bends his head in silence and respects the worshiper. They may unite in the spirit while in form they widely differ.

In the judgment the test shall be character not creed.

One of the prime objects in building houses of worship is that some particular form of religion may be taught and practiced. You do not wonder that we have gathered together and built a church where the doctrines may be taught which we believe are set forth in the New Testament, and that we have built an altar where incense may be offered to the Almighty which we believe will be acceptable.

Paul taught Timothy that he should abide in the doctrine which he believed, that he might save himself and those who heard him.

Let the doctrine of Christ be taught if it tears the present church from root to branch, from center to circumference. Whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ has not God. When we dedicate these walls to the doctrine of Christ we shall have no cause to fear. They may cause some change in the doctrines of men but they will stand forever. The time will come when we shall be a unit in faith.

May the time go on and the good time come when no position or power on earth shall equal the condition of being a free man in Christ.

The audience was requested to rise and a short impressive prayer of dedication was offered after which the thanks of the church was tendered to all who had contributed toward the building.

A collection was taken to defray the expenses of Elder Smith and to apply on the remaining indebtedness of the church. J. W. Chatburn stated that there was but a small sum remaining unpaid and that would not become due until next fall and further that the reason of applying a part of this to defray the expenses of Joseph Smith was that their ministers receive no salaries and hence their expenses must be met by voluntary contribution.

The church is a neat, plain structure, situated in a pleasant locality and is a monument of the indomitable energy and perseverance of that little band of much maligned and persecuted worshipers, who strong in their faith and earnest in their devotions have shown that they practice the doctrines they preach, and are willing to be regarded as nought by the world for the sake of the hope that is within them of a blessed immortality hereafter, if they worship God according to their belief as taught in the Holy Scriptures."

The Harlan Herald contains a similar kind-worded notice to which we would gladly give attention, had we the space to do so.

Correspondence.

EDENVILLE, IOWA,

February 23d, 1883.

Editor Saints' Herald:—The branch here, is improving. Spirituality and unity are upon the increase. We trust that it shall indeed be an olive branch in which the law of God shall be magnified, and the peace of God abide. Fellowship and social services, of late especially, have truly been "seasons of refreshing from the presence of the Lord," and we have been made to rejoice under the admonitions and promises of the Holy Spirit. Elder J. F. McDowel has of late months, from time to time, labored in our midst. With pleasure we record the fact, that he has rendered splendid service, and is greatly endeared to the Saints. Wherever his lot has been cast in the district, the blessing of God has followed, the saints have been strengthened, and the work has received fresh impetus. In him, the Church has an able representative; the faith a fearless and uncompromising defender. The local brethren have not been idle; but have done some good service. Brn. Nirk and Knox quite recently baptized six persons in Dallas county, at a place where considerable seed had been sown from time to time by the different elders. May the good work go on in triumph over sin and unbelief, until all nations shall bow to the great Nazarene, and "crown him Lord of all."

The liberal management of the Herald is generally approved. The thinkers generally enjoy the exposition of the various shades of thought, knowing that thereby they are enabled to cast off their crude notions and incorrect ideas, and adopt the sound and the true. If our personal theories can not endure close scrutiny and criticism, bigotry and intolerance can not cover their defects; but will only serve to emphasize their weakness. As I have perused splendidly written apologies for illogical vagaries, I could not but feel that,

"A little nonsense, now and then,
Is relished by the wisest men."

And again, as I have read protests and complaints against the views of others, that "wounded birds will flutter."

Yours in behalf of "free speech,"

THOS. E. LLOYD.

SALEM, Arkansas,

February 10th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I am still alive and moving in the duties of my mission. What the result of my labors will be in this region, remains to be seen. I am the first of our Elders in this country, and of course the doctrine is new to the people; but they are not wanting in prejudice, as the enclosed slips will show. The five days given me in the notice expires to-morrow, and as it does not suit my convenience to comply with the request made, I shall be here to see whether the cowardly vagabonds will carry out threats. I would be just as easily killed perhaps as any other man, but they will find that I don't scare worth a cent. I propose to stay and preach and baptize, and perform my whole duty, as far as able, and leave when I get ready, but not before; and so have I informed the pious scoundrels. Prospects are good for additions. I confidently expect quite a number to obey soon. I may, however, be too sanguine, but time will tell. Prospects are quite flattering of getting into a discussion with a Christian minister of reputed heavy calibre. We shall see, that is, if I survive. I have not received the scratch of pen or pencil, since I left St. Louis. My correspondents, like Grandfather's Clock, have stopped short, whether to go again is not yet apparent. I expect to labor in this county, (Fulton, Ark.), and Oregon county, Missouri, till about the 5th of March, then back to Franklin and Crawford counties, Missouri, and reach St. Louis, about the 25th of March. Have not seen a Herald later than the 1st number of the weekly issue. There are ten members of the Church scattered through this section (no officials) most of them from Springerton, Illinois, two from Farmington, Ky., Bro. Clapp's converts. I hope to organize a branch ere I leave, i. e., if I am not kuklaxed. There is a fine large field here in Southern Missouri, and Northern Arkansas, that has been neglected in the way of missionary labor, which I trust the coming conference will consider. By the way, whose territory am I trespassing on here in Arkansas? I hope at least it is not one of those very extraordinarily sensitive ones, who are so particular about geographical lines. I think, however, that my boy, Heman C. Smith, has charge; if so, it is all right, and all I shall get from him will be God speed. The Saints here are all good ones, and have a good reputation among their neighbors. May God bless them. There was great joy among them when I put in an appearance. Kind regards to all Saints.

In bonds,

B. V. SPRINGER.

LIMERICK, Ohio,

February 21st, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith.—By request of the Saints at Cabenson, Doddridge county, West Virginia, I visited them on the 20th of January, and remained there four weeks, held fifteen meetings, had good liberty in presenting the word to fair audiences considering the bad weather; many seemed interested. The good seed had been sown by Elders L. R. Devore, and D. L. Shinn; they have done a good work there. They baptized six at that place; and left others believing and investigating, five of whom I had the pleasure of baptizing, all heads of families. Four of them were members of the Primitive Methodist Church, one of the United Brethren, all good members, and bid fair to be good Saints. I long to see the good work go on. The Cabenson Branch, organized with eleven members, all of them are very anxious to see the good-begun work go on. They are willing to do all they can, that others may be able to see the light, and save themselves by obeying the perfect law. Sister Leeson is rejoicing to think she has not had so many lonely hours for nothing. Her mother and sister, brother-in-law and sister-in-law and father-in-law, have all obeyed the gospel, and are rejoicing in the truth. C. G. Ruley, branch president, R. R. Baker, teacher. The Methodists closed the church against the gospel; notwithstanding this, the good work moves on all the same. Others are believing and investigating. The class leader of that class don't believe in closed doors, but believes the doctrine as taught by the Saints, and says he will soon be with us. He is greatly needed. Let us pray that the good Father may draw him.

Yours in hopes of the prosperity of Zion,

T. J. BEATTY.

MEDOC, Jasper Co., Mo.,

February 18th 1883.

Dear Herald.—The nearest neighbor I have, is an infidel, but he is a good neighbor, and I think an honest man; but he tries to run man back to monkeys. He says he would like to hear some of you Mormons preach, as he never heard them, so I wish some one would come this way and spread the gospel, as I believe there is a good many here that never heard it in its true light. There is a large school-house close to me. The Baptists just closed a four weeks' meeting. One of their preachers said while on the stand, that those signs and miracles were past and gone by. I wished for Bro. Bays about that time. They call me the Mormon. I tell them that I can't help what they call me. So readers of the Herald, you can judge how I am surrounded with trials and troubles and temptations, but may God help me to bear them all. I live about two miles from Sr. Williams, and there are a few Saints at Galesburg about four miles off. They have meetings there once in a while. Dear Saints, remember me in your prayers, hoping that I may hear from you all through the Herald. May God help his people to be faithful.

Your brother in the love of Christ,

PLEASANT GROVE, Neb.,

February 20th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph.—At Wilber there is some prospect of a discussion with the M. E. Church; but they are not willing to have their own organization or doctrines tested. I submitted the following proposition: "Resolved, That the M. E. Church, is a branch of the Church of Christ, and teaches the fulness of the gospel, or plan of salvation;" and got the following reply: "As for your second proposition, I would say I am not the advocate of any church in its organic form; for I do not believe any particular church is perfect in its organization. I advocate the system of morality taught by Christ and his apostles, broad and magnanimous in its principles and sympathy. If I should claim more, I fear the Savior might say to me as he did to the Jews in answer to their claim of being the only true church. 'They shall come from the east, and west, and north, and south, and sit down with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, but the children of the kingdom shall be cast out into outer darkness.' L. L. Tase, pastor M. E. Church, Wilber, Nov. 8th, 1882." To this I replied: "Why, Sir, if you claim to teach no more than this, Bob. Ingersoll and many of the writers of the Boston Investigator, can shake hands and fraternize with you, etc."

I arrived at Fremont on the evening of the 16th just in time to see the last few rounds of a slugging match between the "Heenan" of the Latter Day Saints' Church and the principal or head man of the Adventists in this State, Elder A. J. Cudney, resulting in a glorious victory for the cause of Christ. It was Bro. J. F. Mintun's first debate, and his opponent an old debater. In his last round he wound up with so much force and power (not his own) that the Adventists hung their heads. There were five "bottle holders"—that is, Advent ministers—to aid their chief, manufacturing bullets for him to fire; but Frank had only the Comforter, and the cause is benefitted and the Saints have been much built up; and they needed it badly. The debate was in the Advent Church, and both of the speakers were by the side of a large map of the ten commandments, and an illustrated diagram of the image of Daniel 2d, and the likenesses of the four beasts, etc.; and as they claimed the ten in full force to-day, you should have seen Frank with his pointer, pointing first to the second commandment, "Thou shalt not make any likeness," etc., and then pointing to the likeness on the diagram, and said, "What do you call this?" and he pointed with his lance at the "belly of brass" with such force, that if it had been paper and not canvas, the image would have been impaled. Praise the Lord for the victory.

At the close of the debate, Frank handed them two propositions to debate: Resolved, That the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is the true Church of Jesus Christ, and Resolved, That the Adventist Church is likewise, but they would not come to time. We then came to this place, and have had a good two-days' meeting, and still preaching. Good attendance and attention, and to-morrow we return to Fremont and preach in the Advent Church, and propose to stay by them till they are mad or glad.

It appears to me that the signs of the times indicate a tidal wave of discussion. The power of the truth is forcing recognition in all quarters. God decidedly is endowing his servants with more power when they walk humbly before him.

Another lie nailed to the mast. There are several apostate Mormons in this region of country, and they can not believe that we are going to hold a conference in Kirtland Temple; for they have a Danish Brighamite Hymn Book, and hymn eighty says that the Kirtland Temple was destroyed by wicked men.

Yours in bonds,

CASSIA CREEK, Idaho,

January 22d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph.—My brother and family, two sisters and myself, settled in this valley last September. Have built us homes, and expect to engage in making the desert blossom, &c. Since our arrival we have seen no Latter Day Saint. Should any, contemplating making homes in the west, desire information concerning these parts, we would gladly answer all questions relating thereto, upon which we are informed. We would be glad to have some elder visit us. I have talked some with the people here, and believe success would attend the preaching of the word. This valley has but recently begun settling. Is occupied by both Brighamites and Gentiles. Should an elder make it a point to visit Cassia Creek, by inquiring for Condits, he will be able to find us and receive a hearty welcome, Asking for the prayers of the Saints, that in our isolation we may continue to enjoy the Spirit of God,

I remain your brother in the true gospel,

D. S. CONDIT.

ROLFE JUNCTION,

February 16th, 1883.

Dear Herald.—The winter here has been very cold and stormy, so much so that people could not get from one place to another some of the time. Elders Wedlock and Whiting from Deloit have been here preaching; they spoke three times to the branch, met with them in prayer meeting once. We had a good meeting, all speaking and praying as they felt the Spirit press upon them. The Elders tried to hold a series of meetings in Rolfe, but owing to bad weather and prejudice being so strong, they only spoke a few nights. I think what few did come out to hear, will change their minds in regard to us. They held a week's meeting in Rush Lake Township, about twenty miles north of here, with good success; the people are good, and honest-hearted, willing to accept the truth when they hear it. There are some who I think will be baptized in the Spring.

There has been a good deal of sickness, and a good many deaths with the typhoid fever in our little town of Rolfe. Last Fall I had a serious attack of the fever, took medicine for some time. A few days after I was taken sick the Saints met together and held a season of prayer for my recovery. A short time after they had ceased praying, my fever left me, and I commenced to get better from that time. I feel that God healed me,—not the medicine. One of those that died was Nettie Barker, oldest daughter of Bro. and Sr. Barker, a dear friend and school-mate of mine. She was loved by all who knew her. Just prior to her death she spoke to her mother, looking out of the window at the foot of her bed, saying, "Ma, look there, see that beautiful valley, see those nice things there, if you are all white you can come and get some." I feel that God spoke to Sr. Barker through the lips of that dying girl.

O, dear readers of the Herald, it is my desire that we may all strive to live, so that we may be all white, so that we may enter that beautiful place that this dying girl saw.

I am, as ever, your friend and well wisher in the one faith,

AMY L. REED.

NORTH BROOKSVILLE, Me.,

February 16th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—It would rejoice my heart to meet with the Saints often, but poor health and distance prevent me from meeting with the members of my own branch, which is the Brook's Harbor Branch, oftener than once or twice a year. I am alone here, and have been eleven years. After becoming acquainted, found but little opposition; probably it is because I've been negligent in advancing the most prominent points of our doctrine. Have been impressed to do so only in a few instances. We have had some very interesting prayer meetings at our house. Though few in numbers, they were attended by as much of the Spirit as is manifested outside of Saint's meetings. I take great pleasure in the Herald. Other papers are good and instructive, but they do not have so much real food. Have never been able to take it, but get a few occasionally from the sisters. Am glad it is a weekly; for it sheds forth to the world much instruction and light that can be found nowhere else. A neighbor remarked to me: "The Herald is a very deep paper." That is my mind exactly, and besides, it is so plain that, "A way-faring man, though a fool, need not err therein."

My husband and I have made the Bible a daily study for four years; during that time we have read it through nearly four times. We have received much light by so doing. We read it because we love it, and love it because we read it, as dear Bro. Crossett remarked in his letter from China. We ask God to give us understanding, considering him to be the Teacher of his own work; yet there are many subjects which we do not understand clearly, such as the following: Was Jephtha's daughter sacrificed on the altar, or was she consecrated to the service of the Lord? When the foundations of the earth were laid the morning stars sang together, and all the Sons of God shouted for joy. I want to know if those sons were spirits that had not been clothed in the flesh, or if they were the spirits of just men from some other planet. I want to know if the ark of the covenant, and its precious contents were destroyed by men, or if it was caught up from the earth. I understand that the disciples tarried seven days at Jerusalem, for the gift of the Holy Ghost. The Passover was eaten by Christ and his disciples the night before the crucifixion. Three days from that was the resurrection, and forty days later was the ascension, which taken from fifty days, up to the Pentecost leaves seven. The opinion of many denominations, and even the almanac, is that they tarried ten days. Will some one tell me which is right? I hope some one will tell me through the columns of the Herald.

Desire the prayers of the Saints, that I may be able to meet all the afflictions that my Father suffers to come upon me.

Your sister in Christ,

ALMIRA M. SNOW.

OAKDALE, Nebraska,

February 20th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—Precious harbinger of light and joy, bearing the glad tidings of heaven's truth and happiness not to be expressed! Whence cometh the germ of your existence? Ah, 'tis a ray of light from the presence of the infinite, a token of the love and parental watch-care of the Father above,—a material instrument, chosen in wisdom for the carrying on of the latter day work. I see you going at rapid speed—thanks to the author and fulfiller of Nahum's prediction, to the north, south, east and west. As if by magic you seem to know your destination. Happy and thankful hearts are waiting, anxious to be fed on spiritual food. Here is a hamlet where the sound of the primitive and "everlasting" gospel never was heard, but lo, kind providence has directed or permitted honest and faithful ones to wander there. These sigh for the companionship of congenial spirits, of hearts that beat in unison with their own, of intelligences touched with the same sacred fire. Hundreds of leagues may intervene, the mighty expanse of ocean perchance may separate, but kindred spirits are made glad, hopeful, and are elevated morally and intellectually, by the same powers of light and love.

Christianity versus infidelity. Place them side by side as something to be desired by hungering, thirsting, mortal man. Can a sane man, true to the emotions of his better nature, hesitate in deciding which to choose? Place them upon equal footing, is not the former as likely to prove true as the latter? Do you tell me the scientific mind is necessarily infidel? That imperial personage, Jesus Christ, opposed no scientific truth, nor was he guilty of scientific mistakes, so common in the experience of modern discovery. We aver that if the gospel does not prove itself true, it is because not understood or exemplified. Come ye scientific investigators, prove the promise of Him who said, "Whosoever will follow me, shall not abide in darkness, but shall have the light of life!" Your discoveries have been good, your development in general knowledge is commendable; but you have not revealed to fellow-man his origin nor final destiny. What hope have you inspired that reaches beyond the grave? What incentive have you given to actuate men and women to a higher plane of moral activity and development? What possible good have you that is not embodied in the religion of Jesus Christ? What moral or scientific truth have you evolved that is opposed to the practice or teaching of the Christian's Law Giver? Give us something better, else we pray you, do not seek to destroy our faith and hope in the gospel that guarantees the power of an endless life through him who hath risen from the dead,

On my way home from the South, I was privileged to stop in Council Bluffs, meeting with the Saints twice on Sunday, and truly the seal of a restored gospel was there, enriching our souls with love and heavenly joy. Call me what you will; let my lot be cast where it may, so long as my profession and practice secure to myself and others such happy results, I am content with life, and hopeful of its final issues. I stayed with Bro. Andrew Hall, one of the tried and the true. I felt to love all the Saints there, and hope to be remembered by them. Their expressions of appreciation, and desire for my temporal welfare, I have not forgotten.

At Mondamin, preached once in the new Congregational Church, to fair sized audience, notwithstanding cold weather. By the way, Bro. Stuart, Jensen, and others are trying to do something for the work there in the distribution of tracts, sale of books, &c. This being my former home, and the residence of many dear friends and relatives, although a cross at first, it became a pleasure to talk to them of gospel grace and power. Since, Bro. Derry has labored there with good success we are informed.

On the 3d of February, I arrived at my home at Clear Water, Nebraska, after fifteen months absence. Found the dear ones well and happy. Several having moved from Iowa, we have a nice branch now, numerically, and, as we met together in the sod mansion of a friendly neighbor on last Sunday, the blessed spirit of life and peace was graciously bestowed, to the joy and satisfaction of our souls. On the Sabbath previous, we tried to talk, but discovering that our efforts were not being stamped with that degree of the Spirit's impress needful to edification, we gave place to others. Bro. Levi Gamet gave us spiritual food, and we trust that good was done. The contemplated church has a subscription of $226. $300. it is thought will complete it. The enterprise seems to meet the approval of many out of the church, and out of the faith so far as I know, who have contributed liberally. Several of the prominent men of Clear Water, Neligh and Oakdale, have "given us a lift." If any of our brethren of the district or others, wish to help us with their might, or mite, any amount will be gladly received. Remit to James Smith, or Aaron Hollenbeck, Clear Water, Antelope county, Nebraska.

I desire to place my name on file as one willing to labor for the cause of Christ in the interest of humanity. If, in the past, I have erred, it was unintentional; was ever offense given to any, I crave forgiveness, and permit me once more to record that, whatever be my faults, I love the cause of Christ. Though oftentimes my soul is burdened with evil, and I feel almost overwhelmed with the consciousness of my own unworthiness, yet looking upward from out this wilderness of darkness, a bright ray of light ever shines overhead—the beacon light of redeeming love.

"When dark clouds of trouble hang o'er us,
And threaten our peace to destroy;
There is hope, smiling brightly before us,
And we know that deliverance is nigh."

Now, I feel at peace with God, myself, and all the world. I look out upon the future with sweet hope, and blessed assurance. Marching events betoken the coming of "the glorious day so long foretold." Science, with its unceasing research, investigation, calculation, and demonstration of plain facts; and the gospel of Jesus Christ, with its light, love, wisdom and power, move in grand harmony, for the final revelation of the infinite God,—Creator, and upholder of the universe.

May glory rest upon the Israel of God, through Jesus our Redeemer, blessed forever more.

Amen.

In the bonds of peace, I remain yours,

GEO. S. HYDE.

STEWARTSVILLE, Mo.,

February 22d, 1883.

Dear Brother Joseph:—Our Branch is still increasing, and the Lord adds to our number. I baptized one last Sunday night, a young man about thirty years of age, came last spring from Germany to this country. There are others still investigating, and I think before long will unite with the church. The good spirit of our Lord has been with us so far, for which we feel to praise his holy name. We are still trying to hold on to the rod of iron, in order to make our Election sure; we have often trials to pass through but the Lord gives strength to overcome, if we live humbly before him. I have not labored any outside of the Branch since last fall. I labored a while in Iowa, Baptized four there amongst the Germans. Prospect is good there. I had several calls from other places amongst different German settlements, but was not able to go. I have rented my place out, and built me a house in Stewartsville, on two lots I bought there. I intend to move next week, in order to be more at liberty, so that I can spend more of my time in preaching the gospel.

It sometimes fills my heart with sorrow to think and see that thousands of my people are crossing the ocean, and have not the privilege to hear the glad tidings that bring peace and comfort to our souls. My prayer is that the Lord may open the way, and raise up laborers to labor in his vineyard; for the field is white already to harvest, and he who will thrust in his sickle with his might, and reap while the day lasts, the same will treasure up for his soul everlasting salvation in the kingdom of God. My desire is to live humbly and faithfully, to fight the good fight, and to work while the day lasts. To labor for the crown that is laid up for the righteous, and when my precious redeemer will come, that I then may be found worthy to hear the welcome voice, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

Yours in Christ,

TEMME T. HINDERKS.

Bro. Joseph:—I am sick and need the prayers of my brethren and sisters. I take this method to let my wants be known. About seventeen years ago I was very badly crushed under a wagon, and five doctors, with all that saw me but a few Saints, said that I must die. But the Lord had willed it otherwise, and under the hands of Brn. A. H. Smith, William Anderson, A. B. Johns, E. C. Brand, and others; also the prayers of the Saints, and a covenant that I would go and preach the gospel, I was raised up, and a promise was given that I should be able to walk with a cane, and preach, which has been literally fulfilled on the Lord's side, and as long as I kept my covenant I was able to walk with a cane, and preach, which many of my brethren and sisters can testify to. But there came a time and condition of things that seemed to justify me in turning my attention to temporal affairs. I was prospered and made money very fast; but my health began to fail, and my faith in the ordinances suffered loss, and instead of going to the Lord through the Elders and the prayers of faith, I went to the doctors and received nothing for my money, and have now returned to the Lord, and renewed my covenant, that if he will spare my life, I will spend the balance in the ministry to the best of my ability, and by the grace and strength he will give me. Now I ask all my brethren and sisters, when they read this, to go before the Lord in secret prayer and ask him in faith to spare brother A. Haws, that he may go forth and preach the gospel and be an instrument in the hands of the Lord in bringing many to a knowledge of the truth. Now if I know my own heart, this is my great desire, and has been from the time I first covenanted so to do. I want to live to help to accomplish the great work of the dispensation of the fulness of times.

Your brother in gospel bonds, with love to all,
A. HAWS.

OPOLIS, Crawford Co., Kansas,

Dear Herald:—O, the thoughts that flooded my mind whilst meditating after reading the good letters of Brn. Charles Derry, J. F. Mintun, F. P. Scarcliff, J. F. Burton and others. I am a poor, lonely, cast off worm of the dust, and yet I have some of the finer qualities and feelings in common with all men; and O, how it grieves me to see so much sacrifice on the part of some, and so much neglect on the part of others. God only knows my heart. I feel determined to preach the gospel, the Lord willing, or give ten cents of every dollar he gives me strength to earn, especially so long as I am alone, or have no other than my mother to help. I find the poor making excuses because of so close attention to their hard labor, whilst the better able to spend their evenings and leisure moments in musing, etc., and where comes in the sacrifice and labor to or for the Lord, and where is the pay coming from, the reward of eternal life, if we are rewarded according to our works, if we do no works? What may we expect in righteousness? As the end is nearing, Summer will soon be past, harvest ended, and our souls not saved. The thought makes me to fear, lest many of us are weighed and found wanting. I am not here to find fault, but is it not a fact that where there are large or small branches, and no meetings, or very few, and scarcity of attendance, that there is something wrong? Is it not a fact that neglect to read the sacred scriptures, establish the family altar, and at each meal give thanks, will be the means of producing this wrong?

AN OBSERVER.

HARLAN, Iowa,

February 20th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—I came here yesterday, and last evening was permitted to listen to a temperance lecture, at the Congregational Church, by Elder Joseph Smith. There was a full house and good attention. The lecture is "Town talk" to-day. Some are free to express themselves to the effect that it was the best temperance lecture ever delivered in this place. The Saints have just completed a neat and comfortable church here. We expect to try and tell the gospel story in it for the week.

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

COLTHARP'S, Texas,

February 23d, 1883.

Dear Brother:—I embraced the gospel of Jesus Christ at Elkhart, under the administration of Elder H. C. Smith, since which time I have had sufficient persecution to confirm me in the faith, and to prove the truth of the apostle's declaration, that "They which live godly in Christ Jesus, shall suffer persecution." But by the help of the Heavenly Father, I hope to overcome all opposition, and to walk in the path of duty, until he calls me to enter into his rest. I am separated from the Saints of the branch. Except my wife I am alone and feel weak, surrounded as I am by those that never knew the way of truth, and whose minds are so prejudiced that they can not recognize the light, however bright it may shine around them, or however clearly it may be presented to them; but are ever ready to sneer and mock at those who choose to walk therein. I pray therefore that His spirit may be given me, that I may not wander into the slippery paths of vice, and that we all may be more faithful in following "him that loved us, and gave himself for us;" yea, who has now restored the gospel light and truth again, for the salvation of our ungrateful race. I have much to contend with, and many doctrines are presented to me as of saving efficacy; but all seem weak, foolish and vain when compared with the doctrine of Christ as given in the Bible, and as taught by the Saints of these latter days. I have received evidence that our church is the Church of the living God, and that this evidence may be increased, my faith grow stronger, and my assurance brighter; and should I never be permitted to enjoy the society of God's people here, that I may gain an entrance into that everlasting kingdom, where sorrow and parting will be no more, and persecutors will no more be suffered to annoy, I hope brethren you will pray.

I am your brother,

D. B. HIGGINBOTHAM.

MAGNOLIA, Harrison Co., Iowa,

February 13th, 1883.

Bro Joseph:—I am endeavoring to spread the truth as I understand it, and to improve on the talent that God has given me, and I feel to praise his holy name for his goodness and tender mercy, which he bestows on his weak servants. Last Sabbath morning I started from home, and drove six miles to Bigler's grove, and held a meeting at eleven o'clock, and then drove four miles north from there, to Reynold's school House, and held meeting at three o'clock, and thence to Patten School-House, and held meeting in the evening, and thence home, making over twenty miles' drive, and preached three times with good liberty. The people were glad to hear the gospel sound, and there are some here that will soon obey the Master's call, and rejoice with us.

I was called to administer to a sick man, near the Reynold's school House. He had heard me set forth the claim that the signs should follow the believer, and he sent for me and wanted me to administer to him. He is satisfied our claim is the Master's will.

Oh that the saints could trust more fully in the Master's word. As James says, "Is any among you sick, let him call for the Elders of the church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord, and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he has committed sins, they shall be forgiven him."

Dear brethren and sisters, let us rely on the glorious promises that are for our good. Pray for me, that I may ever be found faithful.

Your brother in Christ,

E. R. LANPHERE.

A LIFE BEYOND THE TOMB.

This earth is a place of probation,
To fit us for a life to come;
And, whatever our lot, or our station
There are trials that have to be borne.

But then the dear Savior has promised,
That those who obey his commands;
And live upright, pure hearted and honest;
Shall have a home in that heavenly land.

Whosoever I love, I will chasten;
Saith the Lord, in his counsel of love;
And your crown will shine all the brighter;
When you've gained that mansion above.

O then let us love and trust Him,
And obey his every command:
Then we shall gain an inheritance;
In Zion's beautiful land.

Where sickness, and sorrow, and death,
And the trials of this life are o'er;
And the loved ones, of whom we're bereft;
We will meet, to part no more.

And there in those Mansions of Glory
Sweet songs of praise we will sing;
And dwell in the presence of Jesus;
Our Redeemer our Master and King.

Then let us put on the whole armor:
Shake off every feeling of gloom;
And rejoice in the God-given promise:
Of a life beyond the tomb.

THOUGHTS SUGGESTED BY VIEWING A LOCOMOTIVE.

EDITOR HERALD:—If you will allow me a portion of your valuable space, I would like to tell you some of the thoughts set in motion by looking at a Rail Road Engine on the track. We thought of the time spoken of by the prophets, when God should gather his people to the land of their fathers, and "swift beasts" should have an agency in bringing them there. To us it looked like an enormous beast; the boiler the body, the smokestack the head, and at night when the headlight is lit the eyes are suggested, and the wheels are the limbs or powers of locomotion; it has a capacious stomach in the fire-box, and a large mouth to receive the vegetable food it feeds upon; it also gets thirsty sometimes, and takes in a surprising amount of water, and when running you can perceive that it breathes fast, and then comes the thought, "swift beasts." After admiring the wonderful perfection in the mechanic arts attained in the ponderous machine before us, the nice adjustment of each part to all the others, all working when in motion in wonderful harmony and precision, our thoughts turned to what it was designed for, and the train of living freight behind the engine answered us. We thought there could be no civilized person living, that would deny that it required an intelligent mind to conceive the design, as well as to construct it after conception, and to work the machine after construction; that however powerful when in motion, it had no control over its actions, but must be set in motion and stopped by an intelligent being. We thought if it took intelligence to conceive and execute a design for a certain purpose in the Locomotive, it certainly would take intelligence to conceive and execute designs of higher orders, for higher and nobler purposes, and after our mind had ruminated upon several things that man had done by way of invention &c., it pondered on the design and purpose of the earth's creation, and wondered if intelligence was not used in the same, as well as the construction thereof.

To do away with the idea of a God, a Creator, to whom man would be answerable for all his acts, men have adopted many theories to account for the existence of this earth, and all things therein, themselves included. Some have adopted the theory that "Two atoms accidentally came together, and by the principle of evolution in them contained, this beautiful world and all things therein arrived at the present state of things." We would like to ask such, if they, in all their observation and experience ever knew of an accident without a cause? We confess we never did! Two trains start from opposite stations; they come together with a crash, a smash, and destruction of life and property is the result. What was the cause? Sometimes the telegraph operator; sometimes the recklessness of the conductor, and sometimes it is said the engineer is at fault; but without a cause did the accident take place, and even so we opine that all accidents of whatever nature, must have an antecedent cause. We then discover, that should we grant the assumption of the accidental coming together of "two atoms," for the beautiful order of things extant in this world, it would not be without a first cause. But we ask, why would not one atom answer the purpose? Was it because their fecund proclivities could not be developed without their coming together? If so, it begins to look to us more like design than accident. And their having the germs of all things folded up in their little selves, and having to come together before they could unfold them in space, it looks to your writer as though they must be endowed with male and female functions. The plot of design thickens as we proceed with the investigation.

The germs of all things wrapt in those precious atoms; the fecund propensities; male and female functions, all proclaim an intelligent cause, and if the theory was correct, it would not destroy, but prove the existence of God. There are many theories advanced by atheists, and pantheists, to do away with the idea of a personal God; but from the number, we select only one more; viz, "That millions of years ago the world existed as a vast cloud of fire-mist, which after a long time cooled down into granite; and the granite by dint of earthquakes got broken up on the surface, and washed with rain into clay and soil, whence plants sprang up of their own accord, and the plants gradually grew into animals of various kinds, and some of the animals grew into monkeys, and finally the monkeys into men." Granting for argument's sake the existence of the fire-mist, we are puzzled to account for an eternal red hot fire, hot enough to melt granite, cooling down of its own accord without any outside agency. To grant this, would be tantamount to granting it had a will, a choice, and power to perform the same, which will, choice, and power, implies a mind, and that signifies an intelligent organism. But if we are not willing to ascribe to the fire-mist these properties, we must be willing to ascribe them to some outside influence, which must have intelligence to know the purpose for which this cooling down process was done; must have conceived that purpose beforehand: determined the time of the change; prepared the earthquakes and the rains to break up and pulverize the granite to form the soil. In this theory we have a professed history of the origin of man, as well as other animals, from the plant first springing up of its own accord, from the pulverised granite; then changing into the animal, and finally into man. We have several changes taking place here, and no cause assigned, and all this assumption to do away with the idea of a God having any agency in man's creation. Change is an effect, and requires an antecedent cause. Instead of doing away with the idea of a God in the premises, the necessity of one is multiplied as many times as there are changes wrought in their account of the origin of man. But we begin to be puzzled again, how those plants sprang up of their own accord. We do not see plants spring up that way now, neither has it come under the observation of any one that we have ever heard or read of, who ever saw such a transaction take place. "From the beginning of the world to the present day, no man has ever observed an instance of spontaneous generation. There is no law of nature of whatever kind, can produce a living plant or animal, save from the germ, or seed of some previous plant or animal of the same species. Nor has a single instance of the transmutation of species ever been proved. Every beast, bird, fish, insect, and plant brings forth after its kind and has done so since its creation. So we see by the natural law, as well as by observation and experience, that the above position of the origin of man is false, and militates nothing against a first cause.

But, leaving the different theories of the earth's creation, we find for our consideration an earth already made to hand, like as we found the Locomotive on the track. We enquired the purpose for which the engine was made, and the answer forced itself upon us when beholding the cars of living freight attached behind. We enquire the purpose for which the earth was made, and we receive our answer in beholding the millions of animated beings dwelling upon its face, that it was made for their abode; but more especially for man; for, he being the highest intelligence we have any record of that dwells on the earth, has by that superior intelligence the power to make all inferior animals subserve his purposes. Our infidel friends will not deny, that it required a personal, intelligent being to conceive the purpose of, and design the engine to accomplish that purpose: yet, strange to say, when it comes to a purpose and design of such stupendous magnitude that the engine is but as the mote floating in the sunbeam, in comparison with it, they will deny a personal intelligence any action therein. They say nature has performed it all! But we see the highest intelligence in nature, [man], as helpless as the new born infant to make the least kernel of grain, upon which he subsists, or the least blade of grass upon which the lower orders of animals subsist. Query. If the highest order of intelligence in nature can not perform it, what can the lower orders of intelligences, or nature, not supplied with that commodity, do towards it? If nature could not perform these minor things, what could it do in the design and construction of the whole earth. Man we perceive is helpless to design and create his own food, and were it possible for him to have an existence without the aid of a superior being, he must soon die, if dependent on his own resources, for lack of sustenance. The sustaining of man and beast upon the earth, proves the existence of a superior being.

The ultimate object, or purpose, for which man was placed here, as we conceive, we do not design to enquire into in this article; but merely to deal with the facts of our existence here, and through whose agency we are sustained and preserved. We find an earth with three fourths water on its surface, and one fourth land. Why this division? Why not have it all land, or all water? Because, answers the philosopher, neither man, nor beast, nor any other creature could live if either was the case. If all was land, we would be destitute of our lakes, rivers, and springs, and as a consequence, no animal life existent on the earth; if all was water, reader, you can imagine the consequence. It seems then, to your writer, that it required knowledge, in some power superior to man, that would be needed in the premises for the perpetuation of man and beast upon the earth; it required a will to do, and a power to execute that will, in the division of the land and water. It seems also, that this superior intelligence, understanding that for the perpetuation of life on the earth, a constant supply of water would be necessary, had to have a great reservoir of water located somewhere on its surface, to accomplish this purpose. But how shall it be made available to man, beast, and reptile, and how shall vegetation be watered? Man's genius is not capable of inventing, or converting any force or power, in the universe, to accomplish this purpose. The reservoir, then, would be useless, without some plan of distributing its waters upon the land. A great "pump and sprinkler" has been provided for this purpose which is constantly in motion. The greater portion of this water has been located in the tropics, or between the temperate zones, where the sun's direct rays shine upon it all the year round, lifting in the form of vapor the water from its surface, which is carried upward by the air, until it comes in contact with a cooler atmosphere, serving as a condenser, and is next carried by the winds over the earth, and falls in rain or snow on the same, supplying our lakes, rivers, and springs, continually, with their supply of fresh water. Reader, don't you think that it required a being who could think, contrive, purpose, and who had the power to execute that purpose, in accomplishing the foregoing?

Again, this great body of water had to be preserved pure, which could not be done but for the salt distributed so thoroughly through it, and the constant motion of its waters. Wonderful resources! Wonderful forethought! Another very essential thing in the great programme for the sustaining of life upon the earth, was an atmosphere to encircle it in order that everything capable of living upon its surface might breathe. The three great essentials to physical life are, air, water and food. Here again, the wisdom, knowledge and power of the Great Architect, is made manifest. There are other things auxiliary to the perpetuation of life, but we forbear to mention them for fear we prove tedious to your readers.

But after all we have said, we have only found,—so far in our investigation,—like the engine on the track at a stand still, an earth without motion, and like as the engine,—to answer the ends of its creation,—must be put in motion on the track, so also must the earth be put in motion in its orbit,—having its annual and diurnal revolutions,—without which, a change in the seasons could not take place, nor the winds [which are air put in motion], could not perform this important office in the perpetuation of life on the earth; no more could the equatorial currents of the ocean, perform their important functions in causing large portions of the earth to be fertile, and to produce bountifully sustenance for man and beast, which otherwise would be sterile and barren, were it not for the influence exerted upon their atmosphere and climate by the temperature of those streams. The architect of the engine had to lay a track for it to run or to accomplish the design and purpose of its existence. The highest velocity attained is about a mile per minute, and if perchance it should fly the track at that speed, awful would be the consequences in the destruction of life and property, and the noble engine become a wreck. Such has been the case frequently, caused by the limited foresight or knowledge, or the carelessness of man.

The Great Architect has formed a track [or orbit] for the earth to follow, which has done so for thousands of years, with a velocity of nineteen miles per second, and yet the earth has never flown the track once! No, the wisdom, the knowledge, that formed the earth and its orbit was perfect, could foresee every minutia of what was required in the premises to subserve the intended purpose, and although attaining such astounding velocity, it has never flown the track. But had the earth come into its orbit by chance, chance would have been apt to have thrown it out of the same, and thus brought about the total wreck of the earth at some period of time, and destruction of all life upon it. As the engine was not formed, and did not come upon the track by chance, but by intelligent design, neither was the earth formed or placed in its orbit, but by intelligent design; and that which formed the earth is as much superior to that which formed the engine as there is difference in the work performed by the two, "For as high as the heavens are above the earth, so are thy ways above our ways, and thy thoughts above our thoughts."

E. STAFFORD.

LAMONI, Iowa, November 12th, 1882.

MINISTERIAL CATECHISINGS.

AND NOW, my ministerial brethren, please give me your attention, and draw in your wandering thoughts, and prepare for self-inspection. If you ever lecture, preach or speak in public, please tell us something of your methods of procedure. When you arise, do you ahem! and drawl your words, and present the living picture of misery pure and simple? Do you proceed to say that in ancient times, men spake as they were moved upon by the Holy Ghost, and then state in connection therewith, that unless you are so aided you will be unable to speak, having made no preparation for the occasion? Do you then proceed to make a long, rambling, unconnected speech, in which you display a poor memory, want of preparation, and private opinions? Please think, note your answer down; and if you respond by a general confession, permit one who can sympathize with you in your weakness, to advise you to beware, lest you give the Holy Ghost the credit for your weaknesses and follies. It is well to be cautious in what is said upon such occasions; lest we, by our thoughtless and unwise words, detract from the apparent merits of the truth now declared.

Do you boast of illiteracy? If so, let me assure you, you need not, for an appreciative audience will surely comprehend the situation, and as friends, deplore it. A man is not to be blamed (in every instance) because he is illiterate; but when he boasts of it, and seems to regard it as a prime qualification for gospel work, we think he is then a fit object for pity. In every man it requires effort, patience and study to make what is termed a success, at public address. No man ever attained a proficiency, whether a Prophet, or Priest, or Elder, who did not labor to that end. God is not honored, nor yet his cause, by carelessness at the hands of a careless and slovenly ministry.

Do you stamp around the pulpit with your feet, and bring your hand (usually clinched) down heavily upon the books or desk, by way of emphasis? If so, I can venture the assertion that your efforts are not pleasing to sensitive and nervous people, without saying any thing about the judgment which would be pronounced by the educated and refined. Desist from such action, and strive to be pleasing in your manners, and so improve, acquiring gracefulness and ease of action.

Do you rail out against other churches, rather preaching against other's doctrine, instead of preaching for Christ and his doctrine, distinctively? If so, I fear lest we would say, in justice too, that your efforts will have the effect to drive people away from Christ; and that ordinarily such a course of action is unwise and unjustifiable. It would seem to indicate the spirit of war.

Do you speak as rapidly as possible, especially when reading proof-texts, and at times, as loudly as is in your power? Why do you do so? The end greatly to be sought in preaching, is lost, and such efforts generally produce little or no good results. Speak deliberately, and read your proof texts so that you can, by your reading, call attention to any part desired. Use your voice so that you shall have a reserve for emphasis or stress, if necessary. A great deal depends upon the manner of speech, as well as upon the thing said. Never strain the voice; for it is an easy thing to effect its permanent injury.

Do not acquire the peculiar "nasal twang." It impairs your influence as a speaker, by calling attention in another direction, instead of upon the matter of your discourse. Have you an ideal Elder? Are you absorbed in the splendor of his influence and wisdom? If so, do you act awkwardly, simply because he does so too?

Do you speak in a peculiar and uncouth manner, for the reason that that is the style of his address? If so, you are acting in the simple role of an imitator, and so you are exhibiting the want of real manliness and character. But perhaps you have never seen it in that light, nor have you ever seen yourself, as others see you. Whoever you are, be natural, and as a rule you will be graceful. Don't be an echo; nor yet live absolutely upon your own thoughts. Seek to improve, by contact, general reading, and perusal of what you do read, as well as by listening unto what others may say. Like the busy bee, who draws sweetness from the thousand flowers, it is your privilege—your duty, to gather the fragments of thought and information, to store the mind with varied and useful knowledge, to be used as occasion may demand, so living as to insure the blessing of God upon your days.

Do you insist that upon undecided points of doctrine, every other person shall surrender his views to yours? If you hold opinions for which you can give no reason, still would you demand "unconditional surrender?" Would you be guilty of trying to weaken the influence of this brother or that one, who had been so unfortunate as to know, either less or more than you, and so possibly differ from you in some matter of faith or fact? If so, your action fully entitles you to the unsavory name of the bigot, and your conduct to be known as uncourteous and ungentlemanly. You would most probably be the last man to surrender your opinions at the mere dictum of another. Place yourself in another's stead, and have your opinions subjected to judgment under the rulings of bigotry and fanaticism, and then tell us how you would like the situation. I opine you would conclude that it was a very different case. Hounded by an unreasoning and fanatical zeal, able and true men might be crowded out of the body; or the Church under the influence of the pressure, forced into unwise and unjust measures, which in the lapse of time, for a "sober, second thought" could only revert to the discredit of the prime movers therein, in the revulsion the church as a mere act of justice, which, though tardy, goes through the ordeal of retreat, in restoring such an one to full standing and privileges in the body.

When you take the vial of olive oil to consecrate, or ask God that his special blessing might attend in its use to the afflicted, do you insist in having the cork drawn? Why do you do so? Do you think the blessing of God so material in its character, that the cork would be an hinderance? Or do you doubt the omnipotence of God? Why go to the trouble of removing the cork by bits, when about to ask God to bless the oil, if he is able and willing to bestow divine favor, irrespective of corks and coverings? But then, perhaps it is but a foolish form which you simply follow because you have seen others do so!

Are you prompt in your attendance at church? If so, you set a good example to others. There is nothing of so light a character that conduces more greatly to lessen the interest in meetings, than irregularity and tardiness in attendance. You may think that promptness in this respect to be of small moment, but please remember that it is the small things which make up our lives.

Do you preach long and tedious sermons? And do you use, or seek to use, long sentences, in which obscurity of idea seems to be the point gained? Pith and point are much better, either orally or in writing, than long sentences, however well they may be framed. Notice the sayings of Jesus and his apostles, and the writings of the olden prophets and pilgrims. You see in them gems of wisdom and literary excellency. Note their terseness, their brevity and their force. They evidently had ideas, and they sought appropriate language to convey forcibly the idea intended. That sermon which could be delivered forcibly in thirty minutes, and bristle out everywhere with ideas, would seem flat and uninteresting, were an hour spent upon it, for the apparent dearth of ideas. Study brevity, and point, and learn to preach short sermons.

Are you studious? If you are, I have reason to believe you will improve and increase in ability and gifts. If you are ever well, or thoroughly versed in any branch of knowledge, it will be because of diligence and application. Ignorance can not be concealed, with the well informed, although you should attempt to look as wise as Solon, and as grave as a philosopher. Nor will reserve take the place of information; for when you do speak your words will betray you.

What is the scope of your study? Do you strive to make it as comprehensive as is in your power under your circumstances? Or are you satisfied to confine yourself to one, two or three books? Not only is it your privilege in this day of cheap literature, to make your study quite comprehensive, but it is your duty so to do. It only requires a small sum to have quite a little stock of choice reading, which will afford you pleasant pastime and profitable employment of leisure moments. Do you ever controvert? Are you willing to learn, or do you allow a foolish pride to prevent you from changing your opinions? If you have attained the acme of perfection, then indeed you should maintain the inviolability of your opinions; and your words have somewhat of authority. But not presuming that you have reached so grand a climax, I shall continue to look upon you as brethren, who "know in part," and who are learning by your daily experiences. But remember this: That if you desire to instruct others, you yourselves must exhibit a teachable,—a willing-to-learn spirit. Sheer, undisguised bigotry is not likely, at any time, to prove acceptable to the people. The day is forever past, when mere priestly assertions shall sway the people; and the sooner that this is recognized, the better it will be for all concerned.

Believing, trusting and hoping to hear good things from you all, I strive to endure.

AN ELDER.

INGERSOLL REVIEWED.

"BUT wisdom is justified of her children."
—Matthew 11:19.

When two or three thousand people come together on a Sabbath afternoon and pay a dollar admission to hear a lecture, there must be something in the speaker, or his theme, or in the state of the public mind that is worthy of our study. And the fact that the lecturer is the most noted unbeliever of our country, and his discourse an attack upon the Bible and the Christian religion, should certainly not lessen our interest. Col. Ingersoll had back of him no organization or society; the proceeds of his lecture were not for any public charity, but for himself; and yet there was not room for all who came.

How shall we account for this eagerness of the multitude to hear one who antagonizes that which is supposed to be the common faith of the people? It must be more than a mere curiosity to see the man, for Mr. Ingersoll has often spoken in our city before. It can hardly be explained on the ground of friendship, or of a public welcome, for he has never resided in our town, nor has he just returned from a foreign shore; nor has he ever performed any distinguished service for his country. He was a brave soldier; he is an able lawyer and political speaker, and a good citizen; but this can be said of thousands of others. Is it because of his great power as a speaker? This is a partial explanation, for oratory has always had the power to attract the masses, and in this field he has not many equals, and but few superiors. As a speaker he is ready, pleasing, witty, brilliant, forcible, and eloquent. We can hardly say that he is profound as a thinker or a reasoner. Is the explanation in the fact the mind delights in a battle of words and ideas, and is drawn to a debate much as one is swept into a war; and hence in a country where there are fifty thousand preachers explaining and defending the Bible and religion, the people are anxious to hear what this one noted unbeliever has to say on the other side? This has something to do in the case; but a more important question is this: Is the public mind, to any great extent, in sympathy with the views of this orator? and what is to be the effect of his teachings upon the thousands who hear and the many more who read his speeches? and what will be the influence upon the rising generation, and especially in a time like the present, when there seems to be so wide an unsettling of so many of the old forms of faith?

Partly, I confess, from a curiosity to hear Col. Ingersoll—for I had never heard him before; but more from a desire to satisfy myself upon these questions—I went to his last lecture. His magnetic oratory was all that I had expected. The great audience seemed pleased and delighted, and many laughed and cheered as he sought to make one point after another against religion, and ground out his scathing satire and even ridicule upon things that to most minds are sacred. To me the whole scene was anything but joyful. It was sad; and I went home with a heavy heart, that one so strong in body and so gifted in intellect and oratory, and saying so many good and beautiful things about love, and home, and liberty; one that might be so powerful to influence his age for good, should seem to be fighting the very religion and weakening the reverence of the people for that which to me holds the highest hopes and possibilities of the future of our world.

We should try to be just to all, and I have struggled against the suggestion that possibly Col. Ingersoll is insincere, or that he could so trifle with truth as to use his splendid talents to win applause and money at the expense of right; but I am compelled to think that he is wanting in reverence, and lacks that deep seriousness that should always belong to weighty discussions. By seriousness here I do not mean long-facedness, or the absence of cheerfulness; but such a realization of great questions as taxes the highest powers of the mind and heart, and hence renders trifling impossible. It is not intended by these remarks to say that Col. Ingersoll has not given thought to the questions upon which he speaks, nor that he has been without some measure of moral conviction, for this would not be just; but still he seems somehow not to have that candor and considerateness that should belong to religious discussions.

But for this there is a cause, and the explanation may at the same time be at least a partial apology. As a lawyer, Mr. Ingersoll has been trained to see the weak points in the argument of an opponent, and he has thus been quick to perceive the extravagant and untenable positions of some theologians, and the hard and dark things about some of the creeds, and the mysteries and the difficulties of thought that must necessarily form a part of any great system of religion; and seizing upon these things and putting them in their worst possible light, he tries to turn them to ridicule, or to use them as arguments against nearly all Christian faith. He has a quick, generous, impulsive nature, with a large element of the humorous, and also a strong and ready power of resentment; and dealing with extreme views, and being met and antagonized by hasty and extravagant men, he has become an extremist of the most radical type.

Now, as a result of all this, Col. Ingersoll is not dealing with the bottom facts; is not, as it seems to me, searching patiently and with the spirit of a philosopher for the heart of things at all; is not grappling with the great questions of theism, and of revelation, and of the future state, but is dealing rather with what extreme men have said about God, and about the Bible, and retribution. And in some things he is battling against theories that are at fault, and injurious in their tendencies, and that need to be controverted; but he is making the sad mistake of not discriminating; of jumbling everything together—the true and the false, the wise and the unwise, and seeming to make a grand onslaught upon the good as well as the bad. And hence he is rattling away upon the surface of things, but never getting down to the great realities. He deals too much in large assertions, and extravagant rhetoric, and hasty generalizations, and unfair inferences. And whatever may be the apparent and immediate effect of his teachings, this much is certain, that, while he may amuse the populace and unsettle many inexperienced minds, he must change his methods and go down beneath the surface if he would deeply influence the thinking world in his day, or hope to live as any possible power upon the thought of the future.

It is not the purpose of this pulpit to interfere in the fight between Col. Ingersoll and Dr. Talmage. They seem to be well matched; and it seems not out of harmony with the fitness of things that they should have come into conflict—that the extremes of religion and non-religion should have met. But in the interests of truth, and to further illustrate the methods, and something of the thought, of the lecturer, it may not be improper to review briefly a few of the statements and arguments found in his discourse of last Sunday.

In the very first sentence he rushed headlong into one of the great and disputed questions of metaphysics, and assumed it as out of debate, and wholly settled on his side. These are his words: "Nothing can be more certain than that no human being can by any possibility control his thought." And then after referring to the impressions made upon the brain by the outer world, and comparing thought to the involuntary action of the heart and lungs, he says: "No human being can justly be held responsible for this thought, any more than for the beating of his heart, or for breathing air." He compares the brain to a field where "nature sows the seed and thought is the crop." And then says that "for thousands of years thought has been thought to be a crime; and thousands and millions have threatened us with eternal fire for giving the product of the brain."

Now, this is a fair sample of Col. Ingersoll's method. Its brilliant audacity may captivate and amuse for the moment, but when analyzed and placed in the light of calm thought, what is there in it to carry conviction to thinking minds? He assumes the basis of the material philosophy as settled; that all thought results from outward impressions upon the brain; that it is a "field where nature sows the seed of thought, and the crop is the result." Now, we all admit that impressions are made upon the brain by what we see, and hear, and feel; and that much and even most of thought arises from these causes; but are these the only sources of thought? Is the mind nothing in itself? Has it no power of thought except as acted upon from without? Whence come the conceptions of space, and duration, and the infinite, and the moral intuitions of right and wrong? I can not argue these deep questions of philosophy here; but Col. Ingersoll certainly knows, or ought to know, that the sensational school of philosophy is not the only school; that opposed to it are such great thinkers as McCosh, and Hamilton, and Cousin, and Kant, and Hegel; and yet he assumes the material philosophy as settled. "Nothing can be more certain," etc.

And is the great lecturer prepared to stand by the logical conclusions of his philosophy, that "no human being can justly be held responsible for his thought?" Has the mind no self-determining power? Must one go just where these impressions lead him? We all know that thought lies back of and determines conduct: but if one has no control over and is not responsible for his thought, how shall we hold him responsible for his acts? The effect of this teaching, if followed, would be to say to each young man when thoughts of impurity or dishonesty come into the mind: "You are not responsible; Nature is sowing the seed; there can be no harm in gathering the crop." And further: if Col. Ingersoll's philosophy is true, if thought is the product of Nature's sowing, why does he blame or praise any one for thinking as he does? Why blame the "orthodox soil for being poor?" or why blame "thousands and millions for teaching that it is a crime to think?" Nature sowed that crop of thought too, and they simply gathered what Nature had sown. And yet he says he "stands for absolute freedom of thought." According to his philosophy such freedom is impossible; everything is reduced to fate.

Turning from metaphysics, the next move of the lecturer is into the field of theology and religion, and his first lunge is at the supernatural. Here he confesses that the question is not wholly one-sided, that "there has long been a struggle between the believers in the natural and the supernatural;" but in the same sentence he tries to minify the whole great subject and to place it in a false light by saying that the struggle is between "gentlemen who are going to reward us in the other world and those who propose to make life worth living here and now," and by classing believers in the supernatural with priests of pagan deities, and astrologers, and the "medicine men," and magicians, and sums them up as the "gentlemen who have traded upon the fear and ignorance of their fellow-men, and in all countries have sought to make their living out of others."

No one, I suppose will deny that there was a time when ignorance, and superstition, and fear rested down like a dark cloud upon the world, and that knowing so little of Nature and law almost everything was supposed to be supernatural; and, thinking that everything was ruled by the deities, it was not strange that the people sought to secure their favor through sacrifices. But Col. Ingersoll should remember that this was in lands where the Bible that he is trying to destroy was not known. It was where "Nature was sowing the seeds of thought;" sowing the seeds that produced all this superstition, and produced all these priests and magicians to live off of others. And he should remember that the whole tendency of the Bible is to do away with these superstitions and lead man to worship the living God; and that God commands that His priests should be holy. And if Mr. Ingersoll would study this great subject briefly he might perhaps see even in these superstitions the struggle of the mind and heart after great facts that in our day have come into clearer light. Instead of astrology we have astronomy; and in place of the "medicine-man" we have the scientific physician: and, instead of praying to idols, the soul of man is turning to the great heart and mind of all—to the "Father of Spirits." And is the fact that the world once dwelt in darkness, and that much of what was once supposed to be supernatural is now to us perfectly natural, and that men prayed and worshiped as best they knew, any argument against the fact of the supernatural or against prayer? May not the sincere prayers of the poor heathen, even if addressed to stone, have been answered by the living God? And who shall tell their influence in bringing the better day? Mr. Ingersoll should take account of the fact that the religious nature of man is a fact; and he may say that God put it there, or Nature put it there, just as he pleases; still it is a fact, and it is slowly coming forward like a springtime to the flowers and fruit of a great summer; and prayer and some conception of the supernatural have journeyed along all the way as parts of the religion of the world.

But, says the Colonel, "All the clergymen of this world can never get one drop of rain out of the sky; all the clergymen of the civilized world could not save one human life if they tried it."

How does he know all this? There is prayer in the world, and there is rain. Can he or any one else say there is no possible relation between the one and the other? Can he tell what might be the result if instead of praying all mankind should turn to cursing God? Not till we know ten thousand times more than we now do can any thinker say just what or what not might be if any one thing that is were not. That men do not always get an immediate answer to a prayer for rain we all know; and that loved ones for whom we pray die we know; but can any one say that prayer never has and never can save life? It may count little in this argument, but I most firmly believe that had it not been for prayer I should have been in my grave a quarter of a century ago. We know that souls are strengthened and helped by the presence of an unseen sympathy, that there is that sympathetic accord of hearts that makes patriots and philanthropists feel that they are not alone. The silent wires stretch across the sea and join the distant continents. Are there no mystic bonds and ties between earth and heaven? The tick of the telegraph would cause the tender heart of Col. Ingersoll to leave any pleasure or business and hasten to the bed of a sick child. And shall we say that all the love of the unseen world and the love of God heed not the cries and tears of earth? Much as we may know and high as we may be, there is still a higher, an upper, or supernatural rising above our plane, and before the gates of mystery and mercy human hearts will always look up in prayer. But Col. Ingersoll may say that everything is ruled by unchangeable laws, and ask how can anything be affected by prayer. I will agree that all is under law, under unchangeable law; and what then? Just this: "If all is under law, prayer is under law too; else there is something outside of law; and may it not be that it is a part of that unchangeable law that prayer shall be answered?"

The next point to which the lecturer turns his attention is the doctrine of eternal punishment; and I can easily see how, as a lawyer, Col. Ingersoll should perceive the injustice of this doctrine as it has often been taught, and how, as a man of generous sympathy, his whole nature revolts against it. And I am in sympathy with him at this point; I think the doctrine as often preached has done great harm, and is hurting religion now. It casts a dark cloud over the throne of God, and fills time and eternity with despair. But I do not like the way he handles the subject. His method here is the same as in other things—is what logicians call the reductio ad absurdum; he seeks to make the doctrine ridiculous: and then he is not careful about his facts. He says, "If the Christian religion is true, Humboldt is in hell;" and then eulogizes Humboldt to show the absurdity of the conclusion, and hence that Christianity can not be true. And thus he takes up Shakspeare, and Homer, and Harriet Martineau, and by each one argues the absurdity of Christianity.

Now, the mistake here is in Mr. Ingersoll's startling assumption that "if Christianity is true," then these persons are in hell. It is true he qualifies a little by saying in one place, "I do not refer especially to the Christianity of the New Testament, I refer to the Christianity of the orthodox church;" but generally makes no distinction. But suppose he means orthodox Christianity, still his assumption is unwarranted, for the doctrine of endless punishment is not clearly, if at all, the teaching of orthodoxy. It may be held by some of the churches calling themselves orthodox, as the Presbyterians or Methodists, but when we come to ask what are the standards of orthodoxy, we must take the great creeds of Christianity. The Apostles' Creed is accepted alike by the Catholic, the Greek, and the Protestant churches, but it has not one word about endless punishment. The Nicene Creed says not a word about it. It is not till we come to the Athanasian Creed that the subject is mentioned, and that is not of earlier date than the fifth century, whilst the Apostles' and the Nicene belong to the fourth century. And further, the doctrine of endless punishment was not generally held in the early church. Dr. Edward Beecher tells us that of the six theological schools in the days of Origen, in the third century, and later, only one, and that was the Roman, taught endless punishment, and one taught annihilation, and four taught universal restoration, or that all souls would at last be saved. Origen, the greatest of the fathers, was a Universalist, and published his work on "Systematic Theology" in A. D. 230; and that work was not condemned till A. D. 544, or 300 years after; and then not by a general, but by a local council called at Constantinople by the order of Justinian; and that too in an age of great darkness and cruelty. And thus we see that endless punishment was not the doctrine of the early church, and is not taught in the two great creeds, and hence should not be called orthodox. It is not taught in the thirty-nine articles of the Church of England; the church once inserted an article affirming the doctrine, and kept it in eleven years, and then cast it out. The Protestant Episcopal Church rejected the Athanasian creed, and has no article on the subject. The doctrine is not generally held in either the English or the Protestant Episcopal Church today. And almost the entire body of German divines has long denied it. Even Luther is quoted as saying, "How it may be with those who in the New Testament are condemned, I say nothing certain; I leave it undecided."

I say these things because I think Col. Ingersoll is laboring under a mistake as to what orthodoxy really does teach. He takes what some sects teach, and not the consensus of orthodoxy. And thus, whether endless punishment be true or not, it can not in strictness be said to be orthodox. Nor do I believe it to be Christian. Jesus certainly taught future punishment; but that he taught that punishment would be endless is by no means proved. And in the light of these facts I think Col. Ingersoll will gladly modify his statements. What Christianity teaches about the future world is simply this: That rewards and punishments are carried over from time to eternity; that the principles of the government of God are the same there as here; that character, and not profession or deed, determines destiny; and that Humboldt, and Dickens, and all others who have gone and shall go to that world shall receive their just rewards; that souls will always be in the place for which at the time, be it now or a million years hence, they are fitted. That is what Christianity teaches; and that removes the cold and cruel conception against which not only Col. Ingersoll, but the great drift of Christian thought and conscience is protesting.

The Reformers rested too much upon the dark theology of Augustine and the fifth century; the theology of to-day is finding its way into the clearer light and better life of the patriotic teachings of the earlier centuries, and hence is coming into a larger hope for mankind. And I want Col. Ingersoll to have full credit for all he has done, even by shocking the public feeling into a realization of the terribleness of the old view; but I hope that he will no longer say that Christianity sends "the grandest and noblest characters of earth to hell."

It must be regretted that the lecturer does not take a broader view of the Bible and religion as historical facts of a great and divine and progressive movement through the ages, and in this way try to reach a just estimate of their real contents and value, instead of hunting around on the surface for little mistakes, and errors, and imperfections, and then by these trying to cast doubt and ridicule upon all that is true and good in their great sweep and purpose. But extremes meet; others have claimed too much for the Bible, and he claims too little. It is, however, almost provoking that one of his ability should seem to delight in so little, so unfair, and one-sided a method of treating great subjects. He ought to do better.

What is there, I ask, in home, and love, and liberty, and the exaltation of woman, for which he so eloquently pleads, that the spirit of the Bible and religion does not encourage and help, and for which the Christian Church in its best life is not earnestly working? Is not the church trying just as hard as he to "make the present life worth living," whilst at the same time it is bearing up the hope of the world in life and death by pointing to the land that is better? The Bible gives the life of its time as it was, and with equal fairness the virtues and the failures of man and woman. Shakspeare may paint the beauties of his ideal Isabella and Imogen and Juliet; and the Poetic Greeks give us a faithful Penelope waiting through the long years for the sea to give back her husband, and the love of Alcestis, and the piety of Antigone, and history tells us that in the heroic days of Rome, there was not a divorce in that city for 400 years. But history has to record, too, the vices of those lands; and thus the good and the bad have gone along together. But does not Col. Ingersoll know that the religion of the Bible sought to correct the evils of polygamy and slavery? And where does he find the very heart of the home and matrimony and the soul of virtue as deeply revealed as in the words of Christ? And does not the Catholic Church make of matrimony a sacrament?

But I must close. My friend thinks that blasphemy is impossible—that it is a question of geography. It may be in the eyes of human law; but in the religious sense it is a question of the heart in the deepest life going against the spirit of truth and holiness; and though we may "not be able to hurt God," we may injure our own souls. He says "the Presbyterian is the worst religion in the world." He should remember that the creed of that church is an effort to state a great truth—the sovereignty of God; and that, though unfortunately, and even falsely stated, still it carries along and emphasizes that great fact; and he should explain to us by what strange law it is that "the worst religion" has for centuries given and is to-day giving to our world so many of its best people. He seems impatient over the slow methods of Providence in correcting abuses and bringing about great moral reforms. A believer in evolution should be the last one to utter such a complaint; for he would think nothing of asking for a million years to lift the monkey up into a man; why, then, complain that it takes a few thousand years to bring a whole race of men and women to a high moral state? He says, "If I were God, I would not stop making men till I got one who had the courage to utter his real convictions." It had been supposed that in the long list of martyrs and patriots who have died for the truth our world has had many such noble souls. But if not, let us hope that the Deity was happy last Sunday. My friend says that he "would not blot from the night of life one single star of hope;" and yet he is doing all he can to weaken the faith of millions in the Bible and prayer and Christianity, and to close every church and pulpit in the land. And what would he give us instead? Shakspeare and the drama.

But society will not be swayed very far one way or the other by the extremists of orthodoxy or liberalism. Great changes are coming in the theological world, but the truth will be found to lie in the middle ground between the extravagant men who are shouting on the outer edges; and it is upon this safer path that the great multitudes will journey on to the unseen.

Many a man gets credit for good temper who never knew what it was to be provoked; while he who has retailed his explosiveness with great effort nine times, is reputed a fiery-tempered man because the dynamite got the better of him on the tenth.

DIED.

FULKS.—Near Middleton county, Ontario, August 12th, 1882, sister Clara, wife of Bro. M. Fulks, after an illness of near three years, with the consumption, slowly and surely wearing her away, which she endured with great patience, watching and waiting to welcome the hour of deliverance from her prison house of clay, in full hope of receiving it again in the resurrection day, a glorified body. Deceased was born the 15th September, 1847, at Cranma Hollow, Canada. She with her father's family, moved to near Dentonsville, Michigan, 1865, and on the 15th of June, 1866, married, and moved to Kansas. Here she and her husband sought the Lord oft in secret prayer, read the sacred scriptures, reasoned with all. Soon after some four families of Davises moved in and settled near, when she was led to follow her husband through the waters of regeneration, the 26th of June, 1870. After hearing three sermons by Brn. John T. Davis and James Heart, Jr., in their house, which was the first preached in, and they were the first to obey in all that country. Baptized at Mound Valley, Kansas, by John T. Davis, confirmed by John A. Davis. Funeral preached by Brn. J. H. Lake and E. H. Gurley, to a large congregation, in the Baptist Church, near Tilsonburg, Ontario, Canada, from 1 Cor. 15:21, 22, 23.

THOMAS.—At Cheltenham, Missouri, January 21st, 1883, of inflammation of the bowels, Mary Ann Thomas, daughter of John and Sister Ann Thomas. Born at Cheltenham, Missouri, August 8th, 1872. Funeral services by Elder William Smith.

Passed the shades of death's dark valley,
Thou art leaning on his breast;
Where the wicked may not enter,
And the weary are at rest.
Yet again we hope to meet thee.
When death's gloomy night has fled;
Then on earth with joy to greet thee,
Where no bitter tears are shed.

PRESTON.—Near Xenia, Nebraska, February 15th, 1883, Daniel Jones, son of brother C. K. and sister M. S. Preston, aged 11 years, 4 months, and 25 days. Baptized last Summer by Elder J. F. Mintun. Deceased had been an invalid for some years. Last sickness was the cramp. He only suffered about forty hours. Funeral sermon by Elder Robert M. Elvin, from words spoken just before death, viz: "Those who are baptized will be saved."

HALL.—At Woodbine, Harrison county, Iowa, February 12th, 1883, sister Elizabeth, wife of Bro. Matthew Hall, aged 67 years, 7 months and 23 days. Born in Stennex, county of Cumberland, England, emigrated to the United States with her husband, having been baptized into the church in her native land; but seeing the corruptions of Brighamism, she became sick at heart, and resolved to walk no longer with them. And although she was so deeply wounded in spirit, that she never identified herself with the Reorganization, she treated its elders with respect and kindness, and was a true friend. Though she had no child of her own, she was one of the kindest of mothers to the only child of brother Hall. She was a faithful wife, a kind neighbor and a true friend, and her trust in God and her redeemer never failed. She was willing to depart. Though she had suffered long from heart disease she died of consumption. Funeral by C. Derry.

PERKINS.—At Enterprise, Kansas, on the 10th of June, 1882, of diphtheria, Mary Ann, infant daughter of sister Deilah J. Perkins, and the late lamented Elder J. Perkins, aged 8 months and 10 days. Funeral sermon preached by Bro. A. Kent.

That thy earthly life should close;
Thy gentle spirit can fear no ill,
Thou art safe from all earth's woes.

Summary of News.

Feb. 21.—No Constitution or amnesty will be granted to the Russians on the occasion of the Czar's coronation.

The United States steamer Ashulot was sunk off Hong Kong and eleven of the crew were drowned.

The seventeenth victim of the New York school-house horror died to-night, and several others are not expected to recover.

Sixteen persons were severely injured to-day at Threshers's Corners, Ont., by the fall of the floor of a hall in which a political meeting was being held.

The steamer Morro Castle, of the Clyde Line, running between New York and Charlestown, burned to-day at the last named city. The loss is estimated at $200,000 on the vessel and $70,000 on the cargo. The crew escaped.

Great damage and the loss of five lives is reported in the neighborhood of Vincennes, Ind., where the floods cover the entire face of the country. The condition of affairs at Shawneetown, Ill., is as bad as ever, but at Cairo it is believed that the greatest danger has passed.

Nineteen counterfeiters in West Virginia, have been captured, tried, and sent to prison.

Beyond the Mississippi River there are 1,200,000 square miles not settled by white men, and of this area 240,000 square miles, embracing much of the best land, are included within the Indian reservations, while much of the remainder consists of mountainous tracts, lands inaccessible or sterile, and arid regions which can not be irrigated.

Feb. 22d.—At Milford, Massachusetts, to-day, thirteen children were thrown from a double-runner, which struck a tree. Nearly all were picked up unconscious.

Feb. 23d.—Twenty-two persons were drowned on Thursday by the wreck of a steamer in the Bosphorus.

The most disastrous effect of the floods yesterday is reported from Wolf's Island, fifteen miles below Cairo, where six persons were drowned. At Cairo, Shawneetown, and other points, the high water continues, and both there and elsewhere the people are looking forward to the coming thaw with feelings of dread.

Feb. 25th.—The report of Gen. Thibaudin, Minister of War, of France, in justification of the retirement of the Duc d'Aumale, the Duc d'Chartres, and the Duc d'Alencon, says public opinion demanded the adoption of a measure placing these Princes on the retired list. The public had become alive to the inconvenience of the presence in the army of officers belonging to former reigning families. The great principles of subordination and discipline might be weakened thereby. The Temps, Nationale and Paris, Conservative Republican papers, deplore the fact that the Government was forced to place the Princes on the retired list of the army. They demand a revision of the law of 1834, that officers be reinstated.

An explosion of dynamite yesterday occurred in the open air in the Village of Ganshorten, Germany. One of the men wounded, named Metayar, has since died. The injured men belonged to a committee of anarchists. They were experimenting with a new kind of fireworks when the explosion accidentally occurred. The police have seized documents revealing a plot affecting Belgium and other countries. It is rumored that disclosures made in connection with the explosion and seizure of papers will lead to the arrest of Louise Michel and several of her colleagues. One of the men who was not wounded by the explosion is Cyroet, a weaver from Lyons. It is said the French Government has demanded his extradition. The house of the anarchist in Brussels who entertained Louise Michel when she was here was recently searched by the police, who seized three trunks. A majority of the documents contained therein were written in Russian and Italian, and refer to an international plot. It is reported that the documents show that a plot has been organized to murder the Czar of Russia on the occasion of his coronation.

Cyrot, after the explosion, returned to his lodgings and removed a trunk and two bags.

The Senate of France, adopted—156 to 115 Humbert's bill modifying the oath in the courts.

Feb. 26.—Stormy times are being had in the English Parliament over the Irish Question, and Dublin is greatly excited over the recent developments there in regard to the Phenix Park murders.

The Mark Lane Express, in its weekly review of the British grain trade, says: The wheat trade is slacker. Some of the provincial markets declined Saturday 1@2s. Flour closed 6d cheaper. Barley was steady. Foreign wheat is in the merest retail demand and 1@2s. lower. Flour is in large supply and 6d cheaper. Eight fresh cargoes of wheat arrived, with eight sales; eleven were withdrawn, and five remain. Cargoes on passage and for shipment are very quiet and generally 6d lower. Sales of English wheat the last week, 48,263 quarters, at 41s. 5d. per quarter, against 37,065 quarters, at 45s. 7d the corresponding period of last year.

Hundreds of half starved people are cooped up in Shawneetown, Ill., in consequence of the floods. The Arkansas river is booming, and a blizzard is raging in Michigan.

Feb. 27th.—Accounts from the district of Gweedore, County Donegal, in the north-western part of Ireland, indicate the condition of the people as most distressing. The medical officer of the district reports the children much emaciated in consequence of a scarcity of diet and the general use of seaweed as their principal meal. Sick persons are in almost every house, owing to a want of food.

Popular ferment has resulted from the alteration of the railway tariff affecting the sulphur trade in Catania, Sicily. The situation is becoming grave. Two men-of-war and a regiment of troops have arrived to maintain order. Many persons have been arrested, including several of importance.

A paper bomb charged with powder was thrown into the courtyard of the residence of the Austrian Ambassador. Two similar petards were thrown at the same time, one before the Austrian Embassy to the Vatican and the other in front of the royal palace of the Quirinal. A supposed priest has been arrested. No one was injured.

A dispatch from Durban, South Africa, says it is reported that the Boers have defeated Chief Mapoch and captured Chief Mampoor.

The scene at Shawneetown, Ill., in consequence of the floods, is one of utter woe and consternation. It can only be reached by a journey of several hours, over a wild and desolate waste of waters. One woman died in the court house, leaving a babe a week old. Throughout the town houses are on end, planted firmly in the mud, and others bobbing up here and there like huge bottles. In many parts houses are afloat, only waiting for a wind to move them off in some direction.

Over one thousand people in this town are huddled together in public buildings, driven from their homes by the floods. Of 300 farm houses between Evansville, Ind., and Shawneetown, Ill., not one is left. Fully 150 families are nearly destitute. The Arkansas river is still rising, and threatens a greater inundation than was ever known before.

None of the bodies of the buried miners, at Braidwood Ill., have been yet recovered.

JOSEPH SMITH - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, 17th March, 1883.

HOME AGAIN.

WE left Harlan, for Washington on the morning of February 20th, by the way of Council Bluffs, starting from the latter place on the 21st at 9:30 a. m. reaching Galien, Michigan, in answer to telegram from Bro. George A. Blakeslee, who joined us at that point on the 22d. From there Bro. Blakeslee and the Editor in company reached Philadelphia on Saturday the 24th at midnight. We found Bro. Z. H. Gurley, and others there on Sunday the 25th.

At Philadelphia, we were the guests of sister Julius Heck, who with her brothers Ivan and John Branson made us welcome. Bro. Wm. Small, President, and Archie Cameron Priest, and Harrison, Teacher of the branch, gave us welcome to the church in Philadelphia. Bro. Joseph A. Stewart received us gladly and did all he could to make our stay, personally pleasant. The Editor spoke to the Saints morning and evening in their hall, corner of 9th and Callowhill streets, a small but neat place of worship.

We staid three days in Philadelphia, and on Wednesday morning, February 28th, left for Washington to carry out the direction of the Fall Conference, to lay before the Secretary of the State, our request for the correction of the letter of W. M. Evarts, former Secretary of State, according to the resolution of said Fall session. The work done last winter by Bro. Z. H. Gurley and E. L. Kelley had produced a good effect in Washington, as we discovered; and the further efforts of Bro. Gurley in December last, had proved an excellent preparatory work for a final reception by the Secretary, Hon. F. T. Frelinghuysen.

We requested the Hon. W. P. Hepburn, Representative from the 8th Congressional District, of Iowa, to secure us a presentation to the Secretary; and this he secured and arranged for with Senator W. B. Allison, for Monday, March 5th, at 10:30 a. m. We met these gentlemen by appointment in the lobby of the Secretary's office, and upon the request of Senator Allison, were admitted to an interview, and were by him introduced to the Secretary. The Senator stated the object of our coming, the people whom we represented, and endorsed us most cordially as worthy to be heard.

We then briefly stated our mission, placed our written statement in the Secretary's hand, received from him the promise of a consideration of what we had presented.

The reception was courteous and all that we could expect, and we retired satisfied with the result of our visit. The impression made by brethren Gurley and Kelley in their mission to Washington a year ago, was an excellent one. They became known and were recognized as worthy men representing a worthy people; and we take pleasure in expressing our personal thanks and regard to these brethren for the manner in which they maintained the cause they represented.

The kindest regard and courtesy were shown to us by Senator Allison and Hon. W. P. Hepburn, of Iowa, and Hon. J. C. Burrows of Michigan, and others to whom we were from time to time introduced, treated us with courtesy, of which we could make no complaint.

Bad news travels fast, and such news met us at the Capitol, for in the care of Hon. Burrows of Michigan, was a telegram from Bro. E. Banta to Bro. Blakeslee, and in care of Hon. Hepburn, of Iowa, one from Bro. John Scott, of the Herald Office, announcing that on the 26th Bro. Lawrence Conover, Secretary of the Board of Publication, Book-keeper and accountant of the Herald Office, had absconded with funds of the office to an amount not known.

This made it necessary that Bro. Blakeslee, or the Editor should return at once to Lamoni. Neither could leave Washington until some understanding as to when an interview with the Secretary of State could be had. This was accomplished the next day, March 1st, and Bro. Blakeslee left for Lamoni, by the way of Kirtland, Ohio, the same evening. Bro. Zenas H. Gurley and the Editor followed him on the morning of the 6th as soon after the interview had been accorded as it was practicable to leave. Bro. Gurley left us at Davis City, and we arrived at home, the 9th at ten in the evening.

We found Bro. Blakeslee, Phineas Cadwell and W. W. Blair all anxiously waiting. Bro. Curwen had come and waited as long as he could, and had gone to attend to the affairs of the firm for which he travels.

The interrupted receipts, entries and orders for HERALD, HOPE, ADVOCATE and books, had been taken in hand by Bro. Blair, at the direction by telegram from Bro. Blakeslee, and were being brought into order and regularity. Telegrams had been sent to banks, and others where necessary to curtail further losses where they were liable to occur; and an effort made to secure some trace of the fleeing man.

Upon our arrival Bro. George A. Blakeslee, president, called the Board together, and measures were adopted to provide for the emergency and secure the conducting of the Herald Office affairs, without delays or stoppage.

Wild and conflicting rumors are afloat in every direction; but the Saints will do well to go slow to hear and believe what they hear. As soon as it can be done, a clear report of the loss will be made. No one need to feel alarmed, all that can be done will be done. The loss is not an irretrievable one; except the loss of esteem and confidence in which the Secretary was held. He had by a very commendable deportment won his way into the confidence of all connected with the office; this confidence he has rudely and cruelly betrayed, and this he can not retrieve. He might have wrought more injury than is now discovered, and though he has robbed the Office and the Church of moneys, and soiled by betrayal of trust the good name of those connected with the office, he alone can be the ultimate sufferer from these acts.

The affairs of the office will go on, the HERALD, HOPE, ADVOCATE will come out in their time; books will be sent as ordered, and all the business continue, with all the accuracy and despatch possible. We will pay attention to inquiries for moneys and orders sent, and give all the explanation we can respecting failure to receive, or to forward if received any and all orders stated to us to have been sent, and in short will do all that can be done to correct the errors and wrongs of a defaulting servant of the office.

It is bad enough but not so bad but what it might have been worse; and fault-finding and accusation and recrimination, and undue sorrowing and discouragement are unbecoming and unnecessary. Be patient and read Psalm 37.

LETTER FROM R. PATTERSON.

PRESBYTERIAN BANNER,

PITTSBURG, Pa., Dec. 28th, 1883.

MR. JOSEPH SMITH,

Dear Sir:—You are of course acquainted with the claim advanced in behalf of Rev. Solomon Spaulding, as the author of the historical portion of the "Book of Mormon." I mail to you herewith a statement of the evidence in support of this claim, so far as I have been able to collect it. I solicit your careful and candid examination of the testimony here presented, and shall esteem it a favor to have any errors pointed out, and mistakes corrected. I shall be glad to hear from you personally upon the subject; but if you think proper to notice the pamphlet in your paper, please send me a copy. I mail you two copies of the pamphlet, as you may wish to scissor some portions for extracts.

The truth has nothing to fear from honest, impartial discussion; and in gathering evidence I have been careful to note down and publish as well what conflicts with common opinion, as what sustains it.

I pray God to open your mind to the entrance of the truth, and to give you the courage to avow it. Your position is a very peculiar one; I realize its embarrassments; at the same time there is a peculiar responsibility also resting upon you to do what you can to rectify a great wrong.

I shall be glad to hear from you on the subject of this pamphlet. With sincerest wishes that you may be guided into the right, I am yours,

R. PATTERSON,

198 Penn Avenue, PITTSBURGH, Pa.

The foregoing letter was received by us some time ago, and as soon after its receipt as practicable, we wrote and mailed to Mr. Patterson an article, of which the following is a copy. This is not published as an exhaustive treatise upon the subject, but in the belief that it contains a sufficient answer to the pamphlet referred to by Mr. Patterson; and that the thoughts suggested can be made available in the defense of truth.

LETTER TO R. PATTERSON.

LAMONI, Ia, Jan. 20th, 1883.

MR. R. PATTERSON,

198 Penn Avenue, Pittsburg, Pa.

Your letter of December 28th, 1882, was duly received, but by reason of busy cares I have not been able to reply.

The pamphlet sent by you came two or three days after the letter reached me.

One sentence of your letter you would probably resent as an impertinence, or attribute to fanatical cant if I were to repeat it, with a request for you to make it of personal application to yourself.

"I pray God to open your mind to the entrance of the truth, and to give you the courage to avow it."

Believe me, I do not refer to it to resent it, or to refuse to acknowledge the force of the admonition; or to ignore the good influence with which God endows the mind to examine and receive the truth.

You will pardon me when I state that no man living has a greater interest in the question whether the Book of Mormon is a fabrication from Rev. S. Spaulding's romance, or a discovery of deposited records of early inhabitants of this country as it purports to be, and came into being as my father, Sidney Rigdon, Martin Harris, Peter and David Whitmer, Oliver Cowdery and others, claim.

If the religious teachings and principles that the book contains are true, and comport with the New Testament Scriptures, I am interested in maintaining them and the book because of them. If those principles are false, I am interested in abandoning them and inducing others to do so too. If I become satisfied that the statement respecting the manner in which Joseph Smith became possessed of the records is true, I am interested in maintaining it; and if I become convinced that he was a bad man, and foisted a falsehood upon the world, deliberately, persistently and wickedly, I am interested in denouncing such act.

I have examined every work published against Joseph Smith, Mormonism and the Mormons, that I could procure; from E. D. Howe's book to the last confession of John D. Lee, and Ann Eliza's exposure. I have given them all a close, and so far as I could, an analytical consideration; and will do the same with your pamphlet. The results I will write you, and you will no doubt read what I send carefully and thoughtfully, whether you do prayerfully or not.

Like all who have essayed to write upon the subject, you have taken Howe's work as the basis, and have considered what is stated there as proved. If, therefore, discredit is thrown upon that work, the premise upon which your argument rests is destroyed.

So far as Joseph Smith's possible access to the manuscript of Solomon Spaulding is concerned, whatever previous writers may have done, the theory is abandoned by you.

This leaves the question confined to Sidney Rigdon and his possible connection with those manuscripts.

The possession of the manuscript is accounted for in the statement of Mesdames Davison and McKinstry, daughter and wife of Rev. Spaulding, from its inception until its committal to Dr. Hurlbut in 1834; except the possible time it may have been in the care of Silas Engle, as stated by your father, "some weeks," and returned as he supposed, and Mrs. McKinstry states, and as it must have been; because Mrs. McKinstry states that she had access to it at her Uncle Sabine's after Mr. Spaulding's death, after the removal of the family from Amity, Pennsylvania, and before their arrival in Monson, Massachusetts.

This narrows the time in which Sidney Rigdon could have had access to the "Manuscript Found" to these "some weeks," that they were in Engle's or your father's care; the identity of the manuscript insisted upon as the origin of the Book of Mormon and the one left at the office of your father being admitted. If Rigdon had access to it at this time he must have copied it, as Engle returned the original.

The theory that S. Rigdon copied it is untenable for two reasons.

One is the time allowed for the work, and the circumstances do not favor it. The other is that Rigdon was not at Pittsburg till 1821-2, five or six years after Spaulding's death and the removal of the family with the manuscript in their possession from that place. This theory of Sidney Rigdon's getting possession of the manuscript through Lambdin subsequently, upon the supposition that Spaulding had transcribed it for the printer is ingenious, but is a supposition only, unsupported by any proof; and shows the first theory to be of doubtful character, or it would not have been resorted to.

The statement that Dr. Hurlbut sold the manuscript of the "Manuscript Found" to the Mormons is disposed of by the Doctor himself, who placed it as he says, in the hands of E. D. Howe, of Painesville, Ohio. The force of these points is seen when you take up and consider one by one the statements made by the witnesses cited by Mr. Howe in his work, respecting the similarity between the names, plot of the work and history of Mr. Spaulding's suppositious romance, and the Book of Mormon. All these witnesses certify upon their memory, and you should in justice in the absence of direct testimony upon the point, apply your note number 1, page 11 of your work.

The possession of the manuscript being accounted for until long after the publication of the Book of Mormon, and always in the hands of the antagonists of Mormonism, the opposers of Joseph Smith, the principle of the law of evidence holds good that a party is precluded from proving the contents of a written instrument, unless it is shown that such instrument is lost, or destroyed, or in the hands of the opposite party. In this case, so far from proving that the manuscripts are destroyed, or lost, or in the hands of the Mormons, it is distinctly shown as a material fact, that they were in the hands of the original owner, and his heirs and successors until after the publication of the Book of Mormon, and then went into the hands of E. D. Howe, the publisher of a work against the Mormons, and in ostensible refutation of their theory of the origin of that book. Mr. Howe in direct violation of this well known rule of evidence, proceeds to introduce several witnesses who testify to their recollection of this manuscript, as having heard it read by Mr. Spaulding, all the way from twelve to sixteen years after his death, and thus, too, when the manuscript is shown to be in the possession of Mr. Howe.* When therefore, the Mormon resorts to the plea that the better and more conclusive way to have proven the plagiarism charged, would have been to produce the manuscript, and print it in juxtaposition with the portions of the Book of Mormon said to have been plagiarized from it; that a faithful comparison of the two might be made; he does but insist upon the observance of one of the commonest rules of evidence known to the legal mind. And instead of being himself liable to the charge of resorting to a "dishonorable plea," he shows the weakness of the claim made for the Spaulding romance, and makes apparent the "uncommon straits" to which those who claim the "Manuscript Found" origin for the Book of Mormon, are driven to maintain that claim. And this plea is a just and good one, both against Mrs. McKinstry and Mrs. Spaulding, and all others who claim the manuscript as the origin of the Book of Mormon, for these last make themselves parties to the case upon the side in whose possession the manuscript is found to be. When you present the statement that such a plea is dishonorable, you unconsciously allow yourself to become partizan, and adopt the language of avowed enemies of Joseph Smith and Mormonism; and if the evidence of Mormons, and those friendly to them is to be disposed of as unworthy of belief, because the witnesses are interested, and therefore partial and biased; the rule must apply, and with equal propriety and force, to those at enmity with the Mormons as interested, prejudiced and biased against them. This only results in leaving the matters at issue to rest upon testimony equally worthy, or unworthy.

Mesdames Davison and McKinstry both aver that the trunk and manuscripts contained in it, were in the possession of the family, the trunk never out of actual, or constructive possession, and the manuscript always except the time referred to, when somewhere about 1814 it was presented to your father and Silas Engle for publication, and by them returned to Mrs. Spaulding. It was in the trunk at the time Mrs. McKinstry had access to it at Mr. Sabine's house. It must have been there when the trunk went to Monson at Mrs. Spaulding's marriage to Dr. Davidson; and there it must have been found, when, in 1834, Mr. Hurlbut procured it upon the order of Mrs. Davison. Here then is the unbroken chain of its possession found. What follows. Dr. Hurlbut turns the manuscript over to E. D. Howe, with the manuscript copy unfinished of the Mormonism Unveiled, and the affidavits, etc., which Mr. Howe worked into the book afterwards published. The avowed purpose for which the manuscript was asked for by Hurlbut, was that a comparison should be made with the Book of Mormon then published. The widow "with great reluctance" authorized the loan of the manuscript to Hurlbut upon the solicitation of Mr. Sabine. There can be no doubt from this straight relation that the parties to this transaction, Mrs. Davison, Mr. W. H. Sabine and Dr. Hurlbut, all were satisfied that the manuscript then delivered to Hurlbut was the original "Manuscript Found," the romancing narrative of a suppositious people, whose mythical history a reverend gentleman dying of consumption wrote for amusement, with the hope that it might sell well enough to help him pay his debts. When this manuscript is next heard from, Mr. Hurlbut informs Mrs. Spaulding that it "did not read as he expected, and he would not publish it." It is claimed that it was not returned by Hurlbut, or Howe, up to as late as 1844, when, as stated by Miss E. Dickinson, an effort was made by Mr. Spaulding's family to get possession of it by demanding its return. No part of this manuscript thus obtained by Hurlbut was ever published by E. D. Howe, in whose possession it is left by those who account for its continued existence; and I believe both E. D. Howe and Dr. Hurlbut are living, the latter at Sturgis, Michigan; the former, at Painesville, Ohio. This is strong presumptive proof that the "Manuscript Found" would not bear out the claim that it was the origin of the Book of Mormon. If it had done there is no more certain conclusion to reach than that Messrs. Hurlbut and Howe would never have contented themselves with attempting to prove from the memory of those who "heard portions of it read" that the manuscript and Book of Mormon were one and the same thing in essence, but would have at once put the manuscript in print and thus silenced the claim to Divine inspiration for all time. It will not do to say that there was a transcript made by Spaulding," and that from this transcript the Book of Mormon was written and published. This only complicates the difficulty and would have rendered detection all the more certain, if Mr. Howe held the original. One of two conclusions is inevitable, that the "Manuscript Found," the possession of which has been traced, was not the original of the Book of Mormon, or that no manuscript bearing such similarity to the Book of Mormon from which it could have been so plagiarized was ever written; and that the mythical romance referred to, suppressed as it has been, has been made to do mysterious duty by those opposed to and at enmity with Joseph Smith and Mormonism, and who have not

*Mr. Howe we are informed, was himself a lawyer, and is presumed to have known, and without doubt did know, that while the manuscript in question was in his possession, or under his control, or in existence anywhere where it could by legal process be reached, oral testimony in regard to its contents was incompetent, and therefore inadmissible; and the fact that he knowingly introduced incompetent testimony to make out his case, is conclusive proof that he knew that the introduction of the manuscript, the only competent evidence under the circumstances, would, instead of supporting his claim, overthrow it entirely. No man can practice law in our courts in this way without being regarded as a low pettifogger, wanting either in the knowledge or honesty necessary to the proper practice of his profession. Lawyers do not resort to such dishonorable "tricks of the trade" as this, except where there is no possibility of making a case without them.

the honesty to return the manuscript to Mrs. McKinstry, or to publish it themselves that the infamy of their course may be made plain; or the presumption of the plagiarism fully established.

The point which you attempt to make on page 14, that it is "adding insult to injury to call on Mr. Spaulding's daughter to collate the Book of Mormon with her father's manuscript of which she has been so shamefully robbed," is very much out of place. Mrs. Spaulding and her daughter and Mr. W. H. Sabine were Particeps criminis in whatever robbery was committed; and were parties in an endeavor to fasten gross fraud upon Joseph Smith; and if Hurlbut did not get the "Manuscript Found" it was not the fault of Mrs. Spaulding and her daughter; and it sounds very like a whine of chagrin at the apparent failure of the scheme to what Hurlbut essayed to do for them or any one else to put in such a plea of indignation against a sound charge, that the natural guardians and custodians of that remarkable document, the alleged origin of the Book of Mormon should either produce the original, or show conclusive and good reason why they do not.

That the "Manuscript Found" either in the original, or a transcribed form was ever in the hands of Sidney Rigdon, is a matter of assumption only, and based upon the peculiar sort of proof that characterizes the whole affair presented by Howe and others, viz: "It would not be strange if Spaulding, being a man of leisure, and fond of writing, had made out a revised copy for the printer, retaining his own first sheets, and that these latter were what he took to Amity, leaving the other at Patterson's office," etc. From this presumption the existence of two copies is taken as proved. If this were so, it is in proof, and that from the statement of your father and Mrs. Spaulding, that whatever was left at the printing office was returned to Mrs. Spaulding; thus tracing original sheets and transcribed copy into the hands of their rightful owners. Which of these did Hurlbut get? If the original sheets, the transcribed copy was still left with Mrs. Spaulding, and whether the original or transcribed copy, the difficulty of Sidney Rigdon's securing either without detection is increased materially.

It is very singular that the method of proof resorted to by Howe, (upon the supposition that he wrote "Mormonism Unveiled") should have been adopted by you. The witnesses with scarcely an exception are of that class that gives secondary or hearsay evidence.

John Spaulding tells what his brother told him.

Martha Spaulding, states that having read the Book of Mormon she has no doubt it is the same historically that she read and heard read more than twenty years ago.

Nahum Howard states only what he says Spaulding told him.

Artemus Cunningham recollects an expression, "I Nephi," as occurring in the reading of a manuscript by Spaulding—but pleads the lapse of twenty-two years, as accounting for a failure to remember more fully the general plot. After a partial examination he believes that Spaulding wrote the outlines before leaving Connecticut.

The secondary statement of Mrs. Matilda (Spaulding) Davison, was written down by Rev. D. R. Austin, and printed by him in the Boston Recorder in 1839.

In direct reference to this very statement, Parley P. Pratt wrote to the New Era Nov. 27th, 1839, denying Mr. Rigdon's alleged connection with the getting up of the Book of Mormon. As to the truth of the statement then made he writes: "The person or persons who fabricated that falsehood would do well to repent." Mr. Pratt states further: "Mr. Rigdon embraced the doctrine through my instrumentality. I first presented the Book of Mormon to him. I stood upon the bank of the stream while he was baptized, and assisted to officiate in his ordination, and I was unacquainted with the system until some months after its organization, which was on the sixth of April, 1830, and I embraced it in September following."

Mr. Pratt further notices that "Mormonism Unveiled" makes Mr. Hurlbut to state that the manuscript of the Spaulding romance was "not to be found," while Mrs. Davison in her Boston Recorder letter states, that "it was carefully preserved." Pratt also challenges the production of the manuscript that its truth may be seen. He writes: "If there be such a manuscript in existence, let it come forward at once, and not be kept in the dark."

Mr. Howe's book was not at that date so old, nor the time and place so remote but what there was strong probability that such a production of the manuscript might have been had, if it was in existence. Mr. Pratt adds: "The Spaulding story, so far as the origin of the Book of Mormon is concerned, I know to be false."

Jesse Haven passed through Monson soon after the publication of the letter in the Boston Recorder, and to him Mrs. Davison denied signing or sending the letter which you quote from. In the same interview she stated that Dr. Hurlbut did get the manuscript, and afterwards wrote to her that it did not read as was expected and it would not be published. This Boston Recorder letter was written by D. R. Austin, and you make it do duty as her own.

In January, 1836, the truth of the statements in Howe's book were specifically denied in the Messenger and Advocate, then published in Kirtland by the Church of Christ, or Latter Day Saints, in plain terms, viz: "Witness Mr. Campbell's recommendation of Howe's book, while he knows, as well as every person who reads it, that it is a batch of falsehoods." In the same paper for April is another reference to Mr. Howe's book as an attempt to overthrow Mormonism, which is indirectly denominated as "wicked and scurrilous."

Mrs. Spaulding and Mrs. McKinstry, who had personal access to the effects of Mr. Spaulding, including the manuscript left by him, are very careful in their statements respecting the contents of the manuscript called the "Manuscript Found." Indeed, Mrs. Spaulding does not state anything in regard to her knowledge of that work, and it is certainly reasonable to suppose that she also, if all the neighbors came to hear the manuscript read, would have heard it; but she does not so state. Mrs. McKinstry, however, testifies, only as late as 1880, and then reiterates the names of some that she heard him mention while reading. This is strikingly peculiar; for in the same article written by Miss E. E. Dickinson, from which you quote, Mrs. McKinstry states that she "perfectly remembers the trunk and its contents, one of which was the 'Manuscript Found.'" She had then an opportunity to read it, and if she had so read it could have spoken from her reading and not her hearing. She also states: "I remember that the old trunk with its contents reached her [her mother] in safety." This was when it had been sent from Onondaga Valley to Hartswick, New York. You are not at liberty to deny what Mrs. McKinstry states respecting the safety of the manuscript in the Scribner, for you have quoted from it as competent.

Bro. Griffiths is preaching at Lampsville. We received a card from him a few days ago. He had baptized three, and thought there would be more.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE are informed by Elder William Gibson that the District Conference of the District of Utah, will be held in Salt Lake City, Utah, commencing April 6th, 1883.

We learn by card from Bro. J. F. Mintun, that two have been baptized at Fremont, Nebraska, the scene of his late discussion with Elder Cudney of the Advents, on the Sabbath question.

BRO. WM. BURCH, of Port Sanilac, Michigan, under date of February 18th, reports a faith cure, and other interesting items, as follows:

A week ago to-day, I, in company with a sister, walked eight miles through some of the worst snow drifts I ever witnessed to a preaching meeting, two miles north of Richmondville. We were very tired when we got there, but we were more than paid for our walk, for we had the pleasure of seeing nine precious souls baptized, and the power of God made manifest before the world. There was a woman there who was subject to fits, and while there was taken with one, and Bro. Cornish was called to administer to her, and he told one or two of the people to raise her up. Then he laid his hands on her and prayed for her, and rebuked the spirit in the name of Jesus of Nazareth, and immediately she opened her eyes. He led her to the meeting, and she was all right throughout the entire meeting. When Bro. Cornish got through preaching, he gave way for a little fellowship meeting, in which this same woman got up, and requested to be united with the Church. That evening nine were baptized by Bro. Cornish.

How will those who disbelieve in faith-cures dispose of the following testimony:

A TROY MAN RESTORED TO HEALTH AFTER HAVING BEEN CONFINED TO HIS BED SEVERAL YEARS.

Troy, N. Y., Feb. 20th.—For nearly three years Charity Commissioner Sterry had been confined to his house, with but brief freedom from pain. His malady has been rheumatism of the nerves, and his misery has been almost beyond endurance. The muscles of his legs were so contracted that he had been compelled to lie in bed, with his limbs frightfully distorted. His voice was feeble, and the partial loss of other faculties made death preferable to constant suffering. Physicians were unable to give him relief. Yesterday morning Mr. Allen, representing a faith home in Massachusetts, and the guest of the Rev. J. G. Fallon, was induced to visit Sterry. The latter and his family are devout members of Mr. Fallon's congregation. Three Christian ladies, among whom was Miss Annie Cooper, whose wonderful recovery through prayer after an illness of nineteen years was recently published, were called in, and earnest entreaties to the Heavenly Father were made for the restoration of the bedridden man. Another season of prayer was held yesterday afternoon, and the results were miraculous. Mr. Sterry, in a loud, clear voice, said to a reporter this morning: "It is all God's work. Blessed be his name! During the prayers yesterday afternoon I experienced a glowing sensation and an uncontrollable desire to spring from my bed and walk. Suddenly my legs straightened out, and to my surprise, I found that I had recovered the use of them. I then insisted that I should leave my bed. My friends assisting me, I walked from my bed to a chair. It was the first time I had been able to control my legs since my malady had become aggravated. My voice, as you can testify, is as strong as ever, and my eyesight, nearly gone, is returned to me."—Chicago Tribune.

Let those whose notions of the rights of property are a little loose, read the following good hit, and never forget the lesson it teaches.

TIT FOR TAT.

"One day," said this gentleman, "before harvest, I met a fashionably dressed person with a large handful of ears of wheat, taken from my fields. I saluted him respectfully, and expressed my admiration of the beauty of the wheat."

"Yes," said he, "it is truly a fine sample, and does the farmer great credit who grew it."

"I acknowledged the compliment, and asked him from which of my fields he took it. After he had pointed it out, he assured me he always liked to take a good sample home, as it interested the ladies.

"Upon this, noticing with admiration the style of his coat, I asked him to allow me to look at the skirt. He readily did so, and I quietly took out my penknife and cut a large piece from the tail. The gentleman bounced and swore; but I told him I always took samples of cloth, as I found they greatly interested my wife. I added, that he had no more right to take my wheat than I to take his coat, and that I wished the public to bear this truth in mind."

This was experience bought with a vengeance.—Chambers' Journal.

THE following from the Chicago Tribune of March 6th, will explain to the HERALD readers what brethren Z. H. Gurley and the Editor are doing at Washington.

LATTER DAY SAINTS.

MONOGAMIST MORMONS AT THE CAPITAL.

Washington, D. C., March 5th.—When the Hon. William M. Evarts was Secretary of State, a circular letter was sent to all foreign Governments, asking that the emigration of Mormons to the United States be prevented, as they came to this country to practice crime against its laws. The "Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," however, do not practice polygamy, and they claim that the circular letter of Secretary Evarts works injury and injustice to their church. This body claims to have between 20,000 and 30,000 communicants, and have their central organization at Lamoni, Iowa. Most of these Mormons are in this country, but they have a large membership in Europe. Today Elders Joseph Smith, "son of the founder of the Mormon Church," and Z. H. Gurley, a committee on behalf of the Reorganized Church, waited upon the Secretary of State and asked that Secretary Evarts' letter be modified so as to distinguish between themselves and the polygamous branch of the church. They presented a memorial, in which it is stated polygamy was no part of the faith of the primitive Latter Day Saints, and is no part of the faith to-day; but is a loathsome practice indulged in only by an offshoot from the true Mormon Church, and is properly branded by Secretary Evarts as a crime. The memorial recites that the Reorganized Church has its missionaries in various parts of Europe, Australia, and in the Society Islands in the Pacific, and that Justice demands it should be relieved from the odium and shame of classification with a body practicing crime against the laws of the country in which the great body of its communicants live, and from the disability under which its missionaries labor in spreading their faith.

The committee were introduced to the Secretary by Senator Allison and the Hon. W. P. Hepburn, of Iowa. Secretary Frelinghuysen took the memorial, and promised that the appeal should be considered.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. J. H. Lake wrote us from Walsingham Center, Ontario, February 20th, as follows:

I have been preaching in the Town Hall at this place, and at Port Rowan, and at the Union School-house (a new place); since the 25th of January, with good liberty and attentive listeners; and some have said that I preach the truth, but none have had the courage to obey the truth. I expect to leave here to-morrow for Corinth; there for a few days, then to London, and then I think of going into the other district, Kent and Elgin, for a while before the Spring Conference.

FROM the Columbus (Nebraska) Democrat, we clip the following:

"Henry J. Hudson, whom some of our citizens know as a Mormon Elder of Columbus, for many years, has lately been confirmed as postmaster of that city. Wishing no evil to the former incumbent, Allen Gerrard, (whom wealth however places above political emolument), we hereby tender our sincere congratulations to our friend and neighbor, H. J. Hudson.

THE Utah bill, reported by Mr. Edmunds January 11th, and debated February 20th, in the United States' Senate, is as follows:

A bill to provide further means for the suppression of the crimes of bigamy, polygamy, and unlawful cohabitation in the Territories of the United States, and to provide for the better government of the Territory of Utah, and for other purposes.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress, etc.

That in any proceeding and examination before a grand jury, a Judge, or a United States' Commissioner, in any prosecution for bigamy, polygamy or unlawful cohabitation under any statute of the United States, the lawful husband or wife of the person accused shall be a competent witness, and may be called and may be compelled to testify in such proceeding, examination, or prosecution without the consent of the husband or wife, as the case may be.

SEC. 2. That in any prosecution for bigamy, polygamy, or unlawful cohabitation, under any statute of the United States, whether before a United States Commissioner, Judge, a grand jury, or any court, an attachment for any witness may be issued by the court, Judge, or Commissioner without a previous subpoena, compelling the immediate attendance of such witness, when it shall appear to the Commissioner, Judge, or court, as the case may be, that there is reasonable ground to believe that such witness would unlawfully fail to obey a subpoena issued and served in the usual course in such cases.

Sec. 3. That any prosecution for bigamy, polygamy, or unlawful cohabitation may be commenced at any time within five years next after the commission of the offense; but this provision shall not be construed to apply to any offense already barred by any existing statute of limitation.

Sec. 4. That every ceremony of marriage, or in the nature of marriage, in any of the Territories of the United States, whether either or both or more of the parties to such ceremony be lawfully competent to be the subjects of such marriage or ceremony or not, shall be certified in writing by a certificate stating the fact and nature of such ceremony, the full name of each of the parties concerned, and the full name of every officer and of every person in any way taking part in the performance of such ceremony, which certificate shall be drawn up and signed by the parties to such ceremony and by every officer or person taking part in the performance of such ceremony, and shall be by the officer, priest, or other person solemnizing such marriage or ceremony filed in the office of the Probate Court, or, if there be none, in the office of the court having probate powers in the county or district in which such ceremony shall take place for record, and shall be immediately recorded. Such certificate shall be prima-facie evidence of the facts required by this act to be stated therein, in any proceeding, civil or criminal, in which the matter shall be drawn in question. Any person who shall violate any of the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000, or by imprisonment not longer than two years, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court.

Sec. 5. That every record and entry of any kind concerning any ceremony of marriage, or in the nature of marriage, made or kept by any officer, clergyman, priest, or person performing civil or ecclesiastical functions, whether lawful or not, in any Territory of the United States, shall, be subject to inspection at all reasonable times by any officer of justice appointed under the authority of the United States, and shall, on request, be produced and shown to such officer by any person in whose possession or control the same may be. Every person who shall violate the provisions of this section shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, on conviction thereof, be punished by a fine of not more than $1,000 or by imprisonment not longer than two years, or by both said punishments, in the discretion of the court. And it shall be lawful for any United States Commissioner, Judge, or court before whom any proceeding shall be pending in which such record or entry, may be material, by proper warrant, to cause such record or entry, and the book, document, or paper containing the same to be taken and brought before him or it for the purposes of such proceeding.

Sec. 6. That nothing in this act shall be held to prevent the proof of marriages, whether lawful or unlawful, by any evidence now legally admissible for that purpose.

Sec. 7. That it shall not be lawful for any female to vote at any election hereafter held in the Territory of Utah for any public purpose whatever, and no such vote shall be received or counted or given effect in any manner whatever; and any and every act of the Governor and Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Utah providing for and allowing the registration or voting of females is hereby annulled.

Sec. 8. That the existing election districts and apportionments of representation concerning the members of the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Utah are hereby abolished, and it shall be the duty of the Governor, Territorial Secretary, and the United States Judges in said Territory forthwith to redistrict said Territory and apportion representation in the same in such manner as to provide as nearly as may be for an equal representation of the people (excepting Indians not taxed) being citizens of the United States, according to numbers, in said Legislative Assembly, and to the number of members of the Council and House of Representatives, respectively, as now established by law. And a record of the establishment of such new districts and the apportionment of representation thereto shall be made in the office of the Secretary of said Territory, and such establishment and representation shall continue until Congress shall otherwise provide; and no persons other than citizens of the United States otherwise qualified shall be entitled to vote at any election in said Territory.

Summary of News.

Mar. 1st.—The losses reported to-day, are over half a million, done by the floods, which will not cover one-fourth the damage. There has been no effort made to describe the general devastation of the country for miles, and the sight can not be realized until witnessed personally. No pen can describe the suffering of the scores of women and children, and invalids throughout the inundated country when overtaken by the encroaching river. We can not exaggerate the picture. The people who suffered have true Western pluck and heroism born into them, and even those who lost everything still have the courage, self-reliance and indomitable spirit to face the storm, and try it again.

The water is steadily rising at Helena, Arkansas. The inhabitants consider that there is danger ahead.

The Mississippi river from the bluffs, at the foot of which Columbus, Ky., is situated, was such as was never before witnessed, so far as the record shows. To the south-east and north, no land is visible for from ten to twenty miles, though a few ridges are said to remain above water at points some distance in the interior, to which stock and other property have been removed for safety.

Belmont, Mo., is a watery waste, every foot of ground being under water from ten to twenty-five feet. The water is half-way up the first story of the Belmont Hotel, which is several feet above the ordinary level. Other and smaller houses are half, or more than half, submerged. All business, railroad and private, is suspended. The people there are up stairs in the hotel, while others have gone to the hills on the Kentucky side, or to points up the Iron Mountain Railroad. The water is variously estimated at from five to seven inches above the mark of last year. Mr. Frank Lucas, four miles above Belmont, lost his entire crop, while his neighbor, Mr. George Hudson, had his dwelling and all other buildings on the premises swept away by ice. Wolf Island is almost completely covered, only a few dry spots being left as a refuge for stock, and such other property as could be moved in time.

March 2.—George Stephen, of the Canadian Pacific syndicate, has made a suggestion in the London press for relieving the distress in Ireland by assisting the emigration of 10,000 agriculturists to the Canadian North-west Territory, and offers to provide capital for starting by way of loans.

The court house, churches, school buildings, and other public places in Shawneetown, Ill., are still crowded with people, driven from their homes by the floods. Some are sick, some dying, and many sitting in abject silence, mourning over ruined homes, and houseless children. One correspondent remarks that the sights are enough to move the most immovable to pity and commiseration. In one block, where sixty cottages once stood, but one now remains. Another block has been entirely washed away. The fair grounds on the outer skirts of the town, are entirely wrecked. The loss on corn along the bottom lands of the flooded district, is estimated at 1,000,000 bushels. From New Haven on the Wabash, to the mouth of the Saline, 2,500 people need assistance. At one place a woman was seen rowing a boat with a child in the bow, and her dead husband in the bottom. Every body was so busy no one had time to help her bury him.

Crowds of people are coming into Helena, Ark., from all points, some in skiffs, flatboats, on rafts, by cars—in every conceivable way—all giving heart-rending accounts of their experience and sufferings, and are unwilling to undergo another year's trial such as they passed through during the flood of 1882. A large steamer passed up last night loaded with passengers, black and white, flying from the Mississippi side mainly. There being no levees on that side just opposite this place, and broken and out of repair in many places, the water seems to have reached into almost every nook and corner of that side of the river. Whole plantations are covered entirely by the water and deserted by tenants. The levees around Helena are of no value, and the water is now so deep as to oblige owners to take their stock into their houses.

The St. Francis river has risen fourteen inches in twelve hours, and the people are panicle stricken. About thirty-five miles below Helena there is scarcely a dry spot of ground to be found.

The town of Columbiana, Ill., is submerged by the Illinois river. Only two buildings are visible, and of these only the roofs.

A $3,000 mill was wrecked at Vincennes, Ind., by the floods.

March 4th.—Letters seized at Walsh's lodgings, Rochdale, England, reveal the fact that 6,000 men were enrolled in the secret society he had been organizing in the North of England, and are amply provided with funds and revolvers.

The trial of socialists in Austria, will begin next Tuesday. Thirty persons are to be tried, who are charged among other things, with being connected with the Internationale and Herr Most.

A secret union of foreign laborers has been discovered in Hanover, Germany, several of whom have been arrested, and their papers seized.

The schooner, John L. Colby, was lost off Cape Hatteras, February 28th. After terrible suffering from cold and heavy seas, the crew were rescued by the Ecuador.

Two cent letter postage takes effect October first, 1883.

A little postal bill passed both Houses of Congress in the closing hours modifying the postal money-order system so as to authorize Post-masters of money-order offices under authority of the Postmaster-General to issue postal notes in denominations of $5 and under. This is an important bill, and will greatly facilitate the transmission of small sums through the mails. It authorizes the issue of money-orders without corresponding advices of $5 and less, to be on engraved paper, and known as postal notes, payable to bearer, such notes to be invalid after three months, but the holder can after that time get the par value of the note by applying to the Post-Office Department at Washington. For issuing a postal note a fee of three cents shall be charged. This bill authorizes the issue of money orders in denominations of $100 or less, but none for more than $100 can be issued. The following fees are fixed to be charged for money orders: For orders not exceeding $10, eight cents; from $10 to $15, 10 cents; $15 to $30, 15 cents; $30 to $40, 20 cents; $40 to $50, 25 cents; $50 to $60, 30 cents; $60 to $70, 35 cents; $70 to $80, 40 cents; $80 to $100, 45 cents.

The forty-seventh Congress adjourned at noon, March 4th.

Alexander H. Stephens died at Atlanta, Ga., Sunday, March 4th.

The steamer Tazoo capsized a few miles above New Orleans, La., and twenty lives are supposed to be lost.

Mar. 5th.—Abdel Kadir Pasha has arrived at Senaar, Egypt, after severely defeating the False Prophet, who lost 2,000 men.

Four-fifths of the people of Caseyville, Ky., have been absent from their homes for two weeks by the floods, and it will be as much longer before they can return. The losses aggregate $150,000.

The town of Helena, Ark., was startled this forenoon by the intelligence that the levee had broken eight miles below the city, at the Fitzhugh place. The water burst its bounds about twelve last night, and it is rushing and roaring at a tremendous rate. Many fine plantations are now inundated, and owners and tenants are at their wits' end to know how to provide for themselves and property. The stock is being rapidly driven towards the hills, some preferring to build scaffolds. The water now stands in many places which were never involved until last year. At Languille, Ark., the water is still rising. Clarksdale, Ark., is under water.

The most remarkable phenomenon ever witnessed in this vicinity, Pittsburg, Pa., occurred early yesterday morning. An immense ball of fire darted across the heavens, brilliantly illuminating the city. Witnesses of the phenomenon were considerably frightened. Its course was north-west. An explosion was heard shortly after its passage. At Fredericksburg the explosion was followed by loud detonations and tremors of the earth. The light was very brilliant, and there was a blue tint all along the route traversed. Persons were awakened by the noise and shocks.

March 6.—The new Cabinet of France is as follows: Jules Ferry, Prime Minister and Minister of Public Instruction. Senator Challemlacour, Minister of Foreign Affairs. P. M. Waldeck-Rousseau, Minister of the Interior. Martin Feuille, Minister of Justice. Senator Charles M. Brun, Minister of Marine. F. J. Meline, Minister of Agriculture. A. C. Herisson, Minister of Commerce. L. Adolphe Cochery, Minister of Posts and Telegraphs. David Raynal, Minister of Public Works. P. E. Tirard, Minister of Finance. Gen. Thibaudin, Minister of War.

Prince Gortschokoff, ex-Chancellor of Russia, is dangerously ill.

A severe gale with snow prevailed the last twenty hours in the British Isles. Two vessels and three men were lost at Dundee, Scotland, three vessels at Scarborough, one at the Isle of Man, and two lives lost at Whitstable. Two vessels were wrecked at Scheveningen, Holland, and fourteen persons drowned.

The police seized a number of rifles and bayonets on the premises of a shopkeeper, at Liverpool, England. The discovery was effected while the officers were making inquiries concerning the doings of the Fenians.

The great excitement aroused because of the proposed law giving native magistrates criminal jurisdiction over the whites in certain cases, has spread to the army in Calcutta, India. A letter from an officer in a large garrison says the danger is most serious, and it would be impossible to control the men if a comrade should be sentenced by a native Judge. The feeling is extreme, and there is violent indignation among the officers and men.

A French gunboat has arrived at Bamakou, Africa, on the Niger; and the first locomotive has made its appearance in Senegambia. The first mile and a half of the French railway between Senegal and the Niger was opened on the 19th of December, in the presence of an amazed crowd of negroes. Moors and Chinese are engaged on the works. The blacks clapped their hands, and tried to keep pace with the train. Latdior, King of Cayor, having refused to carry out his treaty allowing the line to pass through his territory, Col. Wendling, at the head of a body of troops, marched to his residence and burnt it without opposition. Latdior has taken refuge with a neighboring chief, in concert with whom he is expected to begin hostilities as soon as the heat forces the French soldiers to return to St. Louis.

The families of many of the imprisoned Socialists are receiving funds for support, from mysterious sources.

Hundreds of vine stocks in Xeres have been maliciously destroyed. The persons supposed to have committed the crime have been arrested.

A Prussian student of Liege University, Belgium, has been arrested with 12,000 francs in his possession. It is believed that he is connected with the Socialist Propaganda.

An important victory was gained by the French Ministry in the Chamber of Deputies to-day, when the proposition of M. Clemenceau for a revision of the Constitution was rejected, and a resolution of confidence in the Government was adopted by a vote of 307 to 182.

The situation at Helena, Ark., is growing worse, hourly. Heavy rains are falling, and the repairs in the levee are washed away, almost as soon as made. At Oldtown, Ark., the water is running wild, and all of the plantations are under water.

The latest news from the Mississippi side is very disastrous to many thousands, and losses are without estimate. Three miles below Friar's Point the levee gave way, causing an enormous gap, through which the wafer is now rushing, flooding the town of Friar's Point, which the inhabitants had hoped was safe.

A heavy snow storm is blocking the roads at Ottawa, Ont.

A cold storm is setting in at Quebec, Canada.

The Kankakee River in Illinois, is rising. The wagon bridge at Waldron has been washed out, and some trestlework on the Kankakee Line bridge. The dam at Waldron also washed out, not a vestige of it being left. This will throw about sixty persons out of work at Waldron. The gorge near Waldron started last night, and is now near the camp-grounds, about three miles above here. It is almost half a mile long and very thick.

Correspondence.

PICTON, Ontario,

February 5th, 1883.

Brother Joseph:—I am in the field assigned me by the direction of Bro. John H. Lake, and also district conference, where I expect to remain for sometime, doing to the best of my ability as the way opens. I intend this incoming week to make an effort to open some new places in the regions round about here, using this place (Picton) as a rendezvous, as there is a good, prospering branch here, striving to do the Master's will in most cases.

Yours in bonds,

J. A. McINTOSH.

CLEAR WATER, Nebraska,

February 26th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—Perhaps many do not know that away here on the broad prairies of Nebraska, a knot of Saints is located, enticed by the opportunity to get land under the homestead law. Our numbers are swelling rapidly this Spring, by comers from Iowa. I do not consider the soil as rich here as in western Iowa, but the gospel is just the same, and is fraught with the same precious results. My earthly fortunes are not as yet much enhanced by my removal, but I have gained some experiences, by which I hope to profit. I am glad to state that I have been blessed with liberty at times to impart the word of life, and have purposed within myself, that I will magnify my calling in this regard. There is a broad field here in which to operate, and as far as my limited means and ability will allow, I wish to see the gospel presented to the people, until in many places God shall "be worshipped in spirit and in truth."

Beloved Saints, I pray the Father to bless you, and may we be in possession of that spirit that shall "guide us into all truth."

Your brother in the gospel,

LEVI GAMET.

BLUE RAPIDS, Kansas,

February 28th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Our quarterly conference has just closed. It was one of the best we have ever enjoyed, and notwithstanding the weather was very unfavorable, a goodly number of Saints collected, and truly the blessings were in proportion to their sacrifices.

Beloved Saints, there are but few of us, and there ought to be none, but what have received a sure testimony of the truth of the doctrine which we proclaim to the world, even that God has renewed a covenant from heaven to man, by the ministry of holy angels, who have committed authority to men to speak in the name of the Lord to their fellow-man, teaching them the only means by which they can obtain salvation. What a wonderful treasure is committed to our care; and God requires a faithful performance of our duty, and our own salvation depends upon our faithfulness. "He that endures to the end shall be saved." When we feel our own weakness, we may well say, "Who is sufficient for these things or that God requires at our hands what we are not able to perform in and of ourselves. We are nothing and can do nothing, but through Christ. He strengthening us, we can do all that is required at our hands; so as to receive the Lord's approbation, and hear him pronounce the words before assembled multitudes that no man can number, "Well done, good and faithful servant, you have been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things. Enter thou into the joy of thy Lord."

This is our time to labor, and let us enter into it with a zeal worthy of the cause in which we are engaged, because we know the reward is sure. Faithful is he that has promised. The Lord has said, "They that honor me, I will honor; and they that despise me, shall be lightly esteemed. Let us honor him by a humble obedience to his commandments. Moses truly said unto the fathers, a prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you, of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you. And it shall come to pass that every soul that will not hear that prophet, shall be destroyed from among the people."—Acts 3: 22, 23.

Consider well the import of this text. We are required to obey every word of the law, or be shut out of the kingdom. As I view it, the time is short, the coming of the Lord is at the door. If we come short of keeping every part of the law, let us mend our ways and doings quickly, that we may be "found of him without spot or wrinkle," inrobed in a wedding garment, and receive the crown for which we have so long labored.

As ever, your brother in the Lord,

JOHN LANDERS.

GAYLORD, Kansas,

January 30th, 1880.

Dear Herald:—I am glad to welcome you as a weekly visitor. I can not do without you. I like the idea of publishing sermons in your columns, thereby many get to hear and learn the gospel that otherwise would not. The Saints here are much scattered, and many have left for other parts; so we seldom get together. I love the society of Saints. I own one-third interest in the Gaylord grist mills, which I would trade for real estate in Western Iowa, or somewhere where I could enjoy their society every day.

W. H. DIXON.

EDENVILLE, IOWA,

February 23d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I ventured out into the local missionary field, on the first of the month, and went into Tama and Poweshiek counties. I preached five or six times at Fairview School-house, twice at Bowens, and once at Ottawa. Held "social services" at which we were richly endowed with the Holy Spirit's presence and power. Blessed four children, and administered to the sick with good results. Was blessed in declaring the life-giving word of God. Still strong in the service of the blessed Master.

While in Tama county, I united in the "holy bonds of matrimony," Dr. S. R. Berg, to Sr. Maggie Dumbald.

May Peace and joy attend them,
God's Spirit ever defend them,
From every ill and harm.

I returned home on the 19th inst., and on eve of 20th, my wife and I attended Methodist meeting here, and on our return home, I was utterly surprised to find the two large rooms of house filled with over forty happy guests, who came in joyful mood to celebrate the forty-sixth anniversary of my nativity. Bro. J. F. McDowell made an opening address, and on entering the house we were greeted with excellent music, and greeting song. The programme of the evening was of a literary nature, interspersed with songs and instrumental music. The time was most pleasantly spent, and at eleven o'clock the company took their departure well satisfied. I was made the happy recipient of several valuable and useful presents. I hereby return my heartiest thanks to the Saints and friends, and wish them many happy days.

Yours in bonds,

A. WHITE.

SULLIVAN, Missouri,

March 3d, 1883.

Dear Herald:—Perhaps you are wondering how the "Old Devil Killer" is getting along, and as I have opportunity I will write a few lines to say that I am well in mind and body. When I wrote you last I was in Arkansas, trying to get an opportunity to present our faith. The bad state of roads and weather, high waters, etc., prevented for the time, and I returned to Oregon county, Missouri. On the way I received another notice to leave, a copy of which I enclose; it purported to be gotten up in Arkansas, but that was a dodge. It was simply the same crowd that sent the former notice. I paid no attention to their threats, only to tell their spies that I was free born and tolerably white; knew my natural and national rights, and proposed to maintain them, and should not therefore, leave the country until I got a good ready; and further, that these original species of Darwinism must keep their carnal hands off.

On the night of the 14th of February, I preached to a good congregation at a private house. Two of the "Shilo Boys," as they term themselves, or "Grandfather and his fifty sons," came in near the close of the meeting. After the meeting closed, the crowd remained talking, as is often the case, till quite late. I remained at the house all night. The people finally dispersed to their homes. Two men and two women went the road I had formerly traveled to go where I generally slept. On their way, at a lonely, brushy spot, three men blacked, and otherwise disguised, sprang up, fired off their guns, and then took to their heels. The two men, (Bro. Jones and son), though unarmed, gave chase, and got near enough to identify them. The two spies by imitating turkey calls, got with the three ruffians, and all went off together. The friends, thinking they might charge on the house where I was, returned to let us know, and we were fully prepared to defend the "fort;" but they did not put in an appearance. Next morning, the ground being soft, the apes were easily tracked to their den, and we had no trouble in identifying the outfit, five in all. In their fright the night before, they dropped the bundle of nice switches which they had prepared for my back, and we captured them. They are kept by some of the brethren as a memento of border chivalry; the ragged tail end of secesh bushwhacking. The leading spirit of the crowd is under indictment for stealing corn, the whole thing being engineered by a very pious old Baptist. Bah! such enterprises are always headed by some old Pharisee. But they were slightly mistaken in their man this time. And they learned that I was not the least afraid of them; went when and where I pleased, and felt safe. I continued my meetings nightly, until the 21st of February, when I went over the line of Arkansas again, and preached every night, and had good congregations and good liberty; and on the morning of the 24th, I stood in the water of the beautiful blue Myatt, and baptized seven persons, and had a glorious time at the confirmation meeting. This was on Saturday, and by a misunderstanding the people came at 11 a. m., thinking there would be meeting at that hour. Well there was, and the speaker was greatly blessed in setting forth the truth. Spoke again at night. Next morning went to the water, and baptized two more. Held confirmation meeting. Thence back to Oregon county, Missouri, and preached to a house full. This closed my labors here, as I had staid as long as I could, and meet my engagements elsewhere. So you see that spite of the combined powers of "Grandfather and his fifty sons," "Shilo Boys," hell and the devil, whether material or immaterial, the good work goes on. To God be all the glory.

The brethren here are good, faithful souls, and when I say brethren, I mean sisters too. God bless them. Their kindness to me will long be remembered. I left them with reluctance. I fain would stay, and would not go. But duty sternly answers no. I trust the coming Conference will see to it, that if practicable, this long neglected part of the country be looked after. An Elder who will go there in the spirit of his calling, together with nerve and back bone, can accomplish good. I do consider it an inviting field for labor; but a man who is afraid of his shadow, or of flesh and blood, need not go. I arrived here on yesterday morning, at four a. m., on the night express of Frisco line, having traveled twenty miles by wagon. Then one hundred and ten miles by the Springfield and Memphis Railroad to Springfield, then one hundred and sixty-nine miles to this place. Found all well, and a welcome here. Shall commence operations immediately, and do what I can for the cause. Thence to Moselle, thence to St. Louis in time to attend the district conference, March 31st. Thence to General Conference, may be.

In all my experience I never felt the need of printed matter more than during my stay in southern Missouri, to scatter broadcast.

Love to all Saints. Yours for the truth, more determined than ever,

B. V. SPRINGER.*

810 N. 7th street, St. Louis, Missouri.

TERRA COTTA, Kansas,

February 26th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—We have been blessed by hearing the gospel preached once more. Brn. A. Kent and A. H. Parsons, from Clay Center, paid us a visit; stayed two weeks; baptized one, Miss Minnie Krider, and left some investigating. Others say it is all right "but the Joe Smith part." They can not believe he was a prophet, or that we can have prophets and revelations in our day. One man said that if they did not have a Bible of their own, he could accept the rest. Others say, that is in your Bible, not in mine. Bro. Kent explained it, so as to satisfy the most prejudiced mind, I thought. They held meetings in three different school houses. One old gentleman and lady became quite interested. They bought the Book of Mormon, and sent by Bro. Kent for other books. I think they will be ready for baptism soon. It was very hard to part with them. Pray for us, that we may one day be gathered with the Saints.

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I remain your sister in bonds, MRS. EMELINE J. DAVIDSON.

HEALDSBURG, SONOMA Co., Cal.,

February 4th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—I have read you and our dear little Hope these many years, in fact, ever since you were printed; and I love dearly to scan your columns, and do not see so many faults in you as some do. O, if I could write as Perla Wild, I should certainly keep writing. Anything that leads to good, will not harm us. And I might as well tell the readers of the Herald and Hope, that they must keep the seventh day holy; for it was in my opinion set apart for that purpose. But you would all say, it is better to keep that to yourself. Keep it if you want to; but we will do as we please. So you should think about the reading in the papers. If pieces do not suit us, let them alone; God has given us liberty and intelligence, and it is right we should use both, but not bind others. Let us be very humble and prayerful, and God will guide those that are willing and able to write for us, so they will do no harm.

"Let us pray for one another
For the day is fading fast;
And the night is growing darker,
While the scourge goes flaming past."

O how true are all those words. I sincerely wish my family to be remembered by all the Saints at the throne of grace. One who wishes to see the work of God roll on,

Dear Bro. Joseph:—I still love the work, and it gives me joy when I read of its prosperity. The Lord blesses us when we meet in our little branch, with the gifts and promises. We have some Saints here in word and deed. I feel to thank the Lord for his guiding care since I saw you last. I promised about that time, that when I knew my Father's will, I would try and do it; and I am trying to preach and teach his gospel, by word and action. Some times it seems slow, but the Lord says, keep on. One more head of a family joined us last Sunday, one that will stand. My mind seems to be looking forward to extending my field of labor.

Praying for the prosperity of the work, I remain, as I hope always to be, your brother,

WM. FRANCE.

Prof. Bigsby, in his lecture Monday evening, gave some very interesting information in regard to the etymology of some of our common words. Among them were, "sister means an adviser, brother means a helper, and mother means one who loves us." The Saxons were so called because they carried a scax, or short, straight sword. Algebra is from an Arabic word meaning the scales. An orange comes from the Arabic and means the "blood of gold." "Blood" also comes from the Arabic and means the "dew of pain." "Cipher" and "zero" both are derived from the Arabic "cifion," meaning emptiness. Etymology is a very interesting and fascinating study.

"Would'st thou be beautiful? Ah, then be pure.
Would'st thou be loved? Then love all that God has made.
And would'st thou happy be? Then make the truth thy talisman,—thy guide.
For these three rays are in the shining crown,
The seraph by the throne of life lays down,
Truth, Love, and Purity."

"TRUTH IMMORTAL,"

"In the morning of Creation
When the stars together sang;
And a world of light and beauty,
From chaotic darkness sprang.
E'er the seeds of sin were scattered
And when Time was in its youth,
By the King's own hand was planted
Seeds of everlasting truth.

Planted in the Earth's deep places
To a mighty vine it grew,—
Often trampled on by error,
Yet it ever sprang anew.
From the natal day of Adam,
Down through Earth's succeeding line,
With its snowy petaled blossoms
Grew the fair immortal vine;
Never yielding, ever clinging
In the tempest, or the breeze,
Cropping out on lofty mountains,
Springing up beyond the seas.

Where the people sat in darkness,
Bringing light and life and love,
Where the sin-sick mourned in anguish,
Waving starry flowers above;
Never dying, all prevailing,
It shall wander far and free,
On beyond the crystal river
Through the long eternity."

"LATTER DAY SAINTS.

A DAY THEY WILL LONG REMEMBER.

PRESIDENT J. SMITH VISITS PHILADELPHIA—A DOCTRINAL SERMON—PROSPERITY OF THE CHURCH—APPEAL TO GOVERN-MENT—THE TEMPLE.

So great was the anxiety to see and hear President Joseph Smith, son and successor of the famous prophet, that after the hour for morning service yesterday there was little but standing room in the hall at Ninth and Callowhill streets, occupied by the Latter Day Saints. The reigning pontiff of the reorganized church is at the head of at least thirty thousand believers, and the body which he controls is as energetic in proselyting as ever was the Utah branch under Brigham Young, so that its numbers are continually on the increase. Its present value to the government in solving the Mormon problem has already been touched upon in these columns. The church has obtained a firm foothold in Utah, where, although the hierarchy claims only three hundred, the government by its last census ascertained that eight hundred persons had declared themselves to its agents as "Josephites," in contradistinction from the "Brighamite" believers in polygamy and its attendant evils.

There was a large representation of the priesthood yesterday: Elder Z. H. Gurley, one of the twelve, the head of the church in this region and its able representative at Washington; Bishop G. A. Blakeslee, who is president of the board in charge of the restoration of the old temple at Kirtland, Ohio; Elder Stewart, who is at the head of the denomination in this city, and several others.

President Smith, though not as tall as his father, the prophet, is a gentleman of commanding presence, with intellectual and handsome features; the forehead lofty, eyes bright and clear, looking full and frankly into those of others; full beard, partially hiding the mouth and slightly tinged with the snows of some fifty winters or thereabouts. The nose is large, indicating force of character, but shapely and refined, and the general expression is not only prepossessing, but just what might be fancied to be that of the man who would rise up to vindicate his father's name, and to reorganize a denomination which to him is an undoubted church of the Gospel, on a basis of law and national loyalty. His voice has not the depth which his physique seems to promise, but it is clear and penetrating, and, with his distinct enunciation, would qualify him to address assemblies too large for the powers of ordinary speakers. As an orator he is remarkably fluent, as phonography, in trying to keep pace with him, at once discovers.

His discourse yesterday morning was simply an exposition of the creed of his church, which he declared to be founded upon the Bible and its revelation of Jesus Christ as the Savior of mankind. In the course of his sermon, speaking of faith, he discussed the prayer cure, pointing out that whether it was an actual malady that the patient was healed of or merely hysteria, simulating the effects of disease, the sufferer was healed all the same. He denied that either the church or its schismatic branch in Utah ever claimed for its hierarchy the power of raising the dead; but as to cures of sickness, what they might proceed from could make little difference to the person restored, and might as well be imagination as medicine, provided the cure was effectual. He indorsed the idea that Christ found among men a lack of spiritual power, and that it was His mission to impart that power to His redeemed. Christ had promised to be with His own to the end of time, and from His gift alone proceeded eternal life. The trust of the Church of Latter Day Saints was in Christ's second advent, and its hope was that He would come soon. Meantime the true life was to live as near as possible to Christ.

Repentance, faith and Christian consistency, President Smith also touched upon in connection with this portion of his subject, admitting a slight difference between his own denomination and others on the doctrine of the Trinity, but without entering into detail as to its precise nature, except so far as to show that it consisted rather in words than ideas.

He was followed by Rev. Z. H. Gurley, who said that Christ was the central hope of the church; that the Latter Day Saints regarded salvation as resting upon Him alone, holding that to make the life conform as far as possible to His life was the one thing needful, and that to impress that truth on the hearers was the end and aim of all preaching.

The hymn, "Lord dismiss us with Thy blessing," was then sung, and the congregation was dismissed with the benediction, but, instead of retiring, thronged about the President, Elder Gurley and Bishop Blakeslee, giving them a warm and affectionate welcome. President Smith, in conversation with the Inquirer reporter, said that the Reorganized Church was growing rapidly, and especially, was making inroads among the Brighamites in Utah. The claim that the prophetic office was hereditary was a legend of the church, and was found to have great weight with the Mormons of Salt Lake, as of all other places. The strong anti-polygamous principles of the true church of Latter Day Saints found an echo in the hearts of great numbers in the Territory.

"Are revelations still continued in the church?" he was asked, "and if so, how are they received?"

"They are still continued," replied President Smith. "As to the manner of their reception, that varies. Sometimes they are given orally, sometimes by impression, vision or trance, sometimes by a dream. My father said that an angel had appeared to him instructing him in the message he was to deliver."

"Are mistakes ever made respecting such revelations?"

"O yes."

"In such cases how are the false distinguished from the true?"

"Scripture, you know, directs us to 'try the spirits whether they be of God.' When a member of our body announces a revelation the elder who is conducting worship when the announcement is made usually gives an opinion. He may approve or condemn, but a man of tact will know how to set aside the claim without hurting the feelings of the 'revelator.'

"What is the test by which to determine?"

"The Holy Scriptures. They are our standard of doctrine, and if you examine the Book of Mormon you will find that, while it may enlarge and expand, its teachings are in harmony with those of the Bible."

"Have you personally received revelations?"

"Yes, and so have others," said President Smith, with evident good faith.

In illustration of this statement of the prophet it may be mentioned that his paper, the Lamoni Saints' Herald, of February 24th, contains an account from Bro. L. D. Hoisington, of Dresden, Nebraska, of an oral revelation, heard simultaneously by himself and his brother. They were walking together near a grove, when both heard a voice above the trees, warning them of the approach of the day of judgment. They compared notes afterwards, and, finding that each had heard the voice, recognized it as coming from the same direction, and remembering the words perfectly, saw no alternative but to conclude that the invisible speaker must have been an angel.

President Smith was reminded that the nineteenth Mrs. Brigham Young had stated in her book on Utah Mormonism, that polygamy had been instituted during his father's life and with that prophet's full sanction, and was asked what light he could throw on that subject.

He replied that Mrs. Young, No. 19, was not born till some years after his father's death; that she was, therefore, only speaking from hearsay; that it was certain that several years had elapsed after the death of the prophet before the apostate leaders brought forward the doctrine, and that it had been quite recently affirmed by cotemporary testimony; that at a period subsequent to that sad event it was still unknown. He was aware, he added frankly, that his father had been charged with indorsing polygamy, but he knew of no evidence by which the accusation could be supported.

Elder Gurley states that the missionaries of the Reorganized Church abroad have been greatly injured by the circular letter addressed by Secretary Evarts to foreign powers asking them to check Mormon emigration, as the converts came to America to practice crime—confounding their missionaries with those of the Utah branch. The European authorities had proved since getting that notification the reverse of amiable, but Secretary Frelinghuysen was thought to entertain favorably a request that he would issue a circular recognizing the distinction between the representatives of the Church of Latter Day Saints, and those of Salt Lake City Mormonism.

The Reorganized Church attaches great importance to this recognition by government, believing that it will have an irresistible influence on the minds of the people of Utah, and of future proselytes. The Common Pleas Court of Lake county, Ohio, has already accorded to them such recognition by deciding in their favor and against the Brighamites a suit for the possession of the Kirtland Temple.

Elder Gurley is one of the Committee of Arrangements for the convention at Kirtland this Spring, when the restored building will be re-opened.

Last evening President Smith again preached to a packed audience, on that occasion from the text, "What is Truth?" He said the true Church of Latter Day Saints was and always had been bitterly opposed to the doctrine of polygamy, as taught by the Utah Mormons. "It is not now," said he, "and never was the doctrine of the Church, and the first public sermon ever preached on it was preached in Utah in 1852, eight years after the death of Joseph Smith, by one of the Brighamites."

President Smith expects to leave for Washington this week, to go before the Secretary of State on business connected with his church, but will probably return to this city for another visit ere he goes back to Lamoni, Iowa."

THE DWELLING PLACE OF GOD.

THIS question has caused many longing and earnest thoughts, especially by those who have earnestly desired to know something of their Creator, whom, it is said, to know is life eternal. But although we live in an age of advancement, science, literature and arts, in a world full of religious teachers and of theological creeds, yet what little light they have shed in regard to the personage and the dwelling place of God. The religious world have been taught to believe, that he not only is omnipotent and omniscient, but also, is in his very personal presence every where, filling all space. But we can not obtain such inferences from that great and good book, the Bible, in which they all profess to believe; but rather according to the revelations of his will, manifesting himself to his creature man, he has appeared, having all the attributes of the human form, and during the incarnation of Jesus Christ, he said as it regards the personage of his Father, that he, Jesus, was the express image and likeness of his Father, and there certainly can not be any doubts concerning the human form and appearance of Christ, being born as he was of a woman. Jesus, then, according to the strict definition of the word "likeness," was one who resembled God; a copy, a counterpart, in his personal appearance of God, and how well do those words in Genesis correspond with this, where God says, "Let us make man in our image, after our likeness."

But if this is all true, that God exists in human form, Where is his dwelling place? Is it not reasonable to suppose that our glorified heavenly Father dwells in and has his own local habitation above the earth, in one of the celestial worlds rolling in the immensity of space, where he personally resides? Or should we be foolish enough to believe, with those blind religious teachers, who are continually mystifying God's word; that he has neither parts nor passions, that he is every where at the same time, filling all space? Does not this doctrine prove too much? Where would his independent identity be? And then it renders him incapable of locomotion, action or knowledge; for how could he who fills all space, remove from one space to another? There is something bearing upon this in Genesis 18:21; it says, "God said, I will go down now." Would he have said so if he had been there, and everywhere else? Decidedly no. But where was he? In his own local paradise, where the resurrected, personal body of Jesus Christ was taken to from his apostles, when it was separated from them at Bethany. (Luke 24:51). This same local heaven was seen by the martyred Stephen, who looked up into heaven and saw the Son of Man, standing on the right hand of God.

Some would say, if God existed in personal form, and has a local habitation, How can his power be exerted and his influences be felt? How does any earthly ruler exert his power, and cause his influence to be felt, and know what transpires in his dominion, while he is located in another part of his kingdom, on his throne? How except by the agency of his kingdom? And if man can know certainly concerning things beyond his own personal existence, or hear, by acoustics, from afar, shall we limit the power of the great God, or think him incapable of distinguishing pneumatic sounds, if our optics of vision can discern objects, and our organs of hearing can distinguish sounds for miles? For ought we can tell, God can hear and see everything in the universe of space. The apostle in Hebrews 4:13, seemed thus to view his almighty power; and although we can not with Paul ascend up to the third heavens, and fix on the exact local place in the immensity of space, where God resides, yet it is no argument that he has no local place, where his throne is prepared, and where he exists as King of Kings, and Lord of Lords.

TO THE WEEKLY HERALD
GREETING.

I HAIL with delight, near akin to rapture, our weekly church magazine, at so very small an advance in the cost. I devoutly pray, that the best men and the purest women of this generation, will redouble their diligence to make this periodical visitor the joy of the Saints, and the light of a benighted world. I fondly trust that the holy watchers will inspire the thoughts that are to occupy its columns.

The three supernatural standards of the church frequently, pointedly, and unreservedly, condemn the concealed and mischievous works of secrecy. Why will our brethren confuse and offend by penning articles for our literature, and then refuse to father their productions, thereby proclaiming their nonparentage? It makes me think of when I was egged in Utah. A dozen or more lads figured in the affair, and, strange to relate, their parents could not be found among those patriarchs that had been through the secret "sink-hole," as Sr. Perkins calls it. Can you fancy Paul of old, drafting a powerful epistle, and then subscribing himself, as "Plain Facts," or "Inferior"? Think of the great apostle's profound address "to the twelve tribes," and then he winds off with more anon, "Uncle Jim"! What would the strangers throughout the empire of Rome say of the one that held the "keys of the kingdom," if he would close his inspired appeals with, Your affectionate Uncle Pete. To prevent this alias work, Christ taught in Matt. 23: 7-11, that we should call no man father or master.

I do not wish to become a chronic fault finder, "for the accuser of our brethren is cast down;" but my brother proper is one who is known, Good Samaritan like. The minister of uncircumcision wrote as follows; viz, "And have no fellowship with the unfruitful works of darkness, but rather reprove them. For it is a shame to speak of those things which are done of them in secret. But all things that are reprov'd are made manifest by the light, for whatsoever doth make manifest is light,"

Some rejoice that the increased facilities for printing may be largely supported by advertizing. It may be "that the hair of the dog is good for the bite," or the food of A is the poison of B. That way of "setting forth the dealings of God with his people," is a little like satisfying the entire demands of "the law of tithing" on the simple article of eggs, and that, too, when the cholera has taken all but the rooster and a few ducks. Creed mongers are not all dead, and human expediences have not grown obsolete.

If the Saints were as willing to sacrifice as they are to pander to their appetites, then they could all learn how to give. An undue thirst for honor, position, power, or affluence, or something, has sapped the revenues of the church, and I am mortified to say, she is deeply in debt.

A man is called and ordained to preach the gospel; yet should he fail to provide for his family he is worse than Ingersoll; for he does supply all their temporal needs. I am heartily ashamed of all such insignificant statements as, "I have not done anything in the past quarter. I love this work as well as any body, and know it is of God. I hope to do better in the future. Pray for me that I may continue faithful," &c., &c. Esau sought repentance and could not find it; therefore, look out lest you idle away your day of grace, when the Lord will grow weary and disgusted at your repeated and heartless repentance. Oh! if I could only nerve the flagging and reeling columns, how grateful and happy I would be. I stand willing to "provoke to love and good works," if that is the only alternative.

I will say nothing about the soul-bernumbing, expensive, filthy latter day tobacco, lest I might hit too heavy.

I will mention another way how we may "rob God." It is by taking the Lord's money, and buying these "pleasant pictures," contrary to the Scriptures of divine truth. Please refer to Ex. 20: 4; Deut. 4: 16; 5: 8; Isa. 2: 16. My parents have a large album, and I got a nice one for a birth day present, and brother had one hung on the Christmas tree, and we all want your photo. so "awful bad." Do please give us your whole family in a group, and then we will let you have our's. Honestly, I think this is shabby business, and I once told a young Elder who carries several large albums, that it was "cheap idolatry." "The blow of a friend is better than the kiss of an enemy;" and we hope that some will be goaded to repentance.

Since leaving Iowa, I have traveled in Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas, and Illinois, and have done considerable preaching, though secular matters and the last sickness of my father, have demanded much of my time. The new year found me comparatively foot-loose, and my determination is to radiate forth, and proclaim aloud.

My bodily health is all right, and my zeal for the spread of the work is intact. My consort wants me to magnify my calling, for the field is wide but the laborers are "few and far between." The heathen priests of Mystery Babylon, are still on the alert. Their schemes and intrigues will prevent them and their votaries from enticing the fold of Christ as of old. The devotees of error are more willing to lavish out their substance than the advocates of truth.

Some economical souls are wonderfully glad "salvation is free," and they are so wholly engrossed in "laying up treasures in heaven," that they have no change to spend on the earth. "The children of this world are in their generation wiser than the children of light." Those that would give, but are not able, are more justifiable than the prosperous, who are more willing to pray than to help. Poverty, fostered by sluggish inactivity, is reprehensible; while honorable failure is meritorious.

I would love to see our people more thoroughly united in "every good word and work, than the idolators of the Orient, or the pagan hosts within the bounds of Christendom. "The swift messengers" should bear the "glad tidings of great joy" to all the habitable globe, with a long, strong, united effort. There are no obstacles so formidable, but we can and will overcome, by and through the favor of Jehovah. In meekness and patience, let us handle the "sword of the Spirit," in a dexterous manner. That double edged instrument will benefit the live branches, lop off the dead excrescences, and strike through the hypocrite's heart.

Let us live in Christ, by every word from the Lord.

FAULT FINDING.—It requires no talent to find fault. Any one can do it. It is easy to say that no one is honest. It is easy to say that no one does right; that every one looks out for Number One exclusively. But it isn't easy to look on to the best side; to see that there are thousands of honest, sincere men and women, countless sets of justice, charity and humanity, which outweigh all the grumbling of all the grumblers, so that it is really only the finest dust in the balance. Let us be fair and cheerful. The world is not wrong. Everybody isn't a rascal. Our neighbors are not trying to cheat us. Even the growlers are not half so disagreeable as they seem."—Selected.

THE GOVERNMENT OF CHILDREN.

OUR apology for essaying to write upon this subject is, that when we have anything to say we seek to enunciate it in wisdom for the mutual benefit of self and all others to whom it may apply; allowing it to pass for what it is worth.

There are at least three ways in which all may learn: intuitively, by observation, and by practical experience. We believe that from each one of these sources we have drawn some information; and though the ideas we may be able to advance may be crude, we hope and trust that they may serve to suggest higher and clearer thoughts in other minds, and that all may tend to benefit and elevate our race, mentally, and morally. It is rather proverbial to say, "It is much easier to theorize than to put into practice;" but it is equally true, that every theory pertaining to moral and intellectual life, that is true, should be practically observed. It is human to err, it is right to confess, and divine to improve. The expression, "Charity begins at home," is frequently used; but usually in a mercenary sense. Its true genius and force should be seen in a more spiritual application. Home! how sweet the name; what fond recollections cling around the word; what pleasant thoughts are brought to view, by its utterance. There are the most tender and sacred ties. Loved ones whose hearts beat in unison with our own, go in and out there. The poet rightly said, "Be it ever so humble, there is no place like home." In the plural, they are the foundation and rock of society, the bone and sinew of civilization, and the cradle of nations. Who but the Infinite, can calculate as to the effects flowing out from home influences? Considered with reference to individuals, none should deny that these influences have much to do in shaping the character and life-course of each. They begin their effects upon the offspring even before it is born. Born, nurtured, and reared under certain auspices, the child is unaccountable for its personal merits or demerits.

By virtue of hereditament, together with the influences exerted by them during the course of parental training, the parents are responsible. In purview of these facts, can we as parents, and sentient beings, accountable to God, exercise too much care in the government of children? The axiom, that "actions speak plainer and louder than words" has a forcible application here. Though children may not be endowed with as much acumen as those of maturer years, yet they usually are quick to observe; and impressions made upon the tender and flexible mind of a child, whether they be for right or wrong, are likely to cling to it as long as life shall last. "As the twig is bent the tree's inclined." These "little ones," God bless them, are tender plants committed to our trust. 'Tis our's to foster, nurture, cherish and fashion them; and as a day spent can not be recalled, so a failure upon our part to discharge these high and noble obligations, can not well be expiated by us. To rear and cultivate morally, mentally, socially, and physically, a family, be it large or small, is a laudible thing. To do this successfully, love, charity, patience, and bright hope must inspire and encourage. Our conceptions of life must not be narrow, or superficial. They must reach far beyond the grave; into never fading eternity. It is worse than useless for us to expect to escape the cares, anxieties, and troubles consequent upon married life; and an unlawful attempt to escape them, will only result in pain, unhappiness, and condemnation. Selfishness is a poison that destroys human felicity, and in a sense, thwarts the purposes of God; for he desires our happiness in the mutual progress of the world. What a sorrowful thought, that the tender, innocent, bright eyed babe, in some instances, it is hoped they are few, is hailed as an unwelcome guest. What but selfishness could prompt such a feeling. Dost thou not know, man, that thou canst not make one hair of thy head white or black? Then consider thy helplessness in being happy in self. Go cast thy care upon the Lord. Bear patiently the toils and cares of life; and anon receive with joy and thanksgiving, the blessings thy God hath given thee, and thou shalt have peace in life, and be crowned with glory in eternity. Children are a care, to be sure, and create a necessity for labor; but are not our lives precious to us? And did not our appearance in the world necessitate the same amount of care and labor?

Children differ in disposition, and hence uniform rules are not always suitable and adapted to the government of each alike. A gentle reproof to one may be equivalent to a severe chastisement to another; hence what wisdom, gentleness, love, and patience should bedeck our parental authority.

One fact, apparently overlooked by many parents is, that children have rights as well as those who are older. Those rights should be respected, and if we do our duty, we will allow, and teach them to maintain them. The old ironside idea that "might is right," has destroyed domestic felicity, ruined nations, and subverted the world. The principles of right and wrong are eternal, and diametrically opposed; and a propos, a child's rights are worth a thousand times more than a parent's wrongs. The God given faculty of discriminating between these principles begins almost with infancy, and surely any one will see the necessity of its being encouraged and developed. Destroy it in the child and you will not find it in the man. The story of the little boy telling his playmate, by way of a clincher, that "what pa says is so if it aint so," only illustrates the fidelity of a child's confidence, and serves to remind us of our responsible position as parents. For an illustration of how children are often wronged, and their sense of right perverted, we draw from fancy that which has its counter-part in a thousand facts. Blue-eyed, four-year-old Johnny has a toy,—it belongs to him by right; as much so as his father's farm belongs to him; perhaps a friend gave it as a token of love. Pretty, two-year-old Kate, sees this toy in the possession of her brother, and as is quite natural, wants it, and finally cries for it; but Johnny knows it is his, and as neighbor Jones don't like to deed his house and lot to neighbor Brown, just because the latter would like to have it; so Johnny is not willing to surrender his property that seems to him as the most valuable thing on earth. It is his all,—his worldly possession. The mother perhaps weary and a little "out of sorts," and thinks she has neither time nor patience to reason with the boy, that he might have the toy without endangering its safety; neither can she take time to pacify Kate with something else; so, to stop the noise, and dispose of the difficulty in "short order," she snatches the toy from Johnny and gives it to Kate, and perhaps gives the boy a slap for his "hatefulness." Who can fully realize the evils that grow out of this hasty, unwise, and unjust act. A precedent is established by which the younger covets everything it sees in the older's possession; the organ of selfishness is developed, while a mutual distrust is engendered between the children. The boy—poor fellow—who can describe his feelings? He knows he has been wronged,—robbed of that which rightfully belonged to him. The fire of just indignation burns in his youthful breast, and although by nature he loves his mother, he feels grieved, wounded, and offended by her who, instead of performing a mother's duty, has played the part of a child. If after repeated acts of this kind the boy offers no resistance or complaint, it is only prima facie evidence that his sense of right has become blunted, stultified; an evidence that the very foundation of his character has become warped, and what wonder if the building reared thereon in after years is twisted and very imperfect. In hundreds of cases that occur, the child is right, and the parent is wrong. In such cases, where the latter inflicts punishment on the former, a base injustice is done; and naught but eternity can reveal to us the crime and misery born of such acts of violence. The parent always assumes to be right; but when this assumption is sustained only by the prestige of age and position, the premises are bad, and repentance becomes a prerequisite to the faithful discharge of parental duty. In point of relationship, our children are ours; but morally we have no more right to offend them, or in any way injure their feelings unnecessarily, than we have to insult our neighbors; and furthermore, the parent who hastily, or otherwise, gives offense to his child, is under obligation, by virtue of the law of heaven, to ask forgiveness of the one offended; and if we are not meek, loving, kind, and humble enough to do this, the wrong stands upon the record against us. Of course they may, and sometimes do, forget it in time; but it has left its mark upon the character of each.

Children by nature are inquisitive, which shows a disposition to learn. Unfortunately, some regard this as an evil, and the little inquiring ones are told "no matter," "wait until you get older," &c. Now as to this, there may be two extremes, hence wisdom should be exercised. This curiosity should not be discouraged, but directed and encouraged. Let them learn. Help them to learn. The lessons may seem simple to us, but they are grand to them; and when we look back a few years, we remember when they were grand to us. Every progressive idea usually begins small and crude. First the germ, then the blade, then follows "the ear, and full corn in the ear." The first lessons must be learned before harder ones can be mastered. But alas, how many young inquiring minds are left to educate themselves, or remain in ignorance because of a lack of careful, patient, and wise instruction by the ones appointed for this work. Sometimes the child is told, "Children should speak when spoken to;" the idea being that they should speak only when addressed by their superiors in age. Doubtless those who give such instruction mean well enough, but it will hardly bear the title of "the golden rule." Supposing a child would carry it into effect, would the result be what the fond parent desires? The rule strictly adhered to is better calculated to make dunces, than bright, intelligent, and happy children. That they often need instruction is true; but is it the part of wisdom to teach them a wrong precept as a means of encouraging them to do right? Of course children are diverse in their dispositions; some being bold, while others are timid, which necessitates, in order to proper government, a careful watch-care, that these propensities may be discerned and wisely suppressed or developed, as the case may be; and right precepts and encouragement to do well are the only successful means for mental or moral development of young or old.

Some people—and it is distressing to think how many,—wrong their children and themselves by the habit of—lying. Not intentional falsehood, with intent to injure, perhaps, but to persuade them to obedience, they conjure up a kind of mental "scarecrow," by telling what awful things will be done to them if they don't "be good," when not a word of it is true. To say the least, no good can come of it. The "scare" soon becomes an idle tale, and if the child learns anything by it, it is that the parents do not always tell the truth. And it certainly tends to make it regard lightly the command, "Thou shalt not lie." Think of it, you that read; thousands of innocent children are reared under such auspices. "White lies,"—if it is possible to bleach an untruth,—are told them daily by parents, who in turn, in fits of angry righteousness, ply the rod to them for prevaricating. As an advocate of truth, and a lover of justice, I enter my protest against such thoughtless, unjust, and inordinate treatment. "Thou that teachest a man should not steal, dost thou steal? Thou that abhorrest idols, dost thou commit sacrilege?" Individually, I want my children to learn from infancy to draw the line of demarkation clearly, between truth and error, right and wrong; and God forbid that the example of parents should hinder their progression, or tend to their demoralization. Parents must set a laudable example, or they are shorn of ability to educate their tender offspring, morally.

Again. Consider the inconsistency of a father or mother, with countenance livid with anger,—unholy passion,—punishing their child to make it do right. May the crimson blush of shame mantle the cheeks that have been thus desecrated. "What," says one, "shall I allow my child, when it does wrong, to go unpunished?" Not necessarily so; but a thousand times better than to commit sin by inflicting pain while influenced by an angry passion. Are we not amenable to God? And does he justify us in anger? Under no consideration.

This base passion stultifies the senses, and subverts reason; and who will fail to see that the parent made blind therewith, is not fit to punish a donkey, much less a tender child.

Love is the magic influence by which humanity may be governed. Let it burn upon the altar of our hearts, and as the shining sun gives warmth to mother earth, inducing her to put forth verdure, so will the genial warmth of this pure emotion generate and bring forth in our children the fragrant flowers of filial affection and devotion. This God-like passion does not ask, or prompt us to countenance, or encourage wrong in them; but teaches and aids to reprove and correct, with gentle firmness. It does not come and go at our command; but is a germ born of God, which may be cultivated until our being is imbued with its glorious light and power. If we have failed during past life to cherish this emotion, thus exerting its latent influence upon our children, we need not be surprised if a sudden and unexpected effort on our part does not develop wonderful results. We sometimes say, "It is never too late to mend." Technically, this is not true. It were better to have said, "It is never too late to improve." To arrest the progress of a rushing torrent is difficult, but a commendable effort may slacken its speed, and time and patient efforts may serve to turn its course.

Some err by constantly telling their children that they are bad, continually keeping before them the idea that they are always wrong; thinking, apparently, that this constant pressure on the negative side, will induce them to reform; the natural result of which is, the child loses self respect and self confidence, which are necessary adjuncts to a useful and virtuous life. Let them apply the rule to themselves, and determine whether a constant reminder of their real or supposed faults, serves to smooth the temper, elevate the morals, and inspire courage to do right.

Those who do not love to be appreciated, whether they be parent or child, are robbed of one of nature's endowments, and are virtually unfitted for life. Encouragement is the secret of physical, mental, or moral success, in young or old. It is the silver lining to every dark cloud. It is the beacon light to those wrecked upon the sea of adversity, and the rock of despair. It is the bright angel of mercy that has beckoned to millions of dying souls, inducing them to emerge from the slough of sin and consequent misery, into the glorious light of truth; and the lever that moves the great world of mankind. The adage is, that "necessity is the mother of invention," which in part, perhaps, is true; but hope and encouragement constitute the sire, and we are indebted to them for the wonderful facilities by which we communicate with nations, traverse land and sea, and successfully pursue every avocation of life. In fact they are the main springs of this world's progress. Then, should we not inculcate these principles in the youth? If we want our children to do right, we must make them think they can do right. If we wish to educate them mentally and morally, we must encourage and not discourage them; and every effort made by them should receive proper consideration. Adults should have more fortitude than children; yet I doubt if any would accomplish much physically, mentally, or morally, without the stimulus of hope and encouragement.

Individually we are highly elated at the golden prospects for the education, mentally and morally, of the rising generation. The glittering wheels of modern progress, have brought to our aid the noble institution of public schools. Poverty no longer debars the anxious youth from gratifying his thirst for knowledge of the sciences. And above all, the gospel of Christ in its primitive beauty, has been recommitted to earth's children, and the obedient may rear their offspring beneath the unction of the Spirit of intelligence, purity, and power. They may, and should be, not only instructed in cosmology, together with every branch of education that serves to store the mind with useful knowledge, but taught of God, the author of all the natural sciences. We should educate them to have faith in Him; to rely upon his word; and believe in his omnipotence, omniscience, omnipresence, mercy, and perfect love. Mental and moral education go hand in hand, in the enlightenment of mankind; each being an auxilliary to the other. I fear that some, even of the Saints, have erred by regarding mental education as non-essential to spiritual progression. Is not knowledge and enlightenment in regard to all that pertains to man, earth and its appurtenances, and the myriads of worlds that constitute the universe, better calculated to fit us for heaven, and draw us to the great author, than ignorance? Does not a knowledge of the sciences cite us to him who originated them? Ignorance has been, and is now, the bane of this world, and crime and misery follow in its wake. It robs humanity of the blessings of earth and heaven, but persistently asserts "I am the pearl of great price." It seats itself in the baser passions, and makes war upon all that will benefit the race of mankind. It is the foe to human happiness and progress, and its reward is not from above.

"Knowledge is power," and truth is knowledge of things as they exist; while divine knowledge is the power of God unto salvation. Mental education is a part of the work of God in the hands of his creatures; and the writer believes that he blesses those who so labor. The virgin soil was dedicated to man to be cultivated, and produce; so the intellect is given for use and development. Speaking from personal experience, and in accordance, we think with reason, the Spirit of truth is not given to supplant the uses of proper mental education. And I would call the Saints attention to the fact, that the law that makes us free, enjoins that we gather knowledge from all good books. And I would remark further, that justice says, the authors of these books shall have their reward. I confess that I am indebted for hundreds of facts and ideas, not born within the pales of the Church of Christ. It is my earnest solicitation that we who have found grace and wisdom through the mercy of a restored gospel, may fully comprehend the relationship we sustain to each other, to God, and the world. If my experience is worth anything, it has taught me that to encourage every avenue of life and light to the world of mankind, is pleasing to him who created all. And as I become better acquainted with the work of God for a world's redemption, and enjoy the flow of the crystal stream of his munificence, my ideas become more expanded, and my charity toward the world increases. I have not, neither do I intend to compromise with any, but I can extend the hand of sympathy to all. Retrospectively I gaze upon the swarming millions that have graced this vine-clad earth, that now affords me a resting place; and among all nations, sects, and creeds, I behold some truth. Justice and mercy, twin sisters from the presence of the Infinite, clad in royal robes, and with smiling face, appear with light but firm tread, and announce to my joyful satisfaction, that this jewel must be preserved. With reverence and thankfulness to God, I meekly bow, and say, "Thy will be done, thou king of Saints." I know men in the church of Christ,—good men, and I love them well,—who apparently can see no good thing in the so-called orthodox churches of to-day; and one would judge from their conversation, that they regard an admission of any virtue in them, as detrimental to the cause of Christ; yet these very men have taken satchel in hand, and gone forth into the world, asking and have found charity. O, brethren, that we could look upon others, as God looks upon them and us; that we could love the people as did that glorious personage, Jesus Christ; that our charity might not be conceit, and our love selfishness and presumption. May God purify our hearts, illuminate our souls, and make us the worthy receptacles of his holy law. We never shall lose by respecting others, nor will the cause suffer by reason of our love and charity for all. We are not asked to compromise with error, but we are admonished to depart therefrom.

Extremes are the rocks upon which human happiness and prosperity are frequently wrecked; and love, divine love, can alone adjust and preserve our spiritual equilibrium. Let us seek to assimilate the manners and character of the Savior, whom we love, and concerning whom, even the skeptics say, "He was a good man." Then our souls will be enriched and resplendent with the blessings and glory of an infinite God; our children will rise up and call us blessed; and we shall see them pursuing the paths of innocence, peace and virtue; while their usefulness and happiness will be as diamonds in our crown of redemption. We invoke the blessings of His majesty upon the Israel of God. Laud him all ye his people with earnestness and zeal.

I remain, fraternally,

G. S. HYDE.

MARRIED.

YARWOOD—MCKEE.—At Fall River, Massachusetts, February 27th, 1883, by Elder John Potts, Mr. Luke H. Yarwood to Sr. Jane McKee, both of Fall River.

"On their happy wedding day,
Luke said, 'I will,' without a fear;
But 'neath the smiles in Jane's soft eyes,
There seemed a shadow of a tear.
'Tis true, her heart was warm and fond,
For him to whom she gave her life;
But girlish lips will falter, when They speak the words, 'I'll be your wife.'
Ah me! to leave a father's home,
A mother's arms, and brother's true;
To cast behind what has been proved,
And step beyond to all things new!
Who wonders if in trusting hearts,
There comes the semblance of a dread
To thoughtful girls with happy home,
E'en on the very day they wed."

SHAW—COTTAM.—At Fall River, Massachusetts, January 28th, 1883, by Elder John Potts, Mr. Daniel T. Shaw to Sr. Alice A. Cottam, both of Fall River.

"To him who has chosen this sister of ours,
For his 'help meet' through weal and through woe;
May God in his providence make few the hours,
Till He'll show him the right way to go.
Now our sister dear, may your chosen for life,
Prove good, kind, and free from all error;
And may you to him prove a true faithful wife,
And he, yet to us, be a Brother."

BRUNSON—WHITEAKER.—At the residence of the bride's father, North Freedom, Wisconsin, February 8th, 1883, by Bro. W. A. McDowell, Bro. Hiel Brunson, to Sr. Laura G. Whiteaker, both of North Freedom, Wisconsin.

May their life be long and happy,
While on earth they stay;
May the future that awaits them,
Be like a lovely May.

DIED.

HUMPHREY.—At Carbondale, Ohio, February 2d, 1883, David Humphrey, aged 41 years, two months and 22 days. Born at Merthyr, Tydvile, South Wales, November 10th, 1841. Was buried at Syracuse, Ohio, February 6th, 1883. Was formerly a member of the church, but severed his relationship with it several years ago.

TWITCHELL.—At San Juan, San Benito county, California, January 30th, 1883, of measles, Lorenzo Delroy Twitchell, the son of John and Annie Twitchell, aged two years, 7 months, and 13 days. Funeral sermon by Elder R. Smith. Text, "Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of God.

Dearest Delroy, sweetly sleep,
'Till Christ in clouds does come;
And then in glory thou shalt rise,
With the Church of the First Born.

M. J. S.

JONES.—At his home, in Oregon county, Missouri, February 4th, 1883, Bro. William H. Jones. Born September 16th, 1824, in Jackson county, Tennessee. United with the church March 17th, 1873, at Springerton, Illinois. Bro. William was a good man, and died in faith of a glorious resurrection. Funeral service on the 7th by Elder B. V. Springer, using a text of Scripture selected by the brother before he passed away; viz, 2 Timothy 4: 6, 7, 8. Quite a large number of relatives and friends were in attendance.

O may we ever faithful be,
And thus prepare
For the blest resurrection morn,
And meet him there.

BOWERS.—At Oregon county, Missouri, July 4th, 1881, Sr. Nancy A. Bowers, daughter of William H. Jones, aged 34 years. She was a bright, intelligent woman, although a deaf-mute. She passed away in peace. Funeral service by Elder B. V. Springer, February 7th, 1883.

Dear sister Nancy, fare thee well,
We'll meet again;
'Tis joy to know that thou art free,
From care and pain.

B. V. SPRINGER.

FORBES.—At Greeley, Colorado, December 30th, 1882, little Emma, daughter of Bro. John and Sr. Eliza Forbes, aged 3 years and 19 days. Her death was caused by her falling into some hot water. She lived about 3 days after the accident occurred, and suffered very much. Funeral sermon by Bro. James Caffall.

A clergyman was preparing his discourse for Sunday, stopping occasionally to review what he had written, and to erase what he was disposed to disapprove, when he was accosted by his little son, who had numbered but five summers:

"Father, does God tell you what to preach?"

"Certainly, my child!"

"Then what makes you scratch it out?"

We are all passing through trials of some sort, to enable us to enjoy a portion in a better life beyond; every disappointment, every season of suspense, weariness, pain, change or gloom, is just that much more to insure "life eternal" in a kingdom "where pleasures eternally bloom."

"'Tis folly to be wise" in the ways of the world, hence, "ignorance is bliss" in such things.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE learn by letter to Bro. W. W. Blair from Bro. D. S. Mills, of Santa Ana, California, that the work in the district over which Bro. Mills presides, is in a flourishing condition. He says: "As you say, the outlook for the work, is good everywhere. Especially is it so in this district. I have done what I could for the past four months, and have baptized sixteen. Others are about to obey. There are many calls for preaching the word, and I feel thankful to God for returning health, with the power of the Spirit, in demonstration of the word. There is not an instance in my ministrations for the past six months, but God has added his blessing; and several are truly marvelous in my eyes. Even in last stages of consumption, where hemorrhage was severe, such sudden and radical changes took place, as I did not expect. We have just closed one of the very best conferences here that I ever saw. Not a jar, or cross word uttered."

By newspaper clippings sent us we learn that Bro. John D. Bennett, of Cuba, Kansas, is engaged in a controversy through a Republic county paper, with a correspondent, who writes in "palliation," but not in defense of polygamy.

Bro. George A. Blakeslee was at Lamoni, from March 7th to 14th, straitening up herald office matters, and looking after the affairs of the Bishopric, in connection with Bro. Banta; he left for Galien, on the 14th with Bro. W. W. Blair.

The proposed debate, in which Uncle W. B. Smith was to defend against a Presbyterian minister, failed; reason assigned "My friends have advised me not to discuss Mormonism with the Prophet's brother, as it might give greater notoriety to the Mormon sect." Rather an ingenious excuse; but possibly valid.

Bro. W. W. Blair was at Lamoni, in charge of affairs at the Herald Office from March 1st to 13th by direction of Bro. G. A. Blakeslee, president of Board of Publication, and left for Sandwich, DeKalb county, Illinois, which will be his post office address, on the 14th.

Bro. J. W. Chatburn, of Harlan, writes that the labors of Bro. R. M. Elvin at that place have been productive of good. He adds, "You can hardly tell how different we feel worshipping in our own house, as against meeting when and where we could get the chance." The Saints at Harlan deserve success, and are much encouraged.

The whereabouts of Sr. McCoy and her mother Mrs. Bevans is wanted by Rev. W. H. H. Ellsworth, Mobile, Alabama. He has some property in his care left to them.

THE spirit of persecution it seems has not yet died out, as will be seen from the letters of Bro. B. V. Springer contained in late issues of the Herald, and the notice which we give below:

"Post office Potersville, County of fulton, State of Arkansas. We notify B. V. Springer to go Back to Solt Lake Where he belongs ef he dont we will give him hell the — Rascale and ef you ever sho youre — old ugly Looks Back hear you will find you a Location hear We al have good respect for you look out the time is drawing nigh for hell is your doom from Grandfather and his fifty Sons."

There is, however, a valuable lesson to be learned from this and like instances of his Satanic Majesty's work. No sooner had Bro. Springer braved the danger to which he was exposed, whether apparent or real, than the good work received a cheering impetus, and believers were added to the fold.

A short time ago, Bro. Heman C. Smith, in his labors in Texas, had an experience which teaches the same lesson. In a neighborhood where the fair name of the church had been tarnished by the deception of a wicked impostor, and where, therefore, the prospects were gloomy indeed, he lifted the gospel standard; and here also the truth triumphed, and the numbers of the church were increased.

The lesson is apparent. The commander of the opposition is not playful. He is always greatly in earnest. When he roars we may know that battle is at hand. And from experiences such as those cited above we learn, that these battles are generally decided in favor of the servants of God, if they fight wisely and manfully.

LETTER TO R. PATTERSON.

The introduction of Mr. Sabine as a witness is also peculiar; Mrs. McKinstry having said "he undoubtedly read the manuscript while it was in his house," and had "faith that its production would show to the world that the Mormon Bible had been taken from it." His "desire to uproot this Mormon fraud" was the motive for urging his sister to loan it to Mr. Hurlbut. If Mr. Sabine had read it, why did he not say so? Mrs. McKinstry states that her mother gave Mr. Hurlbut an order to Mr. Jerome Clark to deliver this manuscript, which she perfectly remembers was in the trunk, to him, which he did. The purpose was that it might be compared with the Book of Mormon. Neither Hurlbut nor Howe ever made this comparison; but Hurlbut does state that he gave what he received to E. D. Howe. Neither Howe, Hurlbut, nor Sabine tells what were the contents of that manuscript.

July 26th, 1881, Mr. E. D. Howe wrote from Painesville, Ohio, to T. W. Smith, then of Chicago, Illinois, now of Stewartsville, Missouri, as follows:

"Sir:—Your note of 21st is before me, and I will answer your queries seriatim.

"1st. The manuscript you refer to was not marked on the outside or inside, 'Manuscript Found.' It was a common-place story of some Indian wars along the borders of our great lakes between the Chicagoes and Eries, as I now recollect—not in Bible style, but purely modern.

"2d. It was not the original 'Manuscript Found,' and I do not believe Hurlbut ever had it.

"3d. I never saw or heard read the 'Manuscript Found,' but have seen five or six persons who had, and from their testimony, concluded it was very much like the Mormon Bible.

"4th. Never succeeded in finding out anything more than was detailed in my book of exposure published about fifty years ago.

"5th. The manuscript that came into my possession I suspect was destroyed by fire forty years ago.

"I think there has been much mist thrown around the whole subject of the origin of the Mormon Bible and the 'Manuscript Found,' by the several statements that have been made by those who have been endeavoring to solve the problem after sleeping quietly for half a century. Every effort was made to unravel the mystery at the time, when nearly all parties were on earth, and the result published at the time, and I think it all folly to try to dig out anything more.

(Signed), E. D. HOWE."

I have now traced this "Manuscript Found" to its end; and there is not a particle of positive proof showing that either Joseph Smith or Sidney Rigdon ever saw it.

Dr. Hurlbut was a man of some parts, and E. D. Howe was evidently well versed in lore, legal and otherwise; now, if the shrewd lawyer of Onondaga valley, Mr. Sabine, had read the "manuscript Found," he would have known whether or not it would "uproot Mormonism;" and E. D. Howe must have known also whether it would have done so. But neither Howe, Hurlbut, nor Sabine ever stated what was in it, and all of them can not get away with this fatal conclusion, that the manuscript was strangled in their hands, and they, not the Mormons who never had it, (not even the surmised improved transcript of Mr. Spaulding himself), are the ones who have so shamefully robbed the widow and the fatherless of this fabulous history. The very wail that you set up about their having been so despoiled, in the light of these facts is a lame confession that you and they believe now that the manuscript suppressed, as I have shown that it was, was the identical "Manuscript Found," or that which was and has been made to do duty as such.

The statement of Mr. Howe in regard to the manuscript which he received from Mr. Hurlbut, that it was a history of war between hostile tribes of Indians "along the borders of our great lakes," opens ground for the presumption that this was the production read to the family and neighbors of Rev. Spaulding, and accounts for the recollection of the destructive battles fought in the regions of western New York and northern Ohio, of which so much is made as to their similarity to the Book of Mormon. This presumption is made still stronger by the fact, that when lying in the trunk as so perfectly remembered by Mrs. McKinstry, (if it was the only manuscript there when the order for it was given to Mr. Hurlbut), it was enclosed in a wrapper marked on the outside, "Manuscript Found". This wrapper would be easily removed by Hurlbut in transmission to Howe, with a view to mislead after inquiry as to the identity of the one he got and the "Manuscript Found", which has been so long and so industriously flaunted in the faces of the people by testimony of such a character that it could not be introduced in any Court of inquiry the world over, by reason of its being contrary to all recognized rules of evidenc.

I offer you the following suggestion. The most obvious presumption that those who may yet write upon this question may make, is to dispose of the "Manuscript Found" long before it reaches Howe, in this way. "It is to be presumed that after Rev. Spaulding had taken the transcribed copy of his work, the "Manuscript Found," to Mr. Patterson's office, and it had been returned to him as impracticable, he took the copy and the original and destroyed them, as no longer necessary to be kept. But being of an economical turn of mind, he saved the outside blank sheet on which the title was written, and in that wrapped up his work on the history of the Chicago and Erie Indians, and placed it in the trunk with other manuscripts, where it was found by Mr. Clark at Mrs. Davison's order." This would remove the difficulty of accounting for the disappearance of the manuscript in so questionable a manner, as has been done; and losing sight of it while in the hands of its author, and rightful owner, would thus lay a better foundation upon which to introduce the hearsay evidence so much relied on. To me this is far more plausible than the theory so far advanced.

The animus of these witnesses must enter into the account. Dr. P. Hurlbut the actual compiler of the work, the agent of discovery, was an enemy to Joseph Smith, and the Church. He had been a member of said Church and was expelled, either for good cause or otherwise. As a recalcitrant Mormon he essayed to destroy that Church, and its faith, both in the Book of Mormon and Joseph Smith. He completed the compiling of the work and sold it to E. D. Howe; either because he had scruples about publishing it, or because his own prestige was bad, whichever you choose, and his connection with the work ceased. E. D. Howe does not testify except as I have quoted in regard to what the manuscript received from Hurlbut was. The testimony of the eight witnesses, is not given upon oath, and bears evidence of having been written by the same hand, the product of one brain, that of Hurlbut. Those who make these statements are not friendly, but at enmity with Joseph Smith. The same objection of enmity lies against all of the witnesses. Of several of the statements I have nothing to say, recollections, impressions and opinions are made to do duty as proofs in a very unsatisfactory way.

Rev. Kirk says that Dr. Winter told him that Mr. Rigdon told him.—

Dr. Winter's daughter says her father said that Rigdon got Spaulding's manuscript.—

Rev. Bonsall heard Dr. Winter say so and so.—

And the impression of these three is that Dr. Winter wrote out his recollections—and therefore of course he did.

Mrs. Amos Dunlap saw Rigdon reading a manuscript, therefore it was the Spaulding Romance.

Pomeroy Tucker says "a mysterious stranger visits Joseph Smith," therefore Sidney Rigdon is the man.

Mrs. Horace Eaton makes a similar statement, assuming it as a matter of course.

I tell you, Mr. Patterson, such a system of presumption, based upon foundations so strained and bare of fact, is in no way calculated to impress a candid and legal mind with a sense of fairness and honor in the treatment of the subject.

Mr. James T. Cobb is the son of the woman known as Brigham Young's Boston wife. He was an inmate of Brigham's family and partaker of his bounty, and a member of the church in Utah, as I am informed. His domestic life was poisoned by the defection of his own wife; and subsequently still, his daughter, Luella, became the polygamous wife of John W. Young, supplanting that gentleman's Philadelphia wife. For these reasons he is an intense hater of Mormonism; and I am quite surprised that instead of publishing the work which you have sent me, as portions of it bear the imprint of his genius, he has sent the results of his work to you, as in almost exact accordance with the Hurlbut and Howe work. I do not blame him for not liking polygamy, or Brigham Young's memory, if it is true, as I am informed by residents of Salt Lake City, that mother, wife and daughter fell into its meshes. He has written me copiously, and boasted to me that he would destroy Mormonism, root and branch; and I am persuaded to believe that the many newspaper articles so lavishly scattered over the land, are in the main his work. That he has acted like himself, unscrupulously, I can but believe.

Let me now call your attention to a very strange inconsistency in the train of reasoning adopted by you, in culminating your web of circumstantial evidences.

Sidney Rigdon was the inspiring genius, the black pope of the whole plot, laid at the time of the supposed abstraction of the mythical transcript from the office of Patterson and Lambdin. That Sidney Rigdon was a scamp and had always been.

That he fooled the Baptist Church first, and afterwards the Disciples, and finally adopted the faith of the Mormons. That he was shrewd, cunning, and so extremely careful in his methods of deception that he so covered up all possible connection with Joseph Smith, whom he was to employ as a tool, that no positive collusion has been, or can be proved between them—and that he was a crack-brained youth, having had his head hurt when a boy. This hurt in his head injured his intellect, but did not impair his mental faculties, and totally destroyed his moral nature, so that he was capable of any abominable trickery and imposition. Notwithstanding this, he studied for the ministry, was ordained and held the pastorate of the First Baptist Church of Pittsburg, and was afterwards an able assistant and rival of Alexander Campbell in the Disciple Church, and an eloquent and able man among the Mormons; so much so that when permitted to address an audience of enemies when under arrest in Missouri, in the Court of Judge King, he so won upon the minds of those present, that he was not only discharged from arrest, but a purse was made up for him to aid him in getting out of the state. This statement is made by one who was an attorney and acting general in the militia of the state of Missouri, and present at the time.

I send you marked articles which please read. My mother states that no acquaintance was formed between Sidney Rigdon and the Smith family till after the Church was organized in 1830. That neither my father nor herself ever saw Sidney Rigdon until long after the Book of Mormon was in print. This agrees with the statements of P. Pratt, who says that he first presented the Book of Mormon to Rigdon. It also corroborates what Rigdon says, that the story of his connection with the Spaulding story and the origin of the Book of Mormon is a "base lie," or the "most base of lies."

David Whitmer, whom I saw in April last, at his home in Richmond, Missouri, where he is now living, states positively that the Book of Mormon was published long before Sidney Rigdon was known to his family, or the Smiths. He states further, that he knows that the story told of the same romance in connection with the Book of Mormon, is false.

David Whitmer states that when Joseph Smith was engaged in translating the Book of Mormon, he sat with his face covered, and dictated to those writing for him hour after hour, and day after day, without break, or apparent hesitation; and that he would return to the work after a meal or after the night's rest and sleep, and taking his place with his face covered, at once begin to dictate without having any portion of what had preceded read to him. He was asked by another in my presence, and at my suggestion, whether at any time, to his knowledge, Joseph Smith had, or used while ostensibly translating, any book or any manuscript copy of any sort, from which he read. He replied emphatically that he had not. It was suggested that he might have had such document, and possessing himself of its contents secretly, might have dictated from memory. He replied that such a thing was impossible; that Joseph Smith was a poor scholar, could scarcely write a legible hand, and could never have read a written copy of any sort without consulting some one to help him.

Oliver Cowdery tells the same story respecting the translating while it was being done.

My mother, whom I interrogated upon the subject, stated that she wrote for my father, (Oliver Cowdery and one of the Whitmers and Martin Harris also wrote for him), and that she knew the plates to have been in his possession; that they frequently lay upon her table in the room where she was at work; that she had felt of them through the small sack or bag in which they were kept; that they had the feeling of thin metal plates, and that they rustled under the fingers as do the thick leaves of a book when one thumbs the edges, but with a metallic sound; that father frequently translated from them, (as David Whitmer states), without hesitation or break, hour after hour, as fast as she could write, (and she was a fair scholar for the times), and that without having any passage already written read to him as a starting point. I asked her the same question that I afterwards had put to David Whitmer, whether he had not some manuscript or book, or paper copy, from which he read to the scribe. She replied that he had not, neither at the time she wrote for him nor when Oliver Cowdery or Whitmer wrote. I suggested that he might have had such manuscript concealed and have committed it to memory day by day, and thus repeated it to be written. She stated that this could not have been done; for he could not have had any such manuscript or book without her finding it out; besides this, such a thing as that would require more of an intellectual effort than she was willing to give my father credit for possessing. My step-father, present at the interview, asked my mother why she had not undone the sack and examined the plates, while she had opportunity, and also if her husband ever forbade her examining them? To this she replied that she had plenty of opportunities if she had so desired; that she had not been forbidden to handle them, but that she did not feel it to be honorable to examine them in his absence, or have curiosity enough to do so even when he was present. She was satisfied as to what they were, and had faith enough in her husband to believe that he came honestly into the possession of the plates. She also stated that when she wrote for my father there was no screen between him and the writer, and that much of the dictating and writing was done in her presence and in the room in which they lived and where she was at work about her daily tasks. I suggested that it might have been possible for father to have had some work from which he would commit to memory and so dictate from memory. This she thought impossible, because when not engaged in translating he was busy at work about the premises, or with other parties when he had no opportunity to do so by stealth. My aunt Catharine, father's sister, states that Sidney Rigdon was not known to the Smith family, until he came to Kirtland; that soon after his coming he performed the ceremony of marriage for Mr. Jenkins Salisbury and herself. She was an inmate of her father's family until her marriage, and was well acquainted with the family affairs, and knows that Sidney Rigdon's acquaintance with any of the family dated after the publication of the Book of Mormon.

The Jews in Toronto, Can., are moving to have certain reforms introduced into their service, and that both sexes shall sit together instead of being separated. The matter has been referred to the Chief Rabbi, in England, but should his decision be adverse the reformers will form an independent body.

Summary of News.

March 7th.—It is rumored at Dublin, Ireland, that Patrick Egan left Paris with the Land League securities. The police are tracing him. It is believed he has gone to Spain.

At a meeting of the local board of Swinford, County Mayo, Ireland, it was reported that great distress prevailed in the district. Over thirty persons in the poor-house are suffering from famine fever. There are 700 names on the list of persons needing relief. The distress has not been so great since 1847. The people who refuse to enter the work-house are dying from want of food outside.

Under date of Irkutsk, Siberia, December, 8, 1882, Lieut. Harber writes to the Secretary of the Navy, giving a detailed report of the operations of his party in their search for the missing people of the Jeannette: At midnight, June 23, they left Irkutsk for the Lena delta, arriving at Bulun July 3. They took in the stores left by Engineer Melville, and fitted out four parties with native boats. Then followed the chief incidents of the search of the different parties from day to day and the difficulties experienced from shoal water and the impossibility of procuring native guides. They were frequently compelled to wade and drag boats for miles. On the morning of Aug. 21st they reached Matrai, visited the tomb of Lieutenant-Commander De Long and companions, and put four heavy bolts through the standard and arms of the cross, in accordance with the request of Engineer Melville. Thence the search was continued northward, and on the 31st they reached the spot where Lieutenant-Commander De Long and party were found. Search was made to see if anything remained hidden under the snow; nothing of consequence however, was found. Returning, the party reached Bulun on the 16th of September. Here the Jeannette's party was placed in charge of Ensign Hunt. The search was continued by Lieut. Harber and Mr. Schultz on sledges. Lieut. Harber then gives an account of the points visited and distances traveled, and notes the return to Bulun on the 8th of November, and adds: "I regret to state no trace of Chipp, or his party, or his boat has been seen by us or any of the natives. It is probable that I have communicated with every native of the delta and with those who were near the coast."

J. R. Green, author of the "History of the English People," is dead.

The insurrection in Guayaquil, South America, continues. Hanns Veintemilla, the leader, as his fortunes become more desperate becomes more tyrannical. On the 11th his little armed cruiser, Huacho, seized the English ship Mysterious Star, lying outside the bar at San Lorenzo, and it is thought the act will lead to serious trouble.

The news is just received that the British steamer Gloucester City, which left Bristol on February 8th, for New York, foundered February 23d, in latitude 52 degrees north, longitude 52 degrees west. Crew rescued. Landed at Havre.

The steamer Horton, from Galveston, Texas, for Sebastopol, is aground near Gallipoli.

The steamboat Mary, Capt. Lefare commanding, entered Company Canal, Louisiana, Tuesday afternoon about half-past three o'clock. Nothing appeared the matter with her at that time, but fifteen minutes later, when about a mile from the entrance to the canal, and without any apparent accident occurring in the meanwhile, she commenced filling rapidly, and sunk in ten minutes in about six feet of water, careening over on her larboard side, which was submerged to the guards, those on the starboard side being out of the water. No lives were lost, and no injury was received by any person on board.

Arkell & Co., of No. 118 Pearl street, the New York agents of the Bristol City Steamship Line, received the news of the loss of the steamer Gloucester City, Capt. Deslandes. The Captain had under him a crew of twenty-seven men all told. There were no passengers on board. The Gloucester City was valued at about $150,000. The freight was valued at about $75,000.

The water now only lacks four inches and a half of running over the levees, at Helena, Ark. White River is declining, and Clarendon, which was overflowed, will be rid of the water now in a few days. There is a great deal of suffering upon the St. Francis and in the Sunk Lands, and it will be a long time before the people can recover their losses. Notwithstanding the efforts made to recover the lost people who were supposed drowned or starved to death, nothing can be learned. Capt. Morris, of the Sunk Lands, has made every effort to learn of their whereabouts. The destruction in that quarter and at Madison, on the St. Francis, has been very great. No just estimate can be made of it until the water goes down. The water in some places is fifteen feet deep. The Memphis & Little Rock Road has suffered a great deal from the frequent washouts on the road. The Memphis & Kansas City Road has also lost much material, such as ties and rails, and washing off where grading has been done. Several miles of telegraph poles are washed away. All business is transacted by way of Little Rock. The company have men to repair the damages. The greatest danger felt by the citizens is from the break of last year, which shows signs of great weakness. The wind is high, which augurs ill.

All the country between Memphis, Tenn., and Helena, Ark., is submerged. Austin, Miss., is overflowed. Water to the depth of several feet rushes through the town. Much suffering exists among the inhabitants of the sunk lands, in the north-eastern part of Arkansas; and their isolated condition makes it very difficult to render them assistance.

Accounts from western Tennessee say great damage has been done in Lake and other counties along the river. Much stock has been lost, and many houses, fences, and a good deal of corn and cotton swept away. Some of the towns are completely isolated, but no actual suffering is yet reported.

Mar. 8th.—The Mayor of Xeres, Spain, has received a threat to poison the drinking water if the prosecution of the "Black Hand" Society is continued.

Conductor John Caine, shot by the robbers on the Little Rock and Fort Smith Railroad train, died this morning, and the body arrived to-night. Later dispatches show four men were concerned. They boarded the train at Mulberry, and began firing at the conductor when he asked for fare. He received two shots in the head. Brakesman Lester is still alive, but he is believed to be mortally wounded. He is a young man residing at Columbus, Ky. One of the robbers was shot by his comrades during the indiscriminate shooting, after Caine was shot. The wounded man, who spent the night at a neighboring farm house, was arrested and lodged in the VanBuren jail. A passenger identifies him. Large parties are scouring the country for the remaining robbers. In addition to $1,000 offered by Superintendent Hartman for each robber, Governor Berry offers $500 for each fugitive.

The steamship City of Merida, of the Alexandria line, which arrived at New York to-day from Havana and Vera Cruz, was out in both of the hurricanes which prevailed last month in the Gulf of Mexico. Capt. Rettig states the City of Merida was on her way from Havana to Vera Cruz on Feb. 17. A very severe gale from the northward then set in and continued without cessation until the 21st. The steamship was hove-to with her head to the sea, and her decks were frequently swept by the waves. On Feb. 22 the Merida reached Vera Cruz, at which port the storm had caused much damage. Nearly every boat and lighter in the harbor had been more or less injured, and many of them were entirely destroyed. At sunset on the 17th, after the storm had been raging for eight hours, the cable of the French mail steamer Ville de Brest parted. She then steamed out of the harbor of Vera Cruz and remained at sea until the 22d, when she returned. During this storm the Mexican schooner Aguila Mexicana, bound from Vera Cruz to Nantia with a general cargo, was wrecked at Punta Delgada. Her entire crew perished. One body was washed ashore after the storm.

Captain Spicer, of the ship E. F. Spicer, which arrived at New York to-day from Liverpool, reports having encountered a succession of heavy gales from Jan. 22d until Feb. 15th. On Jan. 30th there was a hurricane, which continued for six hours, during which time the barometer went down to 28.85 degrees. In latitude 50 degrees and longitude 20 degrees, quantities of floating deals and timber were seen. These were spread over a distance of four miles.

The water continues to rise in the Mississippi. Arkansas city, on the Mississippi river, and like last spring, citizens have no means of communication but boats. There are four feet of water in the Parker House, and back water covers the Little Rock, Mississippi River and Texas Railroad for eleven miles. Though communication is still maintained, the only ground visible in town is near the elevator. There is considerable suffering among the poorer classes, as all industries have stopped, and no provision has been made to relieve the destitute. For several miles the railroad track is kept from floating off by covering the ties with railroad iron, and thousands of sacks filled with earth have been piled three or four deep on the sides to protect the track.

Twenty thousand dollars' worth of damage occurred to the dam at Niles, Mich., last night by a washout that took seventy feet. Five establishments are stopped thereby for an indefinite period. The work of rebuilding will begin at once.

The old breasts of the Reliance Colliery caved in, at Mount Carmel, Pa., cracking a large area of the surface under nine houses, leaving only a shell of frozen earth between the houses and the mine. Families are hurriedly moving out. Twenty other houses, the public road, and the Reading depot and railroad tracks are in danger. The houses belong to the Reading Company. Some of them are being pulled down and carried away, as they may sink out of sight any moment.

March 9.—A terrible disaster occurred in the German Ocean yesterday, the steamer Navarre, bound from Copenhagen to Leith, foundering during a storm. Of eighty-one persons on board the ill-fated vessel only sixteen were saved.

The Parisian police yesterday forcibly suppressed a Socialist meeting which was announced to be held on the Esplanade des Invalides. An attempt was made to form a barricade with paving-stones, but the municipal cavalry charged on the mob, and a large number of arrests were made.

Owing to a heavy gale the tide in the Clyde, Scotland, is remarkably low. The steamers Devonia, Circassia, Manitoban, and several others were at one time aground.

The Hull fishing fleet suffered seriously by the gale. Eighty vessels of the fleet arrived there in a damaged condition, and twelve of them lost members of their crews. Three vessels were foundered, one with all hands on board.

Similar accounts have been received from the Yarmouth fishing fleet.

The Norwegian merchant steamer Odin was wrecked Jan. 23 on the Island of Tung Ying, on the China coast. The ship and cargo were a total loss. The crew was saved, and, after escaping the attacks of piratical natives, reached Foochow and Hong Kong.

The Yokohama Chamber of Commerce, Japan, having obtained a copy of the recent British treaty with Corea, reports strongly against its ratification by the British Government, chiefly because the treaty recognizes the Corean right to impose a tariff.

A dispatch from Tamatave, Madagascar, states that the people are determined if the French make an attack upon them to migrate to the interior. The fanatics are stirring up the people against the Christians.

At Old Town ridge, Arkansas, the water is high everywhere. The population is fleeing towards Helena. The overflow at this place is twelve inches higher than last year. In the Big creek and White river bottoms, the floods are awful. The rushing and roaring of the water can be heard for miles. Houses have been washed away, and fences are floating off, without any hope of recovery. The water in the Langville bottom has reached an immense depth. The telegraph wires between Madison and Memphis are down. Up the St. Francis every thing is under water except the Indian mounds, which are a poor refuge for the overflowed people.

The receding waters have left Shawneetown, Ill., in a doleful condition. The phases of destruction seem to be unending. Many houses supposed to be unharmed, are falling in ruins, as the water leaves them.

Chicago officials have estimated that there are six thousand places in Chicago where liquor is sold and drunk.

March 11.—Prince Gortschakoff, Russia's most famous diplomat, who has been in the service of his country for over sixty years, died to-day at Baden-Baden at the age of eighty-five.

Another Socialistic meeting was announced to be held in Paris yesterday, but failed to come off. The authorities took energetic measures, emboldened probably by the easy manner in which the last affair of the kind was disposed of, and the police and municipal cavalry charged the mob. Fifteen arrests were made, and search is being conducted for Louise Michel, the fiery virago who is said to be at the bottom of the present abortive movement. It is generally believed, however, that she is only a tool in the hands of the Bonapartists, who are playing their favorite game of starting a scheme for their personal aggrandizement under the guise of a democratic uprising.

It is stated that the police were warned from Paris of a plot to murder the Czar. A lady was arrested at Charkov, and there was found on her the key to the cipher documents which had been previously seized.

The heaviest snow storm of the season, at Montreal, Canada, to-day.

The first loss of human life by flood in Arkansas occurred by the upsetting of a house twelve miles south of Helena, Ark., in which were six adults and four children. The latter were drowned, and the former rescued by a party of hunters, who took them off the roof after they had clung to it three days. The St. Francis swamp contains hundreds of horses, mules, and cattle standing up to their throats in water, their owners being unable to rescue them. Many carcasses are floating about.

There is sickness and great suffering, reported at nearly all the Ohio River towns, which have suffered from the late overflow.

At New Franklin, Ind., a village of 120 inhabitants, thirty are destitute, fifteen are sick, and there have been two deaths from pneumonia.

At Uniontown, Ky., population 1,500 nearly everybody suffered. Fifty are destitute.

In Shawneetown, Ill., 1,500 people are destitute and depending on the public for provisions and medicine, 125 are sick, and twenty-four have died of pneumonia, catarrhal-fever, and dysentery. The latter disease is almost an epidemic. About 125 houses have been swept away or damaged. At least 700 persons are liable to disease.

At Caseyville, Ill., no relief had been furnished. There were forty-five cases of sickness, mostly typhoid-fever. There had been one death. One hundred houses have been under water and half of them are ruined.

Rose Claire, Ill., had been entirely covered by water. The committee found a family of ten persons, the father and mother sick, living in the engine-room of an old saw-mill.

New Liberty, Ill., had been entirely submerged, and sickness to an alarming extent prevailed.

The fishing schooner Agnes, thought to have foundered in last Thursday night's storm, arrived at Herring Cove to-day.

The Norwegian bark Sarah has been totally wrecked, and three of her crew drowned.

At 11 o'clock last evening fire was discovered in the large two-story boarding-house owned by Hood & Scott, in Drownsville, Dakota, on the Homestake Railway, and in less than thirty minutes the entire structure was destroyed. Eleven persons perished in the flames, and several others were seriously injured.

The Mark Lane Express, in its review of the British grain trade of the last week, says: The week's spell of wintry weather has been beneficial to the young and weakly wheats, which being coated with snow are protected. The supplies of wheat, though curtailed, are in somewhat better condition. Trade was slow and inanimate, but prices are unchanged. The foreign trade has been tedious and dragging, the demand small, and the supply moderate. Rates were slightly lower; five cargoes arrived, but there were no sales. The forward trade was inanimate and weaker; red winter wheat 6d lower. Flour dull and weaker; foreign was also dull and weaker, with large supply; prices are lower. Barley and oats unchanged. Maize weaker in view of the prospect of a large supply. Sales of English wheat for the last week, 47,497 quarters at 42s 6d, against 32,054 quarters at 45s 9d the corresponding week of last year.

The levee of the Mississippi has broken at Beasley's and all the people were able to do, was to fly before the raging waters. Island No. 65, in the Mississippi river about sixty miles below Helena, has been washed away entirely. Another break in the levee near Aushalia, Miss., is letting the water overflow a vast tract of land in that region.

March 13.—The French revolutionists at Paris, have resolved henceforth to hold regular fortnightly meetings, in different quarters of the city. These meetings are announced to be under the central revolutionary committee. One of these meetings has been held at which one of the fiery orators said: "The people of Paris have in times past watered the streets with their blood, and they have plenty left in their veins to do so again." The meeting broke up amid shouts of "long live the Commune." Explosive machines have been discovered in different parts of the city of Paris.

Correspondence.

EGREMONT, Ontario,
March 7th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I am well, and trying to sow the good seed, the word of God, among the people. I find it a hard thing to do sometimes, as they are afraid to come to hear what a latter day saint elder has to say to them about the gospel of Jesus Christ. And some of the preachers think, and say, that we are all the same as those in Salt Lake, and try to make the people believe that we are. And they try to find fault with the Book of Mormon, and the name of Joseph Smith, and say that he was a bad man, and the Book of Mormon a humbug, and so on. We ask them to come out and prove their statements. They will not do that. We have one Mr. Clark here in Egremont, a Christian Minister. He has done all he could against us; and I have asked him to meet me on either question openly, before the people. I have given him every chance; but he will not come out. And when he dare not take me up himself, he tried to get two Baptist Ministers to help him. But he lost ground every time, and I baptized two last week out of that part. One a fine young man by the name of Thomas H. Johnston, and a woman by the name of Sarah Ann Spencer. She was a member of the Christian Church, one of Mr. Clark's members. And I think we shall get some more out of that part, before very long. I hope so. I think I shall baptize two or three more here in this branch this week, if all is well.

The branch in Egremont is in the best condition now it ever was in, since it has been a branch. The Saints come together at the church for meeting, and the spirit comes with them, and is felt in great power. On last Sunday at one o'clock, the Saints came together for prayer and testimony, and the good spirit of the Master was present with his people, in great power, and every one present was made glad. Some were present at that meeting, not members of the church, that said they never witnessed anything like it before, and some of them will soon be members of the church. I find that there is much need of more laborers in the Dominion of Canada. I can not be at all the places I am wanted at; for I find that the great work of God is onward, and we must sow the seed before we can reap. I am willing to labor wherever the Lord wants me, and wherever I can do the most good; and I feel that the Lord has blest me since I have been on this mission. I have found good, kind Saints, and they have cared for my wants, and I am still ready and willing to do all I can for the cause of truth. I hope to meet with many of you at the coming Spring conference.

May the blessed Master help all his dear children to do right, is the prayer of your brother. I ask your prayers in my behalf.

I remain your brother in the bonds of Christ,
GEORGE HICKLIN.

COLUMBUS, Kansas, March 8th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—We appreciate the Herald as a weekly, and wish that it could be read by all the honest in heart. It is a great source of light. The Saints in this branch are in unity and good feeling. Brother J. T. Davis was here a week, and preached during that time to an attentive and full house. Some have said that he was a man inspired of God. If he can come back and speak a week more, he will be greeted with a full house.

Yours truly,
W. S. TAYLOR.

MILTON, Santa Rosa Co., Fla.,
March 7th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. Anthony spent the month of February in Jackson county, Mississippi, and for three weeks of this time I had the pleasure of laboring with him. Three were added to the church whilst we were there. There is a very inviting field of labor over in that part of Mississippi. We wished for more laborers.

The quarterly conference of the Florida District, held about six miles from here, 3d and 4th inst., passed off pleasantly. There was a fair attendance of the Saints, and many of our friends came out to listen to the preaching of the word, and a fair degree of the spirit was enjoyed by the speakers. Although the work is still very low in this part of the district, causing us to feel sorrowful, we think we can see the silver lining to the clouds, and we shall hope, pray and work on for the good of our brethren, and the glorious cause of truth.

From southern papers we learn, that there are a great many missionaries scattered throughout the southern states, who have been sent here by the Utah Church. Bro. Anthony, who has fought this evil, this monster in its den, feels as if he would like to follow them up, and show the people among whom they have labored, wherein they have misrepresented the church of Christ. I think he would be off to those parts where they have been laboring at once, were it not that work needs to be done to try and revive the work in this district. About four hundred Saints in this district, have scarcely any preaching, save when the missionaries are around, and the cry that comes from them is pitiful, of the Master's flock, famishing for the bread of life. I have known of missionaries being found fault with for laboring in the branches; but if it is a true saying, "That charity begins at home," and that we are "to do good unto all men, especially unto those who are of the household of faith," then these sheep need to be fed; O, that the spirit of the Master might dwelt richly in the hearts of the Elders, Priests, Teachers and Deacons in this part of the moral vineyard. Then could the missionaries turn with joy to new and inviting fields; then would the work spread in the sunny south; then the dear Saints would be blessed, and would bless others. O, that God's people here would be wise, that he might bless them with greater temporal blessings; but alas! so many of them spend their money for that which is not bread. O, that they would obey the law given for their temporal salvation, that their herds, their flocks, their fields and the labor of their hands, might be blessed.

My health has been better during the past few months than usual; for this and other blessings received, I thank the Master. Dear Saints, pray for the laborers in this mission.

Your brother in Christ,
FRANK P. SCARCLIFF.

BOZEMAN, Montana,
February 27th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I have been absent four days, attending a two days' meeting, commencing Saturday, the 24th of February, at Reese Creek, Montana. I was surprised and also pleased with the experience gained while among the Saints there. Business was attended to with the strictest order, and according to the rules of the Church, and with unity. The brethren in authority work together, and (let me not forget to mention) with great power. Sunday the 25th, was a day never to be forgotten; the ordinances of baptism and confirmation, healing the sick, and administering the sacrament, were attended to, and with the power of the Spirit, which was felt in abundance by every one present. The gifts were enjoyed by the Saints. I feel thankful that I belong to such a branch of the Church, and that I belong to a church that I need not be ashamed to present to the world; and a people that believe in and worship our God, according to the Holy Scriptures. That the works of darkness may go down where they belong, and the great work of Israel's God advance and triumph at last, is the desire of your humble servant,

MARTIN LUNDWALL.

LAMBERTA, Baldwin Co., Ala.,
March 5th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—We hail with pleasure thy weekly visits. Thou art ever a welcome visitor in our family, made more so, as we have no preaching in our neighborhood, (the nearest Branch being fourteen miles distant), only when some traveling Elder calls, and preaches in our house. Bro. Scarcliff has been with us pretty regularly for some time.

Salem Branch, the one referred to above, was organized by Bro. Montague, September 25th, 1881, with sixteen members; now numbers more than thirty, under the watch-care of Bro. J. H. Givens, faithful old soldier of the cross. Though he is old and feeble, yet he is doing a good work. Has been the means in God's hands of bringing many souls out of darkness into the glorious light of the gospel. May he be spared to us many years yet. I read with pleasure the letters of Bro. Heman C. Smith in Herald. He seems to be thoroughly alive to the work of his Heavenly Master. God speed the day, when the people will be willing to hear the gospel preached in its primitive purity and simplicity. Then we shall see branches of the church of Christ, springing up all over the beautiful, sunny south.

Yours in the one faith,
MARY LEAVINS.

MANCHESTER, Red River Co., Texas,
March 3d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I am still striving to tell the gospel story. Since my last report, I have been laboring in this and Ellis county; and in Severe county, Arkansas. In Severe county, at Silver Hill, I left a splendid interest, and quite a number very near the kingdom. I fear I left them too soon, but think to visit them again soon. In Ellis county I was not able to make the effort that I desired to make, owing to inclement weather and the condition of my health. I was nearly down sick while there. However, I held a few meetings, and was blessed in presenting the Book of Mormon. On two occasions administered to the sick, with good results. I returned to this place on the 17th of January, worn down by sickness and care, and found such welcome as only Saints can give. May a kind and loving Father bless them ever, is my prayer.

I have labored here as best I could. We have had snow, sleet, and mud to contend with, besides the intolerance and prejudices of the people; but prejudice is giving way before the light of truth, and the interest is increasing. The Saints, though few in number, are about building a house in which to meet, and are receiving assistance from some of the friends outside the church. This will give the work here more permanence, and I believe will result in great good to the cause. I think we have reason to expect an ingathering in the near future. At times this mission has seemed a very hard one to me; but trials and clouds will mark the pathway through life, whether in this place or that; and when the presence of the Spirit gives assurance that the Master approves, it matters little where we labor. Only for the intense, yearning desire, to see the loved and loving ones at home, I could willingly stay here, and strive to build up the cause in this southern land. The great want of this part of this mission, in my judgment, is local labor; a vigorous, continued effort.

We are more than pleased with the weekly visits of the Herald. May it long continue to admonish, instruct, and edify the Saints. With an earnest desire for the prayers of the Saints, I remain your brother in gospel bonds,

GEO. MONTAGUE.

NAUVOO, Illinois,
February 18th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—In Herald of January 13th, I read a communication from Bro. Charles Derry. Among other things, he mentioned being in a place called Burnett, where he found Elder Oscar Beebe, who, he says, preaches occasionally; but having lost his license, and being unable to procure another, the Saints do not know whether he has been properly ordained or not. If it will be of benefit to Bro. Beebe and the church, I will send the following.

Under the preaching of Elder Nathaniel Finch, in the township of Fremont, Saginaw county, Michigan, 1864, Bro. Oscar Beebe and wife, with a number of others, were convinced of the gospel truths, and submitted to the ordinance of baptism September, 9th, same year. Subsequently, a branch was formed, with Bro. Finch presiding Elder. The following year, Elder Finch removed to the Midland Branch; but before his removal, and at the time of his release from presiding over the branch, Bro. Beebe was chosen by acclamation, by the members of the branch who were present, to preside over the branch, and was ordained to the office of an Elder at that time by Elder Finch.

Yours in bonds,

D. D. BABCOCK.

AMERICAN FORK, Utah,
March 2d, 1883.

Bro. Blair:—All is going along smoothly with us. Bro. Hansen got the American Fork school house three evenings. We had good order. Bro. Hansen and I were at Fairfield; had three good meetings. All feel well. Bro. Hansen is south. The Saints in Lehi Branch wanted to have meetings. There is a man there who is interested with us; he attends our meetings. I will stop over Sunday to meet with the branch, then I will go after Bro. Hansen, south. I think there will be good done there, and we would like to keep it up. The weather is very fine here. I got a letter from Bro. Warnock. I believe all is well in the city. Bro. Hansen is a good man for this mission. I like him. I hope you will be back in May. I would have liked to have seen you before you left. I want to do all the good I can. I thought if I could get a home back east, I would have a place where I wanted to live. I am tired of Utah, but I will do any thing for the good of the cause.

Your brother in Christ,

WM. GIBSON.

BIGTIMBER, Riley Co., Kansas,
March 3d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—North-western Kansas found a few of the Saints gathered on the 24th of February, according to previous appointment, notwithstanding mud and drizzling rain, and last of all, snow. A good spirit prevailed, and the Saints were rejoiced. There were some branches that failed to put in a report, storm-stayed, I suppose. We are in great want of a Swedish or Danish Elder in this district, or both. I am in a Swedish settlement, and if an Elder that could speak that language would come, I think a great work could be done. He can board free. I am striving to live the life of the righteous. Pray for me.

Your brother in bonds,

G. W. BEEBE.

SONORA, Iowa, March 8th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I came home last week from Pennsylvania, where I have been over two months, visiting friends, and proclaiming the gospel of Christ. When I first arrived in Perry county, there was a protracted meeting in progress. My old friends found out, (as they said), that I had turned out to be a preacher, and they wanted their preacher to get me to preach some for them; but when he found out that I was a Latter Day Saint, (Mormon), he had an eye on his doctrine, and strictly forbade them to let me use the church. But some were anxious to hear me, so they got the school-house for me. After my second effort, the class leader challenged me for a discussion. He affirmed that sprinkling was the scriptural mode of baptism, including infants. He also tried to prove, that Christ was sprinkled. He made but one speech, and that was all conjectures. He got so cross, that he never came back to hear me again. He left the house, smacking his fists, and declaring, that any one preaching such doctrine, ought not to be allowed in a house, etc. But the cause lost no friends. It has been the means of removing mountains of prejudice, and their preacher has read one of his members out of the church for disloyalty, and others are threatened, if they don't return speedily to the faith of the discipline. From there I went with a friend to meeting; but the preacher did not come, so the class leader called on me to take charge of the meeting. I spoke an hour with good liberty, then closed. After this, they commenced to ask questions concerning our faith and doctrine for about two hours more. The next night the folks came where I stopped, and I addressed them for three hours. As I had to leave there the next day, I wanted to tell them all I could. All present invited me to call and see them; and since I left there, I have had two letters, asking me to return and preach again. They have offered me two school-houses to preach in. If we have any Elders in western Maryland, who could go up there, they could do some good. If they will drop me a card, I will give them full directions where to go, and whom to stop with. One very fine woman wrote to me from there, that she was baptized once, but was not satisfied with it; and if she could get her husband to go along, she would be baptized by one having authority. And I think a few sermons more, would convince him of the truth. My desire is to do my Master's will in all things.

I remain your brother in the fulness of the gospel,

J. S. ROTH.

VANCLEAVE P. O., Jackson Co., Miss.,
February 28th, 1883.

Dear Sir:—We have been having some good preaching down here by Elder R. J. Anthony, and Elder F. P. Scarcliff; and I think there are several who are convinced of the truth, but they are ashamed to own the cause, because they have been crying Mormonism down so long. But it will become more common hereafter I hope. Mr. Anthony and Mr. Scarcliff stayed with us when they were preaching. They baptized my father on the 17th of February, 1883. I was very much pleased to see them come, but was sorry to see them leave.

Your friend,

A. L. LIVINGS.

March 7th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—The weather has been very cold out here this winter; but the Herald is a great pleasure to me in the lonely hours, as I am the only member that belongs to the church of latter day work out here. When I think back one year, or more, when I was living in the Miller Branch, Ills., where I had the opportunity to hear the gospel preached every Sunday; but since I came out here, I have not heard a gospel sermon preached. I ask an interest in your prayers.

Your brother in bonds,

O. H. MIDGORDEN.

NEBRASKA CITY, Nebraska,

March 5th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—Thou art the one that brings glad news to the children of God. I have awakened from my slumbers, by the help of the Spirit of God, and I have made a promise that I will sleep no more. I am not alone. There are others who have awakened in this part of the Lord's fold, over which I rejoice. The Lord has remembered his covenant children in this city. A little over a year ago, the good Spirit of God worked upon the hearts of many in this branch, with the desire to get a house of their own, in which to worship God. We got the house, and said to the Lord, we give this house unto thee. He accepted the contribution, by promising, "I will meet with you here; I will bless your efforts, will bless your incoming and your outgoing;" and glory to his holy name, who is always the same, the promise has been verified. Our meetings are well attended now. They are lively, and well aided by the Spirit of God. One thing rejoices my heart. There is no vain pride, showy appearance, the cause of any absence of a God-fearing soul from the house of God.

Bro. E. L. Kelley, while preaching here, pictured out beautifully the mind and will of God. I am satisfied, that if ever a servant of God was inspired by the Holy Spirit, he was; for he left a noble mark. God bless you Bro. Kelley, come again! I have made up my mind, that it was another call from God to his children, to prepare their hearts for the coming of the Messiah to reign, to save those who love him. I am going to do all I can for my soul's salvation. I do not mean to be selfish in respect to my salvation; for if I was only saved, and my brethren and sisters were not, it would be no salvation at all. For it is the salvation of my brothers and sisters, fathers and mothers, that I desire to work for, in connection with my own. I have long ago thought that I could do nothing; but I have now thrown such thoughts away. If I can not go and preach, if I have a dime to spare, that goes to help some one else on his way. I am anxious for my native land; but for long years I have kept silent.

I remain, as ever, yours in hope,

JAMES THOMPSON.

Bro. Joseph:—The branch here is in a fair condition spiritually. The work does not prosper, (that is by increase of numbers), as we would like it to do, but we have learned to wait the Lord's own time, and to continue to watch, work, and pray; and we are satisfied that the time will come, when we shall "reap if we faint not."

That you may have God's spirit to be with you always, to cheer and comfort you, we shall always pray.

Yours in bonds,

THOMAS WHITING.

WILLOW CREEK, Montana,

Bro. Joseph:—We are few, but we feel good. We have had no meetings here since Bro. Blair was here last Summer. But I hope that something will turn up before long. I am in hopes that Bro. Blair will be out here again, and hope that he will stay here a while. I believe he could do some good here, and he can stay as long as he wants to. My dear brothers and sisters, I pray our Father in heaven to save us all.

Your brother in the gospel,

ISAAC HARRIS.

Bro. Joseph:—I like the Herald in its present form. I have been a constant reader of it for the last sixteen years. The more I read the better I like it. It is the only preacher we have, and have had no other for a long time. I would like to have an Elder come this way, that we might have our spirits renewed, and our hearts made glad with the presence of an Elder among us. Ever wishing success to the cause, I still remain your brother in the Lord,

P. C. DAILY.

STEWARTSVILLE, Missouri,

Bro. Joseph:—We are still rejoicing in the latter day work. We had of late some most excellent sermons delivered here, at the German Stewartsville chapel, by Elder T. W. Smith. He spoke with great liberty, and to the edifying of all. We would like him to stay with us all the time. We are all well at present.

Yours in Christ,

T. T. HINDERKS.

SERMON BY ELDER E. H. GURLEY,
OF LAMONI, IOWA,
AT OLD CHURCH, NEAR LAMONI,
DECEMBER 17th, 1882.

AFTER the reading of the 19th Psalm, Bro. Gurley said: I will invite your attention this morning to the 20th verse of the 8th chapter of Isaiah. "To the law and to the testimony: If they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them." The words of the prophet Isaiah.

The thoughts suggested to my mind since requested to speak, are perchance of a somewhat peculiar nature, and yet familiar to the most of you at least, if not all.

The truth of Christ as presented in the word, fails to give satisfaction to the race; but few out of the many engaging in his service by an obedience to his word.

In my younger days, under the tutelage of my parents, I was not brought up under any strict discipline of faith; but simply taught to believe in the existence of a God, and those characteristics or principles of truth, justice and mercy; and was taught that by making an application of these principles to my life, that it would make me a man respected in society, and in the love of our Creator and friend. Though raised chiefly in the rural districts, yet not altogether a stranger to the vices and sins found in the cities; but have perceived that the enticements and influences brought to bear upon the young in city life are such that it is difficult, far more so than it is in country life, to bring the rising, growing up young men and women to the line of truth. That indeed it is marvelous sometimes in contemplation, how we might reach all the classes, all the different grades in life.

It is generally accepted that the religion of any individual, or of any people, depends upon their conceptions of the Deity.

I was impressed in my younger days, and am still in the same mind, that honesty was ennobling in all; but dishonesty, or hypocrisy, was contemptible, especially so in religion; and if we choose to accept or profess Christianity, it is quite consistent that we should accept it upon the terms that are offered us in God's word. That no one could have conceptions of God equal to Christ; hence it must follow that the religion of Jesus Christ is the best that can be offered to the race. But in the days of Christ and the apostles, and history repeats itself, for it is so to-day, men who wished to make objections to the word and condemn all those who professed to be divinely sent, said, work for us a miracle, show us a sign, and then we will believe your message.

The class of skeptics in the world who desire to condemn the Bible, and are doing all that they are capable of doing to destroy its influence, should remember while they are endeavoring to destroy the Scriptures and its influence from the human soul, that they should present us something in its stead that will answer the innate longings of man. That will give him that feeling of satisfaction and consolation that is found in a true and genuine faith. Hence for our part we propose to accept the Scriptures. We propose to stand by them until they have presented us something that will warrant us in leaving them; until they shall have presented us something that is better. We are willing to be tried by the word, and we expect to be judged by the word that God has spoken. And being tried by this, before they condemn our faith they should see that it is inconsistent with the word of God as taught in his book.

Not only does the question arise, If you are divinely sent work for us a sign or a miracle, that by its demonstration we may perceive that you are divinely sent, or that the message is true; but there also arises the query, Are all spiritual manifestations of God?

It is our purpose to examine these two questions from the word, and let it speak; and its teachings should settle the question so far as faith in God and his word, and in Christianity, and the terms of the gospel of Christ, is concerned.

Accepting Christ as the head, the representative of God upon the earth; the author and finisher of our faith; the one upon whom power was laid to inaugurate the Father's will and kingdom in the earth,—he came down from heaven "not to do his own will, but the will of him that had sent him," we are willing to be tried by his teachings and his expressions which he made while here upon the earth. And not only by those we have from him, but by those of his disciples, or twelve whom he sent out into the world. And if it can be shown from the word that they went abroad in the world working signs and miracles to convince the world of their Divine mission, then we are willing to acknowledge, friends, that we can not compete with those disciples sent of Christ.

I will first call your attention to this representation found in the 4th chapter of Matthew. After Jesus had been baptized of John it is said he was led up into the wilderness, of the spirit, to be tempted of the devil. And when he had fasted forty days and forty nights he was an hungered. After he had fasted, and was an hungered, and when the tempter came to him he said: "If thou be the Son of God command that these stones be made bread."

I wonder how the world can not perceive that the devil, the adversary of all righteousness came to Christ with that damnable expression, "If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread." But notice the answer that Jesus gives: "But he answered and said, It is written, man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."

But the devil, not satisfied with this trial, makes the second attempt. When Jesus went up into the mountain, as it is in this translation, "The Spirit setteth him upon the pinnacle of the temple, and the devil came and said unto him, "If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down," and he quotes Scripture now, "For it is written, he shall give his angels charge concerning thee, and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone." The cunningness of the adversary here in going back to that which was written aforetime, and applying it in this case that Jesus should work this miracle, that he should cast himself down from the pinnacle of the temple, and thereby demonstrate that the angels of God were bearing him up in their arms. But Jesus knew indeed that it is contrary to his Father's will; for he answers him, "It is written, "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God."

In this then we learn, that to have satisfied the endeavor, or complied with the request of the devil, would have been to have tempted the Lord his God, and he expresses the thought that it was written, "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God."

"And the devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, and showeth him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them; and saith unto him, All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me."

As an individual I believe that was a great and sore temptation unto Christ. I believe the underlying principles that exist in all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them, originated with this evil one, and that he possessed power over these kingdoms, and all of this he would have given to Christ, if he would have fallen down and worshipped him. But Jesus, true to the mission for which he was sent, and indeed my thought is that he would have lost his Son-ship had he obeyed the injunction, refused to comply with the command, for he answered him, "Get thee hence satan, for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God and him only shalt thou serve. The devil leaveth him after this, and behold angels came and ministered unto him." What higher position could man attain to in this life than to have the angels of God to come and minister unto him?

Passing from this to the 8th chapter of Matthew. The 5th, 6th and 7th chapters of Matthew, contain an account of the Sermon on the Mount. Afterwards he came down from the Mount, and great multitudes followed him. "And behold there came a leper, worshipping him, saying, Lord, if thou wilt thou canst make me clean. And Jesus put forth his hand, saying, I will, be thou clean."

Notice there the expression of the one who was afflicted with the leprosy, "Lord, if thou wilt." This shows that the principle of faith was already in his heart, and he knew, or believed that Christ could heal him. "Jesus saith unto him, See thou tell no man." Strange he did not tell him to go out into all the world and declare this great miracle that he had wrought upon him. Jesus did not tell him to tell his friends and his neighbors that they might believe; but quite to the contrary, he charged him, "See thou tell no man, but go show thyself to the Priest."

Here we discover that Jesus directly to the opposite of that which is generally taught by men, refers them to the things that were written, as in the case of the devil tempting him. He worked no miracle to prove his Divine mission, but he referred to those things that were written aforetime. If they would accept that word they might believe and know him. But if they reject that, so far as he was concerned, he would not stoop as it were to work a miracle to satisfy their curiosity for the time. For he well knew their evil hearts as he afterwards expressed it. When some learned that he was casting out devils, they accused him of casting them out by Beelzebub, the prince of devils, Jesus made an illustration of opposites for them, by showing "That a house divided against itself can not stand."

This same 8th chapter contains several other cases. One in the 23d verse. "When he had entered into a ship his disciples came unto him. And behold there arose a great tempest." His disciples had not power to quell the tempest. But Jesus came unto them and commanded the tempest, and it obeyed him. So he reproveth his disciples for their littleness of faith; showing indeed that the principle of faith was the underlying principle that would call down the blessings; and that without that principle of faith, they should not expect that they would receive the blessings of God, or be able to teach what they did receive from him.

This same 8th chapter also contains an account of his passing through a certain country, and there were men who were herding a large herd of swine. And there came some that were possessed of devils, and the devils cried out unto Jesus, and asked of Jesus that if he cast them out he would permit them to enter into this herd of swine. He did so; and the result of it was that the swine ran from the precipice, and were drowned in the sea.

Those who were the keepers of the herd of swine, went into the city and told to those people all that had happened to those who were possessed. Did they come out and worship Christ? Did they accept of him because of this wonderful miracle, and because they should consider and believe in an opposite power from that which those persons possessed? Even though evil spirits obeyed him, did they believe? No, but they besought him that he would leave their coasts. They would not accept of Christ notwithstanding this miracle wrought by him, and they besought him to leave their coasts. I presume this is very likely, as is natural for the human family. It was quite a strong pull on the pocket nerve. He had destroyed their property, and they wished him to leave their coasts, forgetting that Jesus or God, was the giver in the first place of all that they possessed. "The Lord giveth, and the Lord taketh away."

Passing on to the 9th chapter and the 2d verse: "Behold they brought to him a man sick of the palsy, lying on a bed. And Jesus seeing their faith, saith unto the sick of the palsy, Son, be of good cheer, thy sins be forgiven thee."

How remarkable that expression in James, 5th chapter, "Send for the elders of the church, and they shall anoint them with oil, and pray over them, and the prayer of faith shall save the sick; and if they have committed sins they shall be forgiven them." They upbraided Christ for making this declaration; but it was just as easy to say, "Thy sins be forgiven thee," as to say "Rise, take up thy bed and walk."

This same chapter, from the 20th to the 26th verse, also contains an account of a woman who had an issue of blood for 12 years. She came and touched the hem of his garment; for "she said within herself, if she but touched the hem of his garment, she should be made whole," showing the principle of faith implanted within her breast, that he was divinely sent, and that he could heal her by his wondrous power, if she but touched the hem of his garment.

It is said in another place where the same instance is recorded, that Jesus was thronged, and he says, "Who hath touched me? There was a great throng about him, and his disciples were astonished that he should say, "Who hath touched me?" But he perceived that virtue had gone out from him. They might touch him, and rub against him, and yet if it was not done by faith, for a specific purpose, as in the case of the woman who had the issue of blood, it would have no effect upon him. But in this case he perceived that virtue had gone out of him.

Again in the 27th verse: "And when Jesus departed thence, two blind men followed him, crying, and saying, Thou Son of David have mercy on us."

And when he was come into the house, the blind men came unto him; and Jesus saith unto them, Believe ye that I am able to do this thing?"

I present these cases to show that there was a principle of faith underlying these miracles wrought by Jesus, and that you may not deceive yourselves with the thought that those who come to you with the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, should work signs and miracles to convince you, or your fellow men of the truth of the message that they bring.

It is given by the Apostle John in his second epistle thus: "Whosoever transgresseth, and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ hath not God. He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son."

Here is the test. If they come to us abiding in the doctrine of Christ, we can receive them as the children of God. But unless they are found abiding in the doctrine of Christ, or if they come to us with another doctrine than that of Christ, "receive them not into your houses," that is as teachers sent of God, "Neither bid them God speed."

Now to return to this case of the blind men: "They said unto him, yea, Lord."

Then touched he their eyes, saying, According to your faith be it unto you.

And their eyes were opened; and Jesus straightly charged them, saying, See that no man know it."

It was not his design that they should go abroad, and herald the miracles that he had wrought, and the signs that he had performed, the blessings that he had called down upon them. But they should keep it as a blessing of God to them, confirming them in the belief of his Divine mission, and the truth of that which he taught unto them; for the things that were written aforetime should be sufficient to give this faith to those who accepted the word.

But we are perfectly willing to admit that Jesus did give them one sign that they might believe; and that towards the close of his mission, and just before his crucifixion, as has been noticed in a little tract entitled "Trial of the witnesses to the resurrection of Christ." It was urged that he had misappropriated the prophecies of old to himself. That he had misconstrued them. But Jesus himself shows plainly that he should die, and that the third day he should rise again. And after Christ was put to death, you recollect the Jews besought Pilate that they might have a guard, and that the sepulchre might be made sure until the third day, lest his disciples should come and steal him away, and the last error should be worse than the first. So they went their way after Pilate gave them permission, and they rolled a stone to the door of the sepulchre, and they placed a seal upon it, and a guard was stationed, and they watched it. It was only designed that they should watch it until the end of the three days. If he did not rise then, it would be proven that he was false. They were fearful you see that if it was not watched, his disciples might come by night and steal his body away, and some one would come and personate Christ, and deceive the people that he had risen from the dead.

Now notice that they placed a seal upon the stone, and they set a guard to watch it for the purpose of preventing his disciples from stealing his body away. I thought as I read the little tract that the point was well taken, that the seal was not placed upon the stone for the purpose of scaring away his disciples; but it was as it were a strict charge to those guards that they should see to it under the penalty of the law, that that seal was not broken. If the guards were removed, those who desired to steal away his body, would not stop for the seal. They could easily break the seal and roll the stone away. But the seal was placed there that the guards might know that it was a strict charge that they had, and that the seal was not to be broken.

It is said that they slumbered. Was it an ordinary sleep? Think you that an ordinary human sleep would come upon these guards when they were under that strict penalty of the law by which that seal was placed there, which they were placed to guard? I think my friends that it would be quite inconsistent and unreasonable to entertain for a moment the thought, that the sleep that came upon them was an ordinary one, when that seal was placed there as the monitor, as it were, to prevent them from permitting the stone to be rolled away.

Again, think you that it was an ordinary sleep that was upon those guards, so that human agency indeed by any means could go and break the seal and roll away that stone, and steal the body of Christ out from the grave without waking them? To my mind it would be inconsistent, to say the least.

This sign he gave them that the third day he should rise again. It is not consistent to think for a moment that human agency wrought it under these peculiar circumstances.

We turn to the 11th chapter of Matthew, the 20th to the 26th verse, where Jesus commences to upbraid the cities.

"Woe unto thee chorazin! woe unto you Bethsaida! for if the mighty works which were done in you, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes." He upbraids these cities. "And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted unto heaven, shalt be brought down to hell; for if the mighty works, which have been done in thee, had been done in Sodom, it would have remained until this day."

Great works had been wrought there; but their effects upon the people did not bring them to repentance. And there had, as the word also shows, but comparatively few obeyed under the works wrought by Christ and the preaching of the gospel, which was the highest witness or testimony that could be offered or borne to the race. They had rejected his teachings, and he upbraids them for the evils that had been found among them.

Another instance. A centurion requested him to come and heal his servant. You recollect the story. Jesus said, "I will go and heal him." But the Centurion said, "I am not worthy." He said, "Just speak the word, and it shall be done. For I am a man under authority, and have soldiers under me. I say to this one, Do this and he doeth it. And to another one, Go there, and he goeth." And Jesus said that he had not found so great faith, no not in Israel. Here it seems is a case, where outside of the peculiar people, outside of Israel, was found one in possession of faith sufficient to call the blessings upon him.

Another witness is in the case of the woman who came and asked him for the blessing of healing, and Jesus reminded her that it was not meet or right that he should take the bread from the children and give it to the dogs. "True," she says, "but the dogs pick up the crumbs that fall from the Master's table." How great was the faith which that woman possessed, notwithstanding she was not of the chosen people, as it were, in those days!

Hence we find in some years after this, that the gospel went abroad into all the world, and all who would accept of him were accepted with him, of every nation tongue and people.

In the last verse of the 13th chapter it is said, that he "did not do many mighty works there because of their unbelief." And the Apostle Mark declares in his 6th chapter, and 5th and 6th verses, "that he could there do no mighty works, save he laid his hands upon a few sick folks and healed them." And he marveled at their unbelief, and went abroad in the villages teaching; showing that the principle of faith was that which called the blessings upon them. Because of their unbelief, Jesus, the representative of God, the highest type of righteousness upon the earth, could not work wonderful miracles, and he marveled at their unbelief; showing conclusively that their unbelief was the cause of his not being able to work many signs and miracles among them. And if Jesus could not, it could not be expected of men much less than him to work these miracles without the operation of the principle of faith.

It is thought by the expression of the Apostle John in the 20th chapter of his gospel, and the 30th to the 31st verses, that signs and miracles should be wrought. "Many other miracles truly did Jesus in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book. But these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing ye might live therein." "Many other signs did Jesus truly." In whose presence? "In the presence of his disciples." It does not inform us that he worked many other signs in the presence of unbelievers; but it very pointedly informs us that he worked them in the presence of his disciples, "Which are not written in this book. But these are written, that ye might believe." To whom is he writing? Col. Robert G. Ingersoll says it is addressed to nobody; and signed by nobody; but it would be very foolish for the Apostle John to write his epistle, and send it to those who rejected him, or did not know anything about him. But it was very likely that he would send it to those who were the disciples of Christ. So here is John the disciple, testifying of miracles wrought in the presence of the disciples, by Christ, and John testifies of them to the disciples of Christ, that those to whom he sent them, even the disciples of Christ, might be confirmed in their faith, and might be willing witnesses in the cause.

We read that John being cast into prison, sent ambassadors unto Christ to ask him if he was the Christ, or should they look for another. Jesus, while the ambassadors were with him, worked several signs, and sent them back to John, and told them to tell him that "the blind saw, the deaf heard, the lame walked, and the poor had the gospel preached unto them." These witnesses were taken to John in prison, by the messengers whom he had chosen, and they bore witness of them; which indeed was sufficient to satisfy the situation of the case at the time. So in the instance referred to. Consequently we perceive that it has no bearing to prove that those who come with the gospel of Christ should work signs or miracles to make the people believe in Jesus or his word. This testimony that was written by a disciple to disciples, is quite a different case.

We wish now to call your attention to the grand test case of the Prophet Elijah. When he came to Ahab who was king of Israel, he upbraided him because he had caused Israel to err. And "Elijah came unto all the people, and said, How long halt ye between two opinions? If the Lord be God, follow him: But if Baal, then follow him." Then he proposes a test case unto them. He says he is alone; but of the prophets of Baal there are 450. He tells them they shall make a test case as it were. Let two bullocks be brought and each of them would prepare one. Then let the prophets of Baal call upon their God, and he would call upon the Lord his God. And that God that would answer by fire, let him be God. So they agreed. And they each took their offering and laid it upon the altar. The prophets took theirs and laid it upon the altar. And they commenced to call upon their God. And they continued to call until noon, but he answered not a word. Elijah you know reproves and upbraids them a little, sarcastically. He says, call a little louder. Peradventure he is asleep, or is pursuing, or is gone upon a journey. And they continued to cry, and they were so zealous in the cause that they cut themselves with lances until the blood gushed out, until the time of the offering of the evening sacrifice; but their God heard them not. When it came time for Elijah to call upon his God, he tells them to bring four barrels of water, and pour upon his altar. He had taken twelve stones first and prepared an altar. He told them to pour on four barrels of water, and do it the second time, and they did it the second time. And he told them to do it the third time, and they did it the third time, making twelve barrels of water that were poured on the altar. Then he cried unto his God saying: "Lord God of Abraham, of Isaac, and of Israel, let it be known this day that thou art God in Israel, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy word."

Here we see that Elijah did not step out of his agency and propose all these things to all Israel, and by his own faith as it were, call down the blessing of God or the fire upon the altar; but he acted in harmony with the teachings of God. God had spoken to him; for he says: "Let it be known this day that thou art God, and that I am thy servant, and that I have done all these things at thy word." God had spoken this word to him, and he could well indeed be assured that he would fulfill. This was a test case to Israel, God's chosen people in those days, and was in accordance with his word. Now to return.

The 4th chapter of Luke and the 25th verse, says: "But I tell you of a truth, many widows were in Israel in the days of Elias, when the heaven was shut up three years and six months, when great famine was throughout all the land." Notwithstanding the fact that there were many widows in Israel, the heaven was shut up for three years and six months. Notwithstanding also the fact that the prophet, the servant of God was upon the earth at the time; because it was not God's will, that the blessing should come. He does not bestow the gift and power upon men at their own will, as it were, in order that they may demonstrate some wonderful sign or wonder. It is not given unto any man to have it and use it in accordance with his own discretion; but God gives it to man as it seemeth good unto him. As it seems wisdom to him, so he bestows it upon them. Here we learn in this case how it was in that time, and we learn from the peculiar history of the past, how God's power was manifested in delivering the Midianites into the hands of the Israelites under Gideon. Three hundred Israelites vanquished those Midianites; God's power delivered Daniel from the den of lions, and the Hebrew children from the fiery furnace. His power delivered the apostles many times, and yet in after years these same apostles suffered death, and many of them in a most excruciating manner; torn asunder, thrown into boiling caldrons of oil, or crucified in diverse ways. They were true. God submitted them to it, because he would not indeed show his power always to the world, but that they at the hands of the world would receive suffering.

Again in the 27th verse of the 4th chapter of Luke, he makes the declaration: "And many lepers were in Israel in the days of Eliseus the prophet; and none of them was cleansed, saving Naaman the Syrian." From this we learn that God does not bestow his power but in accordance with the principle of faith, and in accordance with his knowledge and wisdom.

In the 17th chapter of Luke, to which I now call your attention, he is speaking in the 6th verse of the principle of faith. Before that, however, Jesus says to his disciples: "Take heed to yourselves. If thy brother trespass against thee, rebuke him; and if he repent, forgive him. And if he trespass against thee seven times in a day, and seven times in a day turn again unto thee saying, I repent, thou shalt forgive him. And the apostles said unto the Lord, Increase our faith. And the Lord said, If ye had faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye might say unto this sycamine tree, Be thou plucked up by the root, and be thou planted in the sea, and it should obey you." Truly that is not much faith, as a grain of mustard seed, a very small seed; and yet it is the emphatic declaration by him who spake as never man spake, that if they had "Faith as a grain of mustard seed, they should say to this sycamine tree, be thou plucked up and be thou planted in the sea, and it should obey" them.

By this we learn the purity that was to exist and be in them. The mustard seed is a perfect oval in shape, and if our faith is perfect like unto the perfect mustard seed, pure unadulterated faith, then as God bestows his blessings upon the children of men, these things could be done at his will, or at his command.

None of those mighty miracles, those which are described in the records, were done except it was by the command of God through Christ.

While at this part of the subject we call your attention to the latter part of the 16th chapter of St. Luke, the parable of the rich man and Lazarus. You know that they both had passed from this stage of action to the stage beyond, and it was said that Lazarus was in Abraham's bosom. "And the rich man lifted up his eyes in hell, being in torment, and he desired Abraham to send Lazarus, that he might dip the tip of his finger in water and cool his tongue. I apprehend it was a place a good deal like that spoken of by the prophet Zachariah, "A pit wherein there is no water." Abraham refused him, and told him of the good things that he had in this life, and the evil things that Lazarus had, and now it was changed in the other sphere. Finally the rich man besought Abraham that he would send some one to earth, for he had five brethren there, that they might hear the word, and avoid that place of torment. But Abraham replied to him, "They have Moses and the prophets. And he said nay, father Abraham, but if one went unto them from the dead they will repent. And he said unto him, If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead." Here indeed is a very significant expression that should forever settle the dispute upon this point. They had Moses and the prophets. Jesus says, "If ye had believed Moses and the prophets ye would have believed me, for Moses and the prophets testify of me." In addition to Moses and the prophets, we present to the world the testimony of Christ and the apostles, Jesus who spake as never man spake, the highest representative of God upon the earth. If they would not believe when they had Moses and the prophets, they would not believe, though one should rise from the dead. How can we compare with them in rejecting the teachings of Christ and the apostles, as well as that of Moses and the prophets?

Changing the subject to the other branch of it, it appears that Jesus would not work miracles to convince the world of his mission, and the truth of what he taught; and it is answered in the very significant teachings of the word, that all spiritual manifestations are not of God. That there is a power that is opposed to the power of God, that also works through human agency and channels. And by this means we may discover that we should not believe in a message, or a creed, or a theory of man, by any signs or miracles that they might work, for the simple reason that opposing powers are represented in the earth, and there are spiritual manifestations that are not of God.

We turn to the case of the magicians of Egypt, when Moses was sent there by the power of God to lead Israel out of Egyptian bondage. They were sent in that unenlightened age; not as it was even in the days of Christ, and not as it is in this enlightened age, when every man is permitted to worship God according to the dictates of his own conscience, and the right of reason and the liberty of speech is granted to the people. The people were in bondage, they were under task masters, and they were in Egyptian darkness, and they did not have that light and liberty which we now have in the gospel of Jesus Christ. Hence God sends Moses and Aaron to Pharaoh to lead his children out of Egyptian bondage. One of the first miracles that he wrought, was casting down his rod, and it became a serpent according to the command of God, God having the right to command in every instance. And the magicians did so with their enchantments before him. Here we discover the opposing power to that of God, working miracles like unto them worked by Moses and Aaron. But God at the outstart manifests his will and power in a measure, in that the rod or serpent of Moses swallowed up the serpents of the magicians; and this showed them the superiority of the power that was with Moses and Aaron, over that of the magicians of Egypt. But did it satisfy? No indeed, they hardened their hearts and would not let them go. He worked the second miracle, and the magicians did so with their enchantments. Here we have an instance where there is no superiority of the one over the other, and how would an individual judge between these two powers and manifestations? In this instance there are two miracles worked by two different powers, two miracles that are equal, and how could he discern by signs and miracles which was the true power? Which was the power of God, and which was the opposite? For he must certainly confess that they are opposed, the one to the other.

The third miracle is worked, bringing up such a great host of frogs, that Pharaoh besought Moses that he would seek his God, and have them removed. He softened his heart there a little. He knew in his heart that Moses was a servant of God. Moses besought his God and the frogs were removed. But now after this, Pharaoh beholding a respite granted to him, hardened his heart again and would not let the children of Israel go. Again the Lord commanded Moses to stretch out his rod and another dire calamity came upon them, and the Magicians sought to do so with their enchantments, but could not. God proposed now that this thing should cease; that his power should be manifested, and that he should lead the children of Israel out of that bondage. The Magicians could not work the fourth miracle with their enchantments, and yet they hardened their hearts, and pursued the children of Israel, and as you have all read they were drowned in the red sea.

Passing over these instances we notice, that it would be difficult to tell at times which was the power of God, and which was the opposing power.

We pass now to the case of Saul of Tarsus. Old king Saul, who had so far transgressed, and departed from the Lord, that God would answer him neither by Urim and Thummim, nor by dream or prophet, and he seeks the Witch of Endor, in order that he may gain some information with regard to the fate of the coming battle. After a time he succeeded in obtaining some communication, and it is represented that she brought up Samuel; brought up the words of Samuel, as another translation has it.

We refer to this simply to show, that when the children of God depart from the Lord, and seek the opposite power, they can be accommodated with some things under this evil agency. That the two powers are in the world, and it is essential to know which is right and which is wrong.

Passing over this we come to the eighth chapter of the acts of the apostles; and we discover that when Phillip went down to Samaria, preaching the word of God, that he found there one Simon Magus, who had bewitched the people with his sorceries, giving out that he was some great one, working signs and miracles among them; yet it was not with the power that accompanied Phillip. For when he heard Phillip preaching, he obeyed the ordinance of baptism with others at that time. But afterwards when he saw that through the laying on of hands the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money, saying, Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay my hands, they may receive the Holy Ghost, showing that sin was still in his heart. He wished to buy this power that he might convey this influence to the children of men, that money might be brought unto him, and he could afford to to pay a little for it on the outstart. But Peter the servant of God rebukes him, and tells him that he perceives that he is still in the gall of bitterness, and the bonds iniquity.

We discover here that when God's power was manifested in those ages, that the opposing power also presented itself. It always has been manifested through its own agencies, and the crowning effort has always been to equal or surpass the power of God; as witness the case of the Magicians of Egypt, right in the same line as it were with those that were wrought by the servants of Christ.

We discover again in the 13th chapter of the Acts of the apostles, that when they had gone through the island of Paphos, they found a certain false prophet, a sorcerer, a Jew, whose name was Barjesus.

Again in the 16th chapter and 16th verse we read:

"And it came to pass as we went to prayer, a certain damsel possessed with a spirit of divination met us, which brought her masters much gain by soothsaying: The same followed Paul and us, and cried, saying, These men are the servants of the Most High God, which show unto us the way of salvation." Here then was a certain damsel, possessed with a spirit of divination, and she declared that these be the servants of the Most High God. But was it the power of God that she possessed by which she had brought her masters much gain by soothsaying? Nay, verily; for Paul, the servant of God, turned upon her and rebuked the spirit within her, and it came out of her the same hour. Here we discover that opposite power to that of God, the power of the devil made manifest, when God's power was in the earth.

That this power should be also in the latter days, is just as clearly foretold as the restoration of the gospel of the Son of God is foretold. It was to be restored in the latter day, as witness the 14th chapter and 6th verse of the book of Revelations, the angel coming with the everlasting gospel. You turn to the 13th chapter, and you will find there an expression of what was to take place in the latter day. John in the spirit upon the Isle of Patmos, declared things which the angel had told him must be hereafter. He first pictures a first beast, and then another beast, and says: "And I beheld another beast coming up out of the earth; and he had two horns like a lamb, and he spake as a dragon, and he exerciseth all the power of the first beast before him, and causeth the earth and them that dwell therein, to worship the first beast, whose deadly wound was healed. And he doeth great wonders, so that he maketh fire come down from heaven on the earth in the sight of men.

I think if I should be made a believer in any doctrine or theory of men, through any miracles that might be wrought, to call down fire from heaven would be as apt to convince me, would be as wonderful to my mind as anything that could be offered. If by this means we are to be made believers in theories and doctrines of men, friends, we will have sufficient of this; for this evil power, this beast, will have "power to call down fire from heaven in the sight of men, to deceive them that dwell on the earth." Hence God in his kindness and mercy to man has caused it to be recorded in his word, so that we might know that signs and miracles worked through the agency of men, should not bring men to the theories of men, and to the theories of faith and belief outside of His word. "He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ, he hath both the Father and the Son."

We read farther: "And deceiveth them that dwell on the earth by the means of those miracles which he had power to do in the sight of the beast; saying to them that dwell on the earth, that they should make an image to the beast, which had the wound by a sword and did live."

We can not conclude this without reference to the epistle of Paul to the Thessalonians, second epistle and second chapter. Paul a servant of Christ; one who had received the gospel, not by the will of man, but by the will of Jesus Christ, writes thus: "Now we beseech you brethren, by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and by our gathering together unto him, that ye be not soon shaken in mind, or be troubled, neither in spirit, nor by word, nor by letter as from us, as that the day of Christ is at hand." For he says, "Let no man deceive you by any means: for that day shall not come except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition."

Paul gives a warning there to the Saints of Thessalonica, and it is a warning to the Saints in all ages. It is to-day as then. Let us be guarded and careful. Weigh the matter and examine it by God's word, and be not soon shaken in mind; for all the purposes of God are not known unto men.

The Apostle speaks of this individual who is to exalt himself above all that is called God. In the seventh verse he says, "The mystery of iniquity doth already work." In the 9th verse: "Even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan, with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth," (mark that), "because they received not the love of the truth that they might be saved. And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness."

What is truth? Jesus says he "came to bear witness to the truth." He says in the 8th chapter of John, to those Jews who believed on him, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Humbly he declared in prayer before God: "Sanctify them through thy truth, thy word is truth." "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." God's word is truth. And those who receive and love this word will be delivered; but those who receive not this word for the love of the truth, will be deceived by the signs and miracles that will come to pass in the latter day, by those false prophets that shall be in the land. False prophets shall come, and "Ye shall know them by their fruits," says Jesus in the 7th of Matthew, "Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles?" Not very likely.

Jesus says in the 8th chapter of John, and the 47th verse, "He that is of God heareth God's words." And by this we may know that we should go "to the law and to the testimony, if they speak not according to this word it is because there is no light in them." And as the Psalmist declares in the psalm just read, "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul: The testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple. The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart: The commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes. The fear of the Lord is clean, enduring forever: The judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether. More are they to be desired than gold, yea, than much fine gold: Sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb. Moreover by them is thy servant warned, and in keeping of them there is great reward."

We find the same expressions also in the 119th Psalm. "Thy righteousness is an everlasting righteousness, and thy law is the truth." "And all thy commandments are truth."

In this instance above cited, we discover that Jesus refers to the teachings of the word, the word of God, the law of God; and by this we may know the difference between these two powers.

The disciples came to Jesus once and represented to him that they had found some casting out devils, and they had rebuked them and forbidden them. Jesus tells them to rebuke them not, as much as to say they were not to be tried by that. If they were found abiding in the doctrine of Christ, appealing to the law and the testimony, amen to their casting out devils.

If men shall be found in possession of the principle of faith, that shall call down upon them the blessings, I shall be the last one to murmur or complain, but say God speed them in so doing. But so far as the doctrine that they teach, it must be tested by the word. We appeal to that and expect to be tried by it. We are willing to be tested by that word. By the doctrines taught by Christ and his apostles. I am not anyways afraid that they will "put new wine into old bottles," or a "new piece of cloth on an old garment," and make it a success.

God too in these latter days has given a warning to the church, as found in the 45th section of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, 4th and 5th paragraphs: "Wherefore beware, lest ye are deceived, and that ye may not be deceived, seek ye earnestly the best gifts, always remembering for what they are given; for verily I say unto you they are given for the benefit of those who love me and keep all my commandments, and him that seeketh so to do, that all may be benefitted that seeketh or that asketh of me, that asketh, and not for a sign, that he may consume it upon his lusts. And again, verily I say unto you, I would that ye should always remember, and always retain in your minds what those gifts are, that are given unto the church, for all have not every gift given unto them; for there are many gifts, and to every man is given a gift by the Spirit of God."

Here is a declaration of God through his prophet in the latter days, that is in strict harmony in my opinion with that which is recorded in the Bible, and which we have presented from the word touching these things; and the testimony of the apostle Peter in his second epistle and first chapter is this: "We have also a more sure word of prophecy." Mark you the New Testament Scriptures were not written at that time; but the Scriptures that he refers to were the recorded testimonies of the prophets that lived before Christ. He says, "We have a more sure word." Does Peter there say that there is a spirit of prophecy that is not quite so sure? "We have a more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn, and the day-star arise in your hearts. Knowing this first that no prophecy of the Scripture is of any private interpretation. For the prophecy came not in old time by the will of man; but holy men of God spake as they were moved by the Holy Ghost." But my exhortation is that none should speak thus, unless he is moved by the Holy Ghost, unless it be by constraint, that God may work together for good to them that love him and keep his commandments. Paul tells us in the 12th chapter of first Corinthians that these are for the edifying of the church. He tells us that there are various gifts, but the same spirit of God. He also, in the 13th chapter of first Corinthians speaks of a time when tongues shall cease, and prophecies shall fail, and knowledge shall vanish away; but charity, he says, endureth forever. Charity, that sublime principle of forgiveness, if that be within us, we may lift up our heads and rejoice. And unless that principle of charity is found within us, though we have power to remove mountains, and speak with the tongues of men and angels, and work many mighty miracles and wonders, it will profit us nothing. It is as a sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal.

May God enable us to love his word, to adhere to it, and to stand by "the law and the testimony," and the doctrine of Christ as found in the New Testament Scriptures. Let us adhere to these things. And if we conform to the teachings of the word we will not be deceived by the false prophets and the false teachers that will be manifested in the latter days. May God add his blessing, is my prayer, amen.

Her pretty little hymn she used to sing;

CHICAGO MISSION.

Whereas, the Northern Illinois District has been, and is, making a determined effort to have the Chicago Branch acknowledged or made a part of the district; and

Whereas, we believe that we are now properly and rightfully a part of the Chicago Mission, and not of the district; and

Whereas, we believe it to be inexpedient that the Chicago Mission should now be abandoned, and turned over to the Northern Illinois District, (as, in our judgment, such abandonment and transmission would be very detrimental to the interests of the work); therefore, be it

Resolved, That we are opposed to being taken from the Chicago Mission and placed under the rule of the Northern Illinois District.

And be it further Resolved, That we instruct our delegate to the Annual Conference, to be held at Kirtland, Ohio, April 6th, 1883, to support the foregoing preambles and resolution.

Resolved, That a copy of the foregoing preambles and resolution be sent to the Herald for publication.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

A TELEGRAM received from Bro. E. L. Kelley, dated Chicago, Illinois, March 20th, where he was endeavoring to obtain reduced fares to conference, is as follows: "No reduced rates can be obtained for conference west of Chicago. Those attending via Chicago, Detroit, Toledo, or Buffalo, over the Lake Shore and Michigan Southern Road, pay one and one-third fare."

Please notice the communication and letter of Bro. W. H. Kelley about the Spring Conference.

Lamoni is now without a boot and shoe maker, and there is a splendid opening for a good workman to open up a shop where making and repairing of foot wear can be done with promptness and in good style. A workman slack in keeping his promises, or who does slip-shod work, need not apply. One who has vim enough to select and keep good material, and make good fits, can get plenty of work. One who has the courage and ability to hit the trade can also keep and sell ready made wear in connection with shop work, will meet custom. Lamoni is growing, and needs such artisans as make up the sum of human existence in civilized condition.

Bro. Glaud Rodger and family have returned to Lamoni to live. We welcome them back again. Bro. Glaud and Bro. Duncan Campbell of the Seventy were in the Herald Office on a friendly visit and consultation, on the 13th inst.

Bro. Elias Land writes from Temple, Texas, in rather a sad and despondent tone respecting the condition of the work in that region of country. No labor done there to any extent at present.

Rev. Dr. Healy has been paying his respects, in a sort of left-handed way, to the cause in West Oakland, in which he gave the usual recitation respecting the Spaulding origin for the faith; and the other abominable things laid to the charge of the church by popular opinion. Bro. William Anderson took the matter in hand and replied in the Masonic Hall. At the close of Bro. Anderson's reply, Bro. H. P. Brown gave a good experience in favor of the work. Bro. Anderson's reply was printed in the Oakland Independent for March 4th.

Brn. Peter Harris and George Adams have put in a steam engine and are grinding corn, and chopped feed, for the dwellers of Lamoni and vicinity.

Bro. H. C. Bronson, of the Kewanee, Illinois, District is having a sharp controversy with some one who signs himself "Norval, Jr.," in the Rock Island Union.

Sr. Ann Chatfield writes from Gilmore City, that she would like for some Elder to visit Springdale, Washington county, Arkansas, and preach there. She has a sister living there that she thinks would obey if permitted to hear preaching.

The prayers of the Saints are asked for in behalf of Bro. Russell Archibald, of Centreville, Iowa, and Bro. C. Mills, of Pittsfield, Illinois. The latter is suffering from a broken leg, the former from decay of the bones of his right knee.

BRO. MEDDOWCROFT, of Picton, Ontario, writes March 15th, suggesting that a small donation from each member of the Church be solicited, the amount to be used to replace the money taken by Secretary Conover. It is stated that a small sum from each would replace the entire amount taken.

This suggestion is kindly meant, and we thank the brother sincerely for it; but there is no necessity for that kind of an action; all that is or can be properly asked by the Board of Publication of the Church, is that patience toward them be extended by all the patrons of the Herald Office, and time be allowed to recover the lost ground. The office had made a material advance, which is now broken, and time is needed to work forward again. Courage and patience will win the battle.

It of course is a small thing, to speak of, and does not seem to be onerous, or burdensome; five, or ten, or twenty-five cents each from a number of thousands of people—just a mere trifle—but if there are, (as is usually the case with the Saints), many such little demands, or they occur frequently for one purpose or another, local or otherwise, it makes up a large percentage of labor, savings, or income, and the Scotch proverb is exemplified "Many mickles make a muckle."

It is better that the loss be retrieved in the legitimate train of events, so far as the money is concerned. So far as lost confidence in man is concerned, it is like "water spilt upon the ground."

A BROTHER writes to us at a late date condoling with us in the loss to the office, and suggests that we try and get an honest man next time.

We have tried to get honest men for the positions of trust and labor about the office, and supposed that we had secured them,—but it seems that failure has been made. Nor do we see anything extraordinary in this failure. The world is full of just such mistakes; and if the children of this world are "wiser in their day and generation than the children of the kingdom," as was stated at an early day of the Christian dispensation, we may look for such mistakes now and then. "Misfortunes never come singly," and "evils hunt in couples;" hence our share must occur. "Offences must needs come" said the Savior, and if they come the only thing for men to do is to profit by them, not be overcome or cast down by them; letting the rest of the sentence to be fulfilled likewise, "woe to them by whom they come."

If there is any one who "knew all about" this or has a "I told you so," to state; permit us first to state that no one far, or near, ever stated to us in any form that the late secretary was not entirely worthy to be trusted. No one offered a suspicion to us, or intimated that they had reason to believe him to be dishonest. If there are any who had such suspicions, or reasons for them who said nothing to us about them, in connection with the secretary, they will do well to remember that silence was criminal; and if they are as wise now as they were unwise before they will simply keep still, or they will betray themselves.

From the first men have been trusted in the church, and some have betrayed their trust though fear, shame, trial, temptation, lust, greed for place, power and gold.

We were surprised and betrayed, and may be again—for man is fallible—but we have not lost faith in either God, or man.

LET THE LIGHT SHINE.

WHILE prosecuting the trust reposed in us as a committee to Secretary of State, at Washington, D. C., we deemed it wise to present marked copies of the Book of Mormon and the Book of Covenants to Senator G. F. Edmunds, who has charge of the Senate Bill on Utah affairs. We waited on the Senator at his hotel, but did not find him at home, we however left a note for him and the books, the receipt of which was acknowledged in the following letter:

U. S. SENATE CHAMBERS,
WASHINGTON, March 6th, 1883.

Gentlemen:—On my return to Wormley's last night, I found your note of yesterday, with a copy of the book of "Mormon," and the book entitled, "Doctrine and Covenants." I did not possess these books, and am much obliged to you for them, as they will be of use to the committee next winter.

Respectfully yours,
GEO. F. EDMUNDS.

MESSRS. JOSEPH SMITH & Z. H. GURLEY,
National Hotel, Washington, D. C.

We have also assumed the responsibility to send copies of the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants to Judge Jere Black, that in his apparent espousal of the Utah Church in the papers and elsewhere, he may not be entirely ignorant of the grounds assumed by the Reorganized Church in regard to Utah's pet doctrine.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Norman W. Smith, of Lamoni, handed us a letter written to him by Bro. William Bracy and wife Eliza, (colored), of Mecosta City, Michigan, from which we take the following extracts:

There are two here that believe in the faith, and would like to be baptized, and become united to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; their names are William Campbell and Lucy Lett. You must remember us in your prayers, that God in his own due time may send us a pastor to preach. We are almost starved to hear the gospel once more. There are four of us here now that belong, and there are a number here that want to hear the gospel. The colored people here have started a Zion Methodist Church, but most all of them believe our faith; even their preacher himself preaches our doctrine, but he will not acknowledge it, and I think that if we could get a preacher here that the greater part of them would turn and believe on the Lord Jesus Christ.

Bro. Thomas Revell, of Nauvoo, Illinois, wrote February 26th, that the HERALD as a weekly gets more and more interesting. He says:

I like to read the different views of my brethren; and the reason that I liked it, is that there is liberty in the gospel and the true servants of God. I hope I may be true to the cause which I love.

Bro. C. W. Conat, East Tawas, Michigan, in a late letter, says:

We want an Elder here badly; can not you send us one? We have money to defray expenses. Give us an able Elder, if there is one to be had.

Exactly; we will comply as soon as our new invoice of "able Elders" arrives, and we get them properly sorted,—very able, able, good, partly able, unable, and disabled.

Bro. Arthur Leverton writes from Bothwell, Ontario:

"We feel very sorry that you have had such a misfortune in the Office. When our brethren betray our confidence, it is very bad indeed; but we hope he will be brought to justice.

Bro. F. C. Warnky writes by card from Independence, Missouri, March 15th, 1883.

Dr. McLellan died Tuesday; all is well in Zion.

Bro. Warnky did not intend to couple the welfare of Zion with the death of Dr. William E. McLellan, whom the Saints all know by reputation, and many by acquaintance; but the rapid writing in reply to an inquiry we sent him, and the stating of the death of one so noted in the history of the latter day work as Dr. McLellan was; and the fact that apparent unity reigned among the Saints of the Independence Branch, came appositely together, and one can well pardon such a slip of the pen.

Dr. Wm. E. McLellan was an old man full of years, and in many respects a remarkable man. He was a man of some attainments, and a fertile brain, active temperament, loose attachments, and strong and persistent enmities; which most likely gives the key to his estrangement from the men of the Church in the rise of it. He was a strong believer in the Book of Mormon, and probably in the mission of Joseph Smith up to a certain date, which he fixed somewhere in 1834; but discarded much or all the work after that date. We met him twice, once on a visit to Independence, in August, 1877, and in the Spring of 1882, at the April session of Conference, in which from a peculiar manifestation we secured the clue to the early troubles in Kirtland that resulted in his standing aloof so long. He is gone to his account, and so let him rest. We will be pleased to give particulars if they are furnished to us.

THE Nebraska City (Nebraska) News and Press have each the following notice of the preaching of Bro. E. C. Briggs, on March 18th:

Elder E. C. Briggs, of Carson Iowa, will preach to-morrow at Latter Day Saints' church at 11 a. m. and 7: 30 p. m. Mr. Briggs is the gentleman who first went to Utah and declared war on polygamy, by which he won a national reputation. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

[Concluded from last week.]

LETTER TO R. PATTERSON.

THERE is some reason to believe that the Spaulding manuscript story, as a makeshift origin for the Book of Mormon, did not originate with Mr. Hurlbut, but was suggested by Obadiah Dogberry, who published The Reflector, at Palmyra, New York, in 1830-31. This editor furnished the key note for this cry in his paper for Feb. 23d, 1831, as follows:—

"It is well known that Joe Smith never pretended to have any communion with angels, until a long period after the pretended finding of his book, and that the juggling of himself or father went no further than the pretended faculty of seeing wonders in a 'peep stone,' and the occasional interview with the spirit, supposed to have the custody of hidden treasures; and it is also equally well known, that a vagabond fortune teller by the name of Walters, who then resided in the town of Sodus, and was once committed to the jail of this county for juggling, was the constant companion and bosom friend of these money digging impostors.

"There remains but little doubt, in the minds of those at all acquainted with these transactions, that Walters, who was sometimes called the conjurer, and was paid three dollars per day for his services by the money diggers in this neighborhood, first suggested to Smith the idea of finding a book. Walters, the better to carry on his own deceptions with those ignorant and deluded people who employed him, had procured an old copy of Cicero's Orations in the Latin language, out of which he read long and loud to his credulous hearers, uttering at the same time an unintelligible jargon, which he would afterwards pretend to interpret, and explain, as a record of the former inhabitants of America, and a particular account of the numerous situations where they had deposited their treasures previous to their final extirpation.

"So far did this impostor carry this diabolical farce, that not long previous to the pretended discovery of the 'Book of Mormon,' Walters assembled his nightly band of money diggers in the town of Manchester, at a point designated in his magical book, and drawing a circle around the laborers, with the point of an old rusty sword, and using sundry other incantations, for the purpose of propitiating the spirit, absolutely sacrificed a fowl ('Rooster') in presence of his awe-stricken companions, to the foul spirit whom ignorance had created, the guardian of hidden wealth; and after digging until day-light, his deluded employers retired to their several habitations, fatigued and disappointed."

It is too bad that Walters should be cheated out of the honors of his suggestion by the Spaulding Manuscript mythical, as it undoubtedly is.

The doctrinal portions of the Book of Mormon are not those that one would expect from a retired clergyman of the Presbyterian school. They begin with the history and are intimately interwoven with it from first to last; and some of the cardinal features of the Presbyterian confession of faith are discarded. A Baptist writer, Professor Whitsitt, in a lecture delivered before a Baptist Pastors' Conference, and published in the Western Recorder, takes the ground that the Book of Mormon was written in the direct interest of the Campbellites, and in support of their confession of faith, that "Jesus is the Christ." He takes up item after item in the book, and emphatically declares that there can be no other conclusion drawn. Mrs. McKinstry and others represent the Spaulding manuscript to be a historical sketch of the early settlers of this continent, who were an idolatrous people; and this peculiarity of the manuscript is attributed to Mr. Spaulding's tendency to infidelity in the latter years of his life, and from 1809 to 16 must have been the latter years of that Reverend gentleman's life. He wrote it as a religious novel, for amusement as the pastime of his invalid hours, and as the passion of his life, and as a means to pay his debts. He was idle for a great portion of his time, etc. It is a little discouraging to think that a good man, a godly man of the strictest sect, would engage in writing a religious romance, and read it to his hearers with such earnestness and fidelity that it would carry them away; telling them that in after times it would be as much believed as any other history, could do all this without a design of imposing upon posterity; and that such a writer should get into debt and seek his way out by the publication of such a work, helps to discourage a belief in the story told of him.

The Book of Mormon was sold at the start at $1.25. Howe's book was offered for sale at its publication at the same price. The year after its publication it was purchased by the elders of the church at thirteen cents a copy.

Howe's book had but little effect upon the progress of the church in and about Kirtland. Whatever the causes may have been to prevent, it had but little success as a destroyer of Mormonism, even with the prestige of Mr. Howe's character and influence to give it impetus.

Mr. Ebenezer Robinson, now of Davis City, Iowa, a resident of Kirtland, in 1835, and thence till the church moved from there, states that during all the time of his stay there the elders everywhere publicly denied the truthfulness of the statement made by Howe in reference to the origin of the Book of Mormon. Benjamin Winchester, resident of Philadelphia in 1840, and now of Council Bluffs, Iowa, wrote and published a pamphlet against it in Philadelphia in the year 1840. This pamphlet was published by Brown, Bicking and Guilbert, No. 56, north Third Street. In the Times and Seasons, a paper published by the Church at Nauvoo, in 1839 to 1844, in the number for 1840, is a specific editorial statement that the Spaulding Romance origin for the Book of Mormon was not true. The editors state that they speak from personal knowledge.

John E. Page wrote a pamphlet called "The Spaulding story refuted," I think at Pittsburgh, and about 1840. The church had it reprinted, but I have not a copy at hand just now to give you the exact date. Mr. Robinson before referred to, states that the story was definitely denied by the elders wherever they went, and I know that it is so done to-day, and the issue shown. Hence the statement made by you that the statements made in Mr. Howe's book were not denied in and about Kirtland, Painesville, etc., the region where it was issued, and are therefore to be taken as confessed, can not be true, and is ingeniously and purposely stated to mislead.

Below in this connection I send you an extract from a letter written for and published in the Evangelist for September 30th, 1880, by S. Burnet. I quote it to show you that the logic of evidence is on my side.

"I lived near Kirtland, Ohio, and was seventeen years old in 1830. Sydney Rigdon was uncle to my present wife, and for many years, or until the Smiths left, we knew them all personally. The Spaulding manuscript had no connection with the Book of Mormon, else when Harris' wife, an unbeliever, stole and burnt the first one hundred and twenty pages, they could have copied again, but that changed the whole plan of the work; new plates had to be found, and the translation was delayed a long time, and another scribe, Cowdery, procured. Though Spaulding wrote fiction, he was a man too well informed to make two families, men and women and children, take their tents, provisions and seeds to plant the new country, and leaving Jerusalem six hundred years before Christ, plunge into the wilderness where there was none, and travel on foot three days, and pitch their tents 160 miles from the place of starting, in a valley at the mouth of a river on the border of the Red sea, where there never was a river for more than 300 miles either way along the shore of the sea."

The long and labored effort of Howe's book to throw discredit upon the literary character of the Book of Mormon, and its crude statements, etc., both in its historic statements and other things, is in itself a rough comment on the Rev. Spaulding, as a scholar and refined gentleman, for he nowhere tells the readers which is Spaulding's and which is Rigdon's or Smith's. If the Rigdon theory is correct, the plot of the story is Spaulding's, and the situations and poses are his. If he was the scholarly man that his eulogists say that he was, how comes it that the book which is said to be his production is of such an abominably wretched construction, as these same eulogists declare it to be. Sidney Rigdon was not a fool, nor to any serious extent ignorant of the rules of the language of the day when he lived. He was not such an ignoramus but what he succeeded in passing muster in examination for the Baptist pulpit, and rivaled Alexander Campbell among the Disciples; and it is not only unreasonable but absurd to assert that he would take a finished Romance, such as it is said the Rev. Spaulding wrote, written "with such earnestness and fidelity" as to entertain the hearers, and deliberately fill it with incongruities of phraseology, faults of construction, crudities in grammar, vilolations of common speech, etc., as it is claimed by Howe, whom you have adopted, and as Williams, Tucker, et al, have charged upon the Book of Mormon.

Sidney Rigdon, if he had ever attempted a travesty on the Spaulding Romance, would have disguised it after quite another fashion than to make it a butt of ridicule for its inelegancies of speech. To say that the good parts are Spaulding's, the bad are Rigdon's production, is too general, nor would such evidence be allowed in the examination, were strict justness and fairness preserved; but the specific parts claimed to be Spaulding's would have to be named, as in claims of piracy on copyrighted works, or suits for slander or defamation of character. Besides this, the acknowledged good portions of the Book of Mormon are its doctrinal teachings, which are emphatically supportive of the teaching of the New Testament; in maintainance of the Christ is the Redeemer; and this teaching begins with the history, and is found all the way through. Are these doctrinal portions the result of a sick clergyman's pen? "No," says Mr. Howe, and others. "They are Sidney Rigdon's peculiar ideas." They are sound Biblical teachings; how can they then be the vicious production of a finished scoundrel, who hunted up a visionary, idle, bibulous vagabond to make the dupe of his pretensions, and fulminate his doctrines. "But," says Howe and others again; "The historical parts only are Spaulding's." Howe says that these are bad, very bad, the plot crude, the language bad. How then can the bad parts be Spaulding's and Rigdon's at the same time?

No, Mr. Patterson, as ingenious and careful as has been your work, aided as I can but fancy by Mr. Cobb, the presumptive proof you have woven together, must be overborne by the plainest facts in the case. The inconsistencies of the claim made for Spaulding's Romance are so numerous and striking, that I can not receive them. I prefer to believe the statements of my mother, whose character for veracity and honor is as good as that of any reverend gentleman you have named; and she stated that Sidney Rigdon was not in any wise connected with the writing or issuing of the Book of Mormon. Her opportunities to know were superlatively better than those of any who have testified in your pamphlet.

If it can be shown clearly, as I think has been done, that Joseph Smith was alone in producing the Book of Mormon, so far as human agencies are concerned; and that there was no collusion between him and Sidney Rigdon prior to the printing of that book, whether Rigdon had or had not a transcript, or the original of the "Manuscript Found," and that Smith had neither original nor copy, it is clear that every premise upon which your presumptions are built has been proven to be false, and your theory an incorrect one.

Martin Harris, Oliver Cowdery, Joseph and Hyrum Smith, and Sidney Rigdon maintained their testimony respecting the Book of Mormon to the day of their departure from earth. David Whitmer at seventy-four still maintains it. Dr. W. E. McLellan, though opposing all organizations of Mormons, still maintains his faith in that work. Why not then take the book into examination for its truths? Why accept only those things which libel and traduce it?

I close this long letter by stating, I have for twenty years, heard, read and examined all that came in my way that offered a proof to invalidate the claim made by Joseph Smith respecting the origin of the Book of Mormon; and have had and now have as strong reasons for discarding that claim as any one can possibly have for proving it false; but the methods pursued by those who have offered such proofs have been so uniformly prejudiced and unfair, and the proofs of such doubtful and inconsistent character as to be presumptive only; while those coming to my notice in favor of the claim made for the origin as given by Joseph Smith have been of so direct, plain and unequivocal a nature that I can not yet disprove them. Sidney Rigdon in the two or three years prior to my father's death was not in cordial relation with him; and after my father was killed, was in actual discord with Brigham Young and others, and had an ample and wonderful opportunity to revenge himself, had he been the bad man Howe and yourself have made him to be, by declaring the imposture practiced in foisting the Spaulding Romance upon the credulous as a divine production. That he did not do this, nor ever give the remotest hint in that direction, is as strong presumptive evidence in disproof of the claim that you have made in that regard as any you have cited is in support of your theory.

For your courtesy in sending me pamphlets accept my thanks.

JOSEPH SMITH.

[FOOT NOTE].

On page 15 of his pamphlet, Mr. Patterson urges an objection as follows: "To persons who accept Joseph Smith's statements in regard to his angelic visitants it does not seem at all incredible that Cowdery could in two months perform the stupendous task of writing out from dictation a manuscript about equal in magnitude to the Old Testament!" This objection is doubtless based upon the fact that the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, section 9, contains a revelation directing Joseph Smith to begin the second time the work of translating the Book of Mormon, and this revelation is dated May, 1829; and that in August, 1829, the manuscript was delivered to the printer, allowing only the intervening time for the work of translating. It is founded upon one of those pernicious errors in dates, which creep in through the mistakes of writers or printers, and are often very difficult to detect; but happily in this case, the detection is both easy and certain. The error is in the date of the revelation which is found in section 9 of Doctrine and Covenants, and which directs Joseph Smith to renew the work of translating, the true date of this revelation being July or August, 1828. This is proven in two ways. By the contents of the two revelations, and by the history concerning their reception, given by Joseph Smith.

The two revelations upon examination are found to refer to the same thing, namely, the manuscript pages of the Book of Mormon which had been lost, and we would naturally expect, therefore, that they were received within "a few days" of the same time. The history of the matter, as given by Joseph Smith, is as follows:

"In the mean time while Martin Harris was gone with the writings, I went to visit my father's family at Manchester. I continued there for a short season, and then returned to my place in Pennsylvania. Immediately after my return home, I was walking out a little distance, when behold the former heavenly messenger appeared and handed to me the Urim and Thummim again, (for it had been taken from me in consequence of my having wearied the Lord in asking for the privilege of letting Martin Harris take the writings which he lost by transgression), and I enquired of Lord through them and obtained the following revelation: Revelation to Joseph Smith, Jr., given July, 1828, concerning certain manuscripts on the first part of the Book of Mormon, which has been taken from the possession of Martin Harris." The revelation referred to is then quoted. This is the revelation found in section 2 of Doctrine and Covenants. Immediately after the quotation of this revelation, occurs the following:

"After I had obtained the above revelation, both the plates and the Urim and Thummim were taken from me again, but in a few days they were returned to me, when I enquired of the Lord, and the Lord said thus unto me. Revelation given to Joseph Smith, Jr., May, 1829," etc. Then follows the revelation in full.

Here are two revelations which the historian informs us were given but a "few days" apart, but which, if the dates they now bear are to be trusted, were given ten months apart. That there is an error no doubt can exist. But where is it? In the revelation now bearing date July, 1828, or that bearing date May, 1829? Most certainly in the latter, as a further examination of the history clearly shows. Immediately after the quotation of the revelation last referred to by Mr. Smith, he says:

"I did not however go immediately to translating, but went to laboring with my hands upon a small farm which I had purchased of my wife's father, in order to provide for my family. In the month of February, eighteen hundred and twenty-nine, my father came to visit us, at which time I received the following revelation for him." Then follows the revelation referred to. We have already seen that the revelation bearing date May, 1829, was given "a few days after the one bearing date July, 1828. We now see from the above quotation, that it was given some time before a revelation which was received in February, 1829.

By following the historical account farther we discover, that all the revelations which appear in the Book of Doctrine and Covenants from section 2 to section 9, were given after the one in section 9; and that those contained in sections 8 and 10, were given without any revelation between them. It is clear then that there is an error in dates, and equally clear that it is in the date of the revelation now dated May, 1829; and it is farther clearly ascertained, that this should be dated a few days after, sometime in July, 1828.

The history farther shows that the work of translation was re-commenced on April 17th, 1829, which would allow four months for the word, the manuscript having been delivered to the printer the following August.

The historical references to which we call attention, are found in the Times and Seasons, published at Nauvoo, Ill., vol. 3, pp. 786, 801, 817, 832, 853, 854, 865, and 884.

Missouri is losing all its great men.

Mar. 16.—It is expected that the emigration to Canada the ensuing season will be unusually large. The steamer Parisian, from Liverpool for Halifax, takes 450 emigrants. A large number of Scandinavians and Germans go to the north-west of Canada in the next five weeks.

Mar. 18th.—At an early hour this morning a fire broke out in one of the brick buildings of the Manufacturing Company at Sandwich, Ill., and before it could be got under control did considerable damage. The pumps of the company could not be worked for want of steam, it being blown off last night to enable the engineer to clean out the boilers to-day. The loss is about $18,000 on a brick building 210 x 45 feet and two stories high, with a wing 40 x 25 feet, which was used for an engine room, and a one-story frame with their contents, on which there was no insurance. The mechanics lose about $3,000 on tools. Two buildings owned by A. A. Marcy were also destroyed, valued at $2,000; no insurance. Preparations for rebuilding will be made in the morning, and the work will be in full operation in a short time. The engine is damaged some, but will be repaired during the week, when the works will start up again. The building burned was used for a wood room and paint shop.

Mar. 19.—Frederick Billings, who presented the library of the late George P. Marsh to the University at Vermont, has given that institution $75,000 for a library building.

The latest news confirms the previously-reported overflow of the Tallahatchie country. Greenwood is submerged, the water being only twelve inches below that of 1882, but it is rising slowly. From Greenwood to Henry Island the whole country is inundated. Some of the largest Yazoo River planters fear that their interests will be seriously damaged. Later news sets at rest the fears of an overflow along the Yazoo.

The water at Sharkey's was falling; at Greenwood at a stand. Between the latter place and the head of Honey Island the plantations are overflowed, but with the fall above this water is expected to pass off soon. At the head of Honey Island there seems to be very little uneasiness, and work continues at all places. The Yazoo river can stand a larger rise than it will get.

The Indianapolis Board of Trade Relief Committee arrived this evening on the Halpin. They visited every inundated city and village on the Ohio River. They have given relief where needed, and say no more funds and supplies are necessary. They return home from here.

The Aldermen of Boston, Mass., have passed an order for a statue of Paul Revere, to cost $5,000.

Mar. 20th.—Two car-loads of European emigrants arrived yesterday by the Lake Shore, and one by the Michigan Central.

Three suicides in Chicago to-day.

On Friday night a barn with a quantity of stock, the property of a farmer living near Helena, Mont., was destroyed by fire, and there was reason to believe that incendiaries had been at work. Saturday morning a vigilance committee appointed itself, and with little delay fastened the crime upon two men dwelling in the vicinity. Sunday night the committee quietly and deliberately hanged the two men, and yesterday delivered the bodies to the authorities at Helena.

IOWA ITEMS.

The Keokuk Canning company has re-organized and increased the capital to $25,000. The company has purchased ground and commenced the erection of a building 76x128 and an annex 16x20, two stories high. The company proposes to manufacture 600,000 to 800,000 cans if the season is favorable. Two hundred acres of tomatoes will be contracted for and a favorable yield of that number of acres will reach 600,000 bushels. To put up that amount will require the labor of 200 hands during the coming season.—A steam creamery at Vinton has a capacity of 2,000 pounds a day, and employs in the busy season about fifteen men and teams. In 1882 the company paid $40,000 for cream and labor, and made 146,500 pounds of butter.—The Watson Canning company of Vinton, put up about 600,000 cans of corn last year, and will this year add tomato-canning to the list. Farmers are contracting corn at $6 per ton and tomatoes at twenty cents per bushel with the company.—Peter Bixler, a farmer three miles north of Van Meter, Dallas county, lost his house with all its contents, on the 15th.—The finest public school building in Iowa City was burned on the evening of the 15th. CLEVELAND, Ohio,

March 19th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—We have arranged to supply good spring beds, cots, comforters and pillows, for use at the coming conference. There was general objection to bringing beds; and the springs and cots are far better and cheaper, besides will be up off the floor. Pillow-cases and sheets will come in good service, if any can bring them. We will depend on some being brought. No lodgings or board will be free in Kirtland. The village folks will charge on an average $4 per week for board and lodgings. At the hotel meals will be served for twenty-five cents each. At least we think now, that this can be done. Will not exceed that much, if any. Spring beds large enough for three, if they wish to sleep in, 50 cents a night, single spring bed or cot, 30 cents. There will be a lunch room in connection with the hotel, where each can purchase that which he likes best, in large or small quantities, and pay accordingly. So that it will not be difficult to get a meal for from 10 to 15 cents and upwards.

The people of Kirtland are showing themselves friendly and interested in our having a pleasant conference, and will do what they can to entertain those who may come. It will not be difficult to get private board,—good rooms and pleasant people to board with. Those who come will find a welcome by the citizens here; and this seems to be the sentiment of the country. From three to five hundred regular attendance are expected, and ten thousand from surrounding country.

Come, and enjoy yourselves, and help the cause. Let there be such a turn out that all may see that the gospel is spreading, and this cause is not kept in a corner—or under a cloud. We are hastening the repairing of the Temple along.

A good audience in attendance at meeting yesterday. Lap-ropes, shawls, &c., will be very convenient. There will be no cushions on the seats in the Temple, and they are old style, and don't seem to have been contrived wholly with a view to ease. A hint to the wise is said to be "sufficient."

Respectfully,

WM. H. KELLEY.

Of the committee.

BOSTON, Massachusetts,

February 1st, 1883.

Editor Herald:—Before leaving for the south, many of my friends in the west, requested and received promises of letters, some of which I fear are unfulfilled to this day; and for fear I shall do no more, will do this much—address them all through the Herald.

I left Grand Rapids, November 14th, last; called on Saints at Coldwater, visited in Cincinnati with my little daughter, went down the Ohio to Madison, Indiana, and met Bishop Blakeslee and E. L. Kelley in conference, November 25th. We found the Saints here as elsewhere, glad to see us, and we were at home. There is a lack here as elsewhere, which time and influences that are at work will correct. I would recommend a faithful and persistent study, or reading of at least one chapter a day, by every one called Saint, of the Bible, Book of Mormon, or of the Covenants of the Church, besides taking the Herald, paying for and reading it. We were glad to leave so able and willing a representative of the gospel faith in charge, as our esteemed brother, H. Scott. May success attend him and the Southern Indiana Mission.

December 16th I left Cincinnati for the Sunny South. Eleven p. m. found us in Chattanooga. Here we stopped for a day to visit the famous Lookout Mountain, two miles from town, and five to mountain top. This is a grand sight.

Monday morning finds us on our journey south. Now we are among the cotton fields of Georgia. Two p. m. stopped at Atlanta. Spent the afternoon looking over the city. Traces of the war yet remain,—but as the old city was destroyed, it is being rebuilt largely by northern men, and presents the lively appearance of one of the greatest cotton centers of the south.

By one of those happy chance acquaintances we are invited to Southern hospitality near Griffin, Georgia, where a most agreeable day and night were passed—and whatever lack the Southern people may possess—we will not soon forget the sample of open-handed, unreserved proverbial Southern hospitality that we enjoyed on the plantation of W. W. Woodruff. It is hard to have to shock nice people, especially those to whom we are obligated, but our conscience would not let us leave without a declaration of a synopsis of the faith of the gospel. We were not sorry we did so,—however. Have promised to send the Book of Mormon.

Aside from the wealthy, intelligent families, of whom this was a sample, the great majority average far below the people of the north—in general intelligence—comfortable and thrifty independence; and the general appearance of the whole country through Tennessee and Georgia—is best expressed by that one word of down east patent—shiftless.

Thursday 21st, finds us in Jacksonville, Florida, and we lay aside our overcoat, gaze at the orange tree laden with fruit, the palm and the palmetto, and smell the roses, and realize that we are in the land of perpetual summer. Here at this point is the funnel through which they pour from the east and the west, from the north to the south, and distribute themselves all over the state. The pleasure and the health seeker, escaping the chilling region of the northern winters, dreading to bear the evils that they have in such things, and flying, in many cases, to "those they know not of." Florida has sunshine and oranges, but a generally monotonous scenery, a lazy climate, and a soil that absorbs as much wealth as it gives; but without doubt a good place in winter for people afflicted with bronchial and catarrhal troubles, or incipient consumption. I enjoyed and appreciated the sunshine when I got it, as it rained about three-fourths of the time of my stay, but an unusual thing, as the natives said. Left for Palatka, seventy-five miles south on St. John river, December 21st. Visited orange groves, saw trees in Col. Hart's grove, that yield from fifty to one hundred and fifty dollars worth of fruit annually. A grand sight certain. Friday we again board the steamer on our journey south, yet up the river—as you must know that the St. John's runs north, instead of the usual course of rivers. We arrive at DeLand, the objective point of our southern trip, and our brother's residence in the afternoon, one hundred miles from Pensacola. Oranges here are plenty and cheap, vegetables fresh and growing, but high, as the demand is great. Strawberries in bloom here. The banana and pine apple grow, lemon and fig. A poor place for the solid vegetables, however, and most we eat are shipped from the north, of poor quality, stale and high price—except cured meats and grains. But we sicken of southern fruits, made of water, mostly, and begin to think of the solid fruit of the north; but Florida will grow; for there are the thousands of sick people who have money, and the extent to which the state has been advertized as the "Italy of America" is marvelous.

Christmas Day I attended a Sabbath School picnic and Christmas tree. Tables spread out of doors, December 25th, was a novelty to me, a Summer Christmas. New Year's Day spent in DeLand, the nicest, neatest town I have seen; settled by northern people and founded by Mr. DeLand, the Fairport, New York, saleratus proprietor. Wandering among the orange grove laden with fruit, I think of the other New Years that I have spent; the lack one may feel of happiness, no matter what the surroundings, and I can only lean amid trials on the testimony always abiding and everywhere furnished, by the gospel of the Son of God. January 2d I took the steamer to Palatka, stopping over for a day; went out fifteen miles into the back country to look at some pine lands. A barren and desolate looking country to me; frogs singing everywhere in the creeks and swamps; no winter frosts or chill to their perpetual song in this land. January 4th came to Tocol, and from thence overland by rail to St. Augustine, said to be the oldest historic town in America. Here we are interested in the old Spanish fort, sea wall, ancient house of Spanish architecture, narrow streets, etc., one seven feet in width. Took a sail over to Antaulusia Island, a lovely day there, seventy-five degrees in shade. Porpoises leaping out of water all around us, novel and exhilarating sight. Over on the sea shore we indulge in the to us, novel luxury of a salt sea bath, January 5th. At Jacksonville again, January 10th, having recovered our lost trunk, we leave for Fernandino and Savannah, Georgia.

My limb, injured in April last, of which many of the Saints know, is troubling me very seriously, and I conclude to visit Boston and a doctor there of considerable repute in the treatment of injuries such as mine. I have always been and am still willing to testify to my large lack of faith in doctors in general, and drugs and patent medicines in particular. The preponderance of testimony in reason in my opinion, is against their systems; experience in the past confirms it; and if the Bible hints at an opinion, it is against them. The only two instances I now remember being, first of one of Israel's kings, Asa, I think, where it is said that he resorted not unto the Lord, but the physicians, and simply but significantly adds, "And he died." The other in Jesus' earthly ministry, of the woman healed, who before had spent all her money on the physicians, and grew nothing better, "but rather grew worse," a very common experience in our day. Latter day revelations of the Spirit more strongly testify in this direction. Herbs, if you know the kind,—don't swallow everything,—and mild, reasonable food, good nursing, quiet, pure air, a good conscience, and an abiding faith in the general law of God, as manifested in Nature's recuperative power, everywhere and always manifested. I have not forgotten James' advice, which is, I sometimes think, too readily seized upon: "If any are sick among you," etc. Just how sick a Saint ought to be before sending, sometimes a long way, for a sometimes very busy, or tired Elder or Elders, is one of those questions which we as creatures of God, endowed by him with powers of judgment, reason and discretion, to judge of some matters pertaining to this physical life, in accordance with the facts as our senses can, or ought to perceive them, without a special revelation, or prefixed "Thus saith the Lord," must answer, not specifically hereafter, but at the bar of justice that God has reared everywhere in all his domain where physical law is violated.

There can be, in my opinion, no real conflict between natural and revealed law. God's mercy may be interposed, but the overwhelming force of God's law in nature, envelopes and surrounds and controls; or if its force is temporarily stayed by the will and error of men, justice will have her own in the end, and physical disorder, disease, and decay ensue. Under this law are Saint and sinner alike, and it will take more than an apostle to order or execute otherwise. Other things being equal, those who most "call for the Elders," are not most certain to be the healthiest people.

I am glad to testify, that God does heal the sick, and "raise him up" through faith in his name. But, O, I would have Saints make reason, experience, and facts that the senses can appreciate, guide them when their testimony is sufficient. God will not take two or a dozen ways to accomplish an object, when one only is necessary, and to ignore the first and seek for a second revelation, which of necessity must be a different one in order to be a second one, is an experiment that has proved disastrous in all the history of God's people. In the times of ignorance God winks at some law violations, and displays his power over law, and reveals his mercy; but the law of nature was written in the physical body before James ever penned his advice. Shall not we as Saints begin to realize, that the advice of James, or the promises like unto it in the latter days, are not designed to frustrate the natural laws of God, and permit violators of them to go unpunished by running after the Elders, or in free use of oil every other day. I do not wish to be misunderstood as to my position. I only want that we may learn to use our God-given powers of discretion, to note the facts and the truth of experience, as well as revelation; and "not wait to be commanded in all things."

MYRON H. BOND.

Graham, Young Co., Texas,
March 5th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I have had a blessing from God that I feel it my duty to relate. I had a little girl seven years old, that had been afflicted all her life with the sore throat, and with her head. We had doctors to treat the case, but medicine failed to cure. On the 27th of November last, Bro. Heman C. Smith stopped over night with me; and when he came he found the child sick with a fever and swelling in the throat. I asked brother Smith to administer to her, and he did so; and through the faithful brother's prayers, she was healed at once. So we give God the praise.

W. P. HARGRAVE.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.,
March 10th, 1883.

Dear Brother Joseph:—My wife, our daughter fifteen years old, and myself, have been blessed, in accepting the truth of the gospel. We have belonged to the Providence Branch for the last three years and seven months. I can testify to the church and to the world that I was brought from nature's darkness to the glorious light of revelation and liberty. And thanks be to God, that the Spirit of God bears witness with my spirit, that I am accepted of him. For verily I have been blessed with spiritual dreams and visions.

Brother Joseph, if there is one desire above another, I would like others to know the truth as it is in Christ Jesus, as I do. Yes, I feel it is good to be a Saint in these the latter days. I realize every day more of the blessings it holds forth to the honest in heart, and the responsibility to lift the voice of warning, to repent and flee from the wrath to come. My wife has a testimony to the coming forth of the Book of Mormon by the power of God through Joseph the prophet. My earnest desire is to so live, that I may be accepted at that day, when the Lamb's Book of Life will be opened, and my name amongst the worthies there.

From your humble brother in the truth,
RUDOLPH SIEGRIST.

WARNOCK, Ohio,

Bro. Joseph:—Since I wrote to the Herald, I have labored in this place; also Lampsville, where I preached fourteen sermons in the Saints' Chapel to large audiences, with excellent liberty; also had the pleasure of baptizing four, and left many more who were almost persuaded to obey. The work in this district has received a new impetus, for which we are very thankful to our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well. The Saints are awakening to a sense of their duty and are now beginning to realize their condition, and the majority have resolved to live nearer to the Lord, keeping his commandments more fully. Our district quarterly conference convened at Lampsville, March 10th and 11th. We had an enjoyable time; the Spirit of the Master met with us in power to the cheering and consoling of all present. Our aged brother, Josiah Ells, was in attendance. He came over a hundred miles to be with us. He says he is feeling stronger physically, at present, than he has for the past two years. He gave us good counsel and told us many things of interest. He anticipates to attend the Kirtland Conference. I leave here for Byesville, a new opening, on the 16th inst., where I expect to labor until time to start for Kirtland.

Yours for truth,
G. T. GRIFFITHS.

SOUTH RAWDON, Nova Scotia,
March 2d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—We are still contending for the faith of the Saints. There are plenty of clergymen here now—Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian Episcopalian, all are very busy, very much interested in their flocks' welfare; and those who were formerly not friendly, are now seemingly very friendly with each other. The Episcopalian clergyman thought proper to deliver a lecture against "Mormonism." We listened, took notes, and replied. He replied again, and I replied to his again. In his last, he reiterated the statements of his first harangue, the usual anathemas against "Mormonism;" and then said he washed his hands, and if any one followed this terrible heresy, he was free. We, in closing remarked, if he, or any other desired to attack us again, we hoped they would take an Epitome of faith, and attack the doctrines there set forth; and offered to affirm them with any one who would choose to deny, the Bible to be the standard of evidence. The people endorsed that idea, saying scandal was no argument against a man's faith, and the Episcopalian had not presented argument, but ridicule and slander. Now I hear that the Presbyterian minister has an appointment out to preach against "Mormonism," a few Sundays hence. There is quite an excitement in this place and vicinity. I expect to baptize two or three next Sunday. I baptized Mr. Burgess and wife, Sunday before last. So there are a few willing to bear the cross that they may wear the crown.

Bro. Holmes Davison came over to see us, and also to hear the lectures. On his first visit he was ordained an Elder, having been called by prophecy in confirmation, and being told by the Spirit to wait until he had testimony himself; he waited, and having received it, he came to us and received ordination, and will work in his ministry as circumstances will permit. He will be an able defender of the faith, clear, explicit, calm, not boisterous nor boastful; but firm and steady. May God abundantly bless him in his labors in the future. I would like to whisper into Bro. John Lake's ear, to come over in this part of the Dominion, immediately after Spring Conference, and help us for a few weeks, at least. It would do us all good.

I expect to open a new place next week, perhaps two of them. I have plenty of calls for the word. Many wanting to hear our faith. Pray for us, please.

Your brother in Christ,
JOSEPH F. BURTON.

THE TEMPORAL LAW.

THE sermons of Bro. Blakeslee and his counselor, Bro. Kelley, have been read with earnest care, and the conclusion arrived at was, that in all our experience with the latter day work, extending into four decades, nothing that we have read, or thought about, has given us more ineffable satisfaction and real pleasure, than we felt after mentally digesting what those brethren have said to us about the temporal law of the church. We felt like exclaiming, Mercifully! God has given the Bishopric a degree of light that enables it to give the law an interpretation that will recommend its observance to all lovers of the cause. So liberal, so wise, so just, and so true as we believe it to be. Is it not a matter of astonishment, that it could not be so understood before?

What a perplexity! And what a discordant theme has tithing been, as viewed from the surplus clause, to the reorganization; although the stern and cruel interpretation usually bestowed upon it, did not recommend its observance to but very few. I believe there can be no doubt that many thought it the true one, notwithstanding the word and command seemed so plain and inexorable, that any other would have seemed entirely out of place.

Now it appears the whole difficulty remained with the hidden fact, that the church was ignorant of the surroundings that required such obligation to be assumed by the immediately concerned parties at that time. We can understand now why it troubled us, and failed to secure observance from the Saints; because it was not right to so observe it, it was not for us, at present at least. Whatever demands the Divine economy may make upon the people in the future, in order that the requirements of the cause may be met, we can not say; but sufficient for us to know now is, that the law given in 1831, is the one that immediately concerns us and imperatively demands our observance, if we continue in the desire to be God's people. And it seems to require but a casual thought to convince all that we have now arrived at a point where all dissimulation and controversy upon the law and its meaning in the abstract should cease, and instead a practical observance with honorable fidelity be rendered to it, as now so clearly interpreted.

It clearly seems to be a part of the Divine economy, that the Saints shall not clearly discern the times and seasons appointed, touching many things, at least; but as they arise, presenting themselves to us, their requirements come with them also, and the knowledge of the fact is clearly made manifest by him who works out his own sovereign will.

The action of the bishopric will suggest many things, and particularly this one thing, that in the progressive development of the cause it has, perhaps, arrived at a stage where it is about to assume an entirely different aspect, a more aggressive one, in both its spiritual and temporal workings as inseparably connected as they are, and necessary to ultimate victory.

Our ignorance touching the temporal law in the past, is perhaps a justifiable reason for the non-observance of it; and is it not quite evident that God has been quite merciful, remembered and blest us all for our little consecrations in divers manners and ways, that has seemed to have brought the cause thus far?

That more might have been done there can be no question, and perhaps our dissimulations, our lack of faith and power, and the very general slumbering and hinderance to the general advancement of truth, may be easily traced to our lack of doing.

Now, what shall we do? There is one thing that is hoped will and should prevail in the hearts of all who are wishing for and prayerfully hoping to see Zion developed, that there must be universal effort, because a few and their efforts can not do it. All are equal under the law, equal in its demands and promised results. Who can claim immunity from observing, and still expect to share in the glorious results? The clear obligation it brings all under, can be easily assumed. From all is required but a decision of the heart to keep it, a solemn covenant entered into with him who can read every heart, to keep it as he is enabled, and none need fear their ability to do at the end of the year.

Let there be a general uprising and enrollment under the law in the church, and an abundance of means will be obtained. It needs it. Its needs must be met, and we are told that, "God loveth a cheerful giver." Let the whole church in its faith of God's truthful character, verify his promises in keeping the law, and in doing so, may it not expect to witness, not only a marvelous advancement in spiritual workings of the church, and in his dealings with the nations; but a marvelous temporal prosperity amongst the Saints that shall strengthen their hope, and confirm their faith.

THOS. J. ANDREWS.

ANSWERS BY BISHOP BLAKESLEE.

Ques.—Can a member who has not been ordained to any office in the priesthood be appointed as Bishop's Agent?

Ans.—Yes. See resolution passed by last General Conference. An agent is a party who acts under the direction and instruction of his principal, and hence there is no necessity apparent for selecting from the priesthood. However, since it often happens, and is necessary for agents to visit various places in their districts and present the law, where it can be done, it will be an advantage to have an officer, or one of the ministry appointed.

Ques.—Has an Agent power to appoint sub-agents?

Ans.—No. An Agent may properly ask the treasurer or president of a branch to receive moneys in his absence, and report to the Agent; but this does not make what is properly termed a sub-agent. It is not expected that the authority of Agent shall run all through this line in order that these officers and persons do their duties in assisting in the work of transferring funds.

Ques.—Suppose a person began the year '82 with not to exceed $50. He resolves to keep the law of tithing, but has no surplus. At the end of the year he finds his property increased to $300, but still no surplus. Must he wait until he has a surplus, or should he pay one-tenth of his increase?

Ans.—"Let every one of you lay by in store as God hath prospered him, that there be no gatherings when I come."—1 Cor. 16:2. The law of tithing is founded in the principles of justice and equality. All who are blessed with life and the means of sustaining life, are in this much indebted to the Creator; and if a person is blessed over and above that necessary for his living and clothing, the law is that he should render a certain portion to the aid of God's work, and the promise is that if he thus manifestations of the Holy Spirit shall not be shows a disposition "with full purpose of heart," to comply with the law relating to temporal things, he shall be prospered in these, and not only these, but even then the withheld; so that when he calls upon his Creator from time to time for help, he may the more effectually receive. "He that is tithed shall not be burned." The law is binding upon every one, and was given for the good of the individual. The Lord has said, what would be pleasing in his sight is a tenth of the increase, income, interest. Each member is left free to decide this matter for him or herself. Therefore, let each do right.

GOSPEL ANTIQUITY.

"For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life."—John 3: 16.

We are told by the Christian world, that the gospel was not in force, or ever known to the world, until Peter preached upon the day of Pentecost. That then the first gospel sermon was preached. We can not conceive of anything more absurd, or untrue, than this. It is contrary to reason, and to the character of God. Four thousand years of the world's existence had passed away, when Christ appeared. That all the people that lived before that time, who were just as worthy of the blessings of the gospel as those who lived after Christ came, should be deprived of those blessings, just because they were not so fortunate as to live when the gospel came, is preposterous. We read that "God is no respecter of persons," and that "God is love." This being the case, did he not have as much regard for one as he had for the other? Should they be cut off just because they did not come into the world after Christ came? They were not responsible for this. Christ came to redeem the world from sin; "For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ should all be made alive."—1 Cor. 15: 22. And as the sin began with Adam, bringing death upon all men, so were the mercies of Christ to reach just as far as the curse was found. We believe that a soul was just as precious before Christ came in the flesh, as after he came; for we read that "God made of one blood all nations of men, to dwell on all the face of the earth" (Acts 17: 26.) So they must all be closely related to God and each other. We are told that Jesus was as a lamb slain from before the foundation of the world. (Rev. 13: 8.) What would be the use of this, if man was not to have the benefit of this sacrifice from the foundation of the world! Again, Peter says, that he (Christ), "was ordained before the foundation of the world." (1 Pet. 1: 20.) Why all this, if man was only to have the benefits of this ordination from the meridian of time? Again, we are told that some are to have their names written in the book of life from the foundation of the world, (Rev. 17: 8). Who are these, but they that had been redeemed by the blood of Christ, that was to be shed! Saved by the gospel plan. Surely they that lived in the apostles' day, will receive no more.

It is evident, then, that the means of salvation were placed in man's hands in the beginning, and it must have been through Christ; for we read that "there is no other name given under heaven, whereby we can be saved." (Acts 4: 12). If the benefits of the Gospel were only to be enjoyed by that part of the world that lived after Christ, does it not prove that God is a partial being? If all things are possible with God, why did he not send his Son into the world sooner, so that more of the human family might have received the blessings thereof. These are questions propounded by the Infidel to the Christian world, and they can not answer them. Such doctrine mars the beauty of the word; destroys the character and the undying love of that Jesus who said to the Jews with scalding tears, pouring down his face; "How often would I have gathered your children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not." (Matt. 23: 37). I believe that he is all that the word says he is. That he is no respecter of persons, and he is the propitiation for our sins, and not ours only, but for the sins of the whole world. (1 John 2: 2).

Before man came on the earth, God saw that as soon as he would come he would fall, yield to sin, and thus become spiritually dead. Hence the plan of redemption was prepared in the councils of heaven, before the foundation of the world, so that when man came and had fallen, the means would be ready to redeem him if he would lay hold of them. The apostles Peter and John must have comprehended it in this light, when they spoke of him as being fore-ordained, and "slain from the foundation of the world." To illustrate, a man owes a debt, for which he is brought into bondage—deprived of certain blessings. A friend comes along and offers to pay his debt. He enters into an agreement with his creditor to come at a given time and pay this man's debt. Now, the very minute this agreement is entered into, the man is relieved, and set at liberty; and the friend assumes every responsibility that this man was under, so that nothing can be held against him from that time. This principle is plainly set forth in Lev. 16: 21, 22, where Moses takes a goat, and lays upon it the sins of the people, and sends it into the wilderness. This represents Jesus Christ, who was to bear the sins of the world. By this creditor, we represent God, the Eternal Father, by the friend Jesus; and by the man, the world,—the whole race of man. The time when the debt was to be paid, is when Jesus died on Calvary. Thus giving man the same blessings in the beginning, when Jesus, after his resurrection, stood with his arms stretched forth as it were, one pointing to the beginning, the other pointing to the end; thus embracing the whole human family, and said: "All power is given unto me both in heaven and on earth." Well might he say this; for he had not only paid the debt for the world, having taken upon himself the sin thereof, but he delivered himself, having fulfilled his agreement, thus satisfying the demands of justice. It is plain, then, that Christ entered into this agreement, and that the plan of redemption was prepared before man existed on the earth; and Jesus' sacrifice on the cross, was simply fulfilling that which he agreed to do in the councils of heaven before man was. And man had the privilege of receiving the benefits of it, as soon as he had sinned.

We have much evidence to prove that the gospel was not only among the people in different ages of the world before Christ came, but many obeyed it and were saved by it. We can find many traces of its principles, and the gifts of the Holy Spirit, among the people ages before Christ. The knowledge of a Savior came into the world in the beginning, and men had the privilege of enjoying the gospel blessings by looking forward to the time when he would come, and by obeying the ordinances thereof. The knowledge of a Savior brought with it every blessing attached to the gospel; if not, what benefit would it be to simply know that he was to come several thousand years from then? It would be like a hungry man looking afar off, and seeing a table spread with food, and he not able to partake of it. He would still be hungry. But we read that, "To him gave all the prophets witness that through his name whosoever believeth in him, shall receive remission of sins."—Acts 10: 43. And we find that all the prophets that ever spoke, testified of him. The only difference between the people in those days and us is, they were to look forward by faith to the time that he would come, we must look back to the time that he did come; and that by faith, too, they received as great blessings as we receive. "Without faith it is impossible to please God." And faith is the first principle of the gospel. We read in Hebrews, 11th chapter, that "Abel, by faith, offered unto God a more excellent sacrifice than Cain," and he received a "witness [revelation] that he was righteous." How could he become righteous, but by the gospel—by faith? Enoch was translated, and received testimony that he pleased God. Now Enoch was a prophet, and must have preached the gospel, and many believed him. He built a city called Zion; and because it was called Zion, they were pure in heart; and because of this they were taken up into heaven, and the saying went abroad, "Zion has fled." (See Doctrine and Covenants, page 134). It is evident that they were saved as much as any one ever can be; and by what means were they saved, if it was not by the gospel? If it was by some other way, then there are more ways of salvation than one, and Christ is the author of but one way. Hence, if there are more ways than this one, Christ is not the author of them.

By faith Noah received a revelation from God, that the world, because of wickedness, would be destroyed, and he became heir of the righteousness which is by faith. We are told in 2 Peter 2:5, that he was a preacher of righteousness, which righteousness is the gospel. Paul says that "Therein is the righteousness of God revealed through faith."—Rom. 1:17. One of the grand characteristics of the kingdom of God is righteousness.—Rom. 14:17. We read that Noah and his family were "saved by water, the like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us."—1 Peter 3:20, 21. This word also gives us to understand, that they were saved by baptism in the same manner as the people were that Peter was speaking to. They only received a temporal salvation by going into the ark; they were spiritually saved before they entered therein, or else they would not have gone into the ark. They believed the preaching of Noah, and must have become righteous by obeying the ordinance of baptism, for Jesus says, that unless "a man be born of the water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God," or become righteous, which is the same. And this must apply to men from the beginning. Then we can understand Peter when he says "baptism doth also save us," saved in the same manner as they were, not by going into the ark, for this did not make them righteous, but obeying the gospel Noah preached, did; hence they must have enjoyed the power of the gospel. In the same chapter of Hebrews, we read of many of the ancient Saints by faith wrought righteousness; out of weakness were made strong; women received their dead raised to life; and others were tortured, not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection. They having such great faith as this, could God withhold any blessing from them that it was possible for mortals to enjoy, in the light of the word that says, "All things are possible to them that believe" (Matt. 9:23). We are told that Moses by faith chose rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, "esteeming the reproach of Christ of greater riches than the treasures of Egypt; for he had respect unto the recompense of reward," (Heb. 11:26). Now how did Moses know anything about the reproach of Christ, if he had no knowledge of the gospel? But he did have knowledge of it. The inspired Stephen tells us, that Moses testified of Christ to the people; and that he (Christ) was in the wilderness with the Church, and that Moses received the lively oracles to give unto us, which our fathers would not obey. See Acts 7:38. These lively oracles were the gospel in all its beauty. The Apostle Paul says: "For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them, [Israel in Moses' time], but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it," (Heb. 4:2, 6). They hardened their hearts against it, having no faith. "Whosoever is not of faith, is sin;" and "without faith it is impossible to please God." Therefore his anger was kindled against them. So he gave them another code of laws, which was enacted, wherein was no faith. It was, as the Apostle Paul says, "a school master to bring them to Christ," (Gal. 3:24). Again he says, that "The law was added because of transgression, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made," (19th verse). To what was the law added? It was to remain in force until Christ came, he being the seed spoken of. When he came, he was to take the law away. He was to be the end of the law; (Rom. 10:4). Now, when this law is taken away, the thing that remains will be that to which the law was added, will it not? We find that when the law is taken away, the gospel appears in all its beauty; then was not the law added to the gospel? We can draw no other conclusions. To think that the saving power of the gospel was not enjoyed before Christ, is absurd.

Moses and Elias appeared clothed with the glory of God upon the mount, and talked with Jesus in the presence of the three disciples. (See Matt. 17:3-6). Is this not good evidence that they were saved? Elias is Elijah the Prophet, that raised from the dead the widow's child, (1 Kings 17:22), and magnified the name of God in the face of the priests of Baal, and finally was taken up to heaven in a chariot of fire. Could he have done all this unless he had received the power of the Holy Ghost? Will any dare to say that these men were not saved—made perfect by the gospel plan? If they were not saved by this means, by what means were they saved? What saved them, could also save all others; and we have no evidence that any were saved, or ever could be, but by the gospel. Please read Isaiah 63:7, 8, 9.

We come down to John. We hear a great deal about the baptism of John; that there was a great difference between his baptism and that of Christ; that his baptism did not induct people into the church of God, &c. This is taught by men who claim that baptism is the only means of salvation for all people. By taking such a position as this, they destroy the force of and beauty of the principle of baptism. We believe that the baptism of John was just as legal, and as much a Christian baptism as that of Christ. In fact there was no difference in them. Now if we can prove this, we think it should be enough to show that the gospel was in the world, and in force before Peter preached on Pentecost. At the birth of John, his father, "Zacharias, being filled with the Holy Ghost, (and by the way he must have been born of the Spirit, therefore a citizen of the Kingdom of God), he prophesied many things concerning John,—plainly setting forth his mission. He said he was to give knowledge of salvation to his people, by the remission of their sins, (Luke 1:77). Jesus was not yet born. When he entered upon his mission, he came forth clothed upon with authority from God, saying, "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." He taught them to believe in Jesus Christ, which was to come, (Matt. 3). "John did preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins," (Mark 1:4). Did the Apostles do more than this, or did they not baptize for the same thing? Baptism was for that purpose, and that is just what John baptized for, and he was sent of God to do it, (John 1:6). We find just before Jesus enters upon his mission, that he goes to Jordan, where John is baptizing, and demands baptism at his hands. John did not feel worthy, knowing it was the Lord; but Jesus said, "Suffer it to be so now, for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness." "For thus," means to be baptized of John. Now, if being baptized of John fulfilled all righteousness, we would like to know if his baptism was not in every sense of the word, a true Christian baptism? Jesus submitted to it, and was baptized of John, and by so doing, he fulfilled all righteousness. As soon as Jesus came forth from the water, the Father spoke from the heavens, saying; "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased;" thus bearing record of the act done, and being thus baptized, he received the Holy Ghost, which came in the form of a dove, and sat upon him, (Matt. 3:13). If the baptism of John was not a true, Christian baptism, we do not think that the Holy Ghost would have been received by obedience to it. We have no record, showing that Jesus was ever baptized again by water.

It is believed by many, that all the people in that country were baptized by John, because we read that Jerusalem and all Judea, and all the regions round about Jordan, came and were baptized in Jordan, confessing their sins. (Matt. 3:5). I do not believe this, because it does not harmonize with many other passages of Scripture. We read in the very next verse, that when he saw many of the Pharisees and Sadducees come to his baptism, he called them a generation of vipers, &c. Is it likely that they were baptized of him? Again, we hear Jesus saying, that the Pharisees and lawyers rejected the counsel of God against themselves, not being baptized of John, (Luke 7:30). There are others that were not baptized. No doubt some of these are they that had been rebuked by John at Jordan. Again, Jesus disputing with the Jews, asked this question: "The baptism of John, whence was it? Of heaven, or of men? And they reasoned with themselves, and said: If we shall say from heaven, he will say, why did you not believe him," (Matt. 21:25). It is evident that they were not baptized of John. Now, all who submitted to baptism by John, believed also in Jesus Christ, when he came; for this was the burthen of John's message, to testify of him. How did many receive him? They accused him of all manner of evil; they abused him, and thirsted for his blood, and he prophesied of many things that should come upon them, because they would not believe in him. Is it possible that all these were baptized of John? We ask all that believe Jerusalem, Judea, and all the regions round about Jordan were baptized of John, to reconcile this matter, and make harmony out of it, if they can.

"Well, says one, it is written so, and what right have you to say you do not believe it?

In the first place, there is too much evidence against it. God's word must harmonize with itself. There must have been a mistake made in the translation of that verse. If the word many was inserted in the sixth verse, just after the word and, it would remove the whole difficulty, and make beautiful harmony. We believe this is what was intended. No doubt they all went out, simply to see him, through curiosity; but not to be baptized of him. This is evident from the question propounded by the Savior, speaking of John he said: "What went ye out into the wilderness to see," and he repeats it three times, Matt. 11:7. We have no evidence that any were ever baptized by the disciples of Christ, that had been baptized by John. There is nothing on record to show that the apostles were ever baptized unless they were baptized by John. They that were converted on the day of Pentecost, had never believed in Jesus Christ, consequently they had not been baptized by John.

How about those who said they had been baptized with John's baptism, says one, which is recorded in the 19th chapter of Acts? There were impostors in those days, the same as in these days. They had not been baptized unto John's baptism, but had been deceived by false disciples. Paul discovers this when he asked them if they had received the Holy Ghost since they believed. They said that they had not heard whether there be any Holy Ghost. So Paul preached Jesus through the baptism of John, telling them that John baptized unto repentance, testifying of Jesus Christ; convincing them of the fact, that if they had been baptized unto John's baptism, they would have heard all about the Holy Ghost. This proves beyond a doubt that they had been deceived. Hence we see no reason why we should not believe that John's baptism was the same as that of Christ, which is another evidence that the gospel was in force before Peter preached on the day of Pentecost.

The apostle tells us that the gospel was preached to every creature under heaven, (Col. 1:23). It certainly was not preached by them to every creature under heaven, as but a small portion of the world was known at that time. Paul speaking on the same thing says; "Have they not heard? Yes, verily, their sound went into all the earth, and their words into the ends of the world," (Rom. 10:18). He does not say our words, but their words, evidently referring to the prophets who had in different ages come, and all testifying of Christ, (Acts 10:43).

When Christ rose from the dead, "the graves were opened, and many bodies of the saints that slept arose, and came out of their graves, and went into the Holy City, and appeared unto many," (Matt. 27:52, 53). How did they become saints? they must have been purified by the gospel; and as this resurrection took place before the day of Pentecost, they must have heard the gospel before that time. This ought at once to wipe out the abominable theory, that the gospel was unknown to the world, until Christ came. "The scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham," (Gal. 3:8). This must have been the same gospel that Paul preached, for he said, "Though a man or an angel, should preach any other, he should be accursed," (chapter 1:8). Paul told Timothy, "That from a child he had known the Holy Scriptures, which are able to make you wise unto salvation, through faith which is in Christ Jesus," (2 Tim. 3:15). "And the unfeigned faith that is in thee, which dwelt first in thy grandmother Lois, and thy mother Eunice; and I am persuaded that in thee also, (2 Tim. 1:5). This unfeigned faith was not only in Timothy, but in his grandmother before him; and that by knowing the Old Testament scriptures. They were able to make them wise unto salvation. The apostle did not mean the New Testament; for it was not written when Timothy was a child, nor any part of it but Matthew, and it is very doubtful that it was. Then the Old Testament must have contained the gospel, or at least enough of it to make them wise unto salvation. Then the idea that the New Testament only contains the gospel, is not true.

We are met with an objection, founded upon what is written in Eph. 3d chapter, where Paul speaks of a mystery which had not been known in past ages, but had been made known to them; and the objector says this mystery is the gospel. If this is the case, Jesus Christ did not preach the gospel. And when Ananias was sent to tell Paul what to do, he did not say anything about the gospel; for he tells us that this mystery was made known to him, by revelation. Hence it does not mean the gospel at all. We learn by reading the sixth verse, what the mystery was; viz., that the Gentiles should be fellow-heirs, and of the same body, and partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel. That was the mystery which was made known by revelation to Paul, and he received it as soon as he entered upon his mission, (Acts 9: 15; also 22: 21). He was called the great apostle to the Gentiles.

WHAT SHALL I DO?

"LORD, what wilt thou have me to do?" It would seem that this language would naturally call forth the same inquiry by all those who are interested in the subject that called forth the above quotation. It is evident, that although Paul was a man of the highest type of culture, and literary attainments, he did not comprehend his situation and duty toward God; hence the important question; "Lord what wilt thou have me to do?" It would also seem, that were we called upon to answer the question, we could not do so more correctly than to quote the answer given by the questioner himself, in preference to any disinterested party. In the same verse above quoted, the writer says: "And the Lord said unto him, Arise, and go into the city, and it shall be told thee what thou must do." Again, in the 22d chapter of Acts, and 10th verse, the testimony of Paul is repeated. "And I said, What shall I do Lord?" Again the answer is repeated: "And the Lord said unto me, Arise, and go into Damascus; and there it shall be told thee of all things which are appointed of thee to do." We not only have the testimony of Paul in regard to this question; but the same writer records the testimony of Peter, when asked the same question by men out of every nation under heaven; and also as asked by one, Cornelius, upon a certain occasion, the answer being invariably the same. We have the question propounded by various ones, and we discover their anxiety in regard to it, and we conclude there must have been some importance attached to it; else why the anxiety of the questioners?

We now wish to produce the answer to the question, as given by the various ones of whom the question was asked; and show if possible the importance and benefit derived from a strict compliance with the requirements of the answer. We are told by one of the questioners that, "by the foolishness of preaching God designed to save them that believe." Now, as we are confident the answer to the question referred to will show conclusively what men are to believe, and the benefit of their believing, we quote the answer as given by Ananias, Acts 22d chapter. "The God of our fathers hath chosen thee that thou shouldst know his will, and see that just one, and shouldst hear the voice of his mouth, For thou shalt be his witness unto all men, of what thou hast seen and heard. And now why tarriest thou? arise and be baptized, and wash away thy sins." Again in the 9th chapter of Acts we have a repetition of the same; "Ananias, putting his hands on Saul, said: The Lord even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way as thou camest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight, and be filled with the Holy Ghost. And immediately there fell from his eyes as it had been scales; and he received his sight, forthwith, and arose, and was baptized."

In answer to this same question, asked by men out of every nation, we have recorded in Acts 2d chapter: "Repent and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. Then they that gladly received his word [or answer] were baptized." When Cornelius received his answer, it was substantially the same. Peter, having descanted upon the subject of salvation, the baptism of John, the mission of Jesus Christ, and perceived that the Holy Ghost had fallen upon his hearers, asked whether any man could forbid water that they should not be baptized. Paul and Silas testify that this same question was asked them by a certain Jailor, who had charge of them as prisoners, and we infer that the answer was the same, as the record states that they spake unto him the word of the Lord, and he was baptized.

Paul in his epistle to the Romans makes this statement; "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his death? Therefore, we are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection."

And now in conclusion, we quote one more testimony and we think we have produced evidence conclusive to answer the question of our text, and have shown some of the benefits derived from a strict conformity to the requirements of the answer to the question. Several years ago, it is recorded, that Joseph Smith was anxious to know what he should do to be saved, and made this same inquiry and the answer was given by a messenger from heaven, that it was necessary he should repent and be baptized for a remission of his sins, and receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, which he declares that he did; and not only he but many others testify to the same thing. And now with the great Apostle Paul, we declare unto you glad tidings, how that the promise which was made unto the fathers' God, hath fulfilled the same unto us their children, in that he hath raised up Jesus, and that through him is preached unto you the forgiveness of sins. And by him all that believe and obey, are justified in all things in which they could not be justified by the law of Moses.

VALENTINE WHITE.

REDEMPTION OF ZION.

ALL who have taken the name of Latter Day Saints, are especially interested in, and accountable for the covenant they entered into at their baptism. And many of us have waited many years, and prayed for the glory that will be revealed; and because many who have taken a leading part in the latter day work have done wickedly and been cast out, the love of many has turned cold, and they have lost faith in the promises, and have given up all hope of success. This is wrong. Only they who endure to the end can be saved. "God is not slack concerning his promises, as men count slackness." The redemption of Zion is the great event of our world. It has been promised, it has been prophesied of, and anxiously looked for by those who believed the promises of God, since the time that man disobeyed the law of his Creator, and was cast out from his presence. The redemption of Zion is the beginning of the redemption of the world, and we as a people have received spiritual knowledge, and been sent for a light to the world; and we need to stand on firm ground, the revealed word of God. We have to meet the nominal Christian, in error; the skeptic, and the philosopher. All truths are of God, and all agree, however they have been revealed. The Prophet Joseph has revealed unto us many principles of eternal truth, which we can not afford to neglect. The antiquity of the gospel; that Christ has been the light and Savior of the world from the beginning of time through the principles of the gospel, which are faith, repentance, baptism, laying on of hands, resurrection, and eternal judgment; the unchangeability of God; a personal God; and the universal reign of law.

The will, revealed to us in religion, is not a capricious will; but one with which there is no variableness, neither shadow of turning. God said to the prophet, "All kingdoms have a law given; and there are many kingdoms; for there is no space in the which there is no kingdom; and unto every kingdom is given a law; and unto every law there are certain bounds and conditions. God is the light which is in all things; which giveth life to all things; which is the law by which all things are governed; even the power of God. And they who are not sanctified through the law which I have given unto you, even the law of Christ, must inherit another kingdom," Doctrine and Covenants, Sec. 85. We do not need to go to the infidel naturalist, to find that we are under the reign of law; but not in the sense in which they have come to understand law. That great and general laws, inexorable in their operation, and in an endless chain of invariable sequence, are the governing powers in nature; and that they leave no room for any special direction, or providential ordering of events." Let us meet the student of physical science upon his own ground, The reign of law. If there was no evil, there would be no need of a deliverance from evil. Ruin, waste and decay, are written upon every feature of the natural order. We recognize far more fully than the mere physicist, the abounding misery that is in the world, the terrible-ness of that unutterable curse, which hangs upon mankind on account of sin and disobedience to the law of God. But we know it is not of God, and will be removed from our world, because it has no substance of its own; but is only the defect, excess, perversion, or corruption of that which has substance. The skeptic calls our attention to what the world calls the Christian nations, and shows by history how wicked and blood-thirsty they have been, and points to them as a failure of Christianity to benefit mankind. But I say, without fear of contradiction, there are no Christian nations in existence, and never have been since Enoch's time. There have been Christian men and women, who, by faith and repentance and holiness, have received the Holy Spirit, and been sealed up until the day of redemption.

Man by nature is a social being, and in the church or nation, we are bound together as one body; and when one member suffers, we all feel the effects of the wrong. And we Latter Day Saints have suffered, and do suffer for the sins of others. In a revelation given 1831, in which the Lord said:—"Verily I say unto you, ye are clean, but not all. And now I show unto you a mystery, a thing which is had in secret chambers, to bring to pass even your destruction in process of time, and ye knew it not; but now I tell it unto you, and ye are blessed; not because of your iniquity, neither for your hearts of unbelief; for verily, some of you are guilty before me." Doctrine and Covenants, Sec. 38. Again in May, 1831: "Behold I, the Lord, have looked upon you, and have seen abominations in the church that profess my name; but blessed are they who are faithful, and endure, whether in life or in death, for they shall inherit eternal life." Doctrine and Covenants, Sec. 50. And in August, 1831, a revelation given in Zion: "Verily, I say unto you, my law shall be kept in this land." God commanded the purchase of that whole region of country, as soon as time would permit. Read also Sec. 59. "I gave commandments, and many have turned away from my commandments, and have not kept them. Lo, your enemies are upon you, and ye shall be scourged from city to city, and but few shall stand to receive an inheritance. Wherefore, let the church repent of their sins, and I, the Lord, will own them; otherwise they shall be cut off." Section 63. They were warned, time after time, that unless the law of God was kept, that they would be cast out. Joseph, in a letter to W. W. Phelps, January 11th, 1833: "I say to you, and what I say to you I say to all, hear the warning voice of God. Repent, repent, lest Zion fall, and the Lord swear in his wrath the inhabitants of Zion shall not enter into my rest. This from your brother who trembles for Zion, and for the wrath of heaven which awaits her, if she repent not." In a letter written from Kirtland, January 14th, 1833, by Orson Hyde and Hyrum Smith, warning the people of Zion to repent, I find the following clause: "There is a clause in Bro. Joseph's letter, which you may not understand, that is this: If the people of Zion did not repent, the Lord would seek another place and another people. Zion is the place where the temple will be built, and the people gathered; but all people upon that holy land, being under condemnation, the Lord will cut them off, if they repent not, and bring another race upon it that will serve him."

I have been particular to show that the people who came to Zion in the name of the Lord, did not obey the law of God, which had been given them in the Book of Mormon and the revelations they had received; and that they were warned of the danger before any trouble came upon them. They were in the midst of a narrow-minded and bigoted people, and suffered unmercifully at their hands; and unjustly, no doubt, in many instances, and many of the innocent may have suffered with the guilty. But the innocent will receive the greater reward, while the disobedient will continue to suffer until they repent and return to the law of God. But if the Saints had lived according to the law of the gospel of Christ, the power of God would have been over them, and wicked men nor devils could have had no power to destroy them, or drive them out. "In the beginning was the gospel preached through the Son," (John 1:1). The works of God were prepared from the foundation of the world, (Heb. 4:3). It was possible for man to have kept the law of God from the beginning, and it was possible for him to return unto the law of God by repentance and faith in Christ; and the redemption promised. Man by disobedience to the law of God, had sinned, and come under the curse of a broken covenant; and evil desires had invaded his nature, and he hid himself from God. And the flaming sword was placed to guard the tree of life from impenitent man, and it, the sword of justice, is there now to keep back the impenitent and rebellious. The laws of God are as unchangeable as he is himself, and only by the gospel of Christ can Zion be redeemed, and by a holy and righteous people. Christ said to his disciples: "Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father in heaven is perfect." And only by perfect justice, peace, holiness, love to God, and love to man, can Zion be redeemed and built up. Moses tried to bring the children of Israel under the celestial law, that they might find rest; and Christ wept over the Jews and said: "How often would I have gathered you as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not." We have it revealed to us that Enoch gathered a people in righteousness, and the Lord came and dwelt with his people, and they lived and obeyed the celestial law, and the devil had no power over them; and through obedience to God they attained unto immortality and eternal life, (Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 36). Thus we see it was possible for man, in all ages of the world, to come to God through the gospel of Christ. There still exists a faint tradition of Enoch's people amongst the nations as the Golden Age, when all was peace and happiness. The world of mind and matter is now in commotion, as it never has been before; "Every plant which my Heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up," (Matt. 15:13). We find John Stuart Mill throwing aside the prejudices of a life-time. "He said there is a large balance in favor of the probability of creation by intelligence," (Essays on Religion, page 174). Sir William Thompson goes further. He told the British Association that he found overpowering proofs of intelligence and benevolent design, lie all around us; and if ever perplexities, whether metaphysical or scientific turn us away from them for a time, they come back upon us with irresistible force, showing to us through nature the influence of a free will, and teaching us that all living beings depend upon one ever-acting Creator and Ruler. Here is a confession made in respect to Mr. Darwin's theory by one of the most competent of its supporters. Creation by law, evolution by law, development by law, or as including all those kindred ideas, the reign of law is nothing but the reign of creative force, directed by creative knowledge, worked under the control of creative power, and in fulfillment of creative purpose. Mr. Wallace, Journal of Science, page 473 says: "Science in the modern doctrine of the conservation of energy, and the convertibility of force, is already getting something like a firm hold of the idea, that all kinds of force are but forms, or manifestations of some one central force, issuing from some one fountain head of power." Reign of Law, page 122. Much has been said and written on the natural and the supernatural; but who will now point out the dividing line. Man has brought many forces under his control and made them subservient to his will, that a few years back would have been counted supernatural. I view them as alike the expressions of the Divine Will, a will which acts not capriciously, nor as the phrase is arbitrary, but by law. It is by virtue of this law that the sick are healed, whether by the prayer of faith, or the prescription of a physician. All is under the control of the Divine will, from the opening of a flower to the fall of a sparrow.

Dear Saints, the dark clouds of sin and transgression, which have separated us from God, are moving; and let us individually go before God in humility, and ask in faith for the Holy Spirit to cleanse from sin; forgive others as we hope to be forgiven. And as we are soon to meet in conference upon holy ground, let us leave behind us all vain ambitions, and meet only for the glory of God, and the redemption of Zion.

J. MCKENZIE.

A HINT TO TEACHERS AND PARENTS.

It is not enough recognized by some teachers that their special business is to act as inspirer and hence as creator. It is their business to create, if possible, in the mind of the pupil a certain confidence in himself and in his own powers. The teachers who can do this are those who create geniuses out of common material. There is no word which ought to be heard oftener in a school-room than that of encouragement. "Yes, you can do it." "Yes, you can understand it."

"Do not be afraid to try." "You do know it." Such are the phrases which should be as common as household words in every school room. Where they are so, the faith of the teacher in the power of the child creates in his mind a certain faith in himself, and then the work is well begun. On that confidence he can venture to take another step, and then another, and yet another.

Miscellaneous.

CONFERENCE AT KIRTLAND, OHIO.

Spring beds, cots, comforters and pillows have been procured for the use of those who may attend the coming General Conference. No beds need be brought by any one: sheets and pillow cases will come well, and some can bring them as well as not. Board and lodgings among the villagers average $4 per week. Meals at hotel about 25 cents; lodgings as reasonable. Lunch room also—pay for what you get, get what you want. Provisions are cheaper here than we anticipated—hence can do better in the way of fare and prices than we anticipated at first. There will be room for all, and accommodations as cheap as at home,—so none needhe sitate about coming. We are moving slowly. Hope to be ready for all who come by the appointed time. Thousands will be in attendance, judging from the sentiment in the country.

To eternally bask in thy sunshine and bowers,
In Jesus' arms to sweetly repose.
Shall we meet thee again, our dear little treasure,
When this state of sorrow is o'er;
When peace and joy will flow without measure,
And death will distress us no more?
Yes, we shall meet thee when Jesus will come,
To reign with his people on earth;
Then he will conduct us to our bright home,
Never more from each other to part.

WICKES.—At Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa, March 18th, 1883, of consumption, Sr. Elizabeth Gertrude, wife of Bro. Charles A. Wickes; aged 20 years, 2 months, 17 days. Sr. Wickes was the second daughter of Bro. William H. and Sr. Martha Elizabeth Curwen, and was born at Chicago, Illinois, January 1st, 1863; was a young woman of fine natural endowments, a graduate of the Plano High School, and of more than ordinary culture and promise. She was married to Bro. Charles Wickes January 1st, 1881, and leaves her young husband in the shadow of sadness and disappointment by her early death. She was buried from the Lamoni Chapel, March 20th, Elder Joseph Smith preaching the funeral sermon; and her remains deposited in the cemetery west of the village, to wait the wakening summons from the dead.

JOSEPH SMITH - EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, 7th April, 1883.

AN exchange contains the following suggestive words:

"Man is still at the threshold of life's great problem—how to live. It is no wonder so little attention is paid to the other—how to die."

Nor will he, in our judgment, ever reach a less confused state, while he attempts to separate a preparation to die from a preparation to live. The religious world is constantly calling upon men to prepare to die; while the skeptical world is calling upon them to learn how to live; and if we were compelled to choose between the two methods, we should, without a moment's hesitation, choose the latter, for the obvious reason that he who is prepared to live, is certainly prepared to die; or to state the same thing in different words, he who is prepared to properly serve God here, and live up to his highest and best privileges here, is certainly prepared to meet that God and properly do his will in the great beyond. The discrepancy between these contending parties, arises from the fact that neither one adopts a sufficiently comprehensive view. The religionist ostensibly bestowing his whole attention upon the hereafter, while on the other hand the skeptic gives his undivided attention to the things that are here. The baneful result is, that men's energies are divided, a portion of them devoted to here and a portion of them to hereafter. Whereas, if the view we shall presently announce should obtain, all their powers would be concentrated upon a grand union of the two, and a preparation for living would be a preparation for dying; as life and death would be viewed as the same thing under different names.

The view we entertain is this: The proper and complete service of God will result in the greatest good of the creature so serving. Hence whatever details are necessary to be observed in order to the real enjoyment of the present life, are comprehended in that service. Also those things, the observance of which produces the greatest degree of real enjoyment here, will most fully prepare for enjoyment hereafter; for there can be no discrepancy of the character intimated by these contending parties, between two realms presided over by the same God of matchless wisdom and infinite love.

This dividing of man's energies, and directing a portion of them to this life, and a portion of them to that life, is fruitful of great evil; for, weakening the force bestowed upon either, it proportionately weakens the chances of success in either; so that in the effort to gain both, there is good reason to fear that both may be lost. But if these two can be made one, and thus the energies employed concentrated, how greatly are the chances of success in both increased.

This point is of practical value to the Saints. How often do we hear it said: "I am so engaged with temporal matters, that I have no time to attend to my spiritual duties;" or, "My temporal and spiritual matters are so mixed up that I sometimes wish the race was ended." The cure for this lamentable state does not consist, as some have supposed, in getting out of temporal matters, for obviously this we can not do until it is proclaimed that time shall be no more; but in uniting all things with which we have to do, under one grand spiritual head, comprehended in the language: "I have not at any time given unto you a commandment which is temporal, but spiritual." The remedy is rather a change of mental conceptions, a correction of erroneous views, than a sale of cattle, horses and farm, and "a getting out of temporal affairs."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. Richard Coburn wishes to give notice to the Church that the name of the branch formerly known as the Buckhorn, of Ontario, Canada, has been changed to the Blenheim Branch, which is also now their Post Office address.

Bro. Wm. Franklin wrote from Flintville, Wisconsin, stating that the HERALD was a "great comfort" to him. He has not been able to work for two years, and feels his confinement sadly.

Bro. Edwin Moorman writes from Lindley, Missouri, March 12th, that Bro. Bozarth had been there and much good had been done by his preaching. The Adventists are quite furious down there, and are anxious to show how foolish and vain are the delusions of the Latter Day Saints.

We are in receipt of copies of the St. Clair, Michigan, Mineral Springs, and "Oakland" circular, for which we thank the company. It is a fine specimen of special advertising. "Oakland" is a health resort, open the year round.

Those who have ordered or who may order bound tracts, and $1.25 Harps, will please take notice that the delay in sending is caused by our having run out of our supply in filling back orders. Others are expected soon from the binders.

THE Cleveland, Ohio, Voice has the following:

"The coming Mormon revival at Kirtland is attracting no little attention, but not half as much as it would were polygamy attached to this branch of the belief. The Kirtland Mormons believe in having only one wife, and some of them think that that is one too many."

THE following appears in the Dubuque, Iowa, Herald, of March 21st, which some one, probably Bro. Joseph McDowell or Bro. R. Etzenhouser, sent us, and shows that the soldiers of truth will find friends to espouse their cause when the din of bigotry and intolerance is surging around them. A similar article appeared in the Telegraph of March 20th:

"IS HE HETERODOX."

"Rev. J. F. McDowell, one of the speakers at our "anti-polygamy" meeting held here one year ago last month, came to the city last week in company with another minister. Effort has been made to procure the occupancy of two or three chapels for services, and all were promised, and then denied on the ground that the gentlemen were "not orthodox." Mr. McDowell is accounted by leading papers in this state as one of the ablest speakers. This we can prove. His teachings are exclusively founded on the New Testament. Is the New Testament "orthodox?" We have read in many papers highly complimentary notices of Mr. McDowell, as being a scholar, an orator and very entertaining speaker. Why he should be denied the use of a hall is more than I can understand. Some thoroughly respectable citizens in our city count it a shame that those gentlemen have been so strangely treated. Mr.

McDowell has occupied pulpits in prominent churches, and neither ministers nor people have regretted it. We know of prominent ministers in some cities who have "given way" to Mr. McDowell their appointment. These gentlemen are bound by no formulated creed, only as Christ taught, as is found in the New Testament. They believe in "faith, repentance, baptism by immersion for remission of sins, and the reception of the Holy Spirit, resurrection of the body and eternal judgment." This is surely biblical! I thought the time of religious and other kinds of intolerance had passed.

"A CITIZEN."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. W. W. Blair wrote from Sandwich, Illinois, March 19th:

Had two fair meetings yesterday, though in the evening a "blizzard" was sweeping down from the arctic regions. The Sandwich Manufacturing Company suffered a loss of $30,000, or more, by a fire that broke out Sunday, a. m., about 3 o'clock. To-day they are clearing off the debris, preparatory to rebuilding. Some think the fire the work of incendiaries. Bro. Patterson is preaching at Mission. Bro. Rogers sympathises with us in our Lamoni troubles. He thinks some of attending the Kirtland Conference. I expect to remain in this region till about April 1st. With best wishes, yours ever.

The following is the Tribune editorial comment upon Prof. Wiggins' failure to prophetically forecast a storm as predicted by him to occur March 9th to 11th. There can be no doubt that some of the Saints were moved by fear "as if the day of the Lord were near at hand." We were asked several times if we endorsed Bro. "Guy's" opinions as expressed by him in regard to this same storm predicted by Prof. Wiggins. We did not, or we should have said so at the time of its insertion. However, the period is passed, and if any extraordinary storm occurs this month, it will not be the one prophesied of by Professor Wiggins.

GOOD-BY, WIGGINS.

Wiggins, the prophet, is now without honor in any country. His great storm, which was to have gathered head in the Northern Pacific Ocean and traveled round the world at the astonishing pace of nearly five hundred miles an hour, with tidal waves in the Bay of Bengal and the Gulf of Mexico, which was to have torn up the Valley of the Mississippi, hurled itself against the Rocky Mountains, bounded off like a ball and returned to Halifax, tearing everything to flinders on the way, has failed to put in an appearance. There has been no storm other than such local blows as are always experienced in March. No cyclone; no tidal waves. The Bay of Bengal and Gulf of Mexico have not been vexed. They have rolled on as regularly as if Wiggins had never lived. Nothing has been smashed. No one was hurt. It is a dismal failure, but it has its compensation, for Wiggins promised this time, if his storm did not come, to retire from the heights of prophecy altogether, and he will be held sternly to his promise. He must now abdicate, and whatever his malefic planets may tell him in future, must hold his peace. We have had enough of him.

It is patent enough that Wiggins is a quack and a humbug, and yet it is astonishing what an influence he has had, and what a capacity for folly and superstition people have shown, notwithstanding we live in a century of mathematical demonstrations and scientific hard facts. Wiggins has spread consternation in every direction. Men and women in Kansas gathered together and prayed to be delivered from the horrors of his storm. Some persons went crazy from fear. Apparently intelligent persons have built huts and caves in the earth and retired into them to escape from its ravages. On the northern coast of South America several villages were deserted by their inhabitants to escape from the threatened tidal wave. On our New England coast several fishermen have remained on shore, when they might have had a week's good fishing, and of course have lost much money. Quite a number of people who had engaged passage for Europe last week put off sailing, and many sailors declined to start out until after the 11th. If it were known how many people secretly believed in Wiggins' prediction, and said nothing about it for fear of being set down as credulous and superstitious, and how many more without exactly believing it still looked forward with considerable apprehension, and were greatly relieved when they saw the sun shining yesterday morning, the public would probably be astonished. Superstition is a strong element in human composition. It may be covered up by knowledge and culture, but it is questionable whether it is ever entirely eradicated. Very few will admit it, and yet there are very few who would like to come face to face with even a counterfeit of the supernatural. There are not many persons who would like to go through a cemetery at midnight, though it is the safest place in the world, and there are few who would not be uneasy at the appearance before them of anything resembling a ghost.

It is possible Wiggins may not be a prophet at all, but a grim humorist, who has been laying back and quietly enjoying the consternation he has caused over a whole continent, and has been laughing in his sleeves at the scared men and women and affrighted sailors and fishermen, and that he has palmed off his prophecy as a huge joke to see how many would swallow it. If such be the case, he has been extremely successful, for both North and South America have been all torn up, and his nonsense has spread like an epidemic in every direction. It would not appear so funny to Wiggins, however, if some of the victims who are out of pocket should get after him. The cyclone he predicted would be mild compared with their wrath. It is to be hoped he will keep out of their reach and that he will now abandon prophecy, for he must be convinced that the elements are all against him. It is not likely, however, that the race of weather-prophets will die out with Wiggins, for as long as the human capacity for folly remains there will be plenty of quacks to minister to it. Wiggins may disappear, but others will take his place, and there will be plenty of fools to follow them and swallow their quackeries.

Who would venture on the journey of life if compelled to begin at the end?

Correspondence.

FONTANELLE, Adair Co., Iowa,
March 20th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—Infirm and weak as I am this Spring, I would like to have you know that I have not yet lost all my good sense, (neither am I free from ignorance), and do take comfort, yes, pleasure in reading your columns; which are produced by the noble men of God; who are made such by the inspiration of the Holy Spirit; and my prayer is, and has been, that the Lord would teach his servants how to direct and use his law so as to protect, sustain, and uphold and preserve all classes of Saints, wise, unwise, strong and weak, and their sympathy be of such a nature that the poor and weak in faith will feel your affection in their hearts; which is I know, justly required of all those that claim and are in possession of authority from on high to preach the Gospel of Jesus Christ to this self-conceited, learned and yet unwise generation.

I notice in one of your columns that there is no fault finders, or quibblers but those that are very ignorant. I suppose you mean, do not know but very little; well, I am of this class, if you so choose. But, how comes this to be so in this dispensation? Was it so with Job? Did he find fault without cause? Is the 14th Psalm to blame? Is Paul out of the way because he found fault with those in his day? Jeremiah, Ezekiel, and many other of the prophets, with our Lord himself and his apostles, if your position be true, were greatly in the fault. The Seer, the Martyred prophet of this dispensation, will have to be considered of this silly class, as well as all of us who find fault with this wicked generation, and those who have brought shame upon the Church of Christ in this our day. This is a position that I do not fellowship. The simple or unwise may censure or find fault; but the wise have the best right to do so, and are the best qualified for such service.

Peter, Paul, James and John, all had occasion to complain of some that made trouble in the Church, in their day. What do you think Paul ment when he said to the Romans: "I beseech you brethren, to mark them that cause division and offences contrary to the doctrine which you have learned, and avoid them; for they that be such, serve not our Lord Jesus Christ, but their own belly; and by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple." If they had such a class in Paul's day of deceivers, how does it stand with us in this day, when learning and science are, in the estimation of many, of more value than the knowledge some have that Jesus Christ is God over all, forever and forever.

I have a few things to say this morning, not with a design to pervert judgment, make war, nor destroy peace with Saints. I will begin with first sec., Doc. and Cov., 2d par., last four or five lines; "Measure to every man according as he hath measured to his fellow-man." Again: "It is written that it is not given for one man to possess that which is above another." When and where is this principle to come into use? Before Christ's coming to make up his jewels, or after his coming?

Tithing as a principle, I understand, was to commence after the consecration of all our properties, as it was at the day of Pentecost. There has been an effort made in your father's day to do this work. Was it not completed? I think it was. Why did it not stand? My judgment is that the consecrators did not know how, or enough to keep the law, or laws that were made to save or redeem Zion.

Why was our Lord Jesus Christ not overcome by the devil when he was in the mountain, after fasting forty days? Though he was suffering with hunger, no doubt, yet he was not overcome by the devil. Why was it that the devil did not succeed in his purpose? A good reason why he failed; because the Lord knew more than he did. Jesus understood the Scriptures better than Satan. For the safety and welfare of the Saints, wisdom and knowledge that come from God will interpret all that the prophets have spoken, as also all that your father has written touching the doctrine of the redemption of Zion. It is in my heart to believe that it is the pure in heart that the Lord will use for this purpose.

Now, if men are to be dealt with as they have dealt with their fellow men, and that it is not given for one man to possess more or above his fellow man, there will be a great change in this day, or when Zion is redeemed; and I wish all your brethren could see these things aright.

BRIGGS ALDEN.

DELHAVEN, Nova Scotia,

March 8th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I am young in the good cause, was baptized by Bro. Joseph Burton last June; was called to be an Elder: was ordained a few weeks ago at South Rawdon, where Bro. Burton is now fighting manfully for the truth, against four ministers of other churches, who seem determined to "wipe out Mormonism," as they call it, beside the general opposition that an Elder will naturally meet in a new field. This Nova Scotia of ours seems to be a hard country to sow gospel seed in; however, I believe it will be sown, and fruit gathered that will well pay for the labor expended upon it. Our denominational ministers are so hard. A few days ago there appeared in the "Christian Messenger," (the Baptist organ), a long article from the pen of my former pastor, D. Freeman, (Baptist), entitled "Mormonism." His aim was to make the Utah Mormons out as bad as possible, and then tried to prove that the difference between us was slight, and that on account of the law forcing us to abandon their customs. I tell you, Joseph, the truths in that article were few and far between. I fairly sickened as I read it; but I was not long in deciding upon a line of action. Although I am but a poor, unlearned farmer boy, and he a learned, experienced theologian, and the odds in every apparant particular fearfully against me; I procured a hall in the adjoining neighborhood, notified Mr. Freeman to meet me at the hall the following evening, then advertized for miles, my intention of defending the Church of Jesus Christ, against his attacks. Well, the following evening came, the hall was pretty well filled, but no D. Freeman present; but the Lord was there and I had easy work. Since that I sent a notice to the "Messenger," giving Mr. Freeman to understand that I would meet him in any suitable room in my own, or adjoining counties; have not heard from it yet. I also hear that Bro. Burton is "going for him" in Hants county. I have tried to preach a few times, but my attempts seem weak and insignificant. However my heart is in the work, and I pray God hourly that the work may go forward.

I like to hear from Bro. B. V. Springer. How I wish that twenty just such men as he appears to be, were let loose in Nova Scotia for about a year. God grant that it may be so ere long.

Yours in the truth,

HOLMES J. DAVISON.

Bro. Joseph:—I am glad the Herald comes every week; and I hope while the world stands it may continue its noble work and ever be instrumental to enlighten and encourage its readers in word in this glorious work.

Yesterday we had a very profitable time together, serving God, after partaking of the sacrament. We were blest with God's Spirit in prayer, singing, and testifying of God's goodness; we all seemed to feel as one being. In the evening Elder Robt. M. Elvin, who was home as it was Easter Sabbath, preached to a large assembly of people a very able sermon, upon the dealings of God with the children of men in all ages of the world. As the Spirit of Christ accompanied him in his undertakings, he feelingly portrayed the grandeur of an unchangeable God. I pray that God will bless his work in all the world, that honest people every where may be led to obey God's holy truth, that the power of Christ may triumph over all other power. I rejoice that I have obeyed the Gospel in its purity, and hope the Spirit of Christ may be with me to the end of this life.

Yours in hope of eternal life,

ANNA NIELSON.

DELOIT, Iowa,

Dear Herald:—I remained with the Saints at Harlan for sixteen days, and spoke eighteen times. The melting of the snow, made it somewhat disagreeable in getting to the church. There was a Methodist revival kept in motion during the whole time of our stay, and the minister found it necessary as a watchman to address his flock as follows, "It is a shame for you to leave the truth, and run after error." The attendance at our meetings was much better than we had hoped for, and several by their constant and close attention manifested an interest in the gospel of salvation. From both saints and friends, we received kind and cheerful words, and a unanimous vote to return.

I desire to return my thanks to the kind, liberal hearted Saints of Harlan, for the manner in which they sent me away. I pray that God, which doeth all things well, may guide them aright, and cause them to rejoice, with an increase of such as shall be saved; that peace may abide, and the light of the Holy Spirit, ever direct and sustain them in the path of duty. There are many, who are opposed to the elders going into branches to preach; but I am inclined very much to question the propriety of laboring, long and faithful for the purpose of establishing the work, and then to go and leave them to lapse from activity and life, which is assuredly too often the case, where branches are left to care for themselves. My personal experience has been, that the Holy Spirit attends in preaching the word in branches, just as effectually for good as where no Saints live; and as a rule as many or more are made to see the saving light of truth. One thing I have discovered, which is a positive fact, and will not admit of two answers. Many branches must soon receive outside help, and a return of the Spirit, or they will die of inaction. Local laborers take new courage by the visits of the traveling elders, "as iron sharpeneth iron."

Attended the quarterly conference of this district, at Galland's Grove, 9th to 11th instant inclusive; roads so bad in the Grove, that it was not practicable to hold any night meetings. Came here last evening. Spoke to a full house, expect to remain about a week.

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

CHATFIELD, Minnesota,

Dear Herald:—Since there have been letters of Joseph Smith's the Seer, published in the Advocate, I have had a better chance to learn about him; and I am more than ever satisfied that an innocent man was mobbed and assassinated, in the year 1844. If such a thing could be written against me, (it was done about eight years before I was born), I hope it will be blotted out forever. God is just. Wickedness shall not go unpunished, and the real perpetrators can not expect to escape. They not only committed a great crime when they murdered Joseph and Hyrum; but they robbed devoted wives of their loving husbands, and little children of their kind fathers. They also brought on shame, disgrace and crime, from which it will be hard for an unfortunate people to rid themselves. But now the people should acknowledge this, and go to Joseph's sons, and the rest of his bereaved ones, with outstretched hands, and beg their forgiveness. As for me, I am sorry, very sorry, that this horrible crime exists and seems to increase.

Truly yours,

MRS. O. C. MERRILL.

NORTH OGDEN, Utah.

Bro. Joseph:—There is quite a lively interest and an inquiring for the truth springing up in this dark corner of late. We have been circulating the Herald and Advocate, as much as we could conveniently, and we think a branch of the Reorganized Church might be organized here soon by some preaching. We are looking some for Bro. Blair; I wrote him a few days ago.

I wish to say in connection something I know about Brigham's revelation about coming to the Mountains, they say so much about God establishing his church and kingdom here in these mountains. We were with them at Winter Quarters. Now for Brigham's dream on it, he got up in meeting in my hearing and said, "It never seemed to me that this people would go over the Rocky Mountains, until last night; when I dreamed that I was with a company at the summit of the Rocky Mountains going down on the other side. I did not know where, or which way to go, when behold I saw Dr. Richard's way down the side of the Mountain with his night cap on, 'Halloo! Come this way. You can get along this way!'" This was the sum and substance of the dream and revelation as some few hundred could testify if they would.

TAITSVILLE, Ray county, Mo.,

Bro. J. Smith:—It pleases me to read the Advocate; especially the two last. If I could get such articles in every one, I would be glad if it became a weekly also, as well as its sister Herald. The Saints that have been saying, or rejoicing over the Herald becoming a weekly, have only been speaking my thoughts and desires. I hope to live to see Zion redeemed; and also see some of my proud neighbors have to bow to King, Prince Emanuel's ways. There are two men in our school district that I think could see us all driven as before. The rest of the district are men of principle. These two have shut us out of the use of the school-house to have meetings in; yet they hold meetings in it and burn the wood. I am also taxed for school purposes. I tried to get the house for Bro. Lanphear when here, and before he left the district, one drunken gentleman threatened my life about twenty times for that, and other things he could hatch up, calling me a low flung Mormon and hard names.

May the Lord bless all is my prayer. I am determined to do all the good that I can, and hope to be saved with all the Saints.

ERI B. MULLIN.

MERLIN, Ontario,
March 22d, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—The writer has been doing some preaching, as also spending some time with team carrying Elders to their appointments. I carried Bro. Merriam when he first came from Chatham in November; he preached to us a few times, until he got appointments in Romney. I attended there with him for a number of discourses; he then left them to think the matter over for a time. A few days ago there was an invitation sent from the people there to come and preach more, for they say half of the people are for us; but as the conferences is so near, there will not be time for Bro. Merriam to attend to the call now. He has appointment for holding meetings in Chatham with Bro. Lake. Bro. Merriam and self took a trip by cutter to Corinth in December; met with the Saints there, Bro. Lake being there at the time. The Saints are building a very nice little chapel. Bro. Merriam spoke at 11 a. m. I occupied the stand in the evening. We also held meeting on our way, at Kent Ridge, with a strong invitation from some of the world's people for Bro. Merriam to come back; he afterwards returned and held some meetings there; as also a few miles north, at Maple Leaf, where Elder Gurley preached. There are good prospects of several coming into the fold at that place.

I met Bro. Lake in London, Sunday, March 4th. I then had the pleasure of speaking to the people at night, with good liberty, thank God. On Saturday last, 17th, I met Bro. Merriam in Chatham, and brought him out here to fill appointment in our school house; he gave us two excellent sermons on Sunday; also one on Tuesday evening. On Sunday night we held prayer meeting, and had a refreshing time, the Lord being with us in power by his Spirit. Two children were blessed under the hands of Bro. Merriam, one being my own. There was one lady present that was always opposed to us, but never would come out to hear; after attending preaching during the day and prayer meeting at night, she seemed to take a different view and was pleased with the meetings; the reason she came out was to get something to dissuade her daughter from joining as she had reason to believe was the case; her daughter heard Bro. Merriam a few times before. Yesterday I took Bro. Merriam to where there was a good place and had the pleasure of seeing three born into the kingdom by water, one being the daughter before mentioned. Confirmation meeting at night, where were two children blessed. Bro. Merriam speaks here on Friday night; and on Saturday we go several miles north of here to a place where Bro. Leverton has preached a few times, and baptized four within the last three weeks. Request by card to meet him there on Sunday. Some prospects for discussion if the man will face the music. Bro. Merriam silenced one big gun in this neighborhood, a short time after he came here, one Rev. Hall of the Methodist persuasion. Bro. Merriam had a set-to with a Soul Sleeper, a few nights since, and very much disturbed his mind with regard to his security in that faith. A few more such turns will make a Latter Day Saint of him, or spoil him for anything.

Hope Bro. Merriam will be returned here, he has got the work in good shape and ought to continue, would be great good done here. We also ask for Bro. J. H. Lake's return to this mission. Expect to attend Conference at Kirtland. Am glad the Herald is a weekly; is just the thing; we can get the news of the work oftener.

Praying the Master for the building up of Zion, I remain yours for truth,

A. MCKENZIE.

NEW RICHMOND, Ohio,
March 20th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—In answer to sister Almira M. Snow's questions, in Herald of March 10th. I would answer in reference to one of them, namely—"Was the Ark of the Covenant with its precious contents destroyed by men, or was it caught up from the earth?" I read some years ago in a magazine called the "Israelite," published in New York by a Christianized Jew, that there is a tradition among the Jews that the Ark was secreted in a vault of the Temple that had been prepared expressly for that purpose.

H. B. EMERSON.

PARIS, Tenn., March 18th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—We are very few in number, but are trying to do all the good we can, in this part of the vineyard. There is a work for all to do that none may be idle. We hope that the April Conference will remember us with an Elder, or Elders. We believe there may be a good work done here, though they seem to be resting, watching and waiting to see what will be done next. A Baptist brother said whilst in conversation with him, he believed I was a Christian, but he had no confidence in the doctrine I held to. We have had no meetings for some time, on account of sickness.

Yours for truth,

W. J. SEATON.

RIVERTON, Iowa,
March 19th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—We are still battling for the truth as contained in the gospel of Christ. We expect Bro. E. C. Briggs to-night to preach to us; he comes from Nebraska City.

L. C. DONALDSON.

BOYNE CITY, Michigan,
February, 1883.

Brother Joseph Smith:—I want to say a few words to you, as unto the Chief Shepherd now left unto the visible organization of the Church of Christ, for indeed I know of no other now living.

I noticed in the Herald of February 24th, 1883, some of those quotations from the "Voree Herald" in regard to the sin of polygamy and "plunder." By "plunder" I understand that it means, the taking of other people's property without their consent, and pretending to own it, all save one tenth, which they essay to give as tithing to the house of the Lord. I was in Voree with my family, and had a chance to know something about what was said and done during those times referred to in those quotations. I believe what Mr. Strang said of polygamy and consecration, or "plundering the Gentiles," is true. That the devil hatched it up for the purpose of which it is named by him.

I think every man should have the right to consecrate his own if he chooses; but no right to steal his neighbor's property, with the plea of paying one tenth of it unto the Lord. For the earth is the Lord's, and no man has a right to steal; not even out of love to God or man.

I know that the Father of the faithful paid tithes into the hands of Melchisedec, but the property was his own. He obtained it by the right of conquest, in legal and honorable war. He did not get it like a cowardly thief, who comes in the dark to do what he dare not do before the eyes of his fellow men. And yet he must know that every hidden thing of darkness must be brought to light, and revealed upon the house-tops, for God can not lie. And if this is in very deed the hour of his judgment, if it is come, as we testify, then what secret band can keep their shameful deeds of darkness covered up. When the Lord finds his house of prayer converted into a den of thieves, no doubt but he might make a scourge, and drive them out of his Temple. For he is the same to-day as yesterday; and none the less opposed to stealing.

And I am confident, if the Lord had need of some man's colt to ride, he would not send one of his servants in the night to steal it from the owner, but to tell him who sent him after it. Undoubtedly that man knew who the Lord was that sent, and he acknowledged his right by letting him go. No thief that. As to polygamy and perjury, and plundering unbelievers, I have not "assumed" to preach or practice any one of those sins. Nor do I want to hear any such a doctrine preached. I am willing every man should be accountable for his own sins, after he has been faithfully reprov'd. If Mr. Strang did preach and practice those things in the face of that revelation that God gave him Voree, as his son Charles says of it, even so it seems to me. I can not help believing, that God gave him that revelation, and that the curse rested on him. Sometimes I have thought he was made a curse for his people, in proof of his being a revelator. Prophets may sin, as well as other man. It would be folly for me to say King David did not sin, because God had "chosen him as one after his own heart." My God is Jesus Christ. No guile was found in his mouth. Other prophets are fallable men.

Respectfully, I am yours,

J. S. COMSTOCK.

MOREHEAD, IOWA,
March 16th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I have been reading the Herald. It makes me rejoice to see how the good work is advancing, helping the weak and weary on to God; giving them strength to continue on, believing and trusting in the strength of one that is mightier than we poor, helpless mortals here; for our Savior will help us, if we ask him to. I know that he helps me; I know that I am weak and do wrong many times, but I trust Jesus and place myself in his care, for I know he will care for all of those that ask him, for the Bible says, "Seek and ye shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you." I try to help the work on all I can, but that is not much. I pray for the Elders who leave their pleasant homes to the preach the gospel.

Your sister in Christ,
HENRIETTIE HILSINGER.

REESE CREEK, MONTANA,
March 2d, 1883.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—Yours of the 15th ult. came to hand some time ago,—was pleased to know that you had arrived safely at Lamoni. I am thankful that this leave us all well. Our conference adjourned last Sabbath evening. We had a good time. I believe it was the best conference ever held in Montana. The Saints realized the presence of the Holy Spirit from the first session to the last; and in our last to a remarkable degree. We had good attendance, the house was crowded full. In our sacrament meeting, some of the outsiders could be seen shedding tears, and they expressed great satisfaction. We baptized a Brighamite Elder during our conference, his name is Martin Lundwall, and he resides in Bozeman. I look for more additions before long if the Saints will be united. I sincerely hope you will be able to pay us a visit next summer and remain with us for a few months. I think you can do a great deal of good. The railroad will be in Bozeman by the 20th inst. We are having beautiful weather, the snow is almost gone. I hope and pray that you will have a good time at Kirtland, and that the Lord will bless you abundantly. With kind regards I will close.

Yours in bonds,
GOMER REESE.

XENIA, ILLINOIS,
March 7th, 1883.

Dear Herald:—The winter is gone, and the work commences again. And while we are busy, I know we can hear from one another through your columns. There is one time that I am proud, and that is when I hear the Saints praised by people who do not know whether I am a Saint or not. Let us not value the wealth of this world higher than we do the love of God. I hope God will strengthen his servants to fulfill their mission that he had assigned them, (for I have seen them traveling through rain and snow to meet their appointments), and that he may give them grace to bear their trials, whether they be small or great. O, let us be watchful, so that when our eyes change their color, and our lips forget to move, we will have a hope in the glorious resurrection.

Hoping that God may be with all his people in every good effort, I remain your loving sister,
C. M. JARVIS.

RUSHVILLE, Schuyler Co., Ills.,
March 8th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Bro. J. Goodale of Barry, Pike county, came to our place, February 10th. Preached for us about eight discourses, and reorganized the Alma Branch, as it had become broken up, with eight members of the old branch present; and by ordaining Bro. J. H. Corbon, Priest, and choosing him president of the branch. Elder Goodale gave us many good instructions, and reading a piece in a Herald of 1879, written by Bro. C. Derry, headed "Bear and Forbear," which was very pleasant for the occasion.

LINES TO AN ELDER IN THE FIELD.

Brethren! Sisters! When he cometh
To the portals of your home,
O, with open hearts receive him,
Wheresoe'er the wanderer roam.

Minister to his need and weakness,
As unto our Lord above;
Send him on his way rejoicing,
With the tokens of your love.

White winged Angels! hover near him!
Turn aside the shafts of hate;
Soothe each mortal pain and sorrow,
Ever on his footsteps wait.

Jesus, Master! Own his labor;
For like thine his footsteps rove,
House nor home thy servant owneth,
Bless him with thy wealth of love.

Holy Spirit! Ever guide him,
And inspire his lips to speak;
Let thy power divine be known,
Resting on him—frail and weak.

Give for hire of sheaves abundant,
Bid disease his word obey;
Through his hand's, O, work thy wonders,
Spirit of our God, we pray.

Not for mortal exaltation,
We for him these favors crave;
But we wish that Thou wilt bless him,
As he seeks of souls to save,

Judge of all! O, when awarding
To each soul this meed of worth;
Crown him with immortal honor,
For the cross endured on earth.

"NATURE MADE THEM."

DID she? Are you quite sure of that? Whenever a sceptic in revealed religion is asked how he accounts for the existence of all those beautiful organisms that appear on earth and in the heavens, his invariable answer is that, "Nature made them all."

A very cheap and easy way we should think, of answering, of all questions the most momentous to mankind. The question arises very naturally, what proof has either past or present generations furnished that nature made all things? If neither the past nor the present ages have offered any proof that nature made all things, why should we imagine that she ever did, or ever can produce anything? History and modern research both inform us that many animals once wandered over, and inhabited Great Britain and Ireland, such as the elk, bear, wolf, panther, eagle, various species of grouse, &c., that have long since disappeared from those countries. Fish, plants, and trees of various kinds and species have also disappeared from those countries where once known to exist in great plenty. Races and tribes of men have also disappeared within the period of the discovery of America; yet in all these instances,

"Nature" has never replaced a single species. Not one.

If nature ever was originally the producer of all things, she must in the history of man have left, at least some evidences of the fact; but where is the evidence. Here and there all over the civilized world, laws are made to prevent the annihilation of many kinds of living animals, birds, fishes, and trees. Why? Simply because all know that when they once disappear from the earth, "nature" never replaces them. And a very melancholy fact it is indeed, to witness the disappearance or annihilation of any one species of useful animals, or plants. The great elk and moose, that used to roam over the vast north-west, have almost disappeared. The buffalo that used to cover the immense plains of the west like a vast living sea, are greatly reducing in numbers annually, and are destined, unless preserved by law, to be blotted out at no very distant period.

Now and then the bones and skeletons of distinct species of animals are found in various degrees of decay, of which not a living specimen is now found on the earth. The elk, buffalo, antelope and many other animals, are, we fear, destined to the fate of the mammoth, mastodon, and megatherium, and like them, and many others when once extinct, there is no hope that nature will ever replace one of them.

The Atheist, wishing to establish his "nature-made-all-things" theory, is conscious that his proof is nowhere in either history or fact, but then he can take you back to unknown ages, and take refuge behind the "evolution" theory, where he knows he may assert many things and prove nothing, and bewilder both you and himself, by his very learned (?) and groundless notions.

If the elephant is the evolved offspring of some pair of different animals in species, where are those animals? If the rhinoceros is the evolved result of the union or mixture of some two other animals, which two are they? And so of every known specimen of beast, fowl, fish, tree or plant; if at some remote age, it was common for any two species to produce some other species altogether unlike themselves, what animals or organisms were they? And why don't such animals do the same things now? If the salmon is the natural offspring of some other two fishes altogether different in species to himself, which two fishes are they? Surely ere this, some naturalist would, or ought to have found out some of these matters. If the sugar maple is the natural offspring of the ash and the oak, or some other two unlike species, why has not some naturalist, either of the past or the present, discovered the fact, and kept us no longer in ignorance of it? We are often told that our best horticultural fruits, as the apple, peach, pear, plum, &c., are only the result of long, patient, persevering cutting, pruning and grafting industry. But I have most sincere doubts of this. It is not possible to so mix up any fruit tree with others that its identity will be lost. The common crab apple of to-day does not differ from the same species of two thousand years ago; and you might graft it on to any known species of tree for ten thousand years, and it would be but a crab apple yet; and just so with any other known specimen of fruit. To have the Northern Spy, the Rhode Island Greening, Dutchess of Oldenburg, or any other specimen of apple, you must get them either from the seed, or the cuttings; and what is true of them to-day was true of them as long as they have been known to man. The names may be changed any number of times, but the tree and fruit never, even though we now and then find different fruits upon the same tree. If wrong in my conclusions I am willing to be corrected. I have long thought on these things, and upon infidel themes; but I do not imagine that there is nothing more to be learned.

Another point. Mr. Robert Ingersoll does not think it a hard matter at all to assume that man invented his own language: but like many other things of grand and glorious moment, which he blindly opposes, he never thought much upon this subject. But we will here ask a few questions. I have now in my possession some nine or ten different accounts of the finding of children, lost, it is supposed at, say three or four years of age; but found at nine to fourteen. Not one of these was capable of speaking one word of the language of its parents. Not only that, but all had become so wild, that they had to be run down by fleet men and horses, before they would yield to be captured; and when taken like any other wild animal, they sought every possible chance by writhing, twisting and jerking to escape from their captors, and had to be tamed down by kind treatment, like any other wild animal, before they could be induced to accept, or to love the society of man! There were several other curious facts in relation to them. 1st. It was exceedingly difficult to teach them language at all, 2d. None of them learned it except in very small degrees, and most of them learned none at all, though hearing it every day for years. And, 3d, they were all very short lived, none having reached more than about twenty years, while others died soon after their capture.

Whatever the extent of the knowledge possessed by these youths, before being lost, not one of them had a word of the parental language when found; and being entirely forgotten, or lost to them, it was lost to them forever, unless they received it again, from those in possession of it. This is one of the many facts that prove conclusively that, man by nature has no articulate language.

Whoever knew a deaf person, I mean one so born, to speak a language? Having never heard, he has no knowledge of any language, and therefore can not speak it. If an Englishman wishes to learn the French, German, Greek, Latin, Hebrew, Chinese, or any other language, he must learn them all from those who can speak or teach them. So of any other man any where on earth. No man was ever known to possess a language, unless he learned it from some one already in possession of it. Every man, every where, has just as much language as he has learned from others, and no more. And what is true to-day in this direction, has been true since man began to be.

I would be willing to give Mr. Ingersoll all the way from six months to ten years, to logically show how any one entirely destitute of language could ever come into possession of it, merely by his own ingenuity, or wisdom. And if he, or any one else can prove such a thing possible, he will then have one of the strongest arguments against theology that it is possible to conceive. Feeling fully satisfied that man by nature has no articulate language, we conclude that a being as far at least above man in the scale of intelligence, as the most towering intellect is above the unconscious babe, visited, communicated, and taught men language, very much as recorded in the Bible, or otherwise man could never have possessed it. It is impossible to conceive a stronger, standing evidence that God is, and that the Bible testimony of him is true. Moreover, just as certain as man is by nature destitute of articulate language, so surely is he destitute of the knowledge of moral right and wrong. In other words, man until taught, knows no difference between right and wrong. Every observing man and woman knows very well that it takes no small pains, labor and perseverance, to imprint the knowledge of moral right upon the mind of youth; and to expect that any one left untaught,¹ would naturally grow up unto an exemplary man or woman in morals, is of all follies the most foolish. The laws of every nation on earth, holds the parents responsible for the wrongs done by youth; all being conscious that until taught, children know no difference between right and wrong.

There is any amount of evidence that the present aborigines of America and other newly discovered countries, are the lapsed descendants of a once highly civilized race; that instead of being the mere children of forest and prairie, advancing from the lowest scale of being to civilization, and enlightenment, they are simply making steady strides toward a certain extermination. I mean that, left entirely to themselves, to their own individual effort, entirely without aid from a superior race, or a race greatly more advanced in intelligence and civilization, that the tendency is downward to extinction and not upward to national greatness and intelligence. As with an individual, so with a tribe or a people; the longer and the more the laws of life are neglected the less they are valued or regarded, till step after step, they get down to the mere level of the digger Indian, or those youths alluded to in the commencement of this article, where education is at the best next to impossible.

The conclusion we feel to arrive at from all these premises is, that man was not only taught language very early after his creation on this earth, but that he was also put in possession of a high order of civilization, and the knowledge of many of the necessary sciences. That he was brought forth by some unaccountable circumstances, all the way from the capacity of a mere brute, possessing but a mere "spoonful of brains," as Mr. Ingersoll puts it, up through the monkey tribe, or ringtails, apes, baboons and ourang outangs, is indeed baboonish enough! If it were possible that man, without language and the necessary arts and sciences of life, could live through more than three or four generations, it can no more be proved that he could originate them than the baboon or the monkey. What those animals are to-day, they have been known to be as long and as far back as history reaches. They have never originated a word in all their history; and man left to himself is much less capable of maintaining an existence than even these animals. Imagine, if you please, a man utterly ignorant of the art of making iron. At what time in his life, or the lifetime of his posterity, would that knowledge be likely to be arrived at? Imagine utter ignorance of any one of the other necessary sciences, as weaving, agriculture, molding, casting, brick making, architecture, &c., and the difficulty is just as apparent. That these were introduced in the days of Adam by just such a being as the Scriptures show God is, is infinitely more reasonable than any other story or theory introduced by either Atheism or Deism. Which will you have?

I think, of all the unreasonable and incredible things in the universe, the most unreasonable and incredible are atheism and infidelity. The gross follies and perversions of true religion, made and making every day, by foolish priests and divines, have been and still are the greatest causes of atheism and infidelity. No reasonable or reflecting man can believe in the human creeds and teachings of the present time. The only way any one can enjoy them is to let them entirely alone, or reject them. The moment one puts them to the test of the apostolic faith, they disappear. "Prove all things, and hold fast that which is good." "Come now and let us reason together." "That which ye have, hold fast till I come." "The spirit searcheth all things, yea, the deep things of God." "I will give you a mouth which all your adversaries shall not be able to gainsay nor resist." "Sound speech that can not be condemned."

"That ye may be able by sound doctrine to convince the gainsayers," &c., are things that modern sectarianism does not possess, and can not lay claim to as essential to her faith.

SOMETHING IN IT.

THE inhabitants of Edwards county, Ill., do not support any temperance lectures or spend their time talking temperance. They decided twenty-five years ago that no liquor should be sold in the county, and since that time have sent but one person to the penitentiary, and he committed a crime while drunk with whisky procured in an adjoining county; they support but two or three paupers, and their jail is empty most of the time. Their taxes are thirty-two per cent lower than the adjoining counties, and their term of court occupies three days in the year, while their tax rolls show that they return more property than any other county in the state of equal population. This is a case where the minority can not complain of any invasion of private right, for the people are unanimously opposed to license under any circumstances. Families seek the locality as a good place to bring up their children. When confronted with the statistics of this model county, even old toppers admit there is something in it; but it evidently is not whisky.

"WHO AM I?"

THE TROUBLES OF A YOUNG SAINT IN PROSPECTING FOR HIS IDENTITY.

A SHORT time ago a bright-looking Danish boy stepped into a lawyer's office and said: "I want you to tell me, who am I?" laying a $5 bill on the desk at the same time.

The lawyer, peeping alternately at the boy and at the bill, shaking his head, replied: "It seems that you are a funny boy."

"Not funny at all; you will find it a very serious matter."

"Well, go ahead and explain it."

"About twenty years ago a wealthy Danish lady, being a widow, came over to this country, with her two daughters. There was a Norwegian and his boy. The father married both the widow's daughters. One year after, the Norwegian's boy married the wealthy widow. The result of that marriage was the birth of another boy, and if I am sure, I am that boy. The Norwegian's boy died. The Danish widow was a widow again, but the old Norwegian, married her, too. After that the old lady died, and one year ago the old gentleman, too, after he had made himself the owner of his third wife's property. Now when I claimed that property, my sisters said: 'Stop, you can't be the heir at all! You are our late husband's grandchild. By her marriage with him you became your mother's grandchild, too, and after she died we became your mothers, and you never can inherit the property before we are dead.' That's what my sister mothers say, but I think that can't be right and there must be some mistake in polygamy. Now, sir, please tell me what I am; who I am."

The lawyer, thrusting his chin into his neck, answered pathetically: "You are a polygamistake!"—Salt Lake Tribune.

SCRIPTURE ILLUSTRATED.

"And the Lord said, Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil."—Genesis 3:22.

This is confessedly one of the obscure and difficult passages of Scripture; and it is believed that one cause of its obscurity is that our translations have not given us the precise idea which is conveyed by the original Hebrew. The Hebrew verb rendered by our translators in the present tense, is, must be acknowledged by all who understand the Hebrew to be the third person preterit; and therefore should have been rendered, or translated, was, instead of is. But this of itself, would not relieve the difficulty, because there would still be something wanting to make the sense complete. To overcome this difficulty, we must suppose the sentence elliptical, which every student versed in the Hebrew, knows frequently occurs in the Hebrew Scriptures. That is, a word or more is wanting in a sentence to make the sense complete. Although in many places the ellipsis has been supplied by our translators, yet in the present text they have unfortunately neglected to do so; and by translating the preterit by the present tense, have thrown impenetrable obscurity over the entire text; by giving a literal translation of the Hebrew verb, and taking the liberty of supplying the ellipsis, we may read the text as follows: "Behold the man was as one of us, to know good; but now he hath added to know evil." That this is the genuine sense of the passage, is manifest, I think, from the following considerations: The serpent while audaciously contradicting the Almighty, and impudently reasoning with the woman, to induce her to transgress the Divine command, said: "Ye shall be as Gods," &c. And according to the present version of the above text, it is but the echo of the devil's lying assertion or declaration. "The man is become as one of us to know good and evil." Now, allowing this version to convey the true idea that Moses wrote, it conveys the false assertion of Satan into a truth, and also proves it a great benefit to transgress God's commandments, because it makes us more like Him; therefore it is conclusive that there is some fatal error in that version. If transgression makes men more like God, then we would all do well to transgress more frequently and generally than we do. We see at a glance this can not be correct.

But allowing our rendering to be correct, it not only relieves us of the difficulty of the text, but it also corroborates the Divine declaration in regard to man's having been created in God's image (just like him). This being true, transgression could not have made him more like him. It also confirms the subsequent account of the fatal effects of man's apostacy; for the amended translation saith, "But now he hath added to know evil." And the Scripture saith of apostate man, that his part is evil, and only evil continually; though he was God, possessed of the image of God, yet now having rebelled and sinned against God, he has lost his goodness; is dispossessed of the image of God, and has an image, earthly, sensual, devilish.

Thus we see he became more like the devil and less like God, by his rebellion and disobedience to the Divine command.

And the truth of God is confirmed, and the daring falsehood of the devil is fully evinced and Christ's words also confirmed, that "the devil is a liar from the beginning, and the father of it, and ye are his children, and his lusts ye will do." John 8:44.

THE PURE IN HEART.

"Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God."—Jesus. Who are the pure in heart? Perhaps no question of more vital importance could be propounded; and surely none could be asked which would be more difficult to answer in a satisfactory manner. It is not so hard to ascertain whether our friends and neighbors, with whom we associate daily, are living consistent lives, and keeping the commandments contained in the decalogue. If our friends stumble, or fail in any way in keeping the law, or outward ordinances, we are pretty certain to hear of it. Some friend(?) is always kind enough to come to us, and whisper in our often too willing ear, that such a brother or sister is guilty of committing some grievous sin. That a certain brother in the church has partaken too freely of the sparkling beverage, and made a beast of himself, besides bringing shame and reproach on the cause. Some good meaning brother, perhaps, will come and tell us that such a member is possessed with an evil spirit, and has prophesied falsely in the name of the Lord. If such persons do exist in the church, the fact is to be deeply deplored. It is a crying shame that such persons should call themselves members of any church. But is it wise or prudent for another member of the church to go through the country telling the Saints here and there of these things? Is it not much better to go to a brother, who has been guilty of some misdemeanor, admonish and reprove him, in order to induce him to do better in the future, then to merely go around telling that brother A. or brother B. has done so and so; thus sowing the seeds of discontent and disunion in the various branches? Are persons who are guilty of circulating such reports the pure in heart, of whom it is said, "They shall see God?" It is an easy thing to see an individual's outward faults, but how are we to know what is going on within the heart of the individual? We read in the Good Book, that the "heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked." Hence we see the necessity of having our hearts purified. We are told somewhere in the sacred volume, that "God will take away our hearts of stone," and in exchange, will give us "hearts of flesh." Our secret sins are often the most hateful and heinous in the sight of Jehovah.

Let us pray God to grant unto us, above all things, a pure heart. Before we seek to understand others in order that we may accuse them of faults, let us strive to know ourselves, in order that we may condemn ourselves.

It is a homely old saying, but a true one nevertheless, that in the last day every tub will be compelled to stand on its own bottom. The sins another may commit, can never either benefit or injure us. By our own works will be judged, when the day of reckoning comes.

Remember, dear reader, that the pure in heart only have the promise of seeing God.

GOD'S INFINITE LOVE.

THE following lines have been written in one of the institutions of this country, in answer to the question or definition of "God's Love,"

"Could we with ink the ocean fill;
Were every blade of grass a quill;
Were the whole world of parchment made,
And every man a scribe by trade;
To write the love of God above,
Would drain the oceans dry;
Nor would a scroll contain the whole,
Though stretched from sky to sky."

Dear reader, God's love is boundless—"He so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life." John 3: 16.

Do you ever thank God for an open Bible? Do you ever thank him for the restoration of the everlasting gospel, and the Book of Mormon, and this bright and beautiful world? How many pleasant sights, cheerful voices, and happy hearts! And, alas, sorrowing ones also. I love to see the sunbeams dance upon the silvery waves in the brooklets, and to watch the tiny flowers springing up from the ground, with their heads sparkling with drops of dew. I love the bright frosty crystals, that glitter in the moonlight, or gather in fairy forms on our window pane. I love to hear the song of the early robin, and the chirp of the sparrow, as perched on the topmost bough. I love to hear and see the sky-lark until I can see and hear her no more, rising so high, and filling the air with her sweet melody. I love the bounding step, and the merry laugh of the little ones, and O! how much do I love the sound of my mother's voice, and the sight of her loving smile. Why, the world is full of lovely things; for God is love, and he created them all.

But they tell us these beautiful things must all pass away; that one by one all earth's pleasant things will grow old, and their charms will be lost. I have seen the flowers fade. The drifting snows have covered them from sight. I have seen it rain in torrents, and shortly after the sparkling dew-drops have been changed to glittering pearls, by the hand of winter. "All is change." Even the merry prattle of the little ones; and the sweet voice of those we love, may soon be silent in death. And is there nothing that will not change? And is there nothing that will not shortly grow old and die? Yes, there is one thing that is always new: one gem that always grows brighter, and becomes more and more valuable as we use it, and love it. It is the Bible; the simple story of the cross; the gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ! Precious volume! Though heaven and earth may pass away, yet the "word of God abideth forever."

This is our guide to that mansion of loveliness, where the great Father of the beautiful dwells. This is the chart of that liberty our forefathers lived and fought for. This is the note book that teaches us the strains of that sweet song, which the angels sang on Bethlehem plains by night: and that they sing around the "great white throne." This is the law book, that contains the law and the statutes of that holy country, which we hope to inhabit, where the sovereign Law-giver is the just and merciful, the wise and holy Jehovah. This is our watchword on our journey thither; and it tells us of the password of the entrance into the gates of pearls: through the golden streets, through the burnished walls, to the home of the blest, the New Jerusalem. Elders; Priests; Teachers; Deacons; Brothers and Sisters, the Herald has gone forth! The latter day work is not a myth. The everlasting gospel is a reality, then gird on your armor, helping each other to "watch and pray," and if we can awaken in one another a love for its teachings, or a resolution to study more carefully its sacred pages, that we may be more and more like its holy author. That our humble efforts may be truly blessed, is my prayer.

I will now conclude by the well known lines of Sir Walter Scott.

"Within this awful volume lies,
The mystery of mysteries;
And happiest they of human race
To whom our Lord hath given grace.
To read, to hear, to hope, to pray,
To lift the latch and force the way;
But better had he ne'er been born,
Who reads to doubt; or reads to scorn.
May this blest volume ever lie
Close to my heart, and near my eye;
Till life's last hour my soul engage,
Be this my chosen heritage."
"Wide as the world is thy command,
Vast as eternity—thy love;
Firm as a rock thy truth shall stand,
When rolling years shall cease to move."

WM. STREET,

ALCOHOLIC STIMULANTS AS MEDICINES.

THERE seems to exist a force of habit, or prevailing fashion, among physicians to prescribe alcoholic stimulants upon nearly all occasions, and I believe they do so without considering the evils which are likely to result from their use, or realizing the responsibility which really rests upon them as individuals, and as members of the medical profession.

All intoxicating stimulants are injurious, and when taken into the human system have the effect, first to excite, then to depress, the entire vital force. As the habit of using intoxicants is increased, the desire for food and the power to assimilate it is diminished. This fact becomes more apparent as the habit increases, and in the stages immediately preceding the delirium tremens the desire for food and the power to digest and assimilate it are entirely suspended.

Alcohol is neither food nor medicine. It can not add one molecule to the plasm out of which our bodies are daily built up. On the contrary, it exerts upon the whole animal economy a most deleterious influence. It does not supply, but diminishes, vital force. It weakens the nerves, deadens the sensibilities, and lessens the power of the system to resist disease, or to recover from its effects.

Alcoholic stimulants may serve a purpose in bridging over attacks of sinking or prostration, and physicians may, and often do, interpret such momentary exaltation as favorable to life and health, and so continue their use. But the incited activity produced by such stimulants does not last many hours, and can not be extended for any great length of time even by the continued use of the stimulants, because the depressing effects, which are sure to follow their use, more than counteract their power to stimulate. Alcohol may keep up an excitement of the system for a time, but it can not nourish or sustain the vital force. It inflames the stomach, weakens the power of digestion and assimilation and can not be long continued without disastrous results.

Do you mean to say that you do not approve of alcoholic stimulants under any circumstances? is a question asked me very frequently, and with real earnestness, by physicians and so-called Temperance men, who have not yet seen their way to total abstinence. They have many examples to relate of the good done by beer, wine, whisky and brandy, but I believe their estimate of the good accomplished by these stimulants is erroneous.

I have often witnessed cases where alcoholic stimulants had been given for days and even weeks, when the attending physicians seemed to think that their patients had been kept alive upon such stimulants, when it seemed to me evident they had survived in spite of the liquors and would have recovered much sooner without them; and I have seen other patients succumb who it would seem might have recovered from their diseases but from the additional shock produced by the use of such stimulants.

In the case of a patient rapidly sinking, I might perhaps administer whisky or brandy, were nothing else at hand, but with the firm belief that the object would have been more satisfactorily attained by harmless medicines.

As a result of thirty years of professional experience and practical observation, I feel assured that alcoholic stimulants are not required as medicine, and I believe that many, if not a majority of physicians to-day, of education and experience, are satisfied that alcoholic stimulants as medicines are worse than useless, and physicians generally have only to overcome the force of habit, and the prevailing fashion in medicine, to find a more excellent way, when they will all look back with wonder and surprise that they, as individuals and as members of an honored profession, should have been so far compromised.—Extract from a paper read by R. Greene, M. D., of Boston, before one of the medical societies of that city.

THE YEAR AND THE CALENDAR.

ON the day after the 4th of October, 1582, the people of Italy, Spain and Portugal wrote the date October 15. Ten days had been dropped altogether. This was because of the adoption of what is known as the Gregorian calendar, because it was decreed by a bull issued by Pope Gregory XIII.

The early division of time was very irregular and inaccurate. The reckoning by months did not bring out even years, and it was only when astronomy became something like an exact science, that the actual length of the year was known.

In the time of ancient Rome, there were but ten months, and the Roman kings fixed the length of the year at three hundred and fifty-five days. When this inexact division caused trouble, an extra month was inserted here and there to restore the system to a degree of order.

We owe it to Julius Cæsar that the year was fixed at three hundred and sixty-five days, with an additional day once in four years. The fourth year in which the day is added is bissextile, or as we call it, leap year. The year of 365 1-4 days is known as the Julian year.

But even this is not accurate. The true solar year is 365 1-4 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes and 49.62 seconds long. That is, it is 11 minutes and 10.38 seconds shorter than the Julian year. The Julian calendar was adopted forty-six years before Christ, so that in A. D. 1582, more than sixteen centuries later, the error had amounted to about ten days.

It was this error which the Gregorian calendar corrected. But in making the correction it was necessary to guard against a similar accumulation of error. That object was accomplished in this way.

The error amounts to very nearly eighteen hours in a century. Accordingly it was decreed that each year whose number was divisible by one hundred should not be a leap year unless it were divisible by four hundred.

Consequently the year 1900 will not be a leap year, but the year 2000 will be one. Three leap years are omitted every four hundred years by this plan, and the result is that the average civil year differs from the true solar year by less than twenty-three seconds. This difference will amount to a whole day in something less than four thousand years.

The new system was adopted gradually. By the Roman Catholic world it was adopted almost at once—the last of the Catholic countries making the change in 1587. But it was not until 1700 that Protestant Germany adopted it; and in England and America the Gregorian calendar was not used until 1752.

The Greek church has never sanctioned the change. In Russia to this day the old style is in use, and the error, which was only ten days in 1582, is now more than twelve days. The Russian Christmas does not come until nearly a fortnight after all the rest of the Christian world has celebrated it. It is also a curious fact of which few are probably aware, that until one hundred and thirty years ago, the year began in England and this country, not with the first of January, but on the twenty-five of March.

Before that time, however, the practice had become common of indicating that there was a doubt to which year the days in the first three months belonged. Thus in the old Boston newspapers of the last century we see such dates as this: "February 4, 1723-4,"—from which anybody can discover that the date, according to the Gregorian calendar, is February 15 (eleven days' correction), 1724.

The year is a varying quantity according to the standard by which it is measured. Of course, it is the time within which the earth makes her passage around the sun.

But if this time be measured by the period of the earth's return to the same apparent place in the heavens, as seen from the sun, it is a "sidereal year;" 365 days, 6 hours, 9 minutes, 9.6 seconds.

The time in which the earth makes the circuit from her perihelion, that is, the point of her orbit where she is nearest to the sun, around to the same point again, is the "anomalous" year, 365 days, 6 hours, 13 minutes, 48.6 seconds.

The "tropical" year, however, is that which astronomers have selected as the true solar year. It is the time included between two "vernal equinoxes." This vernal equinox is that instant in the spring of the year when the equator of the earth, if extended, would pass through the center of the sun.

It is also the time when the days and nights, all over the globe, are of equal length. The period between two vernal equinoxes in 365 days, 5 hours, 48 minutes, 48.6 seconds.—Youth's Companion

THE SEVENTH DAY ADVENTISTS.

A FEW reasons why the writer could not unite with them. First: They are as authoritative and positive in their religious views as they could be were they the living oracles, the infallible depositories of eternal truth. Second: They claim to teach nothing but what can be sustained from the Bible, and yet it is by forcing their constructions on certain passages of Scripture, a construction that is uncertain and unwarranted, that this claim is sustained. It was by forcing a construction on Daniel 8:14, that William Miller predicted the time of Christ's second advent. Miller held that the earth was the sanctuary which was to be cleansed at the end of the two thousand three hundred days, or years; which according to chronological calculations would end in the year 1844; and its cleansing be the manifestation of our Lord from heaven. This little mistake of Mr. Miller's would be quite sufficient to satisfy most people as to the source of his inspiration, but not so with an Advent. It is acceded that the earth is not the sanctuary here mentioned, but that it is the heavenly sanctuary, and its cleansing the investigative judgment, which began in heaven in 1844; and as soon as this investigation is finished then our Lord is coming to execute judgment. This mistake of Mr. Miller's we are told was in accord with the predetermined counsel and will of God. This too can be proved from the Bible, and this time it is by forcing a construction on the Revelation of St. John 10:9, 10. Here John the Revelator is made to pre-figure, or represent the Millerite Church. The little book which the angel gave John to eat, telling him it should be sweet in his mouth and bitter in his belly, was none other than the book of Daniel, which the Millerites were carried away with; in the language of one, "literally devoured." The expectation of meeting their Lord at the appointed time was to them very sweet; but when the disappointment came then it was bitter. This is the way the Bible is made to prove doctrine. I can not think of a being who is represented as a being of love and truth, raising up a man for no other or better purpose than to bring sorrow and disappointment on thousands of honest men and women, reducing them to poverty and want, destroying their confidence in the word of God, making infidels of them, as was the case with Mr. Miller.

The most of professing Christians can find Scripture enough to sustain them in the belief that man is dual in his nature. Not so with an Adventist. With them a man's spirit is his breath; and when he dies there is nothing but his breath that returns to God. The martyr Stephen, as he was about to yield up the ghost, cried: "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit." (My breath). Again the words of Christ to the thief on the cross: "To-day shalt thou be with me in paradise." In order to destroy the force of this passage they are under the necessity of punctuating the sentence differently from what it is in the Bible; which when done, makes the sentence ambiguous, and when it is once made ambiguous then they can force the desired construction.

May heaven deliver the honest hearted, from the subtlety and sophistry of the present day.

Again, Daniel 7:24, 25. Here we have a power brought to view, that should wear out the Saints of the Most High, and should think to change the times and laws. This power we are told is the Papacy or Roman Catholic Church. And one of the laws which she thought to change, we are told, was the Sabbath, from the Seventh to the First day of the week, or from Saturday to Sunday. If it were true that the change of the Sabbath had its origin with the Papacy, we would never raise a pen in defense of Sunday observance. So far from this being true, we have the united testimony of such historians as Mosheim, Eusebius, and Sewell, to the effect that Sunday was observed as a day of public worship in the first, second, and third centuries. Whereas, the Papacy was not set up until the fifth century. Nor was this observance of Sunday by the Christians as a holiday, or feast day, as has been asserted; for proof of which see Sewell's Church History, page 169; Eusebius, page 27; Mosheim, part 2, chap. 4, sec. 4. According to Mosheim, Sunday was unanimously observed in the first century by all the churches; but not unanimously observed in the second century, and in the year 321 the Emperor Constantine enforced its observance. How then could the Papacy think to effect a change which had already been effected.

But the most remarkable feature of this Sabbath question is yet to be told. Turn with me now to the 14th chapter of Revelations, 9th verse. To-day we are told, is the day in which the third angel's message is being delivered to the world. The Seventh Day Adventists have been commissioned with this message. The beast spoken of is the Papacy, and the image of this beast is soon to make his appearance. An amendment is soon to be made to the constitution of the United States, that will enforce the observance of Sunday without respect to creed, or religious faith. Then it is that the United States becomes the image of the beast, or Papacy. The same distinctive feature or mark is common to both the beast and his image, viz: the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath. Now, if the reader has any curiosity to know what his fate will be, for rejecting the message, or who persists in the observance of Sunday after this message has been given, then get your Bible and read the tenth and eleventh verses, and you will know just what your fate will be, just as surely as Mr. Miller knew what would be the fate of those who rejected his message; for the arguments brought to sustain these doctrines are no better than were those of Miller; indeed they are not so good.

It occurs to me that this Book of Revelation is supplemented with a curse to the one who should be guilty of adding to, or taking from the words of the prophecy of that book. It also occurs to me that to force a construction on any portion of the book, which God never intended, for the purpose of building out a creed, is one way whereby the curse might follow; which is another reason why we do not care to unite with the Adventists.

The only argument that ever has, or ever can be brought against Sunday observance, is the absence of a special command. This absence or silence can be accounted for, and do no injustice to our senses, or the Bible either. The early Christians are supposed to have been guided by the Holy Spirit; and being thus guided, a command did not necessarily have to be reduced to writing to make it law. It was not until the Spirit of Christ had ceased to strive and guide that a written law became necessary. The facilities for writing in those days were not so good as they are now; therefore the injunction of the apostle to hold fast the traditions which they had been taught, by word, as well as epistle, (2 Thes. 2:15). The Scriptures tell us that if all the things which Jesus did and taught had been written, the world itself could not contain the books; (or bear the expense of their publication); and if this be true with the Savior, how much more true with the Apostles.

We do not feel competent to do this subject justice, and as we are not quite certain that what we have written contains merit enough to insure it a place in the Herald, we will close; but before doing so, candor would compel us to say, that not all the doctrines of the Seventh Day Adventists are sustained as the above. They are under no necessity of forcing a construction on any portion of the Word of God to prove that immersion only is baptism; or that a moral life is necessary to salvation; or that there is nothing a man can do to advance or secure his salvation.

Some years ago we read in one of the public journals, a protest made by a Chinese nobleman residing in California, protesting against the Christian religion being preached to the Chinese, either in this country, or in their own land, for the reason that when a Chinese becomes a Christian he is a worse citizen than he was before. We said at the time, and we say now, that the gospel of the Son of God never had that effect on a Chinese or any body else; and we believe that this effect is the result of that pernicious doctrine that there is nothing a man can do to save himself, but that he is saved by grace alone. We admit that we are saved by grace, but it is not until we have resigned our will to the service of God that we have any claim on the grace of God for salvation; hence the necessity of knowing what that service is.

TRUTH vs. ERROR.

Seventeen English companies with a combined capital of $20,650,000, have been formed and are being formed, for operating in cattle and similar enterprises on this side of the Atlantic. One company takes South America for its field, and the remainder come to the United States.

Never drive a milk cow faster than a walk.

Liquor is apparently a greater "necessity" for New York City than bread, meat or groceries. There are 9075 licensed saloons and groggeries and about 1000 more of the unlicensed sort. Of bakers there are only 1100, butchers 2500, and about 3700 grocers. And still the liquor men complain of too much interference with their business, though there are twenty-four dram shops to every mile. The arrests for public drunkenness during 1881 and 1882 were 27,050 men and 13,656 women. A procession of these people, preceded by the dealers, would be a rather powerful argument for temperance.

Report of Conference Committee:—To the assembled conference of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, at New Port, for the Southern California District; Greeting: We your committee on report hereby submit the following:

Whereas, at a previous conference here a resolution was passed stating our belief that the work on this coast had been injured by the contradictory writings and teachings of the standing spiritual authorities of the Church, in the east; to which the Herald subsequently asked an explanation, and we were appointed by your honorable body to frame and report a reply at this conference; after due consideration, we hereby submit the following:

We your committee find the writings and teachings referred to as appearing in the Herald at different times, and in tracts to have been on Inspiration of the Bible; Pre-existence; Tithing; Bishopric and Twelve; Zion Gathering; etc.; Authority; Sacramental Feast; and in tracts, "Epitome of the Faith," and "What is truth?" While one teaches the second resurrection to take place after the thousand years and little season; the other teaches before the one thousand, or at Christ's second coming. See part 5, "Epitome," and part 12, "What is truth?" But we are satisfied with the revelation of September 28th, 1882, as tending [?] the matter. And while we believe considerable differences of opinion, and of writings and teachings in the past have existed, we fully believe the house of God is being (wisely) set in order, as he promised; and we rejoice to say we find no differences of writing, or teaching by the First Presiding Elder, in the past or present. And we fully believe it requires time and labor with the aid of the Holy Spirit to bring to pass the promised unity of the faith. We are truly pleased with the present progress and status of the Church; and heartily bid our noble weekly Herald, "God speed." And its truth-bearing story, and unswerving Editor, shall have our faith and prayers, as he has our confidence and love. And while we think it wisdom to refrain from discussing or stirring up strife respecting any one in his own views, we confidently expect to see discord cease and union prevail until we arrive at the stature and fulness of the measure of Christ.

Signed: by permission, Joseph F. Burton, D. S. Mills, E. J. French.

Resolved that the report of committee on explanation (see report of conference committee) be adopted as the sentiments of this conference, and the secretary be instructed to forward a copy of the same to the Herald as our explanation as asked for.

Resolved, That this conference send Bro. D. S. Mills as delegate to attend the General Conference to be held at Kirtland, Ohio.

Resolved, That the officers of the Northern California District be requested by the president and secretary of this conference to procure and send to the General Church Recorder the record of the Pacific Slope Mission. Supposed to be in the hands of the widow of the late Peter Canavan.

Resolved, That whereas we recognize in Bro. Richard Allen, Bishop's Agent, a Saint of high Christian character, and an officer of integrity and an upright business man; and whereas, he has signified his intention to soon remove to the east, and also has often signified his intention of resigning the office as Agent;

And whereas, it needs in the work in this district one that is active to travel and teach the law of tithing and offerings and collect the same;

Therefore, resolved, if the said Richard Allen, Bishop's Agent, does so remove or resign, that we recommend to the Bishop, Bro. N. W. Best to fill such office.

Resolved, That we believe Bro. D. S. Mills is the man to fill the office of president of Southern California District, and that we will sustain him by our prayers and labors.

Resolved, That we sustain Bro. Joseph Smith as President of the Church; and all the quorums, in their calling.

The following preamble and resolution was offered and passed:

Whereas, We the officers and members of the Lucas Branch of the Decatur District, have evidence and do firmly believe it to be the will of God that Bro. E. B. Morgan should be ordained to the office of an Elder, therefore, be it Resolved, That we recommend Bro. E. B. Morgan to this session of conference for ordination to that office.

The committee chosen to investigate the appeal of Bro. and Sr. James Robinson were authorized to call such witnesses as they may deem necessary.

On motion, and by his request, Bro. Robert Lyle was released from acting on the committee upon which he was appointed; and the chair appointed Bro. E. Robinson to fill the vacancy.

The committee appointed to investigate the matter of grievance presented to the conference by Bro. James and Sr. Sarah Robinson, reported: "After a careful examination of the matter brought before us, we are of the opinion that the parties named in the appeal should have made a public acknowledgment to Bro. and Sr. James Robinson, according to the law as found worded in sec. 42, par. 23, Plano edition of Book of Covenants."

Report of committee adopted and they discharged.

Preaching by Bro. O. B. Thomas on Saturday evening.

Sunday morning a prayer and testimony meeting was held, followed with preaching by Bro. E. Robinson. Two o'clock in the afternoon, met for testimony and sacrament meeting. The ordination of Bro. Evan B. Morgan to the office of Elder was attended to, John Watkins officiating. Preaching in the evening by Bro. E. Banta.

JOHN SCOTT, Librarian.

BORN.

HARDMAN.—At Galland's Grove, Shelby county, Iowa, November 17th, 1881, to John and Francis Hardman, a daughter; blessed March 11th, 1883, by Elder Robt. M. Elvin, and named Clara Pearl.

KEARNS.—At Galland's Grove, Shelby county, Iowa, December 5th, 1882, to Mindred and Laura Kearns, a son; blessed March 11th, 1883, by Elder Jonas W. Chatburn, and named Clyde Wilson.

HAWLEY.—At Galland's Grove, Shelby county, Iowa, January 2d, 1883, to Albert R. and Mary Hawley, a son, blessed March 11th, 1883, by Elder Robt. M. Elvin, and named Aaron Cecil.

HIRST.—At Galland's Grove, Shelby county, Iowa, November 28th, 1881, to John and Melinda Hirst, a daughter; blessed March 11th, 1883, by Elder Jonas W. Chatburn, and named Letta May.

SHAW.—At Galland's Grove, Shelby county, Iowa, October 11th, 1882, to Fredric N. and Mary A. Shaw, a son; blessed March 11th, 1883, by Elder Robt. M. Elvin, and named Samuel Nelson.

DIED.

DILLEE.—Near Palacky, Kansas, February 20th, 1883, Gertrude, infant daughter of G. W. and sister Mary A. Dillee.

"Yes, we trust thee blessed Jesus
And rely upon Thy word;
That we'll meet our little Gertrude,
In the Paradise of God."

EDWARDS.—At Omaha, Nebraska, March 12th, 1883, of pneumonia, after an illness of two days, Bro. Edward T. Edwards. He was born in Mayrthyr Tydvil, Wales, April 29th, 1821. He was baptized in Wales, about the year 1838, and emigrated to Utah in 1849. In 1860 he went on a mission to his native land, returning in 1863. He was baptized into the Reorganization in 1866, by Elder Thomas Job, removed to Omaha in 1867, where he has remained. He was chosen president of the branch four years ago, which duty he endeavored to fill with godly zeal, until his death. His soul was wrapt up in the work. He was not ashamed of it. He took great delight in defending it before all classes. He died with a bright hope that all was well, and as we stood looking at his quiet form as he passed away, a peaceful smile dwelling upon his face, a desire went out to God that our "end might be like his." He leaves a wife and five children whose grief is great. Funeral services were conducted at the Saints' Chapel, before a crowded house by Elder

R. C. Elvin; after which the body was delivered into the hands of the Order of Odd Fellows, of which he was an honored member, who conveyed it to its last resting place. Thus another faithful servant of God has gone to swell the number who are waiting for the coming of the Lord.

The following was adopted by the Branch:

Memorial of esteem for our brother, E. T. Edwards, who departed this life March 12th, 1883, and an expression of condolence with his bereaved wife and children. Whereas: God in his wisdom hath seen fit to remove from our midst, by the hand of death, our beloved brother E. T. Edwards; and Whereas: we deeply sympathize with his bereaved family in their great distress; and Whereas: we as a church feel that we have lost a faithful brother from our ranks, one whose soul was wrapt up wholly in the latter day work and in the welfare of his family, by ties stronger than death; Therefore, be it resolved, that while as a church we humbly bow to the will of God we feel that we have lost a faithful brother and the church an able and consistent minister of the gospel, one who was not ashamed of his religion before the world; whose example was always that worthy of a Saint of God; whose unflinching and tireless labors we shall ever remember with gratitude; and whose memory we shall ever cherish for his fearless advocacy of the right and opposition to wrong; and while we deeply mourn his loss, yet "we sorrow not as one without hope;" for we are assured that "our loss is his eternal gain," through Christ our Lord; and when the trump of God shall sound and the dead in Christ shall rise, that he shall be among those that will shout, "Victory," over the power of the grave; which was his great desire often expressed with tears. And we fervently pray that God will pour into the soul of our sister and her children the Spirit of peace; that he will be their stay and staff until death; and we further pray that in common with all his brothers and sisters in Christ, may so live as to be privileged to enjoy the society of our brother, where God and Christ eternally dwell.

HAWKINS.—Near Plattsburg, Clinton county, Missouri, March 8th, 1883, after ten days' sickness, Sister Elizabeth Hawkins, aged 70 years, 8 months and 9 days. She was born June 27th, 1812; was baptized May 7th, 1876, by Bro. Wm. Summerfield, and has lived the life of a Saint, as nearly as she could. She bore a faithful testimony, and said she was ready to depart, for she knew she would be much better off. She was sensible that the time for her departure had come, and when the change came, she said "Thank God, I am happy. I prayed this morning that this might be my last day on earth, and so it will." And so it was, for at five o'clock and thirty minutes, she departed without a struggle. She was respected by all who knew her. Funeral sermon by Bro. William Summerfield, from 1st Cor. 15:22.

"Now thou art gone, we'd not recall thee,
From a land of perfect bliss;
To share with us the joys and sorrows,
In a world so cold as this." A. S.

HANNA.—At Buchtel, Athens county, Ohio, March 10th, 1883, little Johnnie P., son of brother Samuel D. and Margaret Hanna; aged 15 months and 5 days; his death was caused by putrid sore throat. Funeral service by Bro. Robert Wiper.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. D. S. CRAWLEY has been trying to get a hearing at Weir, Kansas, secured the refusal of two denominational chapels, and then took a school house and by invitation a public hall. The alleged cause of refusal was that Bro. D. S. "unchristianized the churches." What a confession. That a man teaching the Scriptures can "unchristianize" a church. Is the Church of Christ so easy dethroned? Daniel of old prayed the mouths of lions shut—and a second Daniel succeeds in praying the chapel doors shut—we hope by a similar trust in God.

Bro. Wm. Anderson of Oakland, California, is having a hot time with Rev. Dr. Healey, who ungraciously attacked the church, and then graciously slid out of controversial reach because he did not wish to "give notoriety to any obscure advocate of Mormonism," by a discussion. The Oakland Independent gives both sides a hearing for an issue, or two.

A situation as a school teacher, in a locality where the English and German are required to be taught, is wanted by a brother now in St. Louis, Missouri. Any one needing the services of such a teacher, or any one who knows where such a situation can be obtained, will confer a favor by conferring with Bro. R. D. Cottam, No. 209 North 17th street, St. Louis, Missouri.

Elder Alfred White, for many years in business at Edenville, Iowa, says he has bought a place in Independence, Mo., and has moved there.

Bro. E. Downey, of Star, Nebraska, in renewing his subscription for the HERALD expresses his thankfulness for its weekly visits, as it is his only preacher. He wishes the prayers of the Saints.

We learn by the St. Joseph Herald of the 1st inst., that Elder Mark H. Forscutt of that city, was to lecture in the Court House, the third of a series on "Science and the Bible. The subject for that evening was "Light."

Sister Eliza A. Mann of Arlington, Reno county, Kansas, desires to know if there are any Saints in the region of country where she lives, or in adjoining counties. She would also like to unite with the nearest branch, having been in Kansas for five years past, and not had opportunity to join any branch yet. We do not know whom to refer her to, but hope that some one not far distant will see this, and either write to or visit her. Address as above.

Sr. Ellen Platt of Denver, Colorado, sends the money and name of a new subscriber for the HERALD, and says she hopes we may have a good time at General Conference. Thanks for the kindly wish. It is gratifying to see the interest taken in extending the circulation of the HERALD: every week swells the list.

WE write this on the eve of starting for Kirtland to attend the Annual April session of conference. We leave home and our duties at the Herald Office under circumstances calculated to disturb and distress. The late defalcation, the consequent disarrangement of business, the fact that we have no associate editor to leave in charge, the hurry and worry of the past month, and the pending of apparently discordant matters that elders expect to bring before the session and urge their settlement, with the small probability that such settlement can by any possibility please, or satisfy both, or either party, all go to make our absence though imperative suggestive of annoyance. That there is prestige to be gained by the meeting of conference at Kirtland is quite certain; but it is possible that the prestige may be bad, should the actions of the brethren, who make claim to be the servants and apostles of peace and "Good will to men," show them to be "lovers of self," "heady," and bent upon having their own will to govern the body. It is certainly incumbent upon all who attend at Kirtland and all who remain at home, who have faith in this latter day work, to exercise wise discrimination, and so conserve the good of the whole body that no prestige for evil shall follow the Kirtland conference.

All correspondents with the office and those whose credits and changes may not have been properly made and given by our late secretary, must be patient. We are doing all we can do, or have done that no one shall suffer, and all shall be attended to in time. We have run out of certain of the books and can not get them in time for conference, as some desire. A box of sheets of the Harp went astray between the office and Chicago, and thus defeated our getting them bound for conference, and we have none to take with us. It may be said that we "should have provided in time." Possibly this is true; so we thought we had provided, but sales at the office were heavier than we had looked for and so our supply fell short. We will however strive to catch up and be prepared for extra calls hereafter.

WE give the following as a matter of news to the Saints:

THE REVISED VERSION.

THERE HAS FOR MONTHS BEEN NO DEMAND FOR IT IN CHICAGO.

That the "revised edition" of the New Testament has not proven the great success expected, so far as its circulation is concerned, is a fact that is admitted by all extensive book-dealers and publishers of religious books. This is perhaps accounted for by the reason that the generality of theologians and church-going people prefer to adhere to the old version, and their sincere belief that there is a place of everlasting punishment, and that that place should be called "hell." Doubtless they consider that the book which has satisfied their ancestors all these hundreds of years will in turn serve them, and that there is no need of their resorting to a more modern revision of the Holy Word. Be that as it may, the fact remains that the sale of the "old version" that has been in vogue for centuries has not been in the least impaired, except for a short period; while there is but little or no demand for the revised edition. When the new edition was first published by the Oxford Press in England there was an immense demand for the work, and millions of copies were sold. Quite an interest was taken in the work by theological students; but it proved only transitory, as there is hardly a single minister in Chicago who uses the new edition in the pulpit beyond an occasional reference to elucidate more fully the obscure passages occurring in portions of the old version.

A Tribune reporter called on several of the most prominent book dealers yesterday, and questioned them with regard to the sales of the revised work, and without a single exception all of them replied that the demand had dwindled down to almost nothing. Jansen & McClurg stated that there was a small demand for the new book, although the sale did not in the least interfere with that of the old version. When the new version first made its appearance there was an immense demand for it from people who wished to obtain a copy, as much out of curiosity as anything else and they experienced considerable difficulty in obtaining sufficient quantities to fill their orders. But this did not last over three months, although during that time they disposed of nearly 25,000 copies. The present demand was chiefly from customers who wished it for reference, while those who did not possess a Testament invariably preferred the old version.

The Methodist Book Concern was visited, and the reporter was informed by the Secretary that they did not have a call for the new version more than once or twice a week, although the Bible trade was exceedingly brisk. He stated that they had sold only about 1,500 copies altogether, most of which were of a cheap edition that retailed at twenty cents. They had published a costly edition of the work, which was sold only by subscription, but it had not proven a success, as the demand was principally for the standard version.

At F. H. Revell's and the Baptist Tract Society a statement was made to the same effect, and the reporter became convinced that if the revisers ever expected a permanent demand for the fruits of their labor they were doomed to disappointment, as the revised edition of the New Testament was simply a drug on the market.

A SEPARATE AND HOSTILE SECT

The leading New York papers are giving prominence to an application made by representatives of the sect commonly called "Josephites" to the Secretary of State, for a modification of the silly circular letter of Secretary Evarts to foreign governments in relation to "Mormon" emigrants. The Evarts document only excited ridicule at home and abroad, and is not of the least practical importance. The "Josephites" are simply seeking a little notoriety and to loom up with prominence on the rising tide of "Mormonism." The circular letter has no effect upon them, but it offers a convenient pretext for their leader to pose before the country as the head of a sect and an opponent of polygamy.

The New York Sun, commenting on the "Josephite" application to Secretary Frelinghuysen for a modification of the circular letter, so as to distinguish between their sect and the "Mormon" Church in Utah, says, as reported by telegraph:

"So long as the true Mormon Church of which Elder Smith speaks permits the polygamous branch to stand as the type of Mormonism by reason of the prominence which the enormity of its practices gives it, so long he and his anti-polygamist brethren will have no grievance against the Federal Government. Let them stamp out polygamy, and then the United States Government will probably modify its request that foreign powers prohibit the emigration of Mormons to this country."

It is always funny to note the remarks of newspaper men upon anything relating to "Mormonism." They will not take the trouble to learn anything about it, but are ever ready to give advice and moralize upon it in blissful unconsciousness of their own ignorance and folly. The idea of the Josephites either "permitting" this Church to "stand as the type of Mormonism," or "stamping out polygamy," is the height of absurdity. The Sun, before venturing to give counsel on this matter ought to have learned some facts concerning it. The "true Mormon Church," as it styles the "Josephite" sect, had no existence a few years ago. The Church which the Sun wants it to regulate had flourished over thirty years before the "Josephite" sect was attempted to be set up. Plural marriage had been introduced as a doctrine of the "Mormon" Church nearly twenty years before the "Josephites" set up their milk-and-water opposition society, and their "permission" or "stamping out" would have about as much effect on the "Mormon" Church as the Sun's permission to the Government of the United States to govern the District of Columbia, or the blowing of a tin whistle against a prairie fire.

The Sun ought to learn that the sect represented by the son of the martyred seer is bogus "Mormonism." It has nothing to do with the Church established by Joseph Smith the Prophet. It is a new creation out of discarded elements; a gathering of excommunicated particles galvanized into temporary life, responsive to the misuse of an honored name; a poor imitation of a divine system, and lacking its essential qualities. It is a separate, distinct and hostile faction, utterly unconnected with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and having no power over it or effect upon it in any way whatever. How ridiculous, then, for the Sun to require it to "stamp out" anything pertaining to "Mormonism," or to hold it responsible for anything relating to Utah life!

The New York Herald, touching on the same subject, suggests that;

"Since the 'Mormons' have a large membership on the Society Islands it might be well for them to bid a long farewell to a country which never did thoroughly appreciate them, and migrate in a body to that more sympathetic locality."

We are much obliged for the kind suggestion, but Utah suits us pretty well, thank you. We came here to stay. We have become so much accustomed to lack of sympathy from the pious "Christians" of the East that we manage to get along very well without it, and even to feel that the friendship and fellowship of people who practice the social abominations which fairly saturate the centres of civilization, are not particularly desirable to a community who have come out from Babylon that they may not partake of her sins nor receive of her plagues. It is true that the country never did appreciate nor understand us. But we are willing to bide our time, assured that the day will come when the wise will understand and the just and the upright will appreciate us and our doctrines and mission. Till then, we take our stand in the mountains, and have no fear either of sensational newspapers, bogus churches, or sententious and absurd official circulars.

The foregoing is from the Deseret News for March 16th, and should be as mirth provoking for the ignorance of the facts in the case, as the article from the New York Sun.

If the Mormonism that flourished from 1830 to 1844, the truth of which was attested by the blood of Joseph and Hyrum Smith in their death at Carthage Jail, was "bogus Mormonism," then that "sect represented by the son of the Martyr" is "bogus Mormonism," and if the faith, tenets, doctrines and practices of that church which existed and flourished from 1830 to 1844, under Joseph Smith, its first presiding officer, constituted it a bogus institution, then is the "sect" represented by the son of the martyred Seer a bogus sect, for that sect holds, teaches, and practices in accordance with the principles of faith under which that original church flourished. Is the Utah embodiment of dogmatism prepared to say that original Mormonism was "bogus?"

If it is always "funny to note the remarks of newspaper men upon anything relating to Mormonism;" then there is something to create a smile, a grin, a laugh at the "ignorance" and "folly" exhibited by the Deseret News; for it surely should know (if it does not it is because its editor is wilfully ignorant) that the "sect" ("the Josephites") has existed ever since 1852 as an organization, and that the "son of the martyred Seer" has been actively posing "before the country as an opponent of polygamy" ever since 1860.

The church which the New York Sun wants regulated, was organized with Brigham Young at its head somewhere about 1847; and its chief distinguishing tenet, polygamy, did not become such until August, 1852; and the editor of the News shows lamentable ignorance of facts when he asserts that this was nearly twenty years before the "Josephite sect" was set up.

If the Sun is not to be excused for being ignorant in regard to the facts of Mormonism, what excuse can the editor of the News possibly make for equal if not worse ignorance on the same subject. The HERALD has been published as the organ of the sect which the News calls "Josephite," since January, 1860, now over twenty-three years, and during that entire period has occupied the same ground touching Utah's distinguishing doctrine.

The News is decidedly ignorant in another thing. The "Josephite sect" is not a "separate, distinct and hostile faction" to the "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints," as that church was set up and organized by command of God upon divine law, but is the legal and true representative of that church, and is now demanding recognition as such and will be heard. And it is because of such legal representative existence that the "Josephite sect" asks the Government of the United States to relieve it of disabilities imposed upon it by action against a church professing and practising a perverse and abominable doctrine in the sacred name of that original church. Nor is the "Josephite sect" a "gathering of excommunicated particles" from the Utah Church, its original members having been constituent elements of the Church in the days of Joseph and Hyrum, against whom no legal church tribunal had ever moved by process or indictment, and who neither swerved from their first confession of allegiance to Christ, as taught from 1830 to 1844, nor accepted the corrupting rule of Brigham Young or the tenet of plural marriage. To these have been added thousands who quietly stood still until the Lord lifted up the "standard" against the "iniquity" that came in "like a flood."

That the "Josephite sect" is a "separate, distinct and hostile faction, utterly unconnected with" the Polygamist church of Utah, is precisely what we have been persistently trying to beat into public recognition, and it was for this very purpose that we went to Washington, and placed the matter before Secretary Frelinghuysen, and tried to call attention to the fact of such distinct separation from the Utah dispensation; and what just cause of complaint can the News have to such procedure? If there is a distinction, and the Utah church recognizes it, and the Reorganized Church recognizes it, but the public and the Governments abroad will not, because the Home Government does not, why in the name of common sense can objection be made to the Reorganized Church asking that public opinion and the Government correct themselves.

Who knows best whether the "Josephite sect," the Reorganized Church, is affected by the Evarts letter, silly or wise, C. W. Penrose, editor of Deseret News, in his Utah home, or the elders of the sect asking relief, who are abroad in the world asking to be heard for the cause of original Mormonism. Is it not strikingly singular that the people everywhere persist in classing all believers in the mission of Joseph Smith, and the Book of Mormon, as Mormons and polygamists; and therefore unfit to be heard; and that the Utah Mormons should class us as enemies to Mormonism, opposed to plural marriage, and for that reason pestiferous, blatant and unfit to be heard. On the one hand Sectarianism bawling at us, "Mormonism! Joe Smith! Polygamy! Devilish and accursed!" And the other, the Utah Church, hailing us with "Apostate," "Separate and hostile," "Bogus Mormonism;" the one side consigning us to the devil because we are not of them, and the other because we are. It would almost appear that neither the devil of Mormonism, (if there is one), nor the devil of Sectarianism, (if there is one), can endure the Reorganized Church.

BRO. JOSEPH F. McDOWELL and another of the brethren have succeeded in getting an uproar started in Dubuque, Iowa, as will be seen by a reading of the following spicy correspondence in the Dubuque Telegraph, for March 21st and 22d:

Editor Telegraph:—In last evening's issue, under the caption: "Vox Populi"—"Something Strange," the writer holds himself responsible for the following: "The Rev. J. F. McDowell, in company with another minister, entered our city on last Wednesday. An effort has been made to obtain the occupancy of some of the chapels, and they have been denied the use of them on the grounds that the gentlemen are not orthodox." * * * Who is this Rev. McDowell and the other minister that came to town last Wednesday? They are no less than two "Mormon elders" sent out to proselyte the unwary and make converts to the "Mormon faith." Have we not had trouble enough with this lawless, unprincipled, law-defying class of citizens that stoop to anything to carry their point, as a class living in open violation of the laws of the land and making their boast of it, defying the government to put it down?

But "Citizen" says "his doctrine is only that of the New Testament." I would ask "Citizen" if he ever knew of any evil being started without having some good mixed with it? The lower and more contemptible the sin the greater the necessity to have it "sugar-coated." Satan had a plausible excuse for Eve before she would partake of the forbidden fruit. The devil, while tempting Christ, quoted from the same scripture that told of Jesus' coming, His life, death, etc., but he was careful to quote only what would answer his present purpose. Our Savior saw his wily scheme, and answered him accordingly. Again, "Citizen" says Mr. McDowell "endorses no creed, is thoroughly liberal in his views." So is the devil. He is one of the most liberal characters in this world of ours. He gives us the liberty to commit any sin however damnable and brutal it may be. This is one feature of Mormonism, judging from its past history.

Again he says, "He has occupied some of the pulpits of the most prominent churches" where he has traveled. So has his counterpart, his em-com-mitted and sanctioned by them, too numerous to mention here? Let their Rev.—answer these questions before they complain of the people for looking after their families, especially the happiness of their daughters. We have seen ployer, the enemy of all righteousness.

But for the facts, which are somewhat different from those started in yesterday's issue: A meeting was called for the trustees of the chapel on West's hill to consult and decide whether they would let the Mormon elders hold a series of meetings in it or not. It was purely a trustees' meeting and no others had any business there. Notwithstanding this the two "elders" and their forces were there; bound to have the chapel. A majority of the trustees thought differently. Another false statement of "Citizen" is that they had been promised the use of it. It is strictly against the by-laws of the society to have it used for any such purpose. Well, what about Mormonism? "By their fruits ye shall know them." Go to New York where it started. From there follow it to Ohio. What drove it from there to Illinois? and from there to Salt Lake? What about "the Mountain Meadow Massacre" and other murders too many wolves putting on (or trying to put on) sheep's clothing. The proceedings in congress for the past few years ought to be enough to open the eyes of every honest, sensible man not to invite a tigress to play with his children.

CONSISTENCY.

Mr. Editor:—I deem it but an act of common courtesy that I be permitted to respond to "member of West Hill's chapel." It was a specimen of the most inconsistent "consistency" I have had the privilege of meeting. When men will stoop to vituperation and expressions of virulency they transcend the limits of that character that necessarily attaches to a gentleman, to say nothing of a Christian.

He says that the "other minister" and myself are no less than two "Mormon elders." This we deny. We have no affiliation with any society by that name. We are not baptized in the name of Mormon nor do we endorse any teachings outside of Christ's. Our doctrine is not "sugar coated," it is exclusively Christ's doctrine. "Consistency" seems to breathe forth language similar to ancient Pharisees whose forte in argument was vile misrepresentation of facts, and expression of unwarranted assumptions. He would even make me act the part of a hypocrite, presenting my speech as I did in the Opera House last year against polygamy—and now be one of the polygamist clan. The gentleman is "away off the track," and makes an assertion that has no basis in truth or fact!

We are as liberal as Christ. We have placed our brains in no "cast iron box" via endorsing a narrow dogmatic creed. God never established any such thing. If what we teach is error, then Christ taught error.

We look upon the Mormon leaders in the west as "lawless." Their polygamist and kindred evil doctrines are "unprincipled," "law-defying" in their nature. But, that we are in anywise connected with the damnable heresy, we most emphatically deny. I will not rest under any such vile, base and unprincipled charges. I rise up in all my moral and religious dignity and deny the charge of any identification with any system of moral filth and religious degradation. We believe polygamy to be whoredom—and hence a great crime. The text books of our society denounce it as an abomination before God and man. Our society aided in the passage of the Edmunds bill; and two leading men, ministers of our society, were at Washington recently and were introduced and recommended as worthy of a hearing in our emphatic work against Utah abomination, by Senator Allison, I believe, and other honorable gentlemen.

We invite investigation—criticism. We take no one in an unwary manner. We are not responsible for the Mountain Meadow massacre—neither is our society. I am indignant at such charges as "Consistency" makes, because they are implacable. We appointed service at West's Hill chapel by vote of the congregation, and the trustees entered and prevented our filling the appointment, and the congregation assembled were respectable, honorable people. No trustees' meeting had been appointed for that evening. We held services in a dwelling of one of Dubuque's highly respected citizens on last evening.

Whether the member wrote as a "Christian" or a gentleman is hard to determine. It is a fair specimen of "orthodox" out-bursts, but it lacks logic, lacks argument, most decidedly.

J. F. McDOWELL.

Editor Telegraph.—"Could 'nt have the Chapel" is the heading of a local item in yesterday morning's Times. In justice to the gentlemen referred to, and in a spirit of charity to all, I beg the use of your columns to answer.

A couple of ministers representing the reformed church of the Latter Day Saints (a society bitterly antagonistic to Utah Mormonism and polygamy) were passing through the city enroute to their annual conference in Ohio. While stopping in the city a few days to visit friends and relatives, they were invited by some of the residents of West's Hill to preach Sunday evening in the Union chapel there. The invitation was accepted, and the under-signed had the pleasure of listening to the sermon, which was an able discourse eloquently delivered, and therefore very entertaining.

At the close of the services, an expression of the congregation was taken in regard to continuing the meetings through the week, which resulted in a unanimous vote in favor of it. Services were then announced for Monday evening. They went at the appointed time, to find the board of trustees in session, discussing the advisability of allowing these ministers the use of the chapel. After considerable discussion pro and con a vote was taken which resulted by one majority in refusing the use of the chapel. Previous to this decision the gentlemen, being present, announced they would preach from the New Testament; teach nothing but what Christ taught; that their theme was Christ and Him crucified. I have since had the pleasure of listening to two of their discourses, and find they have kept their word. They are able preachers and I believe Christian gentlemen, and I as well as many other members of the association regret that so narrow and illiberal a policy has been adopted by our trustees, as we entertain a spirit of toleration toward all religious societies. Heretofore our chapel has been open to all denominations and creeds, which is the true spirit and intent of the constitution and by-laws governing the association, so much so that no more than two trustees are allowed to be chosen from the same church; and therefore, we hold that no exception to the rule should be made with these gentlemen unless it should be found they were teaching immoral doctrines, which, verily, is not the case as far as my ability to judge is concerned. And to-night they will hold services in our parlors, and we are not Mormons either; and possibly our morals will compare favorably with those of some of our neighbors who voted against the use of the chapel.

A. W. HOSFORD.

SOME one who fails to sign his name, writes us from Calistoga, (California, we presume), complaining of us for not paying attention to letters, communications and questions, written for the HERALD. The same writer in his letter asks several questions, two of which have been heretofore pointedly replied to in the HERALD, and that too in a late issue. The Saints should all remember that no attention will be paid to letters, communications and questions, of which we do not know the writer by name, at least. The name of the author, or sender, must accompany communications, letters or questions, in all cases. The writer who so complains, neither signs his name, nor puts county or state on his letter in its inscription. If other letters and questions to which he says no attention has been paid were sent in a similar way, they went where this one goes—into the waste basket.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

In a late letter, Bro. William France of Coffeyville, Kansas, says:

All is well with us. Bro. J. T. Davis is with us again, preaching in the school-houses around, and the people are getting more light. The debate opened the eyes of some, and Bro. John is letting more light in. May our father bless all that go up to conference with a spiritual blessing, is my prayer.

Bro. William A. Moore, recently moved from Ford county, Illinois, to Naponee, Franklin county, Nebraska, in writing to the office, says:

Should any of the Elders pass through this county, I should be happy to have them call on me. I live one mile south and half a mile west from Naponee, on the B. and M. road.

A worthy example. Bro. R. Goreham of Sonora, Iowa, in writing for the Inspired New Testament and the Voice of Warning to be sent to his friends in Canada, says;

I was in South Mountain, Canada, this winter on a visit, and came home a few days ago. I left a number of friends and relatives searching after the light of the gospel, by the aid of the Book of Mormon and the history of the Church. I am looking forward to a time when some Elder will be able to do a good work in that part of Canada.

Bro. D. S. Bowen, in writing from Independence, Mo., on the 2d inst., says:

I am sick and very feeble now, I wish your prayers, and the prayers of the Saints, that I may be healed. My father was an Elder in an early day in the Church, and I was born and raised in the Church. I have never had a moments doubt about the work being true, for which I give thanks to Almighty God.

A correspondent asks:

"The question so often mooted as to the official standing of Deacons and Teachers, suggests the further query: What priesthood do Deacons and Teachers hold? Will some one please answer."

GLEN EASTON, West Virginia,

March 30th, 1883.

Brother Joseph.—As I learn through the Herald that the good work is prospering in almost every place, I thought it might interest some of the many readers to learn how the work is prospering in our place. Truly the Lord has set his hand here again to build up his church, and we have been abundantly blessed this Winter; and if ever any one had reason to be thankful it is I, for every day I live I feel more established in the work. Through the goodness of my Good Father I was permitted to meet with the Saints at our quarterly conference at Lampsville, Ohio; had quite a good time while there, met with several Saints, and a good spirit prevailed throughout the entire conference. Among the rest I met old Brother Ellis; it did me much good to see him once more, as I had almost given up ever meeting him again in this life; his exhortation to the Saints was good. I spent a week visiting with the Saints, and felt much strengthened.

When I came home I found Bro. Hiram Robinson here, holding meetings; he remained with us a week, and had the pleasure of baptizing five more into the kingdom, and built up the Saints. We all felt to rejoice, and all felt loth to see him leave; he has done a good work here at this place. One of the five baptized was my daughter, which gives me more reason to rejoice in this good work; which I have proved in days that are past that it is of God. I have had many testimonies, and am thoroughly convinced that God is unchangeable, as I have seen his power manifested in many different ways. I can not doubt his word for one moment, when I think of his goodness to me.

We have prayer meetings twice a week, with a good turnout of the world; there are more here that are convinced of the truth, and I think will obey ere long. We hope to have an Elder come soon after conference.

Ever praying for the redemption of Zion, and that much good be done at General Conference, I am your sister in the one faith,

CAROLINE WAYT.

CENTRAL HOUSE, Cal.

March 10th, 1883.

Beloved Saints.—I wish to add my testimony to the many of the work of God, that in his mercy he has made known to the world in these last days, for the gathering of his people. I feel to rejoice in the hope of the gospel of the blessed Savior. There has not been much preaching here; there are some who would receive the truth who talk favorably. Brethren there is no trouble in getting a house, a good school house, which is free to all. There is one dear sister within a half mile who is a firm believer in the latter day work and joins with me in writing to you. We hope that Zion's children will be gathered in the own due time of the Lord.

Your sisters:

SARAH CHESTER.
MARY GRISWOLD.

RIVERTON, Iowa,

Bro. Joseph Smith:—We are still battling for the truth as contained in the gospel of Christ. We expect Bro. E. C. Briggs to-night to preach to us; he comes from Nebraska City.

In the gospel,

L. C. DONALDSON.

HORNERSTOWN, New Jersey,

March 26th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—On Sunday last, Brn. Bond, of Michigan, and J. A. Stewart, of Philadelphia, were with us. We held two meetings, Bro. Bond preaching at three o'clock in the afternoon, and Bro. Stewart occupying the evening. The attendance at the afternoon meeting was fair and the sermon excellent. In the evening, our little hall was well filled, and Bro. Stewart acquitted himself well. The writer, as well as all the Saints and friends to the work in this neighborhood, have been desirous of seeing Bro. Joseph; and when we heard that he was no farther off than Philadelphia, we hoped that he would be able to reach our little village; but it was not to be. A few of the Saints here have been talking of attending the Conference at Kirtland, but they now fear that they will not be able to get there. Ever praying for Zion's weal,

I remain yours in bonds,

W. H. BROWN.

BLOOMERY, Hampshire Co., Va.,

February 4th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I cherish the good reading in those papers as better to me than gold, for gold could not satisfy my hungering and thirsting after righteousness as does the truth contained in them and in the works of God. I love this latter day work, and rejoice in the truth, although I never see a Saint, or hear song or sermon; but this is evidence of God's truth; it gives me constant peace and strength, such as nothing else in this broad land can give.

Your sister in hope of Christ,

E. P. KEARNS.

OMAHA, Nebraska, March 26th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—Our conference adjourned last night, after a peaceful and profitable session. The number of Saints present from outside of this city was very small, but an unusual number of non-members was present. Bro. W. M. Rumel was elected president of the district, and although young in years, he has made a reputation that any Saint might be proud of; he has the confidence of the Saints, which is an element of success; and we look forward with pleasure to the future, confident that he will bring about changes that will cause the work to receive a new impetus in this district; and with the hearty co-operation of the officers of the branch, we can expect that the cheering news from one end of the district to the other will be heard, that the work is upward and onward, and the Saints rejoicing in the gospel. But we do not expect this state of affairs will be brought about in a few months: it will take time and patient labor to accomplish it.

Bro. H. Nielson preached on the law of tithing on Sunday morning, and it was a noble effort on his part, and the Saints felt satisfied that the law of tithing was the best financial system to be governed by; far better than theories of men; in it they saw wisdom and justice.

Bro. N. Brown preached in the afternoon, after which Bro. Rumel was ordained an Elder; a number of sick was administered to, and then we had a prayer meeting, in which we greatly enjoyed the Spirit. The afternoon services will long be remembered by the Saints as a day of pleasure, and we believe the beginning of an epoch, in the history of our district that we can look back to with pleasure.

Bro. Brand preached in the evening, his subject being, "Was Joseph Smith a Prophet of God?" The audience listened with profound attention, as he produced the facts of Scripture in support of his statement. The conference was a success, and we are happy to say that when we do our part God never fails to do his.

Yours in bonds,

E. RANNIE, JUN.

GALESBURG, Missouri,

March 19th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—We are pleased to receive the Herald weekly; it is quite a comfort to many who are deprived of the society of the Saints, and the privilege of meetings. Sorry to hear of the loss to the office; but there is no use in fretting over it; only, we hope that you will try and get an honest man next time. We have had no meetings since Brn. A. H. Smith and M. T. Short were here. Three weeks ago I spent the Sabbath with Webb City Saints; enjoyed myself well. The Saints desire to comply with the whole law, but like many more, need constant teaching. Sister Southerland was very low when I was at Webb; I was sent for to administer to her; I learn that through the mercies of God she is getting well, and is able to sit up.

I have not been to Kansas since last conference, but I learned yesterday that the Pleasant View Branch was reviving, which I was glad to hear, for they needed it. I know that the Spirit of the Lord visits me frequently, and brings peace to my soul, and teaches of the future.

Praying for the prosperity of the work of God, I remain your humble brother,

S. MALONEY.

NEBRASKA CITY, Nebraska,

March 23d, 1883.

Dear Herald:—Home again, and an opportunity to rest, with a stack of letters to answer, and reports to make out, and a neglected homestead to fix up. Spent a week at Deloit, and spoke nine times to full house; and while trying to present the evidence of the gospel, the Father in his love gave proof of the work, by sending the Holy Spirit, giving light and point to the word spoken. One night at Dow City, to a full house: most all present manifested an interest; we left Bro. Robt. Montgomery to continue; left the last named place on the 20th in a snow storm, arrived at home about noon, after a disagreeable ride in a smoking car. It is a blessed thing for the lovers of the "weed," that I do not possess the authority of regulating this air-poisoning habit. While talking with a man upon this subject, he was of the opinion, that some would live to see the time when men would go to church, put their heels upon the pews, and smoke their cigars during the preaching. Certainly we are getting there fast.

On my arrival at home I found a telegram from Bro. J. B. Gouldsmith. Next morning took train for a ninety mile ride in response to the telegram; found him very sick with inflammatory rheumatism. After prayer and administration, he arose and sat up, during the evening. Next morning I again administered, and he came down stairs for dinner, for the first time for a week. Yesterday, without any definite reason, went to Plattsmouth; but the occasion of why was clear upon my finding Bro. and Sr. Cazier downcast and afflicted. Surely the God of mercy guides those that trust him.

With a desire to be found ever in the discharge of duty, I remain as ever in the hope of Eternal Life at the end of the race.

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

BUFFALO, Iowa, March 17th, 1883.

Brother Joseph Smith:—A conference for the Eastern Iowa District was held at this place last Saturday and Sunday, and although the attendance was not large, there was a general good feeling, and a revival to good works on the part of the brethren. The president of our district, Bro. Warren Turner, arrived on Saturday evening, and he met with hearty greeting from the brethren here. He is a man of sterling worth, and has the confidence of all who know him.

Elder M. T. Short was with us through the conference, and is here yet, preaching every night; the congregation increases in number, and there has been an unusual interest awakened, which we are hoping will result in good. He will remain with us until Monday morning, when he will depart for Chicago.

Here in Buffalo we are united and hopeful. Honest hearts have been touched, and we are fully persuaded that responses will soon be heard to "the gospel's joyful sound." May He whom we serve bless his servants, and through them the people, is our prayer.

Joined together in gospel bonds, I pray God to bless you, yours, and all the household of faith.

JEROME RUBY.

HOLLISTER, California,

March 26th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I am now returning from San Juan, where I preached twice, yesterday, near there to a few attentive listeners. I also preached in Bitterwater Valley a week ago yesterday, to a fair congregation. Bro. John M. Range is now beginning to shove the gospel plow with force of the Spirit. We in this Central District are going to observe the 8th of April as a day of fasting and prayer for the general welfare and progress of the Church, and while we are fasting, God grant that you and all his people who meet at the Temple may be feasting is my desire.

Yours ever,

J. H. LAWN.

OAKLAND, California,

March 29th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—In consideration of the benefits accruing from the changing of the Herald from a semi-monthly to a weekly issue, with its laden columns of encouragement and truth, we must not omit to notice the impetus the change has brought. The Church has had its varied trials since its reorganization, and each time has been marked for the best; so we feel with regard to the Herald, and take encouragement in the thought that our course is onward.

The year 1883 has so far made a fearful record of catastrophes. The cause assigned by some is the effect of the perihelion period upon the elements; others attribute it to natural causes in the course of events. But to those who believe the revelations of God, consider them ominous of a great event, and the watchword of the day is "Watch and be ye also ready."

The spirit that actuates the body plainly declares a plain rendering of the laws of the Church, and especially the law of tithing,—a principle of the gospel that was much abused by the different factions; and as many of the Saints have had affiliation with some one of them, their minds have been much exercised in that direction. Therefore the necessity of the plain facts being plainly stated, and carefully carried out, in order that their minds may be disabused of the idea that the Church may drift into relentless extravagance. I have no reason for any such doubts. But with the change of the Herald from a semi-monthly to a weekly, dressed in its neat, well arranged columns, laden with the instructions upon the law of tithing, opens up a channel of thought that brings joy in its contemplation, that the key-note of the inseparable principle of the gospel has been touched, and many receive and accept it as glad tidings. It would be needless for me to undertake to expound the law, but suffice to say, I concur in the sentiment and principles put forth by the Bishopric.

Not for one moment casting any reflections upon the work of our honored and much esteemed retired Bishop, who so nobly and faithfully defended the cause by his service and means in the days of the Church's poverty. Then the Church was not in a condition to enter upon its duties. Time and experience were necessary, in order to prepare their minds for the present index of truth.

The many ways adopted to raise means to meet the demands of the Church will now be laid aside, realizing that such demands will only withdraw so much from the Lord's dues, and no credit allowed to the donor as tithing. The Saints will now understand that one-tenth of their yearly increase belongs to the Lord, and that assessment remains with his Saints to levy and collect as seemeth just and right to themselves; and the amount collected must be placed in the hands of the Bishop or his agents, and they receipt for the same. And the Bishop, with the spirit of his office resting upon him, will disburse the same to the best possible good.

Now to my mind, matters in this direction are evolving into a system of business, and when complete, our poor will be cared for, our missions be prosecuted, land purchased, Temples built, and various demands met, that the Church in her now crippled condition can not meet. I believe the Saints only want the modus operandi of the law, rightly interpreted, they will avail themselves of this opportunity of escaping the judgments of God, which otherwise they can not.

The spiritual authorities, whose duties it is to watch constantly over the interests of the Church, know best what should be done, and who are capable of doing the work to the best possible advantage, and when they see the where-with placed at the disposal of the Church, the cause will roll on. This then will beget confidence and faith, and by the exercising of those powers, will remove the non-conductors in the great cable, and light and strength from the Eternal World will flow into every heart. What a favored people we are; what blessings we receive. Day by day we discover renewed evidence of our acceptance with God, and the divinity of the work. My desire is to prove faithful to the last.

As ever, I remain yours in bonds,
WM. ANDERSON.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I am well pleased with the Herald as a weekly messenger. In looking over its pages I find many good and precious things; it is the only preacher we have here. We have not had a sermon of our faith in this vicinity since last May, with the exception of Bro. John Robinson, of Peoria, as he was passing through Alexis, he preached two sermons; it was to us poor Saints like giving bread to the hungry, for we felt that we were perishing for the word of truth. The Spirit rested down upon him with great power. His sermons were something new for the people; it created great excitement. Some said: I wish he would come again; others said they would go fifty miles to hear him preach again. We have done all that was possible for us to do, in order to have preaching; but we feel as though we had failed to get much. I have done all I could in trying to get our faith before the people. I have sent my Heralds among the neighbors, loaned the Book of Mormon and Voice of Warning. Some good honest persons say that they like and believe their teachings, and there are some here that desire baptism. I want to say to Bro. Robinson, that I have seen the directors of the Advent Church; they said when you or any of our ministers wanted to preach here, their doors should be opened again. I saw Mr. Pine; he said he wanted to hear you preach, and if at any time you would send an appointment, he would publish it for you.

Yours in hope of eternal life,
ISABEL GLASS.

Editor Saints' Herald:—I received the Herald of March 10th yesterday, and it is always welcome to my home, and I accept it as a messenger of truth and light; and pray that it may continue to preach the word of God unto man and be able to spread light into darkness, and loudly proclaim the gospel of Christ unto the world; so the honest in heart may be gathered to Zion and there dwell in peace through eternity. I also received the tracts. They came in very handy. It was the Relief Society conference yesterday, and crowds were gathered outside of the Post Office, when I went in there and the tracts were freely distributed. People first took a look at the pamphlet and then at me, and perhaps never knew before that the "Bible versus Polygamy," and that "Polygamy was not an Original Tenet of the Church." The word of light and peace is preached to this people, and what the result will be, God only knows. But I hope and pray that the day is not far off when this people, or at least the honest among them, will find out that they are led astray and will turn unto the path which leadeth to everlasting joy.

The Herald is welcome as a weekly; I am always longing for it, and say, "Come along, dear Herald, I will read and re-read your pages, and when I have got renewed strength from you, I then will send you to those who yet sit in darkness; and hope that you may enlighten their minds, and bring them back to our loving Savior Jesus Christ, who is always willing to receive us." Pray for me that I may be faithful to the end.

Your brother in the gospel,
ANDREW C. NIELSON.

MOUND VALLEY, Labette Co., Kan.,

Bro. Joseph:—You can perceive that I am now preaching in the locality of my late debate. It has made quite a stir among the people here. The Campbellites are not pleased with the way they came out, and they talk of "finding another man;" but if they are wise in their day, and wish to continue their traditions, they had better let it alone, especially if I should be helped of the Master as I was last time. I am holding meetings here every night this week, and shall continue over Sunday. The Seventh-day Adventists are crowing pretty loudly here now, I don't know but we may expect some trouble in the camp from that source. I think all that prevents it now is they are afraid that they have not the "man," smart enough at their command.—We will try to "hold the fort," &c. I held meeting all last week at Hallowell, good hearing. Also previous to that I had a week's meeting four miles north of there. The way opens up before the work, and local brethren and the Saints render all the help they can.

In gospel bonds,
J. T. DAVIS.

HARWICH, Ont., March 26th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—The work of the Lord is still rolling onward, and several have been baptized within the last few weeks. Bro. Gordon E. Deuel has been with us; and a more earnest worker for Christ never stood before a people. He seeks not the noble nor the great ones of earth, but he has been in the streets and lanes and brought in the poor. On the first day of March I saw him baptize one dear sister; and on the 16th he baptized eleven more, making twelve in one place, called Ridgetown, and on Sunday, the 25th, we met and they were confirmed, when we all partook of the Sacrament together. It was a joyful meeting, a day long to be remembered by us. How we were comforted and cheered; and what promises were made to us through our dear Bro. Deuel, while under the influence of the blessed Spirit. He has labored earnestly and faithfully wherever his lot has been cast. We feel grieved that he has to leave us, for there are many investigating; and if he could have staid with us I believe there would be more to obey soon. But our prayer is that God may bless him abundantly for the good he has done.

Brothers and sisters, let us be faithful, for we know that this work is of God; therefore let us strive to live as Saints should do. Judgments are flying through the land; but if we live with an eye single to God's glory, the destroying angel shall pass over us, and we shall find refuge within the ark of safety, for "He is faithful that promised."

Yours in hope of eternal life,

J. LEATHERDALE.

PERRY, Iowa, March 16th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—We are in the enjoyment of pretty good health, and spiritually I am feeling well. My husband has not united with the Church; I hope he will soon. As for me, I love the latter day work more and more, and my faith grows stronger every day. You no doubt remember Sr. Ann T. Goodrich; she and I attended the Des Moines District Conference, held at Edenville, Iowa, 3d and 4th of this month; had a good time. The Saints were blessed and edified. Bro. R. Etzenhouser visited us in February, and Brn. Nirk and Knox came a week after Bro. Etzenhouser was here; but the snow and severe cold weather prevented us from having any preaching, although we were much strengthened and encouraged by the visits of those brethren.

I feel sorrowful indeed over the sad intelligence the Herald of March 10th brought. What a pity it is; I feel that it is a great loss to the Church. All Saints have my prayers and best wishes.

Your sister in hope of eternal life,

S. E. BOUTON.

VOLNEY, Iowa, March 28th, 1883.

Joseph Smith:—There are two or three believers in this true and everlasting gospel living up here in the northern part of Iowa. Although we are surrounded by wickedness on every side, we are trying to live as nearly right as we can. We would like to have an Elder come and preach the gospel in its fullness to the people of our county seat, Waukon. There are three churches there; my brother joined the Baptist, but he says if he is not right he wants to know it. We would try and make an Elder comfortable while here. My husband and myself have not been baptized yet, but will be at the first opportunity. If an Elder comes this way, Monona is our nearest Railroad Station; could find us by inquiring for David McGoon.

I sign myself a believer in the gospel,

MRS. ABBIE FREEMAN.

GOODLAND, Michigan,

March 18th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—We have a nice branch here of twenty, and they are all trying to do their duty and advance the cause which is moving slowly and surely. I baptized two since conference. The prospects are good. I never saw the time since I came into the Church, there was such a call for preaching as there is now. I have five points where I hold meetings and at every point people seem anxious that I shall continue. Many have invited me to come and preach, which I am not able to do. I preach every Sunday once or twice and sometimes during the week. I wish my circumstances were such I could devote my whole time to the cause; I would love to do so. There is great need of more preaching through this part of Michigan. I know of more than twenty points where they want preaching and there is no one to do it. There are several Elders and Priests here, but like myself they have families and can not devote their time to the work. Bro. DeLong is the only one that is at liberty and he has all he can do where he resides and around there. God blesses me whenever I try to preach the word; he is blessing me both temporally and spiritually. When I came into the Church five years ago I was in debt some three or four hundred dollars more than I was worth, but to-day I am almost out and can see my way clear through. I promised God when I got out of debt, I would devote my time to the cause, now I feel as if the time had nearly come for me to go to work. I hope you will pray for me that I may do the Lord's will. I expect to be at conference in April and am praying that God will bless us much.

In the gospel,

JAMES A. CARPENTER.

HERSEY, Mich.

March 26th,

Bro. Joseph:—About four weeks ago I started for the plains stopping over night at Bro. Wheaton's. Next day walked about nine miles mostly through the rain, got to Bro. Reynolds, gave out word for preaching on Sunday and spoke to the people at eleven o'clock with fair liberty, having an attentive congregation. Bro. Joseph Shippy arrived in the afternoon and spoke at night. Here and in another school house four miles from here I spoke four times, and Bro. Joseph Shippy five. I believe there are some on the plains that will obey the Gospel; but all we can do is to sow the seed and leave the result with God.

I had a short conversation with Charles J. Strang's mother. She wants to hear what the Reorganization believes in, and requested me when the roads got good to come up and preach in their school house; as the snow was so deep it made it bad walking now.

We returned home on Monday found Bro. C. Scott busily engaged preaching to the people in our neighborhood. Bro. Scott is well liked here, both by those in the Church and out; and is an able defender of the cause. I hope he will be able to come back again before long, as the calls around here are many, and may God speedily send more laborers into his vineyard, that the many who are now sitting in nature's darkness may have the privilege of hearing the Gospel. My desires are to do all the good I can for my fellow men. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion,

I remain your Brother in Christ,

SALEDA D. SHIPPY.

GOODLAND, Michigan,

March 15th, 1883.

Bro. Joseph:—I have for some time thought of writing to the Herald and tell you how I come to the light of the gospel, and was led to embrace it. I knew little of the Bible, although I had been a member for years of the M. E. Church. I attended meeting one Sunday for the purpose of hearing what I could of the doctrine of Christ, with the intention of making sport of it; but I did not make any sport, because I heard so much truth I could not; but I did not like to own it, and I dared not deny. I wanted to do what was right and was forced to obey because I believed; now I know it is truth. I am trying to do right. I am enjoying what I never did before, or never would had I not obeyed the gospel in its fullness. I intend to defend the cause let what will come. In God I trust. My hope and faith are strong, and the more I read the word of God the stronger I grow, and the more able I am to defend it. I catch it on every hand because of my faith, but the Spirit is with me bringing all things to my remembrance, and giving me the victory. I have learned more of the word of God during the four months I have been in the Church of Christ than I ever knew before, and I am still endeavoring to learn.

Yours truly,

WILLIAM McFADDEN.

Summary of News.

Mar. 30th.—The country west of Silver City, is full of Indians. Several camps along the Gila have been attacked. Probably fifty whites have been murdered in the last four days in Arizona. The Indians threaten the annihilation of all the whites in Grant county.

A messenger from Thomson Canon, eighteen miles north-east of Lordsburg, N. M., gives intelligence of the murder by the Apaches of Judge H. C. McComas, of Silver City.

A party just returned from the scene of the massacre in Thomson's Canon found Mrs. Judge McComas, shot through the head, lying by the side of the buckboard; stripped naked. Judge McComas was found about 200 yards south of his wife, shot in four different places, also stripped naked. Their young son is missing.

In a saloon row at Evansville, Ind., a Deputy Sheriff shot and instantly killed Jackson Wallace, and mortally wounded his 17 year old son.

A book-keeper and a cashier of a wholesale dealer in photographer's material, at New York, are behind the bars for embezzling from their employers $18,000.

The craters of Mt. Etna are again active. The rumblings of the volcano are frequent. Signs of earthquake are evident.

A London, England, firm, cigar importers and general merchants, has failed in £82,000.

The great destitution which for some time has prevailed in the West of Scotland threatens to assume serious proportions. In certain parts of Skye and the western islands the condition of the people is deplorable, for not only are they absolutely devoid of present means of subsistence, but, unless prompt assistance be forthcoming in the shape of funds wherewith to procure seed, corn, and potatoes, nothing can avert an extension and perpetuation of the calamity.

The enthronement of the Archbishop of Canterbury took place yesterday. The traditional enthronement ceremonies were observed. There was a dense crowd in the cathedral. The Archbishop is a High Churchman, but of the moderate order, and in politics a Whig. He now comes into the control of an income of $75,000, with a couple of palaces in which to reside, and the control of hundreds of livings.

A man who carried a box containing explosives and infernal machines has been arrested at London. He had just arrived from Cork. An Irish railway porter, supposed to be an accomplice, has been taken into custody by the police. The explosive material was nitro-glycerine. The infernal machines were most cunningly devised. The post-office is occupied by a force of police, threats being made to blow up the building.

David Whelan an informer, was shot dead at Maryborough, Ireland. Eleven persons were arrested at Castle Connell, charged with intimidation.

Count Von Majlath von Szekehely, President of the Court of Cassation, Hungary, has been found murdered at his residence at Ofen. He had been strangled and his tongue had been cut out. His hands were bound tightly together with ropes. The body was lying on the bed when discovered, but the bedclothes were not disturbed and the Count was not undressed.

Mar. 31st.—The eruptions of Etna have ceased. There are no present indications of earthquake.

Forty Socialists to-day, holding a secret meeting within Spanish lines, were surprised by Government troops. The entire band was captured and sent under a strong guard to Seville.

Reports from the Scottish coast say a terrific and destructive gale visited that section to-day. Three vessels have gone ashore in the vicinity of Aberdeen. There are no reports of loss of life. The damage to property, however, is considerable.

A bark is ashore at Holyhead. A crew of twenty-three persons were drowned.

The bullion withdrawn from the Bank of England on balance to-day was £105,000.

Advices from Tozer, Tunis, say that De Lesseps has arrived there. He says explorations made it plain that an inland sea in the Desert of Sahara is practicable, and it can be accomplished by using a hundred excavating machines equal in the aggregate capacity to the labor of 100,000 men. The projected inland sea in North Africa will cover a basin fifteen times as large as the Lake of Geneva; the moisture engendered by its presence will bring vast tracts of desert land into cultivation, and an approach to valuable forests, now wholly inaccessible, will be facilitated.

The London police are in receipt of a letter purporting to emanate from Fenian sources threatening that unless the men charged with the Phenix Park murders, and now confined in Kilmainham Jail awaiting trial, are at once released, the central telegraph office in London will be blown up.

As a precautionary measure, orders have been issued that the passage which underlies the residence of Premier Gladstone shall hereafter be closed at sunset.

Three hundred and fifty emigrants left Belmullet, County Mayo, yesterday for America. An immense throng of people witnessed the departure.

The Illinois State Supreme Court has rendered a decision which holds the Pullman Palace-Car Company to be nothing but common carriers and subject to all laws governing such. The case came up on appeal from the Appellate Court, and the decision is a sweeping one.

Seven more bodies were recovered yesterday from the Diamond Mine near Braidwood. The proposition to abandon the mine and leave some fifty corpses in it meets with great opposition from the friends of the deceased.

At seven o'clock yesterday morning the night express from Chattanooga to Cincinnati over the Cincinnati Southern Railroad ran off the rails. Half a dozen cars were ditched and at least fifty passengers sustained serious if not fatal injuries. The escape of any of them from immediate death is surprising under the circumstances.

Three legal hangings occurred yesterday, and one of the victims was a woman, and one a boy of seventeen years of age.

April 2d.—David H. Shonts, one of the oldest residents of Kendall county, Illinois, died at Plano yesterday at the age of 74. He was a native of Herkimer county, New York, and came to Illinois in 1842 with scarcely a dollar in his pocket. He had pluck and energy, and succeeded in borrowing enough money to procure a home-stead. He has held various political offices of trust in Kendall county; was a Knight Templar and had attained high degrees in the Order of Odd-Fellows, being the only surviving charter member of the latter society in Plano. Mr. Shonts was a good neighbor, and has conducted and had charge of the funerals of very many of the Saints of Plano. In time of trouble and distress he was ever willing to assist, and do what he could.

A boiler explosion, which resulted in the killing of thirty-one persons, and sixty-five were injured, many of them fatally, is recorded this morning; the scene of the accident being in a small manufacturing town near Paris, France.

Nearly 3,000 bricklayers went on a strike yesterday in Chicago, their demand for an increase of wages of $3.50 to $4.00 per day having been refused by the employers.

The steamer Indiana yesterday, took the first batch of emigrants forwarded free by the British Government to America. The party numbered seventy-five, and was principally composed of persons evicted in Connemara, Ireland.

The War Office, London, has taken the question of explosives in hand with vigor and determination.

Notwithstanding the circular recently issued by the Austrian Home Minister, giving the various authorities urgent instructions to carry out constantly a strict inspection of all the factories, warehouses, and shops belonging to the manufacturers of explosives. It is known that large quantities of dynamite and other explosives have been shipped from Vienna to various points in Russia, evading the watchfulness of the regular and secret police. It is believed that similar shipments are still being made, although the utmost surveillance has failed to detect any of the criminals. A dispatch from Moscow to-night states that Count Warontzoff-Daschkoff, who is making the final arrangements for the coronation of the Czar, has received a number of anonymous letters threatening that all those taking part therein will be annihilated.

The Revolutionary party in Russia has issued a proclamation announcing that preparations are complete to meet the coronation of the Czar, and that they have every hope of success in fully carrying out long-devised plans. The proclamation contains a warning to all persons that they shall, if valuing their personal safety, keep at a distance from the Czar during the ceremony of the coronation. The pronouncement concludes with the words: "We will strike once more for the freedom of Russia." The proclamation is printed in letters of red and bordered with stripes of the same color.

Since the 13th of March forty-eight cases have been reported by the City Health Officer. The disease has also had many victims in other towns in Tennessee.

Scott Oliver shot and killed John Walton at 3:30 yesterday morning in John South's saloon at Bowling Green, Ky., on account of a trifling dispute over cards.

Do to-day's duty; fight to-day's temptation; and do not distract yourself by looking forward to things which you can not see, and could not understand if you saw them. Enough for you that your Savior for whom you fight is just and merciful, for he rewardeth every man according to his work. Enough for you that He has said: "He that is faithful unto death, I will give him a crown of life." Enough for you that if you be faithful over a few things, he will make you ruler over many things, and bring you into his joy forevermore.

MORMONISM VERSUS MORMONISM.

"AN house divided against itself can not stand," said Jesus of Nazareth. True, but "there are gods many and lords many," and yet but "one living and true God," and "one Lord Jesus Christ." Many false Christ's were to arise. But they were false, because he was and is the only true one. So there is genuine Mormonism, and the spurious. "But what is Mormonism, whether true or false?" the honest inquirer asks. We answer, It is either the doctrine of the Book of Mormon—or the doctrine of the compiler of the book, whose name was Mormon, or both. Being a compilation of the books, or writings of several authors, yet called after the name of its compiler, or the "Book of Mormon," it may be as well to call the doctrine of the entire book, Mormonism. Whether the book is a plagiarism of the Solomon Spaulding Romance, or whether an independent production of Joseph Smith, or the conjoint work of Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon; or whether it is what it claims to be, a divinely translated history of a portion of the house of Israel, particularly of a portion of the tribe of Joseph, with the history of other colonies, who came from the eastern hemisphere several thousands years ago, the question is, What is the doctrine of the book, or what is Mormonism?

As the Board of Publication of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints issues several works which treat at length the origin of the book, and show the fallacy of its Spaulding romance origin; and others which present the Bible argument in behalf of the book, the purpose of the present essay, will be to present a few quotations from the book, on a number of doctrinal subjects, which the reader will please compare with similar passages in the Bible; and to then honestly answer this query: If the teachings of the Bible are orthodox and evangelical, must not the same sentiments or teachings, if found in the Book of Mormon be equally orthodox, equally evangelical? Or does truth become error, or remain truth, just as the character, or
