were broken up, then the sea rolled from the north and the windows of heaven were opened, the great arch gave way and fell to the earth. Then we read of the first wind that passed over the earth and of the new covenant, the bow in the cloud. Now if there ever before had been a cloud there would also have been a bow, but now there was a new order of things and a new covenant made in accord, and this because of the wickedness of men, as the Lord had said, His Spirit should not always strive with man. And it has been so ever since the beginning, that men would rather do evil than good, and so reject the strivings of God's Spirit; and so it has continued unto this day. Thus we see that all the ills that have befallen mankind are because they would not nor will not listen to the voice of God's Spirit nor hear and obev the gospel of Jesus Christ,

Many proofs can be given to show that as time passes our earth is going to decay and becoming a barren waste, because of the wickedness of men and the with holding of God's power in nature, as we can learn even by the history of America. The shores of Greenland were once inhabited by a prosperous people, and on that land grew oats, barley, peas and all the products of a north temperate clime. What is it to-day but a barren icy country? This writer has lived on the isles of the St. Lawrence and in Nova Scotia and ofttimes heard the old men say that when they were boys the land was blessed so that it produced abundance and all had plenty, and we find that there and all over

It is not so long ago since we heard of the whirlwinds or cyclones, and when they first appeared the wiseheads said that they had always been in that region of country, but would not be known east of the Mississippi river. But soon thev were heard of in the state of Pennsylvania, and even away down to the gulf coast, making a clean sweep for miles of all that came in their course, and appearing at all untimely seasons of the year; all of which goes to prove that we lost much by the flood and the wickedness of men; and we also learn that if we as a people would be truly blessed we must seek to do God's will in obeying His commandments.

THE "SEALED BOOK."-No. XII.

BY ELDER R. M. ELVIN.

THE St. Louis, Globe Democrat, of April 22d, 1877, contains the following very interesting sketch of the works of the ancient people in Colorado:

"The ancient ruins which are scattered all over this country are some of the greatest unwritten pages of the world's history. This fertile valley has been densely inhabited and highly cultivated by an enlightened race of people centuries ago, while the ruins of the houses, corrals, towns, fortifications, ditches, pottery-ware, drawings, noninterpretable writings, etc., go to show there have been many arts cultivated in those days, which are now entirely lost to the human race. Their houses have been built of most every kind of rocks, from small boulders to the finest sandstone. The finest of these rums, and the most perfect, are located fifteen miles up the Animas river, or about thirty-five miles below Animas City, in a large valley fifteen miles long by seven miles wide, on the west side of the river. This valley has been covered with buildings of every size, the two largest ones being 300 x 6,000 feet, and are about 600 feet apart. They are built of small sandstone laid in adobe mud, the outside walls being 4 feet, and the inside walls from 11/2 to 3 feet. In the lower story port-holes have been built for defense. There are rooms now left and walls for about four stories high still standing. About the second story, on the west side, there has been a balcony along the entire length of the building. No signs of a door are visible in the outer walls, and the ingress must have been from the top, in the inside there being passages from room to room. Most of them are small, from eight by ten to twelve by fourteen feet, the doors being two by four feet. The arches over the doors and port holes are made of small cedar poles two inches wide, placed across, on which the mason-ry is placed. The sleepers supporting the floor are of cedar, about eight inches through and from twenty to fifty feet long and about three feet apart. A layer of small round poles is then placed across the sleepers, then a layer of thinly split cedar sticks, then about three inches of dirt, then a layer of cedar bark, then another layer of dirt, then a carpet of some kind of coarse grass, which forms the floors. The rooms that have been protected from exposure are whitewashed, and are ornamented by drawings and writings. In one of these rooms the impression of a hand dipped in whitewash, on a joist, is as plain as if it had been done only a few days ago. In another room there are drawings of tarantulas, centipedes, horses and men. room in the eastern portion is quite a curiosity, it being perfectly round, and must have been used for a hall. It is about twenty feet across. In some of these rooms have been found human bones, bones of sheep, corn cobs, goods, rawhides and all colors and varieties of pottery-ware. These two large buildings are exactly the same in every respect. Portions of the building plainly show that it has been destroyed by fire, the timbers being burned off and the roofs caving in, leaving the lower rooms entirely protected. rock these buildings have been built of must have been brought a long way, as nothing to compare with it can be found within twenty miles. All the timber used is cedar, and has at least been brought twenty-five miles. Old ditches and roads are to be seen in every direction.

"In conversation with the Navajos in regard to these ruins, they say their fore-fathers came there five old men's ages ago (500 years) and these ruins were here, and the same then as now, and that they have no record of it whatever.

"The only thing to show its age is a date in one of the rooms just opened, which took two men one day to get into, and found on the wall the date of 1225."

Rosengarten, in writing of the Arch of Las Monjas, Palenque, describing the Treasure-house of Arteas" says:

"The base of his treasure-house is circular, and the covering of a dome shape. It does not, however, form an arch, but courses of stone are laid horizontally over one another in such a way that each course projects peyond the one below it, till the space at the highest course becomes so narrow that a single stone covers it. Of all those that have survived to the present day the treasure-house at Arteas is the most venerable." Architectural Styles, p.59.

"In the ruined cities of Cambodia, which lies farther to the east of Burmah, recent research has discovered teocallis like those in Mexico, and the remains of temples of the same type and pattern as those of Yucatan. And when we reach the sea we encounter at Suku, in Java, a teocalli which is absolutely identical with that of Tehuantepec. Mr. Ferguson said, 'as we advance eastward from the valley of the Euphrates, at every step we met forms of art becoming more and more like those of Central America."—Builders of Babel, p. 88.

The above writer evidently thinks that the cities and civilization of ancient America are equal to those of the Old World

WRITINGS.

MacLean, describing the Grave Creek stone says: "The inscribed stone is an oval disc of white sand-stone, nearly circular in form, about three fourths of an inch thick, and an inch and a half in diameter. On one of the flat surfaces are engraved three lines of unknown characters. At the Congress of Nancy, Monsieur Levy Bing made a report of this inscription from an imperfect engraving. He states that after different combinations of the twenty-three letters, I obtain the following result, that is eight Canaanite words, having complete sense; forming a phrase which corresponds admirbaly with the symbol below the inscription."

In regard to the genuineness of this stone he says: "I have carefully gone over the whole of this evidence, both pro and con, and have no hesitancy in declaring that if the authenticity of the Grave Creek Tablet' has not been established, then no reliance can be placed upon human testitestimony."—Mound Builders, pp., of 105.

testimony."—Mound Builders, pp., 91-95.
Colonel James E. Wharton, who examined the stone immediately after it was found, says: "It was a hard, dark grey sandstone, the letters mostly phoenician, and I believe I was the only one present who had ever seen that alphabet, or the Celtic or Bardic, which were somewhat similar; they were clear, deep, and carefully cut, the stone oval, the edges nearly beveled all round on both sides."—Ibid,

p. 97.
In "Ancient Monuments" the following description of the Cincinnati Tablet" is given: "The material is a fine grained compact sandstone, of a light brown color. It measures five inches in length, three in breadth at the ends, two and six tenths at the middle, and is about half an inch in thickness. The sculptured face varies very slightly from a perfect plane. The figures are cut in low relief (the lines being not more than one twentieth of an inch in depth), and occupying a rectangular space four inches and two tenths long, by two and one tenth wide."—Ibid, p. 275.

The "Cincinnati Tablet" was found in

The "Cincinnati Tablet" was found in November, 1841, at the corner of Fifth and Mound Streets, Cincinnati, Ohio. The "Grave Creek Tablet" was found the 16th of June, 1838.

"In 1870 there was found a tablet in a mound near Lafayette bayou in Issaquena county, Missippi, which has the same reduplication of figures in the carved work as exists in the 'Cincinnati Tablet.'"—Ibid

p. 110.

"This [Berlin] tablet was found June 14th, 1876, by Dr. J. E. Sylvester and Lurzey Cremeaus, near Berlin, Jackson county, Ohio. It was found in a small mound situated on the second bottom of a small tributary of Dickson's Run. The stone, which is six inches long, three and five eighths wide, and half an inch thick, composed of a fine grained sandstone of a greyish brown color, occurred on a level with the original surface, placed on its edge with its ends pointing east and west. Both sides are engraved, the style being of that kind known as line engraving. One side is a reduplication of the other."—Ibid,

p. 110.
The Chicago Times for July 17th, 1876, in its special correspondence, contained the following: "In the same county, near Murphysboro, is a circle of upright stones inclosing a monolith of cut stone, ten feet in height, and inscribed with various characters, now nearly effaced. On the east side is a representation of the sun, on each side of which is a woman figure in a kneeling posture with the hands held aloft. Under these are hieroglyphics. On the west side is the picture of a buffalo, apparently, though the identy is doubtful, drawing a cart, headed toward the south. On the north side, or edge, is a hole near the top, of about two inches in diameter, extending downward at an angle of forty-five degrees. Mr. Edmunds, on whose land this interesting relic stands, has inserted into this aperture a straight wooden bar, and has marked its shadow on the circle of stones into hours and their decimals, and is firm in the belief that it was originally intended as a sun dial or clock. He has shown a commendable spirit in placing a stout fence around this rare place." No untutored Indian was the architect or manufacturer of the

The Newport (Vermont) Express and Standard, of August 15th, 1882, has the following from the New Orleans Democrat: "Numerous of the pyramids and mounds which so often occur in the western states, have been leveled to the surrounding surface by zealous searchers for relics of antiquity. Nor have their efforts been in vain. Copper hatchets, chisels, and various other kinds of tools have been unearthed, together with copper plates covered with inscriptions, and with phonetic signs which proves conclusively that these people had a written language."

Baldwin says upon the art of writing: "If a consecutive history of the ancient people of Central America and Mexico were ever written it has been lost. Probably nothing of the kind ever was written in the manner which we call history, although there must have been regular annals of some kind. The ruins show that they had the art of writing, and that, at the south this art was more developed, more like a phonetic system of writing than that found in use among the Aztecs. The inscriptions of Palenque, and the characters used in some of the manuscript books that have been preserved, are not the same as the 'Mexican Picture Writing.' It is known that books or manuscript writings were abundant among them in the ages previous to the Aztec period. They had an accurate measure of the solar year and a system of chronology, and many of their writings were historical. Among the Mayas, and in other communities of the same family, writing was largely used in the time of the Spaniards. It was common also among the Aztecs, but they used 'picture writing.' "—Ancient America, p. 187.
One of the offices among the ancient people, was one to write history and to chronicle events. "These chroniclers had likewise to calculate the days, months and years; and though they had no writing like ours, they had their symbols an characters through which they understood everything; and they had great books, which were composed with such ingenuity and art that our characters were really of no great assistance to them. Our priests have seen those books, and I myself have seen them likewise, though many were burned at the instigation of the monks, who were afraid they might impede the work of conversion. Books such as those here described by Las Casas must have contained important historical information."—Ibid, p. 188.

There can be little doubt that the opinion expressed by Mr. Baldwin is correct, that many of the older books perished by reason of the wars, and mouldered into dust by the wear and tear of time and use.

"We learn from Spanish writers that a still greater destruction of the old books was effected by the more ignorant and fanaical of the Spanish priests who were extablished in the country as missionaries after the conquest. This is stated by Las Casas, himself one of the missionaries. Besides the many smaller bonfires of this fanaticism, there is record of a great conflagra tion, under the auspices of Bishop Zumarraga, in which a vast collection of these old writings was consumed. As the writing was all on paper (which had long been used in the country) the burning was easily accomplished."—Ibid, p. 189.

The Peruvian name for paper was quellca. And the government of Peru had a law regulating the manufacture thereof, as also proscription to the use of the same.

"Paper. — The same argument holds good as to paper. The oldest Egyptian monuments contain pictures of the papyrus roll; while in Mexico, as I have shown, a beautiful paper was manufactured and formed into books shaped like our own, In Peru a paper was made of plantain leaves, and books were common in the earlier ages. Humboldt mentions books of hieroglyphical writings among the Panoes, which were "bundles of their paper resembling our volumes of quarto." Atlantis, p. 451.

Of the Aztec writing Baldwin says: "Their skill in architecture and architectural ornamentation did not enable them to build such cities as Mitla and Palenque, and their 'picture writing' was a much ruder form of the graphic art than the phonetic system of the Mayas and Quiches."—An. Am., p. 221.

From the above we are led to believe that a wide contrast existed in the writ-Some ings of the Ancient Americans. were elegant in their artistic appearance, while some were rude.

Some of the Peruvian tongues had names for paper; the people knew that a kind of paper or parchment could be made of plantain leaves, and according to Montesinos, writing and books were common in the older times, that is to say, in ages long previous to the Incas."—Ibid, p. 255.

As to hieroglyphical writing, Baldwin says: "It is not improbable that a kind of hierographical writing existed in some of the Peruvian communities, especially among the Aymaraes. Humboldt mentions books of hieroglyphical writing found among the Panoes, on the River Ucayali. . . . A Franciscan missionary found an old man sitting at the foot of a palm tree and reading one of these books to several young persons. The Franciscan was told that the writing contained hidden things which no stranger ought to know.' It was seen that the pages of the book were covered with figures of men, animals and isolated characters, deemed hieroglyphical, and arranged in lines with order and symmetry. . . . There is similar writing on a prepared Llama skin found among other antiquities on a peninsula in Lake Titicaca, which is now in the museum at La Paz, Bolivia."—Ibid, p. 255-6.

Delafleld says: "Their buildings, particularly the sacred houses, were covered with hieroglyphics. Each race, Egyptian, Mexican and Peruvian recorded the deeds of their gods upon the walls of their temples."--Inquiry, Origin American Antiquities, p. 60.

Prof. C. S. Rafinesque says: "It is false that no American nations had systems of writing, glyphs and letters. Several had various modes of perpetuating ideas. There were several such graphic systems in America to express ideas, all of which find equivalents in the east continent."-

Ibid, p. 305.

Speaking of a sculptured figure at Uxmal, Stephens says: "Around the head of the principal figure are rows of characters. We now discovered that these characters were hieroglyphics."-Incidents of Travel in Yucatan, vol. 1, p. 167.

And of a building at Uxmal he says: "In the south end apartment we found the sculptured beam of hieroglyphics which had so much interested us on our former visit."—Ibid, p. 178.

Of a vase found at San Francisco, (Central America) he says: "The engraving below represents two sides of the vase; on one side is a border of hieroglyphics."-Ibid, p. 275.

Describing a building at Kabah, he says: "But the layer of stones around the base were sculptured, and on examination, we found a continuous line of hieroglyphics."

Explaining the appearance of a figure at Kabah, he says: "The head-dress is a lofty plume of feathers, falling to the heels of the standing flure, and under his feet is a row of hieroglyphics,"-Ibid, p. 413.

Of a certain tradition the same author writes: "There is a tradition of a great paved way made of pure white stone, called in the Maya language sache, leading from Kabah to Uxmal, on which the lords of those places sent messengers to and fro, bearing letters written on the bark and leaves of trees."—Ibid, p. 415.

Of an inscription at Kewick he says:

"It exhibits a rude human figure, surrounded by hieroglyphics, which doubtless contain the whole of its history."-Ibid,

vol. 2, p. 74.

He tells of the burning of some ancient books: "In 1571, 29 years after the foundation of Merida, some Indians of Mani relapsed and became idolators, practicing in secret their ancient rites. Intelligence of their backsliding reached the ears of the provincial in Merida, who came to Mani in person, and forthwith established himself as inquisitor. On a day appointed for that purpose, he made them bring together all their books and ancient characters and publicly burned them, thus destroying at once the history of their antiquity."—Ibid, pp. 261-2.

Of a tablet found at Chichen, he says: "This tablet and the position in which it exists. have given the name to the building which the Indians call Akatzeeb, signifying the writing in the dark; for as no light enters except from the single doorway, the chamber was so dark that the drawing could with difficulty be copied. It was the first time in Yucatan that we had found hieroglyphics sculptured on stone, which beyond all question bore the same type with those at Copan and Palenque."Ibid, p. 292.

Tyler says: "There is evidence that the Maya nation of Yucatan, the ruins of whose temples and palaces are so well known from the travels of Catherwood and Stephens, not only had a system of phonetic writing, but used it for writing ordinary words and sentences." — Tyler's

Wilson says: "The recurrence of the same signs, and the reconstruction of groups out of the detached members of others, clearly indicate a written language and not a mere pictorial suggestion of associated ideas, like the Mexican picture writing. In the most complicated tablets of African heiroglyphics, each object is distinct, and its representative significance is rarely difficult to trace. But the majority of the hieroglyphics of Palenque or Copan appear as if constructed on the same polysynthetic principle which gives the peculiar and distinctive character to the language of the New World. This is still more apparent when we turn to the highly elaborate inscriptions on the colossal figures at Copan. In these allideas of simple phonetic signs utterly disappear. Like the bunch-words, as they have been called, of the American languages, they seem each to be a compound of a number of parts of the primary symbols used in picture writing, while the pictorial origin of the whole becomes clearly apparent. In com-paring these minutely elaborated characters with those on the tablets, it is obvious that a system of abbreviation is employed in the latter. The Palenque inscriptions have all the characteristics of a written language in a state of development analogous to the Chinese, with its word-writing; and like it, they appear to have been read in columns from top to bottom. It is also noticeable in the frequent occurrence of human and animal heads among the sculptured characters they invaribly look toward the left, an indication, as it appears to me, that they are graven inscriptions of a lettered people who were accustomed to write the same characters from left to right on papers or skins."—Wilson's Prehistoric Man, p. 378, et seq.

I leave this part of the subject with some degree of reluctance, but fondly entertain the hope that the next will be fully as attractive.

The evidence that a people, anciently in America, possessed the knowledge of such a high degree of civilization and an education that demanded the use of letters and characters, make us wish that such men as Bishop Landa had been more kind and thoughtful, and not consigned the ancient books to the flames, for we might have found great help in our search after the antiquities of those people. (To be continued.)

Miscellaneous.

BISHOP'S APPOINTMENTS.

In accordance with the recommendation of Bro. G. T. Griffith and New Hope Branch of Virginia, that Bro. Isaac Coffman be appointed my agent for said Branch and vicinity, I, therefore, appoint him as such and recommend him to the Saints to sustain him by their prayers and means.

Bro. Samuel Brown having moved from London District, and requesting to be released from acting as Bishop's Agent, and as at the district conference held in said district, at Garafraxa branch, June 15th, 1889, Bro. Egerton K. Evans was recommended as my agent in Bro. Brown's stead, I, therefore, appoint him as such and recommend him to the Saints, asking them to faithfully sustain him by their prayers and means.

G. A. Blakeslee, Presiding Bishop.

BIRTHS AND BLESSINGS OF CHILDREN.

Born to Winfield and Ella Brown, at Stewartsville, Mo., on January 3d, 1889, a son who was blessed by Elder Mark H. Forscutt on June 9th, 1889, the name of Winfield being given to the young "Hope."

Born to William and Jannette Clay, at St. Joseph, Mo., on June 16th, 1888, a daughter. The name of Jennie was given to the laughing-eyed one when blessed by Elder M. H. Forscutt on June 20th, 1889.

Born to Mr. and Mrs. Gilmore, at St. Joseph, Mo., December 15th, 1888, a daughter. The sweet babe was blessed by Elder M. H. Forscutt on June 20th, 1889, and the name of Maud given BALDWIN.—At the Saints' Church, Stewartsville, Missouri, on Sunday, June 30th, 1889, the two infant sons of Bro. and Sr. D. R. Baldwin, born May 19th and named Gomer and Homer; Elder James Drown officiating.

DIED.

WALLACE.—At her home in Keokuk, Iowa, Sr. Hannah Wallace, nee Vest, at ten p. m., June 13th, 1889. Sister Walace was born in England, January 7th, 1839, and was aged 50 years, 5 months, and six days. She was baptized in England by John Carmichael, came to America in 1853, and settled in Utah; but became dissatisfied with the methods of the authorities there and returned to the states in 1857. She was married to John Wallace, at Boscobell, Wisconsin, July 16th, 1866. She, in company with her husband, came to Keokuk in 1867, and has lived in or near about there ever since. She united with the Reorganization October 12th, 1884, under the administration of Bro. M. T. Short. Her last illness began April 10th, after which time she was a great sufferer from that terrible disease, dropsy. Within a short time of her death she prayed the Lord to have mercy on her; and immediately she became easy and continued so until she passed away. The funeral services were conducted at the Latter Day Saints Church, Keokuk, Iowa, by Elder James McKlernan.

GOBLE.—Abiel Goble departed this life May 5th. 1889. He was stopping with his son during his sickness, in Nez Perces county, Idaho, where he died, with his family to witness his last moments. He was a great sufferer till death brought relief. His last hours were borne with great patience; and death would have been welcome much sooner if the Lord had so willed it. He was born in Pennsylvania, October 12th, 1819, and was aged 69 years and seven months. He was a member of the First Day Advents. He leaves a wife, four daughters and one son to mourn their loss till they meet in the resurrection morn. His remains were brought to his home in Asotin county, Washington Territory, where he has resided for years. Funeral services by S. Rice, Adventist.

GLADWIN .- At Council Bluffs, Iowa, June 13th, 1889, of congestion of the lungs, Sr. Georgia A. Gladwin. She was born near Council Bluffs, the 28th of January, 1856, and was baptized March, 1888, by Elder M. H. Forscutt. She sleeps in peace.

Bourgeoin.—At St. Joseph, Mo., on June 15th, 1889, Brother Lewis Bourgeoin. He was born at Amsterdam, Holland, in July, 1808, and was therefore nearly 81 years old. He leaves a noble-hearted widow behind him to perpetuate his memory. The funeral sermon was by Elder M. H. Forscutt at his recent home, St. Joseph. After the services his remains were followed to the depot, and thence taken to Lamoni for interment. There they were laid away to rest under direction of President W. W. Blair, who officiated at the grave. Faithful through life, faithful to the end, he rests in peace.

WEBER.—Killed, at St. Joseph, Mo., on June 14th, 1889, by the falling of a brick wall upon him while at his employment as a bricklayer, Brother Henry Weber. He was born in September, 1804, and was therefore nearly 85 years of age at the time of his death. Baptized at last April conference, his testimony often was "I have since been very happy." Funeral sermon by Elder M. H. Forscutt at Saints' Hall, 5th and Edmond, St. Joseph.

NOTICES.

To the Saints of the Southern Indiana district, especially the branch officers: As there has been much said and done in this district which has not been in strict harmony with the general church, in dealing with members, therefore I submit for consideration and action the rulings of General Conference, 1884: "No person's name should be stricken from the Church records until specific charges have been preferred against them and lawful action had in the case; and that the cause or causes of action and expulsion should be stated upon the records, hence those apostatizing ought to be visited and their desires learned. If they can by kind persuasion be brought to come back, let the effort be made. If after kindly labor they are still determined to withdraw, then let the teachers prefer charges based on their findings and time be set and they be notified to appear before a court of elders to formally sit and try the case or cases. In that way they can be legally disposed of." If any are hanging in suspension do not let them hang until they are dead. If any have not been dealt with properly see to it that the law is properly administered, and that no personal feelings or differences are made to be the basis of a charge.

Yours in bonds, M. R. Scott, President of the Southern Indiana district.

A series of two days' meetings will be held in the Galland's Grove district, Iowa, commencing as follows: At Deloit July 6th, Brn. Charles Derry and Charles E. Butterworth in charge; at the Salem branch July 13th, Brn. C. E. Butter-worth and Joseph Seddon in charge; at Galland's Grove July 27th, Brn. C. E. #### THE UNJUST STEWARD.

"PLEASE explain the sixteenth chapter of Luke; that part referring to the 'unjust' steward; especially the ninth verse:"

"And he said also unto his disciples, There was a certain rich man who had a steward; and the same was accused unto him, that he had wasted his goods, and he called him, and said unto him. How is it that I hear this of thee? Give an account of thy stewardship; for thou mayest be no longer steward. Then the steward said within himself, What shall I do? For my lord taketh away from me the stewardship. I can not dig; to beg I am ashamed. I am resolved what to do, that, when I am put out of the stewardship, they may receive me into their houses. So he called every one of his lord's debtors, and said unto the first, How much owest thou unto my lord? And he said, A hundred measures of oil. And he said unto him, Take thy bill, and sit down quickly, and write fifty. Then said he to another, And how much owest thou? And he said, A hundred measures of wheat. And he said unto him, Take thy bill, and write fourscore. And the lord commended the unjust steward, because he had done wisely; for the children of this world are wiser in their generation, than the children of light. And I say unto you, Make to yourselves friends, of the mammon of unrighteousness; that when ye fail, they may receive you into everlasting habitations. He who is faithful in that which is least, is faithful also in much; and he who is unjust in the least, is also unjust in much. If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches? And if ye have not been faithful in that which is another man's, who shall give unto you that which is your own? No servant can serve two masters; for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye can not serve God and mammon. And the Pharisees also who were covetous, heard all these things; and they derided him."-Luke 16: 1-14, Insp. Tran.

A careful examination of the above is necessary in order to properly understand the meaning of it. We call attention to a few brief points in reference to it.

The steward is called the "unjust" steward; a very significant term, and one which plainly indicates that he was guilty of wrong doing, and for which he was accused, even by his lord who afterwards commended him for his sagacity and shrewdness, although he made a sinful use of those qualities.

The steward evidently knowing that his dishonesty would cause him to lose his stewardship, resolves that though that fails him, he shall be received and favored by those whose debts to his lord he had diminished.

The Savior recognized that his people in all ages have been careless and unwise in temporal things, and have failed to realize the importance and power for good of temporal riches. In their desire to obtain the spiritual riches they have not paid, in many instances, due importance to the things of this life. On this account he enjoins upon them the necessity of making to themselves friends of the mammon of unrighteousness; not to serve it, but to make it serve them and their God by aiding His cause. The proper amount of attention and the right use of our temporal stewardships (the little things) will enable us to grow, do good and be useful in fitting us to make right use of the greater riches by coming into entire harmony with the laws that govern them. See eleventh and twelfth verses. Jesus commends one phase of the wisdom of the unjust steward—that of providing for the future-but in these verses condemns the misapplication of the principle, the improper and unfaithful use of another man's property.

God has chosen mankind as his agents in accomplishing his purposes. To aid them He blesses them with spiritual aids and also temporal things. He expects man's agency to be used in the application of these things to the highest purposes. Temporal things have their likeness and form part of the agencies furnished to carry out God's great designs. That is their true ultimate. They are not to be used to simply gratify passing whims, enjoy worldly pleasures and vain desires, but are for a grander purpose. Hence the Master did not disregard them but taught his people the necessity of rendering an account of their temporal as well as their spiritual stewardships, with the promise that when those things of a temporal nature failed, they (God and Christ, who only have the power to do so), would receive them into -not temporal-but "everlasting habitations." Jesus in this and in all his sayings condemns not only the act but the very semblance of dishonesty. Any other interpretation of this parable would cause a conflict in the teachings of the Scripture which must be considered in its entirety.

It is a well known fact that a wise and faithful use of temporal means will cause an individual to develop in benevolence, and free him from selfishness—one great affliction common to humanity. It is also just as requisite to their proper use that they be not used in profligacy, but where they will do the greatest amount of good.

Mankind make God and Christ their friends by laying up treasures in heaven by the right use of what has been termed (on account of its improper use) the "mammon of unrighteousness." Any true principle can be misapplied and perverted to another than its intended use. The proper use of anything is the true idea and will bring the best and grandest results. The harmony of these things with the experiences of human nature, man's necessities and the temporal and spiritual laws of God is apparent.

When perfected, all the elements and man himself will be substantial and eternal. We must be made perfect to receive and enjoy them in their perfect conditions.

MILES GRANT IN UTAH.

In "The World's Crisis," for May 20th, and June 5th and 12th, there are articles from the pen of Miles Grant, sometime editor of that paper, in which he relates at length his missionary efforts of late in Salt Lake City, and how freely the Methodists and Mormons gave him their churches and halls in which to hold religious services and deliver lectures, and also how readily he set before the Mormons the idea that there was and is nothing in or about man that is immortal, and also that other leading idea of the Adventists, namely, that the Kingdom of God is not and never will be set up on earth till Jesus Christ makes his second advent. All his efforts may have been very attractive, and equally amusing, to well posted Mormons, but we doubt if one such was in the least converted to those unscriptural, irrational Whoever is well read in the theories. teachings and revelations of Joseph Smith the Seer, whether in or out of Utah, knows full well that, on the plan of interpretation and application set forth in them, the teachings of the Bible are blended solidly on these and other points into one consistent, harmonious and beauteous system, as far superior to the ignus fatuus, or penny-rushlight of Adventism as the splendors of midday are superior to the mists and uncertainty of the vanishing rays of departed day.

Intelligent Latter Day Saints nowhere believe that immortality is naturally inherent in man in this life, much less in the mere earthy body of man; but they do believe that the spirit of man, like that of Christ their Lord, possesses the quality of immortality, it being "the offspring of God" (Acts 17: 29), He being "the Father of spirits" (Heb. 12:9). They believe that death is fitly described by our Lord when he said in John 12:24: "Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone; but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit;" and also when dying, himself said, "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit; and having said thus he gave up the ghost"-spirit-(Luke 23:46); all of which is in exact harmony with the word of God in Eccl. 12:7, which says: "Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was; and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it." Everyone knows that, if "a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die," then death simply unfetters, frees and separates the vital, life-principle within the corn, and that the latter, apart from the shell or inert body, actively takes on other living, developing and progressive conditions. Man, as a present living whole is not immortal, for the reason that death separates the immortal spirit from the body or earthly tabernacle. But when these are united in the resurrection, then man, in his two-fold being, will be immortal.

In the number for May 29th Mr. Grant says of the Mormons: "I showed them it [the kingdom of God] could not be set up till after the second coming of Christ." Wonderful, if true! We presume this claim is no better sustained than many others he makes which are found to be groundless. Mr. Grant nor any other person can prove from the scriptures that the kingdom of God will not be set up on earth "till after the second advent of Christ." The very reverse of this is true, as is witnessed by the Lord Jesus, the prophets before him and the apostles after him. The Latter Day Saints, in all their standard works, claim and teach that the kingdom of God may exist in heaven and on earth at the same time.

Jesus and his apostles taught in their times that the kingdom of God was then on the earth. Jesus said to the blind Pharisees, "Behold, the kingdom of God is within [among] you."—Luke 17: 21. Jesus the King, his officers, his law, and his subjects—all were then in the midst of the Jews. Again he said to them, "But if I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto you."—Matt. 12:28. And to "the chief priests and the elders of the" Jews he said, "Verily I say unto you, that the publicans and harlots go into the kingdom of God before you;" and further, "The Kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation [the Gentiles] bringing forth the fruits thereof."—Matt. 21:31, 43.

Jesus also said, "The law and the prophets were until John; since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it."—Luke 16:16. And speaking of the ministry and persecutions of John the Baptist he said, "And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of God suffereth violence, and the violent taketh it by force."—Matt. 11: 12.

It is quite impossible to justly refer these texts to the kingdom of God after the Saint Paul second advent of Christ. taught that the kingdom was on earth in his times, for he says the Father "hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son."-Col. 1:13. Mark it well,-this work had already been accomplished—it did not remain to be done in some future time. Scores of passages may be added to these proving that the kingdom may be on earth before the second advent, for we see it was on earth in the times of John and Jesus and the apostles.

And that it will be on earth before Christ makes his second advent is seen in the following texts: "The Son of Man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that do offend, and them which do iniquity."—Matt. 13:41. This certainly refers to the kingdom prior to the advent, when in it are found both the bad and the good. Jesus, in verse 44, further says: "Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field [the created world]; the which when a man hath found, he hideth, and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that he hath, and buyeth that field."—And Abraham also became "the heir of the field" or world.—Rom. 14:13.

Jesus in verses 47, 48 and 49 further says of the kingdom as it will exist on earth before his second advent, "Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a net, that was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind; which, when it was full, they drew to shore, and sat down, and gathered the good into vessels, but cast the bad away. So shall it be at the end of the world; the angels shall come forth and sever the wicked from among the just."

And in Matt. 25: 1-13, when speaking of the condition of the kingdon on earth just before the second advent, "while the bridegroom tarried," Jesus says the kingdom will be then composed of the "five wise" and "five foolish" virgins who will be aroused by "a cry" which comes to "the wise" and "foolish" alike, "the wise" alone being prepared for the occasion.

But, mark it well, the kingdom is then, before the second advent, composed of the foolish and the wise. This must not be said of the kingdom in heaven, nor of those who come with Christ in his glorious advent. It can only be said of it when in its militant state, composed of "the good" and "the bad" mentioned in a previous quotation from Matthew, chapter 13. Jesus knew what the facts would be just prior to his glorious advent, and he says that "Then shall the kingdom be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the bridegroom"-Jesus Christ—which proves that the kingdom will be on earth, in its imperfect condition as to its members, before Christ comes in glory. Daniel 2:34, 35, 44, 45, and Psalms 102: 16, and many other like passages teach the same idea. From all these texts we learn that the kingdom of God may, and in these last days will, exist in heaven and on earth at the same time. And it is therefore perfectly consistent that Saints should pray the Lord's prayer—"Thy kingdom come"—for it simply breathes the faith and hope and ardent desire that the kingdom of God in heaven may "come" and be united with the "good" and "wise" ones found "in the kingdom" on earth at the times of the second advent.

In perfect harmony with this is the prayer provided for the Saints in October 1831, by revelation, found in the Doctrine and Covenants, which is clear evidence that Joseph Smith was inspired by the same Spirit that moved the ancient prophets and seers, including also our blessed Lord. It reads:

"Hearken, and lo, a voice as of one from on high, who is mighty and powerful, whose going forth is unto the ends of the earth; yea, whose voice is unto men-Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight. The keys of the kingdom of God are committed unto man on the earth, and from thence shall the gospel roll forth unto the ends of the earth, as the stone which is cut out of the mountain without hands shall roll forth, until it has filled the whole earth; yea, a voice crying-Prepare ye the way of the Lord, prepare ye the supper of the Lamb, make ready for the bridegroom; pray unto the Lord; call upon his holy name; make known his wonderful works among the people. upon the Lord, that his kingdom may go forth upon the earth; that the inhabitants thereof may receive it, and be prepared for the days to come, in the which the Son of man shall come down in heaven, clothed in the brightness of his glory, to meet the kingdom of God which is set up on the earth; wherefore, may the kingdom of God go forth, that the kingdom of heaven may come, that thou, O God may be glorified in heaven, so on earth, that thy enemies may be subdued; for thine is the honor, power, and glory, forever and ever. Amen."—D. & C., sec. 65.

And in 1843 we find Joseph teaching the Saints in exact agreement with this revelation and the Bible, for he says:

"Some say the kingdom of God was not set up until the day of Pentecost, and that John did not preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins; but I say, in the name of the Lord, that the kingdom of God was set up on the earth from the days of Adam to the present time.

"Whenever there has been a righteous man on earth unto whom God revealed his word, and gave power and authority to administer in his name, and where there is a priest of God, a minister who has power and authority from God to administer in the ordinances of the gospel and officiate in the priesthood of God, there is the kingdom of God; and in consequence of rejecting the gospel of Jesus Christ, and the prophets whom God hath sent, the judgments of God have rested upon people, cities and nations, in various ages of the world, which was the case with the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah, which were destroyed for rejecting the prophets.

"Now I will give my testimony. I care not for man. I speak boldly and faithfully, and with authority. How is it with the kingdom of God? Where did the kingdom of God begin? Where there is no kingdom of God there is no salvation. What constitutes the kingdom of God? Where there is a prophet, a priest, or a righteous man, unto whom God gives his oracles, there is the kingdom of God. And where the oracles of God are not, there the kingdom of God is not.

"The plea of many in this day is, that we have no right to receive revelations; but if we do not get revelations we do not have the oracles of God; and if they have not the oracles of God they are not the people of God."—Life of Joseph the Prophet, pp. 412–13.

How perfectly like the above are these words of Jesus,—"The field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom." And this,—"The law and the prophets were until John: since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it."—Luke 16:16. And this also,—"If I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto you."—Matt. 12:28.

In view of all these facts, well known to all fairly posted Latter Day Saints, we conclude that Miles Grant is much too fast when he claims to have converted "the Mormons" to his soul-sleeping nonsense and his post-advent-kingdom heresy; for it is scarcely possible they should have forgotten all the leading lines of argument and proof-texts concerning these matters. Mr. Grant is as badly blinded and befogged on these matters as he and his fellows have ever been on the numerous fixed times they set for the advent of our Lord.

DAVIS CITY CAMP MEETING.

Notice is given that the Davis City Camp Meeting, arranged for by the Decatur district, will commence Friday, August 2d, and continue over Sunday the 11th. Full information concerning the cost of fuel, feed, etc., will be given next week.

THE letter below we give our readers without note or comment:

"THURMAN, Ia., June 30th.

Brother Blair:—As per notice the Rev. Clark Braden put in an appearance at this place, June 1st, and gave a series of lectures against Infidelity; and on June 9th he delivered three lectures against Mormonism. To my mind, his manner, speech, and general deportment throughout betrayed him in his pretended profession as a representative of Christianity, and placed him on the lists of aspirants to unmerited praise. And were it not for the unpopularity of the theories he essays to make war with, he would undoubtedly be regarded by all fair minded people as a charlatan, a low-down cunning trickster, entirely destitute of the humility and meekness characteristic of the true christian.

He seems to be brimfull of egotism, and in his morbid desire for fame and notoriety, appears to be willing to stoop to anything in order to secure an endorsement from the people. This was clearly manifest here on the occasion mentioned in his attempt to bulldoze the people by threats, seeking to intimidate them and prevent the free exercise of their agency, cunningly pretending to submit some prepared resolutions to them for their consideration, to be voted on, and at the same time denying any one the right to vote who would be likely to vote in the negative. And by this crafty scheme he actually "stole a march" on some of our most honorable, unsuspecting citizens, by which he got an endorsement from them. This is the manner in which he manufactures his many published endorsements (?) which he sends broadcast throughout the country in order to deceive the people and establish the assumption that "I, Clark Braden," am a mighty man, because, for sooth, he assumes to be a representative of christianity; a defender of the faith!

Such a display of egotism, fraud and deception, has never had a parallel in the history of our county.

A friend of justice and the people.

WM. LEEKA."

Bro. I. N. Roberts wrote June 26th from Cook's Point, Texas, that although compelled to remain for a time in his old field, he had lost no time in preaching the word. He expects to attend the Texas Reunion which begins July 5th, after which he expects to proceed to Missouri and Arkansas.

Read Bro. W. H. Kelley's communication in this issue. It contains much wholesome advice, and practical suggestions.

The following editorial from the Salt Lake Tribune is so just and so sensible that we think it well worthy of preservation. Mankind should learn early that heaven will not change the established laws of the universe nor suspend their operations when men wilfully or ignorantly violate them. The laws of nature are the laws of God, and when they are faithfully observed blessing and favor follow. When they are transgressed the penalty finds out the evil doer in due time.

"ABSURD STUPIDITY."

"The most absurd freak to which the Johnstown calamity has given rise, is the reported loss by the survivors of their faith in Providence, and their open burning of their Bibles. As if Nature, or Providence, call it which we will, were responsible for hanging that sixty million tons of water up there three hundred feet above the town! Probably there was never a lovelier or more dashing stream let down from the mountains than the South Fork of the Conemaugh, winding between the crowding hills, in and out of leafy thickets, between flower-decked banks, tumbling anon over the bowlders, and then sliding under the banks and shelving rocks, where the speckled trout hid from the sneaking angler. Big trees, hemlock and spruce and maple and beech and birch higher up the hillsides, in which the songs of birds never ceased. That is what Providence provided for man's use and enjoyment. It was for man's idle hours, not even to turn his water wheels, that man dammed the stream and then neglected the dam until an extraordinary rainfall swept it away and with it thousands of people and their homes and property. If we are to repudiate the sweet legend that not a swallow falls out of heaven or a hair of man's head to the ground without our Heavenly Father's notice, let us do it on some more tenable ground than that Providence is in any sense responsible for the distrees, the loss, the sudden death and widespread devastation consequent upon the bursting of the South Fork dam. Away behind all creeds and beliefs are the immutable laws that hold the universe serene, the planets and suns in their orbits, the oceans within their shores. One of these laws the men of Pennsylvania chose to defy, and they suffered. That is all there was to it, and the most cowardly thing that mortals ever can do is to seek to make Infinite Wisdom responsible for their infinite foollshness."

A WORKER'S PRAYER.

Lord, speak to me that I may speak In living echoes of Thy tone; As Thou has sought, so let me seek Thy erring children, lost and lone.

- O lead me Lord, that I may lead

  The wandering and the wavering feet!
  O feed me, Lord, that I may feed
  Thy hungering ones with manna sweet!
- O strengthen me, that while I stand Firm on the rock and strong in Thee I may stretch out a loving hand To wrestle with the troubled sea!

Teach me, Lord, that I may teach
The precious things Thou dost impart,
And wing my words they may reach
The hidden depths of many a heart.

- O give Thine own sweet rest to me That I may speak with soothing power A word in season as from Thee To weary ones in needful hour!
- O fill me with Thy fulness, Lord, Until my very heart o'erflow In kindling thought and glowing word Thy love to tell, Thy praise to show!
- O use me, Lord-use even me,
  Just as Thou wilt, and when and where,
  Until Thy blessed face I see,
  Thy rest, Thy joy, Thy glory share!—Sel.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"Long years ago I held within my grasp
Whereon to write a life. I filled it full
With love and love's sweet ministries, with home,
And the dear homely cares that make most full
A woman's life—my husband's sheltering love
And the soft prattle of a baby's voice.
And then, in very peace and restfulness,
I closed my eyes and said: 'I thank Thee, Lord,
For life.'"

AUNT PATTY'S ADVICE.

Harry, go out doors this minute and don't you come in until I call you! Ethel, put up that music box immediately, and go into the diningroom and study your Sunday School lesson! Quick, march! Ralph Holden, how many times have I told you not to play in the mud, you naughty boy! Come here to me! Upstairs to bed you go this minute!"

And having issued the above command, Mrs. Holden rushed Ralph screaming upstairs, where she gave him a smart whipping and put him to bed, where he lay sobbing a long time. Ralph was only five, and so fond of playing in the mud. He had not intended to get dirty, he didn't mean to bother mamma—but a team was rushing by. The mud splashed all over him, and with a grieving heart he was rushing to mother to "fess," as he called it when she had so summarily dismissed him unheard.

"I tell you, Ethel, mother's got in one of her tantrums, and we will have to keep scarce. Wish you could go out, too, but of course you didn't ask her," was Harry's remark as he left the room where Ethel was already seated with her lesson, looking very sullen.

"I don't see what we were doing, that she need to come and bother us. She said she didn't care what we did so long as we didn't bother her, so there." "She's coming, she—e's," and Harry bounced out doors as his mother came from upstairs, and glancing into the room assured herself she had been obeyed.

"There, now, I'll see if I can finish this dress of Ethel's without going crazy. I don't know why it is, but it seems as though the days fullest of work are the very ones the children take to make the most trouble, especially if at the same time I'm nearly wild with the headache," said Mrs. Holden to her aunt, who was making her a visit. Then seeing her aunt made no reply she added, "I suppose you are perfectly shocked at my way of governing, but nothing short of a general stampede seems to have any effect such days as this. There's a great difference between theory and practice, as any one will find out soon after they try it"-snap went the thread as she pulled nervously at an obstinate knot-"there, even the thread seems in a spirit of rebellion, never knew it to be so full of kinks before, and my machine-needle broke, too, first one since I've had the machine, and I wasted a half-hour setting another. How any one can keep their temper under such manifold trials, I don't see," and she turned to the machine and sewed vigorously, apparently somewhat relieved by getting it in rapid motion, the uneven action ensuring the greatest amount of noise.

"I don't see how any one with your way of living can expect an even temper," said Aunt Patty quietly when the machine stopped for a moment.

"No one would believe me if I should say I had any plan of government, and I sometimes doubt if I have. Sometimes when I'm unusually well, I flatter myself I'm training my children in quite a model manner. There'll be several days in succession of continual quiet, then comes a day like this when every one seems to get up wrong. I'm sick and hurried, and such days with their numerous battles undo weeks of the method plan. And I don't understand why they come, or why children always take the days I am the most nervous to have all their worst tantrums."

"Did you ever think possibly the fault was all with you?—that they were no worse on that day than any other?"

"Oh, yes! I have times of such self-infliction; and I think, 'now I won't notice little things, I'll let them pass.' But it's sure to become unbearable, and end as it did just now. Mrs. Cotton says she believes children need a sound trouncing about once in so often, and I'm nearly converted to her theory."

"Now, Emma, I think you do yourself a great injustice in this matter, almost as much as you do your children."

"I know I fall very far short of being a perfect mother, and I sorrow over these constantly recurring outbreaks more than I can tell," and the blue eyes filled with tears.

"So I believe, for I know you to be an earnest Christian at heart, but you make the same mistake, in words, to my mind commit the same sin so many do of expecting too much of yourself," was Aunt Patty's answer.

"But how can one expect too much of themselves, or have too high an estimate of their responsibilities?" asked Mrs. Holden.

"First, Emma, in this way,—let us make it a personal matter. When you exacted of yourself the finishing of Ethel's new dress before Sunday morning, you made a mistake; when in finding you had a headache you insisted in completing your allotted task you committed a sin. There was where all the trouble, or much of it, came in at this time."

"But I'd promised Ethel she should have the dress, for she sings in the concert in the even-ine."

ing."
"She had another white dress that was presentable, had she not?"

"Yes, but they are old," answered Mrs Holden.
"A white dress always looks well if clean and whole. To my mind Ethel will not feel repaid for her present punishment by wearing the new dress. Being a child, she will not see the connection."

"What would you have me do, then?"

"When you found yourself sick, remained in your room in quiet; called the children to you -told them mamma was sick, and they should see how quief they could be. Explained to Ethel that perhaps you'd not be able to finish that dress, much as you wanted to, but if your head stopped aching you would try. Few children who have been brought up to be unselfish will resisf an appeal to their sympathies, or not be made more docile by feeling a responsibility was placed upon them. They may forget, and in their play choose something so boisterous that that they will need reproof, but if it's kindly given and another game suggested, there's not apt to be the spirit of combativeness that your method aroused. I heard you tell the children you didn't care what they did so long as the didn't bother you." *

"Yes, I don't doubt I made just that remark. I was nearly frantic, and their noise I just could not stand."

"I'm not blaming you for that, although they were not making half the noise they did last evening, and you did not reprove them, but joined with them."

"But my head did not ache then," persisted Mrs. Holden.

"That's just the point I want you to make. Now instead of thinking your children are the most mischievious, obstinate children ever made, just look over the day. It seemed as though they couldn't do any thing right. Harry was too long coming back with the thread for which you were so impatient-minutes seemed hours-so he was scolded for tardiness which was more imaginative than real. Ethel was uneasy when you were fitting her dress. She got several jerks, and finally a clip on the head. Then she was out of humor. Ralph was banished because he asked too many questions, he was playing as near the forbidden ground as possible when a passing team bespattered him with mud. When he comes in broken-hearted he is sent straightway to bed, everybody is cross - all is at sixes and sevens, and all because mother insisted on working when she is sick. Now, Emma, don't think that you have sinned beyond forgiveness, or that you are alone in this matter. Thousands of mothers are doing the same thing, and without knowing why, are blundering on, often weaning their children from them entirely by their erratic ways.

"There are times and circumstances where mothers can not take even the slightest rest from their labors, but they are fewer than one imagines.

"Every mother owes it to herself, her children, and her Maker, to maintain as high a type of bodily health as possible. To do this she must take time for a change of scene or occupation. When she finds her nerves are so on edge she is on the point of exploding under the slightest added provocation, then is the time for her to change, if only for a few minutes, if it's only looking to see if the flower-bed is thrifty, or if the continued story she's been reading is finished in the last magazine, if she is so fortunate to have one; or let her look at the passers by, and it will relieve the nervous tension, calm the troubled spirit, and all will be smoother.

"The work of of the wife and mother, especially of those in slender circumstances, where one pair of hands must do a numerous number of duties, is very rasping, very wearing; the mother gets nervous—the children are nervous—there's scolding, bickering, contention, much of which would be avoided were mother well.

"The reason of the work being so wearing is not because of the monotony of it, for work at the shopbench—at the store counter—the counting-house, allows of far less change than housework; but, in these callings the laborer has a daily walk through the crowded street, past the well-decorated store windows, he hears bits of news, many things aid to give his mind a change, he does his work automatically, and does not wear himself out by being self-centered."

"But it takes time to secure a change. I never had so manny interruptions as to day. I fear I shall not get this done, and I hate to have a nearly completed garment go over to another week," said Mrs. Holden. with a show of reason.

"Of course, one of your methodical habits dislikes having their plans interfered with. But had you rather offend one of Christ's little ones, of which offense He says, 'it were better that a millstone were hanged about his neck and he was cast into the nethermost parts of the sea, than that he should offend one of these little ones?"

"Aunt Patty! Do you think I have been guilty of that offense in my hasty dealings with my children?" exclaimed Mrs. Holden.

"That is the way it looks to me—and, furthermore, you have sinued against yourself. Excuse me, niece, if I speak plainly, but I grieve to see you forcing yourself to exertion far beyond your strength so constantly. You already begin to show the look of care and worry. You save for yourself not a moment's time for rest, for communion with your God, for gathering strength of mind and tranquilty of spirit necessary to be all to your children and husband it is your privilege to be. You say yourself after such a day as this, the little ones seem farther away from you for several days."

I think I begin to see how a certain degree of selfishness in a mother can be the best of kindness to her family," said Mrs. Holden, meditatively."

"Exactly. As I said before, every mother owes it to herself to keep her health up to the very highest standard possible. To accumulate all the reserved strength possible for the numberless emergencies always arising in the best regulated families. Then she will have far less occasion to lament her hasty words, to bewail her lack of government — few black days to live in her memory, when those who help to make everything at sixes and sevens are scattered, some to their lifework, some to sing in God's choir, and mother is left with ample time to think, "Why, Oh, why, did I not enjoy them while they were young, instead of being encumbered with so much serving!"—Sel.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column:—Many a time have I reflected upon what has passed through the day and seen wherein I might have had had more patience. There is not a day passes but what I feel the need of a guiding hand and wisdom to train my children aright. I have three promising boys and hope to raise them up to be useful men in the ministry if God sees fit. I had the pleasure not long since of being at a meeting in our branch and it was one long to be remembered by me and most of the people there. We do not have the privilege of attending often, as we live about eight miles away and my husband has to stay at the station Sundays and all Asking the sisters to pray for us I will close.

Your sister in Christ, Mrs. Charles K. Ryan.

BUTTERMILK is highly recommended as a healthful summer drink. Among its beneficial effects, particular stress is laid upon its power to clear the system of unwholesome impurities which poison it during the enervating season. Hall's Journal of Health says: It should be freely used by all who can get it. Every one who values health should drink buttermilk daily in warm weather and let tea, coffee, etc., alone. For the benefit of those not already aware of it, it adds that in churning the first process of digestion is gone through, making it one of the easiest and quickest of all things to digest. It mades gastric juice, and contains properties that readily assimilate with it with very little wear upon the digestive organs.— $E_{\aleph}$ .

FOOLISH spending is the father of poverty. Do not be ashamed to work and do not feel that your work is beneath you. There is a dignity in honest labor that all wise men recognize, and the man who tries to avoid it loses his own self-respect as well as that of his fellow men. Be your own master and do not let fashion or pride swallow up your individuality—hat, coat and boots. Let your pride be of the right kind. Be too proud to give up without conquering every difficulty, too proud to wear a coat you can not afford, too proud to keep company at night you are ashamed to be met with in day time, too proud to lie, steal or cheat.

Correspondence.

SIX MILE GROVE, Iowa, June 23d.

Dear Herald:—Never thinking it of special importance for your readers to know every step I take, every sermon I preach, or every child I bless, I do not trouble them often with an account of my doings; but when I have anything that will gladden the hearts of the Saints, strengthen the weak and encourage the strong, I love to contribute my mite to that end.

Since our general conference I have labored diligently for the cause, and hope that eternity will reveal some good done through my instrumentality. Once in a while I learn of some souls gathered into the kingdom of God in whose hearts I have sown, in common with other laborers, the seeds of truth; and I rejoice to know that some are permitted to water that seed while I realize the increase is from God. A few weeks ago I was requested to visit some friends belonging to the Methodist church. The husband had been a class leader in that body, and the wife a devoted member; but some years ago a little grain of truth was dropped in the hearts of this worthy couple, from my lips. Since then they have wandered into Kausas, and have been far from where they could hear the preached word. They have passed through varied changes, yet holding on to the Methodist church; but never forgetting the little word of truth that sounded so strangely to their ears. And now, being returned to their former home, I was requested to visit them, and in doing so my heart was made glad with the assurance that no earnest word of truth was spoken in vain, and that Solomon made no idle utterance when he said, "Cast thy bread upon the waters; for thou shall find it after many days." The lady repeated the utterance; it had been by me forgotten, but not so with her. She said she should never forget it, and it created in her a hungering and thirsting after righteosness. And Christ says such "shall be filled." They requested me to leave them the Book of Mormon. I did, and also the Compendium, and the other day when I called on them the Book of Mormon had been carefully read and compared with the Bible. Nor had the reading and comparison resulted unfavorably as to the question of the divinity of the former; and ere long I believe they will obey the gospel as it is in its fulness restored.

Our conference at Little Sioux passed off with great pleasure and profit in a spiritual sense. By the zeal and energy of Bro. John Coffman (president of the Little Sioux branch) and his brethren and sisters, they secured the big tent for the conference which attracted great numbers from the outside; and there was a goodly number of Saints from different branches, though not as many as there would have been if all had understood the printed notices aright. There was some excellent preaching by Brn. McDowell and H. O. Smith, and the writer was permitted to occupy the stand twice. The best of attention was given.

It was thought proper to continue meetings in the tent. Elder Smith occupied one evening and Elder McDowell the remainder of the time, in connection with Elder Crabb, the district president, the result of which is that last Sabbath Elder McDowell baptized seven souls, some say "of the best citizens;" but I recognize no best only as men and women do best. Money and position are nothing in the sight of God. Our condition when outside of his kingdom is one; all are sinners in his sight; but God, angels and all good men rejoice when they see souls return to him, whether of high or low degree. No matter who is the instrument in adopting them in, God works through whom he will. Many may be weavers in the great warp and woof of human salvation, but the glory of that salvation belongs to God and his Christ.

I attended the conference of the Galland's Grove district at Dow City. A good representation of the branches, Elder Whiting president. The bread of life was broken by Brn. Whiting, Butterworth and Seddon, your humble servant putting in a helping oar. There seemed to be an earnest spirit among the brethren. Bro. Charles Butterworth was appinted to mission the southern part of the district, and Elder David Rudd the northern portion, in connection with the president of the district and Elder Turner, and other local helpers. There was a good interest manifested in the Sabbath School. Elder Butterworth and myself labored several nights and one Sabbath to present the work on Pleasant Ridge, about five miles west of Harlan. The Union church was crowded on the Sabbath, and good attention was given. The nights being dark and rainy not so many attended as on the Sabbath, but words of encouragement reached our ears, and hearty expressions of approval from many of the audience. Bro. Butterworth was left to hold the fort. On my return from Dow City I preached in Woodbine to a fair audience of attentive listeners. I trust God will give us sheaves there to gladden our hearts in the harvest home. Priest Matthew Hall and Teacher Kibler are good earnest workers there, watching over the interests of the work, and caring for that great nursery to the church, the Sabbath School. May God bless their united efforts together with the efficient help of the sisters, who take so earnest a part in that work; for I assure you their efforts are not to be despised, and God will crown them with honor and glory!

I have preached in this grove nine sermons of late to very attentive audiences. Have baptized one young lady. Her father declared his determination to obey, but believes God will have mercy upon him until his companion will come with him. Others have expressed themselves desirous of being on the Lord's side. I see nothing to hinder a good work being done here if the Saints will do their duty, and if not the blood of souls will be found on their hands. God will never approve of half hearted followers. If we are for God we must show it by our lives. Jealousy is a flame from the infernal pit, and will consume to the lowest hell all who give it place in their hearts. God help me to be clear of it! I want to be on the Lord's side with all I have and am, but I realize my weakness and unprofitableness in His cause.

The presidency of both the districts seem to be in earnest; the Bishop's agent seems alive to his duty, and the general conference appointees permitted to labor in these districts are proving by their works their zeal for the truth, and I hope by next general conference to roll up a good report of this part of the Iowa mission.

Pardon the length of this report or letter, and when I have better news I will give it.

CHARLES DERRY.

P. S. Many are asking about the Reunion. Is it not time our committee revealed the day and the hour when it should begin? C. D.

MILLERSBURG, Ill., June 26th.

Editors Herald:-I was gone up north into Wisconsin forty-five days. It took two days to come and as many to go, and I lost five days from bad weather and other hindering causes. But "for a' that" we averaged one meeting per day. I spoke forty times, convened one sacrament and social service in Davenport, Iowa, took part in one debate and heard Bro. Pender four times the few days he was with me. Our labor was confined to three localities, or villages, in a section where they had never heard the word dispensed, and hence prejudice was rife. We have many warm friends there, and plenty of good homes for self or successor in work. Returned home last week to rest and recruit from my hurts in a smash-up, and will take my exit in a very few days for Northern Illinois conference at Chicago, and on to work. Feel well and hopeful; have a few trials now and then, but such is life. I am desirous of being ever diligent, and wish to improve in humility, caution, prudence, and every good word and work. The poet says, "We resolve and re-resolve, and die the same." The Lord bless Zion and enlarge her borders and comfort all her children. M. T. SHORT.

LAMONI, Iowa, July 3d.

Dear Brethren and Sisters in the covenant of the gospel of Christ Jesus our Lord:—How great are the privileges and blessings we enjoy in this the dispensation of the restitutions of all things spoken by the mouths of all the holy prophets since the world began! Well might the apostles say, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, the things that God hath prepared for them that love him,"—those that keep his commandments.

Why do our brethren and sisters mourn when trials come? Know we not that we must be made perfect through suffering, like our divine Master? When tribulations come, be not troubled, but rest in the Lord, that "when he who is our life shall appear, we may appear with him in glory." How we long for the time to come when the Lord Jesus Christ shall come in the clouds of heaven with ten thousand of his Saints in the glory of his Father. Dear children of God, are we prepared for his coming? We look earnestly for the signs of his coming. I think the surest signs of his coming for us to look for is the unity of the Saints and see them walking in all the ordinances and precepts of His house blameless. For Jesus will not come till there is a people prepared for him to come to. O, my brethren and sisters, let us put on the whole armor of God in Christ Jesus our Lord, that we may be one as Jesus Christ our Savior and his Father is one. Except we are one, we are not his. Therefore let us lay aside every weight, and the sins that so easily beset us, and run with patience the race set before us, looking unto Jesus the author, and who will be the finisher of our faith. If we so order our lives in conformity with the principles of his gospel, which ever will be the power of God to our salvation, if we believe and obey. For most assuredly, the light of the gospel of God has come. Then let us walk in that light so we may not be overcome and walk in darkness, and miss the narrow path that leads to the tree of life. But may we be faithful and partake of that fruit and live forever. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God. Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled of the Spirit of the Lord."

O thou that dwelleth in the heavens, look in mercy upon thy children on earth and keep us from sinning and bring us safely home to enjoy that rest thou hast prepared for Thy children, for Jesus' sake, Amen.

JAMES WHITEHEAD.

RIVER FALLS, Wisconsin.

Dear Herald :- I have just laid down the Herald for June 1st, and it gives me new strength to hear from the different branches of the church. I was born in Portage county, Ohio, removed from there when quite young to Illinois, and from there to Iowa. I have heard all the different churches but when I heard the Latter Day Saints preach the restoration of the gospel to earth, I accepted it, and myself and wife were baptized at Sioux City, Iowa, June 10th, 1889, by Elder M. T. Bean, and then I left for the above named place, where I am laboring at present. I am alone here but I pray the Lord for strength and he gives it to me. I would be happy to correspond with any of the brethren who may wish to write or will be happy to meet any that may call.

> Address, E. H. RANDALL, Box 253, Fall River, Wis.

> > ST. JOSEPH. Mo., June 30th.

Bro. Blair: -- I feel very glad to be able to say that the spiritual condition of our church has increased considerable since the general conference. About two months before general conference I stated to some of the brethren that I wished said conference was over, being afraid it would be a failure, but instead of that it has been a blessing to this branch. It has removed a great deal of prejudice in this city, and what is still better, it has made the Saints more united and firm in the work. Our Sunday School is growing in numbers; our attendance to-day was fifty, with good prospects that it will increase steadily. I have always loved Sunday School work, and it has been, in my estimation, a sowing of spiritual seed in the hearts of the little ones which can not fail to pay ten-yes, a hundred fold in after years.

The meetings for Sunday are as follows: at 9:30 a.m. testimony and sacrament meeting; at 10:30 a.m. preaching; at 12:15 p.m. Sunday School, and at 7:30 p.m. preaching.

Bro. Mark H. Forscutt has made his home with us for this conference year. His time is pretty well taken up as follows: Tuesday evening, practising in singing; Wednesday evening, Saints' meeting; Thursday evening, preaching in North St. Joseph at Bro. Clay's; and Friday evening, young folks' prayer meeting. During the day he is away from home visiting the Saints, administering to the sick, etc. etc.; and he has been very much blessed in said duties. We are all glad to have him with us, and feel satisfied that Bro. Mark will do a great work in this city. He has done so already in this branch.

I feel very gratefull for the courtesies shown me during my short stay in Lamoni; and was very much pleased with the locality in which it is situated. I like those smooth, sloping lands.

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I am yours in the gospel,

MILAN, Sullivan Co., Mo., June 13th.

Dear Brethren:—I have preached every Sunday but one since conference, the Lord blessing me with a delivery of speech. My hip has given out so that I can not travel any more on foot. I am at Andrew J. Glaze's, my brother-in-law today. I will start to Texas next Monday. I borrowed twenty dollars from my sister, Sarah G. Glaze. May God bless her for her kindnes! I met with the Saints last Tuesday night in prayer and testimony meeting. She Spirit was with us. May truth prevail here and elsewhere is my humble prayer. Asking the Saints to pray that my health will improve and that my labors in the gospel will prosper.

Your brother,

HENRY GRIM.

LAMONI, Iowa, July 3d.

Bro. Blair: Since my appointment by general conference I commenced labor near home where I baptized two, heads of families, with the promise of more. The work is onward in this part of Decatur county. I then commenced to lead out in other places where I found good interest and the people willing to hear. I then went into Missouri where I have done some work near where Bro. L. Wight and Wm. Allen live. The people are wakened up and notwithstanding the raging of the heathen and the closing of the church we had a big time Sunday, June 30th, and I felt like the old prophet, that the Spirit of the Lord God was upon me, and I led four good honest souls into the waters of baptism. It was a time of rejoicing, which was felt by all present. The names of those baptized are Bro. Thomas Brinigar and wife, and Bro. Henry Bandy and wife. Expect to baptize more when I return, which will be July 14th; and will say to the members that there will be a grove meeting commencing half past ten o'clock two miles east of Ridgeway, Mo. All are invited to attend, and a good time is expected. The man that owns the grove said that he would not let one of our elders preach in a school house while he was director, but he was out to hear the gospel on Sunday and it had a good ring, and he came forward and said we could preach in his grove or the school house. It made me glad and I remembered how the Lord had said he would send his Spirit before us and prepare the hearts of the people. The house would not hold those who came out to hear June 30th.

Bro. Bell, of Lamoni, was with me and assisted. I hope the brethren will not forget to attend July 14th. We have seventeen members there though somewhat scattered. I expect to organize a branch there this summer.

Bro. S. J. Salisbury told me when I was young in the work that if I was faithful I would see the fruits of my labor. Little did I think at that time that I would ever baptize any one, but when a man speaks in the name of the Lord and the thing comes to pass, then we may know that the Lord hath spoken. As my faith gets stronger my hopes grow brighter, and it seems that my joy is full, and my love for the work is greater. I hope to be a wise servant.

Yours in the faith,
THOMAS WELLINGTON.

PLEASANTON, Iowa, June 27th.

Bro. Blair:—I had the pleasure last Sunday of assisting Bro. J. R. Lambert in his meeting at the Reger Mineral Springs. There was quite a large assemblage, especially in the afternoon, and there were several features of encouragement connected with the meetings, One was that several persons came to the stand at the close of the service with the question "Can't you come over to our neighborhood, and do some preaching?" This request came too, from places where efforts have been made to our disadvantage.

We were also pleased to note the close attention given by men of thought and earnestness; and while it is probable that some of these will not unite with the church, yet they must experience, to some degree, an uplifting in thought, in sentiment, in life; and this must make them more favorably disposed towards the work which we represent; and their influence being exercised upon others will incline them to listen more readily to what our people have to say. I think the number baptized into the church represents only a part of the work which the elders are doing. The impetus which is given to broader lines of thought, to purer speech, and nobler acaction will count for more than we now think in time to come.

Appointments were announced for next Sunday—New Zion at 11, a m., and Hickory at 4 p. m. Also grove meetings at the Springs on third Sunday in July at 11 a. m., and 3 p. m.

Fraternally.

DUNCAN CAMPBELL.

DIAMOND, Ohio, June 25th.

Bro. R. S. Salyards:-Bro. L. W. Powell arrived in the mission on the 12th inst. He delivered two sermons in Kirtland with good liberto and acceptance; also Bro. T. W. Williams, our "young preacher," did some excellent preaching, and baptized three at Kirtland on the 16th. Our young brother is a second cousin of Captain "Dan Jones," the great Welsh preacher orator,one of the first missionaries to Wales. I am inclined to believe that if Bro. Williams keeps humble and is faithful in keeping the commandments, he will become a useful man in the church. May God bless both of our worthy young brethren! Both seem to have a grand future before them, and if they will continue to be true to the trust that God has reposed in them, He will be to them a true friend and a constant helper.

The Kirtland Sabbath School picnic, on the 11th inst., was a grand success in every particular; there was a large gathering of friends all of whom seemed to enjoy themselves immensely. A variety of innocent games were indulged in for the amusement of both old and young. Long tables were spread with an abundance of eatables which were truly appreciated by all. The school furnished the ice cream and lemonade, which of course gave satisfaction.

The work in this mission is in a splendid condition with the exception of a few places where some trifling grievances exist; but we hope to be able to adjust all these difficulties soon. It is almost impossible to keep all who profess to be Saints within the lines of duty. Some people do not seem to be happy unless they are constantly in trouble, nor do they enjoy themselves unless they can bring others into the same miserable condition. If those that appear to possess the faculty to discover defects and weaknesses in others would occasionally turn the reflector on themselves, perhaps they would find it sufficiently hard to keep self clear of those human weaknesses that we are all subject to.

We desire to call the attention of the Saints to the fact that there has been a large number of missionaries assigned to this mission, and that it will require a considerable amount of money to support them and their families. Hence it is to be hoped that all who are interested in this latter day work and the salvation of the people will put forth an earnest effort to pay their tithes and free-will offerings into the church treasury as soon as practicable. Please send all moneys to the following agents: F. Criley, No. 116 Federal street, Allegheny City, Penna., T. J. Beatty, Limerick, Jackson Co., Ohio; William Lockerby, Coldwater, Michigan; Andrew Barr, Forester, Sanilac county, Michigan.

I leave here to day for Washingtonville, Ohio. Brn. Powell and Williams will continue the meetings as long as the interest will justify their remaining here. The Saints here are doing nicely; Sr. Stewart furnishes a good comfortable home to any of the ministry, which is highly appreciated by the brethren. Bro. Stewart kindly conveys the brethren to and from their appointments which is also appreciated. Sisters Hawley, and Harriett and Mary Ann Scott are growing strong in the faith, and are a great help to the cause here. Some are believing and I think will unite ere the brethren leave. With regards to all, I am, your brother and co-laborer,

G. T. GRIFFITHS.

ARLINGTON, Dak., June 26th.

Dear Herald:—Since I last wrote you, Bro. Robert A. Oehring and myself have tried to point the people to the straight and narrow way. We have held quite a number of meetings in the Bolt School-house, about five miles north-west of Arlington. We were blessed with good liberty and fair congregations. The seed sown did not all fall on stony ground; some fell in good soil, and as a result I had the pleasure to-day of leading six precious souls down into to waters of baptism. We confirm them there this evening. Bro. Morris Stone; also Bro. A. C. Stone and wife were the only Saints in this place when we came; now they rejoice to know that the Lord is calling others out of darkness into his marvelous light.

Last Sunday afternoon I spoke on the divine origin of the Book of Mormon. A Lutheran minister by the name of Christopherson was present. After meeting we gave permission to ask questions. The Rev. (?) asked if he could say a few words. We gave him our consent, when he asked if he could speak in his mother tongue (Norwegian). This was also granted, when he spoke about twenty minutes. We learned afterwards that he had counselled all his flock to stay away from "those soul-devour-

Sr. Stone defended our cause in the Norwegian language. I went up and shook hands with the Rev. after the conflict had ended, and asked him to tell me what we were preaching that was not in accordance with holy writ. He said that he had no time to discuss; had no time to talk. I tried to get him into argument, but I could not. He left amid the laughter of those present.

We leave for Farnsworth, Sanborn county on the morning train tomorrow,

E. DAY BENNETT.

NEW FREEPORT, Pa.,

Editors Herald:-I am alone; no one on earth near my place of residence to comfort me; no one to labor with me; none to sing a song of Zion to cheer me; none to bow in prayer with me. I have heard but one or two sermons preached since I came into the Church. It is very trying for one to be all alone, while storm after storm of persecutions rise up against him, while the world speak evil of me daily, and the professing characters and their ministers of the sectarian faith and doctrine, who teach nothing but the doctrine of men, laying aside the commandments of God. But while all this is the case, in the very midst of all these fiery trials, I intend to cling to the rich promises of Christ, for he has promised to protect and help all who will obey and be faithful unto the end. He is my comforter, my shield and my only support; my only care, and if I continue faithful I know I shall never fall.

I know that the Lord can bring us all out on the safe side if will put our whole trust in him, devoting all our time and service unto him. I am poor, but the Lord is rich unto all who call upon him; when I am weak he is able to strengthen me; when surrounded by a host of enemies he is able to send legions of angels to deliver me from their hands. And while all these things are true, and God can not lie, O why should I or any of us murmur, or yet complain, when we meet with trials and temptations hard to bear?

When we think of how our Savior suffered for our sakes, and think how great was his sufferings, and how great was his love toward us, insomuch that he died for our sakes—died that we might live! Who but a kind Savior would have done so much for a people? He died not, for his friends, but for his enemies! Praise be unto his name for his goodness.

We look for a new heaven and a new earth wherein dwelleth righteousness. We should live to enjoy that time, for we are taught by the scriptures that it is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God, but he knoweth how to deliver the godly out of temptations, and to reserve the unjust unto the day of judgment. May the persecutors of the Saints shortly turn to the high calling, (as was the case of Saul).

My parents brought me up in the so-called Campbellite faith, and when I reached the age of twenty-three, thought I ought to become a christian, and that people was holding a protracted effort in Wetzel county, West Virginia, at my father's residence. One night, on invitation, I went forward and gave the preacher (Steed by name) my hand, and the next day I was (so-called) baptized by him and received into that church, and of course was a member of that body. But no blessings of the Holy Spirit were given; nothing to encourage me, insomuch that I could say that I was in the true church and kingdom of Jesus Christ.

But I went on in that way until I met a little band of Saints who taught quite a different doctrine, which embraced a different faith, and which was strengthened by heavenly truth. I at first shunned them, for I was taught not to listen to them as they were nothing but "Mormons," and Salt Lake devils and demons trying to enforce polygamy upon the people. I well remember the first time I went to their church. I would not go into the house, but laid down on the outside and made light of their preaching. I heard them speak in the gift of tongues, and I laughed all the more. But suddenly there came a fear upon me. My attention was turned toward them, and the next time I went into the house and listened more earnestly and more honestly; and the preaching was with such words of great power that I was at once convinced that, surely, they were the people of God, and that the Lord surely worked wonderfully with them. But my parents fought all the harder against my going to where the Saints had meetings. They began to think I would leave the Campbellite Church. But I had dreams of much warning, for I called upon God to hear my cries, as I was in great distress-troubled day and night. And thanks to God and to the Lamb, my voice was heard, and the Lord opened up a way before me, bursting the clouds of fear and doubt that had clustered so heavily around me; and I gave myself up fully unto the Lord, and I forsook my parents, brethren, friends and socalled church, and fled for refuge in Christ Jesus. Elder Thomas Wyckoff attended to the ordinance of baptism, after which confirmation took place; and O, what seasons have I seen since I became a citizen of the kingdom of God and had fellowship with the Saints!

I have often met with people who, when first we met, treated me with kindness, but as soon as they found out what church I belonged to, they would immediately try to bring blasphemy against me. I have been where I preached and their whole congregation would rise up against me, and revile me, and call me all kinds of names and try to condemn me with the Scriptures; but I must truthfully say that I never was defeated in one of their undertakings against me; the Lord always opened up a way for me to escape in safety; placed words on my lips to use when it was necessary to speak; and I do not think that any Saint need fear any foe if they are living closely to their duties in obedience to their Creator; for the Lord has promised to give unto his servants by the Holy Spirit, in the same hour that they shall speak. I have never known a Saint yet to fail and be at a loss to know what to say, even when the greatest foe approached them. The Lord seeth all things and knoweth all things, and has said that no greater temptation should come upon us than we were able to bear. Then why need we fear to trust him and place all confidence in him?

I would that I was able to send for an elder to come into this part of the country and preach and try to bring many of my friends, whom I love (above all their persecutions, ill treatment they bring against me) to embrace the truth and become heirs of the kingdom, and make their peace, calling and election sure with God before it is too late. For "the day of the Lord cometh as a thief in the night." O, let us all be ready waiting for the coming of the Lord, for he surely cometh in great power, in flaming fire, taking vengeance upon those who believe not the gospel; who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power. My prayer to God the Father, in the name of Christ is, that all the Saints may so continue to be faithful to the end of the race, for the prize is at the end. We lost one kind sister out of our ranks in Wetzel county. West Virginia-Hannah Wyckoff. She was a faithful sister, and she is greatly missed. She was called before the winter months had closed; but the will of the Lord be done. I have heard her speak with the gift of tongues different times.

If we, as fellow workers in the Master's cause, are not permitted to meet on earth, I hope in the morning of the sweet resurrection we shall all appear in robes of white and behold our Savior's face, and then forever dwell together. Forgive me for being so tedious.

Your brother in Christ,

WILBER, Neb., June 28th.

W. W. Blair:—Herewith I hand you the letter of Mr. W. T. Moore. He read this in the presence of Brn. G. Z. Redfield and J. Drury. The latter has resided in Brownville since 1857, and they each assured me that the statement of Mr. Moore was correct.

Be it understood by all that Brownville is a "dead town," the cause thereof the removal of the county seat. Town property can be purchased at from twenty-five per cent to thirty-three and a third per cent of what it could now be constructed for. The place is a quiet retreat for those who may desire to live cheaply and comfortably. From thirty-three years experience in eastern Nebraska, I am fully assured that the soil and climate are unsurpassed. I have no "axe to grind," no object in view other than to aid those who may desire to obtain homes in "the regions round about." And to all my advice would be to first go and see—"have all things [arrangements] prepared before hand."

In gospel bonds,

ROBERT M. ELVIN.

To those desiring cheap homes either in town or country come to Brownville, Nemaha county, Nebraska. Brownville is one of the oldest towns in the state, is situated on the Missouri river about half way between St. Joseph, Missouri, and Omaha, Nebraska. Its natural advantages consist, chiefly, in the very rich and productive soil of the surrounding country, producing, in its natural state, without any fertilizing, wheat, rye, barley, oats and corn, in great abundance, also heavy crops of grass, which show up in the fine timothy and clover meadows and in blue grass and timothy pastures that can be seen on the majority of the farms in the country. It is also fully and profitably demonstrated by several years testing by Ex-Governor R. W. Furness, C. W. Kauffman, Joseph H. Heikes and others, that the wooded hills and bluff lands near Brownville are especially adapted to the growing of almost all the different varieties of grapes and small fruits, producing annually large and profitable crops of these fruits. A failure of the small fruit crop in this locality has not yet occurred. Also the larger fruits do well here, especially the apple, which is grown in large quantities. The country is abundantly watered with pure and health-giving water. The climate is pure and healthy, the seasons regular, the rain-fall abundant and crops never fail. Schools and churches convenient and plenty; market facilities good; taxes low. It takes but little effort here to make a living, and those that "get up and rustle" soon get rich. Good farms can be bought at from twenty dollars to thirty dollars per acre; some bottom and bluffy farms at from ten dollars to twenty dollars per acre; good hill fruit land at ten dollars to twenty dollars per acre. Choice and well improved farms sell as high as fifty-five dollars per acre. Good three to five room houses in Brownville with one to two lots can be bought at from two hundred dollars to three hundred dollars; and large, commodious frame and brick residences, with from six to ten rooms and three to eight lots, (lots forty-five by one hundred and forty feet), at from four hundred dollars to one thousand eight hundred dollars. Taking everything into consideration, this is one of the best places in the world for a man, woman, or child with a little money to secure a good, comfortable home. If you do not believe it, come and see and be convinced.

FLORILLA, Missouri, June 22d.

Herald Editors:—Find enclosed a clipping from the Taney County Missouri News. The paper was sent to me by one of my neighbors wrapped around some plants. You see the gentleman defies all Mormons. I think some of our brethren should meet the gentleman and give him the opportunity to prove his bold assertions in public when there will be both sides of the question looked at. [We have sent the clipping to Bro. J. Luff, Independence, Missouri, to look after.—Ed.] I love this glorious cause and love to see it defended.

It does my soul good to read of precious souls coming out of darkness into the marvelous light of God's dear Son. I am only a young soldier in this blessed army of Jesus, and I am to-day rejoicing and thanking God that it has been my happy privilege to enter the fold of the great Shepherd here on earth. Pray for me that I may overcome every temptation and be among the number that have washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. I was baptized in September, 1888, by Bro. Bootman, confirmed by brethren Bootman and Atwell. I am the only one of my people that I know of that belong to the church. I pray God to be merciful to them and show them the right way as he has me. My husband is a believer, and I hope ere long will obey.

We are living eight miles west of Willow Springs. This is a new country and there are good chances here for people to get land. The land is owned by the South Missouri Land Co., and can be bought at from two to three dollars per acre. This country is well watered and well timbered, and the land produces very well. We can raise all kinds of vegetables and fruit except tropical fruits. The country is hilly and broken which makes it a splendid stock growing country. We are very anxious to get neighbors who are Latter Day Saints around us. So if any of the brethren or sisters want to come to a new country or want to make any inquiries, if they will write us, enclosing stamp, we will try as near as we can to give them all its merits and demerits. You get three years' time to pay for the land, or you can settle on it by paying a small sum down and wait till you get able to pay the rest. Your sister in Christ,

M. E. TUCKER.

Cooks Point, June 25th.

Dear Brethren:—I left on the 12th instant for Bell county. I stopped first at Rogers and found that the church at that place was to be occupied the following Sunday by some other preacher, so I left an appointment for the next Sunday and went to Elmwood branch and found the member-hip moving along tolerably well, except a little bit of trouble in the branch, but am glad to say that was satisfactorily adjusted. While there I preached once and visited all the members. I met Bro. Waterman at Bro. Simons. Had a good time with them.

We went to a school-house five miles away and I preached to the people. Bro. Waterman opened and closed the services at the meeting. Bro. Simons preached at the same place next day. He is surely coming to the front in the way of preaching this year. It took him a good while to start, but he is making use of the present time and opportunities. Bro. Waterman aims to preach now as opportunity affords or circumstances permit. He seems to be alive to the work gain. He has been rather lying dormant for about four years from some cause. He has been sick for some time and came to Bell county to be administered to and was healed at once, and went on his way rejoicing. He seemed to be very happy.

I left Elmwood and came back to Rogers and filled the appointments there. On my way up to said branch had a small number of outsiders to preach to, but fair liberty. Hope some good will result from the efforts. I also visited the Saints in the neighborhood of Rogers and attended the funeral of one of Bro. L. Thomas' children, a little boy. I administered to one other of his children with seemingly good results. He rested well afterward and I left it doing well. I left for home and on my arrival found all well and glad to see me back again in time for our reunion which commences the 5th of July. Let everybody come that can come.

Yours in bonds, E. W. NUNLEY.

PROTESTANT Christianity is not only divided and subdivided, but is literally broken into fragments by dissensions and strife within its own ranks, each sect upholding and sustaining opposing creeds, while the Catholic church remains united on every point of doctrine, thereby gaining an advantage over her divided and contending rivals. If the churches were what they profess to be, divine institutions, and the expounders of their principles divinely inspired, we would naturally expect that they would be of a kind and gentle disposition, exercising charity and forbearance towards all who could not conscientiously concur in their dogmas and creeds, but, unfortunately for the churches, the sacred pages of history inform us that with cruel hands they have tortured and put to death in the most horrible manner imaginable the sincere, truth-loving heretic for no other offense than being true to the convictions of his own mind .- Sel.

BORN AGAIN.

WHAT is it that is born again? the spirit only or both body and spirit? Both, I be-But two processes are gone lieve. through in order to the one complete new birth,—the water first, then the spirit, making the one birth; for the Savior himself only commands that which he had experienced, and by so much he was the one to tell what would be best for men and women to do in order to obtain citizenship in his church. The Father requires no more of others than he did of his Son. we do not hear the audible voice of God as Christ did, at our baptism of water, we certainly will know of our acceptance when baptized of the Spirit, for Paul tells us "The Spirit itself bears witness with our spirit that we are the children of God; if children, then heirs; heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ," because we have gone through the same process that Christ did, namely, baptism of water and the Spirit.

Nearly all who call themselves orthodox deny that baptism of water is a real and saving ordinance, but state that the Spirit is, and that men can and do receive the Spirit without water baptism. They also say that the Savior's lesson to Nicodemus was to him alone and not to any others; that it is useless to make a general application of it. It is asked why the Savior did not put the same words to the rich young man and to the lawyer, instead of saying, "Sell that thou hast and give to the poor," and to the lawyer, "How readest thou?" He answered his own ques-Had the rich young man been willing to obey, he would have been willing to be born again; and had the lawyer been willing to love God with all his heart and his neighbor as himself, he too, would have been willing to have been born again. So with Nicodemus, had he been born again he would have been willing to sell all he had and given it to the poor; the new birth brings such a state of things to every heart and mind. Jesus was the most philanthropic being that ever was on earth. He gave on the right hand and left such blessings both temporal and spiritual as were never known on earth before in so plentiful a manner. And he was born again. Does some one say that Christ was not born again? If so I have read to little purpose. Certainly he needed no baptism for sins committed by himself; he was born again, though, for all that.

He never was called the Son of God direct until his baptism by John. The prophets foretold that he should be called the Son of the Highest; the angels announced to the shepherds the birth of a Savior, calling him Christ the Lord. angel to Mary said he should be called the Son of the Highest. But when? At his baptism by John;—the very thing occurred that was foretold; and again, on the mount of transfiguration. Why do men hesitate to say or to believe a plain statement of plain facts even if Christ be the subject under consideration. Shall we deny the truth and say that Christ was baptized just to accomodate John? I believe that a failure on the part of Jesus to obey, and to suffer the ordinance of baptism of water to pass unheeded, and he never would have received the Holy Ghost, and would never have been the Savior of men. And so, now, if we persistently ignore the ordinance of baptism of water, we never will enjoy the Spirit, and we will be worse than the foolish virgins who had lamps but no oil. We will not even have a lamp, much less oil. How men and women can expect salvation through Christ and obedience to his gospel when they are determined to obey it only so far as it suits them is a query. The Savior said, "I came not to do my own will, but his that sent me." "He gave me a commandment, what I should say and what I should speak, and I know that his commandment is life everlasting." then he spoke to John when that individual objected to baptizing him, saying, "Suffer it to be so now, for thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness."

If it became Christ to obey the Father's will, what shall we do if we neglect so great salvation? Are we wiser than God and more holy than Christ?

Now that the body needs regeneration is evident from the fact the body is the temple of the living God. Again: God dwells not in unholy temples, hence the new birth makes us new creatures. Is the spirit a creature? Every creature under heaven perished in the flood. Did the spirits perish if they did? If so, it was useless for Christ to go to the spirits in prison which some time were disobedient in the days of Noah. Again: What is it that is buried in baptism? The body and spirit both. And if the body is not renewed, neither is the spirit, for a good spirit will not dwell in sinful bodies, and Paul says our bodies are to be a living sac-The promise is secured through obedience, and Paul says again: "Having therefore, dearly beloved, these promises, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit," showing beyond a peradventure that the body as well as spirit are cleansed in the new birth. And when we fall asleep in Jesus, the spirit rests in hope. It is the body that sleeps, not the spirit. We have no affinity with soul-sleepers.

To Nicodemus the words of our Savior were too deep. After instructing in the complete new birth he tells him, "The wind bloweth where it listeth; thou hearest the sound thereof, but canst not tell whence it cometh nor whither it goeth. So is every one that is born of the Spirit." As the wind was beyond the ken of Nicodemus as to its course, so is every one else to him that is born of the Spirit. He less as not to be believed, even upon oath.

was as ignorant of the flow or the Spirit and its workings as he was of the wind. We can not believe with some that "So is every one that is born of the Spirit," means that Saints do not know from whence the Spirit comes, for Christ said he would send it from the Father. And if we did not know where it came from, how could we say we felt the Spirit of God? We would be at sea as much as Nicodemus. Thank God for knowledge. We do know that body and spirit are regenerated; that after the birth of water and Spirit we are new creatures in Christ; that the body is the temple of the living God, made in the beginning like unto himself, and will at the resurrection of the just be moulded and fashioned like Christ's glorious body. For as John says, "we shall be like him," and we know his body was glorious if we know anything of the hope of true Saints.

Your brother in weakness, T. F. STAFFORD. LEWISTON, Ill., June 6th.

FOOD FOR THOUGHT.

JESUS said "The truth shall make you But men can only hope to be free by abiding steadfastly therein.

God is called "The Father of light, in whom there is no variableness, nor shadow of turning." Satan is the head and the front of the opposition to God and His truth, and has been called "the father of lies"—the father of liars—and was himself a liar from the beginning.

Darkness is the opposite to light, as is also error or falsehood to truth. So God as the first great cause, the Author of light and truth, must forever stand as the very embodiment of that which is good. His word, truth and counsel alone are the standard to which man must conform, if he would ever attain unto that excellency revealed in the life of Jesus of Nazareth. Therefore, to be godly and godlike, is to partake of the light as it is in Him, and abide in the truth.

Satan, in the "conflict of the ages," has always stood in opposition to the right, from that day when he fell from his high estate as Son of the morning and was hurled from the battlements of heaven, when he became the Prince of Darkness, the power for evil, and the very embodiment of that which is bad, resisting righteousness and truth and peace among the Men are said to be devilish, and children of the devil, when they identify themselves with them, abiding not in the commandments and loving not the truth. How in the world can a man love the truth, and yet at the same time tell a lie? Can the love of truth dominate a man's life without giving truthfulness to the statements he shall make? When a person falls into the habit, and when lying becomes characteristic of the man, does he abide in the truth? and is it possible for such a one to be in favor with God?

And yet there are persons so low in the scale of morals, and still professing great sanctity, and yet so destitute of truthful-

When a man descends to that depth of degradation that, in the ordinary affairs of business and every day life, he is constantly guilty of inisrepresentation and falsehood, he certainly forfeits all claim to respect and sincerity of motive governing his life. And strange as it may seem, such persons when brought to the bar of the church and convicted, or made to confess, or both, sometimes assume the air of injured innocence, and wail so piteously over their great persecutions.

But is it not true all over our fair land, that criminals of all classes always complain when brought to justice? fore, the church is no exception to the rule, at least in this respect. Even when persons make confession and continue right on in their crooked course, and it very naturally becomes town talk, how often it is that they seem to feel greatly abused and slandered because of the notoriety of their conduct! If they would stop the clatter of tongues, let them just change their conduct, doing the right because it is right, and loving the truth, so redeeming the past. And then, and not until then, will people see that they really mean and desire to be Christians.

"'Tis a long lane which has no turning;" and while a man by mere cunning and strange combination of circumstances may long go on unchecked in a career of sin and folly, yet a just Providence has or-dained, "Thy sins shall find thee out." And while the alert and discerning may long have been aware of the real situation, and were in a state of expectancy for the collapse to come, yet to the unwary and the undiscerning it would be as a clap of thunder out of a clear sky, and a great trial to their faith.

It can not be said that every falsifier is a hypocrite, because some do not make any profession whatever. But it is true that every hypocrite is base in professing to be that which he is not. Actions speak louder than words and are even said to be more eloquent than words. It does not necessarily occur that a fair deed is conclusive as to honest and true motive. Selfish, aspiring and base men, for base and ignoble purposes, often do those things which we call generous and good, thinking that thereby they can best promote their purposes. But the motive governing gives character to the deed. So, if the motive be bad, the deed is bad. And while the deed itself may be a great good in its practical bearings upon those whom it was sought to effect, yet it can not be to the credit of the doer, because he did it but for base and selfish purposes. The very essence of a deed is the motive actuating.

But of all deceptions, that which only a corrupt and depraved man could use, would be to pretend to visions and revelations in order be conspicuous, and also to be regarded by the unsuspecting and weak as beloved of God and possessing special divine favor.

And while it is true that the Lord, as Sovereign God, may condescend to reveal himself in a wondrous manner unto a man in abomination and sin, yet claims made by such men to such especial and extraordinary distinction, are, to say the least, painfully open to the suspicion of fraud, and need very greatly divine confirmation before being received as from God.

Modesty, (and it is a jewel), would at least suggest that persons whose standing in decent society may well be brought into question, should refrain from parading their visions and revelations in public places and upon public occasions, and should not push them into public print. An unsavory man, with a reputation accordingly, when publicly, or through the press, giving publicity to his claims for special divine manifestation, does but bring into ridicule and disrepute the gifts and blessings of the gospel.

Therefore, it behooves us to act wisely, cultivating the good, repressing the evil, and so stimulate the faith "once delivered to the Saints."

There is great need of the Saints being awake and vigilant, discerning the spirits, for many deceivers are in the land.

CHARACTER.

Many in ancient times sought to render themselves famous and clothe their names with immortality by the erection of ponderous walls, magnificent edifices, towering pyramids or sculptured sphinx. Men valiant in aggressive warfare, were deified; and heroes noted for their deeds of gallant chivalry were enshrined in the memory of tender maidens, aspiring youths, and antiquated sires. These were times of legendary faith and mythological lore.

A higher conception of nobility is generated and revealed in the Christian ideal. The pyramid of Abel is a moral one, by which "he being dead yet speaketh." This monument of royal fame and renown was erected by faith and faithful service to God. Abel's notoriety is due to the excellency of his character, as rendered by his association with God through the gospel. Moses erected no walls nor left the impress of his ambition upon the sculptured rock, yet he lives in the memory of God's people, his character an enduring monument that can not waste with the decadence of years.

Christ fought no battles, aspired to no worldly honors, commanded no wealth; yet in character he stands infinitely high; towering above all. By the mention of his name many hearts are made glad, and the regenerate praise and adore him. A victim of cruel hate, a lamb among wolves, he stood immaculate. His attendants witnessed no scene of violence nor heard a word of contemplated retaliation upon his part. When reviled, he reviled not again; suspicioned, he rebuked the secrets of their hearts in sorrow; threatened, he passed quietly out of their midst, but feared them not; flattered, he received not their homage; beloved, he gave in rich return. Wealth of character was his store.

Everybody should court such riches, and all else be subsidiary to this great end. The development of character is effected by allegiance to truth and holiness, loyalty to principle and the pleadings of a pure conscience an exercise of which will guide aright and raise our spirits to the realm of usefulness, virtue and true worth.

Socrates of the Orient, and modern philanthropists of our own blessed land, among whom rank Washington, Franklin, Lincoln and many others, rise in preeminence above mediocrity because of their exalted aspirations and unceasing devotion to the better interests of humanity. Prestige of character is not purchased by a single superficial effort. It is the reward of continuous well-doing through life. Energy and perseverance, caution and forethought, charity and humility, reverence and secret devotion, are indispensable qualities to the attainment of the great off.

Character elevates its possessor to an aminence of thought and purpose and guards him from the dangers of passion and vice. It sees the faults and weaknesses of humanity, but does not stumble at them. Conservative in its nature, it smiles benignly upon all; panders not to the vanity of riches nor looks with disfavor upon the poor; knows no moral standard but truth and justice; accords that "all men are born free and equal."

The genius of character is ennobling, purifying, renovating, exalting. It should be the desideratum of every life, the priceless treasure of every heart, and sought after as the treasure of greatest value. Whosoever possesses it is enriched with eternity's wealth,—the earnest of unspeakable glory. It adapts men to the higher spheres and most important stations of life; qualifies them to fulfill the sacred functions of church and state, and capacitates them for entrance into that greater and holier realm as "rulers over many things."

He who seeks a world of glory—
A brighter sphere beyond the sky,
Must learn the old but still new story
Of how to live and how to die.

To die? Oh, yes; we are but mortal,
This life at best is but a span;
And would we stop within the portal,
We must acquit ourselves as men.

It is not all of life the living,
Nor is it all of death to die;
So while we live let's be preparing
That we may even dare to die.

Yes, ever living, ever dying,
Our onward march is toward the grave;
But Jesus, in the resurrection,
Has promised us our souls to save

THE SHEEP AND THE GOATS.

Editors Herald:—With no desire to control, yet I find representatives of the church are frequently approached touching that advocated in the colums of the Herald. And nothing is more pleasurable to me than to be in accord with my fellow representatives. But I am not prepared to forego my convictions when thinking they have been legitimately obtained.

Deferentially I wish to say that I am not prepared to endorse the answer, as to the sheep and the goats which appeared in Herald of April 27th and which was reproduced in Herald of June 15th. The 25th chapter of Matthew explains I think very beautifully that of which it is reflective. That the invitation of Christ to the sheep (as there represented) to inherit the kingdom prepared for them from the foundation of the world was somewhat of a surprise to them is evinced in the fact of their interrogating the King as to when they did the good deeds he gave them credit for. Surely this can not be those who become Saints of God, for they enter the fold of Christ's work and struggle for and expect a reward—a salvation.

The chapter represents five characters, namely: the King, angels, the brethren, sheep and goats. The brethren have been representatives of, hence their relation to Christ. As representatives they are now saved as per promise, "He that is not ashamed of me and my words before men, of him I will not be ashamed before my Father and his holy angels." But the sheep receive the invitation to come, etc., because Christ says as they, the sheep, have done the good deeds to the brethren, they did it unto him. Surely nothing could be more positive to show the difference between the righteous Saints and the sheep who become righteous by the exhibition of kindness to the brethren, so far as such acts could make them righ-In gospel bonds, teous. James Caffall.

To the foregoing we reply: We are aware that some of the ministry have for years taken the position held by Bro. Caffall of the sheep and the goats. However we see nothing to justify that view.

It will be noticed that at the judgment all nations are to be gathered before him and separated into two classes, the "sheep" and the "goats." The term sheep is a designation of the people of God: so we thy people, and sheep of thy pasture".—Ps. 79: 13: "My sheep wander through the mountains."—Ezek. 34: 6: Awake, O sword smite the shepherd and the sheep shall be scattered."—Zech. 13: 17. "He saith unto Peter, Feed my sheep."—John 21: 17; "The Lord Jesus that great shepherd of the sheep."—Heb. 13: 20.

In this parable the sheep are also called the "righteous" and are to inherit the kingdom, and are addressed as "ve blessed of my Father;" terms pretty strong to apply to any but actual disciples or people of God. Their evident surprise at the commendations of Jesus, and their inquiry as to when they had done such things unto him may be readily accounted for by the statement that they evidently failed to grasp the idea that Jesus did not mean that they had done all those things to him personally, but that in ministering to his servants they had virtually done so to him. "Whoso receiveth you receiveth me," is in harmony with this idea.

Was the kingdom prepared from before the foundation of the world for the blessed of the Father, or for another class of individuals? Those mentioned as being on the right hand of Jesus are called right-eous. Who are the righteous? "And they were both righteous before God, walking in obedience to all the commandments and ordinances of the Lord blameless."—Luke 1: 6. Paul informs us that the righteousness of God is revealed in the gospel; and John says, "Every one that doeth righteousness is born of God;" "the fine linen is the righteousness of Saints," etc.

The thirty second verse informs up that he shall separate them one from another—"the sheep on the right hand and the goats on the left; and while we fully believe in the degrees of rewards and punishments in the future state, we certainly fail to see that this parable divides the nations into any but two classes. The righteous certainly compose part of the "all nations." The term "goats," applied to all who are not righteous, does not preclude nor set aside the various degrees of condemnation under which such may rest.

The term "righteous" can only be applied to actual disciples of Christ. The scriptures conclude "all under sin" who are not Saints. We fail to discover that the word righteous applies to any but actual followers of Christ. "But of him are ye in Christ Jesus, who of God is made unto us wisdom, and righteousness, and sanctification, and redemption."—I Cor. I: 30; "And that ye put on the new man, which after God is created in righteousness and true holiness."—Eph. 4: 24. "He that abideth in the doctrine of Christ hath both the Father and the Son."—2 John 9.

It will not do to interpret the Scriptures so as to make them conflict; and as we before quoted the Book of Mormon on the above, we now repeat it:

"O the greatness and the justice of our God! For he executeth all his words, and they have gone forth out of his mouth, and his law must be fulfilled. But behold, the righteous, the Saints of the Holy One of Israel, they who have believed in the Holy One of Israel; they who have endured the crosses of the world and despised the shame of it; they shall inherit the kingdom of God, which was prepared for them from the foundation of the world; and their joy shall be full forever."—2 Nephi 6: 7.

"And behold, I say unto you, this is not all; for O how beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that is the founder of peace; yea, even the Lord, who has redeemed his people; yea, he who has granted salvation unto his people, for were it not for the redemption which he hath made for his people, which was prepared from the foundation of the world; I say unto you, were it not for this, all mankind must have perished. But behold, the bands of death shall be broken, and the Son reigneth, and hath power over the dead; therefore, he bringeth to pass the resurrection of the dead. And there cometh a recurrection, even a first resurrection; yea, even a resurrection of those that have been, and who are, and who shall be even until the resurrection of Christ; for so shall he be called. And now, the resurrection of all the prophets, and all those that have believed in their words, or all those that have kept the commandments of God, shall come forth in the first resurrection; therefore they are the first resurrection. They are raised to dwell with God who has redeemed them; thus they have eternal life through Christ, who has broken the bands of death. And these are those who have part in the first resurrection; and these are they that have died before Christ came, in their ignorance, not having salvation declared unto them. And thus the Lord bringeth about the restoration of these; and they have a part in the first resurrection, or have eternal life, being redeemed by the Lord. And little children also have eternal life. But behold, and fear, and tremble before God; for ye ought to tremble; for the Lord redeemeth none such that rebel against him, and die in their sins; yea, even all those that have perished in their sins; ever since the world began, that have wilfully rebelled against God, that have known the commandments of God, and would not keep them; these are they that have no part in the first resurrection. Therefore had ye not ought to tremble? For salvation cometh to none such: for the Lord hath redeemed none such; yea, neither can the Lord redeem such; for he can not deny himself: for he can not deny justice when it has its claim."-Mosiah 8: 6.

INTERMEDDLERS.

Dear Herald:—There is an idle curiosity, called inquisitiveness, which leads to meddling and causes men and women to pry into the affairs of their neighbors, which is really deserving of censure for several good reasons: 1. It disturbs good order and destroys the peace of society. 2. It develops and encourages many bad feelings. 3. It draws men and women aside from a consistent course of civility in the discharge of their own duty as neighbors and citizens. 4. It breaks up the friendships of families and brings bitter and lasting disagreement and eventually propagates its bad spirit in all the surrounding vicinity. 5. It is the cause of destroying those friendly relations and brotherly offices between man and man. 6. It takes out of the hands of each other the opportunities of doing good to each other in times of necessity, and even of direful calamities. 7. Intermeddling is the work of busybodies, tattlers, backbiters, slanderers, liars and self-conceited would-be wise ones. 8. It breeds a malicious spirit, also tale-telling to others confidentially; peddling matters out secretly with the intent to injure. Then the spirit of jealousy arises in order to discover something that will break down the reputation of some to the level of their own. Then flattery comes along and metes out its malignant purposes, doing evil.

Is there nothing better for this class of workers to follow!

Stop, reader, and count up the number of busybodies in your church and neighborhood. The following signs mark them: Some one hears a rumor about some one or some thing, they give it new life, and away it flies on the wings of scandal, accompanied by falsehood, misrepresentation, and mountains rise out of mole hills. It envelopes the minds and conversation of the busybodies for weeks, and finally they talk of it so much they really come to believe the scandal is true. So the world moves.

The disposition of such persons is wholly different from that amiable and gentle spirit, the spirit on which our whole religious system is founded.

Charity covers a multitude of faults; but this prying, meddling spirit in man or woman endeavors to find out all the supposed little and great faults of others, and makes itself the standard of perfection.

Charity does not rejoice in iniquity, but throws her mautle over the shortcomings of others.

This prying into the affairs of others becomes a distemper, and sometimes affects a whole neighborhood, as well as individuals. In fact, nearly all of Adam's posterity is more or less afflicted with it in some form. But Christ's disciples should not be so. There are many little duties for Christ's children to do rather than engage in what the world does. Godliness, virtue, Christian watchfulness and activity are the watchwords.

"FEED MY LAMBS."

NEXT to the injunction, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature," is the one uttered by the same great Teacher, with which this article is headed. It is evident here that Christ was speaking of the children of the kingdom, for He at divers times referred to the adults as sheep, and this would be but a logical conclusion.

"As the twig is bent the tree's inclined" is a saying of the present as well as of the past, and that the truth contained therein is evident to every sober and sane minded person needs no argument. It is an established principle of psychology that early impressions are most lasting. All educators and many parents are acquainted with the fact that it requires a much greater effort to get rid of wrong or false impressions than it does to acquire correct ones. Then it follows naturally that a mind influenced by wrong impressions must first be cleansed from these errors and then supplied with right principles. There is no question but that much, if not the most, of character making is accomplished prior to the age of twelve years. From this fact may we not deduce this conclusion: That if proper and healthful influences be thrown about the child up to that time, there is little cause to fear for his welfare through life?

In intellectual pursuits every precaution is taken to develop such methods and to secure such teachers as shall give the right kind of training to the child, so that much time need not be spent in unlearning that which has been learned under improper management. Most of us adults know how difficult it is to break off from habits of long standing even though they seem so trivial in their character. Words whose pronunciation we have learned incorrectly at first give us untold trouble before we are able to master the change.

What is true in the intellectual is also true in the spiritual. Wrong impressions and ideas in regard to principles of the gospel are just as difficult of correction as wrong principles of mathematics, and can be corrected only by unlearning the wrong and substituting the right.

The question for us to solve is this: Shall we arrange for the proper instruction of the young and in this way save the extra task of unlearning? and if so, how? To the first part of the question the answer would invariably be in the affirmative; to the second part the answer is: By establishing and maintaining Sunday Schools where right principles shall be taught to the young of the church. These schools should be controlled by members of the church, and the principles of the gospel should be the principal objects to be taught. These schools should be placed upon a dignified basis and must receive the attention of the church in order to secure and maintain the dignity necessary to their The Sunday School work ought success. to be and no doubt soon will be recognized as a distinct department of church work, for the great advance which we expect the church to make in the immediate future depends greatly upon the Sunday School work.

The Sunday School, then, should receive the attention and patronage, where possible, by every member of Christ's kingdom, from the smallest child of a teachable age to the silver haired veteran of the cross. Let us look then to the religious training of the young. There are provisions made for feeding the sheep, and shall the lambs be permitted to go hungry? Do not let us permit them to wander in search of food but set it before them, and when the doors of the fold shall be opened to them they will be willing and ready to enter.

FAITHFULNESS IN LITTLE THINGS.

THE MASTER has told us, "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much." In this utterance of our Savior lies the secret of our successful service. The child who never masters the alphabet can never have success in any other department of study. So in all departments of life there are the little things which lay at the entrance of our pathway which must be met and dealt with before we can successfully proceed.

There is that merchant who has been so successful. How we point to him as an example of how some men get on in life and prosper, but are we aware of the real cause of his rise and prosperity? He began as a "cheque boy," and was so faithful and devoted in that position that he was pronoted to the "notion counter." And as prosperity did not seem to lift him up in his own estimation and he became only only the more devoted, he was exalted by his employers step by step, till finally he was made junior partner, and then in a little while became the head of the establishment and one of the most successful men of his day.

"Faithful in little," educates us to be "faithful in much." The littles are the principles by which the great problems are solved. Faithfulness in little fits us for faithfulness in greater things. The person who has shown faithful skill in the little and uninteresting field of labor can be depended upon for cheerful and faithful service in the larger sphere of Christian endeavor, for the character of that individual is devotion to present duty.

Paul had the true secret of the motive, spirit, and purpose of our service when he said, "Whatsoever you do, in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus." 'Whatever, therefore, ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." That shilling kindly bestowed needs a living faith to back it. That tender entreaty must be enforced by Divine love. That cup of cold water must be given in the name of Christ. That visit paid to some burdened soul must carry also a living Savior. Those two mites we bear to the Lord's treasury must be given by a heart wholly the Lord's, and then we shall have wrought well though our work have been but little.

The little duties carry with them grave responsibilities, and in these trusts comitted to our care are we to find the complement of our life's work.— World's Crisis.

WHY DO THE NEWSPAPERS GIVE SO MUCH SPACE TO CRIMES AND SO LITTLE TO NOBLE DEEDS!

We cut the following from the "Journal of Women's Work."

If the newspapers took one-tenth part of the interest in noble deeds which they take in crime, our estimate of the human race would be better than it now is. For it is natural, indeed inevitable, for us to generalize on facts brought most prominently and constantly before our minds. If a column in our favorite paper is devoted to the description of a murder or a swindle, and two or three lines, without comment, to an act of heroism, the former is almost sure to make the largest figure in our average. For instance, in a recent account of a railroad collision, we find the following item: "Engineer Martin D. Slattery, of the Wildcat, remained on his engine with his hand on the lever and was instantly killed, the lever going through his body. . . . Another train was following the Wildcat, bound West, and the conductor of the latter (name not mentioned), with three broken ribs and a dislocated hip, crawled back a considerable distance to flag it, and then fainted."

Who that reads of the exploits of men in battle, men with all their fighting instincts and their hope of victory nerving them to courage, would think of comparing their case with that of the man who calmly "stands with his hand on the lever," going, as he knows, to certain death, not to punish, but to save his fellow-creatures; and that other, dragging himself along in torture and at the risk of his life? We could wish we might at least have known his name.

Day before yesterday the writer saw a handsomely attired young man, who had, to her surprise, kept his seat in the street car when a pretty girl entered, rise and give that seat to a large, middle-aged woman with a market basket. And he did it in a way that didn't make her wish he hadn't, and she thanked him heartily, moreover, and then he lifted his hat in a manner that could not have been improved upon if it had been the pretty girl herself. And there are really plenty of such actions occurring every day if we could learn the habit of looking out for them as sharply as we do for their converse.

Apropos of the yellow fever at Jacksonville: Among the honored dead is Dr. L. F. Eddy, of Louisville, who died at the Medical Bureau a few days since. He was one of the volunteer physicians who went there to give his services free of charge to his suffering fellow-creatures, and to lay down his life in the cause of humanity. He was stricken with fever several days ago, and from the first his case has been desperate.

Pillsbury & Co., Minneapolis millers, have lately made their fourth annual divdend to their employes, the sum divided amounting to forty thousand dollars. In no case did the dividend amount to less than a month's wages. The firm has carried out the profit-sharing plan with its workmen for years, and it is needless to say that this firm has no trouble with its employes.

Miscellaneous.

SALUTATORY.

To the Saints:-Having been reappointed to the oversight of the missionary work in the east for the ensuing year, it is proper to address a few lines to you and call attention to some things of primary importance relating to the work assign-

Some fruit has been given for our labors in the past, and let us confidently hope that the present years' work may bring increased numbers, spir-itual power, and influence to the cause. The mission embraces a large territory, and the condition, circumstances, education, tastes and habits of some communities are very unlike those of others, hence the present demands of one are not necessarily those of another. The following is submitted for consideration with a view of stimulating thought and improvement. A greater harmony of sentiment and increased unity of action will be productive of good in many places

(1) I am confirmed in the opinion that it is not the large numbers received into the church that give it strength and tone, but rather the character of those numbers. Hence it is important that due diligence be given to the administration of church law and usage; that the officers insist upon a compliance therewith by those being received into the church, as well as those belong-ing to it. Members who have been expelled from the church for disorderly conduct should be received back with great caution. Repentance, reformation and restoration should be required. The church and individuals wronged possess rights, as well as those desirous to return to the fold. The habit of receiving members back by baptism, who have just been expelled from the church, without diligent enquiry having been made as to their fitness, or a proper repentance and restoration had, is unwise and dangerous, and hurtful to the cause. Out one day and back by baptism the next, at the caprice of the parties demanding it, is more of a burlesque on true christian order and discipline than anything else. Care should be exhibited and genuine repentance had, or it is a vain work and a damage to the one received, and to those receiving him back.

The Elders should be first "in their own cause." A dispensation of the gospel is committed unto men, and they should make themselves familiar with every phase of that message that they may be able to present it intelligently, assigning a reason to every man for their hope. They are the light-bearers to this generation. is not important that they copy largely after the manner and methods of the world, theorize, speculate, present themselves, seek their own glory; but preach the gospel straight, "in the power of God and the wisdom of God" Paul said he was sent "to preach the gospel, not with wisdom of words lest the cross of Christ should be made of none effect."—I Cor. I: 17. "Not with enticing words of man's wisdom, but in demonstration of

(3) If you are rich in this world's goods, be benevolent and sympathise with the poor. Help and encourage those who are willing and striv-ing to help themselves. That is not a true senti-ment entertained by some, that every person might succeed and possess a competency if they were but industrious and would. Large numbers have neither the opportunity or ability, physically or mentally, to compete; besides the training of some is bad. There is something significant in the statement, "The poor have the gospel preached unto them." Something is here implied that they were not responsible for their condition, but perhaps others were. "Hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom which he has promised to them that love him."-James 1: 5.

If you are poor, do not covet the possessions of the rich. In God's economy the rich are none the better for being rich; and the poor are none the worse for being poor. Moral worth, good deeds, the love of right, are the standards of measurement .- "Thy prayers and thine alms are come up for a memorial before God."—Acts 10: What a sublime rebuke to the parsimony, lit-tleness, irreverence and inhumanity of men who live only for self and this world!

(4) The first thing to be considered and cared for is the home. Constant interest should cluster around and center there. It should be endowed with every constituent element possible of usefulness and success. A well ordered fireside is the brightest spot on earth. Do away with tobacco, whiskey, beer, gaming, opera and theatre going, high life and expensive ways, and build a home, and you will be happier in advanced

In connection with this it is necessary to speak of education: Next to the necessaries of life,-food and raiment-education stands first. It should be made a chief thing in life. It is the foundation of our civilization and freedom, and upon it rests the future of our country. It is a crime against your children not to educate them, a sin against society, a shame upon professed religion. In a country of free schools, and in many localities free books, when little or no interest is taken in securing an education, legal enactments are necessary to enforce it. If you want your children to succeed, to be useful and intelligent citizens, ornaments of society, a glory to their parents and country, educate them; not to be "dudes," to live without work; but to be men, useful and noble, able to work to a purpose and to success. Ignorance is the nursery of vice. Nine-tenths of the criminals shut up in our prisons are of those reared in ignorance. I repeat it, educate your children. He is no proper Saint that will not do it, if in his power.

(5) Business meetings are the places for doing business, not the prayer-meetings. In the business meeting all are upon a common footing,-male and female. Each can speak or vote at his or her option, within the rules governing the meeting. Every question of importance connected with the branch should be discussed and settled None should be censured for expressing their views freely upon any question presented for consideration. A majority vote should be the rule of power and decision upon every question. All should acquiesce in it, whatever their individual views to the contrary. No one should manipulate the business to serve selfish ends. In the selection of branch officers, especially, it is recommended that the vote be taken by informal ballot. This will give every one the privilege of expressing their choice uninfluenced by another. Get in the way of counseling together, not dictate and lord it over one another after the manner of a boss.

(6) Prayer meetings are not business meetings So far as practicable business should be excluded from them. Most especially that which is calculated to consume much time and cause division and conflict. These meetings are for worship, song, prayer and praise; the use of scriptural texts and comments, experiences and such like. Insinuations and reflections upon others or a reference to them, or any matters calculated to wound the feelings of any, are very improper and unbecoming. Don't do it! Study to be useful in the prayer meetings. Take part with the rest, not necessarily at every service, but at least occasionally. Cultivate the habit of each one leading in singing; not one or two do all of the selecting and starting of every hymn and verse that is sung in the meeting. Give chance for the Spirit to prompt in the exercises, and grow into the habit of responding, and you will be edified and edify others. An apt and well expressed verse of Scripture, with suitable comment, is an improvement, sometimes, over long rambling recitals of experiences oft repeated. Do not repeat, refer to and tell of your experiences in Brighamism, Strangism, Morrisism, Thompsonism, and such like; nor refer to the leading characters of those factions that sought to fasten themselves upon the faith of the church, and ingratiate themselves into the affections of the people, whose very names are but synonyms for folly, crime and iniquity—a stig-ma and blight. It does no good; is not edifying. The people are pushing away from those old fungus-growths and demand present truth, live issues, gospel liberty, gospel fact and gospel ex-

Prayer meetings should not be held too long. Those taking part should not speak or pray too long, or too often in one service when there are others to take part. Give every one a chance, especially those of little experience and those who can not attend regularly. What is the use of one person attend regularly. What is the use of one person keeping the people on their knees at prayer a half an hour and then get up and speak another half You, long talkers, who don't think you bore people sometimes, just note the clock before beginning to pray or bear testimony, and observe it again when done, and you will soon be con-vinced that you are monopolizing; you have no more right to monopolize the time belonging to others than the Sugar Trusts have the sugar Short speeches, short prayers and short hymns should be the rule in prayer-meetings—long ones the exception. We are not heard for our "much speaking." "Wisdom is justified of her children!

(7). District presidents and branches, their respective duties, these are among the mooted questions. There are a good many agnostics regarding them. Something should be said of them however, for order's sake. The district president is a creature of the district. He belongs there or nowhere. He should be of service in some way to the district, or else be dispensed with. He is usually an elder, and may be under general conference appointment; may travel and preach all the time or as circumstances permit. When at the time or as circumstances permit. When at liberty to travel he can do any thing any elder can Preach in the district or branches in harmony with constituted authorities, the same as a seventy or any other general appointee. All general church appointees should have an interest direct in the general good wherever they chance to be. More especially should the Seventy zealously guard the interest of the work. Church officers are to administer the law, not enact it. See that the law is kept. Branches should con-trol their affairs within themselves so far as possible, and settle their own difficulties. in need of assistance they may call upon any competent officer available to render such aid. sponsibility, choice, ability, expense, distance, time, etc., being considered in determining the selection; also the importance of the case should have weight. But all things being equal, the district president, the Seventy, or elders under general conference appointment should be selected competent officers. Of course this is where there is not competent local aid that may be capable and preferred.

Branch officers may advise with the district president regarding any matter and obtain his judgment if they so desire. The Seventy, district president, or other general church ap-pointees, when laboring in districts or branches should be courteously received. They should should be courteously received. They should call attention to any matter neglected or that needs attention where they chance to be laboring, advise with reference to it in a public service or otherwise as may be thought for the best. If local officers refuse wholesome advice they should be reported to the missionary in charge when the case may be reached through the district president, Seventy, or other competent authority. Wisdom, care and caution should be exercised here not to be extra officious. By resolution or majority vote either may preside at a branch meeting, and should, if they can best serve the cause in that position. It is proper to extend the courtesy, especially if they are experienced elders; proper to extend it to the district president, by way of recognition, prefering your brother be-fore yourself, but neither can insist upon it as a right. Districts should respect their selections for president, but not above what is written. This puts no one up nor any one down.

Branch officers should give all those who labor among them proper recognition and encouragement. Get all the benefit of the laborers you can. Put out appointments, rally the peo-ple and let them preach, take or not take. Give Put them in charge of their them a chance. own meetings; allow them to make the opening prayer, if so prompted. Good elders prefer to open by prayer sometimes. The people prefer to hear them. If they can not pray they should not represent.

Don't have everything too iron clad. Give choice for direction by the Spirit. The traveling ministry are aids, helps-not hindrances. When branch offiers become discourteous to those sent to labor with and for them they should be reported to missionary in charge, and it will be his duty to advise a proper course, and vice versa.

Grave matters involving organization, branch rights, radical changes, new departures, should also be reported to the misionary in charge and his advice had. It is the duty of the general the duty of the general church appointees, including the district president, to be in close correspondence with the missionary in charge. The Twelve will insist that the rights of branches and individuals be maintained

Branch officers should be close mouthed. Don't gather news at one place and scatter it at another. The home is a sacred place. Every one entering another's home is standing on holy ground. He should conduct himself accordingly. Don't pry into things that are none of an officer's business. If there is one terror above another in a neighborhood, it is that of some one going about picking into peoples' affairs where it don't concern him. Church officers are not spies, meddlers and gossip hunters, but peace-makers, messengers to remind, encourage to duty, to warn the transgressor, to bring to justice the wrong-doer.
(8). Temporal things should be considered by the Saints along with others as among first du-We are stewards over what the Lord has put into our hands. The law requires a tenth of the increase. He that would have the law defend him should keep it. It is a sacrifice with a promise-keep the law.

This article is thought to be within the extremes of mooted questions, and designed to serve a good purpose for the present. Some things are pointed out of value and duty; but in some respects the chief may have been omitted. May the spirit of unity and true fellowship abide with the Saints, and the witness of the Spirit be ever present with them.

Your fellow-laborer in the gospel, WM. H. KELLEY.

NOTICES.

There will be a two-days' meeting in the Pigeon River (Mich.) branch on the 13th and 14th of July, All Saints, with their friends, are cordially invited to attend. Respectfully, R. E. GRANT, Branch Pres.

Whereas, Bro. Edwin Tyrrell has left the Kent and Elgin district and the Dominion of Canada in an unbecoming manner; this is to notify him that unless he returns here and makes reparation for wrongs done, inside of on year from the date of this notice he will be dealt with as the law of God directs in the case of transgressors.

SAMUEL BROWN, Dist. Pres., RICHARD COBURN, Sec.

BLENHEIM, July 1st, 1889.

Any industrious lady desiring to obtain a good situation and due recompense for her work will do well to address Mrs. Carrie Dickinson, Everest, Brown county, Kansas, Box 83. A Latter Day Saint is preferred. It is a pleasant home for some one. I have lived with them five months and am well satisfied.

CYNTHIA LOOMIS.

CORRECTION.

The late Kent and Elgin district conference adjourned to meet October 5th next, and not the 15th, as erroneously stated hitherto in Herald.

BAKER.—At Dorchester, Nebraska, October 17th, 1888, to Bro. F. M. and Sr. C. E. Baker, a daughter. Blessed at Wilber, Nebraska, July 1st, 1889, by Elders Robert M. Elvin and Levi daughter. Anthony, and named Nora May.

MARRIED.

SUTTON — TRIMBLE.— Near Fulton, Jackson county, Iowa, June 20th, 1889, by J, S. Roth, at the residence of the bride's parents, Bro. John W. Sutton and Sr. Tillie Trimble.

DIED.

Lockling.—Near Magnolia, Iowa, June 13th, 1880, of jaundice and old age, at the residence of his son-in-law, Elder Artemus W. Lockling. Father A. W. Lockling was born March 30th, 1806, at Lyndon, Caledonia, county, Vermont. He united with the church May, 1835, being baptized by James C. Snow. He was a brother who was much blessed with the gifts of tongues and interpretation of tongues, and through his labors many have been made acquainted with the gospel and the gifts attending the believer. He died without an enemy, and was highly respected for his integrity. His testimony remained unwavering until death. The Saints of Magnolia branch and vicinity will miss the testimonies of Father Lockling very much. Funeral services in the Saints church, at Magnolia, by Elder J. F. Mintun, from Rev. 14: 13. Elder Lockling united with the church in his native state, coming to St. Joseph Mo., in 1849, and thence to Council Bluffs the following year, and from there to Harrison county, where he lived till death. When he learned of the corruptions of the leaders of the old church, he quietly settled down to wait until God should do a work to deliver the wait until God should do a work to deliver the church from deceivers, yet all the time advocating the principles of the gospel to his neighors, and talking of what should be done to establish the church in righteousness. His last words in reference to his hope of eternal life were, "Like old father Paul, I can say there is a crown laid up for me." He leaves an aged wife, two sons, and two doughters, hesides a number of grand. and two daughters, besides a number of grand children and great grand children to hold in memory his faithful life and peaceful rest.

Gone to his rest in the far better land. Gone to his rest in the far better land,
In its glorious light with the ransomed to stand,
And sing and rejoice, with the Saints gone before,
Eaving finished his course, and his conflict all o'er.
For evil he gave not a frown in return,
Nor suffered revenge in his bosom to burn;
When reviled he returned not reviling again,
By patient forbearance, at peace with all men.
In this world of scramble for power, and for gold,
How rarely such virtues as his we behold!
G, that we by meekness like his may prepare
To meet him with joy in the home over there,
Where sickness and death, neither winter nor night,
Can sadden the soul, filled with God's love and light;
Where sin and temptation no more can allure,
And trials ne'er come on the evergreen shore. And trials ne'er come on the evergreen shore.

—Verses by C. W. Lamb.

STONE.—Otto Stone, son of Bro. Andrew C. Stone, of Arlington, Dakota, born April 11th, 1879 died on the 26th day of April, 1889, aged 10 years, 15 days. Funeral sermon by Robert Oehring and E. Day Bennett.

Anthony.—At Wilber, Nebraska, June 25th, 1889, of cancer, sister Mariba Anthony, wife of Elder Levi Anthony. She was born in Highland county, Ohio, and united with Bro. Levi Anthony in the bonds of wedlock, October 4th, 1846. The fruit of this union was thirteen children. Her earthly pilgrimage was 61 years, 2 months and 28 days. There are left to mourn, a husband who keenly feels his severe loss, 10 children, 20 grand-children and 2 great grand-children. She suffered affliction patiently nearly two years, and gave evidence of an abiding confidence in the gospel with no fear of the change. She was of a religious mind from childhood, and January 31st, 1878, was baptized by elder R. J. Anthony. Her chief delight was in administering relief and comfort to others. A mother in Israel has gone to her rest. The funeral was held in the Saints' Church, June 27th, and the sermon was by Elder Robert M. Elvin, from Job 14:14. The I.O.O. F. attended in full regalia, as also the Rebecca Lodge, who performed their burial service at the grave for their departed sister. The unusually large at-tendance at the funeral witnessed the esteem in which sister Anthony was held in this vicinity.

BLACKBURN.—Near Cameron, Clinton county, Missouri, Jan 31st, 1889, Robert F. Blackburn, aged 31 years. Bro. Blackburn was born in Shelby county, Missouri, November 16th, 1858, and that was his home until the year 1886, when he came to Clinton county. He with his wife was baptized August, 1888, by Elder W. T. Bozarth, and blessed by the same and Elder Kinnaman, at the Saints' Chapel eight miles north of Cameron. He died of consumption, and though suffering long and painfully, he complained only to say, "Oh, when will the blessed day come, when I shall be at rest!" He was buried at the Cameron Cemetery, and leaves a wife and two little girls to mourn.

GRAYBILL, -S. P. Graybill was born March 26 h, 1816, in Jackson county, Ohio. He was baptized into the first organization sometime in 1832; was with the church at Kirtland, also at Far West, and endured the persecutions incident to the expulsion of the Saints from Missouri, but never united with the Reorganization. He died June 27th, 1889, at Weston, Iowa. Funeral ser-vices at the grave by Elder Hyrum O. Smith.

KINDER—At St. Joseph, Mo., on June 17th, 1889, Ammon, son of Brother and Sister Kinder. Their little one was born March 13th, 1888. He was their hope of the future in this life, but it seems to have been otherwise decreed. Funeral obsequies at house and grave June 18th, by Elder M. H. Forscutt. The little one leaves a house of mourning, in which no one of the six remaining is free from affliction; yet their strong faith justifies the hope of an ultimate triumph

JOSEPH SMITH W. W. BLAIR

ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, July 20, 1889.

In the Elders' Journal, published at Kirtland, Ohio, for November, 1837, there appears a communication from Joseph Smith, editor of the Fournal, headed as follows: "Be it known unto the Saints scattered abroad; Greeting:" Then follows the presentation of a number of items of interest, the communication closing with twenty questions "which are daily and hourly asked by all classes of people, while we are travelling;" which were to be answered in the next number. In the number of the Fournal for July, 1838, which number was published at Far West, Missouri, the office having been removed from Kirtland, and prospectus issued for the renewal of its publication in April, 1838, Thomas B. Marsh publisher, and Joseph Smith editor, the questions published in the fall before were answered by the editor. We give these questions and answers below, as they appear in the Fournal, (See also Millennial Star, vol. 16, pps. 150, 151), the copy from which we quote being in the possession of Elder E. Barrows, who resides at No. 532 East Second South Street, Salt Lake City, Utah, and who was a member of the church and passed through the Missouri and Illinois troubles, but has preserved his faith, and kept whatever records came into his hands appertaining to the history of the church. The article is as follows:

"In obedience to our promise, we give the following answers to questions, which were asked in the last number of the Journal."

"Question 1st.-Do you believe the Bible?

"Answer.—If we do, we are the only people under heaven that does. For there are none of the religious sects of the day that do.

"Question 2d .- Wherein do you differ from other sects?

"Answer.-Because we believe the Bible, and all other sects profess to believe their interpretations of the Bible, and their creeds.

"Question 3d.—Will everybody be damned but Mormons?

"Answer.-Yes, and a great portion of them, unless they repent and work righteousness.

"Question 4th.-How and where did you obtain the Book of Mormon?

"Answer.-Moroni, the person who deposited the plates from whence the Book of Mormon was translated in a hill in Manchester, Ontario county, New York, being dead, and raised again therefrom, appeared unto me, and told me where they were; and gave me directions how to obtain them. I obtained them, and the Urim and Thummim with them; by the means of which I translated the plates; and thus came the Book of Mormon.

"Question 5th .- Do you believe Joseph Smith Ir. to be a prophet?

"Answer.-Yes, and every other man who has the testimony of Jesus. 'For the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy.'-Rev. 19:10.

"Question 6th.-Do the Mormons believe in having all things common?

"Answer .- No.

"Question 7th.-Do the Mormons believe in having more wives than one?

"Answer.-No, not at the same time. But they believe that if their companion dies, they have a right to marry again. But we do disapprove of the custom which has gained in the world, and has been practiced among us, to our great mortification, of marrying in five or six weeks, or even in two or three months after the death of their companion. We believe that due respect ought to be had to the memory of the dead and the feelings of both friends and child-

"Question 8th .- Can they raise the dead?

"Answer.-No, nor any other people that now live or ever did live. But God can raise the dead through man as an instrument.

"Question 9th.-What signs does Jo Smith give of his divine mission?

"Answer.-The signs which God is pleased to let him give; according as his wisdom thinks best; in order that he may judge the world agreeably to his own plan.

"Question 10th.-Was not Jo Smith a money

"Yes, but it was never a very profitable job for him, as he only got fourteen dollars a month for it. "Question 11th.—Did not Jo Smith steal his wife?

"Answer.-Ask her; she was of age, she can answer for herself.

"Question 12th.-Do the people have to give up their money when they join his church?

"Answer.-No other requirement than to bear their proportion of the expenses of the church and support the poor.

"Question 13th.-Are the Mormons abolition-

"Answer .-- No, unless delivering the people from priestcraft, and the priests from the power of Satan, should be considered such -But we do not believe in setting the Negroes free.

"Question 14th.-Do they not stir up the Indians to war and to commit depredations?

"Answer.-No, and those who reported the story knew it was false when they put it into circulation. These and similar reports are palmed upon the people by the priests, and this is the reason why we ever thought of answering "Question 15th.—Do the Mormons baptize in the name of Jo Smith?

"Answer .-- No, but if they did it would be as valid as the baptism administered by the sectarian priests.

"Question 16th.-If the Mormon doctrine is true, what has become of all those who have died since the days of the apostles?

"Answer.-All those who have not had an opportunity of hearing the gospel and being administered to by an inspired man in the flesh, must have it hereafter before they can be finally "Question 17th .- Does not Jo Smith profess to be Tesus Christ?

"Answer .-- No, but he professes to be his brother, as all other saints have done, and now do, Matthew 12: 49, 50, 'And he stretched forth his hand toward his disciples and said, Behold my mother and my brethren. For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother.'

"Question 18th.—Is there anything in the Bible which licenses you to believe in revelation nowadays?

"Answer.-Is there anything that does not authorize us to believe so? if there is, we have, as yet, not been able to find it.

"Question 19th.—Is not the canon of the Scriptures full?

"Answer.-If it is there is a great defect in the book, or else it would have said so.

"Question 20th.-What are the fundamental principles of your religion?

"Answer.-The fundamental principles of our religion is the testimony of the apostles and prophets concerning Jesus Christ, that he died, was buried, and rose again the third day, and ascended up into heaven; and all other things are only appendages to these, which pertain to our religion.

"But in connection with these, we believe in the gift of the Holy Ghost, the power of faith, the enjoyment of the spiritual gifts according to the will of God, the restoration of the house of Israel, and the final triumph of truth.

"JOSEPH SMITH,

"In Elders' Fournal, for July, 1838, Far West, Missouri."

One reason for inserting this bit of historical teaching from the pen of Joseph Smith is that some one has said that somebody else said that Joseph Smith told him of the celestial marriage doctrine away back in 1832, to which statement, so loosely made, the simple statement of Joseph Smith, publicly made in a journal of the nature of the Elders' Journal published first in Kirtland, and then continued in Far West, ought to be sufficient and explicit answer. It must strike every one who reads this statement of questions and answers that Joseph Smith deemed it to be necessary for him to place in the hands of the elders who were travelling to preach, and in the hands of the "Saints scattered abroad," such a declaration of the position of the church, its representative men and responsible leaders, upon the points named that they would be able to correctly answer questions of a similar nature, and these included, to the enlightment of those who questioned, and the silencing of those disposed to charge upon the church contrary and evil beliefs. In this statement made in 1838, some eight years and three months after the church was organized, and six years before his death, Joseph Smith distinctly declared that the "Mormons" did not believe in "having more wives than one." There is no possible way to twist the answer to make it cover a mental reservation. "No, not at the same time" is specific; and shows most conclusively that under no species of belief, or practice, or under any high sounding terms were men authorized to disregard the then law of God to the church and the law of the land. We publish the whole article as it is in the Elders' Journal and commend it to the reading of the investigator, especially those who may be of the opinion that the position taken by the Reorganization is an incorrect one.

DUTY OF PRIEST.

In pursuance of our self-imposed task we attempt in this article to give some expression of the views we hold touching the duty of the priest.

The common acceptation of what the word signifies, as found in Webster, is as follows:

"A presbyter or elder; a minister; one who is authorized to consecrate the host and say mass; but especially, one of the lowest order possessing this power." "A presbyter, one who belongs to the intermediate order between bishop and deacon."

The definition of presbyter is:

"An elder having authority to instruct and guide in the church." "One ordained to the second order in the ministry, called also a priest."

Dr. Buck states that one class in the church of England, who consider the sacrament of the Lord's supper both "commemorative and eucharistical," also consider all those "authorized to administer that sacrament in the strictest sense priests." "Others hold the Lord's supper to be a feast upon the one sacrifice, once offered on the cross; and these must consider themselves clothed with some kind of priesthood."—Buck's Dictionary, page 369. These statements are given for the purpose of showing the generally understood nature of the priest's office; not for the purpose of citing them as definitely deciding the question; only as aids, not as finali-

"Now for a long season Israel hath been without the true God, and without a teaching priest, and without law."-2 Chronicles 15:3.

It would be very difficult to enumerate very many of the duties of the priest under the Mosaic economy; but that there will be some obstacles lying in the way of defining the duties of that office under the economy of the apostolic ministry, we need not doubt.

"And it came to pass that I, Nephi, did consecrate Jacob and Joseph, that they should be priests and teachers over the land of my people. And it came to pass that we lived after the manner of happiness."-2 Nephi 4:5.

"And it came to pass that King Mosiah granted unto Alma, that he might establish churches throughout all the land of Zarahemla; and gave him power to ordain priests and teachers over every church. Now this was done because there were so many people that they could not all be governed by one teacher; neither could they all hear the word of God in one assembly; therefore they did assemble themselves together in different bodies, being called churches; every church having their priests and their teachers, and every priest preaching the word according as it was delivered to him by the mouth of Alma; and others, notwithstanding there being many churches, they were all one church; yea, even the church of God; for there was nothing preached in all the churches except it were repentance and faith in God."-Mosiah 11:12.

"And, behold, you are they who are ordained of me to ordain priests and teachers to declare my gospel, according to the power of the Holy Ghost which is in you, and according to the gifts and callings of God unto men."-D. & C. 16: 5.

"The priest's duty is to preach, teach, expound, exhort, and baptize, and administer the sacrament, and visit the house of each member, and exhort them to pray vocally and in secret, and attend to all family duties; and he may also ordain other priests, teachers, and deacons; and he is to take the lead of meetings when there is no elder present, but when there is an elder present he is only to preach, teach, expound, exhort and baptize, and visit the house of each member, exhorting them to pray vocally and in secret, and attend to all family duties. In all these duties the priest is to assist the elder it occasion requires."-D. & C. 17: 10.

"And the elder or priest shall administer it."-D. & C. 17: 22.

"Or send by the hands of some priest."-D. &

"I give unto you a commandment, that every man, both elder, priest, teacher, and also members, go to with his might, with the labor of his hands, to prepare and accomplish the things which I have commanded."-D. & C. 39:9.

"And also priests to preside over those who are of the office of priest."-D. & C. 104:31.

"And that the solemnization should be performed by a presiding high priest, high priest, bishop, elder, or priest."—D. & C. III: I.

The passages of Scripture, and quotations from the Book of Mormon and Book of Covenants are presented together for the purpose of assimilation, as no one isolated passage can give so much light on a given subject as many, or all that may be cited, bearing upon that subject placed in comparison together.

From these quotations we receive the understanding of the priest's duty, or duties, which we give in this article. It is the duty of a priest to "preach the word."

In preaching the word, a priest is privileged to use all the diligence, faith, and charity requisite to be used by an elder to render his preaching acceptable. He may likewise sing, pray, open meetings and conduct them, using the Scriptures as a text book. He may invite men to come to Christ, using every auxiliary, honorably and truthfully, within his reach; and may baptize into the body of Christ those who hear and believe on his words. So far, the duties of a priest do not materially differ from those of an elder; and indeed from the character of those duties we may be excused if we conclude that the priest's office is of a composite character, spiritual and temporal.

In the specification of the duties of a priest, as in those of both teacher and deacon, there is much undefined in the law that may be understood by the nature of those duties which are clearly stated.

The organization of branches or congregations of disciples into churches, as they may gather themselves together in the various places where elders may preach and baptize, is not provided for by direct commandment, so far as the organic law contained in the Doctrine and Covenants reveals the commandments; yet there are few who would risk their reputation by asserting that congregations or churches could not be so organized. The good of such churches and the genius of the work demand organization.

How this organization is to be effected, and who shall convene the members of whom this organization shall be composed -the believing and baptized disciples-or who shall be selected from among them to become their standing minister, or how he shall be appointed, chosen or elected, are not pointed out; but it is quite essential that all these things shall be done.

The New Testament affords but meagre record as to how the various churches were organized; but bishops and deacons are both written of; and in various places the church is named as being under rule, being governed, controlled or supervised by some one of their own number.

The Book of Mormon, as we have before quoted, affords us a certain indication of the manner in which those churches were organized there written of; and priests and teachers were ordained over them.

The spirit and power of the instruction given by King Mosiah unto Alma, were to organize those hearing, believing and obeying the word, into churches; and select from their midst men who should be ordained to have charge over them, spiritual and temporal authorities for temporal and spiritual labors.

These selections were evidently to be made, governed, aided and decided under one of three conditions; either chosen by the voice of the body, ascertained by nomination and vote; by the authoritative declaration and selection of the person who was instrumental in originating and conducting such organization; or by the appointment of the Spirit through proper representatives of the church, in answer to the prayer of faith. In the event of one being appointed by the Spirit, the office to which he should be called would most likely be named; but in case he should be selected by the voice of the person officiating, or by the choice of the people, he would needs be so chosen "according to the gifts and callings unto men," and ordained according to the "power of"the Holy Ghost in the one ordaining." Ordination in either case must be in accordance with the law by which the church was established and by which it should continue.

What instructions King Mosiah gave Alma touching the manner of his organizing churches, the selection of persons for officers and the grade of office to which they should be ordained, does not appear; but the fact recorded that Alma in accordance with the permission of King Mosiah did organize churches, is evidence that he was acquainted with some law by which his acts should be regulated, or that he had received some specific instruction from the King; or what would serve our present purpose far better, had received instruction from the Spirit of Christ.

One of the reasons given for organizing churches, was that all could not be governed by one teacher; nor could they all assemble at one place to hear one person declare the gospel.

Whatever may have been necessary for Alma to do in organizing those churches was done; and when he ordained priests and teachers over those churches, he very evidently did not transcend either his instructions or the law by which they were to be organized.

Whatever may now be said, the priests ordained by Alma must have been preachers; men of character and standing; men of influence and power; men of ability and gifts; men able to persuade, incite and urge other men on in the spiritual race; men prepared to place themselves in the advance in defence of the church, in all good works, and in suffering for the cause; wise enough for counsel, and strong enough for battle against error; men who were not sycophants to those above them, nor tyrants to those below them; in a word, standing ministers to and guardians of the flock.

It is the duty of a priest to "teach." This teaching is for the benefit of the church, and though he holds the privilege in common with the teacher and deacon, it is made his duty by the statement that he is to teach. He shall teach the things of the kingdom, deriving the instructions which he imparts from the Word of God, from the teachings of the elders, from the dictation of wisdom, and the voice of the Spirit.

It is the duty of a priest to expound and exhort.

He shall make himself conversant with the Scriptures, the laws of the church, the covenants and commandments, that he shall be able to give them a proper construction and application.

It is a priest's duty to visit the house of each member, and exhort them to pray,

In the discharge of this duty there is grave responsibility imposed upon the priest. He comes in contact with all kinds of people, under various circumstances, and of different tempers. He must be cool, sagacious and wise, whatever may be his natural disposition; it is his duty, therefore, to cultivate those qualities.

In his visits from house to house the priest must necessarily hear and see much of the inner or domestic life of the saints; it is his duty, therefore, to refrain from telling what he sees and hears; and in no case is he justified in betraying confidence reposed in him by those among whom his visits are made. His questions should be few, and directly connected with his spiritual office as priest. He must neither be suspicious of, nor give rise to suspicion in others. He should study to make his visits welcome seasons of enjoyment to the saints. He must not hear, encourage, nor meddle with, personal differences where hardness against others is held, only to soothe, palliate, or advise to seek for and obtain reconciliation; this he should exhort offenders and offended alike to do.

The priest is to take the lead of meetings "when there is no elder present."

The priest is to assist the elders in all the duties enumerated in the paragraph of section seventeen which defines the priest's duty.

The taking "the lead of meetings" is made a part of the duty of a priest, and from the connection of this paragraph, with duties defined in other places, the facts heretofore cited, of the formation of churches by Alma with "priests and teachers" over them, and the declaration made in section 17, paragraph 25, that the lists of members should be sent to the elders' conferences by the hands of a priest, show that it was contemplated that churches could be represented by that priest; the further fact that a priest is authorized to administer the sacrament, are all significant that the same unwritten rule of church law by which different churches may be organized, provides that the chosen, selected, or appointed officers, are presiding officers over such churches. The priest here spoken of, then, is such chosen, selected, or appointed person ordained over the church.

The priest is to assist the elder in all these duties if occasion requires, and in no other case does occasion so urgently require as in the case of the absence of the elder.

In paragraph II, section I7, it is made the duty of the teacher to take the lead of meetings in the absence of the elder or priest.

These two paragraphs, the tenth and eleventh of section seventeen, of the Doctrine and Covenants, have been made the subject of much discussion. In most of these discussions it has been insisted, by some, that the words "he is to take the lead of the meetings when there is no elder present, but when there is an elder present he is only to preach," absolutely prohibit a priest from taking the lead of a meeting when there is an elder of the church, belonging to the same branch, present in such meeting. This is the chief and strongest objection against a priest presiding. It is used as an unanswerable argument, and so it is always thrown in as a clincher.

Paragraph eleven has the terms differently placed, and the words "the elder or priest," seem to have a specific reference to some one of the whole number of elders and priests as "the" one elder or priest indicated. It is not claimed that this eleventh paragraph can be so strictly construed as paragraph ten.

We desire in this connection, although it may be deemed a digression, to offer the following.

If the words "no elder present" and "an elder present" are to be construed to include only elders belonging to the branch, or particular church, meeting at any one given place, do not the words "the elder or priest," in paragraphs eleven and twentv-two, equally as certainly indicate some one of those elders and priests belonging to such branch? If so, are there not two declarations making the application specific and limited, against one making it indefinite and general?

Again, if the words "no elder" and "an elder," occurring in paragraph ten, prohibit a priest who belongs to a branch, or specific church, from taking the lead of any meeting where there may an elder of the same branch present, by what rule of construction are those words confined in their meaning to elders belonging to the branch?

Again, if it is an interpolation to construe the words "the elder or priest" occurring in paragraphs eleven and twenty-two, to mean the elder or priest chosen, selected, or appointed over that particular church, is it not also an interpolation to say that the words "no elder" and "an elder" in paragraph ten mean the elders resident in, or elders of that particular church?

The declaration made in paragraph eight "and to take the lead of all meetings" is distorted when it is construed to say the "elders are to take the lead of all meetings." In the beginning it reads, "An apostle is an elder, and it is his calling;" the pronoun his representing the word apostle, not the word elder. If it read an elder is an apostle, and it is his calling, &c., then the sentence might with propriety be construed to signify that "the elders are to take the lead of all meetings."

We have never been in favor of a strained construction of the law; nor are we any more in favor of seeing the law over-rode and set aside by precedents not in accordance with the law; and where access can be had to the law, and a construction be put upon that law harmonious with itself and with the organic law by which the church was established and perpetuated, that construction should obtain and be observed; the charge then that we sometimes go contrary to some former precedents has not yet daunted us when hurled at us by those who held views of the law created by those precedents.

The fact that many branches of the church were governed and controlled by an elder and his two counsellors, does not invalidate the law of organization for branches, or churches, if we can find that law. We find no law providing for a presiding elder and two counsellors as the officers of a branch, or separate church; but we do find the priest, teacher, and deacon spoken of as standing ministers to the church, priests and teachers being ordained for that especial purpose.

Whenever usages of the past contradict or contravene the organic or governing rules of the church, those usages should be abandoned, and a nearer approximation to those rules should obtain.

We can not say what prejudices may be held respecting the taking the lead of meetings; but if by this taking the lead of all meetings, it is intended to convy the idea that the care, trouble, anxiety and selfsacrifice necessary and incident to the spiritual oversight of a church of six or several hundred of the disciples of Christ is meant, we can see nothing especially to be desired to make one jealous of such honor; and just as little do we see the propriety of any man being so tenacious of his personal dignity as to claim from another the privilege to read an hymn; to invoke a blessing; to read a chapter; to deliver a discourse, or preach a sermon; to pronounce a benediction, and be subsequently tortured by fear lest he has trodden on some other man's pet theory, or denounce some other man's pet practices; to be harassed by charges of error, lack of judgment, false doctrine, and so on to the end of the chapter as read by some one of equal ability and equal right to the same

The priest is to "teach, expound, exhort and baptize, and visit the house of each member, exhorting them."

These duties are continuous, involving a constant watchcare and oversight; not merely an occasional visiting, or exhorting, during the time of meetings. A consideration of the language of this statement of duties, shows that the presence of the priest or teacher is always recognized; that he is the visible presence of the power and authority of the church, its spiritual safeguard. His duties neither begin nor end at the close or opening of the meeting-room door; he is always on duty. In him the higher and the lesser blend, in him they diverge; his duties being of the spiritual and the temporal, partaking so much of the spiritual as to take him to the door of the sanctuary; acquainted with the mysteries within, yet delighting ever to bring men thus far and return for others still on the way. Permitted and authorized to declare the honors and delights of the kingdom, to throw wide the doors and help others through them, yet restricted from conferring the Spirit in confirmation, not because of his lack of worth, but because of the necessities of the duties which he is called to perform.

That he may preside is shown by the fact that Israel mourned when there were no "teaching priests;" by the fact that "priests" were consecrated by Nephi over the land; by the fact that Alma established churches and ordained priests and teachers over them; by the fact that the twelve were to ordain priests to declare the gospel of Christ; by the fact that he is made a visiting, teaching, standing minister to the church; by the fact that he may administer the sacrament, even in the presence of elders and high priests; by the fact that he may preside over those who are of the office of priest; and by the further fact that in all these duties he is to assist the elder if occasion requires.

Section seventeen of the Doctrine and Covenants is not a revelation; but is a definition of sundry duties arranged and presented to the church at a solemn assembly, or conference, and by them accepted and adopted; therefore it is clearly within the province of a similar body to define the construction to be put upon the act or acts of their preceding assembly. This section bears the same relation to the church that the "Lectures on Faith," the "Organization of the High Council," the "Articles on Marriage," and "On Governments" do. The formulas given respecting the sacrament are both transcribed from the Book of Mormon and are accepted as commandments. We are therefore neither guilty of contempt for the law of God, disregard for the covenants of the church, nor blasphemy against the character, goodness, or the Word of God. in thus presenting our understanding of the duties of a priest in the Church of Jesus Christ.

THE CELEBRATION.

IT affords us unmixed pleasure to say that Lamoni, and multitudes with her, enjoyed the best celebration of our national anniversary in 1889 ever witnessed here or near here. The day was perfect, the assemblage very large and orderly, the various committees acquitted themselves well, the trade's display was unique, in fine taste, and very large and full; the instrumental music was good, the singing superb, the reading of the Declaration of Independence by Prof. Roy most excellent, and the oration by Hon. J. H. Burrows was worthy of all praise. Mr. Burrows puts his heart into his speech, and this, with his admirably chosen topics, his fluent enunciation, resonant voice, and naturally attractive manners charmed and thoroughly instructed the vast concourse who earnestly listened to his words for at least an hour and twenty minutes. All were delighted with his effort, and all felt richly repaid for their attendance upon and participation in the exercises of the day.

Mr. Burrows took occasion to say to us that he never witnessed better interest and attention than was manifest, especially during the exercises at the stand. And Prof. Roy remarked that the trade's display, and the exercises generally, were worthy of all praise.

We heard of no drinking beer or wine or strong drink on or near the grounds, and nothing of the kind was manifested except with a couple of forlorn souls who drifted in from other parts, and they soon discovered that they were in uncongenial surroundings and so sneaked out of public

The celebration was a success from first to last, saving that the labor and expenses of it were not equally shared by those benefited by it. Lamoni demonstrated again that such occasions can be made most successful and enjoyable without either strong drink, uproar or tumult.

PLEASANTON BRANCH. On our visit the 7th instant, to Pleasanton, twelve miles east of here, to attend a two days' meeting, we were reminded of the great change there has come to the church both there and in many regions abroad since we first visited that place-in July, 1859. Then there were in the entire Reorganized Church but about one hundred and fifty souls, and not a score of them in Iowa. Near Pleasanton (then called Nine Eagles, or Pleasant Plains) there were a few old members of the church, among them George Morey and wife, Ebenezer Robinson and wife, A. W. Moffett and wife, William Alden and wife, Dr. George M. Hinkle, Austin Cowles and wife, John Keown and wife, father Wright and wife, and a few others. But all these were shy, though friendly, for they had been disappointed by men who should have dealt wisely and truly and honorably with them; and hence when Elder E. C. Briggs and myself told them the Lord would soon send "young Joseph Smith" to lead the church, and that we knew it by the multiplied and oft recurring testimonies the Lord had given us and numerous others all along since November 1851, it sounded to them "like idle tales." But the Lord greatly blessed the efforts we put forth there in preaching and teaching the written word, and He put forth his power in healing Sr. Helen Morey, Sr. Elizabeth Hartman, and some others, and shortly a branch was organized. By and by, about 1863, Ebenezer Robinson claimed to have seen me in vision in their vicinity, howbeit, at the same time it was supposed by all I had gone on to conference in Illinois, while the facts were I had been delayed at Manti, Fremont county, Iowa, preaching and baptizing. By reason of this vision Bro. Robinson notified the family of Bro. George Morey to send me to his place when I came. And on learning I had reached Bro. Morey's, he came personally for me, assured me he had a vision of my coming, and said, "It is all right, brother Blair, the Lord is with you and the work you represent." During my stay at his house, Sr. Robinson requested myself and her husband to administer to her for her "often infirmities," and while having a season of prayer, and Bro. Robinson praying, he suddenly burst out weeping and praising God. On arising from prayer he said, "Brother Blair, it is all right; God has just given me testimony that brother Joseph [alluding to "young Joseph Smith," as he was then commonly called by the Saints] is all right; he is in the right place [alluding to his being President of the church, and I am with you heart and hand." Soon after this I baptized him and his wife and others at that place, and the branch, few in number at first, grew rapidly.

But Satan was not idle; for the wine of apostacy still had influence with some, and the mistakes and errors and evils, imaginary and real, of some who united with the branch, cast their shadows across the pathway of the church; divisions, contentions, whisperings, fear and doubts-all did their hateful work-and the church that began its work there in the "wisdom of God and the power of God," suffered at the hands of professed friends who then and since have given cause for it to be "evil spoken of," as happened anciently. But of late the mists and clouds have been lifting and clearing away, discordant and dividing elements have left the branch, the Saints are more united and faithful than ever, the legitimate and helpful influences of the church are extending abroad in all that region, and the branch, rising superior to the assaults within and without, which it has suffered, is now likely to increase "with the increase of God" and go beyond all its past attainments in numbers and christian worth. Patience, perseverance and prayerful devotion are now needed, and if had the Pleasanton Saints will grow and flourish and overcome to the uttermost, and prove a great help in building up the work of God in all that region of country.

LORD SALISBURY.

ENGLAND'S Prime Minister in a recent speech before the house of Lords stated that "it was never more uncertain than at the present whether the present rulers of Europe would remain in power five years."

The above statement was published in an editorial of the Morning Call, of SanFrancisco, California, for June 15th, and probably shows the extremely strained tenure of possible peace relations of European nations at the present crisis of political affairs in the old countries.

What the occasion may be that shall precipitate the angry storm may not be clearly discerned; but the probable dropping out of life of Queen Victoria, Bismark, and the present pope, with the new complications sure to occur when these events take place, together with the unsettled affairs of France, and the jealousy of German supremacy in one direction, and Russian, or English in another, will furnish plenty of opportunities for a break in the smooth currents of affairs that will presage war. Will our country be able to maintain her present attitude and policy, or will the sweep of events involve

America in the "abomination which maketh desolate?"

It is well for men to be prepared in mind for calamity, perplexity, and possible political ruin. Proper preparation does not consist in the mere forecasting of the events waited for; but is found in such a preparation in heart and life, personal, private and public conduct, that is above reproach and will permit the individual to value and enjoy the highest citizenship, both of state and church—of the state for time, of the church for eternity. There ought not to be among us any "fearful waiting" for what is to come upon the earth, but we should be prepared.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

I.—In the Word of Wisdom, what is the true interpretation of the statement, "every herb in the season thereof, and every fruit in the season thereof?"

2.-When fruits and vegetables are canned, and eaten after the fresh ones of their kind have passed away, are they used "in the season thereof?"

3.—The statements, "flesh, also, of beasts and of the fowls of the air," and, "the fowls of heaven, and all wild animals that run or creep on the earth," do not mention or include fish or any other animals that inhabit the waters. Are these meant to be forborne in summer, or when there is neither cold nor famine, as other flesh?

4.—Does not the statement "and these hath God made for the use of man only in times of famine and excess of hunger," imply that man could as well do without flesh entirely if he had plenty of other food?

Answers 1 and 2.—We understand the word "herb" to include not only such wholesome plants as are generally understood by that term, but also all useful products of the vegetable kingdom. statements are made that they are for the constitution, nature and use of man; also that they appear and are to be used in their seasons. We do not understand that they are not to be used out of their seasons, but that the greatest benefit is derived from them when used in the season in which they ripen. Physiologists claim that the human system passes through a series of changes in harmony with the laws governing the seasons. All nature is somewhat in sympathy in these things. words, "all these to be used with prudence and thanksgiving," suggests that individuals shall exercise judgment and learn by experience and observation what benefits them, and act within the scope of the principles of the word of wisdom. "What is one man's meat is another man's poison" For instance, we heard is a true saying. of a person to whom the luscious strawberry was a positive poison, owing to some peculiar physical antipathy to it. Experience and "prudence" would suggest that such a one let such fruit severely alone, while another would be greatly benefitted by the same.

3. The statements concerning flesh food are, to us, plain and unmistakable.

"All these to be used with prudence and thanksgiving. Yea, flesh, also, of beasts and of fowls of the air, I, the Lord, hath ordained for the use of man, with thanksgiving. Nevertheless, they are to be used sparingly; and it is pleasing unto me that they should not be used only in times of winter, or of cold or famine. All grain is ordained for the use of man and of beasts, to be the staff of life, not only for man, but for the beasts of the field, and the fowls of heaven, and all wild animals that run or creep on the earth; and these hath God made for the use of man only in times of famine and excess of hunger."—D. & C. 86: 2.

It is here stated, in effect, that God has "ordained" [appointed] flesh as a food "for the use of man." This should settle the question whether man should eat flesh or not, all extreme vegetarians to the contrary notwithstanding; but it should be used "sparingly," (not two or three times every day), and only in times of winter, cold or famine, -in other words, do not use flesh of beasts and of fowls in warm weather unless there is a famine in the land; but use them sparingly, and in times of winter or cold weather. The prudent use of fish as a summer or winter diet is not prohibited.

4.-- No. Such conclusion would be in direct conflict with that cited in number three. We understand the word "these" to refer to wild animals which "God hath made for the use of man only in times of famine and excess of hunger,"—in unusual emergencies. If we interpret this latter clause as prohibiting the use of flesh entirely, it causes the word to contradict the statement that God hath "ordained flesh of beasts and of fowls for the use of man . . . sparingly . . . in times of winter or of cold or famine." And to be consistent with such misinterpretaion such theory would also prohibit the use of grain (mentioned in the same paragraph) as a food for man, while "all grain" is permitted him. Wheat is designed to be man's specific staff of life, but "all grain" is also for his use. In this connection we quote from Genesis 9: 8-11, Inspired Translation:

"And God blessed Noah and his sons, and said unto them, Be fruitful and multiply, and replenish the earth. And the fear of you, and the dread of you, shall be upon every beast of the earth, and upon every fowl of the air, upon all that moveth upon the earth, and upon all the fishes of the sea; into your hand are they delivered. Every moving thing that liveth shall be meat for you; even as the green herb have I given you all things. But, the blood of all flesh which I have given you for meat, shall be shed upon the ground, which taketh life thereof, and the blood ye shall not eat. And surely, blood shall not be shed, only for meat, to save your lives; and the blood of every beast will I require at your hands."-Gen. q: 8-11, Insp. Tran.

The construction of man's teeth indicates an omniverous diet for him,-that they are designed to masticate grain, vegetable and flesh foods.

There is a feature of the Word of Wisdom which has not been generally considered, namely, that the benefits derived from observing it are proportionate. If one principle is observed—for instance abstinence from tobacco or strong drink—the benefits of said abstinence accrue. If in connection with that we also abstain from other things mentioned therein as not good, additional benefit will be received. But in order to obtain all the wonderful and beneficient blessings named in paragraph three, all the provisions and conditions must be observed. There is danger of being overparticular as well as not being particular enough in its observance.

"And all saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, shall receive health in their navel, and marrow to their bones, and shall find wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures; and shall run and not be weary, and shall walk and not faint; and I, the Lord, give unto them a promise that the destroying angel shall pass by them, as the children of Israel, and not slay them. Amen."—Doc. and Cov. 86: 3.

We have at times marvelled at the magnitude of the blessings thus promised. We can not too greatly appreciate them. We hail with joy the seeming awakening of God's people to the necessity of keeping the Word of Wisdom and the approaching time when they shall "live by every word which proceedeth from the mouth of God."

Bro. R. H. Wight, of Los Pinos, Colorado, writes that his wife and himself are the only members of the church in that place. They appreciate the publications and feel the need of active church privileges.

Bro. W. F. Clark, who is running a corn meal and feed mill at Caney, Kansas, is reported to be preaching evenings in the school-house at that place. We wish him success.

A late letter informs us that the work is looking up somewhat in Boston, Massachusetts; two were baptized there lately.

THE following is the speech of Apostle John W. Taylor, at the conference of the Utah Church, April 6th, 1889, taken from the Deseret News of April 9th. The report of G. Q. Cannon in 1884 gave the number of births to be about 1,200 boys, 1,100 girls. It is a peculiar and particular discourse:

"Apostle John W. Taylor was the next speaker, He said that he had traveled among the Saints a great deal as a peacemaker, and he had found that nine-tenths of the difficulties that arise among the Saints are over financial affairs, showing the truth of what Apostle Thatcher had said. He spoke of the necessity of works as well as faith in cases of sickness. There are some of us who are so fanatical that we would let our wives or our children or our brother or our sister die before we would have it said that we had a doctor in our houses. Now this is the height of ridiculous nonsense. I might use stronger terms, but I am learning to use milder terms. It is very often that we let our children die for want of a little medical attention. There are about 6,000 children born among the Latter Day Saints every year. It costs a family man $20 a head for every child that is born, Thus it costs us $120,000 a year for babies. I mention this thing that you may look at it as you please. The speaker closed by exhorting the people to walk in the straight and narrow path which eventually leads to God—reminding them that this is not the narrow guage railway that leads to the lake to bathe on Sunday."

MARRIAGE NOT A FAILURE.

The Hon. Carroll D. Wright has issued a volume of about one thousand pages on the statistics and laws relating to marriage and divorces in the United States. Whatever the report lacks of accuracy is due to the negligence of the authorities of the several states in causing marriages to be put on record. It follows, therefore, that whatever conclusions may be drawn as to the relative number of marriages and divorces the errors will be against marriages, as the list of divorces is more complete being in most cases taken from the records of courts. So far as Mr. Wright has succeeded in getting the records of marriages, the chances are as one to five hundred. If there have been marriages of which no register has been made, the proportion of marriages would be still greater. But, accepting these figures as correct, the showing is not a bad one. With every reasonable opportunity for divorces, only one couple in five hundred avail themselves of the ability to obtain release. In 1880 there were nine and one-half millions of married couples in the United States. The increase from 1870 was about thirty per cent, thus keeping pace with the growth of the population. In the face of these statistics, which, if not absolutely correct, are not far wrong, the problem if marriage is a success ceases to be a problem. No other human institution can be indicated which is so uniformly successful. It will be urged, of course, that all unhappy marriages do not appear in the divorce courts. One important branch of the Christian church does not recognize legal divorce as annulling the marriage bond. The unhappy married couples in that church, it may be said, suffer in silence. At least, they do not give delvers into statistics any material to present to the public. The number of separations which do not figure as divorces can only be guessed at. There is no record by which they can be made public. But with so large a portion of our people at full liberty to get a divorce and with such comparatively meager results, the conclusion is reasonable that the proportion who want a divorce and are not at liberty to get one is not large. Of course, it will not be assumed that the 499 couples who do not apply for a divorce are perfectly happy. Some, probably, think themselves very unhappy. But the condition in life in which unhappiness is not found has yet to be discovered.

In this editorial respecting the absorbing topic lately discussed in many of the news journals of the country, which we clip from a late San Francisco, California, Morning Call, the point is clearly made that in the United States at large marriage is not "a failure."

It is probably quite true that many unhappy marriages do not find their way into the divorce court; but if the percentage of those that did was much larger than Mr. Wright makes it, it would not then change the conclusion arrived at.

All who marry should remember that God having been the Creator of man, has given the law by which the dual relation should be governed, and must then necessarily hold all who enter into that relation responsible for how it is maintained and the law authorizing it observed. We believe that man will be held to account before the tribunal of God for the observance of the marriage bond, no matter what the decision of human courts on each separate case may be. That He who gave the law will permit transgression of it to pass without the penalty is not to be thought of for a moment.

The Christian church referred to as discountenancing legal divorces, must be the Catholic: and it is not to the credit of any of the protestant daughters that the mother church was not followed in this particular. We, at least, should be able to read the law clear on this point; and we see only one way to do that; it is to hold that while teaching that marriages should not be hastily, nor lightly contracted, once made, the terms of the contract should be sacredly observed; and he be held guilty of the one cause for which separation should be had, who by any sort of bad conduct puts it out of his companion's power to keep the bond according to its obligations.

Original Poetry.

I send these lines, given by the Spirit at Hackney, London, to Sister Waterman, about six years ago. The Lord's promises seemed to be delayed and she was somewhat sad about it. Others may be in similar circumstances now.

God does not bid thee wait
To disappoint at last.
A golden promise fair and great,
In precept's mould is cast.

Soon shall the morning gild The dark horizon. Then Thy heart's desire shall be fulfilled. Wait patiently for Him.

No life

THOUGHTS.

"WE really need an elder here to help us in overcoming the works of the devil; for how can I stand out alone year after year? Twenty-three years is long enough in all reason! Elders from the Salt land come here, two at a time every year, and they get some to join their rotten church. These same people would have joined our church; but how could they without a preacher? I was acquainted with some of them. And they were nice people. Oh, how I wish it was possible to send and elder immediately!"- Letter from Carefully we folded the letter and laid it away, but we could not lay aside the busy thoughts surging through our brain. Souls hungering, perishing for the bread of life, and we knew that it was possible to send an elder-aye more, that there were those who were willing and waiting to go; yet none went, because none were sent. Was there or was there not responsibility connected with this state of things; and if so, where does it rest?

"How shall they hear without a preacher, and how shall he preach except he be sent?" . . . The Lord has done his part, fully, thoroughly and effectually. By the hand of an angel he restored the gospel and commissioned men to preach it in all the world for a witness-and to the intent that "The end might come." The end of sorrow, wickedness, pain and death; the end of man's inhumanity to man; of the power of spiritual wickedness in high places and the oppression of the poor and needy whose cries like the wailing, surging, moaning of the storm-tossed ocean, have entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth and will be answered upon the heads of all-yes all-who might have helped to usher in his coming, but who have folded their hands in the laps of self-ease and self-indulgence, unmindful of the great work to be accomplished; unmindful of him who has called them to a part therein and who has left as way-marks all along the path upon which his followers must walk: faithfulness, diligence, humility, self-control, fasting and prayer; aye, agony and drops of blood.

There comes to our mind as we write a vision or dream which we heard related by Bro. Joseph -indeed, now that we remember, it was published in the Herald some ten or eleven years ago, and feeling certain that no better use could be made of the space allowed the Home Column, than to reproduce it, and we will do so in the next issue of the Herald. Many hundreds now in the church have never had the privilege of reading it and we feel sure that those who never have will be benefited by its perusal, while those who have read it once will be glad to see it again.

In and by this vision we are instructed that by some there is a terrible self-deception being practiced; and the question which most nearly interests us is, "Is it I?" Will I be among that number who with confident assurance will walk up to the door, never having a doubt that I shall not enter, only to have those gleaming, flashing swords smite together as they shut me out forever, or will they open for me to pass?

What the gospel of Christ demands of one, it demands of all, and when the day of reckoning shall come and the final account be rendered in, then, if not before, we shall know that God is our Father and all mankind are brethren. Justice is the habitation of his throne and unto each one will be rendered a due recompense of reward. How long will this state of things continue? How long will elders wait to be sent and the means be waiting to carry them forth?

"The earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof." Surely those who occupy will in time discover that the Lord will one day take an account of every man's stewardship.

Dear Sisters: - Why should I feel sad to-day? It is the Fourth of July and all nature seems to rejoice. I hear the band playing and have just seen the procession pass by and it was good. The pure white dresses worn by the young ladies who represented the different states made them look, from where I was standing, as though they belonged to heaven more than earth, and I could not but wish that heaven may be their portion. It is lovely July weather and the earth is robed in beautiful green, yet I feel sad, and can not mingle with the busy, joyous throng that are crowding the streets of our peaceful little town on this occasion, and am at home, alone.

There will be another procession this afternoon, a funeral in the church across the way. I look through the window, at the house of brother and sister Stebbins-a house of mourning. but a few hours longer and they will follow their little darling to her last resting place-the cold and silent tomb. Only those who witnessed her last hours upon earth can realize what a happy release it was to that lovely little spirit, to be taken back to God who gave it. They are left to mourn their loss while here below, but not without hope of a glorious meeting in the life to come. They have one bright spirit left to cheer home, little Helen. She came to them nine years ago to-day; thus it happens that this memorable day will bring to them each year, both joy and sorrow, the birthday of one and the funeral day of the other. May God in his mercy comfort them is my prayer!

I look in the opposite direction at another house. Sister Emma Thomas is at home to-day watching over her little four-year-old Frank, who had his limb broken last Monday. She had enough care before, but she is so patient; alas, what is this life at best! 'Tis but a troubled dream. O how my thoughts wander, and my feelings none can tell! Where is my first little darling's grave? Ah, I never saw it! Perhaps the wolves dug him up. And where is Willie's? I could not find it if I was there. Many times has the sod been turned over, and wheat grows on it now. And where is Tillie's? the good little Saint of eleven years old? She lies in a pretty graveyard two thousand miles away; but where is the grave of him whom I loved in my youth? I do not know, I have not seen it. More than a thousand miles separate that grave from me and I can only weep and wait. If I am faithful I know that I shall meet them again.

And where are the living? Glaud and Janie are away in the west, they live by the seashore, and I may never see them again in this life. Two are here but not mine like they used to be; they have homes of their own. All are gone and such is life!

Everything is so quiet, and I thought I would rest too, but the mind will wander. I am back again sixteen years ago. Joseph and Dollie were little then and their father said to me, "Mattie, how can I go to Australia and leave you all alone: it is too far."

I said, "Go, and the Lord will take care of us," for I could not leave my children nor could we take them along if I should go. I see his parting look, I hear his farewell words,-

"I will come back to you again, for I know the Lord will take care of me," and we are at the window watching the cars and the waving of his handkerchief till all had vanished from sight. Then it seemed as though the sun had ceased to shine and it was gloomy as a funeral day. The children and I were alone; but they were good and obedient,-never gave me a saucy word, no never; but helped me all they could to keep their father in the ministry. O, how my heart aches! I can not keep the blinding tears back when I think of the past, and to-day brings forcibly to my mind one Fourth of July when we could not go to the celebration. Joseph had no clothes fit to wear. He knew his father was a good man and on the Lord's work, so he staid at home without a murmur. I told him that the Lord would bless him in future, and so he has done, for he has been his teacher and showed him many things that no human hand has ever done.

When their father came home after an absence of nearly six years, Glaud and Joseph went with a team to meet him and as they drove through the gate I said to Dollie, "Has he come?"

She said, "I don't know, there's a man in the wagon, but I don't know him."

They were strangers and it was a long time before they could get acquainted with him. It was hard to see that, and almost more than I could endure. But it was all for the gospel's sake. If we only remain faithful what a joyful meeting we will have in the bye and bye, where sighing and parting will be no more. I felt like writing. Speaking and writing often brings relief, but now I must stop. Your sister,

M. RODGER.

THE above letter was handed us since our editorial was written and we can but wonder, does it enter into the mind of any that the elders' families are the only ones of whom God demands sacrifice? It will be well as we read the vision next week that we put the question to our every heart, "How will I feel should those gleaming swords bar my entrance? Am I indeed deceiving myself?"—Ed.

Dear Mothers and Sisters of the Covenant:—As one of the "should be correspondents" to our dear Home Column, I take up the pen and will try and have a few minutes social converse with you. But alas, my pen seems rusty and dull-pointed; but no wonder! I've had it laid away in a napkin so long. But I have repented and in the future, with God's help, will try and do better; and in the name of a Latter Day Saint and sister in Christ I greet you.

Latter Day Saint! Gracious name! Would that all who bear it were worthy! The name of the church was given by inspiration of heaven, and our Father loves it, and so does Jesus our Elder Brother; and if loved by heaven, we can well sustain the sinner's scornful sneer.

All through the Scriptures, and especially in the New Testament, the people of God, the church of Christ, were, with one or two exceptions, called Saints. The name implies a great deal, and I only wish-well-wish-we were better. If we have come short in the past let us look well to the future, and, day by day, Lord help us to renew our covenant. For one I can say that my hope in Christ and in the great latter day work is firm and abiding, and to the dear mothers who, like myself, have grown old and gray in this work I would say, Let us be patient. Let us try and be faithful a little longer. We are now within a hand's breadth of the prize; O, may we not falter or grow weary in well doing, now we are so near the end of the race! Many times our feet have well nigh slipped, but have been upheld by the grace of God, and by the communion and fellowship of the Saints. Father, our Father in heaven! help us, O help us to make straight paths for our feet, lest that which is lame be turned out of the way! Surely,

"It requires a constant labor All His precepts to obey."

And we can

'Never cease the conflict,
Till the summons home be heard,
We have all for life enlisted,
In the army of the Lord."

What a blessed privilege is our's of communicating together through the Home Column. We thus become better acquainted with each other and each other's hopes, fears, and determinations, and when the Union Prayer Circle meets we know better how to pray and what to ask for. O, my sisters, do we appreciate, do we estimate this privilege? I sometimes fear we do not. How we love our dear Herald! The Home and Correspondent's Column is worth every thing. The "Sealed Book," and, speaking for myself, I think the "Harmony of Inspiration," by Bro. R. M. Elvin surpassed anything I ever read in the Herald. So much truth and beauty combined. I enjoyed it very much.

We, my husband and myself, with our young family lived in this region of country when our brethren Joseph and Hyrum Smith were martyred. We saw the dark shadows rest down upon the church; saw the Saints scattered like sheep without a shepherd, and then we sorrowed and grieved almost as those without hope. Oh, those were "dark and cloudy days!" Aspirants arose and led away disciples after them, ourselves among the number. We followed at the call of S. Rigdon and G. M. Hinkle at a sacrifice of home, friends and all, or nearly all, of our earthly possessions. But why, oh, why dwell upon those troublesome times! I would forget

"Those tedious days and nights of grief,
Those months of woe and no relief;
How glad when they were gone!"

And now, dear mothers and sisters, let us unite our hearts and voices in one prolonged thankoffering, that we have been spared to see the reorganization of the church in all its beauty; for it has arisen clear as the sun, fair as the moon, and will become terrible as an army with banners! Then will come to pass the saying among the wicked, "Let us not go up to Zion to battle, for the inhabitants thereof are terrible!" Yes, terrible; not in their own wisdom or righteousness, but

"Strong in the Lord of Hosts, And in His mighty power,"

Ever praying for Zion's weal, I am your sister in hope, M. Ruby Baldwin.

Dear Sisters:- Though never having met with an organization of your society-nor even one of your membership,-(our were the proper word, perhaps),—yet I am deeply interested in all your works and words. Some of the sisters have ceased to write. We-I-miss them very much. Have they deserted the work for more effectual work? Why don't we hear from more societies of the Prayer Union? There are five sisters (self included) in this vicinity, but scattered from two to seven miles apart. Some have no team, two or three are too poor to take the Herald, two sisters have been in the church only a few months --so the prospects are discouraging for a Prayer Union here,-yet still I am going to try to effect an organization. There is a dear, noble sister and her family intending to come here from the Pacific coast with a view to locate permanently; another from Texas. So there is hope of a better time coming; and we who are here desire the especial prayers of the Union, for we are isolated from the most of you; and, as a family, our's really needs the faith that only deep, earnest, united prayer elicits. Our faith has been most sorely tried, we have been brought near to God; aud proved Him, that He verifies His word to His children in very deed.

We fear we may sometimes relax our hold of the rod of iron; when the mists deepen around us, become weak from sheer exhaustion, and lose a little of our earnestness and zeal. Therefore, pray for us.

Did any of you ever live in every sense of the word? and what was the result? Or, did you try and stumble and fail? Give us the benefit of your experience.

The powers of darkness are waging war against us—drawn up in battle array in the rear, aye, it would seem sometimes as if we were encompassed about, and we grow sick at heart, and almost fearful;—but the enemy is watching us, and we must not give up. We are trying to let pebbles of truth fall about us continually, that the waves of light may circle wider and wider till the waters of evertasting life shall finally prevail over all things.

Being but a lesser light I may neither edify nor instruct, therefore I will close.

Fraternally,

VIVE VALE,

FULTON, Iowa, June 23d.

Sister Frances:—The Herald is a welcome visitor, for it is always loaded with glorious news of the latter day work, and the letters of the Home Column are food for my soul. They strengthen and cheer me on in this warfare against Satan and sin.

Elder J. S. Roth is with us again. His coming is always hailed with delight, and his stay appreciated highly by all the Saints as well as many outside the church. The threats of tar and feathers were unheeded by him and he stepped boldly into the field as of old, preaching to large and attentive audiences several times and also officiating in a marriage ceremony near the vicinity of these enemies. The parties were two highly esteemed young Saints of this branch whom I, with many others, heartily wish a life of faithfulness to God attended by many blessings. Elder Roth is an expert at tying knots and those wishing to be united in the "holy bonds of wedlock" would do well to engage him.

Satan has been raging since my last writing and we have been severally tried, but by putting our trust in God and receiving aid from Him we were permitted to go on with the good work. Our priest, J. Heide, though threatened with vengeance, held meetings at the school house every Sunday night and our weekly prayer-meetings went on as usual and are still continuing. The trial was only strengthening and to day we were made to rejoice, first at our Saints meeting, for God was with us in the gifts promised to His children in his word; second, by Bro. Roth after preaching in the afternoon, leading four precious souls into the waters of baptism in the presence of a large congregation. But notwithstanding that God's work is going on, the devil is also present, for while we were on the way to the water, a man followed us about half a mile raving like a maniac and threatening to cane Elder Roth as sure as he would baptize his wife, declaring he would never baptize another, and used language which I would not like to repeat. He found Bro. Roth did not scare at triffes, but went about the Lord's business as if nothing had happened. That man's wife was not baptized for the reason that she had not asked, so the old gent had his fury all for nothing.

The confirmation meeting in the evening of those who were baptized was a joyous affair and long to be remembered by both Saints and outsiders who were present. Over fifty were congregated at the home of my mother, which made it somewhat crowded, but the best of order prevailed throughout the meeting. More are ready and would obey, but are prevented.

How glad I am that I ever obeyed this blessed gospel, for I know that it is of God, and how I praise Him for giving me strength to stand firm during the trials and persecutions I have lately had to undergo, and I humbly ask an interest in your supplications, that whatever may be in store for me in the future, I may continue faithful to the end and share the glorious reward which awaits all those who obey God's holy will and commandments.

With much love to all the Saints, I am your sister in Christ, OLLIE SUTTON.

FULTON, Iowa, June 25th.

Dear Sisters:—Although you have so recently heard from our branch through Bro. J. Heide I feel that I must write to tell you how our hearts were made glad by four precious souls being born of water and the Spirit on Sunday last; two brothers and two sisters whom we receive with thankfulness. Satan is still raging because he sees good is being done despite those slanderous reports which have been so extensively circulated.

Sisters of the Prayer Union, I have been watching the Home Column for more of you to report; especially those who keep the hour alone; but perhaps you are a little timid about relating your experiences and sending them up to be published, at least that is my condition, but as I have often learned a lesson by reading another's experience, I will relate mine which may benefit some one who perchance may have thought as I did.

When I first became a member of the Union I thought it unnecessary for one alone to devote the entire hour of prayer and praise to Him who is ever mindful of us.

One day as the hour arrived I laid down my sewing, retired to my room, knelt down and offered up my feeble supplication to God upon the subject which was set apart for that day and for the afflicted ones who requested our prayers. I spent about twenty or thirty minutes perhaps, then resumed my work again. I was not more than seated when the following words, "Could ye not watch with me one hour?" came to me with such force that I was made to realize at once I was not proving faithful. The same words that Jesus spoke unto his disciples in the garden of Gethsemane, and I immediately thought, Somewhere many of my sisters are keeping this hour sacred while I have not fallen asleep as did the disciples of old, but deserted my post. I pray that we may all continue faithful to the end, and that we may receive strength and wisdom from God to guide us here on earth.

In connection with this letter I wish to say that I derive much benefit from Autumn Leaves and Home Column, and feel that I can not do without either.

I suggest that Sr. "Frances" favor us with her portrait in some number of Autumn Leaves ere the year closes.

Yours,

E. M. D.

ROMAN, Va., July 2d.

Dear Herald:-I came home from Dayton. Virginia, Saturday last, and found Bro. Moler here yet, although fixing to return to West Virginia. It is the first time that we have met since the debate with Harvey in Mason county, West Virginia, at which time this brother was just beginning his Saint life, and has since been made an able minister of the word. Notwithstanding it has been at a great sacrifice to him in many respects he has lifted up and firmly planted the standard of truth here in such a manner as to attract some of the very best people in this country -a people able and willing to support it. They have erected a neat and well planned house of worship with capacity to seat from three to four hundred people. I am told that when Bro. M. came there was but one Saint here, and that a Arrangements are made for a discussion with Rev. W. C. Thurman who is a Universalist—that is, he has founded a system that after him is known as such. He proposes to affirm that what he teaches is the true doctrine of Christ, &c., and is ready to negative the proposition that the Reorganized Church is the true church.

He stands well here as a man of good character and ability and a man of good manners, who will not stoop to the dirty work of a Clark Braden. I would earnestly request that the church send Bro. E. L. Kelley here to meet this man sometime in October, and give him at least three weeks' time, so that all can have satisfaction. This is a most excellent point for such a work. This community, including many counties in this great valley, is made up of tolerably intelligent and wealthy people, mostly Dunkards, some Lutherans and Methodists who will fall in with us in large numbers when convinced of the doctrine. It would hardly be worth while to undertake it sooner than October as the people are all too busy saving their crops. The whole face of the earth seems to be mostly covered with the golden grain-wheat. There is, I suppose, more wheat harvested in this valley than in all West Virginia; and there may be also, if this work is kept up steadily by the church, a harvest of souls gathered into the Lord's "barn." Three were baptized yesterday by Bro. Moler.

I am left alone and somewhat disappointed as I was sent here to labor with Bro. M. However, I am of the opinion that he is right in going back into West Virginia, for there is no chance here now to labor, as people are so busy they will not turn out to hear preaching, and it will be so for at least a month or more. I am strongly convinced that it would be far better for me to return to West Virginia where I had a good work started and where I can serve the cause to better advantage. It is not convenient for us to dedicate the new church edifice here at this time, for the reason that it is not finished, and the people can not attend as they will after awhile. Many wanted it postponed who live in other counties so they can attend. At some proper time we will advertise it in, say, October. This service will attract an immense concourse of people, and offer an opportunity to present the word seldom enjoyed by an elder in this country. I could lengthen out this writing further and tell you all about the good Saints we have here, the noble sisters and brethren, old and young, and how they love the work that has lifted from their eyes the vail of the God of this world which blinds the minds of millions "lest the light of the glorious gospel should shine unto them." I am very impressively instructed that a standard shall be raised here that will not be pulled down by the enemy; "a standard of truth," but I know the value of your space and therefore close offering this only. to use all or as much as in your judgment is most proper. Your prayers, brethren and sisters, for those Saints and, Yours,

WILBER, Neb., July 8th.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—Closed meetings here last evening, spoke eleven times in the Saints' new church, a neat frame house of worship which looks well with its clean paint. The Saints expect to complete the inside work before cold weather. Attendance was good throughout. The heat for the past two weeks has been severe, and preaching every night is a task on the best of health. Farmers are busy with their harvest. The small grain this year is excellent, and the promise for corn is still good if rain comes soon. Gospel outlook as good as we could expect at this time of the year. In bonds,

MANY LITTLES.

There are few enterprises, if any, which reach a culmination save by a preparatory procedure, which involves a necessity for co-operation. The gospel method reflects its own equality, which the lovers thereof will never knowingly hide or essay to prevent. The building of houses of worship by the Latter Day Saints is a laudable, nay more, an imperative work; but we can only be Christ-like as we study and labor to evince a goodly or Christ-like zeal. And he has cautioned or advised all who build to count the cost, the imperativeness of which is often more sensibly felt after being plunged into difficulties through a disregard of the caution. And while it is possible to excite sympathy in such difficulties, yet a failure to observe the caution whether through ignorance or a zeal not according to knowledge is condemnable in proportion to the understanding we might claim to have of Christ's teachings.

I was forcibly reminded of these facts in studying the contents of a petition from the Fremont branch, Nebraska, to a district conference held at Platte Valley, Nebraska, June 28th, 1889, from which I learn wherein the petitioners inform the body to whom they appealed, that an indebtedness of $150 on their house of worship, which after many and fruitless efforts on their part to liquidate, has become a burden, looming up as a preventive to spiritual progress and gospel unity, hence their appeal. Here, then, is a difficulty and an enquiry as to the cause of it would be ineffectual to remove or lessen it. For if by pushing this inquiry it were made to appear the building committee were at fault, it might claim to have done its best; in which event the time and labor consumed would prove useless, and perhaps make the difficulties more complicated,

Then let the three hundred members of the Northern Nebraska district demonstrate the practicability and the goodness of an ultimate being reached by many littles, and the truthfulness of the saying, namely, "A good many can help one when one can't help a good many." Three hundred halves would make one hundred and fifty dollars. It is probable that some among the three hundred could not possibly contribute the half dollar, and just as probable that there are those who could contribute more than the half dollar. Will not the brethren and sisters of the above district come to the help of the distressed, evincing a desire to bear each other's burdens and practically demonstrate the effect of unity through the mite system? It is possible justification may be felt in a non effort to assume the task under the pressure of the times, but experience teaches us that we'll do but little for the promotion of the cause we claim to love if waiting until all barriers are removed, and warrants the conclusion that a design with a corresponding effort to do gospel labor or perform gospel imposed duties will always be performed under or in the face of difficulties, requiring much gospel boldness and purity of desire.

In conclusion I would respectfully suggest that the following be carefully studied and taken as a guide in the work of church building:

"For which of you intending to build a tower, sitteth down first, and counteth the cost, whether he have sufficient means to finish it? lest haply, after he had laid the foundation, and is not able to finish it, all that behold it begin to mock him, saying, This man began to build and was not able to finish."—Luke 11: 28-30.

Nothing could be more sensible, while the practicability thereof is in no way difficult. But between it and lofty notions begetting a desire in Bro. A. to excell in beauty and dazzling appearance. Bro. B., there is a conflict. But to discreet and conservative Latter Day Saints, the propriety of an unassuming structure free of debt is more desirable than a massive, assuming, costly one, which brings a big incumbrance. And when these lofty notions triumph over, and lead from the course that discretion, etc. suggests, anguish and trouble are as sure to follow as day succeeds night. For the expectation of God's wondrous interposition to stay effects following a disregard of well-known caution and admonition, is not well founded.

Those to help outside of branches in the district may forward their offering to W. M. Rumel, No. 2222. Clark Street, Omaha, Nebraska.

Bro. Blair:—I wish to inform your readers of the prosperity of the work in the Western Wisconsin district. In company with Bro. W. S. Pender I have been laboring at Valley Junction for the last two or three weeks in defence of the truth; preaching every night with good liberty, good attention and the Holy Spirit rested on them; so I had the pleasure of leading six souls into the kingdom of God, and there are a number more that are near the kingdom and will get wet soon. The Saints there are kind and good, and strong in this latter day work. The branch numbers thirty, und is known as the Evergreen branch. We expect to return there in the near future if the Lord will. Bro. Pender is well liked and God is blessing his labors.

This district is doing grandly. The calls for preaching more than we can fill; truly the Lord is with us! I can say the Lord has blessed me with power in preaching this glorious gospel. I have been traveling about two months and the Lord has blessed my efforts. I must go home to see to the harvesting of my grain and then go again to battle for the truth. I hope to continue most of my time in the field. I have a small family to support. Will have to go home part of the time. I depend on God for assistance Love to all.

A. L. WHITAKER.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, July 7th.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—June 7th I went to quarterly conference at Little Sioux. The brethren had the "tabernacle" pitched, and by request, on the evening of the 11th I commenced a series of meetings, preaching in all twenty-three sermons in sixteen days. On Sunday, the 23d ult., I baptized eleven persons in Little Sioux river, and there ought to be ten more "buried with Christ by baptism" at that place; and I believe there will be, and possibly more. A very good interest was manifested throughout, and attendance excellent. The tabernacle is a success.

God blessed me with much power, and plainness of speech. A newspaper correspondent wrote to a county paper of the meetings and said: "The meetings did an immense amount of good"—and he's not of our faith either! We give God the honor.

A committee requested the writer to deliver the oration on the Fourth, which I did, to a vast audience.

There was a great deal of "kicking" done by an "evangelist" residing at Little Sioux, and by some few of the Methodists, and the M. E. preacher of this place is slurring our faith through one of the papers. We have replied to him: and this week we expect the publication of a challenge in two papers, to the M. E. preachers of Little Sioux and Magnolia especially, and those in Harrison county in general. We believe force of circumstances demanded this. We, as a people, have nothing to back down on in our doctrine, and are fearless in its defense. We have been called "frauds," "impostors," "liars," "deceivers," etc., considerable hereabouts. Now let it be proven if possible; there is a way to get at it.

I see Braden is still on the war-path. Mormonism don't seem to set well on his fermented, theological stomach. Well, it is as distasteful up here with some; but with God's blessing we do not purpose restraining the Holy Spirit in its hallowed promptings to teach plainly and boldly, for any man in or out of the church. I've got no covering to put on God's word to please any one. If the plain gospel story told under God's blessing don't please folks I've no apologies to offer. Ever since I have been a minister in this church I have endeavored to preach "the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth." I started out young-in company with no one but Him who sent me, - and from that day to this I have trusted Him and learned of Him; believed His promises, and received many of His favors. I know of His power, or I know nothing. I thank God sincerely for His saving truth; for its ever blessed light, and its wondrous power! I'm glad it reaches the hearts of the people; and having been sent of God—as all His ministers are—we can rejoice, knowing we serve no man, but each one is a "free man in Christ," observing the same laws, preaching the same gospel.

I rejoice in the prosperity of the cause. I am receiving added light upon God's word-and unusual power of the Holy Spirit in preaching it. My health since General Conferance has improved very much, ane I am thankful. God bless the church publications; bless the holy "Prayer Union," the "Golden Research Societies," the Sunday School Associations, and every thing else Godsputs in the hearts of his people to do-furthering the work of righteousness among his people, confirming them in the faith, increasing their knowledge of Him and His ways. There is no law, rule or regulation of the church forbidding their existence; nor the existence of any effort for good. No word of God exists, written or unwritten of which the church has any knowledge debarring God's peope from such holy and righteous association and commingling of his people. I have been surprised to see questions of queer sort in Herald about such things. God says man has the power in himself to bring about-or to pass-much righteousness. If it is a righteous thing for an individual to pray-is it an unrighteousness thing for two or more to meet for prayer? If it is a righteous act to read God's word and study it as an individual, does it become unrighteous and unsafe and a human affair for two or more to meet to do the same thing?

If it be a righteous act for a Sunday School to exist, does it become unrighteous and unsafe for two or more to associate and from rules, etc, for the furtherance of the good work?

Is it a good deed for a sister to make a garment for a brother or sister, and does it become an evil deed for two or more to get together and make a garment for a good cause? Wherein lies the consistency of objections of this sort? We have all needful evidence that God has and is blessing all the auxiliaries of righteousness in and to his church. I am not personal, but I mean what I write, and can see no other way!

"Come up higher," says the Spirit. How? By remaining indifferent, or branching into the several paths of righteous and godly effort when we can see and know that those paths lead no soul from God or his truth, but are strengthening, sustaining, awakening and refreshing His people! God speed every means of right-doing. "He that waiteth to be commanded in all things shall be counted as a slothful servant."

J. F. McDowell.

Woodbine, Iowa, July 5th.

Bro. Blair:—I am doing all I can to secure subscriptions for the church publications, and trust that I may be able to send more soon. I feel a great interest in the spread of truth here and elsewhere, and I humbly ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints that I may be strengthened through faith in Christ to humbly, patiently and faithfully perform the duties that are devolving upon me acceptably in the sight of God, for I feel at times that my burden is more than a new beginner can endure; but at the same time I know the crown is promised only at the end of the race. How much easier would be the race if we all as Saints would live up to our privileges and duties. O, let us all awake to the work required at our hands, and ere the winter of 1889 and '90 close in we will be surprised at the results for good. It does not matter how weak we may feel, each and all have a work to do, and if that work is done faithfully and truly the reward is promised and will never fail to follow the labor bostowed.

S. B. KIBLER.

DURANGO, Texas, July 1st.

Dear Herald: - I was baptized September 19th, 1886, by Elder S. W. Simmons. I am fifteen years old. I have never regretted the step thus taken. We are the only Saints in this little town, but have a branch about nine or ten miles from here. We are having plenty of rain and good prospects for a good crop. I have been blessed since I joined the church, although I have not lived up to my duty as I should. My father and mother are members of the church. Papa takes the Herald and I take the Autumn Leaves. I love to read them and don't think I could do without them. Many of my friends and relatives turned against me when I joined the church, but they are getting over it somewhat now. Pray for me that I may live right and be saved in the kingdom of God. Your sister,

ANNIE BATES.

WEST BAY CITY, Mich., July 8th.

Bro. Blair: On the 17th of June, the day following the close of our district conference, I went with Elder J. A. Carpenter to Bay Port to administer to a sick sister. On the 20th I came here to assist Elder J. J. Cornish, and labored here until the 29th. I then went to Coleman. While there I baptized two, and confirmed them and three others who were baptized by Priest E. J. Martindale. On July 2d I went to Juniata to spend the fourth with my family and brethren. The members of our branch assembled on the morning of the fourth at half-past ten at the meeting-house for prayer and testimony, and at half-past two I was called upon to address those assembled. We met again in the evening for prayer and testimony, and we were greatly blesed with the Spirit in all our meetings. In our evening meeting of that day the Saints bore testimony that they had enjoyed that day more than any Fourth of July in their life, and I can truly say the same. On Saturday I returned to this place. I expect to open up a new place this week in Lapeer county.

Your brother in Christ, LEVI PHELPS.

SINNET'S MILLS, W. Va., July.

Dear Herald:-I love God's holy cause. I love the Herald. When I read the sisters' and brethren's letters my heart burns with that love that should be in the heart of ever Saint. I have been made to rejoice in the last few weeks by having the privilege of reading thn Book of Mormon which had greatly been my desire, having not obtained one as yet. Bro. Bell loaned me his, and I have read it prayerfully and carefully. I would say to every Saint that has not read the book to read it; for it will lead us into the path of duty. Now, then, those of us that have not got it, let us make a sacrifice, for it will be the means of bringing our children and our neighbors' children into the fold. I can say that my husband and I rejoice in this latter day work, for we know it is the power of God unto salvation. I have no other desire but to live near the foot of the cross that I may have my work done, and well done when Jesus comes in glory.

Your sister in Christ,

MAN IS PERSUADED OF GOD AND TEMPTED OF THE DEVIL.

"Our of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. A good man out of the good treasure of the heart bringeth forth good things; and an evil man, out of the evil treasure bringeth forth evil things."

-Matt. 12:34, 35. Whether the heart here referred to is the heart alone, or both heart and brain, it is quite clear that it includes the mind which controls the desires and actions of the entire man, which God has so arranged in every intelligent person that it may be made by them a treasury of good things, or a treasury of evil things. Therefore, if a man's heart is evil and his mouth is continually speaking that which is corrupt, and the members of his body are found violating the laws of God and man, he, and not God, is responsible therefor. For it will be seen by a careful examination of the words of inspiration, that God has so ordered that man can not be led into ways of righteousness by the Spirit of truth, nor into the paths of darkness and sin by the devil or any other being until he willingly yields to be led. To prove this we will first state that the spirits of all men were pure in the beginning, which is shown by the following: "Every spirit of man was innocent in the beginning, and God having redeemed man from the fall, man became again in their infant state, innocent before God."-D. and C.,

The above quotation not only shows that the spirits of all men were innocent in the beginning, but that through the atonement of Christ all are without sin in their infancy. And in bringing man into the world in this innocent state, and enduing him with power to resist evil, and make his heart a treasury of good things which should flow from the mouth like the water from a pure fountain, we read that Christ gave a degree of light to every man that is born into the world: "That [Christ] was the true light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world."-John 1:9.

"For behold, the Spirit of Christ is given to every man, that they may know good from evil."—Book of Mormon, p. 536, par. 2.

It seems to me that in order to make the Scriptures harmonize it is necessary to reach the conclusion that the light which is given by Christ to every man that cometh into the world, is the power to think and act independent of all other beings.

And this is in harmony with the though that Christ is the one by which all things were made and by which all things continue to exist, as seen in these words: "Who is in the image of the invisible God, the first-born of every creature. For by him were all things created, that are in heaven, and that are in earth, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers; all things were created by him, and for him; and he is before all things, and by him all things consist."—Col. 1: 16, 17.

"And he bore record saying, I saw his glory that he was in the beginning before the world was; therefore, in the beginning the Word was; for he was the Word, even the messenger of salvation, the light and Redeemer of the world; the Spirit of truth, who came into the world because the world was made by him; and in him was the life of men and the light of men."

—D. and C. 90: par. 1.

Yet for all this the Lord says: "All truth is independent in that sphere in which God has placed it, to act for itself. as all intelligence also, otherwise there is no existence. Behold, here is the agency of man, and here is the condemnation of man, because that which was from the beginning is plainly manifest unto them, and they receive not the light."-D. and C.

Wherefore we see that whenever God sent a message to the people either by prophets, apostles, or by his own Son, that message was always addressed to man's reasoning powers as well as to the emotions of the heart, as may be seen by the following: "Come now, and let us reason together, saith the Lord: though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool."—Isa. 1:18.

"Who hath ears to hear, let him hear."

-Matt. 13:9.

For by hearing with our ears and seeing with our eyes our minds are convinced that "the testimony of the Lord is sure," and that it is for the best good of ourselves and all, to keep God's commandments and listen to the gentle wooings of the Holy Spirit that our hearts might be filled with love for God and man and thus become a treasury of good things. This is plainly seen by the following words of our Savior: "And in them is fulfilled the prophecy of Esaias, which saith, By hearing ye shall hear and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see and shall not perceive; for this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should be converted, and I should heal them."— Matt. 13: 14, 15.

Although man has his agency, yet there are two powers in existence which from the foundation of the world have ever sought to influence him; the one to do good, and the other to do evil; one is God and the other the devil. God has ever sought to store the heart with good things, while the devil has tried to sow in it the seeds of evil.

The apostle James understood this thought when he wrote, "Let no man say when he is tempted, I am tempted of God; for God can not be tempted with evil, neither tempteth he any man. But every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lusts, and is enticed."-James

The devil always stands ready to whisper in our ears that there is no harm in this or that evil, and thus lead us on and on to destruction because we have chosen

"Know ye not that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?"—Rom. 6: 16.

"Submit yourselves therefore to God. Resist the devil, and he will flee from you."—James 4: 7.

"Wherefore, all things which are good, cometh of God; and that which is evil, cometh of the devil; for the devil is an enemy unto God, and fighteth against him continually, and inviteth and enticeth to sin, and to do that which is evil continually. But behold, that which is of God inviteth and enticeth to do good continually; wherefore, everything which inviteth and enticeth to do good, and to love God, and to serve him, is inspired of God. fore take heed, my beloved brethren, that ye do not judge that which is evil to be of God, or that which is good and of God to be of the devil. For behold, my brethren, it is given unto you to judge that ye may know good from evil; and the way to judge is plain, that ye may know with a perfect knowledge, as the daylight is from the dark night. For behold, the Spirit of Christ is given to every man, that they may know good from evil; wherefore I show unto you the way to judge; for everything which inviteth to do good, and to persuade to believe in Christ, is sent forth by the power and gift of Christ; wherefore ye may know with a perfect knowledge, it is God; but whatsoever thing persuadeth men to do evil, and believe not in Christ, and deny him, and serve not God, then ye may know with a perfect knowledge it is of the devil, for after this manner doth the devil work, for he persuadeth no man to do good, no not one; neither doth his angels; neither do they who subject themselves unto him."-Book of Mormon, p. 536.

When Christ came into the world clothed with a body of the seed of Abraham, he was not perfect at first, but after he was tempted and tried and overcame he secured salvation for all who would follow him as may be seen by the following: "For we have not a high priest which can not be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin."

"Though he were a Son, [yes, though he were the Son] yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered; and being made perfect, he became the author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him."-Heb 4: 15; 5:8,9.

This thought is also taught in Doctrine and Covenants 90: 2: "And I, John, saw that he received not of the fulness at the first, but received grace for grace; and he received not the fulness at first, but continued from grace to grace, until he received a fulness; and thus he was called the Son of God, because he received not the fulness at the first.'

The Savior confirms this testimony in these words, in John 17:19: "An for their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth."

When Jesus obeyed the command of God, the Spirit was received by him and the Father proclaimed from heaven, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.'-Matt. 3: 17.

And John tells us us that he gave power unto others to become the sons of God also as follows: "He came unto his own, and his own received him not. But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name."-John

But it should be remembered that while power is given to all to become the sons of God who believe and obey the truth, yet he stands preeminently above them all and is known in the world as the Son of God, while others are merely called

He was to sanctify his body and redeem the world, therefore it is writen of him: "Thou hast loved righteousness and hated iniquity; therefore God, even thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness above thy fellows."—Heb. 1:9.

"For he whom God hath sent, speaketh the words of God; for God giveth him not the Spirit by measure, for he dwelleth in him, even the fulness."—John 3: 34, I. T.

But of other sons of God it is written: "If ye love me, keep my commandments. And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever; even the Spirit of truth; . . . whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you."-John 14: 15, 16, 26.

"For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. For ye have not received the Spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the Spirit of adoption, whereby we cry, Abba, Father. The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit, that we are the children of God; and if children, then heirs; heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ; if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together."—Rom. 8: 14-17.

But in order to receive and retain this Spirit we must be cleansed from our sins through obedience to the gospel of Christ; we must continue to keep our entire bodies and spirits pure and holy in the sight of God; our bodies must be temples for the indwelling of the Holy Ghost. Hear what Paul says: "Know ye not that ye are the temples of God and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are. What! know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you, which ye have of God, and ye are not your own? For ye are bought with a price; therefore glority God in your body, and in your spirit which are God's."—1 Cor. 5: 16, 17; 6: 19, 20.

"And what agreement hath the tempel of God with idols? for ye are the temple of the living God; as God hath said, I will dwell in them and walk in them; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."-2 Cor. 6:16-18.

The last quotation shows very clearly that the people of God are to leave and separate themselves from the sins and follies of the world; and there is no better way of doing this than by making our hearts a treasury of good things, so that our mouths may continually speak that which is good.

As the body of every true follower of Christ is the temple of God, so do all the members of an organized form known as the church compose a glorious, spiritual building and called in the Scriptures, the temple of God, as may be seen from the following: "Now therefore ye are no more strangers and foreigners, but fellow citizens with the Saints, and of the household of God; and are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone; in whom all the building fitly framed together groweth unto a holy temple in the Lord; in whom ye also are builded together for a habitation of God through the Spirit.—Eph. 2:19, 22; 4:15, 16, and 1 Peter 3: 5-9.

As Jesus Christ, without a desire to exalt himself, but in weakness and with a heart overflowing with love to God and sympathy for fallen man, chose to come and do the Father's will and redeem mankind, thus becoming the Son of God, so I understand that Satan, because his heart was evil and his ambition was to exalt himself, chose to rebel against God and thus became the Devil, the Son of perdition, and while there may be many others who will follow his lead and become devils or sons of perdition, because Satan reigns in their heart, yet the devil has as much preeminence in his sphere as the Son of God has in his.

That Satan did fall from heaven, see the following: "How art thou fallen from heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning! How art thou cut down to the ground, which didst weaken the nations! For thou hast said in thine heart, I will ascend into heaven, I will exalt my throne above the stars of God: I will sit also upon the mount of the congregation, in the sides of the north: I will ascend above the heights of the clouds; I will be like the Most High."—Isa. 14: 12, 13, 14.

"And it came to pass, that Adam being tempted of the devil, for behold the devil was before Adam, for he rebelled against me, saying, Give me thine honor, which is my power; and also a third part of the hosts of heaven turned he away from me because of their agency; and they were thrust down, and thus became the devil and his angels; and behold, there is a place prepared for them from the beginning, which place is hell; and it must needs be that the devil should tempt the children of men, or they could not be agents unto themselves, for if they never should have bitter, they could not know the sweet."—D. C. 28: 10. See also Revelations 12:3, 4, 7, 8, 9.

Now I reach the conclusion that whenever Satan or the son of perdition gets the ascendancy in the hearts of the majority of the people of God, no matter in what day or generation of the world it may be, there is an apostasy or a falling away and that the son of perdition "exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God [the mystical body of Christ or the church showing himself that he is God."—2 Thess. 2:1-8. "Verily thus saith the Lord unto you, my servants, concerning the parable of the wheat and tares: behold, verily I say that the field was the world, and the apostles were the sowers of the seed; and after they have fallen asleep, the great persecutor of the church, the apostate, the whore, even Babylon, that maketh all nations to drink of her cup, in whose hearts the enemy, even Satan, sitteth to reign; behold, he soweth the tares, wherefore the tares choke the wheat and drive the church into the wilderness."-D. C. 84:1.

"And it came to pass that I beheld this great and abominable church; and I saw the devil that he was the foundation of it. And I also saw gold, and silver, and silks, and scarlets, and fine twined linen, and all manner of precious clothing; and I saw many harlots. And the angel spake unto me saying, Behold, the gold, and the silver, and the silks, and the scarlets, and the fine twined linen, and the precious clothing, and the harlots, are the desires of this great and abominable church; and also for the praise of the world do they destroy the saints of God, and bring them down into captivity."--Book

From the foregoing we learn that the devil uses gold, silver, fine clothing, women, and the honor of the world to tempt men,—and especially those who profess to be the people of God, in order that he may reign in their hearts and separate them from the love of God, and lead individuals and the church down to hell. what a contrast there is between the allurements of Satan and the holy influences of Who would forsake the Spirit of God! God to follow Satan!

Listen how the Lord warned the first elders of this church to shun the evil and follow the good: "Seek not for riches, but for wisdom; and behold, the mysteries of God shall be unfolded unto you, and then shall you be made rich. Behold, he that hath eternal life is rich."-D. C. 5:3. "Remember faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, brotherly kindness, godliness, charity, humility, diligence."—(Sec. "And now, verily, verily, I say unto thee, put your trust in that Spirit which leadeth to do good; yea, to do justly, to walk humbly, to judge righteously, and this is my Spirit."—10:6.

When the minister has the holy priesthood conferred upon him, and is in possession of the Spirit of God and will follow its guiding influence as taught above, he can go wherever the sinner is found for the purpose of leading them to Christ without being overcome with their evil thoughts, words, or deeds; and thus they, under their "leader and commander," Christ Jesus, become the Saviors of men. But woe, woe to that man who has received this authority and enjoyed the sweet influence of the Spirit of God and been made "a partaker of the good things of the world to come" who suffers his lusts and the devil to make of him a tempter of the innocent and pure. Yes, it is written, "My Spirit shall not always strive with man, saith the Lord of Hosts."

Yes, it is the duty of every child of God to shun the evil; and should they find one who is unholy, tell them how they are violating the command of God, and Savior-like, say: "Go thy way and sin no

What a joy it is to know that if we are faithful and true to God and man the Good Spirit will lead us on and on until we shall be permitted to behold the face of our God in peace! See how the following harmonizes with this thought: "Wherefore, he that preacheth and he that receiveth understandeth one another, and both are edified and rejoice together; and that which doth not edify, is not of God, and is darkness: that which is of God is light, and he that receiveth and continueth in God receiveth more light, and that light groweth brighter and brighter until the perfect day."—D. C. 50:6.

ANIMALS.

In the Book of Mormon, as before quoted, will be found an enumeration of the animals which the Nephites found upon the land of America. Science is wholly unable to disprove any part of this statement by geological deductions, for before these deductions prove anything negatively, it must be shown, (1), that all the species of animals which ever lived upon the earth have been preserved as fossils in the earth's strata; (2), that all these strata have been thoroughly examined, and such examinations thoroughly and correctly reported. Such examinations gists do not claim they have made; but while they are unable to disprove any part of this statement, they have by affirmative evidence proved a large part of MacLean says: "The discovery of the Big Elephant Mound in Wisconsin establishes the fact that the mound builders were acquainted with the form of the mastodon." If the 'Report of the Davenport Academy of Sciences' is to be accepted, then this effigy is not an isolated case. It states that a member of the association has found a carved pipe in the form of an elephant. This however is not incredible on account of the discovery of the Wisconsin mound. It is evident that in order to have delineated the form of this animal it must have been seen."-Mound Builders, p. 136.

In relation to the Elephant Mound found in Wisconsin, Bryant says: "It does not seem probable that the people who piled up these mysterious earthworks could represent a mastodon or elephant if it were not a living creature with which they were familiar."—History of U. S., vol. 1, p. 22.

It will be remembered that I cited Prof. Winchell, in proof of the horse and camel, as also Prof. Marsh of Yale College, Ignatius Donnelly and Dr. Le Plongeon; all these witnesses harmonize and confirm the statements of the Book of "A correspondent of the Eugene City, Oregon, Guard, gives the following account of a visit made June, 1877, by himself and another person to the so-called tossil beds of Lake county, in that state: 'We found fossil bones of the elephant, camel, horse, and elk, or reindeer, the horse being much more abundant than either of the others, but all being so clearly marked as to leave no doubt of their identity. There were other bones, apparently of large animals, but your correspondent was unable to name the animal they once belonged to. Among the fossils found, the smaller quadrupeds had a representation; bones answering to the fox and wolf were found; and others answering to the sheep or goat in size and appearance."

The American Encyclopedia says: "Its fossil remains, chiefly molar teeth, have been so frequently found, especially in the southern and western states and in South America, and have been so carefully examined by competent palaeontologists, that no doubt can remain of the former existence of the horse in the western Prof. Leidy says there is no room to doubt the former existence of the horse on the American continent, at the same time with the mastodon, and that 'man probably was his companion.' "-

See article Horse.

And upon the elephant the same authority says: "The fossil elephant of North America is said by Prof. H. D. Rogers to occur above the drift, in the superficial deposits of a distinctly later age; it must therefore have been contemporary with the mastodon giganteus; indeed their bones and teeth have been found side by side in the marshy alluvium of Big Bone Lick, and the two animals must have been exterminated together."

MacLean says: "No extinct quadruped has been more widely diffused over the globe than the mastodon. It has extended from the tropics both south and north into temperate latitudes, and its bones have been found in vast numbers throughout the plains of North America, from north of Lake Erie to the Gulf on the south. There were mastodons peculiar to Central and South America."-Mastodon, Mammoth and Man, p. 18.

"The The same author says again: mammoth ranged over a large part of earth's surface, its remains having been found in North America from Behring's Straits to the Gulf of Mexico."—Ibid, p.

He says again: "The existence of the mammoth or mastodon, (probably the latter), was known to the people of Central America. On the walls of their stone built palaces and temples have been found, engraven with elaborate care, the form of one of these animals. On one of the ruins at Palenque, state of Chiapas, Mexico, there is the figure of a head, resembling the elephant, although the tusks are not represented. Ancient basket works, mattings, etc., were found on Petit Anse Island, Louisiana, at a depth of sixteen feet below the surface of the soil. Two feet above the matting were the remains of tusks and bones of the mastodon. The fossils, baskets, pottery, etc., belong to a layer which rested upon a stratum composed of a gray mixture of salt, clay and sand. Since the layer containing the remains was formed, fifteen others have been deposited, the greatest thickness of which is one hundred and eighty feet. The formation and position of the relics leave no doubt that man and the mastodon existed at the same time on this island. The bottom layer of this island is rock salt of unknown thickness, and the evidence shows that both man and the mastodon, as well as other animals, resorted to this place to obtain salt."—Ibid, p. 77.

Of the remains of the great buffalo, the same author says: "The remains of this animal have been met with in Kentucky and elsewhere."—Ibid, p. 81.

In the absence of evidence to the contrary, it is fair to presume that the mammoth and the mastodon are the curelom and cumom of the Book of Mormon.

Prof. Wm. Larrabee, A. M., in "Lectures on the Scientific Evidence of Natural and Revealed Religion," says: mastodon was a native of North America. He resembled the elephant, but was much larger."-p. 312.

In the Chicago Times for April 26th, 1882, was the following concerning the elephants of ancient America: "Jumbo wasn't a circumstance to the elephants that used to stamp around this country."

S. B. Evans, who was sent out in 1881, by the Chicago Times on a mound exploring expedition, says of the elephant mound in Wisconsin: "A huge structure, in the form of an elephant, occurs in Grant county, Wisconsin. Its total length is about one hundred and thirty-five feet; from hind feet to back, sixty feet; width across forelegs, twenty-one feet; across the body, thirty-six feet; general height of the effigy above the surrounding lines, five feet. This remarkable structure deserves more than a passing notice. It so closely resembles the elephant in all the details that the observer does not fail to see the resemblance at once, and from any point. Its antiquity is not questioned, and yet it was constructed by a people who, according to our notions, had never seen an elephant. But to have made such an effigy it was absolutely necessary that the designer should have had the form before him or the idea in his brain. It could not have been a creature of imagination, or the proportions would not have been so well preserved. These facts lead one to think that the primitive elephant, or the mastodon, existed in America at a later period than has always been supposed."-Chicago Times, March 30th, 1881.

The Newport, Vermont, Express and Standard for August 15th, 1882, contains the following from the New Orleans Democrat: "Other copper plates have been found, on which were skillfully engraved figures of the mastodon and of the American horse, whose fossil remains are so plentifully found in different localities

Not of less importance and interest is this in The Youth's Companion of March 30th, 1882: "The mastodon a recent animal. It has been common with a class of scientists to class the mastodon among animals which became extinct many ages ago. And as the bones of men and extinct species of animals have been found mingled together, it was inferred that man may have had a remote antiquity, reaching back a hundred thousand years or more. But the following facts from Prof. Collet's Geological Report of Indiana, go to show that the mastodon disappeared at a quite recent period. A skeleton was discovered in excavating the bed of the canal a few miles north of Covington, in wet peat. The teeth are in good preservation, and when the larger bones were cut open. the marrow, still preserved, was utilized by the bog cutters to "grease" their boots. Pieces of sperm-like substance, two and one-half or three inches in diameter, occupied the place of the kidney-fat of the monster. During the summer of 1880, an almost complete skeleton of a mastodon was found in Illinois, which must have survived until the vegetation of to-day prevailed. The tusks formed each a full quarter of a circle; were nine feet long, twenty-two inches in circumference at the base, and weighed one hundred and seventy-five pounds. The lower jaw was well preserved, with a full set of magnificent teeth, and is nearly three feet long. On inspecting the remains closely, a mass of fibrous, bark-like material, was found between the ribs, filling the place of the animal's stomach, When carefully separated, it proved to be a crushed mass of herbs and grasses, similar to those which still grow in the vicinity. In the same bed of miry clay a multitude of small fresh-water and land shells were observed. These mollusks prevail all over the state of Illinois, Indiana, and parts of Michigan, and show conclusively that the animal and vegetable life, and consequently climate, are the same now as when this mastodon sank in his grave of mire and clay."

Of the mammoth this is said: mains of mammoths have been gathered from the cliffs of frozen mud, and from the ice on the east side of Behring's Strait, in Russian America."-Present Conflict of Science with the Christian Religion, p.

I clipped the following from the Nebraska City, Nebraska, Daily News, of March 9th, 1889: "A dispatch from Livingston, Nebraska, says: 'While digging a well on the homestead of S. B Shumway, near Livingston, Banner county, Grant L. Shumway found embedded in the sand at a depth of fifty-four feet, the remains of a prehistoric animal, of mammoth proportions. He succeeded in removing a portion of the upper jaw, containing two teeth, one of which measured eight inches in length and four in breadth and weighed seven and one-half pounds. The rest of the monster is still imbedded where it has lain for ages, and can be excavated at no great expense The peculiar manner in which the teeth were set in the jaw of the animal differed from any ever heard of There was apparently but two teeth in the upper jaw. A few other smaller bones resembling the fins of a fish have been secured. These fins are about the size of a man's hand. Further excavations and other discoveries will probably be made,"

Of the mastodon the American Encyclopedia says: "Found either in the tertiary or more recent deposits in all quarters of the globe except Africa."-Article Mastodon. And in the same book, under the article Archaeology we read: "The Mastodon was evidently known to the founders of the Central American cities, and its figure is pictured on their walls."

Squire says: "At Tambla, some leagues south-east of Comayagua, was found the fossil skeleton of a mastodon, whose tooth is shown in the cut, imbedded in a sand-stone formation."—Central America pp.

William Hosea Ballou, in the Scientific American, for January 26th, 1889, gives the following statement received from Dr. Le Plongeon: "We spent several months at the principal city of Uxmal, where we found objects of equal interest. Among these were exquisite works of art and a statue supposed to be that of the brother of Caacmol. This statue we carefully concealed after making a mould of it. Only we know where it is hidden, and if we never secure it, I doubt if it ever can be found. Caacmol was deified after death and worshipped in several countries under as many different names. At Chichen we found shrines erected to his memory. Here were many beautiful mineral paintings, probably the only vestiges now existing of ancient American art. They were on the walls, which were smoothly and beautifully plastered. The paintings were in vegetable colors, same as on the tombs of Egypt. They represent the history of the life of the individual buried beneath the mausoleum. We preserved facsimiles. The Mastodon was venerated by the Mayas because is was the largest animal in existence during their time. We found it sculptured on all the monuments. They considered it a fit object of worship. same emblem appears in the Troano The mastomanuscript in many places. don faces are at the same time inscriptions and have their significant meanings. The mastodon probably became extinct about en thousand years ago."

The learned French explorer gives the ancient Americans ample time to have fully accomplished all that is claimed for them in the Book of Mormon.

In the language of Mr. Donnelly I might say: "We are but beginning to understand the past; one hundred years ago the world knew nothing of Pompeii or Herculaneum; nothing of the lingual tie that binds together the Indo-European nations; nothing of the significance of the vast volume of inscriptions upon the tombs and temples of Egypt, nothing of the meaning of the arrow-headed inscriptions of Babylon; nothing of the marvelous civilization revealed in the remains of Yucatan, Mexico, and Peru.

Scientific investigation is advancing with giant strides. Who shall say that one hundred years from now the great museums of the world may not be adorned with gems, statues, arms, and implements from Atlantis (America) while the libraries of the world shall contain translations of its inscriptions throwing new light upon all the past history of the human race, and all the great problems which now perplex the thinkers of our day?"—Atlantis, p. 480.

What the author of the above anticipates for the lost island, I feel very confident will be realized in confirming the history as recorded upon the pages of the Book of Mormon. The tidal wave of evidence flows toward the beautiful city of God, and truth will prevail.

DECATUR.

Conference was held at Allendale, Worth county, Missouri, June 8th and 9th, 1889 H. A. Stebbins presiding, S. D. Shippy clerk. Branch reports: Lamoni last report 619, present 646; 15 baptized, 19 received, 1 removed, 6 died, 4 marriages. Lucas last report 200, present 209; 6 baptized, 4 received, 1 removed, 2 marriages. Pleasanton last report 114, present 109; 5 received, 10 removed. Davis City last report 82, present 80; 3 baptized, 4 received, 9 expelled. Greenville last report 39, present 39, 1 received, 1 removed. Centerville last report 21, present 20; 1 received, 2 removed. Lone Rock last report 65, present 61; 1 baptized, 5 removed. Allendale last report 63, present 73; 10 received. The president gave an account of the situation and of his own and others labors in the district. Elders Salyards, Wellington, Shippy, Himes, Baggerley, Harder, Gregg, Cochran, O. J. Bailey, John Johnston, J. W. Johnson, C. H. Jones, J. Hawley and J. Alfred Davis reported in person; also Priests N. Lovell, S. D. Shippy and S. Pinkerton. Teachers W. Burk, T. Cochran and A. K. Anderson, and Deacon N W. Smith. Elders J. Watkins, R. M. Elvin, M. M. Turpen and L. W. Wells by letter. It was provided that a collection be taken up in the conference to help pay the expenses of the Camp Meeting to be held at Davis City, August 2d to 11th; and also it was resolved that each branch president in the district be requested to take up such a collection before August. The conference raised $6 66. The committee reported having secured the ground and other favors. Lucas and Lone Rock wished the October conference, and the latter gained it by a vote of 28 to 20. There was preaching on Saturday evening by J. Shippy, assisted by T.

Wellington; on Sunday morning by C. H. Jones, assisted by O. J. Bailey, and Sunday evening by R. S. Salyards, assisted by H. A. Stebbins. Morning prayer meeting in charge of Brn. Stebbins and Hawley, and the afternoon testimony meeting in charge of A. S. Cochran. At the latter service F. M. Weld, M. Sorrenson and E. D. Marshall were ordained to the office of priest, as recommended by the Lamoni and Lone Rock branches. Brn. Salyards, Stebbins and Jones were spokesmen in the above order. The ordination of L. Little as priest was provided for, as recommended by the Pleasanton branch, but he was not present to be ordained. The authorities of the district and of the church were sustained. Adjourned to Lone Rock, Mo., October 5th.

Adams, J. W. Terry, D. S. Holmes, J. D. Jones, E. Miller, E. Wheeler, J. B. Larne, J. L. Terry, F. G. Dungee, W. Terry and E. Epperly; by letter: J. Chisnall, as elder and Bishop's agent: Received during the last 9 months $50251, disbursed $378, balance $12451. Committed appointed to audit the account reported it to be correct. A vote of thanks was, tendered to him for his services as Bishop's agent, and he was requested to continue, as the district so desired it. Resolved, that this conference urgently request the secretary of the White Eagle branch, [and of all branches, Dist. Sec.], to report as early as possible to the district secretary all names of members having united with them which have not been sent in for recording, and also that they make a statistical report to every district conference in future. The authorities of the church and district were sustained. Preaching by Brn. Wheeler, Jones and Holmes. The meetings were blessed, and soul reviving ones, the Holy Spirit being present and manifest to the comfort and joy of all. Adjourned to Buffalo Prairie, September 7th.

GROVE MEETING.

By order of the Decatur district conference arrangements have been made for holding a grove or camp-meeting at Davis City, Decatur county, Iowa, beginning on August 2d and closing on August 11th, 1889. The tent owned by the Fremont and Pottawattamie Districts has been engaged for holding services in, and it is expected that there will be three preaching and one prayer service each day. Correspondence is being had with various brethren in relation to their being present, such as Brn. Joseph Luff, J. W. Gillen and M. H. Forscutt. Among those already engaged are Brn. W. W. Blair, J. R. Lambert, H. C. Bronson, Duncan Campbell, R. S. Salyards and O. B. Thomas. The ministry within reach are invited to make it a point to be present.

The grove is one of the best shades anywhere to be found, besides being a clean place and far enough above the river to be dry and comfortable. It is also convenient to the town, being just across the river, about an eighth of a mile from the business part. The river is convenient for watering teams and for other needs, while on the grounds is an abundant supply for cooking purposes. Ice water for drinking will be kept in barrels free.

Tame hay has been engaged for $4 per ton, and hard wood for $1.50 per cord. It is expected that oats will be 18 or 20 cents per bushel and corn about 25 or 30 cents. Beef has been engaged at 4 to 6 cents for boiling pieces, 7 to 8 cents for roasting, 8 cents for round steak and 10 cents for loin steak.

Correspondence is being had about reduced fares on the C. B. & Q. railway, and it is expected that they will be granted.

If any further information is desired address O. J. Bailey, Davis City, Iowa. We would like to see there the Saints from surrounding districts and hope that many of them will make an effort to attend. It is seven miles east of Lamoni.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The North-West Kansas district conference will convene with the Twin Creek branch, Osborne county, Kansas, the 13th, 14th and 15th of September. The place of meeting will be four miles east and one mile north of Osborne City, three miles south and four miles west of Downs. Those coming by train from the east write Bro. James Coop, Downs; and those from the west W. D. Jemison, Osborne, and arrangements will be made for conveyance to the grounds. Bro. Luff is expected to be present, also all the elders in the district and those in proximity.

The Maine reunion, to be held as we understand August 4th, may interfere somewhat, but we hope that as a beginning has been made, the friends will not abandon the good cause at the start, but will make an effort to be present.

We, the committee appointed at the last business session of the Providence branch, suggest a partial programme which may be followed out, and published in the Providence papers and secure public attention.

Meeting will convene Saturday evening, July 27th, at 7: 30 p. m.; organization, followed Sunday morning and afternoon by such services as may be appointed, but having direct bearing upon the object of the convention, concluding Sunday evening with a short speech or paper and concert. We hope to make it a profitable and interesting occasion. By vote the Providence branch defer the usual order of meetings and give the time to the convention.

DIED.

SHELLEY.—E. A. Sheeley died July 3d, 1889, at his home in Sherman, Mason county, Michigah. He was born in New York April 13th, 1838; baptized July 9th, 1871, by E. C. Briggs. He was ordained an elder May 26th, 1875, by S. Bailey. Bro. Shelley was a good, worthy brother, and loved by all who knew him. He was not sick any length of time, but did not want to live any longer, having lost his loving wife only three months and three days before his death. He fretted over it and wanted to be with her. He made arrangements with the rest of the family concerning his financial affairs and said he would not live long. After doing up his morning's work as usual, the morning after settling his affairs, he told them he did not feel well, ate but little breakfast, and in the afternoon he lay on the lounge to rest, and finally became unconscious and in the night passed quietly away. Funeral sermon by Elder J. J. Cornish.

HOLT.—At his son's house in Kewanee, Henry county, Illinois, our God-fearing brother, Robert Holt, passed from earth to his home in paradise June 27th, 1889, after some two or three weeks' sickness. He died as he had lived, a firm and consistent believer, and had been an active worker in Christ's kingdom. He accepted the warning voice in his young days in his native land, England. He was born February 8th, 1814, in Bolton, Lancashire, and was there an active worker, being for some years the presiding elder of the Manchester district-then called conference-with its hosts of faithful Saints. He emigrated to Utah with his family, drawing a "hand-cart' over the plains, when many, very many, suffered death through unwise counsels. many, suffered death through unwise counsels, bearing all patiently, looking forward with fond anticipation to the promised haven of joy and and peace in Utah. But upon reaching there sorrow seemed to reign and that to the fullest extent. His hopes were blasted, for his righteous soul could not endure the evils practiced there under the near of religious and seemed there. under the name of religion, and as soon as opportunity offered he returned with his loving family to the states and finally settled in Kewa-nee. He often remarked in testimony that upon this spot he felt as did the apostles of old when the Jews had taken their Lord and put him to death. But the Lord had not forsaken his disappointed children, for the Reorganization with its "dead—reviving" call soon greeted his ear, and April 17th 1871, he with his devoted wife (now dead) again passed through the waters of regeneration, and he was soon re-ordained to his eldership; and ever since, as the days have come and gone, he has proven himself an energetic and active worker. Few were his equals. With delight he ever sought to practice what he taught from the sacred desk. He often reminded us that his earthly mission was near its end. In the last two meetings he said, "I am truly grateful to God that ever the everlasting gospel greeted my ears. Man will live eternally, especially in his next sphere to which we are fast tending. He is his own architect for the future; his happiness, his all depends upon duties performed here, God having given us our agency to choose life or death as the case may be. While reviewing the past, I am, of a truth, thankful to God that as my probation is fast nearing an end, that in and through his mercy I have been enabled to retain my standing in his church. Hence I rejoice in my bright hope of eternal life beyond just across the river of death. I care not how soon the call may come, for I am ready to go at any time; but in this and all, the Lord's will be done, not mine." He leaves a son and three daughters to mourn his death, who are not as yet of our faith and they had the full control of the obsequies. The Rev. S. VanPeet, Pastor of the M. E. Church conducted the service, speaking from Phili 1:21-23. His remarks were seas-oned with charity. The Saints in sorrow wept the fond tears of affection for a loving brother. His wish would have been to have been buried by those of like precious faith with himself, with whom he so often had met, and delighted to mingle in divine worship, and he had to some so expressed himself. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord, for they rest from their labors and their works do follow them."

LANYON.—At Lamoni, July 4th, 1889, the youngest child of brother and sister W. C., and E. Lanyon. Appropriate sermon by Elder W. W. Blair. Funeral services conducted by Elder John Shippy.

"Now she's gone we'd not recall her, (From a paradise of bliss, Where no evil can e'er be'all her) To a sin cursed world like this."

Young.—Near Livermore, Alameda county, California, June 21st, 1880, of Quinsy, Willliam Young, son of J. G. and Annie Young, aged 17 years and o months.

"Calm on the bosom of thy God,
Young spirit rest thee now;
E'en while with us thy footsteps trod,
His seal was on thy brow.

"Lone are the paths and sad the bowers
Whence thy meek smile is gone,
But, Oh! a brighter home than ours
In heaven is now thine own."

JOSEPH SMITH W. W. BLAIR

ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, July 27, 1889.

By letters received of late from Pres. Joseph Smith we learn he has been preaching during the past two weeks or more in Salt Lake City, Lehi and Pleasant Grove, having a fair hearing and a growing interest in his efforts. Some baptisms have occurred, and others in prospect.

Bro. R. J. Anthony, in a letter dated at Salt Lake City the 16th instant, says:

"There seems to be deep interest felt in Joseph's preaching. His effort here last night was just grand-clear as the sun, and in power. He is doing plain talk this time. We are having the offer of meeting houses in different places."

In this connection it is proper to say Bro. Joseph informs us that Bishop Cutler of Lehi, kindly gave him the use of their Tabernacle at that place for two evenings, though he occupied it but once, owing to a misunderstanding on the part of some. He preached in the Opera Hall at Pleasant Grove. and, on invitation, intended to go to Ogden soon, to labor, Important changes are imminent in Utah affairs, and we trust God will be glorified in them, and His work advanced. To this end let the Saints pray and labor.

LETTERS TO UNWORTHY MEMBERS.

COMPLAINT is made that in one or more places branches have given unworthy members letters of removal presumably for the purpose of getting rid of them, and our opinion of such usage is asked We have but one opinion to give, and that is most decidedly against it. place to deal with an unworthy, disorderly member, is right where they live and have done or are doing evil. Every branch should set its own affairs in order, if possible, and not crowd them over onto their neighbors. The Lord says, "Purge ye out the iniquity which is among you" (D. C. 43:3), but this does not mean to shift it merely from a branch or district in which it originated to one where it does not be-

Paul said,-"For every man shall bear his own burden" (Gal. 6:5), and this principle applies with equal force to branches and districts. The best place, usually, to deal with an offender is where the offense is committed and where the facts touching the case are known and available. This is taking the matter at short range and tends to secure just and equitable proceedings in the easiest, quickest way.

We are glad that but little advice of the foregoing kind is sought for in our branches, yet we are aware that the church in this dispensation, as in previous ones, "is like unto a net, that was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind,"-"the good" and "the bad." If "the bad" will not reform and become "good" in a gospel sense, they should be dealt with as the Scriptures teach, and that, too, in whatever corner of the "net" they are found. Jesus says,—
"If thy brother offend thee and confess not and forsake not, he shall be cut off," (Mark 9:40, Insp. Trans.), and this implies that it should be done where the offense is committed, if practicable, and applies to offenses against the church the same as individuals. But love and wisdom and patience should be used first.

THROUGH WHOM SHALL COMMANDS COME?

A BROTHER asks if it is lawful and proper for a lay member to receive commandments, professedly by the Spirit, ordering and dictating the church or its minis-To this we reply that there is order in the Church of God, and it is neither seemly nor lawful for the lesser to dictate or command the higher lest confusion follow. Joseph the Seer said April 17th, 1833:

"We do not consider ourselves bound to receive any revelation from any one, man or woman, without their being legally constituted and ordained to that authority, and giving sufficient proof of it. I will inform you that it is contrary to the economy of God for any member of the church, or any one to receive instruction for those in authority higher than themselves, therefore you will see the impropriety of giving heed to them. But if any have a vision, or a visitation from a heavenly messenger, it must be for their own benefit and instruction; for the fundamental principles, government and doctrine of the church are vested in the keys [authorities, lawful rights and callings] of the kingdom." Times and Seasons, vol. 5, p. 752.

This teaching of the Seer is in perfect harmony with the following from Mosiah 11:12:

"And it came to pass that King Mosiah granted unto Alma that he might establish churches throughout all the land of Zarahemla, and gave him power to ordain priests and teachers over every church. Now this was done because there were so many people that they could not all be governed by one teacher; neither could they all hear the word of God in one assembly; therefore they did assemble themselves together in different bodies, being called churches; every church having their priests and teachers, and every priest preaching the word according as it was delivered to him by the mouth of Alma."

Mosiah was both king and presiding "Seer" over the people of Zarahemla, for king Benjamin, his father, appointed and consecrated him to these callings (Mosiah 1: 2, 3, 9, 10; 4:1; 5: 10), giving him the sacred records and other sacred things always conferred upon the presiding Seers and prophets, (1 Nephi 5: 47; Mosiah 1: 3), and Alma was a presiding High Priest, (See Mosiah 11: 2), over "the Church of God or the Church of Christ," (Mosiah 9: 8), and acted under the counsel and direction and authority of Mosiah, (Mosiah 11: 14), and "the priests and teachers" acted strictly under the counsel and authority of Alma (Mosiah 9: 9), "he commanded them that they should teach nothing save it were the things which he had taught, which had been spoken by the mouth of the holy prophets."

Here is God's order; here is a chain of divine authority; here is the line appointed of God from whence comes commands, revelations, and authority to teach and govern the Cnurch of God-the Saintsevery officer being honored in his own place, office and order. When this is faithfully observed, good results will follow, and the favor and blessings of the Lord will abound. But when it is ignored or violated, confusion, bred of darkness, contention and disorder will follow.

Let no one seek for, nor pretend to place nor office nor authority which does not belong to them, lest they and others suffer by it.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BISHOP Geo. A. Blakeslee has been visiting Missouri and Iowa of late, in the interests of the church. He arrived in Lamoni the afternoon of the 15th inst., and departed on the 18th, in excellent health and spirits.

Bro. J. M. Tullar, of Roslyn, Kittitass county, Washington Terrritory, desires to know what members there are living in that county. Who will write him?

Bro. Stephen Stone, Sr., of New Canaan, Connecticut, writes bearing a strong testimony to the work, and expressing joy in its saving power.

Bro. William T. Kyte, daughter and son, of St. Louis, Missouri, have been visiting Lamoni for the past week, as the guests of Bro. William Anderson.

Bro. A. White wrote us from Clinton, Missouri, the 17th instant that he had moved to that place for a season, but hoped to return to Independence at some future time. Was pleased with general prospects.

Bro. R. M. Elvin was at Wilber, Nebraska, July 16th, and he writes that heavy and continued rains were hindering the meetings, and some feared damage to crops. He says also that the "sheep and goat articles" in late Heralds do not suit all, but hopes investigation will continue and further light be given on the subject "till we stand unitedly on solid rock."

While in many parts of the United States heavy and repeated rains are doing much damage to crops and other property, in the Rocky Mountain region, especially in Utah, there is great need of water, and the people are much alarmed at the outlook. In and about Lamoni little damage, if any, has resulted from heavy rains.

"The Saint's Harmony" is now in the hands of the binder and will be on sale at this office at $2.50 at any early time. Without question it will be found a most excellent work of the kind, and all who wish it should order at once.

Sr. Phebe Billinger of Independence, Missouri, writes appreciating the accounts of the Lord's dealings with his people, and expressing the satisfaction derived by reading the news of the progress of the church.

MATTHEW 25:31-46.

Some of our readers may be already wearied with the repeated discussion in these columns of Matthew 25:31-46, but we think the topics therein suggested are of sufficient importance to pay well for a most thorough and searching analysis, "comparing spiritual things with spiritual" lest personal theories and "private interpretation" mislead the mind and rob the word of God of its intended meaning and application.

In our issue of April 27th, past, we demonstrated, on page 259, that "the kingdom" the Saints inherit, "was prepared from the foundation of the world" (2 Nephi 6:7), which is the exact language of Christ in Matthew 25:34, which he applies to "the sheep," the "blessed of my Father," "the righteous"—terms that, according to the Scriptures, apply only to the children of God, the heirs of the celestial kingdom.

A good sister, referring to this, asked to know how we reconciled that position with this saying of Jesus,—"And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also" (John 14:3), assuming, in effect, that the terms "kingdom," and "place," were one and the same.

To this we replied, in Herald for June 15th, page 374, that the "kingdom" was one thing, and that it was already prepared—"prepared from the foundation of the world"—but that the "place" Christ would "prepare" for his Saints was the earth, to which he is coming "in power and great glory," the "place" to which he will bring "all his Saints" (1 Thess. 3:13, with Zech. 14:5, and Jude 14), and that, therefore, the restored earth would be the "place" for "the kingdom prepared from the foundation of the world," and that "the sheep," the "blessed of my Father," "the righteous," would then inherit and possess "the kingdom" and the "place" of it.

In the Herald for July 13th, Bro. James Caffall enters his objections to our explanation, and we there give further reasons for the views we entertain on the subject, giving Scripture texts to show who are Christ's "sheep," "the righteous," proving, as we think, conclusively, that these and these only are heirs of the celestial kingdom, being the children of God, and that they will "inherit the kingdom prepared from the foundation of the world" mentioned in Matthew 25:31-46 and 2 Nephi 6:7, etc., etc.

And now comes Bro. A. H. Parsons, offering objections and asking for further explanations, as will be seen in his paper below, which we cheerfully give place, and in due time will reply:

"PREPARING A PLACE."

To whom does this promise of Jesus refer? This question has been asked in Herald and answered; but I will have to beg leave to differ with the editorial answer given, until the Scriptures quoted, with their application, is made plainer. And what few thoughts I may offer is in view of hearing something more on the subject from the editorial sanctum.

"THE BRETHREN."

This is the first thought I wish to consider. I will cite you to Matthew 25:35, 36, 37, 38, 41: "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you.... I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick, and ye visited me; I was in prison, and ye came unto me. Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thus and so and administered unto thy wants. And the king shall answer, and say unto them, Verily, I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Please note the answer given to those on the left hand,—"As ye did it not to one of the least of these my brethren, ye did it not to me."

Here are three parties spoken of, "sheep" and "goats" and "brethren." It seems to me it would be inconsistent to think Jesus, when speaking to the sheep and goats about what they had done and had not done to his brethren was referring all the time to the sheep as his "brethren," and they blessed with an inheritance in that kingdom for what they had done unto themselves. It would be an inconsistent expression, to say the least of it, if that was the understanding he intended to convey. The answer given to the question in Herald June 15th, is that the sheep were the "brethren." The word plainly says, inasmuch as ye did it to one of the least of these my "brethren." Because of this ye inherit, or I give unto you an inheritance in this kingdom. Who were his "brethren?" (Matt. 12:43,44) "And he stretched forth his hand toward his disciples, and said, Behold my mother and my brethren. Whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother and sister and mother." In John 14:3, it reads: "And when I go, I will prepare a place for you." Who? His "brethren." Where is their inheritance?

As Latter Day Saints, we say the earth in its redeemed state-yet to be-but not yet fully prepared, Doctrine and Covenants section 28:6: "And there shall be a new heaven and a new earth." 2 Peter 3:7: "But the heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire, against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." With these plain quotations before us, it appears to me that the expression of Christ in John 14:3 is in strict harmony with the scripture above cited, and therefore he would go and prepare a place-this earth-as he would sit at the right hand of God the Father, assisting in the complete victory over sin and redemption of the earth-or "restoration." More could be said on this point, but let this suffice.

"YE SHALL KNOW."

The sheep were so ignorant that they were not aware that they had done anything for Christ or his brethren-themselves. Jesus said, "Ye shall know of the doctrine," and to know God and Jesus Christ whom he has sent is eternal life. "As I have kept my Father's commandments, so do. ye keep mine." Was he aware, while keeping those commandments, that he was doing good, loving his neighbor as himself, and doing good to all men? If he was, then what would be a natural result of those whom he called "brethren" as pertaining to these matters? "As yehave sent me, so I have sent them, that they may bring forth fruit, that their fruit should remain." Is it possible that these "brethren" are the "sheep" that did not know they had done anything for themselves-sheep? 'As much as ye did it unto one of the least of these my brethren"--yourselves. If that is the idea intended to be conveyed, I will have to correct my theology. I want more light upon this subject. A more elaborate explanation would perhaps enable the writer to understand that answer in Herald, June 15th. Please let us hear again, as I am not the only one befogged if that answer prevails.

In everlasting bonds,

A. H. Parsons.

His objections seem to lie, 1, in the fact that there is a distinction made between "the sheep," "the righteous," the "blessed of my Father," and those called "brethren." This we readily allow, but hold that it is a distinction simply as to persons, but not as to kind, class, or quality, and that the "brethren"—not sisters—are Christ's ministers who are lovingly, faithfully treated by the children of God—"the sheep," "the righteous," the "blessed" of the Lord.

His further objection lies in the fact, 2, that "the sheep" seem ignorant of their meriting rewards when ministering kind deeds to the "brethren" as though they did it to Christ himself.

This objection, it seems to us, is not well taken; for it is probably true that but few of the Saints, in any dispensation, have well understood that when good or evil deeds are done to Christ's ministers—"brethren"—it is and is to be reckoned as though done directly to Christ. Our Lord, in these verses, teaches this principle in a most striking manner, and it applies, not only to the Saints of God, but also to all people, for the Lord "is no respecter of persons," and "every man will be judged according to his works." This is a matter which should be better understood.

The "brethren" of Christ "are ambassadors for Christ" and minister "in Christ's stead" (2 Cor. 5: 20); and whosoever "receiveth" them "receiveth" the Father and the Son, (Matt. 10: 40–42; Doc. & Cov. 83: 12, 16; John 13: 20); and those who reject, refuse, persecute or negligently fail to receive Christ's "brethren," are adjudged as doing it to the Father and Son. See Luke 10: 16; 1 Sam. 8: 7; 1 Thess. 4: 8, with Acts 9: 1–5, etc., etc. Doing to Christ's "brethren," is doing to Christ!

This important principle—we repeat it—should be more thoroughly taught, and more faithfully acted upon. Then the relation of Christ's "brethren" to the church and the world would be better understood, and better conditions and results would obtain.

The brother's remaining objection seems to be in his theory that the "brethren" are not of "the sheep," "the righteous," the "blessed of my Father," mentioned in the text. To this we reply, to be brief, that "the Son of Man" is "that great Shepherd of the sheep" (Heb. 13:20; 1 Peter 2:25; 5:4), and He says: "There shall be one fold, and one shepherd;" and further,—"My sheep hear my voice, and I know them, and they follow me: and I give unto them eternal life; and they shall never perish, neither shall any man pluck them out of my hand."—John 10:16, 27, 28. We hardly think any one will claim that Christ's "brethren" are not of that "one fold."

It is far easier to believe that some or many of Christ's "sheep" may be ignorant of the great fact that good or evil deeds done to his ministry are, and are to be, counted as done to Christ personally, than it is to believe that He has more than "one fold," either before or after the final—"eternal"—judgment, and that one class of His "sheep," "righteous," "blessed" of His Father, are consigned to one "kingdom" and another class of His "sheep" to a different kingdom.

One thing is certain, Christ has "one body," "one fold," one "kingdom" for his faithful Saints, and all this "was prepared for them from the foundation of the world" as is taught in these words,—"But, behold, the righteous, the Saints of the Holy One of Israel, they who have believed in the Holy One of Israel, they who endured the crosses of the world, and despised the shame of it; they shall inherit the kingdom of God, which was prepared for them from the foundation of the world, and their joy shall be full forever."—2 Nephi 6:7. This is substantially what Christ said of "the sheep," Matthew 25:34,—"Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world,"—and we therefore conclude that these texts refer to one and the same kingdom, and to one and the same people.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Q.—Is it right and in keeping with the rulings of the church for a branch to receive new members who are without certificates of baptism, and who never belonged to any branch since their baptism?

A.—Yes; but only on good oral or written testimony that the applicants have been duly baptized and confirmed into the church.

Q.—Should a branch receive a number of members, say from ten to twelve, without the names or number being specified in the motion to receive them?

A.—No; they should be taken in singly, or all the names should be specified.

Q.—Should an elder refuse certificates of baptism to those baptized by him in or out of the branches?

A—The General Conference has ruled that elders baptizing parties remote from branches should give to each a certificate of baptism, which on presentation will entitle to membership in the branch where presented. When parties are baptized into a branch such certificates are unnecessary.

Ques.—Was Eve created before or after Adam named the animals?

Ans.-After.

2.—Was Eve created before or after Adam was commanded of God not to partake of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil?

A.—After.

2.—Did God command Eve, except through her husband, to not partake of that tree?

A —We have no testimony on that point.

2.—Were not both Eve and Adam present when God commanded to not partake of that tree?

A.—We have no Scriptural testimony on which to decide.

Q.—Did the Lord Jesus retain a perfect recollection of his former estate and the glory he then had with the Father, or was he taught that knowledge while here on earth?

A.—We think he was taught it. See Luke 2: 40, 52; In Doctrine and Covenants 90: 2, it reads: "And I, John, saw that he received not of the fulness at the first, but received grace for grace."

A.—When unbelievers hear the things of God declared in their own tongues by those who do not know those tongues, as on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2:1-13), or where unbelievers have other good testimony—as by the Spirit's power—that the tongue is spoken by the gift of God.

Q—Is it right for an elder to teach that the Saints should do as they are told, whether right or wrong?

A.—No—emphatically, no! Such an elder should be reported to those presiding over him, for he is unfit and unsafe to be a teacher in any sense.

Q.—Is it proper for church officers to give members in known transgression, letters of removal?

A.—No.

Q.—Has a person who was baptized when near ten years of age and under the influence of friends, but without a proper understanding of the gospel, the right to receive that ordinance again?

A.—If the person was not in the proper condition of heart and mind and will at the time he or she was baptized, then such baptism was irregular and such person is entitled to receive the ordinance when their faith and repentance is such as the gospel demands. See Acts 8:37; 19:1-5.

Q.—Should the Saints forgive those outside the church who trespass against them?

A—Yes; for the Lord commands thus: "I, the Lord, will forgive whom I will forgive; but of you it is required to forgive all men."—Doc. and Cov. 64: 2.

Q.—Is it right for a Saint, when sitting on a jury to inflict the death penalty for murder in the first degree?

A.—A juror finds the prisoner innocent or guilty—nothing more. The judge pronounces sentence. If a juror has conscientious scruples against capital punishment, he may, on request, be excused from sitting on a jury where a capital crime is being tried.

Original Poetry.

ORIGINAL SIN AND THE WORK OF REDEMPTION.

Thoughts on the death—in Raglan township, Harrison county, April 39th, 1886—of Flora, aged 2 years 6 months and 2 days, child of Jacob and Laurestine Mintun.

Innocent sufferer, thou art gone— Rest has come to thee, darling one. "Of such" the heavenly kingdom is, And Christ will count such jewels his.

In his presence they may rest, With the righteous ever blessed. In his love will e'er be joy, Deep and sweet without alloy.

She's accountable for naught; Years had not yet knowledge taught; Who knew no law could have no sin; Through Christ a saved condition in,

The link of life that broke in twain By Adam's fall, He'll mend again: Though spirit and body separate, They'll reunite in deathless state,

The first of men, whence came our race, Had fallen 'neath the ban of death: His offspring all must share the curse; No stream can rise above its source.

Save the ransom had been paid,—A divine atonement made,
Not a hope for man remained:
Death could not have had an end.

Though from death all men will rise, Those who've lived a life unwise, Account must give of deeds they've done, In yielding to the evil one.

The resurrection, by Christ brought in, From consequence of Adam's sin Will those who have not strayed, restore To dwell with God forever more.

For redemption from the fall,— Freeing children, even all, From that sin—the Savior wrought; By his death our lives he bought.

But when reason knowledge brings— For it is from thence it springs— Those who would continue free Must the gospel law obey.

May we who do the Scriptures know,
And must be sanctified by law,
So live, by faith and works and prayer,
That we with joy may meet her there.

THE HOUSE OF THE LORD AS SEEN IN VISION.

In sleep, or in waking hour, I can not tell,  $\hat{I}$  saw and realized what I shall try to relate; and though some years have elapsed, what was seen and heard during that eventful hour remains vividly impressed upon my mind, as if heard and seen but yesternight.

I had slept and was consciously awake, and approaching a building apparently eighty feet long by fifty in width, the walls of which were about twenty-five feet high from the top of the foundation, which was raised some five or six feet from the ground, and of stone roughly dressed by the mason's hammer, though jointed and faced at the edges. The front was to the east, and as I approached it from the northeast I had time to note that in the outside of the building no attempt had been made by the builders at ornamentation; except that along the sides were a series of pilasters standing out from the main wall a few inches, though forming a part of the wall, the bases of which were finished in square work, pedestal and pediment; the tops in capitals rich and peculiar in style, but which I can not describe. At the front a flight of nine, wide, stone steps reaching nearly across the building, led up to the entrance; this entrance being an open porch about sixteen feet deep and thirty wide. Two finished pillars stood at the outer edge of this porch supporting, with the walls at either side, three arches. These pillars had square and solid finishes at the base, but rose from their bases round and smooth, to their caps, which were very richly carved in square designs; the arches which they supported the inner and outer feet of, were exactly circular, and formed of cut cut stone, and were only a few feet below the ceiling of the porch. The inner side of the porch formed the outer wall of the assembly room, and was richly paneled between the open doors, one at either side of the porch opening straight into the building from the front, and apparently three and a half feet wide and nine or ten feet

As I passed up the steps I seemed to know that the Saints were assembling for some purpose, and yet I felt no care nor responsibility respect the nature of the assembly, any more than to be there with the rest. I found three or four brothers standing at the right, or north end of the porch, conversing in low and quiet tones together. I joined them for a moment; and while standing there I saw numbers of both brothers and sisters come up the steps and pass across the porch and into the open doors, the brothers to the right, the sisters to the left. Some I knew, some were strangers whom I had never seen before. Some, of both men and women, who came briskly up the steps and walked freely across the porch went no further than the doors; when for some cause that I could not see, they stopped, and either turned immediately around and walked hastily away, or turned hesitatingly, slowly and sadly and with frequent backward glances, went away as if overcome and distressed.

While standing thus a shadowy fear came over me, that as I saw some turned away, for reasons that I did not know, and as I then supposed by some one standing at the doors, so I might not be permitted to go in; and in my perplexed and doubting frame of mind, I turned from the brethren with whom I was chatting and walked slowly toward the door upon the right, thinking that if I saw the least sign that I was not to go in, I would turn at once away, as if I did not care to enter. As I came near to the doorway, to my surprise, I saw neither sentinel nor usher, neither door shutter nor bolt, lock nor hinge, nothing but the open doorway with door jams, lintel and threshold smooth and free from any indication of there ever having been a shutter with which to close the opening. My surprise was increased when, being permitted to pass in, I found no one inside having charge of the door or aisle; nor anything to betray the mystery of turning those back that had gone away.

I went carefully in, taking my hat off as I passed the doorway, and walked about a third of the way up the aisle which led the entire length of the room, ending against the side of the pulpit platform. A dim and mellow light shone in the building, though I saw no windows; nor did it seem as if the light came from the sun shining out of doors, for none came in at the open doors. There were two aisles, one at either side of the room, a trifle wider than the doorway, dividing the seated portion into three parts; the seats were similar to some styles of church pews, or slips, finished in dark, heavy, polished woods, and at the two sides running level from end to end, and across the room, except at the two sides of the pulpit platform where they were placed lengthwise, facing the pulpit. The middle row of seats were in parallel lines with those at the side, and level with them for about two-thirds of the way from the pulpit to the door, when they rose in a circle, arc down, until the last one was raised five or six feet. At equal distances apart, and at the outer side of the inner row of seats, were four pillars supporting the roof.

The pulpit platform was very elaborately finished, and contained a seated apartment, richly furnished; two small circular tables, one at either side, chairs at the sides, and an orator's desk, all of a similar material and finish as the seats, only much more exquisitely carved and colored. The walls were, apparently, painted, and finished in pictured designs, that at the back of the platform much more elaborate and complicated than those at the sides; the ceiling also, was richly decorated; the cornices profusely so, with carven imagery, scroll and counter scroll, reaching along the sides, and down the corners, and along the walls in places, corresponding to the pilasters upon the outer surface. In suitable niches, and on brackets carved and embellished, were pictures and statuettes, the pictures representing scenes in the life of the Savior, the Apostles of the New Testament, and of the Book of Mormon, the statuettes, the figures of covenant leaders of both continents, ancient and modern.

I had, however, only time to catch a hasty glimpse of all that is so briefly described, when a sort of metallic, ringing sound from the left hand door, and a kind of flashing light diverted my attention, and I looked across to the other side, but saw nothing.

I had hardly time to renew my survey of the walls and ceiling when I was fairly startled by a repetition of the sound already referred to, this time at the door on the right through which I had come; I turned in my seat and saw a man standing at the doorway facing it as if to come in, and in the doorway itself, two crossed swords, much like the old fashioned broad swords, only a trifle broader; the hilts rested against the door jams, one at either side, about two and a half feet from the floor, and the swords crossed each other, edge down, with their points resting against the opposite door jam about the height of a man's shoulder from the floor. The hilts were plain, the guards like the common sabre guard, the handle part of dark material; the blades polished till they shone like silver, with a golden tinge. As the man stood for a moment, the swords shook a little, as if held in the hand of a person nervous from excitement, and from them as they shivered, a pale, shimmering, yellow light seemed to flash or flow.

The man turned away with a sigh, and with a sad face; the swords remained just a moment, but before the footsteps of the repulsed man had reached the outer edge of the porch, they were drawn back apparently into the door jam itself, turning upward as if upon a hinge formed at the hilts. I looked the door jams all over after the swords were withdrawn, but there was no sign nor trace of any opening in which the swords might be hid; nor was there any evidence of the existence of the swords to be seen.

I turned to renew my survey of the room and as my eyes became more accustomed to the peculiar light, I discovered new and wondrous beauty in the workmanship and finish of the whole. I had, as it seemed, come early; for the arrivals were more frequent, the intervals between them shorter and shorter; the room was filling up on both sides, and in the center; the dropping of the swords in either doorway was also more frequent. the light flashing from them more continuous; while now and then, from some cause, the falling of them seemed like a crash, as if they were clashed furiously together, at which the light seemed to blaze throughout the room and corruscate along the emblazoned imagery of cornice and column like yellow lightning. I sat in wonder, but not in fear, for within was complete quiet. I began to contemplate the arrangements of the pulpit, where now a page, a lad of some sixteen years of age, was moving to and fro arranging something upon the stand, the tables and chairs

A sudden loud clashing of the swords in the doorway just behind me, together with a vivid flashing of the strange light caused me to turn my eyes again in that direction; a man was standing outside the doorway, with his teeth shut tightly together, his hands clenched, and eyes blazing with fury and disappointment; before him were the crossed swords, quivering as if instinct with life, and endowed with emotion; the polished blades had changed their hue from the silvery, golden tinged glitter to the color of a golden flame, while the light that scintillated from them flashed over and filled the room to the remotest corner, flooding seat and pillar, pulpit and altar, niche and statuette, picture and scroll, with its terrible brilliancy. The man turned away, the swords were withdrawn, but in an instant he came towards the door quickly, and was almost in the room with his right foot touching the threshhold, when with a crash that sent the blood surging through my veins with the shock, the swords fell before him, sending a flood of flame and light over the room again; he turned again away, and stepping back a few paces, he started toward the door the third time with determination, despair and fierce rage pictured in his face; and again those terrible swords, now white and glowing like molten gold, fell before him, striking fire from their clashing crossing, shaking the building with the fierceness and suddeness of their fall, and filling the doorway from top to bottom and from side to side with their quivering, eager motion, putting before the enraged and desperate man seeking an entrance, a wall of flaming swords and seeming fire. I shall never forget the fearful expression of baffled desire and helpless rage depicted in the face of the man thus barred out.

I watched him depart, and though many came; some coming in, some being prevented and going away, I saw only the one who tried more than once to enter. It seemed that when a person came up who was to come in, no stir nor change took place at the door; but when some one came who was not to come in the swords dropped lightly into place across the doorway, striking slightly together as they fell. If the one thus stopped from coming in, at once turned away, the swords were withdrawn, without noise or light; but if they remained standing, as if waiting to come in or to question why they were thus stopped, the blades of the swords would begin to blaze and quiver with motion, and light would begin to emit from them, similar in appearance to the flame from a hot, briskly blazing wood fire; and the longer the person stood there, the more energetic would be the shivering motion of the swords, and the more vivid and intense would be the light flying from them, until in some instances, as in the one described, the room would be illumined with the light, which resembled that which heralds the rising sun seen as it comes unclouded from the shades of night; or like the glow at the setting of the sun.

I saw some enter whom in my waking every day hours I knew were deemed not meet for a membership with the faithful; and I saw some rejected who are deemed most worthy.

Some walked briskly in, some slowly; none who entered seemed to take any heed to whether there was any thing to stop or hinder them; while some walking slowly and gently would find their way barred with the crossed swords, they having fallen into place gently and noiselessly; others coming quickly would be met suddenly by the fall of the swords with a clash and noise, as if sprung into place by the stroke of a nervous and impatient hand; and if entrance were insisted upon, or seemed to be, the crossed swords began to glow, moving up and down, quivering as if with emotion and life, and light would emit from them as from the burnished plough-share set in the aun.

My waking eyes have never looked upon workmanship so complete, so fit, so richly elaborate in design and finish, so profuse and yet so grandly harmonious as that of the room I have so poorly described. The outside of the building was massive and solid, a building only impressive because of its solidity and strength; without a spire, and yet perfect in proportion, design and

It faded from my sight as sublunary things began to obtrude themselves upon my conscious being; but the impressions made upon my mind will never be effaced. Well may we believe that the "Flaming swords that turn every way to guard the way of the Tree of Life," still stand as prescient sentinels at the open doors of the Temple of Eternal Peace, and dispute with the fierceness of awakened wrath the entrance of human or devilish design and work.

TO THE PRAYER UNION.

Dear Sisters:- The request of Sr. Abigail Y. Alley as found in Herald for July 13th, will be made a special subject for the fifth Thursday in August. Let all remember the day and unite in earnest petition. We are growing more and more convinced by the progress of events and the increasing interest of the people in the affairs of Palestine that the time is near when the word of the Lord will be fulfilled in the restoration of the gospel to His ancient people of that land, when after it is preached in its fulness to the Gentiles in these last days, it is to go again to Judah. They will never understand the gospel until they hear it, and "how shall they hear without a preacher?" ELEANOR.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYERS.

Sr. Margaret Hoagland, of River Sloux, Iowa, requests the prayers of the Union that her health may be restored.

Also, Sr. Laura Bronson, of Plano, Ill., requests the prayers of the Union in her behalf that she may be restored to health.

Also Sr. Catherine Whitaker that God in his mercy may heal her. She has been a great sufferer for many years.

IVANHOE, Colo., July 2d.

Dear Sisters: - This is my first attempt to write to the Herald, but having just read the letters in the Mothers' Home Column, it gave me courage to try and write a few lines. I feel weak in the effort of trying but having a desire to always try and do what is right and pleasing before my Maker, I will endeavor to do my best.

I was baptized when I was eight years old and I can truly say I never have been sorry for the step I took, but rather rejoice to think I was thus taught to obey God's will in my early life; for I have realized many blessings and feel that God is kind and merciful to me. I sometimes feel unworthy in his sight and that I do not serve him as I should; still I keep trying and he knows it is my greatest desire to strive to serve him and do what is right,

I think we have much to be thankful for, while we see and hear of the dreadful destructions and loss of so many, many lives, we truly ought to feel very thankful that we are blessed with health and strength. I have always lived among a few of the Saints, but now I am so far away from any of them that I do not have the privilege of meeting with them, but I do the best I can to serve God, for I feel more need of His Holy Spirit now than ever before, since I am out in the world all alone. 'Tis true I have a companion with me, but he is not one with me in the gospel as I should like him to be. Pray for me, dear Saints, that I may hold fast and not fall by the way; and I greatly desire your prayers that my companion may be led to see the true light of God and walk in the path of righteousness.

I will bring this, my first letter, to a close, lest I weary you. Hoping it may be found worthy of space in the "Column,"

I remain your sister in bonds,

IDA A. SHAWI.

BUFFALO GAP, Dak.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column:—As it is the Sabbath day and I have no church to go to, I will try to commune with you. I have belonged to this church for six years and I am made to rejoice in God for his goodness in showing me the way. I, with the rest, am a mother, having one little darling given to my care. I love to read the letters in the Column; they seem to speak comfort to my troubled heart. O mothers, you do not know what a balm your letters are to many scattered ones, and how they rejoice when they read of the up-building of Zion!

We hope before long to have some brother come here to feed the hungry souls of South Dakota. There is a splendid chance, as there is no church in the country. Fearing I may tire you with my letter, I will ask you to pray for me that I may do my duty in all things.

From your sister in Christ, MARIA MCKINNEY.

No house should be without a bottle of arnica. It is indispensible in cases of cuts, burns, and bruises, and in earache it is a sovereign cure. As soon as any soreness is felt in the ear-which feeling almost always precedes the regular "ache" —let four or five drops of tincture of arnica be poured in, and then the orifice filled with a little cotton to exclude the air. In a short time the uneasiness is forgotten. If the arnica is not resorted to until there is actual pain the cure may not be so speedy, but it is just as certain. If one application does not effect a cure it will be necessary to repeat it, it may be several times. It is a sure preventive for gatherings in the ear, which is the usual cause of earache.

Correspondence.

GALIEN, Mich., July 12th.

Editors Herald: - While the meadows are aglow with blue and red and the numberless harvest fields bow in waves of gold, responsive to the rippling breeze, we pause a few moments to waft a strain floating over the strings of memory's harp. We are reminded more forcibly of the "Lord's harvest" and his "few laborers," by the musical ring of the reapers gathering in the sheaves, and the willing, steady, persistent, go-aheaditiveness for the bread that perishes with the using; while the sable cloud of carelessness and miserable indifference to the harvest and garnering of the soul creep along in the advance of so many, striking back the peaceful light of God. Truly if the condition of the present life involves the great question of "profit and loss," the life to come will be woven in the same warp and woof. "What will it profit a man to gain the whole world, and lose his own soul."

Just a present, a wonderful wave in the religious atmosphere is being magnified. A beautiful haven of rest and glory is thrown upon the canvass,—a golden prize,—a region fairer than Sumium's marble palace, and no one knows how to get there. The inheritance in a glorified state, beyond the rolling waves of death, are presented to the eye, and no conditions upon which such is obtained, other than that gleamed from the teachings in common to all, that is, "Only believe and hope." Some few of this class believe the Jewish Sabbath is the power of God unto salvation, and hope to be saved and fall heirs to the legacy on the other side by simple obedience of "Seventh Day."

We have labored some four or five weeks among them, but a veil is over their hearts in reading the new covenant as one was drawn over the hearts of the Jews in the reading of the old. However we left some six or seven in that neighborhood convinced, but lacking the moral courage to give up the leeks and onions under Egyptian bondage for the fruits from the "tree of life" in the midst of the heavenly Jerusalem, which are free.

Bro. Columbus joining in the service of meetings poured in the grape and cannister. We baptized two at that place—near Hartford, Michigan, at Rush Lake school-house, the two being Sr. Elizabeth Credit and Bro. Cyrenus Trumbull, mother and son.

We must not omit to mention that previous to the convening of our district conference we held a series of meetings at the named place and baptized Sr. Ada, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Frances Robertson, making eleven since our appointmentment for the year, to the Michigan district. We would remember too, the substantial aid tendered by Saints and friends of Hartford and vicinity; we extend our hearty thanks, and feel to say, God bless you all.

The marvelous work of the last days grows brighter at every development. Surely it towers high over the wreckages of the past, evincing divine wisdom at all stages, and manifesting how utterly powerless are the rude efforts of man, unaided, to solve the mysteries which have been swept down the current from the fatal period in which the light of revelation was extinguished. It will accomplish, for God has sent it on an eternal mission in this world. Although few, comparatively, accept it. Yet, "Fear not little flock for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." God will use whom he will for the accomplishment of his purposes for "the Son of Man is as a man taking a far journey who left his house and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch."-Mark 13:34. Not only does he give authority to his servants, but has made specific provisions in his kingdom for a "porter," whom (Matthew 24:45) Jesus says, is ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season. And the Lord is to find him there "when he cometh." But error still practices and prospers, and we yearn for the period when nations, kindreds and tongues shall serve and obey the Lord Jesus; the time when all unfriendly relations shall cease, and nations throw down their implements of blood and combat, and learn war no more. Yet the Lord is overturning and manipulating the keys of governments to a supreme end.

"See the mystic Weaver setting
High in heaven—His loom below,
Up and down the treadles go;
Takes for web, the world's dark ages—
Takes for woof, the kings and sages—
Takes the nobles and their pages,
Takes all stations and their stages;
Thrones are bobbins in His shuttle,
Armies make them scud and scuttle—
Web into the woof must flow.
Up and down the nations go!
At the Weaver's will they go!"

Hopefully yours,

LEONARD SCOTT.

SPRINGDALE, Ark., July 7th.

Dear Saints:- I am still earnestly striving to dispense the bread of life to the hungry souls who are seeking after truth. I thank the Lord for the liberty which he gives me when trying to preach His word. I conferred with brother Gillen, (missionary in charge), and told him what I was doing. His reply was, "Go ahead, dear brother, and may the Lord bless you in the good work." So I have been striving with all my might to sound the gospel trumpet long and loud. I have let no opportunity pass. I have four different points where I hold meetings, occupying four Sundays in each month, besides some between times. A few weeks ago a kind friend in Rogers, ten miles north of here, gave me a few days of carpenter-work to do, and while there I occupied the time well, working at the bench in the daytime and preaching at night. There is a splendid interest in the faith worked up in that town, and much of that interest is owing to the faithful and untiring zeal and labor of those dear Saints -pioneers- Grandma Neuman, Sister Minnie Wickes and Grandma Stuart. Tell me, that dare, that the sisters can't do anything towards spreading the gospel! I have lived in branches where there were a half-dozen elders, where they all didn't do half as much toward spreading the gospel as these good faithful souls do. Their hearts and souls are in the work. I am satisfied that there are many precious souls in and around Rogers that will obey the gospel if we can only hold the fort and "keep the campfire burning." Then there is a place over on White River, in Madison county, where the earnest and piteous call keeps coming from: "Do come over and preach for us." Oh, they are perishing for the bread of eternal life, and I can't go just yet, for my harvest must be out and my corn must be plowed, and I must work late and early to earn my bread by the sweat of my face. I tell you, my dear brethren, I can't be still. Have I not followed this latter day work-this Reorganization -through from the beginning! I am one of the charter members; was present at Zarahemla, Wisconsin, in April, 1853, when the nucleus organization was effected. Yes, and before this, when a little band of us placed ourselves on record and declared ourselves as standing aloof from all parties and pretenders, and especially proclaiming against polygamy and its kindred abominations. And then in our appeals to God to know what to do, we were told that the Lord, in his own due time, would raise up young Joseph, the son of the Martyr, who should deliver His people. Bro. E. C. Briggs, you and I can remember the time when one small room would hold every member of the Reorganization! I have faithfully and earnestly and zealously watched the progress and movements of this work, and I have been glad and rejoiced when all went well, and grieved and sorrowful and even wept when trials and trouble came.

Let me say to all that, this work is of God. I love it with all my heart, and I am determined, let come what will, to do all I can to build up the Church of Christ on the earth. I believe that there are precious souls here out of the narrow path, and some one must pioneer. Maybe after we get the ice broken and a few branches started, some of the General Conference appointees will stray along this way and give us a lift in preaching. I, too, am getting hungry to hear some one besides myself preach the pospel. The last sermon I heard preached was by brother Henry Southwick, at the Saints' Chapel near East Delevan, Wisconsin.

I would like to meet the dear Saints once more. I do always rember them before the throne of grace, and I do especially remember those who have remembered us in our poverty with substantial tokens of their love for the work, and for us who are in need. May God in his infinite mercy bless all.

Yours,

ELI M. WILDERMUTH.

LOOKOUT, California, July 8th.

Dear Herald:—I have preached one sermon since I have been here. I have baptized fourteen and there are twenty-two others who have confessed the faith in full, and still others whose prejudice is removed. I expect to be forced to leave this field for a while to support my family, but I hope to return to it again before very long.

J. R. Cook.

California.

Dear Brethren:—The Herald is a most welcome visitor to me, and I should feel very lone-some without it, as it is my only preacher. I take great delight in reading it to trustees, ministers, and in fact to all I have a chance to, and show them where the true Church of Jesus Christ is. Strange as it may appear, I never got left yet, for I know this is the work of God, and the true Church of Christ. Let any man or woman repent and be baptized for the remission of their sins, having hands laid on them (by those having authority) for the gift of Holy Ghost, then shall they know for themselves whether this doctrine is of God or of man; then shall the signs follow them that believe.

With Christian love to all the Saints and enmity to none, HENRY WHITAKER.

SAND RUN, Ohio, July 15th.

Dear Herald:—I desire to bear my testimony to this work, for I know that it is true, and I rejoice in the gospel, and am glad that I have had the pleasure of obeying it, as I feel that God has but forth his hand the second time to gather his people into his kingdom, that he may destroy the wicked one. May God help us to press forward till we gain a rest with him in glory, for the word of the Lord endureth forever. The grass withereth, the flowers fadeth, but the word of the Lord shall stand forever. God has said that we shall know of the doctrine, and I feel that I have the knowledge of his word for myself. Yet I am very young in years and I have much to learn yet.

I would ask for the pravers of all the Saints so I shall go onward and have the knowledge of God at all times in my heart.

We have a branch of forty-three members in this place, but we have not had the Spirit with us so much as we have had in time past; but I feel that it is of our own selves, but God is remembering us us in mercy.

In our little branch we have a very sick sister and we desire the prayers of all the Saints that she may be healed, and that this little branch may go on rejoicing in the work; and that we may all come to the perfection of the faith, that we may reign with Christ in his kingdom.

I have a question to ask of the Herald, and that is this: In this place there has been eighteen baptized into our branch who have not been voted into it. Now I want to know if all members have to be voted into a branch?

May God bless us all and help us do his will.
Your brother,

THOMAS WARD.

Members are received into the church by baptism. (See D. C., 17:7). When parties are baptized into a branch by its officers or by one whom they have appointed to administer that ordinance, a vote to receive is not necessary. But if baptized without the knowledge of a branch or its officers and without its limits, they should be received by vote.

Some branches have a custom of voting on applicants for baptism, either out of courtesy, or as a safeguard to themselves. Where such local custom is made a rule it should be observed, but there is no provision in the law for it.—ED.

HASTINGS, Victoria, Australia,
April 26th.

Dear Editor:—I left Hasting to go to Gipsland, about two hundred and fifty miles away, to see if I could get any place for our elders to preach in, and I got two houses opened to them and a promise of two houses for them to preach in; and at another place I got the promise of the Christian Church. They said that any of our elders could have it. One of their preachers conversed with me for four hours, and he said that he could find no fault with our doctrine. He asked me the name of our church. I said the Church of Jesus Christ. I asked him if he knew any one of that name, As I was a member of his, (Jesus Christ's) church, Mr. Ferguson gave me five dollars to pay the elders' fare to Gipsland. I was called to the eldership last Sunday, May 26th, but not ordained yet. I know that I am called by the revelation of Jesus Christ, as I have had the ministering of an angel in the middle of the day, before I was called to the Aaronic priesthood. I pray that God will bless us with the gift of preaching that my tongue will be loosed when I am ordained to the Melchisedec order. Bro. I. Burton prophesied that I would never be confuted with the Bible, when he had his hands on my head; and I do not believe I ever will. I wished that Bro. Burton had been with me at Gipsland as there was a better opening than when I was with him in Geelong. Everywhere I go I can get people to listen to me. There are plenty of Christ's sheep in Victoria and will obey when they hear the gospel.

ASHTON WOOLLEY.

GEORGEVILLE, Mo., July 14th.

Dear Herald:—While looking at your page 438, the words of cheer from Bro. Whitehead, I felt that calm and gentle Spirit rest on me, and I am persuaded to take my pen in hand and say with him, "On, on to victory!" for at the end of the race we will get the crown promised by Him that never faileth. His coming is near, even at our doors; so let us be ready, and let us lay-members do all we can to persuade our neighbors, that they may be redeemed with us. Oh, how anxious we should be for them!

Yours for truth's sake,

ELI B. MULLIN.

LAURIETON, N. S. W., May 25th.

Bro. R. S. Salyards:—Just received your welcome letter last night, with circular enclosed. I am glad to hear of the progress being made in that locality, and to see by the Herald how the work is progressing all through the states. In fact when we receive the Heralds—every four weeks—I sometimes feel as though I could "fly" off to that land.

When our mission was given us, we both resolved to stay till it should be accomplished—the time I mean—and therefore we will not grumble.

You have no doubt, ere this, learned of our not being together; both Bro. Smith and I concluding that it would be better to thus separate. And upon consulting Neely, he was willing to do so for the work's sake, while you can judge of what his feelings must have been to thus stay alone in a foreign land. It is one of the marvels that are only found in the church—the progress he has made; he simply delights the Victorian Saints. After an absence of some ten weeks, out opening new fields, he returned to Hastings and Queensferry, and they are not loud enough in their praise of his improvement. I have seen no report of the discussion that I had at Hastings last January with a Utah elder on the subject of polygamy, and suppose that it has never been reported. As brother Smith was present and taking notes I supposed he intended to report, but forgot to ask him prior to his departure. However, there was nothing of special note. He had a two-nights' contest and the elder proved himself to be a gentleman. The time was far too short for a full presentation of the subject, but I did the best I could under the circumstances, Bro. Smith saying at its close that I did well-On the Saturday following I was married, and on the next Wednesday we started for New South Wales as missionaries. I have found my wife a willing helper, a zealous worker, and willing to undergo trial for the work's sake. Since our arrival, February 15th, I have preached forty-six times, baptized and confirmed twelve, blessed eleven children, with the various other duties attending. Have written some to the papers, and as a result now have a discussion on hand for July 5th. The subject is baptism, I to affirm in favor of immersion as the mode. My opponent is a Presbyterian minister and it all came about by an extract of one of his sermons being published in the press, which I answered.

There is a man by the name of Alex. Johnston, of the Christian Church who hails from America-California- and has been raising quite a stir in the same locality. As soon as the Rev. Smith had come out in the paper stating his willingness to discuss with me, as I had said that I was willing to discuss it either through the press or from the platform, Johnston sent him a letter stating that he had accepted this challenge! Of course the man was premature, because Smith had accepted mine. Therefore he could do nothing but state the facts, and as a result the following Sunday night he-Johnston-came out bitterly against Smith, calling him a coward, etc., and challenged the ministry in general. In the next issue of the paper, one of our brethren -Wm. McLaughlin-accepted his challenge on my behalf, laying down two propositions similar to the last two discussed by Braden and Kelley. This roused the gentleman's ire, and in answer thereto through the press he said, "Not with a Mormon!!" and further: "In the country where I come from, America, one would forfeit all claims to respectability who would do so."

A dispatch was sent me, and the next day I listened to him twice, and had I not been present I am satisfied we would have been raked at his evening service, as he gave it to the others. At the close I went forward and got from him the acknowledgement that he was aware of the distinction between us and the Utah people, and this before some of his own followers. Prior to this he had told some of them that there was no difference. I challenged him to discussion, but no—the lion (?) had now become the cringing cur.

We are at present with Bro. John Rodger—noble people. Work seems to accumulate and the end is not yet. Its condition here is encouraging. Wife joins in sending love.

Dear Herald:—Some time ago I gave through your columns a receipt for the cure of cancer, offering to give a receipt for to make the black, or all healing salve to dress the sore with after the cancer plaster was taken off. Will you please publish the receipt for the benefit of your read-

Take rosin and beeswax, of each two ounces, sweet oil eight ounces. Melt them together and stir well, and at near the boiling point add four ounces red lead, stirring well; the lead to be added slowly, stirring until nearly cold. Then add slowly two drachms pulverised camphor, stirring until cold. (A drachm is the eighth of an ounce or about a teaspoon full.)

To pulverize the camphor drop on a few drops of alcohol and it will pulverize as fine as flour. Yours in bonds,

Bro. Blair:-I came here to preach the funeral sermon of father W. R. Orton last Sunday. I have labored in Emerson, Keystone, Shenandoah and other places of late. I shall go to Mill Creek this week, the Lord willing, and labor in that place and at Hamburg and vicinity, and work my way to the Richards settlement before returning here again.

The work is in fair condition. Braden's opposition has given us good help and made us friends.

Bro. Briggs has preached in Shenandoah and helped the cause. He thought of starting on his eastern mission last week.

I shall do the best I can, trusting the Master for the result. The Saints all expect to meet you at the camp meeting at Wheeler's Grove.

HENRY KEMP.

HENDERSON GROVE, Ill., July 15th.

Dear Herald:-I am getting on in this field, and have been laboring actively since June 15th. I did some labor previous to that time but not as much as I desired. Am blessed with health and strength, and also a fair degree of God's Spirit in my work. I spoke last Saturday night, Sunday and Sunday night at Shanghi, an Adventist stronghold, and will speak there next Sunday again. Also spoke to quite large audiences in our church here in the grove last night with fair liberty. The Saints here have all been very kind to me, and all are desirous of aiding and helping me on in the good work. Surely they will not lose their reward.

> Your brother in bonds, E. E. WHEELER.

COOK'S POINT, Texas, July 8th.

Brn. Smith and Blair: Our reunion is over, and on account of high water and a great amount of rain the people, and especially the membership of the church, failed to meet with us. However, Bro. Ezzell and daughter were with us and we held several services. Bro. Ezzell did some good preaching which was highly appreciated. Bro. I. N. Roberts could not be with us on account of being sick. He is still sick at this writing, but hope he will be up soon. Don't know where Bro. Ezzell will go next. I aimed to go to Jack county, or Houston county this state to preach next. There are many calls for preaching and few to preach in this section. We aim to do the best we can, God being our helper. E. W. NUNLEY.

TABORVILLE, Missouri, July 9th.

Bro. Blair: Well, I am another Latter Day Saint knocking for admitance to the golden gate of the New Jerusalem. I hope by the grace of our Lord and Master to be able to enter in. My wife wrote to the Mother's Home Column some weeks ago, and since then we have had some inquiring about our part of the world, and I wish to state in the Herald for the benefit of such parties that if they wish to hear from me in regard to this country, I will be pleased to give all the information I can, if they will be so kind as to enclose stamps for postage, as it takes considerable money to answer so many. And I will further add that if there are any Saints that are good at blacksmithing and wood working there is a splendid chance for such a man here.

Well, Saints, we've had quite a shaking of the dry bones in this part of the Master's vineyard, and lots of very fine preaching by Brn. I. N. White, D. Tucker and S. Swenson; and many good people are very earnestly investigating.

I have only been a Saint about ten months, but I can truly say that I am glad that I lived to hear a poor, deluded Saint preacher; and can bear my testimony to this great work of our Lord and Master in this the eleventh hour, and hope and pray that I may be ready to meet him when he comes to make up his jewels. Love to all and malice toward none.

ALVA W. HADLEY.

LAMONI, Iowa, July 15th.

Dear Herald:-After finishing up the necessary office business for a season, I took the field early in May and have been out most of the time since. I assisted Bro. M. M. Turpen in and near Redding, Iowa, for a few days. After that I preached and otherwise labored for the cause at Allendale, Missouri, till May 20th. On May 24th, by unanimous invitation of the G. A. R. Post of Lucas, Iowa, I went there and preached the annual memorial sermon in the opera hall on the 26th. My text was:

"And he shall judge among the people and rebuke strong nations afar off; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks; nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."-Micah 4:3.

Though I spoke of the war and of its statistics and losses, its horrors and desolations, yet I dwelt chiefly upon the beauty and glory of peace, and upon the coming reign of the Prince of Peace, endeavoring to show God's plan and purpose for the final welfare and happiness of the human race under the reign of the Messiah. At the wish of the members of the Post, and others, the sermon was published in the Lucas Ledger. On the same day I preached the funeral sermon of Bro. Hopkins' child, and also spoke on that and other evenings in the Saints' Chapel. The never failing hospitality of the Ssints at Lucas and Cleveland makes the traveling elder feel at home, but the scant work that has been found in the coal mines this season, and the consequent trying times felt at those places, makes the heart sad, especially as nothing better seems at present in prospect for them; but they deserve better

On June 2d I went to Redding, preaching that evening and over Sunday. From there to Grant City and Allendale till the 10th. Our district conference on the 8th and 9th was a good one, and the Allendale Saints were alive and ready to receive the goodly gathering from Lamoni, Davis City, Greenville, Lucas and Redding, Iowa, and from Lone Rock, McFall, Sheridan, Sweet Home and Grant City, Missouri. Good sermons were preached by Brn. Shippy, Jones and Salvards, and an excellent testimony meeting was held on Sunday afternoon.

From June 10th for awhile I was at home, my youngest child having never fully recovered from the whooping cough of the winter and now seeming weaker. Still she held to life with a strong spirit and we hoped would recover. Meantime I preached at Davis City and Greenville, and then, having promised to go, I went with Bro. C. H. Jones to McFall, Missouri, where we preached in town and country, and on the 28th I baptized two sisters in the border of Daviess county. Bro. Jones staid but I came home the 29th. But finding no one prepared to go that day to fill the appointment at Redding I continued on the same train, having no chance to see my sick child. That night she was taken worse, and when I returned on Monday she was evidently nearing her end. We labored and watched, assisted by kind Saints, till Tuesday night her sweet spirit returned to the Giver, leaving us to mourn after so short a visit wherein she had been so happy with us and we with her. On July 4th we laid her pure and beautiful form away in the earth, sorrowing, yet having hope that we may be worthy, through Christ and our service, to have our dear one again in the first resurrection. Our home seems lonely, the mother's heart is sad, while the months of watching and labor have taken her strength and impaired her health. Hence I shall stay at home some, but meanwhile attending to accumulated office work, and preaching as I can. On July 6th and 7th attended to two-day meeting at Pleasanton and took part, with Brn. Blair, Wellington and Turpen. Bro. Lyman Little was ordained a priest. We expect him to do a good work, as also that the other three will who were ordained at our district conference, namely, Priests F. M. Weld, Mars Sorrenson and E. E. Marshall. The field is wide before them and their helps and chances are good.

In the district over which I have charge various brethren are laboring locally, and nearly all the branches are doing well. The elders and priests are going outside and making appointments and having fair success. This is as it should be, God having commanded men to labor in their calling and to bring to pass much righteousness by their free agency and activity in the good cause. On the 14th preached at Lamoni, and I expect to be engaged on Sundays and at other times as home and office matters permit.

In the hope of the gospel,

HENRY A. STEBBINS.

SANTA ANA, Cal., July 8th.

Dear Herald:-I have just returned from Laguna branch where the Saints have been holding a Sunday School Convention, and a Reunion Meeting. They pitched the large tent near the large Lagune (which is lake in our language) in a little grove of nice shade trees. They celebrated the Fourth of July and had a good time generally. It was a glorious meeting for the Luguna branch, for it brought them together as a band of Saints truly and they forgot all their old troubles. Concession and humiliation was the order of the day. May the Lord continue to bless them, that they may remember their first love. I would be very grateful to the brethren in Idaho if they would enquire for my brother, John Walker, who is known in Idaho as Parker John. He came from Carthage, Missouri, in 1850, and I have lost track of him. If you can find track of him please address the undersigned, Box 8, Santa Ana, Orange county, California. J. G. WALKER.

SERMON BY ELDER W. W. BLAIR,
AT LAMONI, 10WA.

INTRODUCTORY to the remarks I may make this morning, I read from Isaiah, chapter twenty-nine, commencing at the ninth verse. I do so for the purpose of considering God's marvelous and wonderful work that was to be begun and carried forward in these days, prior to the second coming of the Lord Jesus Christ. We have some clear proofs of the doctrine we preach in regard to its origin and purpose, a variety of proofs tending to confirm the fact that God has begun, is carrying forward, and will consummate one of the most marvelous works that was ever known to the sons of men. We believe this, teach it, and seek to keep well posted as to the evidences upon which we base our faith, so that we may give an intelligent reason for the hope that is within us on this important matter.

Isaiah delivers this prophecy professedly by the inspiration of the Almighty; it was to have its accomplishment in the last days. Examining this prophecy, there has been no time in the past when anything like it has been accomplished; and we discover further, by the terms of this prophecy, that it could not have been accomplished until these latter times. In this is strong presumptive evidence of the divinity of the work intrusted to us. Evidence abounds that in the economy of God, the Latter Day Saints are the first people who ever made the claim that this prophecy was to be fulfilled in these latter times.

"Stay yourselves and wonder; cry ye out and cry; they are drunken, but not with wine, they stagger but not with strong drink. For the Lord hath poured out upon you the spirit of deep sleep, and hath closed your eyes; the prophets, and your rulers, the seers hath he covered. And the vision of all [that is all these prophets, and rulers, and seers referred to] has become unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saying, Read this, I pray thee; and he saith, I can not, for it is sealed."

When, in all the past, since the utterance of this prediction, has such an event as this transpired until the coming forth of the Book of Mormon?

"And the book is delivered to one that is not learned, saying, Read this I pray thee; and he saith, I am not learned."

It is a strange, but nevertheless prophetic truth, that "the book" was to be delivered to him that is not learned, saying, "Read this I pray thee;" and that he should say,

"I am not learned." But it was fulfilled in the coming forth of the Book of Mor-

"Wherefore, the Lord said, Forasmuch as this people draw near to me with their mouth, and with their lips do honor me, but have removed their heart far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precept of men; therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people, even a marvelous work and a wonder; for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid."

This is God's work. His will and design. The learned could not read the book; but one "not learned" would read it. Then follows the important revelation that, in "that day"—the same one when the book should come forth—"the ears of the deaf should hear the words of the book, and the eyes of the blind should see out of obscurity, and out of darkness. The meek also shall increase their joy in the Lord, and the poor among men shall rejoice in the Holy One of Israel; Jacob shall not now be ashamed, neither shall his face now wax pale."

When?—After the coming forth of this marvelous work. This was all to be introduced in that period when the children of Abraham should not be "ashamed," and their face no more "wax pale." Paleness of face signifies fear, unrest, tribulation, and all that is implied in these terms.

"They also that erred in spirit shall come to understanding, and they that murmured shall learn doctrine."

Well, the presumption is, as found in this last verse, that God's people would come to a correct understanding of spirit manifestations; and that they who "murmured" would learn doctrine implies that they would learn God's doctrine—the true doctrine of life everlasting; such is the reading of this closing verse of this the 29th chapter of Isaiah.

Well, now, we have here in the Book of Mormon a claim that is made—(and some people say that I preach nothing but the Book of Mormon; but that is not so; but if I did preach it, it would be wonderfully sound doctrine)—but here in the 2d Book of Nephi there is a prophecy which comes to the nineteenth century first in 1829 or 1830, so that the world began to know of this marvelous statement, this wonderful prediction, only as far back as 1820.

Prophesying of the apostasy from the church established by Christ and his apostles, and of the Jews scattered abroad among all the nations of the earth, Nephi says that God would "proceed to do a marvelous work and a wonder, that he might remember his covenant which he had made unto the children of men; and that the Lord would "set his hand the second time" to restore his people from their lost and fallen condition, and that one of the evidences of it would be that it should bring Israel to a knowledge of the Messiah. Wherefore God would "proceed to do a marvelous work and a wonder," not only among Israel, but abroad, throughout all I the nations of the earth. And he predicted that the Lord would bring forth his words unto them, (such is the Book of Mormon), and that they would be given unto them for the purpose of convincing them of the Messiah, and that this would be at the time of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon.

"Well," says one, "you place that book in the stead of the Bible." No; it is not to take the place of the Bible, but to furnish strong evidences to establish the divinity of the Bible. It teaches the all-important fact that Jesus Christ is the Messiah, the Savior of the world. It agrees with the Bible in its doctrinal teachings; and many of its predictions are corroborative of those contained in the Bible relative to the Lord's great and marvelous work to be enacted in the last days for the salvation of the house of Israel and of the Gentiles. So that you discover this "marvelous work" predicted in the 29th chapter of Isaiah was to be introduced by the coming forth of the Book of Mormon.

We claim that this is the very "book" that was to be given to the unlearned man, the "words" of which would be heard by the deaf in these days, in proof of which many testimonies could be adduced of those who were "deaf" being healed by the power of God so that they have been, and are still able to "hear the words of the book" as well as to read the same. We claim that this book came forth at the right time, in the right place, in harmony with the prediction, and that all things worked in harmony to the fulfilling of the various prophecies relative to the coming forth of this marvelous work.

It is now well known that the land of Palestine has been a waste for seventeen centuries. It is also well known that that land is being restored to fertility, and that wherever the hand of industry is found in that land it is bringing forth abundantly as it did in the days of the patriarchs and prophets. This is a matter of world-wide notoriety at the present time. The Journals of the day are full of matter in regard to it.

The house of Jacob was to be brought into vastly improved conditions after the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. It is a remarkable fact that the children of Judah have been under the feet of the Gentiles, and have been persecuted, hated and despised, robbed and slain mercilessly by those powers until within the last one hundred years; and that especially for the past fifty or sixty years great changes have taken place in their favor. Some of the most renowned statesmen, generals, scientists and financiers are from their ranks, and their condition as a people, is now vastly better, except in one or two nations where they still suffer some persecution. Jacob's face no "longer waxes pale," neither is he "ashamed." And "Lebanon is turned into a fruitful field," and all this has transpired since the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. Surely, it is a marvelous, a wonderful work; yet not in harmony with the popular notions of the religious world, nor of the wise and prudent of earth, and therefore could not originate with them. God declared that the "work" effecting these conditions should be "a marvelous work and a wonder," one that He himself would do; also that "the wisdom of their wise men" should perish, and "the understanding of the prudent" would "be hid." Every verse of this chapter has a sermon in it, but we can only glance at them as we pass along.

The Book of Mormon puts the statement about the land of Lebanon in a different form than found in the Bible. says: "I will shew unto the children of men that it is not yet a very little while and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest."

"Well," says one, "that word applies to a district in the land of Judea." there is a district called Libanus, or Lebanon. It was from this district that the cedars of Lebanon came with which Solomon beautified the temple of the Lord. But the "Lebanon" referred to in the prophecy, refers to the land of Palestine, including the city of Jerusalem. Certainly—as we discover here—it was not to a region of sterile mountains, or anything of that kind. It was to a land that would be developed in fertility, for it would be "turned into a fruitful field."

The two books are in harmony concerning the coming forth of this "marvelous work and a wonder." There is no discrepancy or incongruity between them; agreement is plainly manifest in all their parts.

We turn to the past and ask, When, and where has that promised "book" made its appearance? We have reached the times when the "tribulation" of the Jews is almost entirely done away, when the "face" of Jacob does not "wax pale;" and a little before this time God was to bring forth "a book." And seeing that all the tribulation of the Jews have passed away, we ask, Where is to be found that "sealed" book? Where in the past has been given the "words"—or a portion—of that sealed book to "the learned," who replied, "I can not" read it "for it is sealed." Can you find where these things have transpired except among the Latter Day Saints? We challenge the entire world to bring forth proof of the fulfillment of this prediction elsewhere. It has not been fulfilled until the coming forth of the Book of Mormon. And while said book was in process of translation by Mr. Smith, he transcribed a few of the characters, and with their translation, sent them by the hand of Martin Harris to New York, who there presented them to a "learned" gentleman of the name of Anthon-a professor of ancient and modern languages-who after examination pronounced the characters true, and the translation correct. He gave Mr. Harris a certificate to that effect, certifying to the people of Palmyra, New York, that they were true characters, and that the translation of such as had been translated was correct. But as Mr. Harris, when retiring, had reached the door, Mr. Anthon called him back and asked him where the young man got this book from which the characters were transcribed. Mr. Harris told him that an angel of the Lord had delivered it to him. Mr. Anthon then asked for the certificate he had given Mr. Harris, which, when he had received it, he tore in pieces, and said, "Young man, angels do not appear in these days."

But, mark you, the leading facts in the case are still preserved; for we find them in the answer of Mr. Anthon and Mr. Mitchell wherein they admit that certain strange words were presented to them by "a plain countryman" to see if they could translate them. Little did Mr. Anthon think that he was literally fulfilling the prediction we have read in your hearing this morning. Indeed, neither Mr. Smith or Mr. Harris were fully aware of the part they—as well as Mr. Anthon—were then playing in that great work predicted by Isaiah until some time after the events had transpired. There is a most remarkable agreement in the prophecy and its fulfill-

But "the book"-according to the terms of the prophecy—was to be given to "one that is not learned," saying, Read this, I pray thee; and he saith, I am not learned." Then the Lord speaks further and says: "Forasmuch as this people draw near me with their mouth and with their lips do honor me, but have removed their hearts far from me, and their fear toward me is taught by the precepts of men; therefore, behold, I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people, even a marvelous work and a wonder; for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid."

In fulfillment of this word the Lord gave power to this unlearned man, Joseph Smith, to read and translate it by divine power into our language, and proceeded to perform and continue this great and "marvelous work" spoken of, for he gave to this same man authority to preach His word and ordain others to do the same; gave him understanding to organize His church after the original Christian pattern found in the New Testament; and when the church, though few in number, was organized, the Lord gave revelations of His will to govern, enlighten, build up, confirm and strengthen it.

In one of the first revelations given to the church in February, 1829, the first thing of importance you read is: "Behold, a marvelous work is about to come forth among the children of men." And who were the ones with whom this work was entrusted? Why, they were illiterate men; men without wealth, without important social or political station, but industrious, honest young men; men of good, upright and moral habits. They were not of the rabble, nor anything of that kind. These were the kind of men to whom the work was committed in 1827-30; and the revelation declares that it was to be a "marvelous" one. Since its coming forth it has been opposed on every hand by all the multiplied forces of the world; it has been ridiculed, treated with biting sarcasm and base falsehood; opposed by vileness, and violence, and by every form of persecution, until some portions of the land of America have been crimsoned with the blood of the people of God! And yet it has spread out and gone forth like the light of the morning, and God has confirmed on every hand by his power and strange providences wherever his ministers are bearing it off in uprightness. And whereas there was but one young man in the commencement, in New York State, and then a second man, and then a a few in number when the church was organized in April, 1830; yet in a very short time sixty or seventy belonged to the church; and from such small and humble beginnings it has swept onward and onward until the gospel has been preached in all the nations of the earth, well nigh.

I do not say that the marvelousness of this work is limited to the preaching of the gospel; for there are numbers of other points connected with it that are correlative; and taken altogether it becomes one of the most marvelous movements the world has ever known.

In order to bring to pass this prophecy it was essential that wondrous changes should be wrought in the political, industrial and social conditions of the world. Hence we see that marvelous changes have been wrought in the numerous departments of the various industries,-in mechanics, in the chief arts and sciences throughout the civilized world, and much of it within the memory of men now living. The various enterprises that are being set forth in America alone, without mentioning those of other nations, are truly remarkable.

Since our nation was founded, and within the last eighty years—yes, within the memory of our aged men and womenthe mode of travel was chiefly on horseback. If a young gentleman wished to take his young lady to meeting or a social gathering, she rode on horseback on a pillion behind him. After a time came the stage-coach, and a man that was able to have a carriage was a curiosity; indeed, a man that could support a one-horse shay in America was regarded as a rich man, a man of ample means. If we stop to make comparison between then and now as to the mode of travel on the ocean, we discover that remarkable changes have been wrought. Persons can now navigate the ocean by steam and accomplish more in twenty-four days than they could in months then; for a time they could only travel in sail vessels, and sometimes it would take months to make a voyage across the Atlantic; but now they have perfected steam appliances so that only a few days are required, as in the case of the "City of Paris" that lately made her trip in a trifle over six days. Well, this is but one illustration of marvelous progress made in one direction in the last few years.

But in regard to the going forth of God's "marvelous work and a wonder" and for opening the way for its onward march on the earth during the last fifty years, one great force is the press. Look at the steam press by which bibles by millions are being printed! England takes the lead in this, but America comes second. Money is being poured out like water in order to publish the bible and send it abroad to the inhabitants of the earth! It is the infinite God who is opening the way to send his great work forth upon the earth to all nations.

Again; in regard to Sabbath Schools. What wonderful changes have been made in this respect. It is but a short time since God moved upon the heart of an Englishman, Robert Raikes, to conceive the idea that Sabbaths could be spent with profit to the young, many of whom had been allowed on that day to run at large, by collecting them together and instructing them in the word of God. He commenced the Sunday School and was blessed in his ministrations. From that it has spread out until the Sunday School has become one of the most important factors in giving religious instruction in the world, and every man and woman honestly connected with it deserve to be blessed of

It is "a marvelous work and a wonder" which God has promised should go forth among the nations of the earth in these latter times, and it has already spread out so that not only the English and American, but the French, the Spanish, Australian, German, and all the peoples that represent the intellectual and industrial world—the world of progress—have caught the inspiration; and not only do they have the Bible in their own tongue, and at such cheap rates that the poor can have it, but it is being translated into the language, and dialects of barbarous Africa, and those portions of the globe that have been hidden from the rest of the world for the last eighteen centuries can now be taught of God and his ways. The Lord seems to be stirring up men of late, Livingstone, Stanley, and others with them, to explore and open up the dark and unknown regions for the introduction of civilization and the light of Christ, so that now heathen nations, including the wild Africans are having the word of God published in their own tongues in which they were born! Down in the Indian Territory, among the Choctaws, Cherokees, and others styled the Indian Nations, the bible is had in their own tongues, and this I regard as one of the many evidences of the time in which God's "marvelous work" should go forth to all the nations.

Other prophecies that have a bearing upon this subject might be introduced, but we only take a little here and there, glean evidence from all quarters, so far as we can in all justness, taking all for what it is worth, and it becomes a mighty means in building up and extending abroad this glorious work.

Now, in regard to the preaching of this gospel—this "marvelous work and a wonder"—the leading feature is "the doctrine" of Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, to-day, and forever. One of the distinctive features of this prophetic work is that, "they that murmured shall learn doctrine." What doctrine? Evidently God's doctrine; Christ's doctrine. "But," says one, "have not we had that doctrine all along?"

Yes, in some small degree, but we have had it hidden "under a bushel"—by the creeds, catechisms, precepts and dogmas of men. To illustrate, (and with no disrespect to any church outside of our own), I remember that in my boyhood days, the doctrine was held that little children, if they died without being sprinkled by some one were certain to go to hell!—and that meant everlasting fire in which they were to be tormented forever!

That is very hard, strange doctrine; but nevertheless it was and is taught that little children dying without having their little heads sprinkled with water go down to everlasting burnings! Do you find any such doctrine taught in the Bible? No; we find the very opposite to that; namely, that children (infants) dying in their infancy are heirs of salvation through and by Jesus Christ—"Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

Yes, that is what the Bible teaches. Jesus further says: "Their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven."

How is it possible that the religious world could have adopted the idea—most blasphemous upon the character of the Almighty and the saving power of Jesus Christ—that little children, because they were so unfortunate as to not have their faces sprinkled in the name of Jesus Christ should go down to everlasting darkness and loss!

I will tell you how this has been brought about: The church established by Christ and his apostles anciently began to apostatize from the faith, the doctrine of Christ, and in process of time it was found unworthy of and without inspired men, and it gradually adopted the theories and philosophies of Pagan Rome, which eventually destroyed every vestige of Christianity except the name. The Bible had not been published; it only existed in manuscript form, and in the hands of but few; it was not published to the world as it is in the present form till in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries. And so it was that Pagan philosophy and religion, also heathen mythology were incorporated with a very little, if any, of the doctrine of Christ, and that corrupted and destroyed the church of God. The church still retained the name, but in essence and in substance, in doctrine, organization, ordinance and Spirit, the church that existed after this departure from the doctrine of Christ, was not his. The form of religion calling itself Christian remained, but there was nothing like primitive Christianity in it. This may be thought a hard thing to say, but such are the facts.

In the thirteenth chapter of the book of Revelations you will find that John, his soul lit up by the Spirit of the Almighty, saw a strange beast having seven heads, and ten horns. This beast, as history has shown, represents Pagan Rome; its seven heads, the seven forms of political government under which it existed before its final division into ten kingdoms denoted by the ten horns upon which were ten crowns. John saw that after this tenhorned beast had accomplished its work, there arose "out of the earth" a two-horned beast that was essentially the same as the first beast, for it exercised "all the power of the first beast"-Pagan Romeand it had "two horns like a lamb," but it spake "like the dragon" for all that. It had and held similar dominion as the first, and it blended church and state—ecclesiastical and political power-and hence it had "two horns like a lamb," though it retained the essential characteristics of the first beast. The ten-horned beast was to "make war" with the Saints, and to "overcome them," for they were to be "given into his hands," and he was to accomplish the complete overthrow of the church. All this is said in plain terms.

It should be remembered that this same ten-horned beast appeared in this another form and did those strange things that was to be brought about in the destruction of of the church, it absorbed or blotted out the church with its peculiar doctrines and distinctive features.

Such are the historical facts that you will find in profane as well as biblical history. This apostacy from the primitive faith made it necessary for the gospel of Jesus Christ, as also the church organization, to be restored in order to prepare a church and people for Christ's second coming; it made it necessary that God should bring forth this "marvelous work and a wonder," that they who "murmured should learn doctrine."

There have been in the religious world since the departure, or apostacy from the ancient faith, many erroneous doctrines taught, which has caused much murmuring by the honest enquirer after truth, on account of their apparent injustice. The doctrine before mentioned concerning the endless torment of little children, because they were not sprinkled, has caused the hearts of mothers and fathers to mourn and murmur, feeling that such a doctrine could not be true if God was what the Scriptures represented him to be, a loving Father. But since the advent of the gospel by the angel, sent forth by God to be preached to all the world by the Latter Day Saints, it is made known that infants are redeemed from the fall through the atonement of Christ, and are consequently without sin, and that dying in that condition they are saved and blessed, and go to dwell with the spirits of the just in the Paradise of God.

Again, it has been taught that the poor heathen has to go down to hell to be tortured eternally — he being so unfortunate as to be born in a foreign land, where the name of Jesus Christ was never heard! The speaker asked, Is that the work of your Father and my Father! God is said to be "the Father of spirits;" and in another place we are called "the offspring of God." Is that the way that God will deal with his offspring? Is that Bible doctrine?

The Bible teaches quite to the contrary. Jesus said, "If I had not come and spoken unto you, ye had not had sin." Well, then, the poor heathen will not be condemned, for not having heard of Christ or his gospel he could not be condemned by it; he never had sinned against that light. The Bible teaches that men will be judged "according to their deeds," and be condemned only for rejecting the light they had received not for rejecting what they did not receive.

The speaker then referred to the doctrine of death-bed repentance as one that was pernicious in its tendencies, causing many to procrastinate serving the Lord, and to engage in evil practices, thinking that if they could only get time to call upon the Lord before death, all would be well with them. He spoke of hearing an old gentleman with whom he was acquainted say, "If I can only have time to repent of my sins and call upon the Lord before I die, O, I shall be all safe." To whom the speaker made answer: "But you must call on Him in truth and in rightousnes; for such only will he hear and bless."

LETTER FROM ELDER M. H. BOND.

EDITORS HERALD: - My last communication to you was, as I remember, written April 25th, the date of my arrival in Lamoni. It would have been my wish to have remained much longer with the Saints, but my engagements prevented anything but a hasty visit; and indeed I should have gone direct to Burlington had it not been for the voice of the Spirit to Am glad I went, sorry for many reasons I could not stay. Lamoni has great advantages, and would be a desirable place of residence for Latter Day Saints who have a family of children to rear.

It is one of the most beautiful promises concerning the millennial era-that "their children shall grow up without sin unto salvation." "They shall not labor in vain, nor bring forth for trouble; for they are the seed of the blessed of the Lord and their offspring with them." Both children and parents in this latter day work are to be pitied who are trying to rear them amidst the contaminating influences of Babylon. Fashion, pride, false ideas concerning life and a thousand influences press upon the young in our church to claim and draw away their attention from a gospel whose attractiveness is best manifested by trial and experiences and intellectual development that come only to a life matured by pain and suffering.

In the scattered branches in all the world, few are large and possessed of means, numbers and talent enough to compete with the world of physical and sensual attractions that constantly tend to draw the mind of the young away from the sober considerations that attach to a religious life.

Some form of objective lesson, simple and entertaining, must be placed before the mind of the young in order to enlist a more hearty sympathy on their part in our church work. The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints has forgotten or neglected to remember that in the greatest of all schools,—where the knowledge of the Infinite God is to be taught and learned, the primary or simple lesson must prepare the way for the deeper analogies; higher and keener, moral, intellectual and spiritual accomplishments and delights. Lamoni, I trust, under the providence of God, will enable us to see how by practical experiment these things may be accomplished for the youth of our church.

The revelations of God have been neglected, misunderstood and an unacceptable, unprofitable, and, -in many cases I believe-, an unauthorized ministry, claiming to represent the everlasting government of God, has been the result.

The provisions made in the revelations of God to Joseph Smith for preparation by search, experience, study; the appointment of schools, etc., by which men when called were fit to be chosen to represent unitedly, intelligently, the common faith of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ and his gospel of the kingdom of God, are marvelous, and only equaled by our stupidity, I think sometimes, in perceiving these things. May God bless the children of his people and multiply his agencies for their salvation, is my prayer! May the Lord bless also our Sr. Walker and supplement all her powers by his grace to aid in this most righteous and commendable work!

The idea of a college of our own is an inspiring one to me, and I hope it may succeed and soon be among the possessions of the Reorganized Church. No life is so full of boundless possibilities as that which is devoted to mental and spiritual activities, supplemented by a healthful, physical base and force to feed these fires that propel all the machinery of the soul. I was greatly pleased to meet the young people of Lamoni in their society for mutual improvement by study of the things that I know pertain to their everlasting interests.

Our good will extends to the Herald editors, and we look and pray always for their success, and for the success of the only preacher that ever reaches hundreds of the Herald readers.

Friday morning, the 26th, found me in Chicago. A pleasant visit and entertainment at Bro. Culver's at night, together with some unpleasant reflections concerning the success of the common enemy of the church in that place,—which I have always thought can only be avoided by availing ourselves of the provisions made in the law of God for defense against his i nsidious encroachments—, were among the experiences of our thirty-six hour stay in that city. Securing, by favor and direction which the Spirit gives, as I believe,a clergyman's annual over the Michigan Central railroad, I left for Galien, Michigan, at four p. m., and while purchasing my ticket who should step up but Bro. Richard Evans and a brother whose name is forgotten. This made things pleasant of course, as we journeyed together toward Galien, where we were met by the Bishop and a lot of Saints. Rested and refreshed at the home of Bro. and Sr. Blakeslee, Sunday morning we listened to Canada's "boy preacher," who does not preach like a boy, however. Afternoon and evening we were assigned the occupancy of the preacher's place. Large and interested audiences greeted and encouraged the ambassadors of Christ, day and evening.

Monday morning we took the parting hand, leaving Brn. Evans and Willard J. Smith to prosecute the work,-successfully, as later reports confirm. A day in Grand Rapids pleasantly spent with relatives, and the next day went to Cadillac to look after temporal interests.

Time and its changing hand, everywhere manifest, nowhere more plainly than in this town-my former home. Glad to see the old friends and neighbors, and still more glad to know that the gospel standard had been lifted again in that place by our worthy brother, Willard J. Smith. Five Saints, all of good report, the visible results of his labor. I trust that he will look after the interests of the work in that place. Good people there, (as everywhere), but all absorbed in the greed of gain and pleasure of the world.

May 3d found us, my daughter and self, after a quiet night from Detroit upon Lake Erie, in Cleveland; from there to Kirtland, where Sunday we spoke in forenoon to the old friends, neighbors and relatives congregated, bearing our testimony and witness of the gospel truth with liber-Bro. Wm. Kelley gave us the sermon in the evening to a good congregation; church interests gaining there I think. I hope the spiritual side of the question will always maintain the uppermost in that place, as well as in all other places where Latter Day Saints congregate.

May 7th left Kirtland for the east, arriving in New York city the following morning. Preached in evening to Saints and strangers assembled in their hall in Brook-Signs of encouragement for the growth and spread of the work are here.

Thursday evening, taking the Sound steamer, arrived in Providence Friday morning, only to move out the next day to the conference in Boston, where we were glad to greet brethren Parsons and Robinson from Nova Scotia and Bro. Greene from Maine. A feast of good things was enjoyed by the Saints at all their sessions, and the favor and wisdom and direction of God, confirmed by many infallible tokens, left us all in a grateful and happy mood.

Since conference sickness in my family has tried us somewhat, as shortly after conference my daughter Lottie was taken with diphtheritic sore throat and in a poor condition to resist this troublesome and dangerous malady; but when at the worst, the prayer of faith prevailed and change for the better came soon after administration. "The trial of our faith" ought to be "more precious than the gold that perisheth." It costs more, is a harder task for the natural man to possess and retain than the exercise of bodily, fleshly powers by which material dross or substance is acquired. So far as I am concerned, however, I have endeavored to possess a faith in these matters that does not waver in the face of disaster or death, knowing that neither are the worst things that can happen to me in a temporal view. And while "the hidden things belongeth unto God," and the world and some Latter Day Saints seem to be raking over the whole animal, vegetable and mineral kingdom to discover some "scientific," man-devised, or easier way hidden up in the archives of nature for a remedy for the ills that flesh is heir to, and seem to be willing to use their body as an experimental laboratory; "the things which are revealed belong unto us and our children forever," and we shall try, so far as our influence goes, to govern and be governed by the counsel, and live by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God, and exercise that faith, without which it is impossible to please Him.

Theory and fact should go together; faith and results confirm or deny. It is just as true as it is that the sun ever shone that those Saints who trust God in these are among the foremost in spiritual matters and life, praverfulness and godly walk. Eloquent deliniation of the faith of Moses and the ancients, power to entertain and delight by pictures graphic with description concerning the final rest prepared for God's elect may beguile the inconsistency of the orthodox world in regard to the promises of God and of his Christ, may unite our criticism or furnish food for comment or satire even from the preacher's desk, but the great and awful and sorrowful fact remains that the lessons of history are largely lost upon us as a people, and we stand not far from the place where stood Moses and rebellions, faithless Israel. The word of the Lord spoken to us to-day is not largely mixed with faith, and for the same reason and no other is the promised inheritance withheld—our children are mixing and marrying with aliens and strangers to God or his ways; are corrupted by their fashions, and religious and other "entertainments" entice them from the preaching of the gospel that saves. Our means for dress for our children that they may keep up in the race for "appearances," instead of the endowment of Zion and her municipals and for her glory by consecration and tithing.

There is more money spent for medicines and doctors—for pills and "bitters" and "herbs" and occasionally the "services" of a christian scientist, or something else equally foolish—than for all the work of the spread of the gospel or care of the poor. "These signs shall follow the believer." Where is he? Is he outside the camp altogether? "Oh, for a faith that will not shrink!" How pleasing the melody! With eyes closed we could almost go to sleep to the measure and tunefulness that we have allowed to cloud and cover its meaning!

Your child, your companion in whom your love and your life is wrapped up seems slowly slipping away. Already are they so near the point of weakness and apparent dissolution that death's door may be reached in an hour's time. Fright and terror and anguish struggle with and torture that weak and neglected faith—yes, neglected. You thought you did not need it—before you were well; your companion and child in health, you did not soon see the necessity of any farther acquaintance with God than to be satisfied that the Book of Mormon was true, and Joseph

Smith a prophet of God, and your earth's experiences, perhaps, with the consciousness of the weakness of all other religions, gave you carelessness and ease. Perhaps it did not seem necessary to contribute to the church support or to fill your seat in the place of worship among your brethren; you had so many ways for your money and for your time. It was too hot or too cold; too wet or too dry; conferences you could afford to attend when they came around especially, but it was out of reason to be governed save by your own feelings in the matter. The hour of necessity—the need of faith is upon you. Faith, faith, not credulity. Where is its accumulated store? Where the example that manifests the power of godliness as revealed in the letter of the gospel which we preach?

But what shall we do when sick? I would say that we should endeavor to practice what we preach and to live by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God. If not possessed of faith to endure trial and be healed, do the next best thing, as advised; and if the use of that which wisdom (not the wisdom of this world) directs does not relieve or remove, bear the burdens of the body with cheerfulness, and trust in the forces of nature to recuperate and restore.

But was not Thomas B. Marsh appointed to be a physician? "Yes, to the church; but not to the world." Why? "For they will not receive you." Why? Because to prescribe, or counsel, or treat as counselled in the revelations of God to His Saints, would be as popular and profitable—and no more so—as the preaching of the spiritual law.

Such physicians, trained and skilled in knowledge of the wonderful science of surgery and all that belongs to good nursing, cleanliness, pure food, pure air and rest, will find a place and occupation in Zion in the future.

Do we believe in the resurrection of the body and expect a resurrection among the just? If so, is our mortal body to be quickened by his Spirit that dwelleth in us? Yet has not this Spirit control over a single affected or diseased organ, or part of this structure? Like our religious neighbors, how much we expect bye and bye; how little we expect or demonstrate now of that gospel which is the power of God, through faith, "unto salvation;" salvation of both spirit and body; full, complete and demonstrable, or it is worth nothing to me! How can I trust a Savior whose first promises mock me for the tremendous tests of his power in my behalf when the heavens are on fire, the elements filled with fervent heat, and the world's disaster upon it and its faithless inhabitants? Who shall abide?

"For the Son of God, Jesus Christ, who was preached among you by us, even by me and Silvanus and Timotheus was not yea and nay, but in him was yea. For all the promises of God in him are yea, and in Him Amen, unto the glory of God by us."—2 Cor. 1: 19, 20.

"These signs shall follow them that believe." They "that have faith to be healed shall be sealed." Are we in Christ? Are his promises to us yea or nay?

Oh, this trial of faith in Abraham's children! I never got acquainted with this old hero only in gospel life, nor his family after him. I do really long for courage enough to entitle me to a seat in the kingdom with them. If I in my life display cowardice, I don't want to sit down in their company—I wouldn't be at home. They would know me as an interloper and out of place; not fit for the kingdom of God and its association, but some other place, the place my faith and works here might naturally, reasonably, and according to the just provisions of God assign me.

I hope I shall not be deemed uncharitable in my statements. "Charity preventeth a multitude of sins;" it "rejoiceth in the truth." "Thy word is truth;" it "shall judge us in the last day." May we have courage to abide by its judgment to day! I can testify that it pays to trust God in this life. Healing and miracles have been wrought; great has been the blessings of God upon our household, time would fail to tell of the wonders God hath wrought. Should matters fare far worse, we hope to abide the test.

A God-fearing, sensible and courageous companion makes it much easier to withstand the outside pressure in hours when serious sickness and trial are upon a man or his household. The mark upon the door post also we trust will be plain enough upon our home when the destroying angel shall pass by. He is coming to the Saints of the Massachusetts district. We shall be tried. May the Lord bestir us from slothfulness, is my prayer!

Brother Parsons is with us, and is a good counsellor and we hope he will not be taken away and we be left alone. Shall try to get around to visit all as soon as possible. New places also wait our coming. We shall endeavor to be directed by the highest authority—the Spirit of God—and discharge our duty alone in his fear in the adjustment of matters. The general outlook is one of improvement in the district. Boston is looking up, late additions, worthy and helpful people, and the Spirit of God cheers and encourages the Saints in this place, and a better feeling all around encourages us to press onward in the great In faith and hope, work. Myron H. Bond.

"THE DEAD IN CHRIST SHALL RISE FIRST."

ALL young children have no sins to answer for, and of such is the kingdom of God. Hence they will be of those in Christ who shall return from a paradise of bliss to paradise restored on earth. All who would have this privilege must be "as little children"—have no sins to answer for; their sins gone before them to judgment, because of repentance, restitution, good labors, obedience, etc.

"Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." To such it will be an end of pain, an end of misery of every kind, an end of sin, an end of death; and they shall rise first, enjoy life on earth 1000 years, and then pass on to eternal bliss. J. O. T.

Miscellaneous.

NEW ENGLAND REUNION.

The New England Reunion will be held at Green's Landing, Deer Isle, Maine, commencing Saturday, August 10th, 1889, at two p. m., in the Saints' Chapel. Reduced rates are obtained over the Boston and Bangor Steamship line, from Boston to Green's Landing and return $3 50. Steamer leaves Foster's wharf, Atlantic avenue, daily at five p. m., (Sunday excepted), arriving at Rockland, Maine, the next morning; there connecting with steamer for Green's Landing. These rates are not good on the steamer leav ing Friday, consequently it will be necessary to leave on Thursday, August 8th.

Bro Frank Steffe's, No. 11, Sarsfield street,
Boston, will be headquarters for starting, where some of the committee will be found, empowered to furnish tickets at the reduced rates. Brn. T. Whiting and U. W. Green are appointed on reception and arrangements at Green's Landing. It will facilitate matters very much for all who intend going to send their names to them at as early time as convenient. Those going from Eastern Maine can consult Bro. J. S. Walker, Jonesport, as to time of starting, rates, etc. It is hoped that an effort to go will be made by as many as can possibly go. The fare from Boston is very reasonable, also affording a sail on the ocean of about two hundred miles. Our session last year was a profitable one, favored of God. That this one may be no less so, may all bring the Spirit of peace and love with them.

F. M. Sheehy,

Chairman of Committee.

WOODCOCK.—At his home, Galland's Grove, Iowa, June 26th, 1889, Thomas Woodcock, in the 75th year of his age. He was born near Licking Creek Bridge, Bedford county, Pennsylvania, December 29th, 1814; was baptized at Montrose, Lee county, Iowa, in 1842, by L. Dalrymple, Exportal exprises at the Science County of College of the College of the Science College of the Science of the S Funeral services at the Saints' Church, Galland's Grove, Iowa, by Elders J. A. McIntosh and R. Jenkins. The large attendance of brethren and friends manifested the high esteem in which the deceased was held.

DUELL.—Sr. Amelia, wife of Bro. W. Duell. was born at Birmingham, Warwick, England, April 8th, 1828. She joined the Church of Jusus Christ of Latter Day Saints before the death of Joseph the Seer, while yet a school girl. After her marriage she emigrated with her husband and family to Utah, and was sadly disappointed at beholding the apostasy of that people: and when the elders of the Reorgonized Church came there to preach, she gladly obeyed and was baptized by Bro. E. C. Brand and confirmed by Bro. W. W. Blair, February 7th, 1870, at Henniferville, Summit county, Utah. She died June 25th, 1889, after about two months illness. She was treasurer of the Sisters' Prayer Union at the time of her death, and had attended every meeting until her sickness. Her fervent, earnest prayers will long be remembered by our Union. she leaves a husband and a son, Bro. H. Duell, also a daughter, Sr. T. very handsome floral offerings were present by friends of the family.

Dear sister, thou art called away,
To mingle with the blest;
Thy sufferings now are at an end,
Thy spirit is at rest.
For thou the gospel did remain,
And faithful did obey,
And when the Lord in clouds shall come,
A crown thou wilt obtain.
Then may we meet thee, sister, dear,
And dwell forever more
With thee, and all the faithful ones,
On Zion's happy shore.

Bowen.—Liddie Bowen was born at Vale's Mills, Ohio, August 15th, 1862; was bap-tized at Vale's Mills by Elder G. T. Griffiths, September 24th, 1888, and died at Vale's Mills of consumption June 7th, 1889, at home with her She said some three weeks before she died that she used to be afraid of death and the grave. "But," said she, "since I have come into the church I have no fear. There is but one thing that troubles me, and that is, to leave my mother; but otherwise I am ready to go. would like to see my father; I am anxious to meet him." Her father died less than two years ago, in full faith of the gospel. Her casket was surrounded by three of her brothers and their families, and a dear old mother; who is firm in the faith. The funeral was preached in the Saints' Church by Thomas Matthews, to a crowded house, many failing to get in. She was buried June oth.

RICHARDSON .-- At the home of her son-in-law, Mr. John Hetzler, near Waterloo, Iowa, July 8th, Mr. John Hetzler, near Waterioo, 10wa, July 8th, sister Serepta Richardson, aged 86 years, 9 months and 4 days. She was born at Boylston, New Hampshire, October 4th, 1802; was baptized April 20th, 1832, at Charleston, Vermont, by Lyman Johnson, and confirmed by Orson Pratt and L. Johnson. Moved to Kirtland, Ohio, and in 1838 to Illinois, Bureau county, where she lived until about five years ago, when in company with her husband she removed to Waterloo, to reside with their son-in-law, where the messenger of death found them both, Bro. Richardsenger of death found them both, Bro. Richardson preceding her to "the beyond" something more than a year ago. The remains were taken to LaMoille, Illinois, where funeral services were held in the Baptist Church, conducted by Elder W. Vickery, of Plano, Illinois, assisted by the Reverends Morpby and Henderson, Baptist and Congregational ministers of LaMoille, Bro. Congregational ministers of LaMoille, Bro. Vickery preaching the sermon from Job 19: 23-27—a text selected by the departed some time before her death. She was a devoted wife, a loving mother, and has left four sons and two daughters, one of the latter residing in Utah. She was a kind, noble woman, attested by words and acts of those who were her neighbors, they believing her to have been a true christian. She was laid to rest in the cemetery four miles north of LaMoille, by the side of her husband. For more than fifty-seven years she had stood true to the faith against the frowns and disbelief of those whom she loved. Who can tell the pray-ers that have gone to the throne of grace that they might know as she did of the truth of God and be led to obey as she had obeyed? Said Mr. and Mrs. Scott, "We have known her thirty years, and her life was faultless as a christian all that time." She has gone to rest in a good old age and full of days.

SNELL.-Frances M. Snell died June 16th, 1889, aged 2 years, 10 months and 21 days. Funeral sermon by J. A. McIntosh, June 18th, at 2:30 p. m. She was a daughter of Bro. Henry and Sr. Mary Ann Snell, of the Masonville branch, Canada. The cause of death appeared to have been some spinal or kidney complaint. She had been weakly from an infant, though bright and intelligent. She was blessed by Elder J. B. McIntosh, and at the time of death passed peacefully away evidently without pain. Her loss is certainly felt but not mourned as if there were no hope—"For of such is the kingdom of heaven."

EMMETT.—At Kersey, Michigan, June 19th 1889, of dropsy, Bro. Stephen Emmett, aged 78 years. He was born in St. Catherines, county of Lincoln, Ontario; was baptized at Buxton, coun-John McKenzie and confirmed by him and Bro. R. Davis. He leaves a wife and eleven children. He died happy; death had lost its sting; he rests in peace and in hope of sharing in the resurrection of the just.

BOOKER.—In Monroe county, Alabama, March 5th, 1889, of pneumonia, Elder John Booker, aged 65 years, 6 months and 5 days. He was baptized March 24th, 1866, by Elder W. A. Litz.

ENLARGED CHICAGO.

Saturday, June 29, is a red-letter day in the history of Chicago. The work of that day is absolutely without precedent in the history of the great municipalities of the world, of which Chicago is now, territorially, the largest.

On Friday the city contained 43 square miles. On Saturday by a vote of a large majority of all the electors concerned this area was increased by 131 square miles, making a total of 174. Philadelphia, the next largest city in the union, has The estimated population of the city on Friday was, the basis of calculation being the new city directory, 900,000. On Saturday night Hyde Park, Lake View, Lake, Jefferson, and a part of Cicero having been added there was a gain of 200,000 at the very least, making the present population of Chicago 1,100,000. The federal enumeration, which will be made now federal enumeration, which will be made next year, will doubtless establish officially and beyond question that Chicago is the second city in the United States.

In the legal sense this was a day's growth. Practically, the extension has been going forward for many years, the legally added population being merely the overflow of a crowded city .- Sel.

PRESIDENT SMITH IN OGDEN.

THE letter below indicates that the people in Ogden, Utah, are willing, and anxious, to learn the views of President Joseph Smith and the Reorganized Church on those questions which make Utah Mormonism a proverb, a reproach, a hiss and a byword," wherever known, like rebellious Israel of old:

OGDEN, Utah, July 22d.

Brother Blair:—We have held three meetings in the Pavilion here. Bro. Joseph spoke to a good audience on Saturday night. Yesterday at 2 p. m. I preached the gospel to the people, and last night Bro. Joseph preach to a sea of people. His theme was plural marriage and why he rejected it. When he quoted from the second enapter of Jacob, in Book of Mormon, some young man called out for him to read the balance of the chapter. Joseph did so to the astonishment of the young man, and with a few comments completely upset the Brighamite pet theory built on "If I will raise up seed unto me, I will command my people otherwise." Joseph gave them the correct rendering, and then showed the scourges and judgments which should be visited upon those who practiced such abomination. The reading and comments created quite a little breeze, and applause. The people saw the point. Joseph showed that the Reorganized Church kept the laws of God and the nation and were entitled to the promised blessings.

Before he had fairly resumed his argument on the main question, a man called to him to read the fourth chapter of Isaiah. Joseph said he would read it if the people wished and comment on it. Several called out, "Read it!" It was then read, also a portion of the third chapter to show the kind of women that would "take hold of one man" predicted in 4: 1. And before Joseph got through with the reading and his comments, there was "music in the air." A perfect storm of applause followed.

Joseph was in fair health, although for several days he had been suffering with facial troubles, but he was free from pain during the sermon. I am of the opinion that that man, nor any who were present, will ever again ask an elder of the Reorganized Church-and specially Joseph-to read the fourth chapter of Isaiah again. I learned that the man had served a term in the penitentiary because he was "too much married,"

To-day there is much talk and comment on the discourse, and, so far as I can learn, it is regarded as one of the ablest. The evidences were full and pointed, and the arguments were unanswerable. Joseph is master of the situation; and from appearances very many people here really desire to hear him.

Surely, the Lord will soften the hearts of some of these people so that they may see what will be for their peace. R. J. Anthony.

CAUSES OF JUDGMENTS.

"IT is because of our iniquities and abominations that has brought us into bondage." -Mosiah 5:6.

Pres. G. Q. Cannon, of the Utah church, is credited with having said on Sunday, July 14th, in the Tabernacle in Salt Lake City:

"If the streams of these mountains should dry up and the land be covered with death, so to speak, to all vegetation, there is only one course we can take that will be acceptable in the sight of God, and that is, live in peace with one another, bear patiently the dispensations of Providence, of our God, without murmuring, without quarreling and fault-finding, not seeking to blame somebody for that of which God is the cause."

In the statement quoted above, Elder Cannon recognizes God as "the cause" of the present "famine for water" prevailing in the west, and pressing so sorely in the valleys where the people of God are gathered. He thinks it unwise to seek and blame human agencies for that of which God is the author.

Accepting the thought as expressed by Mr. Cannon, that God is the responsible author for having brought this drought upon the west, and upon Israel as a consequence of their being in the west, is it out of harmony with the thought and the wish to know why-for men to ask-"For what reason has God sent so severe a visitation upon the people gathered in the mountains," called by Mr. Cannon "the people of God." Mr. Cannon, nor any of his co-laborers, will hold that God would send punishment and distress upon his own people in wantonness and cruelty, but will admit that he has, and may possibly again, visit those who are his with punishment for disobedience and disregard of his law and commandments. If, then, Mr. Cannon admits that it is of God, by his own act, that this withholding of the rain and snow has come to pass, is it not competent for some of the sufferers in Israel to put up a cry that shall not only reach the rulers, Mr. Cannon and his fellow servants, but reach God as well? There was a people on this land once, of which the record says:

"For behold, I, the Lord, have seen the sorrow, and heard the mourning of the daughters of my people in the land of Jerusalem; yea, and in all the lands of my people, because of the wickedness and abominations of their husbands. And I will not suffer, saith the Lord of Hosts, that the cries of the fair daughters of this people, which I have led out of the land of Ierusalem. shall come up unto me against the men of my people; for they shall not lead away captive the daughters of my people, because of their tenderness, save I shall visit them with a sore curse, even unto destruction; for they shall not commit whoredoms, like them of old, saith the Lord of Hosts." . . . "Ye have broken the hearts of your tender wives, and lost the confidence of your children, because of your bad examples before them; and the sobbings of their hearts ascend up to God against you." . . . "Wherefore, ye shall remember your children, how that ye have grieved their hearts because of the example that ye have set before them: and also remember that ye may, because of your filthiness, bring your children unto destruction, and their sins be heaped upon your heads at the last day." -Book of Mormon, pps. 118-19.

If it is practicable for history to repeat itself in the secular affairs of this world, is it not possible that there may be a repetition in some of the things appertaining to the history of the people of God? If it is, and God is "the same yesterday, to-day and forever," then there may be a cause for the interference of God with the water supply of Salt Lake, Utah and other valleys where drouth is now prevailing. If Mr. Cannon is assured that God, and not the county nor city authorities, is the one on whom the responsibility for this condition of things belongs, he does well to counsel them not to blame men. What then? It would seem to be wisdom to admit the reason for chastisement, as well as the hand that inflicts it; and if the impending ruin can be averted by repentance, as in the case of Nineveh, then repent; make a clean work of it, and thus avoid the further consequences of persisting in waywardness and disobedience.

It can not be possible to defer much longer the uprising inquiry of an outraged people! The urgent appeal of those in authority to be still and bear the evils which folly, or worse, has brought to the very doors of the people in Utah, will soon tall on unheeding ears. The spirit of restlessness, now taking hold of many, will spread, and those hitherto thought to be trusty and strong will prove to be selfish and careful for themselves first—and for those who trusted them after. Children and children's children will depart from the faith of their fathers, and thousands will discard faith in both man and God, and unbelief and carping infidelity usurp the minds of those who, but for the foolishness and vain glorying of their parents and leaders might be, and would be, kind "saviors of men," "the salt of the earth."

The Reorganized Church has proved, and is proving, that the Church as founded on April 6th, 1830 upon the New Covenant, the principles of the Book of Mormon and the revelations to that Church, can live in peace with their neighbors by upright walk and righteous conversation. It is showing that, what God designed to do in sending the angel's message, is practicable everywhere. The people in the valleys ought to be able to comprehend this; and pausing before it is too late, they should eliminate from their philosophy all that is making their work vain, and, returning to the right ways of the Lord, avert the "scourge" which seems to be impending.

WHAT MAY IT MEAN?

THERE is a wail in Zion. There is a famine for water throughout the west, and the "valleys in the tops of the mountains" are in trouble—dry and dreary trouble over it. President George Q. Cannon now enjoins it upon the dwellers in Utah to not contend for their right to the water for which their farms and gardens are suffering, and on no account to go to law in appeals to the courts for protection from drouth. "Let the valleys dry up, but retain your unity," seems to be the injunction of this apostle.

The condition of the people on the irrigating lands of the interior is at present writing very serious, and, if there is not an early fall of rain, or snow in the mountainous regions whence the valleys get their portion of heaven-bestowed water treasures, ruin and devastation are absolutely certain in many localities.

In Salt Lake valley, a great scarcity of water is being felt. The snow-fall the last winter was light, and this added to the fact that less than the usual amount of water had fallen the two or three years prior to this, leaves the dwellers in the valleys in much distress. Wells which have stood the draught for years are dry. Lakes whence generous supplies have been drawn hitherto, to water the thirsty and parched lands along the canals and ditches made for the purpose are too low to fill the water ways and sluices. The street side streams, long the boast of this city amid the hills, are dry, and the gray dust, the dread cerement of death and decay of vegetation and fruitful life, lies thick over plant and bush and tree, while many of the last named are turning the sere and yellow leaf of their decline to the hot summer sun. Hundreds of shade trees will die, all over the hitherto well watered plain. Along some streets in Salt Lake City the supplies once plentiful to local dwellers are gone, many not having enough for ordinary needs, and anxious hearts are beating as trembling lips frame the question, How long will this continue?

All this is bad enough; but what seems to give occasion to this appeal from the leaders to keep clear of division and disunity among the people, is, that there appears to be injustice, or bad administration, in those who have the watch and ward of the water supplies. It is alleged that some have plenty and to spare, while others have scant supplies, or none. It is even charged that those who should be the just guardians of the poor and needy, are disregardful of even the just demands such suffering ones have made for what were and are their rights; hence, those thus deprived assume to assert their first law, "self preservation," in appeals to those forces which alone can see them righted; and thus the cause of Mr. Cannon's complaint of want of unity, that unity which he thinks should characterize the children of the kingdom—the church in the valleys.

Some time ago, how long does not now matter, the water of City Creek flowed down from the mountains, clear, cool and sparkling. Such were its qualities that the late Heber C. Kimball advised his brethren to "dip" their dry bread in its pools and be fed! At a later period, the powers that then were, in view of better distribution and husbanding the possible supply of life-preserving waters, arranged for enclosing the resources of City Creek in iron bands, locking them up in bonds to be opened by golden keys in the hands of opulent holders.

To offer a sort of "sop to the Cerberus," of dryness and famine, a canal was dug to convey the waters of Utah lake from their place of deposit, thirty odd miles away, along the water wavs from which those of City Creek were diverted. Whether this supply was ever satisfactory to those from whom their first right to the mountain stream was taken, it is not for us to say; but it is now apparent that when the sure processes of waste and depletion, unsupported by the increasing forces of replenishment, have overdrawn the stores held in nature's reservoirs, these same residents, deprived of the waters of City Creek, find the canal a stagnant water way through which the now shrunken Utah Lake refuses to pour its riches-hence their gardens, orchards and fields are perishing, while some, more opulent, or more far-seeing, having access to the pipe system, enjoy and waste at their pleasure the once sparkling waters of the beautiful City Creek. That some are suffering and some have plenty, and all of the same family and fold, is certain. The sufferers are complaining and asking for redress; and this is the occasion of Pres. G. Q. Cannon's appeal to the people to stand in unity though the valleys do parch.

One circumstance in this occurrence may be taken into the count. The authorities of the city and the county, who have had charge of the care and distribution of the water supplies of the valley and city, are and have been the choice of the members of the church dominant here. Whether or not the officers filling the councils of the city and county have been chosen and their election dictated by the leaders of the church we may not say; but the fact remains that these have been mostly members of the church; therefore, whatever bad management there may have been by which present distress and suffering has resulted, it was the work of their own people, trusted men of their own choosing or sufferance. If the men so chosen by the people have proved incompetent, or recreant to duty, it is the undoubted right of the people to complain. It is true that it will not cause it to rain copiously, nor smite the rocks of the mountain ranges causing them to burst forth in copious and refreshing fountains, for the sufferers to find fault with and abuse those whom they think responsible for their distress; but it may and ought to open the eyes of those suffering and those witnessing such distress to the fact long patent to those looking on from the outside, that men are not always made to be wise men because they have been made, by human hands, officers of the church. To put men into places of trust and power simply because they "hold the priesthood," while they are unblest by the commonest attributes of good sense, prudence and love for human kind, is to invite disaster, and pledge the people so enthralled to the inevitable result that follows folly, or wickedness in high places. One man says, "I thought that if I could

One man says, "I thought that if I could trust my bishop with my spiritual concerns, I certainly could trust him in my temporal affairs; but I find that I have been mistaken. For I find that some have plenty of water, while my orchard and garden are destroyed."

It is easy for him who may be filled with that which stays hunger and rounds out the frame to oily fatness, to say to him who faints for lack of food, "Don't complain; stand steadfast though you perish;" but it would comfort the perishing man if he could know that his fat consoler had tried to avert the disaster by which he was perishing, or was sharing with him the peril he was passing through.

President G. Q. Cannon declared that "the people of God" are passing under a scourge. Will he take it as an interference on our part if we remind him that the Lord said to the church as early as 1832, (September) that treating "lightly" that which they had received has brought the church under condemnation, and that "this condemnation resteth upon the children of Zion, even all; and [that] they shall remain under this condemnation until they repent and remember the NEW COVENANT, even the BOOK OF MORMON and the former commandments which I have given unto them not only to say, but to do according to that which I have written, that they may bring forth fruit meet for their Father's Kingdom, otherwise there remaineth a scourge and a judgment to be poured out upon the children of Zion; for shall the children of the kingdom pol-Verily, I say unto lute my holy land? you, nay."

If the people whom Pres. Cannon called the people of God are indeed being scourged, why does not he, in his character of a shepherd, which should be sacred, take up the Book of Mormon and read what is found in it concerning that which is "abominable" before God, and then read what we have quoted above and tell the people, frankly, that they will have to obey the commandments of God! What a strange spectacle is this, that the body over which Pres. G. Q. Cannon presides and whom he so earnestly exhorts to "keep the commandments of God." which if they do nothing shall overcome them, presents to the world, the intelligent world, the world that thinks and reads and thinks again, the world to which the angel's message, the "NEW COVENANT, the Book of Mormon," was sent! In that angel's message men read the word of the Lord condemning, in plain words, the very course of conduct which Pres. Cannon and the church over which he presides persist in pursuing. And in the "former commandments," the word of the Lord to the church direct, the same intelligent men read the positive instruction to the people as to what shall be their conduct in regard to the domestic relation, all definitely and clearly opposed to that course adopted by Pres. Cannon and his people, and persisted in by them contrary to the laws of the nation and land of which they are citizens.

How long, O dwellers in Zion, how long will you suffer this "scourge" before you in your distress will turn you unto the long neglected precepts of the New Covenant wherein you shall find rest! "How long, O Lord!" may be your cry; and the Lord unto whom you direct your appeal answers you in "speech" that "whispers from the dust," "Until you repent and remember the New Covenant, even the Book of Mormon, and the former commandments which I have given, not only to say, but to do according to what I have written." Any resolute tyro in the ranks, with the Books of the Law of the Lord as they were left to the church by Joseph and Hyrum in his hand can, if he will, tell when the heavy hand that holds the

If the fourth chapter of Isaiah, which these elders of Utah claim is being fulfilled in their time and cause, is correctly applied by them, what will they—what can they say of what is found in verses 12-15 of the 3rd and the 7th of the 5th chapters!

"scourge" will be stayed.

The day when the "scourge" shall cease shall be the day after there shall be a return unto the word of the Lord from which there has been a clear departure. The night of God's displeasure will not give way before the dawn of the day of redemption, until men shall put away the sin by which the Holy Land has been polluted. Who will hearken? "Behold, here is wisdom."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

"We saw an item in the Herald about southwestern Iowa timothy head. We have some here on Bro. Blakeslee's farm measuring twelve inches."

So writes Bro. Steinbaugh, of Galien, Michigan, and we give it up for the present at least.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Is Doctrine and Covenants 17: 7 to be complied with as it reads, or should the minister baptize an individual on the supposition that he is all right?

Ans.—The minister officiating should be able to discover whether the applicant is in proper condition for baptism, and that is largely left to his discretion. We doubt the propriety of demanding an extended statement and confession; and such alone would be no guarantee against deception. Parties should not be baptized, however, without evidence of their having complied with the spirit of the law cited.

Q.—Do you not think or believe that if this paragraph 7 was strictly complied with there would be fewer who would bring disgrace on the church?

A.—It should be strictly complied with. But what might be interpreted by one as a strict compliance, would not be accepted by another. It would be folly to demand that candidates remote from branches be compelled to appear before a branch and make a formal statement before baptism. The elder must stand for and represent the church in this instance. In Doctrine and Covenants 52: 3 a command was given to some of the elders to baptize and confirm at the water's edge, in their travels, as they preached in the various congregations of the world. Because members become careless and dance, etc., it does not follow that they were not sincere in their profession of faith and repentance. It is also true that the exercise of good judgment and discernment are necessary, "but . . . you can not always judge the righteous, or . . . you can not always tell the wicked from the righteous."-D. & C. 9:7.

Q.—Is it right to baptize any one who refuses to abstain from the use of tobacco? And should there be any distinction in age?

A.—Yes; no.

Q.—D. & C. 17: 13 refers to "elder's" conferences. Should the membership, children or older ones, be entitled to vote?

A.—We think this refers to district or mission conferences, or their equivalents, of which we believe the eldership should take the charge, admitting by the rules of representation the lesser priesthood, and permitting the branches to select experienced and wise delegates from among the membership if they so desire.

All members of branches have the right to vote in the branch business meetings.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE Herald editors acknowledge and appreciate the receipt of an invitation to and programme of the commencement exercises of the Western Normal College of Shenandoah, Iowa, which was sent us with the compliments of Sr. Fantie H. Walker, one of Lamoni's bright representative girls, who is a student there and whose name appears in the Normal Class of 1889, with which she will now graduate. The exercises continue from July 21st to 26th inclusive. A similar invitation also reached us from Bro. J. A. Gunsolly, but we are compelled to decline both with thanks.

Elder J. A. Currie, Jr., wrote July 18th from Stockdale, Texas, that he had just entered upon an eight days' discussion. He states that the Lord is blessing him, for which he praises His name. He had just closed the conference at Pipe Creek, and baptized seven.

Bro. J. J. Cornish writes from Sherman City, Isabella county, Michigan, says, "I baptized seven last Sunday and Monday."

C. M. Philips writes from Brockton, Massachusetts, renewing for the Herald, and says: "It seems that I could not get along without the Herald. It is a grand paper to have in a family."

The Van Wert Header, of Van Wert, Iowa, published by W. L. Andrews, is a new enterprise, but from the general make-up of the paper we conclude it has good staving qualities, and we bid it good speed.

Sr. Flora Abbott of Havens, Nebraska, states that any elder who will labor in that place will be cared for at her home. The nearest railroad town to Havens is Randolph. Can any of the ministry labor at that place?

Through the kindness of Bro. William Anderson who conveyed us to the Reger Mineral Spring, near Lineville, Iowa, about twenty-five miles east of Lamoni, we were permitted to assist Bro. J. R. Lambert in holding two grove meetings at that place, on Sunday, July 21st. A fair attendance and a good, peaceful spirit were some of the encouraging features of the meetings. In conversation with some of the residents we learned that quite a number of people in that vicinity believe the latter day work, while it is regarded with favor by many, and the faith has gained considerable prestige among the people. We left Bro. Lambert at the Springs. He will continue to labor in that vicinity, while he is seeking aid to health by drinking the mineral waters. It is evident that our faith is becoming established all through the country surrounding Lamoni. Quietly and effectively its truths are presenting themselves to the people, and the truth is taking a deep hold upon the honest in heart, by whom it will be received.

ST. JOSEPH EXPOSITION.

THE coming "National, Railway, Electric And Industrial Exposition," to be held at St. Joseph, Mo., promises to be a very important affair and one in which many of our readers will be deeply interested, and we take pleasure in presenting them with the subjoined statement that a comprehensive view of its objects, plans and purposes may be had, and also that as many as desire may prepare to make exhibits and compete for premiums. All who are interested in the development of those regions contiguous and tributary to St. Joseph should take pride in promoting the success of this movement in all proper ways-talk it up and work for it. Here is the statement:

"Our Exposition opens September 3d, and closes October 5th, 1889. St. Joseph is the center of a population of 4,000,000 people within a radius of 200 miles, and exhibitors will have an exceptional opportunity of placing their goods before an immense number of observing people. Application for space to exhibit anything usual, new, novel, and proper to be exhibited at expositions, solicited. $500 will be given for the best dozen ears of corn; $250 00 for second best; $125 00 for third best; $62 50 for fourth best; $31.25 for fifth best; $15 00 for sixth best; $5 00 for seventh best. Liberal premiums for all farm products and live stock. Floor space in main building, 80x1040 ft. There will be forty-five acres of pyramids, granaries, colonnades, arcades, grottoes, canopies, pavilions, pagodas, arbors, amphitheatres, etc., etc., trimmed and decorated with and for Cereal exhibits. The grounds, in blue grass, are dotted with elm, oak, ash, and other shade trees. Lakes, fountains, rustic bridges, etc., will be numerous. The amphitheatre will seat 10,000 people. This is to be the greatest exhibit and attraction ever held in the west, and the largest agricultural exhibit in the world. Exhibitors will please take notice that this is the first time in the history of expositions that the farmer has been substantially recognized. For further particulars, address,

THE following is an editorial from a late Boston (Massachusetts) Herald, another proof of the need of primitive Christianity in all its perfection and fullness, and another evidence of the badness and weakness of apostate, corrupted, divided, contending systems claiming to be the Church of Christ.

Let the Saints ever bear in mind, that to them has been committed the restored gospel of Christ, and that its object is to unify all classes of intelligent, devout worshipers on the original foundations in all respects—"One Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you [Saints] all" (Eph. 4: 5, 6); for in the plan God has given, "There is one body [church], and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling." (v. 3).

Strive patiently on, then, ye Saints of God, that this great want of the age may be supplied, that God may be glorified and souls be saved in His one Church.

A PERIL TO CHRISTIANITY.

A discussion of great importance is going on at the present time in China respecting the conflict of the Protestant sects as to what Christianity is. There are forty different Protestant bodies competing independently for the converts in the Chinese empire. The larger and better established of these organizations have all the way from 1,247 to 9,285 communicants. The chief religious bodies are Presbyterian, Congregational, Methodist, Episcopal and Baptist. Each of these carries into the Chinese mission field the porcupine quills with which it is accustomed to wound Christian brethren of other names at home. The efforth of the missionaries in China repeat the bad and injurious features of Christianity as faithfully as they represent its beneficent work; they load down the heathen world with the Christian contradictions of our latest religious civilization, and interfere and cut up one another with the same ferocity in the heathen world that they carry on their religious conflicts here at home. On the other hand, the Roman Catholic mission in China are carefully laid out into eighteen provinces, which are divided into bishoprics, and are so organized that no man's work interferes with that of another, while the different religious orders and national societies, the Franciscans, the Dominicans, the Belgians, the Germans and the Spaniards, are located in separate provinces, where there is no posssibility of their conflict with one another. In the Protestant ranks there is no agreement, no co-operation, no assignment, of districts, but each one takes up work wherever he can find a chance to start it, with the result that confusion reigns everywhere, with constant interference, and with a waste of effort that is both painful in itself and extremely costly to the missionary boards at home. The first native Protestant Church in Japan was organized in 1872, and at the end of 1888 there were over 28,000 church members. The unity in Japan among Protestant workers has been no greater than that to be found in China, though the country is more concentrated in population and has been vastly more under the influence of modern civilization, but even here the complaint has been that the confusion in religious teaching was a hinderance to the advance of Christianity, and at this very moment there is a demand among the Japanese for a native church in which Christianity shall be lifted above its present sectarian manifestations.

The peril to Christianity in both China and Japan, so far as Protestant work is concerned, is very great, from the prevalence of the discordant elements which constitute the religious embarrassment in Europe and America. What must intelligent Chinamen or keen-witted Japanese think of a Christianity which is represented by so many sects? How can the Christian religion make headway, when the variations of Protestantism are as repugnant to the common sense of the heathen as they were embarrassing to Bossuet on his attempt to reconcile them with the Roman Catholic Church? Missionary work in our western towns is so degraded by competitions among Christians for "corner lots" for churches that the intelligent western man is in danger of losing his respect for Christianity entirely, when he sees its principles put to shame by the rivalries of its representatives; but this does not begin to be so bad as the impression which a disciple of Confucius must receive when he sees Protestant Christians going to war "at a woful, shattered, tattered, sorry disadvantage." Dr. Alexander Williamson, a veteran Chinese missionary, puts the case of disagreement very forcibly in a recent appeal, where he says: "We have three branches of the Episcopal church, eight different sects of Presbyterians, six sects of Methodists, two Congregationalists, two Baptists, besides several other minor bodies, all acting independently of each other." When a John Chinaman is asked to become a Christian, he says plainly: "Agree among yourselves, and then we will listen to you." This judgment is met with as much in Japan as in China; but in the latter country, under the new constitution, it is possible that before a great while a native Japanese church may grow out of the existing Christianity and fuse the present Protestant elements into one living and consistent whole. Under such treatment Japan would become essentially a Christian nation; but in the empire of China, which could absorb, perhaps, thirty Japans, and where the Christian population, both Protestant and Roman Catholic, is only an iota of the whole population, no such national organization of religion is possible. The most that can be done for the different denominations of Christians is to consent to drop their sectarian ideas, and constitute for themselves a religious basis that stands for the working agreements of Christianity. This is as far as they can go, and unless they go thus far, it is a serious question whether the missionary investments are directly worth while. Indirectly, the missionaries in China have done more than any others to open that empire to western civilization; but this is incidental to their missionary principle, not the main thing for which they were established. It will remove a great difficulty, if Protestant Christians can be made to see, from the point where they now stand, that in their present divided state they can never Christianize China.

LIKE THE OLD TESTAMENT.

"But why speak of the Book of Mormon as an imposture? There are many reasons. One is this. It is written in a quaint sort of dialect that makes it "sound like the Old Testament." It is evidently imitated from that, Now, Joseph Smith, or Rigdon (whichever it was that wrote it), did not know, or stop to think, that that peculiar phraseology is simply the English of three hundred years ago, when the Bible was translated, and its peculiar idiom is only English as it was then. If the Book of Mormon had been translated from Hebrew, it might have sounded a little like the Old Testament, but not much. If the Hebrew of the Old Testament were translated into the English of to-day it would read like any other book in the English language. But the Book of Mormon does not claim to be translated even from the Hebrew. So that when Smith gave his pretended translation in the phraseology of the "King James version," he simply stamped the fact on it to all intelligent minds that it was a fabrication of his own."

If it be true, as asserted above, that, "If the Hebrew of the Old Testament were translated into the English of to-day it would read like any other book in the English language," why is it not reasonable that Toseph Smith, an unlearned man at that time, should translate from "the reformed Egyptian" the Book of Mormon into that style of English bearing "that peculiar phraseology" which marks the English Bible, seeing that was the only style with which he was acquainted in his Bible readings? If translators are left to their own taste and judgment in respect to language, style, phraseology, etc., why quarrel with Joseph Smith if he chose that of the English Bible? That style was and is the most popular among English speaking peoples in respect to sacred literature. Joseph was perhaps better acquainted with the English Bible than with any other book, for his father's family were religiously trained and carefully disciplined in Bible instruction. And being "unlearned" in the wisdom and knowledge of the schools, the Bible style of English would no doubt be more to his taste, and more in harmony with what little learning he then had in respect to pure, suitable language into which to translate so important a work as the Book of Mormon.

How far Joseph was left to select language—its style, etc.,—it is now difficult to determine; but the fact that he translated the Book of Mormon somewhat in the style of language peculiar to the Bible is just what we might expect for the reasons stated. But there is much in phrase-ology in the Book of Mormon quite unlike the Bible, as may be seen on reading the two critically.

THE pungent, scathing sermon below we take from the Chicago Times for the 22d ultimo. By it our readers will be reminded of the cruel craftiness and oppressive avarice developed in the system of trusts now so common in our land, a system which enriches the rich at the expense of the dependent masses.

TERROR OF TRUSTS.

"Terror of Trusts" is what the Rev. F. J. Brobst talked about last night (July 21st) at the Westminster Church (Chicago).

"The organizers of trusts," said the reverend gentleman, "are sagacious thieves and remorseless highway robbers intrenched behind the certain technicalities where the law can not reach them; relentless, blood-thirsty, devilfish, with their hideous tentacles clasped about helpless humanity, sucking its life blood drop by drop.

"When we visit the central mart of this great metropolis of the west and study the system by which it is managed we are charmed, and when we try to comprehend its wonderful details and its possibilities we are thrilled. The entire globe is ransacked in search of the good things of life and for the benefit of man. Our hearts are thrilled when we consider the vast amount of business energy necessary to do this, but the thrill escapes and our sensibilities are jarred when we see a desire on the part of a few to own the earth and reap the profits accruing therefrom. We are grieved and alarmed when we see this spirit of injustice that has taken possession of trade.

"At first the terror of trusts appeared on the horizon of trade in a small cloud no larger than a man's hand, but it grew and assumed proportions until now we crouch like little chickens in the presence of danger. And the terror has grow from a speck until we are appalled. This awful shadow is rising, growing larger all the time, and it has taken the name of trust.

"Trust! Oh, what beautiful sentiment is embodied in that little word. Trust in the Lord and you will be saved. That is one meaning of the word. The other signifies an attempt on the part of the rich men of the period to get control of the necessities of life and like the highway robber or the foot-pad they say to the poor: "Your money or your life."

"Look at the sugar trust. It already controls $14,000,000, and has put the price up 150 per cent. They are robbers who say, 'Your money or your life,' so far as sugar is concerned. The milling trust has done the same thing with flour, stealing the very staff of life from the mouths of the poor. We are amazed at the growth of the terror. It includes zinc, iron, steel, lead, flour, copper, jewelry, oatmeal, twine, cattle, cotton-bagging, sugar, cotton-seed oil, whisky, petroleum, patent leather, castor oil, coffins, and school books.

"Of all the outrageous, inhuman actions of the terror the school-book trust is the worst. The heartless robbers were not content with a profit that would satisfy a Shylock. No, they bear down upon the children of the poor, squeezing from the puny bodies the last drop of blood left by other remorseless trusts. They were not satisfied with a profit of 200 per cent over and above the original cost, but said to the poor children: 'Your money or no education.'

"Trusts are trampling out the commandment, 'thou shalt not steal.' Some time ago the oatmeal people formed a combine and jumped the price of their product from $3.50 to $5.60 per barrel, a clear steal of $2.10 on a barrel. Justice is supposed to lurk in the business office and the counting room, but the organizers of trusts have kicked justice out and installed the presiding genius of robbery.

"The twine trust secured control of the flax fields and mills so that it could get its hands into the pockets of 60,000,000 and steal their money. That is all right in the eyes of the law, but a man who takes a jimmy and cracks a safe is sent to prison.

"Another act of the ghouls was in the formation of a trust controlling the market of undertakers' supplies. We go to the grave with our beloved dead and return home harressed by the feeling that our dead has been robbed. In this and the school-book trusts the rapacity of pirates on the high seas does not compare with the awful criminality of the trusts.

But the effect of the trust sometimes strikes the other way, as in the case of the official in France who was deeply interested in the copper trust. When the combine was broken he went out and killed himself. There is over $1,000,000,000 locked up in trusts in this country. What will be the effect on coming generations when they realize that the moneyed men of the country are robbers? Is it any wonder that we have socialists and anarchists? The terror is a menace to the destinies of 60,000,000 people and their descendants. It is God's ordained law of trade that there shall be competition. The Bible says that 'if thou sell to or buy ought from thy neighbor thou shalt not oppress him.'

"The trust's evil effects are felt even in the politics of the country. Lobbyists are on the increase, millionaires are augmented, and all for the purpose of furthering the interests of criminal combinations. There is a dark future coming for our country which needs no prophet to predict it."

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

WE clip the following from The Faith of God, a paper published in Pittsburgh, Pa., and we heartily endorse the last sentence, for just as true as the Bible is of divine authority, the only gospel healing is that set forth in its numerous plain statements. We are glad to see people professing to be Christian appeal to "the law and the testimony," for it promises good:

"Christian Science is the product of man, or rather of the devil through the agency of man. In it he deceives as an "angel of light." It is an imitation, indeed the best counterfeit ever yet produced, of Divine Healing, and as Satan is the author of sickness as he is of sin, may be he can remove it at will for his own purposes, "to deceive if it were possible the very elect;" but thanks be to God, those who are washed in the blood of the Lamb can not be deceived by it, for they are cleansed from all sins, Satan hath no part in them, and those that have the Holy Ghost dwelling in them are led by Him into all truth and are not given over to believe a lie. No, they can and do detect the imposture and the cunning of the evil one.

"These Metaphysicians or Christian Scientists, so called, are not washed in the blood of Jesus Christ, they spiritualize the physical blood of Christ, and indeed, are nothing but spiritualists in a new garb, suited to these "latter days" when "the devil has great wrath knowing that his time is short." He is to do many wonderful things, even to bring fire from heaven, but he will soon be chained up, and then there will be no sickness, no sighing, no tears!

"See the last chapter of James and the last chapter of Mark, for the true Gospel of Healing &c., and woe to them that preach and follow any other Gospel!"

In the clipping found below is another clear proof that "the work of the Father" is going forth rapidly into all the dark corners of the earth as predicted in Book of Mormon, I Nephi 3:51; 2 Nephi 2:1, 2.3; and 12:13, "preparing the way for the fulfilling his covenants, which he hath made to his people, who are of the house of Israel," and also in order that the gospel, "the new covenant," may be "preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations" before "the end shall come." Matt. 24:14; Rev. 14:6-8; Rom. II: 25-28; Isa. 2: I-4: II: IO-16; Jer. 16:14-IO, etc., etc.

This is pre-eminently an age of discovery, invention, and restoration. God is going forth in the midst of the nations in order "that he may do his work, his strange work; and bring to pass his act, his strange act," and usher in that blessed age when the nations "shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and their spears into pruning hooks," that "nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more. movements like those of Livingstone and Stanley in Africa, seconded by men of large wealth, in carrying civilization and the Holy Scriptures to those in barbarism and spiritual darkness are blessed harbingers of the coming Lord. All these are as "the light coming out of the east," heralding "the Sun of Righteousness" at hand.

TO OPEN UP THE CONGO.

About £850,000 has been subscribed to build a railroad between the lower falls of the Congo river and Stanley pool, says the New York Herald. How much more money will be needed for the purpose is not known on this side of the Atlantic, but this and other information relating to plans for opening up the Congo country in a practical way will soon be in the possession of Mr. Collis P. Huntington, president of the Southern Pacific.

Though Mr. Huntington has not received as reported a cablegram relating to African railway matters from the king of the Belgians he has been recently the recipient of a message from across the water from a kindred source. Mr. McKinnon, the great Scotch ship owner—said to be the largest individual ship-owner in the world and an immensely wealthy man—is a mutual friend of the king of the Belgians and Mr. Huntington. Both gentlemen have spent some days on Mr.

McKinnon's beautiful estate on the west coast of Scotland.

The interest taken by the king of the Belgians in African exploration and in the abolition of the African slave trade is known throughout the world. He found an ally in Mr. McKinnon and another in Mr. Huntington, and the latter has had considerable correspondence with the private secretary of Belgium's king about the feasibility of building a railroad between the falls and Stanley pool, and touching methods for killing the slave trade.

The cablegram purporting to have been sent to Mr. Huntington by the king of the Belgians was from Mr. McKinnon. In it he informed the American railroad magnate that the Belgian government had agreed to put £400 000 into the scheme, that a syndicate of Belgians had subscribed £400,000 more, and that he (McKinnon) had put his name down for £20,000, and that other amounts had been subscribed. Mr. McKinnon wound up his cablegram by inquiring how much money Mr. Huntington stood ready to furnish, and by asking if he could not induce other Americans to take stock in the scheme.

Mr. Huntington said last evening that he was not in a position to give definite information about the case. Surveys of the route had been made, and it seemed to be settled that there were about 3.000 miles of fairly navigable water above Stanley pool. The length of the railroad between the pool and the falls was to be 262 miles. Maps of the country and profiles of the contemplated work were probably on their way from Europe. Until he saw these and obtained a fair idea of the quanity and classification of the material to be removed he could tell nothing of the probable cost of the road.

The king of the Belgians was doing a great deal of good in Africa, and would do more. He was probably actuated more by sentiment than motives of gain. His object was to see the Congo country made open to travel, for only by such means could the slave trade be obliterated.

Did Mr. Huntington think there was money in the scheme? It was hard to say. His knowledge of the country and its products was gleaned from books. He understood there were not many portages between the head-waters of the Congo and Victoria Nyanza. There was talk of an English syndicate building a road from the Zanzibar coast to Victoria Nyanza, a distance of something over four hundred miles. If both schemes were successsful an immense impetus would, of course, be given to commerce in a region that was now practically given up to the Arab trader. The latter, when he collected all the ivory he was able to buy, secured negroes to carry it, and upon arriving at the east coast sold loads and carriers. He had known Providence and Salem ship owners who grew very rich out of trade with the east coast of Africa. Mr. McKinnon believed there was money in the scheme.

Mr. Huntington was willing to contribute something to kill the slave trade. He had fought slavery from boyhood. He was interested in the scheme from sentimental motives rather than financial reasons, and would only subscribe an amount that he could afford to lose. He did not know how other Amerians would look at the scheme.

Mr. Huntington will subscribe £10,000.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"Self-reverence, self-knowledge, self-control, These three alone lead life to sovereign power."

Or the three qualities thus happily linked together by the poet, our thought singles out the first, and following the chain link by link, we presently stand face to face with self, as seen and lived again in the lives of the children we have begotten and brought into the world.

Self-reverence! Purity of thought and life which leads to this, can but lead to God. Oh, what a terrible wrong is inflicted upon that child—that son or daughter whose parents have suffered through neglect or mistaken kindness to pass the boundary line beyond which their own self-respect and the respect of good people can not follow them.

Fathers and mothers in Zion; these words are not aimlessly written, neither have we to draw upon our fancy for the most terrible picture of their meaning, and when we ask you the question, "Where are your boys and girls when the shades of evening come, that time when they should be at home, sheltered by the watchcare of those who love them?" we mean it for you-you who are parents in Lamoni as well as in every spot where lives a Latter Day Saint who has dared to assume the solemn responsibility of parenthood. Can we be Saints and neglect so great a duty as that which a parent owes to a child? Can we be Saints and yet suffer them while yet under our control to begin the formation of habits which if followed to the ending thereof, will as surely lead to wretchedness, misery and disgrace to them, as that in all this we shall have our own part to bear; and this part will be all the more bitter because we are the ones who should have restrained them, and did not do it? Are we sleeping upon that bed of poppies, "My children can not do this thing?" If so be we are, then it is time we awake, shake off the sleep of indifference and death and learn from the word of God-that word which was written for our admonition and instruction—that man may, in a very brief space of time too, do that about which to day he indignantly exclaims, "Is thy servant a dog that he should do this thing?"

There is no downward path which has not a point where the incline begins; and shall he or she who sees a child place foot upon that downward path, and leaves undone any thing within the power of human will strength or ingenuity to do, in order to restrain that child, claim justification for themselves or immunity for the child from the consequences of those first downward steps?

"I will judge the house of Eli forever because when his sons made themselves vile and he knew it, he restrained them not."

Forever! Terrible judgment to fall upon a parent because of the sins of his children! And yet the judgment of God is just. "When he knew it, he restrained them not." Poor wayward yet unfortunate boys! How very different might have been your fate had your father exercised the God given right of restraining you.

Vile! oh, what a depth of meaning those four letters thus combined, convey. Vile! And yet this is the end of the downward path the beginning of which you called harmless. Did you look, a short time since, with horror upon acts of your neighbor's children and yet regard with complacency the late coming home at night, the non-attendance at Sabbath School, the bad deportment at day school, the possible smoking of the cigarette or cigar, by your own child? Poor child, we say, if unfortunately you have done this! Poor boy, that he should have no one who loves him well enough to try and keep him from laying up such bitter memories—yes, loves him well enough, if need be, to restrain him from becoming vile! Tobacco, late hours, and strong drink are the way marks upon the road to that horrible pit, where self-reverence is forever lost and from which only the power of God can res-

There is not, we feel morally certain, a single father or mother who will read these lines, whose heart holds not the desire that their children should walk in paths leading to the noblest aims and ends. God grant then that your watch-care fail not in the hour when it is most needed; that you teach them that fear of God which is the beginning of wisdom, and if need be that you restrain them from evil that they lose not self-reverence until they have attained to self-knowledge and self-control, for oh, it is a sad sight to see the wreck of a fair young life, and it will be worse than the sting of a thousand scorpions to the soul of that father or mother who shall be compelled to feel that through their neglect of duty the son or daughter of their love has fallen -has made themselves vile.

Fathers, mothers, do you know where your children are? whose company they are in? Don't, we beseech of you, flatter yourself that your child can not step aside from the path of virtue and honor. It is a good thing to believe in virtue—to have confidence in your own child and in the children of others; but it is a better thing that you see to it that your trust is not misplaced, your confidence abused; for the God of heaven will demand of you a reckoning and his judgment will be just.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYERS.

Bro. J. W. Chatburn requests your united faith and prayers in behalf of Bro. Wallace Wood whose situation is very distressing and sufferings intense.

Sr. Edith Fifer, the aunt of the little sufferer, requests your prayers for the child of Sr. Alice Lloyd, She writes, "He is suffering more than pen or tongue can tell, from the effects of drinking some concentrated lye. His sufferings are agonyzing to his mother and she is powerless to help him. But there is One in whom we trust, who is able to do all things for us. He has been administered to with only temporary relief." Sr. Lloyd lives at Macedonia, Iowa.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.

Dear Sisters of the Prayer Union, and in general:-I have felt blest in trying to memorize the "memory texts," for while trying to fix the texts in memory one is able to more fully comprehend the meaning of the different sentences. Especially have I felt blest in memorizing Sec. 3 of D. and C., and which I wish for the good of the Saints, and the work, all Saints would commit to memory every section of the grand laws and truths contained in the wonderful book of Doctrine and Covenants, for I understand that by the law contained in this book will this generation be judged. Then how important it seems that all should be familiar with every section of the book. No doubt there are a few who are, but it seems to me all should be familiar with the law and commandments that are to govern their daily life and conversation, that they may thoughtfully and intelligently make the record that will be read at the last day. This revelation from D. and C., section 3, speaks of the marvelous work that has come forth among the children of men: 'Therefore, O ye that embark in the service of God, see that ye serve him with all your heart. might, mind and strength, that ye may stand blameless before God at the last day; therefore if ye have a desire to serve God, ye are called to the work. For behold, the field is white already to harvest; and lo, he that thrusteth in his sickle with his might, the same layeth up in store that he perish not but bringeth salvation to his soul." Faith, hope, charity and love, with an eye single to the glory of God qualifies him for the work. [Note. Just here let us notice that the parties addressed, "O, ye that embark in the service of God," must necessarily include both male and female; and having embarked, are not all without distinction called upon to thrust in the sickle with his (or her) might?—Ed.]

The sentence, "with an eye single to the glory of God," shows a need of self interest, that is to make the Lord's work of saving souls the most important part of the business of the daily life of those who embark in his service. To feel that His work is our own, and strive with all our powers to do the work that every opportunity may offer, as if we were doing it for ourself. And are we not, if partakers of his Spirit, a part of himself? Then what manner of Saints, I ask myself, ought we to be? Surely we ought to abound in these fruits of his Spirit, of faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, brotherly kindness, godliness, charity, humility, diligence. What a world of meaning is contained in these eleven words! So I discovered while trying to analyze them, and what a help I found our nice Compendium. I began on page 141, beginning at the subject "Christian duties and graces," and went to the subject of "Lord's Supper," on page 158, and I would have been pleased if all the dear Saints could have enjoyed the feast I had in reading the Scripture quotations under these subjects. I would like to call special attention to the readings in the Compendium under the subject of that blessed word "charity," "Govering the tongue," "Holiness," "Peace and love," "Purity of heart," "Examples and conduct," "Perfection to be aimed at," "Steadfastness," "Self-denial," (which I think is the great secret of success) "Subjection of the body," "Zeal," etc. I will write one of the quotations under the subject Zeal: Rev. 13: 15, 16: "I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot. I would that thou wert cold or hot, so then because thou art lukewarm, neither cold or hot, I will spew thee out of my mouth." This reveals the fact that God will have no half way work in his service. We must be thorough. The word reads He would rather we should be "cold or hot" (active or inactive in his service) We know it will please Him if we are active. And to be active will require that we, in the words of Sec. 3, D. and C., "Remember" all these fruits of the Spirit every time we open our mouths to speak. Then I think idle words would be few and we have less to account for at the last day; and His Saints would become a thoughtful, careful, wise, prudent people, constantly growing in knowledge, wisdom, charity, zeal, and no such sad cry would go out from General Conference for laborers to work "as circumstances permit," especially when we know the need of more laborers instead of less. To me this cry is even sadder than the terrible flood which occured at Johnstown, Pa., this month. For if all our people were fully obeying the celestial law, and the law of fithing is one of the most important parts of the celestial law, would not our Bishop have the means in the Lord's treasury to keep all and more of those "fishers and hunters" God has sent to work, recovering souls instead of bodies as the men at the distressed districts are so zealously laboring to do?

Sad, sad, is the thought to me, that of all those many thousand souls lost in the flood, most likely but one half, the children under eight years, are saved in the kingdom, and the dear fathers and mothers and kindred separated until they shall obey the law. If we take this home to our own hearts and ask, "Will Heaven be happy for me without my dear parents, brothers, sisters and kindred with allithe dear Saints?" It may aid us to more fully realize the great and awful responsibility we have taken upon us when we "embarked in the service of God," which is to save every precious soul that it is possible to reach and our own as well. Then will we be more willing to sacrifice our carnal desires of fashion, fun and the love of display. For instance of ornamenting our homes and persons with trimmings costing five dollars a yard, and thus utterly disregarding the word as given to Timothy (1 Tim. 2:9; 1 Pet. 3:3,4) and the teachings of the D. and C. and Book of Mormon on the subject; for if we had barrels of gold and did not impart of our substance for the maintenance of those who are dependent upon our obedience to the law of tithing, we would still be beggars in God's sight here and hereafter, according to Mosiah 2. O, can not the people of the kingdom of God, his church militant, believe the King when he asks them to "prove him and see if he will not open the windows of heaven upon them and pour them out a blessing?" And will they not respond by obedience, with their heart, mind and means, to the necessities of hungering, starving souls, waiting—dying—for the bread of life, as graciously and freely as the sympathizing world does for the Johnstown sufferers? Especially when we remember the word given through the "Choice Seer" that these calamities would come until the earth was wasted and few men left? Thus appears the great necessity and privilege of trying, even by sacrifice, to furnish the money that the true sheep may have a chance here to hear the gospel "witness" and thereby hasten the day of deliverance. That I may be one of the "wise virgins" is my prayer in His name.

SR. LOTTIE BROWNE.

Correspondence.

Dear Herald:—In my last letter from Virginia there are a few mistakes which I wish corrected. Either I was at fault in my writing, or the proof-reader in not correcting the type-setter.

I wrote from Romau instead of "Roman." This name is pronounced as if ending with w. This is a new postoffice just created by the government, and our friend, Mr. Michael Hollar, is the postmaster. This gentleman is the owner of a fine farm in the neighborhood of our church at Liberty Hall. Although not a member he is a lover of truth and justice, and advocates charity for all and malice toward none. His companion, however, is a member of the Saints' Church, and is a faithful sister.

Mr. Hollar was a very earnest and liberal helper in the erection of the new church, having donated one hundred dollars and also offered the ground on which to build it.

In the first line of my letter you will read here for "home," as I did not come home, but to that place from Dayton, Virginia. Again, for "Universalist" read Thurmanite, called so from his name, but he is not a Universalist; we must not misrepresent people. You have given his name properly. He is what is known out there as a "Progressive Dunkard." He is called the false prophet, because he once fixed the day for the coming of Christ and the ascension of "the church" to meet Christ in the air. They all assembled with him on the day designated, and on a hill near Dayton, Virginia, waited and solemnly watched the clouds till late in the evening. Disappointed at the non-appearance of the Lord, and deeply affected with the consciousness of the fact that God had once more "made foolish the wisdom of this world," and had "caught the wise in their own craftiness," they slowly and pensively wandered back to their old homes to engage again in the tiresome and monotonous affairs of "earth-life." "How can they preach except they be sent?" Nevertheless, Bro. Thurman still preaches, and, being strong in his knowledge of the Scriptures and wonderfully endowed with light and learning, proposes to prove that he, W. C. Thurman, is in fact the only true expounder of Christ's teaching, and that "Joe" Smith was a fraud, and the Reorganized Church not the Church of Jesus Christ. Now, I say, he ought to have the very best chance possible given him, as good as he had on that hill, to spread himself and save us all from delusion.

The Ritchie county falsifiers are having myself and Bro. E. L. Kelley now in that county teaching polygamy. They failed to run us off with their champion, Adam Archibald, and they have gone back to their more natural refuge, circulating through the most base and unprincipled newspapers in the state all manner of low and vulgar tales, and lies the most glaring and insulting. We have appointed the fifth Saturday and Sunday in September for a two days' meeting, at which time the new church at Romau is to be dedicated, unless the Saints there change the time, in the event of which you will be notified. I desire to labor as the way is opened and attend conference at Vale's Mills, Ohio, and after that return again to Virginia in time for the meeting above mentioned. I hope the time for the conference will not be put off too late in September, as it will clash with the time set for the dedication services at Romau. I feel strong in the latter day faith, and happy in the grand work and hope of the Church, but am constantly reminded within myself that I am far from being perfect. O, for the prayers of God's people and the help of His grace! I feel to extend to the Saints in Augusta County, Virginia, my thanks for kind treatment, as also to friends there.

D. L. SHINN.

OGDEN, Utah, July 17th.

Br. Blair:—After a long time I send you a few lines from the "Salt Land." Just at the present time there is a great lack of water in all this mountain region. Wheat and oats will be about half a crop; corn and potatoes will be a failure in many places. There are complainings and murmurings on every hand. The government has prosecuted polygamists for the last five years, until many thousands of dollars have been wrenched from them to pay costs of court and fines, to say nothing of loss from imprisonment. Then again, the Liberals are rapidly gaining political power in all parts. Ogden is entirely in the hands of the Liberals; and from the present outlook, Salt Lake City will soon fall into their hands.

But perhaps the water troubles cause more bitterness just now than all else. There is a desperate effort being put forth by the leading men to maintain unity, but up to this time there is no disposition on the part of the people to surrender what they believe to be their rights. When the water supply is cut off, their living is jeopardized. It looks now as though the people ought to be brought to their senses. Years ago the Lord warned the people of the scourges and judgments that would be visited upon them if they would not "repent and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon and the former commandments, not only to say but to do, according to that which" was then "written"—in 1833.

It surely looks as though the scourges and judgments were accumulating. God cursed the land in the days of the Nephites, because of their wickedness, and visited the people with famine and pestilence. They were scorned by the Lamanites, just as this people are now being harrassed by the Gentiles, until to-day there is no rest to Israel in the mountains. The power of their church is broken, its glory is departed, and a wail of bitterness is going up from the leaders, as may be seen by reading the utterances of President A. O. Smoot and his counsellors, and last Sunday's discourse by G. Q. Cannon, who confesses that they (the Presidency) were forced into exile four years ago, and that the enemy came and "sowed tares," and that now there is a spirit manifest that is contrary to the spirit of the gospel; that the Saints were going to law one with the other; that he had heard of litigation about Parley's canyon, about Utah Lake and other water companies. It was too bad! What if the streams did dry up! Had they not been taught that famines would come! He said the Saints were passing through a fiery trial, but they had to be a tried people of course! He tried to frighten them by declaring in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ that the spirit manifest was not of the Lord.

From appearances now, it will take more than that to whip the people back into line as they used to do. When a people begin to see and realize they have been hoodwinked, and see that their rights to water has been taken from then by city corporations and otherwise, a threat in the name of the Lord has but little significance or terror for them. The weather is extremely warm, and the dust is dreadful. Unless rain shall soon come upon the land, this fall will present a scene anything but lovely.

Joseph has been in the territory near three weeks. In the city, people have turned out fairly well to hear him, and the interest to hear him is deepening. Last week we held one meeting in Lehi, in the tabernacle. The turnout was large and attention good.

At Pleasant Grove Joseph spoke twice in Clark's Opera Hall, to splendid congregations. There, as in other places, the attention was good. Yesterday I procured from the city council the use of the Pavilion here (Ogden) for next Saturday evening and Sunday. There seems to be a demand all along the line for Joseph to be heard. Several have written us to say Joseph can have the meeting house to speak in. There is no excitement, but upon the part of very many a quiet disposition to hear the son of the prophet prevails. May the Lord give him strength to meet the demands.

We will go from here to Willard, where Bro. Thorn has secured the meeting-house for Joseph to speak in; and from there we will go to Malad and spend some time in Idaho. If this is the time for the Lord to lead the honest out, they will hear the messenger whom he hath sent to "plead the cause of injured innocence."

Joseph's preaching has been very pointed and clear. Last Sunday night, in the city, his discourse was grand, and was delivered in power. The house was well filled, and the attention was all that could be expected. The interest was intense. We are perfectly calm. While the indications are good, we see obstacles still in the way, but pray the Lord to direct us that we may help the erring and the oppressed And if good shall now come to this people we shall feel glad and rejoice.

The following is from a late sermon by G. Q. Cannon, and speaks of the situation of Brighamism:

"I hear of murmuring. This is a time of trial for the Latter Day Saints. We have now for upwards of four years been undergoing persecution—some have called it prosecution; but it has assumed a form of persecution in many instances. One class has been greatly tried; their faith has been greatly tested—women and children especially. They have had to undergo many afflictions, they have had to bear many sorrows. True, a good many of the people have not felt the burden of this persecution, or prosecution—choose which term you please-beyond the natura sympathy they had for their brethren and sisters in affliction.. Doubtless many hearts have been filled with sympathy, and the people have sorrowed with a deep sorrow because of the sufferings of others. The question has frequently been propounded to me, 'What is going to be the result of this?' There is only one portion of the community feeling the burden of this affliction. Are they the only ones whose faith is going to be tested? Are we who have endeavored to keep what we believe has been the command of God to go through more than the rest? Questions of this character have been put to me time and again. But we know that the Latter Day Saints are all to be tested. If they attain to the same glory they will have to bear afflictions which will try them to the fullest extent. There will be no distinction in this respect. If we are so fortunate as to enter into the glory which God has prepared for his faithful children, we will all have to be tried as gold that has been purified through the furnace seven times, until all the dross of our natures, until all that is wrong and earthly and that is not of God will be cleansed from us. Our spirits have come from God, they will return to God, but our bodies are of the earth and therefore have to be purified and brought into subjection to law, until when we receive them in the morning of the first resurrection, our spirits re-united with our bodies, we can enter into the presence of our God and dwell there eternally. But if we have not been subject to the law, if we have violated the commands of God, if we have not walked before him so as to be purified and sanctioned through obedience, then we shall not partake of that glorious resurrection that has been promised unto the faithful.

"Therefore I say all the Latter Day Saints will have to be tested. I think of it especially in these days when water is so scarce, when there is scarcely enough to keep our trees alive, much less to save our crops. I think that this is testing both those who have been tested by past acts, by prosecutions that have been instituted. and those who have not. The whole land from north to south is suffering for want of water, and I ask myself, should this continue for another season or two, how would the Latter Day Saints feel? Would they bear it patiently and without murmuring? Or would there go up from all our settlements a murmur that would be heard all over the land-fault-finding, quarreling, a contending for this element so necessary to life, to the preservation of the crops, to the preserving of the improvements which have been made at such immense toil and expense?

"I hear of litigation threatened in connection with Parley's canyon, in connection with the waters of Utah Lake, between the canals and the city; litigation in the north between the canal companies; with the Hooper Canal; with other canals and the Davis County Canal. Men are ready to go to law, almost to fight. I have heard it said that some have even talked of taking their rifles to defend their rights, and I have asked myself, is it possible among Latter Day Saints there can be such a spirit and feeling as this, among those who have come here professing to be the Saints of God, rather inclined to boast of their fidelity to the truth, rather inclined to do as I have done this afternoon-tell about our past sufferings and sacrifices and hold ourselves up as being a little better than other people, because we have done more for our religion than other people? Is it possible that we have forgotten the purposes for which we have come to these valleys, so far as to be ready to rush into all manner of evil and to commit deadly wrongs against each other because of grievances, real or imaginary, which we think we have suffered or are suffering at the hands of our brethren."

Yours in bonds,

DELHAVEN, N. S., July 15th.

Dear Herald:—Since I have joined the Church I have read your pages and received strength in so doing. It is our only preacher most of the time. I have written to Bro. Parsons to come back to Nova Scotia this fall and hold a discussion with a Baptist minister. I think it would be a good way to get the gospel before the people.

I love the latter day work, and pray that God will hasten the time when gospel knowledge will cover the earth as the waters covers the deep.

ROBERT NEWCOME.

LOWRY CITY, Mo., July 16th.

Br. Blair:—The work in this part of the vineyard is onward in spite of the opposition it has to contend with. I attended one of Mr. Price's lectures on Mormonism, and replied the next evening. Good interest manifested; Saints and friends seemed strengthened in the work. We had a bush meeting last Sabbath, not many out perhaps on account of the busy time and warm weather. Brethren Curtis and Swenson occupied the stand in the morning and afternoon with good liberty; at the close of the afternoon service one was baptized. I cast in my mite in the evening.

Brethren Curtis and Swenson will labor in this vicinity for a short time. I will go to Hickory county and look after the work there; then to Taborville to assist Br. I. N. White. I expect to reach Kansas in August or September. My faith grows stronger in the work as my knowledge increases, and I am satisfied that Zion will be redeemed by power and that Jesus Christ will go up before his people according to D. C. page 277, and he can not go up before them till he comes; neither can his angels. The manifestation of the Spirit to come up higher, and that his coming is near, are in perfect harmony with this idea, and correspond with the twenty-fourth chapter of Matthew, as I understand it. I hope to be ready for the great event, and not be caught napping. We sometimes feel discouraged when trials come, forgetting they are neccessary to prepare us for the Master's use.

Br. Kelley's letter in the Herald of July 13th did me good, and I can recommend it to others. Come again, Br. Kelley, Yours in the faith, H. H. Robinson.

LEE'S SUMMIT, Mo., July 17th.

Bro. Blair:—I never felt better in the work than at present. We have several here inquiring, and everything looks well temporally and spiritually. Debate between Rev. Ray and E. L. Kelley as our intellectual treat we look for, and almost every one here is in favor except a few Baptists.

As ever yours in bonds,

WM. H. KELLEY,

PARIS, Tenn., July 15th.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—We believe the interest here to be increasing according to the degree of labor done, and there is an increasing demand for more labor. The harvest seems to be plentiful but the laborers are few; and those few seem willing to do what they can for the good of the cause.

Bro. Thomas is now in Henderson county opening up the work there, and doing valiant service for the Master. Bro. Griffin is on the sick list and has been for four or five weeks. I am sorry, for he is a good traveling companion, an energetic and faithful worker. Bro. J. H. Adair and self have been traveling together of late, filling appointments and opening up new places for preaching, and have baptized two. Bro. B. R. Turnbow is giving out and filling appointments around where he resides. We think he is fully able to create an interest there, and we hope he will.

Yours in gospel bonds, P. B. SEATON.

F. D. SEATO

FLAGLER, Iowa, July 21st.

Ediiors Herald:—We had the pleasure of hearing Mr. James McKiernan preach in the town hall on Sunday night. It is a rare treat to hear so much Bible doctrine, as facts were explained in such an inteligent and plain manner that the most skeptical must acknowledge there is a reality in religion, We would be pleased to hear such doctrine oftener, as we believe it is a work for good in the community.

RICHARD WILLIAMS.

OAKLAND, California, July 17th.

Bro. Blaia:—Enclosed find an article clipped from the San Francisco Call. It is only a few words taken from a long article I wrote for that paper, but having no money to give them they put in only what they felt disposed to publish and I am thankful for it.

"ELDER HAWS MAKES CAUSTIC COMMENTS ON THE UTAH MORMONS.

The members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, of which there are quite a number in this city and Oakland, have been considerably exercised of late over the fact that they are referred to as polygamists and follow the doctrines of the Mormon Church of Utah. In view of this fact Elder A. Haws of Oakland states the difference between the two institutions.

"There is a distinct line," he says, "to be drawn between the Latter Day Saints and the Utah Mormons, for the following reasons: First, our church was organized by divine revelation after the primitive pattern on the 6th of April, 1830. It was monogamic and subject to the laws of the land then, and has remained so up to the present time. Brigham Young, his followers and other small factions, tried to foist polygamy and other false doctrines and practices upon the church, but that fact does not vitiate the name, rights and characters of the very large majority of the church who repudiated Brigham and his followers as usurpers and heretics, and remained true to their original faith and practices.

"Second, the members and representatives of our church are true followers and believers in Jesus Christ, which they show by their works, for they set first in the church the apostles and second the prophets and never at any time nor under any circumstances have they taught, practiced or instigated polygamy or any other unchristian doctrine or any practice contrary to the laws of the land. Our church also was the first to bring the Utah question before Congress by sending our memorials and delegates there to meet and withstand the Utah delegates with their false claims. Written arguments were presented to every member of the Forty-seventh Congress. We are on record as a church in regard to the base pretensions of the Utah Mormons."

I will leave here for Oregon on the 21st of this month, the Lord willing, and my address will be East Portland, Oregon, until further notice. I would like all the brethren and sisters in Oregon and Washington Territory who want labor done in their neighborhood to write to me and let me know their wants, and I will respond as I can.

JOHN'S BAPTISM.

OBJECTIONS TO ITS BEING CHRIS-TIAN BAPTISM, EXAMINED AND REFUTED.

THE authority I use is a work issued by the Rev. R. B. C. Howell, D. D., entitled, "Terms of Communion," London, 1847.

Mr. Howell's severely criticises the Rev. R. Hall of Bristol, England. I accept Mr. Howell's extracts, from Hall's work, as I find therein "Terms of Communion," as being correct. I will not give the full text, but such extracts with comments as I think necessary.

1st Objection. The Rev. R. Hall says, ust Objection. The Rev. R. Hall says, works, short statement, vol. 3, p. 359: "It is demonstrable that John's baptism was a separate institution from that which was enacted after our Lord's resurrection."

Ist Answer: If so, it is as easy to demonstrate that the apostles were not baptized in the Christian sense; as it is positively certain that they were not baptized after the resurrection. Furthermore, the majority of the early Saints were baptized by John and his disciples, and by Jesus and his disciples, before the crucifixion; John 3: 22-26, and they were never afterwards baptized; so that if John's baptism was not Christian, then the early Saints did not receive Christian baptism, as there is no proof of their being baptized again after the resurrection.

2d Objection. Vol 3, pp. 134, 135, "Reply to plea:" "As the ministry of John commenced previously to that of the Messiah, which succeeded his baptism, no rite celebrated at that time is entitled to a place among Christian sacraments, since they did not commence with the Christian dispensation, nor issue from the authority of Christ, the head of the church."

2d Answer: To affirm that John's ministry was not under the Christian dispensation is false, as Mark 1: 1, informs us that John's ministry of preaching in the wilderness, the baptism of repentance for remission of sins was, "the beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God."

Besides this, if John's baptism was not and is not Christian baptism, then neither John nor any of those whom he baptized were in the kingdom of God; yet Jesus said, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he can not enter into the kingdom of God."—John 3: 5. Yet John inducted Jesus into the kingdom in this way—(Matt. 3: 16, 17). "And Jesus when he was baptized went up straightway out of the water, and . . . the Spirit of God descended . . and lighting upon him." If John inducted one man (Jesus) into the kingdom of God by his being born of water and of the Spirit, then were all the others inducted in the same way, as Jesus Christ is our example.

But it may be said that John was not in the kingdom himself, as he said the kingdom was "at hand."—Matt 3: 2. Jesus said it was "at hand," (Matt. 4: 17), and the disciples were commanded to preach that it was "at hand." (Matt. 10:7). To say that John and his disciples, and Jesus were not in the kingdom would be untrue, for Jesus said, (Matt. 12:28), "But if I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto you." This was A. D. 31; hence long before the resurrection. See also Luke 17:20, 21. I quote Dr. J. J. Griesbach's Emphatic Diaglott on this last reference: "And having been asked by the Pharisees, when God's kingdom was coming he answered them, and said: "The kingdom of God comes not with outward show; nor shall they say 'Behold here! or there!' for behold, God's Royal Majesty is among you." His note on verse twenty-one says: "In this verse it has been found necessary to depart from the usual signification of hee basileia ton theon, the kingdom of God, and render as in the text. That this rendering is admissable and correct, see Note on Matt. 3:2: "Basileia here refers to the person of whom the title and honor of king belonged, rather than to his territory or kingdom." Prof. Whiting, an able Hebrew and Greek scholar says, "This clause in the twentyfirst verse ought to be rendered the king is among you." Dr. A. Clark in a note on the twenty-first verse evidently understood it as relating to the Christ. He says: "Perhaps those Pharisees thought that Messiah was kept secret, in some private place known only to some of their rulers; and that by and by he should be proclaimed in a similar way to that in which Joash was by Jehoiada the priest." (2 Chron. 23: 1-11.) Dr. Griesbach's note on Matt. 3: 2 says, "Basileia means kingly power, authority, royal dignity, majesty, etc., as well as kingdom, realm or reign.

From what has been said concerning Luke 17:21 it is evident that the Kingdom of God was then there, and when it was said it is "at hand" it could only refer to being future in greater glory, or at hand to them who had not entered. One thing is certain, that is, that Jesus was born of water and of the Spirit, and thus he entered the kingdom; so that his doctrine in John 3: 5, and John's doctrine and practice were the same. They both preached faith, repentance, and baptism for remission of sins. Both engaged in the rite of baptism; John 3:22,26; so that to accuse John's baptism of not being Christian is to implicate Jesus also in not administering Christian baptism, as he certainly performed that ordinance long before the crucifixion. Jesus was not baptizing with the Holy Ghost-John 7:39-but with the identical mode, to the identical kind of subjects, for the same objects and design as John; hence John's was Christian baptism. The Christian dispensation began with John.

To say that John's authority "did not issue from Christ the head of the church," is equally untrue. One of the assumed reasons why it is so said, is because under the law certain priests could not enter on their ministry till thirty years of age; hence, Jesus began to be thirty years of age when he was baptized.—Luke 3:23.

As John was some six months older than Jesus, he would have been thirty years old just six months before Jesus was, and as John entered his ministry (it is said) at thirty years of age, he must have been acting without Christ's authority, as Christ could not give him authority yet till he, (Christ) was thirty years of age. From this it is assumed that John's baptism was not Christian baptism.

But the idea of every priest having to be thirty years old before he could enter his ministry is not true Some could enter at twenty-five years, (Num. 8: 24); others could enter at twenty years old, (1 Chron. 23:23-28; but this law pertained to the Levites, while our Lord came of Judah (Heb. 7: 14); so that he did not come under the necessity of even having to be twenty years of age before he entered his ministry. We learn from Luke 2:49 that Jesus said, "Wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?" This was said when he was but twelve years old.-Luke 2: 42. Again, we learn from John 1:6: "There was a man sent from God whose name was John." Surely God could have given him authority. Again: Jesus said, (John 8:42): "For I proceedeth forth and came from God." Jesus and John were sent from God, in their conscious, pre-existent state before coming here, Jesus could and did give John authority. As "the Father and I are one," said Jesus. I ask if John did not receive authority to baptize, then why did Jesus say, "Suffer it to be so now for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness?" How could either Jesus or John fulfill all righteousness, the one in administering baptism, the other in being administered to, if there was no God-given authority in the case? Where did Jesus receive authority from when he tarried in Judea and baptized? "No man taketh this honor unto himself,." etc.—Heb. 5:4.

3d Objection: John's baptism can not be Christian baptism as it is styled the "baptism of repentance;" baptism of water;" "baptism of John," etc.

3d Answer; This is as much as to say that water baptism is not Christian baptism! Why then do ministers of various denominations administer water baptism in any form if it is not Christian? It is an untrue sophism, as no other kind or mode but water baptism can be Christian baptism, as that must be administered by a Christian to a Christian; or in other words, by one who believes in Christ to one who believes in him. John belived in Christ, and Christ believed in himself, hence John's was Christian baptism.

No less a personage than Rev. R. Hall, a Baptist preacher and scholar, is the one who furnishes this third objection.—Vol.

3, p. 130, Reply to plea.

When Jesus said "Go teach all nations, baptizing them," etc., (Matt 28:19), was it with water or with the Holy Ghost that they were to do the baptizing? It was with water, from the fact that they could not baptize with the Holy Ghost. God alone can do that; they were to baptize with water "in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost." In the name of the Holy Ghost, is not with the Holy Ghost. Then as it was with water that they were to baptize, it follows that water baptism is Christian baptism.

4th Objection: "John's can not be Christian Baptism, as that rite must invariably be administered in the name of Jesus, and John did not so administer, as Jesus most studiously avoided the avowal of himself."—Hall, vol. 3, p. 131, 132, Reply to plea. . . . "Baptism in his name must have been equivalent to a public cenfession of his being the Messiah. . . All men were musing in their hearts whether he were the Christ." . . . And Mr. Hall asks, "How is it possible such a question should arise on the supposition that John baptized in his name?"

ath Answer: The very fact of such a question being asked is good evidence that withal the "musing in their hearts" that John was not the Messiah, but that he baptized in the name of the Messiah; then the question would arise, Who is this Messiah that John is baptizing in the name of? Let me illustrate: I baptize you in the name of Messiah who is coming after me; He shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost, etc.

But it is not true that baptism was "invariably" administered in the name of Matthew 28:19 says: "In the Tesus. name of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost is the name they should baptize in; and it is beyond a probability that John used the same formula, as John was sent of God (John 1:6) to bear witness of the Son, (John 1:6-12), telling those whom he did baptize that the Son would baptize them with the Holy Ghost. Therefore, John knew of the Father, Son and Holy Ghost, and in I John 5:7 we are told these three are one. (I claim nothing from this last reference, as it is doubtful. See Griesbach's Emphatic Diaglott).

It may be said that this is strong presumptive evidence that John did baptize in the name of Jesus, but not positive! Very well, now for the positive: Acts 19: 4: "John verily baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Christ Jesus." Here are positive words that John did use the name of "Jesus" when he baptized. So that if to be Christian baptism it must have been administered in Christ's name, then John's was Christian baptism.

When it is said that John's could not have been Christian baptism because Jesus studiously sought to conceal his identity, etc., saying, "tell no man," etc., it is mere subterfuge, for in Luke 9:49 we read: "Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and we forbade him," etc. Also Luke 10: 17: "And the seventy returned again with joy, saying, Lord, even the devils are subject unto us through thy name." Here were seventy men acting in his name and doing such works as made it utterly impossible to conceal his identity; and he had wrought many miracles, etc., and the devils declared "we know thee who thou art." John the Baptist knew him. (John 1:5). Griesbach's Emphatic Diaglott says: 'John testified concerning him, and cried, saying: 'This is he of whom I said, He who comes after me is in advance of me; for he is my Superior."

With his own works, with devils declaring, and John testifying, and seventy disciples acting, all in his name, and when he did do certain cures and forbade them to tell it, they generally blazed it abroad all the more. (See Mark 1:44, 45.

Our Lord never shrank from declaring who he was, only in the sense that he never boasted to every one in an indiscriminate way, as if he wished to lord it over men; but he invariably appealed to his works, (John 14:11), ... "Believe me for the very work's sake;" Luke 22: 67: "Art thou the Christ? tell us. And he said unto them, If I tell you, ye will not believe;" also John 8: 24: "I said, therefore, unto you, that ye shall die in your sins; for if ye believe not that I am he, ve shall die in your sins." Also John 10:26: "But ye believe not, because ye are not of my sheep, as I said unto you," (37, 38 verses), "If I do not the works of my Father believe me not. But if I do, though ye believe not me, believe the works, that ye may know, and believe, that the Father is in me, and I in him."

He appealed to his works, not with the ostentation of an earthly outward pomp; and it was only in that sense he sought to conceal himself; as they evidently looked for him to come in a gorgeous manner, and if he had, they would have made him king. He did not seek public notoriety, but ever sought to call men to the truth, and the proof of his doctrines being the truth was confirmed by his works. With the foregoing, who can believe he sought to conceal himself? As he did not, and John did not, the seventy did not; then if to be Christian baptism John must not conceal Christ, then his baptism was certainly Christian.

5th Objection. "John's baptism can not be Christian baptism, as that ordinance is commemorative of the death, burial, resurrection and ascension of Christ; and these events must have been past, before they could be commemorated."

5th Answer: "The Lord Jesus the same night in which he was betrayed took bread; and when he had given thanks, he brake, and said, Take, eat; . . . this do in remembrance of me. . . . For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come."—I Cor. 11:23-26.

Was this a Christian ordinance? Yes. Was it Was it commemorative? introduced before the event it was intended to commemorate took place? Yes. Yet the learned Rev. R. Hall says an event must be past before it can be commemorated! (vol. 3, p. 133, Reply to Plea, etc). John's baptism could not be in memory of Christ's death, burial, resurrection and ascension until after these events had transpired, is the idea intended to be convey-Then the bread and wine can not have been in remembrance of him either, as that was instituted before his crucifixion. If the one is not a Christian ordinance because practiced before the event, the other is not a Christian rite for the same reason. "The wisdom of the wise men shall perish."

What do we know now since the events, in our unregenerate state, of his death, burial, etc., except by the principle of faith? If it is on that principle that we now accept baptism as commemorative, could not those who lived before his death and burial have received baptism on the same principle of faith? they believing that he would die, be buried, rise again as well as we do now believe it to be past? Faith is involved in either case, now and then. All whom John did baptize could believe that Jesus would die and rise again before it took place, just as easy as we now believe that he did die and rise. They commemorated it before it took place, believing that it would take place.

6th Objection: "Know ye not that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death."

It is said, (whatever else this passage may mean), that it means they WERE baptized into a belief in his death, which they could not have been until after He did die, etc. It is further asserted that John and his disciples, and even the Apostles did not believe in his death till after it was fulfilled.

oth Answer: John did know that Jesus was to die, for he said, "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world." How could John refer to Jesus as a lamb having virtue to take away sin except in shedding his blood? Heb. 9:22 says, "Without shedding of blood is no remission." John was a Jew, and a priest, well acquainted with the teaching of the law and of the prophets. He knew well that the paschal lamb was typical of the Lamb of God. John believed the prophets, and they all testified that Jesus would die and live again: Ps. 16:9, 10; 22:16; Isaiah 53:7-10; Zech. 12:10; 13:6, etc. John was a great prophet himself, and he knew that Jesus was to die and live again, and thus take away the sin of the world. Hence Paul could truly say,

"As many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death;" so that whatever else this may mean, it means that John told of the death and rising of the Messiah so that they were baptized in a belief in his death.

Caiaphas, a wicked high priest, knew that Jesus must die. He said: "Ye know nothing at all, nor consider that it is expedient for us that one man should die for the people, and that the whole nation perish not."—John 11:49.50.

If a wicked enemy who, by reason of his being a priest and being acquainted with the reading of the law, and the prophets did learn from the shadows of the law and the predictions of the prophets that one man was to die for the people, and that one man was Jesus, then, I ask, why did not John know it? If Caiaphas had it specially revealed, John was greater; why should God not also reveal it to him? He did, hence John said, "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world" (by the shedding of his blood). But it is with this objection as with the last one, if it is of any force against John's baptism, it is equally so against the sacrament of bread and wine.

CONCLUSION.

John's baptism required, 1st faith; 2d repentance; 3d teaching before; 4th it was for the remission of sins; 5th it was administered in the name of Jesus; 6th, it was in likeness of death, burial, resurrection, etc; 7th, it was the beginning of the gospel, of Jesus Christ, before the cross.

Christian baptism requires the same points exactly since the cross. What is true of one is true of the other in every respect. The one required adults, so does the other; the one was for initiation into the kingdom, so was the other. Therefore John's was christian baptism in every and the fullest sense.

But my style of putting it before the critical reader may not be in the most approved and polished sense, yet I do not seek for honor from men, and as I have had to meet this question more than once in debate, I thought to give the readers of the Herald the benefit of what views I had obtained concerning it; and if there is nothing forcible, nor new, yet I believe it is in the main correct, and am willing to be put right, and am always thankful to any man, especially a brother, who will give me light on anything as the word says, Hosea 4:6: "My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge; because thou hast rejected knowledge, I will also reject thee, that thou shalt be no priest to me." If any brother sees anything to correct in this, do so, and I will receive it, if it is a correction.

LUCK AND LABOR.

Luck is waiting for something to turn up. Labor, with keen eyes and strong will, will turn up something. Luck lies in bed and wishes the postman would bring him news of a legacy. Labor turns out at six o'clock and with busy pen and ringing hammer lays the foundation of a competency. Luck whines, Labor whistles. Luck goes to the poor-house, Labor to independence.—Sel.

LETTER FROM BRO. L. L. WIGHT.

DEAR HERALD:—At the close of our last district conference, in February, we as a branch of the church away here in this dark and benighted region, but not hid from the gaze of the all-seeing eye of God, resolved to be more diligent in the labor entrusted to us. Your readers have noticed in the letters of Sisters Sutherland and Sheppard something of our efforts. I will add that we have held meetings nearly or quite every Sabbath since conference, alternately, in four different localities; all in Bandera county, and with good results. I never received kinder and better treatment in all our travels than in this our effort to push the teachings of Christ in The last few weeks these mountains. Brn. Currie, senior and junior, have been with us and have held a two-days' meeting at Crockett; also at Horse Valley. Both meetings were in charge of Bro. J. A. Currie Ir., and largely attended. Good interest, good order and good behavior. At Crockett the last sermon was begun by Bro. J. A. Currie Jr. on the final restora-We were under arbor, and no house near. We saw in the northeast indications of a storm approaching, but so intense was the interest in the sermon that little heed was given to its approach. Still the storm seemed to care as little for us as we did for it, and it rushed up the deep canyon, guided, seemingly, by the lofty Peaks on either side, lifting sometimes deep rooted trees from the earth and hurling limbs of trees seemingly in search of something to destroy. The storm reached us, and louder preached Bro. Currie and louder blew the wind until the weaker voice of man was hushed by God's unseen power; yet not a soul left their seats until all were drenched with rain and dismissed in order, with a promise that that sermon should be finished.

There are no members of our church living in Horse Valley yet. The congregations were so large that it was difficult for all to get into the house.

When I meditate upon the blessings that God is bestowing upon us in this far away land, I remember other days when I was in darkness, and God's servants were traveling here, and only for the light of God's Holy Spirit, all must have been gloomy; yes, darkness and despondency. I can see them now, as I could not at that time, on their knees in secluded spots of these valleys, behind the rocks and trees, pleading with the eternal God for the honest souls of these mountains and valleys. Then I am led to exclaim with the poet:

"Must I be carried to the skies On flowery beds of ease, While others fought to win the prize, And sailed through bloody seas?"

Yes, brethren, you who have traveled through these parts and sowed the seed in dark days, now that the mists have blown away and we are reaping the reward of your labors, forget not that the memory of you is cherished by us! We forget not to make mention of you in our prayers. What a difference in your lot at that time and our's now! We are surrounded by faithful brethren and sisters, while you had to tread the wine-press alone! While we withhold your names we can safely say, Not one of you are forgotten by us. Brethren, your prayers for this place have availed much, and we still desire an interest in them.

We will, God willing, build a house of worship in August next, two miles below Medina City, on the Bandera road. We have nearly the required means now subscribed. Friends outside of the church have donated liberally and we haven't the slightest reason to doubt but that the house will be completed; and when the last nail is driven, and the sound of the hammer greets your ear, it will be with this echo: "The house is paid for!"

The Saints of Bandera and of that branch of the church are taking an active part in the building of the house, in fact there is a unity between the Bandera and Medina branches in all their undertakings that is worthy of commendation. To God be the praise!

It will be remembered in my letter to the Herald last winter that I mentioned a discussion held by Bro. J. A. Currie Jr., with Mr. John Banty of the C. D. T., but not completed. About the 20th of last month he (Mr. Banty) came again with renewed energy. He meets Bro. Currie and finds him as he left him-firm as a rock, and with a smile on his face. This time Bro. Currie affirms that our church is in fact the church of Christ, and produces the following argument: Christ established a church with apostles, prophets, pastors, teachers, evangelists, bishops, deacons, helps, governments, etc., etc., 1 Cor. 12:28; Matt. 10:1; Luke 6:13; Acts 13:1; 15:32; 21:9-12; Rev. 16:6; 18: 20; 2 Pet. 4:5; Acts 21:8; Titus 1:5; Acts 14: 23; 1 Tim. 3:1; Eph. 4:11. Also Seventy, Luke 10:1. The gifts and blessings were put in the church to confirm believers, Mark 16: 17-20. They followed believers, Acts 8: 17 19:6; 1 Cor. 12th chapter. A direct communication existed between God and his people which enabled them to know their duty and acceptance with Him, etc., Rom. 8:16; John 15: 1-8; Rom. 12: 6, 7, 8; Eph. 1: 13; John 14: 16, 17; 16: 13. By this communication God called men to office, Acts 1: 24; 13:2; 1 Tim. 4:14. This church went into darkness, John 11:12; 2 Thess. 2:3; 2 Pet. 2:12; 2 Tim. 4:3, 4; 2 Tim. 3:1-6, etc., etc. The church must be set up again previous to the coming of Christ, for through it he would gather all things in heaven and earth, for 'tis his fulness when perfected, Eph. 1: 20-23; Eph. 1: 10; Phil. 1:9, 10, 11, etc. There would be laborers called and sent forth in the eleventh hour, Matt. 20:6, 7. This work is Christ's work and is to precede him, Isaiah 62:10, 11; 40:9-18.

The ensign was to be set up (Isa. 11: 12). It was the same ensign that the Gentiles sought when first set up,—verse 10. In gathering Israel God would coummunicate with man again, and call them to work, (Jer. 16: 16, 17; Ezek. 20: 33-36). Tis to be a strange work, (Isa. 28: 21; 29: 14). The Gentiles shall know his power, (Jer. 16: 16-19). God always works through man, (Amos 3:7). Some man must be called to bring about that work, to be a messenger, (Mal. 3:1); to receive the angel (Rev. 14:6, 7). That gospel must be composed of the same principles as taught in Hebrews 6:1, 2; not one principle done away with. The signs should follow to-day (Acts 2:39; 1 Cor. 12). The water baptism not a valuable one except followed by Spirit baptism, (Matt. 3: 11; John 3: 5). Here his opponent tried to prove the Spirit birth was after the resurrection, but Bro. Currie showed the fallacy of such conclusion, by showing that it took both Spirit and water to constitute a birth. Mr. Banty then resorted to Acts 19: 16; 1 Corinthians 12: 13, etc., and proved to the people that God's people should reign on the earth. Bro. Currie sanctioned it and proceeded to show that until that time our spirits would be in the hands of Him who notices the sparrow's fall,

Jesus went there, (Acts 3:21; 1:11). He promised his disciples that they should follow, (John 13:36). Paul knew it was better to be absent from the body and to be there, (2 Cor. 5:8). He had a desire to go there, (Phil. 1:23). God showed Peter how he must put off his body, (I Peter 1:14). John saw there the souls of those who had been slain for the word of God, (Rev. 6:9, etc). They are to come with Christ to earth, (Matt. 25:31; Jude 14). Those who obey the gospel are to come forth in the first resurrection; those who do not, in the second, (Rev. 20:4, 5; John 5:9; Jno. 1:4, 7, 9; 1 Tim. 2:4-6; I Cor. 15:22; Acts 13:47, etc). Those who die without hearing the gospel shall hear it (1 Peter 4:6).

Joseph.

He then showed that God was a God of love, of justice, etc., and when justice was satisfied He liberated his captives, quoting Zechariah 9:11, 12; Isaiah 24:21, 22, 23; 1 Peter 3:19. He then proceeded to show that God's work could not be fathomed save by his Spirit (1 Cor. 2:11, 14, etc).

The strongest argument Mr. Banty could bring was founded on I Corinthians 13:8. He dwelt on this to considerable length in regard to miracles being done away. But when Bro. Currie told him in his next speech to tell the people whether knowledge had vanished away he seemed somewhat unnerved, and then resorted to ridiculing the idea of Joseph Smith being a prophet, the ensign to be set up and hooted the idea of a dead man talking, as in the case of Moroni and

Bro. Currie in his next speech told him that if Joseph Smith was not the man to restore the gospel to tell the people who and what the quotations which he had made from Isaiah, Jeremiah and others meant, and when he dwelt with power on the gathering of Israel and turned to Mr. Banty and told him to write it down, and answer him, and tell the people the meaning of all those prophecies, he sat with pencil in one hand and paper in the other perfectly motionless, and when he arose he did not answer a question or make the least effort to explain the promises, but again resorted to the Book of Mormon,

Joe Smith, Solomon Spaulding's romance, etc., and when Bro. Currie read a sketch of Joseph Smith's early life in which is mentioned his first vision, Mr. Banty wilted and stood for some time seemingly speechless, and when he did get off anvthing, about all he could say was, that "it was an abomination for that boy to pray to God for light, when he could have bought a Bible for a day's work, and in it he could have got all the light he could have wanted."

On the whole we consider it a grand victory. To God be the glory! Finally, I wish to say to your readers to the credit of Mr. Banty, that he is a man possessed of manly virtues, and that he has been a life-long friend of mine. My heart's desire and prayer to God is that he will yet see his error and enlist in the service of his God for the right. With a sincere desire for the welfare of God's creatures, and a hope that I have written nothing to incur the displeasure of any one, I am yours in the service of my God, L. L. WIGHT.

A SIGNIFICANT NIGHT VISION.

[Bro. James Green of Willow Creek, Montana, sent us the following very significant night vision some time ago, and for reasons we have delayed publishing it till now. He is an old member of the church, lived in Nauvoo, emigrated to Utah under Brighamite leadership, lived some years at and near Provo, and moved thence to where he now resides. He has always retained his faith in and love for the Church of God, and his heart has ever been filled with anxious care for its prosperity. He says of his dream or vision—.Ed.]:

"I seemed to be traveling on a public highway, and was told that a woman I was acquainted with in Nauvoo, in 1843, had passed along on that road and was insane. I knew she had been a good woman, and I followed on after her, for I had great sympathy for her. I could see her tracks in the road very plain. I called at a way-side house and was told that she was still traveling on that road. I stopped and rested at that house, and when I returned to the road I met a person who told me that she had turned back and had passed by while I was in the house, and that the distance she had traveled on that road before she turned back was eighty miles. I then turned and tracked her on the road back, could hear of her, and she was wild with insanity. I followed on, and when half way back she turned off on a side road on the right. The people told me she could not be very far, for there was a large river a few miles below and she could not cross it. Some of the people then went with me to find her and we tracked her into a thicket. In a short time I saw her raise her head above the brush and look at me. We found no trouble then in securing her, and we took her to a house close by. Here I saw Bro. Joseph, and I asked him if he could take care of her, and he said he could. He then called six men to sit in council and see that she was cared for. These men had been Brighamites, but now were Josephites, and they lived in northern Utah and Idaho. Now that the woman was taken care of I passed into another house, and there were some men making a coffin, and making it solid to the house and setting it upon end -just the body part, not the lower partand I understood that the body of the woman was to be placed in the coffin. told them it would make a bad smell in the house; and to this they replied that it made no difference, for it had to be put in, and they seemed determined it should be."

Selections.

"THE REVELATION OF JOHN."

DURING several days of pleasant intercourse with brother F. F. Hintze in the Holy Land, through part of which country we traveled together, sharing the varied experiences of a journey in a strange land, many an hour was pleasantly and profitably spent in studying the prophecies of holy writ. While conversing upon such themes, the visions of John on Patmos were more than once devotionally contemplated by us. Before we separated, I was earnestly asked to give publicity to some of the thoughts expressed in our conversations, a request with which I now readily comply.

The Revelation or Apocalypse is commonly known as John's, but the vision it contains is his only in a secondary meaning. It is really a revelation to Jesus Christ. According to the first verse of the book it is a revelation which God gave to Jesus Christ in order to show the servants of Christ what should soon come to pass, and through an angel it was communicated to John, who was permitted to publish it to the Saints. The title of the book might very properly be "The Revelation of Christ" rather than that of Tohn.

It is a book profitable to study, for, in its own language, "Blessed is he that readeth and they that hear the words of this prophecy and keep those things which are written therein; for the time is at hand." (Rev. 1:3). It certainly belongs to that "more sure word of prophecy; whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light that shineth in a dark place, until the day dawn and the day star arise in your hearts." (2 Peter 1: 19). Being published especially for the instruction and enlightenment of the servants of Christ, there can be no truth in the assertion that the revelation is impossible to understand.

The revelation is generally supposed to have been written by John during his exile on Patmos, about the year 96 A.D. The early Fathers, Irenœus and Éusebius refer the book to the time of the Emperor Domitian, and the earliest traditions support the view that John, during the time of this emperor, was exiled to Patmos. Many, however, give a much earlier date to the book, supposing that the exile of John happened during the reign of the Emperor Nero, 67 or 68 A.D. Although this early date can not be proved beyond doubt, yet the probability is very strong in favor of it. The very language of the book indicates an author who was not yet accustomed to the Greek tongue. The frequent references to the temple, the altar. and the sacrifices, strongly favor the supposition that it was written before the destruction of Jerusalem, consequently before Domitian.

It appears that the powers of darkness have been very anxious to corrupt this book particularly. When the first edition was printed it was impossible to find a Greek copy which was not more or less spurious, or even complete. The last chapters were nowhere to be found, and so the editor had to translate the lacking part from the Latin, by means of which a very poor text was obtained. Besides, there is a notable peculiarity in the book. The author. when seeing an object in a vision and describing it, often disregards the grammaticalgender, and makes his adjective or participle agree, not with the word but rather with the idea present in his mind at the time. Some of the early copyists, in transcribing the texts apparently thought it their duty to correct these apparent anomalies, thereby producing a very spurious text. At present, however, not less than ninety-three manuscripts of this book are known, some of which are very ancient, and by means of these scholars have been able to purify the text and give it to us, on the whole, as it was originally written by John. It must be admitted that, in its original form, ungramatical thought it be, it can not be surpassed in dignity and sublimity of composition.

Stated briefly, the book is divided as Part 1, relating to "the things which are," at the time of the writing. This part contains the seven letters to the seven churches, recorded in chap. 1, 3.

Part 2 is the proper prophetical part of the book, and relates to "the things which shall be hereafter." (Rev. 1, 19). This part contains the visions of, 1, Seven seals. 2, Seven trumpets. 3, Three enemies—Satan, the beast and the false prophet warring against God. 4, Seven vials. 5, The three enemies overthrown. 6, The final triumph of Christ and the new or heavenly Jerusalem.

The whole has, by the best commentators, always been considered as one continuous chain of events, although some are, as is natural in all historical narratives, synchronological. With the central objects, seals, trumpets, vials, Satan, the beast, the false prophet, other visions are interwoven as introductory and concluding scenes, several of which relate to the Church and the Kingdom of God.

On all sides it is admitted that the Revelation is a most difficult book to interpret. Its language is chiefly symbolical, and when we open its pages we are met by a number of figure-angels, books, beasts, rivers, cities, mountains. All this seems to be as intelligible as a set of Egyptian hieroglyphics. Indeed, the prophetic language generally is hieroglyphical, or more properly still, it is picture writing, with the pictures spelled out in words instead of painted or engraved. This creates the difficulties. A knowledge of this fact may also furnish the right key to the interpretation; for if it is found that the prophets invariably use the figures to represent the similar events, as they indeed do, and if it be understood that prophetical figures sometimes are interpreted by the angels, by the seers themselves, or by the events fulfilling them, then we know where to look for a true and reliable interpretation. Clearly enough, if we, for instance, in the prophetical book, meet with the figure of a beast, and find that this in Daniel means an empire or a woman, and that this elsewhere means his Father's throne, that a virgin should conceive-all these were impenetrable mysteries, as profound as any of those of the revelation to us. It requires a prophetic spirit to comprehend them.

The gift of prophecy is one of the blessed gifts that has been again restored to the Church of God through the everlasting gospel. The prophetical writings should therefore no longer be sealed books. And they are not. Through diligent study of the prophetical language in general, careful attention to the events recorded in history, and with the help of the "Key" revealed through Joseph Smith, the Apocalypse ought to be made quite as legible as any part of the Word of God.

A few instances how the Word of God is its own and best interpreter may here be given.

In Revelations, chap. 4, we read that round about the throne of God were seen four "beasts" which continually glorified God, together with the elders. The first was like a lion, the second like a calf, the third like a man and the fourth like a flying eagle. On comparing this vision with Num. chap. 2, where the camp of Israel is described, we find a striking resemblance, and feel assured that the two-the vision of John and the formation of the camp of Israel-had one pattern. Here in the wilderness we find round about the Tabnacle, to the east three tribes, headed by Judah, whose banner was a lion; to the south three tribes, headed by Reuben, whose banner represented a calf; to the west three tribes, headed by Ephraim, whose banner represented a human face, and to the north three tribes, headed by Dan, whose banner had a flying eagle. Upon further inquiry into the significance of this arrangement observed by Moses in the wilderness, and seen in the heavenly visions on Patmos, we are told [in Concordance to Doc. and Cov.]: "They represent the glory of classes of beings in their destined order or sphere of creation, in the enjoyment of their eternal felicity. In the wilderness the four beasts, or rather "living creatures," represent the people of God "marching on to glory;" in the vision of John they represent glory already obtained. How instructive, the two put to-What the people of God shall gether! become in eternity they must already commence to be here.

In Revelation, chapter 6, we read that there was a great earthquake; the sun, moon and stars were affected and the heaven departed as a scroll, while every mountain and island were removed out of their places. Now, to apply this, as has sometimes been done, literally, and thereby understand a complete destruction of the universe, is contrary to the language itself. The "stars" fall to the "earth;" the heaven "departs," and yet the mountains are only "removed" out of their place; and after these things four angels stand on the earth and the events go on as before. Clearly, by the figures employed, something else is represented, and what is that? In Isaiah, chapter 13: 9, 10, 13, we find almost the same expressions: "For the stars of the heavens shall no more let their light shine; the sun shall be darkened at his rising and the moon shall not give her light. Therefore shall I let the heavens shake and the earth shall be moved out of her place." This sublime figurative language is descriptive of the fall of the great Babylonian empire (verse 1). Similarly, Hosea, chapter 10, describes the fall of Samaria: "They shall cry to the mountains, cover us, and to the hills, fall over us." The prophets abound in this mode of expression, and it always signifies the fall of some great power, God's judgment of some nation or nations. It is therefore no more conjecture to say that the passage in Revelation refers to the overthrow of the then existing Roman empire. By the concussion of the heavenly bodies is the idea conveyed that the events predicted could be effected only by God. Hence the time in which such events take place are always called the "day of the Lord" or the "coming of the Lord." Compare Matthew 24:3, where the disciples speak of the destruction of Jerusalem as the "coming" of the Lord and the end of the era (Greek aion, not world).

The two witnesses (Rev. 11), are by wav of revelation said to be "two olive trees and two candlesticks, standing before God." All these expressions become clear when compared with other parts of Scripture. In Zechariah, chapter three, we see Joshua and Zerubbabel represented as two olive trees, dropping their oil into the candlestick, setting forth how, by the Spirit of the Lord resting upon those two prophets of God, the temple should be completed without external help (v. 6) and against all opposition (v. 7). Two olive trees are therefore two prophets of God. (Compare Concordance in Doctrine and Covenants.) But there are also two candlesticks, which mean churches, according to Revelations 1:20, setting forth, therefore, the twofold work of the last dispensation, the gathering together into a church, "first the Gentiles and then the Jews." These two churches, then, and these two prophets, "stand before the Lord," an expression which always means "to serve" the Lord. The expression is applied to the priest who officiated in the Temple, and Elijah's "Thus saith the Lord, before whose face I stand," is well known. Two churches, then, and two prophets clothed with the holy priesthood is what the passage means.

Thus all the principal symbols of the book can be traced and their meaning ascertained. Yet their right application is a work which no one can undertake without the aid of the Divine Spirit of prophecy and much minute inquiry.— J. M. S., in Descret News.

THE DIVINE PLAN OF CREATION.

To ME individually it has always appeared that a false issue is raised when opponents of Darwinism make their appeal to the odium theologicum. For although it is quite true that the theory of natural selection is incompatible with that of supernatural design in those cruder forms which it necessarily presented under a belief in special creation, I do not see that such is the case with regard to any hypothesis of teleology which deserves to be regarded as in any way worthy of those higher conceptions of theism which the growth of natural science, in all its parts, has been the means of engendering. It is true that theists are now required enormously to widen their ideas touching the nature and the method of superhuman design in the realm of organic nature, just as was the case when astronomy first revealed the utter inadequacy of previous ideas touching the realm of inorganic nature. But I can not see that in the former, any more than in the latter case, those who on other grounds have accepted the theory of theism should find any reasonable cause for alarm in being required to extend immeasurably their conceptions of the Divinity. And I am quite sure that they would be committing the gravest of possible mistakes if they were to adopt the advice which appears to be given them in the words with which I will conclude:

"No wonder that Darwin was reviled by men who had the cause of religion at heart, for his theory tended not only to repudiate creation, but to discredit design, and so practically to enthrone unreason, as lord of the universe."

PROF. GEO. J. ROMANES. The Forum for July.

IMMERSION.

On strictly exegetical and historical grounds, baptism must be immersion. Without prejudice, no other interpretation would ever have been given to Bible baptism. It is the most natural interpretation, and such we must always give. Immersion is natural and historical; sprinkling is artificial and an expedient for convenience's sake. All the symbolism of the text, (Rom. 6: 34), and everywhere in the Bible, demands the going under water and coming up out of it to newness of life. Sprinkling has no suggestion of burial to sin and resurrection to holiness. In order to be true to its original meaning, and its vital relation to redemption through Christ Tesus, baptism must be immersion. Why do you wish to get rid of it? Eminent theologians have wasted their learning attempting to defend infant-sprinkling. Imposition is not exposition. All the early defenders of Christianity taught that nothing but immersion was baptism, and all the Greek or Oriental churches continue to immerse to this day.—Dr. Schaff.

GROVE MEETINGS.

A union meeting will be held in the grove at Diamondale, Eaton county, Michigan, commencing on Friday evening the 16th of August and continue over Sabbath, the 18th, and as much longer as circumstances and the interest of the meeting may demand. All well-disposed, peaceable and law-abiding citizens, as well as Saints, are invited,—yes, anxiously solicited to attend.

GEO. McCLINTOCK, Branch Pres.

HIRAM RATABUN, District Pres.

At the Davis City Camp meeting the elders who take part in the services will be boarded and lodged free, on arrangement with the committee. For others, who do not come prepared to take care of themselves, board can be had at three dollars per week, and it is hoped for a less cost than this. At present it is uncertain. This answers inquiries. By order of committee.

BORN.

Bostrom.—At Nebraska City, Nebraska, June 11th, 1889, to Mr. Fred W. and Sister Martha Bostrom, a daughter, blessed July 21st, 1889, by Elders R. M. and R. C. Elvin, and named Lu Ora Martha.

DIED.

POWELL .---At Cleveland, Lucas county, Iowa, Lorenzo W. only son of David and Agnes Powell, aged 11 months and 14 days. Funeral sermon by Elder John Watkins. We were much disappointed in not being permitted to keep the little darling boy, but we must learn to say "God's will be done."

ORTON.—At his home, near Tabor, Iowa, June 25th, 1889, William Read Orton. Father Orton was born March 19th, 1802, in Rowan county, North Carolina, and was married to Rebecca Huev, December 22d, 1822. He united with the church Feb. 10th, 1835, in Clinton county, Illinois, and received the office of an Elder August 26th, 1835, under the hands of Harvey Green; moved to Missouri and passed through all the afflictions and persecutions incident in that place; returned to Illinois and stayed with the church until they broke up for the west. He was engaged with the Relief Society organized by Brigham Young in 1839 for the purpose of moving the poor from Missouri to Illinois, and made two or three trips with his teams in that laudable work. In 1852 he moved to Provo, Utah, where he united with the Reorganization in 1864, by baptism, under the hands of George Rush and was reordained to the office of an elder the same year under the hands of elders Squires and Atwood, and returned to Mills county, Iowa, in 1866, and was known and highly respected by the Saints as a true, faithful and devoted worker, ever willing to defend the faith in word and deed true in life, faithful in death.

He was stricken with paralysis, March 8th, 1886, and was helpless until he passed away.

He was tenderly cared for by his family, and death was sweet to him in hope of the glory of God. He was interred in the Tabor Cemetery; funeral services conducted and sermon preached by H. Kemp.

Coop.—David F. Coop, son of Bro. James and Catharine Coop, after a life here of 16 years, 4 months and 1 day, passed peacefully away on Saturday July 13th, 1889, at 10 a.m., of abscess of the stomach, a lingering illness of eight weeks. His two sisters and a brother which were absent were sent for, and arrived there just in time to see his last smile. He tried to talk to them, but, alas, it was too late! Seeing he could not talk, he cast his eyes separately on them with a smile, then turning his face from them, passed into a peaceful sleep, which none ever wake to weep. Many friends from the city of Downs and country accompanied the remains to the cemetry of Downs, Kansas.

wns, Kansas.

"We shall all go home to our Father's house,
To our Father's house in the skies,
Where the hope of our soul shall have no blight,
And our love no broken ties.
We shall roam on the banks of the river of peace,
And bathe in its blissful tide;
And one of the joys of our heaven shall be,
Our darling boy that died."

STEBBINS .- Ruth Emily, daughter of brother Henry A. and sister Clara B. Stebbins, was born in Lamoni, Iowa, on the morning of July 10th, 1888, and on the morning of July 3d, 1889, she peacefully breathed the last sigh of mortal life, and her gentle spirit departed from earth to be with God, the Father of all spirits, in whose presence all is peace and joy. Though not strong and hearty like some children, yet, excepting for the common troubles of early infancy, she was well in body and very happy in spirit during the first seven or eight months of her life. And she seemed glad to be in the world, and happy to see and to smile upon all humanity. Late in February she took a cold that settled on her lungs. After that came the whooping cough that lasted till warm weather, and then the pneumonia set in, which, with severe teething troubles, wore her out, after over four months brave fighting against death. Through it all she was patient and sweet, enduring much and quietly waiting for attention and care. To her mother and her sister Helen she was a continual joy, and into her father's life she brought great comfort and brightness during her brief visit to the household that now seems so lonely without her dear presence. They pray that they may be worthy to dwell with her in Christ's kingdom. Funeral sermon by Elder C. H. Jones, assisted by Elder A. S. Cochran, on July 4th.

IN BONDAGE BECAUSE OF IN-IQUITY.

"And behold, it is because of our iniquities and abominations that has brought us into bondage." -Mosiah 5: 6, Book of Mormon.

In this article we design to consider some of the vicissitudes of God's people, and to especially call attention to a number of the leading causes which have brought them into bondage and prevented them from enjoying as far as possible those great spiritual and temporal blessings, which, used for their intended purpose, not only prepare for and make worthy of the great inheritance in the future life, but are designed to also make our earthly estate one of happiness, peace and joy; and one that shall, in some degree at least, be in the likeness and bring some of the blessings of the future state.

Probably the best and most widely known example, and the one most suitable as an illustration to our readers is that of Israel, the chosen people of God. The Lord called them to be his peculiar people, leading them by the hand of Moses, and organized them into a separate and distinct nation among the political powers of the world. In the 28th chapter of Deuteronomy we have a graphic picture presented; of blessings remarkable and wonderful in their character,—of prosperity and goodness in all phases of their life, political, social, domestic and spiritual;-of freedom, wealth and heaven's especial favor, under which it was evidently intended they should not only enjoy every good thing which God had made for man, but were also privileged to be a light to the Gentiles, and as instruments in God's hand to bring the nations to the knowledge of the true God. All these wonderful blessings were promised upon conditions, and those conditions were faithfulness and obedience in all things-not to that which every individual taught, but to the accepted, written law delivered unto them by Moses, the mouthpiece of God.

On the contrary the painful and debas ing results of disobedience were also presented to them in contrast. For beginning at verse fifteen of this same chapter we have a minute recital of the woes, afflictions, poverty and final captivity and bondage of Israel, which were predicted should they fail to "hearken diligently unto the voice of the Lord thy God, to observe and do all his commandments which I command thee this day."

The history of Israel is a narrative of elevation and decline; prosperity and adversity; freedom and bondage. When they were united and faithful they were esteemed as the salt of the earth; were acknowledged of God, blessed with plenty, and were happy and at peace with their neighbors, and unoppressed by other nations. But the greater part of their history presents an opposite or very different picture, and reveals them as in trouble, turmoil, spiritual darkness and oppression, and all this in consequence of their failures to obey God and faithfully comply with his revealed word.

The history of the Jaredites and Nephites presents the same general facts and reveals similar results of disobedience; and we behold Israel and Judah to-day scattered and downtrodden as salt which has lost its savor, and henceforth good for nothing but to be cast out and trodden under the feet of men, until they repent and turn to God and faithfully serve Him.

"Your iniquities have separated between you and your God and your sins have hid his face from you. . . . I have spread out my hands all the day unto a rebellious people, which walketh in a way that was not good, after their own thoughts," was the word of God through Jeremiah, showing us that the same causes operated among them as among the people whose record we have in the Book of Mormon, namely, transgression and departure from the law of God, to degrade and lead them into error, ignorance and

In all His dealings with humanity God has designed that they shall be educated and disciplined until they have reached the very highest conditions of obedience, integrity, knowledge, intelligence and happiness. His purposes have been and must ever be the most exalted ones,—those that are in harmony with the perfection of his charactera nd attributes.

The account of God's dealings with Enoch and his city is one of the earliest and grandest of which we have any history, and by it we are justified in the belief that the Almighty will never be fully satisfied with and entirely accept a people until they have been so thoroughly disciplined and have so completely overcome not only the world, but every unhallowed personal tendency and inclination, whether acquired or inherited; until they shall become in every deed and desire, the Zion of our God, the pure in heart. "He that saith he abideth in him [Christ] ought himself also so to walk, even as he walked."-1 John 2:6.

God is a jealous God. While he has given commandments by prophets and performed wonders through man as His agent, he has ever strictly enjoined it upon his people to make the distinction, clearly and strongly between the law and the servant through whom it was given. And while He has used men to in some sense stand between Him and the people, it is recorded that "there is one mediator between God and man, the man Christ Jesus." And while the instruments—the prophets—should be honored as such, the strict observance of the law, the word of God, is that which gives safety from deception, human or devilish, and brings the approval, and the overruling watchcare of God. For the best and most obedient of the prophets were imperfect in some degree.

Ancient Israel disobeyed not only by directly violating the precepts of the Lord, but they invited darkness and paved the way for their greatest acts of disobedience by failing to individually acquaint themselves with God's commandments, and by accepting, unquestioned, the deceptive teachings of false shepherds who at times led them at will. Bible readers are familiar with the numerous instances there recorded, but we quote a few:

"O my people, they which lead thee cause thee to err and destroy the way of thy paths. The Lord will enter into judgment. . . . for ye have eaten up the vine yard; the spoil of the poor is in your houses."-Isaiah 3: 12: 14.

"For the leaders of this people cause them to err; and they that are led of them are destroyed." ---Isa. q: 16.

"Woe be unto the pastors that destroy and scatter the sheep of my pasture! saith the Lord, Therefore thus saith the Lord God of Israel against the pastors that feed my people; Ye have scattered my flock, and driven them away, and have not visited them; behold, I will visit upon you the evil of your doings, saith the Lord. And I will gather the remnant of my flock out of all countries whither I have driven them, and will bring them again to their folds; and they shall be fruitful and increase. And I will set up shepherds over them which shall feed them; and they shall fear no more, nor be dismayed, neither shall they be lacking saith the Lord."-Jer. 23:

"For the land is full of adulterers; for because of swearing the land mourneth; the pleasant places of the wilderness are dried up, and their course is evil, and their force is not right. For both prophet and priest are profane; yea, in my house have I found their wickedness, saith the Lord. Wherefore their way shall be unto them as slippery ways in the darkness; they shall be driven on, and fall therein; for I will bring evil upon them, even the year of their visitation, saith the Lord. And I have seen folly in the prophets of Samaria; they prophesied in Baal, and caused my people, Israel, to err. I have seen also in the prophets of Jerusalem a horrible thing; they commit adultery, and walk in lies; they strengthen also the hands of evil doers, that none doth return from his wickedness; they are all of them unto me as Sodom, and the inhabitants thereof as Gomorrah. Therefore, thus saith the Lord of hosts concerning the prophets; Behold, I will feed them with wormwood, and make them drink the water of gall; for from the prophets of Jerusalem is profaneness gone forth into all the land. Thus saith the Lord of hosts, Hearken not unto the words of the prophets that prophesy unto you; they make you vain; they speak a vision of their own heart, and not out of the mouth of the Lord. They say still unto them that despise me, The Lord hath said, Ye shall have peace; and they say unto every one that walketh after the imaginations of his own heart, No evil shall come upon you. For who hath stood in the counsel of the Lord, and hath perceived and heard his word? who hath marked his word, and heard it?"-Jer. 23: 10-18.

"Can any hide himself in secret places that I shall not see him? saith the Lord. Do not I fill heaven and earth? saith the Lord. I have heard what the prophets said, that prophesy lies in my name, saying, I have dreamed, I have dreamed. How long shall this be in the heart of the prophets that prophesy lies? yea, they are prophets of the deceit of their own heart."—Jeremiah 23: 24-26.

"And now, O ye priests, this commandment is for you. If ye will not hear, and if ye will not lay it to your heart, to give glory unto my name, saith the Lord of hosts, I will even send a curse upon you, and I will curse your blessings; yea, I have cursed them already, because ye do not lay it to heart."—Mal. 2: 1, 2.

"For the priest's lips should keep knowledge, and they should seek the law at his mouth; for he is the messenger of the Lord of hosts. But ye are departed out of the way; ye have caused many to stumble at the law: ye have corrupted the covenant of Levi, saith the Lord of hosts. Therefore have I also made you contemptible and base before all the people, according as ye have not kept my ways, but have been partial in the law."—Mal. 2:7-9.

In Book of Mormon times history has repeated itself and witnessed the truth of the saying that "the same causes produce the same effects in all ages." We cite but a few illustrations recorded there:

"Therefore Noah began to reign in his stead; and he did not walk in the ways of his father. For behold he did not keep the commandments of God, but he did walk after the desires of his own heart. And he had many wives and concubines. And did cause his people to commit sin."—Mosiah 7: 1.

"And it came to pass that he placed his heart upon his riches, and he spent his time in riotous living with his wives and his concubines; and so did also his priests spend their time with harlots."—par. 5.

"And the Lord said unto me [Abinadi], Stretch forth thy hand and prophesy, saying, Thus saith the Lord: It shall come to pass that this generation, because of their iniquities, shall be brought into bondage."—par. 10.

"And it shall come to pass that I will send forth hail among them, and it shall smite them; and they shall also be smitten with the east wind; and insects shall pester their land also, and devour their grain."—par. 12.

With these examples before them, (which were written for their profit and learning) and the revelations in the Book of Covenants, the especial and "present truth" to the Latter Day Saints, -it would have been impossible to have brought upon them the condition of doubt, despair and bondage which now prevails in Utah, had the Saints heeded the word of the Lord and not the "counsel" of men. The Lord foresaw and forewarned against, the darkness and apostasy of Brigham Young and his co-workers in wrong-doing, and gave such clear and pointed revelations to the church through his servant Joseph, that had the people rejected all teaching contrary to that word of the Lord, both they and their children would have escaped their long and weary forty years of temporal and spiritual exile and bondage in the "salt land."

We mention a few of the revelations given to the Church through Joseph Smith. In January, 1831, in New York State, the Church was commanded to go to the Ohio (Kirtland) and there receive the law of the Lord, and all this that they "might escape the power of the enemy." In this same revelation they were warned against "a thing which is had in secret chambers, sendowment houses, etc., with their blinding and binding oaths and combinations], to bring to pass even your destruction, in process of time." In that law, given at Kirtland, which was to govern them until Christ came, this command was given: "Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shalt cleave unto her and none else; and he that looketh upon a woman to lust after her, shall deny the faith, and shall not have the Spirit; and if he repents not, he shall be cast out." In various other revelations the doctrine of but one wife was repeatedly and strictly enjoined. "Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land; wherefore be subject to the powers that be, until He reigns whose right it is to reign, and subdues all enemies under his feet."

Again: "There shall not anything be added to this Church contrary to the Church articles and covenants." "And now, verily I say unto you, concerning the laws of the land, it is my will that my people should observe to do all these things whatsover I command them, and that law of the land, which is constitutional, supporting that principle of freedom, in maintaining rights and privileges belongs to all mankind and is justifiable before me; therefore, I, the Lord, justifieth you and your brethren. . . . in befriending that law which is the constitutional law of the land; and as pertaining to the law of man, whatsoever is more or less than these, cometh of evil."

"Search these commandments, for they are true and faithful," was a command to the Church in the preface of the Lord's words to his church in this generation, as published in the Doctrine & Covenants. But with all the experiences of the past to profit by, they failed to remember that 'whoso treasureth up my word shall not be deceived" (Doctrine and Covenants), and yielding to the persuasions of man and continuing to be led by men, instead of by the counsel of God, they have been spoiled and led into darkness and error, until today all who will may readily see that every promise of their leaders concerning Utah as Zion and a place of gathering, has failed, and instead of polygamy and other departures from the truth prevailing and accomplishing a righteous purpose, such precepts have brought the heavy hand of the nation to bear upon the people of Utah to the extent that Gentile influences bid fair to soon entirely predominate in the territory.

In September, 1832, the Lord said to the church through Joseph Smith:

"And your minds in times past have been darkened because of unbelief, and because you have treated lightly the things you have received, which vanity and unbelief hath brought the whole church under condemnation. And this condemnation resteth upon the children of Zion, even all; and they shall remain under this condemnation until they repent and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon and the former commandments which I have given them, not only to say, but to do according to that which I have written, that they may bring forth fruit, meet for the father's kingdom, otherwise there remaineth a scourge and a judgment to be poured out upon the children of Zion: for, shall the children of the kingdom pollute my holy land? Verily, I say unto you, nay."-D. C. 83:8.

The causes of all the troubles that have come upon latter day Israel, together with the remedy, are here plainly pointed out. The counsels of their leaders have plunged them deeper and deeper into darkness and distress, and increased their burdens and disappointments. Why not now turn and remember the commandments given unto them through the prophet Joseph? Are the counsels and advice of their present leaders superior to that given of God through the Seer? God is calling upon Israel to return and remember the former commandments, (the revelations He gave to the Church from 1830 to 1841—those regularly accepted by the church in Joseph's day), and the Book of Mormon.

When ancient Israel disregarded and transgressed the written law, he sent his servants, the prophets, to call upon them to return and obey that law; and always with the warning that evil would come upon them if they failed to hear and be obedient. He is likewise calling upon the Latter Day Saints in Utah to cast aside polygamy and every principle that is contrary to his word, and to return to Him and to the written law. Will they obey the call of God's servant who is now among them? If so, peace, blessings and happiness will be theirs; but if they refuse, who knows what greater evils than they have already borne may yet come upon them! The predictions and promises of their leaders have failed. Will they not refuse to be longer led and deceived by them? Why not obey God rather than man, and obtain rest and safety?

WE ask our readers to carefully read the following article by Elder James Caffail, and then examine our reply.

We are more than ever satisfied that the subjects in issue need to be thoroughly investigated and solid facts obtained, so that the truth of God shall govern the faith and teachings of the Saints rather than "the tradition of the elders."

THE SHEEP AND THE GOATS.

EDITORS HERALD:—By a careful examination of the reply to my brief article on the Sheep and the Goat question, in Herald for July 13th, I think objections in said reply may be noticed under three heads, namely: Degrees of rewards and punishments, the terms, "my sheep," "righteous," being applied to none but actual disciples or followers of Christ or people of God; and the scriptures concluding all under sin who are not Saints. With the thought that Christ is the source whence light radiates, proving or disproving all purporting to be saving truth I essay the task.

I. Degrees of rewards and punishments. In language quite free from ambiguity Christ promised a prophet's reward to him that receives a prophet in the name of a prophet, and a righteous man's reward to him that shall receive a righteous man in the name of a righteous man, and declares those giving a cup of cold water to one of these little ones shall in no wise lose his reward, Matt. 10: 40, 41; 23: 14.

Christ told the scribes and pharisees that because they devoured widow's houses and for a pretense made long prayers, they should receive the greater damnation. As the above proves degrees of rewards and punishment, it also proves different classes to be thus punished or rewarded, whatever Matthew or any one else may teach. "To the law and the testimony," &c. Paul taught three glories thus: one of the sun, one of the moon, one of the stars, and adds, "for as one star differs from another star in glory, so also is the resurrection."-1 Cor. 15: 41, 42, while the vision of Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon, beginning on page 210 and closing on page 216 of the Doctrine and Covenants, is most explicit and grand in bearing record of and describing the difference between celestial, terrestial and telestial glories; and on page 234 Joseph speaks of a kingdom which is not a kingdom of glory, and on the same page he says: "And the spirit and the body is the soul of man; and the resurrection from the dead is the redemption of the soul, and the redemption of the soul is through him who quickeneth all things, in whose bosom it is decreed that the poor and the meek shall inherit the earth. Therefore it must needs be sanctified from all unrighteousness, that it may be prepared for celestial glory; for after it hath filled the measure of its creation, it shall be crowned with glory, even with the presence of God the Father."

Let the reader get these dazzling facts fixed in his mind, remembering that they are in harmony with many promises in ancient and modern revelations, promising knowledge of, with spiritual growth of Saints in their probationary state, to culminate as above stated. And the thought of appearing before their Savior in the sweet bye and bye in such profound ignorance as will be evinced by those Matthew represents as sheep, will be repulsive; but more of this further on. Other proofs in favor of degrees of rewards and punishment might be adduced, but I am willing that the above shall suffice.

2. The terms, "my sheep," and "righteous," being applied to none but the actual disciples or followers of Christ. Let the reader turn to and examine the fifth paragraph of the reply, and learn that under the second head, the editor is not misre-presented. The scriptures quoted to prove the process through which those accepting the gospel are to become righteous as God is righteous, I endorse; and would I could evince a more rapid growth. But I do not believe with available proof that the sheep and righteous referred to in Matthew are the righteous in Christ, the Saints of God who shall awake at Christ's second coming and come with him to reign a thousand years. In D. & C. 77: 6, I find a description of the terrestrial glory. Those sharing the same are called the honorable men of the earth, yet not valiant in the testimony of Jesus. But that these honorable men must have performed something praiseworthy in their earthly career. is plain to be seen. And if in moving among suffering humanity, as angels of mercy in feeding the hungry, clothing the naked, &c., were not they righteous acts, making them righteous in a sense, seeing the power is in man to do good?-Page 177, D. & C.

And if these honorable ones should be so free from partisanship as to show such kindness to Christ's brethren, will not the invitation to inherit the kingdom, &c., because they had fed him, gave him to drink, came to him in prison, &c., be compatible with the promise, namely, he who giveth a cup of cold water shall in no wise lose his reward! "Then shall the king say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."—Matt. 25: 34.

"Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered and fed thee, or thirsty and gave thee drink," &c. This not only evinces an ignorance as to whom or for what purpose they had performed works of charity, but affords no evidence of an expectation of future reward, and no greater evidence is needed that between these Matthew calls righteous, and the righteous in Christ, the Saints of God, there is a verv great difference. For the latter love, work and pray for, and if finishing their earthly course with joy, depart with the blessed assurance of a glorious resurrection, attaining to an understanding subsequent to their adoption, thus they receive Christ in the reception of his doctrine. But hear the king and let all flesh be silent: "And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."-Verse 40.

The editor is made aware of the ignorance of these sheep and righteous, (as Matthew designates them), and essays to account for it thus, (see third paragraph of the reply). He says, "Ttheir evident surprise at the commendation of Jesus, and their inquiry as to when they had done such things unto him, may be readily accounted for by the statement that they evidently failed to grasp the idea that Jesus did not mean that they had done all those things to him personally, but that in ministering to his servants they had virtually done so to him. 'Whoso receiveth you receiveth me,' is in harmony with this idea." So the editor has the resurrected and glorified Saints before their Savior, (for he will hardly claim that the judgment will be before the resurrection), so profoundly ignorant as to create a necessity for Christ to pause in the work of judging, to teach the Saints doctrine which the Scripture warrant us will be by the Saints so thoroughly learned here as to qualify them at Christ's coming to enter into higher grades of eternal instruction.

The reader will take notice that the term servant is not used by Christ, but, "Inasmuch as ye have done it to one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." Now if these my brethren and the sheep and righteous, as referred to in the 25th chapter of Matthew, were all one, why did Christ say "these my brethren?" Or why did he refrain from calling them, the righteous, "my sheep," or "my brethren?" It will be seen that he applied none of these terms. Nor did he invite them to, or to abide at his right hand, but the sheep on the right, the goats on the left is the order in which Matthew places them for judgment; and the King in deciding upon their reward said, "Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world," etc., a sufficient proof to my mind of that "ye blessed of my Father" and the Saints are two dif-ferent classes. The reader can decide for him or her self. "For I say unto you that except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven."-Matt. 5: 20. Neither the scribes nor pharisees were recognized as Christ's disciples; yet Christ recognized in them a righteousness that the disciples were to exceed, and failing to exceed they could not enter into the kingdom of heav-

This presents an unseemly antagonism between the Editor and Christ, but is in beautiful harmony with Christ's teachings as to a righteous man's reward, and a reward for a cup of cold water; for it cannot be thought that Christ would reward for an unrighteous act. Hence while the Saints are saved and redeemed to see Christ as he is, because having attained to the righteousness of Christ through the gospel; others become righteous so far as righteous acts can make them righteous, but never attain to Christ's righteousness, not being valiant in the testimony of Je-Hence degrees of righteousnes, which tend to show the vastness of that system which guarantees a reward to the one giving a cup of cold water, with rewards differing as the stars in heaven differ, to those who shall gain the glory of which the dazzling sun is a type, too vast for the finite mind. Hence God purposes to teach by the light of his Holy Spirit, or by anointing our eyes with the heavenly eye-salve. And to my mind a method of interpretation leading to a positive and radical conclusion on information gleaned from a single chapter which would collide with information sparkling in scores of others needing a careful comparison, necessitating a guidance by four rules to aid in a research and reaching a legitimate conclusion, 1st to know who wrote; 2d to whom written; 3d the subject-matter of that written; 4th the circumstances under which that was written which we essay to understand and enforce, savors of indiscretion and without a guaranty of ultimate good for or to the cause.

3d. "The Scriptures concluding all under sin but Saints." Though true, this is a sweeping declaration, needing a flash of heavenly light to make visible its consistency and equity: "This is the condemnation that light is come into the world; and men love darkness rather than light because their deeds are evil. For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved. But he that doeth truth cometh to the light that his deeds may be made manifest that they are wrought in God."—John 3: 20-22. Thus taught Christ; and more or less than this must come of evil. Light had come, and individuals, cities and nations were apprised of it. The shaking the dust off the feet of the disciples against a house or a city was to follow and not precede a rejection by the house or city where or to whom they went.-Matt. 10. "And the times of this ignorance God has winked at; but now commandeth all men everywhere to repent."—Acts 17: 30. "For when the Gentiles, which have not the law, do by nature the things contained in the law, these, having not the law, are a law unto themselves; which show the work of the law written in their hearts, their conscience also bearing witness, and their thoughts the mean while accusing or else excusing one another. In the day," etc.-Romans 2:14-16, Inspired Translation. A portrayal of the threatening part of the gospel message, without the qualifying parts thereof is similar to declaring one a transgressor in Zion before the evidence is obtained by a legitimate process, and the accused having the privilege to recant or prove his innocence, which would evince a zeal not according to knowledge.

The climax of evidence in favor of the Editor's claims is, as I suppose, to be found in Nephi, who says: "But behold the righteous, the Saints of the Holy One of Israel, they who endured the crosses of the world and despised the shame of it, they shall inherit the kingdom which was prepared for them from the foundation of the world, and their joy shall be full forever" -quite a vivid and plain description with no uncertain sound as to who shall inherit the kingdom. And doubtless the kingdom was prepared in the divine mind of the Father which the Saints shall inherit. But this grand culmination, so far as man is concerned, is reached by preparatory steps: hence the work of the Father in the various epochs or dispensations of time. There is, therefore, force and much significance in the teachings of Christ and his inspiring promise to his disciples. says: "Let not your hearts be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Fathers house are many mansions; if it were not so I would have told you. I go to pripare a place for you, and when I go I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am, ye may be also." —John 14: 1-3, Inspired Translation.
That Christ and his disciples knew all

That Christ and his disciples knew all things had been prepared in the mind of the Father, there is no doubt; but as the Savior, the lamb slain, etc., he knew that through his instrumentality preparatory steps had to be taken to make ready, that the Saints might enter into that kingdom which he promised to prepare. The above reveales the fact of many mansions, and as plainly reveals that they were not to be the abode of the disciples. Hence the promise, "I go to prepare," etc.

It is quite safe to presume that the terrestral and telestral worlds, glory or rewards thereof are also prhpared in the mind of the Father, the kingdom which Joseph calls a kingdom, not of glory, not excepted or left out of the divine mind. And as Christ fails to recognize the sheep in Matt. 25th as the Saints, it were difficult to determine by revealed evidence to which of the glory or kingdoms he reffered to for those who had ministered to his brethren.

In presenting the above I am not aware of having transcended legitimate limits, but quite positive I have intended no harm, I think I have learned that answers to questions in the Herald are not always supposed to be final or infallible. Hoping truth and equity may triumph, whether I survive or perish. In gospel bonds,

JAMES CAFFALL.

Replying to the above we have to say we never doubted nor taught other than that God will reward all, Saint and sinner, according to their works; and also that those who give even a cup of cold water to a disciple of Christ will receive reward therefor. But we do doubt that such an act, without the other gospel requirements, will make any person an heir to that "kingdom" which Christ says, in Matthew 25:34, was "prepared . . . from the foundation of the world" for "the sheep on his right hand," whom he unqualifiedly calls "the righteous" and the "blessed" of his Father. We hardly think these terms should be applied to unconverted gentiles at the judgment seat of Christ, even though the latter may have done many good deeds to Christ's people, including his ministry—the "brethren." Nor do we think the kind acts mentioned by our Lord in Matthew 25:31-40 all that is required to secure a place at Christ's "right hand" in the final judgment, and an inheritance in "the kingdom prepared for" "the sheep," "the righteous," the "blessed" of the Father, "from the foundation of the world."

Jesus, in the passage referred to, teaches the fact of a future judgment of all mankind, and he feaches also the importance of good works, and that even those called "sheep," "the righteous," and the "blessed" of God must have such in order to "inherit the kingdom prepared for" them "from the foundation of the world." And this is in essence precisely what he taught his disciples in Matthew 5:20 when he said: "Except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the Scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven;" and also when he said to them, "Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven."-Matt. 18:3.

Good deeds are essential in order that the Saints, Christ's "sheep," etc., may inherit that promised kingdom. Those who are Christ's followers must add to their profession of faith in him the provided christian works and graces, otherwise they lose the christian reward and an inheritance in the kingdom prepared for the Saints "from the foundation of the world."

It will hardly do to say that an unconverted Gentile, because he feeds and clothes and ministers kindly to the Saints, or to the ministry of Christ, will thereby secure salvation, (aside from the provisions and requirements of the gospel), such as is found on the "right hand of Christ,"—and there is where "the sheep" of Christ (Matt. 25:33) are to be placed. That place—at Christ's "right hand," God's "right hand"—is the place of special favor, protection, blessing, salvation and glory, as may be seen by consulting Ps. 110:1; Luke 22:69; Mark 16:19; Acts 2:33; 7:55; Col. 3:1, etc., etc.

Let us now see Christ's portrayal of the final judgment of all men: "When the Son of Man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory: and before him shall be gathered all nations; and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats: and he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left. Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: for I was an hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick and ye visited me; I was in prison, and ye came un-to me. Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee a hungered, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink? when saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee?, or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee? the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, [ministers], ye have done it unto me. Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels: for I was an hungered, and ye gave me no meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me not in; naked, and ye clothed me not: sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not. Then shall they answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungered, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto thee? Then shall he answer them, saying, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these my brethren, ye did it not And these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal."-Matt. 25: 31-46.

This no doubt relates to the final, general judgment, when final, eternal awards will be made to each individual of all mankind, the righteous and the wicked. In this is seen the fact of a future general judgment, with Christ the judge, also that good works must be had by those called "the sheep," "the righteous," the "blessed" of the Father, in order to secure place at Christ's "right hand" and qualify them to "inherit the kingdom prepared for" them "from the foundation of the world." And this is precisely what is taught by Jacob in 2 Nephi 6: 6, 7, for he there says: "And it shall come to pass, that when all men shall have passed from this first death unto life, insomuch as they have become immortal, they must appear before the judgment seat of the Holy One of Israel; and then cometh the judgment; and then must they be judged according to the holy judgment of God. And assuredly, as the Lord liveth, for the Lord God hath spoken it, and it is his eternal word, which cannot pass away, that they who are righteous, shall be righteous still, and they who are filthy, shall be filthy still; wherefore, they who are filthy, are the devil and his angels; and they shall go away into everlasting fire, prepared for them; and their torment is as a lake of fire and brimstone, whose flames ascendeth up forever and ever; and has no end. O the greatness and the justice of our God! For he executeth all his words, and they have gone forth out of his mouth, and his law must be fulfilled. But, behold, the righteous, the saints of the Holy One of Israel, they who have believed in the Holy One of Israel; they who have endured the crosses of the world, and despised the shame of it; they shall inherit the kingdom of God, which was prepared for them from the foundation of the world; and their joy shall be full forever."

By thus "comparing spiritual things with spiritual" we get at the truth as it is in our blessed Lord, "learn doctrine," and also how and where to apply it. Doing good deeds to the Saints, or Christ's ministers, by an unconverted Gentile or Jew, such deeds alone as are mentioned in Matt. 25: 35, 36, will hardly entitle them to stand at the "right hand" of the all-glorious judge and "King" at the final judgment. Such deeds, alone, can never transform an unconverted person into a "righteous," blessed "sheep" of Christ. But such deeds must be found-will be found-to adorn and grace the character of the Saints at the final judgment; for except the righteousness of professed Saints exceeds the righteousness of those who claim to have faith in Christ and yet have not good works, such can not inherit the kingdom prepared for faithful Saints "from the foundation of the world."

Don't lose sight of the fact that those set at the "right hand" of Christ at the judgment day are "the sheep" of Christ, and they are not "lost sheep," either. And mark well the fact, that the covenant people of God, under both covenants, are called "sheep." Such may have lived and served under a broken and "faulty" covenant; such may have been imperfect in their knowledge and service of God, as has been true of God's people in the past; but still they were God's covenant people. See 2 Sam. 24:17; Ps. 79:13; 95:7; Jer. 23: 1; Ezek. 34:6, 11; Zech. 13:7; Matt. 10:6; 15:24 John 10: 2-26; 21: 16; Heb. 13: 20, etc.

Now let us see what conditions are necessary, according to the unerring word of God, in order that persons may become and remain the "sheep" of Christ; and when we have found what are the divinely appointed requirements, let that end forever all controversy on that point. Jesus says, "My sheep hear my voice, and they follow me."-John 10:27. And to the unbeliving Jews he said, "But ye believe not, because ye are not of my sheep."-vs. 26. Belief in God-belief in Christ-this is what makes persons Christ's "sheep" and the entire Scriptures sustain this view. In further proof we give the following from the Book of Mormon: "And now I say unto you, all you that are desirous to follow the voice of the good shepherd, come ye out from the wicked, and be ye separate, and touch not their unclean things; and behold, their names shall be blotted out, that the names of the wicked shall not be numbered among the names of the righteous, that the word of God may be fulfilled, which saith, the names of the wicked shall not be mingled with the names of my people. For the names of the righteous shall be written in the book of life; and unto them will I grant an inheritance at my right hand. And now my brethren, what have ye to say against this? I say unto you, if ye speak against it, it matters not, for the word of God must be fulfilled. For what shepherd is there among you having many sheep, doth not watch over them, that the wolves enter not and devour his flock? And behold, if a wolf enter his flock, doth he not drive him out? Yea, and at the last, if he can, he will destroy him. And now I say unto you, that the good shepherd doth call after you; and if you will hearken unto his voice, he will bring you into his fold, and ye are his sheep; and he commandeth you that ye suffer no ravenous wolf to enter among you, that ye may not be destroyed."—Alma 3:8.

And Alma says further on this point, in paragraph 5: "And if ye will not hearken to the voice of the good shepherd, to the name by which ye are called, behold, ye are not the sheep of the good shepherd. And now if ye are not the sheep of the good shepherd, of what fold are ye?" To this we add the word of the Lord to Alma, by which we further learn how people become Christ's "sheep": "And thou shalt serve me, and go forth in my name, and shall gather together my sheep. And he that will hear my voice shall be my sheep."—Mosiah 11:15.

Therefore, when we teach that "the sheep," "the righteous," the "blessed of my Father," of Matt. 25: 31-40, are the people of God-the Saints-and that the "brethren" are Christ's ministers, officiating in his name and stead; also that "the kingdom prepared for" "the sheep" "from the foundation of the world" is that one promised the Saints, then the Scriptures sustain us. And when we teach that the judgment period of Matt. 25: 31-46 is the general, final, "eternal judgment" to be passed upon all men, then all the Scriptures sustain us. For be it remembered that the Doctrine and Covenants teach on this point essentially the same as the passages hereinbefore quoted, for it is said in section 28:7, "But, behold, verily I say unto you, before the earth shall pass away, Michael, mine arch-angel, shall sound his trump, and then shall all the dead awake, for their graves shall be opened, and they shall come forth; yea, even all; and the righteous shall be gathered on my right hand unto eternal life; and the wicked on my left hand will I be ashamed to own before the Father; wherefore I will say unto them, depart from me ye cursed into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels."

And now be it understood that we have never intimated, in any way, that good deeds would go unrewarded of God; for we know they won the favor of God in the case of even the heathen Cornelius, and yet the Lord showed it needful to send him the gospel in order that he might be saved by believing in, and obeying, the Lord and his Christ, as see Acts chapters 10 and 11. Good deeds-good worksalways bring their rewards; and gospel deeds-gospel works—are essential to make and constitute man "the sheep" of Christ, otherwise the gospel plan is of none effect, but superfluous.

And be it further understoood, that none of "the sheep," in the judgment period, will manifest ignorance of the good deeds they have done the "brethren" of Christ, but only that doing such deeds to Christ's ministers are reckoned to their credit as having been done directly to Christ-that is all. Furthermore; Christ at no time "promised to prepare" a "kingdom" into "which the Saints might enter," but the kingdom of God, the kingdom of heaven, is ever spoken of as having been "prepared for them from the foundation of the world" (2 Nephi 6:7, with Matt. 25: 34, etc.), as "an everlasting kingdom" (Dan. 7: 27), and of which the "choice seer" ever taught the same in all his revelations and miscellaneous writings. The "kingdom" the the Saints shall inherit was "prepared from the foundation of the world" both in design, and in fact; and it remained and still remains for the Saints to prepare themselves to inherit and forever enjoy that "kingdom" when established in its "place" -the "new earth," which is yet to be prepared, and which is also now in course of preparation.

And to conclude; the editors have never claimed that the HERALD was, is, or ever will be "infallible" in respect to its answers to questions. But is it not rather probable that our heavenly Father will qualify every officer of the church for his own office, calling, and work, if such officer is faithful in attending strictly to his own official duties? We think so; and we therefore humbly trust the Lord to guide us in our duties in the HERALD office, also in such other duties as of right devolve upon us.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques .- Is it impossible for any one to speak, blaspheme or sin against the Holy Ghost, except those who have received it?

Ans.-Not in the sense that such acts are unpardonable. Sin is the transgression of law by an intelligent, capable, moral agent who knowingly acts upon his free will. Actual knowledge, and opportunity to obtain knowledge, form the ground or basis of sin. Jesus said to the Pharisees,-"All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men who receive me and repent; but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven unto men, * * * neither in this world, neither in the world to come."-Matt. 12:26, 27, Insp. Trans. The same sentiment is found in Mark 3: 24; Luke 12: 12, all of which doubtless refers to those and to those only who receive of the Spirit of God. That this view is the correct one may be seen in the following texts: "For He hath made it impossible for those who were once enlightened, and have tasted the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come, if they shall fall away, to be renewed again unto repentance; seeing they crucify unto themselves the Son of God afresh, and put him to an open shame,"-Heb. 6:4-6. Paul in this limits the unpardonable sin to "those who were once enlightened," and had "tasted" and "were made partakers of the Holy Ghost * * * and the word of God and the powers of the world to come." Peter taught similarly; "For if after they have escaped the pollutions of the world through the knowledge of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, they are again entangled therein, and overcome, the latter end is worse with them than the beginning. For it had been better for them not to have known the way of righteousness, than, after they have known it, to turn from the holy commandment delivered unto them."-2 Pet. 2:20, 21. And so taught the apostle John: "If any man see his brother sin a sin which is not unto death, he shall ask, and he shall give him life for them that sin not unto death. There is a sin unto death. I do not say that he shall bray for it," -1 John 5:16.

The Book of Mormon teaches the same: "After ye have repented of your sins, and witnessed unto the Father that ye are willing to keep my commandments, by the baptism of water, and have received the baptism of fire and of the Holy Ghost, and can speak with a new tongue, yea, even with the tongue of angels, and after this should deny me, it would have been better that ye had not known me."-2 Nephi 13:3. Again: "For behold, if ye deny the Holy Ghost when it once has had place in you, and ye know that ye deny it, behold, this is a sin which is unpardonable."—Alma 19:1.

We can not better close than by quoting these words: "Thus saith the Lord concerning all those who know my power, and have been made partakers thereof, and suffered themselves, through the power of the devil, to be overcome, and to deny the truth, and defy my power; they are they who are the sons of perdition, of whom I say it had been better for them never to have been born; for they are vessels or wrath, doomed to suffer the wrath of God, with the devil and his angels, in eternity, concerning whom I have said there is no forgiveness in this world nor the world to come; having denied the Holy Spirit, after having received it, and having denied the only begotten Son of the Father; having crucified him unto themselves and put him to an open shame: these are they who shall go away unto the lake ol fire and brimstone, with the devil and his angels."-Doc. Cov.

By thus comparing spiritual things with spiritual," we learn what Jesus designed to teach and did teach in Matthew 12: 27-32, and elsewhere in respect to sinning against the Holy Ghost.

GRADY'S ORATORY.

THE following extract is from a very brilliant address delivered at the commencement exercises of the University of Virginia, the 15th of last June, by Hon. Henry W. Grady, editor of the Atlanta Constitution, and will well repay a careful perusal:

"The germ of the best patriotism is in the love that a man has for the home he inhabits, for the soil he tills, for the trees that give him shade, and the hills that stand in his pathway. I teach my son to love Georgia-to love the soil that he stands on-the body of my old mother-the mountains that are her springing breasts, the broad acres that held her substance, the dimpling valleys in which her beauty rests, the forests that sing her songs of lullaby and of praise, and the brooks that run with her rippling laughter. The love of home-deep-rooted and abiding-that blurs the eyes of the dying soldier with the vision of an old homestead amid green fields and clustering trees-that follows the busy man through the clamoring world, persistent though put aside, and at last draws his tired feet from the highway and leads him through shady lanes and well remembered paths until, amid the scenes of his boyhood, he gathers up the broken threads of his life and owns the soil his conqueror-this-this lodged in the heart of the citizen is the saving principle of our government. We note the barracks of our standing army with its rolling drum and its fluttering flag as points of strength and protection. But the citizen standing in the doorway of his home-contented on his threshold-his family gathered about his hearthstone, while the evening of a well-spent day closes in scenes and sounds that are dearest—he shall save the republic when the drum tap is futile and the barracks are exhausted.

"This love should not be pent up or provincial. The home should be consecrated to humanity, and from its roof-tree should fly the flag of the republic. Every simple fruit gathered there, every sacrifice endured, and every victory won should bring better joy and inspiration in the knowledge that it will deepen the glory of our republic and widen the harvest of humanity. Be not like the peasant of France who hates the Paris he does not comprehend, but emulate the example of your fathers in the south who, holding to the sovereignty of the states, yet gave to the republic its chief glory of statesmanship, and under Jackson at New Orleans and Taylor and Scott in Mexico saved it twice from the storm of war. Inherit without fear or shame the principle of local self-government by which your fathers stood. For though entangled with an institution foreign to this soil, which, thank God, not planted by their hands, is now swept away, and with a theory bravely defended but now happily adjusted, that principle holds the imperishable truth that shall yet save this republic. The integrity of the state, its rights and its powersthese maintained with firmness but in loyaltythese shall yet by lodging the option of local affairs in each locality meet the needs of this vast and complex government, and check the headlong rush to that despotism that reason could not defend nor the armies of the czar maintain among a free and enlightened people. This issue is squarely made. It is centralized government and the money power on the one handagainst the integrity of the states and rights of the people on the other. At all hazard stand with the people and the threatened states. The choice may not easily be made. Wise men may hesitate and patriotic men divide. The culture, the strength, the mightiness of the rich and strong government—these will tempt and dazzle. But be not misled. Beneath this splendor is the canker of a disturbed and oppreseed people. It was from the golden age of Augustus that the Roman empire staggered to its fall. The integrity of the states and the rights of the people! Stand there—there is safety—there is the broad and enduring brotherhood-there, less of glory, but more of honor! Put patriotism above partisanship-and wherever the principle that protects the states against the centralists and the people against the plutocrats may lead follow without fear or faltering-for there the way of duty and of wisdom lies!

Exalt the citizen. As the State is the unit of government he is the unit of the state. Teach him that his home is his castle and his sovereignty rests beneath his hat. Make himself selfrespecting, self-reliant and responsible. Let him lean on the state for nothing that his own arm can do and on the government for nothing that his state can do. Let him cultivate independence to the point of sacrifice and learn that humble things with unbartered liberty are better than splendors bought with its price. Let him neither surrender his individuality to government nor merge it with the mob. Let him stand upright and fearless-a freeman born of freemen, sturdy in his own strength, dowering his family in the sweat of his brow, loving to his state, loyal to his republic, earnest in his allegiance wherever it rests, but building his altar in the midst of his household gods and shrining in his own heart the uttermost temple of its liberty.

Go out, determined to magnify the community in which your lot is cast. Cultivate its small economies. Stand by its young industries. Commercial dependencies is a chain that galls every day. A factory built at home, a book published, a shoe or a book made, these are steps in that diffusion of thought and interest that is needed. Teach your neighbors to withdraw from the vassalage of distant capitalists, and pay, under any sacrifice, the mortgage on the home or the land. By simple and prudent lives stay within your own resources and establish the freedom of your community. Make every village and crossroads as far as may be sovereign to its own wants. Learn that thriving country-sides with room for limbs, conscience, and liberty are better than great cities with congested wealth and population. Preserve the straight and simple homogeneity of our people. Welcome emigrants, but see that they come as friends and neighbors, to mingle their blood with ours, to build their houses in our fields, and to plant their Christian faith on our hills, and honoring our constitution and reverencing our God, to confirm the simple beliefs in which we have been reared, and which we should transmit unsullied to our children. Stand by these old-fashioned beliefs. Science hath revealed no better faith than that you learned at your mother's knee-nor has knowledge made a wiser and better book than the worn old Bible that, thumbed by hands long since still and blurred with the tears of eyes long since closed, held the simple annals of your family and the heart and conscience of your homes.

"Honor and emulate the virtues and the faith of your forefathers, who, learned, were never wise above a knowledge of God and his gospel; who, great, were never exalted above a humble trust in God and his mercy.

"Let me sum up what I have sought to say in this hurried address. Your republic-on the glory of which depends all that men hold dearis menaced with great dangers. Against these dangers defend her as you would defend the most precious concerns of your own life. Against the dangers of centralizing all political powers put the approved and imperishable principle of local self-government. Between the rich and poor, now drifting into separate camps, build up the great middle class that, neither drunk with wealth nor embittered by poverty, shall lift up the suffering and control the strong. To the jangling of races and creeds that threaten the courts of men and the temples of God, oppose the home and the citizen, a homogeneous and honest people, and the simple faith that sustained your fathers and mothers in their stainless lives and led them serene and smiling into the valley of the shadow.

"Let it be understood in my parting words to you that I am no pessimist as to this republic. I always bet on sunshine in America. I know that my country has reached the point of perilous greatness and that strange forces not to be measured or comprehended are hurrying her to heights that dazzle and blind all mortal eyesbut I know that beyond the uttermost glory is enthroned the Lord God Almighty, and that when the hour of her trial has come he will lift up his everlasting gates and bend down above her in mercy and in love. For with her he has surely lodged the ark of his covenant with the sons of men. Emerson wisely said: "Our whole history looks like the last effort by divine providence in behalf of the human race." And the republic will endure. Centralism will be checked and liberty saved-plutocracy overthrown and equality restored. The struggle for human rights never goes backward among English-speaking peoples. Our brothers across the sea have fought their way from despotism to liberty, and in the wisdom of local self-government have planted colonies around the world. This very day Mr. Gladstone, the wisest man that has lived since your Jefferson died-with the light of another world beating in his face until he seems to have caught the wisdom of the infinite and towers half human and half divine from his eminence-this man, turning away from the traditions of his early life, begs his countrymen to strip the crown of its last usurped authority and lodge it with the people, where it belongs. The trend of the times is with us. The world moves steadily from gloom to brightness. And bending down humbly, as Elisha did, and praying that my eyes shall be made to see, I catch the vision of this republic-its mighty forces in balance and its unspeakable glory falling on all its children-chief among the federation of Englishspeaking people-plenty streaming from its borders and light from its mountain tops-working out its mission under God's approving eye, until the dark continents are opened-and the highways of earth established and the shadows lifted -and the jargon of the nations stilled and the perplexities of Babel straightened—and under one language, one liberty, and one God all the nations of the world, hearkening to the American drum-beat and girding up their loins, shall march amid the breaking of the millennial dawn into the paths of righteousness and of peace!"

"Speak gently, it is better far To rule by love than fear."

SCOLDING IS NEVER IN ORDER.

Many a father who will not strike his child feels free to scold him. And a scolding mother is not always deemed the severest and most unjust of mothers. Yet, while it is sometimes right to strike a child, it is at no time right to scold one. Scolding is, in fact, never in order, in dealing with a child, or in any other duty of life.

To "scold" is to assail with noisy speech. The word itself seems to have a primary meaning akin to that of barking or howling. From its earliest use it has borne a bad reputation. In common law, "a common scold" is a public nuisance, against which the civil authority may be invoked by the disturbed neighborhood. And it is true to day as it was when spoken by John Skelton, four centuries ago, that

"A sclaunderous tunge, a tunge of a skolde, Worketh more mischiefe than can be tolde."

Scolding is always an expression of a bad spirit and of a loss of temper. This is as truly the case when a lovely mother scolds her child for breaking his playthings wilfully, or for soiling his third dress in one forenoon by playing in the gutter which he was forbidden to approach, as when one apple-woman yells out her abuse of another apple woman in a street-corner quarrel. In either case the essence of the scolding is in the multiplication of hot words in expression of strong feelings that, while eminently natural, ought to be held in better control. The words themselves may be very different in the two cases, but the spirit and method are much alike in both. It is scolding in the one case as in the other; and scolding is never in order.

If a child has done wrong, a child needs talking to; but no parent ought to talk to a child while that parent is unable to talk in a natural tone of voice, and with carefully measured words. If the parent is tempted to speak rapidly, or to multiply words without stopping to weigh them, or to show an excited state of feeling, the parent's first duty is to gain entire self-control. Until that control is secured, there is no use of the parent's trying to attempt any measure of child-training. The loss of self-control is for the time being an utter loss of power for the control of others. This is as true in one sphere as in another.

An admirable work on "Dog-Training" says on this very point, to the dog-trainer: "You must keep perfectly cool, and must suffer no sign to escape of any anger or impatience; for if you can not control your temper, you are not the one to train a dog," "Do not allow yourself," says this instructor, "under any circumstances to speak to your pupil in anything but your ordinary tone of voice." And, recognizing the difficulties of the case, he adds: "Exercise an unwearied patience; and if at any time you find the strain upon your nerves growing a little tense, leave him at once, and wait until you are perfectly calm before resuming the lesson." That is good counsel for him who would train a dog—or a child: for in either dog-training or child-training, scolding—loud and excited talking—is never in order.

In giving commands, or in giving censure to a child, the fewer and the more calmly spoken words the better. A child soon learns that scolding means less than quiet talking; and he even comes to find a certain satisfaction in waiting silently until the scolder has blown off the surplus feeling which vents itself in this way. There are times, indeed, when words may be multiplied to advantage in explaining to a child the nature and consequences of his offense, and the reasons why he should do differently in the future; but such words should always be spoken in gentleness, and in self-controlled earnestness. Scolding, rapidly spoken censure and protest in the exhibit of strong feeling, is never in order as a means of training and directing a child.

Most parents, even the gentler and kindlier parents, scold their children more or less. Rarely can a child say, "My parents never scold me." Many a child is well trained in spite of his being scolded. Many a parent is a good parent notwithstanding the fact that he scolds his children. But no child is ever helped or benefited by any scolding that he receives; and no parent ever helps or benefits his child by means of a scolding. Scolding is not always ruinous, but it is always out of place.

If, indeed, scolding has any good effect at all, that effect is on the scolder, and not on the scolded. Scolding is the outburst of strong feeling that struggles for the mastery under the pressure of some outside provocation. It never benefits the one against whom it is directed, nor yet those who are its outside observers, however it may give physical relief to the one who indulges in it. If, therefore, scolding is an unavoidable necessity on the part of any parent, let that parent at once shut himself, or herself, up in a room, where the scolding can be indulged in without harming any one. But let it be remembered that, as an element in child-training, scolding is never, never, in order.—Selected.

AT LAST.

BY J G. WHITTIER.

When on my day of life the night is falling,
And in the winds from unsunned spaces blown
I hear far voices out of darkness calling
My feet to paths unknown;

Thou who hast made my home of life so pleasant Leave not its tenant when its walls decay; O Love Divine, O Helper, ever present, Be thou my strength and stay!

Be near me when all else is from me drifting,
Earth, sky, home's pictures, days of shade and shine,
And kindly faces to my own uplifting
The love that answers mine.

I have but Thee, O Father! Let thy spirit Be with me then to comfort and uphold; No gate of pearl, no branch of palm I merit, Nor street of shining gold.

Suffice it if—my good and ill unreckoned,
And both forgiven through thy abounding grace—
I find myself by hands familiar beckoned
Unto my fitting place.

Some humble door among thy many mansions, Some sheltering shade where sin and striving cease, And flows forever through heaven's green expansions The river of thy peace.

There, from the music round about me stealing, I fain would learn the new and holy song, And find, at last, beneath Thy trees of healing, The life for which I long.

VICTORIA, Ill.

Dear Sisters:-I rejoice daily that God has given us the privilege of bringing all our cares and sorrows as well as our songs of joy to him. And when I read the letter of some dear true soul, I long to say, "Be of good cheer, for God is not slack concerning his promises." I would say to Vive Vale that I think we have but a short time at least. It is twenty-two years this coming September since the Lord, in his infinite mercy and goodness, showed to the writer in answer to prayer, the truth and divine origin of this Latter Day Work. And for weeks, and I don't know but I might say for months after, my mind was so filled with the beauty of the heavenly vision, that my household labors (which were not light) did not seem to tire me in the least, and in all the long years since then, I have never had a shadow of a doubt concerning the ultimate triumph of the work; but have always trembled for those who have undertaken to counsel or rather to correct those whom God has placed at the head of his church. Now, lest I weary you I will close by exhorting every one that believes the Lord hears and answers prayer, to be faithful, humble and constant in prayer. Remember when the powers of darkness are hovering around us that we have the sure promise that we shall not be tempted above what we are able to bear, if we put our trust in him who is mighty to save.

Now dear sisters, who have the ability to write, do not grow weary in writing, for you know in former times not many learned or wise, according to the wisdom of the world, were chosen; and many a precious soul has found favor at the throne of grace, who would feel it an impossibilito write to the Herald. Now let me plead for the erring ones, (and who has not erred?) for to err is human but to forgive divine.

In years gone by we have been cheered and strengthened by one who I hope to hear again telling the gospel story, for the children of the solated ones need to be nourished and fed until they are well grounded in the faith. And I sometimes feel that if the elders were not a little fearful about following their Master that the law might be more fully taught, and some be led to honor the law of tithing who now treat it with indifference.

Ever praying that we may all work together for the good of the cause, I remain your sister, S. E. Cook.

CRESCENT CITY, Iowa, June 27th.

Dear Sister Frances:—The sisters of the Crescent branch met at the house of sister Adams for the purpose of organizing a Prayer Union. We organized with eleven members, elected sister E. J. Hough president, sister E. J. Terry secretary, and sister B. Dunkle treasurer. We pay ten cents to become members and five cents each week thereafter. We have good meetings with the promise of greater blessings if we are faithful, and I know God will keep his promise if we are faithful, for I have proved him in days that are gone. When my prayers are not answered I know that the fault is in me and not in my God.

Dear sisters, I ask you to pray for us that we may be blessed. I for one feel like pressing on though many times my wav is so dark, but I ask you to pray for me that I may not faint by the way. This latter day work is my hope and my stay.

I just received word that sister Duell of the Council Bluffs Prayer Union is to be buried to-day at two o'clock, to late for me to go. I regret it very much. She was a dear, worthy Saint, a Saint in every sense of the word.

I had almost forgoten to tell you we are building a new church, or rather getting the material on the ground for one.

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I am your sister.

VALLEY VIEW, Iowa, July 6th.

Dear Sister Frances:-It is some time since I made an attempt to write to the Home Column, but my negligence was only through my inability to write anything of interest or benefit to its readers. But I am happy to say I still have the same desire to press on in the gook work which I know and can testify is of God. We have had many evidences of God's goodness and mercy to us. Herald, Hope and Autumn Leaves are always read with much interest by us and are ever welcome visitors at our home. They bring many words of cheer and comfort, especially in the days of trouble and persecution. We have been and still are greatly encouraged to look above the things of this world to our Heavenly Father who is the author and giver of all good, and who is ever ready to hear and answer prayer, and he has heard and answered ours many times in sickness and other troubles. Twice when our little boy was very sick he was healed in answer to our prayers to God; and when our little child died a few months ago-he was suffering intensely with violent convulsions—we prayed earnestly to our Heavenly Father to relieve him of his pain, and in a few mtnutes after we arose from our knees the convulsions ceased and he passed peacefully and quietly away to the Lord who gave him. We have much to be thankful for when we realize our unworthiness before him. and dear sisters let us be faithful and humble. Whoever on earth may forsake us or turn against us, we know that he is ever near and ready to bless; and may we each one live so that when we are called from earth we may receive the great reward of eternal life, in the kingdom of God, together with the many of our loved ones gone on before. What a glorious meeting that will be! I would like to say to sister Walker that the Autumn Leaves is much appreciated by some of our neighbors where I have loaned it to be read. We attend meetings every Sabbath when possible, and our Sunday School is well attended. Fearing I have taken up too much space, which others with more words of encouragement might fill, I will close. Ever trusting in the love of our Savior, I remain,

Your sister in Christ,
THIRZA CHAPMAN.

THE LADIES' PRAYER UNION.

The ladies of the San Francisco branch of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, founded a Prayer Union and held their first meeting at sister Potter's house on Thursday, June 27th. Sister Knight was elected president and opened the meeting by singing and prayer which was followed by the testimonies of the different sisters. Our meeting lasted about two hours, and all thought the Spirit of God rested down upon our little number, and all seemed inclined to pray to Him to look down in tender mercy upon the sick and heal each and every one of them.

We prayed most earnestly for those who wished our prayers and whose names were in last month's Herald; also for sister Potter's son and child who are greatly afflicted. Sister Curry was elected secretary. Our meeting then closed with the doxology, and we were dismissed by sister Potter, in the German language.

SISTER POTTER, Pres., SISTER CURRY, Sec'y.

POLLUTED ICE.

Users of ice must read up on the recent investigations of Kedzie, Pengree and Prudden, showing that ice taken from polluted streams is not purified by freezing. Kedzie tells us that if taken from streams containing rotting vegetable matter or sawdust it will produce diarrheas. In 1875, at Rye Beach, an epidemic broke out in a large hotel, and was traced at last to ice taken from an adjacent pond. The water of this pond in summer was foul and stinking with putrescent matter. Organic matter, as well as bacteria, is not eliminated by any ordinary degree of cold. Too many of our streams are the recipients of sewage. This is the ice age of civilization, and we must have it pure.—Sel.

BEEF FOR HOT BLOOD.

The idea is beginning to gain vogue with others who have never considered the subject in the light that the vegetarians do, that our diet is altogether too strong in the matter of the more heating meats; so much is this the case that it is maintained that mild wines do really less harm to the general system than flesh that is loaded with red blood. This strong meat, such, for instance, as beef, the eating of which, it is said, frequently generates too hot blood, gives us our reckless activity, our intensity and many of our new diseases. White meats, vegetables, oils and fruits, in long tried use among the ancients, are in this view a safer and more wholesome diet than that which we have so long considered the best to be had.—Sel.

Correspondence.

KANSAS CITY, Missouri, July 26th.

Bro. Blair: The Herald and Autumn Leaves are welcome visitors to our house, and I trust ever will be. The letters and articles under the head of communications are also very instructive and edifying. We are comforted and strengthened day by day by the blessings of God which he has bestowed and is bestowing upon his Saints both here and elsewhere. As a branch we are few in number in such a large city. There are so many ways and means provided by the people of the world to draw away the hearts of the children of men, especially the young. May the Saints remember us always in their prayers. We have of late been strengthened by the knowledge that God is confirming his work by signs following: On the 22d Bro George Edwards' oldest child was taken very sick. They sent for the doctor, and he pronounced it very dangerously ill and gave some medicine, but by advice Bro. George made up his mind to send for the elders. Bro. St. Clair from Independence came down, and the doctor came in during the administration and said the child would die if they quit giving her medicine. They told him that he need not call again for they were going to try some other remedy; and they did and the child did not die, but after being administered to arose, called for a drink, and next day was playing with other children. And thus the work rolls on. Bro. David Winn opened up a new place for preaching at Fry school-house, six miles south of this city. Great crowds turn out to hear and the best of attention is given. We hope to reap ere long if we faint not.

Did you hear the latest city news? "The Mormons are building a Temple at Independence, and Utah is furnishing the money for the same!" Why do the heathen rage and the people imagine vain things! Hoping I shall be enabled to hold out faithful,

In bonds of love,

HENRY SPARLING.

Dear Herald:—What untoward circumstance warranted my report of private donations and disposition thereof I know not, but do know I mailed said report on or about March 1st, 1889, from Flora Vista, New Mexico, as has been my wont. While, therefore, I regret its non-appearance in the Bishop's report, I have no compunction of conscience arising from a design to omit a law-imposed duty.

From Saints at points in Nebraska and Colorado in the past conference year I was assisted financially beyond my expectations which placed me under renewed obligation to strive more zealously—to still merit their respect and confidence which such liberality evinced. Nothing seems more gratifying than the confidence of zealous and well-meaning Saints which to gain and retain involves a necessity for the evincing of a gospel imposed rectitude. Policy, or a cringing sycophancy may and will secure prestige, but it will be of but short duration; pure friendship that is as lasting as the hills is wedded to no such companions. I have a knowledge that more desired to help but could not because they had not. Such always have my heartfelt sympathy, and think the warrant that in such cases God takes the will for the deed, a matter for thanksgiving, as therein we see dazzling proof of equity but little known and practiced among men.

I shall not soon forget the thankfulness, begotten through a liberal donation from a non-member, or one of those whom Matthew designates sheep in contradistinction to the goats. If a cup of cold water merits a reward, then does the above gift merit a greater reward. And those of the brethren who shall be fortunate enough to be present will feel their souls aglow as the precious words shall fall from the lips of the king, "Come ye blessed," etc. While convinced as to the duty of elders reporting to the Bishop, the legitimacy of spreading such reports across the sky, as it were, at a great expense, does not appear to me. I therefore think such an outlay of money prodigal. But shall think differently should such proof come to the surface, which is possible if it exists.

In gospel bonds,

JAMES CAFFALL.

FALL RIVER, Massachusetts.

Dear Herald: — Thinking God was willing for me to inform the readers of the Herald, Autumn Leaves and church publications, that I your weak brother, have blessings above what I deserve, yet not only am well and mine, and for one have the blessed privilege of hearing the gospel preached, and read and study the blessed works of the Saints. My Compendium I admire, Autumn Leaves is a treasure, and I thought "The Ruins Revisited" would be a helper also. Now, brethren and sisters, all our useless habits leave off, and the most of us can not only have all the works of the latter day work, but the Spirit of the gospel also. I feel that I need the prayers of God's people along with mine.

I used to know Bro. Wm. Street and am thankful he yet holds the fort and writes good, encouraging words now and then to the Herald and Hope. Remember me at the throne of mercy.

D. F. COOMBS.

DETROIT, Minn., July 22d.

Dear Brethren:-When the Herald comes I often first look to the letters and Home Column for familiar names, especially those from my old home in Maine. So I feel impressed to say a few words, thinking that some would be glad to know that I yet remembered them and was pleased to hear a cheering word from all. Doubtless some remember the rescue of the crew of the schooner Flora Crowley (as I find it recorded in the Herald of June 1st, 1878), of which I was one. I will here add another testimony of the Father's goodness to me Some two years ago when I had been lying sick for a long time and all around had given me up to die, and even my family had no hopes of my recovery, and thought I had better have a doctor, but I would not consent. However, one morning we thought the hour had come as I began to breathe heavy, and my speech left me, but yet I could hear and see my family around my bed side crying. My pain had mostly left me but I was much distressed for breath. yet they held me up in a sitting posture and fanned me to keep life in me as long as they could. All at once I heard my boy say, "Mother, has any one prayed?" She said, "No." I soon heard them praying in the next bed room. Soon afterwards the distress left me and my voice returned and I was free from distress and pain and felt very happy. I soon bowed my head on my pillow to express my thanks in silence—as I often pray in silence—I had a desire to know by what process I was so quickly helped. I had taken no medicine nor had the elders laid hands on me at that time; but I had been administered to at times long before. All at once I saw a white robed messenger standing with his hands over my head. I say his because he had some beard on his face; and his robe was shining white. From that hour I began to recover my health again, and do most of my farm work since. I am not well now, for the last two weeks, so I improve my time studying the three books.

I do not expect to see you all in this life, but let us lay aside every weight and the sin that so easily besets us and run with patience the race set before us, looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith. This one of the many evidences I have had of God's goodness and mercy.

A. TABBUT.

BENNETT, Nebraska, July 27th.

Editors Herald:-I have been preaching here and at Palmyra branch since the 13th inst. The Saints in this vicinity are doing well; there are some exceptions however. We had a time of great refreshing at the social meeting, last Sunday, at the branch. The gifts of the Spirit were manifest, and every one seemed greatly blessed. One woman, not yet a member, testified that she desired to become a Christian and asked an interest in the prayers of the Saints. Her husband also arose and presented himself as a candidate for baptism. We shall administer the ordinance to-morrow. We have had good attention and fair audiences at our preaching services in Bennett, and also had a splendid social service on Wednesday evening. We are not "wearied" with the sheep and goat question, but on the contrary we are greatly interested, and desire to learn the whole truth, that we may come to a perfect understanding in regard to it if possible. I have not been more interested in any question discussed in the Herald in a long time. I send a few questions which have presented themselves to my mind, and which may greatly assist me and perhaps others in arriving at a knowledge of the truth in the matter.

> Your brother in Christ, CHARLES H. PORTER.

> > WEIR, Kansas, July 29th.

Bro. Blair:—During the Spring and summer I have spent most of my time in Cherokee and Crawford counties, part of the time in different towns and cities preaching upon the streets; for although the school-houses can be had, I find that ten-fold more can ofttimes be reached upon the streets than could be induced to go to a house to hear. I spent some time in Pittsburg and vicinity, a city of some eight thousand, engaged mostly in coal mining and zinc smelting. Sometimes on the street I would have nearly five hundred, and when I would preach in the school-house forty or fifty would sometimes attend. Much interest is manifested in various places. The "sanctified" people are making great efforts to unite all in their peculiar faith, holding tent meetings for a month in one place. Amidst so much confusion it seems very hard indeed to persuaded any to accept the true faith. I am preaching this week in Weir City. Next week I shall go to Webb City, Missouri, where our district conference convenes August 9th; after which I shall go to other places where I have promised to preach. When preaching on streets I have been urgently requested by those who heard for the first time, to visit their homes and preach. Bro. Evan Davis has recently arrived from Wales.

CALIFORNIA, Mo., July 29th.

Dear Herald: Since April conference I have been engaged almost every Sunday in the ministry. I have preached at Knobnoster, Bevier, St. Joseph and Independence. At Knobnoster, with the assistance of the local brethren, Wells and Keyler we have made some advancement; have baptized three, one an old gentleman, Bro. Mc Millen; a young lady, Minnie Garr, and yesterday a young man, Washington McCray. We have by the authority of Bro. Luff organized a branch to be known as the Knobnoster branch, ordained Bro. John Keyler priest, Gomer Wells teacher, and Bro. Wightman deacon; Elder J. H. Wells president. Numbers confess their belief in the work, but are not quite ready to obey for some cause known only to themselves. One gentleman, a lawyer, told me Sunday night that he was perfectly satisfied with the church but would not state his reasons for not obeying; many others are like him.

Opposition of a mean, low order, such as sectarian priests are capable of offering, is at whiteheat, yet we had a good congregation yesterday, and at the water where we again addressed the large company assembled.

Bro. Wells and family are alive in the work, and this is what makes sectarianism howl. Where the Saints are as eep no trouble will bother them. The work is looking well and the brethren are filling school-house appointments.

BAY PORT, Michigan, July 27th.

Brn. Smith and Blair: - I have often been impressed to write a few lines in behalf of this great work in which I have enlisted. I was a member of the M. E. Church for seven years. I enjoyed a portion of God's spirit, but two years ago, the 13th of this month, I accepted the gospel, and since then I received God's Holy Spirit. Now I could stand before the whole world and testify that I know the work is true. I am glad I am in the work, for I have received more in one meeting with the Saints than I did the seven years before. I can also say I know the signs follow the believers. I have heard the gift of tongues, have heard the interpretation, have heard God speak through his servants calling others to preach the gospel, and I have been

When conference was here at Bay Port a year ago, last October, I was not able to go as we lived a half a mile from the church. On Sunday morning I called for the elders of the church, and was administered to. I walked to prayer-meeting the next Wednesday night and home again, and have had good health ever since. Before that I don't know as there was ever a year passed without I either had the doctor or was taking medicine. Since then I have neither had the doctor nor taken a drop of medicine. For a year and a half before this I was an invalid, not able to do my work only by spells; but now I feel free. Since God's servants commanded the disease to leave my body I am bound down by Satan no longer; to God be all praise.

One of your sisters carnestly contending for for the faith once delivered to the Saints,

MRS F. Z. HARDER.

FONTANELLE, Iowa, July 28th.

Editors Herald:—Bro. Briggs Alden is very much pleased with brother Blair's sermon on the Book of Mormon published in late Herald, and says there is nothing so good for the growing generation that he has ever heard; and that every American citizen that can understand anything should read it.

W. H. BRIDGMAN.

WHITE ROCK, Mich, July 23d.

Dear Herald:—Feeling a desire and having an opportunity to write, I will endeavor to bear my testimony to the restored Gospel. I am thankful to say that I know for myself that this work is of God, for I have proved it in different ways, and I am not ashamed to be classed among the despised ones, nor need we care for we know the God of heaven does acknowledge us as his people when we observe and keep his commands. My desire is to live my religion in this life in such a manner that I may be ready for the coming of the Bridegroom.

Enclosed find twenty cents as a birthday offering. Ever praying that the Home Column may do much good for the cause we love,

I am your sister in the gospel covenant,
MARY E. RAWSON.

SANTA CLARA, Dakota, July 22d.

Dear Herald:—On the last trip of Br. Oebring and myself we baptized eleven. We excited considerable of an interest in Farnsworth and also near Arlington. They want us back again. Near Arlington there is a minister who wishes to lock arms with sus on doctrine. We have written, asking him to write up propositions, and then we will complete the arrangements. I think it will do much good. There are a number there who are asking the Saints when we will again come that way.

Shortly after we left Farnsworth two Utah elders came through and gave out meetings in the same place where we had held our meetings. The names of the elders are J. H. Dennis and Isaac Wall. Mr. Dennis did all the preaching. Bro. Gray, writing, says, "He built the mountain of the Lord's house and rolled the stone spoken of by Daniel to the top of the Rocky mountains, in his sermon Friday evening." They were told that it wouldn't do any good to preach against the Josephites there. At this place Br. Oehring had baptized five. I had led six into the waters near Arlington. We intend to push this field this fall and winter, the Lord willing.

Last Saturday evening we met with quite a loss. Lightning struck our large barn, setting it afire. We tried to save the horses. I succeeded in getting out one, and father got out a mare and coit. I tried to get out another but did not succeed; the result was that I nearly lost my life, but finally got out considerably burned on the hands, also about the shoulder, head and neck. My right hand is not burned so but what I can use it to write, and I will be all right again in a short time.

Our loss was about fifteen hundred dollars. Three horses were burned. The colts and cows were in pasture and so escaped.

Yours in bonds,

E. DAY BENNETT.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CAMP MEETING.

As per notice, Saints and members of the Southern California District Sabbath School Association began to assemble in the beautiful grove, near the big lake in Laguna Canyon, on the morning of July 2d, and by the time the sun had crept behind the hills quite a little city of tents showed their white walls among the trees, and the hum of happy voices floated everywhere, making glad the listening ear.

The large tent had already been pitched and furnished with seats, table, pulpit and organ, and by half-past seven o'clock all was in readiness for the lecture-feast promised to the prompt. Bro. Mills then took for his subject, "The Israelites; their origin and history from Abraham to Moses." And, quoting from the Book of Abraham as well as from the Bible, gave a most complete and satisfactory exposition of his

Promptly at 9:30 on Wednesday morning, July 3d, the Association met, as per adjournment at its last meeting on March 16th, for the transaction of such business as might be necessary for the comfort or pleasure of the Association and Saints assembled during the present series of meet-The Supt. of the Association, Sr. V. H. Goff requested, because of ill health, that a president pro tem be elected, and Bro. Daniel Garner was so chosen. As Bro. Garner was also the Association's secretary, he appointed Bro. S. G. Wright to assist him in reporting the meetings. committee consisting of Srs. Nellie Holt and Ina Smith, and Brn. A. A. Goff, E. J. French, S. H. Garner and S. G. Wright. was then elected to decorate the tent on the morning of July fourth. A committee on games was also elected; Sr. Tina Salter being chosen to take charge of the little ones, and Brn. Geo. Stevens and A. A. Goff to take charge of the young folks. Subsequent to another meeting the Pres. appointed another committee, consisting of S. G. Wright, Ina Smith, Sam'l Dungan and Mary Patterson to take charge of the social meeting to be held on the evening of July 4th.

A committee on grounds had been appointed prior to the meeting of the Association consisting of Brn. E. J. French and Howard Thompson of Laguna, and Bro. Chas. Salter of El Toro, and this committee now reported concerning the arrangements they had made. The grounds had been procured free of cost, the large tent had been pitched, wagons were in readiness to convey parties coming by train to and from the depot, water would be sunplied daily in barrels for the use of the people, and hay would be brought on the grounds for the horses, all free of cost. Bread, potatoes and garden vegetables could also be procured by those who desired them. A vote of thanks was then tendered to the committee for their earnest efforts, and for the excellent arrangements they had made. The meeting then adjourned till 10:30 a.m. Hymn 259 was lung, and benediction pronounced by Bro. D. Garner.

At 10:30 the children present, under eighteen years of age, assembled for a Bible lesson which was conducted by Bro. D. Garner. Older ones were not forbidden to take part, and several visitors were present in the tent. Some very good instruction was given, and the children answered their questions well.

At 2:30 o'clock all interested in S. S. work and especially S. S. teaching were invited to be present, and the tent was well filled. The meeting was opened by Bro. D. Garner and then given in charge of Sr. V. H. Goff. The greater part of the time was occupied by the giving of useful hints and suggestions by different individuals present, Brn E. J. French, D. S. Mills, John Brush, H. L. Holt, A. L. Starkey, D. Garner, and Sr. Bird speaking to the interest and profit of all present. Near the close of the meeting Sr. Goff rehearsed the various points which had been presented, and in addition read and explained an abstract which she had prepared as a suggestive guide to teachers and pupils. The interest throughout the meeting was excellent, and it is believed that a greater impetus has been given the S. S. work by this one meeting than by any three efforts previously made. To this district it is now an assured fact that the preparation for effectual S. S. work has begun.

At 8:30 p. m. the Saints re-assembled to listen to a lecture by Bro. H. C. Smith. His subject was the "Exodus of the children of İsrael." A blackboard map had been prepared by Bro. Smith, and with the aid of this both eye and ear were enabled to take knowledge of Israel's doings. The interest in the lecture was profound, and the Saints were edified by many points not thought of before concerning the similarity of God's method of organizing his people in all ages. This ended the first days' meetings of the Association, and all sought their tents that night with a desire to thank God in their hearts that they had made the effort to come.

The morning of July 4th, broke sunny and clear, filling every heart with joy and gladness. The very atmosphere seemed in harmony with the feelings of the people, for this was to be a day of gladness, a day of thankfulness, and a day of social intercourse for young and old. The morning exercises were not to open till 10 o'clock in order to give the decorating committee time to do their work, and when this time finally arrived the tent was filled with campers, Laguna residents, and with visitors from Santa Ana and the surrounding neighborhood.

As the Laguna Saints and children had prepared a special programme for the day it had been decided that the president of the association and the Supt. of the Laguna S. S. should jointly conduct the morning and afternoon exercises. A large flag gracefully hung from near the center of the tent on the inside, the stand was beautifully draped with starred cloth, and the many sides of the tent were covered with cypress boughs, whose dark green was relieved by pale ferns and bright flowers, causing the whole to present a beautiful appearance. Outside the tent, on the top of an adjacent tree which was visible from the road, floated another large flag which the sisters of Laguna had made with their own hands. A pretty banner representing the Laguna S. S. also added to the appearance of the inside. After the opening hymns had been sung, several recitations were given by children appropriate to the occasion, after which Elder E. J. French was called on to address the people in the place of Elder Q. S. Sparks, of Los Angeles, who had been unable to be present on account of severe illness.

Although Bro. French had had only an hour's notice his address was excellent, and the remarks appropriate. One idea advanced was that we did not meet amidst the crash of cannon and the noise of other inventions borrowed from heathen nations. but that we met in quiet and peace to commemorate the establishment of a government which should harbor peace and in which the everlasting Kingdom of peace was to be established. The address was followed by instrumental music and singing, which was enjoyed by all.

A long table was spread after the exercises were over and a picnic dinner enjoy-ed. "Calathumpians," in tasteful costumes, afterwards produced a good laugh and helped to digest the dinner; and at 2:30 all re-assembled to hear the children's pro-

The children acquitted themselves well (they will be more fully noticed in the Hope), and for over an hour, old and young were delighted with wit, wisdom, pathos, and mirth, interspersed with music and singing. At the close of this session a little buisness was transacted—the Association tendering a hearty vote of thanks to the Laguna Saints for their hospitality and other kindness extended during the meetings. A resolution was then passed asking the Association to arrange at its regular business meetings for one or more meetings similar to this in character from year to year.

The meeting then adjourned after singing, and the rest of the afternoon was spent by middle-aged, youth, and young in outof-door converse and games. This district has never seen so many grown people, including women as well as men, enjoying together innocent recreative exercises out-of-doors. All seemed to heartily enjoy themselves; the outsiders saying, "How is it; they all seem like one family!"

At 8 o'clock the Saints in camp assembled for a quiet social time at the tent, and informal recitations, songs, charades, made the time pass pleasantly, and an interesting half-hour lecture by Bro. S. G. Wright, descriptive of life in Australia was delivered, which thus closed our S. S. meetings, and with one remark our communication The children, whom we will also close. have not noticed so fully here as we will elsewhere, seemed to feel differently here than we have ever before seen them. They did not feel as though their presence was merely tolerated, and that they had no part in the good times had, but the light of interest shone in their eyes, and they anticipated the exercises with as much pleasure as any of the others, filling well the place that has at last been provided for May God foster and bless the them. work.

REUNION IN CALIFORNIA.

Bro. W. W. Blair :- Enclosed find minutes of our reunion, &c. They are longer than I intended, but can not well abridge them and give what I wish to express. Sr. Goff and Bro. Dan Garner also send you report of Sunday school reunion, which I suppose will appear first in same number of the Herald with these minutes if you have room. We are enjoying a fair degree of health and rejoicing in spirit, thanking God for his loving kindness to us. We are praying earnestly in faith for Bro. Joseph's success in Utah. We feel there is something of importance transpiring there now, and that Joseph's words may be God's words to that people, and accepted as such by them. I pray God to stir them up to realize their situation now and accept of God's servant, even if the heavens are rent and the earth heaves beneath their feet till men fall to the ground and cry aloud for help; and that his words may continually ring in their ears day and night till they obey and find peace to their souls! Yours in the covenant; D. S. MILLS.

LAGUNA REUNION.

SANTA ANA, Cal., July 12th. Bro. Wm. W. Blair: - After the Sunday school reunion and glorious Fourth exercises held in our tent at Laguna, the Saints assembled July 5th, at 9:30 a.m., in prayer and testimony, Elders D. S. Mills and John Brush in charge. It was a live meeting, in which the Spirit of God was manifest in a marked degree, and the Saints rejoiced in it. At 11:30, after a short intermission, met and organized by electing Apostle H. C. Smith to preside, D. S. Mills, assistant; Br. Sidney G. Wright, secretary; Brn. E. J. French, Charles Salter and Howard Thompson were continued as a committee on arrangements and reception.

Moved and carried that the president and assistant appoint meetings and speakers during this series of meetings, not forgetting to include themselves.

Sister Patterson was then elected organist, and requested to select a choir to assist her in singing.

The president delivered an able and instructive discourse from Matthew 12: 36. Prayer and testimony meeting announced by the president for 2: 30 p.m.; closing hymn 238, benediction by D. S. Mills.

Met at hour of appointment, D. S. Mills and Albert Starkey in charge. During this meeting the Saints enjoyed a season long to be remembered. The earnest supplications in prayer, and the wonderful testimonies borne, were approved of God and sealed by the Holy Spirit in a most positive manner, and the tongues given were assuring and comforting. hours seemed short for such a soul-inspiring time. Benediction by J. F. Burton.

Met at eight; prayer by H. C. Smith, then preaching by H. L. Holt, making some good points on latter day events; benediction by H. C. Smith.

Saturday, July 6th, 9 a.m. Met in prayer-special object for healing certain ones named of afflictions of long standing-in charge of P. M. Betts and George Bird. A blessed season was enjoyed for one and a half hours, during which the very fount of light was opened. Bro. Daniel Garner, in open vision, beheld a glorious light envelop the place, and each one who prayed he saw lifted up and conversing and pleading with God in behalf of the afflicted ones around. It filled his soul with love and praise to God the giver. Some were at once healed, and all were blessed by the untold love of God. Benediction by Br. R. M. Dungan.

Met at 11 a.m.; prayer by Elder E. J. French; preaching by Elder J. F. Burton, who was much blessed in speaking, reminding us of days agone. Benediction by

E. J. French.

Met at at 2:30 p.m. in prayer, Elders Daniel Garner and A. Starkey in charge; special object, the work of the Bishopric, that the Saints may be moved upon by the Spirit to comply with the temporal law. An excellent season was enjoyed. Benediction by Elder Daniel Garner, Met at 8 p. m.; prayer by A. W. Thompson. A committee consisting of Brn. D. S. Mills, H. L. Holt, Q. S. Sparks, E. J. French, John Houk and Ira Weimar were appointed by the president, as per resolution, to confer in regard to time and place of holding next reunion meetings in this district, and to report to next fall conference; said conference to decide and appoint said meetings. Preaching by Bro. Sidney G. Wright, who was listened to with marked attention. The discourse showed ability and research. Benediction by A. W. Thompson.

Sunday, 9 a.m.: met in prayer, special object that the ministry on this slope may have increased power in presenting the gospel, and that the hearers may be so wrought upon by the Spirit of God, that the preaching of his servants may be more effectual, D. S. Mills and Harvey Hemingway in charge, prayer by H. Hemingway. Two hours were profitably spent, and many melting fervent prayers were offered and soul stirring testimonies borne. Benediction by P. M. Betts.

Met at 11: 30; prayer by H. L. Holt; preaching by D. S. Mills; benediction by H. Hemingway.

Met at 2: 30 for sacrament, special prayer for the spirit of reconciliation, love and peace among all the branches; testimonies and administering to the sick; H. C. Smith and D. S. Mills in charge. This C. Smith and D. S. Mills in charge. was a continuous feast from our Father's table. The tent was well filled with Saints, and with songs of praise to the giver of all good. In administering, some were instantly healed by the power of God. Closed at 5; benediction by H. C. Smith. Following this Brn. H. C. Smith, J. F. Burton and D. S. Mills were called into an adjacent tent to administer to Bro. D. Garner and then with him administered to Bro. J. F. Burton. While thus engaged it seemed as if the very windows of heaven were opened upon us in a glorious manner, which few persons may have ever known, and once experienced are never to be forgotten. In fact it is beyond the powers of pen or tongue to adequately describe. To be filled with the Holy Ghost as we each were on that occasion, is all that mortals can contain, standing in a little spot of heaven on earth, knowing that God hears and at once answers in such mighty power is glorious compensation for earthly ills. No other power can successfully imitate it in working to deceive those who have once felt it. We do know we are working with God when he thus sets his seal to it, and the various idle calls of erring men to return, or lo here and lo there, are as sounding brass to us. Let us return from this holy heaven-blest path never; but onward, higher and higher ever. Elder David Garner was richly blessed in body and spirit; Bro. Burton was instantly healed, and sang it in tongues, praising God who had heard and healed him.

Met at 8 p. m., prayer by J. F. Burton, preaching by H. C. Smith, in much power, from Moroni 10: 2: "For if there be one among you that doeth good, he shall work by the gifts and power of God."

A vote of thanks was tendered the Saints of Laguna for their kindness and liberality in supplying the wants of those assembled; also in feeding teams, and conveying from and to the depot free of charge. D. S. Mills and Sidney G. Wright were requested to prepare and send a copy of these proceedings to the Herald for publication. Benediction by H. C. Smith. During the reunion six children were blessed and five promising young people were baptized and confirmed. Officials in attendance were, apostle, Heman C. Smith, missionary in charge; seventy, Joseph F. Burton, missionary in charge; Hiram L. Holt; H. P., D. S. Mills; elders, John Brush, Daniel Garner, P. M. Betts, A. A. Goff, J. G. Walker, Wm. McGary, Geo. Bird, A. W. Thompson, E. J. French, Harvey Hemingway; priests: Sidney G. Wright, H. C. Ladd, A. Starkey; Teacher, Stephen Penfold; Deacon, John Bedford. The attendance throughout was good, and we look for the best results.

D. S. MILLS, Dist. Pres. S. G. WRIGHT, Sec. reunion.

GOOD DEEDS.

In sacred writ there are a few very significant promises that to my mind has a particular bearing to us Saints of the latter days

"They who would love life and see good days, let them refrain their tongues from evil and their lips from speaking guile." "A meek and quiet spirit in the sight of God is of great price." "If a man's ways please the Lord, he will make even his enemies to be at peace with him."

—Bible.

"All things shall work together for good to them who walk uprightly."—Doctrine and Covenants.

"They who seek to bring forth and establish this my work in the last days shall be filled with the gift and power of the Holy Ghost."—Book of Mormon.

Again, "Whoso treasureth up my words shall not be deceived."—Christ according to testimony of Luke 21st chapter.

ARCHITECTURE.

I now turn to the nature of the civilization of the great Central American race, and present first their Architecture.

Speaking of the ruins in Mayapan in Yucatan, Stephens savs: "The ruins of Mayapan cover a great plain, which was at that time so overgrown that hardly any object was visible until we were close upon it, and the undergrowth was so thick that it was difficult to work our way through it. At a short distance from the Hacienda, but invisible on account of the trees, rises the high mound which we had seen at three leagues distance from the top of the church at Tekoh, and which is represented in the following engraving. It is sixty feet high and one hundred feet square at the base, and, like the mounds at Palenque and Uxmal, it is an artificial structure, built up solid from the plain. Four grand stair cases, each twenty-five feet wide, ascended to an esplanade within six feet of the top. This esplanade was six feet in width, and on each side was a smaller staircase leading to the top. The summit was a plain stone platform, fifteen feet square. Around the base of this mound, and throughout the woods wherever we moved, were strewed sculptured stones." -Incidents of Travel in Yucatan, vol. 1,

In the editorial of the Scientific Ameri. can for February 9th, 1889, appears the following:

"MORE MEXICAN RUINS.

"An interesting antiquity has recently been discovered at Palenque, in the Chiapas district of Mexico. The monument is situated upon the river Xhupa. Although it is now a complete ruin, it was originally a structure of considerable height, as three distinct stories are still distinguishable. The ground floor is very large, measuring some one hundred and twenty feet, by seventy-five feet. The floor above is attained through holes in the ceiling or vault, and here a room is found measuring some twenty-seven feet by nine feet. The openings referred to are natural and have been formed by the disintegradation of the stone and the sinking in of the roof. On stone slabs set into the wall are bas-reliefs of human figures, warriors, etc. Although these stones are in a very bad state of preservation, they are to be sent to the capital of Chiapas. Near this ruin are a row of houses forming a street, and not far from these the vestiges of a quite large town, all of course in a state of complete ruin."

The above indicates that the commission of which Mr. Stephens was a party, sent out by the United States, did not discover all the works of the ancient people.

Of Uxmal, Stephens says of their domicile: "Being now domesticated, I shall introduce the reader without preface to the ruins of Uxmal. The first ruin which I shall present is the one in which we lived, called the Casa del Gobernador. Its front is three hundred and twenty-two feet long. This building was constructed entirely of stone. Up to the cornice which runs round it to the whole length and on all four of its sides, the facade presents a smooth surface; above is one solid mass of rich, complicated and elaborately sculptured ornaments, forming a sort of arabesque. The grandest ornament, which imparts a richness to the whole facade, is over the center door way. Around the head of the principal figure are rows of characters, which, in our first hurried visit we did not notice as essentially different from the other incomprehensible subjects sculptured on the facade; but we now discovered that these characters were hieroglyphics. They differ somewhat from the hieroglyphics before presented, and are more rich, elaborate and complicated, but the general character is the same. All the other doorways have over them striking, imposing, and even elegant decorations, varying sometimes in the details, but corresponding in general character and effect with that represented in the accompanying engravings. Next to the great building of the Casa del Gobernador, and hardly less extraordinary and imposing in character, are the three great terraces which hold it aloft, and give it its grandeur of position; all of them artificial, and built up from the level of the plain. The lowest of these terraces is three feet high, fifteen feet broad, and five hundred and seventy-five feet long; the second is twenty-five feet high, two hundred and fifty feet wide, and five hundred and forty-five feet in length; and the third on which the building stands, is nineteen feet high, thirty feet broad, and three hundred and sixty feet in front. They were all supported by substantial stone walls. The platform of this terrace is a noble terra plana, five hundred and fortyfive feet long and two hundred and fifty feet wide, and from the remains still visible upon it, once contained structures and ornaments of various kinds, the character of which it is now difficult to make out.

At a distance of a hundred and thirty feet from this mound was a square ston structure six feet high and twenty feet at the base, in which we made an excavation and discovered two sculptured heads, no doubt intended as portraits. center of this great platform a grand staircase one hundred and thirty feet broad, which once contained thirty-five steps, rises to the third terrace, on which the building stands; besides this there is no staircase connected with either of the three terraces, and the only ascent to the platform of the second is by an inclined plane one hundred feet broad at the south end of the building, which makes it necessary for all approaching from the north to pass the whole length of the lower terrace, and ascending by the inclined plane, go back to reach the steps .- Incidents of Travel in Yucatan, vol 1, pps. 165-184.

ANOTHER MOUND.

Writing of the ruins of the hacienda of Sijoh, Stephens says: "We continued to another mound nearer than the first. This mound was a solid mass of masonry, about thirty feet high and nearly square. The stones were large, one at the corner measuring six teet in length by three in width, and the sides were covered with thorns and briers. On the south side was a range of steps still in good condition, each fifteen inches high, and in general three feet long. On the other sides the stones rose in a pyramidal form, but without steps. On the top was a stone building, with its wall as high as the cornice standing. Within the apartment was precisely like the interior of the buildings at Uxmal, having the same distinctive arch." —Ibid, p. 199.

UNDERGROUND BUILDINGS.

Describing a labyrinth at Maxcann he says: "The mouth was filled up with rubbish, scrambling over which I stood in a narrow passage or gallery, constructed like all the apartments above ground, with smooth walls and triangular arched ceilings. This passage was about four feet wide and seven feet high to the top of the arch. It ran due east, and at the distance of six or eight yards opened into another, or rather was stopped by another crossing it, and running north and south. At the distance of a few yards on the right side of the wall, I found a door filled up, and at the distance of thirty-five feet the passage ended, and a door opened at right angles on the left into another gallery running due east. Following this, at the distance of thirteen feet I found another gallery on the left running north, and beyond it, at the end, still another, also on the left, and running north, four yards long, and then walled up, with only an opening in it about a foot square. Turning back I entered the gallery which I had passed, and which ran north eight or ten vards; at the end was a doorway on the right, opening into a gallery that ran east. At the end of this were six steps, each one foot high and two wide, leading to another gallery which ran north twelve yards. At the end there came another gallery on the left which ran west ten yards, and at the end of this another on the right, running north about sixty feet.

This passage was walled up at the north end, and at the distance of five yards from this end, another doorway led into a passage running to the east. At the distance of four yards a gallery crossed this at right angles, running north and south, forty-five feet long, and walled up at both ends; and three or four yards farther on, another gallery crossed it, also running north and south. This last was walled up at the south, and on the north led to still another gallery, which ran east three vards long. This was stopped by another gallery crossing it, running to the south three yards, when it was walled up, and to the north eight yards, when it turned to the west. Nevertheless, every step was exciting, and called up recollections of the pyramids and tombs of Egypt, and I could not but believe that these dark and intricate passages would introduce me to some large saloon, and perhaps some royal sepulchre. All at once I found the passage choked up and effectually stopped. The door of El Laberinto, instead of opening into a hillside, opened into this mound, and as near as I could judge from the ruins along the base, was ten feet high, and the Laberinto, instead of being subterraneous, or, rather, under the surface of the earth, was in the body of this mound. This discovery gave rise to the exciting idea that all the great mounds over the country contained secret, unknown and hidden chambers, presenting an immense field for exploration and discovery."-Ibid, pps 214-219.

CISTERNS.

Returning to his narrative of Uxmal the author says: "Throughout the ruins circular holes were found at different places in the ground, opening into chambers underneath, which had never been examined, and the character of which was entirely unknown."

Of the exploration of one of these holes he says: "The opening was a circular hole, eighteen inches in diameter. The throat consisted of five lavers of stone, a yard deep, to a stratum of solid rock. As it was all dark beneath, before descending, in order to guard against the effects of impure air, we let down a candle which soon touched the bottom. The only way of descending was to tie a rope around the body, and be lowered by the Indians. In this way I was let down, and almost before my head had passed through the hole my feet touched the top of a heap of rubbish, right directly under the hole, and falling off at the sides. Clambering down it, I found myself in a round chamber, so filled with rubbish that I could not stand upright. With a candle in my hand I crawled all round on my hands and knees. The chamber was in the shape of a dome, and had been coated with plaster, most of which had fallen, and now encumbered the ground. The depth could not be ascertained without clearing out the interior. In grouping about I found pieces of broken pottery, and a vase of terra cotta, about one foot in diameter, of good workmanship, and baying upon it a coat of enamel, which, though not worn off, had lost some of its brightness. It had three feet, each about an inch high, one of which was broken. In other respects it was entire."

Of another he says: "It did not however require much time to explore this vault. It was clear of rubbish, perfect and entire in all its parts, without any symptoms of decay, and to all appearances after the lapse of unknown years, fit for the uses to which it was originally applied. Like the one on the terrace it was dome shaped, and the sides fell in a little toward the bottom, like a well made hav-stack. height was ten feet and six inches directly under the mouth, and it was seventeen feet six inches in diameter. The walls and ceiling were plastered, still in a good state of preservation, and the floor was of hard mortan,"-Ibid, p. 226-229.

CAMP MEETING.

The Wheeler's Grove camp meeting will com-mence at half past ten o'clock, Friday, August 30th, 1889. It will be held in Bro. Lot Smith's grove, where all may feel at home, as many can testify who have been there before.

Hay will be sold on the ground for ten cents for fifty pounds; plenty of water, and all down wood free; cord wood for all wishing it on reasonable terms. The camp ground is five miles east of Macedonia, the nearest railroad station, and seven miles south-east of Carson. Those coming by rail will find conveyances at either of the above named stations Friday 30th and Saturday 31st.

We intend to hold meetings in the large tent, so that rains will not interfere. Brn. W. W. Blair, Joseph R. Lambert, Henry Kemp, H. N. Hansen, (also J. Luff if his health will permit), have promised to be with us. We would be glad to have Bro. Blakeslee come if he can, also Bro. Joseph Smith-and we don't know where to close the invitation. All are cordially invited to come, and all bring tents who can.

L. V. Frederickson.

NOTICE.

There will be a two days' meeting at Little Sioux, Iowa, on Saturday and Sunday, August 24th and 25th. Elder W. W. Blair and other ministers will be there.

Mondamin, Ia., July 31st.

Funeral services were conducted in the Congregational church in Emmington, by Elder F. M. Cooper, and the re-mains were builed in the Lutheran Cemetery in Kankakee county. She sleeps in Jesus.

THE EXTINCTION OF LEISURE.

"Millions for enterprise; for thought not a penny," should be inscribed over the doors of our state-houses and our national Capitol. The enticing of men and women into ways of expending their energy or the fruits thereof, is become a fine art. Seclusion is departed from the world. The emissaries of traffic invade our homes, beset us upon the road, and lie in wait for us at our places of resort. Though we flee to the desert they are there, nor is refuge from them to be found on the tops of mountains or in the islands of the sea. Whoever would keep even with the world by limiting his wants is regarded as a shrinker of his duty.

The sum of modern ethics is contained in the word do. Do that which is good if you can, but rest assured you shall be pardoned for doing evil more readily than for doing nothing.

Even when applied to the main chance, if men did but know it, leisure is often the best of investments. Nothing can be more useful to man than the determination not to be hurried. The popular idea that a man's prosperity or his usefulness depends upon the amount of his business, is not a correct one. Here, as every where else, quality counts more than quantity. The most successful man is not he who is always doing. Ask an old merchant how to succeed and he will tell you: "Do not try to do too much."

We make merchandise of ourselves in order to satisfy our constantly expanding volume of want—the measure, as we are told, of civilization. The more wants we are unable to refuse, The more civilized we become. If this be civilization, let us go back to barbarism at once We are a richer and busier people, but we are politically and industrially, and socially a less independent people than were Americans of two generations ago. Leisure is necessary to democracy. With no leisure there can be no intelligence, and without intelligenc democracy cannot exist. -Alfred H. Peters in the August Forum.

CHINESE CALAMITIES.

Within the last two months, if the reports conveyed from China are true, not less than 70,000 persons have been drowned or burned to death in the empire. The horror of the Conemaugh disaster becomes insignificant, so far as loss of life was concerned, when compared with the terrible floods that devastated large districts in the chinese provinces, and now comes the news of a recent fire at Lu Chow, which burned for twenty three hours, destroyed 87,000 dwellings, and caused the loss of 1,800 lives, no less than 1,200 persons having burned in the flames.

Should these calamities continue to follow upon each other's heels even the population of China, great as it is, would soon be swept away. The loss of 70,000 people out of a population of 120,000,000 may seem small by comparison but 70 000 in two months would mean 420 000 in twelve months, and from present indications it would seem as though the percentage of loss from calamities of all kinds, including the periodical famine, would be mantained if not increased.—Chicago Times

BY RAIL TO JERUSALEM.

The British consular agent at Jaffa in his last report on the trade of his district states that a concession for a railway from Jaffa to Jerusalem has been granted by the sultan to Mr. Joseph Navon, an Ottoman subject, for seventy-one It is stated that a company has been vears. formed in England and France to carry out the scheme, and that the engineers are soon expected to undertake the work. The carriage road between Jaffa and Jerusalem has been greatly improved. The government sold last year the income from the toll of the road for £2 085, as comproved. pared with £1,812 the year before last, which shows an increase in the traffic. The Jewish colonies in Palestine are greatly improving; one of them, which is called Richon le Zion, has planted about two million vines, all promising well. The colonists are good laborers; nearly all their land is cultivated. The greater part of them are Turkish subjects, and are all subject to the laws of the country -London Times.

IN THE HOLY LAND.

In these times of interest concerning movements in the Holy Land the following from the Scientific American is of interest;

Application has been made by Jos. Elias formerly government engineer of the Lebanon, for a concession for a railway from Haifa, on the Mediterranean, about midway between Tyre and Cesarea, by way of Lake Galilee, over the river Jordan to Damascus. Authority for the navigation of the lake and a priority of right for the extension of a line over any other applicant for three years is asked for. The line is to follow the river Kishon for six miles, going within three and three-quarters miles of Nazareth, and then ascending the valley to the water-sheds of the Jordan. The line will proceed along the northwest of the lake close to the plain of Genesaret, up the Jordan, crossing it about two miles below From that point the line turns toward Merim. the east to Damascus, a distance of one hundred miles from the coast. A branch line will go to miles from the coast. A branch line will go to Naova, the capital of the Hauran, with an option to continue on to Bosra, the ancient capital of Bashan. The practical part of Mr. Elias's application is interesting. He estimates the population to be served at 500,000, or about 5.000 to the Damascus has about 200,000 inhabitants, and there are ten towns with from 1 000 to 10 000 inhabitants and about 5 040 villages. Although the district is very fertile, only one-sixth of the arable land is under cultivation. There is an abundance of streams, however, so that the country could be easily irrigated.

LIBERAL GAINS IN UTAH.

THE following telegram is an added and most striking evidence of the certain downfall of "Brighamism"-not genuine Mormonism. We are not at all surprised that "the life-blood" of Brighamism is being let out of it, nor that God has set his hand to expose the errors, evils and "folly" of that despotism, for we have long expected it—and have known it must come.

"Salt Lake, Utah, Aug. 6 .- The city has gone wild. Nothing like the scenes presented on the street at midnight has ever been witnessed in Utah. Salt Lake City has been grasped from Mormon rule, the vote giving the Gentiles a majority of 41 in the city and assuring a Gentile city government next February. Six Gentiles were elected to the house of representatives and two to the council, giving them eight out of thirty-six members. The Mormons are disheartened and feel that their rule of forty years has gone down

Commenting upon this the Chicago Times of the 7th inst. says:

"A civic revolution has been produced in Salt Lake City. At an election held Monday the reign of the Mormon, which has existed continuously from the foundation of the city by Brigham Young, was broken, and the municipal administration passes into the hands of the Gentiles. Whether or not the revolution will abide or whether a reaction shall occur depends much upon the use the Gentiles make of their newly acquired power.

"Salt Lake was dominated by the Mormon influence. There was more thrift than enterprise in the management of the municipality. The site on a plain sloping from the mountains to the shores of the lake was well chosen. The streets are broad, the improvements commonplace. The drainage is entirely surface, water continually running through the gutters from a mountain stream diverted to that use. The property is owned chiefly by Mormons. The city controls and manages the street-car system and is careful of its revenue. The streets are not paved and taxes are not high. The Gentiles have complained that saloons are made to bear a heavy burden, and the Mormons are all the more willing to impose it because they are neither owners nor patrons of such places. "Holiness to the Lord," a familiar legend upon the business houses of the city hitherto the ecclesiastical capital of Mormondom, would not look well upon the facade of a dram-shop. Ecclesiastism has mingled to some extent with the civic administration. Every ward is a bishopric with its meeting-house and its school, and close surveillance of the occupation and the resources of the people is thus maintained. This close organization is something of a necessity in a theocracy which keeps its tithing house and strictly demands its tribute in kind.

"How far the rights of Gentile owners of property may have been trenched upon by a municipal administration closely allied with church government is not quite clear, but whatever the status of such an owner the new-found power of the Gentile will probably be used in such manner as will make the Mormon owners of city lots, especially in the business quarter, apprehensive of confiscation. An elaborate system of special assessments for street improvements, water supply, sub-drainage, and electric lighting will impose a great burden on property, and may enable Gentiles to increase their holding upon terms which they will regard as favorable. The city contains many followers of the mammon of iniquity, who, in possession of the city administration would not neglect their opportunities.

"Mormonism as a religious profession may long survive, but as exerting a dominant influence upon the government of Utah and its cities it is certain to fall before the influx of hostile population. Polygamy had already commenced to decay. The loss of temporal power and a critical environment will hasten its extinguish-

Had the Utah people received in 1860 and after the teachings and admonitions of Joseph, the son of Joseph the Seer, the lawful, regular and promised successor of his father in the presidency of the church, all the antagonisms existing between the Utah Mormons and the nation would have been purged out long ago, and that people would have been brought into harmony with the civil institutions of our country, and into exact accord with the standard books of the church as held and taught in the days of the Seer.

Vigorous efforts have been made to reach the Utah people by the ministry of the Reorganized church, but the leaders of that people have ever, until of late treated them with either neglect, contempt or violent threatnings and abuse. They are now reaping the fruit of their own doings. Their only hope is in mending their

APPEAL FOR FREEDOM.

This is what a Utah Mormon has to say of priestly dictation by the Utah Church leaders, in matters of politics, and mixing the affairs of church and state. We are glad to see that "Young Utah" feels the "collar" and the "yoke" and have the Christian manhood to free themselves and the church. God speed the right!

> HUNTINGTON, Utah, July 17th, 1889.

To the Voters of the Ninth Council District:

Many friends have asked me to become a Candidate for the Legislative Assembly of Utah, from the Ninth Council District. I have concluded to yield to their suggestions and hereby announce myself an Independent Candidate for the position. In so doing, I am aware that I act in opposition to the People's Party. I want all to know my position, and knowing it, I want each voter to use his own judgment and free will, unbiased by the counsel or command of anyone, when he decides whether he will vote for me or for Abram Hatch.

It is well known that I am a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. My religion is my own and I am entitled to my belief. My political faith is likewise my own and no man has a right to interfere with it. I am a firm believer in the proposition that that there should be no union of Church and State, and thus believing, I cannot conscientiously submit to anything that looks like dictation in political affairs by these who are in charge of the welfare of my church. The man serves his church and the cause of religion best who resolves that he will not stand idly by and see the cross of Christ dragged into the mire of politics. Thus believing, I am impelled to state a little current history which led me up to the step which I take.

At the recent convention of the People's Party at Springville my name was presented as a candidate for the nomination for the Council. My education has taught me that any man may aspire to political position in America, and I have heretofore supposed that he would stand or fall upon his merits. I did not believe the charge often made by the Liberals, that the heads of my church were the dictators of the People's Party politics. I expected fair treatment in the convention. I little thought that an unseen hand would be thrust forward into the convention and force me, without even a chance to be heard, to the rear. I was willing to stand or fall by the free action of the convention, but I did not expect to be defrauded of my rights. For some unknown cause, men not members of the convention did not desire that I should be nominated. The delegates who had pledged me their support, withdrew my name. Their excuse is, that they were "advised" to do so. Thereupon, Abram Hatch was sustained as candidate.

I believe that he ough to be defeated at the polls. In saying this, I know that I will be met with the cry, that I make the statement because I desire the office. I speak truly when I say that I care far less for the office than I do to prove my independence and manhood. I feel that I am doing a service to those of my religious faith, in publicly announcing my political independence. The time has come when some man should set an example to our people. We have had too much dictation in the politics of Utah. Let us now have a little freedom. I desire to prove that a man does not surrender his political faith when he joins the Mormon Church. I shall perform my duty to my God and to my church, and I shall keep the faith, but I shall also act my manhood in public affairs. In assuming to become an independent candidate, I represent the issue of political independence and I ask those who feel as I do to give me their votes. I also call attention to the fact that our section of the Territory has not been recognized in the nominations made by the People's Party. We are entirely without representation. We did not have a fair representation in the convention and advantage was taken of us. In sustaining my candidacy, voters will sustain themselves.

If I am elected, I shall be an independent man, just as I am now and ever have been. I will represent all the people of the district alike without regard to creed, color or politics. I shall strive for just laws. I shall work for a more perfect and generous common school system, and I shall support such measures as seem to me likely to benefit the territory, no matter from what source they may emanate. I shall look upon my position as a public trust and use my best efforts for what seems right.

Upon this platform, I invite the votes of Mormons and Gentiles. Those who vote for me will have the satisfaction of knowing that they vote for a free man, and one who does not wear a brass collar about his neck.

If I am defeated, I shall have the satisfaction of knowing that I have asserted my manhood and that I have done a little toward lifting the yoke from the necks of men of my faith.

I submit my cause to the people. Let us declare by our votes that a man may act in accordance with his own conscience in Utah politics.

I remain the public's obedient servant,

Don. C. Robbins.

ASK THE BISHOPRIC.

THE Herald office is frequently requested to ask, through its columns, for aid from the general church abroad, to assist in building churches, also to aid some poor person or persons, etc., etc., matters of local import only, and those of which the HERALD editors and the Business Manager have no personal knowledge as to merit, reliability, genuineness, etc., etc., and by consultation with Bishop Blakeslee, president of the Board, those in charge of Herald Office matters have decided it best to decline publishing requests of that kind unless ordered by the Bishopric, that quorum having direct management and control of the general financial affairs of the Therefore, all who seek aid of the kind indicated above should appeal to the Bishopric, stating fully and clearly the facts and their needs.

NEWS FROM IDAHO.

"JOSEPH SMITH, President of the Reorganized Church, and Elder Anthony, will hold services in the Josephite chapel to-morrow."

The above is from the Enterprise of Malad City, Idaho, for the 3d instant. It is probable these brethren will respond to some other of the numerous calls in that territory, especially in Cache and Bear Lake valleys.

It is said there are over twenty thousand Mormons in Idaho; and these are now confronted with the following clause in the proposed State constitution which, if it becomes a law, as is now probable, will practically disfranchise every Brighamite Mormon.

"No person is permitted to vote, serve as juror, or hold any civil office who is a bigamist or polygamist, or is living in what is known as patriarchal, plural or celestial marriage, or in violation of any law of this state, or of the United States, forbidding any such crime; or who in any manner, teaches, advises, counsels, aids or encourages any person to enter into bigamy, polygamy, or such patriarchal, plural or celestial marriage, or to live in violation of any such law, or to commit any such crime; or who is a member of, or contributes to the support, aid or encouragement of, any order, organization, association, corporation or society, which teaches, advises, counsels, encourages or aids any person to enter into bigamy, polygamy or such patriarchal or plural marriage, or which teaches, or advises that the laws of this state prescribing rules of civil conduct are not the supreme law of the state.

"The legislature may prescribe qualifications, limitations and conditions for the right of suffrage additional to those prescribed in this article, but shall never annul any of the provisions in this article contained."

The clipping below is from the Osceola, Mo. Advance: And yet the Utah leaders tell their people they are not prosecuted or persecuted for their "polygamous customs," but on account of their spiritual, religious doctrines!

"While the Mormons of Utah have been persistently reviled and condemned by the people of all other sections of the Union on account of their polygamous customs, yet it is an admitted fact that in point of honesty, industry, sobriety, and in all the graces which adorn life and beautify the home, they take rank among the very best people in the United States. Dr. Miller, editor of the Omaha Herald, says:

"To the lasting honor of the Mormon people and system be it said that for twenty-five years such machines of moral infamy as whisky shops, harlotries, faro banks, and all attendant forms of vice and iniquity were totally unknown in Utah."

JOSEPH THE SEER.

The revised edition of this little book, containing over 200 pages of carefully prepared matter, it being a reply by W. W. Blair to the attack of Rev. Wm. Sheldon on the Book of Mormon and the prophetic claims of Joseph Smith, will soon be on sale at this office.

Many valuable facts have been added to this edition, and altogether it will be a very helpful work to all who desire to learn of God's dealings with his people, past and present, also of the multiplied evidences supportive of the faith of the Saints. All orders hitherto sent for will be supplied as soon as it is received from the binders; and all others desiring it should order at once. Price, in cloth 50 cents; in paper, 35 cents.

IOWA STATE FAIR.

By the courtesy of its secretary, John R. Shaffer, we learn that the State Fair of Iowa will open at Des Moines the 30th instant, and continue up to September 6th. It is claimed that the premiums are the largest and most varied ever presented, and that no effort will be spared to make the occasion most profitable and entertaining. "Iowa Railway lines will carry passengers to the Fair and return for one fare for the round trip. Freights full rate going to the Fair, returned free on certificate of Secretary."

"Beautiful camping grounds in a natural grove of timber, laid out with streets, supplied with water from hydrants, are provided free for all who wish to camp. Tents, chairs, and cots can be rented on grounds at reasonable prices. Arrangements have been made to have the ground brilliantly lighted every night of the Fair."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

SOUTHERN Iowa is rejoicing in fine crop prospects of all kinds. Stock never looked better, the health of the country, generally, is excellent; and all around there are abundant reasons for thankfulness.

Br. W. C. Morgan, who resides near Oakland, Iowa, thinks some there would hear the gospel if it were preached there.

Br. M. M. Turpen is now at Bevier, Missouri, and any one in that district wishing his labor in the gospel should write him at once, care of T. J. Williams.

Br. I. L. Rogers paid Lamoni a welcome

Br. I. L. Rogers paid Lamoni a welcome visit from the 5th to the 7th insts. He came to attend the Davis City camp meeting and feels happy and hopeful. He has had such experiences in the rise and progress of the Reorganized Church as fully satisfies him that the Lord was, is, and is to be its "author and finisher."

Bro. W. E. Peak wrote us from Cormorant, Minnesota, the 31st ult., saying, "All moves well in this mission so far, and the work is on the move for the better."

In its proper department will be found a cheery letter from Pres Joseph Smith. And although not intended by him for publication, we feel confident he will excuse the liberty we take in letting our readers know where he is, what he is doing and how he is feeling in spirit and body. He has a wide and most important field before him in the west, and all should sustain him by their faith and works.

CORRECTIONS.—We are instructed by Bishop G. A. Blakeslee to make the following corrections: Received October 13th, 1888, of Lydia Boocher $23, instead of "Ann Wildermuth," as printed in Western Wisconsin financial report; also received of Thomas H. Moore of Massachusetts district, $9 25, instead of "Thomas Moon," as printed in report.

Bro. J. C. Crabb requests us to say it is expected that Elder W. W. Blair will attend the two-days' meeting at Little Sioux,

Iowa, the 24th and 25th insta

Bro. Frederickson says the Wheeler's Grove Camp meeting will commence Saturday, the 31st instant, instead of Friday the 30th.

Bro. James H. Tyrrell says he thinks the numerous unusual names abounding in the Book of Mormon are good proof that Joseph Smith was inspired of God. He is confident no man by human wisdom could invent them, much less an unlearned young man as was Joseph. We think there is merit in the view he takes.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Br. E. C. Brand wrote from Scranton,

Kansas, of late, as follows:

"I have preached fourteen nights; interest yet good; have baptized eight, and one more goes tonight, and several almost persuaded. Shall open up at Burlingame, six miles from here, and have the City Hall through the courtesy of the Mayor; and then Bell school house, which is waiting for me."

Sr. Ellen Fisher, of Palouse City, Washington, writes:

"The church papers and standard books are my only preachers, as there is no branch near this place, and as far as I know, no prospect of any. It would be quite a treat to hear a gospel ser-

WE clip the following item of news from the St. Louis Republic and have to say, If the people would take the word of God as "a lamp" to their feet and "a light" to their pathway, these "blind leaders of the blind" would have few if any followers; for it plainly refutes the re-incarnation theories of Schweinfurth, Joseph Morris, and all that class, and teaches thoroughly that "it is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the judgment." The same "word" reveals that when Christ comes in his second advent, it will be "in glory;" "in flaming fire;" "in the clouds of heaven;" "with all the holy angels;" "with all the Saints;" and "not in the form of a woman [like Ann Lee, etc. etc.], neither of a man traveling on the earth."—D. C. 49: 4.

"EMOTIONAL INSANITY.

"Several weeks ago an Ohio man appeared in Georgia with a retinue of negroes to whom he had communicated the lunacy which, propagated by Schweinfurth and others in Chicago, has attracted such wide attention. It is supposed that he is insane, but whether he is a lunatic or a scoundrel, he acquired unlimited control of a large number of negroes. He told them, as Schweinfurth tells his Chicago proselytes, that he was an incarnation of the Divinity, a second Christ. They were wrought up to such a pitch of superstitious excitement that the white people saw that repressive measures were necessary and the Sheriff interfered as a persecutor of the new religion-not however, until several of the negroes had been rendered to all appearances permanently insane. A number of the more intelligent negroes who were called together in meeting to assist the whites in preventing the other negroes from being demoralized, indorsed fully the action of the Sheriff and pledged themselves to do everything possible to check further manifestations of the emotional insanity.

"The action of the Sheriff, however, seems to be sufficient to force a return to normal conditions. The white people acted with cold-blooded intelligence. As long as the lunacy led to no act of which the law could take cognizance they did nothing more than attempt to convince the negroes by argument. They failed, as a matter of course, and, equally as a matter of course, the negroes soon overstepped the law.

"The chief seat of the infection was the Walthour plantation in Liberty county, where a negro named E. W. James had been driven mad by the imported superstition and had announced that he himself was the real Christ. His preaching threw the other negroes into an indescribable state of emotionalism. In their orgies they indulged their lowest passions, and soon became highly dangerous. The false Christ was surrounded by a retinue of prophets and priestesses. One negro woman who acquired special influence assumed the title of the Queen of Sheba. A negro man called himself King Solomon and claimed power to work miracles. A third announced himself as Nebuchadnezzar and demonstrated it by grazing. The report now reached the ears of the white people that a child had been killed and offered as a sacrifice to James. The Sheriff prepared to act at once with a strong and well-armed posse, but in the meantime James pointed out to his followers a number of negroes who, he said, were possessed by devils. It was a part of his creed to have these killed, but one of them, named Sambo Castles, escaped after brutal beating, and the legal charge on which the Sheriff acted was assault to murder this negro. James was arrested with King Solomon, Nebuchadnezzar and others of the most dangerous, the Queen of Sheba being left unmolested in her cabin.

In the jail James has shown himself a violent lunatic, He refuses to eat, tears off his clothing and destroys everything in reach that is destructible. Nebuchadnezzar psychologizes in a way that would do credit to the editress of a Boston Spiritualist magazine. He explains that he ate grass because he was at the time possessed by the influence of the spirit of a grass-eating animal. King Solomon, when asked to work miracles, shows two glistening rows of white teeth in a shamefaced way, and explains that he worked them only by means of a "power stick," which the Sheriff has taken from him. On the Walthour plantation the Queen of Sheba still holds court, but the new religion is practically supressed, and the negroes who were not driven permanently insane by it will soon be ashamed of it and themselves.

"It would be hard to determine how much more intelligent these followers of James are than the followers of Schweinfurth in Chicago, one of whom is described as a graduate of Yale; but leaving that undetermined, the bearing of such incidents on our experiment of self-government deserves the gravest consideration. The country will necessarily suffer in proportion to the number of people in it who are unreasonably governed by emotion; and it is unfortunately true that such people, once strongly moved, are as much controlled by emotion in politics as in religion."

CHEAP WEEKLIES.

THE following clipping, well digested, may explain why the great weeklies of our country are published at such cheap rates. If the SAINTS' HERALD devoted two-thirds, or even one-half or one-third of its pages to advertising as most all papers do, then it could be furnished to its patrons for one-half, or less, than its present cost:

"A single page in a single issue of the Century taken for advertising purposes costs $500; in Harper's $400; in other prominent magazines from $350 down to $100. A yearly advertisement of a column in the Chicago Tribune costs $26,000; in the New York Tribune $29,554 for the lowest, and $35,950 for the highest rates; in the New York Herald, $36.393 for the lowest, and 49,000 for its highest priced columns. These papers are never at a loss for advertising to fill their columns. These figures will doubtless be of interest to the man of the provincial town who invests ten dollars and flatters himself with the idea that he is the sole supporter of the paper in which his advertisement appears."-Ex.

A MOTHER'S FINAL REST.

Dear mother rest from all your care, Sleep now, your loving work is done; No more that look of trouble wear, But wear the crown that thou hast won.

Now let thy heart, that ever beat Responsive to thy children's call, Be filled with heavenly pulses sweet That from the angel chorus fall.

And let thy hands that knew no rest, From sun to sun through many years, Lie still upon thy peaceful breast Nor wipe again the fount of tears.

And weary feet that walked so long The rugged way that mothers tread, Go, walk those heavenly paths among Where faithful souls are comforted.

O mother, angel in disguise, Thy garment thou hast laid aside And op'ed the gate of paradise, Through love and labor glorified!

ROUND SHOULDERS SQUARED.

A STOOPING figure and a halting gait, accompanied by the unavoidable weakness of lungs incidental to a narrow chest may be entirely cured by a very simple and easily performed exercise of raising one's self upon the toes leisurely in a perpendicular position several times daily. To take this exercise properly one must take a perfectly upright position, with the heels together and toes at an angle of forty-five degrees. Then drop the arms lifelessly by the sides, animating and raising the chest to its full capacity muscularly, the chin well drawn in, and the crown of the head feeling as if attached to a string suspended from the ceiling above. Slowly rise up on the balls of both feet to the greatest possible height, thereby exercising all the muscles of the legs and body; come again into standing position without swaying the body backward out of the perfect line. Repeat this same exercise first on one foot then on the other. It is wonderful what a straightening out power this exercise has upon round shoulders and crooked backs, and one will be surprised to note how soon the lungs begin to show the effect of such expansive development. - Family Doctor.

No Credit for moneys received on subscription will appear on the Colored Address Label of the Herald

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"Her presence lends its warmth and health
To all who come before it.
If women lost us Eden, such
As she alone restore it."

WOMEN HELPING WOMEN.

WHILE a certain class of women are somewhat noisily exerting themselves on the platform and through the press to benefit their fellows, and very possibly are doing a certain amount of good by such means, there are others who have come more practically and more directly to the help of womankind. The ladies who, nearly five years ago, established the Exchange for Women's Work, left to others the duty of prompting women's rights, and simply set themselves the task of discovering women's capabilities. "What can you women do, one and all, who need to work?" was their question; and their counsel, "Do it with all your might; do your best work, and leave it to us to see that the public gets such benefit as you are able to confer, and that you in return receive the money-value of your work." In the four and a half years of its career, the Exchange has thus distributed eighty-two thousand dollars among consigners, the number of whom may now be counted by hundreds, in all parts of the United States, Canada, Mexico and England.

This task of discovering the capabilities of individuals is perhaps one of the most useful to which these women could have set themselves. It has been abundantly proved that women can work, and can work well: but as they have seldom been trained to any one especial occupation, it is always a problem in the case of the individual what she can best do-a problem which includes the two factors of her capacity and the local demand. One woman who thought that her gift was for teaching the harp and piano has found it to lie in making fine buiscuit. Another, doubtless fairly well educated and accomplished, can earn more by making Canton flannel "Jumbos" than by any more artistic employment. The homely arts of pie and cake making, pickling and preserving, have been found in many cases to be very lucrative; and as their practice may often have caused the withdrawal of an equivalent quantity of trashy, so-called art-work from the market, it has proved a double benefit.

The amount of financial aid actually returned to women by this society is not to be measured by the sum which has been distributed by it. As its greatest service has, possibly, frequently enabled women to discover their true capabilities, it must naturally have followed that the work then performed by them, being thoroughly good of its kind and useful, has often found a market nearer home. Probably half of the women who began by making the Exchange the medium for bringing their wares to market have sooner or later achieved a local celebrity in their especial line, and have created, if it had not existed before, a demand for their work.

This point of capability is of vital importance to the whole question of women's work, both as to profit and as to its effect upon her social status.

There is a theory, erroneous but widely held, that work lowers the social standing of women: and hence women dread to work, will not contemplate its necessity until forced to do so, and are seldom fitted to work well. Surely there are facts enough to show that first-rate women workers lose no caste. A good writer, a successful artist, a capable teacher, a proficient in any profession, not only holds the same rank with a man of equal ability and success, but she does not sink below the level of her former peers, enjoying a rather certain added prestige. Doubtless there is work and work, and women do at times lose rank through the necessity of working, because their social position, like that of men, depends upon the kind of labor which they can perform. Yet even here nothing succeeds like success, and a woman noted as an unequaled pie maker earns a repute she would not have enjoyed as an indifferent and unsuccessful artist-a repute not accorded, it is safe to say, to a man who should adopt the same career.

In aiding women to discover their own capabilities, it is by no means invariably the case that the Exchange relegates them to a career inferior to that they would have chosen. Long practice in judging of the quality of work has made the managers of this association, who are women of culture and capacity, very quick to detect indications of talent even in inferior work. And in such cases their influence in showing the artist her faults and stimulating her to seek a thorough training, is of no less value than their other service in bringing the obscure but capable woman into communication with those who need her work. The influence of the Exchange is to teach the lesson which all women need to learn who would be successful workers-that accurate knowledge and careful training are needed by the women no less than by the men; and that thoroughness and completeness dignify labor of whatever order, as well as the man or woman who performs it .- Selected.

HIGHLAND Co., Ohio, July 4th.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column:—I esteem it a duty as well as a pleasure to say a few words in favor of the cause I love. I know that God is working in these last days just as he tells us he would in his scriptures. I can say I know this work is of Him, for I have had testimonies of the truthfulness of it in healing and in prayer. If we put our trust in God, who is our helper in time of need, he will not turn us away empty. I can not express the thankfulness I feel to my heavenly Father for sparing my life to hear the gospel in its fulness and purity. Our hearts have been made to rejoice in the last three weeks by hearing the word preached to us again by L. R. Devore and T. J. Beatty. They are noble workers for the truth, and are loved by the Saints here and also have many warm friends among those not in the church. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I remain your sister in hope of eternal life,

C. West.

SISTERS, LOOK HERE.

Knox, Ind., July 22d.

For ease and facility in washing clothes I offer the following: Take one half pound of lime (either air slacked or unslacked) pour two gallons of boiling water over it, stir well, set away and let settle clear. Pour off the liquid carefully. Take two pounds sal soda, pour on two gallons of boiling water; when dissolved add one pint of turpentine. Mix the ingredients and about three gallons of fluid will be the result. Pour into wash water. One pint of fluid will be sufficient for a large washing. The above will cleanse the water, loosen the dirt in the clothing and render washing easy and so quickly done as to surprise you. Your sister, Anchorage, Texas, July 12.

Dear Sister Frances:-Something has been whispering to me for some time to write to the dear "Column" again, but fearing my inability to write any thing worth the space it would take, and having the sundry duties devolving upon a mother to see to, with a little five months' old babe to care for, has deterred me from writing before; but I will try to be as the poor widow, who threw in her mite, will do the best I can and leave the result with God. But really, now that I have begun, do not know what I shall write about; but feel that I owe you, dear sister, at least an effort to express my gratitude for your great kindness towards me, and to let you know that my interest in the cause we love so dearly has not weakened in the months passed, but has grown stronger. The Lord has greatly blessed me in many ways, and when I think of his matchless goodness and mercy towards his children, I feel how little we have done to merit his blessings, yet he is merciful and slow to anger, and looks into the hearts and circumstances of each of his poor struggling children, and is always ready to reach out a loving hand to help and lift up those who cry to him for aid. But, my sisters, we must not depend entirely upon the Lord, for although he is ready to help us out of all our troubles and to aid us to overcome all of our sins, yet He would not have us stand idly by and depend upon him, without an effort on our part to extricate ourselves. No, we must use our utmost endeavors, and at the same time ask and look to him for help. The admonition of our Savior to his disciples was, "Watch and pray." What are we to watch for? Are we not to watch ourselves, that we be not overcome by our own faults and weaknesses, and the vexations that occur daily to every mother and especially those of large families? There are so many calls for mamma, and so many little troubles and disturbances for mamma to settle; so many little aches and pains for mamma to administer to. Who else could soothe and comfort as she? All this, with her her various household duties to perform without help, is it a wonder that we sometimes become fretful and nervous, and allow ourselves to become impatient? This, then, is what we must watch, that we do not give way to hasty and harsh words, although spoken thoughtlessly and without real meaning, yet nevertheless they are hurtful and cruel to our loved ones, for whom we would undergo any amount of suffering and privation. We might be constantly on our knees, asking God to help us to overcome all these faults, but unless we were earnestly striving and watching the advance of each temptation, that we might the more readily and easily resist the evil, it would profit us nothing, for the Lord requires a willing and ready mind to serve him and is not pleased with one who is not ready at least to help fight the battles of life, neither desiring to sail along easily without any crosses, that our tempers be not tried. My dear sisters, how are we to ever gain strength, but by crosses that we have bravely borne and overcome? These little crosses if rightly borne will but refine us, cleanse us from all dross. Every time that we overcome or resist evil, gives strength for the next conflict, and if we continue to resist victory will soon be ours. Not that we will be freed from trials, no: they will continue as long as life lasts, to some extent, for it is necessary that we be now and then tried in some form. The dear Savior permits this as a trial of our faith. How much greater will be the joy of one who has been faithful and willing to stem the tide, rough or smooth, than the one who has sailed along on an even sea, without a ripple or any snags to impede his progress? The one has fought a good fight, the other has simply drifted with the tide. To be sure, each will receive their reward. When the Lord has tried or suffered us to be tried, until he sees we are determined to serve him, let the way be rough or smooth, then he lightens our burdens, aids us in our efforts to serve him, blesses us with his Spirit, and encourages us from time to time, as he in his wisdom sees we need. Oh how encouraging it is to know we have such a loving, faithful guide over life's rugged way! If any think their troubles are greater than they can bear, and that none others have to struggle for the right under such trying circumstances as they; let them remember that they have not yet resisted unto blood, and the greater the trials and tribulations, the greater will be their exaltation in the sweet bye and bye. The Saints here, I think, are growing spiritually, and seem willing to put their shoulders to the wheel and push on the good work. But oh, how sadly we are in need of laborers, those who are duly authorized to preach the word! We were in hopes of getting more help from the conference, but alas, we were disappointed, and our nach esteemed brother I. N. Roberts was removed to another field of labor, and our South-western Mission is left without a president. It may be that most of the Saints are like we are, too poor to aid the ministry much. Our worthy young brother Johnny is still battling for the cause, and doing much good, but can not possibly fill all the places. Father Kuykendall, the president of the branch at Oakwood, is growing old and infirm, and can do little outside of the branch. His labors are well received by the branch, also those of Br. Murry. We are living fifteen miles from the branch and receive little benefit derived from their meetings; but the Lord is with us here, and blesses us in our efforts to do good. My husband, A. B. Kuykendall, has not been idle, but has done much good in distributing tracts and conversation; has effected an opening a few miles below us, where a house with a good sized congregation awaits to hear the glad tidings, with no one to occupy. Bro. John Currie has promised to come as soon as he can. The field is white and ready to harvest, but the laborers are few. Sisters, let us pray the Lord to send more laborers into his vineyard.

Ever praying for the spread of the truth, I am as ever, in sisterly love.

MARY DELL KUYKENDALL.

Correspondence.

MALAD CITY, Idaho, Aug. 3d.

Bro. W. W. Blair: - Bro. R. J. Anthony and I arrived here at 4:45 p. m., yesterday after one of the hottest and dustiest drives I ever made. The wind was directly astern and the whole broad road a dry dust bed whence the horses stirred up a cloud that would at times hide them from sight; and until by chance a little turn, or a puff of wind would set it aside, it was stifling. Bro. Anthony wore a black coat, and when we got here he looked more like a Montana "mule whacker" than like a respectable preacher—which he is. But by dint of shaking, sweeping, brushing and ever blessed water, we got rid of enough of Utah and Idaho soil to see out and put in some supper at the Hon. John Lewis' good mansion, under charge of Mrs. Hon. John Lewis, and little Kitty, her factotum. I went to bed at a little after ten on a comfortable straw bed from which I had begged Sr. Lewis to take the feather bed, though Sr. Nicholas and she could not see how I could stand it to sleep on the straw. I slept "the sleep of the just," notwithstanding the local bishop of the Brighamite camp had circulated the story that I had been to Bro. Woodruff for the "keys of the priesthood." The last thing on my mind before sleep overshadowed my brain was the thought,-"What a blessed thing it is that Bro. Anthony can go to sleep so quickly!" He snored loudly within two minutes after he blew the light

It is with pleasure I write you that the good folks of Willard, where Bro. Asahel Thorn lives, gave us the use of their meeting room, lighted the lamps, rang the bell, and sang for us for last Wednesday and Thursday evenings. On the first evening I tried to show why we should take the written word, from Doctrine and Covenants, _"Thou shalt take the things which are written in my scriptures," etc. It may be that I wandered a little, as one man remarked that some thought I "wandered about some." But on Thursday evening I affirmed our view of marriage, monogamic, and the same man said that I "stuck to the text." I was as short, precise and clear as I could be; avoiding anything that could be construed to be harsh. One woman remarked in sister Littlewood's hearing, "It was all balderdash. There are as good women in polygamy as out of it; and polygamous wives are not concubines!" I had not said one word concerning the character of either wives, or plural wives, - was treating of the doctrine, and that only. It so happens, however, that Sr. Littlewood has seen and felt the evils, disabilities, and wrongs of that condition, and is from both observation and experience qualified to speak of it—and she did just give that woman a taste of an English woman's tongue in good earnest.

The attention both nights was good and respectful, the last night almost painfully so. Two of Anson Call's sons were out both evenings. Bishop Facer was out the first night. One of the Call's had two wives, one, the first, died. In conversation with him Br. Thorn suggested that he had an opportunity to put himself right on the record by now lawfully marrying the remaining wife. At first he would not hear to it; but thinking it over he changed front, and he and a Mr. Wood who happened to be similarly situated, took their companions before a Justice of the Peace and were by him married. I thought, but I may have been making a mistake, that this particular Call looked sad and as if in deep thought, while his wife, who was present with a babe in her arms, looked pleased and jubilant. May God help her to feel as an honest wife does!

I can not complain of the treatment given me at Willard. Br. Thorn and his companion have been doing a good work by precept and example. The tracts, "One Wife or Many," were taken freely from the hands of Brn. Anthony, Thorn, and Littlewood. The package of a hundred melted like wax. It will do its work. The same thing occurred at our last Sunday night service in Ogden in the Pavilion, at which we had a good audience and excellent attention. Mr. Peery was present, and it is reported was well pleased. No one questioned me-they had enough of that the Sunday before. Bro. Anthony took up a collection, receiving enough to pay the expense of the Pavilion and sixty cents over. We hear of several who are anxious that we shall hold more meetings in Ogden.

The new Tabernacle here, at Malad, remains in the unfinished state it has been in for years.

It is thought that many of those who here nominally left the church to vote, will stay out.

Yours, Joseph Smith.

CLINTON, Mo., August 5th.

Bro. W. W. Blair: - Many of the Saints and friends have written me in regard to this section of the country. I would say for their information, also for others, that the Southwest Missouri Immigration Society have obtained half fare rates for the round trip over most all the leading railroads. These low rates are called "Harvest Excursion rates of Southwest Missouri." Tickets will be good for thirty days from date issued, and will be sold on the following dates: August 6th and 20th, September 10th and 24th, and October 8th. Clinton is one of the most northern points to which tickets can be obtained, and parties would do well to buy tickets to this point as there are a number of cross railroads leading out from here to other parts of the state.

If any should want papers, maps, or directions about coming they will please drop me a line at once and such will be mailed to them. None should fail to take advantage of these low rates if they wish to see southwest Missouri.

Your brother,

D. C. WHITE.

BANDERA, Texas, July 23d.

Dear Herald: We have just closed one of the best conferences ever held in the district. Notwithstanding the adverse circumstances under which we came together, the excessive rainfall and high water made it look to us that our conference would be a failure in spite of all human efforts. This indeed was sorrowful to contemplate, for all had been looking forward to that time with pleasing expectations. The time, however, for conference came, (as does all other time whether we be ready or not), with the Medina river out of its banks, farms overflowed, and grain and fences of many swept away. These were some of the obstacles over which we had to ride in order to reach conference. Sunday morning following the commencement of conference found the waters somewhat abated, so much so that people began to cross. By Monday night all was moving out nicely for conference. A good many, however, were unable to get there, high water and damage to fencing and crops being, I am satisfied, the hindering cause. However, a fair representation from most parts of the district was had.

Conference began the night of July 5th and continued both night and day until the 15th with perfect peace and harmony, not a dissenting voice in all the business done; the outsiders even seemed to never grow weary of our meetings, but seemed anxious to see and learn more of the truth. Most of the time was occupied in preaching and prayer-meeting services, as it only required about one day to transact the business necessary to be done, and in those meetings the good Master blest his people to that extent that all present were made to feel the power of God, and seemed to join in praising his holy name. We also saw his promises verified on this occasion, which were, if we lived faithful there would be an ingathering of souls at Pipe Creek ere long. This we saw fulfilled to the very letter, for at or near the close of our meeting, seven precious souls were buried in the waters of baptism and arose to walk in newness of life. This number added to the five already in that vicinity will be enough to organize a branch, so soon as it is the will of the great Commander-in-Chief that it should be done. And thus you see God is moving out with the people even of Western Texas, where the work has been so long at a stand still.

We feel to thank God for all things, but especially do we thank him for sending among us men of such untiring zeal as Bro. I. N. Roberts and Bro. John Currie, who have continued their efforts in this western country until the truth begins to dawn upon the minds of the people, and the honest investigator is made to cry out, almost in bitter anguish of his soul, "Is it possible that these Mormon people have got the truth!" A people even thought to be un-Christlike in every thing by the professed followers of Christ to-day. Surely, surely, God moves in a mysterious way his wonders to perform! O, that we as a people of the Most High could live upon our knees, as it were, that we might be instruments in his hands to help roll on this grand and glorious work in which we have enlisted, ever bearing in mind that prayer in humility and faith unlocks the door of his blessings to his people. May God continue to bless and strengthen his people, inasmuch as they are faithful here and elsewhere, is the prayer of a feeble worker.

O. D. JOHNSON.

PAPEETE, Tahiti, June 12th.

Bro. Foseph:—I suppose that some at least of the readers of the Herald are desirous of hearing of the state of affairs here. If my coming here in 1885 was as you wrote once "opportune and timely," it is evidently as much o in our return. The offer of a piece of land by the king, and the building of a church upon the land, while exhibiting the friendliness of the king, has proved a snare to many, because this friendship has caused a number to lose their senses almost. To be invited to the king's table, and to sit down and talk with him is by them considered such a high honor that they are completely dazed and so much under the influence of the king, that no matter what he might ask them to do, they would do it regardless of whatsoever law of God they would be required to disobey. I do not say that the king would command them to disregard the church laws, knowingly, but like most kings of ancient and modern days, he thinks that to gratify his wishes and administer to his amusement is the chief business of his subjects.

It is the universal custom here for all of the 'upper ten' to have wines and liquors on their tables at every meal, and the 'under million' are not disposed to reject an invitation to partake. While it is considered no offense to refuse, yet it is thought to be courteous and sociable to take a glass, at least.

The church at Papaoa, three miles from town, was dedicated on May 31st. The next day a priest and a female singer got dead drunk, and a number of others drank wine. The two former were promptly silenced, while the others were denied the sacrament. There is also an indecent dance which outsiders indulge in, and which is pemitted on the king's grounds. To take part in the dance will lose an officer his license, to attend it or witness it three times will deprive any one of the right to partake of the sacrament, and if persisted in will result in loss of office. It is hard for them to keep from seeing what is placed almost under their eyes. These and other things have but one result, and that is, I must forbid the church to locate on the grounds of the king, or else suffer them to be continually exposed to temptation. To do the former may anger him. and he may refuse to give us a deed for the land on which the church is located, or see one after another lose office and membership because of their yielding to temptation. Inasmuch as there are over two hundred of the church here from the Paumotu Islands, and as the king desires them all to live in his houses, and eat the fruit of his trees without cost, the temptations reach many more than the one adjacent branch called Tarona. So fearful are many of losing their offices, that they avoid the temptations by staying in Papeete. I know what the king's wishes are in regard to their stopping on his lands at Papaoa, yet how can I command them to go where they will be tempted to break the laws of the church. So you can see how I am situated.

The Tarona branch had the church built on the land before I had got back here, so I could not prevent the building of it, and thus avoid the trouble, which has only begun. The church was not dedicated sooner because I would not consent to it until the debt was paid, or assumed by members of the church, for I could not see what right we had to take the property of outsiders, or of the owners of the materials of which the church was built, and dedicate that property to the Lord. Where a building committee are personally responsible for the material, and they consent to the dedication, it is another matter.

To make a dedication feast of which the king and his family and chiefs, etc., with a half dozen or so white people partook, with some two hundred of the church, and their families and friends; to make this feast I say, caused about twenty five men of Tarona, Ziona and Matea branches to run about five hundred dollars in debt for food, and for pots, pans, dishes, knives and forks. They can not pay this debt and live beside, under ten months. For us to stay here during that period will be simply impossible, for we can get no help from these branches. We must, therefore, go to the Paumotus as soon as possible, and to do this and leave these people without our watchcare means that most of them will go to the dogs, unless of course the Lord will interfere. The king's enmity would be unpleasant, and to some extent distressing; while his friendship may lead to a disruption of the church here in Tahiti and Maatea. Of course if he was a religious, or pious man, and a temperance believer -or not addicted to strong drink, it might be vastly different; but when under the influence of wine, he is liable to require of the brethren and sisters most extravagant and unlawful acts. To be near them, and to watch over them. I have had a mission house built near the new church, using every penny that was given me on my return here, (one hundred and eighty dollars); and about two hundred more is to be raised. This money which was my own of course is given to the church, because I can not sell the house and get my money back, and I doubt if any one will think that the church ought to refund what I have expended in property, which they and not myself will own. There was a small house at Ziona, but it is over a fourth of a mile to drinking water, which had to be carried up hill the entire distance. At Papaoa the water is not half so far, and the ground is level.

I had hoped that a missionary and wife would have reached here by this time, and so had an extra room built for their accommodation. The mission house will cost about four hundred and fifty dollars; the debt will be paid by the different branches. Now what is going to be done by the church in regard to this mission? Am I to be kept here the remainder of my life? The church will go to destruction if there is not a missionary here to continually be with the church, and watch over them. Let some one be sent at once, to travel around with me, and get acquainted with the language, before I am called to leave. It does not require a learned man here, but an earnest, temperate, firm and patient man; and one who can learn the langurge readily. Father Hawkins is too old and infirm to travel as a man must do here. He is a great help to me when he can be where I am.

There are in every branch a dozen or so of first rate people who are willing to try to do the will of God, and while many are not worth much, yet these who are worthy must be nourished. There are many men who could fill this mission as well, and even better than I can. Such ones as you believe the Spirit of God to suggest as suitable ones for this field, I am willing to accept. What I meant in my letter to conference, that I would wish to know before any are sent, who they are, is this, viz: I have been written to by some who seem anxious to come here, and I believe them to be unfit for this field, for certain reasons; yet they, doubtless, would suit other fields. I thought that they might be appointed; if so, I wished to know it before they were sent. I have no objection to any one whom you and Bro. Blair feel justified in appointing. Under the decision of General Conference held at Stewartsville in 1884, you and the bishop, with myself were authorized to arrange for one or more missionaries for this field. I do not see, therefore, why you and the bishop may not send some one as soon as one can be found. And I do most earnestly urge that some one can be found at once.

I want to leave this field by the end of the year. I want to leave for the Paumotus in a couple of weeks. If it is at all possible, let one reach here before the end of August, so they can get to Manihi by the October conference. They could not reach there if they came on the vessel which leaves San Francisco on the first of September, as it would not reach Papeete till the last of September, and most likely not before the 5th or 6th of October. It would take a week to reach Manihi.

I may leave Manihi after the conference and go to Hao, which is six hundred miles east, where we have never been yet. The branches on the Paumotus are in quite fair condition. It is the branch at Tarona, and the one at Maatea where Satan has his seat. The former may be illustrated in some respects by the church at Laodicea, while the latter resembles in a great measure, Pergamos of old. The former were very heady and high-minded, but they had been humbled to the dust.

There has been a new branch formed at Papaoa -composed of members from Tarona, and Ziona branches. Metuzore is president. After the dedication of the church at Papaoa, Teriirii, the president of Tarona branch died. He was aged and afflicted. He was told by prophecy through Helen that he should not die before he had seen the white people of Papeete meet from time to time in the church at Tarona, which was then just being commenced. I preached but once in it before I left for Australia, but since our return I have preached a number of times, and having seen the prophecy fulfilled, he passed away. A new man has been selected named Tioto, or Nui. for president of that branch, but there is not another man among the natives who can fill the place of Teriirii. He held several badges and a gold medal from the French Government for his services against the New Caledonians, and was a man of much wisdom. The French Governor, and the king attended his funeral.

I am glad that the conferenc appointed Bro. Wight in charge of the Australian mission, for I have enough to see to here. But I believe that a mistake has been made in not ordering the ordination of Bro. Butterworth to the office of a seventy. He will be severely handicapped without that office. His work will be greatly impeded by keeping him simply an elder. There were plenty of wise men in the conference without doubt, but they do not understand the Australian mission by great odds. It would have been a great help to Bro. Butterworth, and he is fully qualified for the office; but I did my duty in recommending him, the responsibility must rest on other shoulders than mine.

There ought to be two elders or seventies sent to New Zealand. I will keep that song ringing in the ears of the church until it is attended to. I wish that such members of the church as are in the Sandwich Islands will correspond with me at once. Send me their names and address.

Is it not time that I had received at least one Herald for this year? I have not seen one of my own since January 1st; nor one of the Autumn Leaves. We receive also one or two letters each mail from our friends. We are grateful for newspapers sent, which, however, for some cause have failed to reach us. It encourages us greatly to be thus kindly remembered by the office and by our friends in general. We can occasionally borrow an American paper, even if it is a couple of months old. If we are remembered as much in the prayers of the church as we are otherwise; we will have a most successful mission here. Can the Prayer Union have time to pray for us occasionally?

Your brother in Christ, T. W. SMITH.

STOCKDALE, Texas, August 1st.

Bro. Blair:—We had a good conference at Pipe Creek. Baptized seven. One of them said she would come and set us afire. The fire burned the other way.

The debate is over and I am satisfied with results. Mr. Z. Brooks committed himself, and after the debate closed, I showed the people his false colors. Hundreds attended the discussion. I am safe in saying those who do not belong to either church represented by the disputants give us the victory by a large majority, and some of the Campbellites say now, he was not the man to represent them. Their representatives are too old or too young, most all the time.

Last Sunday I went to High Prairie school-house to fill an appointment; was locked out, but I preached under some trees, and several men built an arbor yesterday, and I begin meetings there to-night.

Lovers of free thought and liberty say I should have a house to preach in, and the prospectg are good, at present, for the building of a house. We have no organization here, but a few members and many friends. Those friends are mixed in their belief-some Baptists, Campbellites, Methodists, Catholics, etc., etc. Forty dollars have been subscribed up to date for the house. Those helping say it can be deeded to the church. and when we are not using it we must let other denominations preach in it. Of course that suits free hearted people. I do hope it will not be a failure. The Saints in Bandera county are doing very well, and the work there is moving onward under the wise efforts of Brn. L. L. Wight and T. J. Sheppard. Father is here with me.

I am feeling a little tired; have spoken fifty-eight times from June 20th to July 26th. I do not travel much, and I can not say I see very rough times; but I have had some serious thoughts in the past few days, for there is some talk of a crowd being formed to whip me. But I hope it will not be the case, for I think I got enough of that when I was a boy; and, as Paul says, I have put away childish things.

After the debate closed many of Wilson county's leading men gathered around me and gave me to understand they would see me have fair play. The foes can accomplish their desires but in one way, and that is "on the sly." I do not know who the parties all are, but from what I learn, those in favor of it are mixed in size and belief, and are of both sexes. Many substantial friends are ready to "mix it with them."

I was sorry to hear of Bro. Roberts' sickness. Hope he will soon be at work again. We do miss him so much. Ever praying for Zion's welfare and believing—

"God will safely keep His people,
Ever be His name adored;
He makes all things work together,
For their good who love the Lord."
Yours in gospel bonds,

J. A. CURRIE, Jun.

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio, Aug. 7th.

Bro. Blair:—I arrived here the 25th of July and held meetings on the 26th, 28th and 29th in Middletown, but there were not many out to hear. It seems that the people are wholey given over to somethings of a sensational nature, but we have tried to do our duty. There are some good Latter Day Saints here and in Amanda, notably Bro. and Sr. Jones, Bro. and Sr. Wien and Bro. Richard Williams and wife. May their zeal never grow less in this work! We met last Sunday with the Saints and tried to encourage them to duty and they are going to try to keep up their meetings. May God's Spirit be with them, for without the Spirit we are none of his.

The work here has been neglected and I can not see why a good work can't be done here; but it will take time and wisdom to accomplish much. We have been laboring in Crawford and Perry counties all Spring. The work is gaining there. We met with a with a warm reception where we had our debate last Spring in the shape of a bundle of switches with a warning; the final and last argument of Babylon. We feel to rejoice in the work, having confidence in the ultimate triumph of the same.

More anon, V. D. BAGGLEY.

POMONA, Cal., July 50th. Br. W. W. Blair: - Pomona has seven Saints, my father and mother, (Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Brown), Bro. and Sr. Crane, myself and wife and a new member, for which we thank God. My brother's wite sought long and earnestly for the church which taught the gospel truth. A Methodist lady did her best to convince her of the truth of their doctrine, but they had got too far from the truth, and now that she could not convince her of their honesty in teaching what they do, and worse still, leaving undone what they ought to do in the way of teaching the gospel plan. The lady herself seems very much dissasisfied with some of their teachings, especially since one of their sanctified sisters told her if she wanted to be sanctified to get up and say she was sanctified, and that was all there was about it. Probably she thinks that the testimony so often heard that they are so filled with the Holy Ghost, and yet having no visible signs or manifestation of the same, is as hypocritical as to make ones self sanctified by saying so. I do pray God for her that her heart and eyes and understanding may be opened to receive the gospel once delivered to the Saints; for I think her a good, earnest, thoughtful woman, and one who could do good if she was led into the truth; but there is so much that is hard to believe that I can see that nothing but the answer to prayer ever led me to lay aside prejudices as strong as men can hold; but when I went to God and said if he had a people on the earth and would make them known to me I would obey the gospel, whether that congregation numbered two or tens of thousands, and my prayers were answered in a way that left not the least possible room for doubt, and it was strange, very strange, that I found the truth among those I despised most, understanding them the least.

I meet many here who ask earnestly in regard to our teaching and doctrine, and I do all I can to set the truth before them. Many seem perfectly soul-sick of hypocritical doctrine, and to them the doctrine taught as of old has something solid, sound, tangible, which they can lay hold of, a standard around which all can rally, and which has twice been lost by adding to or taking away; and I thank God some are willing to obey the law as he gave it. Yours in bonds,

T. S. Brown.

Dow CITY, Iowa, August 1st.

Dear Herald:-According to the instructions from Bro. Lambert, I consulted Bro. C. E. Buttermorth with regard to what part of the mission to begin labor in, and it was decided that I should labor in the northern part. Accordingly I started out on the 17th of April, having arrived at home from conference on the 14th, and stopped at the North Coon branch four days, speaking three times to attentive listeners. From there I went to Auburn, where I remained for nearly three weeks, speaking as often as I could get openings in town and surrounding school-houses.

While I was holding meetings at a schoolhouse about five miles from Auburn, and at the close of one of our meetings, a young man wanted me to bring some one to whom he could give a dose of poison, and if it didn't kill the party taking it he "would believe."

From here, in company with brother and sister Carroll, brother Carroll taking his team, I went across the country to Rolfe, about sixty miles. On the way we stopped over night with the family of Mr. and Mrs. Chideler who were burned in April. The way it came about was this: They had started to town (Manson), Mr. Chideler smoking his pipe. They had scarcely got one mile from home when he knocked the ashes out of his pipe on the wagon stake. In a very short time, and without warning to them, the flames burst out between them catching the clothing of Mrs Chideler, it having previously been burning hay in the wagon. Mr. Chideler made ever effort in his power to extiguish the flames and save his wife, but to no purpose; all he could do was to stand back and watch his dear companion burn to death. He did not give up until he was burned so badly that the flesh would hang in strings from his hands.

I simply make mention of this for the benefit of smokers and all who say, "You can't set anything on fire with tobacco sparks;" or, "I never had any such accident and I have smoked for a great many years." No! Nor did Mr. Chideler until this time. His cry was, "How can I ever face my children; I have burned their mother to death!" He lived one week after his companion and then went to his long home.

At Rolfe we stopped at Bro. Reed's, where I made my home most of the time while in that vicinity. Thanks for kindness received.

I paid a brief visit to Bro. Ford's near Rush Lake and spoke once in that vicinity. From there I went with Bro. Hartshorn, Sr. Smith, and her son Elbert to their home near Marathon, where we held a few meetings. Leaving there I came home to conference.

After conference, in company with Bro. Whiting, I started north, having been appointed to that field by Bro. Derry. We held a two-days meeting at Camp Creek, then went on to Rolfe, where we lifted the gospel standard in town. Held five meetings, Bro. Whiting doing most of the preaching, and was quite favorably received by some. We could not continue longer on account of the expense-two dollars per day for

At Auburn I baptized two sisters, which was my first baptizing. At Rolfe I had the pleasure of conducting six more into the kingdom. All, I believe, will be instruments for good.

I met with the Saints at Coalville last Sunday. Found them to be a noble people, as almost all of the Saints are wherever I have been.

I am at home now. Came on the 29th ult. Owing to the busy season among the farmers I could not do much in that country. I expect to be doing what I can in this vicinity for a few weeks before going north again.

I pray God to bless all his people and to remember his ministry in particular.

Yours for the truth,

D. M. RUDD.

PORT GREVILLE, N. S., July 30th.

Br. W. W. Blair: - I am here, at Port Greville, one of the loveliest places at this season of the year that I was ever in. A party of us had planned to-day to go in a large sail-boat to Cape Split, a distance of ten miles, on a picnic excursion, but the rain is descending and Blomidon and the Split are hidden from view, so we are obliged to remain in doors, and I will embrace the opportunity to write to you. I received your reply to my letter stating that you had sent it to the missionary in charge. I hope it will be convenient for an elder to come before I leave Nova Scotia, for I could be of assistance in introducing him to my friends; but he would receive a welcome, for many have expressed a desire to hear our elders preach. I have tried to give them an understanding of our faith-a glimmmering of the glorious truth, and they did not weary, but said, "I wish you would talk and explain to us all night." Last week I had a dream that encouraged and strengthened me. I thought I was at home in California and had been to Nova Scotia, and the Lord had blessed me and my efforts more than I expected, and I awoke rejoicing. My daily prayer is that many, very many, will hear and obey the gospel in its purity and have light and knowledge given them to accept it; for I know there are honest people here who are willing to accept truth.

I miss the fellowship of the Saints, but have received testimony that I am remembered in their prayers, and when talking and bearing testimony I have been blessed many times by the Spirit, which brought "things to my remembrance," and I was shown what I did not understand before, for which I thank my heavenly Father. I hope about the middle of August to visit the Saints where Br. and Sr. Burton labored, from there go to Boston; and if I can find them. to spend a short time with the Saints there, and then start for home, which I hope to reach by September 15th. My friends have all received me kindly, but the evil one is classing me among the Spiritualists and Christian Scientists; he is not going to let the restored gospel be preached without a struggle.

I have quite a number of our Church publications in circulation. Have four or five copies of the Voice of Warning belonging to Br. Peters, which are in great demand, and I wrote to Bro. Dancer for a dozen more which have not arrived yet. Expect them soon.

Your sister in Christ,

LOCKHARTVILLE, Nova Scotia. July 29th.

Dear Heraid: It gives me much pleasure to read the letters from different branches of the church. I am but a young soldier in this glorious work, but I know this is the true church of God. I was baptized by Elder A. H. Parsons, January 27th, 1889, and confirmed by Elders A. H. Parsons, H. H. Robinson and H. J. Davison. My parents were baptized October 23d, and I never felt satisfied until I obeyed. I feel that I am very weak but my prayer is that strength may be given me to overcome all temptation and that I may become more worthy the name of a Saint. Bro, and Sr. Davison are the only Saints besides ourselves in this place, but there is quite a branch about twenty five miles from here. I was over and stayed three weeks last Spring and enjoyed my visit very much. They have a nice little church and they had some splendid meetings while I was there. I had the pleasure of seeing Bro. Parsons baptize ten, which gave much encouragement. Bro. Davison preaches to us quite often, but the most of our neighbors appear to be afraid of us and stay away; but I hope that will wear away away bye and bye. We take Autumn Leaves and I think it just splendid. We exchange with Bro. Davison for the Herald. Asking an interest in the prayers of the Saints that I may become strong, and ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I am your sister in Christ, MAUDE H. LAWRENCE.

London, Ontario, July 17th.

Bro. W. W. Blair:-The London branch is in better condition now than it has been for years. On the 13th of June they had a grand entertainment in the church and collected over seventyeight dollars the same night. They have paid in the last two months nearly one hundred and fifty dollars on the church debt, and now have it all paid off. They have in the last year painted it inside and out. Brethren Howlett, Henley, Pugsley and Hardey are the officers of the branch.

I am here at present. Will preach my first sermon in London since October conference tomorrow. I have baptized eighteen since General Conference, thirteen of them at St. Thomas during the past month. God has been with me and blessed me much of late. One young sister that has lately been baptized in St. Thomas has had fits for years, and in one of our meetings she fell down and it took several men to hold her. We walked up to her and had just laid our hand on her head when the Spirit of our Master came upon us and we rebuked the power and took her by the hand, told the others to let go of her and she stood upon her feet as if nothing was wrong. This has caused much talk. She was previously a Roman Catholic. . . .

Another case: A young couple came to hear me preach there. They only heard a few sermons when the lady took sick. The doctor despaired of her life, and it was the worst case of diphtheria he had ever witnessed. The husband came and told me that his wife desired me to administer to her. Bro. Strange and I went, administered to her, and she began to recover, and just one week from that day I baptized the husband and wife. She never took a drop of medicine after the administration. So goes the good work. Your brother, R. C. Evans.

"HE THAT IS LEAST."

"He that is least in the kingdom of God is greater than he."—Luke 7: 28.

Who can the Savior have reference to in the remarks at the head of this article as being greater than John the Baptist? One who was least in the kingdom of God! Who could that be? It is a question that can be solved only by the Spirit of God; and the hope of understanding the whys and wherefores of our Lord's sayings springs up in the heart powerfully, sometimes, while reading his precious words, full of mystery to all who are not endued with the wisdom that cometh from above. Lord, help, that poor, puny man may not be wise above that which is written! I am constrained to write as I do from reading the different ideas on the plainest of scripture lessons. One wouldbe wise man tells us, that the least in the kingdom of God implies that the poorest creature on earth who has received a change of heart, that is, one who has been born of God, as they term it; one who experiences religion according to the methods in vogue now, requiring nothing like baptism of water, only the Spirit; in short, a change of heart, that such is greater than John the Baptist who was more than a prophet-for he was the especial messenger from God to announce the coming King, to baptize him and to declare to all men that the one he baptized was the Lamb of God—the one to baptize with the Holy Ghost.

I wish to ask, Who was in the kingdom of God when this remark was made? I argue that a citizen indeed of the kingdom is one who has received the baptism of water and of the Spirit, and I am not afraid to state that Jesus Christ was one holding that position when he made the remark that heads this paper. I also believe him to be the greatest as well as the least. The apostles had not received the Holy Ghost up to this time, except in a few, very few instances; for instance, when Peter confessed Christ he was told that it was a revelation from the Father, "and," says our Lord, "upon this rock I will build my church" [not that I have built, but | "I will build," (in the future). I hear some one say, "He is going too far, altogether too far." But don't judge too rashly; think well and long before you decide against the writer. He reads the same book you do; he goes to the same throne of grace with you whoever you be, and he would suffer anything, however severe, rather than impute anything wrong to Christ. But he will accept Jesus and his words in preference to those of any other. Now Christ said, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he can not enter the kingdom of God." John says, "The Holy Ghost was not yet given because Jesus was not yet glorified." Jesus tells his disciples before his departure that they should be baptized with the Holy Ghost not many days hence. And had they been baptized before, a second baptism would not have been needed.

Again, notice how often our Lord had to reprove, instruct, warn and teach these disciples. Every parable had to be explained, and some things that our Savior told them they did not know then, but they would when the Spirit of truth should come. And how easy for Peter on Pentecost to preach, and what a glorious sermon he did preach when the Spirit of truth did Then, and not till then did he use the keys of the kingdom which Jesus said he would give him at the time he made his confession. Not give them at that time, but at some time future from that on which the confession was made. Christ retained the keys. I do not believe any one can prove from the gospels that Peter held the keys while the Savior was on earth, for there could be but one set of keys, and if Peter had them certainly Jesus gave them to him, and he must have had them when he denied his Savior. But certainly the Spirit of God was absent then, if ever, from Peter. Now I think all can see that the Lord referred to himself when he said "he that is least in the kingdom of God is greater than" John. The least and the greatest, just as he could be "the root and offspring of David."

There are many sayings of our Savior that seem strange. One more will answer for the present: "And no man hath ascended up to heaven but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of Man which is in heaven." I have many times requested a solution of this passage, and am still waiting. Will some one please tell us and set the mind at rest? John preached, saying, "the kingdom of heaven is at hand." The Savior did the same. When he sent his disciples out he commanded them to preach the same. I look at it in this manner, that the apostles were chosen for the express purpose of being witnesses of the truth; elected if you please; but must wait till they received power from on high-till their inauguration; and that brings to mind something that will answer as an illustration. Our presidents and vice presidents are elected five months before being sworn in. They are, of course our next officers, but they can not officiate until the proper time comes, when the supreme judge administers the oath. So I believe the apostles were elected to fill the offices they afterwards filled with so much honor and fidelity, but must wait as Iesus commanded, until the Father above, the Supreme Judge of all, should empower them for the work assigned them. And how well that was done and how Peter opened the door so that three thousand were able to enter in one day! I believe then that Christ, strictly speaking, was the only one baptized with water and the Spirit except, perhaps, John the Baptist; therefore he was the least and the greatest at the same time. He was greater than Moses, and greater than all others. He was servant of all, yet he was their Lord and Master. No where to lay his head, yet he promised all who followed him a hundred fold more in this life, and in the life to come eternal life. If wrong correct me, and I will stand corrected. As I believe so I speak, and I certainly believe as I have written. Paul tells us that Christ was worthy of more glory than Moses, inasmuch as he who builded the house hath more honor than the house. He was greater than Solomon and greater than Jonah, and yet was least as well as greatest in the kingdom of God after his baptism until some others were baptized by water and the Spirit, or we do not understand the meaning of his remarks on this particular occasion. The apostles were often at a loss to understand their Lord's words, as in the case of the Samaritan woman. When they requested him to eat he said: "I have meat to eat that ye know not of." They supposed some one had given him, "but he said unto them, my meat is to do the will of him that sent me.? Had the Holy Ghost been with them then they would have known. The Savior was sufficient for them as long as he was with them, but when he was taken from them another Comforter should take his place; that is, his holy presence would no more travel too and fro as in the past. While he was present with them they needed no other comforter, for he was their comforter; hence his saying, "another comforter" should come after his departure which should lead them into all truth. We don't see any reference to the old scriptures by the apostles till pentecost, but how easy for Peter to refer to the old scriptures when the Spirit was given, and his argument in favor of Christ from the prophecies of old was so powerful that the multitude was then and there convinced of their guilt of the death of Christ! It was no trouble for Jesus to refer to the prophets. He knew well what happened in Noah's days; also what occured in Sodom; and in short, all that ever occurred from the creation to his own day as well as what would transpire in the future to the end of time. And why? Because he was filled with the Spirit, and that same Spirit would assist the apostles when they should receive it. And they did to a certainty make good use of the old testament writings wherever they went to prove the truth of their preaching and teaching. I see with joy the letters from the elders stating how the Spirit is with them in their labors. They having been born of water and of the Spirit are like the apostles of old, witnesses for Christ. How hard even to offer a prayer without the Spirit! Paul says, we can not pray as we ought to do without the help of the Spirit. It helps our infirmities. "He that searcheth the hearts knoweth what is the mind of the Spirit, because he maketh intercession for the Saints according to the will of God."

I am very well satisfied in my own mind that the new birth is complete only when water and the Spirit are joined and a complete regeneration is not affected on any other terms than the same Jesus passed through and what he told Nicodemus. And in conclusion, I believe that our Lord referred to himself when he said that the least in the kingdom of God was greater than John.

SERMON BY BRO. J. WHITEHEAD,

AT LAMONI.

Reported by E. Stafford, June 23d.

BRO. WHITEHEAD, introduced by Bro. W. W. Blair as speaker of the morning, arose and said: Many of you will remember these words of the apostle Paul: "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come."

My first object will be to ascertain the qualifications necessary for us to be numbered with the godly; they only have the promise of the life which now is and of that which is to come. There are many ideas with regard to the things necessary to prepare men to dwell in the presence of God, a condition we all should be working for; it should be the desire of our hearts and the glorious hope to buoy up the pilgrim traveling on the narrow path that leads unto eternal life.

What would it profit us, brethren and sisters and friends, if we could gain this whole world and loose our souls? What would we give in exchange? We have nothing to give in exchange. The way for us is to pursue the path that leads unto eternal life. What is eternal life? "This is life eternal that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent."—John 17. It is necessary that we come to a knowledge of the Father and the Son and be prepared for that glory which is to be revealed. kind of character must we have to be profited thereby? We can not claim godliness if we do not walk in righteousness and true holiness. "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God. Blessed are the peace-makers, for they shall be called the children of God. Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled with the Holy Ghost," and that Spirit guides the righteousnes until it brings them safely home to enjoy eternal life.

I will read the twelfth chapter of I Corinthians, for it is the foundation of the discourse I wish to bring before you. "Now concerning spiritual gifts, brethren, I would not have you ignorant. Ye know that ye were Genfiles, carried away unto these dumb idols, even as ye were led.

Wherefore, I give you to understand, that no man speaking by the Spirit of God calleth Jesus accursed; and that no man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost." My friends, have we that Holy Ghost? If we have not, we can not in truth and sincerity say that Tesus is the Christ. But if we have received that Spirit-the Holy Ghost, the Comforterthen it will manifest unto us that Jesus is the Christ-is the Savior of the world. It is through his atonement, his sacrifice, the pain he endured for all, that we can approach the Father. And what does Jesus say? "I am the light and the life of the world. He that believeth in me, though he were dead, vet shall he live; and he that liveth and believeth in me shall never die." We must continue to believe in him; continue to honor and obey our divine Master, and do his will, before we can bear testimony that we know that Jesus lives. We must not only have that testimony, but we must continually have it; for "If the light that is in thee become darkness, how great will that darkness be?" "Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit. And there are differences of administrations, but the same Lord. And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which worketh all in all."

Now, my friends, if you find individuals that are in possession of these glorious truths and principles, you will see that they are not only a humble, upright, prayerful people, but that they are prepared for the better and more glorious inheritance, that which is incorruptible, undefiled, and will not fade away. It is well to have these blessed principles, and truths, and powers manifested by that Spirit, but that is not enough; we must have more than that before we can lay claim, or be entitled to that "godliness that is profitable unto all things, having the promise of the life that now is, and of the life to come."

After all these things had been spoken of, the apostle says further: "Though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels and have not charity, I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal. Let us see to it that we cultivate that charity that is gentle, compassionate, actuated by that Spirit that Jesus had so prominently while preaching the gospel. He ever went about doing good; he always was willing to lend a helping hand to miserable human beings; he never turned a deaf ear to any such. The woman who had been afflicted for many years, said, "If I can only touch the hem of his garment I shall be made whole!" She pressed on and touched that garment and was made whole! And Jesus said, "Who touched me?" His disciples said, "Master, see how we are pressed on every hand; why is it that thou sayest, Who touched me?" Ah! "Virtue is gone out of me," said Jesus, "and I know that somebody touched me." That virtue filled that glorious Redeemer and it could pass to the afflicted woman-could The poor woman heal her infirmities. humbly confessed that she had touched the hem of his garment. What did that compassionate Savior say? Did he rebuke her? No! but he said "Daughter, be of good cheer; thy faith hath saved thee."
My dear brethren and sisters, we must follow in the way of that divine Master.
What does the scripture say? "We must be like him"—we must "see him as he is."

We are heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ, if we walk in the truth and power of the gospel of Jesus Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation. How shall we know when we are in possession of this wonderful principle, "chariity?" The apostle shows how we shall know, my brethren. I want you to understand that while I am preaching to you, I am preaching to myself. For I must be in possession of the same gift to be a true child of God, the same virtuous principle, the same knowledge and power of the gospel as every other son or daughter of God has to be-God is no respecter of persons. If I am not in possession of this charity, I am as sounding brass or tinkling cymbal.

Now mark this language, "And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have all faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing."

My friends, you may think that if a person could be in possession of all these gifts or powers, he would be all right. But I tell you there are a great many things abroad; some say that they have the life-power, and they are going to and fro performing wonderful things. I tell you that they are going to deceive the very elect if possible. But, thank God, they can not deceive the elect; for their faith in their God and the gospel of Jesus Christ is too well founded. But though they have all this power, and have not charity, still they are nothing.

What is this charity? How am I to know whether I or my brother or friend has it? Let us see: "And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and though I give my body to be burned, and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing." While Paul speaks so emphatically upon this subject, he knew it was right to have faith, and to give our earthly substance to bless those who need. But if a man or woman-when they are able to, and have an opportuity of providing for themselves -will linger and trifle away their time, and will not make an effort to help themselves, they are unworthy to be helped; if they will not work the apostle says let There are many that have them not eat. not power to help themselves; they have nothing to make them happy and comfortable-among these are the widow, the fatherless and the worthy poor. Let every child of God that is able help such as these. But if man gives his body to be burned, yet if he has not charity, it profiteth nothing. What is this charity? How shall we find it out? The apostle says, "Charity suffereth long." Ah! I think I can hear some of you say, "I have suffered much and have suffered long. I have had all manner of tribulation to pass through." Paul said he had tribulation by land and by sea, and twice received forty stripes save one, also was let down out of a window to escape his enemies. Did he not suffer? Yes, and many of you have suffered.

"Charity suffereth long and is kind." Are you all kind when you suffer? Do you take it in a kind, gentle, loving manner? or do you utter language unbecoming a child of God? Do you murmur, find fault at your lot, envy others of that which they possess, and because you suffer in your poverty treat them unkindly?
My friends, when we suffer we must still be kind; we must bear it as much as possible. If we do otherwise, it is not good. We must suffer and still be kind; for the word says, "charity suffers long and is kind." "Charity envieth not." Whenever we envy any one because they are better off than we are, it is not right.

If we have the charity that inspired the bosom of the divine Master we will never envy any one; and when our friends and neighbors and brethren in the Lord are prospered and doing well we will never envy any of them, but will thank God that he has blessed them with abundance, and we will go on our way rejoicing, without murmuring, or complaining, or fault-finding.

"Charity envieth not; is not puffed up." Is there any such thing as being puffed up? Do any of you think you are better than your fellow men? Do you feel that you are so big, so wondrous wise, so important that you don't look upon your brother and sister as your equals in Christ Jesus, and can not esteem them just as good, as great, as precious in the sight of God as yourselves? Do not be puffed up. If you are, if you exalt yourselves above others, above your brethren and sisters or any one else, you do wrong; it is contrary to that pure principle, the love of God that fills the hearts of the pure, enabling them to pursue the path of right and work with all their power and mind to keep God's commandments.

"Doth not behave itself unseemly." Do we ever behave unseemly? I have seen it-but not in this place-where some would feel so very important that they would not shake hands with one who was clad in poor clothing. Do not behave unseemly. If a brother or sister comes among you with poor raiment, see you to it that you take them by the hand; provide for them as far as you can. If they are hungry, feed them; if they are naked, clothe them, and God will be your reward. But if you do not-if you act unseemly and slight them you have not charity, that charity spoken of by Paul.

"Doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil." It thinking no evil.

Do you ever think evil of a brother, sister, friend or neighbor? If you never think evil I believe you will never speak it; for "out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh." The first impulse of evil comes into the heart; and if you are not careful to keep a seal upon your lips out it comes, causing bitter sorrow; causing others to mourn over the depravity of human nature.

Charity never rejoices in iniquity, but rejoices in the truth. How is it with us, my brethren and sisters? I told you I was preaching to myself as well as you. Do we ever rejoice in iniquity? Do we ever go with the giddy multitude to do evil? If we do we have not that charity spoken of by the apostle. We must never rejoice in iniquity. What shall we rejoice in? In the truth! Let truth prevail in every heart, my brethren and sisters: let men do what they will, should they persecut us unto death let us stand by the truth; it is written for our profit and learning that we may be thoroughly furnished unto every good work.

Now you see what it is to have charity, and you see that if any one in their faith and acts are manifestly contrary to this word, it is an evidence they have not charity.

There is a thing passing in my mind that I will speak of. I remember reading in this blessed book, that after the apostles of Christ had gone forth preaching the word, and many of them had suffered martyrdom for it, there arose some in the church who said that they were apostles, and were proved by the church at Ephesus to have no claim to that office, and the word says they were found to be "liars." How shall we know true apostles? How shall we know a good man but by his works-his deeds. A true apostle of God will preach by the inspiration of heaven. He never preaches anything contrary to this book. If he preaches anything contrary to what has come from heaven, he is not an apostle of the Eternal One. The word of God is the touchstone; is the standard to try every man or woman whether they are true followers of the Lamb or not. How is it with us? "Godliness is profitable unto all things," it "has the promise of the life that now is, and that which is to come." Have we proof that godliness was profitable in this life? Yes; we have a number of them. You remember the case of Daniel who had, with the children of Israel, been carried captive to Babylon. Through the providence of God he was raised high in authority in that realm. This excited the jealousy of the presidents and princes whom he was placed over. They sought to find fault with him in his official capacity, that they might accuse him before the king. But they concluded, after diligently watching, that all the fault they would find in him was concerning the law of his God! They knew that Daniel called upon his God three times a day; and they concocted a scheme to bring him into distavor with the king and to destroy him. They persuaded the king to make a firm decree that could not be changed according to the law of the Medes and Persians—that if any one asked a petition of any God or man for thirty days except of the king, they should be cast into the den of lions. The king signed their petition-it became a lawbut it did not stop Daniel from calling upon God as he had been in the habit of doing. These men found him praying to his God. O, my friends, let us pray so the God of heaven, who is able to protect us; who is able to save us; who is able to bring us into his glorious kingdom where the inef-fable joys that await the righteous far exceed the knowledge of the human mind!

Paul said that he was caught up into the third heavens and saw and heard things that were not lawful for him to utter before mortal man, and why? Because they would not use them right; they would cast them to the swine, and they would turn again and rend them. The gifts of God are very precious; most sacred, and we must not trifle with them; we must use them wisely in the fear of God. Well. what did they do with Daniel. They went to the great king and told him that Daniel had broken the decree and still asked petitions of his God. And when the king heard this, he was sore displeased with himself, and set his heart to deliver Daniel, and labored to that end till the going down of the sun. But the men who had so craftily labored for the destruction of good Daniel would not listen to the king, but clamored for the execution of the law which they knew would not be changed. The king yielded, and Daniel was cast into the den of lions. But the king was troubled about it, and had told Daniel that his God would deliver him. He passed a sleepless night, arose early in the morning and went in haste to the lion's den and cried out in the bitterness of his soul, "O, Daniel, servant of the living God; is thy God, whom thou servest, able to deliver thee from the lions!" Daniel answered and said, "My God hath sent his angel and hath shut the lion's mouth!" He was safe! He was secure from harm, and was taken up out of the den and those who had conspired against him were cast into the den and the lions break all their bones. Here godliness was profitable—and it was in this life, Godliness is profitable unto all things, not only in this life, but in the life to come. Daniel found it so.

How was it with the the three Hebrew children who were cast into the fiery furnace, heated seven times hotter than it was wont to be? When they cast these into the furnace, the fire was so powerful that it slew those who cast them in! The king said, "Did not we cast three men into the fire? I see four there walking in the midst of the fire, and one is like unto the Son of God." There was the angel of the Lord; there was the messenger from heaven to deliver these children of God who had stood to the truth; and they would not worship anything or any one but the God of heaven. "And the fourth is like unto the son of God!" They knew about the Son of God. Why, my friends, the gospel has been preached in every dispensation, from Adam until now. Adam had a dispensation of the gospel given unto him, and he was the head of that dispensation; then we come to Noah, who was a preacher of righteousness. He was God's servant, and he preached righteousness in his day, but the people would not believe him, and God destroyed them by a flood but saved seed upon the earth.

Noah's dispensation was the second one, then comes Moses, who was chosen of God to deliver Israel, and the Lord gave the law by his mouth unto that people. Here was another president of another dispensation, and his was the third. Then comes the meridian of time. Then comes the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world -"Glory to God in the highest; peace on earth, good will to men!" He comes, and is the president over the seven dispensa-The other presidents will stand with him upon Mount Zion, and there will be an hundred and forty-four thousand high priests that shall stand with him. They will be like Him; they will see Him as he is. "Now we see through a glass darkly; but then face to face. Now we know in part, but then we will know as we are known." Don't you see that godliness was profitable in this life unto the three Hebrew children, for they were rescued, not having the smell of fire upon their garments.

O ye children of God, put on the whole armor of God; for I tell you that the day star has appeared, and the work of God will move on, and his cause shall spread and prosper beyond our highest expectations! My friends, I have only just opened this subject. I have told you a little about the life that now is, but I have said nothing about the life to come; only a single sentence about the hundred and forty-four thousand that will stand with the Lamb upon Mount Zion; they will have an eternal inheritance; they will reign with Jesus on the earth; they will be among that number found worthy to be kings and priests. What did John see when he was upon the Isle of Patmos? He saw in priests. the heavenly vision an innumerable company round about the throne of God, and he heard them singing in heaven a new song. What did they sing? "Thou art worthy to take the book, and to open the seals thereof; for thou wast slain, and hast redeemed us to God by thy blood, out of every kindred, and people, and tongue, and nation, and hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth." They also sang, "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power, and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and glory, and blessing . . . Blessing and honor and glory be unto him that sitteth upon the throne and to the Lamb for-ever." These were to reign on the earth. -they are they that reign over the nations of the earth that are saved, and these latter are they that bring their glory and honor into the new Jerusalem-the place of glory, for nothing unholy or impure shall ever enter there.

I was wondering about these things one evening in bed. The word says that the gates shall not be shut at all by day, for there shall be no night there; they are always open, so that they that are allowed can enter at all times. I said to myself, Is it not possible that some unworthy person may get into city the same way that one got into the guest chamber and had not on the wedding garment? But God showed me better. No man or woman will pass into that city but by the permission of the Great Captain of our Salvation, their righteousness having been made manifest unto him through obedience to the ordinances of the house of God while in this probation. They having overcome the world, and the lusts thereof, do "enter through the gates into the city.

But I must stop—the time is gone. I may have a chance of finishing the subject if the Lord spares me-for the best of our subject is to come. The apostle Paul said there was "a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory to be revealed," and that "the Spirit of God searcheth all things, yea the deep things of God," and it maketh manifest unto man the things of eternal worth.

How are we shaping our lives? How often do we go into our secret chambers and go to God in earnest prayer and supplication?

David said, "To meditate upon the word of the Lord" was his chief joy. Is it our chief joy to read these books, the Holy Scriptures, the Book of Mormon and the Book of Covenants? They are all from God. The Book of Doctrine and Covenants is given to us, it is for this generation, this dispensation; it is not to another dispensation; it is true and faithful; it bears testimony to the Book of Mormon, and the Book of Mormon bears testimony to the Bible, and the Bible bears testimony to the Book of Mormon, and the Book of Covenants bears testimony to all of them, and that suffices. I advise you to read that book; to pray for the Spirit of God that it may lead and guide you, and make manifest unto you his will and the glory that is to be revealed. Enter often into your secret chambers; pour out your souls to God to help you put on the whole armor of God that you may ever stand for the truth.

The time has come when we must arise in the strength of the Lord, and by holy living draw nearer to God. We must get upon a higher plane than we are on now. We must go on step by step as we go up Jacob's ladder. We can not go at once from the ground to the top round; if we could we would be so dizzy we would fall. We must go step by step in order to get to the head, and there we will meet with friends that are gone before. I expect to meet my friends if I am only true to the gospel of Jesus Christ, and endure with patience to the end.

"NO DEVIL, NO AGENCY."

I WISH to offer a few thoughts on the above language, found in the present volumn of Herald page 427. In Gen. 3:4, I. T., we find: "Wherefore, because that Satan rebelled against me, and sought to destroy the agency of man which I, the Lord God, had given him; and also that I should give unto him mine own power; by the power of mine only begotten I caused that he should be cast down, and he became Satan; yea even the devil the father of all lies, to deceive, and blind men, and lead them captive at his will, even as many as would not hearken unto my voice." Wherefore, (for which reason), Satan was "cast down and he became Satan." The word "became" points to the fact that prior to this he was not Satan. But seeking "to destroy the agency of man" and rebelling against God changed him from an angel of light to the "prince of darkness," or the devil. Agency existed before the fall of Satan; for seeking "to destroy the agency of man" was a part of his crime. Hence agency can not in any manner be dependent upon him. Reverse the language and say, "No agency, no devil;" then the responsibility of being a devil is placed where it belongs, i. e., on the devil; for, acting upon his agency he did that which made him such. Therefore, justly held responsible for his acts, he, by his own will, occupies his present position, the result of his agency unwisely

Let us deduce: No devil, no agency: no agency, no honor; no honor, no glory; no glory, no happiness; no happiness, no eternal life; no eternal life, no God; no God, no creation-all a blank! Conclusion: All things depend upon the devil! Hence he is God Supreme! Again let us deduce: No agency, no devil, no evil, sorrow, sickness, pain nor death; all happiness, joy and peace. Is agency beneficial then? Yes, if properly used. But like all other things its merits or demerits depend upon the manner of its application. Food is essential to life, but an improper use of it has slain and is slaying its thousands. But of itself it is not an evil. The same is true of agency. By its use we may reach the heights of happiness or depths of sorrow. What is agency? God defines it thus in Gen. (I. T.): "Inasmuch as thy children are conceived in sin, even so, when they begin to grow up, sin conceiveth in their hearts, and they taste the bitter that they may know how to prize the good. And it is given unto them to know good from evil; wherefore they are agents unto themselves." Wherefore, because "it is given unto them to know good from evil" "they are agents unto themselves." Thus we see that it was the ability "to know good from evil" that Satan wished to destroy; or, in other words, the intelligence of man. This could only be accomplished by destroying his spiritual organization. Seeing that, "as thy children are conceived in sin, even so, when they begin to grow up, sin conceiveth in their hearts, and they taste the bitter that they may know how to prize the good."

Deductions: Men taste the bitter, because "sin conceiveth in their hearts;" "sin conceiveth in their hearts," because they "are conceived in sin;" they "are conceived in sin" because man fell; man fell because Satan tempted him; Satan tempted him to carry out his original plan of destruction. Satan became Satan by reason of rebelling against God, and not by virtue of his creation; for as created by God he was "an angel of light." Thus, having to "taste the bitter"-and not our agency -originated with and continues by reason of his Sable Majesty.

As the devil was the cause of man's fall, nothing could be more fitting, wise or loving, than that he should be used for the benefit of man. That God so uses him, see D. & C. page 118, par. 10: "And it must needs be that the devil should tempt the children of men, or they could not be agents unto themselves; for if they never should have bitter, they could not know the sweet." Why? because they "are conceived in sin" and therefore must learn by experience. Thus a wise and loving Father uses the evil designs of the devil for the good of man by teaching him good from evil, thus making him "an agent unto himself" through the very means the devil used to deprive him of his agency. O, benign Parent! how marvelous are thy ways! As being conceived in sin is the reason why man must taste the bitter, it follows that with the complete regenerative work of the gospel this necessity would pass away, and children grow up without sin unto salvation. God speed the day!

The agency of man-to know good from evil-how significant, grand, varied and magnificent! Could we fully comprehend it what a change there would be! We would not speak evil of our neighbor nor do him any harm; but would do as we would be done by. We would love God with all our heart, might, mind and strength, and our neighbor as ourself. Excesses of all kinds would cease, thus destroying death and making life perpetual. For "sin when it is finished, bringeth forth death. Peace eternal, joy supernal, good will to men on earth and God in heaven would surge their mighty but gentle billows over all. But faint indeed are the conceptions of its grandeur. Methinks that "eye hath not seen, ear hath not heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man" to conceive the beauty, worth and wisdom of man's agency.

Is the picture overdrawn? Though it were a thousand times more, there still remains in it more comfort to me than to think that my agency depends upon the devil. To me the agency of man is far too wise, noble and grand than to have originated with, or to be in any manner dependent upon, such a being as the devil.

MEXICAN RUINS.

BY LIEUT. SCHWATKA, A DISTINGUISHED TRAVELER.

THE Casas Grandes (The Big Houses) valley and river, through and along which we have been traveling for some time, as described in my previous article, is formed by the junction of two rivers, the San Miguel and Piedres Verdes. The former, the San Miguel, is the straight line prolongation of the Casas Grandes and seemingly the true stream, but the Piedras Verdes is the more important, as its waters are perennially replenished with branches which head in the never-failing springs of the Sierras to the west. On its picturesque banks we now find ourselves.

Just before reaching La Ascension we came to the Mormon colony of Diaz (named by them in honor of the present president of the Mexican Republic), numbering about thirty families. A discussion of their religious tenets is clearly and fortunately out of my province, not only from the heavy, dreamy character of it, but for the reason that everything, wise and otherwise, about Mormonism has already been put before those who cared to read it. But entirely outside of the subject of polygamy, which has so completely obscured every other point about these people, they have one characteristic which is seldom heard of in connection with them and their wanderings in the western wilderness. I refer to their pioneering efforts, or the building up of new countries. They have no peer in pioneering among the Caucasian races. They are so far ahead of the Gentiles in organized and discriminating, business-like colonization that the latter are not close enough to them to make a clear comparison and see their inferiority. Of course the Mormons see in their belief an ample explanation for this excellence; but it is far more probable, as I look at it from my Gentile standpoint, that it is due to the peculiar organization of their church, which well fits them for the work of making the wilderness blossom as the rose.

No other Christian church exercises so much authority over the temporal affairs of its members as the Mormon, and however debatable this exercise of authority may be in civilized communities surrounded by people of the same kind, there is no doubt in my mind as to its effect upon pioneer associations surrounded by enemies in man and nature. Whoever has grown up on the Gentile frontier and seen the innumerable bickerings between adjacent towns and the internal dissensions in the towns themselves, the rivalry for "booms," the shotgun contests for county seats, the thousands of exaggerations about their own interests and the millions of depreciations about those of others adjoining, needs no second argument to convince him how much more powerful and effective is a much smaller but more binding centrali zation that judicially settles all such questions for the public good, that determines where colonies shall be from, the character of the soil and the natural routes of travel; where only the good of the people is considered as against nature; and last, but not least, the propagation of the faith. It is not at all wonderful to one amid the scenes, that an organized faith of almost any character should have flourished surrounded by so much disorganization. In my last article I said that two or three years of quiet was needed after an Indian war to restore confidence among the whites so that they would settle the troubled districts in a bona fide way. I should have excepted the Mormons; but to have done so then without an explanation would have made the exception look somewhat absurd. Their long frontier experience has taught them how to weigh Indian matters correctly as well as others pertaining to the ragged edge of civilization. Although the Apaches have been subdued a dozen times by the Mexican and American governments alternately, they know when the subduing meant subjugation, and before Geronimo and his cabinet were half way to the orange grounds of Florida, Mormon wagon poles were pointed to the rich valleys of Northwestern Chihuahua. They number here about seventy-five families, a mere fraction compared with all the available land of the magnificent valleys of the Casas Grandes, Boca Grande, Santa Maria and others, counting the Mexican population, which is almost universally Catholic. In fact, those here seem content to settle down and to be let alone, which they can attain here by the purchase of tracts of lands over which they can throw their authority and be a little community unto themselves, neither disturbing nor hoping to be disturbed.

Their success here has already invited the more avaricious but less coldly calculating Gentiles, and, while it is putting it a little strong to say there is a "boom" or indications of one within thirty or sixty miles between villages, yet our conscience is not disturbed in saying that we can at least agree with the great American poet that "we hear the first low wash of waves where soon shall roll a human sea."

Already a railroad is talked of here, and the usual undue excitement is manifested. Every stranger is supposed to have something to do with it. Even America's expedition was thought to be a preliminary reconnoisance, and applications and interviews were made based on that supposition. I have never constructed a railroad in my life, though I have been among the advancing lines of a number of new ones and have seen them grow from two iron rails in the wilderness to a great country; and I do not recall any of them now that have had much brighter prospects ahead of them, as far as the eye can determine, than the proposed one along the eastern slopes of the Sierra Madres, should it ever be built. That it will be built some day the resources of the county demand, and, it is to be hoped for the good of the country, that it will be at as early a date as possible.

At Diaz City I learned from Dr. Derby Johnson, the ecclesiastical head of the lower Mormon colony, in Upper Chihuahua, that at the lower colony on Piedras Verdes, a number of ancient ruins were known, very few of which had ever been heard of before. I determined to try and reach them in time to incorporate some of their more interesting features, if there were any, in my earlier articles.

Corralitos was reached the first day. It has a very pretty, almost poetical name, that loses much of its romantic character when it is known that it is named for some old, dilapidated sheep pens that once existed there. "Corral" is a pen, or corral; "Corralitos" equals little pens, or little corrals. It is a hacienda some eight years old, and has an extremely interesting history, one that would make a book in its self as thrilling as any of frontier life.

The crack of Apache rifles has been heard around the walls wherein I wrote my second article, while dons of Spanish blood have mined fortunes from the mountain sides near by in mines that have been worked since shortly after the conquest. It is a hacienda of about a million acres in extent and one of the most beautiful ones in the whole State of Chihuahua, the Casas Grande river running for some thirty miles through the estate. The true hacienda, of which we hear so much in Mexican narration, is really a definite area, 22,000 acres, but it is used now to mean almost any large estate from that size, or even less, to any amount whatever, under one management. Under the advance of American railways they are slowly disappearing and will soon exist only in poetry and Cheap-John novels. The views from the hacienda are beautiful in almost every direction. The one given in the illustration is taken from La Ascension road, about six or eight miles from the hacienda.

Twenty-five or thirty miles south of Corralitos we came to Casas Grandes, said to be a town of 3,000 people. We saw about ten people as we drove through the seemingly deserted streets. It is the most important town in the valley, both historically and in numbers. It takes its name, meaning "big houses," from the ancient ruins just in the suburbs of the present place, which contained the largest houses of any found in this part of Mexico when it was first visited by Europeans many centuries ago. The name of the town has also been attached to the river which flows just in front of it. It has been spoken of in former writings, and although I shall refer to it again in a future article, it will only be to note its change—which has been very great—and my own investigations about it.

The next day we started to visit the ancient ruins on the Tapasita, a branch of the Piedras Verdes, and as beautiful a little valley as I ever saw in my life.

I expected to find a single well-defined set of ruins at a certain point, so one can imagine my surpaise somewhat when I found that the country, and especially the valleys, were covered with evidences of ruins. There was a high hill, called the Picacho de Forreon, whose southern face had been occupied by cliff dwellers, while at our feet was a mass of reddish rubbish that indicated an old ruin of the later people, and twelve miles up the Tapasita was a massive ruin of stone in reaching which ruins met the eye the whole way. were surely in the midst of an ancient yet dense population, and the fertile resources of the country will yet again sustain another such, even far more civilized. Just before our arrival a pot, or jar, had been taken from one of the ruins, and was given to me by a young man of the colony, Mr. Ellis Johnson.

It is like so many jars that have come from Casas Grandes and other betterknown ruins that have already figured in works on Mexico, but is exceptional from most of them in having upon it the figure of a bird, animals of all kinds being here upon their decorated surface. It is represented here with full and quarter views, the double picture being the same pot, or jar. The bird seems to correspond nearer to the chapparal cock, or California roadrunner, than any other bird of this part of the world. The geometrical designs are the most common, and, of these the zigzag, stair-like ones are the most constant.

Many other things have been found in this mound, including human bones of the original makers, and no doubt the same, with local variations, can be found in all. I believe I do not exaggerate when I say we found 100 to 150 ruins in the Piedras Verdes region, most of them merely mounds to indicate what they once were; and not one-tenth of which had received notice by pen or pencil before.

On the top of the hills adjacent were fortified palaces, apparently where they must have fled in times of danger from other tribes, They were a wonderful and interesting tribe of people, and I shall speak more of the little evidence of the existence they left behind them in future articles.

The third sketch is on the Tapasita, near the principal ruins, which must have been a city of these people. The only life we saw here was a mountain lion, or panther, that came trotting along the valley until it saw us and turned back to the mountains. Truly the wild beasts were wandering over the Toltec Babylon. Half the scenes of this country lose most of their beauty in the rich coloring they possess when transferred into pen and ink sketches. It is the land for the painter to show the people its beauties.—New York Star.

BUISMARK AND THE POPE.

Intelligence reaches us from London to the effect that Prince Bismark, through the imperial representative at the vatican, Dr. von Schloezer, has dissuaded the pope from leaving Rome.

It is a question whether the pope ever seriously entertained an idea of leaving the capital. His predecessor, Pope Pius IX., made a similar threat and repeated it frequently. When Rome fell into the hands of the enemy the understanding from the vatican was that the pope would immediately seek a refuge in some foreign country, but matters speedily quieted down and he remained in the Holy city until the day of his death. Time and again, however when he felt that his influence was waning and that he was suffering from neglect, or thought his position was not appreciated by the governments of Europe, he or his ministers caused the rumor to be circulated that he was seriously thinking of taking up his residence in a strange land. The effect was always to frighten the Italian government, which realizes that Rome and Italy without the pope would be bereft of their central atraction; to inspire the other governments with the desire to obtain the friendship of the Catholic church, always useful even though ostensibly disregarded, and to swell the volume of Peter's pence.

There is no danger that his holiness will move. The Italian government can not afford to have him take up his residence elsewhere. Besides, he is a great deal more useful to the monarchies of Europe at Rome than he could possibly be in Spain or any other foreign country. Bismark requires the services of the pope constantly to assist him in governing the Catholic provinces of England could not control the German empire. Ireland without him. France would go to pieces as a nation if it were not for the influence which he exercises over the excitable people of that so-called republic.

They probably all understand what the pope's motive is in declaring his intention to quit Rome, and understanding it they proceed to humor the old gentleman and make him feel that he has their sympathy and friendship.—Chicago Times.

Miscellaneous.

DIED.

GOULDIN.—At the residence of his family Beattie street, St. Joseph, Missouri, on the 30th day of July, 1889. Bro. William Thorpe Gouldin. Born at Sleaford, Lincolnshire, England, on February 2d, 1837, our brother was in his fifty-third year. Baptized only on July 14th, and confirmed on July 18th, both by Elder M. H. Forscutt, he had never the privilege of attending a meeting of the Saints after his uniting with them. He died, however, firm in the faith he had embraced. He leaves a widow and three children of seven, five, and two years of age, to fight life's battles he would have gladly fought for them as best he could, had providence permitted. Contracting a severe cold in January last, a cold abcess formed, and so sadly had his body been inwardly ravaged by its corrosions and wastes, that it became necessary to bury him the day following his death.

Ashland Cemetery holds his remains. The prayer-lergue is solicited to remember his widow at a throne of grace.

Kelley.—At Jonesport, Maine, May 17th, 1889, Oscar S. Kelley. He was born at Jonesport, Maine, October 11th, 1885. A little bud has passed away from earth to paradise. Funeral sermon by Elder J. C. Foss.

BRYANT .- At Jonesport, Maine, Nellie L. Bryant. She was born at Jonesport, in Maine, April 13th, 1883, and died May 26th, 1889. A dear little lamb has gone to be with the Good Shepherd. Services by Elder J. C. Foss.

STACY.—At New Bedford, Mass., July 28th, STACY.—At New Bedford, Mass., July 28th, 1889, after a brief illness, Bro. Stephen D. Stacy, aged 72 years and 6 months. Funeral July 30th conducted by Elder John Smith. The aged brother was ready and waiting for the change, conscious of the promise of life from the dead through Jesus Christ our Lord.

Boman.—Sister Elizabeth Boman departed this life July 22d, 1889. She was born December 15th, 1828, and died July 22d, 1889, aged 60 years, 8 months and 7 days. Born in Clark county, Indiana, and died at her home near Leavenworth, Crawford county, Indiana. She was the daughter of Sr. Emily McCutchan, of Lone Rock, Missouri; a sister of Elders I. P. and V. D. Baggerly. She was baptized and confirmed in the Reorganized Church, June 13th, 1870, by W. W. Blair, being one of the first in Southern Indiana to pay heed to the Voice of the Good Shepherd. died as she had lived, firm and faithful till death. She always bore a faithful testimony to the work and was not afraid to go, knowing she would be present with Christ, but desired to stay with her children. She leaves four daughters, one son and a husband. May they follow her footsteps to meet their mother in the new earth, never to separate, is our prayer. And may we emulate her example.

"Our tears with sad profusion flow
At loss of those we love,
Yet full of hope this truth we know,
Their spirits dwell above.

By faith we see our sister dear On her dear Savior lean In sweet repose, nor pain nor fear Nor woe can intervene. And who can intervene.

Asloep in Christ, soon shall they wake,
And rise to meet their Lord,
When at his shout the earth shall shake,
The dead shall be restored."

V. D. BAGGERLY.

ATKINSON.-James Willis Atkinson was born ATKINSON.—James Willis Atkinson was born at Virginia City, Nevada, November 28th, 1865; being aged at the time of his death 23 years, 8 months and 4 days. He was blessed at Virginia City by Elder W. W. Blair, when about five years of age. He was the only living son of Bro. Levi and Sr. Susan Atkinson, who have heretofore buried four sons and two daughters, who all died in infancy. Though not a member of the church in infancy. Though not a member of the church, yet from conversations with his companions he had expressed a firm belief in the truth of the latter day work; and a year ago last Spring when he came home from Rulo. Nebraska, feeling quite sick, his expressed wish to his father and mother was that he might be administered to by the elders of the church, and he afterwards said he obtained relief by the administration. His death was caused by an accident. While on horseback, driving some cattle, the latter stumbled, causing the horse which was closely following at a rapid speed, to fall upon him, bruising and crushing him, and rendering him unconscious, in which state he laid for about thirty hours, when death ensued. He was very popular among the young people, and was well and favorably regarded by the entire community as a well disposed and industrious young man. Funeral services at the Saints church, Lamoni, Iowa, in charge of Elder W. W. Blair; sermon by Elder R. S. Salyards. Interment at Rose Hill Cemetery, under the churge of Elder A. S. Cochran and Bro. Frank Dillon.

NOTICE.

Having felt impressed to request the Saints of our mission, which comprises Michigan, North-ern Indiana, Ohio. Western Pennsylvania, Vir-ginia and West Virginia, to put forth a special effort in fasting and prayer, for the benefit of the sick among us, as there are a number of severe cases in our mission, also for the work of the ministry, and that the Saints may receive new strength and thereby "come up higher," I there-fore appoint the first Sunday in September, 1889. Remember it is left optional with all to comply with this request, but I believe that those who respect it will realize a special blessing.

suggest that we break the fast at sacrament. Will presidents of branches please call the attention of their branches to the above notice? G. T. GRIFFITHS.

KIRTLAND, Ohio, August 5th.

CAMP MEETING.

There will be a camp meeting in Bro. B. Salisbury's grove, six miles north-east of Glidden, Iowa, near North Coon river, beginning Thursday, Sep. 5th, 1889, to continue over Sunday. This is one of the most delightful places for camp meeting in Western Iowa. There is a nice flowing spring on the grounds and a river near by. No pains will be spared to make the meet-ing a success. Wood and hay furnished free, or nearly so. Those coming by rail will be met at Glidden and conveyed free to grounds. Bro. H. C. Bronson will be in attendance, and we expect Brn. J. F. McDowell and J. C. Crabb, as well as the local ministry.

Come, brethren, with the Spirit of the Lord, and let us have a time of rejoicing together.

W. W. WHITING, District President.

There will be a grove meeting held at or near Warren, Ohio, beginning Saturday, August 31st, to continue as interest may demand. Brethren L. W. Powell, G. W. Williams, W. H. Garrett, David Strachan and others are requested to be present.

KIRTLAND, Ohio, August 5th, 1889.

REUNION.

There will be a reunion meeting held in Sacramento in the Saint's chapel, corner of 24th and K street, to last from three to six days, as wisdom may direct, commencing Friday, September 6th, 1889, at 10 a.m. All branches in the district desiring to hold special meetings, please notify me. Bro. H. C. Smith, president of the Pacific Slope Mission, is earnestly requested to be present. Come one, come all, and let us work with our blessed Lord for the salvation of precious THOMAS DALEY, Pres., souls.

Grizzly Flat, ElDorado Co., Cal.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Please announce in the Herald that we expect a ten days' meeting to continue after conference, which will be held September 29th. All persons which will be field september 29th. All persons expecting to attend will be met at Carpenter Station, on the K. & O., and at Radcliff on the C. H. V. & T. on September 27th, if we are informed of their coming. Address, S. J. Jeffers, Vale's Mills, Vinton county, Ohio.

The Pittsburgh and Kirtland district semiannual conference will be held at Kirtland, Ohio, commencing Saturday, September 7th, at half-past one p.m. Purchase tickets to Willoughby station on the Lake Shore and Michigan Railway. All who can possibly make it convenient should attend this conference. We want to have a full representation. Branches should hold their conferences not later than two weeks before the 7th of September, so that reports may be properly made up and authenticated and ready to send by the hand of the ministry, as the Covenants and Commandments require.

Brethren Lake, E. L. Kelley, Griffiths, James Brown, M. B. and T. W. Williams, Hulmes, and others of the ministry are expected to be present. The Saints at Kirtland are confident of their ability to entertain all who come. Let us make this occasion a re-union of the district.
All will be abundantly repaid for the expense and trouble of the journey, in the association with the brethren and the blessings of the Holy Spirit. Come, everybody come.

W. C. H. Noble, secretary, care of Hogan,
Evans & Co., Pittsburgh, Pa. W. H. Garrett, president, Greenville, Mercer county, Pa.

The conference of the Philadelphia district will convene on Saturday evening, August 24th, at 7:30 o'clock, in the Saints meeting room, 156, Rockaway Avenue, near Fulton Avenue. All those intending to come can take the Kings county elevated railroad from the Brooklyn bridge and get off at Rockaway avenue for the meeting room; and Easton Park, way station, for my home, 99 Hinsdale street on the same road. It is expected that Brethren W. H. Kelley and M. H. Bond will be present. Would like all the Saints that can to be there.

JOSEPH SQUIRE, Dist. Pres. H. H. BACON, Sec.

The North-East Missouri district conference will convene at Bevier, Missouri, August 31st, 1889. Come all that can, that we may have a pleasant time. John Taylor, Dist. Pres.

THE SHEEP AND THE GOATS.

A WRITER in this issue assumes that the word "sheep" does not always, in the Bible, mean Saints. To this we reply, that that is owing entirely to how the word is used. When used as the name, the denomiinative, distinctive title of men and women, then, we think, it always refers to those in covenant relations with God and living under the dominion of the law of God-under the government of God-though perhaps not living fully up to their duties and privileges. Psalms 49: 14—"Like sheep they are laid in the grave"—simply compares mankind to sheep in respect to being subject to death-and nothing more. Isaiah 53:6-"All we like sheep have gone astray"—is a comparison drawn between mankind (especially Israel, to whom this prophecy was sent) who wander away from the fold and the shepherd, as do foolish sheep, and this means that such have or have had both a fold and a shepherd. But in Matthew 25:32 certain persons are individually called and individually denominated "sheep" by the Lord Jesus, "the Great Shepherd of the sheep," and this, too, at the final judgment; and these "sheep" are then pronounced by the judge "righteous" and and "blessed," and are set "on his right hand." Mark it well, it is Christ who names and claims these persons as his.

In HERALD for August 10th, pages 520-1, we demonstrated from John 10:2-27; Alma 3: 5, 8, and Mosiah 11: 15, etc., that it requires both faith and good works to entitle any and all to be called of Christ his "sheep" and worthy of a place at his "right hand" at the final, "eternal" judgment; and it matters not if it can be and shall be finally shown that any of these qualifications are attained after this present life, in some future estate. But, one thing is just as certain as the word of God, Christ's "sheep" are those who believe in him; also to remain such they must make that faith effective by good works—works including "brotherly kindness," "mercy" and "charity." Good deeds must be found in the character of all men at "the judgment seat of Christ" to entitle them to a place at his right hand. If such are not had, no one can have claim on his special favor. And here we may repeat what we from the first have said in substance, namely, that Matthew 25: 31-46 was and is intended mainly to teach all to whom it may come, I, the all important fact of a future, final judgment; 2, that it will be largely based on "the deeds" of the individual; 3, that Christ, personally, will be the judge; 4, that "the righteous," "the sheep," at the judgment, possess the commendable and essential qualification of having done good deeds to Christ's "brethand, 5, that at least one leading cause of condemnation of "the goats" will be their want of good deeds to these "brethren" of Christ.

A careful reading of Matthew 25: 31-46 reveals the fact that both "the sheep" and "the goats" there indicated knew Christ's "brethren," had been in close contact with them, and were so familiar with them and their work as that the "sheep" are pronounced "righteous" and "blessed" for having done good deeds to them, while the "goats" are condemned because they did not, when they had the opportunity, do those good deeds. All this implies a familiarity, a knowledge, and therefore a responsibility and duty on the part of both the "sheep" and "goats" to aid, re-relieve, comfort, befriend and sustain the "brethren" of Christ. The "sheep" accepted their oppportunities, performed their duty, and honored the responsibility placed on them; but the "goats" refused, neglected, and rejected Christs "brethren," thereby meriting condemnation for not having performed known duties.

We repeat it, that all this shows beyond question that Christ's "brethren" had been in close contact with, and were well known by both the "sheep" and the "goats." And we further say, this could not be and yet they be ignorant of the faith, character, doctrine and work of those "brethren." Christ assumes that they were so acquainted, and it is evident that upon this he bases his judgment; for he condemns none who have neither knowledge nor opportunity or capability of obtaining such. fore it is proper to assume that both the "sheep" and the "goats" had knowledge, or opportunity of gaining it, in respect to the "brethren" of Christ, including their distinctive faith, doctrine, character and

In respect to "imputed" righteousness, that, we think, is limited to the children of God. Under the gospel covenant (Jer. 31: 34), God takes away, "pardons," and "forgives" such as enter that covenant; but no such promise is made to others. If beyond this life persons hear, believe and accept the gospel covenant, remission of sins necessarily follows. But this is introducing a new subject, and one not essential to be discussed here.

As for the three glories, arising out of the different resurrections and the "eternal judgment" of all men "according as their works shall be," will they all not be found in and under the universal kingdom of God when it fill "the whole earth," "under the whole heaven" (Dan. 2: 35 and 7: 27), when Christ's "dominion" shall be universal and he reign "king of kings and Lord of Lords," and when Christ's people will reign with him as kings and priests? We think so, also that the lesser kingdoms will be embraced within that kingdom, being a part of it, and that the terrestrial and telestial kingdoms will be subordinate to the highest, also that this universal kingdom and its glories and blessings were "prepared from the foundation of the world," as the Scriptures teach, and as is most consistent in the very nature of the work of creation and redemption. But enough on this now.

If the discussion of this subject shall induce deep thought and careful study of the fact of a future judgment of all men in respect to their works, also more full ank thorough investigation of all the subjects germain thereto, it will well repay the efforts being now made.

TRINE IMMERSION.

Editors Herald:-Having got into a confab with a "Tunker" minister of late, he presented some doctrine which does not correspond with the teaching of the Church of Jesus Christ, but which I confess presses me to ask one that is more competent. They teach that "trine immersion" was the apostolic mode of baptism-dipping or bowing the head in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. They claim that Romans 6: 5 has reference to how he died; that "he bowed his head and gave up the Ghost." That is where they get the dipping forward. This and feet washing are their strongest When it comes to the church and its authority they are easily cornered. I send you the following clipping from one of their tracts. Please review the doctrine of "Trine Immersion:"

"After a proper understanding is had between the candidate and the saints, we go to a certain water. After we get there, and after a word of prayer, we make another advance from this point, and like Philip and the eunuch, go down into the water, both the administrator and the candidate; there, while bowed upon his knees, the candidate is thrice immersed face forward, and is thus buried in baptism, in the likeness of Christ's death; face forward, because this is the primitive practice instituted by our Savior, and handed down to us through the apostles, as is the united testimony of all the ancient writers who describe the practice, there being not one case of single backward immersion recorded beyond the reformation, which shows this practice to be a human invention less than four hundred years old.

"Furthermore, the face forward action is in the likeness of Christ's death. He bowed his head in death, and Paul says, "We are planted together in the likeness of his death," not in the likeness of his burial.

"The Brethren baptize by trine immersion because Christ, in Matt. 28: 19, commands to "Baptize them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," which we can not see how to perform without doing just as commanded. Had he commanded to baptize in the name of the Father only, it would require an action to obey the command. Had he commanded to baptize them in the name of the Son only, it would also require an action to obey the command. Had he commanded to baptize them in the name of the Holy Ghost, it would in like manner require an action to obey the command. Now, inasmuch as the Lord did not command to baptize them in the name of either of these alone, but in the name of each-in the name of "the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," therefore we do just as commanded. If I should tell the boy to dip my pencil into the water, and into the milk, and into the wine, he could not possibly obey the command, short of dipping the the pencil three times—once into each substance. Again, if I command the boy to write his name in the book of Matthew, and of Mark, and of Luke, he will at once see that he must write his name three times to do as commanded—once in each book.

"This, the Brethren do not regard as three baptisms, but three actions required to complete the one (baptisma "dipping") spoken of by Paul in Ephesians 4:5.

"HISTORICAL PROOFS ON BAPTISM.

"'Theodoret,' says Bingham, 'charges Eunomius with making an innovation upon the original institution of baptism delivered by Christ and the apostles, in that he made a contrary law that man should not be baptized by three immersions, nor with an invocation of the Trinity.' Antiq of the Chr. Ch., 1, p. 540. Pelagius condemns the single immersion of Eunomius as 'contrary to the gospel given by Christ who appointed every one to be baptized . . . with three immersions, saying to his disciples, 'Go baptize all nations in the name of the Father," etc. Ibid. Gregory Nyssa says: 'Eunomius perverted the law of Christ . . . and taught that baptism was not to be given in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of Holy Spirit, as Christ commanded.' Ibid, I. p. 487. Chrysostom says: 'Christ delivered to his disciples 'one baptism' in three immersions of the body, when he said to them, 'Go, teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit." Ibid, 1. p. 540. Jerome, commenting on Eph. 4:5, says: 'We are thrice dipped in water that the mystery of the Trinity may appear to be one, and therefore though we be thrice put under water to represent the mystery of the Trinity, yet it is reputed but 'one baptism.'' Crystal's History of the Modes of Baptism, 72, 73. Jerome understood Paul's 'one baptism' to be triune.—Stein and Ray Debate, pp. 58-59."

We can best comply with the above request by republishing, among other things, the following editorial from the HERALD of December 12th, 1885:

TRINE IMMERSION.

A brother wishes to know what evidences and arguments we have against "trine"—"triple"—immersion, and we cheerfully furnish such as are at hand, which we think quite sufficient.

1.—Baptism represents death:—Man dies but once; Christ died but once; was buried but once; was raised up from death but once; was not buried face downward nor raised up backwards-yet all of this occurs under "trine" or "triple" immersion. Hear Saint Paul:-"Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life. For if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection." - Rom. 6: 3-5. Hear him again:—"Buried with him in baptism, wherein ye are also risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead." -Col. 2: 12. We repeat it; Christ died but once; was raised but once; and furthermore, there were no three similar acts connected with either his death, burial, nor resurrection; neither was he buried face downward, nor raised up backward; hence "trine immersion" can not be made to represent being "buried with him in baptism:" neither can it be made to represent the candidates being raised up in their baptism "like as Christ was raised up from the dead."

All civilized nations bury with the face upward.

2.-When the person is lawfully baptized he is raised up into "newness of life" -into the new "life;" he is "born of water;" he is "grafted into the good olive tree;" he is entered "in by the door into the sheepfold;" he is "adopted" into the family of Christ, and he enters into these conditions by one act, and not by three; he enters face foremost, and not the reverse as trine immersion would make him to do. Baptism is the chief initiatory rite -the door-by which the individual enters into the visible body, church, or kingdom of Christ; and certainly he does not need to make three attempts-three acts -and then enter backwards! For, be it remembered, he enters the new life-the church, the family of God-not when he goes down into the baptismal waters (for that is "death"), but only when he is "raised up" out of the water—(death—the grave). This done, he enters upon the new life—enters the church, the "household of faith," "the house of God;" and a decent respect for the "household of faith" and for himself would require that he should enter in an orderly way, face foremost, and not otherwise.

3.—If it be said that the candidate must be baptized "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," and that, therefore, he must be thrice immersed; then we reply that, on that ground, the agent who performs a legal act for any firm of three members must perform that act three times—once for each member of the firm. Preposterous! When I perform a legal act for the firm of Gilbert, Prentiss, and Tuttle, I do so by one act, and not by repeating the same act three times.

When Paul says—"One Lord, one faith, one baptism," he thereby excludes the idea of "trine immersion;" for baptism is effected by immersion, or burial in water.

4.—As for the testimonies of church historians on the point, Tertullian, (born A. D. 145, converted from heathenism to Christianity A. D. 185, and made a "presbyter"—elder—about A. D. 190), while he advocates trine immersion, he also admits that Christ did not appoint it, and he thereby admits it to be of merely human origin. He says:

"To deal with this matter briefly, I shall begin with baptism. When we are going to enter the water, but a little before, in the presence of the congregation and under the hand of the president, we solemnly profess that we disown the devil, and his pomp and his angels. Hereupon we are thrice immersed, making a semewat ampler pledge than the Lord has appointed in the gospel, Then, when we are taken up (as new-born children), we taste first of all a mixture of milk and honey, and from that day we refrain from the daily bath for a whole week. We take also, in congregations before daybreak, and from the hand of none but the presidents, the sacrament of the Eucharist, which the Lord both commanded to be eaten at meal-times, and enjoined to be taken by all alike. As often as the anniversary comes round, we make offerings for the dead as birthday honors. We count fasting or kneeling in worship on the Lord's day to be unlawful. We rejoice in the same privilege also from Easter to Whitsunday. We feel pained should any wine or bread, even though our own be cast upon the ground. At every forward step and movement, at every going in and out, when we put on our clothes and shoes, when we bathe, when we sit at table, when we light the lamps, on couch, on seat, in all the ordinary actions of daily life, we trace upon the forehead the sign" [the cross]. -Ante Nicene Fathers, vol. 3, pages 94, 95.

In the above it is seen Tertullian explains trine immersion to be "a somewhat ampler pledge than the Lord has appointed in the gospel." And by examining the quotation in respect to other usages then common in the church, it will be seen that in many things the then Christian Church was far "ampler" than what Christ had ordained in the gospel, and also to what a great extent the Christian had already become heathen. The apostacy of the Christian church, foretold by the Lord and his apostles, was now very great; and it is most unsafe to rely upon doctrines, usages, and customs then endorsed by it which have not the clear support and sanction of the Holy Scriptures.

Dr. Schaff, in his "History of the Christian Church," vol. i p. 468, in a note on the "form of baptism," says as follows of "threefold immersion:"—"The Oriental and the orthodox Russian churches require even a threefold immersion, in the name of the Trinity, and deny the validity of any other. They look down upon the Pope of Rome as an unbaptized heretic, and would not recognize the single immersion of the Baptists. The Longer Russian Catechism thus defines baptism: 'A sacrament in which a man who believes, having his body thrice plunged in water in the name of God, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, dies to the carnal life of sin, and is born again of the Holy Ghost to a life spiritual and holy.' Marriott (in Smith and Cheetham, 1, 161) says: 'Triple immersion, that is thrice dipping the head while standing in the water, was the all but universal rule of the church in early times,' and quotes in proof Tertullian, Cyril of Jerusalem, Chrysostom, Jerome, Leo I., etc. But he admits on page 168 sq., that affusion and aspersion were exceptionally also used, especially in clinical baptism, the validity of which Cyprian defended."

It will be noticed that Tertullian is the first author quoted in proof by Marriott; and we have already seen that he admits that Christ did not appoint trine immersion in the gospel. This, then, ought to forever disprove, historically, the claim made by some that trine immersion is a gospel institution. The last quotation also proves that trine immersion existed in the church at the same time with "affusion and aspersion;" or, in other words, at a time when the so-called Christians had largely turned to heathenism and apostacy. having "transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant."-Isa. 24: 5.

Trine immersion is a chief and distinguishing ordinance of one of the great branches of apostate Christianity, as we have seen, and this is very damaging to its claims for divine origin. Every branch of the great apostasy seems to have "changed the ordinance" of gospel baptism in some way or another, and "trine immersion" is one of the many evidences of that fact.

In connection with the above we mention the following: The believers in trine immersion by their interpretation virtually destroy or at least nullify the true idea of the unity of the Godhead. While they interpret Matthew 28: 19 as requiring three immersions, they are evidently in direct antagonism with John's interpretation when he says, "For there are three that bear record in heaven, the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost, and these three are one." To us the practice of three separate plungings or immersions, in the name of each, the Father, the Son. and the Holy Ghost, seems like anything but unity; but the one immersion in the names of the three who are one, is evidently in harmony with the word of the inspired John.

The illustration of the boy dipping his pencil "into each substance," is not a parallel with the act of baptism. Jesus commanded that one substance be used by the baptizer into which he was to immerse the candidate in the name of the Godhead.

We further quote from Tertullian, and it should be remembered that he is one of the earliest of the "Christian Fathers," and is therefore among the nearest to the apostles as an ecclesiastical historian. His birth is given as A. D. 145, and his death from 220 to 240.

Referring to the practice of trine immersion and other multiplied ceremonies, Tertullian says: "If, for these and other such rules, you insist upon having positive Scripture injunction, you will find none. Tradition will be held forth to you as the originator of them, custom as their strengthener, and faith as their observer," etc .-Ante-Nicene Fathers, Vol. 3, p. 95, chap. 4.

Tertullian's In the "Elucidations" of statements previously quoted, we find the following in Vol. 3, pp. 103, 104, Ante-Nicene Fathers:

"A slight metaphrase will bring out the sense, perhaps, of this most interesting portrait of early Christian usages.

"In baptism, we use trine immersion, in honor of the trinal Name, after renouncing the devil and his angels and the pomps and vanities of his kingdom. But this trinal rite is a ceremonial amplification of what is actually commanded. It was heretofore tolerated in some places that communicants should take each one his portion, with his own hand, but now we suffer none to receive this sacrament except at the hand of the minister.

"He owns there is no Scripture for any of these usages, in which there was an amplifying of the precepts of Christ. . . .

"And as our author asserts the long continuance of such usages to be their chief justification. it is evident that he supposed them common from the sub-apostolic age. There is nothing here to justify amplifications and traditions which, subsequently came in like a flood to change principles of the faith once delivered to the Saints."

In harmony with this idea of the oneness of the Godhead, we quote the following from the "First Apology of Justin Martyr," (who lived and wrote A. D. 114-165), page 183, Vol. I, Ante-Nicene Fathers, chapter 61-Christian Baptism:

"I will also relate the manner in which we dedicated ourselves to God when we had been made new through Christ; lest, if we omit this, we seem to be unfair in the explanation we are making. As many as are persuaded and believe that what we teach and say is true, and undertake to be able to live accordingly, are instructed to pray and entreat God with fasting, for the remission of their sins that are past, we praying and fasting with them. Then they are brought by us where there is water, and are regenerated in the same manner by which we were ourselves regenerated. For, in the name of God, the Father and Lord of the universe, and of our Savior Jesus Christ, and of the Holy Spirit, they then receive the washing with water. For Christ also said, 'Except ye be born again, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven,' . . . there is pronounced over him who chooses to be born again.

and has repented of his sins, the name of God the Father and Lord of the universe; he who leads to the laver the person that is to be washed, calling him by that name alone. For no one can utter the name of the ineffable God; and if any one dare to say that there is a name, he raves with a hopeless madness. And this washing is called illumination, because they who learn these things are illuminated in their understandings. And in the name of Jesus Christ, who was crucified under Pontius Pilate, and in the name of the Holy Ghost, who through the prophets foretold all things about Jesus, he who is illuminated is washed."

It will be noticed that the name of the Godhead is mentioned by Justin Martyr. We have carefully examined volumes one and two of the Ante-Nicene Fathers. which contain the writings of Justin Martyr, Irenaeus, Hermas, Tatian, Athenagorus, Theophilus and Clement of Alexandria, and in them we find nothing which could possibly be construed to favor three immersions. The statement of Tertullian, however, effectually settles the character of that unauthorized institution, for he calls it, as we have shown, "a somewhat ampler [more extended, greater, more enlarged] pledge than the Lord has appointed in the gospel," etc., etc.

Trine immersion was never practiced until after the church began to transgress, change the ordinance, and break the covenant. Rome changed the ordinance by sprinkling and baptizing infants; the Greeks, etc., by dipping thrice, face downward, and in baptizing those not capable of belief or repentance. These changes are clear evidences of the great apostacy which Christ and Paul, Peter, John and others predicted in Holy Writ. The apostasy from the primitive faith began in their own times and had evidently made great inroads upon the work of the apostles. Jesus, in Matthew 28:20 made a conditional promise to be with them "even unto the end." That condition was that they should "observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." While it may be claimed that this promise was unconditional, we reply that in that case Christ would pledge himself to be with them no matter what they taught and what they practiced, and would also be a respecter of persons, for he required Israel to "obey his voice and hearken diligently unto all the commandments," and finally rejected them for their disobedience. Iesus foresaw and predicted the downfall of the kingdom of heaven-the church: "And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence and the violent take it by force." Paul, Peter, John and Isaiah clearly indicate the apostasy which Jesus predicted. See Acts 20: 29. 30; 2 Tim. 3: 3; 2 Thess. 2: 3, 7; 2 Peter 2: 1-3; John 12: 35; 1 John 4: 3; Rev. 12: 1-5, 14; Rev. 13: 7, 8 Isaiah 24: 5, 6, etc., etc. Hence we can readily account for the "ampler pledge" and departures and other rites and customs foreign to the teachings of the New Testament which prevailed even in Tertullian's early day.

If "all Asia" had turned away from what Paul taught them, what might we not expect to witness in the way of multiplied fruits of darkness, paganism and apostasy in Tertullian's time, and in subsequent periods of which the Christian Fathers wrote?

As we examine ecclesiastical history it but confirms the truth of prophetic statements. We present but a few: Dr. Mosheim, the "impartial ecclesiastical historian" says: "The Christian Church was scarcely formed when, in different places, there started up certain pretended reformers, who, not satisfied with the simplicity of that religion that was taught by the apostles, meditated changes of doctrine and worship." "The influence of these new teachers was at first considerable. During the lives of the apostles their attempts to pervert Christianity were attended with little success. They, however, acquired credit and strength by degrees; and, even from the first, imperceptibly laid the foundations of those sects, whose animosities and disputes produced afterwards such trouble."-Part 2, chapter 5, verses 1 and 2.

Of the Second Century he writes in part two:

"This venerable simplicity was not, indeed, of long duration. Its beauty was gradually effaced by the laborious efforts of human learning, and the dark subtilities of imaginary science. This disadvantageous change, this unhappy alteration of the primitive simplicity of the Christian religion, arose partly from pride and partly from a sort of necessity. The former cause was the eagerness of certain learned men to bring about a union between the doctrines of Christianity and the opinions of the philosophers. For they thought it a very fine accomplishment to be able to express the precepts of Christ in the language of philosophers and rabbis. The other reason was the necessity of having recourse to logical definitions and nice distinctions, in order to confound the sophistical arguments which the infidel and the heretic employed."-Chapter 3,

"There is no institution so pure and excellent which the corruption and folly of man will not in time alter for the worse, and load with additions foreign to its nature and original design. Such, in a particular manner was the fate of Christianity. In this century many unnecessary rites and ceremonies were added to the Christian worship, the introduction of which was extremely offensive to wise and good men."—Chapter 4, verse 1.

Trine immersionists and their faulty, imperfect systems as a whole can be traced to the heretical and darkened counsels of those who departed from the faith, and they represent but one of the many phases of the results of apostasy and spiritual darkness.

In connection with the foregoing we cite the reader who desires to make an exhaustive or more extended historical examination of the subject, to an article written by Bro. T. W. Smith, which was published in the HERALD beginning with the September 1st, 1878, number. In the said article Bro. Smith follows the question through the labyrinths of various Greek translations, used by the scholarly advocates of trine immersion, and also closely inspects the mazy, historical evidences, so-called, and completely refutes their various arguments in its favor.

"THE RETURN."

THIS most unreliable little sheet says on page 124 that, "the Reorganized church" teaches the people "that unless they pay their money, their tithing, and have their names on the Bishop's books they can not have salvation."

Ebenezer, don't you know that the above is a downright and unqualified falsity! You ought to; for "the Reorganized church" teaches nothing of the kind. It teaches, however, that all Saints who love God and his church and the salvation of souls should use the means they can spare, even "by sacrifice" of their own personal ease and pleasure, to aid and support the ministry of Christ, wisely and timely, also their needy families, and thus help forward the work of God in all the world; also that this may be done by tithing, or freewill offerings to the church treasury, or by giving directly to the needy or to any worthy object. It teaches that a "covetous" man "shall not inherit the kingdom of God," (1 Cor. 6: 10), and that all should "honor the Lord with" their "substance, and with the first fruits of all" their "increase" (Prov. 3: 9); also that "every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity; for God loveth a cheerful giver."—2 Cor. 9:7.

By the way, why should Ebenezer urge

By the way, why should Ebenezer urge that the Saints should not "pay their money," also "tithing" when able to do so, and thus aid the work of the church? Has he ever suffered at the hands of "the Reorganized Church" in giving it money? Has he ever paid to it any considerable amounts in either tithing, offering, donations to churches, missions, missionaries, or to erect church buildings or to aid any enterprise or work of the church! If he has we never knew or heard of it.

And when Mr. Robinson asserts of "the Reorganized Church" that its "Priesthood is fed and pampered" on "tithing," he ought to know that such statement is both untrue and malicious. The tithing of the Church is used, firstly, to aid the poor; secondly, to aid the families of the traveling ministers-missionaries-and then to aid in any good work in the interests of the Church or common humanity. The ministry, personally, are not expected to be sustained directly from tithings, but mainly by aid furnished them when in their fields of labor. Mr. Robinson knows that such are the teachings of the Doctrine and Covenants, and that such have been the teachings of "the Reorganized Church" through its conferences and regular councils, and that they only are authoritative. Those engaged in mission work do not, as a general thing, receive anything beyond a very scanty support for themselves and families, from any source, and sometimes not even that.

We have both pity and contempt for any one who witholds temporal aid and encouragement from either worthy missionaries, their dependent families, the worthy poor, or other proper objects; and we advise all such parties, whether they claim to be Saints or not, to read Matt. 25; 31-46, and similar Scriptures, and learn the mind of Christ concerning those who either reject or neglect his faithful ministers.

ELECTION IN UTAH.

In the election held in Utah the 5th of this month, the Liberals, composed of Gentiles, apostates from Brighamism, "Josephites," and a considerable number of Brighamites who are seeking release from the ecclesiastical domination of their church leaders in political and business matters, won solid victories in Salt Lake City, Ogden, Nephi, Juab, and other places, electing their nominees, and yet the Brighamite leaders and their organs claim the victory!

Well, a few more such victories and Brighamite rule will be a thing of the past throughout Utah. But naughty boys will whistle when going through a graveyard—and Brighamism is there.

NEW ERA EXPOSITION.

This enterprise promises to be the most important affair of the kind ever projected in the west. During a recent visit to St. Joseph we examined its grounds and plans and buildings so far as they were prepared and think them worthy of all praise.

The location is somewhat retired, natural shade abundant, grounds undulating and well drained, water supply good, buildings tasty and unique. The grounds are of easy access by Railway, Motor line and numerous carriage ways. The Exposition opens Saturday, Sept. 3d, and closes Oct. 5th. We take the following from a letter recently received from President H. D. Perky:

"Our exposition is attracting universal attention, and we will have the greatest agricultural display ever known in the history of expositions. President Harrison and Secrataries Noble and Rusk have been invited to attend, and there is little doubt but that they will accept. Hundreds of farmers have already applied for space to exhibit corn and other agricultural products, and the departure from the time worn custom of offering thousands of dollars to horse jockeys, to the exclusion of the agriculturist, is being hailed with delight throughout the length and breadth of the land."

We clip the following from the Platts-mouth (Nebraska) Weekly Journal of the 25th ult. Many of our readers are acquainted with Bro. George R., second son of Bro. and Sr. J. W. Chatburn, and with us will wish him and his companion all good here and hereafter.

CHATBURN-MURPHY.

Prof. George R. Chatburn and Miss Anna Murphy, the former principal and the latter teacher in the city schools were united in marriage yesterday afternoon in the presence of a select company at the home of the bride's father, Councilmam M. B. Murphy. Rev. J. T. Baird performed the nuptial ceremony. The congratulations over an elaborate collation was served to the invited guests. The happy couple were accompanied by a large party to the six o'clock train when they departed for Harlan, Iowa, the home of the bridegroom. They are both very estimable young people, and enjoy the best wishes of very many friends.

CITING OFFENDERS TO TRIAL.

In the October conference of 1876 it was "Resolved that the citing members to trial, on their membership, through the Herald, be discontinued."

It is held by some that this has never been repealed. If this be true, it should be observed until repealed, and we shall therefore seek to honor it, though we doubt the expediency of the rule unless so modified as to simply prohibit the publication in the HERALD of the specifications in charges against offenders.

Public notification on general charges, is common under civil government, and we can see no reason why it may not be proper with the church.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

By letters, telegrams and otherwise we learn that a very serious drougth prevails all through the Rocky Mountain region, and that Utah, Idaho and Montana are suffering severely. It is said that fruit trees, as well as grain, grass and vegetables are being very seriously damaged. writer in Madison county, Montana, says: "Stock of all kinds are looking bad; men are moving them to different places to winter them. Grain will not be half a crop, and it is very high now-two cents per pound. Vegetables are not to be had at any price. Hay is from $20 to $30 per ton, and still going up. I we don't have fall rains, stock left here will die."

Bro. J. W. Burget says "the work is rolling on" in and about Bay City, Michigan, and that there will be some baptisms there the 18th instant.

Elder W. W. Blair reports excellent meetings at St. Joseph, Missouri, where he preached morning and evening the 5th instant. The attendance was large, especially in the evening, when the hall was filled, and the interest the best. The labors of Bro. Forscutt, he says, are well received and are fruitful of good results.

Bro. E. W. Nunley wrote August 5th, from Elkhart, Texas, that he had been laboring some in various places, at times accompanied by Bro. Bryan, in which labors he hopes good was done. He expects to start for Hill and Jack counties about August 15th. Brn. W. N. and E. Ray wrote the 13th instant, giving Garden Grove, Decatur county, Iowa, as their present residence, and saying their house will ever be open to the ministry as heretofore.

Bro. I. Hagaboom, in a letter dated at Bloomington, Dakota, the 9th instant, says he is preaching there with good pros-

Bro. E. C. Brand wrote from Atchison, Kansas, August 11th, that he had preached fifteen times of late at Scranton, Kansas, and had baptized eleven, others being almost persuaded. He was then preached at Burlingame.

We are now receiving "The Saints Harmony" from the binder and sending it to subscribers. It may not reach all who have ordered it before this notice comes to hand, yet we trust it will, or very soon thereafter. It is a fine work, and is less in size than expected. All seem pleased with it so far.

Superintendents and secretaries of all the Sunday School associations are requested to notice and comply with the request of Sr. Walker published in the miscellaneous column of this issue.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques .- Can the meaning of the 25th and 26th verses of the 36th chapter of Ezekiel be answered through the Herald? There are some here who think they prove that sprinkling is baptism.

Ans.—The prophecy of Ezekiel, referred to, was addressed to Israel who were, at that time under and subject to the law of Moses. Sprinkling was to that people, 1st, a type of cleansing and purifying. See Hebrews 9: 13; 11: 28; Leviticus 14:7; Numbers 8:7; 19: 13, 18, etc. It was also used to represent the sealing, binding, or confirming of sacred things. (Heb. 9: 18, 23). Hebrews 9: 22 amply refutes the sprinkling theory of baptism. "And John also was baptized in Enon, near to Salim because there was much water there."-John 3: 23. Baptism is referred to as a type of "death" and of burial. It is also a birth. They "went down into" and "came up out of the water" is the scriptural statement, which shows that the act of baptism plainly required immersion. Sprinkling is not baptism, for baptism is immersion.

2.-What is the fruit referred to in John 15: 8,-"Herein is my Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit; so shall ye be my disciples?"

A.-Fruitful gospel works--righteousness of life. "Let your so light shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven."-Matt. 5: 16. Read Luke 6: 27-49; Gal. 5: 22-26; 2 Peter 1: 5-9; Luke 1:6, etc.

2-Inasmuch as Elijah was translated, did he go to heaven having flesh and blood? If so, will flesh and blood inherit the kingdom of heaven?

A-To both questions, No. Paul wrote in I Corinthians 15: 50: "Now this I say, brethren, that flesh and blood can not enter the Kingdom of God; neither doth corruption inherit incorruption." From the statement of Jesus in Luke 24: 39,-" . . Handle me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones as ye see me have," we understand that the perfected elements ('flesh") which composed Christ's resurrected body were filled with the Holy Spirit. Elijah was probably translated or changed to the same degree of bodily immortality as were the three Nephite apostles. We read of their translation as follows:

"And now behold, as I spake concerning those whom the Lord hath chosen, yea, even three who were caught up into the heavens, that I knew not whether they were cleansed from mortality to immortality. But behold, since I wrote,

I have inquired of the Lord, and he hath made it manifest unto me, that there must needs be a change wrought upon their bodies, that they might not suffer pain nor sorrow, save it were for the sins of the world. Now this change was not equal to that which should take place at the last day; but there was a change wrought upon them, insomuch that Satan could have no power over them, that he could not tempt them, and they were sanctified in the flesh, that they were holy, and that the powers of the earth could not hold them; and in this state they were to remain until the judgment day of Christ; and at that day they were to receive a greater change, and to be received into the kingdom of the Father to go no more out, but to dwell with God eternally in the heavens."-Nephi 13:6.

Of translated bodies Joseph Smith wrote in his history as follows:

"He explained the difference between an angel and a ministering spirit; the one a resurrected or translated body, with its spirit ministering to embodied spirits-the other a disembodied spirit, visiting and ministering to disembodied spirits. Jesus Christ became a ministering spirit (while his body was lying in the sepulchre), to the spirits in prison, without which he could not have perfected his work, or entered into his rest. After his resurrection he appeared as an angel to his disciples, etc. Translated bodies can not enter into rest until they have undergone a change equivalent to death. Translated bodies are designed for future missions."-Mill Star, vol. 18, p. 694.

2.—Is President Joseph Smith a prohibition-ist?

A.—Yes.

2.- Is it right to confirm members in the name of the Church of Christ, or the name of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints?

2.—Which of A's or B's example is preferable in the following instance: A will take a drink of liquor whenever he wants one; B, may feel like taking the drink, but sternly refuses?

A.—The latter. And if B. persists in abstaining he will overcome the appetite altogether; while if A continues to gratify his taste for liquor he is very likely to lose the Spirit and become careless in other respects.

Q.—Whether is prohibition or high license more in conformity with the rules of our church? A.—Prohibition, if practicable.

DARWINISM.

There are two serious defects in the Darwinian theory of the descent (or ascent it should be) One of these is the utter and ignominious failure to discover in the whole sweep of nature, animate or inanimate, animal or human, any faintest suggestion of transition from a lower to a higher species. The "missing link" breaks the chain and discredits the hypothesis.

The other defect is the absence of intellectual progress within the historic period. Intelligence has broadened. "Science," in Lord Bacon's phrase, "now lights her torch at every man's candle." Free schools and open Bibles and abounding churches have popularized knowledge; so that now Talleyrand's epigram is realized-"Everybody is cleverer than anybody."

But as it regards individual vigor and depth of mind, the ancients are still the admiration and the despair of the world. What intellect has surpassed Plato, Aristotle, Socrates? Do not these yet indicate the high water mark of thought? What poets, orators, artists, have in modern times eclipsed those of Greece and Rome before the advent of Christ? Would not any modern esteem it the highest compliment to be told that he resembled Homer in song, Demosthenes in speech, or Parrhasius in art? Modern culture has gained in breadth, not in depth.

But this is entirely wrong on the basis of Darwin. There should have been progress. Those old mental lights should have been outshone.

It is so much easier to speculate than to demonstrate! Anyone can advance a theory; the difficulty lies in substantiating it.—Selected.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"Nature is not solitude:
She crowds us with her thronging mood;
Her many hands reach out to us,
Her many tongues are garrulous;
Perpetual riddles of surprise
She offers to our ears and eyes."

To ALL who have the training of little children entrusted to them, we commend a careful reading of the article found below. We believe it contains a lesson of value to every one, as well as to those who have children to train, but is especially of value to the latter.

TRAINING A CHILD'S FAITH.

There is no need of trying to implant faith in child's nature, for it is there to begin with. But there is need of training a child's faith, so that it shall be rightly directed and wisely developed. Every child has the instinct of faith, as surely as it has the instinct of appetite. The inborn impulse to seek nourishment is not more real and positive in a normal child, than is the impulse in such a child to cling to and trust another. Both instincts are already there, and both need training.

The faith here spoken of is that faith that rests on a person, not that miscalled "faith" which applies to an assent to a series of dogmas. True faith, indeed, always rests an a person. Any other use of the term is only by accommodation, and is liable to be misleading. One of the best definitions of Christian faith is, "that act by which one person, a sinner, commits himself to another person, a Savior." Even before a child is old enough to learn of a Savior, the instinct of faith is one of the child's qualities; just "as the instinct of hunger is a child's quality before the child is old enough to know the nature of its fitting food. If a mother, or a nurse, or even a stranger, puts a finger into the chubby hand of an infant, that little hand will close over the proffered finger, and cling to it as for dear life. And it is not until a child has learned to distrust, that it is said to be "old enough to be afraid." While a child's faith is yet undisturbed, as also after a child's faith has become discriminating, a child's faith needs wise directing and developing; and to this end there is need of wisdom and of care on the part of those who have the responsibility of this training.

While the instinct of faith is innate in the child, a knowledge of the One on whom his faith can rest with ultimate confidence is not innate. A knowledge of God comes to man by revelation; and whoever has responsibility for a child's moral training, has the duty of revealing to that child a knowledge of God. But a child can understand God, and can grasp a true conception of him, quite as easily as the profoundest philosopher can. A child does not need to be led by degrees into a knowledge of God. So soon as he is capable of learning that his voice can be heard by his loving mother or his loving father in another room, he is capable of learning that his voice can be heard by a loving Father whom he has never seen; who is always within hearing, but never within sight; who is the loving Father of his father and mother, as well as of himself and of everybody else; who is able to do all things, and who is sure to do all things well. In the knowledge of this truth, a child can be taught to pray to God in faith.

From the very beginning a child can take in the great truths concerning God's nature, and the scope of God's power, as fully as a theologian can take them in. Therefore there need be no fear that too much is proffered to the child's mind in this sphere, if only it all be proffered in simplicity as explicit truth, without any attempt at its explanation. Bishop Patteson, in his missionary work among the South Sea Islanders, said that he found it best to begin with John's Gospel in the imparting of religious instruction to the untutored natives; for they could all take that in easier than they could comprehend the historical books of the Bible. And it is much the same with children. They can receive the profoundest truths of the Bible without any explanation. When they are older, they will be better fitted to grapple with the difficulties of elementary religious teaching. The idea that a child must have a knowledge of the outline of the Bible story before he knows the central truth that Jesus Christ is his loving Savior, is as unreasonable as it would be to suppose that a child must know the anatomy of the human frame before he is able to believe in his mother's love for him.

The first lesson in the training of a child's faith, is the lesson that he is to have faith in God. Many a child is taught to have faith in the power of prayer, or faith in the value of good conduct, without being taught that his faith shoud rest wholly and absolutely on God. He is taught that he can hope to have whatever he prays for; and that if he is a good boy he can expect a blessing, while if he is a bad boy he can not expect to be blessed. With this training the child's faith is drawn away from God, and is led to rest on his personal conduct; whereas his faith ought to be trained to rest on the God to whom he prays, and in loving obedience to whom he strives to be good.

If you tell a child that God is able and ready to give him everything he prays for, the child is prompt to accept your statement as a truth, and so he prays for a pleasant day, when a pleasant day is desired by him, If the pleasant day comes accordingly, the child's faith in prayer is confirmed; but if the day be a stormy one, the child's mind is bewildered, and a doubt is likely to creep into his mind whether prayer is always so effective as he had been told to believe it to be. And the case is similar when a child prays for the health of one whom he loves, or for some gift which he longs to receive, or for success in some personal endeavor, and the issue is not in accordance with his petition. If, on the other hand, you tell a child that God knows what is best for us better than we know for ourselves, and that, while God is glad to have us come to him with all our wishes and all our troubles, we must leave it to God to decide just what he will give to us and do for us, the child is ready to accept this statement as the truth; and then his faith in God is not disturbed in the slightest degree by finding that God has descided to do differently from his request to God in prayer. On every side, children are being taught to have faith in prayer, rather than to have faith in God; and, in consequence, their faith is constantly subject to shocks which would never have assailed it if it had been trained to rest on God instead of resting on prayer.

If you tell a child that God loves good children, and that he does not love bad children, the child will believe you; and then, when he thinks he is a good child, he will be glad that there is a God who can appreciate him; but when he knows he is a bad child, he will perhaps be sorry that there is a child in the universe to be his enemy. So far as your training does its legitimate work, in this instance, the child is trained, not to have faith in God, but to have confidence in his own merits as a means of commending him to the God whom you have misrepresented to him. If, on the other hand, you tell a child that God is love, and that his love goes out unfailingly toward all, even toward those who have no love for him, and that while God loves to have children good, he loves them tenderly while they are very bad, the child will take in that great truth gratefully; and then he is readier to have faith in God, and to want to be good because the loving God loves to have him good. And in this way a child's faith in God may be the means of quickening and shaping his desires in the direction of well-doing.

As a means of training a child's faith in God more intelligently and with greater definiteness, the fact of the Incarnation may be disclosed to him in all the fulness of its richest meaning. A very young child can comprehend the truth that God in his love sent his Son into this world as a little child, with the name of Jesus-or Savior; that Jesus grew up from childhood into manhood, that he loved little children, that he died for them, that still he loves them, that he watches over them tenderly, and that he is ready to help them in all their trials and needs, and to be their Savior forever. With this knowledge of Jesus as God's representative, a child can be trained to trust Jesus at all times; to feel safe in darkness and in danger because of his nearness, his love, and his power; to be sure of his sympathy, and to rest on him as a sufficient Savior. That a child is capable of such faith as this, is not fairly a question. The only question, if question there be, is whether any one but a child can attain to such faith. One thing is as sure as the words of Jesus are true, and that is, that "whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child shall in no wise entre therein;" or, in other words, that a child's faith is a pattern for the believers of every age.

The training of a child's faith is the most delicate and the most important duty that devolves upon one who is set to the work of child training. More is involved in it for the child's welfare, and more depends upon it for the child's enjoyment and efficiency in life, than pivots on any other phase of the training of a child. He who would train a child's faith aright has need of wisdom, and yet more has need of faith,—just such faith as that to the exercise of which he would train the child of his charge.—Editorial in Sunday School Times.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYERS.

Bro. J. S. Whiting of Lake Crystal, Minn., requests your prayers in his behalf, that if it be God's will he may be healed. He is, and has been, a very great sufferer from the effects of cancer.

Sr. Nellie Jones, of Sublette, Illinois, who is weak and suffering from the effects of cancers removed, asks your prayers in her behalf.

REQUEST-SPECIAL.

Wishing to communicate directly with any person belonging to the church (or whose parents belong) who is engaged in teaching, or in any employment by which a fair salary is earned, we beg such to favor us with their name and address on a postal card, at their very earliest convenience; assuring them that we will be grateful for the kindness and give them our reasons for the request at an early day.

Dear Column:—I am here again, not to impart anything of great moment, but to correct an error in my last letter. May be I wrote it, "Did any of you ever live in every sense of the word?" I surely didn't intend to produce such an ambiguous expression. I meant to say, "Did any of you ever live by faith in every sense of the word?" etc. If you have, tell us about it.

"The just shall live by faith." How many of us are just, and can live by faith? There are trials and disappointments and sorrows enough in life to call for all the faith one can obtain. Truly we ought to sympathize with each otherwe mothers and sisters. Two bereaved mothers, sisters Stebbins and Lanyon, so lately and sorely bereft of their darlings have my heartfelt sympathy and earnest prayers. God, strengthen them to bear their sorrows. Would I could see their faces again, and assure them that they do not stand forgotten in the shadow of their abiding grief. Few mothers but have been called upon to bear similar trials. Two precious babies have been borne from my arms to a better, safer, happier home.

My heart has found echo in the sweetly sad lines:

"We have tearfully folded the cold, white hands Lovingly over her breast,

We have kissed the pale lips forevermore closed, And laid her down gently to rest.

We have laid her to rest with a void in our hearts, In anguish wept over her tomb,

Yet we would not recall her where life's chilling blast, Blights the flowers in their earliest bloom."

Your sister,

VIVA VALE.

Sr. Viva omitted the two words, "by faith," and though we tried, we could not think what words to supply. The sentence was ambiguous, but ambiguous or not, it is an open question.—

WARREN, Ohio, July 23d.

Dear Sisiers of the Home Column:-I esteem it a pleasure as well as a duty to be able to communicate with you through the Home Column, and as I write I wonder if we who have taken upon us the name of Christ, will always have oil in our lamps, and not bring reproach on his cause. I pray we may continue steadfast in faith and in all our works, that we may ever be worthy of the name we bear. We are enlisted for life in the army of the Lord. Glorious thought is it not? We, the Saints, here, are few in number-seven -but are going to try and lay aside ten cents each month for the missionary fund. That will be seventy cents per month from here. How I wish and pray every branch (when it is possible) would do the same. The calls for more preaching are so numerous, and the laborers so few! Two more souls here were born of water and of Spirit, July 7th. One of our brothers had a testimony at our last meeting that many would be added within a short time. Truly the harvest is great, and we rejoice. Bro. Garrett was with us last Sunday. The good Spirit was present to gladden and cheer our hearts, and all felt it was good to be there. How we enjoy the Herald and Autumn Leaves! May God bless the noble efforts of those laboring through them for Zion's weal.

Not wishing to occupy more than my share of your valuable space, I will close, praying that when Christ shall come to make up his jewels, we may be among the blessed number to whom he will say, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant, enter into the joy of thy Lord."

Your sister in Christ,

ALICE M. PINKERTON,

Correspondence.

Woodbine, Iowa, Aug 13th.

Bro. Blair:—I have not written to the Herald for so long its readers have most likely forgotten me; but I have no apology to make, but admit neglectfulness.

The affairs of our district are in such shape now that we ought to be thankful to Him who has the watchcare over all, men—and especially the Saints. There have been several additions to the church during the summer, with a prospect of more soon. The ministry in the district, so far as I know, feel encouraged wherever they preach, as the meetings are generally well attended. Our last quarterly conference was the largest gathering of the kind ever held in the district, and all seemed to have attended for the purpose of learning the principles of life.

The two-days' meetings, held so far, have been a success. Tent-meetings in Little Sioux, and those that are now being held in Magnolia, have been and are attended with great interest. The interest manifested at this place now seems to be as good as could be expected.

I have been kindly treated by members and non-members wherever I have been, and can see no propriety in taking a backward move, but to the contrary, "on to victory!"

I learned years ago, to affirm our own faith; or, in other words, "preach what I believe and know to be true," and let the faith of others alone.

Having no particular desire that others should ridicule our faith, I have avoided ridiculing the faith of others; thinking that should I use one half of each discourse, or any amount thereof, in telling the people what others believe, knowing at the same time that said belief would be a damage to any one possessing it, that I would be throwing just that much precious time away, for which I would be held to an account.

We (the ministry of the district as well as the members) propose to keep our own flag upon the watch tower, so that it can be seen plainly by all who will look and read the inscription thereon—"Behold the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." And to this end we ask the prayers of all the Herald readers—and in asking them we expect to get them.

I have not mentioned the names of any helpers, because it would be impossible, in our short letter, to mention all the workers in the district. As I view it, the elders are entitled to no more credit, if they are as much, for praching in the different localities in which they labor, as are those who by advertising make it possible for such labor to be performed - not only advertising by newspapers, and billing the neighborhood with posters, but likewise with a godly walk and conversation. I would advise the brethren to keep cool on the "Sheep and Goat" question, as it will all be settled at the great and last judgment. (See Matt. 25: 41; Rev. 20: 14, 15). For both texts have reference to the same judgment, and all the righteous from the beginning to the ending will then receive their final, eternal reward in the new earth, and the wicked their final punishment. Yours,

J. C. CRABB.

MIDDLETOWN, Ohio, Aug. 9th.

Bro. Blair:—I will leave here to day for New Trenton, Indiana. We have been holding meetings here all week and baptized one last evening in the Big Miami river, the first in this place. More are very serious—I believe under conviction—and if proper labor and wisdom is observed, a good work can be done here. This is a center, a great many coming and going. Our audiences increased every night. We held one meeting in a private house. It would be well for Bro. Gillen or Bro. M. R. Scott to visit this place, Amanda branch is in this vicinity. The Saints are very kind and good to me. May God reward them, also the friends treated me with marked kindness.

V. D. BAGGERLEY.

LYNN, Mass., August 5th.

Bro. Dancer: I feel to ask to be forgiven for so long neglecting to forward the subscription price for the Herald. It has not been for a want of an appreciation of the paper or a lack of interest in the subject matter of its pages, for I prize its contents very much, and I consider it as being a very influential factor in setting forth the great and eternal principles of this glorious latter day work; and I would not be without the Herald if it cost three times as much, for I always find that I am encouraged by reading its pages. It always increases the desire within my soul to "come up higher" and more perfectly keep and obey the laws and commandments of God. I always am spiritually blessed through the contents of the Herald, and I hope to see the time in the near future when I shall be able to take all the church publications, for I feel we need all the aid and light that pertain to this great and glorious dispensation of gospel truth and power, to enable us to overcome and successfully attain a complete victory for our souls.

JOHN CHESTER.

Nambucca, Heads, Australia. June 20th.

Dear Herald:—The last Heralds at hand bring us news of the conference, and come freighted with the good news that the work is making rapid progress. While all this cheers and comforts, it proves not a panacea to the hurts received from learning that we are left alone.

After all the efforts put forth to show the size and growing wants of the mission, we had hoped that at least one might be sent out, and then there would be a prospect for opening up New Zealand. Can some one tell me why it was that the brother whom we recommended for appointment, was not so appointed? It would have been no cost whatever to the church in America, and I know it will have a tendency—just as urged by Bro. Smith—to cause some of them to withhold the finances that would otherwise be forthcoming.

Of course I can not in any sense approve of people withholding their substance from the Lord, for such a reason, but human nature is the same the world over, and for fear that the moneys will not be spent in the mission, I am quite satisfied that a slackness that would not otherwise ensue will exist.

This mission could sustain four as easily as two, on the principal that there would not be nearly so much need for travel, and that is very expensive. For instance, had I just one half of New South Wales, I could preach some two hundred and fifty sermons during the year, with less than one-half of the expense, whereas now I only preach about one half that number. And I am certain I could then baptize more than I do now, as I could stay in a place till it was thoroughly worked.

It will be one year the 28th instant since we arrived in Sydney, and there are some of the Saints whom we have not yet seen, and this is my first visit to this river. I am willing to take my grip and travel on foot, if I can be given a smaller field, and then the expense would be so slight that eight or ten men might easily be sustained. I am sure that Neely would be also willing.

It is simply out of the question to think of building the work up to any extent, so long as there are one thousand miles of territory to be traversed. And this is only the territory that has been already opened up. With a full force and the right kind of men, Austrelia would prove to be the best mission in the world outside the land of America.

To me it seems almost like mockery to give one charge of New Zealand, and not send any one to assist in opening up the work. It is a fine field, but can we drop the irons that are already in the fire just at the moment when they are almost ready for welding, simply to put more in? While the body may think that Australia is out of the world, I would respectfully remind them that it is some two thirds the size of the United States, with three million inhabitants; and a better class of Saints I never met with.

But for fear I am classed with the grumblers I will cease by saying, send us ten missionaries, and we will be satisfied.

Will dedicate the chapel of the Nambucca branch next Sunday, and during the week will leave for Wingham where a discussion on the mode of baptism will be held July 5th.

Since our arrival in New South Wales, February 16th, I have preached sixty-eight times, baptized twelve, and blessed thirteen children.

Bro. Butterworth is in Victoria, and doing grandly.

July 3d. After a ride of one hundred and fifty miles by coach, we are settled once more till after the discussion, when we will work south.

The dedication of the new church at Nambucca passed off pleasantly, and on the Tuesday following two marriages were celebrated—all members of the church. This is the third house now in the colonies, and they are speaking volumes, as it has been contended that we only want to get the people off to America.

The cablegrams put the loss in the Conemaugh Valley at 35,000! A large cave-in at New Castle, has entombed eleven coal miners, who had not been found at the end of seven days.

I. W. WIGHT.

Lyons, Wis., August 5th.

To the Editor:—We feel well in body and happy in spirit; for behold, while the hardy sons of toil do garner in the golden grain my heart was made glad to harvest three precious sheaves of immortal worth, into the garner and kingdom of our God and his Christ. Sr. Agnes Williams is the mother of half a score, one half of each sex. Sr. Alfreda Chase has two married sisters convinced and "almost persuaded," to obey. Sr. Ida Swagert's parents, Heflers, and her brother and sister, are all favorable, and let us hope that they are not far from the kingdom of God's dear Son. The first named party embraced the M. E. faith, about two years ago; the second had never professed; and the other was christened a Lutheran.

The gospel is intended to not only cement families, but unify the race. Orthodox circles are troubled, while local scribblers, and some editors contribute, all to enliven, entertain and amuse. The evangelical lines are drawn so tight that they break asunder, once in a while, and we wish to gather up the fragments so that there will be nothing lost.

The wreck and ruin of Strangism has poisoned the public sentiment, and hence we struggle against wind and tide.

We dare not think of failing. "A steady drop will wear a rock." Presistent effort is the great need of this broad, overgrown field. "Eternal vigilance is the prize of liberty," and indomitable courage will gain the day.

We fondly trust that when the hurry and worry of harvest is over, the people will have more time and disposition to attend church, and better opportunities to investigate. Sectarian meshes have interwoven, interlaced, and interlocked throughout the broad domain; but the whole fabric is rotting; the tissues are disintegrating, and the fiber is falling into the thistledust of decay. May God arise in the ark of his strength and smite the "whore" of "Mystery Babylon" and all the "harlots," of her licentious progeny, spiritually speaking, for they have committed fornication with the potentates, merchant-ment, mighty craftsmen, and warriors of the world.

Intemperance is the bane of this land, while the use of tobacco prostrates the nerves, stupefies the mind, stultifies the brain, clothes the back with rags, benumbs the spirit, pollutes the body, enslaves, vitiates the taste and dulls the heart. But thank God, the Saints around here are free from the loathsome, useless habit.

To see a lot of vagabonds on their way to the base ball grounds on the Lord's day, with pipes, cigars, cigarettes, plugs and mugs, and arrest their attention is as fruitless a task as to try to allay a hurricane with a palm-leaf fan. O, my soul, when will theater-goers, turf-sports, and fun-lovers stop their unhallowed career long enough to hear, believe, and obey the gospel!

M. T. SHORT.

BLUE RAPIDS, Kansas, Aug. 12th.

Editor Hevald:—Since April conference I have been preaching all the time. Have traveled over the counties of Marshall, Washington, Clay, Republic, Jewell, Mitchell, Osborne, and Smith. Have preached in various places to congregations of various kinds; good interest in some places and nothing to boast of in others; good liberty of speech sometimes, and other times poor, and sometimes very poor.

I have been traveling alone most of the time, and I frequently think that I can not bear the burden. My first experience in preaching was last summer, and without any knowledge of the work of the ministry it seems sometimes like up-hill business. The Lord has blessed me at times in great abundance; at other times I have been left alone, to show me my weakness, no doubt. I have been in Blue Rapids about four weeks but have not been busy all the time; in fact the nights are rather short to hold protracted efforts very long in one place—at least it seems so in this part.

During my first week's stay in this place we held meetings in the city park. The meeting would have been a success if we had continued longer, but the rain and the circus stopped us. I called on all the ministers in the town and invited them out to church. Only one promised to come, and he failed to put in an appearance. One of them—McHarg by name—(Prebyterian) talked very insulting and ungentlemanly, and manifested anything but a christian spirit. Such men will reap their reward among the hypocrites.

Sunday evening August 4th I commenced meetings in the Fairview school house, three miles east of Blue Rasids. Had a good attend ance and a good interest. Continued Monday and Tuesday evenings with fair prospects. We then discontinued our effort until Saturday evening, when we held forth again. We invited them out on Sunday evening, promised them a blackboard exercise. Sunday evening came with a well-filled house. Subject, the apostacy. I wrote the names of the officers in the Church of Christ on one side, with the ordinances and doctrines; and then I wrote the names of the officers in the different churches of the world on the other side; heading the list with popes, cardinals, monks, etc., also class leaders and circuit riders; and in quoting from Isaiah 24:2: "It shall be with the people so with the priest, etc., one man roared out "You're a liar," at the top of his voice. I passed along without any special notice of his "audacity, and ill-bred cheek," and continued speaking with good liberty until I had explained that there had been a "falling away" After the meeting closed the gentleman (?) came around and began to abuse me. I replied that if he wished to try to refute the argument that I had made I would call the house to order, and give him a chance. He replied, "I can refute you and your d-d crowd too," referring to the Saints who were there from Blue Rapids. I told him if he only wanted to quarrel about it, that he would have to excuse me as I was not doing business that way. I walked out and left him laying it off with both hands to some that had gathered around him. Why do the heathen rage and the people imagine a vain thing! Such is ministerial life. But I suppose I shall spend the rest of my days declaring the gospel message, be they few or many. work is moving on here, and will no doubt make rapid progress in the future. The Saints of Blue Rapids have purchased a fine location for a new church building. It is just across the street from the M. E. brethren. I don't know how the two doctrines will mix; I should judge it would be like water and oil; the oil, representing Mormonism-comes to the top. I believe much good will yet be done in Blue Rapids; at least the enemy shows his teeth here quite often, and we regard that as a good sign.

I ask an interest in the prayers of all Saints that I may be granted wisdom and the liberty of the Spirit in presenting the word.

DETROIT, Mich., August 8th.

Dear Herald:—I know this work is true. I rejoice in the gospel and am glad I have had the pleasure of obeying the same, for I feel that God has put forth his hand the second time to gather his people into his kingdom. My husband is of the same faith. We are daily praying that our children may obey the same. There are eight Saints in this large city. We have had no preaching here yet, but are longing to hear the gospel preached in its purity. May God help us to do our duty and press forward until we gain a rest with him in glory.

We have been made to mourn on account of the strange disappearance of our ten-year-old son Thomas, June 30th. He has not been seen nor heard of since. We desire the prayers of all the Saints that we may find him, dead or alive. Yours in the faith,

JANE COUSER.

LANSING, Michigan, Aug. 10th.

Dear Saints:—I am sorely afflicted with nervous prostration, general enervation and emaciation. My brain and mind is becoming disturbed. Many kind and skillful physicians in this and other states have used their skill upon me, but to no purpose whatever. I have turned from all things earthly to God. I have obeyed and am continuing to obey the gospel as best I know how in my weak state of body and mind. I have been administered to by different elders and at different times; have been helped every time for the time being, but soon would relapse again. I shall trust in the Lord so doing while my life lasts. But I feel so impressed that I earnestly and humbly ask the whole church, everywhere, to pray for me that my health may be restored. O, Saints, will you be so kind as to pray for me, even me, and do so at once.

HIRAM RATHBUN, JUN.

BOSTON, Mass., August 7th.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—We occupied our new church last Sunday—excellent time and good attendance. We feel well over its purchase, and evidences that the Lord is with us are plain. I just came from Brockton where I went to attend business meeting and look after matters. Expect to leave for Reunion in Maine to-morrow. Have had lots of rain, but pleasant to-day. Shook hands with president Harrison at Faneuil Hall to-day.

In bonds,

M. H. Bond.

ARLINGTON, Dak., August 5th.

Dear Herald:—I feel thankful to God that I was brought out of darkness into this glorious latter day work, and can truly say I have had many testimonies of it. How great are the blessings we enjoy when faithful! I want to serve God with all my might, mind and strength. My wife and brother and myself were the only members in this part of Dakota until brethren Oehring and Bennet came here and preached the gospel, and the result was they baptized six into the fold, for which we rejoice. We hold prayer meetings every sunday. May the Lord bless the ministry, is my prayer. Your brother, Andrew C. Stone.

P. S.—I wish to say that if there are any elders in Dakota that can preach in the Norwegian language, I would like to have them come to this place, for here are a good many who can not understand preaching in English. We think good could be done.

A. C. S.

FACT, Kansas, August 5th.

Dear Herald:-I rejoice to say that we, a part of the body of Christ, living here on the sunny plains of Kansas, have times of rejoicing in the goodness of God and enjoy the comfort and peace of the Holy Ghost which has unveiled our minds and understandings from darkness, changing our every thought to dwelling upon nobler things, filling our hearts with love. I remember while quite young of being afflicted. I passed through the dark hours of night in pain and misery, despondent of ever beholding the light of another day. I slept a few moments before the break of day and on awaking I beheld the rays of the sun streaming across my bed. I remember of putting forth my hands to play in the sunshine, and the warm feeling it caused and the gladness that filled my heart. Then all hopes of life returned.

So is the first gleam of truth to the honest and believing heart. I wish to mention the case of a young brother in our branch, baptized last winter. Upon moving from here this spring he was placed in a neighborhood of rough and careless people, whose pastime on Sundays was horseracing and such sport. He organized the first Union Sabbath School ever held there, and being the superintendent it has grown to a splendid school. Young brothers, do not be idle because your surroundings are rough, but in the language of this young brother remember "the more wicked the people the harder I must work."

This we must do. I wish to say that we were made glad by uniting to our branch two precious souls on Sunday, August 4th by baptism, Laura, daughter of Elder and Sr. Kent, and Esther, daughter of Sr. Johnson.

Your brother in Christ,

H. P. Curtis.

OSCODA, Mich., Aug. 9th.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—I left home the last of July for this place and have since been holding meetings every evening but one. Last Sunday the Saints procured Mr. King's opera hall for me and I spoke to a nice gathering. Mr. King was very liberal, charging only one dollar for the use of the hall. The interest here is increasing. Yesterday I baptized two noble souls—man and wife, and others are near.

E. DELONG.

ALPINE, Michigan, Aug. 5th.

Bro. Dancer:—I will renew subscription for the Herald, for I can not get along without it. It is the only preacher we have, and through its columns we learn of the prosperity of the church. The people of this place have built a union church. It is open for all denominations, and as we have put in our mites we would be glad if some one of our elders would come this way and preach for us. They can have a home with us as long as they wish to stay. Our station is Alpine, on the Chicago and West Michigan.

Hoping we may hear the gospel preached in this place soon I will close.

Yours in the one faith,
MRS. N. A. NORTON.

NERVOUS HEADACHE.

There are many kinds of headaches. In these days the nervous headache is a very distinct variety. It is generally located in the front of the head, across the forehead over the eyes. It may be in other parts, though—at the top of the head, at one or both sides, at the back, or all over. It is painful, depressing, disabling. A man feels at the height of the paroxysm like a hunter who has galloped his legs clean off, and who could not leap a three foot ditch to save his life. The spur is of no use, neither is the whip. The pain in the head is worse to bear than either, and the patient will rather endure both whip and spur than make any kind of effort which will make the head pain worse. Physic by itself is of no use. There is not a single drug known to medical science which will of itself at once and permanently cure a nervous headache.

On the other hand drugs are not always needed. A complete change of air and circumstances will usually take away the pain in ten or twelve hours. Perfect rest of a duration proportioned to the severity and long continuance of the symptoms will make the cure permanent. There are, of course, methods of relieving and diminishing the pain until such time as it may be possible to obtain the complete rest. But the rest is the thing to be secured at all costs. If not, the pain goes from bad to worse and the risk from less to greater. The final consequence it is impossible to predict, except that a breakdown sooner or later is inevitable, and the breakdown may be for a year or for lifetime.

A nervous headache is a danger signal; if it be frequent the danger is increased, and, if continuous, a catastrophe is imminent. The driver must put on his breaks at all hazards, or he will probably soon have a leap for his life. There are very few sets of circumstances in which it is a man's duty to go on with his work when he is in this condition, at all risks. Even a threatened bankruptcy had better be risked than a threatened life. Besides a man who is in the unyielding grip of a permanent headache is not really the best judge of his own circumstances, He magnifies and distorts things amazingly. He takes counsel of his fears and abandons his hope and courage al-He takes counsel of together. Rest immediate and sufficient is the sovereign remedy. Two weeks at once may be better than a year very soon.

THE TEN CHIEF REASONS.

I AM a member of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. The chief reason why I like this church especially, is that its name is right. If Jesus Christ was the name of Christ in full, and if Saints is the proper name for his people, and if these are the latter days in the sense of being in precedence of the great millennium, then would the name Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints be all comprehensive, without doing violence to any Scripture name for the church.

The second reason why I like this church especially, is the fact that it believes in and preaches the whole gospel,-a gospel that consists not only in certain facts, but also in certain ordinances, laws, signs and gifts.

The third reason why I like this church especially, is that its ministers are made such, according to the gifts and callings of God unto them. That is, if a man is ordained a minister of this Church, of a certain rank, it is because the character of his gifts and callings indicate that such should be his rank; so that under his ordination he may, should he so elect, both act and speak with an authority that can not be commanded by those ministers who are ordained by one another to be what they are, on account of their own personal wisdom and learning, and because they feel that they are called.

The fourth reason is that its chief ministers hold an order of priesthood that is "after the order of the Son of God, which order was without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days nor end of life;" and an order, therefore, that insures to the members of it the privilege, if they live worthy of that privilege, "of receiving the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, to have the heavens opened unto them; to commune with the generally assembly and church of the first born; and to enjoy the communion and presence of God the Father and Jesus the Mediator of the new covenant."

The fifth reason why, is the fact that there is an ordinance in force within it whereby its members who are worthy, may have a positive knowledge that the baptism wherewith they were baptized into it, and the confirmation wherewith they were confirmed members of it, are both accepted and ratified in heaven. This ordinance is the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. For if those who are baptized into this church, and confirmed members of it by the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, do not receive that gift either immediately under the hands of the presbytery, or remotely, in consequence of the imposition of their hands, they have no sure evidence that the baptism wherewith they were baptized, or the confirmation wherewith they were confirmed, were, either of them, accepted or ratified in heaven.

The sixth reason why I like this Church is the fact that its members may, when they are sick, provided their faith in the power of Christ is sufficient, send for the elders that they may pray over them, anoint them and lay their hands on them that they may be healed. Nor is their privilege a less gladsome one on the account that when they see that they must die, that they may yet send for their elders that they may pray over them, and lay their hands on them, to the intent that they may not see death, but have their vision opened up to their glorious awaiting. And inasmuch as everything that is done, must be done in some way, why should it be thought incredible that this should be one way, if no more, in which those who keep the sayings of the Master may never see death?

The seventh reason as to why I like this Church, is the fact that its slothful and worldly inclined members are not blessed with spiritual blessings equally with those who mind the things of the Master especially; and which would mean of course that its members in general are blessed with the manifestations of the Spirit just to the extent that they keep his sayings.

The eighth reason is the fact that "the testimony of Jesus" is found among its members, and it was declared to John, the beloved apostle, by the mouth of an holy angel, that "the testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy." So that a church amongst whose members is not found the testimony of Jesus has not with it the Spirit of prophecy, and having not with it the Spirit of prophecy, it of course has not with it the testimony of Jesus; and how can a church be his church that has not his testimony with it!

The ninth reason as to why I like this Church is the fact that within it are found the means whereby its members, by making the proper use of those means, may attain to the highest order of existence that is possible to men—an order in which their vile bodies shall be like unto the glorious body of their Master. And an order therefore in which they will be made the inhertors with him of all things, and be made citizens forever of his own immediate kingdom-a kingdom that will be as superior to other kingdoms to which men will belong in the resurrected state, as the sun in its power and splendor is superior to the moon and the stars.

The tenth reason why I like this church is the fact that I believe it to be "the dispensation of the fulness of times;" the Church part of the "stone kingdom" that is to roll on to fill the whole earth; in other words, to bring in the glorious millennium, that Shiloh-day of one thousand years, throughout which not a ripple of rebellion against the truth shall ever come.

A. J. MAPES.

THE SHEEP AND THE GOATS.

EDITORS HERALD:-My excuse for offering the following is simply my desire to see all come to a unity of the faith. It is only by comparing our various views on matters about which we may disagree that we can arrive at such a unity. Where an investigation is entered into for the purpose of such comparison, in a proper spirit, it seems to me that no harm and possibly much good may be done.

I have always thought that the term "sheep" as used in Matt. 25:32 etc., did not refer exclusively, if at all, to the saints of the celestial kingdom of God. Sheep are not always referred to as implying saints. In Ps. 49: 14 the term seems to include the whole human family. The whole house of Israel is meant in Ps. 74:1, so likewise in Ps. 78:52. In none of these cases can we reasonably presume that the sheep spoken of will all be saved. Two classes are evidently presented in the judgment scene in Ezek. 34: 11-19. proneness to wander away and become lost is shown in Ps. 119:176; Isa. 53:6; Luke 15:4; and 1 Peter 2:25. Listen to Isa. 53:6: "All we like sheep have gone astray; we have turned every one to his own way."

In Zech. 13:7-9 two thirds of all the sheep were to be absolutely cut off and die because of their lost condition. In the final judgment day all these sheep will be gathered again to be judged "according to their works."—Rev. 20: 12.

So with the word "righteous." I am ready to admit that in nearly every case where it is used, it signifies that which is holy, and is meant to apply to those who are in the necessary condition to become saints. The word has, however, two different significations, according to its use. "There are two kinds of Christian righteousness; the one with out us, which we have by imputation; the other in us, which consisteth of faith, hope, and charity, and other Christian virtues."-Hooker.

These words, although by a man not recognized by the Saints as an inspired teacher, are nevertheless from a source of sufficient ecclesiastical and historical authority to warrant us in giving them great weight; especially as the definitions here given agree so well with many uses to which the word is put in the scriptures, and assists us over so many otherwise difficult passages. The first definition we might call its general, the second its specific signification. When we speak of a righteous man, we use the word in its specific sense; not so always when we speak of a righteous nation, or a righteous people, as we may then by force of surrounding circumstances be compelled to use it in its general sense. So Paul evidently understood it in his letter to the Roman brethren: "Therefore as by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one, the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life. For as by one man's disobedience many [all] were made sinners; so by the obedience of one shall many [all] be made righteous."—Rom. 5: 18, 19.

This righteousness then is a free gift (imputation, verses 17 and 18) to all; that is, general in its nature and application. This accords with the prophetic scene in Isaiah's mind wherein he sees the Christ come to "justify many" and to "bear the sin of many."—Isaiah 53:11, 12. It also beautifully supplements the language of Jesus in John 12: 32, and is afterward further corroborated by Paul in 1 Cor. 15:

22, 23 and 1 Tim. 2:4-6.
The term "righteous" then, may be applied in its general or imputed sense to all or the greater portion of the human family. In fact, I think that the intention in the Divine Mind originally was to impute it to all through the atoning blood of His Son; but that some by wilful and perverse wickedness had placed themselves beyond the possibility of receiving its benefits, by crucifying their Lord afresh, (Heb. 6:6), and thus the righteous (by imputation) from including all, as originally designed, become, by the transgression of the sons of perdition, simply those that were left. The righteous were again subdivided, as we shall presently show, into an innumerable number of grades at the different resurrections; but principally at the last, when each man was to be judged "according to their works."—Rev. 20: 12.

Now there are two resurrections enumerated in the scriptures, the one mentioned in Matt. 27: 50-53, and the one at the second appearing of Christ—1 Thess. 4: 13-18,—being practically included in what is commonly known as the first; while the second or final one, will be when Christ and His saints who are called to be "priests of God and of Christ," shall sit in judgment, at that day when "the dead small and great" shall stand before God to be judged "according to their works."-Rev. 20: 12.

I presume there will be no disputing the correctness of the proposition that the time fixed in Matt. 25: 31 "when the Son of Man shall come in His glory, and all the holy angels with Him," and when "before Him shall be gathered all nations," is that of the final or second resurrection.

Having found then that the time when "all nations" shall be separated "as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats" is that of the second resurrection, let us proceed to a careful study of this parable. The first thing that strikes us is the two great classes into which the "all nations" shall be divided. The "all nations," however, could not include those who had already come forth in the first resurrection, as no judgment was to set for them, at least at this time. Let us stop here and examine briefly who constituted those who were to have part in the first resurrection. 1st, they were to be the "priests of God and of Christ, Rev. 20: 4-6. Second: All members of His church who prove faithful and true to the end, "who have received the testimony of Jesus, and believed on His name, and were baptized after the manner of His burial, . . . and receive the Holy Spirit by the laying on of the hands of him who is ordained and sealed unto this power."—D. & C. 213: 5. Third: All little children who have not come to the years of accountability; Matt. 19:14; D. & C. 119:13, and B. of M. Mosiah 8: 6. Fourth: Those who die without law, D. & C. 45: 10, and B. of M. Mosiah 8: 6; and, Fifth: "The spirits in prison" who shall receive the gospel; 1 Peter 4:5,6; D. & C. 36: 11; 76: 6.

Now while it is true that all of these had not come forth to the same glory, (see D. & C. 36: 11; 45: 19; 76: 5, 6), they were nevertheless those who either had no knowledge of the law, and there fore could not be judged by it, Rom. 4: 15, or were incapable of transgressing the law, D. & C. 28: 13, or were those who knowing the law had kept the precepts, and thus came under the special favor and protection of God. In either case the promise was that their sins should not be remembered against them.

Jeremiah, speaking of the new covenant, says: "After those days, saith the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people. And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord: for they shall all know me, from the least among them, unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord: for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more."—Jer. 31:34. The italics are mine to emphasize the thought I wish to make prominent here. Heb. 8:12 and 10:12-17 is a repetition and confirmation of this truth of the Lord through his prophet Jeremiah. "In those days, and in that time, saith the Lord, the iniquity of Israel shall be sought for, and there shall be none; and the sins of Judah, and they shall not be found; for I will pardon them whom I reserve."— Jer. 50: 20.

"But if the wicked will turn from all his sins that he hath committed, and keep all my statutes, and do that which is lawful and right, he shall surely live, and he shall not die. All his transgressions that he hath committed, they shall not be mentioned unto him; in his righteousness that he hath done he shall live."-Ezek. 18:21,

Hence, we see that from the very nature of the case, those whom we have enumerated as having come forth in the first resurrection, could not now be called to judgment. Now, who are left of the children of the celestial kingdom to come forth in the second resurrection? As a class I fail to see that there are any. It seems to me much more reasonable to think that the sheep here mentioned are those who are mentioned in D. & C. 76:7, who are of "Paul and Apollos;" "who will not be gathered with the saints, to be caught up unto the church of the first born."-D. & C. 76:7. There may be some of these who, through the preaching of the word during the millennial reign, may advance beyond the glory of the stars, when the judgment shall sit, and every one shall be judged "according to his works;" but I can see no reason to presume that even this will be the case. I fail to find any plain, specific promise that any shall stand in the celestial kingdom of God, but those who shall come forth in the first resurrection. But rather, it seems to me, that the last call will be made to "go into the marriage feast of the Lamb" at the first resurrection, and all that come after will be those who shall be as its "stars" in number, and grades of glory; "but where God and Christ dwell they can not come worlds without end."—D. & C. 76:7.

If our reasoning is correct, we can understand why they should not know Christ when he called them the "blessed of my Father," (Matt. 25: 34). They never had known him. They indeed had made great professions, and shown in certain directions great zeal, but their zeal had been "without knowledge" and their professions had been barren of all the saving elements of a lively christian faith. Many of them had been good, moral men and women, who had kindly ministered to the necessities of the saints, Matt. 25:35, 36, with no idea at the time, of doing an act that was predestined to redound so greatly to their glory; Matt. 10:40-42, but they had never received the Holy Ghost, without which it was impossible to know Him. -1 Cor. 12:3. But Jesus says: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren." Ah, here was another class, viz.: "the brethren," (and this includes the sisters). This agrees with Rev. 20, for there, too, we have the three classes; 1st the saints, who come with Christ; 2d, the first division of those who are being judged, and upon whom various grades of rewards are pronounced; and 3d, the second division of those who are being judged, and who are so judged by having the condemnation pronounced upon them of being "cast into the lake of fire," Rev. 20: 15, or as recorded in Matt. 25:41, "into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels."

I have made a careful study of this question for years, and the more I have studied the matter the more firmly I have become convinced of the correctness of my conclusions. Now, if I am wrong I would like to be set right. I hope this discussion will be continued and be elaborated till we shall have all the light that God or His Word can shed upon the question, to the end that unity and truth may be more firmly established in the minds of the saints.

THE "SEALED BOOK."-No. XIV.

BY ELDER R. M. ELVIN.

NUMEROUS AND DANGEROUS.

Of these chambers in general he says: "These subterraneous chambers are scattered over the whole ground covered by the ruined city. There was one in the cattle yard before the hacienda, and the Indians were constantly discovering them at greater distances. Indeed there were so many of them, and in places where they were so little to be expected, that they made rambling out of the cleared paths dangerous, and to the last day of our visit we were constantly finding new ones. From what we saw afterwards we believe they were intended as cisterns, and had furnished, in part at least, a supply of water to the people of the ruined city."—Ibid p. 231-2.

NAMELESS MOUND.

This additional information is furnished in relation to the ruins of Uxmal: "On a line with the back of the Casa del Gobernador rises the high and nameless mound represented in the frontispiece, forming one of the grandest and most imposing structures among all the ruins of Uxmal. It was at that time covered with trees and a thick growth of herbage, which gave a gloominess to its grandeur of proportions, and but for its regularity, and a single belt of sculptured stones, barely visible at the top, it would have passed for a wooded and grass grown hill. The height of this mound was sixty-five feet, and it measured at the base three hundred feet on one side, and two hundred on the other. On the top was a great platform of solid stone, three feet high and seventy-five feet square, and about fifteen feet from the top was a narrow terrace running on all four The walls of the platform of the sides. were of smooth stone, and the corners had sculptured ornaments. The area consisted entirely of loose rough stones, and there are no remains or other indications of any The great structure seemed building. raised only for the purpose of holding aloft this platform. It commanded a full view of every building. Around the top of the mound was a border of sculptured stone ten or twelve feet high."-Ibid, p. 253-4.

VILLAGE OF TICUL.

Concerning the ruins of this village he says: "It was fortunate for the particular objects of our expedition that, go where we would in this country, the monuments of its ancient inhabitants were before our eyes. Near the vilage of Ticul, almost in the suburbs, are the ruins of another ancient and unknown city. From the time of our arrival the memorials of it had been staring us in the face. The cura had some sculptured stones of new and exceedingly pretty design; and heads, vases and other relics found in excavating the ruins were fixed in the fronts of houses as ornaments. A short distance in the rear of the hacienda were ruins of another city. At this time a great part of the city was completely hidden by the foliage of the trees. Near by, however, several mounds were in full sight, dilapidated, and having fragments of walls on the top. The cura told me that in the dry season, when the trees were bare of foliage, he had counted from this point thirty six mounds, every one of which had once held aloft a building or temple, and not one now remained entire. Beyond doubt it was of the same character as Uxmal and erected by the same people." —Ibid, p. 271-3.

MILL STONES.

Of the ruins of San Francisco he says: "Among the ruins were circular holes in the ground like those at Uxmal. The mouth of one was broken and enlarged, and I descended by a ladder into a domeshaped chamber, precisely the same as at Uxmal, but a little larger. At Uxmal the character of these was mere matter of conjecture; but at this short distance the Indians had specific notions in regard to their object and use and called them chultunes, or wells. In all directions, too, were seen the oblong stones hollowed out like troughs, which at Uxmal were called pilas, or fountains, but here the Indians called them holcas or piedras de molir, stones for grinding, which they said were used by the ancients to mash corn upon; and the proprietor showed us a round stone like a bread roller, which they called kabtum, brazo de piedra, or arm of stone, used, as they said, for mashing the corn.'

—Ibid, p. 284-5.

Honorable Henry R. Evans, of Malad City, Idaho, has one of these kabtum stones. It it is some fourteen inches in length, round, and about as large as a man's wrist.

nun's house.

Describing the House of the Nuns at Uxmal he says: "The building that forms the right or eastern side of the quadrangle is one hundred and fifty-eight feet long; that on the left is one hundred and seventy-three feet long, and the range opposite or at the end of the quadrangle measures two hundred and sixty-four feet. These three ranges of buildings have no door ways outside, but the exterior of each is a dead wall, and above the cornice all are ornamented with the same rich, elaborate sculpture. On the exterior of the range last mentioned, the designs are simple, and among them are two rude figures, which have been considered as indicating the existence of that same eastern worship before referred to among the people of Uxmal. Such is the exterior of this building. Passing through the arched gateway we enter a noble court-yard, with four great facades looking down upon it, each ornamented from one end to the other with the richest and most intricate carving known in the art of the builders of Uxmal, presenting a scene of strange magnificence, surpassing any that is now to be seen among its ruins, This court-yard is two hundred and fourteen feet wide, and two hundred and fifty-eight feet deep. At the time of our first entrance it was overgrown with bushes and grass. Quails started up from under our feet, and, with a whirring flight, passed over the tops of the buildings,"—Ibid, p. 300.

MUSICAL INSTRUMENTS.

These would be good witnesses, evincing a high degree of civilization, and quite a knowledge of the arts and sciences.

Stephens continues his description of the same place thus: "At the end of the courtyard, and fronting the gate of entrance, is the facade of a lofty building, two hundred and sixty-four feet long, and standing on a terrace twenty feet high. The ascent is by a grand but ruined staircase, ninety-five feet wide, flanked on each side by a building with sculptured front, and having three door-ways, each leading to apartments within. The hight of this building to the upper cornice is twenty-five feet. It has thirteen doorways, over each of which rose a perpendicular wall ten feet from the ground. These lofty structures were no doubt erected to give grandeur and effect to the building, and at a distance they appear to be turrets, but only four of them now remain. The whole great facade, including the turrets, is crowded with complicated and elaborate sculpture, among which are human figures rudely executed; two are represented as playing on musical instrument, one being not unlike a small harp, and the other in the nature of a guitar; a third is in a sitting posture, with his hands across his breast, and tied by cords, the ends of which pass over his shoulders."—Ibid, p. 303-4.

OBELISK.

Strange indeed that even the obelisks of Egypt have their counterpart in America. Molina in his history of Chili, says: "Between the hills of Mendoza and LaPunta is a pillar of stone one hundred and fifty feet high and twelve feet in diameter."—History of Chili, tom 1, p. 169.

Again, Bancroft says: "The columns of Copan stand detached and solitary, so do the obelisks of Egypt; both are square or four-sided, and covered with sculpture."

—Native Races, vol. 5, p. 60.

This, upon first reading, may not seem of much importance, but when we remember that the writers of the Book of Mormon wrote a reformed Epyptian language, and therefore whatever is found indicating a unison of Egypt and ancient America becomes material evidence in sustaining our proposition of the sealed book.

GREAT VARIETY.

Of the building Monjas, at Uxmal, Stephens says: "The engraving opposite represents the south-east corner of this building. The angle exhibits the great face before presented, with the stone curving upward at the projecting end. On each side is a succession of compartments, alternately plain, and presenting the form of diamond lattice work. In both there is an agreeable succession of plain and ornamented, and in fact it would be difficult, in arranging four sides facing a court-yard, to have more variety, and at the same time more harmony of ornament. All these facades were painted; the traces of the color are still visible. I omit a description of the apartments opening on this courtyard. The number in all is eighty-eight." -Travels in Yucatan, vol. 1, p. 307.

HOUSE OF THE DWARF.

Of the House of the Dwarf at Uxmal, he says: "The court-yard of this building is one hundred and thirty-five feet by eighty-five. It is bounded by ranges of mounds from twenty-five to thirty feet thick, now covered with a rank growth of herbage, but which, perhaps, once formed ranges of buildings. In the center is a large circular stone, like those seen in the other court-yards, called the Picote."—Ibid, p. 312.

HOUSE OF THE PIGEONS.

Relative to the house of the Pigeons in the city of departed, greatness—Uxmal, he says: "In the center of this building is an archway ten feet wide, which leads into a court-yard one hundred and eighty feet long, and one hundred and fifty feet deep. In the center of the court-yard, and thrown down, is the same large stone so often mentioned. On the right is a range of ruined buildings, and on the left a similar range, and rising behind it the high mound represented in the frontispiece; and in front at the end of the court-yard is a range of ruined buildings, with another arch-way in the center. Crossing the court-yard, and passing through this arch-way, we ascend a flight of steps now ruined, and reach another court-yard, one hundred feet long by eighty five deep. On each side of this court-yard, too, is a range of ruined buildings, and at the other end is a great Teocalis, two hundred feet in length, one hundred and twenty deep, and about fifty feet high. A broad staircase leads to the top, on which stands a long narrow building, one hundred feet by twenty, divided into three apartments. There was a mournful interest about this great pile of ruins. Entering under the great arch-way, crossing two noble courtyards, with ruined buildings on each side, and ascending the great staircase to the building on the top, gave a stranger impression of departed greatness than any thing else in this desolate city."-Ibid, p.

And of this same building he further says: "At the northeast angle of this building is a vast range of high, ruined terraces, facing east and west, nearly eight hundred feet long at the base, and called the Campo Santo. On one of these is a building of two stories, with some remains of sculpture, and in a deep and overgrown valley at the foot, the Indians say, was the burial place of this ancient city; but, though searching for it ourselves, and offering a reward to them for the discovery, we never found in it a sepulchre."-Ibid, p.

NOHCACAB.

Of the ruins at Nohcacab he says: "From the numerous and extraordinary ruins scattered around, there is reason to believe that it was the heart of a rich and what was once an immensely populated country. In the suburbs are numerous and large mounds, grand enough to excite astonishment, but even more fallen and over grown than those of San Francisco, and, in fact, almost inaccessible."-Ibid p. 347.

HUGE HEAD AT NOHPAT.

In relation to the discovery of a huge head among the ruins at Nohpat he says: "Leaving this neighborhood and passing by many ruined buildings and mounds, at the distance of six or seven hundred feet we reached an open place, forming the most curious and interesting part of this field of ruins. It was in the vicinity of three mounds, lines drawn from which to each other would form a right angle, and in the open space were some sculptured monuments, shattered, fallen, and some of them half buried. Strange heads and bodies lay broken and scattered, so that at first we did not discover their connection; but by examining carefully we found two fragments, which, from the shape of the broken surfaces, seemed to be parts of one block, one of them representing a huge head, and the other a huge body."-Ibid, p. 365.

THE TEOCALLIS.

Concerning the ruins of Kabah he says: "Following this path toward the field of ruins, the teocallis is the first object that meets his eye, grand, picturesque, ruined, and covered with trees, like the house of the dwarf at Uxmal, towering above every other object on the plain. It is about one hundred and eighty feet square at the base, and rises in a pyramidal form to the height of eighty feet. At the foot is a range of ruined apartments. The steps are all fallen, and the sides present a surface of loose stones, difficult to climb, except on one side, where the ascent is rendered practicable by the aid of trees. The top presents a grand view. I ascended it for the first time toward evening when the sun was about setting, and the ruined buildings were casting lengthened shadows over the plain. At the north, south, and east the view was bounded by a range of hills. In part of the field of ruins was a clearing, in which stood a deserted rancho, and the only indication that we were in the vicinity of man was the distant church in the village of Nohcacab. At the distance of three or four hundred yards, we reach the foot of a terrace twenty feet high, the edge of which is overgrown with trees; ascending this we stand on a platform two hundred feet in width by one hundred and forty-two feet deep, and facing us is the building represented in the plate opposite. On the right of the platform as we approach this building, is a high range of structures, ruined and overgrown with trees, with an immense back wall built on the outer line of the platform, perpendicular to the bottom of the terrace. On the left is another range of ruined buildings, not so grand as those on the right, and in the center of the platform is a stone enclosure twenty-seven feet square and seven feet high, like that surrounding the picote at Uxmal; but the layer of stones around the base was sculptured, and on examination, we found a continuous line of hieroglyphics. In the center of the platform is a range of stone steps forty feet wide and twenty in number, leading to an upper terrace, on which stands the building. This building is one hundred and fifty-one feet front, and the moment we saw it we were struck with the extraordinary richness and ornament of its facade. In all the buildings of Uxmal, without a single exception, up to the cornice which runs over the door-way the facades are of plain stone; but this was ornamented from the very foundation, two lavers under the lower cornice, to the top. The ornaments are of the same character with those at Uxmal, alike complicated and incomprehensible, and from the fact that every part of the facade was ornamented with sculpture, even to the portion now buried under the lower cornice, the whole must have presented a greater appearance of richness than any building at Uxmal. The cornice running over the door-way, (which is stamped on the cover of this work), tried by the severest rules of art recognized among us, would embellish the architecture of any known era, and, amid a mass of barbarism, of rude and uncouth conceptions, it stands as an offering by American builders worthy of the acceptance of a polished people. In many places it has fallen, but we were now more struck than when at a distance with its general resemblance to the ruined structures on the top of some of the buildings at Palenque. The latter were stucco; this was of cut stone, and more chaste and simple. It could not have been intended for use as part of the edifice; the only purpose we could ascribe was that of ornament, as it improved the appearance of the building seen from a distance, and set it off with great effect on near approach."

Ibid p. 384-390.
It would seem improbable and impossible that any one could read the above without partaking of an ardent desire to learn more of the people who constructed these magnificent buildings, and to a degree, by the aid of the antiquities, come to a better knowledge of the ancient civilizations of our beautiful and loved America, the future home of the meek and the good.

THE RED HAND.

Of another part of the same group of ruins, Stephens says: "Two buildings stood upon this overgrown terrace. The first was two hundred and seventeen feet long, having seven door-ways in front, all opening to single apartments, except the center one, which had two apartments each thirty feet long. In the rear were other apartments with door-ways opening upon a court-yard, and from the center a range of buildings ran at right angles, terminating in a large, ruined mound. The wall of the whole of this great pile had been more ornamented than either of the buildings before presented except the first, but, unfortunately, it was more dilapidated. The door-ways had wooden lintels, most of which have fallen. To the north of this building is another, one hundred and forty feet in front and thirty one feet deep, with double corridors communicating, and a gigantic staircase in the center leading to the roof, on which are the ruins of another building. The doors of two center apartments open under the arch of this great stair-case. In that on the right we again found the prints of the red hand; not a single print, or two, or three, as in other places, but the whole wall was covered with them, bright and distinct as if but newly made."—Ibid, p. 402, 3.

And still again of another part of the same ruins he says: "It had a raised platform about four feet high, and in each of the inner corners was a rounded vacant place, about large enough for a man to stand in; part of the back wall was covered with prints of the red hand. seemed so fresh, and the seams and creases were so distinct that I made several attempts with the machete to get one print off entire, but the plaster was so hard that every effort failed."—Ibid, p. 411.

THE HOLY LAND.

A HORSEBACK RIDE THROUGH PALES-TINE-FROM THE DEAD SEA TO JERUSALEM.

BY A. B. MATSON.

AFTER enjoying the questionable delights of a bath in the Dead Sea, we started for Jordan ford, about one hour's sharp riding. The morning was cool, for this country, but in the valley the heat was simply overpowering, and but for the green line of foliage edging the rivers, urging us on, I for one would have been inclined to give up. In addition to the great heat I was encrusted with salt from head to foot, so that the reader can understand I was not over comfortable. I have experienced somewhat of different kinds of heat, but this was the most peculiar I have ever felt. It came nearer my conception of the orthodox hell than any place I ever want to be in again. For many reasons I longed to plunge into the pure fresh waters of the Jordan. Putting all sentiment aside, I wanted to get rid of the salt which was covering my person. About 12: 30 we reached the banks of this famous river. A few weeks before I had stood at the head-waters of this stream at Cæsarea Phillippi and Dan; farther south I camped on the edge of the waters of Merom, and had a delightful row on the Sea of Galilee, expansions only of the same river, while from various mountain tops I had seen it hunting its tortuous way to the south, and now stood within a short distance from its mouth. Finer springs or fountains of purer water I have never seen, or expect to see, giving promise of a glorious termination; yet how such a stream could end more ignominiously I can not tell. It simply goes out in death. Many people are like this; they start out well and end in a failure. For three or four hundred yards on either side of the river is a thick growth of what may be called underbrush, filled with several varieties of singing birds, and untold myriads of the hungriest gnats I ever dropped across, or rather that ever dropped across

After the heat and coating of salt to which we had been subjected, we enjoyed a bath in the Jordan immensely. One of our party tried to swim across, but found the current too strong for him. Later on in the Summer the stream gets very low, and can be easily forded.

I don't want these letters to take a doctrinal turn, but just one word in the interest of simple truth: I have heard it stated over and over again that the current of the Jordan was too strong for immersing in. At this time of the year the current in the center of the stream is too strong, and the man who wades into it up to his neck will get washed away; but in the first place there is no occasion for going in so far, and second, there are plenty of places to baptize along the Jordan without going near the current at all. After our swim we lunched in the shade of a friendly tree or bush. About 10,000 small black gnats, a good collection of mosquitos, and a few flies, lunched, or tried to lunch at the same time, and from the way they went at it, they had fasted for many days. This is the first time that anything in the way of winged insects have troubled us, and only two or three times have we seen a few half-starved fleas, that were so hungry that they had something to eat and went to bed like sensible fleas, so they did not trouble us much.

We spent some time during the atternoon wandering up and down the banks near the ford cutting sticks, gathering some pebbles and sand as mementoes, and watching and listening to the numerous birds, small and large among the trees. I was especially interested in the birds, as we had seen none to speak of during our travels in Palestine, and for ten years I have heard but few of them sing. The Austraheard but few of them sing. The Australasian birds have beautiful plumage, but they can't sing a bit more than I can, and that's not saying much for the birds of the "Great Southland." The most musical bird in Australia is the Laughing Jackass, which for power and range of voice can't be excelled, I am sure, but the music might not suit all tastes. Apart from some discomforts, I enjoyed my visit to this spot very much. No other river's name was known so long ago, and so far away, as this, which calls up a host of past memories to people in every part of the globe.

Nor is it of the past only that the name of Jordan tells, for in the more thoughtful hours of not a few they hear it whispering to them before, strange shadowy truths of that future, happier land that lies over the stream of the mystic Jordan of death. Some speak of it as a divine river. This may be so; but with me it is divine only as all other rivers are divine. It is true that on its banks Jesus, the Son of God, lived and labored, and beneath his waters he was buried in baptism, as an example to all his believing children; but in every land, and on the banks of every stream, where a man or a woman is to be found who is "living the life of the Son of God," there Iesus lives and labors, and that place is divine, because God is there.

About three o'clock we left the Jordan for our next camping place at or near Jericho. In ancient times Jericho was considered rather a hard place, and its people not over honest or clean. I am afraid neither city or people have changed much for the better. I don't believe much in total depravity, but I can't see how human beings can get much worse than those of Jericho. Our tent was pitched just outside the modern town, and in the evening a large number of women, children and dogs came out to see us. As honesty is an unknown quantity in Jericho, both among the people and dogs, we had to keep a sharp eye over our loose property. We were anxious to get back to Jerusalem, so we got an early start this morning, avoiding as well some of the oppressive heat of the afternoon. We left our camp at 5:50 o'clock, just as the sun was casting his first rays over the eastern mountains of Moab. The scene around us was one of silent and death-like grandeur. Within a short distance of us were the remains of three ruined cities. Modern Jericho is but little more than a wreck; just to the right of our track we could see the heaps where the Jericho of the New Testament once stood; while our pathway led us directly over the foundations of Jericho, the walls of which fell by faith in the presence of Joshua and his army. But little doubt remains but that this is the site of ancient Jericho. The ruins are almost level with the ground, but the walls of the city can be distinctly traced, as also many of the buildings. In a number of places the walls are a few feet above the ground. From just above the last named place we got our finest view of the Jordan valley and its surroundings. The mountains of Gilead and Moab were in full view, as well as the Dead Sea and the whole stretch of the Jordan valley, from the mountains on either side, the Dead Sea on the south and for many miles to the north.

A little money and enterprise would make a rather nice place out of this valley as there is said to be 40,000 acres of good wheat land in this neighborhood, which, if irrigated from the Jordan would produce splendid crops. As the people have neither money nor enterprise, this land is likely to remain in an unproductive state for some time to come. A people who won't scratch the flies out of their eves are not likely to turn the Jordan into the valley From this point to Jerusalem it is about fifteen miles, and in that we ascended more than three thousand feet; so while we did not go "down to Jericho" we went "up to Jerusalem." On every side were steep mountains and wild glens, the haunts of plundering Arabs. The man of the parable is not the only man who has fallen "among thieves." on this lonesome road. An additional guard had joined us at Jericho, but I really felt afraid of our protectors. In about four hours we reached Bethany, the home of Mary and her sister Martha, and the one spot on earth where He who "had not where to lay his head" found a loving welcome and a peaceful home. It is still a lovely spot and one which would be especially desirable to a person in the busy walks of life, seeking a few hours' quiet and rest. I do not wonder that Jesus, the busiest of the sons of men, often sought this place, especially as he found there those whose hearts and lives were in sympathy with his own. So it has ever been. Christ dwells with those who are ready to receive Him, and will make His home with them. Being in a hurry to get into Jerusalem, where we were all expecting letters from home, we did not stop in Bethany, intending to walk out there another day, as it is only a short hour's walk from "The City of the Great King," of which I will write in my next.

Miscellaneous.

REUNION.

The Reunion of the Little Sioux and Galland's Grove district will commence October 4th, 1889, at half-past two o'clock, in Bro. Henry Garner's Grove, five miles east of Mondamin. Hay will be sold on the ground at $4 per ton, or ten cents for fifty pounds. Good water plenty, and all down wood free; cord wood at reasonable price. Persons coming by rail will find conveyance at Mondamin, the nearest rail-road station. A good boarding house will be kept on the ground where meals can be had for 25 cents. All are cordially invited to attend.

By order of committee on arrangements, JOHN T. COFFMAN, chairman.

DIED.

BERTLESON.—At Boston, Massachusetts, July 18th, 1889, sister Wilhelmine, wife of Bro. Fredrick Bertleson, aged sixty years, four months and eleven days. She was born at Copenhagen, Denmark, and was baptized there by the mission-She was born at Copenhagen, aries from Utah in 1855. In company with her husband who had united with that church four years previously, she came to America in 1866; burying one child in the ocean, crossing the plains with an ox team to the "salt land;" joined the Reorganization under the preaching of David and Alexander H. Smith and E. C. Brand, while in Utah. She was a faithful wife and mother, and a good Saint. She was buried in Forest Hill cemetery. She leaves a husband and four children, three boys and one girl, to mourn her loss. Funeral services conducted by Elders A. H. Parsons and M. H. Bond.

A. H. Parsons and M. H. Bond.
Dearest mother, thou hast left us
For the realm's above the skies,
Holy angels they have borne thee
To the bliss of Paradise.
Thou art free from all thy suffering,
Sorrow thou wilt know no more;
Pain and anguish they are banished
Far from thee forevermore.
Thou wast gentle, meek and loving,
Thou wast gentle, meek and loving,
Thou didst always do to others
As thou dist have them do to you.
How we miss thee, darling mother,
Human hearts can never know;
But I hope we'll meet each other
On that bright and happy shore.

MONTGOMERY -- Elizabeth Montgomery, consort of John O. Montgomery, died Sunday, April 14th, 1889, at Voree, Racine county, Wisconsin. She was born May 2d, 1815, at Dartford, county of Kent, England. She and her husband who still survives, were baptized and confirmed by the late Samuel Powers, of blessed memory, June 5th, 1863, at Whitfield, Coos county, New Hampshir. She received a paralytic stroke some fifteen years since, and a few years after the dropsy set in, and she was an invalid for ten or a dozen long years. She bore up under her prolonged, debilitating ailments as patiently, cheerfully and hopefully as she well could, and thus manifested a true Saint-like trust. The Rev. Hubbard, a Free Will Baptist, of Honey Creek, near by, de-livered the funeral sermon, there being no elders near at hand. Her remains repose in the Burlington cemetery. She bore the cross, and despised the shame, for more than a quarter of a century, and lo! the old veterans go, while the young, the happy, and hopeful may die. Her only child, a dutiful daughter, Mrs. Smith, evidently feels the loss deeply, and will miss her loved presence much. Her weary, earthly pilgrimage is at an end, the battles of mortality fought, the prize gained, and "the adoption, to wit, the redemption of the body," is in the very near future!

HATFIELD.—At Chelsea, Massachusetts, July 21st, 1889, Bro. Everett Hatfield, aged thirteen years and seven days. He was born in Pawtucket, Rhode Island. Our young brother though crippled in body, was possessed of a remarkable spirit—we never remember of seeing his like in spiritual things in one so young in years. He was always and everywhere a good boy. Was caralways and everywhere a good boy. ried into the water and buried in baptism two years ago. Would that all might live as pure as he in speech and life! Large attendance at the funeral services which were conducted by Elder M. H. Bond, with singing and exercises at the grave by Chelsea Reform Club and Temperance Cadets—both of which organizations he was a member.

HETZLER .- Mrs. Harriet P. Hetzler was born in Roylston, Vermont, December 25th, 1825. Her parents, the late Bro. Stephen and Sr. Serepta Richardson, moved from there to Kirtland, Ohio, and afterward to near La Moille, Bureau county, Illinois, where she was united in happy wedlock with Mr. John Hetzler, who now survives her. She joined the First Baptist Church in La Moille, in 1872; and in the spring of 1884 she with her husband moved to Waterloo, Blackhawk county, Iowa, where she died June 27th, 1889, esteemed for her many virtues by all who knew her, for her life was such as won her the respect and affection of all who shared her acuaintance.

"'Death should come
Gently to one of gentle mould like thee,
As light winds, wandering through groves of bloom,
Detach the delicate blossoms from the tree.
Close thy sweet eyes caimly, and without pain,
And we will trust in God to see thee yet again."

Morgan.-Sister Elizabeth J. Morgan, wife of Mr. William J. Morgan, died July 10th, 1889, after suffering for several years patiently. She attended the house of worship faithfully and actively until within two months prior to her death. She leaves a kind and loving husband, four daughters and one son, to mourn her death. She was born at Cefn Coed y Cymer, Breconshire, South Wales, October 12th, 1834, was baptized when about thirteen years old by Elder Edward Williams. She emigrated to this country in 1858; was baptized into the Reorganized Church at Mineral Ridge, Ohio, March 31st, 1866, by Elder John J. Morgan, faithful to the end, and was an every-day Saint and well respected by all who knew her. May this sad occurrence be the means of restoring her companion back to the fold of Christ. Numerous friends, including the few Saints remaining in this town gathered at at the house on the 12th where a short service was had, Elder J. T. Williams officiating. A few appropriate remarks were made at the grave and a Welsh hymn was sung, and a funeral sermon was delivered at the Saints' chapel Sunday evening at 6: 30 p. m., July 14th, on the resurrection, by Elder T. W. Williams.

Weep not for me, dear husband
And children, one and all;
I'm going to my "Mansion,"
Until the trumpet-call.
There is a crown of glory
Prepared for you and I,
Aud all who will live faithful
Shall wear it bye and bye.

NICKERSON.—Urlah Chittendon Hatch Nickerson was born in Cavendish, Vermont, November 15th, 1810. He was baptized in the spring of 1833 by Zurubbabel Snow. He was in the early trials and persecutions that fell upon the Saints in Jackson county, Missouri, in the bleak days of November, 1833. He traveled extensively, suffered considerably, testified freely, and preached much in the infancy of the church. He was received into the Reorganization through the ministrations of Samuel Powers, and was ordained by him. He was a peculiar genius indeed, but with all his oddities and freaks he never denied, but rather testified boldly in favor of the great work of God. His memory is cherished with ardent devotion by his aged wife, who also embraced the gospel in the vernal time of 1833, as also by a man and brother, who was reared by their kind hands. The home circle is the place to ascertain true greatness, sterling worth, and unfading merit. He passed hence from nervous debility and old age, June 18th, 1888. Elder F. M. Cooper delivered the funeral discourse some time after his decease, and thus a long life and an eventful career goes into the history of the past; while the force and influence of life go on while eternal ages roll away.

MOUNTAIN OF THE LORD'S HOUSE.

BISHOP O. F. WHITNEY said in the Tabernacle at Salt Lake City, the 11th

"We live in a land of mountains and valleys, in the very land where the Lord, speaking through the Prophet Isaiah, in ancient times. said he would establish His people in the last days: 'Come ye,' says the prophet, 'and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob, and He will teach us of His ways, and we will walk in His paths; for out of Zion shall go forth the law and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem.' We Latter Day Saints believe that we are the people who were thus spoken of by the Prophet Isaiah."

Yes; the Utah Mormons have been taught this damaging error for about forty years. Such misleading applications of Scripture have blinded the minds of thousands of confiding souls, who are taught that their leaders act and speak directly under the unerring influence of the Holy Spirit.

The above text has no more reference to the Saints in the mountains in Utah than to "the man in the moon;" but it applies, and is limited to "Judah and Jerusalem." So reads the context, which says: "The word that Isaiah said concerning Judah and Jerusalem," and then follows the statement of that "word," which reads: "And it shall come to pass in the last days that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it.'

This is plainly a figurative expression relative to the establishment and building the kingdom of God in Jerusalem and Judea in the last days. The word "mountain" is often used, prophetically, to signify a kingdom as in Daniel 2:35,44; Jer. 17: 3; 51: 25; Isa. 25: 6, 7, 10, etc., etc. It will not do to say that the translation of Isaiah 2: 1-4 is incorrect, for 2 Nephi 8:4 gives it the same; and in commenting on this, in connection with much that follows, Nephi says: "Isaiah spake many things which were hard for many of my people of understand; for they know not the manner of prophesying among the Jews."-2 Nephi 11: 1. And this is said, no doubt, because the prophecies of the Jewish prophets abound with figurative expressions, the significance of which requires thorough study and the aid of God's Spirit. But of one thing all may be certain, and that is that Isaiah 2: 1-5 relates to "Judah and Jerusalem," and not to Utah and the Brighamite Church.

As a further proof of the badness of the application made by Bishop Whitney and his fellows of the text in question, we quote the following taken from a revelation given through Joseph the Seer, November 3d, 1831, and found in Doctrine and Covenants, page 316: "Let them, therefore, who are among the Gentiles, flee unto Zion. And let them who be of Judah. flee unto Jerusalem, unto the mountains of the Lord's house." All may see at a glance that the last sentence of this quotation is in perfect harmony with Isaiah 2: 1, 2, 2 Nephi 8: 4, and that it utterly refutes the theory of the Brighamite leaders.

It is always folly, and sometimes a hurtful and even fatal error, for men to frame a theory and then twist and bend and pervert the plain word of God to suit it. All should beware of such methods and of such teachers as either invent or use them.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS AND METHODS.

WE are frequently asked about the Sunday school; whether it is necessary, or permissible in our church work. In reply to this we answer that we believe it to be both permissible and necessary. As to the methods to be employed, and the persons by whom the work should be done, we insert the body of a letter lately received from Sr. Vina H. Goff, a practical, trained school teacher, and a Sunday school teacher and worker, as suggestive, with an endorsement thereof.

"And now that the desire to effect a permanent system for regular instruction has sprung up like a good seed, we do not want it to wither and die because we have not understanding hearts, neither do we wish to leave it untilled by the wayside for those who are opposed to any good work to pluck up or destroy. For these reasons some of those who now have the responsibility of the work on their shoulders are looking forward to a world's representation the coming year, and a general organization to be effected which may have control of the lesser organizations and be empowered to effect the publication of those books and periodicals necessary to good work throughout the schools. In relation to this mater I have already received letters asking for my opinions and co-operation.

"Of course the work has had a great deal of my consideration ever since I started in it; yet I find that where no guiding rule has been given by revelation concerning method of organization, &c., one will gain wisdom but slowly, and that I need instruction, or at least confirmation, concerning the conclusions I have at last come to, ere I feel safe in encouraging or rejecting a new step which will bring the greater good, or evil, according as it is taken. For this I now turn to you, as the one best qualified to give.

"When we drafted the system for Sunday Schools that has since been so largely copied by the Saints in the east, we thought of no other way than to make it a democratic system, leaving it to the wisdom of the people to select officers, and to vote upon questions of finance, management, &c. We found no command in the law specially providing for an organization to do the work contemplated to be done by this one, and likewise no command making it the special duty of any officer placed by revelation in the church to take upon himself the burden of instructing the young; hence our system.

"But since the organization has been effected we find that there are some sufficiently high in church authority to make their opinions worthy of full consideration who maintain that Sunday School teaching should be authoritative in the sense of coming directly from those holding the rights of priesthood, to those taught. Hence they believe that the general conference, district conferences, and branches should control Sunday School matters, some one holding the priesthood to be chosen at least to superintend the schools.

"In meditating closely upon the subject during the past two weeks the thoughts have come to me that perhaps the whole difficulty lies in a misconception both on the part of the formulators of the present Sunday School system and its opposers, of the legitimate field or province of Sunday School work. On the one hand it has been felt that the calling of the priesthood does no necessarily fit the holder either to teach the young himself, or to instruct the would-be teacher how to teach them. On the other, it is thought that only one holding the priesthood is fully qualified to teach classes who are mature, and hence that one so qualified should be at the head of each school.

"As I regard it now I believe that both ideas are true, and that the difficulty comes in trying to include both works under one management. I felt that there would arise a difficulty here, in the very beginning, but I could see no other way, then, than to include all in the one work, trusting to the guidance of the Spirit to straighten all in due time.

"I now believe that the true province of the Sunday School includes the instruction of the young only, from the little ones up to maturity, the same as in other schools; and that both the management of the schools and the work of teaching can be performed by those not holding the priesthood. The command to teach the children falls in all ages upon the parents, not upon the priesthood, and they may call to their assistance any person, or organization that they feel will do as well as themselves or better.

"But that the mature should leave off the study of the scriptures I can not for a moment admit; they are only just ready to study them from a different standpoint. Their work is not history now, but doctrine, wisdom and special guidance, and by some one they must be taught.

"We find that the law does provide that even elders, who have freed themselves up to the time from the blood of their generation, are to gain knowledge and wisdom in a school, to be established for that purpose; how much more important then is it that those not holding the priesthood, and especially the new converts, to whom all the doctrine is new, should have their faith grounded by a thorough knowledge of what is written for their guidance in the scriptures?

"But this I believe to be the work of the church. May not the establishment of the school of the prophets be taken as a type of other schools or meetings throughout the church? This work is not done by the sermons preached; it is not the province of the prayer and testimony meetings; neither of the business meetings of the branches. Could not classes meet once a week (any day or night) for the study of the Scriptures by subjects (as contemplated in the Theological or Gospel Research Classes) under the direction or management of the presidents of the branches, and thus fulfill all the needs of the mature? Please notice paragraph two, section ninety-four in Doctrine and Covenants, and tell me if you consider the school there referred to as being the school of the prophets? I have no means of knowing surely, but it seems to me it

"Now I have written of these things as I see them, asking your opinion concerning them. If the legitimate province of the Sunday School is the instructing of the young only, and if this labor can be properly performed by those not holding the priesthood, then the general principles of our system pertaining to this part of the work will stand, and I with others will be justified in taking steps to perfect and complete the system. If not, we should know it at once that we bring no further condemnation upon ourselves or any others

"If thus far our system is all right, and it would be wiser for the church authorities to take upon them the labor of organizing and instructing Research Classes, we should know this as soon as possible in order to eliminate this part of the work from our system here (thus freeing the Sunday School officers from a burden they can not well carry), and I believe the church at large should know it, that the good work of instruction all around may be begun and carried on properly."

The process of thought through which Sr. Goff has reached the conclusion that it is not absolutely certain that one must "hold the priesthood" to be qualified to teach in Sunday School; and that it does not necessarily fall upon the ministry to carry on Sunday School work, may have been followed by others, who like her have been observant as well as thoughtful. It does not detract from the qualifications of a preacher that he is a good teacher in the day, or Sunday School: but it is certain that many a good preacher and pulpiteer is not a successful teacher in either.

We concur in Sr. Goff's opinion that the children may be taught in the school, and Sunday School, by those qualified for that work, though they do not hold the priesthood; and that when those children pass into the maturer age of self-reliant and responsible manhood and womanhood, they will pass out of the province of the rod and the rule, into the sphere wherein schools of mutual research and communion and interchange of thought, experience and opinion, they may together grow in knowledge and wisdom unto power. This would be the sphere where the priesthood, and all that appertains to it, councils, meetings, and the schools of the prophets, would have its legitimate work, aided and abetted by written law, legislative methods and revelation pertaining to ministerial work.

If the presiding elder of branch, or district, is a qualified man and a willing and ready worker in the Sunday School work, he is eligible to that position. If he is not so qualified, though he may be an efficient and acceptable presiding church officer and minister he is not eligible if there be any other in the district or branch who is qualified, though he may not be an ordained man.

We now believe that the Sunday School work may be safely entrusted to those in the church who possess the qualifications of teachers, both men and women, and recommend to the Saints that they select these in preference to others to take charge of the schools. We are further of the opinion that the Sunday School work does not necessarily come under branch, or district jurisdiction, any further than the officers and members of the schools, who are church members are responsible to the church for their good behavior and moral conduct and teaching, as such members of the church. That in the conduct of the schools, the methods of teaching and rules governing the association of teachers and scholars in the work, they should be free from interference and domination from church officials, unless these officials are also members and officers of the schools.

If there should be in branch, or district, church officers who believe that the Sunday School work should be necessarily carried on by church officers and these only, we recommend to these men that they at once set themselves to work, and push forward themselves, get other workers out, organize them, gather the children and other members in, and do that which they think they only should do; always remembering that it is the "doer of the work" that is "blessed in his deeds;" not only to say, but to do according to that which is written" is the command. If they are not prepared to so work and help others to work in the great work of education, they will do well to get out of the way of the wheels of progression, and not hinder what they know ought to be done, but are too careless or too indolent to do. They are ministers of God who do his work among men.

THE SHEEP AND THE GOATS.

A WISE man has said, "It is by comparisons that we ascertain the difference which exists between things; and it is by comparisons also that we ascertain the general features of things; and it is by comparisons that we reach general propositions. In fact, comparisons are at the bottom of all philosophy. Without comparisons we can never generalize; without comparisons we never could go beyond isolated, disconnected facts." And, Paul advised "comparing spiritual things with spiritual."

Allowing these to be correct principles, and that they must be carefully observed in order to reach just and reliable conclusions, we need to examine all sides and everything pertaining to a subject, lest we be found of that class who "jump to conclusions" instead of reaching them by all "the law and the testimony" which relates to a given case; and this requires us to "dig deep" and labor patiently.

Matthew 25: 31-46 does not treat all sides of the great question of "eternal judgment," but only of that which relates to acts of mercy, benevolence, brotherly kindness and love. Neither does it intimate that the final destiny of man is fixed only and alone upon the acts there mentioned of the individuals named. The text was manifestly designed to teach, illustrate and forcefully present the fact that the class of works therein mentioned would be essential elements on which to base, and indispensible conditions on which to decide the final reward or punishment of those among whom Christ's "brethren" came and ministered "in Christ's stead." "Mothers," "sisters," or children are not mentioned here.

Mankind, "at the last day," are to be "judged out of the books" of God, according to what is written in them, and "by every word" that shall be found to app'y in their case. The "righteous," "sheep," the "blessed of my Father," are not to be adjudged such simply and only because they did benevolent deeds to the Saints, or even the "brethren," and for those deeds alone enter "into life eternal;" neither do the "goats," the finally "cursed" of God, go away into "everlasting punishment," "into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels," for merely and only failing to do such benevolent deeds. Whoever studies all the revealed word of God in respect to why, and how, and under what conditions men are to be adjudged and consigned to "everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels," will learn that it requires far more than the mere withholding of benevolent deeds to Christ's Saints or "brethren" to condemn them to that awful state; for none are consigned to it but such as hear and "know" and wilfully and unrepentantly refuse, reject, and resist Christ in his administrative and redemptive work.

Let the reader ask, "Who are they who, at the judgment seat of Christ, are pronounced 'cursed' and doomed to everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels?" and "the word of God" will with no uncertain sound answer, They are those who knew their duty toward God, toward Christ and his gospel, toward the "brethren" of Christ, and knowingly, wilfully, and persistently neglected, refused, and rejected them! Mark it well—they must in person, have attained actual knowledge of God, of Christ, of the "brethren," before they could sin to the extent that they shall be doomed to "everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels," For Paul assures us that the only class who can not finally repent are "those who were once enlightened, and have tasted of the heavenly gift, and were made partakers of the Holy Ghost, and have tasted the good word of God, and the powers of the world to come" (Heb. 6:4, 5), while the Book of Mormon says, "Will ye reject the words of the prophets? and will ye reject all the words which have been spoken concerning Christ, after so many have spoken concerning him; and deny the good word of Christ and the power of God, and the gift of the Holy Ghost, and quench the Holy Spirit? and make a mock of the great plan of redemption which hath been laid for you? Know ye not that if ye will do these things, that the power of the redemption and the resurrection which is in Christ will bring you to stand with shame and awful guilt before the bar of God? And according to the power of justice, for justice can not be denied, ye must go away into that lake of fire and brimstone, whose flames are unquenchable, and whose smoke ascendeth up for ever and ever, which lake of fire and brimstone is endless torment? O then, my beloved brethren, repent ye, and enter in at the straight gate, and continue in the way which is narrow, until ye shall obtain eternal life."-Book of Jacob 4:1. These texts enable us to see who are doomed, at the judgment bar of God, to be consigned "into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels;" also why they are thus "cursed." All the scriptures relating to this same matter are in harmony with the foregoing.

On the other hand, none can be the "sheep" "the righteous," the "blessed" of God, and enter "into life eternal" at the final judgment as promised in Matthew 25:46, except they first believe in Christ and become reconciled to his covenant and government; "For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish but have everlasting life." "This is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent."—John 3:16, and 17:3. This position is in harmony with the Book of Mormon testimonies quoted in a former editorial and found in Mosiah 11:15; Alma 3:5,6,8, also Book of Nephi 7:2,3, etc., etc.

It therefore follows that the "sheep," "righteous," and "blessed" of God, mentioned in Matthew 25:33, 34, are those who have the faith and the knowledge both of God and his Christ. This being true, it involves, necessarily, the fact that these had received Christ (therefore his gospel work and "kingdom") by the administration of Christ's "brethren" who (as Jesus promised them), were brought under the conditions named in verses 35 and 36,-"For I was a hungered, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked, and ye clothed me; I was sick, and ye visited me; I was in prison, and ye came unto me." The "mothers" "sisters," and children, are neither mentioned nor hinted at in this, but the "brethren" are, and in such a manner as to leave no doubt that the faithful ministry-"ambassadors for Christ"—are referred to. This is in harmony with the following to the ministry: "Shake off the dust of thy feet against those who receive thee not, . . . and wash thy feet as a testimony against them in the day of judgment." D. & C. 60: 4. See also section 74: 3, etc., etc.

As to "the kingdom prepared for" the "sheep," "righteous," "blessed" of God "from the foundation of the world" being that which the Saints will inherit, we no: only have the general analogies of the word of God in all the books, but we have specific statements to that effect "in the words which the Holv Ghost teacheth." and we dare neither deny them nor attempt to explain them away. We now quote them for at least the third time as proof, and we do so for the purpose of adjusting our faith and hope to what is there asserted in plain words, and not to fit them to any preconceived theory: "But, behold, the righteous, the Saints of the Holy one of Israel, they who have believed in the Holy one of Israel, they who have endured the crosses of the world, and despised the shame of it; they shall inherit the kingdom of God, which was prepared for them from the foundation of the world."—2 Nephi 6: 7. And to make surety doubly sure, we now add the words direct of our Shepherd and King and Judge: "And blessed is he that is found faithful unto my name at the last day; for he shall be lifted up to dwell in the king dom prepared for him from the foundation of the world."—Ether 1: 12. No amount of philosophising or theorizing can make these texts mean that the kingdom the Saints are finally to possess is vet to be prepared! That the Saints are to be prepared for it is a fact essential for all to know; and they should learn that works of mercy, benevolence, and love, are "ordained of God that we should walk in them."

This "kingdom" having been "prepared from the foundation of the world," it follows that "the one fold" of Christ, and the "Father's house" with its "many mansions," were also prepared; for these are interchangeable terms relating to the same general facts. And to this agree the words of our Lord when he says: "In my Father's house are many mansions."

-John 14:2. That "house," and those "mansions," were then in existence—therefore "prepared." In further proof read these texts: "And I, Moroni, . . . remember that thou hast said that thou hast prepared a house for man; yea, even among the mansions of thy Father; . . . wherefore except men shall have charity [love], they can not inherit that place which thou hast prepared in the mansions of thy Father."—Ether 3:3. Again: "If thou art faithful unto the end, thou shalt have a crown of immortality, and eternal life in the mansions which I have prepared in the house of my Father. Behold, and lo, these are the words of Alpha and Omega, even Jesus Christ"—Doc. Cov. 80: 1. And further: "And every man shall receive according to his own works, and his own dominion, in the mansions which are prepared."—Doc. Cov. 76:7. All these texts prove that "the kingdom," the "Father's house," and "the mansions" therein, are all "prepared," hence are not in process of preparation, nor awaiting future preparation. But "a place" for all these is being and to be prepared, namely, the new earth after Christ's second advent and after the final judgment-"the end"-when the earth becomes fitted for "the celestial kingdom" (Doc. Cov. 85: 4), according to the eternal purpose of God; and of which kingdom all others of glory are but parts and dependencies, subordinate in power, dominion and glory, and all in subjection to Christ as "King of kings, and Lord of lords," his kingdom filling "the whole earth" which in its celestialized state continues the abode and inheritance of the redeemed forever and forever. Matthew 25:31-46 reveals the essential importance of good works toward Christ and his faithful "brethren," and the Saints will do well to heed the lesson there taught lest they fail and fall.

As for the "kingdoms" and "glories" which will ultimately be found, after the judgment day, subject and subordinate to Christ and his faithful people, those matters may come up for consideration separately, and mainly on the prophetic and doctrinal facts relating thereto.

The chief thing for the Saints is to get at the practical matters—what is now and soon to be needed—"Be ye also ready!"

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. William Strange, president of the St. Thomas, Ontario, branch, wrote as follows August 15th:

"The work is going along nicely here. God is blessing us abundantly, and the branch is in good condition, compartively speaking."

Bro. A. H. Parsons wrote from Green's Landing, Maine, August 12th:

"The reunion at this place is progressing nicely. Four were baptized yesterday, and more are to follow. We had the largest attendence last night that ever assembled here—nearly six hundred."

Bro. E. Delong, under date of Aug. 14th, writing from Oceola, Michigan, says: "Our meetings were well attended last Sunday. I preached morning and evening in the Opera Hall, and on Monday I baptized two more. "The Saints are all united and every thing is moving nicely."

Sr. Ruth A. Turner, of Montrose, Iowa, has this to say in a late letter:

"I truly prize all the church publications and sincerely hope I may always be able to have them to read, for I find in them much to comfort and strengthen me in times of trial and affliction.

"There are a few of the sisters of this branch that meet each Thursday for prayer and have been much blessed at times. There are some who desire the prayers of the Union. Sr. Phebe Hall has been afflicted for a number of years, and desires its prayers; and Grandma Patten also asks the prayers of all, that she may be given patience and grace to endure the afflictions of life the few more years that she may have to remain

Bro. Leonard Scott wrote us from Warren, Ohio, the 16th ult., saying:

"This place presents a very important outlook. Some people very favorable; some ready for baptism. Satan's majesty displayed wonderfully, but truth "goes marching on." The editors are alarmed. Pray for us in this field."

"THE ELECTION IN UTAH.

"The remarkable feature of last Monday's election was the Liberal victory in Salt Lake City, although a notable increase in the Gentile vote is shown in every precinct in the territory. To say that the Liberals are jubilant is putting it in the mildest way possible and to say that the Mormons are gloomy is an equally mild description of their condition."

"The Lord God worketh not in darkness. He doeth not anything save it be for the benefit of the world for he loveth the world, even that he layeth down his own life that he may draw all men unto him."-Book of Mormon, page 100.

The Idaho Enterprise of Malad City, the 10th inst. has this to say:

"Joseph Smith, the prophet, and Elder Anthony are creating quite a little flurry in religious circles."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WILL some one donate or sell to the Herald Office volumes 20 and 21 of the Millennial Star? We want them for use in the Editorial department. Later volumes would also be acceptable.

Bro. John F. Lemburg of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, requests that some of the Elders preach for them at an early time.

Bro. R. C. Evans wrote August 15th, from Waterford, Ontario, that he had been laboring there since the 4th inst. When he began he did not know whether the large gatherings that first greeted him there during his debate with Rev. Wilkinson would again greet him or not, but the Saints church did not afford sufficient room for his audiences, as on Sundays many had to stand outside. He baptized three heads of families, which increases the number to forty-two baptized since the debate. More are to follow and Bro. Evans remarks that he would be willing to pass through the experiences of another debate if forty-two more baptisms would result from it.

Bro. Jesse Seelye of Savannah, Wayne county, New York, writes appreciatingly of the good tidings that reach him through the HERALD. Bro. Seelye has for some time remained almost alone in representing the faith in western New York, except as aided by Bro. C. G. Lanphear; but we hope at no distant day to see an able corps of the active ministry occupying that long neglected but inviting field.

Bro. J. W. Perkins wrote from Campbell postoffice, Indian Territory, August 17th, reciting the sudden and unexpected death of his wife, the loss of whose love and companionship he greatly mourns. He was alone and without assistance at the time. He deeply feels the loss sustained and requests prayers that he may so live that he may be worthy to meet with the loved one wno has preceded him. Pray for him.

Sr. M. F. Squires writes from Yarborough, Grimes county, Texas, requesting that any Saints or elders who may be able to visit her family and herself will do so, as they are alone in faith there and surrounded by opposition. Bro. W. W. Squires, her husband, has been afflicted for over twenty years, but she nevertheless rejoices in the great latter day work and toils on cheerfully in the labor of supporting her children and family. She requests prayers in their behalf.

President W. W. Blair left Lamoni on Wednesday, the 21st inst., for a two weeks' preaching tour in South-western Iowa. He expects to labor some in central Illinois, later on.

THE CANAL OF JOSEPH.

How many of the engineering works of the nineteenth century will there be in existence in the year 6000? Very few, we fear, says Engineering, and still less those that will continue in the far-off age to serve a useful purpose. Yet there is at least one great undertaking conceived and ex-ecuted by an engineer which during the space of 4,000 years has never ceased its office, on which the life of a fertile province absolutely depends to-day. We refer to the Bahr Joussuf—the ca-nal of Joseph—built, according to tradition, by the son of Jacob, and which constitutes not the least of the many blessings he conferred on Egypt during the years of his prosperous rule. This canal took its rise from the Nile at Asiut and ran nearly parallel with it for nearly 250 miles, creeping along under the western cliffs of the Nile valley, with many a bend and winding, until at length it gained an eminence, as compared with the river bed, which enabled it to turn westward through a narrow pass and enter a district which was otherwise shut off from the fertilizing floods on which all vegetation in Egypt depends.

The northern end stood seventeen feet above low Nile, while at the southern end it was at an equal elevation with the river. Through this cut ran a perennial stream, which watered a province named the Fayoum, endowing it with fertility and supporting a large population. In the time of the annual flood a great part of the canal was under water, and the river's current would rush in a more direct course into the pass, carrying with it the rich silt which takes the place of manure and keeps the soil in a state of constant productiveness.

All this, with the exception of the tradition that Joseph built it, can be verified today, and it is not mere supposition or rumor.

Many accounts have been written by Greek and Roman historians, such as Herodotus, Strabo, Mutianus, and Pliny, and repeated in monkish legends or portrayed in the maps of the middle ages, which agree with the folk lore of the district. These tales explained that the canal dug by the ancient Israelites served to carry the surplus waters of the Nile into an extensive lake lying south of the Fayoum and so large that it not only modified the climate, tempering the arid winds of the desert and converting them into the balmy airs which nourished the vines and the olives into a fulness and fragrance unknown in any part of the country, but also added to the food supply such an immense quantity of fish that the royal prerogative of the right of piscary at the great weir was valued at $250,000 annually. This lake was said to be 450 miles round, and to be navigated by a fleet of vessels, while the whole circumference was the scene of industry and prosperity.-Chicago Times.

Kome Column. Mothers'

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"Still when the sun of summer burns. My longing for the hills returns. I go to meet the winds of morn, Blow down the hill-gaps mountain-born, Breathe scent of pines and satisfy The hunger of a lowland eye."

WILL THEY LOVE ME?

I have toiled for these, the children Of my little household band, Through their helpless hours of childhood. With a constant, loving hand: Striving in the right to lead them, Carefully their lives to mold; Now the question comes before me-Will they love me when I'm old?

When my brow is old and wrinkled, Drawn with thought and racking care, When the threads of silvery whiteness Gleam like snow amid my hair, When my eyes grow dim and faded. Scarce their faces can behold, And my step is slow and faltering-Will they love me when I'm old?

Will they guide my tottering footsteps? Smooth the few remaining years, With a patience and devotion That life's failing pathway cheers? When I'm old and worn and weary, Will their love around me fold? Robbing even Death of terrors-Will they love me when I'm old?

I have seen old parents slighted, Treated with neglect, disdain: Cruel jest and mocking laughter Filling their worn hearts with pain; Yet I knew e'en then their longing, Those same heedless ones to fold. Safe from sin's sure retribution-Will mine love me when I'm old?

Others I have seen attending Aged parents with fond care; Dropping hand or loving kisses On their brow or snowy hair; And I wonder will my children My last days with love enfold. Pay back what I gave their childhood-Will they love me when I'm old?-Sel.

In repeating the statements of one person to another, we take upon ourselves a resposibility which is frequently quite overlooked. Many of the misunderstandings and difficulties between people, arising constantly in all departments of life, are to be traced to the forgetting of this responsibility. It is the responsibility of safe transmission of thought, without damage or breakage, from one soul to another. Whether we voluntarily undertake the transportation and delivery, or are commissioned so to do, makes no difference; we are responsible for the ideas we receive, handle, and deliver, in both cases. It is surprising that people are always so ready to tell us what another says, or to report the views of another, when they know that their possession of the other's thought is at the best uncertain, and that their facility and skill in transmitting it are by no means beyond question. They certainly do not handle another's transcendental goods, his purposes, intentions, hopes, fears, relations, ideas, and all his personal possessings, as carefully as they do their own. And by their carelessness they are often the cause of mishaps or injuries which they can never repair. Successful thought-transference is, indeed, a very difficult art. To get the mental picture substantially perfect and complete out of one mind, and then to present it successfully to another mind, with all its proportions, attitudes, relations, perspectives, lights and shadows; to impress on the peculiar individuality of the listener no more, no less, than exactly the whole truth, is a difficult and delicate undertaking. So many and various kinds of allowances, reductions, or enlargements, must be made in taking the matter out of one set of circumstances and out of one kind of personality, and adjusting it to the other. Every man before he repeats what he supposes another has said, and thus assumes the responsibility of injury and damage to an absent one, ought to be sure that his camera has focused a substantially true and accurate picture of the other man's mind; and then he ought to be sure that he is able to transfer this picture to the listeners mind with substantial fidelity. - Sel.

DENNIS, Mass., Aug. 8th.

Sisters of the Home Colmmn:-I have been cheered many times by reading your letters in the Herald, and have withheld my mite knowing there were others who could fill the space more worthily than I. But I want to do whatever falleth to my hands to do with an eye single to the glory of God. "Freely ye have received, freely give."

I have received the knowledge that the work I am engaged in is the work of God, and I desire, as far as I may, to impart that knowledge unto others. The Herald is the only preacher I have, and its contents are as food to the hungry soul. Day by day I seem to grow stronger in this work, and I rejoice in the angel's message, the restored gospel. O, the good we might do if the requirements of the gospel were lived up to! I want to be willing to sacrifice for the work's sake, that more laborers may be sent forth. A few of us (sisters) meet together weekly and strive to let our light shine, but we need preaching to get the truth before the people.

I have not joined the Prayer Union fearing I might not be able to keep the hour having little ones that need constant attention, but I believe it to be a power for good. Your sister,

BESSIE M. SEARS.

Ellis, Mo., Aug. 6th.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column: - I have been thinking so long I would write a few lines to your paper. The Herald is a good visitor and every week I love to read it. I don't know what I would do without it. The missionary work is strengthening to me. In the last Herald I read a vision in which I was very much interested. I refer to the insane woman going back and forward on the public road. She is the church of Utah, Bro. Joseph, and as you are there now, I hope you may tie her, and call on your strong men to make the coffin. Make it stout and put her in it, then nail her up tight. Talk to them now, Bro. Joseph, in plain words.

I have an interest in the Utah people, and was once a member of that church. I joined the Reorganized church three years ago last June; myself and two of my children were baptized by Bro. R. J. Anthony, and moved to Missouri last February. I left two of my oldest girls in Utah. I have eight children. My husband is not a member of our church. Pray for me, sisters, that I may be faithful to the covenant I have made. I know this to be the work of God and have never doubted it from the first time I heard its elders preach. We have had no preaching here yet, but I hope we will have some soon. I pray the Lord to bless the land of Zion for the sake of his people.

From your sister in the faith, GUNNEL HENNINGS.

BUFFALO GAP, South Dak., July 29th. Dear Sister Frances: - I will endeavor to write to the Home Column again, as we have no meetings out here in this new country, but are hoping some of God's servants will be sent here soon. Oh, how I wish I could meet with the Saints when the Sabbath comes! How my heart beats with delight when I meditate upon God's holy word! I have been blessed many times in my troubled hours. I stand alone, as my husband does not belong to the church. Oh, how I love to read the sisters' letters in the Home Column! We do not take the Herald as we are too poor, but my sister takes it and I get to read some of them. My husband reads them too, but he says there is so much in the Bible that he can not understand. I would ask the Saints to pray for him that his mind may be enlightened, and pray for me that I may stand firm and be faithful and set a good example before my little one, that he may learn to love and serve his Creator while young. I am made to rejoice when I sing that blessed hymn, "Behold, the great Redeemer comes, to bring his ransomed people home." Oh, that I may be one of the ransomed ones! I desire the prayers of all the Saints. prayers or an one call.

Your sister in the one faith,

A. M. J.

It was principally for the lonely, scattered ones that the Prayer Union was formed. If you desire to join, you have but to send in your name, and when observing the hour you will be comforted with the thought that hundreds of the faithful ones are praying for the same things, at the same time with you.-Ed.

FOUNTAIN GREEN, Ill., Aug. 2d.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column:—I thought I would write a few lines this morning, thus putting in my mite. I see but few letters from the sisters; perhaps they like myself-think that they have nothing of importance to write. I like to read the letters from the sisters and also the letters from the elders in the Herald. They are strengthening and comforting to the lonely ones. I wish that more would write, for it is cheering to hear of the success of the elders and also the spread of the gospel in these last days. We seldom hear any preaching. Alexander Smith was here last winter and preached a few weeks for us, and since then we have had none. I wish he would come again. I made a visit to Burlington and met with the Saints there once, and heard a very interesting discourse by Bro. Johnson, and after preaching partook of the sacrament, and had a short testimony meeting in which we were all made to rejoice. There were but a few of us, but the words of the Savior were verified, for the Spirit of the Lord was in our midst and our hearts were filled to overflowing. I wish that I could be at the reunion of the Saints, and I hope it may be the means of doing much good. I hope they will remember in their prayers those that have not the privilege of meeting with them.

If the Lord spares my life I mean to be with the Saints at the April Conference. Pray for me that I may be with you then, for the prayers of the Saints avail much.

Dear sisters, write often; bear your testimonies; hold up your light so that others may see your good works and walk therein. I think that you are all doing a good work in your Sunday Schools by training the young.

I think that the Autumn Leaves is grand. This is a great work that we have enlisted in, and let us work while the day lasts.

KATHARINE SALISBURY.

DEER CREEK, Neb., July 20th.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column:-I have thought many times I would like to write you, but my talent was so small that it would be useless to put my ignorance in print. If, however, we should all sit with folded hands or hide our talent in the earth, what will be the sentence of the Great Judge when he shall call us to an account? Let us not bury our talent in the earth because we have but one, but let us each strive to be more diligent and arouse ourselves from slumbering and trim our lamps that we may be ready to meet the Bridegroom with joy when he comes. I do not say this to those that already have their lamps burning brightly, for their brightness has often brought joy and peace to me. May God bless them that their rays may shine forth more widely until the end; but to those that are cast down with troubles and cares and discouragements of this life, like myself. I have long been thinking I must do something for the cause of Christ for I do believe that this is the true and everlasting gospel of Jesus Christ set up in these last days to draw his children together, for he said, "My sheep hear my voice and they know me, and they will follow me."

There are many sisters we would like to hear from through the Column. I think the "Home Column" is just what we need to cheer and encourage each other on in this pilgrimage of earth, and often when reading it my heart rejoices to hear of the many blessings the Lord is pouring out upon his people in these last days. When I look back and see the darkness that hung over our home but a few short years ago, I can but thank God for his great goodness to me and mine, in bringing us into his great and marvelous light.

I do not have as much time to read as I would like, but the more I read the more I can understand, and through the mercies of God I am still striving to press my way onward and upward. Pray for me, dear sisters, that I may overcome the snares of the tempter that have been pressing me in thought.

From your sister in the one faith,

LORINDA LEWIS.

COPY OF A LETTER.

RICHLAND, Dakota, April 17th.

Dear Brother and Family:-I must write to you and tell you what we are about to do. Miles has taken a notion to move to Montana, so we are selling out as fast as we can and expect to start the middle of May-our boys are all going along. We are turning all our stuff into cattle and will drive them through; will have three covered wagons and one not covered. Harry will be married before we leave, to Lotty Fritz, and she goes too. One week from next Saturday we auction off all our household goods, and then comes a trying time for me. I was getting quite smart after sending for the elders, so I was doing my work alone; but this move upset me so I could not sleep, and I am almost in bed again. I feel now if I ever needed your prayers and help from God it is now, that I may be spared to get through and locate. I am trying to have them go to Deer Lodge, or where Bro. Gomer Reese lives, have written to Bro. Clapp and him both, and think we will go as near there as we can find land. We will drive through two hundred head of cattle in all, and three of our boys can take land, and Willie, the youngest, will soon be old

What do you think of our move? Richland has had all the gospel preached to them time after time, and not one seemed to want any of it; so I feel as if I can do no more to help them, and I leave them with my conscience clear, praying God to be merciful to them. The M. E. church has dwindled away ever since Bro. Wight was so insulted here; they can hardly get a congregation. When we leave it will be smaller yet. I had made up my mind to be at the Reunion, next fall if spared; but now I shall never set eyes on any of you again. I tried to have my folks go south, but it was no use; perhaps it is best as it is. Your prayers have always benefitted me; now I ask again that you bring my case before the Lord, that I may either be called away before starting or be spared to get through, just as God willeth-it would be so hard to bury one along the road. I shall ever try to serve the Master in my weakness, and am still pleading God to shew my children their duty to God and man. Remember me to Sr. Derry and all the family.

Yours,

LILLY J. SMITH.

Editors Herald:—Myself and a few companions have been anxiously watching the columns of the Herald to see if we could see anything further concerning the building of a college for the Saints' children at Lamoni, but in vain!

We learned to know what a rebuke meant, as we passed through a two years' course in a Kansas college, and we earnestly desire the association of the Saints while we travel the already hard road of education.

I wanted to go to school somewhere, and when I heard that the Saints were endeavoring to build a college, my happiness at once knew no bounds. I am willing to contribute my little mite and will continue in the college until I graduate. Let us hear how the cause is progressing.

Yours in hopes,

W. D. JEMISON.

[Subscriptions are coming in but very slowly. Those in charge of the project will meet at Lamoni, Iowa, Friday, September 6th, to further consider the matter, and all interested are invited to attend or send in their subscriptions.]

HIGHMORE, South Dakotah, Aug. 15th. Bro. Blair:-I still have the same desire to press on in the good work, which I know, and of which I am ever ready to testify that it is of God. I am almost alone out here except my wife and children; but the Herald is a welcome visitor and a great comfort to me. I preach to the people whenever the opportunity is afforded me. On the second of October, 1888, I was called upon to preach the funeral sermon of Mr. Joseph Hinds. I took my text from Isaiah, "Thy dead men shall live." On August 7th, 1889, I was requested to preach the funeral sermon of Mary Hinds, who after several months of sickness passed away. So father and daughther have gone to the land beyond. I had good liberty of speech and the people were attentive. We have our troubles and persecutions to contend with, but we have been and still are greatly encouraged to look above the things of this world to our heavenly Father, who is the Author and Giver of all good and who is ever ready to hear and answer prayers.

CHARLES SHEEN.

NEEL, Nebraska, Aug. 12th.

Bro. W. W. Blair: We write you in regard to the progress of the work in this part of the vineyard. Since our report to conference we have been keeping up a pretty steady preaching in three localities. At one place we had rather slim attendance and not much interest, but baptized one good, honest, young lady, the daughter of Joshua Lane. You will remember Joshua; he resided at Little Sioux while you lived there. At the other two places where we have been holding meetings there was a good interest and a house full to preach to generally, and to our great joy we found one good old-timer, who joined the church in 1835, by the name of Joseph Gibbons, who had never heard of the existence of the Reorganization, and I tell you it would have done your soul good to see how quick his soul was lit up wifh the fire of God's Holy Spirit when he heard anew the glorious principles of the gospel, and yesterday he renewed his covenant by passing through the waters of baptism. Previous to attending to the ordinance we again appointed a meeting at this place where not much interest had been manifested, as it was near to the beautiful waters of what is called French Creek, that we wished to use. Here we found quite a congregation, more than we expected.

I will here state that we have been assisted by one Bro. Samuel Payne, just emigrated this spring from Kansas into this section of country to take land. He is a priest. We now number about twenty members in this locality, and expect to meet soon to consider the propriety of organizing a branch.

Bro. Madden wishes it said that he does not expect to be idle in the work of the Master, if he is not heard from often; and I will say that I feel the same.

It is due Bro. Madden to state here that he has done the principal part of the preaching since harvest set in. Your fellow-laborers,

J. B. LYTLE, SILAS J. MADDEN.

MALAD, Idaho, August 16th.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—We held meeting at St. John's last evening in the Mormon meeting-house; had a large audience, many listening at the door and the windows. They were very kind to us, lighted the lamps and treated us respectfully. I had the best of liberty in addressing them upon the main question which I discussed from the idea given in "One Wife or many," giving our views, affirmatively, on the marriage question. "It is nothing but Bible," was the comment. One old lady observed to another woman, "I don't see anything in what he has said." The one to whom she spoke said, "Well, if you can not see anything in that, you will have to throw away all your books."

Brn. Morgan Jones, H. R. Evans and others here are impressed that a striking reaction is setting in. Certain it is that we have large audiences, and the best of attention; indeed I have never been listened to better than since I came into the territory here, and in Utah. There is an apparent disposition to hear us.

Bro. R. J. Anthony and I have studiously avoided anything that could be construed into harshness or abuse. I had a large audience at Samaria last Wednesday week, and here on Sunday last. One will speak here to-night and one at Cherry Creek to-morrow night. The shepherds have apparently abandoned the sheep to us Josephite wolves. Bro. Anthony and I took dinner to day at Sr. Nicholas'. Prof. Woozely, (of music,) was present. We had a long and pleasant chat; two years ago he would not have cared to speak to us.

It is still hot and awful dry. Dust lies like a pall on everything and is so deep in the roads that they are rutted, as in winter with us. Prospects for hearing here are great. Some queer things are creeping out. Yours,

JOSEPH SMITH.

PARRISH, Ill., August 10th.

Editors Herald:-I have a mortgage on the new Methodist Church house here in Parrish, with the privilege of our elders preaching any time except on their regular appointments, every third Sunday at three o'clock p. m., and we would like for any of our elders traveling through this way to stop. They will be kindly cared for and have good attentive congregations out to hear, as the people are greatly interested in the doctrine we teach. Several are almost ready to obey the gospel. Bro. I. M. Smith was down here a short time ago and preached about three weeks in this vicinity; most of the time here in the Baptist's house-so the Baptists and Methodists are all tore up and want Throgmorton, of Mt. Vernon, Illinois, their big gun of the Baptists, to meet one of our elders in debate. So he agrees to come down the last of October or fore part of November if he can agree on propositions. So Bro. I. M. Smith is corresponding with him to see if they can agree on the propositions.

A. Burlison.

SPANISH FORK, Utah, Aug. 13th.

Bro. W. W. Blair:-You will find enclosed three dollars, for which please send me the Herald twelve months, and also a complete set of tracts bound. I will also say this much for the Herald that it has been a great help to me in studying the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants, and also the Bible-especially the volumes one, two, three and four, which I happened to get from a member of the Brighamlte church last June, one year ago, which he let me have, perhaps thinking it would be a means of confirming me in the doctrine of said church with which I was somewhat disgusted; especially the doctrines connected with polygamy and celestial marriage. I am thankful to my heavenly Father that we have been led out of the soul crushing and conscience-killing system of Utah Mormonism and are now connected with the Reorganized Church since March the 26th, of this year. My wife and I desire to do all the good we can in building up God's kingdom in these latter days. To this end we will by the help of God, work and pray.

Yours in the gospel,

J. Y. MASON.

MALAD, Idaho, Aug. 11th.

Bro. Blair: — Held meeting at Samaria on Wednesday night; had the whole settlement out to hear. Met in Bro. James Thomas' yard on the lawn. Held meeting last night; R. J. Anthony spoke excellently. Hold meetings all this week at St. John, Elkhorn, and here.

Joseph Smith.

MINNEAPOLIS, Kan., Aug. 14th.

Dear Herald:-I am young in this latter day work, having been baptized by Br. David Winn, May 19th, and confirmed by Br. Joseph Luff, June 2d, while at Kansas City, Missouri; yet I feel like bearing my testimony with the rest of the Saints to the work. While I have not had the manifestations of the Spirit that others testify of, yet I can truly say that I believe the work to be God's work, and have had more enjoyment and comfort during the short time that I have been in it than in all of my religious experience up to this time. I had been a member of the United Brethren for about nineteen years, but there is a something in this doctrine that furnishes food for the soul—it is so completely in harmony with the word of God and His mercy that I can not see how any one can help but believe it. I felt convinced of its truth the first sermon I heard preached, which was at Kansas City last fall, while there at work. I think the first sermon I heard was by Br. David Winn. I was so well satisfied with the doctrine preached. and pleased with the appearance of the people that I continued going to the meetings and heard Brn. Wm. Sparling, Henry Sparling, J. N. White, A. White, (and others whose name I can not recall), preach; so that before I had attended the Church very long I was so well satisfied that I bought quite a number of the books and commenced to investigate, which investigation resulted as above stated. I love the Herald and am eager for its appearance each week. I love to read the testimonies given each week, they do me so much good and strengthen me in the faith.

I will write again sometime and relate a portion of my experience that may be a little amusing to the Saints, and also show what kind of an opinion some people have formed concerning the Saints

To all the brethren and sisters I feel to say, be faithful and let your light shine. The light shining through the brethren and sisters at Kansas City brought me into the fold, and your light will bring others in. I am doing what I can in talking and in letting out my books and papers to others. I am the only member in this part of the country that I know of. I would like the address of the nearest elder, as I would like to have one preach here as soon as he can make arrangements.

In love for the truth,

HENRY RESCH.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Aug. 14th.

Bro. Blair:—We are not altogether idle here. Last Sunday Bro. Geo. S. Lincoln and I went to Irvington. I stopped at Niles and baptized two young persons, and George went on to Irvington to fill an appointment at 1:30. I followed to fill another appointment at 1:30. We confirmed the two baptized, also blessed two children. In the evening at 7:30 Bro. Lincoln spoke from Matt. 13:36-40 in San Francisco with good liberty. We are all pleased to hear of Bro. Joseph's preaching in Utah. May God bless him and all who labor in the interest of the gospel of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

C. A. PARKIN.

BANDERA, Texas, Aug. 13th.

Bro. Blair:—I baptized six at Stockdale after the debate. The Baptist concluded he would not debate. There was sixty dollars subscribed to build a church house when I left Stockdale.

Please allow me to correct some mistakes in Bro. L. Wight's letter in Herald for August 3d: After the word "governments" near the middle of second column it should read 2 Peter 5: 1, after "darkness," same column, it should read Matthew 11; "2 Peter 2: 12" should read 2 Peter 2: 1, 2. In third column it reads "Mr. Banta then resorted to Acts 19," etc. It should read Acts 19: 1-6 and it and 1 Cor. 12: 13 following should occur after the sentence-"Bro. Currie showed the fallacy of such conclusion, by showing that it took both Spirit and water to constitute a birth." Then follows the above quotations. I do not remember the scripture Mr. Banta used to prove Christ's reign on the earth, but we know he had plenty such proof. In same column after sentence "God showed Peter how he must put off his body, 1 Peter," should read, 2d Peter.

In second column where it reads "for 'tis His fullness when perfected, Phil. 1: 9" should read Phil. 2: 9. I may have made some mistakes in furnishing Bro. Wight a synopsis of quotations used, etc., etc.

The Saints are moving on nicely here, and love toward each other seems to be one of their characteristics. I am often asked "who is over this mission?" but I can not tell, for I failed to find anything but "Texas" used in the report of appointments made, etc. Have we no one over us? We need some one loving and kind like Bro. Roberts to go to for advice often. I ask to be prayed for that God may remove skepticism from me, for it cheats me out of many blessings. I believe I try to keep right, but I suppose I do not try hard enough. Sister Walker wrote me once that "morbid fear" was my enemy, and it is too true.

Sometimes when out in the harvest-field I enjoy several spiritual gifts and my cup like Bro. David's of old "runs over." After all this, doubts come, fear rises, and the fruits are discontentment and unhappiness. O, if God would forever banish it all from me how happy I would be! I sincerely ask the prayers of all the Saints.

I wish to say to the Elders in Texas that the Saints in Manchester, Red River county, need help. Address J. P. Brannon.

Yours in hope,

J. A. CURRIE, Jun.

DAVIS CITY TENT MEETING.

The purposed Tent Meeting of the Decatur district was held in the Park (a natural and beautiful growth of timber on the river bank) at Davis City, Iowa, beginning August 2d, and closing August 11th. Through the kindness of the brethren of the Fremont and Pottawattamie districts, we were favored with the use of their tent for the occasion.

On the evening of the 2d an organization was effected by choosing Elders J. R. Lambert and H. A. Stebbins to preside, Elder M. H. Forscutt as chorister, and William McIntosh, J. H. McVay and R. J. Harmon, as police. No one being continuously present who could well act as secretary none was appointed, but Bro. H. A. Stebbins took notes of the sermons and of the proceedings.

At the first service, after prayer by Bro. J. R. Lambert, Bro. H. A. Stebbins gave a sketch of the faith and doctrine of the Church in reply to the request in Acts 28: 22, "We desire to hear of thee what thou thinkest." Bro. M. H. Forscutt followed briefly from the words, "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good."

Saturday, 3d. At half past ten Bro. H. A. Stebbins offered prayer, and the time was occupied by Brn. J. R. Lambert, John Landers and A. W. Reese in short addresses upon various points of the gospel system. In the afternoon prayer was offered by Bro. A. W. Reese. Sermon by Bro. J. R. Lambert from James 2: 12. The evening sermon was by Bro. M. H. Forscutt upon the spirit of man being pre-existent and undying.

Sunday 4th. The nine o'clock prayer meeting was in charge of Brn. H. A. Stebbins and T. J. Bell. It was a pleasant and peaceful session. At half-past ten Bro. I. L. Rogers offered prayer. The sermon was by Bro. R. S. Salyards. He used the parable of the sower and the question of the jailer as the basis of his discourse. The afternoon service was opened by prayer by Bro. J. P. Dillen. Bro. M. H. Forscutt preached from Romans 6: 3 as a text, baptism by water being the theme. Prayer in the evening by Bro. T. Wellington. The Gift of the Holy Ghost was Bro. J. R. Lambert's subject.

The Sunday services were largely attended, and the choir of the Lamoni branch was present and gave valuable assistance in the singing and instrumental part of the service.

Monday 5th. The prayer meeting was in charge of Bro. I. L. Rogers. Bro. Thomas Wellington preached the morning sermon, assisted by Bro. H. R. Harder. The visitation of angels was the subject. The afternoon meeting was in charge of Bro. J. R. Lambert. Bro. Duncan Campbell preached from Acts 2: 36, concerning the great debt that we owe to God and his Son.

In the evening Bro. H. A. Stebbins preached upon the office work of the Holy Spirit, as spoken by Christ in John 4: 16; 14: 26; 15: 26; 16: 13.

Tuesday 6th. The prayer meeting was opened with prayer by Bro. E. Sparks. Bro. H. A. Stebbins had charge. At half-past ten Bro. D. Campbell offered prayer. Bro. John Shippy, by special request, preached upon the apostasy at Nauvoo, and showed that the rise of the Reorganized Church was by inspiration of God. At half-past two the subject of the resurrection was discussed by Bro. H. R. Harder. He was assisted by Bro. Shippy. In the evening Bro. W. T. Bozarth offered prayer and Bro. A. H. Smith preached upon the laying on of hands as a gospel ordinance.

Wednesday 7th. The morning testimony meeting was in charge of Bro. H. A. Stebbins. Prayer by Bro. John Denio. At half-past ten Bro. James McDiffitt offered prayer. Bro. J. R. Lambert preached from the text, "Lay not up for yourselves treasures on earth." He presented and defended the law of tithing as found in the Word of God. Bro. H. A. Stebbins preached in the afternoon, assisted by Bro. William Anderson. The text was 1 Cor. 2: 21, and chiefly the subject was, What is it to be saved? In the evening Bro. A. H. Smith offered prayer, and Bro. M. H. Forscutt continued upon the subject of baptism by water.

Thursday 8th. Prayer meeting in charge of Bro. I. L. Rogers. Bro. John Hawley preached at half-past ten from the text, "Enter ye in at the straight gate," showing the necessity of men following Christ into the true fold. Afternoon service, prayer by Bro. H. A. Stebbins. Sermon by Bro. A. H. Smith. His text was Rev. 21: 1, the subject discussed being the earth as the heaven of the Saints when it is made new and glorious. The evening prayer was by Bro. C. H. Jones, and the sermon by Bro. W. T. Bozarth. Continued revelation was the theme of the speaker.

Friday 9th. Brn. John Hawley and E. E. Marshall had charge of the social meeting. The forenoon sermon was by Bro. J. Alfred Davis, upon the five dispensations in which God has given the gospel unto men. He was assisted in the services by Bro. W. T. Bozarth. In the afternoon prayer by Bro. I. L. Rogers. Bro. C. H. Jones preached one of his peculiar sermons by which the saints were edified and comforted. The evening sermon was from Bro. M. H. Forscutt, in continuation of Bro. Davis' discourse upon the five dispensations of the gospel.

Saturday 10th. Prayer meeting in charge of Brn. A. H. Smith and C. H. Jones. Prayer by Bro. M. H. Forscutt. A very good time was had. At half past ten Bro. E. E. Marshall offered prayer, and Bro. John Shippy preached in advocacy of the Book of Mormon, taking Acts 17:26 for a text. The afternoon sermon was by Bro. W. W. Blair, assisted by Bro. D. Campbell. Bro. Blair spoke of the need of doctrine, and of the ministration of angels in restoring the gospel; also of his experiences in preaching in Decatur county in 1860, and what the Lord had done for his people in the Reorganized Church. In the evening Bro. H. A. Stebbins had charge. Bro. A. S. Cochran offered prayer. The sermon by Bro. J. R. Lambert was in defense of the latter-day work as being the work of of God, and the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants as containing his word.
Sanday 11th. Social meeting in charge of

Brn. C. H. Jones and A. S. Cochran. Many testimonies were born to the work and to the goodness of God. The sermon that followed was from Bro. M. H. Forscutt. He was assisted by Bro. W. W. Blair. The subject was the Church of Christ and its organization as a complete body being necessary, both in the days of Christ and whenever and wherever it shall exist. At half past two, after prayer by Bro. John Hawley, Bro. W. T. Bozarth preached upon the principles of Christ's gospel, arguing that every portion was essential to salvation. At the evening service prayer by Bro. C. H. Jones. Bro. Alex. H. Smith spoke from two texts, namely, "Beware of false prophets," and, "Surely the Lord God will do nothing but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets."-Amos 3:7.

At the close of this discourse a hymn was sung and Bro. H. A. Stebbins pronounced the final

There was a very large attendance upon the closing day, fully twenty-five hundred being present during the afternoon, besides the moving hundreds that were coming and going all the time. We were expecting a few more speakers, and some who came were not able to do so until late. However to all who did come and aid us we feel grateful for services rendered. Many saints were cheered and blessed, and hundreds of others who never before heard the true faith did so this time, because they would attend an outdoor service when they would not one within.

A report of receipts and expenses will be presented to the next session of the district conference.

SET OURSELVES RIGHT.

WHY DO WE NOT SET OURSELVES RIGHT BEFORE THE WORLD?

In reading a volume of Joseph Cook's Boston Monday lectures I noticed this prelude to his seventy-first lecture: "One day Prince Bismarck, rolling in triumph toward Paris, had leisure to visit a country school-house; and it was there that he found what he called the saddest sight he saw in all France. What was that sight? Some widow with a starving family? Some maimed soldier, the only support of a distant home, about to be left in destitution? Some human form riddled with bullets? None of these, but a set of school-books filled with lies! 'I took up the volumes,' says this statesman, 'and found that the tritest facts as to the religious history of Europe were falsified by Romish editors. Scholarship would stand aghast on every third or fourth page, at the monstrosity of the misrepresentations of acknowledged historical truth.' To feed the rising generation with falsehood, Bismarck thought a sadder thing than battle fields. My friends, I hold in my hands a book, copies of which were lately distributed in quantities at Deer Island, in Massachusetts Bay yonder, by Romish priests. It is important for me, as an outlook committee, to observe what passes underneath the surface of society; and I know what a formidable frankness I am exercising now. But it is not a bitter frankness; it is in the interest of straightforward discussion, and even of peace; for certainly it is in the interest of peace to let it be known that there are some things which can not be done in America, and which therefore had better not be attempted! Opening this volume I find not only the boldest violations of historical veracity, but passages plainly intended to inflame uneducated readers."

Then follows a page of quotations from pages 19, 38, 55, 64, 73, 81 and 100 of the work spoken of, containing statements in regard to the Protestant religion, which are evidently false and misleading, after which Mr. Cook continues: "If you please, gentlemen, this delicious food for the young has been distributed upon Deer Island in plentiful meals. The book is entitled 'A sure way to find out the True Religion,' and is published by Patrick Donahue of Boston. You will not be surprised to learn, that, after the character of this volume was found out, it was expelled from Deer Island by order of the chairman of the Board of Directors in charge there."

This, and the question found at the head of this article, propounded to me by a school-teacher in Nebraska, who had come across some of the false statements concerning us as a people, found in some of the common school histories of the United States, which she was using in her school, decided me to compile some of these false statements in an article for the Herald, in hopes that it might be a beginning to the setting of ourselves right before the people. For it will be readily perceived that the damage to the cause of Christ is almost beyond estimate when we consider that these lessons are in our common school books, and they are fairly drilled into the children's minds; for they are required by a system of questions at the bottom of the page, to almost, if not quite, commit them to memory.

There has been some agitation of this matter in regard to the Encyclopedias, but it seems to me that to have ourselves set right in our common school histories is of infinitely more importance, for where one encyclopedia is used there are a thousand school histories; and how can we expect anything else than that we will meet with prejudice when false statements in regard to our origin and doctrine are taught to the children in the schools as a part of their lessons. But some may say, "How are we going to help ourselves?" I have no suggestions to make, and shall leave that for wiser heads than mine, but it seems to me that we might, as a beginning of the work that would finally set us right, in all communities where we as a people have an influence, discourage the use of those histories that do not give us a fair representation, and encourage the use of those that do. Of course this would not be much, but it would be a step in the right direction.

I do not want to make my article too long, and will, with these few comments, give a few quotations from histories, and leave the readers of the Herald to draw their own conclusions, believing, that it is of the utmost importance that this part of the work should be looked after; simply stating, that out of about ten histories examined I find only two that give a connected account of our origin, and one, I believe, does not speak of it at all; but all of the latest issues give false statements.

In the Eclectic History of the United States, by M. E. Thalheimer, published by Antwerp Bragg and Co. Cincinnati and New York, Articles, "The Mormons and Joseph Smith," I read:-"Far more serious difficulty arose with the Mormons, a sect founded by Joseph Smith, in 1830, at Manchester, N. Y. He pretended to have received a revelation from heaven, and as the new religion promised freedom from restraints, its followers were many, but for the same reason they were not wanted as neighbors. It must be said, however, that they were more orderly than a large part of the community about them. Being expelled from Ohio by the citizens in 1838, and from Missouri in 1839, by the state Militia, they built a new city and a splendid temple at Nauvoo in Illinois." ... "Joseph Smith was of Scotch descent, and was born in Sharon, Vermont, in 1805. He led a dissolute life when young, and was very ignorant. twenty-one years of age he pretended to have received from an angel tablets of gold upon which was written the 'Book of Mormon.' He deciphered the hieroglyphics of this book by the means of a pair of wonderful spectacles provided by the angel, and dictated its contents to his secretary, to write in English. This secretary and two other persons bore witness to the actual existence of the golden tablets, and to their mysterious disappearance as soon as they were transcribed. Unfortunately for the new religion Smith quarreled with these witnesses shortly after, and they denounced the whole story as a Smith attempted to introduce polygamy in the Mormon belief when they settled at Nauvoo, Illinois, but was strongly opposed by certain of the community, who established a press and published opposition articles. Smith headed a mob which demolished this press, but this act cost the prophet his life."

And in the History of the United States by Emma Willard, published by A. S. Barnes and Company, New York and Chicago, 1870, Art. Mormonism: "This is the most extraordinary imposture of the age. Its founder, Joseph Smith, was an obscure, uneducated man born in 1805, in Sharon, Vermont. Under pretense of special revelation he produced the sterotype plates of the Book of Mormon, by which he persuaded numbers that he was the inspired founder of a new religion, which was to give to Mormons the same pre-eminence over all other people as the Jews had over the Gentiles. Mormonism gives its followers license to commit every crime that may be sanctioned by the leading 'prophet,' especially does it by allowing polygamy, degrade and demoralize women. bers of both sexes were found to join and aid this delusion—throwing their property into common stock. On their arrival at the Far West, in Missouri, the Mormons were charged with various crimes; among others an attempt to assassinate Governor Boggs, and they were finally expelled the state by a military force commanded by General Atkinson. They then purchased a large tract of land in Illinois on the eastern bank of the Mississippi. There on a beautiful slope they built Nauvoo, and erected a pompous temple. But murders, robberies, and other secret crimes became frequent in their neighborhood. The surrounding people were enraged; the Mormon prophet and his brother were seized by the state officers, and confined in jail at Carthage. A hundred armed men in disguise broke in and murdered them. The Mormons then sold their possessions at Nauvoo, and in 1846 migrated westward to the Great Salt Lake. The Rev. Mr. Spaulding wrote the Book of Mormon as a work of imagination, founded on the Old Testament. He died after having placed the manuscript in the hands of a publisher. Sidney Rigdon, a young printer of the office, thus became acquainted with it, and showed it to Joseph Smith and they two concerted the plan of bringing it out as a new revelation."

And also the following from Quackenboss' History of the United States, published by D. Appleton and Company, New York, in 1875: "About this time [1843] excitement ran high in Illinois in consequence of the proceedings of a body of men calling themselves Mormons or Latter Day Saints. This sect was founded by Joseph Smith, a native of Vermont. Having removed to Central New York, and received an imperfect education, Smith at the age of fifteen asserted that he saw visions; and seven years afterwards, he declared that he had received a revelation from on high, in the form of records which had been buried in the earth for centuries. They were engraved, according to the account of a Mormon writer, on plates having the appearance of gold, and the thickness of common sheet tin, which were covered with Egyptian characters, and united by means of rings. Smith pretended to understand and translate this famous 'Book of Mormon,' and set it forth as a new gospel for men. It contains sundry wonderful stories about events in America over two thousand years ago, and it is said to have been written by a man named Spaulding as a romance. The immorality of the Mormon doctrines, among which that of polygamy, or the allowing of a plurality of wives, was prominent, recommended them to some; and in 1833 Smith found himself at the head of 1,200 follow-Jackson county, Missouri, became their headquarters; but as they declared that the whole western country was destined for their inheritance and as various thefts were committed in their neighborhood, the Missourians naturally desired to get rid of them. The first opportunity was seized to call out the militia; and the Mormons offering no resistence were driven from the state. They crossed to Illinois, and in the spring of 1840, founded on a bluff overlooking the Mississippi, the city of Nauvoo, a word which they say signifies beautiful. Here they erected a magnicent temple, and received a large addition of members, some of whom were men of property. At length the Mormons passed ordinances which set the laws of Illinois at defiance. Great excitement spread throughout the State, and some of the 'Saints' left Nauvoo in alarm. Several robberies and murders committed near their city were attributed to the followers of the prophet; and popular fury was increased by the belief that the Mormons controlled the county courts and could set at defiance all attempts to bring them to justice. At last, Joseph Smith, still the leading spirit among the Mormons, was arrested, and, with his brother, lodged in jail at Carthage. Here, on the 7th of July, 1844, they were killed by a mob, which broke into the prison. The Mormons continued to be objects of pupular suspicion and odium; and so violently were these feelings displayed that the next year they sold their possessions in Illinois, deserted their beautiful city which then contained 10,000 inhabitants, and emigrated to the wilderness beyond the Rocky Mountains."

Thus far I have quoted from school histories but the following I take from another work which from its nature will attract the youthful reader, being a history of many of the pioneers of the new world, and full of exciting adventure. It is written by Col. Frank Triplett, published by The M. D. Thompson Publishing Co., St. Louis, 1886, and entitled "Conquering the Wilderness." He says of the Latter Day Saints, or Mormons: "This religion is founded on the most barefaced frauds, and was the conception of an ignorant, but cunning impostor, who seems to have turned from the digging of wells, and more questionable practices, to the making of creeds, rather from a desire to gain an easy living, than an ambition to found a sect. This shrewd yankee who had imigrated from his native state, Vermont, to New York, seems to have stolen the manuscript of a novel, written in a style similar to that of the scriptures, and entitled the Manuscript found.' This has been proved, by unimpeachable evidence, to have been the work of one Joseph Spaulding, a lawyer, (some accounts say a minister) of considerable erudition. Being unable to get it published, he laid it away in an old trunk, from which it was filched by Joseph Smith, who afterward pretended to have been directed in a vision to dig in a fabulous hill, (Cumorah), where he would find the true bible, written on plates of gold. plates of gold were entirely imaginary; the hill, Cumorah, was Spaulding's trunk, and the new bible the Lawyer's novel. The hill which the Mormons call Cumorah, is called by the neighbors Mormon Hill, and the cut, [here follows a picture purporting to be the picture of the hill where Joseph Smith found the plates of the Book of Mormon] is a perfect representation of it, showing even the hole dug by the knavish prophet, and in which he pretended to find the plates. Upon this slender foundation has been built one of the most stupendous and lasting humbugs that the world ever saw. The 'old man of the mountains' had not more fanatical followers; the 'veiled prophet of Kohrassan' had not a more sensual, and infamous creed. The alleged prophet, Smith, saw that if in the guise of religion, man's basest passions could be pandered to, he would become an easy convert, and hence he formulated a creed, in which license waited on lust and assassination was not denied to revenge. Searching the scriptures for his evil purposes, he selected the most hideous examples in the Old Testament, and entirely ignored the gentle precepts and pure morality of the Lowly Nazarine. Abraham, David and Solomon were stock characters in his facile theology; but the noble, learned, spotless Paul, and he who died on Calvary, do not figure therein. His doctrines made polygamy a necessity, and did not admit of celibacy, or the clinging to one wife. His polity, civil and religious, was a step backward for over twenty centuries. Promising to his male converts a gratification of their sensuality and terrifying the females with revelations of the coming destruction of the world, this fit son of a knavish father, and a mother equally tricky, soon had around him a small congregation of brutish men and idiotic women, and then his revelations increased at a wonderful rate."

Is not this indeed "delicious food for the young." Especially does this subject have its weight when we realize that our earliest impressions are the most lasting, and that which we learn at school stays with us until death. This is so true that a Catholic Priest was heard to say that if he could have the training of a child until he was eight years old he would be a Catholic always. The question is well worth considering, and we as a church ought to constitute ourselves an "Outlook committee" and endeavor to have ourselves set right before the people.

Yours for truth, HYRUM O. SMITH.

SHEEP AND GOATS.

In the Herald of July 27th it is suggested that the topics contained in Matthew 25: 31-46 are of sufficient importance to pay well for a most thorough and searching analysis. I therefore feel free to cast in my mite.

The eternal judgment being designated as one of the principles of the Doctrine of Christ, and I being one of those who have presented the idea that the Sheep represented in the chapter referred to are not the Saints—the church of the first born—the inheritors of the celestial glory, but another class entirely, I give my reasons for so believing. I will here state my position, premising that this is my opinion, and that if it is not in accord with the word, it is not worth the paper it is written upon; let each, then, be his or her own judge.

My position is this: That the Saints, those who shall come with him when Christ shall come the second time without sin unto salvation, also the saints who shall have part in the first resurrection, and the saints who are alive when he comes and are caught up to meet him, will have no part in the judgment referred to only as companions in the train of the Great Judge, and spectators of the proceedings, unless it be in some official capacity.

The judgment spoken of by Jesus in Matt. 25, is certainly the same one referred to by John Rev 20: 12-15. I have arrived at this conclusion from the fact that those I have enumerated have passed their judgment at least one thousand years and a little season before the judgment spoken of shall transpire, and have been found worthy to be called Christ's, and shall dwell in the presence of God and his Christ forever and ever.—D. C. sec. 76:5. Read the whole of the section and it tells the straight story. See also sec. 28:3.

"For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then they who are alive shall be caught up together into the clouds with them who remain, to meet the Lord in the air, and so shall we be ever with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words."—1 Thess. 4:16-18. These are the first fruits of the grand and glorious triumph of Christ over death, hell and the grave, in the great winding up scenes of the last times. These "have received the fulness of the Father."—D. C., sec. 76:6. "They are Christ's, and Christ is God's, and they shall overcome all things."-p. 5.

The second class, or those of the terrestrial, are fully described in section 76:6, and, (from the deductions I am able to make) will also have a part in the first resurrection, but not until after the first fruits have been gathered. "And then shall the heathen nations be redeemed, and they that knew no law shall have part in the first resurrection, and it shall be tolerable for them."—Sec. 45:10. "And after this [the gathering of the first fruits] another angel shall sound, which is the second trump, and then cometh the redemption of those who are Christ's at his coming, who have received their part in that prison which is prepared for them, that they might receive the gospel, and be judged according to men in the flesh." Sec. 85: 28. These are Christ's at his coming, having passed through the prison house and there received the truth or the gospel, and have placed themselves in the condition to be judged as men in the flesh; have at length passed their judgment, and being found worthy have secured their release at the first resurection and are Christ's, the second fruits of his final triumph. They too will have part in the great reign of peace, but in a grade of glory such as they have lived for and can abide.—Par. 5. these of the first and second fruits of the great ingathering into the government of God are they of whom it was said, "Blessed and holy is he that hath part in the first resurrection, on such the second death hath no power."-Rev. 20:6. Ah! they have passed from death unto life, but every man in his own order.

We now come to the great, last and final judgment pictured by Jesus in Matthew 25:31-46 and Revelations 20:12-15, which you can read. These I understand to be a separate and distinct class from the two classes we have been examining. These are a class who were not found worthy of a part in the resurrection of the just and had still to remain in the prison house or hell until the last resurrection; until the Lord, even Christ the Lamb shall have finished his work .- Sec. 76: 7. These in the time of the judgment will be divided into two classes, the one called sheep the other goats; and here, it appears, is where the great stumbling block lies, or one of them at least. From my standpoint I see no difficulty, which perhaps I may be able to make plain as we pass along. Those sheep who form one of these sub-classes and are called righteous, are the ones principally who cause the trouble. If I understand the thing aright all those who are or may become Christ's are his sheep. If this be true, then the two classes we have been examining are also sheep, as well as the ones we are now considering, because they are Christ's, but have passed on to their reward many hundred vears before these are brought to their final account; still these are sheep, and why? Because, "These are they who received not the gospel of Christ, neither the testimony of Jesus; these are they who deny not the Holy Ghost; these are they who shall not be redeemed from the devil until the last resurrection."—Sec. 76: 7. These are the remainder of those who shall be brought forth by the resurrection of the dead through the triumph and the glory of the Lamb.—p. 4. "These are they who receive not of his fulness in the eternal world, but of the Holy Spirit."-Sec. 76:7. These constitute an innumerable host and are composed of the following classes of the world's society: "These are they who are of Paul and of Apollos and of Cephas; these are they who say they are some of one and some of another; some of Christ, and some of John, and some of Moses, and some of Elias, and some of Esaias, and some of Isaiah, and some of Enoch, [and you can run it down into the names claimed as leaders in modern times, ad infinitum,] but received not the gospel, neither the testimony of Jesus, neither the prophets, neither the everlasting covenant; last of all, these all are they who will not be gathered with the Saints to be caught up unto the church of the first born and received into the cloud. These are they who are liars, and sorcerers, and adulterers, and whoremongers, and whomsoever loves and makes a lie; these are they who suffer the wrath of God on the earth, these are they who suffer the vengeance of eternal fire. These are they who are cast down to hell and suffer the wrath of Almighty God until the fulness of times, when Christ shall have subdued all things under his feet."—Sec. 76:7. I fancy I hear some one say, "These are

I fancy I hear some one say, "These are a queer lot to call sheep, righteous." Well, listen: "These are they who receive not of his [Christ's] fulness in the eternal world, but of the Holy Spirit, through the ministration of tho terrestrial, and the terrestrial through the ministration of the celestial, and also the telestial receive it of the administering of angels, who are appointed to minister for them, or who are appointed to be ministering spirits for them, for they shall be heirs of salvation."-76:7.

"And this is the gospel, the glad tidings which the voice out of the heavens bore record unto us, that he came into the world, even Jesus to be crucified for the world, and to bear the sins of the world, and to sanctify the world, and to cleanse it from all unrighteousness, that through him all might be saved, whom the Father had put into his power, and made by him; who glorifies the Father, and saves all the works of his hands, except those sons of perdition [goats] who deny the Son after the Father hath revealed him."-76: 4. "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth."-Matt. 28: 17. How do these of the telestial become sheep, righteous? By the gospel, the glad tidings which shall have been ministered unto them by those (sheep) of the terrestrial world, and by the ministration of the angels sent unto them; for remember this is all to be done prior to this great day of judgment, for then Christ shall have finished his work in the redemption of man, and all that will then have to be done, will be to assign each of these sub-classes to their sphere of glory or dishonor, as their works have beensuch as they have lived for and can abide. Suffering will most assuredly have brought them to knowledge. These sheep will most assuredly have received the gospel. the glad tidings, proved it by obedience, and have become partakers of the Holy Ghost, by which they shall have been quickened, and by whose power they shall have been resurrected, for "These all shall bow the knee and every tongue shall confess to him who sits upon the throne forever and ever, for they shall be judged according to their works, and every man shall receive according to his own works. and his own dominion in the mansions which are prepared. And they shall be servants of the Most High, but where God and Christ dwell they can not come worlds without end."-76:7.

These sheep will then most certainly have become righteous, these will be the inheritors of the telestial glory, whose glory surpasses all understanding; and no man knows it except him to whom God has revealed it."—par. 7.

Will they not indeed be blessed of the Will they not after all their Father? sufferings receive a glorious inheritance through final obedience? Glory, honor, might, majesty and power be forever ascribed to our God, and to his Son Jesus Christ, whose love and mercy reach out to the salvation and final triumph of all men from the power of Satan, except "those who know my [the Lord's] power, and have been made partakers thereof, and suffered themselves, through the power of the devil to be overcome, and to deny the truth, and defy my power; they are they who are the sons of perdicion, of whom I say it had been better for them never to have been born, for they are vessels of wrath, doomed to suffer the wrath of God with the devil and his angels in eternity; concerning whom I have said there is no forgiveness in this world nor in the world to come; having denied the Holy Spirit after having received it, and having denied the only begotten Son of the Father, having crucified him unto themselves, and put him to an open shame. These are they who shall go away into the lake of fire and brimstone with the devil and his angels, and the only ones on whom the second death shall have any power. . . . They shall go away into everlasting punishment, which is endless punishment, which is eternal punishment, to reign with the devil and his angels in eternity, where their worm dieth not and the fire is not quench-

These are the goats; this is the second death "which is spiritual, which shall be pronounced upon the wicked when I shall say, Depart ye cursed."-Sec. 28: 11; see In this last paragraph it is stated, "for their graves shall be opened and they shall come forth, yea even all."

These dead must certainly refer to the rest of the dead who lived not again until the thousand years are finished.—Rev. 20: 5. All the rest except these sons of per-dition will receive not only redemption from their graves, but salvation. They will become Christ's, saved as a part of the work his Father gave him to do, and therefore his sheep; brought at length into his fold, the one fold. Nevertheless this fold may have many pens into which the sheep may be divided according to their grades, or each one receiving an inheritance in that glory or kingdom that they have lived for, that each may enjoy happiness in his own sphere.

Well might these of the telestial be astonished and wonder when it shall be said to them "When I was an hungered ye fed me; when I was athirst ye gave me drink," for they had never known Jesus or his brethren as such while in the flesh. But how many of my brethren when they have been an hungered, and thirsty, and fired, and footsore have met with such generous, open-hearted souls! I have in my mind's eye such; and I praved then, and I pray now, that when God shall number up his jewels He may remember

These telestials or sheep of Matt. 25th may be termed the third grade of Christ's sheep, or the fourth gathering from the earth's vintage, by the resurrection from the dead. The first were the Saints who came forth from their graves when Christ burst the bands of death and set the captives free; the second are those who shall come forth from their graves in the morn of the first resurrection, and they who shall be alive at his coming; who have oil in their lamps, and are thus found worthy. They shall be changed in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye. These all will be caught up to meet him in the cloud and so shall ever be with the Lord. These two gatherings from the Lord's vineyards, they are Christ's, they are his sheep; they will have been gathered into his celestial fold to go no more out forever.

The third are they of the terrestrial, they are of those who have received the gospel in the prison house—the heathen and the honorable men of the earth, those who had no opportunities on earth; and of those I am sorry to say, were saints on earth, but were not valiant in the fight, and thus lost the prize they might have won. These all are Christ's at his coming.

The fourth gathering has been fully described. These are they of the telestial glory, and these are Christ's, made so by their sufferings and final acceptance of the terms of salvation; and thus all of these will become Abraham's seed and heirs of that kingdom and glory in the universe of God for which they have lived; the remainder of the vintage are only fit to be gathered together and burned.

This brings us to another point which is made a stumbling block: "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world."

Any one would think from the arguments which have been adduced, that God the Eternal Father was confined to one little spot of ground upon which to establish His government and kingdom. I have, I believe, shown that Christ's sheep will be divided into three general grades, viz., the celestial, the terrestrial and the telestial; that these general grades may still be subdivided into several groups of the same general grade I believe can be fully demonstrated, especially the last named.

That the kingdoms or mansions were all prepared, which each grade shall occupy, I fully believe, but upon the same principle that Christ was as a Lamb slain from the foundation of the world. The councils were held, the plans were all drawn, the specifications were all written up and fully understood in the mind of the Great Architect. He perfectly understood the end from the beginning; the details were so perfect that there has been no need for change in the smallest item, and from that point of observation all the final resting places of his sheep have been prepared from the foundation of the world. But as I am only particularly interested in the celestial at present, and pray God that I may ever be during this probation, and finally be found worthy of an inheritance there, I shall only turn my attention to it. I will however make one or two quotations bearing upon the point that the government of God is not confined to one spot of dirt, upon the same principle that the government of the United States is not confined to one state, but many. And I feel led to believe that this American government in its parts may be but a foreshadowing of the extended kingdom of our God, seeing that he has said, "And for this purpose [the establishing of liberty among men] have I established the constitution of this land, by the hand of wise men whom I raised up unto this very purpose, and redeemed the land by the shedding of blood."-D. C. 98: 10.

Let us read: "The earth rolls upon her wings, and the sun giveth his light by day, and the moon giveth her light by night, and the stars also giveth their light as they roll upon their wings, in their glory, in the midst of the power of God. Unto what shall I liken these kingdoms that ye may understand? Behold all these are kingdoms, and any man who hath seen any or the least of these, hath seen God moving in his majesty and power," (Sec. 85:12,) consequently within and under his government

"All kingdoms have a law given, and there are many kingdoms, for there is no space in the which there is no kingdom, and there is no kingdom in which there is no space, either a greater or a lesser kingdom. And unto every kingdom is given a law, and unto every law there are certain bounds also and conditions. . Judgment goeth before the face of him who sitteth upon the throne, and governeth and executeth all things. He comprehendeth all things, and all things are around about him, and he is above all things, and is around about all things, and all things are by him and of him, even God, forever and ever."—Sec. 85:9, 10. Thus we see that the government of God is vast as space, broad as eternity.

And now wherever in this vast domain may be located the future habitation of the terrestrial and telestial flocks, or whether they shall inherit some portion of the earth that gave them birth, mattereth not. The kingdom prepared for those who shall inherit a celestial glory, the place where God shall make his permanent and everlasting abode, the capital of this vast empire is that which I am interested in. I have already given my idea of the language used (the kingdom prepared from the foundation of the world), so we will proceed. Jesus said: "In my Father's house are many mansions, if it were not so I would have told you; I go to prepare a place for you. And when I go, I will prepare a place for you, and come again, and receive you unto myself, that where I am ye may be also."—John 14: 2, 3, I. T. I have taken the ground that Jesus, when he made that promise unto his disciples, meant just what he said, and used just such language that they might come to an understanding-just as he has said he had done to us in this day through his servant Joseph, D. C. sec. 1: 5—that their hearts might not be troubled. I believe, then, that the place, mansion or kingdom, (whichever it suits the fancy to call it), was not then prepared, and is not yet prepared, and will not be fully prepared as the eternal habitation of the saints of God for near two thousand years at least, if we rely upon the revelations of God as proof; but that the preparation is being pushed forward with all speed according to the specifications, and will be accomplished in the own due time of the Lord, for I read: "And again, verily I say unto you the earth abideth the law of a celestial kingdom, for it filleth the measure of its creation, and transgresseth not the law. Wherefore, it shall be sancttfied, yea, notwithstanding it shall die, it shall be quickened, and the righteous shall inherit it."-Sec. 85:6.

I do not believe the earth has yet died, nor that it will die until after the last great battle shall have been fought, nor until she has given up the dead that are in her.—Rev. 20: 8-13. Then she must die, and by the power of the resurrection of Jesus Christ she shall be quickened, and by this means; and then shall the last enemy, even death, be destroyed.—1 Cor. 15:26. She will then be in condition for the grandest reunion of the eternities. "And the Lord said unto Enoch, then shall you and all your city meet them there, and we will receive them into our bosom, and they shall see us, and we will fall upon their necks, and they shall fall upon our necks, and we will kiss each other, and there shall be my abode."--D. C. 36:13. This reunion of the saints of earth's Zion and those of Enoch's city will take place at the beginning of the earth's rest of one thousand years, and I believe that 'tis there in Enoch's city the resurrected and changed saints shall meet Jesus in the air, the city being hid by the cloud from the gaze of those on earth, and will remain in the air until the earth shall have been fully redeemed and celestialized. Then shall the great reunion of earth take place, for she will be fully fitted and prepared for the reception of the God of the universe, who has promised to make her his eternal abode. "And thus we saw the glory of the celestial, which excels in all things; where God, even the Father reigns upon his throne forever, and ever, before whose throne all things bow in humble reverence and give him glory for ever and ever."—Sec. 85: 7. "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away, and there was no more sea. And I John saw the Holy City, new Jerusalem, coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away. And he that sat upon the throne said, Behold I make all things new. And he said unto me, Write for these words are true and faithful."-Rev. 21: 1-5.

When all enemies shall have been destroyed, when the earth, the place, shall have become celestialized, and prepared; when the New Jerusalem, the abode of God, the city of Enoch and her territory shall again be restored to earth, then shall Jesus the Christ "have subdued all enemies under his feet, and shall have perfected his work, when he shall deliver up the kingdom and present it unto the Father, spotless, saying, I have overcome and have trodden the winepress alone, even the winepress of the fierceness of the wrath of Almighty God; then shall he be crowned with the crown of his glory, to sit on the throne of his power to reign forever and ever."-D. C. 76: 7.

These are the views I gather from the revealed word of God, and they cause my soul to rejoice in the Holy One of Israel. Brethren, I can not now expect to belong to that class, spoken to upon that occasion, for reasons already given, and others that may follow. Neither do I expect to occupy the same kingdom of glory they will be invited to inherit, if it was absolutely and fully prepared from the foundation of the world, other than as I have already indicated; because to be fully organized and established in all its details as we are led to understand by the revelations of God his government and kingdom will be when fully fitted for the eternal abode of God and his saints. The earth, the mansion, must be fully prepared as the place for that government, kingdom; and the earth is not yet in condition, and will not be for a long time to come as we measure time.

My desire is that I may so live that when I shall pass hence I may be found worthy a place with the following: "And Enoch beheld angels descending out of heaven, bearing testimony of the Father and son; and the Holy Spirit fell on many, and they were caught up by the powers of heaven into Zion."—Doc. Cov. 36: 6. For the kingdom I wish finally to inherit is the one Jesus is now preparing, and which he shall finally present to his Father spotless. As to the class or grade of sheep spoken to, I and all who have received the gospel restored in this the latter day, are too far gone to ever belong to it. must either be classed with the first or second grade, by our full obedience, or in consequence of our slothfulness in not being valiant, or we must belong to that class who are only fit to be gathered together as goats; to be cast out and burned, having our portion with the devil and his angels in eternity because we have known the power of God, and have been made partakers thereof. O, may we never suffer ourselves to be overcome through the power of the devil, and deny the truth and defy its power!

I have based my thoughts principally upon the revelations of God delivered to us in our own day, believing there is nothing but corroborative evidence in the Bible and Book of Mormon when rightly divided and spiritually discerned. Beside there is not in all the records of the ancients which have come down to us so grand, so glorious, so plain descriptions of the things to come upon this question as in these revelations. The reason, to my mind being, that we are upon the threshold of their fulfillment.

The ancient fathers no doubt saw, but were forbidden to write; or if they were allowed to write in full, their writings are hid to come forth in the own due time of the Lord, but we are at the door.

In examining this question, when consulting the Book of Mormon, we must not loose sight of this fact, that the greater part of the teachings, exhortations, warnings and threatenings, were to a people who had known the power of God and had been partakers thereof, and therefore were in danger of becoming numbered with the sons of perdition.

My prayer is that we may overcome through Christ the great Prince.

Your brother,
WILLIAM HAWKINS

THE HOLY LAND .- No. II.

A HORSEBACK RIDE THROUGH PALES-TINE—FROM THE DEAD SEA TO JERUSALEM.

BY A. B. MATSON.

To write the history of Jerusalem, means to write the history of the world; especially of the world's hopes and aspirations. It is not my intention in this letter to enter into any lengthy descriptions of this famous city, but to speak of what I saw and of my own impressions. Those who care to study Jerusalem in detail, I refer to the many learned works on the subject. There are only a few hotels in Jerusalem and they are of an inferior kind, and the charges are very high, besides at this time of year they are much crowded. The contract with our dragoman having expired, we had to seek shelter somewhere else. In Jerusalem there are Hospices belonging to almost all the different sections of the Catholic church. We found splendid accommodation in the Austrian Hospice, near St. Stephen's gate. These places are kept up for the accommodation of pilgrims from all parts of the world and of all religious denominations, but especially for the Catholics from Austria. supposed to be free, or, at least, the pay as to amount is left to the option of the guest. Our party paid $2 a day each. We were treated most kindly. The food was splendid but a little "queer" sometimes. I felt very much at home here, and partly because of this, really enjoyed my visit in the ancient city. I remained here just seven days, and to tell of all I saw would require a volume instead of a brief letter like this. During this time I walked through all the principal streets of the city, visited all the places of interest in and about it, and studied somewhat the customs and manners of its strange people. The present Jerusalem is surrounded by a wall 381/2 feet high, with four towers, forming an irregular quadrangle about 21/2 miles around. I obtained my best ideas of Jerusalem from this wall, around which I walked several times, with the exception of a few hundred yards near the Joppa gate where there is a fortress, and consequently people are not allowed to pass. It may give some a better idea of the city if I say that inside the walls is an area of slightly more than twohundred and nine acres. Access is obtained into the city through five gates. Six hundred years ago there were seven gates, but when the city came into the hands of the Mohamedans for the last time, two of the gates were closed up and have so remained ever since. Jerusalem contains about 20,000 inhabitants, composed of almost every nation under the sun. I saw on the streets, men and women from "Greenland's icy mountains" and others from "India's coral stands." Standing for ten minutes on the corner of David and Christian streets, I heard the nasal twang of the American, the clear voice of the Englishman, the musical hebrew of the Jew, the rattling Arab, the deep guttural tone of the German and in fact, almost every language under the sun. The reader may wonder what all these people are doing in Jerusalem. The great majority of them have come to worship at her sacred shrines; others are students of history, either sacred or secular, or both, while others are here simply to "buy and sell and get gain." Thousands of these people have traveled on foot from the remote corners of the earth, that they might trod with their own feet the places and see with their own eyes the scenes made sacred by the presence of the Son of God. The permanent population of Jerusalem is about equally divided between Jews, Mohammedans and so-called Christians. I think also, they can pretty equally divide the honor as to dirt and filth. If I had to depend on the Christians of Jerusalem for my conceptions of the religion of Christ, I am afraid I would turn Pagan. A religion which won't make a man wash his neck when its dirty, clean up his back yard and scratch the flies out of his eyes when they get in, to my mind is not worth two cents a bushel. It would take a mighty strong argument to convince me that a dirty man or woman had ever "got religion." Dirt, however, is not universal in the Christian community, as there are a number of small societies doing excellent work, not only among the Jews, but the Arabs and Mohammedans, teaching them as rapidly as possible that the religion of Jesus is not a mere sentiment, or something consisting of forms and ceremonies, but a life of devotion to duty at home and abroad. lews, as a class, are the most contemptible looking people I have seen in all my travels so far. A man with a petticoat and an overcoat on his body, both a hat and a bonnet on his head, and with his hair cut short behind and long before, is a funny looking sight. I had some dealings with some of them and found them honest and nice; a little close, but as far as I could judge, telling the truth and asking a fair price for their goods. On Friday last, I visited the wailing place of the Jews, just outside the temple walls, or the enclosure in which the Mosque of Omar now stands. Many of the stones are twenty-five feet long and the scholars of the day have decided that the wall here is a part of the original temple of Solomon. I suppose that there were at least two-hundred Jews there last Friday, some pressed their lips against the cold stone, uttering loud cries of anguish, while others read the lamentations with their cheeks bathed in tears. Some of the weeping was no doubt gotten up for the occasion, but some of it I believe, was genuine and sincere. The scene to me was very affecting, and I could but weep with those who wept, at the time my thoughts went back to the self-invoked curse of eighteen-hundred years ago, "His blood be on us, and on our children."

Almost every day while in Jerusalem, I spent a little time in the church of the Holy Sepulcher. The church is a series of large buildings, standing on the traditional site of Calvary, the first of the series having been built by Helena, the mother of Constantine, in the first part of the fourth century. The whole thing, apart from any scripture truth, is so ridiculously absurd that it seems to me almost an insult to intelligent people to write about it. All the notable events in the whole plan of salvation took place on the site of this building. Here Abraham offered Isaac; here is the stone on which the body of Christ was anointed for the tomb; the place where the angel stood when he rolled the stone away; the center of the world; the place where they cast lots for Christ's garments; the place of crucifixion; the tomb of Christ; the graves of Adam and Melchizedek and other things too numerous to mention. Now this list of holy places would convince me beyond a doubt that the whole thing is a fraud, besides the scriptures plainly state that the crucifixion was outside of the city, and it is now beyond controversy that the site of the so-called church of the Holy Sepulcher was inside the ancient city walls, as it is inside the modern Jerusalem. There are at least two places just outside the city that fill the scripture statement exactly, while the site of the Holy Sepulcher has not a single qualification. This makes no difference, however, with the superstitious and fanatical pilgrims of the worthless old monks who make a living out of the ignorance of others. Next Sunday is Easter and thousands of pilgrims from all parts of the world are here to get their candles lighted from the "holy fire," and the streets are full of men and women with their long tin boxes filled with candles which they expect to get lighted on Easter evening. This "holy fire" business is one of the most shameles frauds that ever disgraced the Christian name. The story runs that when the patriarch enters the Sepulcher on Easter eve that fire descends from heaven and lights the candles on the altar. The priest, who is alone in the Sepulcher, passes out the fire through a hole in the wall. The whole church at this time is filled with a surging mass of men and women, each one trying to get the first light from the sacred (?) flame. Notwithstanding the thick cloud of superstition which hangs over this place, I saw hundreds of earnest and sincere worshipers here. My indignation at the monstrous imposition was mingled with deep sympathy for the ignorant, though earnest pilgrims who were being deceivad. I might say that this church stands in the very heart of the city, as far from the outside as it is possible to get it. About the most interesting place I visited, was the Mosque of Omar, standing on the site of the Temple of Solomon, or rather in the center of the site as it only covers a small portion of the original space occupied by the temple. No one knows just when the present building was erected, but it is credited generally to Caliph Omar. It is octagonal in shape, 152 feet across and slightly over 500 feet in diameter. The main walls are 35 feet high, and are covered inside and out with various colored marbles and mosaics, while the windows are filled with stained glass of very great beauty. The building itself is very interesting and beautiful, but the dome of the rock, or the summit of Mount Moriah which forms the center of the building is by far the most attractive object in or about Jerusalem. It stands right out above the level of the floor; is about forty-five feet wide and sixty feet long. After visiting the places of interest on the surface, we went below and had a look at the great vaulted chambers, doubtless made by Solomon when forming the temple area. These underground vaults are called at the present time Solomon's Stables. Though Solomon "had forty thousand stalls of horses for his chariots," I have no idea that he ever stabled them here. Two or three days I spent in simply walking about Jerusalem, and from these delightful rambles I derived more real joy and information than from all other sources. One day I went in company with two other of our party "out as far as to Bethany" and returned over the mount of Olives. The day was among the most delightful of all the delightful days we had enjoyed in this divine wonderland. The sun was in his glory and a gentle breeze blowing from the enchanted Mediterranean. Passing out of St. Stephen's gate, we at once found ourselves in the wheat fields and grave yards of the valley of Jehoshaphat. From just outside the city walls, down in the valley and far up the side of the mount of Olives, there are thousands of graves mixed up in a most picturesque manner with little wheat fields, olive and fig trees. Just on the other side of the valley from St. Stephen's gate, stands the garden of Gethsemane. That this is the place where Jesus wept and prayed there is no doubt in my mind. I felt a new sensation of heart and life as I stood under the venerable olive trees, which many think cast their shadows on the Son of God during that awful hour of bitter agony. I have not felt those deep emotions when visiting many of the places in Bible lands, of which I have heard so much from others, but my visit to Gethsemane, the mount of Olives and Bethany seemed to bring me nearer the actual scenes in the life of Christ than all else I saw. Going around the lower end of Olivet, we went on to Bethany where we spent a delightful hour wandering among its olive and fig orchards. No wonder that Martha and Mary loved their home and that Jesus found his principal earthly joy in this quiet village. Passing through Bethany we returned to Jerusalem over the very summit of the mount of Olives. I do not know that I stood on the very spot, but if not, very near it, where the feet of the son of God passed for the last time this sin-cursed earth. From the top of this mountain I got my last and grandest view of Jerusalem, The sun was sinking in the western horizon in a perfect sea of gold and the reflection on Jerusalem and the hills around about Zion added a beauty I had not before noticed. Tomorrow morning we leave for Joppa. I do not expect to visit this place again, but I shall ever retain a most pleasant and vivid recollection of my stay within its walls.

JERUSALEM, April 4th, 1889.

CHRIST A PRIEST AS WELL AS A KING FOREVER.

THE number of the elect, or the first fruits, will be completed at the second advent, but that does not put a stop to the saving of others. The saving of men will go on, and more rapidly than it is going on in the present age.

Nor will the operations of the Holy Spirit,-in convincing of sin, in teaching and enlightening the mind and leading men to truth and holiness, cease with the consummation of the age? Some authors and preachers, men of ability, men from whom we have a right to expect a better exposition of Scripture, teach that the Spirit's work will end with the end of the age; but this is a great mistake and evinces a sad misunderstanding of the word. Spirit in His fulness, as given at the Pentecost as He now abides with believers, may not be experienced then; but may there not even then be as much of the Spirit's operations as there was under the old dispensation? May there not be more? And if there is a measure of the Spirit withdrawn with the taking up of the church. will not the presence of Christ and his glorified church, when they come to establish the kingdom, more than make up for that partial withdrawal? But with the personal return of Christ will not the Spirit return again in larger measure? Nay, will not the Spirit then be given in fuller, larger measure than He is now? How else can He be poured out upon all flesh?

If none are saved in the age to come, as some teach, why does Christ continue a priest forever? Christ is not declared a king forever more plainly or emphatically than He is declared to be a priest forever. "And what we say is yet more abundantly evident, if after the likeness of Melchizedek there ariseth another priest, who hath been made, not after the law of carnal commandment, but after the power of an endless life, for it is witnessed of Him, 'Thou art a priest forever after the order Melchizedek.' He, because He abideth forever, bath His priesthood unchangeable."—Heb, 7: 15–17, 24.

"This priesthood," says George N. H.

"This priesthood," says George N. H. Peters, "being after the similitude of Melchizedek, is exhibited in its completeness with His kingship. Now, at His second advent He comes as King, and reigns as King; it follows therefore, that He is also revealed as Priest. The two offices are united in the same person, and so long as the one endures the other must also remain. His kingship is eternal, so likewise must be the priest hood."

If the Saints are to be 'kings and priests' in the future kingdom, then it follows that the 'elder brother' is also the same. This necessarily follows, because His brethren are co-heirs with Him to the same inheritance, honor and glory. He is the great High Priest; they are associated with Him as priests."

Now that the saints, or the holy ones, will be priests, is taught most clearly. This was God's purpose in the ages past, had his people been faithful, as may be seen from the Old Testament. It is evident from Exodus 19: 5, 6, that Jehovah designed to have a kingdom of priests: "Now therefore, if ye will obey my voice indeed, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me from among all peoples; for all the earth is mine and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests and a holy nation." The apostle Peter clearly refers to this Divine purpose in the second chapter of his first epistle: "But ye are one elect race, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a people for God's own possession, that ye may show forth the excellencies of Him who called you out of darkness into His marvelous light," -Verse 9. It is true, the Jews, as the natural seed of Abraham, by their unbelief and revolt, unfitted themselves for the office; but unchanged in His purpose, God is gathering an "elect race." He is raising up a people who shall compose this "royal priesthood." True believers in Jesus, and who by their faith become also sons of Abraham, will form that holy, royal priesthood. In Revelation 1:6, we read: "And he made us to be a kingdom, to be priests unto his God and Father." Here we have the kingly and priestly offices united in reference to the saints. The resurrected ones of Revelation 20: 46, are not only to reign with Christ a thousand years, but it is also said that "they shall be priests of God and Christ."

Now why are the saints thus united with the Christ in this priesthood if the object is not to bestow upon men grace and salvation? This indeed, is clear evidence of a continuance of the work of salvation, the saints glorified one body in Christ, who is their head, will be required to minister in religious things. As priests they will make known God's will to the nations of the earth on matters pertaining to religion; they will also exercise rule in religious matters. They will be engaged further in maintaining the Divine government in administering the laws of the kingdom, in promoting the Divine honor and in conferring blessing upon the nations. They will be endowed with powers amazingly great and nothing will be able to stand in the way of their carrying out the benevolent designs of the Almighty. Equal unto the angels, and with bodies, though material, yet spiritual, distance will be as nothing to them and their devotion to the highest interests of the subjects of the kingdom will be constant and untiring, and divisions will be unknown, and perfect oneness, perfect union, and the same pure, holy, happy, joyous Spirit will actuate all.

And the priesthood of those associated with the Christ will be as perpetual as that of the Christ Himself, for with him they are joint heirs; and what unspeakable happiness, what pleasure, what rapture, will the thought of this create. There will be no fears among them with regard to the future. They will be free from everything that can introduce the least element of discord into their employment, or their praise, or their fellowship; and they will be free from falling. Not a thought will disturb them in reference to the ages of the ages before them.

Christ, then, the great high priest will communicate with the people of the earth through the priesthood of which He is the head and leader. And none will be able to assume this office, who are not called to it and qualified for it by the Lord himself. In the present imperfect state men sometimes get into offices in connection with the church for which they have no spiritual fitness; but such an error will be impossible in the future state.

There will not be one in all the myriads who will form that royal priesthood but will be tried, tested, trained and duly qualified. Let it not be forgotten, therefore, that it is only as Christians are one with the Christ and are overcomers here, that they can become co-heirs with Christ and sustain the office of the priesthood here-

Now it is because Christ and his chosen ones form this royal priesthood, that the work of salvation shall go on in the Millennial age. Not only will all Israel be saved and wonderful grace and blessings be bestowed upon them, but the word of truth and salvation be carried to the nations of the earth. Evil will be put down, every knee will be constrained to bow to Tesus, all must do him homage as King of Kings and Lord of Lords. Holy Scripture then is very plain in teaching that the Christ, in the age to come, is not only King but Priest; and it is in connection with the great work of salvation that His priesthood abideth and is unchangeable. And we may here say definitely, what indeed has been implied in several statements of this essay, that the fact that after the Christ comes, He will continue to be a priest, and that the Church who will share with him in the rule of the kingdom, will also be priests as well as kings, is evidence of the continuance of men in the flesh; for it will be for their advantage and salvation that the priestly office is continued.

Miscellaneous.

PASTORAL.

Dear Herald:-Please say to the Saints and all concerned in Minnesota that I have deemed it wise to appoint Bro. Warren E. Peak in charge of Minnesota, Bro. J. Arthur Davis associated with him for the present mission year, and I ask for them the co-operation of all the ministry, and all good people, in that part of my large field. Being satisfied that they are wise and careful ministers, I can cheerfully recommend them, and shall look forward to a good report of the important trust under their care, thus imposed upon them. May the Spirit of God attend their ministrations, and much good and many sheaves be their reward.

I should have so notified the Saints on my departure from the State, but neglected to do so, ann now ask a cheerful, united effort for Zion's glorious cause all along the line. May God bless the noble helpers and ministers that all may enter into the glory of our Lord's bright home, I ALEX. HALE SMITH, prav.

Pres. of Northern Central Mission. ANDOVER, Mo., Aug. 19th.

We hereby return thanks to Bro. John O. Savage for the gift of a very large volume, "The History of the State of Nebraska," to the Church Library. We received it by the hand of Bro. R. M. Elvin. JOHN SCOTT, Librarian.

BORN.

McCaig.—Near Wabash, Cass county, Nebraska, April 22d, 1888, to Mr. John and Sr. Sarah F. McCaig, a daughter. Blessed at the house of Hon David McCaig, August 12th, 1889, by Elder Robert M. Elvin and named Ella Imogene.

DIED. SMITH.—Sister Lilly J. Smith, late of Richland, Union county, Dakota, was born June 15th, 1837, in the province of New Brunswick. emigrated to Dakota, in October, 1870, and was baptized and confirmed into the church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints by Elder Charles Derry, December 18th, 1877. She died of cancer of the stomach, June 26th, 1889, at Castalia, Dakota. As she had lived from the hour of her baptism in full fellowship with Jesus Christ, so in the hour and last moment of her departure, her entire trust was in that crucified and risen Redeemer. She received the gospel with all her heart, and concentrated all her powers to it. Possessed of more than ordinary intelligence, and being one of the noblest, purest and wisest missionary spirits the church has had, her influence reached out to all classes within her sphere. Ever devoted to the spread of truth and the salvation of mankind, she shrank from no sacrifice, shirked no duty known to her, but unceasingly labored to make her neighbors acquainted with the gospel; yet she never obtruded herself, or views upon any, but her zeal was tempered with wisdom from on high, thus evidencing that the Holy Spirit had given that choices of all gifts to her. She kept an open door (by the kind consent of her husband), for the servants of God, and many will bear witness to her willingness to administer every comfort within her power, that they might be encouraged to bear the banner of the cross to all mankind. I herewith enclose the last letter the writer ever received from her which I ask you to copy for the Herald as it will show her zeal and love for the truth. From the time of her baptism until her death—eleven years-it was her lot to stand absolutely alone, only as an elder or saint could visit her from a distance, which was a rare event, yet she was fully alive to her duty, and never lagged in the race for eternal life. Verily her life was hid with Christ in God! For such to live is indeed Christ, for such to die is their eternal gain. Written at her dying request through her band by Charles Derry. [The letter will be found in our correspondence column.-Ed.]

KENNEDY.—Arthur Forester Kennedy, born May 25th, 1889; blessed by Bro. Hyrum Robinson; died July 1st. Funeral service by Elder Joseph Luff, Independence, Mo. Parents names, William F. and Emma B. Kennedy.

SCHMIDT.—At Stewartsville, Missouri, August 3d, 1889, Sr. Sarah E. Schmidt, of congestion of the lungs. Sr. Schmidt was born August 2d, 1863, in Hancock county, Illinois; was baptized March 29th, 1874, in Montgomery county, California, by Elder J. R. Cook. She leaves a husband, and a daughter two months old to mourn her death, besides relatives and many friends. Funeral services by Bro. Wm. Summerfield, assisted by J. T. Kinnaman.

EDWOR ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, Sept. 7, 1889

OUT OF HARMONY WITH GOD'S WORD, AND INCONSISTENT WITH ITSELF.

In 1882 there was issued from the Juvenile Instructor Office, Salt Lake City, Utah, a pamphlet of fifty-two pages, of which Mrs. Helen Mar Whitney, the daughter Pres. Heber C. Kimball and wife of Elder Horace Whitney, is the author. pamphlet was written in defense of Plural Marriage in "Reply to Joseph Smith, Editor of the Lamoni, (Iowa), HERALD."

From the character of this pamphlet and the knowledge of the social standing of the author, we conclude that some one or more of the leading minds of the church dominant in Utah were cognizant of the writer's effort and what is set forth in the work. It seems to be fitting to the times and the condition of things religious and political in Utah, to present some few of the statements made in this pamphlet in connection with some made by other and leading lights of the same church in Utah, that comparison of fact and theory may be had.

On page fifteen Mrs Whitney states:

"Sister Esther [Gleason] died in Nauvoo without entering into the order, and I think that she never heard it taught. Mrs. Frink was then but twelve years old, and if Joseph Smith the younger was not so young, nor so small, nor so foolish,' etc., as he states, he must have some remembrance of the reports that were affoat not only in the city of the Saints, but throughout the country. At that time 'spiritual wife' was the title by which every woman who entered into this order was called, for it was taught and practiced as a spiritual order and not a temporal one, though it was always spoken of sneeringly by those who did not believe in it."

We italicise "spiritual wife," "spiritual order and not a temporal one," etc.

The date given by Mrs. Whitney as covering the period referred to as "at that time," is shown by her on page fourteen to have been 1842-4.

On page sixteen Mrs. Whitney states:

"The Prophet Joseph revealed the plural order to but few of the honest and pure in heart, who accepted it in the true spirit in which it was taught, as a celestial law that would eventually redeem and exalt the human family. He charged them not to divulge it, as he was harassed by day and by night by his enemies, and on their secrecy depended his life. The Twelve and others who were his most staunch friends were willing to lay down their lives for him if called upon. Under such circumstances he was not very likely to publish it to the world; and it was through the treachery of men and women professing righteousness who, under the cloak of religion, proved themselves too corrupt to live within this celestial law of matrimony, and who, because Joseph rebuked them for their iniquities, turned against him, that he and his brother Hyrum were brought to a speedy death,"

Italics ours.

On page twenty-six Mrs. Whitney gives an account of how the relvelation, socalled, was procured for perpetuation:

"The first copy of the revelation upon celestial marriage was in Bishop N. K. Whitney's possession, when Emma Smith demanded it; but he was too much of a practical business-like man to neglect to retain an exact copy of the original, which she destroyed as soon as it came into her possession. She thought that this act would put an end to the practice; but she was disappointed in her wicked idea."

"In the winter of 1847, when settled at Winter Quarters, President Brigham Young, never having had the revelation, asked for this copy, which was the only one in existence, and he could hardly be expected to publish it until after he came in possession of it."

"Previous to letting the President [B. Young] have it, the Bishop got his son, H. K. Whitneymy husband-to copy it for him. The day and circumstance I distinctly remember, for he told me that his father locked him in his store while he wrote it, in order that no on one should disturb him."

"If some have become degraded in the practice of this celestial order, it is because they were naturally low and depraved, and have occasionally dragged others with them into corruption. The Prophet said that this order would damn more than it would save, because it was a holy principle that could not be trifled with. There are good and bad in every community, for 'the net gathereth of all kinds,' but there are not so many persons of a bad character in Utah as in other parts of the world among pretended Christisns and corrupt monogamists."

On page forty-eight, after an attack upon the evils existing in the world under monogamous marriages, Mrs. Whitney concludes one of her paragraphs in this way:

"It is a woman's right to become an honorable wife and mother, but only through the adoption of plural marriage can this right be extended to all. Were this permitted and recognized, the present wicked and licentious practices, that monogamy only feeds and encourages, would find fewer victims."

In reviewing what we have here culled from Mrs. Whitney's pen, we shall do it by examining what is nearest first, and after that, one by one as they occur.

Mrs. Whitney was born, raised, educated, married and has spent her life among the Latter Day Saints, her residence and associations since her early youth having been among polygamists. She is from these circumstances incompetent to write and testify as to the social conditions obtaining under monogamy. She has adopted the rant of those elders who, for want of absolute and good defenses of plural marriage, have condescended to take the violations of the monogamic rule for the results of the rule itself. This is so obviously unfair and incorrect that it has not been thought by any writer as worthy of serious consideration in refutation.

The records of society clearly show that the observance of the rule governing the domestic relation according to the principle - "keeping yourselves wholly for each other and from all others during your lives," is general, while disregard of this rule is the exception, and nctoriously against public opinion and contrary to the institutions of society. That there have been and are instances where immorality has entered the family circle, among the religious and irreligious, and driven thence happiness and peace, no one pretends to deny. But the men and women who are the guilty ones in such cases never take shelter from the just censure of society upon the plea that the rules of that society were unrighteously restrictive and did not permit the proper exercise of human affection and love.

"It is a woman's right to become an honorable wife and mother," writes Mrs. Whitney.

This statement we accede to. How did woman acquire this right? By creation. It could not be the result of political association; for it is stated as her right by sex -"it is a woman's right."

Is it any more a "woman's right to become an honorable wife and mother," than it is a man's right to become an honorable husband and father? Did not the same God that created woman create man? Was not that creation in the image of God who created them? And is it not a fact that at the time when they were created there was but one man and one woman, one wife and one husband, one and one only of either sort? If the woman was endowed by this creation with the right to become an "honorable wife and mother," was not the man endowed by the same creation with the right to become an "honorable husband and father," and precisely upon the same principle of creation? And did not the Almighty, then and there, fix the conditions under which this mutual relation of husband and wife should be honorable? The equal number of women and men thus instituted at the beginning has been quite uniformly maintiained by the operation of the physical laws which have governed the populating of the earth from that time until now.

In the United States, where the church was established in 1830, there has been generally a larger number of men than women. In Utah there has been from the census of 1850 to that of 1880, more men than women. Hence, Mrs. Whitney's statement that the "right of a woman to become an honorable wife and mother" can only "be through the adoption of plural marriage," can not possibly be true regarded from the facts of creation and the uniformly equal number of men and women. The same principle by which a woman is entitled to honorable maternity, gives to a man the right to honorable paternity. "The man is not without the woman, nor the woman without the man in the Lord," says Paul. If every woman is assured of the right to honorable wifehood and motherhood by the fact of her being a woman, so every man is assured of his right to be an honorable husband and father, by the fact that he is a man. If there be any community in which the numbers of men and women are equal, exactly equal, each one of either sort has a counterpart in the other; the right inhering to all alike. In such a community, if any one man should appropriate to himself more than his own counterpart, some other man, whose right was equally as good, must necessarily be deprived of his right. Mrs. Whitney and others may laugh at this argument so much as may please them, but figures will not lie-even to suit pluralists.

Mrs. Whitney's statement is predicated somehow upon the idea that woman is in some way deprived of her right to wifehood by monogamy. How such deprivation can occur as a rule in any community where the numbers of men and women are equal, will puzzle not only Mrs. Whitney but the sharpest and the best. If there are fifty apples in a basket, all fit to be eaten and waiting to be so eaten, and there are fifty persons each having the same right to eat of these apples as every other, and one or more take two or more apples each, no other result can possibly occur, than that for every apple more than one each of those greedy persons takes, some one of equal right will get none. By just so much as an honorable wife is more valuable and to be desired than an apple, so will the greater right of every man to a wife be defeated in every community where the sexes are equal and one man marries and possesses more than one wife at the same time. If it be stated that every man in Utah who desires to marry can obtain a wife if he is worthy, the 5,055 more men than women in Utah in 1880 may answer. But the following circumstance is related of an outlying settlement, where a certain functionary of the church was teaching earnestly that it was the duty of all the men of the church to take more than one wife. At the close of his exhortation an anxious brother said to him: "Brother, how shall I follow your advice to take another wife?" "Why, court her and marry her, the same as you did the first," was the answer. But there was one circumstance known to this anxious brother that should have been known to the one teaching him, and that was, that, for every twenty marriagable and unmarried women in that community, there were twenty-one marriageable and unmarried men. Facts are stubborn things.

One other thing in this connection. Mrs. Whitney urges that monogamy "feeds and fosters" licentious practices. The ground upon which she urges this is that husbands in monogamy are not contented to confine their regards to their one wife. To this it is only needful to write that husbands who are married polygamously, unless they number their wives as Solomon did, or exercised the power to choose one at will, as David did, are liable to the same infirmity and for the same reason. Besides this, in every community where the number of men is greater than the women, unlawful means and unlawful opportunities are sought for the gratification of passion; and in this regard, wherever polygamy obtains as a practice, and the men are equal to, or greater in number than the women, every man who marries more than one woman is adding one more man to the quota of unmarried men; and if the married man is incontinent, though he be married, how will it be expected that the hopelessly unmarried shall remain subject to the rule that condemns him to celibacy and abstain from wrong doing? It seems that Mrs. Whitney's statement and argument are very faulty!

"If some have become degraded in the practice of this celestial order."

This is an admission that some have "become degraded." How could it be otherwise if what Mrs. Whitney states is true, that the "Prophet said this order would damn more than it would save." It is a fact that in the church in Utah, only, does the order referred to prevail; hence it follows that only there can there be any whom that order will either save, or damn; and as the order was to damn more than it would save, it is in Utah that they are thus damned. And notwithstanding what Mrs. Whitney states on page 16 about its being a "celestial law that would eventually redeem and exalt the human family," if we are to believe that it will "damn more than it will save," how can any one accept it as a principle that will eventually redeem and exalt the human family? Any principle which in its teaching and practice results more certainly in damnation than in salvation, can not have had its origin in a command of God, who commands only to save. Besides this, if this order damns any it is in Utah that they create to themselves this condemnation, as it obtains only there; hence if there are any who have become degraded through this order, it is in Utah; and if its practice damns more than it saves, then the majority of those practicing it are either damned, or rapidly becoming corrupt and subject to condemnation. How will Mrs. Whitney escape the conclusions thus reached?

"The prophet Joseph revealed the plural order to but few of the honest and pure in heart."

The few in any community can not be the many. What is known to but few can not be known to the many. What was revealed to but few, could not be "well known." Nor could anything told and done under the shadows of secrecy, be the well accredited property of public gossip to the extent that boys and girls of the ages of ten to fourteen in the community should be well acquainted with the popular rumor. In attempting to make this revelation as secret as the grave and as public as the highways, Mrs. Whitney has left the marks of improbability upon her statements.

According to Mrs. Whitney those to whom this marvelous secret was entrusted were charged not to divulge it; but like murder, it "would out." Strange as it may appear, some of the few, "the honest and pure in heart;" somebody of that few notwithstanding their honesty and purity of heart betrayed the secret, though the life of Joseph Smith depended upon their faithfulness. This treachery upon the part of some of the "few," "honest and pure in heart," brought the prophet and his brother Hyrum to a "speedy death." It would have been interesting if Mrs. Whitney had given the names of those who were so "honest and pure in heart" as to betray Joseph and Hyrum Smith to their death because of the celestial marriage order. Pres. G. Q. Cannon, Bishop A. O. Smoot, H. B. Clawson and others agree in stating that it was not for polygamy, or plural marriage that Joseph and Hyrum were slain; and the record of current events at the time shows that the statement of these last named is true.

The statement that this celestial order was so secretly revealed, and was "well known to hundreds of old Mormons who lived at Nauvoo" is void of claim to belief when one gives it a moment's serious thought. The claim that he was harassed by night and day, and his life was in danger and for that reason Joseph Smith did not give publicity to what had been revealed, is a most unworthy claim; because he was hunted and harassed and his life in danger long before even Mrs. Whitney states the secret was known; and no pretense is made that he was killed as the result of revealing that secret. Besides this, his whole life before that proved that he was not a coward; and his going to Carthage shows that he was not afraid to die.

"Spiritual wife was the title by which every woman who entered this order was called, for it was taught and practiced as a spiritual order and not a temporal one." This would lead one to conclude that as Mrs. Whitney understood the matter when she wrote in 1882, this celestial order was not at its origin intended to serve the purpose of temporal marriage. Temporal means that which appertains to time. If it was not at its inception and revealment an order involving association in time, when was it that its spiritual character became corrupted and its observance became a temporal and carnal one? For what belongs to time largely appertains to the flesh, to carnality.

"The first copy of the revelation was in Bishop N. K. Whitney's possession," etc.

Mrs. Whitney does not state why, nor how this revelation, so-called, came into Bishop Whitney's possession; nor why Emma Smith demanded it. She does state, however, that when it was demanded, and before returning it he secured a copy of it, he being "too much of a practical and business-like man to neglect to retain a copy."

This statement shows that Bishop Whitney was not the proper custodian of that paper, and that the copy made by him or for him, was not authorized by Joseph Smith. He took said copy upon his own motion and responsibility. The original of this copy, according to Mrs. Whitney, was given to Emma Smith, who burned it. If this statement is true, then Bishop N. K. Whitney not only fooled Emma Smith, but also hoodwinked the prophet Joseph, who it is said, supposing it had been burned, stated that he could reproduce it from memory. As to which idea was the "wicked" one, that of Mrs. Emma Smith, who according to Mrs. Whitney burned the revelation with the idea of putting "an end to the practice," or that of Bishop Whitney who kept the copy of that which "would damn more than it would save," the reader may judge.

According to Mrs. Whitney President B. Young did not have the revelation until the winter of 1847. The "only copy in existence" was the one Bishop Whitney had unofficially taken without consent, or authority. For a period extending from about August, 1843, to about December, 1847, some three years and a half, this wonderful document upon which the "redemption and exaltation" of the human family depended, lay in the possession of N. K. Whitney. How, or when Pres. Young was apprised of the existence of this copy does not appear; but in the winter of 1847 he became aware of it, and then sent for it. The same business tact that prompted Bishop Whitney to take a copy before he surrendered the original to the messenger of the prophet Joseph in 1843, now secured the taking of another copy, which Mr. Horace K. Whitney, husband of Mrs. Helen Mar Whitney took for him. The latter remembers the circumstance well, because her husband told her that the Bishop locked him up in a store until it was copied. This copy so made, or the one made in 1843 under circumstances already referred to, was given to Pres. B. Young by Bishop Whitney. From this date until August 29th, 1852, a period of nearly five years, this copy remained in the hands of Pres. B. Young; on which latter date it first saw the light of publicity.

A question or two may be suggested here: Did Joseph Smith act in good faith when he caused the revelation to be written? Did he act in good faith with God when he gave the revelation to his wife Emma to be burned by her, as stated by Mrs. Whitney? Did he act in good faith toward his wife when he gave her the revelation telling her to do with it as she pleased? If she supposed that act would end the practice, was she not so led to believe by the statements of her husband? By what authority did Bishop N. K. Whitney take the first or second copy of that paper? Why was not the revelation itself lodged in the President's office among the archives and important papers of the church? Why was not an official copy taken and spread out on the records, and the original handed to the secretaries for official safe keeping? What was the influence by virtue of which Emma Smith demanded that paper, and obtained it to be destroyed? How are these copies, of the taking of which Mrs. Whitney gives the account, identified? The original was destroyed; the only copy in existence for three and a half years was in the possession of Bishop N. K. Whitney; who can tell what was the nature of this custody; this copy unofficial and without certified authority passed into the hands of Pres. B. Young, then and subsequently in the meshes of polygamy, in the avowed possession of wives in a temporal sense; the final avowal and publication of the doctrine was put off until excuse was absolutely demanded; then a copy only, and that one is said to have been in President Young's hands for nearly five years, its care and custody known only to himself and those whom he controlled with the absolutism of an autocrat; the only evidence of its identity Pres. B. Young's word. Truly Helen Mar Whitney has written a queer history of a queer transac-

On page forty-nine Mrs. Whitney writes:

"This system is the only panacea that can eradicate and cure the great evils that prevail in Christendom, which are to-day poisoning and eating at the very heart-strings of our nation."

In sustaining this unwarranted statement, Mrs. Whitney refers to certain evils which she would wish her readers to believe are the prevalent rule among the married people outside of Utah. Infanticide, and self-murder which results from it, may exist in the United States and elsewhere, but they are universally reprobated, and are pronounced as crimes, and punishable where brought to light. If there is none of this among those plurally married in Utah, they are to be congratulated; but we advise Mrs. Whitney to remember that there have been other things besides spiritual wifery supposed to be held in sacred secrecy by the "honest in heart," which have come abroad, the telling of which would refute the absolute purity claimed for plural marriage by her.

To this article we propose to add others, the subject matter of which will be taken from other authors who have written on the points considered. If there ever was a time when what is "written" needed to be had, it is now. "O that mine enemy had written a book!"—Job.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE are in receipt of the Clarksburg, West Virginia, News, of August 24th, which contains an excellent defensive article from the pen of Bro. D. L. Shinn in reply to false and sensational reports concerning the labors of Brn. Shinn and Devore, which have been telegraphed abroad by untruthful and unreliable newspaper correspondents. Bro. Shinn asks the people of West Virginia if he is to be treated as an outlaw in the state where he was born, in whose army he fought as a Union soldier, and where he has never been charged with any unlawful conduct, simply because certain evils exist in Utah, which he in nowise represents. Be courageous and persistent, brethren; truth will prevail in West Virginia as elsewhere.

The Chicago Herald of the 22d ult. reaches us, containing an account of the decided success of the Exposition of the Blue Grass League and Palace at Creston, Union county, Iowa. The Blue Grass League is an organization formed by the various agricultural and commercial associations of south-western Iowa, and their Exposition is held for the purpose of calling attention to the advantages and resources of the Iowa Blue Grass Region as a stock country and healthful place of residence. The governors of several states and many other distinguished persons were present at the opening which was an auspicious one.

Bro. S. D. Hannah wrote the 19th ult. from Sand Run, Ohio, giving an account of the efforts of one Rev. Elmer Turner who lectured on "Mormonism" at Nelsonville, Ohio, a near town. The lecture was of the same old stamp which has been so often repeated. Bro. Hannah gives Rev. Turner credit for stating that "the Josephites make good citizens," however, but regrets the tendency of many people to imitate the "young robin" who swallows, unquestioned, everything that is offered it.

The St. Joseph, Missouri Herald of August 23d, reaches us, in which we see a terse but sensible defense of some points of our faith by "Simon Smith;" evidently some level-headed and staunch adherent of the faith in that growing metropolis.

Our correspondents are again reminded that the increasing demand made upon our columns requires them to write up all obituary notices, district conference and other minutes, letters, etc., as briefly as possible. This can be done without omitting any necessary detail; and if so written will be all the more readable and profitable. "Brevity is the soul of wit," and also of communications. An article may may be lengthy and yet be brief and good in the sense that it contains no superfluous or unnecessary statements.

With deep sorrow we learn of the sudden deaths of Misses Bertha and Lucretia, daughters of Bro. James and Sr. Hattie McKiernan of Farmington, Iowa, which occurred on the 16th and 17th of August; and whose obituaries we publish elsewhere, as taken from the Farmington Herald of August 24th. These dear children, aged twelve and five years respectively, were suddenly taken away by that dread malady, diphtheria. Bro. and Sr. McKiernan have our sincere sympathy in their great affliction. May the Master sustain and comfort them as he alone can!

HARD LINES FOR TRANS-GRESSORS.

THE following is the Election Law of Idaho, passed at the last session of the Territorial Legislature. It is very severe in its provisions; especially so in that it provides that the witnesses, by whom the person seeking registration and the elective franchise is to satisfy the court of his good faith, must be citizens who have never been members of the association approbating and teaching the offenses named in the act. For in many localities there will be no citizens of this character by whom the person seeking the right to vote can establish his intention, and his good behavior during his two years of probation. Whether so extreme a precaution against fraudulent practies is necessary, may be a question; but it seems to us that any person of whose good citizenship the court is assured should be considered a competent witness.

This clause disqualifies men as witnesses in the case defined who are not only competent witnesses in all ordinary business coming before the court, but are citizens entitled to and exercising the right to vote, and upon whose integrity the court can rely. It is a hardship and a severe penalty for any man of a reasonable degree of honorable sensitiveness to be disfranchised; but to have the indignity of being compelled to prove ones loyalty and good behavior by a class of men hitherto hostile, added to disfranchisement is deeply humiliating.

A great number registered and voted in Idaho last fall. Against some of these there are now indictments for conspiracy pending, the conspiracy consisting, as it is alleged, of ostensibly withdrawing from the church in Utah, by agreement in obedience to counsel from church authorities, without such withdrawal being made in good faith, but with the special object and purpose of voting at the fall elections, and with the intention to defeat the laws before enacted to prevent pluralists, or polygamists from exercising the right of franchise.

How far the clause referring to membership in associations whose tenets are in favor of celestial, or plural marriage since January, 1888, may be construed to be ex post facto, as will undoubtedly be pleaded, remains for the court to determine; as well as whether a man whose wife and children may be members, aids and sustains the association when he maintains them.

It is evident that the intention of the law makers was to so make the law that it would shut out those who break the laws of the land, and those who sustain and aid them in so doing. Surely "the way of the transgressor is hard."

passage. Approved January 29, 1889.

"LATTER DAY SAINTS.

"On Sunday, the Manchester district of the Church of the Latter Day Saints held their reunion in the Temperance Hall, Farnworth, when a large number of persons from Manchester, Sheffield, Leeds, Wigan, &c., assembled. Refreshments for strangers and friends were provided at the expense of local brethren. The services were presided over by Elder J. Dewsnup, of Mauchester, president of the district, and the morning preachers were Elders W. Armstrong (Manchester), C. H. Hassall (Farnworth), and J. Austin (Sheffield), the addresses being interspersed with singing. In the afternoon a fellowship or testimony-bearing - meeting was held. Striking cases of healing by faith, whilst laying on of hands and prayer, were given. Elder J. Dewsnup showed the position held by the church organized in 1830, and reorganized in 1860, on the question of polygamy, &c., as taught by the people located in Salt Lake City, and said that the latter, though still calling themselves by its name, had gone out from the Church and departed from its faith and doctrine. The standard works of the Church proved that the doctrines held by the Utah body never were and never could be taught or practiced by the Church of Jesus Christ. The speaker bore testimony to seeing the pure Gospel, as first taught, slowly corrupted by Salt Lake Mormons, and said that during his twenty years connection with them the books were time after time revised and altered, so as to keep out all testimony against them. The evening preachers were Elders Thomas Taylor (Birmingham) and H. Greenwood (Manchester). Some of those present called for and received the anointing oil, laying on of hands, and prayer for recovery from sickness, and we understand that one person gave in his name for baptism."

The above clipping is from the Farnworth, Manchester, England, Journal, of August 3d, sent us by Bro. Joseph Dewsnup, Senior. We are glad to read such accounts of "large attendance" at the conferences held by our brethren and sisters in England. We note their progress with joy and bid them God-speed. Their success is our's and our's is their's.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques - Is it right for a layman to preach? Ans.-No; except that under certain special circumstances such would be justified and commended in publicly defending and properly setting forth the truth when assailed and when none of the ministry were present to publicly defend it. The qualifications for and reponsibilities of preaching come by gifts, callings and ordinations. There is a perfect order in God's govern-

"Again I say unto you that it shall not be given to any one to go forth to preach my gospel, or to build up my church, except he be ordained by some one who hath authority, and it is known to the church that he has authority, and has been regularly ordained by the heads of the church."—D. C. 42: 4.

Men of discretion among the laity have wisely and ably defended the faith at times when necessity demanded it; but on the other hand overzealous, unwise and overanxious persons have done harm by attempting to do the work of a minister to which they were not called. All are called to "warn their neighbor," which can be done by a godly walk and "conversation;" but all are not called to preach and minister for the church.

Q.—Is there any law or reason why the president of a branch should have every elder or priest preach because they have such authority?

A.—No; not necessarily. We understand that men are called and ordained as servants to persuade and lead men to Christ—to do good by their preaching and habits of life. If they are faithful and wise in so doing they should of course be called upon and encouraged to minister. But if those holding priesthood are unwise and unspiritual, and are given to slangy expressions and unministerial habits, their preaching will be of a harmful character. "He that speaketh, whose spirit is contrite, whose language is meek, and edifieth, the same is of God, if he obey mine ordinances," etc.—See D. C., 52: 4, 5.

A presiding elder should meekly but fearlessly consider the best interests of the work; showing no partiality, but exercising the discretion and discernment to which he is entitled if wise and faithful. "There has been a day of calling, but the time has come for a day of choosing; and let those be chosen who are worthy," (D. C. 102: 10), we believe to be true in this sense; hence it is necessary for those called to show themselves approved; otherwise their labors will not be fruit ful of good.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. R. H. Wight wrote August 20th from Farmington, San Juan county, New Mexico, as follows:

"I have located near this place and expect to remain permanently, At present this is a lively place; the orchards fairly groan beneath their weight of fruit. The productiveness of this country can hardly be over-estimated. It must be seen to be understood. I hope some day to see a flourishing branch of God's vineyard here, and believe there is as good a chance for a bountiful harvest in God's as in man's vineyard."

Sr. M. A. Waterman, of Springville, Utah, wrote August 21st, renewing for the Herald. In her letter she significantly expresses herself as follows:

"Times are so dull, seemingly. There is no sale for stock; feed is scarce, and I think Utah is a very dull place. I love to read the Herald. I would very much like to sell out here and come nearer to the Zion of God. I don't much like this Utah Zion, but it seems at present as though I had to stay here a little while longer; but the glory of the Brighamite kingdom is now departed."

Bro. E. C. Brand wrote August 26th, from Scranton, Kansas:

"I finished up my work here last night, making thirty discourses since July 23d, besides other meetings, and baptized fourteen. I rest to-day and start tomorrow for Atchison.

Bro. Leonard Scott thus writes from his field, near Warren, Ohio, August 23d:

"The work is on the gain here. I baptized one more last Sunday. More are ready for baptism, and more are believing. The clergy attack us through the papers, but we have succeeded in getting in two rejoinders. Old Satan is on the alert in this part, with a well established agency. His kingdom is moved by an apprehension that the work is among us to stay, and his modes of combat are everywhere and ever the same."

Bro. William Chapman wrote August 23d, from Scranton, Kansas:

"Bro. Brand is here yet, but intends to leave soon. He has done a good work here. He baptize one last night, making twelve in all. May God bless all his Saints that they may ever be found doing His will."

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"Why idly seek from outward things
The answer inward silence brings?
Why stretch beyond our proper sphere
And age for that which lies so near?
Why climb the far-off hills with pain,
A nearer view of heaven to gain?"

SHOULD it appear to some of our readers that the subject matter of the Column this week is just a little foreign to the purpose of this department, we wish to say that in our judgment the importance of the subject is the only apology we need offer. There is not within the pales of the church, one who is not interested in the successful working of our Sunday Schools, and not one who is so interested, but is also interested in this subject of "Teacher's Meetings." We bespeak for the article a careful reading, and from those engaged in Sunday School work not only a careful reading but a prayerful, thoughtful consideration, as well as a hearty adoption of the system indicated. We have taught in schools where these meetings were held and in schools where they were not held, and we fully endorse what the writer says with reference to them. We do hope our Sunday School superintendents will try the effect of them upon their respective schools.

THE TEACHERS'-MEETING A NECESSITY.

THE "teachers' meeting," as the term is employed in America, is the weekly gathering of the teachers of the Sunday-school for conference over the next lesson which they are to teach to their scholars. In Great Britain, such a gathering is known as the "preparation class." It matters little, however, what the gathering is called, if only its nature and purpose be understood while its discussion is in progress.

Not every Sunday-school has a teachers'-meeting; yet without a teachers'-meeting there can be no true Sunday-school. This paradox represents a truth that can not safely be lost sight of in the wise considering of the Sunday-school and its fundamental needs. In the very nature of the modern Sunday-school, a teachers' meeting is a necessity, and without a teachers'-meeting a Sunday-school in name is not really a Sunday-school in fact.

The modern Sunday-school in its integrity includes the grouping of children and others into separate classes under individual teachers for the study of the Bible, and the combining of these separate classes into a school-whole for united work under a common influence. Without the grouping into classes, there is no opportunity of reaching the scholars individually. Without the combining of the groups into a common whole, there can be no unity of impression on the entire membership of the school. In a true Sunday-school there must be both class work and school work, class instruction and school instruction, class influence and school influence. All this can not be secured unless the leaders of the separate groups are brought together in order to secure a proper understanding of their work and a fulness of mutual sympathy and purpose in its prosecution; and this bringing together constitutes the teachers'-meeting of the Sunday-school.

Without a teachers'meeting there is no possible agreement in the teachings of the various teachers in a Sunday-school; nor is there any prospect of bringing up the poorer teachers in that school to the standard of those best qualified. If the teachers of a Sunday-school be not brought together to compare the results of their separate study, and to quicken one another's minds by mutual suggestions and corrections, they are not likely, on the one hand, to be in accord in their understanding or their teaching of the lesson they are to teach; or, on the other hand, to be severally as well prepared for their teaching as if each one of them were possessed of the best thoughts and the wisest preparations of them all. In fact, without a teachers'-meeting a Sundayschool at its best is not so much one school as it is an aggregation of schools; each class being a little school by itself, without the gain which might come from the shared labors and attainments of its immediate neighbors.

It matters not, so far, whether the superintendent be of average or superior ability. The best superintendent in the world would be unable, without the aid of a teachers'-meeting, to have such a Sunday-school as he could have with the aid of a teachers'-meeting; for the teachers'-meeting is the chief agency of systematic and controlling organization in a Sunday-school.

The superior efficiency of an army over a mob is not in its leadership so much as in in its systematic organization. The ablest military commander conceivable would never expect to transform a mob into an army unless he could have all his membership under officers whom he had trained for the work, and whom he expected to train and guide in the work. The mere assignment of subordinates to positions of responsibility in the organization by which a commander would bring a mob to army standards, could not compass the work of transformation. These ofcers must themselves be schooled together by that commander in order to do their part severally and conjointly in that transforming process. The teachers'-meeting is the Sunday-school's "school of officers," whereby those who are leaders of groups may be made intelligent co-workers in a Sunday-school regiment. Without such an agency of organization no Sunday-school gathering of detached companies can become a regimental unit. In short, a Sunday-school without a teachers'-meeting is but mid-way in the process of transformation from a portion of the popular mob to a portion of the Sunday-school armv.

It is not that a Sunday-school superintendent is a military commander, and that his teachers'-meeting will enable him to drill and discipline his school through his subordinate officers. Nor is it that the superintendent is alone responsible for the character and methods of instruction given the school, and that by the means of a teachers'- meeting he can tell his teachers just what they may teach, and how. But it is that without a teachers'-meeting no superintent can fully know the measure and needs of his teachers severally, or be able intelligently to give them help, and to make them helpful to others and to himself. In whatever light a superintendent's work as a superintendent may be viewed, it is impossible for him to perfect an organization in his school that shall give him an opportunity to know his teachers thoroughly and to make use of them wisely, unless he has them together week by week while they are preparing for their common work.

How otherwise can a superintendent ascertain the measure of intelligence and consecration of his teachers severally, and be able to say whether or not they are doing their work as they ought to do it? How otherwise can he bring up the standard of the poorer teachers, and make available to them the information and enthusiasm and devotedness of his best teachers? Through what other agency can he both sift and train his teachers, and make himself felt by them all in their class work and in their school work? Without this means of intercourse with his teachers collectively, and this means of observing and guiding them in their preparation for what they have to do in the school which he superintends, a superintendent is little better than a leader in the general exercises of the school, without the opportunity of knowing and aiding the teachers in their several and collective needs. The class teaching may be very good or very poor, for all that he knows or does. Practically, there are as many schools as there are classes, under his oversight. There is no one school-current of good teaching in his school; for it is only by the means of the channel of a teachers'-meeting that a school-current can be made to flow through a Sunday-school. The teachers do not know whether or not they are in agreement in their spirit and methods of teaching; and whatever their personal will may be, they can not be "working together" with God.

While the teachers'meeting is essential to the very existence of a true Sunday-school as a true Sunday-school, and to the proper work of a teacher in his relation to his fellow-teachers and to the Sunday school as a whole, it is also essential to the best preparation of the best teacher in any Sunday-school for his work as a teacher, in his immediate sphere of class-teaching. That the poorest teachers need the quickening influence and the instruction of a conference with their fellow-teachers in preparation for teaching, all will admit. That the best teachers can do better with such an aid than without it, the best teachers are always prompt to recognize. Both in knowledge and in zeal we are stimulated by contact with our fellows. "Two are better than one" -in study; "because they have a good reward for their labor." As "iron sharpeneth iron, so a man sharpeneth the countenance of his friend" -in the teachers'-meeting. "Two eyes see more than one," says old Matthew Henry. "Wise and profitable discourse sharpens men's wits; and those who have ever so much knowledge may, by conference, have something added to them.'

In addition to the gain of knowledge concerning the lesson and its teaching that may come to the best informed teacher through his attendance at the teachers'-meeting, there is a gain to such a teacher through the disclosures in the teachers'- meeting of unsuspected difficulties in the understanding of the lesson by teachers of average ability. Many a well informed teacher would fail to touch upon points which peculiarly need explanation to his scholars, if he were not warned of the danger of misconception just there by what he\hears in the teachers'-meeting before he meets his class. Rarely, indeed, does any teacher, however well prepared for his work he may have been on going to the teachers'-meeting, come away from a conference over the lessons of the week without feeling the necessity of changing his plan of teaching at some point which has been brought before his mind in new prominence during the discussion of that gathering.

The more a man knows about Sunday-school work, the more he values the teachers'-meeting as a help to his school and to his teachers if he is a superintendent, and to himself as a teacher if he is a teacher. At the first Sunday-school Assembly at the now famous camp-ground of Chautauqua, the writer of these words led a conference of superintendents in a free discussion concerning their official relation to the Sundayschools of their charge. There were one hundred and thirty-seven superintendents in that conference. They were of ten or a dozen different denominations, and from various portions of our common country. One hundred and thirty-five of the one hundred and thirty-seven declared it to be their deliberate conviction that the teachers'-meeting is absolutely indispensible to the success of a Sunday-school. That was quite a number of years ago. There has been progress since then. It is to be hoped that there could not now be found two out of a hundred and thirty-seven good superintendents who would suppose it possible to have such a Sunday-school as he ought to have without a teachers'-meeting.

The writer of these words is now a Bible-class teacher in a well-conducted Sunday-school. He has been in Sunday-school work for nearly forty years. His special duties outside of the Sundayschool, require of him the careful study of the Sunday-school lessons of the International series, in advance of their use in the school where he is a teacher, including an examination of the best helps available to any Sunday-school teacher. He would not venture, as a rule, to go to his class as a teacher without the help of a teachers'meeting of his Sunday-school. Apart from the question of any service which he might render to others by his share in the exercises of that gathering for mutual lesson-study, he values and feels the need of its stimulus and instructions for himself. And his opinion, as based on his experience and observation in the Sunday-school field, is, that any man who knows enough to be a good Sunday-school teacher knows that he can not teach as he ought to teach without the help of the teachers'-meeting.—Selected.

A TATTLING TONGUE.

BY M. RODGER.

Of all the things to be despised
Throughout this vast creation,
Which mars our peace, disturbs our joys
And causes dire vexation;
It is an idle tattling tongue
With lying inclination,
To publish other people's faults,
To every clime and nation.

Beware of such, no matter who,
(Myself or any other),
Who kindly tell you what they've heard
About one and another;
Because, when you are out of sight,
Your ugly faults they'll mention,
And tell some things they think not right,
With seeming good intention.

Of course they think themselves all right,
And rather influential;
They do not want to make a fuss,
But tell it confidential.
And so the story they have told
By others is repeated,
Until with coolness or contempt
On every hand you're treated.

They stir up strife in church and state,
Discord and hate engender;
Yet they can cry at little things,
Their feelings are so tender.
Something is wrong, it must be so,
In their imagination,
Forever meddling, coward-like,
With some one's reputation.

When scandal mongers make a call
Or you should chance to meet them;
Of course you have to treat them well,
With courtesy to greet them.
When they have peddled all the news
And think that you receive it;
Be sure you know that it is true
Before you dare believe it.

Then put a bridle on your tongue
To keep it in subjection;
Instead of talking, think awhile,
Take time for some reflection.
Mind your own business, look to self,
And keep in that direction;
You will not then have time to see
Your neighbor's imperfection.

I do not wish that you should think
That I make great pretension.
'Tis only simple, home-made rhyme
To which I call attention;
But it is truth and that will stand
Though critics may deride it;
There's no one with good common sense
Has ever yet denied it.
LAMONI, Iowa, 1889.

Dear sisters, I rejoice in the work of the Lord in which we are engaged. Never since I embraced it has it seemed dearer to me, and never have I felt the great need of laboring for the advancement of the same more than now. Sisters, we can do our part which is not small. It seems to me that one of the most important parts of our labors now is to pray earnestly that the Lord will move upon the minds of the Saints, tha they may see the necessity of bringing their tithes and offerings into the Lord's store-house, that the work may not languish, but more laborers may be sent into the vineyard; for truly the harvest is great, and many are hungering for the bread of life, and those that sit in darkness are crying for help. And while I write, my soul is stirred within me, and the unbidden tears fall from my eyes and I am led to exclaim, "How long, how long, O Lord, will it be until thy people will fully realize the duty they owe to thee, to themselves, and their fellow men!" May the time speedily come that this people who are favored above all other people on the earth, in that we have had the privilege of hearing and obeying the gospel of our Lord and Savior, may be brought to a perfect realization of our privileges, and not only esteem this law of tithing as a duty but also as a privilege, and as a way and means of expressing our gratitude to God for bringing us to behold the glorious light of the gospel. In this way we can also show our love for the work. "He that loveth houses or lands more than me is not worthy of me."

Dear sisters, the Lord has blessed me and my family in many ways since we engaged in this work. I have received direct answers to prayers when in time of great need hare of late, in cases of sickness and other trying cases. I feel to thank God for every blessing, both in secret and in public. Ever praying that we may work unitedly for the promotion of the cause, I remain your sister in the gospel,

MARGARET J. HEAD.

CLARKSDALE, Mo., Aug. 12th.

To the Editor and Sisters of the Column and Sisters of the Prayer Union:-I have read with deep interest your offerings in the Herald concerning your advancement and experience in the Union and in the work in which we are engaged, and I trust each one is striving to bear nobly our part in this work and will continue to do so, until our kind Father shall say,"It is enough.'

There are a few sisters here of the Pleasant Grove and German Stewartsville branches that still meet together in our little chapel, the Pleasant Grove, and enjoy the sweet communion of the Holy Spirit. It is now almost eight months since our branch of the Prayer Union was organized, and I can say as president of the same, we have not lost ground, but have progressed to some degree, slowly but surely, and I can safely say, in behalf of the sisters here, we still wish to go on, and unitedly labor with our sisters in all localities for the general good of the work and advancement of the cause, and the glory and honor of God. To me the interest that has been manifest by a prompt discharge of duty by each one present at every meeting has been marked with a great degree of pleasure. We have been blessed by the Spirit, admonishing us to a further continuance of duty in the line in which we are engaged, and encouraging us by foretelling future blessings if we continue faithful. The experience of the aged sisters which has been given with their testimonies has been like drinking from a well spring of knowledge. We try to make our meetings pleasant and interesting, as well as instructive. We have felt blessed in praying for the sick and afflicted and distressed ones, and right here I will say for one, I would like to hear from some of them, or concerning them, through the Column as to how the Lord has dealt with them. Whether he has in his infinite wisdom vet seen fit to answer our prayers which have been offered in our finite wisdom, yet with explicit faith and childlike confidence in his promises, that the desired blessings might be received.

"STONED THE PROPHETS.

ELLENBORO, W. Va., Aug. 18th.—Elders Devere and Shinn, the Mormon elders of this county, attempted to hold their regular weekly meeting at Pine-grove School House last Saturday and Sunday nights and it is said that an angry and determined mob interrupted the services by attacking the elders with stones, mud and countless rotten eggs, forcing them to flee from the church and seek shelter in neighboring houses. Shinn received a severe cut on the head."-Wheeling, W. Va, Register.

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., Aug. 22d.

Dear Herald:-I left home on the 8th of June for Highland county, Ohio, and began labor immediately upon arrival, and was greeted with good sized assemblies on most occasions. In a few days Bro. Beatty arrived, and we continued in that region until the 8th of July, effecting some new openings; two were added by baptism during the time.

We returned home, remaining a few days to make necessary arrangements for coming into this part of our field, and during our stay the great flood took place. It was well we were both at home. Hundreds of dollars worth of property was destroyed, and we suffered with the rest. That section never received an equal scourge before, to my knowledge.

On the 20th ult., I left home for Ritchie county. this state, stopping first with the Saints at Bear Run where we found our worthy Bro. D. L. Shinn holding forth. We continued the meetings until the 4th instant. In the meantime we were joined by Bro. Beatty. On the third we held forth at night at Pine-Grove, a new opening. The writer was the speaker, and considerable interruption was made during the service by a number of unruly chaps. We received no harm that night, but the following night Bro. Shinn was speaking, and meeting was scarcely opened until the demonstrations on the part of quite a number of young men were so apparent that we could guess pretty accurately that trouble was agead. For awhile the mob was kept down by the presence of Bro. W. W. Cross, who went out to watch their maneuvering, and for his trouble received a spattering of eggs, the marks of which he carried home with him. The rabble grew so bold that they came in the house (a school-house) and took seats on either side of the speaker on the rostrum, but Bro. Shinn kept ahead as though all was quiet, for he spoke with excellent liberty. After opening the meeting I left my "Harp" on the corner of the stand and took a seat near a bookcase in the corner, to be out of range of stones that might be cast through the window. Those of the mob near the stand slipped my book off unnoticed, and when I missed it I went up to the stand and made known that my book was gone from where I had left it, but no one had seen them take it. The mob then went out in an abrupt manner, and in a moment an egg was thrown through the door way with great force at Bro. Shinn, missing his head only a few inches at most, striking the wall behind him and scattering its contents on the speaker and writer. Others were hit with eggs, and so shared the honor. At the close of the meeting a Mr. Eddy told us to go with him for the night, he soon procured a number to guard us to his residence, and as Bro. Shinn stepped out of the door, he was struck with a mud-ball of considerable size, behind the left ear, almost felling him. Had he fallen or given out that he was hurt there would no doubt have been war on the spot, for it was difficult to keep some who were our friends from wreaking vengeance on the mob. They followed us some distance, but seeing us well guarded, they made no further move to molest us. The blow hurt Bro. Shinn for some time, but he is about over it

We were kindly treated by Mr. Eddy, and I trust he may be well rewarded for his kindness to us. Bro. Beatty escaped, as he was holding meeting that night in another district. Bro. Shinn returned home in a few days and Bro. Beatty and I moved on to Cabin Run, at which place appointments have been made; but the house was closed. We obtained a new opening some five miles from there and held five meetings, with a request to come again. We came here by the request of the president of the branch to aid him in settling some troubles which need adjusting; and from the prospect thus far, our visit has been approved of the Lord. We are holding meetings at Adamsville. Assemblies and attention good. We go to Blandville in Doddridge county, the last of the week; from there to Sinnett's Mills in Ritchie, and then to Calhoon county, where a mob came to take us, over a year ago. We may remain in that region near three weeks. We learn of a number of new doors opening. We will likely stop with the Mt. Zion branch as we return to Ohio the last of next month to attend our district conference. I am requested to preach a funeral sermon there before I leave the state. West Virginia has many noble people-and not a few who will doubtless receive a lengthy schooling in the prison. I feel well in the work, health improving. I may labor this fall in the Kirtland and Pittsburg district, if our missionary in charge does not suggest otherwise. harge uoc.
Yours in bonds,
L. R. DEVORE.

ELLIOTT, Mo., Aug. 26th.

Bro. Blair: Since I came here I have labored in Bevier, Salt River and Renick branches. Have been blessed in teaching the Saints and others the things of the kingdom, and in administering to the sick the Lord has given us aid. One sister in Elliott was taken sick of a fever and I administered to her. The fever was rebuked and she arose from the bed and was able to go to meeting the same evening. I go from here to-day to Higbee and will preach there tonight if we can get a place to hold meetings in. Brethren Iones and Dixon live there. From. there will go to Bevier to attend the district conference, August 31st. The work increases as we get acquainted and if I can get plenty to keep me busy, will not get so homesick. I begin to realize some of the sacrifices the elders make who leave their families and spend their time in the ministry. May God bless them, is my prayer! Love to all Saints.

In gospel bonds,

M. M. Turpen.

BOUTON, Iowa, Aug 22d.

Pres. W. W. Blair:—I just came from Rome where I met the president of the district. He said the grove meeting near Persia was the best that he ever held in the district.

I want to let you know that I am not dead nor asleep. I have been doing some preaching and can say that I was blessed of God with his Spirit, for I have lost no confidence in God, nor in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. I have worked hard this last spring and some of the time in the summer, and have a good crop. I see in the last Herald that Bro. E. C. Brand is doing a good work in his mission and God is blessing his labors. He is a good soldier and works hard.

I am glad to see Bro. Joseph's letter. He seems to be in good spirits. He is showing that he can labor and sacrifice like a soldier of the cross. May God bless his labors, should be the prayer of every Saint. We have not all the proof on the sheep and goats.

Yours in hope of a day of power,

N. STAMM.

GALENA, Ind., Aug. 20th.

Brn. Joseph and William:- I have not been laboring much of late in the field, owing to sickness and death in my family. My daughter Emma, who belonged to the church and after her marriage joined the Christian church, on her death bed said to me in the presence of others, "Pa, I was influenced to do wrong, but I have prayed and God has forgiven me. Won't you pray for me?" She also said, "What do you think about my condition in the church? Is my name on the church book?" I said, "Emma, there has not been any charge against you." She said, "I don't want my name taken off the book; I know my sins are pardoned, and I will meet those who have gone before," and she sang, "When shall we all meet again?" And I am sure and can testify, as I did at her funeral, that her testimony was true. I know that God did hear and forgive her, thank his holy name. "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord; yea, saith the Spirit, they rest from their labors and their works do follow them." I feel confident that much good will follow from her testimony.

I was at Byrnville making arrangements for a discussion and did not hear of her death until a few hours before the discussion was to begin. Bro. Jenkins had come for me the day previous, and informed me that there were two Utah Elders at Byrnville, and that they would discuss the matters of difference between the two churches. On my arrival at Byrnville I found a full house awaiting to see what the collision would result in. Some had been proposing to bet that we would not meet the Utah elders, but when they found there were men ready to take the bets they backed down. Their meeting was near out when I got there, but before it was concluded I was introduced to the elders. I told them that I should not make any private arangements with them, but that what arrangements were made should be made before the public. After it was agreed to, I briefly stated that as I was the challenged party I was ready to defend and would hear what propositions the friends wished to discuss. Mr. Nephi Heward said he would not affirm anything, nor was there but one proposition that he cared to discuss. If I would affirm that Joseph succeeded his father in the office of presidency he would deny. I then stated I would if he would affirm that Bigamy was an original tenet of the church. He said he would not affirm anything, but would deny that Joseph was the legal successor. I then asked him if he was a representative of the Utah church, and preaching, as he claims, the gospel, how could the people believe that they never heard? and if he would not defend the doctrines of the church he represented he had as well go home. He said he would affirm some doctrines that the Reorganization had left off, the gathering, and baptism for the dead. I told him that he misrepresented the Reorganized Church. I said, "Will you affirm that Utah is the gathering place?" He said no, but would affirm that it was a gathering place. I told him I would affirm the same of New Albany. He said if I would not affirm the successorship of young Joseph there would be no discussion. I told him I was ready to affirm every principle believed in and taught by the Reorganized Church. There was but the one proposition that he would agree to discuss, and the time was set for the evening of the 16th inst. I had the opening and closing, and at the close of the first night's debate he refused to continue the discussion. I have not the time at present to detail any of the arguments used on either side, but suffice it to say that it is considered the best thing that has ever happened in favor of the church in southern Indiana. My opponent said he learned something. May he see the truth and be saved, and also all others, is my prayer. Ever yours.

M. R. Scott.

Lock Springs, Mo., Aug. 23d.

Dear Herald:—I moved out here in Daviess county last November, and have not heard any preaching since, and have found but one Latter Day Saint in this neighborhood. The Herald is the only preacher we have, and it does my soul good to read it and to hear of the good work that is going on through the land.

I have been blessed in this latter day work ever since I went into it, for I know it is the true work of the Lord, for the Lord has blessed me at different times, and my prayers have been heard. I know that God will bless all the Saints if they do his commandments and be faithful and obedient to him. Let us all live faithful and obedient to Him and hold out faithful to the end, trying to gain that crown of glory that is for the Saints.

Yours in gospel bonds,

WM, H. LAMBERT.

COLEMAN, Mich., August 26th.

Bro. D. Dancer:—I am pleased to write you that the work is onward in this place. On coming here in December last I found but one Saint, but since that time others have moved in and sixteen have been baptized, making our membership in all twenty-three. Bro. J. J. Cornish did the work with my assistance, I having baptized three. I feel assured that more will be added if the Saints are faithful. Most of them are bearing strong testimonies of the truthfulness of the restored gospel, and feel thankful to the heavenly Father that Bro. Cornish came in their midst.

The Reverends tried to make the people believe he was an imposter, but God confirmed his word with signs following. One afflicted with rheumatism, was healed while in the waters of baptism, and came forth praising God. My heart is in this work and I intend laboring as circumstances permit. I leave here to-day for Wisconsin, on business.

In gospel bonds,

STUTTGART, Ark., Aug 20th.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—I am down again with chills and fever. I am only able to sit up but part of the time. Some here want to be baptized and I am unable to do it. I will leave here tomorrow for Springdale where I can get the mountain air. Please publish my permanent address, Springdale, Arkansas. I will have to stop writing I am so sick. Pray for me.

In bonds,

WEST BAY CITY, Mich., Aug. 26th.

Bro. W. W. Blair:-I am one who was not educated when I was called from darkness into light. I was brought up under the dark clouds of the Roman Church, but I thank my God that after three years going with an honest heart, trying to preach the gospel of Christ, I found I had not tarried in the city of Jerusalem until I was endued with power from on high, but that the reason why I had not received that power was because I had not obeyed the gospel, neither waited from the call from God. But when I heard those preach who were called, I saw at once that I had not had the gospel, but only a gospel taught by the opinions of men. I thank God that the angel that John saw has wended his way to the earth, and all the honest in heart are coming home.

We have had three added to our number in the last week, and I am glad to see the work of God roll on. I for one am ready to help roll it on as can. I am a teacher, and I am glad to even have one talent, and I hope you will pray God that I may not bury it, that at my Lord's coming I may be numbered with the good and faithful servants. May God pour out his blessing upon his Saints everywhere. I was baptized by Elder E. Delong.

DAVID PETEE.

NATHAN, Ark., Aug. 24th.

Bro. Blair: This leaves me busily engaged in the Master's work. I went to Euclid, Howard county, and commenced meetings on Sunday, preaching until Tuesday night. One soul was added to the church. We baptized the sister on Wednesday morning at ten o'clock giving out notice of preaching for Wednesday night. We met, having a fair congregation, and preached, having the best of attention. After service we were talking to a lady about the doctrine. She said that when we came back she wanted to be baptized. About that time Mr. Miller, a Baptist preacher came along with a low mob. Coming to the door Mr. Miller, the parson, said, addressing me, "Mr. Erwin, I am told to tell you not to let the shadow of another night catch you in this country."

I replied that I intended leaving in the morning, but would promise to come back whenever I got ready. "We do not fear all your guns, for the Bible says, Fear not him that is able to kill the body, but fear Him that is able to destroy both soul and body in hell."

"I am told to warn you to leave or else abide the consequences" he replied, and about that time one of our friends fired on them and talked to them straight, asking for their names. He said to the parson, "Come in and show us some scripture against it." But they began to pull out and as they left, the Baptist preacher muttered something and began to get away, when another of our friends said, "I am here and they all sneak off"

I have been assailed through the Howard county Press, and can not get any reply. I want you to send the editor of the Howard county Press at Center Point, Howard county, Arkansas, the copy of the Saints Herald in which this is published. The people at Euclid want me to prosecute the scoundrels. I learn that there was another Baptist parson by the name of J. B. Heester who helped in getting up the the mob.

PLATTSMOUTH, Neb., Aug. 23d.

Dear Herald: My husband is very sick and is suffering great pain from the effects of a broken thigh, and it is his request to have the prayers of brethren Brand, Elvin, Caffall and Bro. Joseph Smith; also all the Saints, that he may be made well and strong once more, so that he may have the opportunity of living near to God and attending more to the duties and obligations he has taken upon himself in the waters of baptism than he has done in the past. Also remember me, and pray that God may give me strength to walk more upright and purely and that I may bear the many trials, persecutions and afflictions sent upon me. May I have patience to bear and forbear all things, and consider them all joys. I ask you in Jesus' name to pray that my companion be soon restored to perfect health and strength and that he may live many years, doing much good for our Lord and Savior.

Your sister,

Mrs. Harry Dickenson.

New Bedford, Mass., Aug. 26th. Bro. W. W. Blair:—Sunday, August 18th we were favored with a visit by Sister White, of Lamoni, who was on an eastern trip. She was present at our meeting and bore testimony of the gospel and its saving power.

Our Reunion in Maine was a success, a report of which will be furnished the Herald readers by the clerk. Yours in the faith,

JOHN SMITH.

COURTLAND, Ill., August 20th.

Dear Herald:—We (our branch) feel to rejoice in the fact that our little, young branch, not yet four years old, being organized with only fourteen members, one of which was granted a letter of removal, now numbers twenty-four members, two being added by letters of removal from abroad and by vote yesterday, and one by baptism, the one by baptism being my nephew. He is seventeen years old, past. Thus we are slowly increasing in numbers and we trust, in spiritual life.

The writer feels to rejoice to think that his father's family, consisting of father, mother, and seventeen children have all but two of them embraced the gospel. A few months ago a brother of the writer, who came from Northern Wisconsin, about five hundred miles from here, and stayed with us about ten days, was buried in Christ in baptism. He left us for Dakota where he went to locate. He left us rejoicing in the truth. Brethren, I wish you would remember him in your prayers and if not too much trouble ask the president of your branch to present this request to his branch, as my brother, J. C. Calhoon, is where he is all alone as far as church fellowship is concerned. He is the only one of our branch that might be called scattered; all the rest, but two, live within ten miles, those about twenty miles. God bless all the Saints.

Your brother,

W. R. Calhoon.

WOODBINE, Iowa, Aug. 22d.

Bro. Blair: We have just closed a series of meetings here, on last Sunday night, which lasted a little over a week-conducted by Brn. J. C. Crabb and C. Derry. We had good attendance and the best of attention, and resulted in eighteen uniting with the church. Twelve were baptized last Thursday and six on last Sunday, and more are near the kingdom. How thankful I feel to my heavenly Father for the interest manifested here! How long we have struggled and prayed for what we are now realizing! I know if we only prove faithful, watchful and prayerful that we will prosper and the good work will move on to success. Bro. Derry will be with us again Sunday, 24th. We ask the prayers of the Saints everywhere that the good-begun work may continue and many of the honest in heart be gathered in, such as shall be eternally saved.

S. B. KIBLER.

MIDDLESEX, Eng., August 8th.

Dear Brethren and Sisters:—I am many thousands of miles away from you, yet how I rejoice to read about you in the precious Herald which I have just received by post from Bro. Taylor, who visited us on the fourth of August with Bro. Clayton. Words almost fail me to express the joy and peace we received from their wise and good counsel; we did indeed rejoice together! May God bless them!

I have just read M. M. Rodger's letter in the Mothers' Home Column. O, how my heart burned within me! I seem to see the procession, then to see the patient face out of the window, looking at the closed house, then to follow on to the house of sickness, then to follow with her to the graves of her dear ones. O, how my heart ached for her, and my tears would flow! I thought of my own dear husband who has just gone to his business. The day would be long, and I though, could I spare him as this sister has done?

The gospel is indeed precious to my soul, but could I sacrifice so much? Ah! what does the Word say? "He that loveth mother, or father, wife or husband, or children more than me, is not worthy of me." My mind is enlarged, my heart swells within me, I seem to see the tired one, in pure white, in the golden city, surrounded with the loved and gone before! Oh the fullness of joy!

Courage, O ye tried ones, Not long to watch and wait; And Christ is there to meet you With them at the pearly gate.

For Christ's sake, Who giveth unto them eternal life that do His will, and hath given all for His sake! I sometimes think my trials have been hard to bear when I have stood by the graves of my dear children and I think of the fire of affliction and pain that I have passed through; and by careful study of the Mothers' Column I find my trials appear much lighter. When I think of what some of my precious sisters have passed through I am silent. Dear sisters, what a privilege to suffer for Christ's sake!

"Though painful at present
"Twill cease before long,
And then O how pleasant
The conqueror's song!"

Holy God, precious gospel, loving Jesus, happy people! Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I remain your sister in gospel bonds,

ELLEN OAKMAN.

WHEN SHOULD I COMMENCE TO PAY TITHING?

THE above question has perhaps been asked and pondered over many times in the minds of many of the Saints, and the cry from the Bishopric of the scarcity of means in their hands proves that the great bulk of them have not yet found a satisfactory answer, or if they have, they put off the time of commencement either from neglect or carelessness until the hands of the Bishopric are nearly tied; and while the cry is coming to their ears from all over the land, "Send us preachers of the word," they, no matter what their desires may be, can do nothing, because they have nothing to do with. Some, however, it may be, notwithstanding all that has been written upon the subject and published in the columns of the Herald, and all that has been said by the Bishop and his agents in their travels endeavoring to instruct the Saints in this matter, are not yet satisfied in their own minds, that they are required to live up to the full requirements of the law of tithing while yet in their scattered condition; not recognizing that the law of consecration (Zion's law when gathered) and the law of tithing are two things; that tithing is an absolute necessity to the spread of the truth, that the children of Zion may be taught of her ways, and may gather to their home when the command of God shall be given, and Zion herself be redeemed, and her children shall have learned to live by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God. That then in her gathered state will come the necessity for the greater law of consecration, that the Zion of the latter day may become a fit semblance of its prototype, having no poor within her borders.

To that class I acknowledge I once belonged, but never advocated my ideas publicly or privately, for that matter, only as I might meet with some one of the same mind and the conversation turn incidentally upon that subject, preferring rather that each should exercise his own judgment in the matter; not that I did not believe it to be my duty to assist all I could in spreading the work, but at the present in the shape of free-will offerings, or by my own labor in the field where my duty

But by reading the thoughts of others, and by studying the subject myself, and perhaps, by the circumstances in life which have surrounded me, notwithstanding all my efforts to make headway in the world, but more especially being accused by the Lord with being a thief, and his challenge and promise of what he would do if I would only change my course, has changed my feelings and ideas in regard to the matter entirely. I read, "Will a man rob God; yet ye have robbed me; ye are cursed with a curse, for ye have robbed me." Strange after all I had done and strove to do to be accused in that way! It looks now as though I stood in the same condition as those who shall say, "When saw we thee an hungered and fed thee not, or thirsty and gave thee no drink," etc. How had I robbed God? Had not the latch string of my door always hung on the outside? Had not my cupboard doors always been unlocked? Had not my purse strings always been loosened ready for my right hand to slip in and take of its contents and slide it into the traveling elder's hand in a manner that my left hand should not know what my right hand had done? Had I not traveled hundreds of miles to declare the word and watch over the interests of my brethren and sisters until I am now getting old and worn out? Well perhaps so; still you have robbed me! How, Lord, wherein have I robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. You have tried to be a law unto yourself, to come up to my help in your own way instead of living according to the law I have given. Thus may each of my brethren and sisters who have not yet settled their minds in regard to this question, hold a conversation with the Lord after reading Malachi 3:8,9.

"But," says one, "this was said to Judah as a part of Israel nearly twenty-five

Well, suppose it was, has he not through the Choice Seer and through our own Joseph commanded us to bring our tithes into the storehouse or into the hands of the Bishop? And are you not of Israel? I came to the conclusion that I was, and therefore he was talking to me. I then read that the Lord issued a challenge (don't be scared at the word, for that is what it is) in this wise: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of Hosts, and all nations shall call you blessed, for ye shall be a delightsome land, saith the Lord of Hosts."

There are promises for you, if you will accept the challenge, sufficient to satisfy the most exacting, I should think; at least I thought so, accepted the challenge, and threw down the gauntlet.

But, the next question was, When shall I begin? I have got nothing to begin to pay tithing on. I was told the Lord did not expect tithing if we had nothing to tithe, give your free-will offering when you have anything to spare, and it will be all right. Spare, there's the rub! If our own natures and apparent necessities are consulted, when does that time come! I had been doing that all along for years in the manner stated above, which was all well in its place, but I realized nothing in the likeness of the blessings promised through obedience to God's law. true I had always been blessed so far with the necessaries of life, but if I had stayed longer where I was, it began to look as though I would never be able to get away at all, and possibly land on the poor farm. I left and came where I am now living, but it was the same old thing, and it took two years to bring myself to the point of commencement, waiting Micawber like, for something to turn up. I was still waiting for something to tithe. At length something began to turn and I found myself the possessor of fourteen dollars, with an offer of a partnership in business with a man but little better off than myself. Into business I went, and I then told my Heavenly Father what I had done, and what I intended to do, and asked his blessing upon the venture. I then began to pay my tithing, not upon what I had specially, but upon what I might some day have, and I kept up my payments regularly every month (save one) for nearly two years, when there came a time that I could find out what I had made, which proved to be five hundred dollars over and above my needs. when I went and squared up with the Bishop's Agent for tithing upon that amount, he counting up what I had paid, finding the balance due, which I settled. I am giving my experience and for that reason place the ingoing and outcoming figures, and have proved the thought of my mind when I began, that the best time to begin paying tithing is when you have nothing, and leave the results with God. I have since taken my money, established myself in business again and commenced paying my tithing as before, and when I come to another point where I can tell how I stand, myself and the agent can have another settlement. The Lord has thus far blessed me, and I am willing to trust him still, for his promises are yea and amen to all those who put their trust in him.

And now I would ask, Who is there in the church who can not go and do likewise, especially if they be men or women of sound body, a thing I have not, nor never had that I can remember, although I have and do enjoy a good sound constitution, and I have concluded that if every one would do as I have done thus far, prove the Lord and his promises and still go on proving him, we would hear no more cries for help from the Bishop. His hands would be loosed, and when the cry would come up from Macedonia or any other point "Come over and help us," he would be able to respond, and respond in the Lord's way, and thus avert a growing evil, which is already beginning to show its slimy head.

At our conferences we pass resolutions and by our votes pledge ourselves to sustain with our faith, prayers and means, the Bishop and his agents, but I fear from appearances that when the conference has closed, many, very many go home and the thought scarcely ever enters their minds again (especially the means part) until at the next conference when the same formality is gone through with. I tremble sometimes for Zion when I remember what she has passed through and am led to recognize the pitfalls she has to escape before it can be said of her, She is "the joy of the whole earth."

My advice, then, would be to those who have something to tithe, tithe it! to those who have nothing to tithe, pay your tithing any way, and accept the Lord at his word; and if my experiences are worth anything, pay your tithing, take care of your receipts, and the time will come under the promise when you can make a settlement. 'Tis true I have not lived at the top of the pile, neither have I rolled in luxuries nor clothed myself in purple and fine linen; but I have had plenty and have striven to inherit a contented mind; whatever might come, therein to be content. I have ever striven to recognize the hand of the Lord in all things, and can now look back and see many things which at the time appeared hard to bear, were indeed but blessings in disguise, drawing me onward in the race for eternal life; demonstrating the truth that all things work together for good to them that fear God and keep his commandments. Pay your tithing. When? Now. your tithing. Winen.

EXPLANATION OF JOHN 3: 23.

"No man hath ascended up to heaven but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of Man which is in heaven.

In the Herald of August 17th Bro. T. F. Stafford, in an article headed "He that is least," says: "I have many times requested a solution of this passage, and am still waiting. Will some one please tell us and set the mind at rest?"

Being interested in the subject myself I will essay to answer the question. The term heaven does not always denote the same place or condition. Hence the place of God's habitation is called heaven. The firmament above us is called heaven. Sometimes the religious world is called heaven, as in Revelations 12: 1-4, 7, etc. When Christ came he preached the kingdom of heaven. In all these different usages, however, it will be observed that the term "heaven" is used to designate the highest relative condition.

The place of God's habitation is called heaven because it is the highest condition that man can conceive, God being sover-eign in authority. The firmament is called heaven because it is the highestcondition with which mortality is connected. The religious world is called heaven because its laws are the most elevated known to man; hence is distinguished from the political or moral laws by which man is governed. So when Christ came preaching that the kingdom of God, or the kingdom of heaven, was at hand, it was equivalent to saying that a higher code of laws were to be established and a corresponding authority to be recognized; in fact it was a call to "come up higher." Christ taught this truth very forcibly when he said, "Among those that are born of woman there is not a greater prophet than John the Baptist; but he that is least in the kingdom of God is greater than he."-Luke 7: 28.

John was born under the Mosaic law and the dispensation of that law was inferior to the law of the kingdom of heaven which was afterward established. John taught the same truth when he said, "He that is from above [Christ] is above all: he that is of the earth [himself] is earthy, and speaketh of the earth: he that cometh from heaven is above all."—John 3: 31.

Some may say, John was not of the "earth," but was "a man sent of God." True, but we must remember we are speaking of the relative authority of the "bridegroom" and his "friend." John was commissioned to preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins, testifying that the Christ should baptize with the Holy Ghost and with fire. He was not commissioned to administer the baptism of the Spirit. When our bodies are baptized it is into death, but when we receive the baptism of the Spirit it is into life, hence John's baptism was for the burial of the old man of sin, but the baptism of the Spirit is for a new life unto righteousness. The former John could administer, the latter he could not; hence he said, "A man can receive nothing except it be given him from heaven."-John

"But," it may be said, "John opened the door for Christ."

True, but a man may officiate as a servant, as John did, and yet not be allowed the full privilege of the house. Christ went to John to gain entrance into the "kingdom" because that was the only legal method of entering in, but after Christ had thus complied with the law of righteousness he received what John could not bestow upon him—the birth of the Spirit; "And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him."—Matt. 3: 16. It was this that conferred upon Christ his power.

There is the difference between Christ and his followers: they receive the Spirit by measure, whereas Christ received a fullness; hence, speaking of the spiritual gifts, Paul says: "But all these worketh that one and the self-same Spirit, dividing to every one severally as he will. . . . For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free; and have been all made to drink into one Spirit."—I Cor. 12:11, 13. But of Christ,

John the Baptist says: "For he whom God hath sent [Jesus Christ] speaketh the words of God: for God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him."—John 3:34. Jesus says, "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth," Matthew 28:18, and by virtue of this power he commands his apostles to go and preach the gospel.

Now for the examination of the passage alluded to: Christ was explaining the laws governing the entrance into the kingdom of God, and he says, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God."-John 3: 5. Kingdom of God and kingdom of heaven are synonymous, hence if a man enters into the kingdom of God he enters into the kingdom of heaven; and if he enters into the kingdom of heaven he is in the highest condition that he can possibly attain to while on the earth, hence what should the kingdom be called but "heaven?" It is true, other terms may be used, even as the kingdom of England is called England, but it is sometimes called Britain and sometimes Albion. If the Church is the kingdom of heaven, then it is evident it would be proper to call that kingdom "heaven;" in fact, it is its proper name. Hence when Jesus said to Nicodemus, "No man hath ascended up to heaven, but he that came down from heaven, even the Son of Man which is in heaven;"-he simply gave him to understand that he, Jesus, occupied a higher position than any other man; and that the only way by which a man could by any possibility attain to a standing in that condition was by being born of the water and of the Spirit; and that condition he denominated "heaven," declaring that he himself was at that time in that condition -or in heaven. Christ had "ascended up to heaven" by receiving the birth of the water and of the Spirit. He testified that he came from heaven, saying: "The bread of God is he which cometh down from heaven, and giveth life unto the world.... I am the bread of life."— John 6: 33, 35. He was obedient to his Father in all things, hence he could say, "Even the Son of Man which is in heav-

It may seem strange to some that Christ should speak of himself as the only one who had attained to that condition, but we must remember that Christ was the only one who had at that time received the baptism of the Spirit, therefore it was an absolute truth that no other man had yet ascended to that condition. It is true the twelve and the seventies were sent forth, but they received their commission from Christ direct, and not by virtue of the birth of the Spirit, and Christ's language admits of no cavil when he says, "no man hath ascended up to heaven;" nor does it it when he says, "except a man be born of water and of the Spirit he can not enter into the kingdom of heaven." All that they were permitted to preach was repentance, saying, "the kingdom of heaven is at hand." It was not yet established for the Spirit had not yet been given, except to Jesus; but Jesus promised his disciples that he would pray the Father for them that they might receive it; but the promise was conditional on his going to the Father. Hence he says, "It is expedient far you that I go away; for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart, I will send him unto you."—John 16: 7.

This promise was fulfilled on the day of Pentecost, and from that time those having authority laid on hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost.

Paul speaking of this says: "When he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men... And he gave some, apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some pastors and teachers," etc.—Eph. 4: 8, 11, showing that in fulfillment of his promise when he ascended to his Father he gave these gifts to his church for its establishment and perfection; and showing conclusively that this authority was necessary, and that the kingdom of heaven might now beattained by those willing to accept of citizenship therein, being born of the water and of the Spirit.

Your brother in Christ, CHAS. H. PORTER.

SELF-EXAMINATION.

Some time ago I examined myself, scribbled it out and sent it to the Herald and it appeared in due time. But I found myself wanting in believing then, and said the Martyr did receive some revelations from the adversary about the gathering, the Nauvoo house, and baptism for the dead. But since then I have read and reread the revelation and considered the case for myself, and now I am a unit that far. But I am sorry to say that I am yet wanting on two points; the first is where the Lord says in Malachi 3: 10, 11: "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts."

Now these are great promises! But poor me, I am lacking in confidence to take him at his word! And why? He is not a man, to lie; nor the son of man to repent; and why should I lack confidence in his word? If I lack confidence in his temporal blessings which are now, how can I have faith in his promise of eternal Reader, if you want riches, try now; here is a chance. And now it puzzles me to know how I can be a child of God and not believe his promises!

The next point is in the Doctrine and Covenants, in the Word of Wisdom, where it speaks of strong drink and says that tobacco is not good for man. Now as long as I use it I say that it is good for me, for a man's actions speak louder than his mouth. When I am not a unit here, the adversary will say, It is all temporal things; you can not lose your soul for temporal things' sake. O, there is room for doubt here! Reader, if you have a boy, and that boy thinks he is better qualified to know things than you and disputes your word, is it not full time to call him to repentance for his unbelief? Now if I can not believe my heavenly Father about temporal things, how can I believe him on spiritual and heavenly things? Will not my unbelief shut me out of the heavenly mansion!

Now I am in unity with the church except these two points, and it is written, "Whosoever keepeth the whole law, but faileth in one point, he is guilty of the whole." But where am I? My conscience whispers, "outside!"

Reader, it seems to me that I was born before the due time-before I got to believe all things as I should, and before I became as a little child, I was baptized and made a member of the church. would to God that all the elders would take a lesson here, and not hurry the applicants to be baptized until they believe all things first that is required of them. Brethren, on these two points, what are you going to do about it? For my part, I am going to fight and conquer. The world and the flesh I have conquered, and now but two enemies remain, the devil and self. Now, half-way will not answer my purpose. I determine to be a unit, not in one or two things, but in all things, temporal and spiritual.

ZAYI.

Or the ruins of Zayi he says: "The range of buildings on the second terrace was two hundred and twenty feet in length and sixty feet in depth, and had four doorways on each side of the grand staircase. Those on the left which are all that remain, have two columns in each doorway, each column being six feet six inches high, roughly made, with square capitals, like Doric, but wanting the grandeur pertaining to all known remains of this ancient order. The platform of this terrace is thirty feet in front, and twenty-five in the rear. building is one hundred and fifty feet in length by eighteen feet deep, and has seven doorways entering into as many apartments."—Ibid, vol. 2, p. 18-21.

LABNA.

Of the ruins of Labna he says: "The plate opposite represents a pyramidal mound, holding aloft the most curious and extraordinary structure we had seen in the country. A narrow platform forms the top of the mound. The building faces the south, and when entire measured fortythree feet in front and twenty feet in depth. It had three doorways, of which one, with eight feet of the whole structure, has fallen, and is now in ruins. The center doorway opens into two chambers, each twenty feet long and six feet wide. Above the cornice of the building rises a gigantic per-pendicular wall to the height of thirty feet, once ornamented from top to bottom, and from one side to the other, with colossal figures and other designs in stucco, now broken and in fragments, but still presenting a curious and extraordinary appearance, such as the art of no other people ever produced. Along the top, standing out on the wall, was a row of death's heads; underneath were two lines of human figures in alto relievo (of which scattered arms and legs alone remain), the grouping of which so far as it could be made out, showed considerable proficiency in that most difficult department of the art of design. Over the center doorway, constituting the principal ornament of the wall, was a colossal figure seated, of which only a large tippet and girdle, and some other detached portions, have been preserved. The figures and ornaments on this wall were painted; the remains of bright colors are still visible, defying the action of the elements. If a solitary traveler from the old world could by some strange accident have visited this aboriginal city while it was yet perfect, his account would have seemed more fanciful than any in eastern story, and been considered a subject for Arabian Knights' entertainments. distance of a few hundred feet from this structure, in sight at the same time as we approached it, is an arched gateway, remarkable for its beauty of proportions and grace of ornament."

PECULIAR ORNAMENTATION.

"This is a proper caption for the description of the ruins at Chicken. Stephens says: "Over these stand out in a line six bold projecting curved ornaments, like that presented from the House of the Governor at Uxmal, resembling an elephant's trunk, and the upper center space over the doorway is an irregular circular niche, in which portions of a seated figure with a head-dress of feathers, still remain. The rest of the ornaments are of that distinctive stamp, characteristic of the ancient American cities, and unlike the designs of any other people, with which the reader must now be familiar. A grand staircase, fiftysix feet wide, the largest we saw in the country, rises to the top. On one side of the staircase a huge breach twenty or thirty feet deep has been made by the proprietor, for the purpose of getting out building stone, which discloses only solid masonry. The grand staircase is thirty-two feet high, and has thirty-nine steps. the top of the structure stands a range of buildings, with a platform of fourteen feet in front extending all around. cumference of this building is six hundred and thirty-eight feet, and its height when entire, was sixty-five feet. It is one hundred and four feet long and thirty feet wide, and the broad platform around it, though overgrown with grass several feet high, formed a noble promenade, commanding a magnificent view of the whole surrounding country. On the side of the staircase are five doorways. The compartments between the doorways contained combinations of ornaments of unusual taste and elegance, both in arrangements and design. The two extreme doorways open into chambers, in each of which are three long recesses in the back wall, extending from the floor to the ceiling, all of which, from the remains still visible, were once ornamented with paintings. All the walls had been covered with painted designs, now wantonly defaced; but the remains of which present colors in some places, still bright and vivid; and among these remains detached portions of human figures continually recur, well drawn, the heads adorned with plumes of feathers, and the hands bearing shields and spears. All attempt at description would fail, and much more would an attempt to describe the strange interest of walking along the overgrown platform of this gigantic and desolate building."—Ibid, p. 293-6.

CAMINO REAL.

Again he says of the same group of ruins:-"Passing among these vestiges, we come out upon the camino real, and crossing it, again enter an open field, containing the extraordinary edifice represented in the plate opposite, which on first reaching the field of ruins, we rode in on horseback to examine it. It consists of two immense parallel walls, each two hundred and seventy-four feet long, thirty feet thick, and one hundred and twenty feet apart. One hundred feet from the northern extremity, facing the open space between the walls, stands on an elevation a building thirty-five feet long, containing a single chamber, with the front fallen, and, rising among the rubbish, the remains of two columns, elaborately ornamented with sculpture; the whole interior wall being exposed to view, covered from the floor to the peak of the arch with sculptured figures in bass relief, much worn and faded."-Ibid, p.

TULOOM.

Of the ruins of Tuloom he says: "The next day was made memorable by the unexpected discovery that this forest buried city was encompassed by a wall, which had resisted all the elements of destruction at work upon it, and was still erect and in good preservation. The character of this structure could not be mistaken. It was in the strictest sense a city wall, the first that we had seen that could be identified as such beyond all question, and gave color to the many stories we had heard of walls, inducing us to believe that many of the vestiges we had seen were parts of continual lines of enclosures. The engraving represents the plan of this wall as taken It forms a parallelogram from the sea. abutting on the sea, the high precipitous cliff forming a sea wall fifteen hundred The wall is of rude confeet in length. struction, and composed of rough, flat stones, laid upon each other without mortar or cement of any kind, and it varies from eight to thirteen feet in thickness. The south side has two gateways, each about five feet wide. At the distance of six hundred and fifty feet the wall turns at right angles, and runs parallel to the sea. At the angle, elevated so as to give a commanding view, and reached by ascending a few steps is the watch-tower represented in the following engraving. It is twelve feet square and has two doorways. The interior is plain, and against the back wall is a small altar, at which the guard might offer up prayer for the preservation of the city. But no guard sits in the watch tower now. . . . The west line parallel with the sea has a single gateway, at the angle is another watch-tower like that before presented, and the wall then runs straight to the sea. The whole circuit is two thousand eight hundred feet, and the reader may form some idea of its state of preservation from the fact that, except toward the abutments on the sea, we measured the whole length along the top of the wall. The plan is symmetrical, encloses a rectangular area, and, as appears in the engraving, the Castillo occupies the principal and central portion."-Ibid p. 394-8.

When you have read this account as given by Mr. Stephens, let me humbly request that you turn back and reread what Mosiah said in relation to the wicked king Noah, building "watch-towers," "palaces" and "cities." Unbelievers in the Book of Mormon may well express astonishment at the revelations of the confirmation of an early civilization of America, but let those who have faith in the history and inspiration of the book, be patient and diligent in gathering and properly classifying all evidence in support of the truth.

AKE.

Stephens says of these ruins: "The plate opposite represents a great mound towering in full sight from the door of the hacienda, and called El Palacio, or the Palace. The ascent is on the south side by an immense staircase, one hundred and thirty-seven feet wide, forming an approach of rude grandeur, perhaps equal to any that ever existed in the country. Each step is four feet five inches long, and one foot five inches in hight. The platform on the top is two hundred and twentyfive feet in length, and fifty in breadth. On this great platform stand thirty-six shafts or columns, in three parallel rows of twelve, about ten feet apart from north to south, and fifteen from east to west. They are from fourteen to sixteen feet in hight, four feet on each side, and are composed of separate stones from one to two feet in thickness. In the same vicinity are other mounds of colossal dimensions, one of which is also called the Palace, but of a different construction and without pillars." —Ibid, p. 441-2.

RUINS IN HONDURAS.

Bancroft speaking of the ruins on a large plateau in Honduras, says: "On the eastern half chiefly, but also spreading over the whole surface of this lofty plateau, is the most extensive group of ancient works in the whole region, and in fact the only one of which we have a description at all in detail. As in the other localities of this part of the state, the group is made up for the most part of rectangular oriented mounds, some of stone, but most of earth, with a stone facing. The smaller mounds are apparently arranged in groups according to some system; they vary in size from twenty to thirty feet in height, having from two to four stages. larger pyramidal tumuli are from sixty to one hundred feet long, and of proportionate width and altitude, with in many cases a flight of steps in the center of the side facing the west."—Native Races, vol. 4,

ARTIFICIAL PONDS AND PAVED ROADS,

The finding of which indicate the high state of civilization attained by the ancient people of this continent, of which the authorities speak as follows: "At Palenque are remains of a well-built aqueduct; and near the ruins, especially in Yucatan, are frequently found the remains of many finely constructed aguadas or artificial lakes. The bottom of these lakes were made of flat stones laid in cement, several layers deep. In Yucatan traces of a very ancient paved road have been found. This road ran north and south, and probly led to cities in the region now covered by the great wilderness. It was raised above the graded level of the ground, and made very smooth. These antiquities show that this section of the continent was anciently occupied by a people admirably skilled in the arts of masonry, building, and architectural decoration. Some of their works can not be excelled by the best of our constructors and decorators."-An. Am., p. IOI.

Here is what Stephens has to say upon the same subject: "These aguadas had become to us interesting objects of consideration. Ever since our arrival in the country, we had been told the they were artificial, and, like the ruined cities we were visiting, were the works of the ancient inhabitants. At first we had considered these accounts unreliable, and so nearly approaching the marvelous that we put but little faith in them; but as we advanced they assumed a more definite character. We were now in a region where the people were entirely dependent upon the agudas; and considered them the works of the antiguos; and we obtained at length what we had long sought for, certain, precise and definite information, which would not admit of question or doubt. Failing in his attempt to procure water from the well, before referred to, in the plaza, in 1835, Senor Frego turned his attention to this aguada. He believed that it had been used by the ancients as a reservoir, and took advantage of the dry season to make an examination, which satisfied him that his supposition was correct. For many years it had been abandoned, and it was then covered three or four feet deep with mud. At first he was afraid to undertake with much vigor the work of cleaning it out, for the prejudices of the people were against it, and they feared that, by disturbing the aguada, the scanty supply they furnished might be cut off. Iu 1836 he procured permission from the government, by great exertions secured the co-operation of all the ranchos and haciendas for leagues around, and at length fairly enlisting them all in the task, at one time he had at work fifteen hundred Indians, with eight superintendents (major domos). On clearing out the mud, he found an artificial bottom of large flat stones. These were laid upon each other | er aguada."—Ibid, p. 234-5.

and the intertices wese filled in with clay of red and brown color, of a different character of any in the neighborhood. The stones were many layers deep, and he did not go down to the bottom, least by some accident the foundation should be injured, and the fault imputed to him. Near the center in places which he indicated as we road along the bank, he discovered four ancient wells. These were five feet in diameter, faced with smooth stone not covered with cement, eight yards deep, and at the time of the discovery were filled with mud. And, besides these, he found along the margin upwards of four hundred casimbas, or pits, being holes into which the water filtered, and which with the wells, were intended to furnish a supply when the aguada should be dry. Hundreds are now perhaps buried in the woods, which once furnished this element of life to the teeming population of Yucatan."—Incidents of Travel in Yucatan, vol. 2, p. 208.

JALAL'S POND.

Speaking of an artificial pond near the rancho of Jalal, Stephens says: "When we first came down upon its banks it presented one of the most beautifully picturesque scenes we met with in the country. It was completely enclosed by a forest, and had large trees growing around the banks, and overhanging the water. The surface was covered with water weeds like a carpet of vivid green, and the aguada had a much higher interest than any derived from mere beauty. According to the accounts we had received at the rancho, ten years before it was dry, and the bottom covered with mud several feet deep. The Indians were in the habit of digging pits in it for the purpose of collecting the water which filtered through, and in some of these excavations they struck upon an ancient well, which, on clearing it away, was found to be of singular form and construction. It had a square platform at the top, and beneath was a round well faced with smooth stones, from twenty to thirty-five feet deep. Below this was another squre platform, and under the latter another well of less diameter, and about the same depth. The discovery of this well induced farther excavations, which, as the whole country was interested in the matter, were prosecnted until upward of forty wells were discovered, differing in their character and construction, and some idea of which may be formed by the engraving which follows. These were all cleared out and the whole aguada repaired, since which it furnishes a supply during the greater part of the dry season, and when this fails the wells appear, and continue the supply until the rains come again."—Ibid, p. 224-8.

THREE AGUADAS.

Describing another trip in Yucatan he says: "At half past nine we reached a large aguada, the banks of which were so muddy that it was impossible to get down to it to drink. A league beyond we reached another surrounded by fine shade trees, with a few ducks floating upon its surface. . . At one oclock we came to anoth-

SACBEY ROADWAY.

While speaking of the ruins of Sacbey, Stephens says: "A short distance beyond is one of the most interesting monuments of antiquity in Yucatan. It is a broken platform or roadway of stone, about eight feet wide and eight or ten inches high, crossing the road, and running off into the woods on both sides. I have before referred to it as called by the Indians Sacbey, which means, in the Maya language, a paved way of pure white stone. The Indians say it traverses the country from Kabah to Uxmal; and that on it couriers traveled, bearing letters to and from the lords of those cities, written on leaves or the bark of trees."—Ibid, p. 122.

CALZADA.

In relation to this paved road Priest says: "From this edifice there is a calzada, or paved road, of ten or twelve yards in width, running to the southeast to a limit that has not been discovered with certainty, but some aver that it goes in the direction of Chicken Itza."—American Antiquities, p. 341.

THE LAVA ROAD.

More wonderful than all is the account furnished by Bancroft: "Father Acuna, an enthusiastic antiquary of the Rich Coast, living at Pariso, near Cartago, reports an ancient road, which he believes to have originally connected Cartago with the port of Martina, and to have formed part of a grand aboriginal system of highways from the Nicaraguan frontier to the Isthmus, with branches to various points along the Atlantic coast. The road is described as thirty-six feet wide, paved with rounded blocks of lava, and guarded at the sides with sloaping walls three feet in hight. Where the line of the road crossed deep ravines, bridges were not employed, but in their stead the ascent and descent were effected by means of massy steps cut in the rocky sides."-Native Races, vol. 4, p. 24.

METALS, SCULPTURE, POTTERY, ETC.

"In South America we have only the most distinct accounts of Peru. And although the government of the Incas possessed no regular city but Cuzco, many interesting specimehs have been exhumed from the Guaces, or mounds, with which they covered the dead. 'Among these,' says Dr. Reese, 'are mirrors of various dimensions of hard, shining stones, highly polished; vessels of earthernware of different forms; hatchets and other instruments; some destined for war and others for labor. Some were of flint, some of copper, hardened by an unknown process, to such a degree as to supply the place of iron."—Mayer's Mexico, p. 227.

I do not concede by the above that iron did not exist or was unknown by the ancient people.

GOLD.

In speaking of antiquities of Costa<sup>o</sup> Rica, Mr. Bancroft says: "Mr. Boyle makes the general statement that gold ornaments and idols are constantly found, and that the ancient mines which supplied the precious metal are often seen by modern prospectors. Dr. Merritt also exhibited specimens of gold, both wrought and unwrought, from the mines of Costa Rica, at a meeting of the American Ethnological Society, in February, 1862."—Native Races, vol. 4, p. 23.

OBSIDIAN.

The same author in speaking of the antiquities of Mexico, says: "At the Cerro de las Navajas, near Monte Jacal, about midway between Real del Monte and Tulancingo, are the mines or quarries from which the natives of Anahuac are believed to have obtained the large quantities of obsidian used by them in the manufacture of their implements and weapons. At Atotonilco el Grande south of Guantla, Mr. Burkart found pieces of obsidian of many sided pyramidal form, from which knives had apparently been split off by the natives in ancient times. The art of working intractable material has been practically lost in modern times."—Ibid, p. 544-5. (To be continued.)

LEGENDS OF SANDWICH ISLANDS

J. B. Herzog, who has been in Chicago during the past week on a visit to America from his home in the Hawaiian islands, tells most interesting stories of the habits and customs of the subjects of King Kalakaua.

Mr. Herzog has lived in Hawaii since 1873, and was a witness to the scenes when King Lunalilo died and the Kamehamed dynasty, which has occupied the throne more than 100 years, came to an end. Nearly all of the current literature on the subject of Hawaii and the inhabitants of the islands deals with these phases of the life of the country which may be seen in Honolulu.

"These are the least interesting of the many curious scehes of Hawaiian life," said Mr. Herzog. "The city-bred people are so much in contact with the Europeans who practically control the government that many of their peculiarities as aborigines of this group of islands in the wide Pacific ocean are wanting.

"It is only in the wild, mountainous districts that the dark-skinned natives can be found in almost in the same condition as their ancesters were when Jean Gaetano landed there in 1755. Although most of the vessels that ply in the Pacific ocean touch more or less frequently at Honolulu, the natives on the other islands, and even in the interior of Hawaii, knew but little of the white man and learned but little of his ways, his civilization, or his religion. They retain to a great extent the strange mixture or idolatry and monotheism which prevailed among them for 800 years prior to the landing of Capt. Cook in 1778, or rather up to the time when King Liholiho declared himself an atheist and decreed the destruction of every temple and idol in the kingdom.

"The native tradition of the early religion of the islands show some strange combinations of the beliefs of many nations with which it seems almost impossible that the Hawaiians could have been in communication. They have, almost without a detail missing, the Mosaic or Jewish account of the genesis of the world and the human race. They have the story of the creation, the fall of man, the deception of the first human pair by a revolted angel, the deluge, and the repopulation of the earth.

"Besides this they had an idea of God that corresponds almost precisely to the Christian trinity. Hikapoloa was the Triune God, and was composed of 'Kane,' the originator, 'Ku,' the architect, and 'Lono,' the executor of the will of the trinity. The first man was Kumuhonua, and the first woman Keola-Kuhonua. Kumuhonua was made of red clay except the head, which was of white clay mingled with the spittle of Kane. The woman was made from a rib taken from Kumuhonua. They were placed in a garden in which were three rivers, 'the waters of life,' the sacred bread-fruit tree and the sacred apple tree. The water of the rivers had the power of restoring the dead to life.

"Kanaloa was the wicked principal, and in the form of a lizard he tempted the first man and woman, who were driven from paradise Paliuli. Nuu was the Hawaiian Noah. The story of the wanderings of Abraham is also preserved.

"The origin of the twelve tribes, the adventures of Joseph, and all the salient points of Jewish history are portions of the Hawaiian traditions. Years ago they practiced circumcision, and in some places the rite is yet observed.

"The Jewish belief, so far as practiced, gave away later to idolatry and mythology very similar, at one period, to the later Grecian pantheism, and subsequently more akin to the Egyptian system.

"The deification of the manifestations of the forces of nature followed, and the spirit of evil became incarnate in Pele, the awful, dreadful goddess of the volcanoes, and temples to her honor were erected all over the islands. The people possessed a very fertile imagination and the wildest pantheism obtained among them. The power of the many orders of priesthood was so greately increased that they ruled the land tyrannically and without judgment. Heua, one of the ancient kings, rebelled and slew his high prist, but was punished with madness.

"Pele, the volcano goddess and here five brothers and three sisters, each representing a volcano, was the most fearful of all the malignant dieties with which the imagination of the people had cursed them. To this goddess, who, in her anger, poured out hot ashes and boiling lava from her residence in the perturbed crater of the volcano over the unfortunate people, they offered continual prayer and sacrifices. Sometimes the sacrifice was a handsome young man, for the goddess was very partial to this kind of a burnt offering.

"It was the legend that oftentimes a beautiful young woman would make her appearance in a village and pay court to some noble youth and the pair would mysteriously disappear. This was Pele, and she would carry the young man with her to the fearful caldron of fire which was her home.

"When she manifested signs of anger it was not uncommon for the terror-stricken populace to endeavor to appease her by casting into the volcano's open crater some youth selected for the sacrifice by lot.

"The people have the same beliefs yet, and the same sacrifices are paid to Pele now as then, only in a less ostentatious man-

"How do they manage to appease Pele now? Her temples are destroyed and her priesthood is no more," asked Mr. Herzog of an old man who muttered a prayer as he saw a column of smoke ascend from the crater of Kilanea.

"After a long questioning look of mingled distrust and fear, with yet some confidence in his interrogator, as if to say 'Do you wish to know the truth?' the old chief replied: 'The offerings are still made.'

41n 1882 the volcano of Mauna Loa broak out into a more than usual violent The poisonous ashes thrown eruption. high in the air covered the entire surrounding country, and a broad stream of lava coursed down the mountsin side till it came within a mile or two of the bay of Hilo, and it seemed almost certain that the town would be wiped from the face of the earth by the awful burning flood. An aged chieftainess, Ruth, one of the royal line of the Kamehamehas, heard of the impending danger and said: 'I will save Hilo; Pele will not refuse to hearken to the prayer of a Kamehameha.'

"The old priestess and a large attendance took a steamer from Honolulu, where she was living, and proceeded to Hilo, which by this time was only a short distance from the slowly moving stream of lava. She ordered an altar to Pele to be erected back of the village and on the very edge of the molten torrent. Here she stood and made her supplication to the volcano goddess, at the same time casting offerings of pigs and fowls into the boiling lava. She assured the people that all danger was averted, and returned to Honolulu. That day the moving lava stopped, and now stands like a wall around Hilo.

"The report of this miracle caused a wide-spread return of the people to their ancient gods.

"Christianity has made but little progress in the islands. The natives recognize in the teachings of the Bible so many of the traditions which have come down to them from their early days that they consider Christianity a sort of imitation of their own, both being taken, as they believe, from a common source.

"The pantheism and idolatry and system of sacrifice, animal and human, which was grafted on the original theories of the creation, still maintains among many of the islanders, but more in theory than in practice. The main body of the native population seem to have lost all desire for religion, either new or old, and have sunk into a sort of stupor. There are only about 50,000 natives on the islands, and they are being forced to the wall in every way by the more aggressive foreigners.

"The country is very rich in legendary lore, and almost every myth of ancient southern Europe, from the story of Helen and Paris to the labors of Hercules, find a counterpart in the ancient stories of the islanders. The story of Laieikawai sounds almost identical with the early life of Christ, only Laieikawi was a girl. Almost the same incidents—such as the sign in the sky, the worship of the wise men, the birth in a cavern, the decree of slaughter by the king, the flight into a strange country-take place in the life of this girl. In the end she triumphs over all her enemies and is worshiped as a deity.

"The ancient Hawaiians seem to have caught on to some of the doctrines now preached by the occultists and theosophists. They believed in the 'projection of the astral double, or in the ability of the pious devotee to leave his body at will, and with his disembodied spirit to go whither he chose."

Miscellaneous.

THE GENERAL ANNUAL REUNION.

Arrangements are being made on an ample scale, to render this meeting the very best of its kind ever held in the church.

Prospects indicate that the attendance will be the largest ever had, and that the comfort and convenience of all in attendance will be made comparatively complete.

The Reunion grounds are being put into good shape, also all the roads leading to them; water and fuel of good quality will be had in abundance, and food supplies will be kept in good supply at cheap rates.

The grounds are located on a gentle declivity, surrounded on all quarters by high ridges, and are bountifully supplied with shade and by elm, linden, hickory, oak, walnut, other trees; and running near at hand is a spring brook, furnishing water for baptismal purposes and for teams. The camp will be ten miles north of the city of Missouri Valley, and may be reached from there by carraige, over good roads, at about fifty cents per passenger; and it may be reached also by carriage from Mondamin, a town five miles west, for twenty-five cents per passenger.

Commodious boarding accommodations will be furnished at twenty-five cents or less per meal; and no effort will be spared by the Reunion committee to see that the wants of the visitors are supplied promptly, at cheap rates, and in a courteous manner.

A general invitation is hereby given to all to come up to this yearly assembly to seek and serve God; and such of the ministry of the church as can find it practicable to come and assist in the services are specially requested to attend and aid as they can

It is hoped the First Presidency, the Bishopric, and as many of the Twelve and other missionaries as can come will be in attendance.

The committee on arrangements earnestly request the prayers of all the church that the Lord may bless and direct the efforts being made to render this meeting successful, and give abundant increase in grace and gifts, in goodly influence and numbers, and do wondrously in the lifting up of Zion and in the salvation of souls. By order of the Committee.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

The quarterly conference of the Northern Kansas district will convene at Fanning, Doniphan county, Kansas, twenty miles north of Atchison, on Saturday (to a. m.) and Sunday, September 7th and 8th. We earnestly request that all the elders will co-opearte with us in observing the law—D. & C. 17: 13. Shall we not, brethren, try for once to have a full representation. Let all that can, come; and those that can not, please report by letter.

E. C. BRAND.

Conference of the Western Maine district will convene with the Brooksville branch, September 28th, at two o'clock p.m. The time is postponed from September 1st, as published in the minutes of our last conference. Remember the 28th. We hope all will attend.

WM. G. PERT. Dist. Pres.

District conference will be held at the little town of Meadow Grove, Madison county, Nebraska, commencing Saturday, September 14th, at one o'clock p. m., and will continue over Sunday, the 15th. Those coming by railroad can enquire for C. N. Hutchins at this place. The meeting will be held in the grove if the weather is suitable. Come Saints; bring the Sptrit of the gospel with you and let us have a good time.

The Eastern Maine district conference will be held at Jonesport, Maine, October 5th. S. O. Foss, Dist. Pres.

DIED.

BRABY .- Sr. Maria Braby was born February 10th, 1841, and was baptized into the church John F. Adams at Buffalo Prairie, Illinois. She was married to Elder George Braby, January 1st, 1867. She was the mother of three children, one of which died in infancy, and one, a daughter, died four days later than her mother. She was sick at the time of her mother's death and being a child fondly attached to her only parent, the shock was too much for her frail body to endure. She was a lovable child and was almost idolized by her mother, who said before she died that she was willing to die if she could only take Perly with her. Her prayer was granted. She was a true and noble woman; one of those whose mind and heart was ever given to exalted thought and tender sympathy. Pure and gentle, gifted in conversation, no one could converse with her without feeling the influence of the wisdom and purity of her mind. During the many years she belonged to the church she has kept the faith, rearing her children in the fear and admonition of the Lord. One daughter, a lovely, gentle girl of seventeen, survives her. May God bless her with strength to bear the fiery trial through which she is called to pass. Sr. Braby wrote a number of excellent articles for publication; the name of "Mormonia" will not She passed the shade of death's dark portal,

The deceased was born at Farmington, Van Buren county, Iowa, December 13th, 1876, twelve years ago. Bertha professed faith in Christ, and on November 2d, 1887, according to her Lord's command she was baptized. She was a great sufferer. Her sickness was borne with a calm resignation to the divine will. Her death was triumphant through faith in Him who conquered death.

There is bliss in the thought that though the tie is no broken
That once firmly encircled the family band,
The example she left us remains as a token
While her spirit is resting in that beautiful land.
Each word and each look, can we ever forget them,
Or cease to remember the tones of her voice?
Ah, no; they were gems, and affection has set them
Where their lustre will yet bid our sad hearts rejoice.
Then why should we weep for the spirit that's free,
Or regret that the tie has been riven,
Since Jesus so sweetly said: "Come unto me;
For of such is the kingdom of heaven."

McKiernan.—Lucretia, daughter of Elder James and Sr. Hattie McKiernan, born at Farmington, Iowa, August 1st, 1884, died August 17th, 1889, aged 5 years and 17 days. The many friends of the bereaved parents sympathize with them in this their time of great sorrow. May the blessed thought that their little ones are "Safe in the arms of Jesus; safe from the world's temptations," greatly comfort their hearts and cause them to feel that though they have lost their treasures heaven has gained them as jewels. How fast the little ones are going and how fast heaven is filling up with them. Jesus is still saying in his gracious word "For of such is the kingdom of heaven." He when upon earth took little children up in his arms and now in the paradise of God bids them welcome and tenderly and lovingly cares for them as a "Good shepherd carrying the lambs in his bosom." It was sad to see the two dear ones taken from the home at the same time. May the God of all grace be unto this afflicted family as One who comforteth the mourners! The funeral services were conducted by Rev. J. F. Jenkins, after which the remains were interred in the Croton cemeterv. J. F. J.

ONLY LENT.

[From an unknown friend.] How we watched those buds of promise Growing on the parent stem, As each petal was unfolding, Choicest fragrance from it came. Nature gives no brighter flowers Than those human blossoms rare; All who knew the gentle Bertha Mourn the loss of one so fair. Pure and true she dwelt among us, Young in years with, mind matured; Eldest daughter, loving sister, Of her peace we feel assured. Dearest father, loving mother, Jesus calls me, I must go, And, oh, could you bear the parting? I would take dear Lulu, too. All the others there are waiting
By the loving Savior's side;
He will take our hands, dear mother,
As we cross the mystic tide.

Oh, my faith is strong that Jesus Will my dear ones bring to me, Father, mother and dear brother; For I can not stay with thee.

Boyn -- Bro. James A. Boyd died of consumption at his home, Fulton, Kentucky, August 16th, 1889. He was born in Newberry county, South Carolina, September 18th, 1821, and was baptized by G. S. Hyde, November 6th, 1881, at Farmington, Graves county, Kentucky. He lived a consistent member and died strong in the faith. He was administered to by Bro. Peter B. Seaton, and he then offered prayer in behalf of his family and said he was willing to die, and that he did not fear death. Bro. Boyd was a member of the Odd Fellows and Masonic fraternities, and their Odd Fellows and Masonic fraternities, and their procession and funeral services will be attended to the fourth Sunday in October. Bro. I. W. Gillen was his choice to preach the funeral sermon. It is a glorious thing to live in a way that we may say as did the brother, "I am not afraid to die."

DUTY OF ELDERS.

The duties of an Elder in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints are varied and single, simple and difficult.

"Ye stand this day all of you before the Lord your God; your captains of your tribes, your elders, and your officers, with all the men of Israel."-Deut. 29: 10.

"Gather unto me all the elders of your tribes, and your officers, that I may speak these words in their ears, and call heaven and earth to record against them."-Deut. 31:28.

"Ask thy elders, and they will tell thee."-Deut. 32: 7.

"Ye rulers of the people, and elders of Israel." -Acts 4: 8.

"And sent it to the elders."-Acts 11: 30.

"And when they had ordained them elders in every church."-Acts 14: 22.

"And when they were come to Jerusalem, they were received of the church, and of the apostles and elders."-Acts 15: 4.

"And the apostles and elders came together for to consider."-Acts 15: 6.

"And as they went through the cities, they delivered them the decrees for to keep, that were ordained of the apostles and elders which were at Jerusalem."-Acts 16: 4.

"Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honor, especially they who labor in the word and doctrine."-I Tim. 5: 17.

"That thou shouldest set in order the things that are wanting, and ordain elders in every city."-Titus 1:5.

"Let him call for the elders; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord."-James 5: 14.

"He ordained priests and elders, by laying on his hands according to the order of God, to preside and watch over the church."-Book of Alma, 4: I.

"The elders are to conduct the meetings as they are led by the Holy Ghost, according to the commandments and revelations of God."-Doc. & Cov. Sec. 17, Par. 9; Sec. 46, Par. 1.

"Every elder, priest, teacher and deacon, is to be ordained according to the gifts and callings of God unto him; and he is to be ordained by the power of the Holy Ghost which is in the one who ordains him."-Ibid, Par. 12.

"The several elders . . . are to meet in conference, . . . and do whatever church business is necessary to be done at the time."—Ibid, par. 13.

"The elders . . . shall teach the principles of my gospel which are in the Bible, and the Book of Mormon, in the which is the fulness of my gospel; and they shall observe the church articles to do them."-Doc. & Cov. 42: 5.

"And the elders shall lay the case before the church."-D. & C. 42: 22.

"Ye shall instruct and edify each other."-D. & C. 43: 3.

"Go ye into all the world; preach the gospel to every creature."-D. & C. 48: 1.

"The offices of elder and bishop are necessary appendages belonging unto the high priesthood." _D. & C. 83: 5.

These quotations, although numerous, do not exhaust the list; but do form the sum of our present article.

"The office of an elder comes under the priesthood of Melchsedek," to which priesthood belongs the right of presidency.

It is the duty of an elder to officiate in the administration of spiritual things, agreeably to the covenants and commandments of the church.—D. & C. 104: 7. In administering in spiritual things an elder must not transcend, contravene, or contradict the covenants and commandments; nor will he ever be led by the Spirit of Christ to do so.

The elders, in their teaching both to the world and to the church, are to remember that the principles of the gospel of Christ are found in the Bible and the Book of Mormon; D. & C. 42:5, and that at the time this revelation was given, February, 1831, the commonly received version of the Bible was the one had and received by the world and the church, and consequently the one meant. The giving of the Inspired Translation, now called the Holy Scriptures, does not effect the removing the obligation to receive, reverence, and teach the principles of truth and righteousness contained in the Bible. It was intended to be a witness for God in the world; and if a witness for God, it is to be heard and used by God's servants on earth for the purpose of convincing the world of the mission of Christ,—the life and immortality brought to light in the gospel. It is therefore the duty of an elder to revere the truths of the Bible, and respect the means through which those truths reach him.

The principles of the gospel are taught in the Book of Mormon, and by the quotation referred to, it is made the duty of elders to teach those principles therein contained.

"They shall observe the church articles to do them," requires a teaching of those articles and a practical adaptation of them to the life of the elder. It is his duty therefore to learn what those articles are: and having learned them, to act in accordance therewith.

It is the duty of the elders to "meet in conference" as often as practicable, or necessary. When they do thus meet together, it is their duty to do whatever church business it is necessary should be done.

The general business which should occupy the attention of the elders at such conferences should be the "spreading the gospel," the work of the ministry "in the preaching of the word," and the "care of the churches," the well-being of the children of modern Israel, and the "edifying and instructing" of each other in the "things of the kingdom." Whatever will conduce to the furthering of either of the above objects, not contradicting nor contravening the principles of the gospel, the church articles, and the commandments and revelations of God to the church, the elders should do. Nor is it necessary that every separate act must be authorized by a specific declaration from God, before its accomplishment is attempted.

In the conducting of these conference meetings the elders are to observe the admonitions of the Spirit, the dictates of wisdom, the suggestions of propriety, and preserve due decorum, order, peace, dignity and solemnity, during their sessions. It is the elders' duty to be grave, courteous, cheerful, contented and happy.

It is the duty of the elders to be lawabiding, law-observing, law-sustaining citizens; both of the kingdom of God and the countries wherein they dwell. To make this more certain the elders are commanded to see that the law is kept .-D. & C. 58: 5.

It is the duty of the elders to preach in the region round about and build up churches.—D. & C. 58: 9.

In this business of building up churches, the following is to be done; and although we can not say that it is exclusively the duty or special prerogative to do them, we can say that they hold a common right or privilege with others to the performance of those acts necessary to be

An elder may officiate in solemnizing marriage rites .- Sec. 111, par. 1.

An elder sitting in conference with the elders of the church, may ordain other elders, and other officers in the church.— Sec. 17, pars. 14-16; sec. 35, par. 3. They may also send the elders out to preach .--

Sec. 108, par. 3.

An elder may preside over ninety-six others, elders like himself, forming a council or quorum of elders, for instruction and for business, whatever may be needful to be done. He may also preside over the whole body of elders at their election.-Sec. 105, pars. 31 and 41.
An elder may travel.—Sec. 83, par. 22;

sec. 105, par. 43.

An elder may administer the sacrament.

-Sec. 17, par. 22.

An elder may sign certificates of membership and good standing.—Sec. 17, par.

An elder may baptize.—Sec. 17, par. 21;

sec. 42, par. 5.

An elder may lay on hands in confirmation and for conferring the gifts of the Holy Ghost; in the blessing of children, and in administering to the sick.—Sec. 34, par. 3; sec. 17, par. 18. Acts 8th and 19th chapters.

An elder may act as one of a court of elders to ascertain the guilt or innocence of any person charged with a transgression of the spiritual law of the church. When he has thus decided upon the case he shall lay it before the church.—Sec. 42, par. 22.

Under this clause, which is specific, the duty of the elders is to enquire into the truthfulness of the charge preferred, and find accordingly. It is not in accordance with any law that we know of that the court of elders should "cut off," "cast out," or "disfellowship" a person whom they are trying. The form of their verdict should be to this effect. "We, John Jones. Fames Fohnson and Charles Corsin, do find upon a proper investigation that Richard Rakeby is guilty of evil speaking and slander, as charged." "We further represent that the said Richard Rakeby exhibited a spirit of 'humility' during the trial; and we recommend that he be subjected to 'reprimand from the presiding branch officer,' or that 'he be disfellowshipped." The result of their action to be left to the church.

An elder may preside over a branch, if chosen by the members of that branch; or a district, at the election of that district. Or he may be appointed by the church authorities to take the active oversight of a district of country.—Book of Alma 4: 1.

Sec. 1:5.

When presiding over a branch, it is the duty of the elder to be active, energetic and vigilant; kind, considerate and wise, and ever ready to do and bear; never angry and seldom moved to indignation; sober, thoughtful and temperate.

He should always be prompt and steady in his atttendance upon all meetings of his branch; never absent except for good reasons. When present in meetings he should be wakeful and exemplary, sedate, earnest and zealous. He should pay attention to the rules adopted by conferences and honor them. He should be watchful for the interests of his church; not bigoted, superstitious, proud or haughty, but calm, consistent, steadfast in principle and unswerving in his integrity to God and his fellow man. He should not be overly tenacious of personal rights or privileges, and should never shrink from a defence of his faith; he should never offer an excuse for the non-performance of a duty not absolutely out of his power. He should neither be contentious, nor loud voiced in council, or conversation; but willing to teach and to be taught. He should not be hasty in his own defence, nor should he pay much heed to unjust criticism; just criticism he should profit by.

He should pray for and with the sick, comfort the weak, restrain and aid the strong; bear with the contentious, headstrong and wilfull so long as there is a possibility of doing them good; and what need to say more, save that an elder should in all respects be a good man, loving his God supremely and his neighbor as himself.

Few possess the character portrayed in this article, or come near to meeting the regirements specified; but all may approximate to them all by study, by carefulness and faithfulness, being diligent in the things entrusted to our care.

Let us "cease to do evil and learn to do well."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

PRES. JOSEPH SMITH Wrote from Soda Springs, Idaho, August 28th, as follows: "We arrived here yesterday in good health and spirits." Br. Anthony was with him and they are en route for a ministerial tour through the Cache Valley. We learn that Brn. Joseph Luff and H. R. Mills of Independence, Missouri, were also at Soda Springs, recuperating, we suppose.

Pres. W. W. Blair returned from southwestern, Iowa, the 5th inst., leaving the following day to attend district conferences at Buffalo Prairie and Adrian, Illinois, from which he expects to return home about the 16th inst. He reports the general interests of the work in Mills, Pottawattamie and Harrison counties, to be in far better condition and the prospects brighter for its growth than ever before. Large additions have lately been and are being made to the churches in that region of country.

Bro. George Jenkinson, of Alpena, Michigan, wrote August 28th, expressing a wish that some of the elders would visit and preach to them.

Bro. J. C. Clapp, of Deer Lodge, Montana, wrote the 28th ult., that he was just starting for the upper part of the state.

Sr. Susan Everett, of Indianopolis, Indiana, who has lately moved into that city, would be pleased to have some of the elders call there and preach the word. Her address is Ryan Block, that city.

Bro. Levi Gamet requests us to announce that the conference of the Central Nebraska district will convene Saturday, September 14th, instead of the 11th as erroneously announced in HERALD of 31st

Sr. Mary Anway of Dickens, Nebraska, suggests that as the people of that place desire to hear the word, good could doubtless be accomplished if one of the elders would preach to them. Who can respond to this call?

Bro. R. R. Gaither writes from Ottawa, Kansas, expressive of his love for the cause. He stands alone in the faith in that city and would like a call from some of the elders. There is a reward for those who stand for the right and constantly represent the faith, even though called to abide alone therein for a time.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

A LETTER from Bro. F. M. Sheehy dated Green's Landing, Maine, August 22d,

"Our reunion has closed and was a big success. Five were baptized and others will soon follow. The weather was good, so that we did not miss a meeting.'

We expect a fuller report later on.

Sr. Mary Struthers of New Boston, Iowa, renews for the HERALD and HOPE, sends money for the misionary column and says:

"I am past seventy-four years of age, and feel thankful to the Lord for sparing my life so long and giving me so much strength. May I always be found worthy of His blessings!"

Bro. J. W. Burget of West Bay City, Michigan, wrote August 28th:

"There were four baptized here and three more have given in their names for next Sunday.'

Bro. William Newton is still energetically working in behalf of the cause. He thus wrote in a recent letter from Kansas City, Kansas:

"I have baptized six since I returned from England, and expect to baptize three more this evening. There were eighteen of us that came back from England. All are in the church, and doing well, and have plenty of work, and their heavenly Father is good to them and blesses them. I am doing all I can at the present to build up the branch."

Bro. H. A. Stebbins writes from Sheridan, Missouri, September 3d:

"I staid nearly a week with Bro. John Moore about Valentine and Guilford, attending conference, and preaching and visiting afterwards. Came here last Friday and began preaching that evening in the Methodist church, and have continued each evening and expect to do so till over next Sunday. Bro. C. H. Jones came and spoke on Sunday afternoon, but returned home on Monday."

THE EQUILIBRIUM OF THE SEXES.

"Whenever careful and reliable statistics have been obtained it is found that more male than female children have been born. In Great Britain, where the returns are nearer perfection than elsewhere, the proportion for the last ten years was found to be 1,041 males to 1,000 females. It is a singular fact, however, that the mortality among the male children is greater, so that the equilibrium is restored in ten years, and a census of children at that age shows the sexes to be equal. From that age onward, owing to the more perilous occupations of males, to losses in war, etc., the proportion of females begins to increase until the final census in England shows 1,000 women of all ages to 949 men."-Exchange

Utah Mormon papers please comment on the above, in connection with President Smiths editorial in our last issue. "Figures will not lie, not even for pluralists."

A YEAR AGO.

"A year ago! A year ago I had my baby here. With hair of gold, and eyes so blue and clear; A year ago I heard his pattering feet, And listened to his childish babble sweet. Now he is gone—gone whither? Will only know he left me, that sad day, Who can say? A year ago.'

"And is that all? Is there no comfort for my aching heart? No balm to ease, no hand to bind the smart? Are all my hopes lost in a bleak Unknown, And is my baby wandering forth alone? My baby, whom I loved and tended so, And soothed to sleep, with mother-croonings low, A year ago!"

"Nay, heart, not all! For see, beyond, in countries not unknown. My baby waits, well loved, and not alone; A strong hand guides him, lest his feet should fall; And loving ears are quick to hear his call; He waits full happy, safe from all alarms, For Jesus took my baby in his arms, A year ago.

SERPENT BOOKS.

ONE day a gentleman in India went into his library and took down a book from the shelves. As he did so he felt a slight pain in his finger like the prick of a pin. He thought that a pin had been stuck by some careless person in the cover of the book. But soon his finger began to swell, then his arm, and then his whole body, and in a few days he died. It was not a pin among the books, but a small and deadly ser-

There are many serpents among the books now a-days: they nestle in the foliage of some of our most facinating literature; they coil around the flowers whose perfume intoxicate the senses. People read and are charmed by the plot of the story, by the skill with which the characters are sculptured or grouped, by the gorgeousness of the word painting, and hardly feel the pin-prick of evil that is insinuated. But it stings and poisons. When the record of ruined souls is made up, on what multitude will be inscribed-"poisoned by serpents among the books!"

Let us watch against the serpents, and read only that which is instructive and profitable.-Sel.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYERS.

The united faith and prayers of all Saints, especially of the Prayer Union, is asked in behalf of Sr. Meacher, of Keokuk, Iowa, who is a great sufferer from cancer in eye and face. Pray that she may be healed if it is God's will-if not healed that she may have grace to bear her sufferings

Also Sr. Simpson and Sr. Sarah Tain of Holden, Missouri, desire your prayers. The latter is very low with dropsy. The former has had the promise of a blessing and if it be God's will, desires it now.

Sr. Florence Leach of Elkhorn Station, Nebraska, requests your prayers in her behalf, that if it be God's will she may be healed. She is and has been for four months a great sufferer from an ulcer, not being able to walk. Would like to be administered to.

Also, Sr. Leotie Bennett, of Bethany, Missouri, asks your faith and prayers in her behalf. She has been afflicted since a child-was administered to one year ago. Is much better than ever before, but if it is God's will she desires to be entirely healed.

LAMONI, Iowa, September 5th.

HUBBARD, Ohio, Aug. 4th.

Dear Sister Frances:-As the rain has prevented our going to meeting to-day, I will try and improve the opportunity by writing to the "Column."

I love to read the letters and testimonies of the dear Saints, for it causes me to realize the blessings which surround us, especially when I read a letter from any of the lonely Saints who have no preacher but our dear Herald.

We had the pleasure of listening to our young brother, T. W. Williams, at Sharon, Pennsylvania, and while we listened, the thought came, would that the scattered ones could hear just such a sermon, and a desire has grown within us to be more diligent that we may by our means do better in the future than we have done in the past, and that our Heavenly Father may bless and help us in our endeavors to do right.

We have seen Bro. Powell and hope to hear him preach soon in our place along with brother Williams. Seven precious souls have covenanted to serve the Lord. These were convinced through the untiring labors of Elder D. M. Strachan, and have for some time been awaiting this opportunity. Many are investigating; prejudice is giving way, and the good work is rolling

To the sisters of the Prayer Union: I' feel to say that I have at times neglected to observe the whole hour. There are so many demands upon my time, but I do the best I can and will try to do better in the future. It is a precious hour to me. Last winter our Herald was a week late in reaching us, and not knowing the lesson, I read a chapter and went before my Father in prayer, and asked him to accept the lesson and prayer, and I asked him to bless what I had done.

Dear sisters, I felt something fall upon my face as dew. It was a sweet season. I love this work: it is my earnest desire to be a Saint in deed, as in name, and to serve my Master in spirit and in

Should these lines meet the eye of one named, Peter Grieve, I should like to correspond with him. He was an old timer, and a brother to my mother. He is somewhere in Illinois, and must have heard of the Reorganization. He left Scotland intending to go to Utah, but stopped at St. Louis, about 1847 or 48. I would be glad to hear from any one who might know him. I will close now as I fear my letter may be too lengthy.

Your sister in love,

FANNIE E. RICHARDSON.

Dear Sisters in the Lord: - I have thought once more to try and write a few lines to the Home Column, trusting that God, from whom alone all light proceedeth, will give me words of light and truth with which to address you.

And believing as I do that the decree which has gone forth from heaven that "that which can be shaken shall be shaken" is already being carried into effect, and that it will continue until only they which stand the test and prove themselves to be true when tried, will remain. I therefore think that no opportunity of helping a fellow-traveler or of doing good which is within our reach and capacity to perform, should be allowed to pass unimproved. We certainly are surrounded by infirmities and filled with weakness; but has not God said that Jesus himself would bear our infirmities, and that out of weakness many were made strong? also that he would be a present help in every time of need?

How then can we ever be shaken out of our place if we walk in the law of the Lord? Therein only can we fail. It therefore becomes our duty to make that law our continual study, that by prayerful meditation we may know and understand its requirements in every different condition or position in which we may be placed; for we know not what a day or even an hour may bring forth. They who are the happy and free children of to-day may, before to-morrow's sun goes down, be the subjects of trial and tribulation which is deeper and heavier than they ever imagined it was the lot of the sons of men to bear. If therefore, these trials come upon them in a way they did not expect, and they know not what the law of God says concerning such a case, how shall they be able to keep the commandments and stand firmly to their post, living by the words of God. Some may say "Have we not always the law close by us? can we not then go and search out our particular duty and carry it into effect." Imagine a captain placing a man who had never had a lesson in swordsmanship in the heat of the battle with a sword in one hand and a book of discipline in the other, and telling him to learn his duty and be a brave soldier! If that man escaped with his life he certainly would learn many things, but he would learn them by the things which he suffered. So it is with us if we learn not obedience by commandment we shall learn it by the things which we suffer, or be slain in the conflict, or in other words "be shaken out of our place."

The mind depressed with trouble, the body racked with pain, the soul groaning for deliverance is not in as teachable a condition nor as capable of receiving faith as one who is free from those things and can weigh in the balance of his intelligence the reasoning of the word of God with peace of mind until every principle of divine truth becomes so established within his heart and mind that to him they are facts, of the truth of which there can be no doubt. And, if his daily life is in accordance with the law which he has learned, then when trials and afflictions come upon him and adversity meets him on every hand he will know what his duty is and also the blessings he will obtain by observing those commandments, and thus he will be able to meet and overcome the enemy in whatever form he may appear as our Captain did "by the sword of the Spirit which is the word of God." And like Job when wealth, prosperity and health had vanished from his overflowing cup, and all things seemed to frown upon him, and a cloud rested over him so that he felt that God had withdrawn himself so far from him that he cried out, "Oh, that I knew where I might find him! that I might come even to his seat! I would order my cause before him and fill my mouth with argument. * * * Behold I go forward but he is not there; and backward, but I can not perceive him; on the left hand where he doth work, but I can not behold him; he hideth himself on every hand that I can not see him, but he knoweth the way that I take; when he hath tried me I shall come forth as gold."-Job 23: 3-10.

When he sought his couch he says, "Then Thou scarest me with dreams and terrifiest me through visions, so that my soul chooseth strangling and death rather than my life." And so little did Job understand what he was passing through that he thought it was God instead of Satan that was bringing all this trouble upon him and contending with him, of which he says, "Show me wherefore thou contendest with me." "Thou huntest me as a fierce lion," and so troubled was he among the conflicting thoughts that came surging like billows through his brain that he declared "I am full of confusion."

And through all his oppression in body and mind together with three so called friends striving continually with arguments and accusations and even professed revelations to make him believe that he had brought his trial upon himself by his own transgressions, yet so perfect was his understanding of the law of God and so closely had he walked therein, that even in those trying hours of contention, pain and confusion of mind, he was able to measure himself by that perfect law of liberty and challenge his accusers to show wherein he had failed in one point to live according to its teachings.

What greater comfort can one have than to be able to look back over the past without any remorse of conscience?

And yet there is only one class of people who shall be able to do so. They who know the will of God and do it with their whole heart. Why do we fret in our difficulties? Sorrow is better for the heart than mirth.

Therefore, though we may sometimes even in the balmy days of youth of which so much has been said and sung, feel as old and sad and weary of life as we shall when grav hairs crown our heads. Yet, if this is God's order of purifying his Saints and fitting them for the kingdom of Heaven, then the sooner we learn to bear patiently and submissively all things that are given us to pass through the better it will be for us both in time and eternity.

The writer has had to learn some things through suffering, and she can testify that it is much pleasanter to learn our duty from the word of God than to learn it in the rough road of experience; nevertheless there are some things that we can not rightly understand until we learn them by actual experience, and there is one thing I can say: "They that call upon God in their hour of trouble shall be delivered, even if heaven and earth should be moved to accomplish it." Call upon him and keep his commandments as nearly as you know how and your past trespasses shall be blotted out, and your deliverance is just as certain as if it were already in the past. God will increase aid unto you as your strength fails or your difficulties increase, and he will bring you out as surely as his name is "Love."

Possess your soul in patience and strive to keep the law, for God is at the helm, and when his purpose is fulfilled and your lesson is learned, if you abide in the Lord you will find he has not forsaken you.

If any of you should feel to remember me at the altar of prayer, I hope you will do so that God may give me the necessary qualifications to search into and to understand and remember the word of God as contained in the books; and especially that I may have a willing and courageous heart to live according to the light that God gives me.

I am your sister,

MAGGIE CAMPBELL.

Dear Mothers of the Home Column:-I am a mother of two bright blue eyed bables, age three years and ten months; and though crowded with worldly affairs, I feel impressed this morning to bear my testimony to you of this glorious work; and should I refuse I feel I would be breaking the command, "Quench not the Spirit." I have been in this noble work only a few weeks, yet God has showered his blessings upon me more than I feel worthy. Oh dear Saints pray for me and mine. I was baptized the 14th of July, 1889, and feel to praise his Holy name for bringing me into his kingdom. Every thing was peace until the 28th of July, when my little boy was taken sick; he lingered for two days growing worse. I was away from home at the time, a distance of three miles, (here I will say I am living with my father Elder L. L. Wight) I was sitting by my sick child on the eve of the second day when I was commanded to send for a Bro. Powell living a short distance away to take me home with my child. The brother came immediately, and we were soon home. The little one still grew worse. When we arrived at home, father, calling his family together, administered to the child and the fever immediately began to cool, and next morning he was up playing and never had any more fever. Thank God! On the following Tuesday night my babe was taken sick the same as the other child. She mouned and grouned all night and lay with a sleepy fever. About eight o'clock in the morning, father administered to her. I then arose and went to prayer. When I returned, which was in about ten minutes, I felt she was all right, and as I approached the house I was greeted with crowing and laughing from my darling babe who was having one of her childish romps with her grandfather. No one knows my joy but a parent and our Heavenly father. "Oh, how good it is to be blest!" My husband is away from home and did not see these blessings. I ask a special interest in your prayers in his behalf. He is a kind loving husband and father, but he is of the Christian faith.

Your sister in hopes of eternal life, SOPHIE FERGUSON.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, Aug. 28th.

Bro Salyards:—Last night we concluded a series of meetings at Little Sioux. Attendance has been large and attention to the word preached excellent. Five persons were baptized Sunday, and others are near the kingdom. The Saints are happy and hopeful, and prospects are good for future increase in all church interests. Bro. J. F. McDowell has been doing good work in Little Sioux and he assisted me in preaching and other pulpit exercises. He is in good spirits. Brn. John T. Coffman and George Scott are doing good work in helping forward the interests of the branch and the district.

I had hoped to meet Brn. C. Derry and J. C. Crabb at the two days' meeting, but animated with worthy zeal to forward the work of the Lord, they chose rather to devote their labors where most needed and so remained preaching the word in other fields. I hear they are being blessed greatly in their efforts and have baptized a goodly number. Such wise and self-denying efforts will bring solid and abundant reward with "many sheaves."

I am to preach here tonight, go to Logan tomorrow, and to Wheeler's Grove camp meeting by Saturday morning the 31st instant.

The Saints and many others in all this region are anxiously and hopefully looking forward to the coming Annual Reunion which begins Oct. 4th. Prospects are most encouraging.

The Lord's work in all these quarters is full of excellent promise, and the Saints are full of cheer.

Yours ever,

W. W. BLAIR.

SANDWICH, Ill., Aug. 28th.

Dear Herald:—I feel an earnest desire to communicate to your readers the great blessing I have received from the Lord in answer to my prayers, trusting it may be the means of strengthening some suffering one in their faith in our God.

Two years ago, August 1st, 1887, I was taken with a severe pain in my shoulder, which continued to grow worse. My daughter applied every means to relieve me without any benefit, and I continued to suffer in this way for two weeks, when I became so much worse that I could not leave my bed. My pain became so severe that my family decided to call in a doctor. I continued to grow worse under his treatment and he finally pronounced my case hopeless. We called in two other doctors with the same result. During this time I was administered to by the elders, at each time receiving a little ease from the terrible pain that seemed to be causing a dislocation of all my joints. In this condition I lay for seven long months, being unable to help myself in the least; having to be watched night and day, being paralyzed from my hips to my feet, and my hands almost in the same condition.

At this time the doctor told me that if I had any business to settle I must do it at once, as I could live but a few days at most. However, I continued in this state until the following year, when I began to take a change for the better, but could not use my limbs, but was obliged to use crutches to get from my bed to a chair.

On the last Friday in June of this present year I was again seized with the terrible pain. I felt that it was more than I could endure, and in my agony I cried out to my Father in heaven to either take me or relieve me from the awful suffering, when instantly my flesh began to quiver all through my limbs. I looked down at my feet, and when I saw the workings of the flesh, fear seized me and I thought I was stricken with death. In a moment I put out my feet, something I had not done in two long years, and found to my joy that I could stand. Then I began to praise God and shout it aloud. "Glory to God! I can walk! I can walk!" And with that I started and walked around the room. Out of doors I went, and when my husband, who was in the garden, saw me he was afraid. He thought that I had become insane. I told him to praise the Lord for I could walk, and up to this present time I have enjoyed this great blessing, for I can walk as good as I ever could. The doctors say that it is indeed a miracle. This is also the testimony of my family, neighbors and friends, but to me it is above the testimony of a nation, that God is no respecter of persons but that to every one who calls upon His name in the sincerity of his heart, his promises are yea and amen!

BROOKLYN, N. Y., Aug. 28th.

Bro. Blair: Our district conference has just closed and was a success. Bro. W. H. Kelley was with us and did all the preaching. The Saints that attended all enjoyed themselves, and the good Spirit was present, and the outlook seemed to be good for Brooklyn if the proper steps are taken; and some of them are found in the revelation given April 11th, 1887, paragraph 3: "Avoid the use of tobacco, and be not addicted to strong drink in any form, that your counsel to be temperate may be made effectual by your example." Some of our Christadelphian friends were present and thought they would like to discuss their soul-sleeping theory, and if they can get the right man, we may expect a debate in Brooklyn some time this fall. We hope our heavenly Father will ever rule all things for our Your brother in Christ,

JOSEPH SQUIRE.

WEBB CITY, Mo., Aug. 27th.

Bro. W. W. Blair: The interest manifested at and near this place when attending our conference two weeks since caused me to return last Thursday. Preached here Friday, twice at Oronogo, three miles from here, on Saturday, being requested to preach the funeral discourse of an old man, a cousin of mine, who died, he being a disciple of Col. Ingersoll. Much curiousity was manifest in regard to "what he would do with him." The funeral was in the M. E. church in Oronogo, and when I presented the fulness of the atonement, and the ultimate redemption of all from the prison house of death, by the power of the Lamb and the different glories in some of the mansions of the Father's house; "every man in his own order according to the deeds done in the body," light and hope sprang up in the hearts of many whom the orthodox had taught that Uncle George must have gone to an endless hell to writhe in the eternal fires of God's vengeance, for he had been a grand old man in many respects. Some were anxious to hear more, and as the Baptists were holding a protracted meeting in the house, I announced preaching near the post-office at night. I had a large audience, many staying from church to hear me. By urgent request I preach there again to morrow night, when seats will be prepared, as many women stood in the street before.

I went north nearly fifteen miles on Sunday, fillfilling three appointments of O. P. Sutherland's, as he was sick. I have preached here evenings since, and shall continue until the last of the week; then go forty miles to hear a celebrated Baptist "divine" demolish "Mormonism," as he has advertised to do, where Br. Maloney has been preaching. There is much interest here; three were baptized this week and many others are investigating, and more calls for preaching than can be filled. Bro. Sutherland is going out ten to fifteen miles every Sunday and opening up new places, and others of the younger brethren are assisting him in filling them. Much interest is manifested in most places, what the result will be time will tell. As ever, yours,

D. S. CRAWLEY.

SEDALIA, Kentucky, Aug.

Bro. Blair:—We are all still trying in our weakness to advance the cause of our Master, though we are surrounded by that opposing element which the people of God always have to encounter. I am rejoicing because I have enlisted in this glorious cause. I have many trials and temptations, yet I know the people of God have to be a tried people. I desire the prayers of the Saints that my wife and I may be healed of afflictions, and be faithful in our calling.

Yours in faith,

W. D. and MARY A. CLARK.

MAGNOLIA, Iowa, August 24th.

Bro. R. Salyards:—The "tabernacle meeting" held here for three weeks closed Sunday eve, 18th inst. Seven persons were baptized by the writer. For two weeks the sermons were alternated between Elder C. Derry and the writer. There were two good sermons furnished us by Elder Crabb as he passed through for other parts. The preaching throughout was attended by the Holy Spirit's presence. The interest was good from first to last, and the attendance all that might be hoped for at the season, which was very good.

I baptized five persons at Little Sioux last Sunday, 25th, during the two days' meeting, at which Elder W. W. Blair was in attendance, greeted by overflowing houses and excellent attention. The sermons were characteristic, and to say they were relished by all, and spiritually palatable would be putting it mildly only. He preached last evening and speaks again this evening. He preaches in Magnolia tomorrow, Wednesday, evening, on his way to Wheeler's Grove. There, now! I'll not assume to report further for him, if he will only pardon this apparent intrusion.

I feel strong and well in spirit, and my soul is glad indeed in the Lord. How good it is to be a witness for Jesus today; a witness whom God deigns to bless! How happy we all should ever strive to be in the good cause of our Master. The sunshine of His countenance—of what precious value! The guidance of His Spirit, how joyous and acceptable! May His church move grandly forward and upward! And it is doing so, to the everlasting joy of God's people, and the honoring of God.

May His hallowed peace ever abide with His children, is our prayer,

J. F. McDowell.

STEELVILLE, Missouri, Aug. 31st.

Editors Saints' Herald: -- I have often wanted to write some for the Herald but not being a member of the Reorganized Church I have hesitated until the present time. My husband is a member and teacher in the church. I hardly know what to write that would interest the readers of the Herald, but I will relate a dream I had not long ago. I in company with several others was standing looking into an old well. All at once the bank began to fall in. It seemed that it had been covered over with old rails and they and myself included began to fall in. I cried for help, and it seemed that I caught to something and clung to it. My husband coming up reached down and took me out. Were the rails sectarianism? Was that something that I was holding to Methodism? Will my husband be the instrument in God's hands in lifting me from the muddy well or waters of tradition? Will some one be so kind as to answer or give the interpretation through the Herald or write it to me? I subscribe myself as a well wisher for all good, MARY MAXEY.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., Aug. 30th.

Bro. Blair:-Please give place to the enclosed minutes of the New England reunion as early as possible. We had a splendid time; the Lord was truly with us by his Spirit. These Reunions are making a new era in the history of the Reorganized Church in New England. No one is able to fortell the effect caused by this reunion, nor how wide-spread and far reaching its influence and power. God alone understands it, and he will cause everything that is done in harmony with his will, and the spirit of this great latter day work, to conduce to his honor and glory, and to our benefit both here and hereafter. The only drawback was that Bro. Wm. H. Kelley was not present. Still it was a success, and all were encouraged to press on in the good cause.

Yours in hope of victory,
THOMAS WHITING.

BAY CITY, Mich., Sept. 1st.

Bro Blair:—I left Oscoda the 16th ult. and arrived in Bay City the same day, finding the Saints all united. We held a business meeting by request of the district president and the branch, and George W. Parks, a priest, was chosen to preside. He was formerly from Ontario. We are satisfied he is the right man.

Since coming here I have baptized six, and others are near. The Saints have a hall where they hold regular services, and the interest is good. Last evening the hall was filled and I feel confident that if the Saints live in unity and the elders and officers faithfully perform their duties, the Lord will enable us to reap a harvest. Can Bro. Joseph Smith attend our conference, in October? We send him a cordial invitation and hope to have him with us.

Yours in bonds.

E. DELONG.

NORMAN, Neb. Aug. 26th.

Dear Herald:—Please say that our ministerial force is decreased the present conference year in Nebraska, by three elders, but calls for ministerial labor are increasing so that it is utterly impossible to respond to but a few of the many. Branches must help themselves all they can and in localities where there are three, six or more members and an official, meet, as oft as possible for worship. Where members are found and no official, appoint one of your number by vote, to preside for present service and carry on prayer meeting after the order suggested by Bro. W. H. Kelley in a late Herald. All should help themselves as much as possible, not overlooking heaven's law and order.

I would be glad to hear from any part of Nebraska, Colorado, Wyoming and New Mexico if openings occur for the presentation of the word; as it seems policy to attend to the most important places first so far as practicable. We can but do our best; that we should do and leave the rest with God. My permanent address is 213 Harrison street, Council Bluffs, Iowa.

JAMES CAFFALL.

CLAY CENTER, Kansas, Aug. 25th.

Dear Herald:-By request of Zion's Hope Union Sabbath School I visited the river brethren society today which has caused my mind to reflect over the past nine years. I came to Clay county nine years ago the 30th day of last April; there were a few Saints here at that time. On April 11th there was a branch organized numbering eleven, and during the following summer it was hard work to do any thing; every body seemed to be afraid of us. We tried to keep our Sabbath services with but few to attend. Thursday night was set apart for prayer service with an attendance of from three to seven, but like the steady dropping of water that wears the stone, so the persistent effort was followed in January, 1887, with the assistance of Bro. H. R. Harder, and we began a protracted effort which resulted with good, and God added daily to the church such as should be saved.

Our meetings were largely attended for the next three years with additions every month until it became a proverb, "Well, we will go to Mormon meeting today; I wonder who will be baptized;" and if no one, the people were disappointed. Such was the condition of Goshen branch. We had the lead; all eyes were turned towards the Mormon neighborhood, and as the apostle said, we were read and known by all men.

We were at that time a prosperous and happy people, without a ripple to mar our peace; living in love and unity together as brethren, enjoying the blessings of a kind and loving Father. I now look back upon those days as a foretaste of heaven on earth.

But alas! those days were to come to a close, and as Israel of old we were scattered to the four winds. Discord and contention, those seeds of hell which our blessed Master so often warned His saints to be ware of, that divide a house that it can not stand, came among us. Oh, my God, how long before thy people will learn to do Thy will that Thy kingdom may come and Thy will be done on earth as in heaven! Goshen branch is only a remnant of its former greatness, and perhaps abroad our brethren look upon us as dead, being twice plucked up by the roots. Will you allow me to correct the mistake? While we are few, we are trying to live faithful, and are at peace with each other and our neighbors; and all attend to their duty in private as well as in public. While we have lost prestige in a measure by not improving the opportunities presented, yet we are not left without hope of a revival of the work in these parts. Saints are not always wise. When they all know they have obeyed the true and everlasting gospel how happy they are made! What testimonies they have received and how they rejoice in the opportunity to impart that testimony to their friends and neighbors and urge them to accept the gospel. And after they have obeyed the gospel how little they often seem to care about helping them to live it and encourage them to overcome. It seems to me as I write that some Saints, and even elders, have supposed that their special calling was to assist the evil one in the way of trying their brethren. If they see any that are trying to live a christian life, is to start some kind of a rumor abroad to destroy their influence among their brethren, either by letter or in person. All such practices are destructive to the work of salvation.

Beloved brethren, we have passed through all this and are still on praying grounds and interceding terms with God the Eternal Father, and I hope to live to see the day when God's name will be honored and glorified, and when all those that are sent out to represent his glorious gospel of peace on earth and good will to men, will have the work of God and the salvation of their fellows at heart, instead of self and self-agrandizement; men that are as willing to serve as to be served; as willing to sacrifice as to be sacrificed for.

God help us to profit by the experience of the past and be ever willing to lend a helping hand to our brother. Though he may have been unfortunate and have fallen among thieves, we can pour in the oil and wine as did the good Samaritan of Bible story.

A. Kent.

PANA, Illinois, August 28th. Bro. Blair: On the sixth inst. Bro. Etzenhouser came to our place, so we began to look about for a place for meetings. First we went to the Baptists to get the use of their church, thinking they could not refuse as we have attended that church ever since we have lived here. One deacon refered us to another, and he said that they could not do anything unless they held a council then they would report. We were refused it and advised to rent a hall. We tried for another church but with the same result. On Sunday morning we went to see the trustees of the M. E. Church South. The trustees and the pastor gave Bro. Etzenhouser a cordial invitation to fill the pulpit that day, which he did in great power and demonstration of the Spirit both morning and evening. After the evening service he stated to the people that the trustees of the church had kindly given their consent for us to occupy the house the next week, except two nights which they reserved. He then announced that there would be preaching on Monday evening and all the week except the two nights stated above. They gave Bro. Etzenhouser the key and he opened the church and rang the bell. There was a good house and they were very attentive. The preacher had requested him to speak on the new birth, so he took for his text, "What must I do to be saved?" and all of you that have heard him will understand with what soul stirring power he would present that allimportant question. He had good liberty and was filled with the Spirit in a wonderful manner; so much so that I know that it will certainly bring forth fruit in the near future. After the services closed the pastor of the church got up and stated that there would be a business meeting the next evening and that none would be allowed to come but members of the church. We felt a little surprised but set our faces as flint to meet the worst if it did come. The next day the minister called on us and asked for Bro, E. He did not have time to come in! He then began to hem and haw and said that the trustees were objecting to Bro. E. preaching in the church and he would have to withdraw his appointments. "You preach too much water," he said. We went to their prayer meeting that evening and they gave us to understand in all their prayers that they had all they wanted of us. The preacher acted more like a tool in their hands than a man. Bro. Etzenhouser asked to speak and it was granted. He thanked them for what privileges they had given us and told them that the preaching would go on at our house. We had three meetings but with rather slim turn out for the "old gentleman" had begun to get in his work, then we secured a hall and Bro. E., thinking he could reach the people better advertised a lecture for Monday night, subject, "Prehistoric Races of America." He had a fair turn out and they listened with rapt attention. He had splendid liberty and great power. He then anounced for the next evening "Mormonism Exposed," as they were giving it to us on all sides that we were Utah Mormons, and to explain our position to the public. It was necessary to enter the columns of the daily paper and state why we were ejected from the church. The presiding elder, Hunter by name, took it up and from past experience you know what we got. Bro. E. replied then Hunter replied again, and as he was not one of the hunters that the Lord said he would send. he must have been sent otherwise, for he seemed better at hunting up false stories than truth. He stated in one article that Joseph Smith was married in celestial marriage to Wm. Law's wife in 1845. Strange that he would admit that and not believe in probation after death, for then is when it would have to take place, as Joseph was dead a year before that date. The agents of evil always overreach themselves. And he did not stop the good work for on Sunday the 28th five of our family were laid beneath the liquid wave to raise in newness of life.

We were cheered and comforted by the presence of Bro and Sr. Morris, of McVey, who came overland forty miles on Saturday to be with us. It was a refreshing season for us that have been so long without seeing any of the brethren.

We had confirmation Sunday evening and testimony and the Lord's supper. Our covenant vows were renewed and prayer asked for by those that had but just started. One son was administered to for his sight, he having lost it about a year ago. We ask the prayers of all the Saints in his behalf that the Lord will complete the work of restoration; also for another son that has lung trouble, and that he may be led to obey the gospel ere it is too late. He is not indifferent to the work but there are some little difficulties that he can not surmount yet. There are just two of my children out of the kingdom that are old enough to obey, and I feel that my cup of joy would overflow could I see them brought in; but I feel to still trust the Lord remembering what he has done for me in the past.

Bro. Etzenhouser came to us a stranger, as it were, as he was unknown to us by face, but he has endeared himself to us by those grand and noble traits of character that will never be forgotten. His patience in trial, his devotion to the cause and his integrity are all worthy of emulation.

While there was some prejudice created, there were some friends made to the cause. The editor of our city daily treated us fairly, publishing our replies to that Hunter of false stories. Pray for us.

Your sister,

AMANDA S. YOHE.

New London, Iowa, Aug. 30th.

Brn. Smith and Blair: I take the privilege of addressing you a few lines and of introducing myself as a member of the Church. I was baptized into the church about 1862 at Oskaloosa, Iowa, where there was a branch and where we met in prayer meetings often and enjoyed many manifestations of the Holy Spirit. Joseph and others, whose names I have forgotten, were on their way to Pottawattamie county, Iowa, once remained all night at my father's house where we gathered a few of the neighbors together and had a glorious meeting. But the members of our branch soon began to disperse to other localities, and in 1865 I came to this place with my family where I have resided ever since, and I have never had the privilege of meeting with the Saints since I came here. I must confess that I have not lived as I should, not as I would had I been among God's people. I feel that I have laid again the foundation of repentance and baptism from dead works, but still have a hope that I shall again see some of the brethrer, reclaimed and made to rejoice with that joy that is unspeakable and full of glory. I believe that the Latter Day Saints have never preached in this vicinity, and if one could come his labors would be greatly rewarded. Many here are desirous of hearing a Mormon (as they call us), preach. One man in particular, who has hitherto been a skeptic, is now earnestly praying God to give him light that he may not be led astray by blind guides who are ever learning but never able to come to the knowledge of the truth. It was mainly for his benefit that I sent for books. He desires to read the Book of Mormon, but I am unable to procure it for him just yet.

Yours truly,

Albert P. Brown.

LAWRENCEPORT, Ind., Sept. 2d.

Dear Herald:—Having traveled over some four or five districts in this country, preaching and teaching the people with good liberty and good attendance, we now have for the last ten days concentrated our labors at what is called the Lee school-house, near the White river. Having made a good impression here we expect to hold on until the Lord brings to light the full result, for some tried hard to break up our meeting by threats of throwing eggs, but all this has failed and they have sent to Bedford, Indiana, Mitchell and to different places for their ministers, but they have failed, as yet, to meet me. They have held protracted meetings all around but have failed, and as the cause is gradually going up and advancing, slowly breaking down error and darkness, we feel that the Lord is with us in our labors, being faithful and prayerful; I humbly ask the prayers of Saints for me in my ministry, for I have never in all my lifetime been blessed as much as I have in this mission; the Lord be praised! Be faithful, brethren, the time is near when the Lord will root up every plant that he has not planted, when the battle ax shall be broken out of the earth, that peace and glory may dwell in our land. Yours in bonds,

JAMES G. SCOTT.

PORT CARLING, Ont., Sept. 2d.

Dear Herald:—Kindly permit us to say to the Saints and friends interested in our welfare that we arrived in Port Carling all right and found Bro. Hough waiting for us, who took us by boat to his place, a distance of five miles or so across Lake Rosseau.

We found the country very rough when compared with Dufferin county where we came from, but as we came here for the purpose of assisting in spreading the gospel and not for this world's mammon, we feel satisfied to make this our home for a time.

We arrived here August 14th and started the camp-fires burning at once. The interest was rather poor at first, but we think we are safe in saying it is improving. We have appointments out for preaching in the school house at Port Carling every Friday evening and on Sundays at Bro. Hough's house.

I wish to thank the Saints of Masonville and Garafraxa for their kindness to me when leaving, and I hope our heavenly Father will liberally reward them. We ask an interest in your prayers that God may prosper us in our mission.

Your brother and sister, JAMES L. MORTIMER.

ELIZABETH MORTIMER.

WHAT A LEMON WILL DO.

Lemonade made from the juice of the lemon is one of the best and safest drinks for any person, whether in health or not. It is suitable for all stomach diseases, excellent in sickness, in cas-es of jaundice, gravel, liver complaint, inflammation of the bowels, and fevers. It is a specific against worms and skin complaints. The pippin crushed may be used with sugar and water, and taken as a drink. Lemon juice is the best anti-scorbutic remedy known. It not only cures the disease, but prevents it. Sailors make daily use of it for this purpose. We advise every one to rub their gums with lemon juice to keep them in a healthy condition. The hands and nails are also kept clean, white, soft and supple by the daily use of lemon instead of soap. It also prevents chilblains. Lemon is used in intermittent fevers, mlxed with strong, hot, black coffee, without sug-Neuralgia, it is said, may be cured by rub bing the part affected with a cut lemon. valuable also to cure warts. It will remove dandruff by rubbing the roots of the hair with it. It will alleviate, and finally cure, very bad colds, and heal diseased lungs, if taken hot on going to bed at night.-New York Weekly.

It is to be presumed that London Justice has made its computation with accuracy when it says that all the people now living in the world, or about 1, 400, 000, 000, could find standing room within the limits of a field ten miles square, and, by aid of a telephone, could be addressed by a single speaker.

ISRAEL; THEIR SALVATION.

"KEEP all the commandments and covenants by which ye are bound, and I will cause the heavens to shake for your good, and Satan shall tremble, and Zion shall rejoice upon the hills and flourish, and Israel shall be saved in mine own due time. And by the keys which I have given shall they be led, and no more be confounded at all. Lift up your hearts and be glad, for your redemption draweth nigh."—Doctrine and Covenants 34:6.

To a majority of religious professors the foregoing text would seem peculiar if called scripture; and more so that there are those who accept it as scripture-revealed by a prophet inspired of God in these latter days. But peculiar as it may be, such is the fact; and an examination of its statements, and a comparison of their sentiments with the teaching of former prophets on the same subject, will constitute a basis for its acceptance or rejection, as an inspired statement of God. It was revealed to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, through Joseph Smith, the Martyr, in the year 1830, when he was only twenty-five years of age. It is in the form of a prophecy, and the nature of the subject is such as to be of intense interest to all who entertain a proper regard for the religion of Jesus Christ, and are exercised with due interest in the development of the divine purposes relating to the last days. For, truly, the themes of the establishment of the kingdom of God in its intended gospel unity-organic unityand the proclamation of the gospel, "not in word only," but in "power," or authority, "and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance," (I Thess. 1:5), "as a witness to all nations," (Matt. 24:14), including Israel, (who will accept it), and culminating in the establishment of "the mountain of the Lord's house," in "the last days," (Isa. 2: 1-5), are subjects of infinite importance to all mankind. And such is the import of the prophecy in our text.

Like other prophetic statements where human agency is involved, it proposes conditions: that the church observe the commandments of God, the requirements of the gospel; nor should the great truth be forgotten, that all the purposes of Deity relating to man's welfare are based on conditions that will be complied with by somebody, and if one man or generation fail to carry out the conditions, another will be raised up who will;—God's purposes fail

God's great latter day work, as contemplated in the text, is one that the prophets from the days of old delighted to contemplate, when enwrapped in Divine inspiration. The apostle Peter, when preaching to Israel, refers to this work as being ushered in just prior to the second coming of Christ, saying, "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you: whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began."-Acts 3: 20, 21. Also Paul, "For I would not, brethren, that ye should be ignorant of this mystery, lest ye should be wise in your own conceits; that blindness in part is happened to Israel, until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in. And so all Israel shall be saved: as it is written, There shall come out of Zion the Deliverer, and shall turn away ungodliness from Jacob; for this is my covenant unto them, when I shall take away their sins."—Romans 11:

These statements of scripture are peculiar, too, when studied with relation to the past and present of the world and Israel. The establishment of Zion, or the "coming church" is the problem of the age with many not now numbered among the Latter Day Saints. They believe it is now due, and many are looking for the conversion of Israel to Christ, but where, and how, and with whom shall the work begin? No visible means with which to move out has been supplied to them. Difficulties of such huge dimensions that Christendom can not move them out of the way, exist. Protestantism is at war with itself and the mother church. It says that the Catholic Church is a stupendous and radical apostasy from original christianity, and a monstrous perversion of the original intentions of christianity, in its entire diction and spirit. And the mother church in turn, denounces Protestants of all shades of religious belief as in a state of rebellion against the authority of the everlasting kingdom, as held and exercised by herself. And taken all together there are no less than twenty strongly established, and hopelessly irreconcilable, and contending divisions, with hundreds of divisions of less importance, comprising almost every conceivable shade and variety of religious doctrine and belief; which, instead of uniting the disciples on the one foundation of the doctrines of Christ, Matt. 7: 13, 14, 24-29; Heb. 6: 1, 2, 3; 1 Tim. 6: 3-5, prove an insurmountable barrier to the accomplishment of their anticipated purpose—the conversion of the world-and surrounds us with the perils predicted by Paul to come in the "last days," prohibiting the people from attaining to "the knowledge of the truth" that sanctifies and saves, and of course are therefore lost. 2 Tim. 4:1-7; John 8: 30-32; 17:17.
The idea that the Holy Ghost is inspir-

The idea that the Holy Ghost is inspiring the ministers of God to labor in the interest of these contradictory creeds and dogmas, and that God is sending men to labor in direct opposition to the unity prayed for by his own Son in his intercessory prayer, and that the very "word" ordained of God to produce the unity prayed for by Christ, is made to do duty in the bands of those diversely schooled ministers to support these various divisions, thereby defeating his own will as expressed in the prayer of our Savior is too revolting to the reasonable mind to be entertained for a moment. But if we admit the claims of all as divinely valid we are forced to admit the above idea to be true, and that God is the author of all this cofusion; that the infinite Godhead is fostering it all. "Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation." Is God working to desolate his own church? Every right conception of God and his work forever vindicate him from any connection whatever with it, so far as its being His "power unto salvation" is concerned.

This condition of things all over, under and through Christendom, exists like an incubus; and well may the question or problem of where, how and with whom shall the coming church originate, be asked. One thing is absolutely certain: With all the theological materials now in the hands of popular Christendom with which to begin the new dispensation, there is no way of building with certainty; no means of demonstrating the absolute truthfulness of their doctrines, to the entire satisfaction of the minds of the believers therein. If so, there would not be the changing of religious beliefs among them that is seen, nor so much shifting of religious relations. No such number of varying and contradicting beliefs respecting every religious tenet, in all the vast range from God to minutest detail, would be in constant debate; no such calling in question of each in its claims to divinity by all the others. Now this uncertainty characterizes Spiritualism with its millions of adherents, along with all the rest; and in fact it professes no standard by which to test the truthfulness of its teachings. It does not own its experiences as positive and satisfactory. It teaches that the degree of certainty attending its numerous tests depends on the development of its mediums, thereby putting a demonstration of its absolute truthfulness entirely out of the reach of mortality. And thus it stands self-condemned, keeping its devotees forever in suspense as to the truth or falsity of its teachings.

The reasons here assigned are the grounds of rejection of past efforts and church building, by those looking for the "coming church," and are also the leading reasons why the new evangel should be heralded. This demand for a church based on principles susceptible of demonstration of truthfulness to the heart and mind is not unreasonable. Every religious, enlightened impulse of the mind demands and requires it. We are so constituted.

But in the light of human experience of the past seventeen hundred years, in church and creed making, how shall the work be begun? Momentous question! this proposal to forsake the landmarks of the fathers and go into the regions by them unexplored in search of light, truth and certainty. It is the mistakes of the past that we are trying to overcome, with their results. But in the work of church building, the past experiences show that man, unaided by the One designed to be worshiped, is a complete failure. There is no question of this. The present hopeless condition of the religious world demonstrates this beyond doubt.

Such being the fact, how shall the great work begin, unless God interpose and direct? Ah! kind reader, this is the question, and it is just at this point that the prophecies of the scriptures come to our aid

I can not well forbear citing one or two prophetic statements supportive of the position we herein take, showing that God pointed out beforehand the great mistake made by the inhabitants of the earth, and the results as they now are made manifest in the religious anarchy of Christendom. "Behold, the Lord maketh the earth empty, and maketh it waste, and turneth it upside down, and scattereth abroad the inhabitants thereof. And it shall be, as with the people, so with the priest; as with the servant, so with the master; as with the buyer, so with the seller; as with the lender, so with the borrower; as with the taker of usury, so with the giver of usury to him. The land shall be utterly emptied, and utterly spoiled: for the Lord hath spoken this word. The earth mourneth and fadeth away, the world languisheth and fadeth away, the haughty people of the earth do languish. The earth also is defiled under the inhabitants thereof; because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, and broken the everlasting covenant. Therefore hath the curse devoured the earth, and they that dwell therein are desolate; therefore the inhabitants of the earth are burned, and few men left." "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and kingdom; preach the word; be instant in season, out of season; reprove, rebuke, exhort, with all longsuffering and doctrine. For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine, but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables." Isa. 24:1-6; 2 Tim. 4:

By a careful consideration of these passages, it will be apparent to any reflecting mind that the very first move that can be made in our delivery from the difficulties we are laboring under, and that Israel may be saved, is for our Heavenly Father to renew "the everlasting covenant" with such of "the inhabitants of the earth" as are willing that he shall; supplant the "fa-bles" to which "priest" and "people" of all societies and positions in life have been turned, that by "sound doctrine"-God's word, with the light of the Holy Ghost that wields it—we may be delivered from the realms of darkness, division and uncertainty, and restored to the "one fold" of Christ. But the restoration, or restitution, of which the prophets have spoken, how was it to be ushered in? This is the ever recurring question. And in our endeavor to answer it, the graduates must suffer us time and space for the sake of those of us yet in the primary departments of this school.

To begin then, it will be observed by all who are earnestly seeking for the truth on this subject, that in the opening up of all the dispensations of Divine grace of past ages, God began by revealing His intended purposes or work to His servants, and giving authority or commission to those whom he chose to do that work, always telling them how to carry on the work they were appointed to do. And as long as they continued faithful to the labor assigned, God was with them by the aid of the angels and the Holy Spirit. Such was the way in which the laborers of the early morning hour were sent to labor in the vineyard, or in the days before the flood. See Jude 14; Heb. 11:4-7; Gen. 5:21-23; Matt. 23: 34, 35. Also in the third hour of the world-day, or in the times of Melchisedec, Abraham, Isaac and Jacob. Gen. 14: 18, 19; 22: 15-18; 15: 16; Psalms 105: 12, 13. When the Lord's "prophets" and "anointed" traveled from nation to nation, laboring in the vineyard, proclaiming the gospel. Gal. 3:8. Where there is no law, there is no transgression, but "iniquity" was imputed to the Amorites by the Lord himself, whereby we are assured that God's word had been declared to them.

So also, in the sixth hour of the world's great day, God sent his angel to Moses and to Aaron, and by the spirit of revelation from God, they with other servants were sent to deliver Israel from the bondage of Egypt, and establish them in their inheritance, the land of Canaan,—Exodus 3d and 4th chapters,—and the prophets were commissioned of God to teach and instruct Israel in the way of the Lord.—

Ter 7:35, 26: John 4: 26-28

Jer. 7: 25, 26; John 4: 36-38.

Likewise in the ninth hour the householder went out to hire laborers to work in the moral vineyard. God opened up the dispensation by revealing himself and his purpose to Zacharias, to the Virgin Mary, to Elizabeth, Joseph, the Shepherds and to good old Simeon and the Prophetess Anna.—Luke, chapters one and two.

By revelation, John the Baptist was authorized to baptize with water; by revelation, Christ came and labored in establishing the kingdom, and by revelation the apostles and prophets, the seventy were commissioned of God to labor in the vineyard, and establish the Church of Christ.—Luke 9: 2; 10: 1, 3; Jno. 4: 36-38; 1 Cor. 3: 9.

But the dispensations represented by the respective "hours" hereby referred to are now in the past. Their work is done, and it is to be noted, that during the times intervening between these stated "hours," there was a "falling away" from the truth by the peoples to whom the word of God was sent. They turned away from the teachings of those authorized to show them the way of light and holiness, and hence, the apostasy of the "morning hour."

We read: "And God saw that the wickedness of man was great in the earth, and that every imagination of the thoughts of his heart was only evil continually."—Gen. 6: 5. And of the rejection of the divine message of the "third hour" dispensation: "For the iniquity of the Amorites is not yet full."—Gen. 15: 16. Also, "Because that when they knew God, they glorified him not as God, neither were thankful; but became vain in their imaginations, and their foolish heart was darkened," and "who changed the truth of God into a lie," and "For this cause God gave them up."—Rom. 1: 21-26.

Of the wandering away of the people, and their rejection of the authorized labors of the "sixth hour" dispensation, it is recorded: "Wherefore then serveth the law? It was added because of transgression till the seed should come to whom the promise was made."—Gal. 3: 19. The law here referred to as being "added" because of transgression," is the law referred to in Deut. 5: 22, and the transgression was the rejection of the gospel, and of those sent to teach and administer it; "For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them; (Israel in the wilderness); but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it."—Heb. 4: 2. "And he shall send Jesus Christ who before was preached unto you."-Acts 3: 20, says Peter to the Jews. And Jesus says to them: "How oft would I have gathered you, but ve would not." "But they mocked the messengers of God, and despised his words; and misused his prophets, until the wrath of the Lord arose against his people, till there was no remedy."-2 Chron. 36: 16.

But notwithstanding all these rejections of God's mercy to Israel whom he had chosen, he still held them in loving remembrance, and after a period of more than four hundred years of wandering in the dark, without any prophets or seers among them, and devoid of the light of revelation from God to guide them, He offered them another opportunity to return to Him, and the Messiah was sent, who offered them the salvation proposed in the gospel: "He came to his own, but his own received him not." They, as a nation, "counted themselves unworthy of eternal life," but "going about to establish their own righteousness, did not submit themselves to the righteousness of God," and as a consequence their house was left unto them desolate. The kingdom was taken from

They have fallen by the edge of the sword; been carried captive among all nations, and their beloved city, Jerusalem, and the Holy land, have been under the heel of Gentile tyranny until this day. And thus the Savior prophecied it should remain till "the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled."—Luke 21: 24.

Now we have before seen by the reference to Isaiah, chapter twenty-four, that God arraigned, not only the Jews, Israel, but "the inhabitants of the earth," for transgressing the laws and breaking the everlasting covenant, the gospel covenant, (See Heb. 13: 20), and that as a consequence, they are to be visited of the Lord with the spirit of burning, and that but few men would be left; and we are informed that before this visitation of judgment, a dispensation of mercy is to be offered to the nations, that they may be left without excuse, in the hour of His judgment.

The prophetic indications of this great latter day work, the manner of its introduction, its character and nature are in this manner set forth; "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached as a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come."—Matt. 24:14.

To "be preached as a witness" implies that it is done by authority, and in order that those who preach the gospel may be duly authorized, a call by revelation must be made. The initial call, and the restoration of divine authority to admisister the gospel, in word and ordinance, is thus portraved:-"And I saw another angel fly in midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindren, and tongue, and people; saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven and earth, and the sea, and the fountains of waters."-Rev. 14: 6, 7.

By an angel, then, God would restore the gospel, that it might be administered to us, not in word only, but with "power and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance," (I Thess. I: 5), for "are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for those who shall be heirs of salvation?" What could be more appropriate, then, what more like God, or like his works of past dispensations, than that he should send his appointed messenger to deliver the keys of authority, to open up the last gospel dispensation, "the dispensation of the fulness of times?"—Eph. I: 10.

Let us not be so overcome by the idea of the appearance of an angel in the latter days, as to overlook the fact that angels are authorized, commissioned, installed into the office of "ministering spirits;" and that it is their official duty, among other duties of their divine calling to "minister for," (in behalf of), as well as to, the heirs of salvation. "Bless the Lord, all ye his hosts; ye ministers of his, that do his pleasure."—Ps. 103: 21.

We read of the angel that ministered for Israel while they were in Egypt, and through the time of their sojourn in the wilderness. (Exodus 3: 14 19; 23: 20, 21). "Beware of him, and obey his voice, provoke him not; for he will not pardon your transgressions; for my name is in him." While Moses, Aaron and the rest of the priesthood ministered to the congregation, "Behold I send mine angel before you." God sent his angel before John the Baptist and Christ in the words of the ninth hour dispensation, Matt. 4: 11: "Behold, angels came and ministered to him."

An angel ministered for the introduction of the gospel among the Gentiles, in the apostolic age. (Acts 10: 3-7). An angel ministered to John for the Saints and church of that age. (Rev. 1: 1; 19: 10). Paul and Peter both teach that the "principalities" and "authorities" in the kingdom in heaven are subject to Christ. (Eph. 1: 20; I Peter 3: 22; Matt. 28: 18, 19). Then why should it be thought a thing incredible that the establishment of the gospel in this age for the preparing of people for the second coming of Christ, and the salvation of Israel, should be by angelic ministration? It accords with the history of God's dealings with mankind in past ages and dispensations; it is in harmony with the teachings of the scriptures; it is prophetic; it is truth!

The nature of the work introduced through the ministry of the angel; the publication of the gospel among all nations, in the "hour of God's judgments, seems to identify it as being the same in point of time and nature as the work done under the eleventh hour call of Matt. 20: 6, where it appears that the laborers are called to prune the vineyard for the last time.

Please observe the following points when studying this parable of Matthew 20: 1-16. It is not a man's "life time" that is likened "a householder that went out early in the morning to hire laborers into his vineyard." It is "the kingdom of heaven." The "laborers" here referred to are not the membership in general, but the called, qualified and chosen ministry of the kingdom or church. Paul said to the church of himself and fellow ministers: "For we are laborers together with God;" and of the church he says, "Ye are God's husbandry, ye are God's building."—I Cor. 3: 9. Again, the ministry, or laborers, sent in "the eleventh hour" are to toil but "one hour" before the time to "give them their hire," and the last ones hired were the first to be paid for their labor, "beginning from the last unto the first." "These last have wrought but one hour." This "eleventh hour" call, will, like the preceding ones, be made by revelation. By revelation the authority to proclaim the gospel and administer its ordinances among all nations was to be restored. By the proclamation of the gospel as a witness, the church will be established on its original basis, according to the example of its ancient organization, with apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, bishops, teachers and deacons; its helps and govern-ments, and its spiritual gifts and endowments, as in former days. And as in the dispensations of the past, God will give the necessary revelations to the laborers to direct them in the accomplishment of this great work, and by revelation the church will be informed of the time and manner of introducing the gospel among Israel, the Jews, at the fulness of the Gentile times.

There is a beginning to this work of the salvation of Israel; a previous and preparatory work has to be done among the Gentiles in order that the "covenant"—deliverer—may go out of Zion, to Jacob, and turn ungodliness from them. The "keys" or administrative authority, by which they are to be led, as stated by the prophecy quoted at the beginning of this paper, are to be restored; that the kingdom may be restored to them, and that the hearts of the fathers may be turned to the children, and the children to the fathers.

Our reasons for dwelling so lengthily on this division of this all absorbing theme is, there are and have been a great many who are and have been looking toward the work of the salvation of Israel, but fail to understand how it is to be done, or the means to be used of God in its accomplishment. They can (like the Jews of old), see the Messiah when coronated king and exalted to the throne, but they can not see him as a lowly teacher of the first principles of the kingdom. They can see all Israel saved and the kingdom as it fills the whole earth, but fail to see the work of their previous regeneration in order to entitle them to an entrance thereinto, nor the "keys" of authority by which the principles of the gospel of their salvation are to be administered.

Israel though yet blind and unregenerate, stout hearted and obstinate, are yet to be placed in such circumstances as will bring them to see in Jesus of Nazareth, their crucified, but risen Redeemer and Savior. They have suffered the humiliation of temporal captivity, but they must also be brought to realize their captivity of sin, and the humility of the cross of Christ, and accept it as presented in the day when their fathers rejected it. A jewish proselyte to popular Christianity, recently said: "I tried hard to become a Christian, but could not honestly admit that I believed" it. He also said: "When Christ was here upon the earth and did many miracles, if the people could not believe then, how can they believe now, when nothing is done?" enough! Where is the gospel as it originally existed? It will be found in Zion, when the time comes for Israel's heart to turn to the Lord, hence the prophecy, "Hearken unto me, ye stout hearted, that are far from righteousness; I will bring near my righteousness, it shall not be far off, and my salvation shall not tarry; and I will place salvation in Zion for Israel my glory."—Isaiah 46: 12, 13. "O that the salvation of Israel were come out of Zion! when the Lord bringeth back the captivity of His people, Jacob shall rejoice, and Israel shall be glad."—Psalms 14: 7. "And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the Lord, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths; for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem."—Isa. 2:1-5.

Thus did the prophet describe the establishment of the Church of God "in the last days," as in vision he saw the glorious work of God preparatory to the reign of peace, and the salvation of Israel; and hence he exclaims, "O house of Jacob, come ye, and let us walk in the light of the Lord."

By these statements we learn that the "righteousness" of God, which is revealed in the gospel, which has been so far from Israel for so long, is to be brought to them, and that his "salvation" that flows out of obedience to the gospel, is to go out of Zion, and thus the Lord will make the "new covenant with the house of Israel and the house of Judah."—Jer. 31: 31-34. And their sins will be "blotted out," and remembered no more, — will be taken away.

"But Israel shall be saved in the Lord with an everlasting salvation; ye shall not be ashamed nor confounded world without end." "In the Lord shall all the seed of Israel be justified, and shall glory," says Isaiah, (45:17), and the only way that they can attain to "everlasting salvation in the Lord," or in him be justified, is by being adopted into the Lord Jesus Christ, through obedience to the everlasting gospel. For to Israel "pertaineth the adoption, and the glory, and the covenants, and the giving of the law and the service of God, and the promises."—Rom. 9:4; Gal. 4:4, 5.

The keys by which Israel are to be led out of the bondage of sin and restored to the favor of God were evidently to be restored by the Elias predicted by our Savior, when, after showing Peter, James and John, the vision of his second coming in power, on the mount of transfiguration:—
"And his disciples asked him, saying, Why then say the scribes that Elias must first come? [first come, that is, before Christ comes,] And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias truly shall first come, and restore all things."—Matt. 17: 10, 11.

It avails nothing to object to this text as applying in this connection because the Savior immediately refers to John the Baptist as being the Elias to the Jews then, for Jesus makes this prophecy with full knowledge of these facts: John had come, finished his work and mission of that dispensation; had been cast into prison, been beheaded, and was buried, when Jesus made the prophecy, ("Elias truly shall first come, and restore all things,") and so states, in substance, in the next verse. And thus the prophecy of Malachi, 4:5, 6,-"Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord. and he shall turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the hearts of the children to the fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse," is confirmed by the Savior as relating to the work of God to be done preparatory to his coming in power and great glory to reign, judge, and reward all men as their works shall have been.

It is after the house of Israel "has received of the Lord's hand double for all her sins," (Isa. 40: 1; Jer. 16: 18,) that the "keys," authority, or the priesthood (See Matthew 16: 19), restored, in order to the building up of Zion, and the bringing of Israel into the bond of the everlasting covenant, were to be administered in the accomplishment of that work. For such is the prophetic testimony: "Therefore, behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that it shall no more be said, the Lord liveth that brought up the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; but the Lord liveth that brought up the children of Israel from the land of the north, and from all the lands whither he had driven them; and I will bring them again into their land that I gave to their fathers. Behold, I will send for many fishers, saith the Lord, and they shall fish them; and after will I send for many hunters, and they shall hunt them from every mountain, and from every hill, and out of the holes of the rocks."—Jer. 16: 14-16.

By this testimony we are taught that God will call and send the ministry that go to Israel, after the desolation of their beloved land and cities, and their captivity among the Gentiles for "many generations." For, as Israel had been "for a long season" without a teaching priest or priesthood, in the days of Asa the king, and Azariah the prophet, "And in those times there was no peace to him that went out, nor to him that came in," (2 Chron. 15: 3-5,) so, during the captivity of the last eighteen hundred years they have re-alized the fulfillment of the prediction, "For the children of Israel shall abide many days without a king, and without a prince [or priest—priesthood,] and without a sacrifice, and without an image, and without an ephod, and without teraphim." But after the expiration of those "many days" the favor of the Lord will be turned to them, for, "Afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek the Lord their God, and David their king; and shall fear the Lord and his goodness in the latter days."-Hosea 3:4, 5.

In this passage it is implied that the priesthood will be restored to Israel in the latter days. But Isaiah is very bold, plainly declaring, while speaking of the early stages of the work, while Israel is yet among the Gentiles, "But ye shall be named the priests of the Lord; men shall call you the ministers of our God." And further says, "And I will direct their work in truth, and I will make an everlasting covenant with them, and their seed shall be known among the Gentiles, and their offspring among the people."—Isa. 61: 4—

Now this "everlasting covenant" was not made with Israel at their restoration from Babylonish captivity under Ezra, for "everlasting righteousness" was not at that time brought in, nor was it to be till the Messiah came—(See Dan. 9: 24.) Everlasting righteousness is revealed in the gospel, (Rom. 1:17; and by the priesthood restored, as here predicted, the everlasting covenant is administered. So that whether the position be held, that this prophecy was fulfilled in the times of Christ and the apostles, or, is yet to be fulfilled, one thing is beyond all cavil, and that is, the priesthood is there! But if it was fulfilled in former days, since the priesthood was in the church and was the authority by which the gospel was administered then, and since by the great apostasy of the dark ages the priesthood was lost, or forfeited, and in consequence of said apostasy, the restoration of the everlasting gospel was necessary, absolutely so, as we have shown, by evidence from the New Testament, there is of necessity a restoration of the priesthood or keys of authority by which the gospel may be again legally administered. And hence we see no way of evading the doctrine that the priesthood is in the Church of Christ in these last days.

But this is that priesthood represented by Jesus, or "the Melchisedec priesthood," since he is the mediator of "the everlasting covenant," the basis of the church of God, (Heb. 13: 20; 8: 6-13), and there is more than one priest of that line or order, for the word reads, "But ye shall be named the priests of the Lord;" "ministers of our God." A gospel minister then is a priest! Paul said of himself and the ministry of his day, "Who also hath made us able ministers of the new testament."—2 Cor. 2:6.

Again, to Israel pertaineth the promises and the "covenants," says Paul; and it appears that God has promised to remember his promise to incorporate the priesthood given of God to Eleazer, into the ministration of the gospel covenant, in the times of the final restoration and salvation of Israel. Nor is the seed of Levi to be forgotten, when the time comes for Jerusalem to offer again an offering in righteousness to the God of Israel. Says the Lord of Eleazar and of his descendants: "Behold, I give unto him my covenant of peace: and he shall have it, and his seed after him, even the covenant of an everlasting priesthood; because he was zealous for his God, and made an atonement for the children of Israel."—Num. 25: 12. And when the Lord inspired the prophet Jeremiah to speak of the restoration of Israel and their salvation, "At the same time, saith the Lord, will I be the God of all the families of Israel, and they shall be my people;" and of the time when Israel shall say, "The Lord hath appeared of old unto me, saying, Yea, I have loved thee with an everlasting love; therefore with loving kindness have I drawn thee;" of the time when it shall be proclaimed "among the chief of the nations: Publish ye, praise ye, and say, O, Lord, save thy people, the remnant of Israel;" of the day when "He that scattereth Israel will gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock;" the day when "they shall come and sing in the height of Zion, and shall flow together to the goodness of the Lord." Of that day the Lord says: "And I will satiate the soul of the priests with fatness, and my people shall be satisfied with my goodness."-Jer. 31: 14.

And again: "Thus saith the Lord; If ye can break my covenant of the day, and my covenant of the night, and that there should not be day nor night in their season; then may also my covenant be broken with David my servant, that he should not have a son to reign on his throne; and with the Levites the priests, my ministers."—Jer. 33: 20, 21.

All will agree that the son promised in this covenant is Christ; and this being true, it is as plainly to be seen that this covenant includes the Aaronic division of, or appendage of the priesthood; and that it will go with the covenant of Christ to Israel at the time of their adoption into Christ, when "the everlasting covenant" is made with the house of Israel and Judah, and all Israel be saved.

And it is also as evident that this priesthood will be exercised in its relation to the gospel, in the spiritual administration, rather than in the "law of carnal commandments." In this relation Jesus re-mandments." In this relation Jesus received its administration at the hand of John the Baptist, who was a legal heir to this authority, in the direct line of Eleazer—Luke 1: 5, 15), and was priest of that order, and "the messenger of the Lord of hosts," (Mal. 2:7; Isa. 40:3; John 1:23); sent of God to preach repentance to Israel, and to administer the baptism of water, according to the gospel of Christ—Mark 1: 1-4; John 1: 33.

There was a change, then, in the relation, purpose and use of this priesthood at the introduction of the gospel; not in its nature, for it is "the priesthood of the Lord," and, as we have seen, "an everlasting priesthood," and so covenanted of God. And hence, its change must have been its reversion from the law of Moses, to the administration of the visible ordinances of the gospel, "For the priesthood being changed, there is made of necessity a change also in the law."—Heb. 7: 12.

From the foregoing evidences we feel that we can safely conclude that both the Melchisedek and Aaronic divisions of the priesthood are in the Church of Christ with their respective grades of authority, so blended that, conjointly, the gospel in all its fullness may be administered through them.

It is now more than fifty years since the angel came and restored to Joseph Smith, while he was yet a lad, the priesthood, by which he was empowered to lay the foundation of the Lord's "marvelous work and a wonder," (Isa. 29: 13, 14), and ordain men to go forth among the nations of the earth and proclaim the gospel of the kingdom as a witness, and build up the church on original gospel principles, as set forth by Christ and his apostle, (Matt. 16: 19; 1 Cor. 12: 28; Eph. 4: 11-15,) and gather out of the great confusion that now prevails, a people preparatory to the carrying the gospel to the house of Israel, at the fulness of the Gentile times, and the bringing of them into the everlasting covenant.

The claim here made is attested by the current facts that since the beginning of this marvelous work, in 1830, in just a little while after, or in 1846-1853, Lebanon, —Canaan,—that had been always waste, since the captivity by the Romans, began to be turned into a fruitful field, through the return of the former and latter rains, (Isa. 29: 14-17; 32: 13-17; Ezek. 36: 8, 9; Joel 2: 23); and that the house of Judah is emerging from their long captivity among the nations whither they have wandered, and where the Lord has shown them no favor. But now the shame and paleness of their face is turning into the blushes of favor, liberty, citizenship and temporal prosperity. Also, they are slowly returning to the land of their fathers, and rebuilding the cities thereof, and Jerusalem is being inhabited by Jews as towns without walls. (Isa. 29: 22-24; 63: 17, 18; Joel 2: 25, 26; Zech. 2: 1-13. And thus are the Lord's purposes moving on to a glorious consummation preparatory to the glorious reign of peace and glory over the house of Jacob, on the throne of David.

But let it be soberly and solemnly remembered by the advocates of the one thousand and thirty-six differing divisions into which modern Christendom is broken, that God does not design that Israel shall be converted to those numerous and contradictory systems of doctrine, but to the "one faith," hope, Spirit, and Lord and Father of all Saints. "Behold, I will gather them out of all countries whither I have driven them in mine anger, and in my fury, and in great wrath; and I will bring them again into this place, and I will cause them to dwell safely: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God; and I will give them one heart and one way, that they may fear me forever, for the good of them, and of their children after them: and I will make an everlasting covenant with them that I will not turn away from them, to do them good, but I will put my fear in their hearts, that they shall not depart from me."—Jer. 32: 37-40.

"By the keys which I have given shall they be led, and no more confounded at all." "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear!"

THE LETTER KILLETH, BUT THE SPIRIT GIVETH LIFE.

"Who also hath made us able ministers of the new testament; not of the letter [only] but of the Spirit; for the letter killeth, but the Spirit giveth life."-2 Cor. 3:

No doubt many have, like the writer, wondered at what seemed to be the strange language of the apostle, "the letter killeth." He could readily comprehend that the Spirit could give life, for he read—and that by the word, or letter—that it was the light, and the life of all things. The letter or word of this same apostle also informs us that "all scripture given by inspiration of God, is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished unto all good If it was profitable unto all things that the man of God may be thoroughly furnished unto all good works, how then can the letter kill? Remember, reader, it is the man of God that is to be thoroughly furnished. He, once, not being a man or child of God, was killed by the letter, was buried and rose again to newness of life, and that life the Spirit

The natural man reads the word, or letter, and learns: "Wherefore as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin; and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned." He finds that the letter condemns all the sons of Adam unto death—it kills. Reading a little further in this fifth chapter of Romans he finds: "Therefore as by the offense of one, judgment came upon all men unto condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life," or, as the apostle in another place speaking of Christ, says, "Who hath abolished death and hath brought life and immortality to light, through the gospel."

Here he finds that Christ has delivered all the human family from this deathseparation of body and spirit—hath forever abolished it; therefore hath brought to pass the resurrection from the dead. All come forth—by the power of the resurrection—in the presence of God, to be judged of him, of the deeds done in the body, whether they be good, or bad; if good, according to the decision, then they dwell forever in his presence; but if to the contrary they can not dwell there, for no unclean thing can dwell in His presence. But he learns also that to dwell in the presence of God, or in the language just quoted, to obtain life and immortality, he must obtain it by a a knowledge of and obedience to the gospel; for through that is it brought to light.

If Christ-who was as a lamb slain from before the foundation of the world in the behalf of fallen man-had not died to redeem man, there would have been no gospel or plan of salvation for him; his body, having been consigned to the grave, would have forever remained there, and his spirit in the prison-house forever subject to the will of the devil: he being impotent to devise any means by his own power to deliver him from the claims of justice. But Christ has tasted death for every man; he has suffered, the just for the unjust, that he might bring us to God. And the first thing to be done in bringing us back that we might regain our lost estate to dwell with God was to free us from eternal death. But this death being abolished by Christ did not free us from that death which is banishment from the presence of God; it only placed us in a condition that when the plan of mercy, or the gospel, should be proclaimed to the children of men, the obedience of which would restore them back into the presence of God, we might avail ourselves of the opportunity offered, and be saved. And thus light and immortality were brought to light through this plan of mercy, or the gospel. "Jesus Christ hath abolished death, and brought life and immortality to light through the gospel."

The natural man reading the word or letter finds that the gospel requires that, having faith in God and his Son as the savior of the world, he must (to be delivered from sin and its consequences) repent or turn away from all sin, and this being done he becomes dead to sin, for he lives no longer therein; the letter has killed But after death there must be a burial; he must be buried with him [Christ] by baptism, into death; that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life."-Rom. 6:4.

This same apostle in the eighth chapter of this epistle, tells what that glory was that raised up Jesus from the dead. He says, "And if the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit that dwelleth in you." The sentence "shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his Spirit," &c., shows that Christ's mortal body was quickened by that self same Spirit; or the glory of the Father that raised up Christ from the dead was the Spirit of God, and that it is by that same Spirit that all baptized, repentant believers receive and are enabled to walk in "newness of life." And this fulfills the apostle's statement that "the Spirit giveth life."

Then after burial there is a resurrection, and that resurrection is brought about by the Spirit, for by it we walk in "newness of life." But Paul says, "God hath also made us able ministers of the new testament; not of the letter [only] but of the Spirit; for the letter killeth but the Spirit giveth life."

If God had not made man an able minister to his fellow man, or clothed him with authority to minister the Spirit, there would have been no resurrection from the burial of baptism to newness of life, and thus man would have been no better off than if he had not been buried in baptism.

Again: It needs authority from God to officiate in this burial by baptism to make a man entitled to this resurrection to "newness of life." "No man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God." -Heb. 5:4. If any man should officiate in this burial without being called of God and authorized of him to perform this rite, there would be no administration of the Spirit, therefore no newness of life; and the letter that kills could not officiate, hence the necessity of able ministers, both of water and of the Spirit, so that repentant man could be born of water and of the Spirit; could be as the Savior declared, "He must be born again." "But," says one, "man has no power to minister the Spirit." Man of himself has no power to do anything to secure the salvation of man, but when clothed with authority from God to act in his name, every act thus performed is as though God himself had done it, and the power is of God and not of man, as the apostle says in 2 Cor. 4: 7, "We have this treasure in earthen vessels, that the excellency of the power may be of God and not of us." How plain! Although man is authorized to minister, the excellency of the power is of God. And how plain the power given to man to minister the Holy Spirit is made manifest in Acts 9:17 where Ananias was sent to Saul of Tarsus, and putting his hands on him said: "Brother Saul, the Lord, even Jesus, that appeared unto thee in the way that thou camest, hath sent me, that thou mightest receive thy sight and be filled with the Holy Ghost." The Lord, even Jesus, had sent him that Paul might receive the Holy Ghost. He had established not only that his servants should minister the Spirit, but the mode or ordinance through which it should be given. This is evidenced in the case just mentioned, where Ananias being sent by his Lord that Saul might receive the Holy Ghost administered by putting his hands on him. The history of the acts of the apostles, as they traveled through the world preaching the gospel, as recorded in the book of that name, in the 8th and 19th chapters, gives other proof of the ministering of the Spirit by the servants of God through the ordinance of laying on of hands.

It would be well for the reader enquiring what he must do to be saved (and for this classs is this article more particularly written) to read these chapters carefully, for in them are couched items of great value to him, instructing him in the way of salvation.

It is related in the eighth chapter that after Philip had preached the word unto the Samaritans, they gave heed to the things that he preached and were baptized both men and women. These people had great joy in seeing the marvelous power manifested through the administration of Philip, in healing their sick and freeing others from the bondage of unclean spirits. But the record says that though they had this great joy, and had been baptized in water, they had not received the baptism of the Holy Ghost; for this ordinance whereby baptized believers received the ministration of the Holy Ghost had not been performed. The apostles at Jerusalem knowing the necessity of this ordinance, sent Peter and John, "who, when they had come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost (for as yet he had fallen upon none of them, only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus). Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost."

How plain, even to the causal reader, that men are sent to minister the Spirit and that through the ordinance of laying on of hands; and not only to minister in this but every ordinance in the house of God. Ananias was sent directly from the Master that Saul, afterwards called Paul, might be filled with the Holy Ghost. The apostles at Jerusalem, being clothed with authority from God to act in his name, their acts, when not transcending that authority, would be as though God himself had done them—sent Peter and John to perform the same rite that Ananias performed upon Saul, the laying on of hands and of prayer that the Samaritans might receive the Holy Ghost.

In the nineteenth chapter of Acts is recorded an instance of Paul, through the imposition of hands, administering the Spirit to baptized, repentant believers. This is the plan of God whereby fallen man may be brought back into relationship with him, having been adopted into his family, having been born again, the Spirit having given them life, even that new life, which is eternal life, but only in such proportion that it is compared to an infant being born into this natural life. We receive the kingdom of heaven as a little child; know as much about it and the spiritual life of its citizens, comparatively, as a natural born infant does of the worldly kingdom in which it is born, or of the natural life it has entered upon.

They have need while in this infantile state to be fed, as Paul says, on the sincere milk of the word; until their digestive powers have grown strong enough for more solid food. They must be taught to rely on their Father's hand for support, when they undertake to stand; they must seek his aid in secret prayer, for therein lieth their strength and support; and in their beginning to walk—if they stumble and fall-they should be helped up by their elder brethren and sisters; not scolded and frowned upon so as to discourage them from attempting to walk again.

If the young members of the church should be tempted and should stumble, so as to give way to the temptation to mingle with the world in any of their pastimes that are not pleasing in the sight of God, they should be gently helped upon their feet and mildly told to guard against stumbling again; that they can not live the life they have essayed to do in breathing the atmosphere of the world, for that will produce decay in the spiritual life, and if persisted in will eventually end in death. Do not get angry at them, ye elder brethren, and thunder at them the terrors of the law, when their feet slip, no more than you would your infant prattler when it stumbles in its first attempts to walk; but be patient with them and by and by, their ankle bones, strengthened by the Spirit's food will receive the strength necessary to enable them not only to stand but to walk in the narrow path that leadeth to the fulness of that life that they have just commenced. They will begin to search the revealed word given for their instruction in righteousness that they may be thoroughly furnished unto all good works—and then learn that that Spirit which gave them life is appointed of God to lead, to guide, and sustain them in that life, "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God;" that the "Spirit will guide them into all truth;" and "that the truth shall make you [them] free." Free from the bondage of sin, and all its consequences; free citizens of the kingdom of God: eligible to all its privileges and blessings here; and if faithful, law-abiding citizens in this probation—having developed by obedience to God's commandments into goodlier proportions in Christ Jesus-they will be transplanted into the richer soil of the Millennium, to reign with Christ on earth a thousand years. And in that thousand years' reign, when the devil is bound, and shut up by the power of God, where he can have no power to deceive the inhabitants of the earth for that length of time; when there will be nothing to hurt nor destroy in all the earth; when the knowledge of God shall extend over all its surface; then will they be educated up to the standard that will make them presentable to the Father; when the Son shall deliver up the kingdom to him, having put down all rule, and destroyed the last enemy, death; then will they receive a fulness of that life which they entered upon in their probationary state when born again in the kingdom of God; then will they receive a fulness of that glorya portion of which they received when their bodies were quickened at the time of their resurrection to reign with Christ a thousand years.

In view of the foregoing, we find that fallen man can not be saved in the kingdom of God without being born again, raised to a newness of life; and that life is given by the Spirit; the Spirit is ministered through the laying on of hands of those authorized to act, and only administered to those who have authoritatively been baptized.

We then ask in all soberness and with all deference to the views of others, how can men who positively avow that there has been no communication from heaven to man for upwards of eighteen hundred years, although professing to be, be called of God and authorized of him to act in his name, when no communication from God unto them has been had? And how can they be any help to fallen man towards securing his salvation? If they preached the word, or letter, in its fulness-which they do not, as evinced by the many churches erected on the differences of opinion existing between them, on that word or letter, it would be no better than the sinner reading the letter for himself; and if their preaching of the letter produced the effect to cause him to repent, or cease to sin against God, it would only kill and could not make alive, for that power to make alive would be lacking.

And this we conceive to be the case with the world at the present time; having departed from the faith once delivered to the Saints, and as a consequence lost the authority to act for God, they can not benefit fallen man towards helping to secure his salvation.

Hence the position of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints is tenable when they assert the necessity of new revelation to restore the gospel, and the authority to preach it, that it may be preached as the apostle declared it came to them in his day, "For our gospel came not unto you in word [letter] only, but also in power, and in the Holy Ghost, and in much assurance."

The word of the gospel was the letter; the power to preach that word and officiate in the ordinances thereof was the authority given of God to men to do so; and through the obedience to the preaching of that word authoritatively administered, the Holy Ghost was given; and brought much assurance, even that God accepts all such as his children, and makes known unto them this fact, and as Paul says, then they can cry, "Abba, Father."

That God has restored this gospel by an holy angel from heaven, who has commissioned men to preach it and administer in its ordinances for the salvation of mankind, the Latter Day Saints have been testifying to the world for upwards of sixty years. And they as the Bride, the Lamb's whe say unto all that will, "Come," and the Spirit also saith "Come," and thus "The Spirit and the Bride say Come, and let him that heareth say Come, and let him that is athirst come; and whosoever will let him take of the water of life free-

God is no respecter of persons, but the cry is to all nations, kindreds, tongues and peoples, saying, "Fear God, and give glory to him, for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made the heavens and the earth, the sea, and the fountains of waters."—Rev. 14: 6. E. STAFFORD.

RUINS IN MEXICO AND GUA-TEMALA.

CITY OF MEXICO, Aug. 2.—Recently returned explorers from the state of Chiapas confirm and add to the remarkable reports concerning important archæological discoveries. A fine, broad, paved road built by prehistoric inhabitants has been traced from Tonala down to Guatemala and thence in a curve up again into Mexico, terminating at Palenque. All along this road are still to be seen the remains of ruined cities, and a careful estimate of the one-time population of these places is about 30,000,000. On that part of the road near Palenque the ruins are of great magnitude. Houses four and often five stories high have been found in the depth of the forest. Many of these houses are pyramidal in form and so covered are some of them with vegetable mold that large trees are growing from the roofs. In some of the houses employment has been made of stone beams of tremenduous weight, and the architecture indicates a high degree of science.

In some houses visited bronze lamps have been discovered and the interior and exterior decorations of the more important houses consist of panelings filled with elaborately carved figures, almost life size, two types of men and women being represented, some plainly Egyptians and others genuine Africans. In front of one of the houses the explorers found fourteen sculptures of gods with folded arms.

The work of exploration was one of extreme difficulty owing to the density of the forest and the unwillingness of the Indians to enter the ancient edifices, they averring that the buildings were inhabited by spirits. Another discovery was that an enormous paved road extends from Palenque across Yucatan to the Island of Cozumel and is continued on the Island.

Palenque explorers assert that they have discovered in the edifices before mentioned examples of a perfect arch. One explorer is a scientifically trained man, who has recently arrived from India, and by his account the region from Chiapas to Yucatan must have been the seat of a densely populous nation.—Chicago Times.

NEW ENGLAND REUNION.

The above reunion was held at Green's Landing, Maine. commencing at 2: 30, p. m., August 9th, 1889, and continuing until the 18th. The assembly was called to order in the Saints' Chapel by Elder F. M. Sheehy, chairman of the committee. Hymn 78 was sung. Prayer by Elder T. Whiting. The following officers were then chosen: Apostle W. H. Kelley president, Elder M. H. Bond, assistant, Elder T. Whiting, secretary, Elder U. W. Greene, treasurer; Elder F. M. Sheehy to confer with the press; Bro. John N. Ames chorister; Sr. Julia Glover organist. Time of meetings, morning prayer meeting at 9: 30, preaching at 2: 30 and 7: 30 p. m. The matter of taking up collections to defray the expenses was referred to the president and treasurer; the appointing of speakers, and others to take charge of meetings was left to the president. After the above business several of the brethren, by request, spoke in regard to the object of the Reunion. Preaching at 7: 30 p. m. by Elder F. M. Sheehy, to a large congregation.

M. Sheehy, to a large congregation.

Saturday, 10th, the morning prayer meeting was in charge of brethren A. H. Parsons and T. Whiting. A very profitable and spiritual season was enjoyed. The afternoon preaching was by Elder S. O. Foss of Jonesport, Maine, in Music Hall; a large hall that holds one thousand people in which all the preaching during the Reunion was done. In the evening the stand was occupied by Elder John Smith of New Bedford, Massachusetts, to quite large audience.

Sunday, 11th: The weather was all that could be desired, the sun shining brightly, and all nature smiling; inspiring the heart and filling each soul with gratitude to God. The morning prayer meeting was in charge of brethren J. C. Foss and A. H. Parsons. A splendid spiritual time was enjoyed, followed by preaching at 10: 30 by A. H. Parsons to an attentive audience. At the close of the service four persons were baptized by Elder T. Whiting. While waiting for the candidates Bro. A. H. Parsons mounted a large rock, and preached to the three or four hundred people on the shore concerning the prihciple of baptism. Altogether it was a very impressive and picturesque sight. The afternoon preaching was by Elder M. H. Bond, of Providence, Rhode Island, to a large gathering, and a very large audience greeted the preacher in the evening, the stand being filled by Elder F. M. Sheehy, of Lisbon Falls, Maine. The preaching during the day was very fine, each speaker being assisted by the Holy Spirit in a marked degree. The congregations assembled during the day are said to be the largest ever known at Green's Landing on any religious occasion.

The Monday morning prayer meeting was in charge of M. H. Bond. The ordinance of confirmation was attended to by brethren Bond, Sheehy, Foss and Parsons. The Holy Spirit was present during the ceremony, after which the meeting was turned over to the Saints, when a wonderful spiritual feast was enjoyed by all. The manifestations of the Spirit in the gifts of tongues and interpretation was present, comforting the Saints, and encouraging and acknowledging the ministry. At 2: 30 p. m. the stand was occupied by Elder T. Whiting, and at 7: 30 by Elder J. C. Foss.

Tuesday morning prayer meeting was in charge of brethren A. H. Parsons and M. H. Bond. This meeting was remarkable for the calm and gentle, yet powerful Spirit manifested in the prayers and testimonies. During this meeting two more offered themselves for baptism. At 2: 30 the Saints gathered in their chapel to listen to an exposition of the law of tithing by Elder John Smith, Bishop's Agent for the Massachusetts district. After the discourse questions were asked and answered, thus evincing on the part of the Saints an interest in the temporal law. Several testimonies were given in regard to the success of its operation, and of the blessings following those who keep that law. At 7: 30 p. m. preaching at Music Hall by Elder A. H. Parsons; theme, Christ's second coming. A large congregation was present.

Wednesday. The rain began to fall this morning, but it did not abate the interest of the Saints, who met promptly at 9: 30 for prayer and testimony, and while all outside was stormy, yet within was bright and cheerful, made so by the influence of the Spirit of the Master. At noon, while the rain continued to fall, a large company gathered at the water's side to witness the ordinance of baptism performed by Elder A. H. Parsons, followed at 2: 30 p. m. by preaching in the hall by Elder U. W. Greene, of Green's Landing, Maine. At 7: 30 p. m. Elder M. H. Bond, of Providence, Rhode Island, was the speaker. The night was stormy, but a good audience was present.

Thursday morning, Brn. J. C. Foss and A. H. Parsons presided over the prayer and testimony meeting. The candidate baptized yesterday was confirmed under the hands of Elders M. H. Bond and George W. Eaton. During this meeting Bro.

George W. Eaton related some of his early experiences with father Landers, in their ploneer work in the state of Maine; showing the wonderful manner in which God directed them in their labors. While this great, rough, weather-beaten fisherman, was telling of God's goodness to Bro. Landers and himself, the tears of joy were coursing down his bronzed cheeks, and the Holy Spirit was present, melting each heart, so that as one member rejoiced, all the members partook of that joy. This meeting was continued in the afternoon until four o'clock, thus taking the place of preaching service. It was a time long to be remembered by all present. The preaching at 7: 30, p. m. was by Elder John Smith; text, Rom. 10: 15; subject, divine authority.

friday morning the assembly was called to order for business, Bro. M. H. Bond in the chair. The committee on reunion made their report, which was accepted, and committee discharged with thanks. The treasurer's report was as folbills 48c., telegram 5cc., total $17.48; amount received by collection $14.62, balance needed $2. The following resolution was then offered: Moved that when this Reunion adjourns it does so to meet at Jonesport, the second Saturday in August, 1890. Moved as an amendment, that the next Reunion be held at Dennisport, Massa-chusetts, the first Saturday in August, 1890. After some discussion the following substitute was offered: Moved that the next Reunion be held the first Saturday in August, 1890. ous question being called, the substitute was put upon its passage and carried. Brn. John Smith, J. C. Foss and U. W. Greene were appointed a committee to arrange for the next Reunion, they to confer with the Saints at Dennisport with a view to holding it there, and to report through the Herald at least three months before the time appointed. A rising vote of thanks was given to the Saints and friends at Green's Landing for their kindness and hospitality during the Reunion. Thanks were also tendered to the Boston and Bangor Steamship Company, for half rates; also to Captain Charles Deering of the steamer "John Brooks," for favors shown to the Saints traveling on his boat; to the Editor of the Green's Landing Gazette for space in its columns; to Mr. Charles U. Russ, for the use of Music Hall at reduced rates; and to Bro. John Knowlton, for the use of organ during the meetings. Moved that if there be any surplus left in the hands of the treasurer, that suitable books be purchased for the secretary and treasurer. Moved that the secretary write the minutes of the Reunion for publication in the Herald, and that he send copies of the thanks of this body to the several companies and individuals before named.

Preaching at 2:30 p.m. by Elder A. H. Parsons. At the close of the meeting part of the Massachusetts delegation returned home on steamer "Mount Desert." Preaching at 7:30 p. m. by Elder John C. Foss.

Saturday morning the entire delegation from eastern Maine, including Elders J. C. and S. O. Foss departed by steamer "Mount Desert," leaving but a few to continue the remaining services. By agreement the morning and afternoon meetings were postponed, and the remaining Saints enjoyed a sail down the river in Bro. Otis Eaton's vessel, and a clam dinner on an island called George's Head. After dinner the delightful sail was continued, and the singing of hymns and chatting was the order of the day. Preaching at 7:30 by Elder Thomas Whiting. The Sunday morning prayer meeting was in charge of Bro. F. M. Sheehy. Many precious moments were lost in waiting one for another. Preaching at 2:30 p. m. by F. M. Sheehy to a very large and attentive audience. At the close of the meeting the large congregation adjourned to the water, where one more was led into the water and baptized by Bro. T. Whiting. In the evening the ordinence of confirmation was performed by Elders M. H. Bond and F. M. Sheehy, after which a very emphatic sermon was preached by the former. Thus ended the second New England Reunion, giving a new impetus to the work in Maine, and especially at Green's Landing.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Conference of the Massachusetts district will be held at Unity Temple Hall, 275, High street, Providence, Rhode Island, commencing Saturday, September 21st, at 2:30 p. m. A committee will be at the hall and assign visitors to places of entertainment. No railroad rates are obtainable over the O. C. R. R. other than one thousand mile tickets, which are good for any number of persons and until used. Parties from branches whose aggregate fares both ways approximate to $20 would do well to purchase and secure thus a two-thirds rate. They can dispose of the balance at conference to the Bishop's Agent. Tickets between Boston and Providence, either way, on the N. Y. and N. E. R. R., seventy-five cents. W. H. Kelley is expected to be with us.

The fall conference of the Kent and Elgin district will be held in the Chatham branch, commencing on Saturday, October 5th, at ten a. m. The officers and Saints of the district are requested to report. All branches are requested to report. It is expected that Bro. E. L. Kelley of Kirtland, Ohio, will be present; also the local elders of the district.

UNFERMENTED WINE.

Recipe for making unfermented wine. Put as many grapes into your press as you like, press out the juice, then put in your bottles, cork and seal as quick as possible. Put your bottles into your boiler on the stove, fill up with water to the necks, heat your water until it almost boils, then you have killed the ferment and you can keep your wine twenty years if you like.

THE GENERAL ANNUAL REUNION.

Arrangements are being made on an ample scale, to render this meeting the very best of its kind ever held in the church.

Prospects indicate that the attendance will be the largest ever had, and that the comfort and convenience of all in attendance will be made comparatively complete.

The Reunion grounds are being put into good shape, also all the roads leading to them; water and fuel of good quality will be had in abundance, and food supplies will be kept in good supplies to above the

ply at cheap rates.

The grounds are located on a gentle declivity, surrounded on all quarters by high ridges, and are bountifully supplied with shade and by elm, linden, hickory, oak, walnut, other trees; and running near at hand is a spring brook, furnishing water for baptismal purposes and for teams. The camp will be ten miles north of the city of Missouri Valley, and may be reached from there by carraige, over good roads, at about fifty cents per passenger; and it may be reached also by carriage from Mondamin, a town five miles west, for twenty-five cents per passenger.

Commodious boarding accommodations will be furnished at twenty-five cents or less per meal; and no effort will be spared by the Reunion committee to see that the wants of the visitors are supplied promptly, at cheap rates, and in a courteous manner.

A general invitation is hereby given to all to come up to this yearly assembly to seek and serve God; and such of the ministry of the church as can find it practicable to come and assist in the services are specially requested to attend and aid as they can.

It is hoped the First Presidency, the Bishopric, and as many of the Twelve and other missionaries as can come will be in attendance.

The committee on arrangements earnestly request the prayers of all the church that the Lord may bless and direct the efforts being made to render this meeting successful, and give abundant increase in grace and gifts, in goodly influence and numbers, and do wondrously in the lifting up of Zion and in the salvation of souls.

By order of the Committee.

DIED.

KINDER —At Saint Joseph, Mo., on August 15th, 1889, Oscar, youngest son of Bro. and Sr. Kinder, aged 4 years and 5 days. Deceased was born near Nashville, Kansas, August 10th, 1885, and August 17th, 1889, was buried on the farm of Bro. Hailey, near Avenue City, Missouri. Funeral services were conducted at the parents' home, on the 16th, by M. H. Forscutt, assisted by Elder J. M. Terry. The deceased had been sick for several weeks, but confined to his bed only a few days, the last three of which he seemed to be in a dying state. Administrations gave relief, but not health. Three days before the end the parents resigned their trust, and Oscar was anointed to his burial or his recovery as the Divine One should will. A holy calm prevailed; pain was rebuked, and no more sign of its presence afterwards manifested. Some blessed testimonies relieved the tender parents' hearts. During the evening on which he died, the following circumstance occurred: Several watchers were around the bed. The father was out in the yard. The dying child lay in the front room—the third room from where the father was. Suddenly all they who were with the child were startled by hearing a voice distinctly call, "Ammon, Ammon." Out in the yard the father heard it too, and hastened in to learn its cause; but none could tell. "Ammon" was the name of a younger brother, much beloved, who departed June 17, scarce two months before. The two boys, Oscar and Ammon, had manifested more of a brother's love for each other than is usual at their age. Since Ammon's exit, Oscar had gradually pined away. Together again once more now, their in-nocent love may find sweeter expression than before, with increased force and broader scope, and where death may not invade.

AULD.-Jennie Edna Olive Auld died Monday, August 12th, at 1 p. m., near Albia, Washington county, Kansas. Sr. Auld was born May 29th, 1876, being 13 years, 2 months and 12 days old. She bore with patience the rod of affliction, showing many evidences of her faith in God and his promises. Sr. Olive had not obeyed the gospel by baptism when she was stricken down with a paralytic stroke and with lung fever. She refused to have a doctor sent for, but requested her father to send for the writer to come and pray for her. I arrived on Friday evening and admin-She recovered her voice and was much improved during the latter part of the night. Her parents got excited and sent for a doctor. Before the doctor got there we had a season of prayer. The blessing came and the numbness departed; she could turn herself in bed and could use her limbs, and when told the doctor had come, called her father and mother and told them she wanted to get up. They placed her in the great arm chair and she remained up while the doctor examined her, made out his prescription, gave a dose of medicine, leaving several doses, with in-We left for our home feeling sad to think how little faith man has in his God. Two weeks passed away; the doctor made five visits and administered his opiates without the desired effect. Little Olive grew worse each day until the physician declared he could do no more; that there was no power on earth could save her. Again they came for us, and we responded, getting to Bro. Auld's at 5 p. m., Thursday. Friends were crying that Olive was dying. We bowed by her bedside and asked God to give here back to us that we might hear her testimony once more. We were heard and she revived and could talk as strong as ever and gave strong testimony of her faith in God; and the next day while two neighbors were visiting and urging her to take some other medicine, she said, "I don't want any medicine; my faith is in God. If He wants me to live He will heal me; don't you see Bro. Kent came and prayed for me and God has blessed me. If I had not taken any medicine the first time I would have been well now." She talked about obeying the gospel and being baptized as soon as she was well enough. I stayed with them from Thursday till the following Monday and from all human appearance she was getting better and gaining strength as fast as could be expected. When we bade her adieu I said, "Olive, what word have you to send to your sister Nettie."

She replied, "Tell her I am just as happy as I can be, only very sick; and that I am going to be baptized, and mamma, just as soon as I get well enough." To my surprise, on the morning of the 13th a messenger came stating that she requested to be brought and laid away with the Saints to await the resurrection of the just. She passed away conscious of death, with a smile upon her countenance, and a lovelier face I never looked upon in death—the peace, joy, and happiness that was implanted there seemed to speak volumes for those that die in the Lord, and are admonitions to all that looked upon her to prepare to meet the end, that their death might be like hers. We tried to speak a few words of comfort to the friends who had gathered to pay their last respects to one of earth's children.

JOBE.—Of disease of the liver and kidneys Mr. James W. Jobe, eldest son of Mr. Thomas and Elizabeth Jobe, August 4th, 1889, aged forty years, four months and four days. He leaves a wife, one little daughter, his aged parents, five brothers, three sisters and a large circle of friends and acquaintances to mourn their loss. He was confined to his bed eleven weeks before his death. They had five celebrated physicians but all seemed as though they could no nothing for him. He suffered so long and so much, but our heavenly Father saw fit to take him from us, for which we feel sad. But we have a promise if faithful until death that we will meet with those gone before. He was class-leader in the United Brethren church and was a man worthy of all due honor and praise. He was a great reader of the Herald and stated a short time before he died that if he lived he would join the Latter Day Saints, for he believed that doctrine more than any he knew Funeral services conducted by Rev. #### LONGEVITY IN THE DESERT.

Deputy United States Marshal Ralph Dominguez of Los Angeles, who was in the city last evening, says the San Diego (Cal.) Union, tells a very strange tale of the extraordinary longevity of some Indians upon whom he served some papers last week.

Five Mission Indians were subpænaed to testify in a case wherein the government is plaintiff. The point involved is as to whether or not the Indians shall be mantained in the possession of the Potrero reservation, which comprises 45.000 acres of the finest land in Southern California. The five Indians in question were wanted to testify as to how long they had had possession of the reservation, and their ages ranged from 80 to 120 years. Mr. Dominguez found them in the Yuma desert, about ten miles the other side of Indio.

The oldest of the quintet was Juan Sabichi, who had been on earth 120 years. Francisca Apache was aged 115 years. Juan Largo had only lived 100 years. Juan Cohulla was born ninety-five years ago. The youth of the party was Chief Cabazon, who had only recollected of seeing eighty summers pass.

Juan Sabichi and Francisca Apache recollected of the commencement of the work on the mission at Potrero, which, as a historical fact, was built 110 years ago. They both assisted in the construction of the antique temple, as they caraccount of their extreme age they can hardly walk now, but all things considered they are quite "chipper." ried adobe and in that way aided in the work. On Francisca Apache was married fourteen years ago, when he was over 100 years old. In honor of his union to an Apache woman, who, on that occasion, was a blushing bride of 60 summers, he added to his name the name of the tribe his wife was a member of.

Four years ago the father of Chief Cabazon died at the advanced age of 140 years, and then his son succeeded to the chieftainship. These extraordinary instances of the longevity of the Mission Indians, who number about 600, speaks a great great deal for the climate of the Yuma desert, where during all this time they have lived undisturbed by the white man-Chicago Times

QUIETNESS.—There are many people who have zeal enough to talk, but few who have grace enough to keep quiet. It is comparatively easy to speak out, when we are assailed, injured, defamed or contradicted, but to be quiet under such circumstances is often much more difficult, and often much more commendable. If a man is assailed by falsehood his truest policy is often the policy of quietness. If he contradicts, those who have told one falsehood may tell ten, and persons who do not know him or know the truth are quite as likely to believe falsehood as to believe the truth - Sel.

THE COLLEGE.

AT the last meeting of the College committee which was held May 25th, an adjournment was had until September 6th, and general and local committees were appointed to continue the work of soliciting subscriptions. As the time for the September meeting is now past we suppose those interested desire to hear of the present status and prospects of the move-

We have simply to report that the project has by no means been abandoned; but that it is the intention of those having it in charge to push the matter to a successful issue, if at all possible to do so; and they think it is possible, and in that work they hope to receive the substantial encouragement and aid which, if intended, should be promptly manifested by a hearty response in the tangible shape of subscriptions for college stock.

At an informal meeting of a portion of the College committee held at Lamoni, September 2d, it was resolved "That inasmuch as unavoidable circumstances are likely to prevent the chairman-Bro. Robert Winning - and others from being present on the 6th inst., to which date the last meeting adjourned, therefore be it resolved that it is the sense of this meeting that the date of the proposed meeting should be changed to a later time in the fall, perhaps some time in October; and that the chairman of the committee (Bro. R. Winning) be requested and authorized to call the committee together sometime in October or November next."

It will be seen by the above that a meeting, which will in some sense prove a decisive one for the present success or present failure of the college movement, will probably be held in the next thirty or sixty days. That should be sufficient to decide the action of every friend of the movement. It is to be hoped that no one who can lend a helping hand to such a most worthy and long-needed institution will hesitate to so express themselves, in a way that will indicate that they mean what they say, and that their favor is of a reliable character.

Enough has been said, we trust, to awake a deep interest in this matter, but the requisite encouragement has not yet been fully given. However, sufficient subscriptions have been obtained to show that if the movement was but fairly appreciated, the College could undoubtedly be built and successfully operated.

In this connection we present below a letter from Sr. Walker, one who is qualified to speak, not only for herself, but for the sisters and for others in the Church. She has the cause of the education of the young at heart, and has heretofore given evidence of undoubted devotion and consecration to it. We can endorse her sentiments that there should be no spirit of sectionalism manifested in this matter.

For our part we hope to see the time when flourishing colleges shall be reared by our people, not only at Lamoni, but at other points, North, South, East and West, as circumstances will undoubtedly demand. But we must begin some time and somewhere; and we believe that that time is now, and that the place is Lamoni. However, let the location be decided upon later, but let us have a college; and when others are necessary, let the same spirit of unity induce subscriptions from all sections to also build them. We can not better manifest our love for our children and for those of the traveling ministry than to promptly aid in this matter. Shall we act, or shall we hesitate and let a golden opportunity be lost?

LAMONI, Iowa, August 27th.

Dear Herald: - Will you kindly grant me space in your columns for a few words with the Saints relative to a matter in which all are interested, but to the importance of which all seem not to be fully alive; we refer to the college enterprise now under consideration by the Saints, not only at Lamoni, but elsewhere throughout the church.

There has been a thought suggested to me (for I assure you it never would unaided have entered my mind) that from various ones this enterprise is likely to meet with opposition, because of its proposed location at Lamoni. Now while I have not one word to say in favor of or against Lamoni as a proper place for its location, I do wish to hold this thought up for an impartial view, that as Saints we may be enabled to realize from whence it comes.

Much has been spoken and written (most justly too) upon the subject of unity. A united church, one Lord, one faith, one baptism; but is not the spirit which stands aloof and says, "I am of the East," while another replies, "I am of the West, North, or South, just as much a spirit of Babylon (or confusion) as that which led the Saints in former times to exclaim, "I am of Paul," and others, "I am of Cephas?"

If this spirit is to be encouraged where is the unity of which we boast? The church, the body of Christ can no more be divided in interest than in Spirit or in body. Is there less consistency in many denominations who, while differing in creeds are yet united in many of the grand, fundamental truths of Christianity, claiming to be the church taken collectively, than there is in a Saint who because he lives at Lamoni, and perchance may have a temporal interest here, opposes a work to be entered into and carried out for the benefit of the church, simply because that work is to be done at Independence; or vice versa, should the Saints living at Independence oppose the same work because located at Lamoni? Where is the consistency of our claim in reference to unity, if this indeed be so? Will not Christ be as ready to acknowledge a bride wanting an arm, a limb, or an eye, as he will a bride who, while blessed with all her members, yet so poorly understands what oneness means as to think there is unity, while the hand tears out the eye and the foot crushes the hand, because they belong to different parts of the same body? To my mind, peace and a spirit of love is to be preferred even if the body be crippled, than a body perfect in its members so far as physical perfection goes, but whose members fail to recognize the fact that it is utterly impossible for one to be exalted at the expense of the other, even as it is for one to suffer without all the rest suffering with it. "If ye are not one, ye are not mine." I am slow indeed to believe that a spirit such as referred to animates the breast of any Saint, but if indeed it be true, is it not time that such an one try the spirit, to know whether indeed it is of God?

The church finds herself in need of an institution of learning, where her sons and daughters may be educated under her influence, her fostering care. This is the need of the church, the Saints; not of Council Bluffs, St. Joseph, Lamoni or Pittsburg, and if this need is not supplied, there is not a branch, nay not a member of the church, no matter how near or how remote they may be from any one or from all of these localities, who will not suffer if this need continues to exist, and on the other hand, not one who will not be benefitted if the want is supplied. O, shame upon that man or woman professing to be of the body of Christ, who yet feels no interest in that body unless gain is to accrue to him or her personally therefrom! Was it for such Christ endured the shame and cruel agony of the cross? Nay, the pure white linen in which his bride is arrayed, is righteousness—the righteousness of his Saints; and the charity which abideth forever, "seeketh not her own."

This spirit of place and division is an old trick of the adversary. With the Jews it dated back to the days of Rehoboam, and following on down, led the woman of Samaria to ask, "How is it that thou being a Jew askest water of me who am a woman of Samaria?"

Bro. Robert Winning, a thouroughly active energetic business man, with others, are now deeply interested in aiding this enterprise, both by means and talent; but the encouragement which they receive is not what it ought to be, neither such as the efforts put forth richly merit. The poet has said, "There is a tide in the affairs of men, which taken at the flood, leads on to fortune." Those most interested in this matter are not seeking fortune, but they desire the weal of Zion and her children. The Saints of Lamoni were the first to agitate this matter, consequently it is but natural they should have thought of Lamoni as a proper location, (for many natural advantages conspire to make it such), but it does not follow that this debars other places from establishing like schools and from calling on the Saints at Lamoni to help them. We hope to live to see the day when this will be done, for we would be glad to have schools of a high order as numerous as our church edifices, and we believe that many of our people would respond liberally to such a call.

As Saints of God, let us go to with our might and help in this enterprise, lest if the opportunity pass us by we have it to regret when it will be too late.

"MONSTER TIDAL WAVE."

THE newspapers of the 10th and 11th instants contain graphic accounts of the "monster tidal wave" and the "fury in the waves" which have of late wrought such widespread wreck and ruin along the Atlantic coast, reaching from New England on the north to the southern coast of New Jersey; destroying enormous quantities of seaside property and completely cutting off Atlantic City, New Jersey, from the mainland; wrecking hotels and other property at other points too numerous to mention, and almost succeeding in destroying many lives. It is conceded to be the worst storm of the kind that has occurred in twenty-five years.

Some general idea of its force and fury may be obtained from the following extracts from a New York item in the Chicago Times of the 11th inst:

"Reports from Coney island show that this is the worst storm ever known there, and all night long the waves dashed over the breakwater at Manhattan and Brighton Beach with a tremendous roar. This morning not a vestige was left of the esplanade in front of the Manhattan hotel, and the tide flowed in and out of the basement of the building. The hotel was flooded to the doors and the guests were unable to leave. The guests of the Oriental hotel were imprisoned in the same way. The West End hotel is entirely submerged and the water is flowing over to Sheepshead bay. The beach at Manhattan has been entirely washed away and the persons still there are badly frightened.

"The mammoth bathing pavilion belonging to Manhattan Beach was beaten down by the thundering waves. The old Marine railway structure was carried away and was taken with an awful crash over the new Marine railway, fully 300 feet inland, carying the latter away bodily and overturning and smashing cars like kindlingwood. The old Brighton Beach bathing pavillion followed it with a deafening crash and was washed with lightning rapidity and tremendous force against the new bath-house, tearing part of that away. The Brighton Beach hotel is surrounded by over two feet of water. Fully one hundred feet of the lawn in front of the hotel has been eaten away since last night and will soon all be gone. The Brighton Beach railroad is submerged. No trains are running. The angry waves dashed against Seidl's music stand, each wave tearing away great chunks of it at every burst.

"In this city some of the piers are entirely covered by the tide and some that are usually twelve feet above high-water mark have their decks licked by the angry waves. The bay and rivers are in an exceedingly turbulent state owing to the high winds. The ferry-boats and general flotilla were tossed about like playthings and white caps were visible as far as the eye could reach. The Jersey shore was inundated in many places, particularly in the vicinity of the Standard Oil company's works at Claremont. On the East river front the buildings from Fiftieth street to Fourteenth street are flooded in the great rise of water. The rock opposite Fiftieth street, which has heretofore been visible in extreme high tides, is now beneath the water and the spindle buoy on Pilgrim rock at Nineteenth street has for the first time been almost covered. The lower end of Blackwell's island is submerged and the keepers were engaged early this morning in removing the patients from the frame buildings in that portion of the island.

"The flood was discussed by all the seafaring men with considerable interest this morning, and it seemed the general impression that the tide exceeded any that we have had in twentyfive years.

"Reports from up the Hudson show that the tide to-day was the highest for many years. At Poughkeepsie the water covered the docks for nearly one hundred feet from the usual water's edge. A severe storm is raging along the river to-night. The strong northeasterly gale and high tides that have been prevailing for the last two days have caused great damage along the coast of Long Island. At Rockaway Beach the tide reached an unparalled height to-day.

"The wind attained a velocity of sixty-four miles an hour at Block Island."

In Luke 21:25-27 of the Inspired Translation we read the following words of Christ: "And he answered them and said. In the generation in which the times of the Gentiles shall be fulfilled, there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon. and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity, like the sea and the waves roaring. The earth also shall be troubled, and the waters of the great deep. Men's hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming upon the earth. For the powers of heaven shall be shaken. And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up and lift up your heads, for the day of your redemption draweth nigh."

In December, 1832, the Lord also said through Joseph Smith:"

"And after your testimony, cometh wrath and indignation upon the people; for after your testimony cometh the testimony of earthquakes, that shall cause groanings in the midst of her, and men shall fall upon the ground, and shall not be able to stand. And also cometh the testimony of the voice of thunderings, and the voice of lightnings, and the voice of tempests, and the voice of the waves of the sea, heaving themselves beyond their bounds. And all things shall be in commotion; and surely men's hearts shall fail them; for fear shall come upon all people; and angels shall fly through the midst of heaven, crying with a loud voice, sounding the trump of God, saying, Prepare ye, prepare ye, O inhabitants of the earth, for the judgment of our God is come; behold and lo, the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him."—Doc. & Cov. 85: 25.

While the recent storm was not of equal severity with those which produced the tidal waves of 1864 and 1876 in India, of 1867 at St. Thomas, of 1868 at the Sandwich Islands, and of 1876 on the Pacific coast, which destroyed thousands of lives and millions of dollars worth of property, yet it was of sufficiently severe to be indicative of prophetic fulfillment, in some degree at least, and to justify the painful expectation of the greater like and dissimilar calamities which will undoubtedly follow from a succession of similar and different causes.

We should note that which is confirmative of prophetic prediction, but avoid reference to those ordinary manifestations of physical force which are without direct signification in that respect, and which when so referred to and claimed to be brought about according to prophetic statement, serve but to cause doubt and ridicule instead of credence, sober contemplation and an intelligent conception of the signs of the times.

Matters of such vital and grave import to humanity as are all the subjects and features of the gospel, should only—and indeed can only—be illustrated and confirmed by well authenticated and reliable facts and truths. Divine wisdom has provided an abundance of such evidences and it is not necessary nor wise nor just to make wrong and careless use of any others. The prudent and studious minister will only declare those facts and items which are sound and substantial, for of such character is truth, and by such alone can it be substantiated and established.

Their constant and only use will bring conviction to the world. But in such degree as they are departed from, by so much will the effort fail of success and entail loss to the teacher and hearer, for "the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is."

Let us take correct positions and build with well tempered mortar.

As we go to press distressing particulars of the ocean storm, referred to in this issue, reach us, showing it to be much more destructive than at first reported. The loss of life, shipping, and other property, can not as yet be fully estimated and the distress and suffering caused by it are very great. Up to the evening of the 12th inst. the storm had abated but little. Our limited space forbids further particulars.

GOOD NEWS FROM INDEPENDENCE.

In the correspondence column of this issue of the HERALD will be found a very readable and interesting letter from Bro. William Crick, of Independence, Missouri, in which announcement is made of the appointment of Bro. Thomas James as postmaster at that place. We congratulate Bro. James on his appointment, and also the Saints and the citizens of that community in securing a thorough, energetic and upright business man for that important position. It is in some sense, a recognition of our people and a testimony of the fact that merit among them will not be unrecognized or unrewarded.

We notice that some opposition is being brought to bear against the appointment by a certain class, who are evidently chagrined that a Latter Day Saint should be thus honored; and that the said opposition has manifested itself through one or more local newspapers in some very unfair references to "the Mormons" in general. But it is significant that leading capitalists and citizens have supported Bro. James, evidently because of the confidence and esteem in which they hold him as a man and a citizen; not alone because he does or does not hold to any particular religious society or belief. It is also significant as indicating that the influence of our people is regarded as being of such a nature as will conduce to the general welfare of that community, and that it is designed to give them a proper share of encouragement and recognition.

Persecution, narrowness of policy and bigotry have ultimately failed in the past, whenever resorted to; and all present indications clearly point to the early and final demise of such methods. Hence no person nor any periodical or community can expect success to follow their use. As principles they are false and wrong and can but return to those who use them their logical and legitimate results—loss, shame and the exhibition of their own folly; and prove that even those regarded as highly civilized may resort to the use of that barbarous weapon—the boomerang.

We are made glad by every success of our brethren. We want no successes but such as are legitimate, fair and proper; and whenever the Saints live in harmony with the faith they profess their integrity will be recognized and their fellow citizens will divide public honors and responsibilities with them. Our faith, if from God, as we claim and believe it is, should bring its adherents to the very highest standard of intelligent and honorable citizenship, and make us, as a people, do good and nothing but good to all men in all the phases of life. Where it is properly understood and our people receive of and live in the spirit of it, it can not fail of such results; but on the contrary, where carelessness of life and unfaithful and unspiritual conditions ensue, individuals can but expect results of a decidedly opposite character—they are sure to follow; for "it is written," "the salt shall thenceforth be good for nothing but to be cast out and to be trodden under foot of men."

Our standard must be Christ and his perfect system of spiritual and intellectual development by the methods of restraint, self-government, and all that is comprehended in the perfect discipline which is based upon the law of the Spirit. Otherwise we naturally gravitate to the follies and evils of imperfect, fallen humanity. Which shall it be? Who are building with gold, silver and precious stones? Who with hay, wood and stubble? Is our personal conduct of such a character as will abide the test of the refiner's fire?

Bro. Crick's letter refers to opposition, but is entirely free from any trace of bitterness or resentment. The Independence Gazette also gives the subject a calm and dispassionate treatment, and advises the opposition element to "bury the old prejudice;" all of which is sound and commendable.

THE JEWS OF JERUSALEM.

"THE Jews of Jerusalem," is the title of an article which has of late been written by a traveler and recent eye-witness of the conditions of life at present existing in the Holy Land, and which has lately appeared in some of the leading journals of the day, from one of which we publish the article referred to. Some of the statements made therein are worthy of note, for instance, "the Jews are coming here by the hundreds," and others which indicate that they compose a large majority of the population, and are becoming owners of the soil, etc. With a predominant Hebrew population it is fair to presume that the influences which shall exert themselves in the Holy City and its adjacent territory will be largely of an Israelitish character. While it must be admitted that some phases of Christianity, so-called, have had a representation in the sacred precincts of Ierusalem and have obtained a foothold there, it is also true that the major portion of it represents but a degenerate and unseemly medley of ignorance and superstitious relic-worship, instead of that which comprehends the Spirit and the truth; and which, like the Samaritan worship of ancient times, worships it "knows not what."

The Hebrew who has for centuries clung tenaciously to the faith of his fathers will be slow to exchange his religious attitude for anything which does not represent, in some degree at least, the purposes of a divine Providence, for it is his destiny to still be controlled and moved by the forces used by the Almighty, who has heretofore held him in His hand, as a witness for Him that He rules among the nations of the earth to the final accomplishment of His beneficent purposes.

We are prepared to accept the idea that, until such time as the preaching of the gospel to the Gentiles is almost or completely accomplished, the Lord will undoubtedly also make a partial use of those who may but very imperfectly comprehend the full scope and character of the means designed for Israel's enlightenment and complete redemption—Jesus Christ and him crucified, as revealed only in the restored gospel in its fulness. But until the Lord shall have finished the preparation of the Jew for the new covenant and shall have prepared him for the salvation which shall flow to him out of Zion, we will do well, while as church we faithfully endeavor to accomplish our present tasks, and ourselves become fitted for a greater measure of usefulness, to watch and discern the signs of the times, and thus be constantly confirmed by the evidences which indicate the coming of Him whose right it is to reign—the Stone and Shepherd of Israel.

David when viewing the wonderful and incomparable future of Israel exclaimed, "O, that Zion were established out of heaven, the salvation of Israel. O Lord, when wilt thou establish Zion? When the Lord bringeth back the captivity of his people, Jacob shall rejoice, Israel shall be glad."—I. T. Ps. 14:7. If the redemption of the descendants of rebellious, ancient Israel is to be accomplished, it must be done through the agency of a faithful, modern Israel—the Zion that shall be arrayed in the beautiful garments which is the righteousness of Saints, and armed with the strength that devotion and faithfulness to God will bring her. Let us comprehend the wonderful mission of God's Church and arise in the strength of the Lord to a fuller and more intelligent conception of the great responsibilities and privileges that are ours. Can we wonder that the Spirit has said "Come up higher?" Shall we be found trifling and indifferent in the presence of such responsibilities and transcendent privileges? "Who is sufficient for these things!"

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Under date of the 12th inst. Bishop G. A. Blakeslee writes from Galien, Michigan, that he has made application for reduced rates of fare for those who anticipate attending the Reunion. He expects to soon give definite information, and states: "If rates are granted they will be over all roads running into Council Bluffs." Full information on the subject will probably appear from him in our next issue.

Bro. E. C. Briggs arrived at Lamoni in time to minister to the Saints in the Sunday morning and evening services of the 8th instant. We were spiritually fed the 8th instant. as we realized that the word spoken was seasoned with the grace and wisdom of the Spirit of the Master, and that the instrument through whom it was conveyed was imbued with the true inspiration which so marvelously moved upon him in the beginning of the Reorganization. May it forever abide with our brother that he may be able to do his part in "confirming" the Saints and assist in calling them to constant advancement, and greater spirituality, as the Lord has appointed him to do as a minister for Him! He leaves for the east in a few days.

In this issue of the Herald will be found two interesting letters from Prest. Joseph Smith who is hard at work, in company with Bro. R. J. Anthony, in Idaho and Utah. In a late letter from South Arm, Michigan, Bro. J. J. Cornish wrote: "The work is moving on and we baptize some ocasionally."

Bro. J. R. Lambert lately returned from a three weeks' tour in south western Iowa, and is somewhat improved in health.

Brn. A. J. Moore and H. A. Stebbins have arrived from the Nodaway, Missouri, district where prospects are reported good.

PREST. W. W. BLAIR wrote from Millersburg, Illinois, September 8th:

"The district conference held in the Saints' Chapel on Buffalo Prairie, five miles west of here, the 7th and 8th inst., was a very pleasant and profitable one. The attendance was large, and the interest in the devotional exercises excellent. The business of the session passed off orderly and without a jar. Six persons were added to the church by baptism, and not a few others are believing.

Elders W. W. Blair, A. H. Smith, M. T. Short, E. E. Wheeler, also J. W. Terry, J. D. Jones, I. B. Larue, Jesse L. Adams, D. S. and Henry Holmes, of the local ministry, were present. Prospects are good for considerable progress throughout the district, for the people seem anxious to learn of the doctrine of the Saints, and the local ministry intend to prosecute their labors wherever they can find opportunities. Meetings will be held by Elders Blair and Smith the 9th and 10th insts. in the Saints' Chapel on the Prairie, and in Millersburg the 11th and 12th, after which they will attend the Adrian conference in Hancock county the 14th and 15th.

All through these regions there are abundant and increasing opportunities for preaching the word of life, and many, no doubt, will receive that word gladly when they hear and understand it. Wise, patient, charitable effort will succeed.

Mothers' Kome Column.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"Sing the song of great joy that the angels began, Sing of glory to God and of good will to man! Hark! joining in chorus
The heavens bend o'er us!
The dark night is ending and dawn has begun.
Rise, hope of the ages, arise like the sun,
All speech flow to music, all hearts beat as one!"

WILLIAM PENN'S ADVICE TO HIS CHILDREN.

If God give you children, love them with wisdom, correct them with affection; never strike in passion, and suit the correction to their age as well as fault.

Convince them of their error before you chastise them, and try them; if they show remorse before severity, never use that but in case of obstinacy or impenitence. Punish them more by their understandings than by the rod, and show them the folly, shame and undutifulness of their faults, rather with a grieved than an angry countenance, and you will sooner affect their natures, and with a nobler sense, than a servile and rule chastisement can produce.

I know the methods of some are severe corrections for faults, and artificial praises when they do well, and sometimes, rewards; but this course awakens passions worse than their faults; for one begets base fear, if not hatred, the other pride and vain glory, both of which should be avoided in the education of youth; for they equally vary from it and deprave nature. There should be the greatest care imaginable, what impressions are given to children; that the method which earliest awakens their understandings of love, duty, sobriety, just and honorable things, is to be preferred.

Education is the stamp which parents give to their children; they pass among men for that they teach them, or for less value, perhaps, for all their days. The world is in nothing more wanting or more reprovable, both in precept and example; they do with their children as with their souls—put them out at livery for so much a year. They will trust their estates or shops with none but themselves; but for their souls and posterity, they have less solicitude. As children are instructed, they are likely to be qualified. Were mankind herein more cautious, they would better discharge their duty to God and posterity, and their children would owe them more for their education than for their inheritances.

Be not unequal in your love to your children, at least in the appearance of it; it is both unjust and indiscreet; it lessens love to parents, and provokes envy among children. Let them wear the same clothes, eat of the same dish, have the same allowance as to time and expense.

Bring them up to some employment; and teach them frugality, and they will not want substance for their posterity. A little beginning with industry and thrift will make an estate; but there is a great difference between being saving and sordid. Be not scanty any more than superfluous, but rather make bold with yourselves than be straight to others; therefore let your charity temper your frugality and theirs.—Sel.

STUBBLEFIELD, Ky., Sept. 3d.

Dear Sisters:—I have felt impressed to write to the Column. I feel that we all ought to be up and doing something for our blessed Master, who took upon him the form of a servant and was made in the likeness of men, and being found in fashion as a man he humbled himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross. I often think that we owe a debt to our great Redeemer, which will never be paid. I joined the church the 16th of August in 1885, and I have never regretted the step taken then, when I made up my mind to accept the truth, and I thank the Lord that I was permitted to live to see the light shine. I have not a shadow of a doubt but what this work is of God, and it is my desire to live such a life that I may be worthy to be called a saint in word, thought, and deed. My heart has been made to rejoice when I read the letters in the Home Column, and also the correspondence, to know that God has a people on the earth who are letting their light shine. Christ in his sermon on the mount, speaking to his disciples says: "Ye are the light of the world, a city that is set on an hill can not be hid."

The fourth Sunday of last month 1 had the privilege of hearing an excellent sermon by Bro. Turnbow. His text was "Seek first the kingdom of God." I went to Bro. Adair's for dinner, and at three o'clock saw him lead one precious soul into the waters of baptism. May God help us all to go forth in the discharge of our duty. I ask the Saints to pray for me that I may hold out faithful to the end, and that I may enter the celestial kingdom. My prayer and my hope is that we may all be there. Where is Bro. Clapp? We would like to hear from him.

Your sister in Christ,

ROSA SNOW.

GRIZZLY FLATS, Cal., Aug. 13th.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column: -As I have read the letters written by each of you from week to week, and have derived much benefit from them, I desire to cast in my mite. I have three little ones to train up for the kingdom, and it is my prayer daily that I may have patience and a proper understanding of the principles of the gospel, to be able to instruct them so they will understand the will of our Father, concerning their duties, when they shall arrive at the age he has revealed unto his servant, that they become accountable to him for every deed. I take great interest in all that is written, in the Column, or elsewhere, on the duties of parents to children, for I realize my weakness and want of patience and forbearance, with my children. When I look back on my own childhood and compare my children with myself at the same age, I feel hopeful and thankful that I have such good and obedient children; but at times when I am tired or do not feel well, and they become quarrelsome, or do not obey as promptly as they should, I become perfectly discouraged, much as was the case with the mother in the Herald of July 13th, and I am sure the advice of Aunt Patty would suit my case if I could always remember at the proper time, instead of giving away to impatience.

Let each of us who are mothers, remember each other at the throne of grace, that we may be patient and forbearing with our children in their faults, showing by our words and acts that we are worthy of the name our heavenly Father has bestowed upon us—the name of mother.

I am one of the isolated ones, and do not have the privilege of meeting with the Saints in a branch, but myself and husband meet with Elder Thomas Daley's wife, and Bro. Milgate and family when we can in summer, as they go to the valley in the fall and winter. But my children have had the whooping cough all summer, and that has hindered our meeting with the family of Bro. and Sr. Milgate.

My little boy was taken very sick with a fever after being almost worn out with the whooping cough, but he was healed by the Great Physician, through his servant, Elder Daley, and is now going to school again. We have been greatly blessed in using consecrated oil, when there was no elder within seventy-five miles, and by the administration of the elder when within reach, for all of which I thank my heavenly Father, and pray that I may be found worthy to inherit the greater blessings in store for all who will serve him faithfully, and overcome every weakness. Your sister in the hope of eternal life,

BELLE SKINNER.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Aug. 19th.

At the suggestion of Bro. A. H. Parsons the sisters of the Providence branch met August 1st, at the house of sister Julia Perthel, to organize a prayer union. Bro. Parsons presiding, sister Blood was chosen president, sister Rennert, vice president, sister Jennie Weeks, secretary, and sister Hannah Yerrington treasurer.

It was resolved that we meet every Thursday afternoon and evening alternately, that all might have opportunity; especially that the younger sisters who are employed through the day could attend. It was resolved that each member give what they deem advisable, to be dropped in a box which is closed until we get ready to count the contents and decide what we shall do with it.

Resolved, that the term of office be six months.

Jennie Weeks, Sec.

St. Joseph, Mo., Aug. 25th.

Sr. Frances:- I have often felt like writing to the "Column," but knowing my inability to write anything very interesting is the reason I have not made the attempt ere now. I have been a reader of the "Column" from the beginning of its existence to the present time, and highly appreciate the many good letters contained therein and the work you are doing, especially in editing Autumn Leaves. I can truthfully say I think it is by far the best magazine published. All Saints should patronize a work like that. I am sure the young Saints feel thankful to you; I do for one. The subject of dress has been dropped and I do not wish to bring it up again only to say I was interested, and I think that if we dress within our means and do not follow after the wasteful and unbecoming styles, there is no wrong done. We are fully aware that there is too much pride in the church, of which we are very sorry. And very sorry indeed that some families of the Saints are beginning to tollow after an old custom prevalent in the high toned class of the world, and that is, not allowing girls that work for them in their kitchen to eat at the table with them; and some of those girls are worthy members of the church. In doing so are they following after the meek and lowly Savior who came not to be ministered to but came to minister? He was not above washing the feet of the poor fishermen of Galilee, and what did Paul say in his epistle to the Corinthians? "And though I have the gift of prophecy, and understand all mysteries, and all knowledge; and though I have faith, so that I could remove mountains, and have not charity, I am nothing. And though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, . . . and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing. . . . Charity vaunteth not itself is not puffed up. Thinketh no evil." It seems to me that those who practice such things are surely puffed up some, and also think evil when they think a brother or sister is not as good as hey are just because his or her occupation is considered less honorable than theirs. Is not all labor honorable when we labor for a worthy end? Do not a goodly number of the noblest sisters in the church labor hard every day? The voice of the Holy Spirit is to "come up higher my people," and oh, may the church listen to and obey that God who gave his Son for us! I love this great latter day work, and my earnest desire is to live so as not to bring reproach on the church and be ready to meet my Savior when he comes.

Your sister.

LAURA MORRISON.

SENIOR, Texas, Aug. 14th.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column:-It has been a long time since I entered your happy circle and though I do not know that I shall very much interest any of you this evening, yet I would like to throw in my little mite in helping to roll on this great and glorious gospel and if I can drop a word of cheer or comfort to one weary mother, my effort will not be in vain. I would say to the dear careworn sisters, look up to Jesus, he is watching over you, his loving hand is stretched forth to help you through the rough places of your earthly pilgrimage. When you arise in the morning let your first thoughts turn to Him who is ever ready to help those who seek him in humble fervent prayer. If the day is begun in this way you will receive strength to endure the many cares and necessary labor that devolves upon a wife and mother. I say necessary, because I know that many poor mothers over-tax their strength in trying to do too much. The Lord Jesus would have us be always neat and clean, but is he pleased when mothers wear out their lives in making so many little ruffled and tucked dresses, and then every week going through the still harder task of washing and ironing these same little garments, to be worn herhaps for an hour and then thrown aside for an other day's washing and ironing? No sisters, He who said, "Let all thy garments be plain," knew that the poor dear mother's would have quite enough to do without all this pomp and show. To be sure we all like to look at pretty things, but we should not do so at the expense of our health and perhaps our lives. Neither should we rob God of the time that is due Him in prayer and praise. Can we live prayerful while engaged in frivilous work? Nay my sisters, neither can you find time to feed your little lambs with the bread of heaven, if much of your time is spent on showy garments. Ah, my beloved ones, our time is short! These little lambs are dear to us, and if we would have them follow us into the kingdom we must daily gather them around us, and teach them the way of life and salvation.

Are we all doing what we can in the Sunday Schools? To all who could do this work and are neglecting it I would say, "You are missing some of the most grand and glorious blessings that the gospel affords; such peace and joy, such comfort! You who have fed these precious lambs of the fold, can understand what I mean. You have felt that joy which pervades the soul, as you look into, their happy faces, and read their love for you there; and remember that Jesus said, inasmuch as you have done it unto the least of these, (if not his brethren are they not his lambs?) ye have done it unto me. Then shall we hear that blessed plaudit: "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." Then do not be discouraged, dear sisters, when you do not alalways see the fruit of your labor, but wait patiently for the reward of your labors, for it will surely come, for God is not slack concerning his promises.

May the Lord help us all to arouse and do our work valiantly, is the prayer of your loving sister.

Nanne A. Gifford.

CLEAR LAKE, Ind., Aug. 18th.

Dear Sister Walker:—Feeling an interest in and deep love for the work of the Master in which we are engaged, I desire to drop a thought or two through the "Sisters' Column," and will try to be brief as possible.

I am sure all who are interested in the great work of the latter day, love to see its progress, and while we read of the spiritual prosperity of it all over the land of freedom and liberty, as also in the old world, how our hearts well up with gratitude to the Giver of all good and what a desire we have to do more for its advancement, and, because of this desire, I am prompted to pen these lines. We read of the reunions of the different districts of the Church, of the spiritual feasts they enjoy, and it makes us all feel as though we would like to be partakers of the same heavenly blessings, and while it is impossible for us to all meet at one place, yet the Lord is willing to bless us wherever we may congregate together, if we but have an eye single to his glory and honor.

The object of my writing is mainly this:-We as a district have never held a reunion from the fact that we have no convenient place to hold them. It is true we have many lovely groves where we could be shielded from the scorching rays of the sun, but perchance it would rain, then they would amount to but little. It would therefore seem necessary in this country to have some kind of a shelter to protect us. I have been thinking of this for some time and I have reached this conclusion, that unless we put forth an effort in the work we never will accomplish the good we desire to see accomplished. To have reunion meetings we must have a tent to hold them in, and now I wish to appeal to the sisters of this district, (Northern Indiana and Southern Michigan)-What can we do toward the good work? It has long ago been decided that we have our work to do along with our good brethren, and we have also seen with pleasure the fruit of our labors and have felt the approbation of Almighty God resting upon us, and if he has, in days agone, been willing to bless our effort when put forth with a determination to succeed, he will do so again. I therefore wish to offer a suggestion. Let each branch in the district organize a society, (if they have not already done so) to meet every two weeks, and let the societies take the form of a prayer and testimony meeting, or a society to help with our hands the poor that need our help, and at each of these meetings let us contribute our mites, say five or ten cents, as we may feel able, the proceeds to go towards purchasing a tent. Some of the branches have societies already for the benefit of the work, in the way of building churches, and if there are those who observe the day of prayer, or Prayer Union. by assembling together, I do not think it sacrilege if they would there drop in their mites for this work. Now my good sisters think of this, Think of the good that could be done with such a place to meet in. Not only would it be a benefit in the way of holding reunions, but if a couple of the missionaries could take it and go out into the field and pitch it at some convenient place, what an amount of good might be done.

This district is quite large and in the whole district there are but three places of worship, and one of them not yet completed. In this county, being the northeast county of the State), there is one branch that is in the northeast town with but a few members outside the town. In the remainder of the county but very few have ever heard a gospel sermon, and I feel confident that there are honest-hearted souls who would gladly obey the principles of truth and right were they presented to them. And while this is the case here, I believe we are not an exception, but such places can be found all over the district.

Now let us think of these things carefully and prayerfully, and let us not be afraid to make a little sacrifice for the grand good work. If we put forth an effort I know our brethren will come up to our help, if we need it, and then we can all rejoice together. I should be pleased to hear from any of the sisters who wish to take action in the matter, and, if it were possible, more fully set before them my object, and would be pleased to give any one instructions as to organizing if I could be of any service to them. It is true we can not hope to do anything toward purchasing the tent this season, but what I had in view was to get ready for next season.

Let us put forth a united effort and the Lord will surely bless us.

My address is Fremont, Steuben county, Indiana. Your sister in the covenant, ELLA A. HOUSMAN.

The idea of Sr. Ella seems a most excellent one. It is in union that strength is found. That which it is not possible for an individual to do, may easily be done by the united efforts of a branch, and that which a branch can not accomplish alone, may be readily brought about by action of the district. This idea of a "Gospel Tent," which is new in our own Church, seems to our mind a most excellent one, and we would be much pleased to hear from those localities in which they have been used, with reference to their practical utility, cost, and plan of fitting up. Should the district officers of the district where Sr. Houseman lives, feel the need of this tent, and approve of this plan of getting it, a few timely words of encouragement will do much to make a success of it. For want of such encouragement many a laudable effort fails.

Surely these tents cost much less than church buildings, and it is a wise plan to leave this generation without an excuse lest blood should cling to our garments.

Under the proper encouragement of the ministry, woman will vindicate the wisdom of God in proving even in the gospel work, a help meet for man. The times are urgent and pressing. Events of great moment are moving to completion with rapid strides. The cry for the preaching of the gospel is coming up from every part of our land, and how is it to be met? Will not the elder who addresses his hundreds cause his voice to be heard by more than he who addresses but tens? We have many times been pained to hear most powerful, eloquent sermons, delivered in small school-houses, the seating capacity of which did not exceed (when crowded to the utmost limit) over fifty. Pained because we wished in our soul that it might have been sounded in the ears of thousands. It is well to "Despise not the day of small things," but if by the use of tents the multitude can the sooner be reached, is it not wisdom to use them?—ED.

WEST JONESPORT, Me., Aug. 8th. Sister Frances: While reading the "Vision of the Lord's house," in the Herald, I was reminded of a dream I had when I first came into the church, ten years ago. I seemed to be standing where there were two paths leading in different directions, and was at a loss which to take. I started in one but every thing looked so gloomy I came back and took the other. After going a short distance I came to a place where no one could enter without having on white robes; and Bro. J. C. Foss was door-keeper. I passed in, and looking around saw others standing at the door who have since come into the church. Every thing was so bright and beautiful that it is beyond my power of description, and when I recall it, these words come to my mind, "And the city had no need of the sun, neither of the moon, to shine in it, for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof." such a haven of rest, and enjoy such sweet peace as pervaded there, would be well worth striving for. God grant that I may overcome all that is evil, have my robes washed in the blood of the Lamb, and be worthy of entering in through the gates into the city. I dreamed too a short time ago of looking to the westward and saw in the sky a bright light many times larger than the sun, and just above it I could discern something which kept growing larger and brighter until the word Lamoni came out in beautiful bright letters. I think Lamoni is to become a bright light to the Your sister in Christ,

DISCOVERY OF THE POOL OF BETHESDA.

Mr. James Glaisher, chairman of the executive committee of the Palestine exploration fund, writes to the London Times: "I have great pleasure in communicating a discovery recently made in Jerusalem by Herr Conrad Schick. It appears to be nothing less than the Pool called in the Hebrew tongue Bethesda' (Bethsaida or Bethzatha, St. John, v., 5) An apparently uninterrupted chain of evidence from the year A.D. 333 to the year 1180 speaks of the Probatica Piscina as near the Church of St. Anne. spoken of is said by the earliest writers to have formerly had five porches, then in ruins. Nothing was known of the pool described by those writers until quite recently, when certain works carried on by the Algerian monks laid bare a large tank or cistern cut in the rock to a depth of thirty feet. It lies under, but not immediately under, a later building, a church with an apse at the east end. The cistern is 55 feet long from east to west; north and south it measures 12½ feet in breadth. A flight of twenty-four steps leads down into the pool from the eastern scarp Now the first requisite for the site of of rock. the Pool of Bethesda is that it should be possible The only way in which to have five porches. this requisite could be satisfied is that the pool should be what is called a twin pool, such as that discovered close to the Convent of the Sisters of Sion-that is to say, two pools lying side by side, having one portico on each of four sides thus formed, and one between them on the wall of separation. Herr Schick now reports that he has found a continuation of the pool, or rather a sister pool, lying end to end, 60 feet long and of the same breadth as the first. We are, therefore, able to make out a reasonably strong case for identifying the newly discovered twin pool with the Pool of Bethesda. The historical evidence in favor of this site is as strong as that which connects the Holy Sepulenre with the site adopted by Constantine. In the minds of most, I think, it will be acknowledged that we have here the ancient Pool of Bethesda."—Sel.

YE ELDERS OF ZION.

Ye elders of Zion how great is your calling,
The gospel of Christ is entrusted to you;
Be watchful, be prayerful in all your engagements
That you ask God to bless in all that you do.

As you traverse each city to tell the old story
Of the gospel restored with its blessings to men,
Be meek and be lowly as Christ was before you,
'Twas the poor and the needy who welcomed it then.

It may cost you a struggle to spread the glad tidings,
The loved ones at home may oft come to your mind;
The days may seem long and the weeks seem like ages,
As you go on your mission some convert to find.

If trials are thick in the pathway before you,
And bitter temptations arise in your mind,
Oh flee from the tempest, don't wait for a moment,
For truly a refuge in Jesus you'll find.

Take courage, my brethren, you'll soon be delivered,
The Lord will repay whatever you do;
There's a palm and a crown await you in glory,
Remember your loved ones are praying for you.

Correspondence.

BROWN CITY, Mich., Sept. 3d.

Dear Herald:—For the last ten months I have been kept at home on account of sickness and death in my family. I have not been able to labor as much as I have desired, although I have been preaching in my own branch and around home. I have preached every Sunday two or three times somewhere, and sometimes during the week, and I must say that whenever I did get a chance to go and preach, the Lord has blessed me very much. I hav, attended three two-days' meetings, and I feel that good has been the result from all of them.

On the Fourth of July the branch at Five Lakes held a meeting which I attended. We had a glorious time, and on the 5th I baptized one, a young lady, and she proves to be a noble saint. On the 13th and 14th of July I attended a two-days' meeting at Pigeon River at which a good time was enjoyed and good was done. I then returned home, stayed there a few days, and on the 19th went to Five Lakes again and held meeting until the 24th, and then we held a twodays' meeting on the 24th and 25th. There was a large number of Saints present considering the busy time of year. Six elders were present, viz: A. Barr, J. J. Bailey, Levi Phelps, R. Davis, R. W. Hugill, and myself. The preaching was good and in the testimony meetings the gifts were manifested and all were encouraged. On Monday the 26th I baptized four; two of them were the sister and father of the young sister that I baptized on the 5th.

On the 27th I returned home and on the 31st I again left for Tawas City, where I preached four times, and on the first day of September I baptized two, a man and his wife, and I think they will prove to be good saints.

Next day I started for home, got as far as Bay City, where I met with Bro. E. DeLong. He was then holding meetings, and I remained all night and preached for him. Getting home today found my wife in better health than when I left. I expect to make a new opening in a few days

I am thankful to say the work is moving on in this district very fast. May God inspire his servants to push it more and more.

> Your brother, J. A. CARPENTER.

MONTPELIER, Idaho, Sept. 6th.

Bro. Blair: Bro. R. J. Anthony and I left Malad City, on Monday, August 26th, for Soda Springs, Blackfoot, etc. We passed the night at the Ranch of Mr. Carl Hawkins, with whom and family Bro. R. J. has been acquainted many years, having wintered there on one of his wagoning trips, from Corinne to the mines of Montana, about 1872. Neither Mr. Hawkins nor his wife were at home, but his oldest daughter and her husband, Mr. Levi Wright, son of Judge Jonathan Wright, gave us kindly welcome and provided for us pleasantly and well. Mrs. Wright has been an invalid since January last, but was cheerful and strong of heart. We felt to pray for her recovery in our appeals for care and guidance. On Tuesday we crossed the mountain divide between Port Neuf and Bear River valleys, and a terrible rough ride it was. The wind blew as if the spirits of the mountains disliked our presence; dust flew in clouds; the buggy danced and swung from side to side as we bounced over the rocks, and into the ruts cut by passing wheels, the winds and the rain; and we breathed much more freely when at length we eased the restive colts on the level road on the hither side of the mountain. From there to Soda (Sodale) was but a play spell, and we were soon by the side of the spring near father Bowman's, sampling the deep-brewed soda-water of old Father Time. After the long ride it was good.

We found Brn. H. R. Mills and J. Luff, of Independence, Mo., domiciled at father Bowman's, who, with Bro. John Lewis, wife and niece, made a good housefull. However, we found lodging at Sr. Eliasson's comfortable cabin, and slept the sleep of the weary.

The Hon. Judge John Lewis, president of district, would have meetings; so he busied himself and on Thursday and Friday evenings we occupied the school house, speaking to good audiences, said to be "mixed," whatever that may mean.

On Saturday, we went over to the Blackfoot, where we met with a hearty welcome from Brn. Hansen, Christensen, Christopherson, Eliasson, sisters Collet and Eliasson, and their families; twenty-four sitting down to Bro. Hansen's hospitable table for supper and breakfast. On Sunday, we held two meetings in the school-house, over against the mountain side, beyond the river; Bro. Joseph Luff occupying the morning hour and Bro. Joseph Smith the afternoon; good liberty and good attention—they are a good, warmhearted people over on Blackfoot.

Monday we returned to Soda Springs, where on Tuesday we were kept indoors by a fierce wind, that blew too hard for those to be out in it, who did not have to. Wednesday we came here to Montpelier, where Bro. A. J. Layland had arranged for a meeting in the school-house, the Bishop consenting thereto. Yesterday, Thursday, Sept. 5th, Bro. Anthony and I drove over to Bloomington, passing by Ovid, and through Paris, the county seat of Bear Lake county, Idaho, on a visit to Bro. John Hart, formerly of Council Bluffs, Iowa, and Ogden, Utah. We found him at Mrs. Long's, his sister, comfortably housed and cared for. He is in his eighty-fourth year, quite feeble, but strong enough to be about. Sr. Hart, his excellent wife, died two years ago next January and left him and her blind daughter Alice almost desolate. Their faith and constancy in the work of God are unshaken, and with the cheering comfort of Sr. Long's sympathy and encouragement, and the Herald, their "only preacher," they keep the hope of Life from dying out. Bro. Hart is cheerful, and steadfast in his desire for Life eternal, and confident in his Master's love. We ate and drank with them and returned to fill the appointment in the evening at the school-house. We found Bro. Hyrum Grimmett and Bro. A. J. Layton waiting for us. These young men are earnest, loyal brethren, doing what lies in their power to foster the faith here. They live some distance from the town, and are beset by hard times, under which very many are laboring this season, owing to drougth. Bro. Grimmett lately lost his home and furniture by fire. The house was well filled last evening, and I spoke to the people from John 8: 31, 32. The Utah Church here in the Bear Lake Stake have built a house at Paris, which is a fine structure, large and handsome; it is said to have cost $65,000.

What the result of our effort here will be remains to be told.

Soda Springs, Sept. 7th.—Bro. R. J. Anthony and I returned here to-day, leaving Montpeller at 8:40 a.m., and driving the thirty-two miles of mountain road without stopping by the way.

We held two meetings in the school house, closing last evening, the Bishop, Edward Rich, son of C. C. Rich, deceased, having consented to our use of the house. He stated to Bro. A. J. Layland, that on former occasions when our elders had been permitted the use of the house, they had "abused his people;" that he did not like to let any one have the house who would do that; but that his brother had heard me in Salt Lake City, and had told him that I did not indulge in that sort of tactics; so he let us have it. He was himself present, I think both evenings; I was introduced to him last night at the close of the meeting, and thanked him for his kindness.

The house was full, and some stood out at the door, listening. The attention was excellent, the audience quiet and orderly. No speaker could have been better treated than I was Brn. A. J. Layland and Hyrum Grimmett and O. Key, with their families, were present, from Dingle Dell, and sat with us on the stand. I met Mr. Samuel Lee, brother to Bro. Joseph S. Lee, who was also present at the meeting. Among others who were in attendance, there was a Mr. Holland, or Hollen, who was in Manchester, England, when Brn. Joseph Dewsnup, Hughes and others defected from the Utah church there. He gives Bro. Dewsnup an excellent reputation; and states that the cause of the separation was the Utah special philosophy. He spoke well of the brethren who left them on that occasion; all of which I was glad to hear.

While at Montpelier we were the guests of Mr. Jones and family, who keep the "Jones House," hotel. We were most hospitably and kindly cared for; the whole family being kind and pleasant to each other and to their guests. The father, past middle age now, is still hale and hearty; but has put the active business of trade and traffic into the hands of his two stalwart sons, Thomas and Frank, who are engaged in general merchandizing, their oldest sister at home clerking for them and helping mother, as the needs require; Johnnie and a younger girl helping about the home. The young men, Thomas and Frank, most kindly looked after the lighting the school house for us and showed an interest in our being heard. The mother is a frank, outspoken woman, who has steadily refused to give credence to the doctrine of celestial marriage; and though doing this and keeping herself and family from its damaging influence, has lent a ready and helping hand to the maintenance of the church in other directions. The father is a brother to Bro. Henry Jones, of Omaha, and is a liberal man, both in sentiment and means; he made us welcome to his home while we stayed and bade us come again. With such may the peace of God ever

I was also permitted to meet a relative, Mrs. Jerusha Blanchard, formerly Walker, a daughter of my cousin Lovina, uncle Hyrum's oldest daughter; whom I had not seen since her family left the east for Utah in 1860. It was pleasant to thus meet a relative, far, far from home.

My subject for the last evening was the position taken by the Reorganized Church on the marriage question, which I presented as well as I could, avoiding anything of an abusive, or denunciatory nature; preferring to do our work affirmatively rather than objectively, during the hour permitted us. At the close the people took the tracts, "One Wife or Many," quite readily, and many will be read. One, Bishop Dalrymple, of Preston, above Montpelier, could hardly sit still, as I proceeded, and at the close said to some others: "Old, old, we've heard all that years ago." We admit that it was "old," "old," as old as creation, at least, in principle, for the Savior said so, in Doctrine and Covenants 49. So let it rest. Yours in bonds,

Joseph Smith.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., Sept. 4th.

Bro. R. S. Salyards:—Not knowing whether you have heard the news that is greatly exciting a number of the Independence people, I drop you a few lines. Last Saturday Bro. Thomas James received his appointment as postmaster of this city, and to say that it created excitement and talk among a certain element is putting it mildly. Both the other papers published here are raking over the old Mormon record of Independence and trying their best to raise something foul. The Saints are bearing up under it bravely and are trying to keep cool, which I am glad to see.

Nothing can be said against Bro. James, nor why he should not be postmaster, only that he is "a Mormon," and nothing can be said against the Saints of Independence, only that they "believe in the Book of Mormon and modern prophecy and visions, and that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God." This is the only argument, and the worst they can rake up against the Saints of Independence.

Bro. James forwarded his bond to Washington on Monday last, signed by the following gentlemen: Jonathan Hill, William McCoy, (both bankers of this city), Preston Roberts, Sr., a capitalist, and F. A. Anderson, a lumber dealerfour of the the most substantial men of this place.

Bro. Luff is still in Idaho or Utah. We expect him back the last of this week or first of next.

The new church is progressing nicely. The Saints are generally well. Our district conference convenes here next Saturday and Sunday.

With love to all, as ever yours in gospel bonds,

WILLIAM CRICK.

CLEARWATER, Cal., Sept. 2d.

Bro. W. W. Blair: I desire to thank you for copies of the Herald and list of publications. We think the Herald fine and a thing of joy and encouragement, as it tells us how the work is going on.

As I read the letters from the few workers in the South Sea Islands, my heart yearns for the Spirit and wisdom that I might go and labor for Christ and his church. Bro. T. W. Smith's letter in the Herald of August 17th made me feel like going right off to his assistance. But I want to learn "Thy will be done," and be contented with my life and lot.

I am very much interested in the latter day work, and shall purchase all your publications and subscribe for the Herald just as soon as I have the money to spare. My wife and I were baptized August 13th by Elder Hyram Holt at San Bernardino, and are as infants in this work. The faith and mode of work is as I have believed from a child, but for some cause I have not been associated with the Saints before. I was formerly a Baptist, but now I think I have been admitted through the door by proper authority. My desire is that I may have the Holy Ghost sufficiently to understand God's word aright and to do good thereby. We are about sixty miles from San Bernardino now, on a small place that we are trying to buy for our home here. May God bless the Saints everywhere, and give them the Spirit at all times to war a good warfare!

Your brother in Christ,

C. H. LUTHER.

HAMILTON, N. S. W., Aus., July 9th. Dear Herald:- Each mail brings us glad news which causes our hearts to overflow with love and thankfulness, until at many times the tears run down our faces as some of your readers have experienced after having been away from home awhile and then having received a letter from a dear father and mother, or brother and sister. While reading with a broken and contrite heart, such have caused us to make strong resolutions that we would love the Saints more and write oftener. This is my position to day in regard to the dear Herald and to my dear brethren and sisters. As our dearly beloved Paul said to the saints in his day, so we will use the same language, "Grace and peace be multiplied to you all through the knowledge of God and our Lord Jesus Christ. For I feel like bearing my own testimony to this work that it may go forth to help confirm my brethren and sisters in this

While reading in the conference minutes that I had been chosen by the brethren to fill one of the eight vacancies in the first quorum of elders I began to feel the responsibility I was about to take upon myself in being placed with a large body of such honorable men. To-day I begin to realize, as our sister Emma once said, that the blessings of heaven are all bought with a price. I had to go to my Father in heaven with the price He demands at our hands for them and ask if such an unworthy child as I have been might be able to purchase them.

My faith is more firm to-day than ever, for I sought with all my heart at my Father's throne for a testimony if I should be accepted with him, and in every meeting but one I have been blessed with the gifts of the gospel. And now my dear brethren and sisters, be it known unto all that I am able to tell you that if any man will do the will of the Father, he shall know of the doctrine, that it is of God and not of man.

Let me say for the encouragement of those that have been and are laboring among the Australian Saints, that I never saw such love and unity among the Hamilton Saints as now. Although our number is not so large as it was, we have the promise of some being added if we will walk in love, and this promise we received from our Father through prophecy.

I could bear a hundred testimonies to this work being true, but I am weak of myself and my experience is that the nearer we come to the light, the more we see our folly and weakness. I ask an interest in the prayers of all.

Your brother,

HENRY BROADWAY.

HILL CITY, Kan., Sept. 4th.

Bro. W. W. Blair:-I am glad when I read in the Herald of the success of the brethren in all the world in the triumph of the truth. It is a joy to me to see the day begin to dawn. When I first enlisted in the cause I went alone with Bro. Z. H. Gurley, Sen., at Henderson Grove, and was baptized and confirmed by him. But we were not alone, the Spirit of the Lord was there and said that I should live to see the triumph of His church and it made honorable before the Lord and all the world. But I did not altogether understand its full meaning and don't know as I do yet; but I thank the Lord for what I do see, that the people are beginning to see their bondage both here and in the mountains of Utah, and as they see their condition they are coming to a knowledge of the truth and out of the bondage of sin and corruption into which they have been led.

An M. E. preacher said to me the other day, "O if you are of the Reorganization, or one wife Mormons, it will make to your good. You have suffered much for the evil of Brighamites. God bless you! You are doing good, as your people

I am glad when others begin to see the good and more begin to realize that the Lord is doing good. It is the voice of the Good Shepherd, and we only want the sheep to hear his voice, for when they hear it they will know it.

I hope when I am done there will be some one ready to take up the watch cry and go on to the end. This is the Master's cause, and, like Father Gurley, I want to die with the harness on.

Two persons demanded baptism of me the other day who heard my preaching ten years ago and have been all this time strangers to me, but have been meditating and reading the proofs. Ah! how little we know what good seed will bring in the Lord's own time! Therefore let patience in the love and fellowship of the Holy Spirit be our mind and character in the Lord and before the world, thereby gaining the confidence of honest men and bringing down the blessings of heaven on all men who may chance to become our associates, honoring God by an upright walk and a godly conversation, that we may be accounted worthy the name of "my brethren."

I am more and more convinced, from what I behold, and verily know, that a false and corrupt religion, a diluted and mutilated Christianity, is infinitely worse than infidelity, agnosticism, or even mild atheism. They know full well that diamond truth, all untrammeled, would speedily lighten the dark corners of the earth, and that the evangelical Moloc of sectarianism would lose pelf, popularity, vital force, power, and, in fine, existence, Filth is bound to accumulate in the cities, and sewers are a necessity to bear it hence: but what about the base that originate legions of lies about an innocent people, and the pious frauds that too often turn themselves into vehicles to communicate and peddle the foul contagion! The stall fed clergy tell their proud, vain votaries that "Jesus paid it all;" "only believe," etc., until they have paralyzed their hearts, calloused their souls, and purloined their agency. They drop into their pews with congenial regularity nor do they wish to see differently or know more than the sweet morsel doled out after the most approved methods. Were it not for the non-professors and even the liberalists, the sceptics, and the spiritualists, we would often have to go unsheltered and famishing. In honor to these great, broad browed, warm-hearted men, we never have to swallow their errors to share their hospitality, nor do we at all connive at their sins to share their bed and board.

"Get religion," then get clannish, then organize. You'r "a number one society;" and about this time drive the Son of God into a desert place by turning the cold side to one of his little ones; take up a collection for the pastor, church extension, home and foreign mission work, and will name it and take it!

Churches are closed against us and schoolhouses generally, and we had to beg by times to get access to city parks, and one priestridden town would not suffer us to speak in even the streets.

On the first of September Elder Cooper, the Northern Illinois district president, Bro. Pender and myself, held four preaching meetings in the Opera House, Lake Geneva City, Wisconsin.

Bro. Cooper reports fair success in North Eastern Illinois this conference year. "Willie," as Bro. Pender is familiarly called, led two into the beautiful lake on the 31st ult., and thus the work rolls on in spite of all opposition.

Unrelenting enemies abound, but many friends are forthcoming.

Those that I baptized some little while ago, appear happy amid the frowns and fierce ravings of an ungodly world. The Saints feel hopeful and are at peace; hence the dark threatening cloud of cruel persecution has the broad silver lining of God's sweet peace. If they only had men and means to occupy where we have forced an opening, the results would evidently ultimately be good. We have been trying to go up in villages and towns, not forgetting nor slighting rural districts. Our motto is "to get all we can and hold on to all we get." The Spirit has whispered "Come up higher," and the brethren think I have enough self-conceit to try the adventure.

Praise the Lord, I feet well and my family are in fair health.

M. T. Short.

CHATHAM, Ontario, Sept. 7th.

Dear Herald: We have been led to rejoice of late while watching the progress of this great plan of redemption of which we have been made partakers. Our eyes have seen and our souls have been made to feel the power of the same; and we do know of a surety that it is the power of God unto salvation to all that will believe and obey the same. And while our eyes have beheld and our ears heard the glories of the kingdom of God, we know that it is not to be obtained except through much tribulation, for it is said, "After much tribulation cometh the blessing." We have enlisted in the great fight, and hope to be valiant soldiers and fight until the victory is won and the crown obtained. We desire to be not forgetful hearers of the law, but doers of it too. We also hope to be blameless children, for without God there is nothing in the world.

We have been, for the last two months, favored with the presence of Bro. Willard J. Smith, who has done much towards building us up in the faith and strengthening us for future warfare. He came to us a stranger in a way; but when our hands clasped our souls met, and I felt that he was a brother indeed. He left us the other day for parts unknown, leaving a vacancy in our hearts that can be only filled by Bro. W. J. himself; and whether again in life or in death we meet, this shall our prayer ever be, That our Father in heaven will ever guide and protect him in every hour of trial and temptation, that he will encircle him in the arms of his love, and that he may be able to rise in conquering majesty until he shall be like Him who is eternal. He has awakened a great interest here among the outside people, has gained their favor and applause, and many are the sincere regrets expressed because of his departure. His name will live while memory lasts with many of the inhabitants of Chatham, and the last testimony he bore to them must echo somewhere along the shores of time, for in all my life I never heard a more powerful testimony borne. Thus we see the work is rolling on apace. We hope to ever keep our lamps trimmed and burning, that we may be lights to those around us; likewise that we too may be able to guide our barks safely across the sea of time and anchor bye and bye.

Your brother in the hope of eternal rest,
WILLIAM LIVELY.

PEMBROKE, Dak., Sept. 1st.

Dear Herald:-I think it but just and right that I should express the pleasure and mention the profit which I derive from perusing your pages. I would not like to be acused of undue or fulsome praise, as I know I am but voicing the general sentiment of the isolated ones of this part of the vineyard, being somewhat out of the ordinary course of the best talent in the church, we are glad to read of them in your pages. This branch is far from flourishing and our meetings are very scarcely attended by outsiders. The settlements are thin, but we suffer no persecution. Most people treat us as on a level with other denominations, but they are apathetic and indifferent to all religion; dreaming or sleeping perhaps best express it.

Most of the Saints are trying to do right. A succession of light crops—almost failures—has been the cause of scattering all but three families. And here I take the opportunity to warn all Ssints to not come here to make homes. I look upon this country as a failure. I have been here seven years, Great things are spoken of the Sioux Reservation, but I have been across it twice. It will perhaps do for stock, but like this side the river, it lacks rain-fall. In short, obey the revelation in Doctrine and Covenants in regard to gathering and the counsel of the bishopric, and in after years you will have cause to be thankful.

In my weakness I am trying to do what I can. Oftentimes I am very weak and ready to faint by the way, but I call upon the name of the Lord and he strengthens me.

On August 28th I saw the following in a dream: "In the midst of a large grassy field I saw a building that looked like a temple. It was not yet quite finished, but the greater portion appeared to have been finished for some time. I inquired of one of the builders what it was and he answered, "The Church of Jesus Christ." The building as a whole was symmetrical and to be admired, but on going closer I saw some places. where the morter was not good; it ran from between the stones and had a bad appearance. It made me feel very sorry, for I was given to understand that part would have to be done over again. Just at this time, however, I saw something that pained me much worse. A nasty, black, offensive stream of water had burst from under the foundation and a large force of workmen were engaged in digging a ditch and otherwise removing the nuisance. I instinctively seemed to understand that some were Saints but some were not. All were cleanly dressed, some in white, and I was surprised to observe no signs on their clothing or persons of their undesirable occupation. There appeared to be some discussion amongst the workmen. One person who seemed to know more or have authority, stood up, and addressing his remarks very pointedly to me, said: "Let the elders do their duty and all will be well!"

Ever praying for the prosperity of Zion, I remain your unworthy brother, WILLIAM SPARLING.

JEFFERSONVILLE, Ill., Sept. 4th.

Bro. Blair:—I have just returned from Parrish, Franklin county, Illinois, where I have been preaching for the past ten days. There is quite a good interest manifested. Bro. I. M. Smith held a discussion there some time ago and it removed much prejudice. Many come out that would not come to hear preaching. I baptized a Baptist preacher and his wife while there, and many more are nearly ready. Brother and sister Burlison are doing an excellent work there, circulating the Voice of Warning, tracts, papers, etc., and also talking privately. Their efforts are very commendable.

Bro. I. M. Smith is putting in good time; also Bro. R. Etzenhouser is doing good work in our district now. We expect him to attend our district conference which convenes next Saturday.

Bro. Gillen was with us the last conference and did good work while in the district; all are well pleased with him as missionary in charge. The local elders here are doing some good work where they can go Saturdays and Sundays, and brother I. A. Morris goes out several days at a time, occasionally, doing much good.

The outlook for the work in the district was never better, while it may be very much improved yet, when all learn to comply with the temporal as well as the spiritual law. We are expecting a discussion to come off at Parrish some time this fall between Rev. Throgmorton, missionary Baptist, and some one of our elders, on the claims of the two churches, divine origin of the Book of Mormon, calling of Joseph the Seer, etc., which, if it comes off will no doubt result in further good to the church in this district. We hope to continue our efforts in the church while we have powers of body and mind to do anything, having had much evidence that the work was the Lord's, and still continues to be acknowledged by him.

My health is better than it has been for some years past, for which I feel thankful, and I hope the time may soon come when I can devote my entire time to the service of the church.

Praying for and believing in the final triumph of the work, I hope to labor on to the end.

G. H. HILLIARD.

THE ONLY WAY TO BECOME A CAPITALIST.

Somebody must save money; and the people who save it will be the capitalists, and they will control the organization of industry and receive the larger share of the profits. If the working men will save their money they may be not only sharers of profits, but owners of stock and receivers of dividends. And the workmen can save their money, if they will. It is the only way in which they can permanently and surely improve their condition. Legislative reforms, improved industrial methods, may make the way easier for them, but there is no road to comfort and independence, after all, but the plain, old path of steady work and sober saving. If the working steady work and sober saving. If the working people of this country would save, for the next five years, the money that they spend on beer and tobacco and base ball, they could control a pretty large share of the capital employed in the industries by which they get their living; and they could turn the dividends of this capital from the pockets of the money-lenders into their own, There is no other way of checking the congestion of wealth and of promoting its diffusion, so expeditious, so certain, and so beneficent as this; I wish the working people would try it! - Washington Gladden in the September Forum

THE "SEALED BOOK."-No. XVI.

BY ELDER R. M. ELVIN.

BANCROFT says on page 794 of his fourth volume on the Native Races of the Pacific States that the Peruvians had a word in their language for iron; this is conclusive that they either had a knowledge of and used this material, or were closely associated with some people which did; for the means to express an idea or thing is conclusive as to its possession. No language has the means of expressing anything with which the people who speak that language is wholly unacquainted. A conception must precede the means for its expression. Means of expression must be regarded as the offspring, and the thing to be expressed as the parent. The one a demand, the other the supply. And as the demand must precede the supply, so must the thing to be expressed precede the means of its expression. To hold that the means of expressing any thing may exist with a people, and yet that people be unacquainted with that thing, is to hold that something may exist without any cause for such existence. Dr. Kane tells us that in his Arctic explorations he discovered that the Esquimaux were without any word which expresses filth, and that they were accordingly without any conception of such a thing. They absolutely knew no difference between that which was clean and that which was unclean, and were thus also without the means of expressing it. This rule will work with equal certainty both ways.

Delafield says: "The walls of the palace of the Incas of Quito, named Callo, show the dignity and magnificence of the princes. You enter through a passage five or six toises long, into a court, on three sides of which is a spacious saloon, each consisting of several compartments. Behind that which faces the entrance, are several small offices. This palace is entirely of stone, almost black, and as hard as flint, well cut, and joined so close that the point of a knife can not be put between them; but no cement is perceivable."—Am. Ant., p. 59.

Stephens says: "In the excavations constantly going on, objects of interest were from time to time discovered, one of which a vase, was fortunately only loaned to us to make a drawing of, or it would have shared the fate of others, and have been burned up by that fire. The engraving below represents two sides of the vase; on one side is a border of hieroglyphics, with sunken lines running to the bottom, and on the other the reader will discover that the face portrayed bears a strong resemblance to those of the sculptured and stuccoed figures at Palenque. The head-dress, too, is a plume of feathers, and the head is held out in the same stiff position. The vase is four and a half inches high, and five inches in diameter. It is of admirable workmanship, and realizes the account given by Herrera of the markets of the Mexican city, Tlascala: 'There were gold-smiths, feather-men, baths, and as good earthenware as in Spain.'"—Incidents of Travel, vol. 1, p. 274-5.

ORNAMENTS.

Relative to golden, and other ornaments taken from the huacas of Chiriqui, a province on the Pacific side of the Isthmus of Darien, Bancroft says: "They are of small size, never exceeding a few inches in either dimensions, are all cast and never soldered and take the shape of men, animals, or birds. One represents a man holding a bird in each hand, with another on his forehead. The gold is described by Dr. Davis as being from ten to twenty carats fine, with some copper alloy; but by another party the alloy is pronounced silver. Of stone, are found ornaments, such as round agates pierced in the middle; weapons, including axes, chisel-heads, and arrow-heads, the latter of peculiar make, being pyramidal in form, with four cutting edges converging to a point, and in some instances apparently intending to fit loosely into a socket on the shaft; images, perhaps idols, in the shape of animals or men, but these are of comparatively rare occurrence; and various articles of unknown use. Small vases, jars and tripods, some of the latter having their three legs hollow and containing small earthen balls which rattle when the vessels are moved, with musical instruments, compose this class of relics. The earthenware has no indication of the use of the potter's wheel; is found both glazed and unglazed, is painted in various colors, which however, are not burned in, but are easily rubbed off when moist; and many of the articles are wholly uninjured by time. The specimens, or some part of each, are almost invariably molded to imitate some natural object, and the fashioning is often graceful and true to nature."—Native Races, vol. 4, p. 18, 19.

THE CALENDAR STONE.

With regard to the Calendar Stone of Mexico, Bancroft says: "The Calendar Stone was a rectangular parallelopipedon of porphyry, thirteen feet one inch and a half thick, and weighing in its present state twenty-four tons. The sculptured portion on one side is enclosed in a circle eleven feet one and four fifths inches in diameter. These are the dimensions given by Humboldt, who personally examined the stone, and agree almost exactly with those given by Leon y Gama, who examined and made drawings of the monument immediately after its discovery. Gama pronounced the material to be limestone, which provoked a sharp controversy between him and Padre Alzate, the latter calling the material, which he tested by means of acids, a volcanic rock. Humbold's opinion is of course decisive in such a matter. The center of the circle does not exactly correspond with that of the square, and Gama concludes from this circumstance that the stone had a companion block which might be found near the place where this was found. Fortunately the sculptured portions have been but slightly injured. These figures are the symbols of the Aztec calendar, many of which are well understood, while others are of unknown or disputed signification. Respecting the excellence of the sculpture Humboldt says: 'The concentric circles, the divisions, and the subdivisions without number are traced with mathematical exactitude; the more we examine the details of this sculpture, the more we discover this taste for repetitions of the same forms, this spirit of order, this sentiment of symmetry, which, among the half civilized peoples, take the place of the sentiment of the beautiful."—Ibid, p. 506-8.

No red man who lives by hunting, and takes pleasure in scalping his fallen foe, who leaves the hard work for the squaw, ever chiseled out the Mexican Calendar Stone

CHRISTY COLLECTION.

Concerning the antiquities of the Mexican Republic Bancroft says: "There are three very remarkable mosaic relics in the Christy collection, one of which is the knife represented in the cut, which I take from Waldeck's fine colored plate, although most of the information respecting these relics comes from Taylor. blade is of a semitranslucent chalcedony found in the volcanic regions of Mexico. The uncolored cut gives but a faint idea of the beauty of the handle, which is covered with a complicated mosaic work of a bright green turquoise, malachite, and both white and red shells. It is certainly most extraordinary to find a people still in the stone age as is proved by the blade, able to execute so perfect a piece of work as the handle exhibits. Two masks of the same style of workmanship are preserved in the same collection. The mosaic of in the same collection. The mosaic of turquoise is interrupted by three broad transverse bands, on the forehead, face and chin, of a mosaic of obsidian similarly cut (but in larger pieces) and highly polished -a very unusual treatment of this difficult and intractable material, the use of which in any artistic way appears to have been confined to the Aztecs with the exception, perhaps, of the Egyptians."-Ibid, p.

557-8. In the late work of John T. Short, published in 1882, he tells the following concerning the City of Palenque: "The accompanying cut shows Waldeck's drawing (employed by Mr. Bancroft). Four hundred yards south of the palace stands the ruins of a pyramid and temple, which at the time of Dupaix's and Waldeck's visits were in a good state of preservation, but quite dilapidated when seen by Charney. The temple faces the east, and on the western wall of its inner apartment, itself facing the eastern light, is found, (or rather was, for it has now entirely disappeared), the most beautiful specimen of stucco relief in America. Mr. Waldeck with the critical insight of an experienced artist declares it worthy to be compared to the most beautiful works of the age of Augustus. He therefore named the tem ple Beau Relief. The above cut is a reduction from Waldeck's drawing used in Mr. Bancroft's work, and is very accurate. However, the peculiar beauty of Waldeck's drawing is such that it must be seen in order to be fully appreciated. It is scarcely necessary for us to call the reader's attention to the details of this picture, in which correctness of design and graceful outlines predominate to such an extent, that we may safely pronounce the beautiful youth who sits enthroned on his elaborate and artistic throne, the American Apollo. In the original drawing the grace of the arms and wrists is truly matchless, and the muscles are displayed in the most perfect manner."-North Americans of Antiquity, p. 387.

TEMPLES OF GROSS AND SUN.

The same author further writes of Palengue: "The stuccoed roofs and piers of both the temples—Gross and Sun—may be truly pronounced works of art of a high order. On the former Stephens observed busts and heads approaching the Greek models in symmetry of contour and perfectness of proportion. Mr. Waldeck has preserved in his magnificent drawings some of these figures, which are certainly sufficient to prove beyond controversy that the Ancient Palenqueans were a cultivated and artistic people. In passing to Uxmal the transition is from delineations of the human figure, to the elegant and exterior superabundant ornamentation of edifices, and from stucco to stone as the material employed. The human figure, however, when it is represented, is statuary of a high order. The elegant square panels of grecques and frets which compose the cornice of the Casa del Gobernador delineated in the works of Stephens, Baldwin and Bancroft, are a marvel of beauty which must excite the admiration of the most indifferent student of the subject."—Ibid, p. 392.

It is worthy of more than a passing note, that Mr. Short here recognized the proof as all sufficient to establish a high development in the arts, and therefore an advanced state of civilization among the ancient dwellers in the land of America. Bancroft says in regard to the Peruvian antiquities: "The Peruvians seem to have had a more abundant supply of metals than the civilized nations of North America. and to have been at least equally skillful in working them. The cuts show specimens of copper cutting implements, of which a great variety are found. Besides copper, they had gold and silver in much greater abundance than the northern artisans, and the arts of melting, casting, soldering, beating, inlaying and carving these metals, were carried to a high degree of perfection."-Native Races, vol. 4, p. 792.

The enumeration of the attainments of the ancients compare quite fairly with the same class of workmen of the present time. Baldwin in writing of Central America says: "These antiquities show that this section of the continent was anciently occupied by a people admirably skilled in the arts of masonry, building, and atchitectural decoration. Some of their works can not be excelled by the best of our constructors and decorators. They were highly skilled also in the appliances of civilized life, and they had the art of writing, a fact placed beyond dispute by their many inscriptions."—Ancient America, p. 10.

Again he says in writing of Palenque: "The chief peculiarity of these ruins, that which especially invites attention, is the evidence they furnish that their builders had remarkable skill in architecture, and architectural ornamentations. All who have visited them bear witness that the workmanship was of a high order."—Ibid, p. 99.

The statements of Mr. Baldwin as to knowledge of the ancient people of this continent is equal to any claim to fine workmanship made in the Book of Mormon.

A SUMMARY,

By Mr. Bradford in his researches into the origin of the Red Race adopts the following conclusions in regard to the aboriginal inhabitants of America: (1) "That they were of the same origin, branches of the same race, and possessed of similar customs and institutions. (2) That they were populous and occupied a great extent of territory. (3) That they had arrived at a considerable degree of civilization, were associated in large communities, and lived in extensive cities. (4) That they possessed a use of many of the metals, such as lead, copper, gold, silver, and probably the art of working in them. (5) That they sculptured in stone, and sometimes used that material in the construction of their edifices. (6) That they had the knowledge of the arch, of receding steps, and the art of pottery-producing urns and utensils formed with taste and constructed upon the principles of chemical composition; and of the art of brick making. (7) That they worked the salt springs, and manufactured that substance. (8) That they were an agricultural people, living under the influence of regular forms of government. (9) That they possessed a decided system of religion, and a mythology connected with astronomy, which with its sister-science, geometry, was in the hands of the priesthood. (10) That they were skilled in the art of fortification. (11) That the epoch of their original settlement in the United States is of great antiquity. (12) That the only indications of their origin to be gathered from the locality of their ruined monuments, point toward Mexico."

Whoever will accept the conclusions of Mr. Bradford in relation to the Red Men of America and their ancestors, will experience little or no misgivings in accepting the historical portions of the Book of Mormon, and when it is demonstrated that as a record of history of prehistoric America that it is reliable and unimpeachable, there will follow as a natural sequence, the acceptance of the divine character of its contents.

DYEING.

Baldwin in speaking of the Peruvians, says: "They had great proficiency in the arts of spinning, weaving and dyeing. They possessed the secret of fixing the dye of all colors, flesh color, yellow, gray, blue, green, black, etc., so firmly in the thread, or in the cloth already woven, that they never faded even during the lapse of ages."—Ancient America, p. 247-8.

How confirmatory is this of the extracts we made from the Book of Mormon, in regard to their spinning and possessing #### cloth and fine twined linen!

In closing this part of the subject, let me remind the reader of the repeated statements in the Book of Mormon of the wealth of the Nephites in all things that constitute a people rich, and I quote from Hon. Ignatius Donnelly, who has exhibited a most indefatigable zeal in massing evidence of an ancient civilization upon this continent; he tells us that "The capital of the Chimus of Northern Peru at Gran-Chimu was conquered by the Incas after a long and bloody struggle, and the capital was given up to barbaric ravage and spoliation. But its remains exist to-day, the marvel of the Southern Continent, covering not less than twenty square miles. Tombs, temples, and palaces arise on every hand, ruined but still traceable. Immense pyramidal structures, some of them half a mile in circuit; vast areas shut in by massive walls, each containing its water-tank, its shops, municipal edifices, and the dwellings of its inhabitants, and each a branch of a larger organization; prisons, furnaces for smelting metals, and almost every concomitant of civilization, existed in the ancient Chimu capital. One of the great pyramids, called the 'Temple of the Sun,' is eight hundred and twelve feet long by four hundred and seventy feet wide, and one hundred and fifty feet high. These vast structures have been ruined for centuries, but still the work of excavation is going on.

"One of the centers of the ancient Quichua civilization was around Lake Titicaca. The buildings here, as throughout Peru, were all constructed of hewn stone, and had doors and windows with posts, sills, and thresholds of stone.

"At Cuelap, in Northern Peru, remarkable ruins were found. 'They consist of a wall of wrought stones three thousand, six hundred feet long, five hundred and sixty feet broad, and one hundred and fifty feet high, constituting a solid mass with a level summit. On this mass was another six hundred feet long, and five hundred feet broad, and one hundred and fifty feet high,' making an aggregate of three hundred feet! In it were rooms and cells which were used as tombs.

"Very ancient ruins, showing remains of large and remarkable edifices, were found near Huamanga, and described by Cieca de Leon. The native traditions said this city was built 'by bearded white men, who came there long before the time of the Incas, and established a settlement.'

"'The Peruvians made large use of aqueducts, which they built with notable skill, using hewn stones and cement, and making them very substantial.' One extended four hundred and fifty miles across sierras and over rivers. Think of a stone aqueduct reaching from the city of New York to the State of North Carolina!

"The public roads of the Peruvians were most remarkable; they were built on masonry. One of these roads ran along the mountains through the whole length of the empire, from Quito to Chili; another, starting from this at Cuzco, went down to the coast, and extended northward to the equator. These roads were from twenty to twenty-five feet wide, were macadamized with pulverized stone mixed with lime and bituminous cement, and were walled in by stone walls 'more than a fathom in thickness.' In many places these roads were cut for leagues through the rock; great ravines were filled up with solid masonry; rivers were crossed by suspension bridges, used here ages before their introduction into Europe. Says Baldwin, 'The builders of our Pacific Railroad, with their superior engineering skill and mechanical appliances, might reasonably shrink from the cost and the difficulties of such a work as this. Extending from one degree north of Quito to Cuzco, and from Cuzco to Chili, it was quite as long as the two Pacific railroads, and its wild route among the mountains was far more difficult.'

"Sarmiento, describing it, said: 'It seems to me that if the emperor (Charles V.) should see fit to order the construction of another road like that which leads from Quito to Cuzco, or that which from Cuzco goes toward Chili, I certainly think he would not be able to make it, with all his power.' Humboldt said, 'This road was marvelous; none of the Roman roads I had seen in Italy, in the south of France, or in Spain, appeared to me more imposing than this work of the ancient Peruvians.'

"Along these great roads caravansaries were established for the accommodation of travelers.

"These roads were ancient in the time of the Incas. They were the work of the white, auburn-haired, bearded men from Atlantis, thousands of years before the time of the Incas. When Huayna Capac marched his army over the main road to invade Quito, it was so old and decayed 'that he found great difficulties in the passage,' and he immediately ordered the necessary reconstruction.

"It is not necessary in a work of this kind, to give a detailed description of the arts and civilization of the Peruvians. They were simply marvelous. works in cotton and wool exceed in fineness anything known in Europe at that time. They had carried irrigation, agriculture, and the cutting of gems to a point equal to that of the Old World. Their accumulation of the precious metals exceeded anything previously known in the history of the world. In the course of twenty-five years after the Conquest the Spaniards sent from Peru to Spain more than eight hundred millions of dollars of gold, nearly all of it taken from the Peruvians as 'booty.' In one of their palaces

'they had made an artificial garden, the soil of which was made of small pieces of fine gold, and this was artificially planted with different kinds of maize, which were of gold, their stems, leaves, and ears. Besides this, they had more than twenty sheep (llamas) with their lambs, attended by shepherds, all made of gold.' In a description of one lot of golden articles, sent to Spain in 1534 by Pizarro, there is mention of 'four llamas, ten statues of women of full size, and a cistern of gold, so curious that it excited the wonder of all.'"—Atlantis, pp. 392-5.

Reader, what think you of a city with an area of two hundred and fifty-six thousand acres, and that built by white men who wore beards? Had Mr. Donnelly said that those who built that wonderful city were the Nephites, he would be in unison with facts sustained by the most emphatic evidence, whose perspicuity the most obdurate may see and understand. The gigantic work necessary to accomplish the building of that vast highway, would bankrupt our nation with all its wealth and vast resources, and yet some would have us believe that these discoveries fail to prove the plain truths told in the Book of Mormon. Without doubt the ancient people of this continent were in possession of all that goes to constitute a people great, wealthy, and happy. Had not the Spanish avarice for gold, united with the Catholic's zeal for his religion, made such havoc with the written manuscripts of the ancient dwellers of North and South America, long ere this the museums and libraries of the world would have been filled with the relics of the former civilization that once flourished upon this continent. However, it is surprising what a vast amount of evidence has come down to our time, and in the absence of a more full and complete history, we shall rest satisfied with the succinct array of evidences that are compiled from the relics, mounds, traditions, and legendary lore. In the near future such books will appear as will spread knowledge and truth to the people to the extent that it will make it as unpopular to deny the Book of Mormon, as to preach "infants in hell not a span long." All hail to the book that shall teach doctrine to those who murmur!

LAMB VS. RAM.

The Rev. M. T. Lamb and others ridicule the idea of there having been sheep and other domestic animals upon the American continent, and he urges against it that "the authorities are plain and unequivocal."

During the early part of May, 1889, Mr. Lewis Fowler found in his stone quary two miles west of Davis City, Decatur Co., Iowa, a perfect and complete ram's horn petrified. It is large and can not be mistaken. This find may be seen at the Saints' Herald Office, at Lamoni, Iowa.

"Desire Charney believes that he has found in the ruins of Tula the bones of swine, sheep, oxen and horses, in a fossil state, indicating an immense antiquity."—Atlantis, p. 350

There has been so much evidence of this character found that it would hardly be thought that any one could be so ignorant, or have so little regard for truth as to fly in the face of multiplied proof. A great loss has been caused to the lovers and students of antiquity, by the building of the government dam on Paint Creek, West Virginia, by the water covering the famous "pictured rock." In fact that whole vicinity has been rich in aboriginal and prehistoric relics. The great fox one hundred feet from the bottom, and some thirty feet from the top, on the face of the rock, and almost inaccessible, put on with a substance like earthernware glazed, is a wonderful sight, and never was the work of the red man in the state and condition in which the white race found and knows him.

HELL IN THE CREED.

A SERMON DELIVERED IN ST. LUKE'S CHURCH, DENISON, TEXAS, BY REV. F. N. ATKIN, THE RECTOR.

He descended into hell—Apostle's Creed. Ita est etiam credendus ad inferos descendisse—Art. III.

In a former discourse upon "some theories of hell," I explained to you as briefly and as clearly as I could the derivative and popular meaning of the word hell. We found that the elementary meaning of that word was simply to conceal, to cover, to hide away. This fact we get from the original word from which the modern word hell is derived. That word, you remember, is the old Anglo-Saxon helan. We found furthermore that the word had been greatly abused by many modern writers and speakers, and is commonly understood to express a meaning at variance with its true elementary nature. We found, furthermore, that in some schools of modern theology it is used almost exclusively in reference to the abode of the "devil and his angels;" but the Hebrew sheel, and the Greek hades and the Saxon helan which are translated hell in the older versions of the Scriptures, seldom, (if ever), refer to a place of eternal torment, as the word hell is now commonly supposed to, but simply to the intermediate state of the dead—the hidden place of departed spirits. You are not to infer that this translation is a modern one made to agree with vagaries of modern religious vagrants. It is nothing of the kind. It is literal, Scriptural and churchly, and has been believed and held "always, everywhere and by all," Catholic minded Christians. I do not believe that the early fathers of the church translated hades, when it refers to the intermediate state, as referring to anything else, and never as referring to the place of the wicked after the final judgment.

The intermediate state of the dead is that state of existence in which they live from the time they leave this world until the general judgment. In the old Latin creeds the word hell is rendered inferi or inferna, which corresponds exactly with the Greek hades. Inferi is derived from a Greek word, which means, literally, those beneath the earth—the spirits of the departed. There is also another Greek word which is often rendered into the English by translating it hell. That word is gehenna. Notwithstanding the confusion arising from its indiscriminate use, neither the creeds nor the doctors of the church have used it to express the place to which our Lord went immediately after his death. On the other hand many learned expositors define it to mean the very opposite-the place where he did not gothe place of apostate spirits, commonly called the damned. It is evidently true that the Greeks sometimes used the word hades to mean no more than the grave. It is equally certain that this was not the common use of the word. It was a popular theory of theirs that Hades himself was the God of the lower regions. Consequently, hades, when applied to a locality meant that region to which the dead went after being "received from the bur-den of the flesh." The Jews believed in a state of being after death, in which the soul was to exist until a general resurrection, apart from the body, yet, in a state of consciousness, either of happiness or misery.

This state or place they called in Hebrew, sheol. They suppose it to be somewhere under terra firma. Josephus intimates as much in the 15th chapter of the 6th book of the Antiquities. He says that when the soul of Samuel appeared to Saul it came up from hades. He tells us, furthermore, that the Sadducees "took away the rewards and punishments of the souls in hades;" meaning that the Sadducees did this by denying the doctrine of the resurrection and eternal life. He says of the Pharisees that they held the doctrine of the immortality of the soul, and that men were rewarded or punished under terra firma according to their practice of holiness or sin in this life. The Jewish doctors disposed of the souls of the righteous, till the resurrection, under what is called the "threefold phrase." 1st, The garden of Eden answering to the Paradise of the New Testament, (Luke 23:43). 2d, Under the throne of glory, a parallel of Revelation 6:9. 3d, "In Abraham's bosom," which is the expression adopted by our Savior in the parallel of Dives and Lazarus; (Luke 16: 22.) The words of our Lord here seem to show that the abode of the wicked, before the general judgment is placed by the same Rabbins within sight of the abode of the just, so that the one could converse with the other. Dives is represented as conversing with Abraham. There is no doubt but the Jews, as well as the Greeks, looked for a state of existence immediately after death, which they called sheol, and we call hell.

Lord Bishop Brown says: "Our Lord and his Apostles never comfort the church concerning those who are asleep with the assurance that their souls are in heaven, nor do they alarm the wicked with the fear that at the instant of death their souls will pass into a state of final punishment. It is ever to the resurrection of the dead and the judgment of the great day that the hopes of the pious and the fears of the ungodly are directed." I believe that the word hades occures eleven times in the Greek Testament, and in the authorized scriptures it is translated hell ten times. But when this translation was made hell did not mean what it is commonly understood to mean now. It was used in its original sense, pure and simple. In these latter days this word hell, with many others, has been hopelessly degraded. If the souls of men went straightway to their final abode at death what need would there be of a general judgment, or a general resurrection? The doctrine of our Lord's descent into hell is briefly this: His soul went to the place of departed spirits, descended into hades. This was a necessary part of the process of redemption. The birth of his human nature was after the manner of men. He lived, he grew, he suffered, he toiled after the manner of men. He died; he was buried after the manner of men, and after the manner of human souls he descended into the place of departed spirits. He trod the path of human existence from beginning to end; from the cradle of his virgin mother's arms down into the mysterious silence of shoel, hades, helan, hell. He passed on through the valley of the shadow of death cutting away the walls of blackness and mystery, -he passed on. He entered the abode of the just, and proclaimed to those happy waiting souls the fact that their salvation had been consummated. Thus you see the doctrine of the Lord's descent into hell is most needful and gracious. Had he gone no further than the tomb, he would not have followed the entire course of the human soul. He would not have exercised all the acts and all the facts of human

The Apostle's creed contains the fundamental principles of our belief. A man is required to believe this to be a churchman:

"Dost thou believe all the articles of the Christian as contained in the Apostle's creed?"

. "Art thou willing to be baptized in that faith?"

These are the questions asked at baptism. The answer is simply and heartily, yes. Then he is brought into the fold of Christ through baptism, the candidate being allowed to choose the "mode" himself. When we come to confirmation these questions are, in another form, repeated and the apostolic benediction is added, the "laying on of hands after the manner of the Apostles."

The Church meets the sinner with a blessing at every step and seeks to raise him to a higher and better life.

There is no damnation in her creed. It is the very reverse. It is the creed of salvation. She knows that the souls of men are already cursed, and, therefore, she calls them to her for a blessing. Her creed does not require us to say that we even believe in the eternal torment of anybody. It teaches us something infinitely better, to believe in the infinite and eternal mercy of him who "tasted death for every man." It teaches the sad and despondent heart of man thoughts of eternal life and peace and joy. It seeks to turn his mind away from all that belongs to this tear-dimmed, bloodstained and sin-cursed world, this gehenna of probation.

"He descended into hell," is all the hell there is in the creed. He destroyed the sting of death, the terror of the grave and unlocked the door of hell and walked through it as only a master can. He illuminated it with his divine presence and enlightened the waiting souls therein with words of eternal joy.— Gazeteer.

JEWS OF JERUSALEM.

Thirty thousand out of forty thousand people in Jerusalem are Jews, and the Israelites bid fair to become the predominant people in Palestine. The Turkish government, which has for ages prohibited them for living longer than three weeks at a time in the Holy Land, is under the influence of the foreign government relaxing its restrictions and at present the Jews are coming here by the hundreds. They are engaging in business and they now control a great part of the trade of Jerusalem. Some of them feel that the day when the prophecy of the Bible that they shall again inhabit their land shall be fulfilled is at hand, and one curious tribe from Southern Arabia claims to have received a revelation that they must leave their desert country and come back to Patestine. These Jews have lived in Yemen Arabia for the past 2,500 years. They are of the tribe of Gad and they left Palestine seven hundred years before Christ was born. They are bringing with them many valuable old documents which prove their origin, and not a few of them are engaged in agriculture near Jerusalem. The persecution of the Jews in Russia and Austria, is driving many of them here and there are large numbers of Polish and Spanish Jews in Jerusalem.

THE AMERICAN EAGLE'S VICTORY.

Our American Consul, Mr. Gilman, tells me that there are about two hundred American Jews in Jerusalem, and he says that the great number of Jewish immigrants is the wonder of the people of this part of the East. He says that the removal of the restrictions on Jewish immigration has taken place during the past three or four years, and that when he came here it was the policy of the foreign governments represented at Jerusalem to aid the Turks in expelling the Jews. He was advised shortly after his arrival that some American Jews were overstaying their three weeks' time in Palestine, and was requested to direct them to leave. He replied that such action was entirely contrary to the spirit of our government which is founded on religious race freedom, and after some negotiations the American Tews were allowed to remain. Shortly after this the British Consul, under instructions from the British minister at Constantinople, took the same grounds, and I am told that the German and French governments have followed suit. The time of the Jews remaining in Palestine has been extended and the restrictions upon their residence in Jerusalem have been practically removed. A half a century ago there were only thirty-two Jewish families in all Jerusalem and the number in Palestine was only three thousand. Now there are nearly fifty thousand in the Holy land, and three-fourths of the population is made up of them.

A curious people they are! Like no other Jews on the face of the earth. They are nearer the type which existed here in the past and they have a prescribed dress and their appearance is like that of no other people of the Orient. The boys and men wear long coat-like gowns which reach without belts from the neck to the feet and which show other gowns beneath them at the front. Their heads are covered with cloth or velvet caps bordered with long brown fur which stands straight out, forming a wide fringe about the head.

HANDSOME HEBREWS.

None shave and all who can wear beards. Each face is framed in two long curly locks of hair which come out just in front of the ears and in many cases reach down to the breasts, in accordance with an injunction of the Scriptures stating that "Thou must not mar the corners of thy beard." Tews here never cut their hair in front of the ears, and I have seen boys with the whole of the rest of the head shaved and these two locks left. These Jerusalem Tews have fine faces with the olive complexion, which are common to their race the world over. They have hair of all colors from black and white to a fiery red, and there are men among them with beards of silvery whiteness.

Jerusalem is to the elderly Jew of Europe what Benares is to the Hindoo. He hopes to come here to die, and I am told that some of the race have a belief that if they die in other lands they will be dragged under the earth through the globe from whence they are laid until they come out upon the Mount of Olives. The side of this mountain is covered with Tewish tombstones, and soil from it is sent to Jews in many parts of the world in order that it may be put into their coffins at burial. Quite a number of the American Jews here are old men. Few of them, however, are of American birth and very few speak English. They have acquired in some way a citizenship in America. But they are not of the high class of their race in our country. Among them are some old men who have gone out of business, or have given their business over to their sons and who live here upon an allowance from them.

The Jews of Jerusalem have some poor among them, and their condition is worse than that of any of their race the world world over. The numbers who have been forced here by persecution are supported almost entirely by the different Jewish churches over the world, and the numbers of different denominations of Christians also who are supported, have made Jerusalem a city of mendicants. At certain hours of the day bread is given away at certain places and the people come to these in crowds. The Jews themselves in the fewest of cases change their religion, but the different denominations of begging Christians move about from church to church as the supplies rise or fall, just as the bad boy changes his Sunday-school according to the prospects of presents at time of Christmas. Such giving has made Jerusalem a hot-bed for the propagation of beggars; and this is true of other people than the Jews.

THE WAILING PLACE.

One of the great sights of Jerusalem is the Jews' wailing place, where every Friday certain sects meet on the outside of the walls of the Mosque of Omar which occupies the site of Solomon's temple, and with their heads bent against the stones sorrow over the loss of Jerusalem and pray God to give the land back to his chosen people. This custom has been observed since the days of the middle ages, and it is one of the saddest sights. I visited it last week. In a narrow alley surrounded by miserable houses—on stone flags which have been worn with the bare feet of thousands of Jews-against a wall of great blocks of marble, which reached for fifty or more feet above them, a long line of men in long gowns and of women with shawls over their heads stood with their heads bowed praying and weeping. Many of the men had white beards, and the long curly locks which fell down in front of their ears were of silver. Others were just in their prime, and I could not but wonder when I saw the forms of these at times almost convulsed with emotion. Each had a wellthumbed Hebrew Bible in his hand, and from time to time the party broke out into a kind of chant, an old gray haired man acting as leader, and the rest coming in on the refrain. The chant was in a strange tongue, but as translated it is as follows:

Leader—For the palace that lies desolate. Response—We sit in solitude and mourn. Leader—For the walls that are destroyed. Response—We sit in solitude and mourn. Leader—For our Majesty that is departed. Response—We sit in solitude and mourn. Leader—For our great men who lie dead. Response—We sit in solitude and mourn. Leader—For our priests who have stumbled. Response—We sit in solitude and mourn. Leader—For our kings who have despised in the statement of the st Response—We sit in solitude and mourn.

The effect of this chant can not be appreciated without hearing it. The old men, the weeping women who kiss the stones of the wall that separates them from what was once the site of Solomon's temple, and which is even now the holiest part on earth to the Jew, the genuine feeling expressed by all and the faith that they show in thus coming here week after week and year after year is wonderfully impressive. It is indeed one of the strange sights of this stranges of cities.

BECOMING OWNERS OF THE SOIL.

There are a number of agricultural colonies in different parts of Palestine. There is an agricultural school near Jaffa, which has more than seven hundred pupils, and there are eight of these agricultural colonies. One of their farms near Jaffa has twenty-eight thousand acres. It is situated on the plains of Sharon, where the Philistines lived, and it has tens of thousands of vine and olive trees. The Turks are very much averse to selling land to the Jews, but the latter show themselves to be as good farmers as they are business men, and the terraced condition of the hills about Jerusalem shows that the Holy Land was far better cultivated under them than it has been under their conquerors. A large amount of land just outside of the city of Jerusalem is now either in the hands of the Tews or of their charitable institutions. Mr. Behar, the head of the Rothschilds schools, tells me they have just bought the Jerusalem hotel and will add it to their school. Sir Moses de Montefiore, who managed the fund left by a rich New Orleans Israelite, built many good houses for Jews on the road between Bethlehem and Jerusalem, and there are a number of Jewish hospitals.

Among the people who confidently believe that the Jews will again soon own Palestine is a colony of fifteen persons who live in a fine house built on the very walls of Jerusalem, and who are known as "the Americans." These people are not Jews at all. They are Christians who have come here from different parts of the United States, and more especially from Chicago, to await for the fulfillment of the prophecy that God will regenerate the world, beginning at Jerusalem. They believe that this day is close at hand, and they say that it has begun in the Jews coming back to Palestine. They see its fulfillment in the improvements that are going on in Jerusalem, and cite the new roads that have been built over the country as one of the evidences of it. They are evidently people of means as well as of refinement and culture. When I visited them the other day I talked with several of them, and found them intelligent and well educated. I asked one as to their belief, and was answered that they took the Bible as their guide, and that they had come to Jerusalem to endeavor to follow its precepts while living upon its walls. They have no particular creed, and one of them said, when asked as to this, that there is too much preaching and too little good living. They do no missionary work, and say they have not yet felt called upon to preach. They spend much of their time in Bible study and singing, and are much respected among the foreigners who reside in Terusalem.

A REAL ESTATE BOOM.

There is no doubt, however, that Jerusasalem is improving-The most of its streets are now well paved and the sanitary condition of the city has been greatly improved. There is still room, however, for further advance in this direction, and the side streets are filled with garbage and slops, and you now and then find a dead dog or cat in a state of putrid decomposition. The Jerusalem outside the walls is now almost as large as the city within, and I am told that land has risen to such an extent that the holy city may be said to have a real estate boom. In the Mediterranean Hotel where I am stopping, there is a card advertising a fine farm for sale between Bethleham and Jerusalem, and I learn that along the Jaffa road, just outside of the gate, property has gone up within a year or so several hundred per cent. One piece which belongs to a charitable institution was bought a short time ago for $500. It is now worth $80,000 and can not be bought for that amount. A telegraph line now runs from here to the sea coast and a railroad company has been organized to build a line from Jaffa to Jerusalem.

I drove out to Bethlehem, which lies an hours ride from here, yesterday, and I found telegraph poles planted on the plains where King David fought the Philistines, and running up the hills where the shepherds watched their flocks when they saw the wonderful star. On the same ground to-day the turbaned Bethlehem shepherds of the nineteenth century are minding their sheep: and as I looked at their rough forms clad in sheepskin coats, I wondered whether the bright star of the electric light might not some time appear in their own little town and on the tower of David, which looks down upon them from the Jerusalem of to-day. Bethlehem has many new houses. There is a good road now to Hebron, and the day will probably soon be when you can travel over the Holy Land in a carriage. Jerusalem, for the first time in its history, has a police force, and its order is now as good as that of New York. It has fairly good hotels, and the town is awakened every morning by the bugle call of the modern Turkish band. The American flag floats from the roof of the Consular building on the top of Mount Zion, and you find on its streets travelers from all parts of the world.

NOTICES.

Owing to the resignation of Br. R. H. Davis, my agent for Spring River, Kansas, district, and that at the late district conference held in said district, Br. J. M. Richards was recommended to me to act as agent for said district, I therefore appoint him as such, and recommend him to the Saints to sustain him by their prayers and means.

G. A. BLAKESLEE,

Presiding Bishop.

To the Saints of Southern California, greeting: A sense of duty impels me to address you; not to teach you the law, but to remind you of the necessity of prompt and liberal action, and to inform you that we have reached a crisis in Southern California where you must come to the rescue or the prosecution of missionary work must be abandoned. Already the Bishop has supplied us with considerable sums the current year, but he has all he can carry. The missionary must calculate his expenses by the strictest rules of economy when making his estimate of family needs, consequently when this does not come his family is in immediate want.

To day there are about one hundred and twenty dollars needed to supply this demand, and the treasury deplete? This with recurring wants must come from some source or the missionary force be notified that the church can not require their service; for men can not be required to go leaving their loved ones destitute. Which shall it be? It is with you to decide. Let me urge each member to make some effort to relieve the embarrassment. Do not wait until you can spare it as well as not, but make some sacrifice for the work's sake. Share the sacrifice with those who toil for the Master and those who keep lonely vigils at home, deprived of the society of husbands and fathers.

Send all remittances to me at Box 695. San Bernardino, California, or hand to solicitors in your respective branches. Praying God to move upon us mightily to the granting of power and disposition to arise, maintain his cause and forward his kingdom, I am, in bonds, your brother an coworker,

HEMAN C. SMITH,

Bishop's Agent.

THE REUNION.

Persons coming to Annual Reunion at Garner's Grove will be carried by bus from Missouri Valley to the grounds for fifty cents. Permanent arrangements have made by the committee with a Mr. Beebe whose name will appear on the bus. This price includes baggage.

Persons coming from the east, south or west,

Persons coming from the east, south or west, will get off at Missouri Valley; those from the north at Mondamin.

COMMITTEE.

SABBATH SCHOOL ASSOCIATION.

The Southern California Sabbath School Association will convene for its regular semi-annual business session at the close of the Southern California district conference, presumably on Monday, October 7th, at San Bernardino California. All parents and Saints interested in Sabbath School work, are earnestly invited to be present.

VINA H. GOFF, Acting Supt.

DECATUR.

A conference of the above district will be held in the Lone Rock Branch, fourteen miles southwest of Lamoni, (in Harrison county, Missouri), convening at ten o'clock on Saturday, October 5th. The branches are requested to send reports and all who can do so please attend the session.

H. A. Stebbins, Dist. Pres.

FIVE HARVEST EXCURSIONS.

The Burlington Route, C. B. & Q. R. R., will sell from principal stations on its lines, on Tuesdays, August 6th and 20th, September 10th and 24th, and October 8th, Harvest Excursion Tickets at Half rates to points in the Farming Regions of the West, Southwest and Northwest. For tickets and further information concerning these excursions call on your nearest C. B. & Q. ticket agent, or address P. S. Eustis, Gen'l Pass. and Ticket Agent, Chicago, Ill. to A5.

THE GENERAL ANNUAL REUNION.

Arrangements are being made on an ample scale, to render this meeting the very best of its kind ever held in the church.

Prospects indicate that the attendance will be the largest ever had, and that the comfort and convenience of all in attendance will be made comparatively complete.

The Reunion grounds are being put into good shape, also all the roads leading to them; water and fuel of good quality will be had in abundance, and food supplies will be kept in good supply at cheap rates.

The grounds are located on a gentle declivity, surrounded on all quarters by high ridges, and are bountifully supplied with shade and by elm, linden, hickory, oak, walnut, other trees; and running near at hand is a spring brook, furnishing water for baptismal purposes and for teams. The camp will be ten miles north of the city of Missouri Valley, and may be reached from there by carraige, over good roads, at about fifty cents per passenger; and it may be reached also by carriage from Mondamin, a town five miles west, for twenty-five cents per passenger.

for twenty-five cents per passenger.

Commodious boarding accommodations will be furnished at twenty-five cents or less per meal; and no effort will be spared by the Reunion committee to see that the wants of the visitors are supplied promptly, at cheap rates, and in a courteous manner.

A general invitation is hereby given to all to come up to this yearly assembly to seek and serve God; and such of the ministry of the church as can find it practicable to come and assist in the services are specially requested to attend and aid as they can.

It is hoped the First Presidency, the Bishopric, and as many of the Twelve and other missionaries as can come will be in attendance.

The committee on arrangements earnestly request the prayers of all the church that the Lord may bless and direct the efforts being made to render this meeting successful, and give abundant increase in grace and gifts, in goodly influence and numbers, and do wondrously in the lifting up of Zion and in the salvation of souls.

By order of the Committee.

DIED.

Jones.—At San Bernardino, California, August 23d, 1889, William Orson Jones, son of Bro. and Sr. A. C. Jones, Sen. He was born Jannary 30th 1851, at Ogden, Weber county, Utah, and was, consequently, 38 years, 6 months and 23 days old at the time of his death. Funeral sermon by Elder Heman C. Smith, on Sunday, September 18t.

WILLIAMS —At Spring Hill, Montana, August 10th, 1889, of consumption, Mrs. Maggie J. Williams, wife of David N. Williams, aged 26 years, 3 months and 5 days. She leaves a husband and four small children and a host of friends to mourn their loss. By her death the little children have lost a kind and affectionate mother, the husband a devoted wife and companion, and society an honored and greatly respected member. Her remains were interred in the East Gallatin cemetery. A large concourse of friends came to pay their last tribute of respect to the departed. One of earth's noble children has gone to rest! Rev. Hall of the M. E. Church was in charge of the funeral.

Lovejoy.—At her residence in Pierport, Manistee county, Michigan, May 31st, 1889, Emma J. Lovejoy, aged 36 years, 3 months and 5 days. She was baptized November 25th, 1883. She was a good wife and loving mother. She left a husband and two little children to mourn their loss. We hope to meet her in heaven where there is no more pain.

WHO OWNS THE COUNTRY.

Let us inquire whether there is any excessive concentration of wealth going on in the United States of America. Leaving mere clamor and unsupported assertions out of consideration, on either side, let us look into facts. As lately as 1847 there was but one man in this country who was reputed to be worth more than $5,000 000; and though some estimated his wealth at $20,000,000, there is no good reason for believing it to have been so great. At the smallest reasonable estimate, there must now be more than 250 persons in this country whose wealth averages over $20,000 000 for each. But let us call the number only 200. Income-tax returns show that the number of incomes, when arranged in large classes, multiplies by from three to five-fold for every reduction in the amount of one-half. For extreme caution, however, we estimate the increase in the number of incomes at a very much lower rate than this. At this reduced rate, the amount of wealth in the hands of persons worth over $500,000 each in the United States would be about as follows:

oc about	as wil	Ows.
200 p	ersons	at $20,000 000,	$4,000,000.000
400	44	10,000,000,	4.000 000,000
1,000	"	5,000 000,	5 000 000 000
2,500	44	2,500 000,	6,250,000,000
7,000	"	1,000'000,	7,000 000 000
20,000	64	500,000,	10 000 000 000
			$36,250,000,000

This estimate is very far below the actual truth. Yet, even upon this basis, we are confronted with the startling result that 31,000 persons now possess three-fifths of the whole national wealth, real and personal, according to the highest estimate (60,000,000,000,000) which any one has yet ventured to make of the aggregate amount. Nor is this conclusion at all improbable.—Thomas G. Shearman in September Forum.

CATHOLIC HOSTILITY TO OUR SCHOOLS.

The main difficulty encountered, as every one knows, is the attitude of resolute hostility to the public school system which the Roman Catholic Church maintains. Atheists, Infidels and Jews, though dissatisfied and complaining, are not positively rebellious and revolutionary in their demands. It implies no uncharitableness to say that Roman Catholics are irreconcilables, pure and simple. They boldly and even proudly avow their purpose to destroy our common-school system as now organized. With such malcontents compromise is, of course, out of the question, and co-operation on some common ground of religious teaching an impossibility. The Romish position on this subject means all or nothing. All or nothing, I say, for to yield to their demand for a division and distribution of the school fund among the various sects, is to yield all. It is to decree the overthrow of the public-school system. For the state to yield to this demand would be to abdicate its function of popular education, and remit this whole business to ecclesiastical hands. Rather than do this I should prefer, for myself, to see the whole structure of our common-school system broken up, and the work of popular education relegated to hap-hazard methods wholly independent of state aid. I dread the perils of general ignorance less than 1 do those of ecclesiastical domination.—Rev. Dr. J. R. Kendrick in the September Forum.

INGERSOLL AND BRADEN.

THE following from Bro. T. F. Stafford, together with the communication from the Peoria Transcript, are self-explanatory. We do not believe in Colonel Ingersoll's particular philosophy, but we are interested in seeing justice done him and to every other man, even an avowed enemy. If Christianity is to be delivered from or defended against the attacks of the Colonel, it will not be because Clark Braden stands in the breach. We opine that it has more to fear from his so-called defenses than from the attacks of the Colonel. Truth may at times consistently pray for deliverance from its friends (?)

Col. Ingersoll deserves due credit for the services rendered to his country. That we accord him fully and frankly. While we can not endorse his later efforts. (though he may have served, in some sense, às an image smasher), yet we can accept what good he has done and drop him when his deeds are contrary to that which is true and right. We should adopt that course with every measure and every man -follow them only so far as they follow Christ and manifest that they are in possession of His pure Spirit—but no farther. We shall at all times be prepared to abide in the faith if thus we do; and shall not be disappointed, nor greatly disquieted, nor lose our reward.

We have no remarks of a personal nature to make concerning Mr. Braden. It is his methods that we despise.

"LEWISTON, Illinois, September 14th. "Editors Herald:-I enclose a morsel from the Peoria Transcript to show that Clark Braden is not resting in a bed of roses by a good deal. He is certainly a delectable personage. It is not a Saint that speaks of him in the Transcript, but a man that knows just what he is talking about. Somehow I am always glad to see Braden in print under such lashings. I may be wrong and perhaps ought to pray for him; but few have ever tried as he has done to destroy the faith. Satan could do little more. Yours in hope,

"T. F. STAFFORD."

SURRENDER OF INGERSOLL.

It makes my blood boil, as it no doubt does that of every survivor of the Eleventh Illinois cavalry, to read the unscrupulous and groundless charges of your conceited Canuck correspondent, Clark Braden, against the bravery of Col. R. G. Ingersoll.

Now, I am no guardian of the Colonel or his interests. He needs none. History is slow and calumny is swift. Time, therefore, will do Col. Ingersoll justice, if I and every member of his command remain silent.

I do not remember dates and have not them at hand, but it was in the spring of 1862 that our regiment, the Eleventh Illinois cavalry was encamped at Jacksonville, Tennessee. Then came word to Jackson of a raid by Forrest in force, in the direction of Lexington, some twenty miles away, and to that point, the gallant Colonel, with a part of his command, was ordered to move. With some six hundred or seven hundred men and two pieces of artillery Col. Ingersoll moved out that afternoon, and at the end of a forced march camped near Lexington, an old tumbledown village, not "Corinth," as this monumental Canuck liar says.

Very early the next morning the command was ordered "to horse," for the pickets had been driven in and the woods in front were swarming with rebel cavalry. Forrest, with his whole division, not less than ten thousand cavalry, was bearing down on our handful, that an hour before had seemed an army. Then Col. Ingersoll arose to the height of the hour. He formed a single line across the Lexington road, all that his meagre force would permit, planked his park of artillery in the road and awaited the assault. He did not wait long, for Forrest, with a line longer than his own, and five or six ranks deep-an avalanche of men and horses-came down upon him. It was then the Colonel dismounted in the middle of the line, and standing by the two guns in the road encouraged the men, as one after another went down, with his calm instructions to "Give them canister?" "Give it to them in their faces!" "Shoot low, boys, and shoot slow, but hit 'em!" And there he stood when the moving mass of men and horses, of friend and foe were mingled for a moment (it seemed like an hour) in a hand-to-hand conflict. Then it was that by the very fact of overwhelming numbers, the rebels could not find us all, and Ingersoll, with a portion of his regiment, actually broke through the solid mass and came out in the rear of the rebel line, where we were surrounded and captured.

Ingersoll was paroled that night, as Forrest had no idea that he had struck anything more than our skirmish line. He supposed that the battle was ahead, and had no time to fool with prisoners. The Colonel was then sent up to command a parole camp at St. Louis, where he waited wearily to be exchanged so as to get back to the front. Some of his men weary of waiting, got leave to go out and work in Missouri harvest fields; and it was here that after months of this illness that the Col. resigned. He came into camp and told the boys why. He could not rust there as a paroled prisoner, and all approved his choice so resign and get back, since he could, into life's activities.

Call Ingersoll an "infidel," whatever that may; say that he was reckless and dissolute in his early days; say that he was blasphemous under provocation; but do not say in the presence of a member of the Eleventh Illinois Cavalry that he was a coward, or that while in the service he ever shirked a post of duty because of its dang-JOHN W. #### CARDINAL GIBBONS ON BRUNO.

BALTIMORE, Md., Sept. 11th.—Cardinal Gibbons' pastoral letter calling attention to the allocution of Pope Leo, on the unveiling recently of a monument in Rome to the memory of Bruno, will be read in all the churches next Sunday. The cardinal says: "A mingled feeling of righteous wrath and deep sympathy was bred in every Catholic heart when the news came that in Rome impious men dared to unveil the statue of an apostate monk to the admiration and veneration of the thousands assembled, dragging the memory of a wild theorizer, a shameless writer and denier of the divinity of Christ, from the obscurity of a grave that had for three centuries been closed upon its disgrace. These men, backed by mere brute force, have set upon a pedestal in the Holy city a statue of the infamous Bruno. Such a proceeding is a flagrant outrage upon the Catholic and Christian world. It is a deliberate and well-aimed blow at all that is sound and wholesome in religion and morals. Its animus is clear from the selection of time and place, and the unchristian and defiant language employed in the unveiling of the statute of a man, whose whole life breathed cowardice, pride, and defi-ance of lawfully constituted authority. In thelr frantic efforts after miscalled freedom they have spurned the truth, which alone could make them free. Theirs is not the action of decent, honorable, but misguided men, calmly and with due regard to the feelings of others promulgating a new Their attempt is not so much to honor belief. Bruno as to insult and villify the vicar of Christ and his derated children throughout Christen-They have chosen as the committee to further the movement the champions of Atheism, the would-be destroyers of the very foundations of Christianity. It is proper that the Christian world and, especially this portion where the term religious freedom' is understood in Christian sense, should brand with their indignant scorn, action such as this. We are not yet ready for processions in which the red and the black flags action such as this. We are not yet ready for processions in which the red and the black flags of Prohibitionists and Anarchists are defiantly flaunting.

The above from the head of the Roman Catholic Church in America voices their side of that question. If all of the above be true it is passing strange that Catholic Italy looks with favor upon the raised and rising statue of Bruno.

We believe that it is not only to his honor that the statue was erected, but to forever commemorate and emphasize the truth of the principle that ecclesiastics shall not dominate the consciences and dictate the civil affairs of mankind; and to rebuke for all time the fanatical and fallacious assumption of authority, which in the hands of Romish priests sought so to enslave in the past, and put to death many of those who resisted them.

One writer has thus stated of Bruno: "It added not a little to the exasperation against him, that he was perpetually declaiming against the insincerity, the impostures of his persecutors—that wherever he went he found Skepticism varnished over and concealed by hypocrisy; and that it was not against the belief of men, but against their pretended belief, that he was fighting; that he was struggling with an orthodoxy that had neither morality nor faith."

After relating the account of the cruel martyrdom of Bruno he adds: "But perhaps the day approaches when posterity will offer an expiation for this great ecclesiastical crime, and a statue of Bruno be unveiled under the dome of St. Peter's at Rome."

How truly has the prediction of such probability been verified. "The mills of the gods grind slowly, but they grind exceeding fine." The best guarantees to the Catholic world that they shall fully enjoy their just rights are those very manifestations in the present age of the emphatic disapproval of the past wrong doings of their clergy.

Those who contend manfully and fairly for the rights of the oppressed are most likely to be magnanimous and just, even with their opponents. Such can generally be trusted to preserve the liberties of all.

REUNION R. R. RATES.

In the miscellaneous department will be found an official letter from T. Thompson, Secretary of the "Western States Passenger Association," to Bishop G. A. Blakeslee, relative to reduced rates to the Annual Reunion at Garner's Grove, near Missouri Valley, Oct. 4th. Read it carefully. Those going to the Reunion over any of the roads indicated in said letter must procure certificates over each road they travel on from the ticket agents at the stations where they purchase tickets, which certificates will set forth the fact of their having paid full first class fare to the point where they leave said road. certificates must be preserved and presented to Bishop Blakeslee or his authorized agent at the Reunion for official signature in order to secure return tickets over said roads at one third regular rates. Strict attention must be given to the instructions set forth in said letter, for only by following them can any one secure the rates provided.

Remember that "Certificates will not be honored for return tickets at reduced rates unless presented within three days after the date of adjournment of the meeting (Sunday not being accounted a day), nor will certificates be honored in cases where going tickets were purchased more than three days prior to the commencement of the meeting."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE September number of the Cosmopolitan, a monthly illustrated magazine, comes to our table, filled with choice reading matter and adorned by beautiful photoengravings. "The two capitals of Japan," "the opening of Oklahoma," and an article from the pen of "Carmen Sylva," the Queen of Roumania, together with her portrait, are among some of its interesting contents. The article on Japan is especially interesting as showing the rapid progress of civilization in that country. The magazine is published at No. 363, Fifth Avenue, New York.

In our last issue, in the editorial on "The College," in fifth paragraph it should read, "Enough has been said, we trust, to awaken a deep interest," etc. On the next page, third column, it should read, "yet it was sufficiently severe." etc.

Bro. B. H. Case wrote from Coal Hill, Arkansas, where he is anxiously awaiting the coming of some one to preach the word. He threatens to himself thrust in the sickle should none other appear. Success to all who "use the truth in wisdom." All do not, but all may and should do so.

Bro. W. W. McLeod wrote the 10th inst. from Cormorant, Minnesota, that Bro. W. E. Peak had just completed arrangements for a fifteen nights discussion with an Adventist, the soul-sleeping theory and other things being the subjects in question. Bro. McLeod was trying to do what he could for the cause.

Bishop G. A. Blakeslee requests that the following corrections be made in his printed report, "all in the Spring River, Kansas, district: October 19, 1888, Hugh Havey $10.00, instead of Hugh Hovey as published. Feb. 16, 1889, Hannah Barmore, $2.00, instead of Hannah Bannon. And Feb. 16, 1889, Roswell M. Barmore $3.00, instead of Russell M. Bannon, as it appears in the report."

Bro. W. R. Calhoon of Cortland, Illinois, writes, desiring to correct an error which appeared in his last letter to the HERALD. It should read that his father's family numbered eleven instead of seventeen children.

Bro. John A. Currie Jr. wrote September 6th from San Antonia, Texas, "The work is moving here and the calls for preaching are many."

The Iowa State Register of the 13th inst., weekly edition, published at Des Moines, contains an account of the conference of the Des Moines district which was held at Rhodes on the 7th. Thanks to the Register.

The Clarksburg, West Virginia, News of the 14th reaches us, containing a good defensive article from the pen of Bro. D. L. Shinn. Good; such contributions will allay prejudice.

Fifth Quorum of Elders: See notice in this issue.

"All goes well; work looking up" are the hopeful words of Bro. D. S. Mills in a late letter from Los Angeles, California.

THE following is self-explanatory:

Editors Herald:—I notice that in the Return for August, 1889, Mr. E. Robinson finds a good deal of fault about my statements in the Herald of July 6th, concerning the course taken with him by the officers of the Davis City branch. Now I wish to correct one date: It should read

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. E. W. Nunley wrote from Cook's

Point, Texas, September 7th:

"I am still endeavoring to push forward the grand cause. Prospects are not as bright as could be desired, but we hope for the better. We have much opposition in Texas, but are not discouraged, knowing that our cause is just and of the Lord. There is no such thing as failure if we trust in Him, which we propose to do."

Bro. E. W. Grim writes from Canton, Illinois, September 6th:

"I want to try to do more for this latter day work. We do not have meetings here now. I wish we had some one to take hold and see if we can not do something. Pray for me that I may not fall."

Bro. J. S. Comstock writes from Springport, Michigan in excellent spirit. He says:

"I shall be eighty-nine years of age if I live until next February. My health is good and I am trying to live so as to not taste of death, as saith the Lord Jesus."

Bro George Hampshire writes, September 7th, from Coplestone, Ontario:

"A discussion comes off at Petrolia, Ontario, on the 10th inst., between a Mr. Bourner and Elder Samuel Brown on the question of baptism. This seems to be our opportunity for getting a hearing in this town. We have hired a hall and seated it and sent out invitations for all to come and hear the gospel free of charge; but about all we could get for Bro. Brown to preach to was almost empty benches. We have but two-thirds of an average crop in this part of God's footstool this year, but we are thankful it is no worse. We hope the day will speedily come when we shall all enjoy peace and plenty."

"WITH SPEED SWIFTLY."

BRO. Elvin will permit us to state, in confirmation of what he writes in another part of this issue, that we lately read an account of the testing of an electric locomotive which attained a speed of three miles a minute, or the relative equivalent of one hundred and eighty miles an hour! Maintained, that would be eighteen hundred miles in ten hours, or a distance equivalent to from New York to Denver in ten hours. How would that be for a "day's journey?" We have seen no verification of the reported attained speed, but we shall not be surprised to learn of achievements of an equally or surpassingly marvelous nature, in electrical engineering. The study of electrical science is but fairly entered upon and its mysterious realm but partially invaded by the searching genius of man. We may yet be as greatly surprised by their discoveries as were the incredulous and skeptical public of but a few past decades who ridiculed the invention of Prof. S. B. Morse's electric telegraph.

THE Columbus, Nebraska, Fournal of September 14th, comes to us with the following strong endorsement of one of our brethren,—Judge H. J. Hudson:

Judge Hudson has announced himself as a candidate for re-nomination as county judge. He has, so far as we can learn, given absolute satisfaction in the conduct of the affairs of the office. If we have ever had as good a judge, we certainly have never had a better one, for all the purposes of this very important office. It is the crowning glory of a civilized community that the interests of the weak, the disabled, the helpless are strongly and carefully guarded from encroachment. This court, having to do mainly with the estates of decedents, and the rights of orphaned children, it is a matter of pure right to such that he who occupies this position should be one who would faithfully see that no harm comes to them from designing persons seeking to prey upon the estates of the young or inexperienced. Give civil communities just judges, and you go the greatest length of the road to assured peace and prosperity."

We are pleased to also note the following in another column of the same paper:

"Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints hold regular services every Sunday at 2 p. m., prayer meeting on Wednesday evening at their chapel, corner of North street and Pacific Avenue. All are cordially invited.

Elder H. J. Hudson, President."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Has a teacher or deacon any right to preach in his own branch?

Ans.-Yes.

"The manner which the disciples, who were called the elders of the church, ordained priests and teachers. After they had prayed unto the Father in the name of Christ, they laid their hands upon them, and said, In the name of Jesus Christ I ordain you to be a priest; (or if he be a teacher); I ordain you to be a teacher to preach repentance and remission of sins through Jesus Christ, by the endurance of faith on his name to the end. Amen. And after this manner did they ordain priests and teachers, according to the gifts and callings of God unto men; and they ordained them by the power of the Holy Ghost, which was in them."—Moroni 3: 1.

"The teacher's duty is to watch over the church always, and be with and strengthen them, and see that there is no iniquity in the church, neither hardness with each other; neither lying, backbiting, nor evil speaking; and see that the church meet together often, and also see that all the members do their duty, and he is to take the lead of meetings in the absence of the elder or priest, and is to be assisted always, in all his duties in the church by the deacons if occasion requires; but neither teachers nor deacons have authority to baptize, administer the sacrament, or lay on hands; they are, however, to warn, expound, exhort and teach, and invite all to come unto Christ."—D. C., 17:11.

"And behold, the high priests shall travel, and also the elders, and also the lesser priests; but the deacons and teachers should be appointed to watch over the church, to be standing ministers unto the church."—D. C., 83: 2.

"And, behold, you are they who are ordained of me to ordain priests and teachers to declare my gospel," etc.—D. C. 16: 5.

"Likewise must the deacons be grave, not double-tongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre; holding the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience. And let these also first be proved; then let them use the office of a deacon, being found blameless. Even so must their wives be grave, not slanderers, sober, faithful in all things. Let the deacons be the husbands of one wife, ruling their children and their own houses well. For they that have used the office of a deacon well, purchase to themselves a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus."—I Tim. 3: 8-13.

2 — If a man be ordained from the office of a teacher to the office of a seventy, and is then dropped from the seventy, what office does he hold?

A .- None-unless ordained to one.

THE HARMONY A SUCCESS.

THE following written approvals of the Harmony are among many that have reached us to date, and we expect numerous similar ones as the book is made use of and tested by the choirs and singers among the various congregations of the Saints.

Bro. J. F. Mintun, Magnolia, Iowa:

"The Harmonys arrived safely and they are excellent. Considering the work and size of book I think it is cheap. It is proving more satisfactory the more used."

Bro. Norman W. Smith, chorister of the church at Lamoni, says:

"I have examined the Saints' Harmony, to some extent, and find it far superior to any notebook that I have seen, especially for our church, the tunes being so nicely adapted to the words found in the Saints Harp. The statements of the editor as found in the Harmony in regard to the book are correct so far as I have examined. I feel safe in recommending it to the Saints at large. The Choir at Lamoni have adopted it for their use in the church services. The book is admirably adapted to the use of both beginners and those advanced in the study of music, and I am satisfied that the more it is studied the better it will be appreciated by the Saints."

Bro. W. Vickery, president of the Plano branch, writes:

"Harmony received and well liked. The work is well done."

We have received but one unfavorable comment, and as that was made shorty after the receipt of the book, it is hoped that after a fair test of its merits the same will be supplemented by a favorable report. The present edition is fast being exhausted. We hope ere long to hear of satisfactory progress and great improvement in the song service among all the branches. The Harmony has a mission before it which we believe it will creditably and faithfully accomplish.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"Till, brief or long, my granted span
Of life with love to Thee and man;
Strike when Thou wilt the hour of rest,
But let my last days be my best!"

"UERY."

"I AM a stranger in a strange land and would like to know what to do to pass away Sunday, except by reading. I always read until I get so home sick I don't know what to do. I want to do only what is right. There is no preaching here that I care to go and hear. I want your advice. Please answer through the Herald."—Letter.

It is a sad thing to be a stranger in a strange land, and some lonely hours must necessarily be the result of such circumstances. But these need not be many, if only the heart and spirit are properly attuned and in harmony with the great throbbing, out-reaching heart of Him who said, "Go ye into all the world." There is no longer a middle wall of partition. "All ye are brethren," and when the love of God baptizes the soul there is an outgoing stream of love which, in its flow, would embrace the whole human family. It is God's great, broad and beautiful world and these are his children, (erring, stained with sin and pierced through with many griefs, though they may be) they are still his. How our hearts have overflowed with emotion when we have realized the greatness of that love which led Christ to take upon himself our nature-to be born of woman-mingle with the poorest and most wretched of mankind, and humble himself even to the death of the cross! Paul says that he took upon himself flesh and blood, because the children God had given him were partakers of it. If we so love, so admire this condescension upon the part of our elder brother, how can we hope to be like him, to inherit his celestial kingdom if we do not partake of the same spirit?

It is not the spirit which makes ascetics or hermits—neither the spirit which seeks its own will, its own good, or even its own happiness; but ever reaches out to seek the good, the happiness of others, even as the Master came "to seek and to save that which was lost."

Now dear sister, it is not possible for us to do people good unless we can, in some way, reach their hearts. Love is the only key which fits the door we want to open and it will never fail. "We love him because he first loved us." He not only loved us, but he manifested that love, and it was by its manifestation that we knew of its existence. We believe the truth and earnestness of your words when you say, "I want to do only what is right." Christ himself answers your question in these words, "Let your light shine." Is not remaining at home, simply because you do not care to hear the preaching which you can hear, putting your light under a bushel? Think for a moment. How can you become acquainted with those folks, unless you meet and mingle with them? How can you recommend the gospel to them by separating yourself from them as though you had neither lot or part in the matters which interests them? We are firmly persuaded that no feeling of bigotry actuates you, that you have not the slightest thought of saying in your heart, "Stand aside, I am holier than thou." But the question arises, what effect will your actions have upon them? Will they not be persuaded that more or less of such a feeling influences you? If so, they will be repelled from instead of being drawn towards you, for it is not in human nature to acquire or love the selfrighteous Pharisees.

As a people we do claim to have greater spiritual light than the rest of mankind; but the only way to establish the validity of this claim is, to let that light shine, and the word of Jesus for it, when our good works are seen, men will glorify our heavenly Father.

Happiness, or rather the pursuit of happiness, is not the legitimate object of the Christian's life. Duty should be our watchword and the glory of God our incentive. If from the heart we pray, "Thy kingdom come," will we not labor to hasten its coming?

To a Saint of God the companionship of those of like precious faith is very dear; but if the work of the Master demand that we resign this, the true soldier will not hesitate one moment to obey the call of duty, for if instructed by the Master he knows well "The path of duty is the only path of safety," and there can be no peace of mind to the Christian who neglects it, or who substitutes for it a less worthy motive.

Our advice to you then, dear sister, is: Mingle with the people with whom your lot is cast. Attend regularly upon both church and Sunday school, especially the latter; for it will be impossible for you to study the word of God without benefit to yourself. No matter how erroneous may be some of the doctrines taught, the great fundamental principles of love towards God and man will be embodied therein, and if they are not acted out by all who profess to adjust their lives according to them, the fault is most likely with them as with many of us, that they fail to let the sunlight of God's all-reaching love into their souls. They do not throw open the windows and let the breezes of divine love chase out the narrow selfishness lurking in the dark corners and illumine the whole interior to such an extent that the light can not be hid.

Seek quiety, unobtrusively, but in every possible way to manifest your feelings of good will to your neighbors, remembering that he is your neighbor who needs any good service in your power to render. Be not ashamed of your religion, neither let a blush rise to your cheek when answering, "I am a Latter Day Saint." If indeed you are one you are the daughter of a King, even the King of Kings, and who would blush to say, "I am Queen Victoria's daughter! Strive to realize this. Think of it. This is one of the things which it will benefit you to "think upon," for it will make you more careful to do only such noble acts as become the daughter of a King, and help you to realize the dignity of your calling and the necessity of being at all times upon your guard lest you bring reproach upon Him who said, "The same is my sister."

Do (not think only,) but do from day to day those things which will prove your claim a valid one, and we guarantee you that should you favor us with another letter it will be like a triumphant song of rejoicing. Study the word of God, pray for the guidance of the Holy Spirit, for the gift of wisdom; then mingle with your kind and let your light shine.

SR. ADDIE E. HULL, of Willow Brook, Buchanan county, Missouri, would be pleased to have some of the sisters write to her. Here is an opportunity for those who have the time, to give the cup of cold water in the name of a disciple. Such letters are often the mediums of great good to the scattered Saints.

Bouton, Iowa, Aug 31st.

Dear Sister Frances:—I have nothing new to write about but must tell you that my interest in the latter day work has not lessened and I am trying to live according to the precepts of my religion. I live ten miles from the Keystone branch to which I belong, but am not privileged to meet with except once in a great while. Bro. W. M. Thompson preached in our neighborhood last spring; since then we have had no preaching. I hope he and others may come again when convenient. Bro. Stamm will preach some when he returns from Boone.

We greatly appreciate the Herald, Hope and Autumn Leaves and shall ever pray for all the workers in this great and glorious work. Please pray for me, that I may live faithful to the end and that my family may soon obey the gospel.

Yours in bonds of Christian love,

SARAH E. BOUTON.

Sister Frances:-I have just been reading letters from my sisters in the far off Australia. Some are young sisters, and I wish you were near that you might share with me the pleasure they impart. I know it will cheer you and all who feel a deep interest in the onward march of the gospel work to know that they are rapidly progressing in the spiritual life. Their letters breathe the true workings of the Spirit within, which makes my heart glad, and I hope ere long several will take their places side by side with their sisters in America and let their light shine through the church publications. Some have introduced themselves already. I hope Sister Lillie Eden will soon appear again, and yet again, for I think she has a work to do in that department of life's duties. And dear Sister Allie, of Wallsend, your letter to Addie was a good one. It brought the tears to my eyes while I read, remembering with gratitude the many acts of kindness both Addie and I received at your hands, and at your father's house. And I believe the Lord was rewarding your cheerful diligence and faith. It was the Wallsend branch that gave us the first hearty welcome to Australia, that lifted the cloud of homesickness from our hearts; and that welcome never grew less. May their day of rejoicing come, for theirs has been a weary toil! Bro. Davis' letter in the Herald some time ago brought me again in communion with the Hamilton branch where we spent many seasons of rejoicing. May they continue to grow and abound. Brethren Wight and Butterworth are working energetically, and according to all reports are the right men in the right place. My parting words to Bro. Wight as the little steamer pushed from the shores of Forster were, "take care of our children." His were, "I will;" and he is being true to his word, and has selected for his partner in life just the right person to help him in his ministerial labors. Sr. Lizzie's whole heart was in the work and she was doing all she could for its upbuilding in her limited circle when the Lord rewarded her diligence by opening to her a broader avenue for doing good, and I rejoice with her. You may know the bond of friendship that exists between us when I tell you that she always addresses me in her correspondence by the endearing title of "mother." But I must remember that possibly this letter may reach Australia and its readers will want to hear something of the work in America. The "reunion" at Laguna was a season of spiritual benefit, still the saints were not left to forget in their rejoicing that they were still in the world where the adversary holds power to mar the happiness of all who will permit him. And I think he must have seen that such gatherings togethe were going to work the overthrow of much of his power, and came up in great wrath striving to prevail against the power of the Holy Ghost; but thanks be to God his power held the ascendency all the way through and triumphed gloriously at the closing. A few were privileged to witness the out-pouring of God's Spirit in great power, while others who were on the grounds knew nothing of it. The Lord sometimes bestows his blessings in a similar manner to his judgments. In the ninety-first Psalm it says, "A thousand shall fall at thy side and ten thousand at thy right hand, but it shall not come nigh thee, only with thine eyes shalt thou see and behold the reward of the wicked." So it was at this time with the blessings; with our eyes we beheld the faces of those who had been the receipients of this power and saw their countenances beaming with the light and glory which it imparted, and heard words of wisdom and instruction as they fell from their lips. May we so live that on future occasions all may be worthy to partake of the same.

In a former letter I spoke of writing on a subject that had been weighing on my mind, but upon consideration I deemed it not wisdom for me to do so.

SISTER EMMA.

LAMONI, Iowa, Aug. 30th.

Dear Sisters:—I have been learning lessons in the months and years that are past, and I am hoping, trusting to be able to profit by them.

We are admonished to heed the lessons of each day, and if we can but read aright and hold fast the teachings of each experience as we pass along, they will prove helps to us in becoming wise unto salvation. Even from our times of trial may come to us lessons which shall be for our highest good, our greatest advancement in this school of life. If we are to be made perfect through suffering, and if it be true that "whom the Lord loveth he chasteneth," are not trials to be desired, according as the Lord wills for us? And if they come shall we murmur or let go our faith? No, rather seek the Lord with renewed diligence for his help and the light of his Spirit, trusting through the times of darkness. When I have desired that the dross of my nature might be consumed and I be made worthy of eternal life and have realized that it might require affliction to accomplish this, I have prayed, "Father, if thou seest that a portion of trial is necessary to purify my heart and make me fit to dwell in thy presence, withhold it not, but give me of thy grace that I may endure."

I feel that we need to be prayerful at all times, and that we lose what we can not gain in any other way, if we neglect our privilege in this. It is in answer to prayer that the Holy Spirit is given, and if we come often to God in prayer we are drawn closer to Him and seem to become acquainted with him who is a "friend above all others." I believe too that it helps us to know ourselves and in every way prepares us the better for life's duties.

Some are grieving over the loss of loved ones, aud as this trial comes home to each one with force stronger than we can know in sympathizing with others, we may be tempted to question the goodness of God or to feel that he is unmindful of us, but we remember that before we learned to love the Lord, many, many such dear ones had gone and left friends sorrowing here. All must cross over the river, and because the loss becomes ours, does not in any way change the loving kindness of our God.—"His mercy endureth forever."

We are taught that we must become as a little child, and as I think of the little one that was ours for a time, so gentle and patient, so loving, so pure! I wonder can we ever be as such? I have thought sometimes that the hope of meeting our lost ones, never more to be parted from them, would be a sufficient incentive for living a righteous life; but I put away the thought as an unworthy one, knowing that love toward God should prompt our service to him. May we love him with pure hearts, fervently, and so honor him in our lives that he shall be pleased to give us a place in his kingdom.

Your sister,

C. B. STEBBINS.

WE give below a few extracts from a private letter which we deem too good to enjoy unshared:

Dear Sr. Walker:— This morning I take the time to write to you. I reached Princeton at three o'clock Tuesday morning, and for several days I felt the effects of so long a ride. I traveled in a chair-car, and I believe they are not so comfortable for a long journey as an ordinary seat. One has to sit in the same position in a chair, while in a seat you can change about.

The institute passed passed off well, and I enjoyed it only that I was so tired that it was hard for me to sit still through the lectures. You know when a person is tired physically, he can not do much mentally.

I went to visit a kindergarten school in Princeton. It was the most interesting thing I have seen for a long time. There were about fifteen little ones with two teachers. The children's ages ranged from three to six. I thoroughly enjoyed watching them. Everything that was placed before them, everything to which their attention was called was calculated to instruct their young minds and teach them pure things.

It made the tears start when those little babies bowed their heads and sung a little morning prayer. As for the teachers, they simply "put themselves in the children's place," made children of themselves for the time and worked and played with them, but while a careless observer might see only the simple, artless play of children, under all there was deep design and over all loving guidance. As for instance when the little ones were seated at a low table, waiting to be provided with splints and beads, the teacher, knowing the children served last would think their turn long in coming, sang softly as she worked:

"I try to be patient,
I try to be patient,
I try to be patient.
And wait till my turn comes."

She knew that soft soothing little song would not be unnoticed or unheeded. The little ones all sat still and waited patiently and who knows how many times in after years when life's greater cares come that little refrain may return to their aid, and not only that, but these early lessons in patience and the kindred virtues they learn in their work and games must exert an influence that may be traced all through the future. I wish you could have seen them. Those little ones I judge all came from good homes, and I could but wish as I stood and looked on, that all the little children of this broad land of ours might have the benefit of such kindergarten schools; but more especially was my wish for the children of the slums, the children of wretched degraded homes, whose play-grounds are the streets where the sights and sounds that greet them are all impure.

Sometimes when I hear or read of the good being done for the poor, the suffering, the neglected, the real practical good being done, I wonder if we latter Day Saints are very much ahead atter all, and sometimes I wonder if we are not a little behind what we ought to be. But I know too that as a people we are the "poor among men," and it requires money to accomplish anything in the way of such enterprises as I have been thinking of.

We have just been reading the leaflet sent out by the Chicago Daily News in behalf of the Fresh Air Fund, and this morning I read a little story, "The Shilling Baby." There is an institution in London by which little children, waifs, are gathered in and grouped in families in cottages under the care of women who act as mothers to the children. The Shilling Baby was one of the little outcast babies.

The miners at Spring Valley who have been idle five or six months are now under orders to accept terms and go to work or quit the houses in two weeks. They say they dare not accept for fear of other miners who are standing out against the wages. Many are leaving, but some I suppose are too poor. They traverse all the country round begging, and some after receiving help go home, invite in the friends and have a "spree." That is the "foreign element," those who come into our country ignorant, uneducated, irreligious.

I see I have written quite a number of leaves, and will not write much more, for if I stop now I may get it in the mail for to-day.

Ruth.

Council Bluffs, Iowa, Aug. 31st.

Dear Sister Frances:—Please find enclosed my mite to the Missionary Fund. I have often thought of writing a few lines to the Home Column. I love this latter day work for I know it is true.

I have been cheered many times by reading the sisters letters through the Herald, and let us put our mites and our prayers together and help roll on this glorious cause, for surely the Lord is well pleased with our efforts inasmuch as they are done with an eye single to his glory.

I had a beautiful dream concerning the Prayer Union, and as it may encourage others, I will relate it: I saw several of our sisters going to a small house for prayer. The road seemed rough and we worked hard to get there, and when we reached it we all knelt down to pray, and as we prayed the Spirit was present to a great degree and our prayers seemed to ascend up before the throne, and just above us I heard a voice singing in beautiful melody:

"Sweet the time, exceeding sweet, When the Saints together meet."

Dear sisters, let us never neglect our petitions to Him who is the giver of all good. I would ask an interest in your faith and prayers, that my health my be restored and I may continue faithful to the end of the race and be saved in His kingdom. Your sister in Christ,

CARISTINA BARMASON,

Dow CITY, Iowa, Sept. 1st.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column:—I will try and pen you a few lines this beautiful evening to let you know we are alive in this part of the vineyard. We have such good meetings which are conducted by the young officers of the branch. Bro. David Rudd will speak to us to-night; although young in the ministry he is doing a good work. And this is what we want, for there are calls all over the land for more laborers in the field, and in order to sustain those that are now in the field and send more, we must throw in our mite and give them our faith and prayers.

I think the Prayer Union a grand help to all the Saints of God. We have ours every Thursday afternoon conducted by our most worthy sister Serelda Rudd, who is a noble worker in this great cause. If it were not for this dear sister we might have given up in despair. We have been greatly encouraged by the Holy Spirit.

"Oh, how sweet is the soul-cheering thought!"
Our minds were clouded, as it were, and unsettled on account of sickness and non-attendance, and we raised our voices to God in prayer to know if the work was in harmony with the will of God, and our prayers were not in vain, for on the following Sabbath it was made known to us by the Holy Spirit of God through our aged and most worthy brother Rudd, that we were then slack in the work we had covenanted to uphold; and inasmuch as we would humble ourselves and live according to the commandments he had given us, he would be with us and bless us.

Dear sisters, is this not worth living for? May God's Holy Spirit be with each Saint, and may he guide us all in the paths of truth that we may reap the reward that is laid up for the faithful, is the sincere desire of

Your sister in Christ,
MAY RUDD.

Омана, Neb., Sept. 2d.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column:-I have thought many times that I would like to write you, but for want of courage have not been able to do so. But to-day being the Sabbath, also communion day, and being unable to meet with the Saints on account of illness, I felt that I would like to bear my testimony to the truth of this great Latter day work. And indeed it is a great work, a marvelous work and a wonder! How my heart swells with thankfulness to God for his loving kindness to me. When I think of the many blessings he has bestowed upon me, I can not find words to express my gratitude. I love the gospel, and strive earnestly to keep the commandments of God, and I desire to obey the call to "Come up higher."

I feel encouraged that I am enabled to overcome some of the many evils that beset my pathway, and pray that I may have strength given me to overcome all, that I may receive the reward that is laid up for the faithful. The Herald and Autumn Leaves are a great comfort to me. I would not be without them, and while so many are doing so much for me I desire to show my willingness to do what I can for others, if it be ever so little. I would like the prayers of the Union in my behalf that I may be restored to health again if it be God's will. Ever praying that we may all work together for the good of the cause, I am your sister,

EVA M. HARDING.

Correspondence.

OXFORD, Idaho, Sept. 12th.

Bro. W. W. Blair: Bro. Anthony and I reached here from Soda Springs on Monday, after a most tedious drive across Bear River Valley, over the mountains, through Gentile Valley and over the mountains into Round, or the upper wing of Cache Valley, a sixty mile drive, the roughest I ever saw a team pull a buggy over. We were properly tired when we reached Bro. John Harris' house in the village of Oxford, at 8 p. m., and were glad to find a hospitable welcome, which we did. We found an appointment in the meeting-house, Bishop Lewis having consented to our use of it. So, on Tuesday evening I addressed a good house full, from Matthew 24: 14. We occupied again last night, the house being fairly well filled.

Bishop Lewis and Counselor Clements were both present each night, as was also Elder Milo Andrus. The latter made a request at the close of Tuesday night's discourse, that I would answer the question of whether father had not more than one wife. I replied that on the next evening I would discuss the main question at issue between the Reorganized Church and the people here, and would answer the question so that no one would misunderstand me. He wished, he said, that he or some one else might be permitted to follow me each service, to which I answered that I had no sort of objection, as I was satisfied that after I was gone, if not during my presence, what I should present would be reviewed and controverted, and I should like to hear how it was done.

Last night I told Bishop Lewis that when I would be through my discourse the matter was in his hands, and he, or any one whom he might choose, or permit, would be at liberty to speak and answer at will. When I closed, Bishop Lewis and Elder Milo Andrus conferred a bit, and the elder proceeded first to endorse all that I had presented, and afterwards to tell of what he heard, etc., in Nauvoo. It was substantially the same as we have heard before, only that a new version of the personnel of those to whom the prophet Joseph unbosomed the dread secret, in secret conclave was given. This was in effect that Joseph Smith was surrounded by a class of men whom he did not trust, and one whom he did. This latter class was the secret police or body guard, of which he, Milo Andros, was one. These, "a few of them, possibly twenty-five, maybe not so many" were called together one night in the Masonic Temple, when Joseph discoursed on the celestial, or eternal character of the marriage covenant, and the redemption of the dead, etc. He occupied nearly an hour, but failed to advance a direct statement in evidence, in refutation of the points I had made, and ended by bearing testimony that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, and that he had now borne his testimony to the three sons of that prophet.

I really suppose that I ought to feel sorry that I am what I am, after all this, but I am all the more convinced and satisfied with the position of the Reorganization on the point at issue.

In answer to my request for the use of the house for to-night, as we designed to stay until Saturday, Bishop Lewis thought that he had no objection to our occupying elsewhere in side meetings, but that if we occupied their house any longer it would be likely to lead to "litigation," which he thought would not be wise. He was quite kind, and in palliation of his refusal of the house told the folks that if we held forth anywhere else in the ward, he was willing any should go who wished to, but that he did not think it best to have any litigation over the question.

I thanked him for his kind permission to use the house the time we had occupied it. One of the trustees of the school house was present and gave permission to use that, so we occupy there to-night. We go to Malad Saturday, expecting to baptize there.

Malad, Idaho, Sept. 15th.— We held two meetings in the school house Thursday night and Friday night; Bro. R. J. Anthony occupying on the first and I on the last named. The congregations were fair under the circumstances. Bishop's counselor, Nephi Clements, was present last evening.

Neither Bro. Anthony nor I alluded to the failure to obtain the use of the meeting house, in our services; nor did we attempt any reply, or review of what Elder Milo Andrews had stated, deeming it best to leave the people to draw their own conclusions.

Both Elder Andrews and the Bishop seemed to be of the opinion that they were not at liberty to defend their faith on account of the restrictions imposed by the law of the land. I was not aware of any such legislation; nor can I find upon inquiry here that there is any such on the books. The Idaho law makes the retention of the franchise dependent upon abstaining from both practice and teaching of the practice of plural marriage, but that is all I find. The Edmunds law inflicts no penalty for belief, that I remember. But it seemed to be a convenient shelter at the time, I suppose. How it may be construed by those who heard us both, remains for time to determine.

Personally, I have no fault to find with Bishop Lewis for declining to permit us the use of their house for further meetings. It was best, in his opinion, and I presume he can answer to those who may make inquiry about it satisfactorily to himself any way.

I hope, however, for the sake of consistency that those who may have charge of the places in which the Reorganized Church worship and preach, will extend the courtesy of their buildings to men who may come into their towns and cities to offer ways of life and peace, as they may hold them, including elders of the Utah Church. For to me it is radically inconsistent to ask others for the use of houses of worship and assembly for our use, and then when opportunity is offered to grant the use of our buildings to them to refuse such privilige. I am of the opinion that I should not feel free in speaking from the stand in one of our meeting houses, if I knew that the use of that house had been refused to others; providing such refusal had been because of difference of belief and teaching. The principles of the faith we hold to, our doctrines, our teaching must be open to examination by others, as when once declared to the public they become so far public property, for acceptance or rejection by those who choose to hear. It does not make our cause stronger to refuse privilege for examination, but such refusal may be construed into fear that our cause may not be defensible. At least, this is the way it seems to me.

Bishop Lewis was of opinion that for us to occupy their building longer, would lead to litigation; we supposed that he meant discussion, possibly contention; and that this was not good. So be it; but there must come a time and a place when and where the matter in dispute will be fairly examined and discussed. That it can be done without bitterness and without personal wrangling we showed at Oxford; and we bide our time.

We were the guests of Bro. Neils Anderson at Soda Springs, who though still holding to the good of Joseph Morris, is a kind, hospitable man, and he and his family made us welcome. We were also made welcome at Bro. James Bowman's, Sisters Eliasson and Peacock. At Oxford we stayed with Bro. John Harris, who with his wife, received us gladly and heartily and took excellent care of us while we sojourned. Bro. Harris is a blacksmith, horse shoer and general worker, and an excellent workman in his line of work. We found Bro. Benjamin Croshaw, the president of the branch, and his family well and happy in the faith. Brethren Wm. Harris, A. Barger, - Baker, Sr. Gooch and others, all feeling satisfied of the safety and final success of the cause.

Times in this valley are hard, money scarce, and prospects for winter not encouraging. Streams, ponds and lakes have dried up; land that has been productive hitherto, has failed of its increase; and altogether, things look unfavorable for the next year. However, most are happy. In bonds,

JOSEPH SMITH.

PLYMOUTH, Mass., Sept. 7th.

Bro. D. Dancer:—I am happy in the glorious gospel of God's dear Son, which is the power of God unto salvation to every one who believes and obeys its principles. Its saving power has been extended to me in every time of need. I have had many wonderful experiences in reading the Herald, and I have loaned some of them to my neighbors. I hope to see this glorious work prosper. My faith and prayers are for the spreading of the gospel and the final redemption of Zion. Your brother, Mads Peter Hansen.

WEBB CITY, Mo., Sept. 7th.

Bro. W. W. Blair: - I thought to write you of the goodness of God to me. On August 26th last I was laboring in the woods and met with an accident which came near ending my life, in which I received a blow on the head that knocked me senseless, and which the doctor said had fractured my skull over the right ear. I was brought to town and was administered to by Brn. D. S. Crawley and Bradley, and am able to go around, for which I thank God. I was taken in by Bro. and Sr. Bradley and cared for and nursed as a child, for which I can not thank them enough. May God ever bless them! Although the right side of my face is paralyzed, yet I thank God it is no worse with me. I hope the Saints will pray for me.

A. J. HEADLEY.

KEEP THE WORD OF WISDOM.

Editors Herald:-Having read in the Herald of several cases of cancer, I write to say that "I knew a man above fourteen years ago"-yes, twenty-one years last winter-supposed to be near the end because of cancer, etc., yet with the prayer of the faithful "such an one" lived to be able in fine weather a few months later to take a two hundred mile trip for a change of air; and while among strangers in a strange land, was advised to consult a cancer-doctor, who happened to be living there. And that doctor who knew nothing of what is known in the church as the word of wisdom, did much the same as to say, "Keep the word of wisdom." From that day "such an one" has kept, and still keeps the word LATTER DAY SAINT. of wisdom.

DENVER, Colorado, Sept. 13th.

Bro. Blair:—There are still a few of us here that are trying to keep the camp fire burning. We have meetings every Sunday and partake of the sacrament once in two weeks.

We have not had any preaching since Bro. Caffall was here. We have been expecting him back to Colorado ere this, but have not heard from him since he went away. We have quite a fund on hand to hire a hall for an elder if one comes this way.

We are in hopes Bro. Joseph will give us a call on his way home. I am satisfied if we had a a suitable place to hold meetings and an elder located here, so we could have regular preaching services, there could be some brought to the light. We hold our prayer meetings at Bro. Weatlands and the Lord meets with us by his Spirit. Though the hand of affliction has been laid hdavily upon some of us, yet we feel that God doeth all things well. We buried Bro. Spruce's only child on the 11th. We ask the Saints to remember us in their prayers that the few of us here may be as a city set upon a hill whose light can not be hid. Yours truly,

E. F. SHUPE.

Lucas, Iowa, Sept. 16th.

Bro. Blair:—Six of our youths were baptized on the evening of the 14th inst. Bro. John Shippy has delivered a series of sermons with telling effect. They were strengthening to the Saints, and I can assure you they needed it. Bro. Shippy desires to do all in his power to further the work. He has done much good in our branch and labored with zeal and earnestness and with great caution. He leaves here to-day, but I feel safe in saying that his return will be welcomed by many should he return at any time, for he is able to impart much information to all.

Bro. L. W. Powell returns to his field of labor. He was called here to attend the funeral of his brother, David W. Powell.

FIVE LAKES, Michigan, Sept. 11th. Herald Editors:—Our two days' meeting held August 24th and 25th was a success and we had a good time of rejoicing, for the Spirit of the Master was with us. The day following four asked for baptism, and we look for a greater number soon; so the work is onward. May we remain faithful, ever watchful to do the Master's will, seeking to build up his kingdom here.

Your brother,

R. W. Hugill.

ST. THOMAS, Ontario, Sept. 10th.

Bro. Dancer: Our branch is being abundantly blessed of God. Last Sunday in our prayer and testimony meeting, God's presence in power was manifested during the whole service. From the time the door was opened until its close seemed to be a time when the Saints were testing God, by their unity in the faith. One dear young sister aged about seventeen, although only a child in this work, and who has a determination to be a true child of God, together with her twin sister, have been terribly persecuted for the work's sake; having been driven from the parental roof to be cared for by others. She could not understand why God did not pour out his Spirit upon her in the same measure as upon the rest. She had not yet experienced that overflowing peace and joy that others had; but last Sunday the Lord permitted her to have the foretaste of what she shall yet enjoy if faithful. Altogether a time of refreshing was enjoyed from the presence of the Lord.

Yours in the gospel,
Wm. STRANGE.

CHEAPSIDE, Texas, Sept. 4th.

Editors Saints' Herald:—I thought I would write a few lines to the Herald. I am not a member of the Latter Day Saint Church, nor have I ever heard an elder preach, or ever seen one, and have seen but one member of that church, she being an aged widow who gave me some tracts and talked to me about the good work. I am fifteen years of age and have been a member of the Christian church nearly a year. My father, being an unbeliever, would not let me hear an elder, so I have to remain where I am for a while. If I see this in the Herald that the dear old lady lets me read I will write again.

I remain yours in truth,
MISS MARY J. VANDYKE.

SPRINGPORT, Mich., Sept. 8th.

Editors Herald:—If you can read my writing
I would thank you to put this in print for others to read.

I think it is with me as St. Paul said, "We which have believed do enter into rest;" every day seems to me like the Sabbath. I esteem them all alike, I am fully persuaded in my own mind that God has not made any change from the seventh to the first day of the week. For if he had all who can read might know it, and those who think he has are "wise above what is written," if it may be called wise.

I was about forty years old when I learned that the seventh day is the holy Sabbath. And now I am almost eighty-nine, or fifty years older than then, but I have learned that some people who contend earnestly for the seventh day Sabbath, do not contend so earnestly for that one commandment of Jesus upon which he said "hangs all the law and the prophets;" or rather the whole of the law or the decalogue, which requires nothing more of us than to do unto others whatsoever we would that others should do unto us. Such a religion as that, if it were universal, would produce a universal brotherhood.

What benefit is to be derived by so much contention about which is the most proper day of rest? and then to appeal to the public to decide which side has beaten! Is that the way to preach the gospel? Pray for me. My love to all who love, the Lord Jesus.

LAKE CRYSTAL, Minn., Sept. 7th.

Editors Herald:—I see by the Herald of Sept. 7th that the sisters want to know how it is with those that have requested the prayers of the Saints. Well I for one can say that on the last Thursday in August I was bowed down with pain from the treatment of my cancer, so I could not straighten up, and at half past two the pain left me in a moment of time, so that I was almost free from pain and had no more hard pains all the time. I have applied the cancer solution freely, but the cancer is not all dead yet and I will have to apply it again. But my prayer is that I may not have any more of those terrible pains. Please remember me in you prayers that I may yet be cured of it. The most of it is dead now. I strive to live the life of a Saint. I am very weak now. Your brother,

J. S. WHITNEY.

LEXINGTON, Tenn., Sept. 6th.

Dear Herald:—Your weekly visits bring comfort and strong testimony of God's dealings with His people throughout the different parts of the country. It seems that we have the most opposition to contend with that I ever saw. The orthodox world has solidly combined against this latter day work and every church house in this county is closed against us. We have a branch of thirteen members and have a church house now completed. Bro. John Thomas of Iowa is in our midst preaching where he can get a place to do so, and he has made some friends to us.

We have just finished our church house which is a credit to any house in this part of the country. Bro. Thomas preached the dedicatory sermon in it the fourth Sunday in August to large congregation. A great many were present who had never before heard our doctrine; one was baptized.

The good sisters and ladies not of our faith prepared a nice dinner furnished on the ground. All had plenty to eat and the day was spent in a manner satisfactory to all present and friends were made to the cause. The people not of our faith liberally donated to the building of the church, for which we feel thankful for such generous hearts, and pray that God's blessings will attend them and their families for such noble deeds. All the orthodox preachers were invited to attend the meeting, but not one came. So we see clearly the source from whence all evil sayings and misrepresentations and, in fact, the fountain head of opposition that is raised against the true principles of the doctrine of Christ as preached by God's servants.

The Lord is working in our midst with signs following, for which we as Saints should feel grateful. For we have such a testimony as the world can not receive. This I know. My neighbors say to me, "If we could see some of these signs we would believe," notwithstanding I have called in the servants of God to administer to my sick and they were healed, and they know it. Still they are blind.

Bro. John Thomas was taken sick but was healed by the power of God without the aid of medicine or medical skill. These things build up the Saints in the truth of the gospel and confound the unbelievers, and cause them to rage and imagine vain things.

Brethren and sisters, we ought to be the happiest people on earth and be the most truthful, honest, virtuous, humble and prayerful people, and have perfect charity one for another and live peaceable, as much so as possible with all people. For the salvation of the world is in our light that must shine into their dark benighted institutions so as to illuminate everything they have that is false and bring all things to the true light.

May the Lord continue his blessings with us all, and especially with those whom he has placed at the helm of His church, that we may have His Spirit always to guide and keep us in the narrow way.

I have done a little preaching, and expect to do all I can; but opportunity now seems to be barred, only at our own church, but Elder John Thomas is now trying to make some new openings some twelve or fifteen miles from here. He is a faithful servant and has been a great help here and has assisted us much in building our church house. May the Lord bless him and his labors.

Your brother,

J. H. Scott.

FANNING, Kansas, Sept. 9th.

Dear Bro. Blair:—We have just closed an excellent conference at this place. Yesterday afternoon in the prayer meeting two spoke in tongues; one, sister Jane Berry, an aged sister who resides in Atchison, Kansas. She gave the interpretation, and a gentleman was present—Dr. M. F. Wells from Richardson county, Nebraska, who was a captive ten years among the Sioux Indians, testified that she spoke the Sioux language and that the interpretation was correct. Am going home to recruit.

E. C. BRAND.

CANEY, Kansas, Sept. 15th.

Bro Blair:-I arrived here last November and have located. I began meetings in the Pleasant Hill School House four miles east of town in December and held a three weeks' meeting. I had good liberty, good houses and good attention with one exception of about four nights when a Campbellite minister undertook to tell the people what wonderful errors I was teaching; but when invited to explain from a Bible standpoint and show the people a "Thus saith the Lord" for his ideas, he backed down and out and afterwards (although an almost constant attendant) held his peace. The result of his popgun wads was to cause many to investigate, and on March 23d I had the pleasure of leading a young man of his flock into the waters of baptism. Brn. R. H. and B. Davis being present, confirmed the brother and now he is rejoicing with us.

A week ago to-day I had the pleasure of leading another man of some forty five years of age into the waters of baptism. This brother was brought up in the Catholic Church, had taught school in Monmouth, Illinois, was well acquinted with many of the old settlers thereabouts and of course knew all about that man of whom the angel said that his name should had for good and evil throughout the world. But when he heard the other side of the question stated from a scriptural standpoint, like Paul of old he conferred not with flesh and blood, but took it to the Lord in prayer and to-day he says he is the happiest man on earth and knows that Joseph (not Joe aow) was a true servant of God.

When I came here in last November there was but one Latter Day Saint here. Now there are eight of us. There never had been any of our Elders here that I know of and I have the honor of preaching the first Latter Day Saint sermon in this county. I am striving to live the life of the righteous, and have a desire to press onward and upward that I may gain a crown and also lead many to a knowledge of the truth.

Your brother,

W. F. CLARK.

GALIEN, Mich., Sept. 10th.

Editors of Herald:-I have just returned from a trip into Trumbull county, Ohio, where my experience has been augmented in every particular, especially in the ministerial capacity, including the strange, weird threatening of "tar, feathers and powder." Quotations indicated a surplus market of the above commodities as well as a cheap percentage of those who deal in such beautiful wares. Having been expunged from the synagogues of popularity, all because, as the teacher stated, "public sentiment had been outraged," (and it requires the clean-cut gospel of Christ to outrage public sentiment), we betook ourselves to the yard grove of solemn pines on the plantation of Bro. W. J. Shafer where we preached the "glad tidings" a number of times with excellent freedom, and led one person (Sr. Ward) into the baptisimal fountain and others are moving into line.

The brethren and sisters of that place are nobly courageous, and stand like pillars for the truth in the midst of the smoke and cloud of evil reports and the pharisaical harpoons of slander. Evidences of growth and strength are seen in the prayer services which are held weekly "from house to house." The editor of the Chronicle gave us a little dash through his daily, to which, through his courtesy, we replied. A Mr. Paine, pastor of the M. E. Church, took up the issue from which we conducted a slight contest through the columns of the paper, the editor opening them for both sides. I know not what will result. It is a very important field and promises to receive the doctrine of Christ quite generally in time. Pray for us.

Your brother,

LEONARD SCOTT.

REESE, Mich., September 16th.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—Yesterday found me at Quannicassee Grove. This place is a prominent summer resort. I had the pleasure of preaching to a large gathering and baptized two, and others are near.

Since my last letter to you I have made two new openings. Have been preaching in a rail road depot at Munger's and baptized one there. The interest is good. There is a growing interest and many calls from every side. May God's blessings attend His church every where.

Yours in bonds,

E. DELONG.

GREENWOOD, N. Y. Sept. 11th.

Mr. David Dancer. Sir:—I write this to let you know of the sad death of one of your members, Sr. Dimmis Dutcher. She died August 5th, 1889, after a sickness of three weeks. She suffered everything while sick, yet she would never murmur nor complain. She was a good, Christian woman and believed very firmly in the Latter Day Saints. While sick she would say: "O, if you could only see as plainly as I do you would never doubt." She wanted me to write and tell you that she died happy and firm in the belief. She had belonged to the church over forty-six years. She leaves two daughters to mourn their loss. She was born in Dryden, Tompkins Co., N. Y., Sept. 22nd, 1805, and would have been eighty-four years old the 22nd of this month. I remain yours, Mrs. M. O. Rogers.

Henderson, Iowa, Sept. 10th.

Br. Blair:—Our camp meeting closed Sunday night. I suppose the secretary will furnish the particulars. General health of the campers was good, attendance last day large and the order good; no arrests during the whole meeting. I had some talk with H. H. Huffaker, son of the president of the Rigdonites.

Yesterday I baptized one at Wheeler's Grove, and two here in the afternoon. The man, a son of a brother Clark, that at one time presided over the branch at Council Bluffs, but went off with Mr. Post. His wife is the grandaughter of Father Waldo, and the wife of H. H. Huffaker is the daughter of Stephen Post.

There is an excellent opportunity for the work in these parts. I go to Nebraska City to-day to laber there until the reunion.

In haste,

R. M. ELVIN.

LOOKOUT, California, September 6th.

Bro. W. W. Blair: We have organized a branch here of eighteen members, the fruits of Bro. Pack's labor, and are greatly rejoiced. Bro. J. R. Cook came up from Sacramento and baptized them, as Bro. Pack was only a layman and I did not have my license. Bro. Cook preached here about three months and did some good work, but as times are hard on account of the drouth, he could not do much. Since he has left us I have been holding meetings every Sabbath, and we have fair congregations and attentive listeners, and some are greatly interested and I think will obey soon. Others are investigating.

I think there will be a good work done here as soon as the hard times are over and we can get some good worker up here. I shall try to hold the fort until we get help. The wicked one is at work as ever. The M. E. preachers and the Christian preachers are trying to keep the people from coming to our meetings, but all in vain, for the honest must hear and be gathered out of Babylon.

We are greatly blessed in our efforts for which we give God the praise. We ask the prayers of all Saints that we may enjoy the promised blessings. Your brother,

LEWIS TURNBULL.

"THE SON OF MAN."

"But he, being full of the Holy Ghost, looked up steadfastly into heaven and saw the glory of God, and Jesus standing on the right hand of God."—Acts 7: 55. 56.

The Savior called himself the Son of

The Savior called himself the Son of Man; not only that, but the Son of Man which is in heaven. He must have referred to the same being that Stephen saw just prior to his death. That God was his Father the scriptures abundantly declare. I am aware that he was called the son of David, also that he was of the seed of Abraham; but when the question was asked as to whose son he was, or "what think ye of Christ?" the answer was that he was David's son.

He gave them a problem to solve by asking them how he could be David's son, and David in spirit call him Lord. They could not answer. The question remains a problem to-day in the minds of thousands. Now the reason I asked for a solution of John 3:13, was because I have seen so many attempts at explanation, and at the same time so many failures to give a correct interpretation, (that is, if my understanding of it is correct), that I ask the favor through the Herald, not of the elders especially; but perhaps some one outside, as is often the case, would explain in the orthodox manner and say that Christ was and is both the Father and the Son, and was in heaven and on earth at the same time; and his saying that "no man hath ascended up to heaven but he that came down from heaven, even the son of man which is in heaven," proves beyond a doubt that his spirit was in heaven while his body was on earth, making him both Father and Son; and this is sound orthodoxy, but not sound doctrine.

The Savior asked a great many questions at one time or another during his ministry on earth, and was always, or almost always, surrounded by a mixed multitude, and in those multitudes were some that considered themselves very wise in their own estimation; some of whom were scribes, pharisees, doctors and lawyers, too big in themselves to stoop low enough to accept either Jesus or his doctrine. And so it was, he spoke to them in such a manner that seeing they might not see, and hearing they might not hear, because he knew their hearts were set to reject him.

Now to the point I wish to make: When Jesus said he was the son of man in heaven, he referred to God and to no other; that he was his Father; that his Father was in heaven; that the man in heaven that he was the son of, was God. Materialism or not, why do I talk so? Because, first, God created man in His own image and in His own likeness, and second, Paul says that Jesus was the express image of the Father, and he was so much like other men that they called him a man, and knew no better.

"But," say some, "God is a spirit." So was Christ after his resurrection, and to a very great extent before that, even while in the ministry. See how he could prevent being cast over the precipice at Nazareth; how often he saved himself when his enemies were determined to destroy him. Then I say that he was a spirit. Though tabernacled in flesh the body was subject to the spirit, and no power on earth or in hell could destroy him—take his life—till the time came that he should give it up of his own accord.

Will any one say he was not a spirit after his resurrection? He was not a phantom as his disciples took him to be, for he had flesh and bones; but he was spirit and was seen and was known by his followers. And he was the express image of God: "And God said, Let us make man in our image and in our likeness." And if God was not man, but in an infinitely greater degree of purity than my poor tongue can find language to express, then of what use is the word image, and what is an image of any thing?

Did Stephen see God and Christ? I believe he did; and I also believe that Stephen saw Christ at the right hand of God in no other form than that in which he ascended while his disciples were gazing up into heaven after him. Some one says that man was first spiritual, then natural. Very good. How about Eve? Was she spiritual too? Moses says, "male and female created he them, in the image of God created he him." The first man Adam was made a living soul, the second Adam was made a quickening spirit. Now who will say he was not spirit?

Paul also tells us he was made in the likeness of sinful flesh; that he took on him, not the nature of angels, but the seed of Abraham. That as the children were partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself took part of the same—only a part; that part from his mother; and that part was always subject to the spirit which came from God.

The second Adam was made a quickening spirit, when? After baptism. He had power over all diseases; over death and over the very elements. He was as much so before his death as the spirit was after his ascension. He was as much the image of God before his death as afterwards, the same being after rising that he was before crucifixion, leaving out the blood. And when the righteous dead come forth they will be like him, and he is like God. If we have borne the image of the earthy, first Adam, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly; we shall be like him—Christ.

I have not the least doubt in the world but what Jesus was always able to behold the Father, being full of the Holy Ghost. Stephen was full of the Spirit of God when he saw the heavens open and Jesus standing at the right hand of God; and only such are able to penetrate the heavenly abode.

If Stephen saw Jesus at the right hand of God, it is evident that he saw God, or he could not say whether he was on the right or the left hand. He was full of the Holy Ghost. They of the council looking steadfastly on him, saw his face as the face of an angel.—Acts 6:15. He not only saw Jesus at the right hand of God, but he saw the glory of God. No man that is carnally minded can see God, but to be as Stephen was, full of the Holy Ghost, it was and is possible to see God.

Stephen did not attempt to describe the glory of God. When Paul was caught up to the third heaven and saw and heard things not lawful to utter, he never attempted to describe what he saw or heard; hence he could say to them to whom he wrote, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard," etc. Had he described everything he saw and heard, he could not have truly said, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard."

Now if Stephen was correct, and I never shall doubt it, he saw two personages, the Father and Son, having form; just as they were at the creation; the same glory, as Jesus asked the Father in his prayer, (John 17th chap.), "Give me the glory I had with Thee before the world was. The Father and Son are the same after Jesus ascended; they were before the creation.

And now I can see why man was first made spiritual, in the image of God: because he was not a sinner. If not carnal, he was spiritual; after transgression he became carnal, a sinner. God pronounced all his works good; sin is not good. Adam was a son of God; so was Christ, and both were in the image of God. Adam sinned; was driven from the garden, but did not change his general appearance. Jesus did no sin, never forfeited his glory, but maintained throughout his earthly career his perfect sonship with the Father.

To be a son of God is to be led by the Spirit of God. Rom. 8: 16: "The spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God; if children then heirs, heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ, if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together." This is in accord with John's first epistle, third chapter and first and second verses: "Beloved, it doth not yet appear what we shall be, but we know that when he shall appear, we shall be like him." "Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face; now we know in part, then shall we know even as also we are known."-Paul.

When men and women are born of water and of the Spirit it does not change their general appearance; they are the same in outward form or bodily as they were before the new birth. And should they fall away that would not alter their natural bodies into some other shape. But they are sons and daughters of God as long as they retain the anointing received at the new birth, and no longer, for if the Spirit of God dwell not in us we are none of His. We change our relationship from one to the other according as we yield ourselves servants to obey, whether of sin unto death, or of righteousness unto life.

Satan endeavors to impress the mind with an entirely different view of the plan of redemption. He wants us to believe that the redemption of the body is false, and I opine that he is succeeding amazingly with some. Some will say, "We don't want these old bodies. Why do we want them, full of disease of all kinds?" Those who say this will get all they ask if no more; but for me I hope to realize the change of this vile body and be fashioned like unto the glorious body of Christ by the quickening power of the Spirit of God. I will be like him then.
