BAPTISM FOR THE DEAD.

A RECENT correspondent inquires: "What are the evidences in favor of the doctrine of baptism for the dead? It is stated in the revelations that the Book of Mormon contains the fulness of the gospel, but that book says nothing concerning baptism for the dead. Can you explain?

Replying briefly to both questions: Baptism for the dead does not involve the teaching of any other gospel than that taught in the Bible or Book of Mormon; but it simply means the extending of the same gospel, in all its parts to the dead. It offers to the dead the same gospel privileges offered to men in this life. And when this is done, the dead have the same gospel-"the fulness of the gospel"-offered to them as is offered to the living. This is contemplated and provided for in I Zech. 9: 9-11; Isa. 24: 21-23; Ezek. 32: 18-31; Ps. 9: 17; 16: 20; 139: 6-8; Rev. 1: 18; 20: 13; D. and C. 76: 6; 85: 28, etc., etc.

While it is true that the Book of Mormon contains the "fulness of the gospel," it teaches its application to the living only, but does not restrict it to them. This omission is not at all strange if we keep in mind the fact, that more than ninety-nine parts of the recorded teachings of the Nephite prophets and seers, and of Jesus also, are not found in the Book of Mormon, as is so often stated. Mormon speaking of this says: "I can not write the hundredth part of the things of my people."-Book of Mormon 1:2. The same is said of the teachings of Jesus, in Book of Nephi 12: 1; and of the writings of the Jaredites, in Ether 6: 9. The Book of Mormon was not designed to teach the details of church government, organization, nor all the methods of teaching "the fulness of the gospel" to the living or the dead. Its chief office is set forth in the fly-leaf, and in I Nephi 4: 3; 2 Nephi 11:4; Book of Mormon 1:9; 2:6.

Its omission to teach baptism for the dead is similar to its omissions in other directions. Bishops, deacons, seventies, evangelists, etc., etc., are provided for in the Bible as officers essential in administering the gospel, but the Book of Mormon omits specific mention of them. It, however, endorses the Bible, hence it endorses all that is taught therein, including preaching to, and baptism for the dead. it is true that the Book of Mormon contains "the fulness of the gospel," yet there are many things taught touching the government of the church, its organization, its methods of work, and its progressive principles, so as to make the gospel effective and applicable in its broadest and most complete sense, that are not mentioned in That book contemplated and foretold the work and words of Joseph Smith, the Seer, and defines his duties and authority. See 2 Nephi 2: 2, 3; 11: 19; Book of Nephi 9: 12, and D. and C., sections 19, 43, and 110: 18-21.

Concerning baptism for the dead we present the following from the "Comprehensive Commentary," page 1312 which in explanation of 1 Cor. 15: 29, says:—

"Some understand it, of a custom observed, as some of the ancients tell us, among many who professed the Christian name in the first ages of baptizing some in the name and stead of catechumeus dying without baptism."

The following is what was written on the subject by Joseph the Seer:

The great designs of God in relation to the salvation of the human family very little understood by the professedly wise and intelligent generation in which we live. Various and conflicting are the opinions of men concerning the plan of salvation, the requisitions of the Almighty, the necessary preparations for heaven, the state and condition of departed spirits, and the happiness or misery that is consequent upon the practice of righteousness and iniquity, according to their several notions of virtue and vice. The Mussulman condemns the Heathen, the Jew, the Christian and the whole world of mankind that reject his Koran as infidels, and consigns the whole of them to perdition. The Jew believes the whole world that rejects his faith, and are not circumcised, are Gentile dogs and will be damned. The Heathen are equally as tenacious about their principles, and the Christian consigns all to perdition who can not bow to his creed and submit to his ipse dixit. But while one portion of the human race are judging and condemning the other without mercy, the great Parent of the universe looks upon the whole of the human family with a fatherly care, and paternal regard. He views them as his offspring; and, without any of those contracted feelings that influence the children of men, causes "His sun to rise on the evil and the good; and sends his rain on the just and unjust." He holds the reins of judgment in his hands; he is a wise lawgiver and will judge all men (not according to the narrow contracted notions of men, but) "according to the deeds done in the body, whether they be good or evil;" or whether these deeds were done in England, America, Spain, Turkey or India. He will judge them, "not according to what they have not, but according to what they have;" those who have lived without law will be judged without law, and those who have a law will be judged by that law. We need not doubt the wisdom and intelligence of the great Jehovah; he will award judgment or mercy to all nations according to their several deserts, their means of obtaining intelligence, the laws by which they are governed, the facilities afforded them of obtaining correct information, and his inscrutable designs in relation to the human family. And when the designs of God shall be made manifest, and the curtain of futurity be withdrawn, we shall all of us eventually have to confess that the Judge of all the earth has done right.

The situation of the Christian nations after death is a subject that has called forth all the wisdom and talent of the philosopher and the divine; and it is an opinion, which is generally received, that the destiny of man is irretrievably fixed at his death, and that he is made either eternally happy or eternally miserable, that if a man dies without a knowledge of God he must be eternally damned without any mitigation of his punishment, alleviation of his pain, or the most latent hope of a deliverance while endless ages shall roll along. However orthodox this principle may be, we shall find that it is at variance with the testimony of holy writ; for our Savior says that all manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven men wherewith they shall blaspheme; but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven, neither in this world nor in the world to come; evidently showing that there are sins which may be forgiven in the world to come; although the sin of blasphemy can not be forgiven.

Peter also, in speaking concerning our Savior, says that "he went and preached unto spirits in prison, which sometimes were disobedient, when once the long suffering of God waited in the days of Noah."-1 Peter 3: 19, 20. Here then we have an account of our Savior preaching to the spirits in prison; to spirits that had been imprisoned from the days of Noah. And what did he preach to them? That they were to stay there? Certainly not. Let his own declaration testify: "He hath sent me to heal the broken hearted, to preach deliverance to the captives, and recovering of sight to the blind, to set at liberty them that are bruised."-Luke 4: 18. Isaiah has it:-"To bring out the prisoners from the prison, and them that sit in darkness from the prison house."-Isa. 42: 7. It is very evident from this that he not only went to preach to them, but to deliver, or bring them out of the prison house. Isaiah in testifying concerning the calamities that will overtake the inhabitants of the earth, says: "The earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard, and shall be removed like a cottage; and the transgressions thereof shall be heavy upon it; and it shall fall and not rise again. And it shall come to pass in that day that the Lord shall punish the hosts of the high ones that are on high, and the kings of the earth upon the earth. And they shall be gathered together as prisoners are gathered in the pit, and shall be shut up in prison, and after many days shall they the visited." Thus we find that God will deal with all the human family equally; and that as the antediluvians had their day of visitation, so will those characters referred to by Isaiah have their time of visitation and deliverance, after having been many days in prison.

The great Jehovah contemplated the whole of the events connected with the earth, pertaining to the plan of salvation, before it rolled into existence, or ever the "morning stars sung together or the sons of God shouted for joy." The past, the present and the future were, and are, with him one eternal now. He knew of the fall of Adam, the iniquities of the antediluvians, the depth of iniquity that would be connected with the human family; their weakness and strength, their power and glory, their apostasies, their crimes, their righteousness and iniquity; he comprehended the fall of man, and their redemption; he knew the plan of salvation, and pointed it out; he was acquainted with the situation of all nations, and with their destiny; he ordered all things according to the council of his own will: he knows the situation of both the living and the dead, and has made ample provision for their redemption, according to their several circumstaces, and the laws of the kingdom of God, whether in this world or in the world to come. The idea that some men form of the justice, judgment, and mercy of God, is too foolish for an intelligent man to think of. For instance, it is common for many of our orthodox preachers to suppose that, if a man is not what they call converted, if he dies in that state, he must remain eternally in hell without any hope:

"Infinite years in torment must he spend, And never, never, never, have an end."

And yet this eternal misery is made frequently to rest upon the merest casualty—the breaking of a shoestring; the tearing of a coat of those officiating; or the peculiar location in which a person lives, may be the means indirectly of his damnation, or the cause of his not being saved. I will suppose a case which is not extraordinary: Two men who have been equally wicked, who have neglected religion, are both of them taken sick at the iame time; one of them has the good fortune to be visited by a praying man and he gets converted a few minutes before he dies; the other sends for three different praying men, a tailor, a shoemaker, and a tinman. The tinman has a handle to solder on a can; the tailor has a button-hole to work on some coat that is needed in a hurry; and the shoemaker has a patch to put on somebody's boot; they none of them can go in time, the man dies and goes to hell! One of these is exalted to Abraham's bosom; he sits down in the presence of God and enjoys eternal, uninterrupted happiness; while the other who was equally as good as him, sinks to eternal damnation, irretrievable misery and hopeless despair, because a man had a boot to mend, the button hole of a coat to work, or a handle to solder on a saucepan. The plans of Jehovah are not so unjust, the statements of holy writ so visionary, nor the plan of salvation for the human family so incompatible with common sense. At such proceedings God would frown with indignance, angels would hide their heads in shame, and every virtuous, intelligent man would recoil. If human laws award to each man his deserts, and punish all delinquents according to their several crimes, surely the Lord will not be more cruel than man, for he is a wise legislator and his laws are more equitable, his enactments more just, and his decisions more perfect than those of man. And as man judges his fellow man by law, and punishes him according to the penalty of that law, so does the God of heaven judge "according to the deeds done in the body." To say that the heathen would be damned because they did not believe the gospel would be preposterous. And to say that the Jews would all be damned that do not believe in Iesus, whould be equally absurd; for, "how can they believe on him of whom they have not heard; and how can they hear without a preacher; and how can he preach except he be sent." Consequently neither Jew nor heathen can be culpable for rejecting the conflicting opinions of sectarianism, nor for rejecting any testimony but that which is sent of God. For as the preacher can not preach except he be sent, so the hearer can not believe without he hear a "sent" preacher, and can not be condemned for what he has not heard, and, being without law, will have to be judged without law.

When speaking about the blessings pertaining to the gospel, and the consequences connected with disobedience to its requirements, we are frequently asked the question. What has become of our fathers? will they all be damned for not obeying the gospel, when they never heard it? Certainly not. But they will possess the same privilege that we here enjoy, through the medium of the everlasting priesthood which not only administers on earth, but in heaven, and the wise dispensations of the great Jehovah. Hence those characters referred to by Isaiah will be visited by this priesthood, and come out of their prison, upon the same principle as those who were disobedient in the days of Noah, were visited by our Savior, (who possessed the everlasting, Melchizedec priesthood), and had the gospel preached to them by him in prison. And in order that they might fulfill all the requisitions of God, their living friends were baptized for their dead friends, and thus fulfilled the requirements of God which says, "Except a man be born again . . . of water, and of the Spirit, he can in no wise enter into the kingdom of heaven." They were baptized, of course, not for themselves, but for their dead. Crysostom says that the Marcionites practiced baptism for the dead: "After a catechuman was dead, they hid a living man under the bed of the deceased; then coming to the dead man they asked him whether he would receive baptism; and he making no answer, the other answered for him, and said that he would be baptized in his stead; and so they baptize the living for the dead."

tures, hence Paul in speaking of the doctrine, says: "Else what shall they do who are baptized for the dead? If the dead rise not at all, why are they then baptized for the dead?"—I Cor. 15: 29.

Hence it was that so great a responsibility rested upon the generation in which our Savior lived, for he says, "That upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel unto the blood of Zacharias, son of Barachias whom ye slew between the temple and the altar. Verily I say unto you, all these things shall come upon this generation."-Matt. 23: 35, 36. Hence, as they possessed greater privileges than any other generation, not only pertaining to themselves, but to their dead, their sin was greater, as they not only neglected their own salvation but that of their progenitors, and hence their blood was required at their hands. And now as the great purposes of God are hastening to their accomplishment and the things spoken of in the prophets are fulfilling, as the kingdom of God is established on the earth and the ancient order of things restored, the Lord has manifested to us this duty and privilege, and we are commanded to be baptized for our dead, thus fulfilling the words of Obadiah when speaking of the glory of the latter day: "And saviors shall come up upon Mount Zion to judge the remnant of Esau; and the kingdom shall be the Lord's." A view of these things reconciles the scriptures of truth, justifies the ways of God to man, places the human family upon an equal footing, and harmonizes with every principle of righteousnes, justice and truth. We will conclude with the words of Peter: "For the time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles. . . . For, for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the spirit."-J. SMITH, ED.

—Times and Seasons, vol 3, pp. 759, 760 761. On Sunday, October 3d, 1841, in a conference at Nauvoo, he taught thus:

President Joseph Smith, by request of some of the Twelve, gave instructions on the doctrine of Baptism for the Dead; which was listened to with intense interest by the large assembly. The speaker presented "Baptism for the Dead" as the only way that men can appear as saviors on mount Zion. The proclamation of the first principles of the gospel was a means of salvation to men individually, and it was the truth, not men, that saved them; but men, by actively engaging in rites of salvation substitutionally, became instrumental in bringing multitudes of their kin into the kingdom of God. He explained a difference between an angel and a ministering spirit; the one a resurrected or translated body, with its spirit ministering to embodied spirits-the other a disembodied spirit, visiting and ministering to disembodied spirits. Jesus Christ became a ministering spirit, while his body laying in the sepulchre, to the spirits in prison, to fulfill an important part of his mission, without which he could not have perfected his work or entered into his rest. After his resurrection he appeared as an angel to his disciples, &c. Translated bodies can not enter into rest until they have undergone a change equivalent to death. Translated bodies are designed for future missions. The angel that appeared to John on the Isle of Patmos was a translated or resurrected body. Jesus Christ went in body after his resurrection to minister to translated and resurrected bodies. been a chain of authority and power from Adam down to the present time. The only way to obtain truth and wisdom is not to ask it from books, but to go to God in prayer and obtain divine teaching. It is no more incredible that God should save the dead than that he should raise the dead. There is never a time when the spirit is too old to approach God. All are within the reach of pardoning mercy, who have not committed the unpardonable sin which hath no forgiveneness, neither in this world, nor in the world to come. There is a way to release the spirit of the dead; that is, by the power and authority of the priesthood-by binding and loosing on earth.

This doctrine appears glorious, inasmuch as it exhibits the greatness of divine compassion and benevolence in the extent of the plan of human salvation. This glorious truth is well calculated to enlarge the understanding, and to sustain the soul under troubles, difficulties and distresses.

For illustration the speaker presented, by supposition, the case of two men, brothers, equally intelligent, learned, virtuous and lovely, walking in uprightness and in all good conscience, so far as they had been able to discern duty from the muddy stream of tradition, or from the blotted page of the book of nature. One dies and is buried, having never heard the gospel of reconciliation; to the other the message of salvation is sent, he hears and embraces it and is made the heir of eternal life. Shall the one become a partaker of glory and the other be consigned to hopeless perdition? Is there no chance for his escape? Sectarianism answers, "None! none!! none!!!" Such an idea is worse than atheism. The truth shall break down and dash in pieces all such bigoted Pharisaism; the sects shall be sifted, the honest in heart brought out, and their priests left in the midst of their corruption. The speaker then answered the objections urged against the Latter Day Saints for not admitting the validity of sectarian baptism, and for withholding fellowship from sectarian churches. It was like putting new wine into old bottles and putting old wine into new bottles. What! new revelations in the old churches! New revelations knock out their bottom of the bottomless pit. New wine into old bottles!-the bottles burst and the wine runs out. What! Sadducees in the new church! Old wine in new leathern bottles will leak through the pores and escape; so the Saducee saints mock at authority, kick out of the traces and run to the mountains of perdition, leaving the long echo of their braying behind

The speaker then contrasted the charity of the sects in denouncing all who disagree with them in opinion and in joining in persecuting the saints, with the faith of the saints who believe that even such may be saved in this world and in the world to come, (murderers and apostates excepted.)

This doctrine, he said, presented in a clear light the wisdom and mercy of God in preparing an ordinance for the salvation of the dead, being baptized by proxy, their names recorded in heaven, and they judged according to the deeds done in the body. This doctrine was the burden of the Scriptures. Those saints who neglect it in behalf of their decaased relatives do it at the peril of their own salvation.

The dispensation of the fulness of times will bring to light the things that have been revealed in all former dispensations, also other things that have not been before revealed. He shall send Elijah the prophet, &c., &c, and restore all things in Christ.

The speaker then announced, "There shall be no more baptisms for the dead until the ordinance can be attended to in the font of the Lord's House; and the church shall not hold another general conference until they can meet in said house. For thus saith the Lord!"—Times and Seasons, vol. 2, pp. 577, 578.

The church does not now teach nor administer baptism for the dead, for it has no command to do so.

The letter below from Pres. Joseph Smith relative to his trip to California, the dedication of the Saints' new church in the city of San Bernardino, the prospects for church work in that region, with other items of interest, will be read with gladness by the Saints everywhere.

We well remember our visit to that city and vicinity when it was but a small place and had not the least prospect of ever becoming the large, growing and important point it is to-day; and we have not forgotten the humble few who joyfully rallied to the standard lifted up there by the faithful elders of the Reorganization, prominent among whom was the late Brn. Glaud Rodger, Hiram Faulk and William Anderson, also H. H. Morgan, J. W. Gillen, A. H. Smith and, later, many others, all of whom did good and lasting work for the Master in that section of country. And while that region has been blest with the gospel of Christ and the confirming power of the Holy Spirit in abundant degree and in great power, it has been sorely cursed with the darkness, delusion and reproach of the Brighamite Apostacy, and that "mystery of iniquity,"-Spiritism. We congratulate the Saints and friends of southern California, especially those of San Bernardino and vicinity, for having exhibited their devotion to God and his truth in the erection of their beautiful and commodious new church, and we fondly hope this work of love will inspire added zeal and interest and well directed effort in extending gospel light and gospel privileges to those who are sitting in darkness and in the region and shadow of death.

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., Dec. 17th. Bro. W. W. Blair:-Yours of the 10th received. Weather here is fine; the second rain of the season has fallen and there was an interval of sunshine, very acceptable to us, yesterday. The day was all we could ask for. We had a full house. The funeral of Mr. E. H. Morse, the cashier of the bank, shot and killed on Thursday, occurring at the same hour as our services, kept a large number away from us, but we could not have accommodated them had they come. We had about two hundred and fifty in audience. The services were in charge of Bro. Heman C. Smith, presiding. The programme was as follows: Opening hymn, No. 770, "Behold Thy temple, God of Grace!" Prayer was offered by

Bro. Joseph F. Burton. The preacher read

Psalms 24th and 25th chapters, when the choir sang an anthem, "At Thy feet, O Lord, we bow!" and the hymn 768, 'O Thou, whose own vast temple stands." The choir, with Sr. Patterson at the organ, did splendidly. I then pronounced the sermon, using no text, but briefly commenting upon the origin and growth, necessity and fact of church building to give expression to the worshiping instinct in man; and in connection reviewing some part of the history of the Reorganization. At the close of the sermon Bro. D. S. Mills offered up the prayer of dedication, feelingly pouring out his soul before the Lord in behalf of the Lord's people, in thankfulness, praise, supplication and devotion. It was a moving, pathetic struggle of the soul, doing good like a healing stream. "While afflicted, tossed and driven" was then sung with much feeling, and the audience was dismissed by benediction by Bro. H. C. Smith, and the services were complete. The congregation was respectful and attentive, and all passed off pleasantly.

The Saints of San Bernardino have built a commodious and beautiful, though plain house of worship, at the intersection of 5th and G streets, north-east corner, with a seating capacity of some two hundred and fifty, with hall and small retiring room and alcove for preacher's stand and choir in the front end of building. It is well lighted by large gothic windows, containing diamond shaped panes of colored and figured glass; the windows in front and back being very large and finely glazed. The ceiling is high and partly arched, the light at night being furnished by circles of gas jets, ample enough to give plenty of light all over the house. The one over the preacher's stand is just enough in front to throw the light upon him from the front. avoiding any grotesque shadows upon the wall behind, which in some rooms gives so much of hilarity to the fun loving in a congregation. The church building is 32x50 feet in width and length and fronts to the south on 5th street, the entrance being at the south-west corner. Inside, the room is wainscoted and neatly plastered, the walls and ceiling being very white. The plattorm is raised, and the reading desk stands still a little higher, and is very neat, a present from a good brother, resting upon a very pretty stand, a really artistic structure. The whole building is an ornament to the street on which it stands, notwithstanding its modest appearance.

The building committee is entitled to much credit for exercising that business prudence, which first counts the cost, the means on hand, and then secures the best results possible. The contract price of the building is $2,487.72. This, together with the cost of furnishing, was all paid before attempting to dedicate, so that the work of the preacher was made pleasant and easy. The furnishing committee's work was well done and the harmony of proprieties kept in the furnishing. It would be a source of congratulation if every branch that essays to build would secure the services of such a committee, would be satisfied to use the means within reach and be content with such a building as that means would secure.

The building committee were Brn. A. B. Wise, G. W. Sparks, D. L. Aldridge, Heman C. Smith and H. W. Remington. The furnishing committee were Brn. A. B. Wise and D. L. Aldridge. The contractors and builders were H. W. Remington and N. Paulsen. The soliciting committeê were Brn. W. Gibson, D. L. Aldridge, Srs. E. Davidson, M. Patterson and Angeline Ames and others.

It is not needful to attempt to state who, among so many striving for one common end, is entitled to most credit, all are entitled to commendation. It has been a pleasant work, and has resulted in giving to the branch a pleasant and commodious house of worship, of which no one need feel ashamed. It was a most pleasant thought that no collection was needed at dedication to meet an onerous debt, or to finish a work partially done. No collection was taken, neither at the morning dedicatory service nor the evening preaching services following after.

Taken all in all it was one of the best and most satisfactory services it has been the fortune of the preacher to engage in.

I had an excellent audience both morning and evening, and in the evening I had good liberty, and found a much better interest manifested, apparently, than I had either hoped or expected. There was, to my thinking, an earnest under current of inquiry that tokens good for our work. I am encouraged. The trip coming here was pleasant, and though I was sore in flesh from the jar of the car and its motion, I feel quite well. Brn. Burton, Mills and H. C. Smith are here and well as could be expected. There is some sickness, but, thanks to the Lord, much of it yields to administration. One man is now ready for the water; a Bro. Paulsen, one who helped build the church here. His child has been healed under the administration of the elders within the last few days. We will hold meetings this week it is likely.

Yours,

Joseph Smith.

BRO. HEMAN C. SMITH, of San Bernardino, California, has received the following characteristic letter, and the notice accompanying it; which we give as an item of news; that if any of the Saints may wish to purchase the work referred to, they may correspond with Mr. Clem-

ORANGE, Cal., Nov. 12th.

Heman C. Smith, Esq., San Bernardino, California: Dear Sir:-The copy of original three thousand edition of Book of Mormon "printed at Palmyra 1830" by E. B. Grandin for the author Joseph Smith which I own is fully authenticated and an excellently well preserved copy. They are very rare, but I am so circumstanced as to be willing that some one better able to own the book than myself should have it. I will sell it for one hundred and fifty dollars. As showing the value of them I send you a clipping from the Palmyra (N. Y.,) Democrat of February 8th, 1888. If you can effect the sale for me I will allow you ten per cent. commission for your Very respectfull,y trouble.

FRED W. CLEMONS

"MAJOR GILBERT DISPOSES OF HIS BIBLE.

"Palmyra was the birth place of Mormonism and it was in this place the first copy of the Bible was printed. The book was seven months in printing, that is from August, 1829, to March, 1830. Major J. H. Gilbert now a hale and hearty old man of eighty-six years, still a resident of this place, was the principal compositor on the work, and the first copy of the Mormon Bible that came from the press he retained. It has never been bound but is in loose leaves. Mr. Gilbert valued this copy very highly, and he received several offers of one hundred dollars for the copy which he refused. A short time ago Pliny T. Sexton, our highly esteemed banker, purchased the copy for five hundred dollars, which he has added to his large library. In the Mormon Bibles now published Joe Smith is styled the 'Translator.' But the first edition bore on the title page 'By Joseph Smith, Jr., author and proprietor."

COMPENDIUM AND SUNDAY SCHOOL BOOK.

WE have received a large invoice of the Compendium in two styles of binding, and also the Intermediate Question Book. We regret the delay in getting them into the hands of those desiring them, but the Herald Office has spared no effort in hastening the work. They could not hurry the work of the binders, but had to wait and hope.

The Business Manager has decided to sell the Compendium, leather bound, at one dollar each. Therefore those who have hitherto sent for them at $1.25 can have the twenty-five cents due them credited on their subscriptions for publications or orders, or it will be refunded upon due notice. From an examination of the Compendium we consider it very valurble and hope it may be placed in the hands of the church generally, and also with those investigating the faith.

The Sunday School question book for intermediate classes is also now on sale at 25 cents each or $2.50 per dozen. It would be well for all the Sunday Schools and those having children to teach, to obtain copies of it.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

To those wishing to know when the Tune Book will be out, we answer that the plates are nearly ready, and the work will be hastened on to completion as rapidly as at all practicable.

We are pleased to learn that Bro. Robert Oehring is doing good work for the Master at and near his home, Newark, Dakota. He has baptized seven during the past ninety days, and others were awaiting baptism. It is probable he will labor in that region during the winter and early spring, and we look for good results.

The editor of Autumn Leaves requests us to announce that the issue of the January number has been unavoidably delayed. It will be mailed about the third of January.

Replying to an inquiry in Editorial Items for December 22d last, by Mrs. Martha Young, for "her husband," Wiley Young, the latter in a letter dated at Union, Nebraska, December 25th, says he has no wife and never had. His home is at Columbia, Iowa, and he says the Saints at Emerson, Iowa, have known him for several years.

The attention of secretaries of districts is called to the minutes of the South-Eastern Illinois district conference, published in this issue. That brief and terse report is a worthy model to pattern from. Similar brief reports for publication would save us much space and time which must be economized as the work grows.

Sr. N. V. Pearson writes from Linley Post-Office, (as we suppose) Gonzales county, Texas, expressing her appreciation of the HERALD and AUTUMN LEAVES. She states that a singing school teacher is wanted there, and that Bro. Currie can get the position by going there at once.

Sr. Priscilla Park, of Brown Post-Office, Montrose county, Colorado, writes renewing her subscription for AUTUMN LEAVES. Neither she nor any of her family have seen an elder for seven years and they are hundreds of miles from any of the branches. They appreciate the publications of the church and would like to live in the land of Zion or the regions round about.

Bro. Edmund Ford, of Curlew. Palo Alto county, Iowa, desires the Saints living in or near Algona to correspond with him.

Bro. Thomas Daley wrote from Genoa, Nevada, December 17th, saying: "Since October 21st I have baptized twenty-one here."

Bro. G. W. Harlow, of Brighton, near Sacramento, California, and now possibly of the latter place, at a late election held in Sacramento county, was chosen Public Administrator, of which election he wrote in a late card to Bro. Heman C. Smith, "I was elected by five hundred and seven votes over a very popular official of twelve years standing, notwithstanding they cried 'Mormon preacher' all over the county." It is an office of trust and fidelity, and we congratulate Bro. Harlow on his being chosen.

A lady wrote us December 17th from Thurman, Fremont county, Iowa, asking if she needs to be baptized again, inasmuch as she had received baptism when young and had not been faithful to the gospel covenant. But she failed to sign her name. Our reply is that she should do as her conscience dictates and thus silence all doubts, for "whatsoever is not of faith is sin."-Rom. 14:23.

Bro. Joshua Armstrong wrote from Nebraska City, Nebraska, the 18th ult., that he recently preached eight discourses in the Congregational Church at Naponee, and that Bro. William A. Moore and family, who reside there, he found to be noble, faithful Saints who showed him many kindnesses. He says he was never blessed to a greater degree with the Holy Spirit than of late, and he desires to do more in the ministry than hitherto, for the calls are numerous on every side.

In a letter to Bro. Asa S. Cochran, dated December 22d at Temple, Texas, Elder A. J. Moore states that he held a debate with W. P. Brown, the Whitmerite, and that the popular verdict was that Brown did not make one point. He says Brown's stock of abuse and falsehood was almost inexhaustible, but it resulted well for the Reorganized Church, but bad for Brown; for the Saints became more firmly established in the truth, and many friends were made among non members. Bro. Moore feels pleased with the fruits of the debate and our readers may soon have some details from his pen in respect to Brown's methods of ministration.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Robert E. Grant wrote the 18th ult., from Kilkenny, Michigan:

"The work is moving onward in these parts. I expect to see a great work done in the surrounding country this winter."

Bro. R. C. Evans, in a letter to Pres. Joseph Smith, dated at St. Thomas, Ontario, the 17th ult., says:

"I have baptized seven more here this week, making thirteen ir three weeks, and hope to baptize eight or ten more before Christmas."

Good! Bro. Evans. We are delighted that you are meeting with success, and that God is sealing your ministrations in giving you many souls in the gospel "net."

Bro. Willard J. Smith, in a letter dated at Holstein, Ontario, December 18th, says: "I have just returned from Masonville and Garafraxa, where I have been laboring since the first of this month. I baptized seven on the 15th and one on the 16th. There is a great demand for labor here, calls coming from every side. God is blessing the ministry in their labors here as elsewhere."

Bro. John Smith, of Seneca, Illinois, under date of December 26th, says:

"On December 16th Bro. Thomas Hougas organized a branch of seven members here, Bro. Walters president. We had a good time."

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"Doubts to the world's child-heart unknown, Question us now from star and stone; Too little or too much we know, And sight is swift and faith is slow. We walk at high noon and the bells Call to a thousand oracles."

WHAT ARE YOU WRITING.

Each day you are writing a page
That adds to your volume of life;
Each hour you are tracing new lines
That tell your success in its strife
The pages are growing in number,
The volume increases with years;
But are you content with its records,
And pleased with the way it appears?

Then are you aware that your writing
Will stand while the ages roll by;
And that every line you have written
Is read by Jehovah, on high?
Go look at the pages you've finished
And see if there's naught you'd erase:
Scan closely each line and its bearing,
Aud see if it's worthy the space.

Do all of your pages have something
That thrills you with honest delight?
Or, are you ashamed of your writing,
And long to erase it from sight?
How much of your space is devoted
To telling the good you have done;
And how much to showing your errors,
And checking the evils begun?

Are anyone's blessings recorded,
For kindness that you have bestowed?
And have you the thanks of the weary,
For helping to carry his load?
Is anyone's pathway the smoother,
For troubles that you have removed?
Have you a kind word for'the erring,
Who hardens by being reproved?

Are faults that your first lines recorded Repeatedly written again;
Or, have you new topics engaging Time's faithful infallible pen?
Compare the last page you have written, With those that you wrote long ago;
And see if its just as displeasing,
And just as much error will show.

Your volume is read by companions
Whose lives you are helping to mould,
And those whom you think are not heeding
By your life are largely controlled;
Your writing will soon be completed;
Time's pen you will shortly lay down;
So write all your pages henceforward,
That you may inherit a crown.

Ah! what are you writing, my brother;
My sister, what lines do you trace?
God gave you a page that was spotless,
But do you its beauty deface?'
So order your words and your actions,
And culture the spirit of love,
That you may write pages untarnished,
Thus laying up treasure above.—Sel.

SPECIAL REQUEST FOR PRAYER.

Bro A. J. Kennison of Smith county, Kansas, desires the prayers of the League in behalf of his aged and sorely afflicted companion.

Bro. H. O. Smith requests the prayers of the League in behalf of an afflicted son now living in Logan, Iowa.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Sr Ann Summerfield, Stewartsville, Missouri, writes: "Thinking it was as little as I could do to tell you I am one with you, in striving to help roll on this work, I write this line. I sometimes feel that what I am able to do is not much, but I am willing to do all I can for I love this latter day work. If we are not called to go into all the world and preach the gospel we are called to preach it at home by our daily walk and conversation."

We are in receipt of an interesting description of the recent entertainment given by the Saints of the branch in St. Louis for the purpose of helping to pay the indebtedness of their new chapel, which want of space prevents our publishing entire. Great zeal and energy must have characterized the occasion as $250 was realized. No one but those who have at times engaged in such entertainments can form any adequate idea of the amount of labor involved. Surely our sisters of St. Louis are worthy of much credit for their perseverance and faithful labors. May the Lord bless them in all efforts for the promotion of his cause.

[The request in reference to Autumn Leaves will be complied with. Please state to what address they should be sent.—ED.]

Sr. Abbie M. Van Fleet, Downey, California, writes: "I have often thought I would write to the Home Column, which I appreciate very much, but I have hesitated so to do because of inability. I said a few nights ago to my husband: 'Nelson, would you not like to meet again all the saints with whom we used to meet in our youth?' I then mentioned Sr. Philo Howard and Bro. Charles Jones, and others. His answer was, 'I would.' It is hardly possible that we shall ever see all of the faces that memory brings so fresh before our fancy. I feel that life has been indeed a school to me, and amid all I have never lost sight of the truth of the gospel of Christ, which has been a source of comfort and strength to me. My lot has been to be the most of my time separated from the saints, so I have not had the privilege of assembling with them in worship —a privilege I always improved when it was possible. Nothing but sickness ever prevented me from assembling at prayer, or any meeting of the saints when it was called for the purpose of worship; and I felt it a pleasure to attend. The interests of the church have always been my interests. I have felt I was a part and parcel of that body; and I love all that feel they are a part of the same. I feel to reach out after those I see that are cold and indifferent, and try to win them back, if possible,"

CABOOL, Mo.

Dear Sisters of the 1-rayer League:—Do not think because my name is not with you in the League, that I am a wanderer from right; for if God hears our prayers in union he hears mine uniting with yours. I am so situated that I cannot belong to the League, yet I never forget to pray that our prayers may be united with yours in asking for such things as are put forth by the sisters in behalf of God's work here upon the earth. God has never forsaken me. Many times I rejoice in his Spirit, when I am alone meditating on his goodness to me. Dear sisters, pray for my husband, that he may get well of his affliction, which is rheumatism.

M. A. Atwell.

DELOIT, Iowa, December 17th.

Dear Sister Walker:—I thank God for the Herald, its weekly visits and the cheering news it brings to all that hunger and thirst after right-eousness. Yes, my heart is made glad while reading its contents! Thank God for the great latter day work; it is dear to me, and I am striving to so live as becomes a Saint in deed.

I wish to write a dream I had about one year ago, as near as I can remember. It seemed I was travelling on foot, carrying something in a white cloth, old but very strong. At times I would be weary, then I would renew my courage and travel on, and my load would be light and easily borne. I went through a large building, and in the center of a very large room was a table, and a person stood by the side of it. I laid my load upon the table and said, "This is for the church treasurer." The person unfolded the cloth and said, "This will go towards spreading the gospel." I then awoke.

This dream so impressed itself upon my mind that I told it in church the Sunday following. The same evening the president of our branch called at my house and asked me if I had the interpretation to that dream. I said no, only I thought it meant we should pay our tithing. He said he thought that white cloth meant something.

I did not think much more about it. Last Monday night, after retiring for the night, I commenced thinking of the second coming of the Savior, the signs that would precede his coming, the Jews' return, the cyclones, the seas heaving, and distress of nations. Everything that has taken place and will be appeared to pass before my view, and it seemed it would not be long until all would be fulfilled. I said in my heart, "How long, O Lord, how long ere these things be? Will I be prepared?" Whether I was asleep or awake I do not know; but immediate-I was standing in the same building, before the same person. His countenance was bright as the sun, and he said: "Here is the interpretation of your dream. Your travel represents the Saints' trials or warfare-those that rely on God for strength and aid, putting their trust in God and the Lamb, whose burden is light and yoke is easy. This building represents the church of the Lamb of God-perfect in its structure. The age of this cloth represents the everlasting gospel. The strength represents those that resist temptation, that are not led away by the cunning deceit of men. The whiteness of the cloth represents the purity of the Saints-those that will inherit the celestial glory." He said: "Look! It is without spot or blemish. Here is the patience of the Saints; of those who keep the commandments of God; those that have neither mark in the forehead nor in their hand, nor on their name; neither is their name numbered with transgressors." Again he said: "Look! this money is the tithes and offerings of the pure in heart—those that have covenanted with God by sacrifice." He a third time said, "Look! and a roll, as if suspended from the ceiling, commenced to unroll, and names written in letters that shone like gold were engraven thereon. He said, "These are the names of those that shall dwell with God and the Lamb for ever and ever." This passed away and I was sitting up in bed.

That we may all live so as to be one of the happy number whose names are written there, is the prayer of your sister in the Church of Christ,

AUNT MARGARET.

BAY PORT, Mich., Oct. 29th.

Dear Sisters: Not quite two years have passed since I became a Latter Day Saint, and I can truly say they have been the happiest years of my life; although I regret the many crooked steps I have taken. Yet it has been my privilege to enjoy many happy seasons, and when I contemplate the goodness of God and realize how merciful he has been to me through all these long years and has brought me to the true light of the gospel, it seems to me I can not be thankful enough. I was a member in good standing in the Methodist church for over eighteen years, and enjoyed a portion of the Spirit of God,enough to make me hunger and thirst after righteousness-but I could not find it there. I always felt there was something more for me, and how was I to attain it, was the earnest prayer of my heart. How often I prayed that God would send some one in our midst who would teach us the right way, and who would enlighten our darkened minds, and lead us into straight paths. For many years I attended the meetings of that faith; but I could see no fruits of the Spirit of God, nothing to feed the hungry soul that was mourning God's love to know. How I longed to see a revival here in our midst. After many earnest prayers it came. But it came in God's own appointed way; and although many rejected it, yet a goodly number accepted it with true and honest hearts, and to-day are rejoicing in the God of their salvation. Oh, I thank God that he was so mindful of us that he sent one of his servants into this part of his moral vineyard to rescue perishing souls! What a great change is here among us in the two years past! Truly we are a happy band of brothers and sisters, all in one common family in the Lord. Praise his holy name for full and free salvation!

It seems to me I have greater reasons to be thankful than most of my brothers and sisters, for I was an invalid about fourteen years, with Bright's disease, which is the dread of all physicians. Sometimes I was compelled to keep my bed for five months at a time; but after I was baptized I thought I was better. The spring following I went to Ubly conference; and as I had the dropsy, I felt it was my privilege to be administered to, which was done by brethren Cornish, Barr and Blakeslee, and I was healed by the power of God, and now I am very healthy and can stand any amount of fatigue for a person of my age—which is almost half a century.

Bro. J. J. Cornish has done a great work here, and I hope God will spare his life many years to sound the gospel trumpet. We have had many able preachers here, amongst whom are brethren Phelps, Shippy, Salyards and W. H. Keiley.

I had a dream which troubles me. I saw Bro. Cornish standing to declare the truth of the gospel. He was as pale as death, and he seemed to grow faint, and would have fallen; but still he preached in power, until at last he could stand no longer, and two brethren bore him away in their arms, and as I looked upon his apparently lifeless body, I cried: "Oh, my brother, you have given your life for the cause you loved so well!" May God spare him and shield him from all harm, is the prayer of your sister in Christ,

ADELIA TAYLOR.

NORTH PLATTE, Neb., Dec. 16th.

Dear Sisters:—I desire to give honor to our Lord by telling you of his mercy to us here. The light has shone in the darkness, and some have received it. In the Doctrine and Covenants (84:4) we find these words of promise: "Therefore blessed are ye, if ye continue in my goodness, a light unto the Gentiles; and through this priesthood a savor unto my people Israel. The Lord hath said it. Amen." We have believed these promises and the prophecies given in the revelations to us; and through belief and obedience have received light, and desire to bear witness of the light to those we are associated with; and some have received the light.

Nearly four years ago we came to North Platte. There were many churches here, but no Saints that we knew of. We were sorry to be alone, but prayed the Father that we might always have his Spirit to be with us. We found out the name Saint or Mormon was very unpopular; but that did not scare us, for we had learned that when we were very young; therefore we continued to bear testimony, distributing books and tracts; and at length our elders came and preached the word, and eight have been baptized, and one of these, Bro. Mohr, is preaching now. He preached at Naccook, Culbertson and North Platte in the German language; and he distributes tracts on the way. He baptized Sr-Johnson the 25th of November.

Bro. Mohr is very anxious for German tracts; says he must have them if they are to be had. Will Bro. Hinderks please send tracts to my address. We sent a letter and stamps for the same some time ago, but it must have got lost. We will send money to pay for tracts. Bro. Moler asks for this to be done. He goes from house to house, keeping the command of Jesus in Matthew 6:26 Inspired Translation. (It is not written so in the King James Translation). He cooks, washes his own clothes, carries his needle and thread, and mends for himself. I told him I would work for him, but he said, "No; you have too much to do."

Bro. Caffall is alive in the gospel, and is trying to make everybody else alive. He told us about going to preach one time, and no one came to hear him; but he preached just the same, and gave out an appointment for the next Sunday. We asked, "Was any one there next time?" He said, "Yes; the house was full." A little boy was outside and told it; and they all wanted to see that crazy fellow that preached to benches; and he built up a large church there afterwards. When he [Mohr] was examining this gospel in Germany I think he was troubled and puzzled between his firmness in Adventism and the power of thisgospel. He awoke one night and prayed very earnestly for knowledge from God; and suddenly the room was filled with light.

A German friend of his had a dream a short time ago. He dreamed that there was a great light that came from the direction of our house and overspread his house, himself and little boy. He is reading the Book of Mormon now.

A Baptist minister and a Methodist minister are also reading the book-the last through the efforts of Sr. Johnson. Sr. J. belonged to his church; but before she was baptized she went to visit him, and told him of her intentions and the poverty of the Methodist teachings and belief, or unbelief rather. She asked me to go with her, and I did; and we heard some queer things. When she spoke of the doctrine taught by the Saints he said, "We have the very same things, only in a little different way;" and when sprinkling was called for examination he said, "We are not following Christ." We called attention to Laying on of Hands in the 19th chapter of Acts. He and his wife said it did not say anything about laying on of hands, "they only prayed;" but we would and did read it out of his Bible. Well, it was too bad. One said I thought this, and the other thought that. Sr. Johnson spoke of the confusion in Methodism and other isms. He began then giving a little sketch of the confusion in Mormonism. I saw he did not give us justice and asked to speak for the church and our prophet. I did, and a few facts were given. He looked at me and said: "Mrs. Richards, I do not want to argue the case with you." But he heard a great many truths. His wife turned pale and her hands shook. He told us at last he did not believe the doctrine, and that Sr. J. would regret what she was going to do; and it was wrong, very wrong for her to unite with us. He said, "I know all about the whole thing." I said, "Then you have read the Book of Mormon?" He said, no, he had not; and after we made him ashamed, he asked me if I would get him a copy of the book. I did, and also a copy of the Spaulding Story—as he tried to use that as a weapon-but everything seemed to bound back and strike a terrible blow where it was not intended. We called special attention to the condemnation of polygamy by the Book of Mormon, and we trust good will be done. I heard that he said since that if she had come alone she would have gone away thinking differently. Strange he was not free to speak before me; but he was very nervous, while we felt at perfect rest and

This fall, when Sr. Eva Adams was baptized she came out of the water singing and giving glory to God and pleading with her husband to come with her through the waters of baptism, while the love of Christ filled her heart and the light was all around her. She was also administered to for that terrible disease, catarrh, from which she has been a great sufferer. She has doctored a great deal with no relief; but when Bro. Caffall laid his hands on her and prayed for her she was blessed immediately, freed from pain, and has done a great amount of work that before would have laid her up in bed. Let us continue in the goodness of the Lord, and hold L. M. RICHARDS. the light up higher.

Correspondence.

ANTWERP, Ohio, Dec. 15th.

Editors Herald: -- I love this latter day work, and believe it to be the work of the Lord, and that it will stand the fire of investigation and come out victorious in the end, although it may suffer some times from the mistakes and wrongdoing of some. Since engaging in the work four years ago, I have tried to be true to the covenant I then made, and have been made to rejoice many times in the knowledge of the truth. I have been permitted to meet with the saints of Coldwater, Michigan, and Clear Lake, Indiana, branches, and others in conference at the above named places, and have met them but to love them. I enjoyed their association, their kindness and brotherly love, and I pray that the Lord will bless them with us and all his Saints, that we may all be faithful, and grow in grace and in a knowledge of the truth of God.

While I have found many things over which I have had reason to rejoice and be glad, it has not been smooth sailing all the time. When Bro. W. H. Kelley came here four years ago last September I found it difficult to get a place for him to preach, although there were two churches and a school house within one mile, either of which was promised me, should he come. But when he came the trustees of both the churches said, "No, they did not want any Mormons in their churches." But after some difficulty I procured the use of the school-house, I being one of the directors in the district, and we have, part of the time, had the privilege of using it since. But some object, and have gone so far as to take measures to try to close the school-house against us, but have failed, so far, as two of the three directors have been in our favor, while the other has petitioned the township Board of Education to not allow us to use it. They refused to grant his petition and he has now taken action against the Board of Education in the court of Common Pleas in this county. While in Paulding-the County seat-to-day looking the matter up, I met an attorney of some renown from Cleveland, Ohio, who is here as aid to our States Attorney in a murder case, and while laying the case before them he said: "There is not a church on this earth that can prove their doctrine from the Bible as well as the Latter Day Saints can theirs." His name is W. B. Higby. He and a Mr. Seiders, both attorneys, said they had been interested in the work of the Latter Day Saints at Cleveland, since one year ago last spring. Both think there is no danger of defeat, should the case come to trial, which it no doubt will. We ask the prayers of the Saints that the truth and right may prevail, and-if it be the Lord's willthat we may be granted the use of this and other school-houses in the county. Other religious societies use them without question and I see no just reason why we should not.

The little branch here are, as a rule, trying to live faithful lives; trying to let their light shine. All quite poor, so far as this world's goods are concerned, but rich in faith, and, we believe, trying to be in good works. We are considerably scattered and not able to build a house of worship of our own, although some out of the church would help us. Many are friendly to us and we think a good work can and will be done here yet. The United Brethren have just closed a protracted meeting at the Armstrong School house, two miles south of here, and, after two weeks hard labor, succeeded in converting one poor woman who had just lost her husband and one child, and was suffering from sorrow and bereavement. She was made to believe that baptism and the laying on of hands were not essential to salvation but were just for the Jews; that Jesus did not mean the Gentiles when he sain, "Go teach all nations, baptizing them," etc.; that Cornelius, a Gentile, received the Holy Ghost, and was saved without either. Truly, "What a tangled web they weave." We insisted that if Cornelius is an example for the conversion of Gentiles they must receive the visitation of angels, send for some one to tell them words whereby they may be saved, and while being taught, the Holy Ghost must fall upon them in such a mnaner that they shall speak in tongues and magnify God; and last, but not least, must be baptized or be disobedient to the commandments both of angels and men of God.

In the above mentioned suit I am in need of the tract "The Kirtland Temple Suit," and will send herewith an order for the same and the Church papers which you will please hand to Bro. Dancer. With love and best of wishes to all at the Herald office and a prayer to Almighty God that he will abundantly bless you all in your labor of love, and also every means which he has employed for the spread of his truth, and especially Bro. Joseph on his mission to Utah and the west that much good may be done, I remain, your brother in the gospel of Christ,

JOHN ERTER.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 28th.

Bro. Blair: By request of Bro. H. A. Stebbins, our district president, I went to the Bonnet schoolhouse, in the Greenville branch, and held a two days meeting Saturday and Sunday, Dec. 15th and 16th. Bro. Bell not meeting with us as we expected, I did the preaching. We met on Saturday at 2:30 and 7 p. m.; small congregations owing to rainy weather. On Sunday we held three meetings; had fair congregations and good attention in the fore and afternoon, and in the evening 1 preached to a large and attentive audience, and I believe that the good seed sown will bring forth fruit ere long. At the close of the meeting some who had never before attended the Saints meetings gave me a friendly shake of hand and invited me to come again. I had good liberty during the entire session.

On the 23d (last Sunday), I met with the Greenville branch at 11 o'clock, when we had a good prayer and testimony meeting. The Spirit's presence was sensibly felt, especially when we blessed a little child. Bro. James McDiffit (the branch president), invited me to preach in the evening, when we had a large attendance, some of whom are believing the gospel, and I trust will obey soon. The branch is ably presided over by Elder McDiffit, and seems to be in good working order.

Yours in the one faith,

JOHN SHIPPY.

LITTLE SIOUX, Iowa, Dec. 21st.

Dear Herald:-In reading the last issue I was earnestly impressed by the Spirit to write a few words. As I have never written to the Herald before I will tell you how much good your kind letters do me. Some of them seem to be written expressly for my benefit, for in them I often find answers to a great many questions that I can not solve. I receive so much strength and encouragement in reading the letters in the Herald and Hope, that I do not see how we could do without them. It is a pleasure for me, and to attend church is also very interesting. O! if some of the young only knew what a difference it would be to them to change their way of living in order to serve the Lord, instead of groveling in the darkness of the world, they would never regret the step they took. The greatest joy of my life is in the service of my Lord. I have left many enjoyments of the world which were once pleasurable to me, but now they are not. My desire is to keep the commandments of God with all my might, mind and strength. Remember, he said that those who did good to their fellow men did it to him-even when done to the least and humblest. We are the children of his Church and he left a work for his Church to do. He has promised to come back in glory, attended by the holy angels of God; but he will never come until this work which he has left for the Church to do, is done; -never. This gospel of the kingdom must be preached in all the world for a witness, and also a people are to be prepared to meet him at his coming

Your sister in hope of eternal life, Dora Coffman.

LLANELLY, Wales, Dec. 10th.

Bro. Foseph:—We are engaged in doing what we can to revive and establish the good work in this mission, and the voice of the Spirit, through the gifts in the different branches is that we shall have an ingathering, after the proper labor and faithfulness on our part and also that of all the Saints here. We hope and pray that this may be the case. We shall try to do all we can.

We have settled at this place for the present in order to help the Saints of this branch to bring things to a better shape and to the best interest of the work. Here is the only meeting house in the mission. On the 8th inst. we delivered a lecture on the second advent of Christ to a large audience of anxious listeners. We hope the interest will increase.

A friend of ours, writing from St. Johns, Utah, October 30th, has this much to say of matters there since we left. "Soon after you left here, a man by the name of Palmer came around this country to preach. Perhaps you know him; he is said to be a great preacher; has been to the states on missions. I think he was sent here to repair the damage you had done while here. He said he was sorry he was not here when you was, as he had heard that you was quite gentlemanly in all your debates. He was well posted in the scripture, &c. So far as I understand, he was using mostly the old prophecies in the Bible that have reference to the building up of Zion in the 'valley of the mountains, &c.' He tore down the 'mountain of the Lord's house' (Isa. 2: 12), which you had built in Judea and Jerusalem, and he built one here in the mountains. He said there is no mountain to be built on in the land of Palestine!! He also said that he heard it rumored around that all the people of St. John had turned to be Josephites, &c. One thing I believe he was wrong in; he accused you people of doing nothing towards preaching the gospel, but laying on your oars waiting for something to turn up, &c I told some here that I knew differently; that most all the Josephites are missionaries, and are all over the different nations preaching the gospel, &c. You do get a knock-down (or they try it). here once in a while from the stand. Bro. undertook last Sunday to show to us that you were wrong in baptizing into the kingdom, &c. He was trying to prove there was no kingdom &c; but he failed to show us what John the Baptist baptized his followers into, and also those that were baptized before the church was organized in 1830. We rather take your views of the matter. He showed great weakness in his argument. Try to come and visit us again straight from your mission when you are released before you go to your home in Kansas. Our kindest regards to you and wife.

Yours truly, ——."
The above serves to show how how the wind blows.

FULTON, IOWA, DEC. 23d.

Dear Herald:-I, too, wish to say a few words for this latter day work. I can say, (as many of my brothers and sisters before me have said) it is the work of God. I have never regretted the step I took the 29th day of last May, when I went down into the waters of baptism, and I know I never shall. I thank my Father in heaven that I ever lived to hear the gospel in its fulness, and that when I did hear it, I was not too prejudiced to investigate the work. My aunt Lucinda Whitley and myself are the only saints in this little village. The gospel has been presented to the people here time and again, but it seems that the wall of prejudice is so hard and thick, it will require a great deal of time and labor to pick through it.

We are expecting Bro. J. S. Roth to soon return to this field of labor, and we are hoping and praying that he will gather a few more into the kingdom.

Your sister,

ELLA M. DEILEY.

MANCHESTER, Eng., Dec. 14th.

Dear Herald:—Three more precious souls were added to the church by baptism, in this great city last evening, and four or five others are nearly ready. Prospects continue favorable. Reports from the Leeds branch, up to present week, are excellent. Yours in hope through the gospel of Jesus Christ.

JOSEPH DEWSNUP, SEN.

COLEMAN, Mich., Dec. 24th.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—I have been here for the last nine days and have spoken eleven times in the Town Hall; do not have a very large crowd, but they are interested and pay good attention. The ministers of other faiths are getting very uneasy, and are busy telling the people to stay away, etc. A few have declared their intention to obey, some of whom are not afraid to speak of the faith. The work in this district moves on nicely. Several are coming into the church, nearly all of whom enjoy a portion of the Spirit of God. I am going home to spend Christmas this year. Kind regards to all.

J. J. CORNISH.

Dow CITY, Iowa, Dec. 19th.

Bro Blair:-My last was from South West City, Missouri. From there I went to the Indian Territory, but because of lameness, I thought it best to work north instead of going to Texas; so Thanksgiving day found me at home. In all my labors while south, I can truly say that I felt well spiritually. The short mission of three months was a good school to me. The people I had met before were glad to see me again, and I have no enemies in the south that I am aware of. The main reason for not going to Texas was my lameness, thinking I would not be able to do as much as I desired. I am very glad to know that the work I have done in the ministry in the Reorganization has been accepted of God. I have endeavored to let the little light that is in me shine to the people. I am now rested up; and that was what my ankle needed. I shall labor in this region until conference, under the direction of those in charge, unless you have other work for me. When the ministry in Texas see this letter, they will learn the cause I am not on my mission assigned me by the conference. A lover of all truth,

JOHN HAWLEY.

LIMERICK, Ohio, December 17th.

Bro. Blair:-It has been months since I last wrote to the Herald. I left home October 12th for Highland county, arriving there on the day following. Found the branch, as a body, in rather low spirits; began meetings on Sunday the 14th, and during my stay of six weeks delivered twenty eight discourses, being favored with extra liberty in a general way; baptized four. The branch now numbers forty-two. While with them be used our influence toward the erection of a church house. Meetings were called and the advisability of erecting one was discussed. The result was that a locating committee was chosen, and soon reported favorably. A building committee was next selected and appointed, consisting of Brn. Skeen, West, and Mr. Isaac Rhodes. They have concluded to build a house 28 x 42, the room to be fourteen feet in the clear. The site is a beautiful one, and when it is erected can be seen from afar. It is in sight of the renowned Fort Hill which is a wonder to all who visit it. Within the fort are about seventy-one acres. and it is a remarkable foot-print of the ancient inhabitants of this continent. There are traces of forts in the vallies below, and the county north and south abounds with mounds, among them the Serpent Mound of history, but a few miles from Fort Hill. By the time I left, or during the last week in November, the brethren and friends had cut, scored and hewed out most of the frame. I have never seen anywhere exhibited among the Saints, and the community at large such a willingness to aid in building a church for the Saints. I have faith to believe it will go up, for there are a goodly number of aged men who have put their shoulders to the wheel with their counsel and means. They will soon have a house to meet in regularly. Our visit among them seemed to be timely. The Saints were strengthened, and we were loth to leave them. May the Lord bless and richly remunerate them for the favors shown to me.

On the 29th ult. Mr. John Rhodes brought me in his carriage to Bainbridge, thus favoring me with a pleasant ride twelve miles or more. H was well acquainted with the country and gave me much information about it and the people. After thirty miles ride on "Nahum's Chariot," I stepped off at Bro. L. W. Torrence's where we took lodgings for the night. They are always successful in their endeavor to make an elder comfortable, and by the way, Sr. Torrence is one among the first who accepted the gospel when I first visited this country in 1878. She has had her conflicts to pass through, but is a lively stone in the spiritual building. We called on brother and sister Joel Allen and spent a few hours with them on the 30th ult. Bro. Allen has been and is still greatly afflicted with rheumatism, which renders life almost a burden, yet he seems to be in good heart, and tries to be as patient as it is possible to be in his condition. They were the first to obey when I introduced the doctrine in these parts. They have stemmed the tide of opposition, and are strong defenders of the faith. In the evening of the 30th ult., we trudged our weary way with valise on our back, which seemed to grow heavier until we had stepped off about eight miles, which brought me again to our little cottage home to greet loved ones and to be greeted by them. I felt like singing:

"Home again, home again From a distant shore; O, how it makes my heart rejoice To be at home once more."

The reports from the laborers as given in the Herald are encouraging, although some of the valiant ones are being called away. I felt to weep on learning of the death of Bro. J. H. Meriam, but our loss is his gain. Bro. T. J. Beatty and I expect to leave home in a few days for other parts of our field of labor. I feel encouraged.

Yours in bonds,

L. R. DEVORE.

WIRT, Iowa, Dec. 18th.

Editors Herald:—According to previous agreement I, in company with my brother Joseph and John Johnston, have concluded the two-days' meeting at this place which was appointed by the president of the district. On arriving here we found that Bro. N. Kent had been authorized to arrange the meetings. This we found was not congenial with the feelings of some of the brethren, the law not being honored.

First we met at the Oger School-house, Friday evening. Only a few being out, we left an appointment for Monday evening at that place. Our next meeting was at the Pumptown Schoolhouse, Saturday, at half past two p. m. Two came, and at seven o'clock in the evening a few lads came out. We met again on Sunday at eleven a. m. and tried to give instructions as we were led. Being satisfied that the two-days' meeting was a failure, we went to the Dickson School-house north of this place, where heretofore there had been a good interest, and the people had treated us with kindness. But the position assumed there since that time has worked injury, and we were informed that the door would be closed against us and we could not have the use of the house. Then being informed by Bro. Kent that there was a place in Union county where they wanted to hear the good news, in company with brethren Anderson and Kent we went to the place and found the leading spirit that had been so anxious, like Felix of old. We were informed in this place that people of the county were building a monument in honor of the old-time Saints who were buried at a place called Pisgah, in the county. We were also informed by a Catholic gentleman who had lived at Kirtland, Ohio, that he was acquainted with the Saints before the exodus, and knew them to be honorable people. We were glad to hear these things. We returned Monday evening to the Oger School-house, but the interest did not warrent any further meetings at present.

As ever,

H. N. SNIVELY.

BIRD'S EYE, INDIANA, Dec. 24.

Dear Herald:-The work is onward in this part of the Lord's vineyard. I attended the southern Indiana conference at Byrnville, Harrison Co. There was a fair attendance of Saints and friends from different parts of the district. Harmony prevailed, and the Saints were edified and strengthened. Bro. M. R. Scott remained there preaching every night until Friday, then went to Mott station and presented the gospel truths to a fair sized audience, and left a good impression upon the people. On the 22d and 23d he and Bro. V. D. Baggerly conducted a two days meeting at Riceville. There are more calls for preaching than the elders can possibly fill. People are beginning to realize that the gospel has a different ring than the sectarian sounds they have been accustomed to hearing. The cause is gaining friends in many sections of this country. But, oh! how few that accept and obey it.

My earnest prayer is that God may bless and strengthen the Saints everywhere to the upbuilding of his cause among all nations.

HARMONY OF INSPIRATION.

BY R. M. ELVIN.

ALL the Saints of this age have been taught that the revelations received by the Prophet Joseph Smith were in absolute harmony with those of the ancient prophets. In the Lord's preface to the Doctrine and Covenants, we are told to "search these commandments, for they are true and faithful, and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall all be fulfilled." This is the same instruction that the great Teacher gave to his apostles: "Search the Scriptures."

With this simple, but sensible rule, we will proceed to make an examination, and see if the inspiration claimed for the prophet of this generation will harmonize with that found in the Bible. For this purpose we take one paragraph of the revelation of November 1st, 1831, and test it by the accepted words of divine authority: "Wherefore I the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, (a) called upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jr., (b) and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments, (c) and also gave commandments unto others, (d) that they should proclaim these things unto the world; (e) and all this that it might be fulfilled which was written by the prophets; (f) the weak things of the world shall come forth and break down the mighty and strong ones, (g) that man should not counsel his fellow man, neither trust in the arm of flesh, (h) but that every man might speak in the name of God the Lord, (i) even the Savior of the world; (j) that faith also might increase in the earth; (k) that mine everlasting covenant might be established; (1) that the fulness of the gospel might be proclaimed (m) by the weak and simple, (n) unto the ends of the world, (o) and before kings and rulers."

I have divided the foregoing by inserting reference letters, and if the reader will refer to each reference as he proceeds, it will greatly aid him in understanding and discovering the forcefulness of the harmony.

(a) We cannot, with any degree of safety to a profession of belief in the inspiration of the Bible, deny the unlimited and comprehensive knowledge of God. And that calamities have been predicted and are being fulfilled to the astonishment and awe of the peoples of all nations, let Holy Writ and historical facts be heard: "For I am the Lord, I change not."-Mal. 3:6. To this we add, "for the ways of man are before the eyes of the Lord, and he pondereth all his goings."—Prov. 5:21. Again: "Neither is there any creature that is not manifest in his sight, but all things are naked and open unto the eyes of him with whom we have to do."-Heb. These seem to establish the unchangeableness of the character of God, and his knowledge of universal man from the dawn of creation until the winding up scene of all earthly affairs. We now take a glance at some of the calamities foretold: "The consumption decreed shall overflow with (in) righteousness, for the Lord God of hosts shall make a consumption, even determined, in the midst of all the land."—Isa. 10:22, 23. Let it be understood that the sin, evil and wickedness among all the people will be displaced and overcome to some extent, by the introduction and establishing of the gospel of peace and salvation; but great and marvelous physical events, such as storms, cyclones, fires, earthquakes, inundation of rivers, lakes and seas, with war and devastating diseases will carry to the grave multitudes of unprepared souls, and destroy untold millions of wealth. prophet must not be understood as prophesying of the Jewish people only, or of one locality, for he says, "Now therefore be ye not mockers, lest your bands be made strong, for I have heard from the Lord God of hosts a consumption, even determined upon the whole earth."-Isa. 28:22. Moses gave a rule of taking evidence, that, "at the mouth of two witnesses, or at the mouth of three witnesses, shall the matter be established."-Deut.

19:15. Adopting this rule as a good one, here is another credible witness: "For these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled. But woe unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck, in those days, for there shall be great distress in the land, and wrath upon this people. And they shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations, and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon the earth distress of nations with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring. Mens' hearts failing them for fear, and for looking after those things which are coming on the earth, for the powers of heaven shall be shaken."—Luke 21:22-

These events have been and are being fulfilled beyond the possibility of contradiction. Here is a most startling delineation of present existing events that are chronicled almost daily in the newspapers of the times. "This know also, that in the last days perilous times shall come, for men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy. Without natural affection, trucebreakers, false accusers; incontinent, fierce; despisers of those that are good; traitors, heady, high-minded, lovers of pleasure more than lovers of God."—2 Tim. 3:1-4. Perhaps on this point enough of Scripture has been introduced, and we therefore present some collateral evidences:

STORMS.

On this topic I might write for hours, and give new data upon each page which would prove intensely fascinating and attractive. The violence and frequency of destructive storms have not escaped the notice of authors and newspaper men. From the numerous reports as published, I select but one from the east and one from the west: "All over the country these storms have been of unusual frequency and dreadfully destructive this year. The lightning, the hurricane, the waterspout, number their victims this summer in the western states by hundreds. And in many parts of Europe the same phenomena prevail, with a sprinkling of earthquakes in places where the earthquake is hardly ever felt. The cause is a mystery."-New York Herald.

"Among the many singular features of the terrible storms which have been devastating portions of the west within the two weeks past, the following item is reported from Lincoln, Nebraska, June 26th, After stating the destruction of crops, the wreck of buildings, and some loss of life, the report says: 'A woman had her leg broken, and four houses were blown to pieces at Rising, and hardly a window was left in town. One mass of ice which crashed through a house and floor weighed twenty-seven ponds.' further report states that 'one man was killed by being struck on the head with hailstones.' A few such experiences as this may begin to convince people that the great hailstones threatened under the seventh plague, (Rev. 16:21), every stone about the weight of a talent or nearly sixty pounds, is not an impossible visitation."

—Review and Herald.

Passing from this phase of disturbances of the elements, we consider the

which has been so common of late in all parts of the earth. I will not copy on this for the reason that I can not choose from the plethoric record made thereon. In Bengal, Calcutta, Chittagong, Hattiah, Sundeep, and Dakhin, at one time over twenty-five thousand people lost their lives, and all the property destroyed upon the thousand square miles of territory. Coming to America the list is appalling. April 14th, 1879, at Collinsville, Illinois, several were killed, and damage to property to the amount of $50,000 was done, while two days later at Waterboro, South Carolina, a hundred houses, including all the churches, were swept away, and fifteen persons were killed. In June of the same year, in Kansas, a cyclone destroyed much property and forty were killed and eighty wounded. July 15th, 1881, a frightful visitation occured at New Ulm, Minnesota, by which the town was left in almost total ruins, and some thirty of the citizens killed. Kansas was visited during April 6th, 7th, 8th and 9th, 1882. Many persons were injured, several killed, and the damage was very great. Again, on the 25th of the same month, Saline county, Missouri, was sorely distressed with great losses; eleven were killed and thirty-five Who and where are those that have not heard of the terrible loss of life and property to the towns of Grinnell and Malcolm, June 17th, 1882, when the estimated value of property destroyed amounted to between two and three millions of dollars, while the fifteen hundred homeless ones were all mourners for the large number of dead. During the week ending May 19th, 1883, six persons were killed at Coventry, Montana, with twenty at Racine, Wisconsin, and a hundred injured, and one hundred and fifty houses blown down. Valparaiso, Nebraska, was made to suffer; likewise White Pigeon, Michigan, Kansas City, Missouri, (three killed), while the same cyclone visited St. Joseph, Missouri, and great damage was sustained at both places. I might add many others but think those cited are sufficient.

FIRE.

Upon this part of the subject I am still more troubled to select from the many than to obtain proof. The most extensive fire that New York City ever sustained was December 26th, 1835, which burned six hundred and forty-eight stores and warehouses, valued at twenty millions of dollars. April 10th, 1845, Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, suffered from the fire-king the loss of one thousand buildings, valued at six millions. Quebec, Canada, in May, 1845, lost by fire fifteen hundred houses, and many lives, while in June the same year, another fire destroyed thirteen hundred dwellings. By these two fires twothirds of the city was destroyed. May 3d-5th, 1851, San Francisco, California, lost by fire two thousand five hundred buildings, and by another fire, (June 22d), five hundred more; an estimated loss of three millions. By the explosion of a little fire-cracker on July 4th, 1866, Portland, Maine, sustained a loss of fifteen million dollars, and ten thousand people were left homeless in suffering and poverty.

In 1870, at St. Petersburg, Russia, lightning struck a house, and in a few hours eleven thousand buildings were in ashes. When Chicago, the "Queen city of the west" was laid waste by the firefiend, a space of one mile wide by five miles long, or thirty-two hundred acres; beautiful and costly mansions, handsome residences, also business blocks; all were licked up by the tongue of flame that many supposed to be supernatural fire.

Shortly afterwards, (November 9th and 10th, 1872), Boston suffered an estimated loss of ninety millions, and almost annually we have great forest fires in Michigan, Wisconsin, Maine, and also in the south; while the small fires that are only locally noticed, will fully equal the large ones in value in the aggregate of losses.

EARTHQUAKES.

Here we have one of the most engaging topics of revelation, history and science; and as a usual thing, when we introduce this class or kind of evidence, the objector will urge that earthquakes have always existed, and therefore that we can not prove anything by them. But hold on. Had you a case in court or were a juror upon some case or trial, which would you prefer as a witness, some person with whom you were acquainted, one who possessed a good reputation for truth and veracity and did not stand in jeopardy of having his testimony impeached, or a total stranger to the entire court?

We are not perturbed on account of objections filed against this witness, and have nothing to fear from cross-question-

"Thou shalt be visited of the Lord of hosts, with thunder, and with earthquake, and great noise; with storm and tempest and the flame of devouring fire."-Isa. 29: 6. To this we add the words of Christ, "For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom. And there shall be famines, and pestilences, and earthquakes in divers places."—Matt. 24: 7. As early as Dec. 27th, 1832, a revelation through Joseph Smith, to the eldership, states, "for after your testimony comthe the testimony of earthquakes." Most any man might predict such events, but it must be conceded that no man could cause such a prediction to be fulfilled, and the enquirer desires to know-be informedwhether earthquakes are more frequent since 1832 than they were prior to that date. There has been much research and labor performed to gain an accurate, tabulated statement of earthquakes, and Mr. D. T. Taylor, in his "Coming Earthquake," quotes from Mr. Ponton and Mallett, who prepared and arranged chronologically, and distinguished the registered earthquakes into five periods as follows:-

相一套新作品的	No. No. of Average.
Those recorded before	The British of the Control of the Co
A D. 1,	58 1700 l in 29 year
Thence to the end of the
9th century,	197 900 1 in 4 year
Thence to the end of the
15th cenury,	532 600 l in 1 yea
Thence to the end of the
18th century,	2804 300 9 in 1 yea
Thence to 1850,	3240 50 64 in 1 yea
Thence to 1868,	5000 18 277 in 1 yea

The very destructive earthquakes that destroyed cities, with many lives register as follows:-

		No. of years.	Average.
From B. C. 1700 to
A. D. 96,	16	1796	l in 112 years.
From A. D. 96 to 1850,	204	1754	1 in 8 years.
From 1850 to 1865,	15	15	1 in 1 year.
From 1865 to 1868,	15	3	5 in 1 year.

I have not at hand the compiled report from 1868 to date, which, however, does not show any decrease, but the reverse. The mortality caused during the year 1868 by earthquakes, was over one hundred thousand, and an equal number perished in Java, August 25th, 1883. I might extend facts and figures upon this phenomenal disturbance of the earth, but will only add by asking the reader, What think you of the witness God said should testify, after the elders should go forth testifying of the restoration of the gospel?

FLOODS AND WAVES.

In America, Europe, Asia (especially China) there has been during the last fifty or sixty years, great inundations along all the principle rivers, resulting in great loss of life, the number unknowable, and property not within the range of calculation as to obtaining anything like the correct estimate. But when we come to consider the havoc wrought by the waves, we are dazed with the stupendous catastrophes that fill the pages of history. A question of contradiction is raised against this line of argument, for Job says, "Or who shut up the sea with doors, when it brake forth, as if it had issued out of the womb? When I made the cloud the garment thereof, and thick darkness a swaddling band for it, and brake up for it my decreed place and set hars and doors, and said, Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further, and here shall thy proud waves be stayed?"-Job. 38: 8-11. Some would-be wiseacres would use this as an animadversion on the revelation of Joseph Smith, wherein he says, "And after your testimony cometh the testimony of . . . the voice of the waves of the sea, heaving themselves beyond their bounds."

I can easily believe and see that both Job and Joseph told the truth, and that by the direction of the same authority. What right has puny man to call in question the action of "Him that made heaven and earth, and the sea and the fountains of waters?" If He saw fit in the time of Job to set bounds to the waves, and in the time of Joseph to say to those waves, You shall be my witnesses by leaping over the boundary line, who shall say to God, nay. For is it not He that "changeth the times and the seasons?" And if he so decides, who can hinder! And, still more, if He gives notice of the change, why should fault be found with the messenger who makes public the notification when said messenger has not power to bring to pass that which he publishes?

In the quaint parlance of kitchen talk, "the proof of the pudding is in the eating of it." So if we find a fulfillment of the events predicted by Joseph Smith, we may be positively sure that he told the truth, and if the thing he predicted was incom. patible with the then existing state of things, and from a human standpoint of judgment no such event could happen, we might be doubly assured that Joseph Smith was a true prophet of God. If this be called unsound logic, where shall we turn for certainty upon any subject of revelation?

A MODERN PARABLE.

ONCE upon a time a man possessed a very valuable knife. The blade was of the finest steel, tempered to sustain the keenest edge, and admitting of a very high polish. The handle was a marvel of workmanship, its beauty unsurpassed, emblazoned with rare jewels and wonderful carvings. This knife, the only one of the kind in existence, was the admiration of all who beheld it, and great was their desire to possess it. The owner of the knife placed great value on it, guarded it very carefully, and at his death left it to his son with the command that he should preserve it as it then was, anxious that it should thus be handed down from generation to generation, in its perfect condition.

After years had passed, one of his descendants becoming self-satisfied and careless, allowed the blade to become loosened, and he finally lost it. Then to replace the loss he procured another blade, had it attached to the handle and claimed that he still had the same knife.

As time rolled by, the jewels, one by one became detached from the handle, and through neglect the carving became worn, dim, and so much defaced that the possessor, desiring to change the style and appearance, had a new handle attached to the new blade, and still claimed that he had the same original knife.

Years after this, a young man found the original blade, and prizing it highly, guarded it carefully, until one day, to his great joy, he found the original handle, which had been discarded by the former possessor. Then, after uniting the blade to the handle, this young man proclaimed to the world that he had the original knife. Upon this the question arose as to what knife the other claimant had, for he delared that his was the original knife, that it had never been out of his possession, but that he had always retained and still held it. But examination proved that it had no appearance whatever of the original, that through the changes it had passed it was no longer the same. And still more, here was the young man with the very identical, original knife, as every one who examined it carefully were compelled to admit.

THE EXPLANATION.

The knife represents the Church of Jesus Christ. The blade, the word of God -by revelation. The handle, with its carvings, the officers of the church. The jewels, the gifts of the Spirit.

The church was established by our Savior while here on earth, and its perfect organization was in due time effected. 'The word of God," which is "sharper than any two-edged sword," and "is perfect, converting the soul," was relied upon by the members for the dividing of truth from error. They had it direct from the mouth of the Savior, and also had continual revelation to themselves. Thus the word of God—the gospel of the kingdom -was presented to the children of men as the means of salvation for all who would receive it, and they were told that without it they could not be saved. The Savior sent his apostles to preach the word of God-the gospel-to "every creature," saying, "he that believeth [the gospel] and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned." The salvation of themselves and their descendants depended upon their teaching and observing the very things that Jesus commandedwithout any changes—as his parting words show: "Go," says he, "teach all nations [the gospel] baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you, and lo [on these conditions that you teach all my commandments I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." He also said, "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of heaven."—John 3: 5.

That we may be more perfectly assured as to what the gospel was. Paul tells us that the "principles of the doctrine of Christ" were repentance, faith, baptism [for the remission of sins], laying on of hands, for blessings, healing the sick, for the gift of the Holy Ghost and conferring the priesthood; resurrection of the dead and eternal judgment. Peter told the early Saints that if they would give all diligence, and add to their faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, godliness, brotherly kindness and charity, they should have an abundant entrance into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

The officers of the church were chosen by the wisdom of God, through Christ, and were commissioned as his ambassadors. Paul, who was called by revelation to officiate for Christ, said that no man could take that honor unto himself, unless he was called in the same manner. Christ also said to his disciples, "Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you, and ordained you, that you should go and bring forth fruit, and that your fruit should remain." The first officers chosen by Christ were apostles! and Paul tells us that God "set in the church" apostles, prophets, evangelists, (the seventy?), pastors and teachers, "for the work of the ministry." These were governing and controling powers in and of the church on earth, and, with the lay members, composed the Church of Christ, the "body" of Christ, the one body, the one fold, the one straight and narrow way unto eternal life. They were united in the one faith, one hope and one baptism, and were led by one Lord and one Shepherd, and by one Spirit they were all baptized into the one body of worshipersthe Church of Jesus Christ, the kingdom of God.

This perfect organization with the gospel, was to continue as the means of salvation "till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God." The reason why it was necessary to have the organization remain perfect, with its pure doctrines, was, "that we henceforth be no more children, tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the sleight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive."—Eph. 6: 14. God knew, Christ knew, and the apostles knew, that no other church, and no other but the church and doctrines of Jesus Christ could work salvation for man.

The officers of the church promised salvation in the celestial kingdom to all who would unite with it and observe its teachings. And that they might have a full assurance of such salvation, they were promised that certain signs should follow them here in this life. Christ said: "In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents; and if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall re-

These things were to be done by the believers in all ages of the world-if they adhered strictly to all the things Jesus commanded-and were to be enjoyed through the possession of the Holy Ghost, Peter, on the day of pentecost, told the believers that if they would repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, they should receive the gift of the Holy Ghost. And that all true believers might know that they, too, might receive this gift, Peter said that the promise (of the Gift) was unto them and their children and all whom "the Lord our God shall call."—Acts 2:38,39. So wherever God calls any one, the promise is unto them.

Paul tells us more concerning the "jewels," these gifts of the Spirit. He says, "there are diversities of gifts, but the same Spirit," and that they all come from the same Lord and God. He names the gifts, wisdom, knowledge, faith, gifts of healing, working of miracles, prophecy, discerning of spirits, divers kinds of tongues, and interpretation of tongues. All these gifts God gave the believers, as it pleased Him, for them to profit by, and thus know that they had embraced the true church, and were saved if they continued in righteousness.

Thus the church was fully established, its teachings and ordinances complete, and in that condition the Head of the church left it for his successors. But as time passed on and years rolled by, they became careless, negligent and lukewarm, and instead of adhering to the gospel they allowed themselves to drift into heathenism. and they consequently lost the word of God by revelation, and were no longer led and directed by it. So, to replace the loss, they attached another word to the church, namely, the word of man-the wisdom of man-and they have relied upon that ever since, and admit that now they are not led by present revelation—the word of God direct. But still they claim that they have the same church!

As time passed on the man-led church became dissatisfied with the officers of the church, and discarded them, replacing them with others more to their own liking; and instead of the officers God set in the church we find Popes, Cardinals, Archbishops, Vicar Generals, etc., etc. Even the name of the church was changed from the church of Jesus Christ to the Roman Catholic Church; and instead of its being led by the Spirit of God it was led by another spirit; and, as a consequence, it lost the gifts of the Holy Ghost, because it no longer complied with the terms upon which the gifts were promised. Baptism by immersion—administered only to repentant believers-for the remission of sins, was changed to sprinkling innocent infants who were incapable of either sinning, repenting or believing. Instead of teaching converts that the "gifts" were intended for them, as well as for their forefathers, they taught that all those things were done away, and no longer necessary. Consequently, the members lost faith in those things, and the signs did not follow them because thay did not believe. Even if they had believed in them these man-made officers were not ambassadors for Christ-were not called by revelation, were not chosen of Godand therefore could not confer the gift of the Holy Ghost.

Step by step they had departed from the faith (1 Tim. 4: 1-3). They changed every doctrine and ordinance of the church (Isa. 24: 1-6; 2 Tim. 4:3, 4). longer preached the gospel, (Amos 8: 11, 12), but became corrupt and denied the things of God, as prophecy had foretold they would (2 Tim. 3:1-7). And yet they claimed that they still had the same church!

For hundreds of years they held to this false claim and still continue to do so. The dark Ages came and passed away. The reformers appeared and freed their fellow men largely from mental, religious and political bondage. Finally a young man came forward with the claim that angels had visited him; that the visions of eternity had been opened up to him, and that our heavenly Father had been pleased to reveal to him His mind and will concerning the gospel and the church; that he had the word of God direct, saying, that the creeds of all the churches were wrong, that their creeds were an abomination in His sight.

After this young man had been fully instructed and commissioned with the authority, he was commanded to organize the church as it was when Christ and the apostles were on the earth. He was delegated an ambassador for Christ, and was taught the duty of all the officers of the church. By revelation he called and ordained them as Christ had done, sent them out to preach the same gospel restored (Rev. 14:6, 7), and promised the same gifts of the gospel to all who believed and obeyed, which was salvation in God's celestial kingdom, the "signs" to follow believers in this life. He placed in the church every doctrine and ordinance that graced it in Christ's day, and then presented it to the world as the means of salvation for man, as the true and original church, the church with apostles and prophets, "Jesus Christ nimself being the chief cor-ner stone." Thousands embraced it and testified of its truth; and thus it stands today the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, organized April 6th, 1830, by Joseph Smith the Prophet and others. The other churches were organized by the authority of man and the wisdom of man, and are therefore the churches of men. The primitive church departed from the faith, and changed the ordinances, and, in its contact with heathenism, instead of converting it, it was itself converted and absorbed by heathenism. All the forms and ceremonies found in the Roman Catholic Church to day are just so much heathenism introduced and adopted since revelation from God to the church ceased. It is a dead-church, without the Spirit, without the gifts, without the power to save; and it is an "abomination" in the sight of God.

Seek ye therefore the true church, the Church of Jesus Christ, and through it secure salvation in God's celestial kingdom, seek and obtain the Spirit and then the gifts. Then you can testify to the truth and be a witness for Christ.

G. S. LINCOLN.

THE MILLENNIUM'S SYMBOL-DAY.

This work of redemption is still progressing, and will occupy the six milleniums symbolized by the six days work of creation, and the seventh millenium will then be the great sabbath of the earth. The sabbath as the Millenium's symbolday, has been associated with the work of redemption from its commencement. There is no scripture warrant for supposing that Adam was ignorant of the original constitution of the world, and the relations, duties and responsibilities belonging to himself as the first representative man. He was created in knowledge. This can not mean that he was created in ignorance. He knew all that it was important for him to know. And when he had transgressed the law, and involved himself and his posterity in sin and death, he was still fully competent to understand the import of those terms in which God was pleased to make known his glorious purpose of redemption. The declaration that the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head, could not have been the foundation of faith; nor could it have afforded any comfort of hope, unless it were understood. And if understood, as we have every reason to believe it was, then its bearing upon the subject of our discourse was apprehended, and hope must have anticipated that the six thousand years of redemption would terminate in the restitution of all things and an everlasting rest. That one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day, was not only understood from the symbolic use of the days of creation, and the first sabbath, but also from the use of the term day in the penalty annexed to the command that they should not eat of the fruit of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, viz: 'in the day thou eatest thereof thou shalt surely die.' Here the term day did not refer to a natural day of twenty four hours; for Adam did not die in the natural or solar day in which he transgressed; but it refers to a millennial day of a thousand years, within which Adam did die. This is proved from the reference to it in the ninetieth Psalm: 'Thou turnest man to destruction, and sayest, Return ve children of men. For a thousand years in thy sight are but as yesterday when it is passed, and as a watch in the night.' This evidently refers to the sentence pronounced upon man, Dust thou art and unto dust shalt thou return.' This is the sentence by which man was turned to destruction, and this sentence was to be executed in the day in which man transgressed; that is, within a thousand years, which with the Lord is counted as a day. In the antediluvian age there were probably no deaths in infancy and childhood, and the people generally lived to be several hundred

They doubtless understood that the penalty of death, which had passed upon all men on account of Adam's sin, would be executed within a period of a thousand years. Adam himself lived nine hundred and thirty years, nearly three-fifths of the ante-diluvian age, and hence could instruct his posterity in regard to the original constitution of the world, and the work of redemption, in both of which the sabbath and its symbolic signification was an important feature. Besides, during that age the garden of Eden still existed, and the cherub with the flaming sword kept the way of the tree of life; thus insuring the execution of the penalty by debarring man from the only means by which his life could be protracted. And the Lord himself, who dwelt in the garden, appeared to his worshipers, as occasion required, to accept the sacrifices of faith, and to administer judgment in righteousness, making known the way of salvation through faith and voluntary obedience. In the prophecy of Enoch (Jude 14), we have evidence that, during that age, there were divine revelations concerning the glorious advent of the Lord to the earth, and the participation of the saints in the rest or sabbath of redemption which he will then introduce. 'Behold the Lord cometh, with ten thousands of his saints, to execute judgment on all, and to convince all who are ungodly among them, of all their ungodly deeds which they have ungodly committed, and of all their hard speeches which ungodly sinners have spoken against him.' This prophecy indicates that when he comes for these purposes, his saints, who shall all have been previously redeemed and glorified, shall come with him, and being constituted associate judges or magistrates, shall enter with him into that kingdom and glory then to be revealed. The translation of Enoch, as the seventh from Adam, was probably designed to teach that the bodies of all saints shall be changed, that they may be fashioned like unto Christ's most glorious body, when he comes to establish his kingdom in the seventh millenary of the world.

THE FIRST MAN ON EARTH.

WHERE did man first appear on the earth? Plato said he appeared on the Isle of Atlantis, lying between Central America and Africa. Herodotus stated that he interviewed the priests of Egypt, who declared they came from the Land of the West 10,000 years before the Father of History visited them. Was the Land of the West Atlantis or Central America? Alexander Winchell placed Adam, or rather the pre-Adam, on an island lost in the South Seas-Atlantis -and Donnelly has written a book descriptive of that mythical isle. Augustus Le Plongeon, the great explorer, claims that the oldest evidences of man on earth exists in Yucatan. As he has brought his proofs here from the peninsula it is at least interesting to hear what he has to say and examine his collection of relics, which are certainly the most marvelous in existence.

Augustus Le Plongeon lives in Brooklyn, at No. 204 Washington street. I visited him there and had an interview. He is a Frenchman by birth, classically educated, now of advanced years. He married a lovely English girl whom he met in the British Museum. She became interested in his studies and placed her fortune at his disposal for exploration and accompanied him on his perilous expeditions. She has ever been his enthusiastic companion and supporter, and her name must live in history with his. Dr. Le Plongeon said:

"I went to Peru in 1862 under the auspices of the California Academy of Sciences, and remained there until 1870, making explorations. I came to New York in 1871, and then to London, where I examined documents in the British Museum for six months, and ascertained what could be learned there relative to the history of ancient Peru. In 1872 I came to New York, and in January of 1873 delivered an address before the Academy of Sciences, in which I stated that there was reason to believe, from what I had seen in Peru, that man had his origin in America. I was attacked for the statement, and made up my mind to go to Yucatan and settle the question if possible. After arriving there I saw that a vast amount of work would have to be done, and before me lay a wealth of antiquities unknown to the world. There were at least forty cities, overgrown with forests, and these so thick that one would never suspect the presence of ruins. Yucatan comprises 24,000 square miles. My investigations there lasted for twelve years. A war of races had been progress for thirty-seven years between in some Indians and whites, so that it was perilous to prosecute investigations alone. People advised me not to go to the ruins, but when they found that I was determined to do so General Palonimo, commander of the Mexicon forces there, volunteered an escort of 100 men, which was accepted. Merida was the Capital of Yucatan, located twenty-eight miles from the coast. From here we went to Chicken, 120 miles The nearest village was Silas, further. fifteen miles away, containing mixed races. There I employed sixteen men at $1 each per day, and General Palonimo armed them. I am a Mason, and as the General was also a Mason, he was ready to render me his powerful assistance and many valuable suggestions.

"HOW THE WORK WAS CARRIED ON.

"We commenced work by having the men clear away the bush from what seemed to be the center of an enormous city. We cleared the debris from around the buildings so that they could be photographed and plans of their architecture secured. There were difficulties in making photographs, as we had only a little box for preparing the negatives. The wind moved the curtain and spoiled the light and the men would peep in to see what mystery was concealed; or we would find that the Indians placed in the background had moved and blurred the negatives. Climate caused the ether to evaporate from the collodion. Plates got smashed. Out of over 1,000 negatives we made, only about 300 are preserved.

"All of the buildings stood on artificial terraces or pyramids. The ascent to them was generally by steep stairs; very often the stairs had disappeared altogether. In many places we had to ascend by climbing some convenient tree. Once on top we found all kinds of thorns, bushes, and debris. We were in constant danger from venomous reptiles and poisonous insects of vast varieties, wants, and tragic intentions. Add to this the stumbling over stones, falling on the nose, and continuous stiff breezes blowing away our tape lines, and you have a fair idea of some of the difficulties of exploration in Yucatan. The sun scorched by day and insects bit at night. We had to examine each place where a foot was put on account of deadly vipers. All of the bushes were loaded with wood-ticks, which got under the skin and made us feel as if we had the small-pox. Nothing would take them off except a hot bath, which was impossible to obtain. We did not dare leave our rifles out of sight for a moment. Still, we conducted our work, and measured every terrace, stair, room, wall, cornice, and door, and got the lengths and breadths, so that we can rebuild any of the structures at any time in fac-simile.

"Among the many interesting discoveries were bearded men, nicely sculptured. There was one face with so long a beard that it appeared to the Indians to resemble me, and they insisted that it was I when I lived thousands of years ago. On this account I became much respected among the natives. There was an old rascal among the men who professed to know where everything was, and he guided us to one building which we were anxious to see. While showing us over the place he told us a wild story about a live donkey living in the walls, and he would not go inside. The same party afterward betrayed us for $10. He stated that in a certain part of the building which was closed up a donkey could always be heard braying. That report caused the soldiers to dig immense holes in order to find the animal, and the workmen assured us that for our desecration we would be turned to statues. The most important discovery was made here. In a mausoleum we disinterred an enormous statue, weighing 3,000 pounds. With it were urns containing the cremated remains of the individual whom it represented. This was the famous statue of Chaacmol, now in the National Museum of the City of Mexico. We were about two months excavating down twenty feet below the mausoleum to the statue. I translated the inscription on the mausoleum and knew that below was either a mummy or a statue. The work took so long a time because the mausoleum was composed. of loose stones which fell down. To remedy this we made a palisade of saplings tied together with withes. The men were very stupid, not understanding what was wanted, and worked unwillingly, because they thought if they touched any of the antiquities they would die before the end of the year. We had to constantly watch them and urge them on, and even when they worked willingly they were slow. Twice they openly revolted. One day when they revolted Mrs. Le Plongeon stood by the stack of arms and threatened to shoot them on the slightest provocation, while I repaired the damage they had done by tearing down the palisade. We made ropes from the saplings with which to haul out the statue. After we got it out we had no means by which to carry it away, and so we made a rude cart and a track. We pushed it for five miles, making a road of levers as we went along.

DESCRIPTION OF THE STATUE.

"The statue was hewed out of limestone, and was smooth and beautifully fleshcolored. After we had gone five miles to receive orders from Gen. Palonimo to disarm, on account of a rebellion in progress. We could not ask the men to remain without arms, so we built a little house and left the statue in it on the cart, carefully wrapped in oilcloth. While the revolution was in progress we went to other ruins for seven months, hoping to go back and get it. While we were away one Peon Contreras, Director of the Museum of Merida, proposed to the Government that the statue should be searched for and placed in the museum at the Capitol. The Government was pleased at the suggestion and sent an army to get it. It was at this time we were betrayed for $10. The soldiers took the statue to Merida, the streets of which were decorated and the houses festooned. It was greeted by vast throngs of people, bands of music, poems, prose writings, and speeches. In fact no man was ever received with more honors than the great statue of Chaacmol. The Government wishing to be in the good graces of Diaz offered it to Mexico as a present. The Mexican Government accepted it, and sent the man ofwar Libertad for it and it was shipped to Vera Cruz and placed in the National Museum of the City of Mexico, where it remains to-day.

"Gen. Grant failed to take action on the subject of this colossal theft, as at that time he was encouraging railway connections with Mexico and feared to complicate matters. The American Minister at Mexico and also the Consul declined to interfere. I placed the matter in the hands of Senator Hoar, who brought it before the Senate, which ordered the whole thing printed. Here again Gen. Grant begged to have the theft dropped, fearing to complicate the close relations of the two Governments. Thus we lost the results of our work on the statue, which had cost us over $1,000. We are still hoping for an Administration which holds the honor of Americans in no light balance, and which will demand the immediate surrender of this great statue so pregnant in the history of the dawn of civilization.

"We spent several months at the principal city of Uxmal, where we found objects of equal interest. Among these were exquisite works of art and a statue supposed to be the brother of Chaacmol. This statue we carefully concealed after making a mold of it. Only we know where it is hidden, and if we never secure it I doubt if it will ever be found.

WHO CHAACMOL WAS.

"Chaacmol was defied after death and worshiped in several countries under as many names. At Chicken we found a shrine erected to his memory. Here were many beautiful mineral paintings, probably the only vestiges now existing of ancient American art. They represented religious ceremonies, warriors, domestic scenes, and part of the life of Chaacmol. Of these we made paintings. They were on the walls, which were smoothly and beautifully plastered. The paintings were in vegetable colors, the same as on the tombs of Egypt. They represent the history of the life of the individual buried beneath the mausoleum. We preserved fac-similes.

"The mastodon was venerated by the Mayas because it was the largest animal then in existence. We found it sculptured on all the monuments. They considered it a fit emblem of worship. The same emblem appears in the Troano manuscript in numerous instances. The mastodon faces are at the same time inscriptions and have their significant meanings. The mastodon probably became extinct about 10,000 years ago, and hence gives some idea of the age and time in which the Mayas lived, those lost races whose relics alone gives an inkling of their history. It seems that it was these people who colonized the earth, because the words of their language and customs, even the red hand, appear everywhere. The red hand marks of blood we found on the walls where they were placed thousands of years ago. The Egyptians always carried a corpse across the water shouting, 'To the West!' 'To the West!' These signs of respect were the same in ancient Yucatan.

"The Troano manuscript was one of the books which escaped destruction at the hands of the Spanish priests under Bishop Landa, who accompanied the conquerors when they came to this country for conquest. It is a book on geology revealing all the facts about the lost Isle of Atlantis and what was known about the creation of the earth in the most remote times. It is a scientific work, not at all like the Book of Genesis, as it confines itself to facts. This manuscript lies in the British Museum, where I secured a facsimile. I anticipated that I should find a key to it in Yucatan and was not disappointed. On all the monuments I found beautiful inscriptions. I worked out the meaning of the Troano manuscript from these inscriptions, letter by letter. The way we ascertained the correctness of my decipherment was in that whenever we followed the directions on the monuments we discovered where certain statues were hid, besides many other objects whose history was on the monuments. We spent in the excavations $48,000 of our private fortune and $5,000 advanced by Mr. Pierre Lorillard at the request of the late Sir Frederick Barlee, Governor of British Honduras. In our last explorations we made molds and casts of all the monuments and inscriptions in the buried cities of Uxmal and Chicken, These are not what are commonly called squeezers, but hard, shaped on the stone with iron bands, nothing being lost, so that plaster casts would be fac-similes. The object of making these molds was to be able to reproduce the inscriptions in any city so that students might study them without a voyage. We have 400 of these moldsenough to reproduce all the monuments, inscriptions, palaces, statues, etc.

"THE ORIGIN OF MAN.

"Let us see how other nations borrowed from or brought their customs and languages from ancient Yucatan, the land of the Mayas. The Greek alphabet is a Maya poem, each letter a line thereof. The Egyptian Maya dogs, and the custom of cutting off or curling their tails, are the The signs of respect, such as one same. arm crossing the breast and hand resting on the shoulder, are the same. They had the same dress and the same cut of the garments. In the center of the pyramids the triangular arches are the same. The Freemason signs are the same. In Uxmal there is a three-room temple where signs exist which any Freemason can recognize. The Egyptians and Mayas had each five unlucky days in a year which are the same. Their measure of time was the Each had a civil year of eighteen months and thirteen days, with identical latitude and declination of the sun. Each people believed that after passing through various transmigrations they would return to earth again. Each believed that they would on their return to earth use the same bodies, and hence the use of mummies with Egyptians and of statues like the individual with the Mayas; each people preserved the ashes of the dead. Blue was the color of each at the buriel service.

"I could go on indefinitely with similarities showing that the Egyptians came originally from Yucatan when it was an immense continent and before the submersion of the greater part of it. In those ancient times, some 12,000 or 15,000 years ago, and there is evidence that the Troano manuscript was written 8,000 years before the Christian era, the land of the Mayas or Mia, as it was called, contained a population of over 260,000,000 people."

Dr. Le Plongeon ceased speaking at this point and I spent several hours examining his marvelous material. I think his statements will bear scrutiny; certainly the evidence he presents is overwhelming and startling, and I hope he may find means to present it in extenso to the world in proper form.

LAMONI COLLEGE.

In this issue will be found Articles of Association for the proposed College at Lamoni, prepared by Bro. E. L. Kelley at the instance of Brn. Joseph Smith, G. A. Blakeslee and others, and endorsed by the Lamoni Board of Trade at a late session.

It was intended by the leading men of the church to seek to establish such an institution, when at all practicable, as far back as in the early sixties. When the matter of locating a permanent business centre for the church was being discussed and provided for, the education of the rising generation was also had under earnest consideration, and the subject has ever been one of living, growing interest with those whose duty it is to watch over and minister for the best interests of society and especially "the Church of the Lamb of God." Prominent among those who, during those early years and since, have ardently advocated it, are the First Presidency, the Twelve, the Bishopric, the High Priests, Seventy, Elders and other church officials, also a large proportion of the membership, prominent among whom are "Sr. Frances" and a host of other faith-

Of late the First Presidency and Bishopric, also many others of the ministry and membership, and some persons not members of the church, have had the matter under thoughtful discussion and have decided that the time has now come when an effort should be made to establish a suitable institution of learning, of an academical or collegiate character, at or very near the town of Lamoni, Iowa, and it has resulted, thus far, in publishing the proposed Articles of Association and providing for securing subscriptions to its

The objects sought by the projectors of the proposed school are most laudable, for "knowledge is power;" and the best means of attaining knowledge, in its advanced branches, is only through the well regulated high school.

The Saints need an institution of the kind where their children and the children of others can be educated without constant contact with sectarian bigotry, denominational dogma, and that blind, partizan zeal which will "compass sea and land to make one proselyte" to their creed-bound systems; for they and their children have suffered in the past not a little in this di-And they need also to step to rection. the fore-front and demonstrate the fact, that a college can be successfully operated purely as an educational institution, free from denominational bias or sectarian taint or intermingling. This can be done, and will be done in due time.

Lamoni offers a site that, in some respects, has unequaled advantages. It is "beautiful for situation." The moral tone of society, in and around the town is of a very superior character, and we trust it will be maintained and steadily advanced. In respect to its healthfulness, it is unsurpassed. Food and fuel supplies are easily obtained, and at cheapest rates. It is sufficiently remote from large cities and their allurements, excitements and confusion, to afford that quiet which is so essential to successful study, and pure and fruitful education.

Railway facilities are tolerable, with excellent prospects that the line now passing through the town will soon be completed, via Maryville, Missouri, to Rulo, Nebraska, also that two prominent roads from St. Louis to Omaha and one from St. Paul to Kansas City, will be built through the county at no distant time.

Brethren Bishop Blakeslee, Bishop Israel L. Rogers, David Dancer, J. H. Peters, Robert Winning, Elijah Banta, the First Presidency, and many others, are of the opinion that, to secure best results and make the institution pay good dividends on its capital stock, the amount of stock to begin with should be sufficiently liberal to erect commodious buildings and furnish them in a suitable manner. On this point Bishop Blakeslee wrote us as follows: "I think the capital stock should be $50,000 or more. I would not be willing to take hold of the movement with less. And I do not believe in taking hold of any enterprise and letting it fail." David Dancer and others with whom we have consulted, coincide in this view.

In conclusion, we have no hesitancy in saying that a College at Lamoni, of the kind contemplated in the "Articles of Incorporation" alluded to, can be made a decided, permanent, and growing success in every way; and that, in the hands of competent managers, it will pay fair dividends, annually, on every dollar of its capital stock, making the stock a safe and permanent investment to all shareholders, whether members of the Reorganized Church or not. And it should be borne in mind that stock may be subscribed by any and all persons, but that only the majority of the managers are to be members of the Reorganized Church.

We bid the enterprise good-speed, and we trust all who can wisely do so will take stock in it as soon as the opportunity offers, so that an organization may be speedily effected and the work of building go forward rapidly.

ELDER W. J. SMITH'S PAMPHLET.

Some little while ago Elder W. J. Smith, whose mission is in Canada and Michigan, sent the manuscript of a pamphlet entitled "Whitmerism Unmasked," to the Herald Office to be printed for him, with the request that it be printed as written. In reading the manuscript we found a statement that Dr. William E. McLellin was baptized into the church under Pres. B. Young in 1847. Not having any information of the correctness of this statement, we at once wrote Elder Smith, requesting his authority for such statement. The letter failed to reach him before the pamphlet went to press; and not knowing but what he might be in posssession of data to sustain his statement, and not being authorized to change the manuscript, the office published as directed. Subsequently, Elder Smith wrote us that he had taken the statement made by the HERALD respectng Dr. McLellin having been baptized in 1847 as the basis of his statement, and considering that the Utah church was the only branch of the so-called Mormon church actively propagandizing and baptizing proselytes, concluded it must have been into this Dr. McLellin was baptized. We wrote Elder Smith upon receipt of his letter that he had made a great mistake, and calling his attention to the facts as we understood them; also stating to him that the baptism of Dr. McLellin, referred to in the HERALD as having taken place in 1847, was the one of which the doctor himself informed the readers of Zion's Ensign published by him at Kirtland, Ohio, and occurred at that place in obedience to what he stated was direction from the Lord to begin a work of reconstruction and rebuilding of the church there. Some others were baptized at the same time, and others still later. We suggested to Elder Smith that such statement should at once be corrected: for, however seemingly good an argument made upon such a statement, if true, might be, the statement being untrue, all or any argument based on it would be bad.

The HERALD is not responsible in any sense for Elder W. J. Smith's pamphlet, nor for any of the statements in it, any more than it is for the personal sermons of an elder in the field, or for any private printing done at the Herald Office by the Board of Publication in its business capacity. For this reason, and for the further reason that we do not deem falsehood and erroneous statements essential to the good of any cause, much less to one of a religious character, and do not propose to be compromised or concluded by such statements when the nature of them is known to us, we do not sanction nor sustain, either the statement made by Elder Smith nor the argument made upon it.

What course Bro. W. J. Smith may pursue in reference to it we do not know, as we have not yet heard from him; but justice to ourselves, to the elders in the field, the readers of the Herald, and the memory of Dr. Wm. E. McLellin, (who, however much he may have been opposed to us while he was living, he also, so far as we know, always expressed himself as opposed to polygamy and the rule of Brigham Young,) all demand that we now explain. We believe it to be as improper to knowingly misrepresent an opponent as to assume false grounds in support of one's own cause.

HYPERCRITICAL.

Editors Herald:—In your answer to the first question in the Herald of December 22d, 1888, page 812, you state that the bread should "be broken and blessed," and cite as authority several witnesses. I suppose you expected your readers to examine what the witnesses have to say upon the subject. Matthew, who wrote A. D. 38, states, 26:26, that Jesus "blessed it and brake it." Again, Paul, who wrote A. D. 56, tells us that "Jesus took bread: and when he had given thanks he brake it."—I Cor. 11:23; while Mark, who wrote A. D. 65 says, "Jesus took bread and blessed and brake it."—Mark 14:22.

These three witnesses are each and severally against your instructions. Nephi 8:6 is in your favor, but Doctrine and Covenants 17:11 has no reference. Doctrine and Covenants 17:22 gives the word of blessing. We were told in a sermon by the president of the church December 2d, 1888, (and not December 1st) as stated in the Herald, page 794, that we should stand by that which is "written," and if any man, prophet or angel brought anything that clashed with that which is "written" we should refuse it. His father tells us in his history, that the word of the Lord came "when also we were commanded to bless bread and break it."-Times and Seasons, vol. 3, p. 915 He was not neglectful, careless nor indifferent unto the word of the Lord, for of the sixth day of April, 1830, he writes: "We then took bread, blessed it and brake it with them."-Times and Seasons, vol. 3, p. 944. I do not write to find fault, nor with a desire to increase division, neither would I refuse to honor my Redeemer and seek for increased spiritual strength in the partaking of the bread forsooth, he who should administer might so elect to break the bread before blessing it, but in the light of the majority of the testimony of the witnesses you have, as Bro. John T. Davis would say, "that cart on the wrong end of the horse." I hope the time has fully come when no man can preach or publish that which clashes with the written law, without a halt being called and the fog and mist cleared away. For truth unsullied and unity divine.

To the foregoing we reply: The question asked us was as follows: "In partaking of the sacrament, should the officer administering break the bread, or should each member break a portion as it is passed to them?" Our answer was that, "it should be broken and blessed and administered by one having authority so to do," We answered the question as to who should do thus and so, not as to which act should have precedence in order. However, while Matthew, Mark, Luke and Paul in their several narrations state that Christ blessed the bread before breaking it, it appears from Mormon's abridgment of Nephi's account (B. M. Nephi 8:6, p. 456) that Christ upon that occasion took the bread and "brake and blessed it" and also commanded others to do likewise.

We remembered when answering the question that the revelation given April 11th, 1887, says, "and the officer may break the bread before it is blessed, and pour the wine before it is blessed; or he may, if he be so led, bless the bread before it be broken and the wine before it be poured," etc., and hence knew that the answer was both generally and technically correct.

To harmonize these Scriptures the proper conclusion is that it is immaterial whether the blessing or breaking of the bread has precedence in order; otherwise Christ either made a mistake upon one occasion in administering and teaching, and the Spirit has erred in the last communication to the church, or some of the sacred writers have erred in their narratives and thus placed the Scriptures in conflict.

If the brother insists that we are bound to bless the bread before it is broken simply because a "majority" of the sacred writers mention its administration in that order, hadn't he better offer an explanation on behalf of the minority, instead of tilting his lance at the editors, especially when the said minority are no less than the Savior and the Spirit?

He says: "I hope the time has fully come when no man can preach or publish that which clashes with the written law without a halt being called and the fog and mist cleared away." We, too, hope so, and for that reason call attention to what is written in the three books and object to the accepting of one to the exclusion of the other two. Will the brother please "go for" those who have "published" the Book of Mormon and the late revelation in the Book of Covenants. If we want to keep out of fog and mist had we not better say and do according to all that is "written," "every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God" and not be hypercritical and strain at a gnat? We think his statements are rash, and that the objections are not well taken. Let us be careful in our criticisms and just in our conclusions. "Be sure you are right and then go ahead."

THE PRONOUN "WE."

"WE, pronoun; plural of I."—Webster.
A glance at almost any issue of the HERALD is sufficient to inform anyone that our correspondents too often make use of the word "we" when referring to themselves in singular, and—as far as the use of pronouns is concerned—that they have, in the great majority of instances at least, become a law to themselves.

We (the editors) are satisfied that the writers to the HERALD have formed the habit of improperly using the pronoun "we" in preference to "I" because it appears to be freer from possible egotism and personal display; and also because of its frequent appearance in the editorial columns of the HERALD.

Its use as referring to the acts of one person, however, is improper, and not according to grammatical rules. The pronoun I should always be used in the first person when reference is made to but one individual. It is the proper word by which a speaker or writer should denote himself. The word we is the plural of I, and can not be used properly unless reference is made to two or more persons.

When used editorially it is supposed to refer to those in charge of the editorial department and may refer to two or more.

A brother should not be considered as speaking or writing in self praise if he makes proper use of the King's English and uses the word I when referring to himself, and we hope that it will be used when its use is proper. Does not the word "we" in that sense rather look as if one thought himself equal to two or any indefinite number?

PLAINNESS OF SPEECH.

In this connection we wish to call the attention of our contributors to the use of language in general as taught by our best and most progressive educators at the present day. The ablest preceptors who teach and write the English language, and whose works are regarded as models of good style are noted for the simplicity of their language.

The directness of their style is appreciated and its pointedness and terseness commend it as being easily comprehended. They waste no words and make no display of unnecessary and unduly long words in explaining their meaning.

Our language probably contains words taken from almost every other language, but the mother tongue is Anglo Saxon. It is the true basis of the English language and its simplicity and comparative purity are acknowledged by all educators.

The Apostle Paul is an excellent example of one skilled in the use of words. Direct and incisive, he always selected the best word to express his meaning and by admirable selections from an extensive vocabulary was able to clearly convey what he desired to teach with exactness and brevity.

Among the good accomplishments that we are called upon to possess let us learn to excel in the propriety of our language, for it is written that by our words shall we be justified and by our words shall we be condemned. Also, that for every idle word men shall give an account.

NEWSPAPER YARNS.

THE New York World regales its readers with a foolish fiction, professedly from "John Y. Nelson," in respect to Brigham Young and his hegira west, and is valuable only as showing what false self-evident yarns are sometimes published in influential newspapers as the truth. Nelson asserts that "late in the fall of 1846," when he was at Cottonwood Springs, Nebraska, "Brigham Young came along and asked my Mexican friend and myself to be his guides across the Rocky Mountains, promising us pay." But what is fatal to this yarn of Nelson, Brigham and the pioneers left Winter Quarters in April, 1847, for the west, reaching Salt Lake Valley July 24th the same year; while Nelson states that "towards Christmas we struck Ham's fork, in western Nebraska, after making a journey of nearly one thousand miles, where they "were snowed up until the next spring." How easily and willingly even would-be respectable people believe falsehood if peddled against those they dislike.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

REPLYING to inquiries concerning games of chance, we can only say that they are not justifiable for the membership of the church. All games such as horse-racing, shooting at target, shooting matches, cards, dice, etc., etc., involve waste of time and money, immoral associations, and should be avoided by all lovers of wisdom, truth and purity. "Abstain from all appearance of evil."

A letter from Bro. Richard Scott of Galena, Indiana informs us that the brethren in that section of country are hard at work battling against error, but not with entirely flattering prospects. He enjoys the influences of the work and desires its

Bro. William F. D. Brandon writing from McCann, Nebraska, states that he would like any of the elders who can do so to labor in his locality. It is a new country but he thinks good could be done. He lives ten miles south-west of Georgia Station on the Fremont, Elkhorn and Missouri Valley Railroad. He also states that there is some government land there, and that he would be glad to have some Saints settle there.

Sr. Mary Annay who resides at Highland Station, Doniphan county, Kansas, writes inquiring if there are any Saints in that vicinity. She also states that herself and family would like to have any of the elders call and preach there or any of the Saints to visit them. She should correspond with Bro. Daniel S. Munns, president of the Central Kansas district at Good Intent, Kansas, who can furnish all needed information.

CHRIST'S BIRTHDAY.

Buck's Theological Dictionary, page 94, says of Christmas: "The first footsteps we find of the observance of this day are in the second century. That it was kept before the time of Constantine we have a melancholy proof." Chamber's Library of Universal Knowledge, reprint, vol. 4, p. 270, says, "It is nevertheless, almost certain that December 25th can not be the nativity of the Savior, for it is the height of the rainy season in Judea and shepherds could hardly be watching their flocks by night in the plains."

Library of Universal knowledge, vol. 1, A. A. Dodge, American Edition, page 499 says: "Dionysius, who was the author of the Christian Era, began the first year on the 25th of March. . . . . . This beginning the year on the 25th of March was the practice in most Italian States as late (in Pisa) as 1745." In England in the 12th century the practice prevailed of beginning the year the 25th of March, and that was the general practice until the reformation of the calendar in 1751 by parliamentary law which directed that the year 1752 should be reckoned from the first of January."

We give our readers this week the comments upon Christmas with the foregoing sketches of history to awaken thought and investigation. We are living in a day of increased knowledge, and it is our duty to give a meek answer to all that ask us of our faith. If Pope Julius in the 4th century decreed the 25th day of December to be observed as Christ's birth-day, and if prior to that time it was unsettled, and observed in a more favored season of the year, to comport with the shepherds watching their flocks of sheep in the fields by night, when we are asked the day of the year our Savior was born, let us answer, We have no divine information. The change of reckoning the length of the year as well as its beginning, with the uncertain traditions of three centuries after the birth of Christ, render it uncertain as to which day of the month of any of the twelve that now constitute our year it occurred upon.

The above from the Advent and Sabbath Advocate is of interest to the readers of the HERALD. We have long believed that the birthday of our Savior was the one on which the church was organized -April 6th. Upon this subject we have had "divine information" in the following revelation from the Doctrine and Covenants, Sec.17:1: "The rise of the church of Christ in these last days, being one thousand eight hundred and thirty years since the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ in the flesh, it being regularly organized and established agreeably to the laws of our country, by the will and commandment of God, in the fourth month, and on the sixth day of the month which is called April."

The reasonable objection against December 25th being the correct date of Christ's birth, namely, that on account of its being in the height of the rainy season the shepherds could hardly then be watching their flocks by night on the plains, can not be urged against April 6th. For Dr. Smith in his Bible Dictionary, page 789 says: "Rain **** is very rare [in Palestine] in April, and even in Lebanon the showers that occur are generally light. In the Valley of the Jordan, the barley harvest begins as early as the middle of April, and the wheat a fortnight later; in Lebanon the grain is seldom ripe before the middle of June. *** The whole period from October to March now constitutes only one continued season of rain, without any regularly intervening term of prolonged fine weather."

John T. Perry in his work "Sixteen Savior's or One"—a reply to Kersey Grave's "World's Sixteen Crucified Saviors"—says, page 48: "All evidence points to early April as the true date of the Savior's birth." We have noticed that some writers who have made a close study of the prophecies have placed early April as a time in which very important events will take place in certain years to come.

All these testimonies sustain the true character of the inspiration of Joseph Smith, who, though not learned according to the world, was marvelously blessed by the divine Spirit in all his prophetic utterances. The more we study the word of the Lord revealed through him, the more we will find it to be in harmony with the predictions of the ancient prophets, and the events of our own times.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

From Blue Rapids, Kansas, Bro. L. Decker recently wrote in this cheerful strain:

"We had a feast last week; Bro. Shute was here and preached seven sermons to crowded houses. We had a glorious time; one to be remembered. Weather here is pleasant and all is well."

Bro. J. A. Currie, Jr., wrote in a late letter as follows:

"I have never enjoyed myself as of late. Have had the gift of prophecy, and it came to pass exactly, thank God. Also the gift of discernment. O, how my heart has been made glad to know that God was with me to own and bless. I think I will have to meet Mr. Z. Brooks (now a Campbellite) in Wilson county, on my next trip. He wrote the preface to one edition of the Book of Mormon, but I am told that he denies being an elder. I am about to engage in a discussion with a Christadelphian."

In a late letter Bro. D. S. Mills says:

"I have just returned from San Bernardino. We had a grand time at the dedication of our nice church. Bro. Joseph preached with much power, and good is being done. We see now having fine warm rains."

Bro. John A. Taylor wrote of late from Carbonate Camp, Dakota, renews for the HERALD and says:

"I would feel lost without it, for it is a great comfort to me. In it I read of so many good meetings that I can scarcely remain here. My faith in the latter day work is unshaken and I hope the time will soon come when I shall be able to do greater good for the Master's cause."

Sr. Charlotte Stewart, of Diamond, Ohio, orders the Hope for some of her young friends, and of some to whom she formerly sent them she says:

"And now that they have joined the Saints, I want them to help. A wise saying is, "Be just and then be generous." I would not be without it (the Hope) for twice its cost a year; and others have said the same. I know they are working a great work quietly. The girls at the Zenia school, asked Miss Zebb to bring the back numbers to the school, as she has been there only one year, and she took them. She has read them for years."

Bro. Thomas Daley wrote December 22d to Bro. Heman C. Smith, Perkins, California:

"I arrived here this morning, feeling pretty well tired out. I have spoken almost every night for sixty days; baptized twenty-three. I devoted my time to four places—Diamond Valley, Fairview, Mottsville and Genoa. I will rest a few days and then strike out I guess to Eureka. I feel moved in that direction."

Bro. Thomas Taylor, in charge of the British mission, in a late letter wrote:

"The work in this mission is moving along very satisfactorily; the Lord is blessing his people, and prospects are very encouraging for the future."

In a letter dated at Brazil, Iowa, December 29th, Bro. J. T. Williams says:

"Since I located here I have preached twice in the M. E. Church, with the promise to preach there whenever it is not occupied by them. They turn out good. This is a new field, and with an effort good might be done. I intend to be alive in the work here while I remain, trusting my labor will not be in vain."

In its issue the last day of the past year, the Chicago Tribune has this to say of the war portents hanging low over the eastern hemisphere, to be followed too soon we fear, by the "red horse" and all the direful calamities that follow in its train. But the Saints, those familiar with ancient and modern prophecies touching these last days, should not be surprised at the condition of the world's affairs, for through the ministrations of Joseph Smith, the "Choice Seer," a vast amount of information has been furnished them on these matters:

THE EUROPEAN WAR CLOUD NEW-YEAR'S DAY.

It is impossible to believe that there can be much sincere rejoicing in Europe New-Year's Day. All the felicitations and congratulations must be a hollow mockery in the presence of the black war cloud which hangs over the Continent. The great nations of the Old World are rapidly nearing that point when they must either fight or go into backruptcy, and it is, therefore, the interest of those which are the weakest to do their warring while they may. For years each Power has been seeking to outdo its rivals in expenditures for military purposes. There has been a steadily increasing competition to get the most deadly rifles, the farthest-throwing and most powerful cannon, the strongest forts, the largest steelclad men-of-war, and the biggest armies. France is now turning out 50,000 rifles a month of a new pattern in which she places great hope. The ball it carries weighs but about half what the standard fifty-calibre bullet does, so that the magazine will contain twice as many and the soldier can carry double the quantity of ammunition he now does. France also claims to have discovered a new powder which is nearly smokeless, besides being very powerful. England is discarding the small arms she has been using and is trying to get better ones, while Germany, Austria, and Russia are all bending their energies in the same direction. Each nation, except England, is piling on to its subjects all the taxes they will bear, and is borrowing from every capitalist all that he can be induced to lend. The number of men under arms, taken from productive pursuits and fed at the expense of the toilers, is growing larger and larger. From the English Channel to the banks of the Volga Europe is one vast camp.

The two prominent antagonists are naturally France and Germany. The former, with the heaviest debt in the world and with a severe financial setback in the failure of the Panama Canal, is still spending money as lavishly as if she had the revenue of Golconda and Ophir to draw on. She has just voted an extra appropriation of $150,000,000 for war purposes and is now expending over $40,000,000 in the construction of a strategic railway which shall link together all the French railway lines of the north, south, and east and facilitate the prompt and undisurbed centralization of all her soldiers on the German frontier. Germany and Austria, on their side are building similar roads on their eastern borders, so that they may be in a position to meet any sudden attack from Russia, which is apparently concentrating her forces for an onslaught on her western neighbors. Everywhere new forts are constructing and every frontier line is becoming a frowning fortification.

The present indications are that when the clash of arms comes, as it surely must, it will be the east and the west against the centre-Russia and France versus Germany, Austria, and Italy. England will be a bystander at the commencement, and for commercial reasons will be strongly inclined to remain so. Whether she will be able to stand neutral while the giant and bloody struggle goes on, is the question. If drawn into the fight she will doubtless side with Germany, not so much for family reasons as because what continental fighting she has done has been against France and Russia-the former an enemy for centuries-but never against Germany, whose ally she has ben since the Protestant Reformation and the conflict with Louis the Great. As to the result of such a combat of armed giants it is useless to speculate. Probably it can only end in the annihilation of one or two powers and a remodeling of the map of Europe. War has gotten to be so expensive and destructive that it is necessary to make a clean, thorough job of it when once commenced. After it is all over the inexorable necessities of the case will probably force a general disarmament, so that there may be more men to work and to pay taxes on the fearful

If war comes the duty of the United States is plain. It has no entangling alliances and should make none. It should push on with the building of its navy and the improvement of the dynamite gun for coast defenses. If England becomes mixed up in the war her commerce will be likely to share the same fate that ours did during the Rebellion, and we ought to profit by her losses and become the common carrier of the warring world. We will have abundant, good food, which our merchants will be glad to sell for spot cash to the combatants; and we shall also stand ready to act as arbiters, whenever they so desire. We could give them much good advice now, but they would not heed it. We could tell them it would be much wiser to disband their huge armies and establish an international supreme court to adjust all their disputes, instead of settling them by a dreadful appeal to arms. They will see all this plainly for themselves when the impending conflict is over and they are all ruined, and may then adopt the advice. But it is doubtful if anything can avert the war which seems to be imminent. If it does come let us hope it will be the last which this century will see. We hope the next one will have sense enough to refrain from determining disputes by such costly and useless butcheries.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"Within himself he found the law of right; He walked by faith and not the letter's sight, And read his Bible by the Inward Light."

BY WHAT LIGHT ARE WE READING?

In the Central Christian Advocate of December 5th Edward H. Rogers discusses The Social Crisis at some length, and holds this problem up to the view of the public, turning upon it lights so strong that we think many a Christian who reads it will be constrained to read again, and, having read, to ponder over the stubborn facts contained therein. We wish the limits of the Column would allow of our publishing it entire, but as this can not be done we will try to give a brief synopsis. He starts out with the assertion that his own acquaintance embraces many intelligent Christian men and women whose convictions are firm that the present scheme of doctrines and practices in the churches embodies stupendous fallacies. That organic, rather than individual defects exist, in the present working of Protestantism. He says: "There are many reasons, and some of them are very good ones, why wealth and respectability should dread the possibility of a political uprising of the common people; but it is passing strange that the broad and deep currents of revelation which point unmistakably to the same results which working people desire, should excite no apprehension or notice even among the same classes -The expectation of the poor shall not perish forever. . . . The Lord will maintain the cause of the afflicted and the right of the poor.' The history of the world furnishes abundant evidence that nations may make great advances in the moral and intellectual culture of their individual units but still be socially rotten at the core. It can not be doubted that this was the condition of the Hebrew people at the time of Christ. We have the instances of Gamaliel, Joseph of Arimathea, Nathaniel whom the Lord himself pronounced 'without guile' and the members of the family at Bethany, as evidences that individual culture had made great advances, but the nation itself was on the verge of dissolution because it had completely disregarded and disobeyed the 'Law.' The destruction of Jerusalem was only an epitome of what has happened to all the ancient people, and it is what will happen to us, unless our 'righteousness excels that of the Pharisees.' That is, unless the voice of the suffering people of the country can be heard over that of the cultured classes, our case is hopeless."

Enlarging upon this part of his theme, the writer goes on to show how the silken bands of courtesy modify and restrain the fearless utterances of the ministers, and the unsatisfactory nature of the pietism which wins the poor to a higher plane of life and there leaves them without placing them in circumstances to earn a sufficient income to comply with the demands of the elevated life upon which they have entered. He says, "There is an absurd disproportion between their income, with its precarious and sorrowful conditions, and the demands which are made upon church members. Superficial temperance advocates often quote the large sums spent for liquor by the working classes, and argue that their discontent with their wages is without cause. They assume that sobriety would bring prosperity. But it is now evident that it does not bring the degree of pecuniary ease which would sustain such conclusions. Churches cost two or three times as much as saloons do. The moment a working man enters a church he is brought with his family into emulative contact with the well dressed, ease seeking, middle classes of society. The expenses for clothing alone, which are forced upon him in this way, are large enough to beggar many of the low paid classes. . . . The fact is that the whole atmosphere of the modern church, on its secular sides, is nearly prohibitory of the membership of the working classes. I find the true reason for the mutual estrangement of the churches from the people and the people from the churches, in the material aspect of the situation. . . . It is fast becoming evident in the south, as it already has in the north, that the churches can not maintain their hold upon the common people. The defect is a radical one; to attempt to reach and to remedy it by the present pietistic measures is as impotent as the ravings of the priests of Baal in the presence of the fire which descended upon the offering of Elijah."

If it be asked us, "What has this matter to do with the Home Column?" we answer, it is one which should present itself to the earnest consideration of every one who reads it. This man has struck but one chord, it is true, of the inharmonious strains between Protestantism and the people; but it is none the less an important one. It occurs to us, however, as strange that he did not see more clearly just where the remedy lies. When Christ came to the earth he came to seek and to save that which was lost. He brought not his glory with him, but to all outward appearance was like those he sought to elevate. He taught his fellows that self denial was absolutely necessary in this world. He would have those who were exalted, humble themselves; not providing for the worldly exaltation of those who were poor, but offering to all alike the true riches. Protestantism to-day confesses her inability to reach the common people. Why? Because when they want to worship God there is no place found for them in the costly edifices erected to his worship, and apart from all else the writer admits," that "the expenses for clothing alone are large enough to beggar many of them." Could they not wear plainer and cheaper clothing? We answer by asking you, "Do you not believe they would be glad to do so if those others who profess to be interested in the salvation of souls would set them the example? Why should it never enter into their minds or hearts to follow the example of Christ, to condescend to men of low estate? Why in the name of Christianity, in the name of the brotherhood of mankind, should this thought never enter into their calculations—never be thrown into the balance? Surely there is something at fault in the "light by which they read."

By what light are we reading? There is a lamp which should be a light unto the feet of every one who has undertaken to walk in the narrow way leading to life and salvation, and that lamp is the word of God. Are we reading by this light, and has it reflected its beams into our hearts and lives so long and so thoroughly that we find our footsteps firmly planted and are not as those who walk in the dark? In fact, "Are we children of the day, and not of the night?"

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Dec. 4th.

Sister Frances:-I can not but wonder why there are not more letters from the sisters in the east. I was glad to read sister B's letter from Boston, but is there only one among the eastern sisters that dares to write, or are they asleep? I know there is good talent in the Boston, Brockton and Providence branches. There are many sound, thrilling testimonies that might be borne to the world, and that might attract the attention of some weary one, and cause them to arise and renew their strength. I, too, perhaps, have been asleep; but may the Spirit of the Lord awake me to a sense of my duty. If I can write, may He inspire me with new zeal, and give me power from above. I will not write a long letter this first time.

I feel that God will bless the Prayer League and every effort in that direction. Many, many times I have proved Him to be a prayer-hearing and prayer-answering God, the same to-day as of old, always ready to guide the steps of His trusting children. My husband and three chidren are members of the Church of Jesus Christ, but my prayer is that we may all be baptized anew with the Holy Spirit. Let us as a family have an interest in the united prayers of my sisters.

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I am your sister in Christ, Addie V. Hoxie.

STRATFORD, Essex, England, Nov. 11th. Dear Sister Frances: - I feel a great desire to join the Preyer League. After a very careful reading of sister Eleanor's letter on the subject, dated May 12th, I feel to endorse all the conditions therein set forth. I have great faith in prayer, having received many blessings in the past, through prayer and fasting; and I sincerely hope in the future to receive many more. I know that if we would have blessings, we must live for them. How beautifully this is illustrated by sister Emma, in the Herald of June 2d. Oh, how my heart rejoices when reading the Hevald, from time to time. I often wish that I were better educated, that I might be better able to convey the knowledge I have to others. I was baptized by Elder Norton, when Father Lewis was on a mission here, over twenty-one years ago, and when there were only six members in London, and not a sister at all. The church here has passed through many trials; but there have been times of prosperity and great happiness and I am thankful to say that the present outlook is very promising. For the first fourteen years of my membership I was as firm and immovable as a rock. The greater the difficuities the church was in, the more zealous I was, pouring out my soul in prayer and tears, accompanied by fastings on its behalf before the Lord; but alas, how frail we are! There came a time of stumbling which entered into my domestic affairs, so that neither my husband nor I entered a meeting in seven years. Oh, how I grieve when I think of it. Yet for me it seemed unavoidable, as I should have gone in open violation of my husband's wishes if I had gone; but praise the Lord, he has at last answered my prayers, and has opened the way for me, and I am now in full communion with the Saints of Zion's Hope branch. I am not able to go very often, as yet, but trust the time will soon come when I shall be able to be a worker as well as a worshipper. It has been a severe trial for me to be an idler for so many years, as I was formerly rather active, being secretary of the United Sisters' Mission; which was organized some years ago, enough in the there were sisters church to form a society, sister Emma Bradshaw being president. I was always glad to be able to do anything that was required of me. Dear sisters, do not be backward in the well-begun work, for I know of a surety that the Lord will bless your efforts. Our sisters' mission was greatly blessed; being the means of doing a great amount of good, both of a spiritual and temporal nature. I would love to be actively engaged again, but dare not think of it at present, only in my prayers. My great trouble now is my husband. Oh. I trust he may not sin away the day of grace. I ask an interest in the prayers of the sisters.

HASTINGS, Victoria, Nov. 20th.

Dear Herald:-Since the conference at Queen's Ferry, one month ago to-day, we have been laboring in some new openings within a few miles of said place. No additions have been made to the church, but we believe the seed to have been sown on good ground, for many took quite an interest in the new doctrine. There are always men ready to oppose the work, but their opposition, as a rule, causes more to come and hear, and thus the work spreads more rapidly. We are expecting Bro. and Sr. Smith to spend a few weeks in Victoria before leaving Australia. It was hard enough to see Bro. Burton and family taking their departure, but I can hardly tell what it will be when Bro. Smith sails away for Tahiti. It almost makes the boys feel as if they were left alone in the great battle for the victory, but we trust that the Conference will not forget this part of the great harvest-field when it appoints the laborers. The work is moving slowly and the good seed that Bro. Burton has sown amidst trials and troubles is beginning to spring forth, and we hope that the time will speedily come when the Lord will cause those that believe to stand out for the truth. Our hearts were made glad when we saw that the Prayer League had set apart a special time to pray for this mission, as well as for other parts of the vineyard. If ever there was a mission that needed praying for, it surely is Australia; for the field is a large one, and there will be only two boys steadily in the field after Bro. Smith leaves, and both of those were put to the plow before they knew what it was to have the harness on. Well do I remember the words of Bro. Joseph, when the Twelve told him that I had had no experience in the work. He said, "Australia is a good place to get it."

Yes, and after we get an ample sufficiency to carry us through life there will be plenty left for others, so don't forget to send some one to this part as soon as possible. We will do all in our power to establish the cause and spread it as far and wide as we can, so that the honest seeker for truth may be preparing himself for that great and notable day when the Lord shall come to gather out the righteous from the four winds of heaven, and to reign with them on earth in peace and happiness while he is preparing the church to deliver it up to the Father a pure church. May the Lord guide us into all truth, is my earnest prayer.

C. A. BUTTERWORTH.

Plum Hollow, Iowa, Dec. 20th.

Bro. Blair:-After leaving you at Underwood, I went to Hickory Grove with Bro. Davis and preached in the Ransom school house to fair sized congregations, held two meetings in private houses, administered the sacrament to the Saints by their request, and felt blessed in all of our labors at that place. Went with Bro. Davis to Niobe, and secured a hall for preaching to be attended to by Brn. Davis and Peak. The two Brighamite elders, Minor and Shadwick, we met by request at the house of Bro. Underwood, one of their members. Bro. Davis, with myself, put in the time faithfully and interestingly, for three hours. We had the law and the prophets to our aid, with the tracts on polygamy, successorship, and the Reorganization, with ten years experience in Utah. We talked, and when they demurred, we read the documents. These men have but little foothold, as Bro. Underwood himself does not believe polygamy, nor any of its kindred doctrines. I spent one week in Union Grove, held meetings, visited old and tried friends, and hope good was done. Among these were the Brn. Chapman from Utah, and Thomas, with Bro. Limmish. Will those Brn. please accept thanks for kindnesses received, and help for traveling expenses.

From thence I came to Neola, and found Brn. Davis and Peak sounding the gospel trump to attentive audiences. I stayed with them one night and occupied the rostrum with good liberty. The Presbyterian preacher was present, and had attended two meetings before that night. I preached four sermons in Council Bluffs, and was glad to meet with many old friends, with whom we had spent many happy hours in years past.

Returned to this district November 23d, and commenced services in Bartlett and Egypt. Full and packed houses for one week. From there to Elm Creek church, now in the Plum Hollow Branch; last week in the Ross School House; this week in the Dutch Hollow, and College Hill school houses. We are holding preaching services every night, having excellent liberty and the very best of attention by those apparently deeply interested. In addition to this, we, with the officers, are visiting the members of the branch, and others, who are near the kingdom, and have held four social meetings in the after part of the day, in which the Holy Spirit has been abundantly poured out opon us in a manifest manner, causing the hearts of all to rejoice in the truths of the gospel.

The work we are now engaged in is a work of necessity in this branch; and we say to the brethren of other places, We shall get to you just as soon as possible. Be patient and press on in the good cause, remembering the duties and obligations imposed upon us as God's Saints. Please do not forget that Bro. William Leeka is still Bishop's Agent for this district. Let all try to do their duty in this respect, that their souls may be developed by their good works, and thereby "lay up treasures in heaven;" for to all such, the rich blessings promised of God, will come.

The young and new members, that joined our ranks during the last camp meeting, are still rejoicing in God "through Jesus Christ our Lord." Many speak very highly of your labors, also of the labors of others who wrought so earnestly and effectually for good in this vicinity; and 'all say, 'Please come again."

Tabor, Dec. 31st.—The Saints and those not members, often express their great satisfaction with your preaching while among us. I have spent three weeks in Plum Hollow branch; preached in four different school houses, to large and very attentive audiences; have preached six times in the Shady Grove church, and have calls from every quarter. I must now start for Farm Creek, Keystone and Wheeler Grove, for I have not visited these places since you were with us there last spring. Peter Frederickson, of Wheeler's Grove, was baptized of late. He has been a good helper to the cause for many years, taking a very active part in finances.

Yours for the truth,

HENRY KEMP.

MICHIGAN BAR, Cal. Dec. 9th.

Dear Herald: I can say I know that the latter day work is the work of God, and I know God has again spoken to his people by Joseph Smith, and warned us to repent. I know that God in His mercy has blessed me many times. I have been sick and have been healed by the prayer of faith. I love this glorious latter day work, for it has brought me hours of comfort. I was baptized some twelve years ago and have never regretted the step, but I have not done as well as I should. Pray for me, dear sisters, that I may be an instrument in the hand of God to bring some souls unto Him. I sometimes think I can not do anything for the Master; then I think if I can not do as well as some, I will do the best I can. If I can not preach I can help the sick and afflicted ones. I can serve God with His help, without that I can not do anything.

Your sister,
SARAH NILSSON.

GARAFRAXA, Ontario, Dec. 19th.

Editors Herald:-A year and some three or four weeks have passed since the writer was privileged to make an opening here, three miles from "Grand Valley." Although the "sound" of the work had reached here by Bro. Wm. Taylor of Masonville branch, he having talked the doctrine to his father's household where we first had the privilege of preaching here. Our effort was followed by Bro. J. A. McIntosh for some two weeks, when we returned and had the pleasure of baptizing five persons, (Bro. Wm. Taylor's father, Bro. Jacob, and two sisters, and a Mr. Elliott.) Bro. McIntosh then made an opening in Luther Township about five miles from here, the writer continuing in this neighborhood about a week, when three more were baptized, several more being almost ready, when Bro. W. J. Smith came to our assistance and twelve more were baptized by him. He left and we returned and continued to hold the fort. Bro. McIntosh soon returned and commenced holding meetings in Grand Valley, so ably presenting the truth and having such a large audience as to arouse the coppersmiths, (sky pilots) to send to Toronto for Rev. T. L. Wilkinson, the great debater of Methodism, to meet Bro. McIntosh in debate, which took place on the subject of baptism, and lasted for eight nights., being a complete victory for the truth. None have been baptized in Grand Valley yet, but we hope in the near future (several are believing) that there may be some.

The writer continued labor at several points surrounding Bro. Taylor's and here, since opening, baptized twenty-nine persons here, W. J. Smith twelve, and Bro. John Taylor, Sr. priest, three, which with two by letter from Masonville, makes a branch of forty-six members, which was organized Sept. 13th and named Garafraxa branch, by Bro. John H. Lake, who also gladdened our hearts with his presence for a few days, Bro. James Mortimer being called and ordained to the office of an elder and Bro. John Taylor Sr. to the office of a priest. Since the organization a neat brick church edifice has been built by the Saints at "Taylor's corner," which was opened and dedicated on Sunday Dec. 2d, when some of the brethren from Egremont, Proton, and Masonville were present. There were three services during the day. Bro. W. J. Smith preached at 10 a. m. to a full house, and at 2:30 R. C. Evans preached the dedicatory sermon from Psalms 127: 1, to a crowded house; also at 7 p. m. Bro. Evans preached on "the prophetic mission of Joseph Smith;" also on Monday evening, when he lectured on "Salt Lake Mormonism" and on Tuesday evening "Probation after death." On Wednesday evening the Saints met for prayer and testimony when the Spirit of the Master was present in the gifts, singing in tongues and interpretation, also speaking in tongues and intertpretation in advice and encouragement to the Saints. Bro. Evans left on Thursday morning for St. Thomas. Bro. W. J. Smith continued with us over Sunday the 9th, our meetings being largely attended; and on the 11th I drove him to Masonville, (about twentyfive miles away) and found the branch in a prosperous condition. Although but organized April 6th '87, they now number nearly one hundred members. Found Elder Wilson and family and all the Saints enjoying good health; met with them at their Wednesday evening prayer meeting; visited some of the Saints and friends next day, and on Friday returned here. I preached Sunday evening and on Monday 17th attended the funeral of Bro. John Roney, who died on the 10th after a long and painful illness. For over a year he had been unable to walk, having lost the use of his legs. He was baptized by the writer on the 5th of July last, and stated that he did not have faith to be healed, but wished to be baptised for the remission of his sins. He bore his suffering with patience and bore to the world a bright testimony that he was ready when the call came and wished his time to be short. A week before his death he requested me to preach his funeral sermon which I did in the Presbyterian church at Price's Corner on 17th, to a large congregation of relatives, Saints and friends-text Rev. 14:12-13. The interest is still good here. On 20th I go to Amaranth to labor, as the work may require. Below we give the verses sung in tongues by R. C. Evans at prayer meeting here Dec. 5th, after singing hymn 513, "Jesus I my Cross have Taken," to the tune of "The Dying Nun."

"As my cross you now have taken,
Be thou faithful to the end;
I will give thee strength to conquer,
If thou wilt on me depend.

"Be thou firm and fixed and faithful,
To the covenant thou hast made;
Thou wilt surely feel my power,
Through the gospel you've obeyed.

"Oh, my people, I have spoken, Be thou faithful, firm and true; For the day of your deliverance From all trial is now in view.

"Then give heed unto my counsel,
All my precepts to fullfil;
Oh, be faithful to your mission,
Soon you'll sing on Zion's Hill."
Yours in hope of etermal life,

JOHN SHIELDS.

McVEY, Ill., Dec., 16th.

Editors Herald:-It is with a thankful heart that we write, as the gospel in its fulness has again been preached in this part by able representatives.-Isaac M. Smith and Isaac A. Morris. It is the first preaching we have had since last winter. The meetings began November 8th, and closed December 2d, and the attendance was good throughout, as the meeting closed with a crowded hall. One had the courage to come out upon the side of truth amid the scoffs of a prejudiced people; yet prejudice is in a great measure giving way with the thinking classes, and some are investigating, which enrages the ministry, and so they stand united against us. The night our meeting closed the Methodists began a meeting one and one-half miles away. It still continues and although not a minister came to hear our preachers there has, up to this time, been six different ministers in attendance at this meeting, all taking part in the services and representing the Methodist, Baptist, Campbellite and Christian-Union churches.

Both the Methodist and Baptist ministers one week ago to-day undertook to overthrow Bro. Smith's position in regard to repentance after death, but not having attended any of his meetings and depending wholly on hearsay misrepresented Bro. Smith and made our doctrine to teach what it did not, consequently we resented and told them they had better go and hear before they attempted to reply and thereby they might not misrepresent. At this the Methodist minister became very angry and indirectly called us of Satan. His words were:-"I know you folks; I know you of old: I can trace you right back to Job." The whole community is in commotion. On Friday last the presiding elder came to the rescue and, although stating that all controverted points was mere play upon words and that he had no time for such, launched right out on controverted ground and remained there through the three discourses already preached and we expect him to remain right there so long as he sojourns in this part, helping the other ministers to substantiate the fact that there can not be a single individual redeemed from hell. He says it is according to our depraved natures to try to think there is no such place as hell and closed up by thanking God that there is a hell, that all may have a clime congenial to their natures. In his discourse to night he became almost boisterous, declaring that the lowest meanest and most degraded individual was one that would not preach the gospel, but just try to proselyte around, and that a sheep thief was the worst thief in the world. As this did not strike our ministry it is not at all hard to tell who it did hit. He tries to make the people believe we would take the sinner to heaven with all his sins clinging to him.

Have visited sister Gunter, and, although she has so lately enlisted in the service of the Master, she is firm in the faith. Husband and I have been so long alone that we know just how to appreciate the association of one of like faith. It is said that every one who attended meeting at the hall is responsible for her soul. Admitting that to be a fact it will only add a jewel to their crown. Surely much good has been done or the enemy would not be so enraged. Satan is cunning and is not going to fortify where there is no danger. That we may live faithfully, walk humbly and in no way bring reproach on the cause we so much love, is the prayer of your sister,

HEPPIE MORRIS.

Dear Herald:—Here is a letter from one of our sisters which I think is worthy of a place in your columns:

"NOANK, Connecticut, Dec. 17th. Dear sister Lottie:-Unless I answer your letter pretty soon, I fear you will think I have forgotten you and lost all interest in the great work we are engaged in. I assure you that neither is the case, for I never loved the work better, or felt more interest in its spread and growth, than at the present time, though I have not had as much time for study and writing as heretofore. But I have had just as much time for talking and thinking, and have improved it, too. I have been away on a visit for a week at an aunt's, and enjoyed it immensely. They are very much interested in the work and are willing for Bro. Bond to stop at their home and hold meetings. There are four of them that are investigating, and all have the tracts, the Book of Mormon, O. Cowdery's Letters, and the life of Joseph the Prophet. I think the son and daughter will attend the conference with me; but uncle and aunt are getting too old to get so far from home in cold weather, though they are just as interested, or more, if anything. They are in earnest, and are trying to live near to God. Mother has another sister who is also confirmed in the work. Besides, there are many investigating. O, the truth will spread, and nothing can hinder!"

WHEELER'S GROVE, IOWA, Dec. 24th. Bro. Blair: - Brethren Sutton and Elswick and myself left here September 17th for a trip through Missouri. We found a man seventyfive years old in Nodaway county, who said he helped to drive the Mormons out of Missouri, and saw the Missourians kill and fill a well full of them. He told us the same old story about the Saints going to houses and driving off stock in the name of the Lord. May our heavenly Father have mercy on our enemies. We arrived in Kansas City and Independence on Saturday, the 22d. Attended the Saints Sabbath school in the morning, and the preaching at 11 a. m. and in the evening by Bro. J. Luff, which was very edifying and instructive. Left Independence Monday morning, passed through Jackson, Cass, and into Henry county. Stopped with Bro. D. C. White. Was not very favorably impressed with that part of the country. On our return, Bro. I. N. White rode with us to Holden, and we had the pleasure of there hearing him preach. On the 30th arrived in Independence and heard Bro. Luff preach again, which did us good. Brn. Davis and Hanson made the Saints a visit here, week before last, and preached us some good sermons. Come again, brethren.

The Saints at Wheeler seem to be more spiritual and to want to serve the Master in Spirit and in truth. Yours,

GEORGE W. NEEDHAM.

Albion, Idaho, Dec. 23d.

Dear Herald:—Welcome messenger of the spirit of peace and good will to all men! I often feel like exchanging thoughts with your readers. In looking over your pages during intervals of your visits, many and varied are the reflections crowding themselves upon my attention. I see on your pages, stories of intense love and devotion under as many different conditions, that often tears of sympathy, unbidden, will fall. Why it is that mankind rejects a Savior's proffered love and refuses to come into the "one fold" is a mystery claiming the earnest inquiry of every loving child of God. Trials and almost continual heart-aches seem to be the lot of many souls within the fold of God.

Adverse tides in the home circle cause many tears of sorrow. God-blessed is the condition of two life partners walking hand in hand in the bonds of heavenly love, rearing their little ones up in the "nurture and admonition of the Lord." To the strong and loving heart, opposition in the world at large awakens but one desire to reason with, and convince of sin and folly, but on the other hand, every chord of the heart's sympathy is drawn out. Very often this could have been avoided if divine wisdom had directed with the Saints in contracting such alliances. The gospel changes the entire channel of our affections very often, and always should direct our love for fleshly and worldly pleasures into the channels of peace and joy in the Holy Ghost. What we once took pleasure in often becomes hateful, even its memories. On the other hand there is no change. The old pleasures attract and please -very evident here is friction. Reasoning is often but irritation; silence itself becames a source of irritation.

Two can not walk peacefully and lovingly together and disagree so vitally. Spirituality becomes an appetite all absorbing in its craving as it is gratified from its own fountain, to be fully satisfied when we "awake in his likeness." The soul which is content with worldly pleasures thrusts the other from it as an abridgement of the pleasures of life. O, man, how will you ever make amends to your Creator for so great a dearth of spirituality, as a life legacy to your off spring. An empty soul, void of fertility,—way side soil. No wonder the wicked are like the waves of the sea; tempest tossed soul, always in trouble, never at peace.

No wonder we should hate the garments worn in sin—they hid from us a Savior's face. A horror of darkness fills the mind at the thoughts of the terminus of the other road, though we should eventually attain telestial glory. The calm sweet peace, the assurance of our inheritance with the Saints in light. The sweetest transition, the gift of God to weak, erring mortality; transition from darkness into light. The heart cries out in agony,

"Why, man, will you refuse your birthright?" Troubled soul, you go mourning through life when one morsel of the bread of life might send the life-blood leaping through your veins. I see! I see! A light I never saw before flashes across the mind. How many souls have been so, or similarly assisted in the mystery of Godliness eternity alone will reveal. God is always ready to assist us when the heart of man is only prepared and ready to receive. But wilful man says, (in effect at least), "If God wants anything of me he can let me know." But the earnest, hungering soul will continue to try and search till he touches the sympathetic chord in the Father's love, and earth will appear in its beauty for them. "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him. Yea, if thou criest after knowledge and liftest up thy voice for understanding; if thou seek her as silver and searchest for her as hidden treasures, then shalt thou understand the fear of the Lord, and find the knowledge of God." "But the natural man receiveth not the things of God, for they are foolishness unto him," totally blinded by a love for the world, the flesh, and the devil. Carnality, thou enemy of man, why wilt thou not reveal thy hydra-head to all mankind? Well might Enoch's bosom swell wide as eternity. We want to take the world in our arms and weep over the sons and daughters of men. Why should the gospel separate fond hearts? He who loved the world was not loved in return, but was hated and despised; a man with sorrows and acquainted with grief. "The heart of hearts yielded up its life-blood that all who would believe might have eternal life." What a seeming contradiction, that we may float in a sea of perfect ease of peace and love, and yet bear "continual sorrow." Who can understand it? O, portals of glory, if you would but open up to all mankind that they might see and then believe and be at peace, reconciled to their Creator. This warfare must go on, dear ones of earth! To yield to sin is death to us who wish eternal life.

The worldly mind revolts and says, "I can not, will not yield to that; 'tis foolishness you ask of me. God tells me nothing of his will; 'tis but imagination of the mind. The Scriptures you repeat are dry and stale, and none but fools give heed to them. Advanced thought has cried them down. Darwin has disposed of God and Satan too. They were the myths of ages long ago. I'll eat and drink and pleasure find, and maybe I'll think of God some other time."

God bless you all, dear Saints of latter days. Let us pray for one another.

Yours in the precious hope of the gospel of Christ, C. L. Albertson.

CLINTON, Mo., December 25th.

Bro. Blair:—The wheels of time have brought another Christmas, and I am "rained out" of appointments, and from home, and therefore can not enjoy the comforts of loved ones—dearer than life itself. All is bustle around me, but no "tree" has any fruit to cheer a lonely elder. Ah, not even permitted to eat the crumbs that fell from the table! But the sad fate of God's "special witnesses" and their loved ones will be rewarded if faithful, at the close of the battle. Wife and children say, "Can't you be home on Christmas?" The Master's business calls to the harvest-field. I saw the tear on the cheek and kissed them good bye while my daughter coaxed the sweet little babe from my arms, and I was gone. Thus the elder's life goes on.

Well do I remember the years gone by when thinking over the sacrifices that the ministy must inevitably go through, and how I sought God in fasting and prayer, asking, "What sacrifice do you require at my hand?" An audible voice, with piercing words, said, "Read the seventh chapter and twenty-ninth verse of first Corinthians." (Inspired Translation). Stepping to the stand I read: "But I speak unto you who are called unto the ministry. For this I say, brethren, the time that remaineth is but short, that ye shall be sent forth unto the ministry. Even they who have wives shall be as though they had none; for ye are called and chosen to do the Lord's work." Seemingly every eye in the house was moistened, while God's Holy Spirit spoke to us in tongues and prophecies concerning his "marvellous work and a wonder."

I am now in the heat of the battle; calls on every hand; opposition in every quarter in the "Zion of America." Late Heralds say: "Some of the ministry must be called in, as there are no funds to keep their families!" Yet the call is not hushed: "The harvest is great and the labor. ers are few; therefore go ye into my vineyard and prune it for the last time." "Let no man among you from this hour, take purse or scrip, that goeth forth to proclaim this gospel of the kingdom." "Behold, I say unto you, that it is my will that you should go forth and not tarry, neither be idle, but labor with your mights, lifting up your voices as with a sound of a trump." "Be ye very careful, for many elders have been ordained unto me, and are come under my condemnation, by reason of neglecting to lift up their voices in my cause, and for such there is tribulation and anguish." "But if any provide not for his own, and specially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith and is worse than an infidel." "And, again, thus saith the Lord unto you, O ye elders of my church. . . . behold I say unto you, that it is the duty of the church to assist in supporting the families of those who are called and must needs be sent unto the world to proclaim the gospel unto the Saints, it is for you to decide this vital question,—Shall the ministry be called in from the field to keep the wolf from the doors of their families during the cold winter days?

"Let no one deceive himself, that he shall not account for his stewardship unto me." "For I am the Lord, I change not. . . Even from the days of your fathers ye are gone away from mine ordinances, and have not kept them. Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the Lord of hosts. But ye said, Wherein shall we return? Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. . . . Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it. And I will rebuke the devourer for your sake, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the Lord of hosts." "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul; the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple." "Whom (Christ) the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." "Surely the Lord God will do nothing, until he revealeth the secret unto his servants the prophets." "Behold, now it is called to-day (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned (at his coming); for after today cometh the burning." 'In order to place the church in a position to carry on the promulgation of the gospel, and as a means of fulfilling the law, the Twelve will take measures in connection with the Bishop, to execute the law of tithing; and let them before God see to it that the temporal means so obtained is truly truly used for the purposer of the church, and not as a weapon of power in the hands of one man for the oppression of other, or for the purposes of self-aggrandizement by any one, be he whomsoever he may be. As I live, saith the Lord, in the manner ye execute this matter, so shall ye be judged in the day of judgment."

SUMMARY.

The harvest is ripe; Saints are praying to the Lord to send more laborers; the Lord hears and makes the calls; instructs them to go "without purse or scrip from this very hour;" don't tarry nor be idle; many have come under condemnation by not lifting up their voices; tribulation and anguish await such. The elder gives himself to the church; the voice of the Saints sends him to the field, away from family ties, from plow, anvil, plane, counter, etc., and all are forsaken; the family fails to keep things running as of yore; the flour chest gets empty and children out of shoes with cold winter staring them in the face! The good wife tells her trials to the good Saints, who give present help until it becomes a burden, when some good brother pounds and bangs the books while giving advise to the Saints, being sure to quote, "If they don't provide for their family they are worse than infidels." Elders are careworn, wives are touched and write their husbands the situation; husbands have restless nights and their spirituality commences to wane, especially when he gets the Herald and reads: "Many of the ministry must be called from the field, as there are no funds to keep their families." Elders go home; every mail brings letters saying, "Come and preach to Some good brother wakes up and quotes: "O ye elders of my church, I say unto you, it is the duty of the church to assist in supporting the families of those who are called to labor in the vineyard." Saints are the church; they search for the law and find "It is written"-"Let no one deceive himself that he shall not account for his stewardship unto me," and sees, for the first time, that God has been robbed in tithes and offerings. "Ah," says one; "this was a law for olden times!" "The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul;" and are we not preaching a restored law? Heaven was to retain Christ until the time of restitution of all things; and that he would do nothing until he revealed it to his servants the prophets. Here we have it: "Behold, now it is called to-day (until the coming of the Son of Man) and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people." In order to execute this the Twelve in connection with the Bishop, were to invite the Saints to observe it; and these officers were to see that the means so obtained should not be used as a weapon in the hands of one man to oppress or aggrandize any one. And in the manner they execute this, law, "so should they be judged in the day of judgment." Who can say that the Twelve and the Bishopric have not done their duty? And if the elders are to be called from the field whose fault is it? Saints, study well the cause, and then act. You are free agents over all you possess. There is no church polity to force any man to give of his substance to the support of the gospel, but every man's work will be tried, so as by fire. Shall Jesus say to you, "I was an hungered; I was thirsty; I was a stranger; naked, sick, in prison, and you failed to care for me with your substance-robbed me!" When was this robbing done? "Verily I say unto you, inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of my brethren, [ministers families and poor, who need it by reason of being hungry, naked, sick, etc.], ye have done it unto me." Those who fail to open their hearts to the wants of the poor, the naked, sick and thirsty ones, will not merit the plaudit, found in Christ's words, "Who, then, is a faithful and wise servant, [over his own substance] whom his Lord hath made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season? Blessed is that servant, whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing; and verily I say unto you, he shall make him ruler over many things."

"Remember bleeding Zion!
Our tears for her shall flow,
While time's unerring dial
Points to one hour of woe.
We will thrust in our sickles;
Help us thou God above,—
Each one to do a little,
Inspired by sov'reign love."
Yours in bonds,

I. N. WHITE.

STREATOR, Illinois, Dec. 25th.

Bro. Blair:—The Lord is still mindful of us, and his mercy endureth forever to those who love him. Eight years ago yesterday I was carried home from the shaft a cripple for life. In the spring following I was elected Justice of the Peace, and when I had served three years, I had an attack of Locomotor Atawia that deprived me of the use of my limbs, and I have been confined to my bed for nearly four years, and am now patiently waiting for the Master to call me Two years ago I was given up by the doctors, but oh, the happy assurance that was given to me in the following language by the Spirit: "I will never leave thee nor forsake thee."

Two years ago I was administered to by Brn. Cooper, Vickery, Hougas and several others. The Spirit said it should be well with me; that I was in the Lord's hands and he would do with me as seemed to him good. So you see I have much to be thankful for. I received the Herald for which I am very thankful to you. I have also had some Autumn Leaves lent me by Sister Mills. I find a great deal of comfort in reading the church papers. I only wish I had some of the church books, for when I have anything to read I make use of the long weary hours at night. For I can not sleep then. Brother Blair, it is a comfort to know that when this suffering is done, and these pains are ended, and this body ceases to toss about on this bed of suffering, that the Lord will say "It is enough." I thank God that this latter day gospel has given me bright hopes in the near future. "Ask and you shall receive, that your joy may be full." Blessed hope, blessed resurection, blessed peace of mind, blessed Jesus! Hasten thy coming and take me home where the weary shall be at rest! Remember me in your prayers. I ask an interest in the sisters' Prayer League.

Your brother in Christ,
RICHARD WOOLISCROFT.

GRIZZLY FLATS, Cal. Dec. 17th.

Dear Herald:-I have been traveling, with Bro. Daley for about two months in Nevada. Was called home by the sickness of my wife and two of my children. Sixteen were baptized during my stay in Nevada and I think several more are almost ready for the water. There is a grand work to be done there if an active elder is sent to labor for some time. I would recommend Bro. Daley for that part of the vineyard. We were very agreeably disappointed with that mission, as we heard that it was a very hard field, but we found it very pleasant. I think that if an elder is sent there to labor permanently, he will be warmly received by the Saints. I will say for them that they were very kind to us and I hope we in turn did our whole duty while among them. There will always be a warm place in my heart for them, and I hope and pray they will not be neglected. After we had preached a week in Genoa (occupying the Methodist church) and returned to Mottsville, the Methodist preacher took occasion to preach against our faith and Joseph the Seer, etc. When we heard of it Bro. Daley wrote out a challenge, but the Reverend gentleman would not accept. Said he "had not the time, if he had the disposition"-the coward's plea. I asked him to come out to our next meeting. He did so, and if ever I heard a man thrashed with the Bible, it was that man. Bro. Daley is very handy with the Scriptures, but I thought more so than usual on that occasion. I tell you if was grand. The line was cut close, and the chips flew fast and hard. Friends were made for the gospel.

Editor Herald:-Our conference was held at the Byrnville branch and many came out to hear the preaching by Brn. Baggerly, J. M. Scott and M. R. Scott, all of whom preached with good success. There was one baptized on Wednesday. We had a good attendance throughout the conference, and a good interest was taken by those outside of the church. The work is spreading here and calls for preaching are more than can be attended to. The harvest truly is great and the laborers are few. Pray therefore to the Lord that he may send laborers into the harvest. I am glad to say that I know that this is the work of God. I praise God that he has placed it in my heart to know this. I would like to stand up before thousands and testify to them that this is the only way by which the children of men can be saved.

When I came into this church and was baptized for the remission of sins and had the elders hands laid on my head to receive the Holy Ghost, I went home and came back to the church that night waiting for the gift of the Spirit. Bro

M. R. Scott preached that night and I was made to rejoice in my soul while he was preaching. I wanted to get up and tell the people that it was the work of God. I could not sit still while Bro. Scott talked. When he got through he asked me if I had anything to say. "Yes" said I, and up I got. It appeared to me that the whole Scripture was made plain to me, and that I must tell the people the danger they were in. The parables were plain to me; in fact, it appeared that I could understand the Bible from Genesis to Revelation. I rejoiced to tell the people the plan of salvation, and I was so rejoicing in the Lord that I could not sleep after I went home. I wanted to go and tell everybody how they could be saved. I want to say to the Saints, Stand up for your faith, for I know this is the work of God. Don't stand back on account of persecutions, but stand up for the Lord.

PANA, Ills., Dec. 31st.

Bro. Blair:-Please state through the Herald that if Bro. Alexander Smith could come through this place we would get him a place to preach and take care of him while here. The gospel has never been preached here, and I think there are many honest souls that would gladly obey the truth. Our family is the only one of the faith here. We are about a hundred miles from Streator. I do not know where to address Bro. Smith or I would have writtenhim. I saw that he had started for a trip through this state. Any elder would be welcome that could make it convenient to come. There is another town that we lived in before coming here that we could get a hearing in if an elder would come, where many would be glad to hear the words of eternal truth delivered by the chosen servants of God.

Yours for the truth,
MRS. AMANDA YOHE.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Dec. 31t.

Editors Herald:—Enclosed find obituary notice of a person whose sweet life has passed from earth to heaven. I do not say too much when I say that, Wm. E. Coiner lived a life exceptional. No word, no act known to parents or friends that ever seemed to require the "mantle of charity" thrown about them for covering. His morality was pure; even his dietary mode had reference to the foundation of character. Bright, true and good. He was a mother's boy, and no duty asked by parents was ever neglected. Would that the world knew more of such as him. He was one of "my boys," and our friendship was strong and warm.

It is pleasing to note the record of the progress the church is making everywhere. The gospel can only win its way by its own self-commending propositions. They appear to be staunch and unswerving, teaching us that salvation is the result of conduct rather than of creed. Every man and woman that enters the "pearly gates," enters upon the pasport of character formed by conduct here. Salvation through the blood of Jesus without reference to conduct is a doctrinal lie! It originated with Catholicism, has been echoed by Protestantism until its narcotical influence has producd spiritual stupor and moral shiftlessness.

Religion is simply a line of coduct. Conduct forms character, culture brightens character, and is a potent factor of conduct. Character admits us to heaven or forces us from its portals. This depends upon its merits or demerits-that's all. Religion is nothing mysterious at all. It is daily application of proper principle-honorable in its nature, practically used. Life's conduct is the performance of individual duties-these lie Godward, man-ward and self-ward. Well performed they guard our temporal and eternal interests; neglected, they destroy those interests. Religion seems more and more simplified to my mind. Divest it of all "mysteries," for humanity needs no mysteries for practical living. God moves in the realm of mysteries. While even human life may be a mystery, that life deals mostly with apparent facts explicitly manifest. Mysteries declare for theories, but facts furnish no fancies. Solidity alone is practical, and what we need. The transparent serve for no foundation rule. Mystery is that which we see; perceiving not, we hear, but understand not. A mystery may be both a fact and a truth, its existence furnishing the fact proof. Christianity is broad and grand, and if it does not relate to what we eat and drink, and do and wear, and how; then it is a spiritual farce claiming attention one way to the neglect of the other. It is either a consistency in its rules of temporal and spiritural living, or an inconsistency. If the latter, then it can be of no lasting value at all. People ought to live it as well as pray it, and vice-versa. It makes demands upon every department of our lives or none at all. There are those who claim to do things toward the benefit of the church, but they never get beyond the toward.

Hoping for continued peace and prosperity to the church, I am yours faithfully,

J. F. McDwell.

CONTENTMENT.

It is because of the special connection of meekness with contentment, that it is promised that the meek shall "inherit the earth." Neither covetous men, nor the grave, can inherit anything; they can but consume. Only contentment can possess. The most sacred and helpful work, therefore, which can at present be done for humanity, is to teach people (chiefly by example, as all best teaching must be done), not how "to better themselves," but how to "satisfy themselves." It is the curse of every evil nation and evil creature to eat and not be satisfied. The words of blessing are that they shall eat and be satisfied. And as there is only one kind of water which quenches all thirst, so there is only one kind of bread which satisfies all hunger-the bread of justice, or righteousness, which, hungering after, men shall always be filled, that being the bread of heaven; but hungering after the bread or wages of unrighteousness, shall not be filled, that being the bread of Sodom. And in order to teach men how to be satisfied, it is necessary fully to understand the art and joy of humble life, this, at present, of all arts or sciences, being the one most needing study. Humble life-that is to say proposing to itself no future exaltation, but only a sweet continuance; not excluding the idea of foresight, but wholly of fore-sorrow, and taking no troublous thought for coming days; so, also, not excluding the idea of providence, or provision, but wholly of accumulation;-the life of domestic affection and domestic peace, full of sensitiveness to all elements of costless and kind pleasure; therefore chiefly to the loveliness of the natural world.—Ruskin.

THE LAMONI COLLEGE.

AT a regular meeting of the Board of Trade of Lamoni, Iowa, held on the 31st of December, 1888, Articles of Incorporation for a College in Lamoni were presented and read, and upon motion the Herald, Patriot and Autumn Leaves were invited to print and publish the same; also that Joseph Smith, D. Dancer, G. A Blakeslee, W. W. Blair and D. F. Nicholson be requested to act as a committee to procure the publication of the said Articles of Incorporation and take the necessary steps to procure subscriptions for the erection of a college in Lamoni.

Resolved, that this Board of Trade heartily endorses the proposition to build said College, and will aid the enterprise all they can.

W. Hudson, Pres. V. White, Sec.

INCORPORATION AND ASSOCIATION ARTICLES OF LAMONI COLLEGE,

DECATUR COUNTY, IOWA.

Statement:-

For the purpose of establishing an institution of learning of an academical character and providing a means of higher education and literary attainment in the town of Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa, for the benefit of all persons who are able to enter the same as provided in the course of study, without distinction of sex, caste or religion, the undersigned incorporators do hereby associate themselves together and make and adopt articles as follows:

ART. I—The association assumes to itsself all the powers and privileges conferred by chapter two (2), title nine (9), Code of Iowa, and such parts of chapter one (1), title nine (9) as are applicable to associations of an academical or collegiate character; and shall exist as provided therein for the period of twenty years from the date of filing of these articles of association in the office of the Recorder of Deeds of Decatur county, Iowa, unless by a vote of three fourths of the Capital Stock of said association, in which event the duration of said association may be reduced to any number of years less than twenty; and said corporation may be renewed at the expiration of twenty years.

ART. 2.—The association shall be named and known as the Lamoni College Society.

ART. 3.—It shall be the purpose of the association to institute, establish and maintain in the town of Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa, a school of an academical and collegiate character and transact all business, including that of conferring of degrees, usual to such institutions; the principal place of business of which shall be at Lamoni, and county and state before named.

ART. 4.—The officers of this association shall consist of a board of seven trustees, and a president, secretary, and treasurer; but the secretary and treasurer may or may not be members of the Board of Trustees; and in case of a vacancy occurring in the office of president of the College the chairman of the Board of Trustees shall act as president pro tempore until the vacancy is filled.

ART. 5 .- The Board of Trustees shall have power to perform the duties usual to such officers of similar institutions, and such as are specified herein, and shall provide suitable buildings, rooms, library, apparatus, incidentals, etc., for use according to the demands and necessities of the College work, from any funds provided by said incorporation for such purposes; but they shall not take or use any donation or fund made, given or bequeathed to the use of certain special purposes—such as the establishing or founding of any chair or professorship in said institution—and appropriate for building or incidental purposes which may be inconsistent with, or contrary to the terms of the gift or donation. They shall also employ and provide for such number of professors and teachers, and such curriculum or course of study as shall fully meet the wants of those desiring the advantages of a good academical and collegiate education, and for the giving of diplomas and the conferring of degrees in the manner usual in such institutions, and also prepare and provide such rules and regulations as shall be necessary for the control and proper government of said College.

ART. 6.—The stockholders of the association shall annually, during the time of the Commencement and graduating exercises of each year, at such day, hour and place in the said town of Lamoni as shall be designated by the chairman or secretary of the Board of Trustees, which notice shall be given at least ten days prior to the time of such meeting, elect a Board of Trustees or directors to the number of seven, four of whom shall be members in good standing of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and the only restrictions and qualifications of the remaining three shall be, that they must be persons of good moral character and over twenty-one years of age, who shall per-form the duties and work herein set forth of such officers; and such trustees, or directors, shall within one week thereafter, at a meeting of which due notice shall be announced at the aforenamed stockholders' meeting, meet and organize by the selection of a chairman and secretary and elect a president, a secretary and a treasurer of the society, and the professors and teachers for the ensuing year, provide for a janitor, and perform any and all other duties required for the good of such institution.

ART. 7—In case of a failure at any time to elect or procure suitable officers or instructors, it shall be the duty of said Board to meet on the first Monday thereafter, at seven o'clock p. m., and proceed with such business, and so on each week until all necessary and proper officers and instructors are chosen. Special meetings of said Board may be had at any time by a call by the President and Secretary of the same, or by a majority of the said trustees, which call shall be in writing and by notice given or mailed to each member; but a majority of said Board shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business.

ART. 8—All deeds and other instruments of writing, in order to be binding upon the association, must be executed by the President and countersigned by the Secretary and previously authorized by the Board of Trustees and entered of record in the Minute Book to be kept by said Board, which book shall contain a true and accurate minute of all meetings held by said Board, signed by the President and Secretary, and after the same are approved by the Board. Said record shall be open at all times to the inspection of the stockholders of said company or society.

ART. 9—It shall be the duty of the President of the College to take charge of and preside at all meetings and gatherings of the membership and Faculty, and take an active supervision of all departments; and he may instruct in such branches of learning as he may deem properly in the interest of the school, and perform all other duties usually performed by Presidents of Colleges. He shall receive for his services, as also each member of the Faculty and teachers, such salary as the Board of Trustees shall fix.

ART. 10—The Treasurer shall collect and receive all moneys belonging to the association or due from scholarships, tuition, or incidentals, and keep an accurate account of the same, pay out money only on the written order of the President and Secretary of the Board, and shall be the custodian of all the funds and other property of the association, and shall report to the association annually, and at such other times as he may be directed by the Board of Trustees.

ART. 11—The Secretary shall keep a true and accurate account of all the proceedings of the association, and perform such other duties as usually devolve upon secretaries of similar boards, and shall keep a true account of all donations, contributions and stock, and turn over the same to the Treasurer and take his receipt therefor at the time of delivery.

ART. 12—The Treasurer and Secretary of this association shall each, before entering upon the discharge of the duties of their respective offices, execute and deliver to the association a bond in a sum not less than two thousand dollars, to be fixed by the Board of Trustees, conditioned for the faithful discharge of his duties, with sureties to be approved by the Board, and for their services they shall receive such sum only as the Board shall fix at a regular meeting of the same.

ART. 13—The authorized Capital Stock of this association shall be fifty thousand dollars, divided into shares of twenty-five dollars each; but the amount of Capital Stock may, by due notice and a three-fourths vote of the stockholders, be increased to a larger amount; but there shall never, at any time, be an indebtedness created beyond the amount of the paid up stock of the association. All accumulations of interest, donations, profits, &c., in addition to the original stock, shall be placed in the surplus fund and held for the benefit of the association according to these articles.

ART. 14—The subscription to stock of this association shall be due and payable as follows: One fourth (1/4) on the adoption of these articles of incorporation; one fourth (1/4) in four months, and one fourth (1/2) in eight months from the date of filing of said Articles, and the balance in twelve months from said date of filing with the Recorder of the County: Provided; that any one so desiring may pay the entire amount of his subscription at any time after the books are open, and receive his certificate of stock therefor, and also that all over due subscriptions shall draw interest at the rate of eight (8) per cent. per annum until paid.

ART. 15—The certificates of stock shall be transferable by delivery; but such transfer shall not be valid, as against the association, until a majority of the stockholders consent to such transfer, and the minority of the stockholders, if any, have opportunity to purchase the stock, and until it is regularly entered on the books of the association so as to show the person by and to whom transferred, the number of the certificate and date of transfer.

ART. 16—At all the meetings of the stockholders, each member of the association shall be entitled to one vote for each share of stock he or she may own, but in all meetings of the Trustees each shall have one vote. Any stockholder entitled to vote may appoint, in writing, a proxy to act for him at any meeting of the stockholders, and in all meetings of the stockholders a majority of the paid up capital or stock shall be necessary to constitute a quorum for the transaction of business; but a less number may adjourn from time to time.

ART. 17—These Articles of Incorporation may be amended at any regular or special meeting of the stockholders by a majority vote of at least two thirds of the stock subscribed, except that which has become delinquent. And it shall be the privilege of the Board of Trustees to make such By Laws, from time to time, for the operation of such college work and transaction of business, as are not inconsistent herewith.

ART. 18—The College shall never be sectarian in its work or instruction, but its advantages and privileges shall be open alike to all; and to guarantee this, it is herein provided that the majority of the trustees shall be members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints; and the President of said Society and College, if not of this Denomination, shall be a scholar of broad and tolerant views and with readiness to canvass and compare religious or political views in a fair and Christianlike manner with students and Faculty. The professors and teachers shall be selected upon their merits and ability to impart instruction, irrespective of Religion or Politics.

ART. 19—The association shall provide a seal, and sue and be sued in its corporate name, and perform any and all work through its proper officers necessary to its corporate existence.

DISASTERS BY WAVES.

"THAT most horrible phenomena, the tidal wave, how many struggling mortals has it swept back into the deep! What countless ships has it crushed against the shores! What mighty cities has it plundered of life and wealth, strewing their streets with the ocean sand, and peopling their palaces with sea-monsters! I saw the whole surface of the sea rise as if a mountain side, actually standing up. Another shock with a fearful roar now took place. I called to my companions to run for their lives on to the pampa. Too late; with a horrible crush the sea was on us, and at one sweep dashed what was Iquique on to the pampa. I lost my companions, and in an instant was fighting with the dark waters. The mighty waves surged, and roared, and leaped. The cries of human beings and animals were frightful."-Harper's Magazine, 1869.

I supplement this with the statement of the British vice-consul, at Arica, who was an eye-witness: "Gracious God, what a sight! I saw all the vessels in the bay carried out irresistibly to sea; anchors and chains were as pack-thread. In a few minutes the great outward current stopped, stemmed by a mighty rising wave, I should judge about fifty feet high, which came in with an awful rush, carrying everything before it, sometimes turning in circles, as it striving to elude their fate."

Here is another vivid description: "The tidal disturbances are the most remarkable and extensive of which there is any record. It is said their velocity was about a thousand miles an hour. Both the great ocean waters of the Atlantic and Pacific have been agitated in their whole extent. We mention in particular the tidal waves at St. Thomas, and all the neighboring islands, which were full fifty feet in hight. It is said by those who have witnessed these waves that the ocean's roar is exceedingly frightful."—New York Tribune, Nov. 12, 1868.

It must be grand beyond all conception to behold these gigantic upheavals, but more especially would it establish faith in those who have an abiding confidence in the utterances of inspiration. It is not the credulous alone who are concerned and interested in relation to these events: "Later and fuller details are every day increasing the interest with which scientific observers regard the recent earthquakes and tidal disturbances, and confirming our first impression that these convulsions of nature would prove to be among the most remarkable and extensive of which there is any written record."—New York Trib-une, Nov. 12th, 1869. Some thoughtless persons desiring to avoid the direct force of such proofs, will, with flippancy cry, "Bah! such things always were, but no religious fanatical cranks tried to use them in sustaining new-fangled ideas about religion!" Not so fast, my friend, in your creed-bound notions. The time has come to scrape the moss from your antiquated hulk and brush up a little and get in line with advanced thought and the great developments that are to prepare a people to stand with Christ when he establishes His kingdom of glory upon the earth.

"These portentous phenomena are seriously engaging the attention of the scientific world. The remark that they only seem to us more frequent because our means of communication are more complete and rapid, and that we now hear from all parts of the globe simultaneously, will not explain the matter, since the late commotions have been attended by disturbances of both land and sea in parts of the earth which have been constantly accessible for centuries, that were totally unparalleled in previous history. change of the gulf stream from its course, and the alteration of climates, have been some of these increased marvels."-New York Mercantile Journal, November, 1868.

The astonishing loss of life and property by these disturbances is frightful to contemplate. During one week in December, 1863, in the Mediterranean Sea, there were over fourteen hundred ships wrecked; and the losses sustained since 1865, by the United States, are two thonsand, eight hundred and twenty-one vessels, valued at $129,067,700.

Lest I become over tedious I invite you to one other branch of proof of the "distress of nations," and will endeavor to be brief. Still it is replete with fact and interest while we jog along the road of observation and inquiry. O, the heartaches and lamentations that have been caused by

One of the signs of the last days which will prevail to the extent that men will undertake the conflict against their fellows, without the aid of associates. This was predicted as an integral part to make up the whole of the great calamities to come upon the people in the last days. Here is the word of the Lord thereon: "And they shall fight every one against his brother, and every one against his neighbor; city against city, and kingdom against kingdom."-Isa. 19:2.

Some would urge that this had only a local application; but the last clause and the present existing state of society indicates that it is general in its forecast. will overthrow the throne of kingdoms, and I will destroy the strength of the kingdom of the heathen; and I will overthrow the chariots, and those that ride in them; and the horses and their riders shall come down, every one by the sword of his brother."—Hag. 2: 22. When this great struggle shall be accomplished, as it most assuredly will be, it can not be otherwise than a calamity without a parallel for the earthly dynasties will be displaced by the legal assumption of universal governmental control by the King of kings; and those who have been in power will not sur-render peaceably. "And it shall come to pass in that day, that a great tumult from the Lord shall be among them; and they shall lay hold every one on the hand of his neighbor, and his hand shall rise up against the hand of his neighbor."-Zech. 14:13. During the last half century, war has entailed its carnage and suffering and destruction of property upon the following nations, namely: "America, South and Central America, France, Italy, Austria, Denmark, Spain, Cuba, Holland, Russia, Greece, Germany, Turkey, Egypt, Algeria, China, Japan, Corea, as also in many of the sub-divisions of both Africa and Asia." Millions of lives have perished in these wars, widows and children in manifold instances were left with sad hearts and in destitute circumstances, and also they left to the world a legacy of demoralization that will not pass away until the present generation, and many of their offspring are transported to the future world. The fighting forces of the European nations as enumerated by the statistics I have access to are as follows: Austria, 856,980, Russia, 1,519,810, Italy, 605,200, Prussia, 1,261,160, France, 977,660, England, 478, 820, Sweden, 274, 510. Total 5,974,140. The forces of the English navy,—the largest in the world—, is not stated.

This present year Germany has lost two emperors by death, which has unsettled, to some extent, the pacific and amicable conditions obtaining for the last few years, while at present the equipments for war by both land and sea, indicate that all expect and fear the approaching conflict. And who can tell but what our own loved and peaceful America may be drawn into the whirlpool of war, or that perhaps darker days await us than any hitherto experienced until Washington's dream shall

Here is something of a more personal interest to individuals than any other of the coming calamities.

DISEASES

Strange to medical professors, and very complicated and destructive to the human life. True, humanity has been afflicted with a great variety of ailments as far back as we have any account, but "previous to 1860, this fatal scourge was scarcely known in our community. That year, however, it swooped down upon the little ones, and its victims were 10,000. Physicians said its visit was transient, and, like the Asiatic cholera, it would, in time, depart. time shows the error of this medical prognosis. The scourge came to stay. It cuts down the darlings of three, five and eight with relentlss hand. Whole households are swept away by it. Medical men say it is caused by some strange and unknown affection of the air. It is on the increase most alarmingly. Five years ago, in 1872, it stood the nineteenth on the list of fatal diseases in Massachusetts. In 1873 it was the same; in 1874, the eleventh; in 1875, the seventh; in 1876, it stood second. In deadly action, it now [1877] stands next to consumption in all the old Bay States. The faculty are in alarm at its ravages. Parents tremble at its visitation."-Comments on diphtheria by D. T. Taylor.

The first time I ever heard the dreaded word or knew of any one sick with diphtheria, was the winter of 1860-1. A man living south-east of Nebraska City had three children buried in one grave. was so severely affected that he had to be sent to the Iowa Insane Institution, for he went through the streets preaching and the people called him the "old crazy Mormon."

During 1880, in Massachusets alone, there were 17,812 deaths from diphtheria, and 20,000, deaths in the United States from yellow fever. And still other new distempers are making their advent, afflicting the populace, and baffling the skill of the most profound doctors. "Turkey is at this time a deeply afflicted country. Besides the ravages of famine, a deadly disease is raging among the flocks and herds throughout the empire, from Bagdad to the Adriatic. In the province of Smyrna a kind of small-pox has broken out among the sheep, while there is a pulmonary disease among the cattle that is rapidly thinning the herds. On the plains of Troy, the skeletons of thousands of sheep cover the ground. Shepherds, stripped of their entire herds in many cases, have gone insane over the calamity. In the country about Adrianople, fully thirty per cent of the horses and horned cattle have already died of the disease. The entire pastoral regions of the empire seem smitten with the disorder which is said to greatly resemble the murrain, spoken of in the Bible."-Christian at Work.

The people of the United States and Canada can not forget when the epizootic swept over the country from east to west, so that even in New York City the street cars and omnibus' were drawn by oxen, funeral processions wended their slow and silent way, also hauled by oxen.

In March 1829, Joseph Smith predicted the coming of "a desolating scourge [which] shall go forth among the inhabit-ants of the earth." I believe this was fulfilled to a degree by the cholera visitation to America, mentioned among other calamities in the following from the Chicago Inter Ocean:

THE PLAGUES OF HISTORY.

"The threatened cholera epidemic has called attention to the great plagues recorded in history, and a glance at some of the events may reconcile us to a grateful feeling for the comparative freedom from pestilence in late years. The earliest plagues of which there are any account of those described in Exodus, occurred in Egypt, 1491 B.C. In 534 B.C., there was a plague at Carthage so terrible that parents sacrificed their children to propitiate the gods. In 187 B. C., in the Greek Islands, Egypt and Syria, people died at the rate of 2,000 a day in Rome. A.D. 80, 10,000 died daily.

Another plague at Rome, A. D. 256, took off 5,000 a day. In 430, Britain was scourged so that the living were hardly able to bury the dead. During the years 746-749 Constantinople lost 200,000 of its population. At Chichester, England, in 772, 34,000 people died, and in 954 Scotland lost 40,000 people. Ireland was sorely visited in 1172 and 1204, and again in 1348-9. At that time 200 people were buried daily in London. In 1407 London lost 30,000 citizens. There was a fearful pestilence at Oxford in 1471. The dreadful "sweating sickness" occurred in London in 1506 and again in 1517. In most of the towns half of the people died, and Oxford was depopulated. In 1522 thousands were swept away in Limerick. The sweating sickness revisited England in 1528, and again in 1551. In 1603-4 30,-578 people perished of plague in London. Constantinople again lost 200,000 people in 1611. In 1625 London lost 35,417 inhabitants. In 1632 Lyons lost 60,000. In 1656, 400,000 people died at Naples in six months. In 1664 London's great plague took off 68,596 inhabitants. In 1720 60,ooo people died at Marseilles. In 1773 80,000 inhabitants of Bossora, Persia, died of plague. In 1792 800,000 persons died of plague in Egypt. In Barbary 3,000 people died daily, and in 1799 247,000 people perished at Fez. Asiatic cholera first appeared in England at Sunderland, October 26th, 1831, and in North America at Quebec, June 8th, 1832, and in New York June 22d, 1832. It revisited the United States in 1834, slightly in 1849, severely in 1855, and again lightly in 1866-67. In 1829-30,900,000 people died of cholera in Russia and Germany. In 1848-49,53,203 people died of it in England and Wales, and in 1854 these countries lost 20,097 and Naples 10,000 persons. In 1865 50,000 people died of cholera at Constantinople."

The foregoing gives dates and data that are valuable, to which I add:

SOME FACTS ABOUT CHOLERA.

Medical men are not very well agreed about the origin of cholera epidemics, and are still less in harmony in their application of remedies. But by common consent few diseases are more severe, or more quickly and surely fatal than cholera. Efforts have been made to establish a connection between its appearance and the recurrence every twelve years of great Hindoo pilgrimages and festivals, and the writer of a learned article in a popular cyclopedia, published some years ago, went so for as to predict visits from this plague in 1877 and 1879. These prophecies were not fulfilled. The truth of the matter seems to be that the exciting causes of cholera are always active in some parts of India, in the Phillipine Islands, and in other far Eastern countries, and that the methods of commerce prevailing nowadays are most favorable for disseminating the pestilence throughout the world. Its ravages have been extensive and almost constant for the last two years in the regions of its origin, and it has now broken out in Egypt, and possibly also at Gibraltar and London. There is much reason to believe that it will appear before many months in every country in Europe, and in this country also.

It is now generally held that cholera is not, strictly speaking, "contagious." That is to say, it is not spread by touch, pure and simple. Its seeds, in order to do their work, must be introduced into the system through the lungs or the stomach. most frequent means of their spread is the use of contaminated water. Some authorities, indeed, go so far as to say that all the most virulent epidemics have been connected with the pollution of drinking water by choleraic evacuations, and that there is but little danger of a very extensive outbreak of the disease where drinking water is originally pure, and is conveyed in close and clean pipes. It seems, however, that the infecting matter in the discharges from the bowels of those who have the disease is apt to be diffused through the air or become attached to clothing, and thus to find entrance into the lungs of healthy persons.

It is still undetermined whether the morbid material that constitutes the cholera poison is a parasitic germ or a miasm. And no one professes to know how the poison is generated, or why it tends to spread more widely at some times than at others, or how the presence of decomposing matter and certain conditions of climate and soil, and certain physical characteristics of individuals, favor its distribution. The disease, in short, is known only in its effects .- St. Louis, Mo., Globe-Democrat,

July 19th, 1883.

With these two lengthy extracts from two of our leading newspapers, I close the argument upon the first part of the proposition, that the revelations given through Joseph Smith are in harmony with predictions of the Bible. The perspicuity of the evidence in proof seems all sufficient to demonstrate that God did reveal unto Joseph Smith the truth relative to the calamities of this age of sin, deception and crime. (b) Some well meaning people, who are devoted and zealous in their religion, ever willing to express implicit confidence in the writings of the Bible; accepting all therein as of divine authority, and who are highly incensed if any one should question the inspiration thereof, and who give every evidence of being honest, and desire it understood that they have full toleration for the religious opinions of all, can not brook for a moment the idea that Joseph Smith possessed the prophetic gift. When asked their reasons for rejecting such a belief they cite such Scriptures as, "Beware of false prophets;" "Believe not every spirit;" not understanding that the evidences they use are conclusive proofs that true prophets are to be expected, else no need of a warning against the false ones. Credulity receives the statement of religious teachers without any substantial evidence therefor; while faith is established upon the investigation of comprehensive, reasonable and tangible evidence, experienced upon faithful and painstaking obedience to "Ask, and it shall be given unto you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you." -Matt. 7:7. "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself."—John 7: 17. These are the instructions of Jesus Christ, and they are not empty sayings, but are full of truth and meaning, and God will fulfill the promises made, otherwise we could have no confidence or inducement to worship Him. Peter at one time upon seeing the spiritual blessings bestowed upon parties whom the Jews did not consider worthy of divine favors, opend his mouth and said, "of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons; but in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him."-Acts 10:34, 35. The above statement is as true now as when uttered to the Gentiles in the presence of the six Jewish witnesses. er time nor clime changes such eternal truths, and "if any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given."-Jas. 1:5. If those who ridicule the faith of the Latter Day Saints and so vehemently oppose their claims would follow the advise of James, remembering the only true and impartial method of a religious investigation or controversy is "to the law and to the testimony: if they speak not according to this word, it is because there is no light in them," (Isa. 8:20), I am willing to abide the result of such verdict founded upon such rule in righteousness. The God-appointed way to determine as to whether a prophet is divinely sent or not, is laid down in much plainness, and no mistake need occur, if the instruction of God is faithfully adher-"When a prophet speaketh in the name of the Lord, if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the Lord hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously: thou shalt not be afraid of him." Deut. 18:22. The proper interpretation, of this would be, if the thing spoken by the prophet did come to pass, it would be fair and just to conclude that the thing spoken was from the Lord. That is clearly what Moses attempted to teach, and in that light we receive his declaration.

"The prophets that have been before me and before thee of old prophesied both against many countries, and against great kingdoms, of war, and of evil, and of pestilence. The prophet which prophesieth of peace, when the word of the prophet shall come to pass, then shall the prophet be known, that the Lord hath truly sent him."—Jer. 28:8, 9. All revelations are not predictions of future events, but when such are given, and a reasonable time has elapsed for the fulfillment thereof, we have, in this statement of Jeremiah, a true rule by which to measure the claim to the prophetic office. Hear ye what the Master has to say that no injustice be done unto those who come proclaiming the decrees, admonitions and instructions of heaven unto men: "Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. A good tree can not bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire. Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them."—Matt. 7:16-20. The admission made by many who profess acute knowledge in theological issues, that Joseph Smith said many good things, and taught much that was praiseworthy and sound orthodoxy, is a tacit acknowledgment that he was a true prophet, divinely sent and inspired; or else they place themselves in the unenviable position of ignoring the words of Jesus the Christ, or of claiming to be possessed of a better understanding of divine things than the Prince of Life was able to attain unto. The essential principles taught by Joseph Smith, as necessary unto salvation, we are willing to put in juxtaposition with any other servant or prophet sent of God, and we contend that this is both fair and honorable: "Doth a fountain send forth at the same place sweet water and bitter? Can the fig tree, my brethren, bear olive berries? either a vine figs? so can no fountain both yield salt water and fresh."—Jas. 3:11, 12. It would seem that the accusation of the Pharisees and other religious sects that Christ and his associate ministers were false and corrupt, forced the statements made in vindication of their own work and claims. It is mean, harsh, cruel and malicious to attack the personal character of the individual instead of impartially examining the doctrinal teachings which they declare to be the true means of grace unto eternal life. Isaiah, Ezekiel and Christ severally cited prophecy as a test of their missions and calls as ambassadors from the court of light unto fallen man: "Produce your cause, saith the Lord; bring forth your strong reasons, saith the King of Jacob. Let them bring them forth, and shew us what shall happen. Let them shew the former things, what they be, that we may consider them, and know the latter end of them, or declare us things for to come. Shew the things that are to come hereafter, that we may know that ye are gods; yea, do good, or do evil, that we may be dismayed, and behold it together."—Isa. 41:21-23. Those who refuse or hesitate to compare their creed of worship with the Bible, are either dogmatical, or lack confidence in their profession?

This is more direct: "And when this cometh to pass, (lo, it will come), then shall they know that a prophet hath been among them."—Ezek. 33: 33. This man waxed bold in his own defence. There must have been non-believers in that land where the Holy Bible men wrote and spoke, otherwise they were wonderfully blessed with the gift of correctly describing some people of this age.

The Lord gave proof of his call and invited the people to watch a prophecy as a test: "Now I tell you before it come, that, when it is come to pass, ye may believe that I am he."—John 13:19. Could it be construed as a violation of any known commandment of God, or example of ancient prophets, if the American prophet gave the opportunity to test him upon the merits of predictions made? One of the first things he said was, that the angel informed him "That God had a work for me to do, and that my name should be had for good and evil among all nations, kindreds, and tongues; or that it should be both good and evil spoken of among all people."

Be it fairly and honestly understood; this statement was made when the farmerboy was in his fifteenth year, and possessed but a very limited common school education. How could one so situated obtain even the idea of doing a work for the Lord, and in so doing gain the good will and respect of men among all people, as also hatred from all parts of the world? A retrospective review of work accomplished by this man during the fifteen years prior to his tragic death, eclipses most dazzling achievements of the greatest reformer. The enemies and opposers of Mormonism are compelled to concede that no man ever had warmer or truer friends than Joseph Even hundreds born since his decease, courageously and unflinchingly stand in defense of the divine call and mission of Joseph Smith. And, notwithstanding the peculiar divine providence of God, the pure and true gospel of Jesus Christ, by reason of the place and people to whom restored, is an American institution and its putative founder was an American. Men from all nations are found equally zealous in defending the faith of "this sect, of which] we know that everywhere it is spoken against," while on the other hand, the opposers have ransacked the entire vocabulary of the English language to find vile, ignoble and contumelious invectives to hurl against the innocent, the inspired, the called of God.

That which is surprisingly strange, is the admixture of praise and censure upon lips of the orthodox clergy. Such a paradoxical exhibition seems to fulfill the prediction, "Surely the wrath of man shall praise thee."—Psa. 76: 10. Let there be a logical analysis of the church organization set in motion by Joseph Smith, with the doctrinal principles taught, and the spiritual blessings promised, and no honest man who believes and accepts the New Testament can consistently reject the call that God made upon his servant Joseph Smith. Be not deceived, neither let mockers cast dust in your eyes, for this church has for its foundation that spoken of by Paul in his letter to the Ephesians: "And are built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone."—Eph. 2: 20.

This church does not make the palpable blunder of building upon a foundation composed of "apostles and prophets," but we build upon the same foundation that the apostles and prophets builded upon, therefore we can accept, and abide, and can not be dislodged. "For other fouldation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ."—I Cor. 3:11. Well may the Saints sing with all the warmth and enthusiam of inspired souls, those grand strains, "How firm a foundation ye saints of the Lord, Is laid for your faith in his excellent word."

NAHUM'S CHARIOTS.

In evidence of the fulfillment of Nahum's prophecy I quote from Mr. Horatio Al-Îen's speech in 1838, about steam locomotion. He stated to the South Carolina Railway Company, that if they would adopt steam instead of horse-power, the basis of his report was the broad ground that in the future there was no reason to expect any material improvement in the breed of horses, while in my judgment, he says, the man was not living who knew what the breed of locomotives was to be.

As early as 1829 and 1830—mark the date-Peter Cooper experimented with a little locomotive on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad. "In the year 1875, at a meeting" of Master Mechanics in New York at the Institute which bears his name, he relates with great glee how, on a trial trip, he beat or had beaten a gray horse that had been attached to another car. In the same year the South Carolina Company had an engine called the "best friend" built at the West Point Foundry for its line in 1831. This company had another engine which was designed by Horatio Allen, built at the same shop. He says it was remarkable in having eight wheels which were arranged in two trucks."-M. N. Forney in Scribner.

The above is to show the remarkable coincidence with Nahum's prophecy, and goes to show the inauguration of a railroad system in or about the year 1830, or in the days of the preparation of the Lord, which in my mind agrees with Isaiah 11: 11-13; 2:11, 12, 17 and Nahum 2:3, 4. And now we will introduce another witness in declaring the sign of the times. The prophet Amos, the ninth chapter and eleventh verse; also Ezekiel 7:26. How the learned DD's. can overlook these important facts is wonderfully strange. I admit my lack of penetration in the mysteries of God, but I am compelled to recognize these plain facts of the hand of the Lord in bringing about the appointed time of his preparation.

J. J. Cornish. REED CITY, MICHIGAN.

ADVANCING YEARS.

You can never ultimately coerce Nature. Nature lie? Nature never does lie; it is only man that lies, and in proportion as man lies does he depart from Nature. See whether you can get nature to lie; put paint on your cheek to make yourself look young; you can not put smoothness on your brow to correspond. Nature is a continual protest against lying. What are those wrinkles coming upon some of you? The retreat of physical reality before the life. What is a wrinkle? The mark of the ribbed sea sand that tells me where yesterday's tide of life was, but where it is no longer to-day. What are those gray hairs of mine, coming so fast? The retreat of juvenilty before, if I be a holy man, a coming spiritualism, and if I be an unholy man, a decaying sensualism. You are gray-headed now; what does it teach you? That sense is an ebbing tide with you, and that physical reality and lustfulness are ebbing with it. A hoary head if in ways of righteousness is a glory, because then, as color is gone, and sensualism fading out, spiritualism, of which beauty of form is the emblem, has taken its place; hence we learn in the old head and the old face rather to look for beauty of form than of coloring, for color is the sign of sensualism; color is the sign of the body, form the sign of the soul. -George Dawson.

RECORDS OF FIFTY-TWO CENTENARIANS.

Richard A. Proctor, the astronomer, says in the Cosmopolitan (New York):-"I have before me the records of no fewer than fifty-two centenarians, the details in regard to whom have been collected by a committee of the British Medical Association. Of the fifty-two no fewer than thirty-six (more than two-thirds) are women. This may probably be attributed in large part to the comparative immunity that women enjoy from many risks to which men are exposed, but probably it is due not less to their greater temperance and to their freedom from the anxieties and heartburnings which attend men's struggles for influence, and even for maintenance. Medical men contend, however, that women also possess greater inherent vitality than men, the mortality of girls being less than that of boys, even during the first year of life, when the female is neither more temperate nor less ambitious than the male, and is exposed to as many dangers. Of the sixteen men only one was single; ten of the thirtysix women were single; fifteen men and twentysix women, then, among the centenarians, were married. Three of the fifty-two were rich, nineteen poor, the rest in comfortable circumstances. Most of the fifty-two have had good appetites, only two having appetites classed as actually bad; most of them have been through life moderate eaters; twelve, however, have eaten large quantities of food. Only one is returned as a large eater of flesh food, and only one as a great consumer of alcoholic liquors (in his case the liquor preferred has been beer.) Only eight of all the number are classified as simply "irritable," but to these must be added five classed as "irritable and energetic." As to smoking, 32 are non-smokers, 17 smoke much (four of them being women), three moderately, and two a little; only one chews; 37 avoid snuff."

JOSEPH SMITH EDITOR W. W. BLAIR ASSOCIATE EDITOR

Lamoni, Iowa, January 19, 1889

W. J. SMITH'S MISTAKE.

In reference to the pamphlet of Bro. Willard J. Smith, of which we have elsewhere in the HERALD made mention, and the mistake made by him in regard to the baptism of Elder William E. McLellin as having been by the Brighamites, Bro. Smith states in a letter to us that, reading in the HERALD that said baptism of Elder McLellin was in 1847, he gathered the idea that, as there was but the one faction of the church or body of any note claiming to be the church, and that was under Pres. B. Young, it was into that body that Elder McLellin was baptized; and he so argued from that conclusion.

We have stated Bro. Smith's mistake, and so far as the HERALD is concerned shown that it was not in fault. mistake, Bro. Willard J. Smith wrote us December 18th, from Holstein, Grey county, Ontario, as follows:

"I have just returned from a three weeks' trip in Garafraxa and Melancthon townships to-day and find your favor of the 27th ult. awaiting me.

"In reply thereto I wish to say, I have been sorry a hundred times perhaps that that mistake ever occurred in my pamphlet regarding Dr. W. E. McLellin.

"In regard to this, Bro. Joseph, I wish to say that the truth is dear to me. It was because of this that I wrote that pamphlet. I wrote of the matter as I then understood it, and desiring the good of the work. That mistake has occurred, and it it is better that I should suffer than that one shadow of untruth or misdirected effort should impede in any way the onward march of the great work. I therefore suggest that either you, or brother Blair, take up the matter and set it in its proper light before the readers of the

We do not know that Bro. Smith can do more than is done by this frank statement. It is much easier to commit an error, than to say nobly and frankly, "I have erred." Bro. Smith is equal to the occasion. We trust that this will be found sufficient to prevent further misunderstanding in the matter. We certainly com mend the spirit of self abnegation, and love for the truth, in which Bro. Willard states his conviction of error, and his regret for having so erred. May it be of benefit to all as indicating the better spirit in which workers for good should labor.

LAMONI COLLEGE.

BRO. E. L. KELLEY, under date of the 8th instant, writes us from Kirtland, Ohio, and in these hearty words endorses and urges forward the erection of the proposed College at this place:

There is no move before the body now which makes greater promise for the good of the work everywhere than that of the esiablishment of a first class institution of learning by the members principally, and yet without the taint of being sectarian.

It is not only Lamoni that will be benefited, but as must necessarily occur, when one part of the body is honored, every other part is blessed by it. An educational association with an aim to attain a ranking place with the first institutions of the kind in the country, will give a prestige to the work in every part of the country, and materially assist in opening up the way for preaching to every elder in the field, not to say anything of the inestimable good it must be to those who can receive of the direct advantages of such association and instruction. It will further advertise to the world of letters and culture that the church is not the bigoted and fanatical body it has been so falsely charged as being; that it stands for an educational institution wholly free from bias and sectarianism, and yet recognizing the Bible as of divine authority and a correct guide. I have a firm hope that the Saints everywhere will not fail to see the necessity of prompt, devoted and unselfish aid in the undertaking, for certainly rightfully sustaining this, is aiding wondrously the gospel work that we are daily contending for. I have but little personally to aid with, but shall sacrifice in other things that I may subscribe for a few shares of stock to aid all possible the undertaking; to have an institution I may have confidence in, where I may send my own children, and where all who desire may send theirs for an education unburdened with the bias, superstition and bigotry of priestcraft of whatever kind.

Lamoni as a healthy, secluded, moral, thriving inland town, and Iowa, as a first class free, advanced educational and liberty-loving state, makes the place of selection first class. now let us have funds sufficient for a first class College. Fifty thousand dollars will do as a starter, but you will want to soon double the capital stock I hope. At least, have a reserve or sinking fund of as much more. Don't think we will be backwards here in the east to aid it because so far west. We want some place to send our children so they may be under proper control and restraint while being educated."

THE official recognition below of the efforts of Pres. Joseph Smith and the Reorganized Church against polygamy, is another proof that God is giving-and will give-the faithful Saints "favor and grace" with the people when they wisely and patiently serve him. All history witnesses that "the Most High ruleth in the kingdom of men," and that he is "the Most High over all the earth." His Saints everywhere are learning this, although with some it is "by the things they suffer."

May heaven inspire the hearts of all to seek the Lord with the whole heart, that his name be honored, his cause advanced, and his church triumph gloriously.

TRINITY HISTORICAL SOCIETY, DALLAS, TEXAS.

SECRETARY'S OFFICE.

Dec. 28th, 1888.

REV. JOSEPH SMITH: Lamoni, Iowa:

DEAR SIR:-The members of this society desiring to convey to you in some manner an expression of their appreciation of the value of your work against polygamy, and as a slight token of their esteem, have unanimously elected you an honorary member of the society. Would you kindly favor us with your photograph?

PURGE OUT INIQUITY.

A BROTHER Wrote us of late as follows, and inquires what should be done with the transgressor:

"There was an elder in this district who sold some horses that did not belong to him, obtained money from the bank under false pretenses, and then left and did not pay his store bills nor make settlement with his creditors."

Our answer is, that the branch and district officers should have proceded at once, as the law of the church provides in the Scriptures, Book of Mormon, Doctrine and Covenants and Book of Rules, chapter thirteen, to correct and purge out the evil. Besides this, if it was evident he had violated the laws of the land, then he should have been promptly turned over to the civil authorities; for the law of the church commands that he or she who kills, robs, steals or lies, and the like, "he or she shall be delivered up unto the law of the land" (Doc. Cov. 42:22), and their guilt "shall be proven according to the laws of the land."—Doc. Cov. 42:41. The laws of our country provide for the punishment of such evil doers, and the law of the church commands the Saints to "be subject to the powers that be" until Christ comes in glory. (D. C. 58:5). The fair fame, the prosperity, and even the safety of the Saints depend on their seeing that these requirements are faithfully kept.

A branch or district where there are two or more elders who are not personally interested in the matter is legally competent to proceed and purge out such evil.

Any person who sells property not his or her own and over which he or she has no lawful authority to sell, or who obtains money or property under false pretenses is criminal under the laws of both God and man and should be made to answer thereto. And all persons who will not settle with their creditors and pay store bills, or any lawful, just debt, are transgressors of the laws of the church and of the land, and should be treated as such. No one can be a disciple of Christ, or a decent citizen, and wilfully or negligently fail to pay his or her debts; and the officers of the church should see that the church and the country are not defiled by that class of church members.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. M. R. SCOTT wrote from Wirt, Indiana, the 4th instant that some Brighamite elders had been trying to undo the work done by the brethren at Byrnville, Indiana. They hastily departed, however, on hearing of his coming. He lectured there on the apostasy of the Utah Church and the claims of the Reorganization, baptizing a leading citizen and his wife at the close of his meetings. Bro. Scott states that no harm was done to the cause by the efforts of the Brighamite elders.

Bro. F. C. Warnky wrote from Independence, Missouri, that church matters were prospering there. The brethren were pushing the work on the new church building, and expected to get the roof on this winter. In spiritual matters they were also advancing.

Bro. Thomas Rawson, of White Rock, Michigan, writes that the few Saints there are alive in the good cause, trying to do what they can to advance its interests. They seldom see an elder, but rejoice in the blessings of the work, which they receive.

Bro. Joseph Simmons, of Canton, Illinois, renews for the HERALD and says, "I can't see how any true Latter Day Saint does without the Herald."

We are pleased to learn by letter from Bro. G. S. Lincoln that Bro. H. P. Brown, of Oakland, California, who lately had a stroke of paralysis, was up and about again, expecting to resume his work on the Expositor and other duties at an early day.

Bro. J. M. Sumner, of Castle Rock, Morrow county, Oregon, is anxious that some of the traveling ministry should visit him and preach in that vicinity. He thinks some would unite with the church. The Saints of Salt Lake City made glad the heart of Bro. R. J. Anthony with substantial tokens of their kindness on Christmas day, presenting him with a fine gift, for which he feels very grateful; conscious that it is an evidence of the esteem of the donors.

Sr. Abigail Stites, of Plainville, Indiana, writes that there are but few Saints there, but they rejoice in the cause and their hearts are gladdened by the good news of its progress. She hopes to see all Saints, whether few or many, standing firmly for the right as a testimony of the faith to the world.

Sr. M. A. Bean, of Cadillac, Michigan, writes cheerfully of the good she has received by obeying from the heart the form of doctrine delivered unto her through the ministrations of Elder W. J. Smith. She rejoices in the blessings of the Lord. Replying to her question we state that the Home Column Missionary Fund is used to sustain the families of the ministry.

Bro. J. A. McIntosh writes that the edition of his pamphlet on the objections to baptism examined and refuted is now exhausted. More will be printed at a future time of which he will give due notice.

A recent letter from Sr. M. T. Short informs us that Bro. Short is in his mission field—Wisconsin.

Bro. A. Z. Rudd, of Kingsley, Iowa, writes that Brn. J. A. Davis and W. E. Peak are opening new places and doing stalwart labor for the cause in the Little Sioux district.

Sr. Emily Shumway writes from Muskogee, Indian Territory, that she is not long for this world and asks the prayers of the Saints in her behalf; also in behalf of her two young grandchildren, that they may be watched over for good.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Are parents who do not live in Zion or any organized branch exempt from the command of God, as recorded on page 200 in Doctrine and Covenants concerning their children?

Ans.—We have no right to extend the specific obligation further than the revelation itself does. It reads: "Zion, or in any of her stakes which are organized." A strict obligation rests upon all Saints, however, to teach the gospel to their children, and in a proper manner persuade them to accept it, when prepared to do so.

2.—Is it in keeping with the law that the sacrament be taken from the church and administered to one who is sick and cannot attend?

A.—Yes; in case of sickness, accident, or other infirmity.

ROME WAILING.

The clippings below indicate a fulfillment in part of some of the remarkable prophecies of St. John, of the Book of Mormon, and Doctrine and Covenants, in relation to the humiliation, wasting, desolation and final overthrow of "Mystery, Babylon the Great, the Mother of Harlots," etc., etc. Read Revlations, chapters 17, 18 and 19, also I Nephi 3:33, 34, 46-51, and Doctrine and Covenants I:3; 34:3; 64:5; 84:1; 108:2, 4, etc, etc. We rejoice that God is moving for the spread and triumph of his "marvelous work and a wonder." The signs of the times point unmistakably to a further breaking down of "Mystery, Babylon," throughout all her departments, and to her further alienation from, and by, the civil governments of the world. The light is come and increasing.

Rome, Dec. 24.—"The Pope addressed the Sacred College today and gave thanks to God for the blessings which his jubilee had brought him. He affirmed with much feeling his former utterances on the question of temporal power, and indignantly rejected the accusation that he was an enemy of Italy. He urged Catholics everywhere to agitate in a legal manner, for the restoration of the Papal Supremacy, and spoke in deprecation of recent liberal factions in Italy. His address throughout was unusally violent and bitter.

The speech referred exclusively to the Vatican and Italy. His Holiness said that the whole world saw in what a painful situation he was placed. One could only ask, How far will they go? At the present time a systematic war was being waged. Even the person of the Pope was exposed to the threats of the mob. The enemies of the Holy See had weapons enough already to injure the Papacy, and if these did not suffice, they were prepared to manufacture fresh weapons. It was persistently asserted that the Pope was the enemy of Italy. This assertion was simply made to mask the real object of the perfidious war against the church, and that object was to render Italians hostile to the Papacy. To vindicate the rights of the Pontiff, was in reality to advance the prosperity of Italy. To demand that the greatest moral power in the world should possess real sovereignty in Italy, where Providence had placed it centuries ago, was not an act of hostility to the country. The fact that Bishops in foreign lands were laboring for the restoration of the Pope's temporal rights proved that the interests of the whole Catholic Church were bound up in the cause."

Of this the Chicago Tribune for Dec. 26th has the following comments, and the Brighamite Mormons and their like would do well to note the fact that "Providence" is moving for the divorcement of the state from church control and church interference throughout all Christendom. "The wicked shall do wickedly, and none of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand."

The Tribune says:

"It is a little remarkable that the venerable Pontiff of the Roman Catholic Church at this blessed Christmas tide, and when his discourse should be "peace on earth, good will to men," addresses his Sacred College in a belligerent manner and can find no better topic than wholesale abuse of the Italian people, and of all people everywhere who do not believe in the temporal power of the church. 'To demand that the greatest moral power in the world should possess real sovereignty in Italy, where providence placed the church centuries ago, is not an act of hostility to the country,' says the Pope, forgetting that the same providence which placed the church in Italy, also laid upon it the injunction, Render therefore unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's,' of which things temporal sovereignty is the most natural and conspicuous. It is not a pleasant spectacle, this of the spiritual head of a great church berating the world, opposing himself to its material profit and progress, and demanding political power and sovereignty, oblivious to the fact that it has long passed the time when it will allow the church to interfere in the concerns of state or dominate them in any way. Such violence and bitterness are not seemly."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. R. Etzenhouser wrote under date of the 7th instant from St. Louis, Missouri, as follows:

"Conference of the 5th and 6th a success. All business passed off peacefully and much of the Spirit was manifested, with profitable sessions throughout. In the sacramental service many took part and were blessed. Bro. Gillen's preaching of late weeks, and his work in the conference have been very profitable."

Bro. Hiram Rathbun wrote from Buchanan, Michigan, the 4th inst:

"I have labored at Williamson, Webberville and Dimondale, and left all three places with arrangements for prayer and testimony meetings Sabbath at each place. I am now with H. A. Richardson, John Shook and the other Saints in this place trying to help them on in their con-flicts in this holy war against error, ignorance, superstition, arrogance and sins, all of which know no blush. But the faith, the hope and the patient endurances of the Saints-watered with their tears-bringeth in the season thereof a glorious reward. 'He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him? Thank the Lord for his precious promise! When grief's gushing fountains of the Saints are all broken up and the eyes become the channel of a flood, yet holy hope rides buoyant down every tear as the Spirit whispers, "He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him freely give us all things.' So let Saints work on, pray on, weep on, trust on, hope on. The rest, the prize, the crown, is waiting, yes, just waiting.'

Bro. J. G. Cook, of St. Louis, Missouri, recently expressed himself as follows concerning church matters there:

"Bro. J. W. Gillen has been preaching for us lately, but I am sorry to say that he is going away this week; his sermons were good and he has done a good work here; he is a good brother, and in his departure from among us I can say that he has the well wishes of the Saints at St. Louis."

WE have the following from the Chicago Tribune of the 11th inst.:

"A meeting was held tonight (10th) by the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints to complete arrangements for the world's conference to be held April 6th 1889 Delegates will be in attendande to the number of probably 800, from all parts of the world, and the conference will continue for about a week. A committee on entertainment was appointed, consisting of J. F. McDowell, H. C. Bronson and Robert Winning, who will see what can be done in the matter of aid toward entertaining the visitors. This committee will also visit the various pastors of the city with a view of securing their co-operation. Robert Winning, John Burlington Jr., and the Rev. H. C. Bronson constitute a committee to procure a building sufficiently large to accommodate the delegates. This conference is an important one, as it exercises a controlling interest in all governmental affairs of the Church throughout the world. The quarterly conference of this district convenes in St. Joseph the last Saturday and Monday in February. It will enact such regulations as will be deemed necessary for the further establishment of the church in north-west Missouri, receive the report of the general work done in this district, and appoint all ministers within its jurisdiction.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"Make my mortal dreams come true With the work I fain would do; Clothe with life the weak intent, Let me be the thing I meant."

BY WHAT LIGHT ARE WE READING? As saints of God we expect to build a spiritual house. Have we counted the cost, and are we assured in our own minds that we shall be able to finish? "One is your Master, and all ye are brethren."

In our last article we quoted from a widely circulated, ably edited journal of the Methodist Episcopal Church an article which charges upon Protestantism the entire blame for the loss of power over the masses of the people; and one of the items ennumerated is, that the dress of even the middle classes is such that the poor cannot afford, without beggaring themselves, to appear in the house of God clothed as would seem suitable beside these. In this latter day, God has spoken to his people and given them a direct command, "Let all your garments be plain." Would any one suppose that this could be open to controversy? And yet it is, and that too of honest difference of opinion, because to this is added, "And their beauty the beauty of the work of thine own hands." A plain garment may at the same time be a beautiful garment, but by no possible rendering of the English language with which we are acquainted can an ornamented garment be a plain garment. It may indeed be comparatively plain, but it is not plain If we read by the light of loving, willing obedience to the will of God, we will not only be able to read correctly, but, led by the Spirit which guides into all truth, we will many times be able to see clearly the reason for the loving guidance God extends to us, which guidance if submitted to, will lead us into all truth. Comfort, freedom from many an hour of perplexing thought, self respect, time secured for the improvement of our mental faculties, to say nothing of obedience to His will, are all on the side of plain dressing; and if it does not bring humility with it surely no one can say that it has a tendency to foster pride.

Still more surprising than the fact of the construction which has been put upon the commandment to which we have just referred, is that which is put upon the one given in 1887: "Let your garments be of a sober character, and free from excess of ornamentation." There is a light by which this would stand out in bold relief and read, "ornamentation is the excess from which I wish you to be free. The trifling ornaments which vanity and pride lead men to put upon their persons, ill become the elders of my church. Men 'standing between the living and the dead,' embassadors for Christ, need not such things as these. They cannot add to your dignity, they may perchance hinder your usefulness; avoid them. The money invested in these would procure respectable garments for some fellow laborer who is not to-day in the field, simply because his clothing is not respectable, or for some other one who is there, and being there, needs better clothing than he has." All may not read it by this light, however, and for the sake of argument we will read it by another light, and say, "This shows plainly that a certain degree of ornamentation is right, and may be used. If the elders may ornament their clothes to a certain extent, then it follows that the sisters may do the same."

In the first place this command was given to "Men of God who bear the vessels of the Lord;" and be its meaning what it may, it applies to them and only them. And however desirable it may be for others to obey it, and good in its results to them as to the ministry, were those others bound by no other command to a like course of action, then they are not bound by this, for it is direct and specific in its nature, and cannot by any stretch of the imagination be made to apply to any but those to whom it is given, "Men of God who bear the vessels of the Lord."

But admit for the sake of argument that the Lord did intend to convey the meaning which has been attached to it, is there any trimming which good taste allows to be put upon a gentleman's clothes? To any reflecting mind the absurdity of the position ought at once to be apparent.

Again; if the noun "excess," be used in the sense of the adjective excessive, who will be able to tell us just at what point the proper amount of ornamentation ends and the excessive begins? We have seen by their own confession, that to present a respectable appearance by the side of the middle classes in Protestant churches to-day, means beggary for the poor. Neither can you call this excessive, for according to the world it is very moderate indeed, anything like excess lying far beyond this. As a case in point we give you a brief description of the attire of Mrs. Frank Leslie, when assisting at a Thanksgiving dinner served by herself and other ladies of New York to the starving poor of that city, in the kitchen of the St. Andrews hotel: "She was dressed in black silk, with a jaunty little bonnet on her head, and the regulation band of white ribbon tied about her throat. Her fingers were jeweled with solitary diamond, turquois, sapphire and pearl, and about her wrists were clasped great bands of Roman Gold, set with diamond stars." Mockery, hollow mockery! but while our heart burns within us at such a spectacle, we do not wish to be drawn from the consideration of the question, "Where does the proper amount of ornamentation end and the excessive begin?" Having made plain garments to mean sober garments, and discovered that we may trim and ornament them, it is still necessary that we know how much to put on them without coming to the point of excess.

Thus we find ourselves again reduced to walk in an uncertain way and to stumble, as all surely will who walk not by the light of His revealed word. The test of our love to Gsd is obedience. "If you love me keep my commandments." We take broad issue with the sectarian world upon this very point. They have explained away the plain commands of God. Are we in any better condition? It will not do to say, "This matter of dress is a small one;" for if it is not too small to demand the attention of the Ruler of the universe, can it be too small for our consideration? It will be a happy day for the cause of truth, and a blessed one for humanity, when they shall fully comprehend the fact that every law of God is a great matter, and because each separate one has been framed and weighed in the balance of eternal love, and was from the beginning intended for our highest good, they cannot be violated with impunity. Small as this matter of dress may seem to you to-day, if eternity should reveal to you the fact that one soul had stumbled over your dress and been lost, do you think it would be a source of pleasure to you? Love seeks the wellfare of its object-leaves the ninety and nine in the fold and searches upon the bleak mountain tops for the one gone astray-and if you have never tasted the sweets of finding and helping back to the fold such an one, try it, we say to you; taste, and you will know joy you have never felt, a foretaste of the joy reserved in heaven for him who overcometh.

The voice of the Spirit is calling to the Saints, "Come up higher." The forty years wandering in the wilderness for the Latter Day Israel is drawing to its close, and the eye of faith turns from the toil-worn and weary veterans, to the young men and maidens of whom you said, "Our children shall perish in this wilderness." Even now God is raising up leaders for them, and e'er long the battle cry will be passed along our lines, "Arise, go over this Jordan, thou and all this people." Let those who wait upon the Lord renew their strength, and let your courage fail not; for as there were in Israel seven thousand who had not bowed the knee to Baal, so in this Latter Day army God has reserved to himself a goodly number who will keep his commandments, and his word shall not fail, but shall accomplish that whereunto he has sent it. Let us so strive to read his law by the inner light of love towards God and man, that we may be found walking in harmony with it; for outside of this there is no promise of safety.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Sister Lillie Kinsey, of Harlan, Iowa, is in special need of the prayer of faith and earnestly desires to be remembered by the sisters of the League.

Sr. E. A. Charles, of Bartonville, Ill., also requests to be prayed for, that if it is God's will she may be healed.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Sr. Mary White, Lima, Mo., writes:—"I must bear my testimony to the value of the Prayer Union. I have observed the hour from the first, and have had the Spirit of God bearing witness with mine that He is a prayer hearing and a prayer answering God, and also that he is about to pour out his Spirit more fully upon the church. I desire this year to make a monthly free-will offering to the Lord. I am one of the scattered and lonely ones, and ask to be remembered in your prayers."

Sr. Bently, St. Thomas, Ont., writes:—"I want to let you know that I am still in the faith, and the more thoroughly I become acquainted with the work the firmer I am. I desire to press onward in it, for I love it and its teachings."

Sr. Cornish, of the same place, writes:—"I love this work, and strive to defend it wherever I am. Last year I asked the Saints to pray for me because of poor health. It has pleased God to bless me; but I am not entirely restored. Will you intercede with God in my behalf, that, if it pleases him, he will restore me to health, that I may spend my strength in his service."

Sr. Mary Prettyman, of Knox, Ind., writes:-"I have been engaged in this work for twenty years, and God has many times blessed me in a wonderful manner. There is a little flock of Saints here that are hungering and thirsting after righteousness. We have not had any preaching since September, when Bro. C. Scott was with us and gave us some splendid discourses. We have week-night prayer meetings, and Bible studies on Visitors frequently come in to these, Sunday. and we enjoy talking together. Sr. Maggie Collins and myself have been visiting, and talking some with the people, and have been blessed in so doing. The last week of the old year was one of severe trial and darkness for me; but, praise the Lord, with the incoming of the new year this darkness has fled, and I set my stakes more firmly than ever to draw nearer to God and strive to live every day as though it were the last one of my mortal life. Let me beg the sisters of the Prayer League to be faithful, for God has surely a blessing in store for those who are."

Sr. M. M. Brooks, Tilbury Center, Ont., writes:

—'I think the Prayer League will be the means of much good if we are only faithful. Would that the language of every heart might be, "Nearer my God to thee." May God increase our faith, and give us wisdom that we may know what to pray for. Let us pray in faith, for the prayer of wavering unbelief can not be acceptable to God."

Sr. Mary E. Kelsey, Croton, Iowa, writes:— "Sr. Matthews sends me the church papers, and though I have had many trials since I came into the church, I can truly say I have never regretted what I have done; and though my husband now opposes me I hope to see the day when he will be with me in this work. Pray for me, that I may hold out faithful."

A sister writes as follows:—"I was much impressed with the good news contained in the editorial in the Herald, "Come up Higher," and on the night I read it I dreamed that I, with some of the Saints, was in a large wagon, journeying. It seemed to be night, and I noticed the stars, which were exceedingly bright and numerous. They commenced to move and come together in perfect order; and went through a drill, as it were, changing into beautiful forms-much like the forms presented in the changes of a revolving kaleidescope. When the last view was presented there appeared two double columns, and over these a beautiful arch, like a large gateway. The arch was beautifully wrought with a lace or network of stars, with the word "Come," in the beginning of it. I could not make out the other words, which were behind the network, neither did I know what they were. I thought I stood up and clapped my hands and shouted, "This denotes the coming of the Savior." I awoke and felt to rejoice over it, and because of the progress of the Lord's work throughout the world."

BUFFALO, Iowa, Dec. 30th.

Sister Frances:-Something like two months has passed since I sent my name to be enrolled with the Prayer League; and I now wish to relate my first experience when meeting with you. I was alone one afternoon sewing. The thought came, "It is near the time for me to meet with my sisters in prayer." The next thoughts were, "Oh, how silly it would look! Your prayers would amount to nothing!" But I well knew this to be an influence from an evil source, and so, by a determined effort, I forced myself from the chair in which some unseen power seemed endeavoring to keep me seated. Going into my bedroom and closing the door, I knelt down and prayed to God to help me that I might pray intelligently; and I experienced a spirit of prayer such as I had never known before. And, dear sisters of the League, I felt your very presence with me so strongly that I instinctively looked around almost expecting to find you there indeed. I arose with my eyes full of tears, and my heart warm with love for Him who I knew heard my prayer that day. I believe there will be great good wrought by, or through our effort. Let us persevere; and if any be tempted as I was, do not yield, for a blessing awaits you. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, I ask that you pray for your PAULINE RUBY. sister,

No 5, PARK TERRACE,

LLANELLY, Wales, Dec. 11th.

Dear Sister M. Walker:—I have been a constant reader and a silent observer of all your writings in the Herald, Hope and the Leaves, and after mature consideration I am constrained to say that by your labor and in your field there is truly a golden harvest for the church, for fathers and mothers, for the youth and the children.

I have read the different letters in the "Mothers Column" from the many sisters that have been drawn by your labors into the great field of correspondence, with great interest. Could see my own experience of life in the self-confessed experience of others.

By this time I am released from the "burden of young children." I have raised mine, four in number, two boys and two girls; and, thank God, they are landed where my ambition wanted to have them, in the service of God, and in the missionary field. And my prayer now is continually: "O, Lord, protect from the evil that is in the world." Only a mother's mind can run back the path of my experienc and conceive with what terrible exactness I tried to, and did, impress the image of truth upon their tender minds, and that, often times, under trying circumstances.

Permit me here to offer a thought. The minds of our children, when we first get them, are clean, pure and white, like paper ready to take impressions; and, dear mothers, it is our right to see and superintend all the impressions that are made.

Remember us and our mission field.

SISTER J. T. DAVIS.

THE words of encouragement and appreciation contained in the above letter are to us almost precious; for, next to the approval of God, we hold the approval of a true, pure, loving, faithful mother--a mother whose works bear witness to her life, and whose husband and children rise up and call her blessed. Sisters, let us take new courage. Our work cannot be separated, and whatever is said to one is said to both. Together we are enlisted to fight this battle, and whith God's help we must conquer. We entreat that the Prayer League will not forget the especially hard and in many respects discouraging mission undertaken by Bro. J. T. Davis and wife, that God may uphold and sustain them and go before them.—ED.

Dear Sisters:-This being the first of the new year, I feel like writing a few lines to you to say that I am encouraged in the work that we are engaged in.

The Mothers' Home Column has been a great comfort and help to me, as well as to many others, for which I feel thankful. Many times, when burdened with care and trials, there would appear a letter that seemed expressly for me, from which I would receive new strength and faith to take up my cross again, and follow my Master through rough places as well as smooth. The paths He trod were not always smooth and full of roses, then why should mine be? Since entering into the Prayer League I have been blessed. Although I am one of the scattered ones, and have not the privilege of meeting with my sisters, I have not failed to keep the hour, and feel that it is right so to do. The Lord has blessed me, and I know that he will bless all that seek him with full purpose of heart.

I received a letter a few weeks ago, from one tempted and tried, and I presume there are many such. To them I would say, do not give up. Let your trials be ever so great and your burden ever so heavy, remember you have a friend that will help you in every time of need. He is pleading with you with outstretched hands, saying: "Cast upon me all your care. Come unto me all you that are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Will you heed those kind and loving words, and trust Him? If you will, he will help you, never fear. So do not get discouraged, but look up. The Spirit is calling you, dear discouraged sisters, to come up higher. Purify yourselves; let your conversation be pure and holy;

call on the Lord in mighty prayer, he will hear. Do not say you doubt, for He desires a prayer of faith. If you are weak and cast down, remember we all have a work to do, the weak as well as the strong. If you do stand alone, there is more need of living close to your Savior, continually striving to live the life of a true Christian, teaching your little ones to live so that you with them may meet those gone before that are waiting for you in the paradise of God.

I feel that I am one of the weakest, but am determined by the help of God to fight on and try to gain that rest that awaits the people of God. What are all the vanities of the world compared with a home in heaven with the saints of the Most High? God give us strength to endure to the end, is the prayer of AUNT P.

Correspondence.

GARAFRAXA, Ont., Dec. 24th.

Dear Herald:-Having become acquainted with your papers of late and being cheered by the many testimonies given to the truth of this great latter day work, I thought I would add what I know of the glorious gospel. I am but young in the work, having been baptized on the 30th of July last by Elder John Shields. When he came here a year ago I was so prejudiced I would not go to hear him preach, and represented that he had come to get up a load for Salt Lake, and also other reports which had no foundation more than Madam Rumor.

I was raised in the Presbyterian faith, but finally abandoned church-going and tried to believe the Bible to be false and religion to be a fraud, thinking it was not possible for the Bible to be a truth and sanction to so many forms of religion. And without investigation I classed the Latter Day Saints as another of these forms, and only another specimen of the religious fraud, until one Sunday, in February last, my wife and I paid a visit to Mr. John Taylor's family, living about ten miles away; and it so happened that Elder J. A. McIntosh was to preach there. After hearing him preach I thought the gospel was better explained than I ever heard it in all my life before. I then got some tracts and a Voice of Warning and commenced to investigate; and the more I searched the more I found the doctrine to agree with the Bible. In June I met with Elder Shields again and invited him to come to my place and hold meetings, which he did on the 23d. On the 30th I agreed to be baptized with my wife and three others, and on the morning I was going to be baptized I took out my pipe to have a smoke, but Bro. Shields said, "Bro. Mortimer, why not bury your tobacco habit with all the rest of your sins?" so I began to think, "Why not," as no unclean thing can dwell in the presence of the Great I Am, and surely tobacco is not a clean habit. And as I wished to get rid of the habit, "why not now?" so I did not have the smoke, and have never touched tobacco since, nor did I have a desire to do so after I was baptized, for I desired the Lord to take away the appetite when I arose to walk in the newness of life, which he did, although many times previous to my obeying the gospel I had tried to give up the habit but was unable to do so, proving to me at last the power there is in the gospel to save from sin if we we will only be obedient to its conditions. I was also addicted to strong drink, and at many times was partially overcome; but since obeying the gospel I find that appetite also taken away. I thank the Lord for the same and would not exchange the few months happiness since I obeyed the gospel for all the pleasures of the world I have ever before enjoyed. When I say this work is true I only state what my eyes have seen, what my ears have heard and what I have felt of the power of the Spirit. I know the gifts of tongues, healing and prophecy are enjoyed by the faithful ones of to-day as in days of old. But I also know it requires diligence in the service of the Master, and a consistent walk before all to obtain those blessings.

Yours in the gospel of Christ,

JAMES MORTIMER.

KINGSTON, Mo., Dec. 31st.

Editors Herald:-I am still working for the cause of Christ. On the 8th of December I went to Livingston county. Bro. Miller secured the Christian Church, known as the Highland Church. I occupied it four nights and raised a little inquiry. I think some saw things in a different light from what they had before. I have been preaching eight miles east of Kingston in a School-house. I spoke three times at night in succession. This is where my brother, E. N. Ware, preached, as a Campbellite. He once preached our faith. I have preached in Ray and Carroll counties at twelve different places. Some new places, and some where there has been a large amount of preaching done. I shall do what I can this winter, according to my health. I have not been very well this fall; had some chills. My preaching is mostly at night and the night air seems to disagree with me, though I shall trust in the Lord and do what I can.

Yours in Christ,

R. L. WARE.

HARRISONVILLE, Mo., Dec. 29th.

Dear Herald:-Since I last wrote you I have received letters of inquiry concerning the lay of the country, etc. I will say for the benefit of all concerned, that the country is mostly level, just rolling enough for drainage, with lime-stone soil, mostly prairie, yet plenty of timber for support, and is well adapted to growing all kinds of grain and grass. Harrisonville is the county seat of Cass county, and has a population of about six thousand, with four railroads. We have a membership here of fifteen but are not yet organized. We hold services once a month. As evidence of the class of people that occupy Cass county, this fall we gave a majority of four hundred for Local Option. Beat it if you can. Of late I have done considerable preaching at Rich Hill and baptized seven, mostly heads of families. Several others are near the kingdom.

I assisted the brethren there in organizing a Sunday School, Bro. J. C. Christensen superintendent. The branch has enrolled on its book fifty-nine members, four others who have moved in of late not registered.

The branch has rented and seated with chairs a very commodious hall, that will seat about one hundred and fifty. Bro. S. S. Black is president, A. Dellor priest, W. Chapman teacher, Thomas Oneal deacon.

On December 11th I commenced a discussion in the Christian Church at Virgil, Vernon county, Missouri, with Elder F. Smith, which lasted four nights, giving us a grand victory for truth and making many friends to the cause. To God be all glory. We have some very faithful Saints who live in that section. I have been assisted at times in my labors by Brn. A. Lloyd, D. Tucker, J. C. Foss and the White brothers, who are all good, faithful brethren, and are doing a good work. I feel well in the work and desire to battle on until the last victory is won.

Yours in the faith,

EMSLEY CURTIS.

FERNDALE, Cal. Dec. 15th. Dear Herald:-I send you the Ferndale Enterprise in which you will find a defense of our position. I find no trouble in getting such an article printed. Most of editors are perfectly willing. Again, I would call the attention of our brethren in the field to this the best of ways of informing the public of the difference between us and the Utah people, if they will write without personalities. It is no trouble to get this subject before the public in the secular papers. We should use every lawful means within our reach to let the people know the difference, as that is the great stumbling block and rock of offense. Let us remove it. I have just opened another place and am slowly widening the circle. Expect to baptize some on the morrow.

Yours in bonds,

A HAWS.

TULARE, Cal., Dec. 25th.

Dear Sir:--I wish to call your attention to a strong argument for the convincing of outsiders of the truth of the divine revelations of Joseph the prophet. We read in Ezra that he set up the altar that had been thrown down and restored the continued sacrefice. What more evidence is required to prove that the 2,300 year-days of Daniel's prophecy, for the cleansing of the sanctuary, are in the past? It is acknowled, generally, that the 70 weeks were 490 years. Ezra set up the altar 536 years before Christ. If the daily sactrifice was taken away in B c 600, we come to the birth of Swedenborg who may have had something to do with the water or cleansing. If we reckon from 543 B c. we come to the date of Swedenborg's last judgment in the world of spirits 1757. He (Swedenborg) restored organization like Joseph Smith, but predicted at his death that the Lord himself would, in about 50 years, restore the New Jerusalem Church, which took place in 1830 through the instrumentality of the Lord's prophet, Joseph Smith. Malachi says the daily sacrifice that was offered up in his day was not acceptable to God. Hence the fulfillment of that prediction is in the past.

INER LAMB

BURTON, Wis., Dec. 25th.

Dear Herald:-I am just as strong in the faith now as ever. I have read the Life of Joseph the Prophet, also the Book of Mormon. I have been reading my Bible lately, which, by the help of my heavenly Father, I understand well. I wish the prayers of the Saints, for I have hard times here, being all alone. If it were not for "the faith once delivered to the Saints" I would not want to live in this wicked and sinful country. If any of the elders should pass through these parts, they can find a welcome with my parents. I would be glad to correspond with some of the Saints, Yours,

W. D. KLARMAN,

CARO, Michigan, January 3d.

Bro. Blair:-An article [found in another column.—Ed.] written by Mr. Richard Nye, better known in the counties of Sanilac and Huron, in this state under the name of "Uncle Nye, I send you to-day. He is a very influential man, and it is said by those who are acquainted with him that he is a man of veracity. By his request I frequently made his pleasant home a resting place when I passed that way, and I always received a hearty welcome from him and his family. One day when in Minden City he chanced to meet two ministers, one a Congregationalist, the other a Methodist. They began to converse with him upon the subject of religion which ended in a controversy upon the mistranslations of the Scriptures, and on the faith of the Latter Day Saints. On parting they promised soon to pay him a visit. Soon after returning home he prepared this article, which he intended to read to them, but they failed to fulfill their promise to meet him. Soon after he had written it, I happened to pass that way and stopped for a few hours, and while there he read it to me. A few weeks ago I sent for it, and so he sent it to me and gave me permission to have it published in the Herald, and I forward it to you.

Yours in Christ,
LEVI PHELPS.

ELDORADO SPRINGS, Mo., Dec. 28.

Bro. Blair: I feel to rejoice in this great latter day dispensation, for the truth is gaining ground. I had the pleasure of attending the discussion held at Virgil City, cammencing December eleventh, and continuing five evenings of two hours each. Bro. Curtis sustained his posltion nobly and well. It must be remembered that the discussion was forced upon Bro. Curtis while preaching at Virgil City. Elder Smith of the Christian faith remarking that what Bro, Curtis had said was an "infernal lie," and that he would "wear him out" on the same. The tables turned and Elder Smith frankly confessed that to Bro. Curtis belonged the spoils, and shook hands over it at the ending of the debate, and said he wanted to act honorably with Bro. Curtis which he did. The whole house was held spellbound for the last half hour, while Bro. Curtis, under the power of the Spirit, heralded forth the truths of the kingdom of heaven, and under the solemnity of the occasion many were able to see that the gospel is still the power of God, although some would persecute the saints of the Lord. I am happy to say that the work in this part of the Independence district is flourishing; that by wise and efficient labor, we have reason to believe many will obey the gospel soon. We all know in waging war we must have faithful officers to see to the work, and we have that in the wise supervision of brethren I. N. and A. White. There are grand openings all along the southern portion of the district for preaching.

I have not been able to devote all my time to the work in the field, as home duties have taken up a part of it. But by the the help of the Lord I hope to devote all my time to the vineyard of the Lord as soon as circumstances will permit. My labor has been to assist Bro. Curtis until of late. I expect to join him after conference again, and remain through the winter. Our quarterly conference convenes on the sixth and seventh of January. In the covenant.

ABNER LLOYD.

WHEELER'S GROVE, Iowa, Dec. 31st. Bro. Blair: The Saints at Wheeler's Grove are not all dead. We have had some good prayer and testimony meetings this winter, in which the Spirit has been present with us, and that has caused the Saints to rejoice greatly, and has strengthened our faith in this great Latter-day work. Brn. Hanson and Davis have been with us and spoken words of encouragement and cheer, for which we thank our heavenly Father. While they were here another one was born into the Church of Christ. Peter Frederickson is well known in the Pottowattamie and Fremont districts, a man respected and loved by all who know him. He ever was a charitable man, and a true friend to the church. His baptism fulfills a dream in which it was seen he was baptized. This dream was had eight or nine years ago, and the very spot and everything connected with it was shown in the dream. We are looking for Brn. Henry and George Kemp by the 4th of Jan-Yours in the faith, S. C. Smith. uarv.

NEW HOPE, Va., Dec. 28th.

Dear Herald:-I am a new member among the Saints and wish to tell your readers how my conversion was brought about. I had been trying to serve God as best I could for twenty-one years. I had never heard of this latter day work until I was married, which is nearly nine years ago. My companion was deceived by the Brighamites at one time, but he told me he did not believe in all their doctrine, and that he expected to unite with the Reorganized Church some time. But I thought it was all a delusion and that he would be turned away from it.

I did not feel uneasy at all, and so everything moved on smoothly until one year ago when the few Saints in this community asked for our house of worship for an elder of the Reorganized Church to preach in and it was denied them. Then my trouble began. My companion told me he could not go there with me to preaching any more. This was more than I could bear alone; and as I had always found help in time of need, I thought I would take my trouble to God in prayer. Then I felt strong, and I thought that would be the turning point for my husband, and that he would come in with me. But instead of this, God turned me around insomuch that I could not pray at all. I then thought there was something wrong, but I tried time and again, and always with the same result. At last I gave it up. If it had been a man I believe I would have fought him. But I was afraid to try to fight God because he would not let me do to suit myself, for I felt that it was the power of God that was in my way. I continued stubborn and would not tell of my trouble but was trying to wear it off, when brother James Moler came to our house and stayed a few days and preached twice. I believed the doctrine to be true the first time he preached, but I was determined not to say so, and he went away. I did not feel satisfied, and when he came back the second time and preached several more sermons I felt obliged to confess I believed, and also tell my experience of trying to pray and could not. I tried all night to go to sleep, but could not; but when I told all, sleep came just as natural as ever.

But my near and dear friends have turned their backs on me; and yet this only confirms my faith in the work-that it is of God. Bro. Moler baptized my husband on the 8th of this month, and six days later he baptized me; and now we are trying to serve God together, and we rejoice that we have been united in "the faith once delivered to the Saints."

Pray for us that we may be faithful unto the end. I have already written more than I intended, and yet have only made a beginning.

Your sister,

MAGGIE S. COFFMAN.

VALENTINE, Mo, January 1st.

Bro. Foseph:—There has been a discussion here between a wholly Sanctified man and Bro. James Thomas of this district. The proposition read: "Resolved that the gospel preached by the twelve with its water baptism, did not include the Gentile world." Mikel Rousy affirmed; James Thomas denied.

The cause did not suffer in the four nights debate. Bro Thomas tried to get him to continue three nights longer; but no; he must go home! He said the Latter Day Saints believed that none would be saved only them. He was then informed that they believed every man would be rewarded according to his works. He tried to make it appear that Paul preached another gospel, a different one from that taught by the Twelve, chosen by the Savior prior to his resurrection. But he utterly failed on all points.

Bro. Thomas and my father, Ole Madison, have been on a preaching tour in Holt and Atchison counties, and state that the work is onward in all the places where they were, people being willing to come and hear for themselves. But we need more laborers, for the field is large, and the harvest is ripe, and the reapers few.

Yours in Christ,

M. P. Madison.

PLEASANTON, Iowa, Jan 3d.

Bro. Blair: - I have looked over the first volume of the Autumn Leaves, and in my judgment it is the best work I ever saw for the youth of the Church. The story of the Book of Mormon, by Bro. H. A. Stebbins, is very interesting reading and gives real light upon the dealings of God with his people on this land of America. "With the Church in an Early Day," by Frances, is very instructive and edifying, and should be read by all our young people. "From Malachi to Matthew," by W. R. Houghton, is an able effort to throw light upon a period of over four hundred years, which we have but very little history of in the Bible. These articles, with many others from the pens of our faithful brethren and sisters, and others, which appear in Autumn Leaves, make it a very interesting and valuable book to read, and the young people and the heads of every family in the Church, ought to subscribe for it. Dear young brethren and young sisters, if there are any of you who have been in the habit of reading novels and worthless books, I advise you to cease from it and read that which is now prepared for your especial benefit. I once asked a member why he read trashy matter. The answer was that he was tired of reading the Church books and that he wanted a change; at the same time never taking the Herald, nor any of the church papers. To such my advice is, Stop reading your novels and subscribe for the Church publications. One number of Autumn Leaves will teach you more wisdom, moralty, virtue and religious principles, than ten thousand copies of fables. Remember that this monthly magazine is published especially for your benefit. It is edited with great wisdom and is beautifully arranged. If the whole volume complete is bound together, it will make a book of nearly six hundred pages of good reading, and worthy a place in the library of every Saint.

Monmouth, Ont., Dec. 25th.

Brn. Foseph and William:—As the year has rolled around, bringing the festive season, it also brings many greetings as memories and scenes are revived, and charity forbids expression of the thought that all these greetings are hollow mockery only put on to fill up an appearance which is but assumed. Be it as it may, there are among the many those whose souls are stirred with deeper and holier thoughts, when they are brought in memory of Him whom the days' festivies are said to commemorate the birth of. My own thoughts go out to Him and I am trying to comprehend the extent and nature of the work he did, but I can only see a little way, and "through a glass darkly." But I will leave my reflections and proceed with other matters.

This is a new field of labor opened by brethren W. J. Smith and J. H. Lake, where they have done a good work at considerable sacrifice. Their memories are yet fresh in the minds of the Saints. This is the roughest and most picturesque part of Canada that I have ever seen. It appears as if one of the most mighty convulsions of natureearthquakes-had done very much to "turn upside down" a very considerable extent of this country, as much of the rock has been heaved to the surface and is broken in such a manner that large detached pieces can be seen where they have evidently been broken off from the other parts. Granite (red and grey) lying on the surface. Iron abounds in places and in paying quantities, but little is done towards working mines. Marble, of no mean quality, is common to some parts. Pyrites, soapstone-of a splendid quality-and lead are found in many parts. Copper is also found, and several kinds of beautiful stone which for lack of ambition or energy lie unnoticed and unused.

You will no doubt call to mind a letter you received some time ago from a Church of England minister, who wished to enter into a war of words through the Herald, but you wrote him to use some of the local papers as the Herald would not be seen among but very few of his people. This is his locality, and he seems to have a sympathetic feeling for his surroundings; (I mean the physical appearance of the country); as it is most terribly broken up, deformed and contorted by convulsions, evidently caused by internal pressure. I hope the future may make the rough places smooth again, not only in the physical, but also in the moral phase. I may have to meet the gentleman, but would rather not from what I learn of him. Bro. W. J. Smith held a debate with him last summer and it has done our cause a great deal of good. In fact, I dont want to spoil it, so I shall try to keep out of the way so far as I can, and not compromise any principle of

Among the events that have transfered with the Saints we may mention the loss of Bro. Abram Lake's wife, aged forty-seven years. She was not a member of the church, but was about to become such. Her faith led her to confess as much.

She died very suddenly, having left home at Irondale on the morning of November 1st, and in company with Sr. Bates proceeded to Cameron, which they reached in safety. Some time after arriving Mrs. Lake had occasion to go out of the house where she was stopping (with Mr. A. and Sr. Miller). Sister Miller knowing that Mrs. Lake was not well, went out a short time afterwards and found her dead. A deep interest was felt by the Saints and many of the friends. Among those who are not members was Mr. Bryson, the Post Master, who drove to Bobeaygeou, a village some twenty miles distant, where she was buried. Mr. and Mrs. Ayers also showed all the kind attention possible; but probably the weight of feeling rested on Mrs. Miller and his wife. As sister Miller is not very strong, the shock had considerable influence on her nerves for a time. Bro. John H. Lake no doubt will join in mournful sympathy, as it was his brother's wife. Shortly following this was the death of Sister Garbet, also of Irondale, and we have been informed by those who surrounded her bed just previous to her departure that the radiant light of peace and joy which lit up her soul and burst from her lips was one of the most soul gladdening testimonies ever left by a dying Saint. I was called upon to preach both funeral sermons which I did on the same day-Sunday December 16th. In the forenoon we used a text for Mrs. Lake's sermon Romans 14: 7-12; and in the afternood Psalms 116: 15 for the discourse on Sr. Garbet's departure.

I enjoyed a degree of liberty and had no lack of aid, being assisted by the word. Three other elders being present, namely, Abram Lake, Amos Lake and D. E. Hough; the two former brothers of J. H. Lake, the latter a promising young elder who has volunteered to labor with me for a few weeks this winter. I very much appreciate his help. He is a good reasoner, very calm and not easily disturbed by crying babies, etc.

I feel inclined to offer a word in behalf of Bro. Abram Lake, as I am satisfied that he has the talent to make a very servicable man in the field if he can arrange his temporal affairs. Bro. Amos Lake is not at all qualified for the rough experiences of the field, but is of a very retiring disposition and admirably qualified to preside over a branch if he will give himself to it. Bro. Charles Lake, a young priest of the Irondale branch, son of Abram, is well qualified for any labor in field or branch, in due time, as he becomes better acquainted with the work. He takes his place now when duty calls him, and has given good satisfaction. Bro. Anson Burton, a young elder, is doing his best to hold the fort at Monmouth and acquits himself creditably before the world and the brethren, who are well pleased. Thus you see that in this part of the field God is answering the oft-repeated prayer, "Send more laborers into the field" by raising up young men to succeed the ones who will soon pass away. May they be abler and better men! Wish you could send some tracts into this place, they would do good; several are enquiring for reading matter. This is a good field. Several urgent requests have come to me from places round about-from five to twenty miles distantto "come and preach for us." I can not do it, as I am only one and there are none of those holding office who can go, as they are all compelled to labor for the "bread that p-risheth" I may except Bro. Abram Lake. Even if they were at liberty they feel timid in going alone. Yet that is how I went, and have remained, with few exceptions, for eleven years. I will do the best I can while here to "strengthen the brethren" and present the word and such labor as is generally required, etc. I feel that with the local talent there is in these parts, that in a few weeks I shall be justified in going west, into the Kent and Elgin district, as that is where I am assigned to labor, as soon as I can reach it, which will be as soon as possible, of which I will apprise the president, Bro. A. Leverton, in due time. (Long may his face shine). To the Saints in that district, I send greeting, a wish for a joyous Christmas, not caused so much by reason of carnal festivities as by that"hungering and thirsting after righteousness," that the day may, by its recurrence, bring about in memory the desire to "come up higher," to a more spiritual walk and conversation with God; thus feasting to good things that make fat the soul.

To the Saints in the London district—as it is my home-I wish all that God may deem wise to give them, and I shall try to do my part in aiding them as I pass through the branches occasionally. Many times have they remembered me for which I wish to bring a gift of sweet remembrance and lay it on this Christmas altar to be consecrated to God for his goodness in puting that love into their hearts.

Some lonely ones away on the north peninsula of Bruce I am thinking sadly of to-day because they have no one to speak to them of the joys of the kingdom. Yet I am glad for them that they found the "Babe" who was once cradled in a manger. May the echo of the angelic voice which declared "Peace on earth good will to men" rebound upon the hearts of each of them and all their lonely ones thus situated, and echo and re-echo until it reaches my home where wife's heart may be made glad, and all my brethren and their homes, this day.

Editors of the Herald: After a long silence, so far as the Herald is concerned, I feel it my duty to offer a few words to your many anxious readres. About one month ago I did my last preaching. It seems a long time to me. It is a great sacrifice to labor as a traveling minister, but it is much greater one to be unable to fulfill the duties of one's calling. Some years ago I received the evidence that it was my duty to go forth, preach the gospel and help build up the work, notwithstanding my poor health, if at all able to do so. From that time to the present I have carefully striven to observe the instructions given; for the impression came in answer to prayer, was very strong, and I knew it was of God. God knows under what trying circumstances I have gone forth, and that I went in good faith and without regard to consequences. I have, however, for many years, been sensibly aware of a gradual and sure failure in my health, and that without Divine and miraculous interposition, I would, at an early age, reach that point where it would be impracticable and unsafe for me to continue in the field. That point has been reached; and although not unexpected by me, yet, as is usually the case, it has come much too soon. To submit with good grace is the most difficult part. We need the prayers of the faithful, but do not, wish to attract undue attention, as there are others, many others, who need them as badly (possibly more) as we do. In some of my last efforts in preaching the word, I was greatly blest. I trust I shall never forget how the good Father stood by me when I was weak, giving to me and to all the hearers who were in a condition to be blest, such strong evidence of the divinity of His work. My desire and determination are to do what I can to sustain the work. And should it please God for me to again occupy the field, I will gladly do so.

Your brother,

JOSEPH R. LAMBERT.

BARTONVILLE, Ill., Dec. 23d.

Bro. Joseph and William:- I have just finished reading the Herald and rejoice that there is such a paper in the church. On reading it many thoughts come to mind. I noticed in it a request from Kewanee for the Saints to pray for Sr. Annie Chisnall We have been shown by the Spirit in vision that, if she would exercise faith she would be granted her desire. Sr. Annie is a good Saint and one who has ever been ready to put forth her best efforts, both in branch and in the Sunday School, and she has won the esteem of her schoolmates and brethren and sisters. We feel to say amen to the request made, and will join in the prayers of faith with the Ever hopeful,

JOSEPH CHARLES.

LAMONI, Iowa, Dec. 31st.

Bro. Blair:-The Herald comes and brings good news from far and near, gladdening our hearts to hear how the gospel is being carried to the nations of the earth, and how God is blessing his servants with his Spirit. Since I left Illinois I have labored in southern Iowa and northern Missouri, and have been blessed in presenting the Word. At Blythedale and Pleasant Valley where I have been laboring of late, I find there is an earnest inquiry after truth, and the prospects are good. Some will obey ere long. It is no trouble to get a hearing when we go into a place where we have members who are trying to serve God and live their religion, and who are indeed an honor to the cause. Such I find in my travels. At Pleasant Valley is a nice Church belonging to the Baptists which is open for us by common consent, and the people administered to our temporal wants. Our brethren there are few in number: Bro. Wight and family, and Bro. Wm. Allen and family who are trying to hold up the Banner of King Emmanuel by their good works. letting their light shine. Bro. Bandy, who lives near Blythedale, is an old time Saint. He is an honor to the cause, and is well respected by all who know him. I expect to go back to that part soon, as the people are eager to hear, and I think much good can be done. I wish to say to my friends that Lamoni, Iowa, is my Post Office address. #### TRIUNE BAPTISM.

Whether we shall cruise along the shores of time, or bask in the sunlight of the known; or with intrepid boldness try to fathom the mysteries of the great unknown-and that which, without the inspiration of the Spirit of God will remain to man the unknowable: Whether we shall, by the inspiration of God, go out into the vast infinitude of creation and see its wonder-workings, all of which proclaim the supreme majesty of the Author, or simply confine ourselves to our terrestrial surroundings, we will be made to discover that nothing exists without law-neither indeed can. In fact, it were but deduced logic, that the thought of being governed, implies the necessity of something to operate in that direction. And hence we argue that as God is the great Author of the universe, and the governing, moving power, he will do nothing without law. And he being perfect in all his attributes, that no law can be framed in his unerring conception but a perfect one. That he, knowing the end from the beginning, could understand what kind of law would be necessary to operate in the final salvation. of humanity, and just what kind would be suitable to any or all conditions of life, without regard to any particular time in the great events that were to transpire before the final "consummation of all things."

To our mind the great events of the flood, which has so perceptibly left its imprint enstamped upon the face our globe, stands out a living argument of God's eternal design, and corroborates the statement of Paul in Galatians 3:8 and Hebrews 4:2.

But that a better understanding of the argument we design making, may be had, we must go away back to what, without the voice of inpiration, would remain to the human family the great unknowable, away to the time when nature travailed and brought forth a new world; and I trust the Herald readers will pardon the timidity with which we approach this part of the argument, as we are yet a novice as to the pre-existence of man. As Jesus was the great Prototype of the mortal family of man, so must be have been of the immortal family, and hence, were there no other proof, this thought alone seems sufficient to our mind to prove that-"When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy," we of the human family must have been there, and we shouted because we knew that we were to come and take up an abode and become even a part and parcel of the earth, that the design of our creation might be accomplished. See Genesis 6:2; Luke 3:38, in proof that we are the sons of God.

God knowing that man would become a transgressor of law, brought into existence a law intended to redeem him from transgression, and also to frustrate the deceptive schemes of the tempter. operation of this law will bring about the redemption, not only of the globe itself, but of all who are willing to yield obedience to its demands. In Genesis 3: 17-19, we learn that on account of man's transgression the earth was cursed. Having already discovered that we are a part of the earth, is it unreasonable to suppose that to the extent that the earth is cursed, man will also partake of its withering blight, and vice versa? Hence the law requisite to the purifying of the globe, will also govern man, at least so far as he has partaken of the nature therof. Now that God operates through all nature by law, and would save man without law, seems unreasonable and highly improbable, to say the least. But going to the "law and to the testimony," we find the bright gleams of inspiration speaking forth in affirmation of God's way, and just how he has designed that in time we shall have fulfilled our course, and having observed the law, shall stand with the redeemed and bask in the glorious light of heavenly bliss.

In the sixth of Genesis we learn that man had so far degenerated that it became necessary for God to destroy him from off the face of the earth. Man being a part of the earth, through his profligacy brought our globe into a fallen condition, and in consequence it became necessary for God to put into operation the law adequate for the redemption of this terrestrial sphere, and without which it would ever have remained in its fallen condition. Hence we see it entirely immersed with a water baptism, the which becomes a part of the grand law of trinity that ages before had originated in the mind of Deity. In the second chapter of Joel, we learn that after the land of Canaan shall have been redeemed, there is to be a wonderful outpouring of the Spirit of God, even to the extent that "all flesh" shall feel the grand effusion, or that our globe is to be literally immersed, the second part of the triune law, the Spirit baptism. And it is to have such an effect, that Isaiah tells us that the "lion and the lamb shall lie down together." "But the heavens and the earth which are now, by the same word are kept in store, reserved unto fire against the day of judgment and perdition of ungodly men." I Pet. 3:7. Here we learn that the time is to come when the earth is to be cleansed by fire, and it will be after this cleansing that it becomes as "a sea of glass." Thus is seen the trinity, the baptism of water, of the Spirit, and of fire; and as God never does anything without a necessity, it becomes actually requisite that the earth shall undergo this triune baptism before it can be permitted to occupy its allotted place with the celestialized globes,

Now if the argument thus far be a legal one so far as the law of God is concerned, and man in any sense of the term partakes of the nature of the earth, then that part at least, if ever cleansed, will need to undergo the same purifying influences. I trust we may be pardoned, if for the moment we digress to offer the thought that this was one of the reasons why it became necessary for Christ to be baptized. To the extent that he had partaken of the earth, it became necessary for him to obey the great law of purification.

Going to the record we learn that John was commissioned to preach the baptism of water, and as the sweet cadences of divine inspiration had long ceased to be heard, on account of apostasy, the result was that his preaching awakend in them such conviction of guilt that they came from all parts to receive his baptism. And true to his divine mission, he taught them that while he baptized them with water unto the remission of sins, "one mightier than I cometh, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to unloose; he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with fire." Luke 3:16. And now bursts forth from inspiration's dawn, the great era of the world; when, instead of the law of types and shadows, the great constitutional law of the world is given through the ministration of Jesus the immaculate! Who so arrogant as to assume for a moment that though for a time it was necessary, in this age it has become one of the non-essentials! What childishness to impute unto God the thought that he would introduce into a law intended for our salvation, such a thing as a non-essential!

But the glorious beams of his eternal goodness shoot athwart the darkned sky of degenerate apostacy, and through the teachings of the Savior of the world we hear the voice of Jehovah giving utterance to the sublime saying, "Verily, verily I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the kingdom of God."-Ino. 3: 5. Again: "He that believeth and is bapcarries with it the weight of Jesus after "all power" had been given him. Then in a condition to know as God himself, dare we impute to him the thought that he knew not whereof he affirmed? If he did not then know, is it not barefaced assumption-to say the least-for even the most learned scholar in biblical lore to offer the thought that baptism is not essential to salvation?

But God has given such complete proof of the divinity of the law that we do not need to dwell on conjecture, but go to the heaven-inspired utterances of those men who were duly commissioned to establish the law among their fellow men. In the last chapter of Luke we have the record that the apostles were to tarry in the city of Jerusalem until they were "endowed with power from on high." Now remember that these men, though they had traveled with the Master, and for three and a half years had been taught the truth, yet they did not have the right to go and teach it till they had received the baptism of the Holy Ghost and of fire. The last verse of this chapter tells us that they "were continually in the temple, praising and blessing God until [as we are told in the second of Acts] the day of pentecost was fully come." Now read Acts 1:2-4 and we learn of the baptism of the Holy Ghost and of fire. Weigh this matter carefully. If these men were not in a condition to preach the gospel without this purifying endowment can we expect to be saved short of it? Listen once more to the voice of inspiration: "Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ."—Acts 2:38. "The like figure whereunto even baptism doth also now save us."—I Peter 3:21. Not the act of water alone, but the great triune baptism, which to our mind constitutes the "one baptism," for Paul says, "by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body." Thus we feel to have discovered the necessity of the three baptisms; but as you will have seen, we are but a novice in this line of argument, and if the thought presented is not in harmony with the church polity or the word of God, then we want to be set right.

Another reason for presenting it is, that we are often accused of preaching too much doctrine. Remembering that "whosoever transgresseth and abideth not in the doctrine of Christ hath not God," we feel the necessity of showing why we preach doctrine. And inasmuch as this is a part of the doctrine of Christ we feel that it should be understood. To this end then we present it to the Herald, desiring to be shown our error if wrong.

SOME HISTORICAL FACTS.

FIRST that the Bible was never printed until about A. D. 1455. This is selfevident, because prior to that date there was no printing done of any kind. Up to that time it was in manuscript form, and in possession of those who could change it if the wished, and they did change it, because no two ever agreed.

The Jews never agreed as to what books were inspired. Two or three years before Christ the Hebrew manuscripts were translated into Greek. Some Latin Bibles were found in Africa, but no two of them exactly agreed. And then they translated the Septuagint or Greek version of the Old Testament, and no two of them exactly agree, although they were in the European languages. Constantine had been Emperor of Rome, residing at Constantinople, twenty six years. He died July 22d. A. D. 337, in the sixty sixth year of his age. He helped on the evil work of apostacy and corruption and was a murderer, for he murdered his wife and child.

The Bible of Henry the Eighth did not suit his daughter, so she got up another edition, and she also murdered her consin Mary, Queen of Scots. But this Bible did not suit. Then King James, a good philosopher no doubt, prepared the edition which we now have. Now do either of the above named make any claim to having been inspired by God to translate his holy writ? If they do I tail to find it. History proves that the Bible has been translated some eighty times; and it may have been translated three times that number for any proof we have to the contrary.

Then is it any wonder, when we put our prejudice under our feet and think for one moment of all the times this Bible has been translated, written and rewritten, printed and reprinted, and for many other reasons that I might mention, that mistakes occur in it? One of the things that surprises me is, that there are so few. Then should man charge these mistakes of men to God! My answer is, emphatically, No.

Now go with me and read from Exodus the fourth and the ten following chapters and you will find it says six times that Pharaoh hardened his heart against God. That, in my opinion, is correctly translated. In those same ten chapters it also reads that God hardened Pharaoh's heart against himself (as it were) eleven times. This I believe to be incorrectly translated. would ask, Is the above translation where it reads, "God hardened Pharaoh's heart," the language of God, or man? I know that my Creator liveth; He is my God, my Father and my Savior. He will never harden my heart against himself; neither did he harden Pharaoh's heart against him self. But I, and Pharaoh, and I am afraid many others, have hardened our hearts against our God, and now some try to throw the responsibility upon Him by saying that God hardened the heart of Pha-

Why would he not do the same by us? And if so, how can he hold us responsible? Believe me, that is not the language of God, but it is man's. God desireth not the death of a sinner, but would rather that he would turn from his wickedness and

My mother taught me to look upon the Bible as the unadulterated word of God. I still hold to that belief so far as I believe it is correctly translated. I think if all the evidence we have at command as to the men being inspired by God to translate the Bible just as he desired and required it should be, was weighed in a scale of justice and evidence, Joseph Smith would weigh them all down. I believe he was an inspired man, and that he died a martyr to the faith by the assassins bullet, as John the Baptist did when he was beheaded by the desire of a wicked woman on account of his goodness. I speak impartially, because I am not a member of any church. I am known because I love the brethren, more especially those in this latter day UNCLE NYE. work.

"PRACTICAL TEMPERANCE."

REV. M. H. Bond of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ preached an interesting sermon yesterday.

Text: "Add to your faith-temperance."—2 Peter 1:5, 6.

Shining through the mists of error, misjudgment and doubt caused by man's ignorance and cupidity in the past and present, there comes the light of faith and hope in the doctrine of the immortality of the human soul. All or any religion, Pagan or Christian, in all places and in all times, can never be wholly bad that has this eternal fact shining through the errors of human doctrine and human creed. To every member of the human family, no matter what the average of their life may be, for joy or for sorrow there has come this thought, this fond hope of a continued life (no matter how inobvious to the touch of sense) beyond the tomb that shall make the joy of existence the rule, instead of the exception. No matter then how much we may be divided by religions, creed or opinion. There is one plain proposition to which all must in reason agree, that if it be true that "There is no death, and what seems so is transition," then it naturally and logically follows that whatever rule of conduct maintained in this life tends most toward the production of the peace and happiness of man as an individual, or collectively, (as character is the only thing with which a man or woman may enter into life or continued existence in another state or sphere). Then we should and must all agree that that religion, as a whole, which tends most to exalt man from the basis on which it finds him, which appeals in just and due proportions to all the higher and better forces of his being-justice, mercy, reason, truth, morality, loyalty, temperance, etc.—that these are the things that must be discussed and practiced in order to entitle us to the name of rational beings. This statement brings us to the discussion of our text. First, we shall assert that the word temperance, as used by Peter, the apostle of Jesus Christ, does not refer specially to the use of alcoholic stimulants in any form or quantity. I do not believe however that he would disagree with the modern definition of the work temperance, namely," The moderate use of such things as are not in and of themselves hurtful."

It has been often shown that the moderate drinking of alcoholic stimulants as a beverage, is unsafe and unpracticable, and far more difficult to regulate or control than fire or scourge. As a medicine it is rapidly losing favor and support in the light of discussion and practical experiment; and to the sick-honored more in the breach than in the observance of its practice and use. It has been said that there are two sides to every questionthat men may differ permissibly upon questions of religion or politics-but to the questions of Prohibition, or the sale of intoxicating liquors, there is but one sideit is an absolute, unmitigated, unqualified curse. It is not possible to produce a man who was ever made better by selling rum, beer or wine to his fellow man; and yet it is he alone, almost, that constitutes the opposition to the temperance reformation. It is not the man who stands before the retail bar and thrusts upon himself, his family and society the results of his weakness and other's cupidity and greed. "The love of money" which tempts men into a business whose principal qualifications for success is a lack of conscience and sensitiveness should be considered as the "root of all evil," and by a wise and God-fearing nation or people treated as such. It is not our purpose to-night, however, to enter into lengthy details of the wretchedness and crime wrought by drunkenness.

"Vice is a monster of such hideous mien, That to be hated needs but to be seen; But seen too oft, familiar with its face, We first endure, then pity, then embrace"

Of no other question in the world is this so true as of the rum traffic.

Death loses its terrors by its common presence. That which is worse than death forms no exception to the rule.

Drunkenness is responsible for over one half of the pauperism in the Old World; the percentage is greater in our country. In New York city the saloon is responsible for seven-eighths of the crime and poverty existing there. There are nearly three thousand more places accessible to men for obtaining drink than for all the other things that go to make up life in that city. Not many years ago the Board of Aldermen consisted of two lawyers, two politicians—whatever they may be, God alone knows-two builders, two agents, one umbrella maker, one eating-house proprietor and thirteen liquor dealers. in the United States nearly eight hundred millions of dollars for the support of the rum traffic. Do you wonder men engage in it, and that occasionly women fall so low as to sell intoxicating liquor? "There's millions in it." Religion costs a little over one dollar per head, education two dollars, while for every man, woman and child in this country there is spent $17 for rum.

"Peace on earth good will to men."— How shall we establish it? By abolishing sin! What is sin? Transgression of law. How shall we enforce law? By discussing and enforcing its penalties-by manufacture and education of a conscience and sense in man that he is an accountable being and will have to answer at the bar of justice, here or hereafter, and that the article of death is not a court of bankruptcy and discharge from the sentence of the Author of his existence that every man shall answer for the deeds done here in the body, "things whether they be good or whether they be bad." A religion which puts conscience into men, the fear of God and a just judgment to come, cannot be a bad religion. A religion which evidences that God exists. and that his eyes are upon all of men's ways, by putting a conscience into men they will fear to do wrong. Francis Murphy has said somewhere that if law would have saved men, Moses would have been the Christ. The enforcement of law will give us the Christ and his reign. We have the letter of the law in Rhode Island, not only in regard to the sale of liquor, but other sins, which if enforced would bring us near the millennium. How shall we prevent men from selling and drinking liquor; the man from making rum for money only, and the pious hypocrite from the greed of large rentals and prompt pay, which the wages of sin offer for the present time? How shall we make men courageous as well as wise and politic at the ballot, in the street or the church, or the pulpit! or conscience the education and manufacture of an unpliable and a Godly conscience as a potent factor in the reformation and salvation of the human race!

We claim as true Latter Day Saints the absolute necessity of communion with God; and to make it clear and emphatic, to establish the consistency of the claim of God's unchangeability, the revelation must be as aforetime in regard to manner, means, and the doctrine contained in the revelation. Public men, ministers, have publicly stated that "Mormons," (a name we do not acknowledge), are the most temperate, religious body in the world. From our enemies you may have been led to think that our people engaged in a monopoly of every kind of wickedness. We simply invite you to a study of statistics and facts with regard to the morality of our membership as compared with other churches. And whatever favorable verdict may be had for us, the argument cannot be drawn from the fact that our Gospel comes to and is received only by the rich and honorable, those who are removed largely from temptation which the poor of this earth are subject to by reason of their respective surroundings, but in the face and fact of a revelation which makes, and should make, men and women fear to do wrong.

"Add to your faith, temperance," and not only temperance, but the Apostle Peter gives us a list of virtues which, if practiced by a people or nation, would turn hell into heaven and the Lord's prayer would be answered. The presence of the letter of the law in our midst to-day is an affirmation that we are transgressors of law. "If law would save men, Moses would have been the Christ," says Murphy. If the Israelites had kept their contract with the Almighty, no Jew would need to pray the Lord's prayer. What was the trouble? Enforcment of the law! Paul tells us in Romans 7th chapter, verse 12, that "the law was holy, and the commandment holy and just and good," and it is spiritual also. What's the trouble? "But I am carnal—sold under sin. I find then," says he, "a law that, when I would do good, evil is present with me." Where is our practical help then by which we may live above law and so escape its penalties for violation? What hope for the drunkard and the man enticed into sin which his higher nature and best mind revolts from? "Thou shalt not kill," but they did kill. "Thou shalt not commit adultery," but they fell in one day by the thousands as a result of disobedience. How shall we stop men from committing slow suicide and destroying their families by selling and drinking intoxicating liquors? Our answer to all, as members of Christ's visible body, is with Paul to say that the law of the spirit of life in Christ Jesus will make men free from the law of sin and death. "It is not in man to direct his steps aright," unaided by a higher power than his fellow man. God has "laid help upon one that is mighty," and the divine manifestation of God's love in our helplessness, in the person of Jesus Christ, is our chief joy as a people, and our principal theme. "For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God, sending his own son in the likeness of sinful flesh, and for sin-condemned sin in, [not out of] the flesh, that the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled, accomplished in us who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit,"

There is a law that governs man's physical being that no man will say can be violated with impunity. The law of God, the law that governs or should govern the eternal spirit of man, is just as arbitrary, just as fixed as any other, is not nor can not be changed by man or any set of men without loss. That law is the gospel of Jesus Christ, revealed to us from heaven, and not reformed by men or theologians. We invite investigation of its practical results, in not only temperance, but all other reforms. And as we believe that whatsoever things are lovely, or pure, or of good report should be encouraged by saints of God, we urge the support of the public press that stands by the temperance reformation. The Dispatch has undertaken the cause of morality and law. We bespeak for it the encouragement and patronage of this people.—Providence (R. I.) Dispatch.

HARMONY OF INSPIRATION.-NO. 111.

BY R. M. ELVIN.

"The origin, rapid development and prosperity of this religious sect is one of the most remarkable and instructive events of the present century. That an obscure individual, without money, education or respectability should persuade hundreds and thousands of people to believe him to be inspired of God, and cause a book, contemptible as a literary production, to be received as a continuation of the sacred revelations, appears almost incredible."—History of Illinois, page 214.

From the rock-bound shores of Maine to the "Golden Gate." From the white sand beach at "Key West" to the land of lakes in Manitoba are the membership of the body of Christ, and they sustain a reputation as being moral, sober and industrious citizens. "By their fruits ye shall know them." A false religion does not usually gather from all denominations, sects and parties, and unify them in a oneness, and improve their moral and social condition.

(c) The bane of Joseph Smith and his co-associates in the ministry in the estimation of professors, is the claim that God gave commandments in the present dispensation. And if we are to believe our ears, to have faith and confidence in present and immediate revelation is a mortal and deadly sin, almost equal to the unpardonable sin, or the sin against the Holy Ghost. And more, it would be the delight of those who oppose this doctrine,especially the dirt and slime slingershad the prophet and his companions emerged from the slums of humanity, and had there been no redeeming quality in any of them. And their worst fault is in claiming that God condescends to reveal his mind and will now as in ancient times. saith the Scriptures upon this? Are there any reasonable grounds for expecting that God will act like himself to this generation as to the race from Adam until the apostles closed their eyes in death? "The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him; and he will shew them his covenant."—Ps. 25: 14. To this promise agrees the following: Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets."—Amos 3:7. One thing is sure; if at this time when sin is so rife in the land, God has an active, living work going on among men, He has prophets to whom he commits His secrets or revelations; otherwise there is no God in the whole religious scheme. There can be no escaping this conclusion with those who believe this last quotation.

When the Redeemer was debating with the common foe of man, he said: "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God."-Matt. 4:4. To deny that Jesus here teaches continuous and immediate revelation, is an attempt to evade a plain and emphatic self-evident truth. Man, (the generic term), applying to the the whole human family from Adam on ad infinitum. And while this living, flowing stream shall continue to come and go, God will furnish, fresh from the fountain of light and life, words of instruction and guidance whereby those desiring to serve in patience and love the true and living God, shall obtain grace in His sight and have reason to pray. I would ask, What is the sense of praying if you do not expect an answer to your prayers? And, if praying to God, and He grants our petitions, what is it but revelation? Do we not perceive that to interpret Christ's words to mean other than direct and constant communications from God to man, is to do violence to the language employed? This is no new doctrine, for so was it of old. "But the word of the Lord was unto them precept upon precept, precept upon precept; line upon line, line upon line; here a little and there a little."—Isa. 28:13.

Kind critic, do not everlook the fact that other men who heroically labored for the salvation of perishing humanity had confidence in and taught that additional revelation and knowledge in relation to the things of the kingdom: "In the approaching days of a better reformation the sincere though weak endeavors of the servants of God who went before them will be also accepted of the Saints in those times of greater light and holiness that are to come."-Mather in Magnalia, vol. 1. If multiplied divisions among the socalled Christians was the greater light, Mr. Mather was a wonderfully wise man, a good guesser, or a true prophet. But the unification of all worshipers into one organization, with but one creed, was original Christianity, for "Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and every city or house divided against itself shall not stand."—Matt. 12:25. These words are true and faithful and will ultimately have a most literal fulfillment. Unity is unmistakably the theme when Paul writes, "One body, one Spirit, one hope, one Lord, one faith, one baptism, one God."—Eph. 4:4-6. As this unity is not found in the Catholic or Protestant Churches we must look in other quarters for the new evangel. "The vindicators of religious liberty do not discover all truth in an instant; but like persons emerging from long darkness, their vision improves gradually."-Mosheim, p. 136. The Christian mind has been advanced on a number of doctrinal points during the last half century, but in other respects retrogression has been the order of march. In 1620 a band of people with a burning desire to enjoy religious liberty, and to obtain emancipation from the evils of priestcraft and intolerance, bade adieu to friends and native land. As they took passage on the "Mayflower" their former pastor addressed them thus: "Brethren, we are now quickly to part from one another, and whether I may live to see you face to face on earth any more the God of heaven only knows; but whether the Lord hath appointed that or not, I charge you before God and his blessed angels, that you follow me no farther than you have seen me follow the Lord Jesus Christ. If God reveals anything to you by another instrument be as ready to receive it as you ever were to receive any truth by my ministry; for I am verily persuaded, I am very confident, that the Lord has more truth yet to break forth out of his holy word. For my part I can not sufficiently bewail the condition of the reformed churches who are come to a period in religion, and will not go at present no farther than the instrument of their reformation. The Lutherans can not be drawn to go any further than what Luther saw, and the Calvinists, you see, stick fast where they were left by that great man of God, who yet saw not all things. This is a misery much to be lamented; for though they were burning and shining lights in their time, yet they penetrated not into the whole counsel of God, but were they now living would be as willing to embrace further light as that which they first received. I beseech you remember it as an article of your church covenant that you be ready to receive whatever truth shall be made known to you from the written word of God. But I must herewith exhort you to take heed what you receive as truth. Examine it, consider it, compare it with other Scriptures of truth before you receive it; for it is not possible that the Christian world should come so lately out of such thick Anti-Christian darkness, and that perfection of knowledge should break forth at once."

Mr. Robinson was evidently a man of good sound sense, and while he did not claim perfection he built better than he understood. It is the tall trees upon the highest hills that kiss the first rays of coming morn, but when the king of light hath arisen to his zenith then the most humble herb in the valley may be baptized in the warmth and glory of that light. counsel he gave is as applicable now as when it was given, and to accept additional light by revelation direct from God will be to amplify upon our opportunities to ameliorate our own and others' condition. "A day is coming when Scripture, long darkened by traditional teaching, too frequently treated as an exhausted mine, will at length be recognized in its true character, as a field rich in unexplored wealth, and consequently searched afresh for its hidden treasures."-Interpreter, 1862. The light, agency and incentive to make the exploration into that wonderful "mine" will be the immediate revelations of the Almighty, such as he gave unto Joseph Smith. "Each age of the church has, as it were, turned over a new leaf in the Bible and found a response to its own wants. We have a leaf still to turn-a leaf not the less new because it is so simple."—Dean Stanley. Although the Dean and his compeers are not aware of the fact, that unturned leaf, "simple" as it was, but potent for good, was duly turned when God gave commandments unto Joseph Smith whereby an apostolic church, as the herald of the consummation of all things, and the preaching of "this gospel of the kingdom, shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come."-Matt. 24:14. It may be humiliating for the religious world to acknowledge that, in preaching pure, undulterated apostolic doctrine, the Latter Day Saints occupy the most advanced position of the entire so-called Christian world.

"For the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call."—Acts 2:39. The conclusion is inevitable, that if God now calls any one, to them the Holy Ghost is promised; and if God fulfills his promise and grants the Holy Ghost to those whom he calls, the gift of prophecy is included, (I Cor. 12:10), in the manifestations promised "to every man to profit withal." Yea, still more, the "testimony of Jesus is the spirit of prophecy."—Rev. 19:10.

Let all those who bow their knees in the name of Jesus Christ, be of the like mind as was Moses when he made answer to the objectors to revelation, "Would God that all the Lord's people were prophets, and that the Lord would put his Spirit upon them!"—Num. 11:29. When the universal conception of the purpose of God is educated up to the high state that Moses attained unto, there will be found no longer defamers of the character of Joseph Smith on account of God choosing him as the one through whom commandments came to the world in this epoch.

(d) The only apology I offer for writing so lengthily is that which is stated in the revelation; the proclamation to the world of the restoration of the primitive gospel as a warning to turn from evil doing, and live by the oracles of Heaven. This was contemplated in the instructions, "I, Jesus have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things in the churches. I am the root and the offspring of David, and the bright and morning star. And the Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."-Rev. 22: 16, 17. It falls to the lot of the Latter Day Saints to make this cry unto mankind, for the minister or the church who decry the spiritual gifts, and get their faces awry on account of some who confess and deny not that a loving Father sends down, as of old, those unspeakable comforts to cheer the weary pilgrim, can not in reason be the principal agents of such a grand work. For almost sixty years we have been testifying of these things unto the churches, and let it be advertized that this mission has come to stay, and will abide until God hath made good the promise, "I will proceed to do a marvelous work among this people, even a marvelous work and a wonder; for the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent men shall be hid,"-Isa. 29: 14. With time this work will gain in influence, and will also receive more consideration and kinder treatment.

(e) To collate proof of all the predictions of the ancient prophets, would occupy more space than I can in reason claim; for it would make a large book. But I will give a few items of more than usual interest. Peter was speaking upon this theme when he said: "Repent ye therefore, and be converted, that your sins may be blotted out, when the times for refreshing shall come from the presence of the Lord; and he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you, whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all His holy prophets since the world began."-Acts 3: 19-21.

Two things of paramont importance are here stated, namely, that all the holy prophets had spoken concerning events to transpire, and the times of restitution: and. as the events were in the future from Peter's time, it but intensifies our anxiety to learn how and when these predictions are to receive their fulfillment, and the nature of the events. "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that I will make a new covenant with the house of Israel, and with the house of Judah; not according to the covenant that I made with their fathers in the day that I took them by the hand to bring them out of the land of Egypt, which my covenant they brake, although I was an husband unto them, saith the Lord; but this shall be the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel: After those days, saith the Lord, I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and I will be their God, and they shall be my people. And they shall teach no more every man his neighbor, and every man his brother, saying, Know the Lord; for they shall all know me, from the least of them unto the greatest of them, saith the Lord; for I will forgive their iniquity, and I will remember their sin no more. Thus saith the Lord, which giveth the sun for a light by day, and the ordinance of the moon and of the stars for a light by night, which divideth the sea when the waves thereof roar; the Lord of hosts is his name; if those ordinances depart from before me, saith the. Lord, then the seed of Israel also shall cease from being a nation before me forever. Thus saith the Lord, if heaven above can be measured, and the foundations of the earth searched out beneath, I will also cast off all the seed of Israel for all that they have done, saith the Lord. Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that the city shall be built to the Lord from the tower of Hananeel unto the gate of the corner. And the measuring line shall yet go forth over against it upon the hill Gareb, and shall compass about to Goath. And the whole valley of the dead bodies, and of the ashes, and all the field unto the brook of Kidron, unto the corner of the horse gate toward the east, shall be holy unto the Lord; it shall not be plucked up, nor thrown down any more forever."-Jer. 31: 31-40. We learn from this that God made a covenant with Israel about the time that Moses led them out of Egyptian bondage, and that they brake or violated the articles of that covenant, and a new covenant is promised unto the "house of Israel."

B. C. 975, the twelve tribes were divided into two separate nations known as the kingdom of Israel, and the kingdom of Judah. From that date until the present, no reconciliation or union has been effected. If so, history is silent upon the transaction. The new covenant promised is to be made with the house or kingdom of Israel. When we ask the average minister as to place and time of establishing that new covenant, he invariably tells us that Jesus gave that new covenant during his ministry at Jerusalem. But there must be some mistake in this, for Jesus did not go to Samaria to be baptized and begin his ministry, which would have been proper had he repaired to the capital of the house of Israel, if he came from God to give the covenant promised by Jeremiah. On the reverse of this, Jesus came to Jerusalem, the capital of the house of Judah. And still further notice this marked and significant instruction to his twelve apostles: "Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not."—Matt. 10:5. This was at the beginning of his mission. At a later period we hear him exclaiming, "Therefore say I unto you, the kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."—Matt. 21:43. No one would think of denying that the gospel was preached to the house of Judah, but the above citation clearly shuts them out from being the people who were to be so highly favored of the Lord as to first receive the new covenant. If there remains a doubt, the following is enough-it seems-to remove it: "He came to his own, and his own received him not;" (John 1:11), but to the contrary "his own" said, "crucify him crucify him."-Luke 23:21. And so it was; the house of Judah rejected Christ, and thereby forfeited the privilege and opportunity of entering into the new covenant. God pledges the constancy of the orbs of light that he will remember Israel and establish the covenant with them. He then gives the dimensions of Jerusalem at the time this new covenant will be accepted, which very materially changes the limits and bounds of the city from what it was at the time of the Savior's advent. When this new city, with its inhabitants living under the laws of the new covenant shall be established, all shall be holy. Surely none are so ignorant as to think that such a condition obtained in a city, and among a peowho put to death the Prince of Life and Glory; and, still more, when the Jerusalem here described shall be established, it shall never again be destroyed. If the covenant was given at the time of Christ, the prophecy by Jeremiah was a failure. Say, my friendly critic, which horn of the dilemma will you take? The understanding and knowledge of those with whom God shall make the new covenant is a distinguishing feature, accomplished by the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, to the displacement of uncertainty, confusion and anarchy upon religion, its object and attainments. Not during the time of Christ and the apostles, was the law of life in the hearts of the people to the extent that they ALL knew God, "from the least of them unto the greatest of them." We must, therefore, look elsewhere for the fulfillment of the promise of the new covenant. God's method of writing His law in the heart is on this wise: the first essential qualification upon the part of the disciple is faith in God, (Heb. 11:6), and next in order, "except ye repent, ye shall all likewise perish."—Luke 13:3. And of equal importance is the next step, "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."-Mark 16: 16. Now comes the ordinance by which the immediate power of God enters the heart: "Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost."—Acts 8: 17. These are the re-Ghost."—Acts 8: 17. quirements of God upon his children, and then by and through the agency of the Holy Ghost the law is written in the heart at all times in harmony with the commandments of God.

Unto Joseph Smith and the Church of Latter Day Saints did God bestow the dispensation of introducing to the world the new covenant. As additional evidence I quote: "And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed; and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever."—Dan. 2: 44. For long ages the clergy have preached and written that the kingdom referred to was an ecclesiastical kingdom, and that it was instituted in and when Christ organized His church. I am of the opinion that most all students and writers on the prophecies agree in the main upon the following historic data.

1. "The dominion was taken from the Chaldeans, or the lion, and given to the Medes and Persians, or the bear.

2. The conquests of the Medo-Persian empire were achieved in one direction; that is westwardly. The bear, it is said, raised up itself on one side."

The bear it is said had "three ribs in the mouth of it, between the teeth of it." The Persians conquered the kingdoms of Babylon, Syria and Egypt. They oppressed and devoured their revenues and their good things as a ravenous beast does its prev.

4. The dominion was to be taken from the bear and given to another, the leopard. The Grecians conquered the Persians.

5. Alexander was said to conquer faster than others could march. His victories resembled an army flying through a nation, rather than encamping against it. The leopard had four wings on its back representing the unusual rapidity with which the Macedonian dominion would be set up.

6. This beast had four heads. When Alexander died in his drunken revels at Babylon his kingdom did not descend to his son, or to one or two of his officers; if so, this beast would have had one or two heads; but it was parted between four of his generals, and these four heads had dominion until the fourth beast was grown.

7 The fourth beast, the nameless beast, was to take dominion from the four-headed leopard, devouring and breaking in pieces.

8. This power, the Roman, was to be diverse from all the beasts before it. This is so strikingly understood by all who read only the alphabet of history, that I need not name the instances of dissimilar-

9. That which this beast could not devour it was to stamp with his feet. This has already been noticed.

10. It was to be divided into ten king-doms, represented by the ten horns.

11. This division into ten was to take place exclusive of the Chaldean, Persian and Macedonian territories; for these beasts, after losing dominion were still to exist for a season and a time."—Nelson on Infidelity, pp. 370-371.

Infidelity, pp. 370-371.

By a reference to Daniel's interpretation of Nebuchadnezzar's dream, you perceive that the intrinsic value and order of gradation of the kingdoms had in panoramic view, was from gold to clay, and by a retrospective survey, it would appear that the clay predominates to a great extent. And when the mill of the Eternal God is set to pulverizing the materials of all these kingdoms, the gold, brass, iron and clay will be ground to powder by the little stone that God shall take from the mountain, which is the kingdom that God himself will set up, which will displace all earthly governments and dynastic authority, and in lieu, will be the universal, governmental kingdom, whose autocrat shall be Jesus Christ, the supreme and righteous ruler.

SAM JONES LAID OUT.

The following review was prepared by appointment of the Ministers' Association of Moberly, and read at their meeting, December 2d. The paper was adopted by the ministers with only one dissenting vote, that of Rev. T. H. Whitten. I have been asked to permit its publication. A few slight changes have been made and some criticisms, brought out in the meeting, added,

J. B. Welty.]
Rev. Sam Jones has come and gone.

Rev. Sam Jones has come and gone. We have heard him, and this morning, by previous appointment, present a review of him. This is hard to do and and do it thoroughly, impartially and justly. We confess, at the start, that our paper is not a cold, abstract, critique, but is colored much by our personal feelings, likes We have no fulsome and our dislikes eulogy to pronounce, nor have we any unnecessary condemnation for that popular brother. It is granted at the start that he has some elements of strength, and points of genuine merit. But there are other elements and other points that are neither strong nor meritorious. We certainly admire his boldness, his loyalty to the cause of Christ, his frankness in exposing sin, pretension, hypocrisy and all manner of religious shams, his untiring industry, his earnest advocacy of whatever cause he espouses. But there are some things about him, his style, method and spirit, that are to be abominated.

We heard him first as a rostrum lecturer. But the term lecturer is a misnomer. Mr. Jones is not, strictly speaking, a lecturer. His whole two hours' deliverance can not be called a lecture, without violence. It was a random talk and no more. Indeed, we should but utter the truth to say that it was a pompous harangue to the people about their faults and their foibles, their shams and their meanness.

As to subject matter, there was nothing new. It was Sam Jones preaching over again Sam Jones' old sermons with the added rate of seventy-five cents per head. No doubt they bring in more money when advertised and set up as lectures than they do when preached as sermons.

The title of the advertised lecture was misleading. It did not express the lecture that was given. In fact, when Mr. Jones ascended the rostrum, he said that he was at liberty to select his subject and proceeded to announce a different one altogether from the one advertised. This struck us at once unpleasantly. It seemed that evidently the advertised one was used to catch the eye, strike the fancy, arouse curiosity and draw the people. But a lecturer should not deceive the people with a subject, or use it as a mere decoy. It should be as honest and direct as the price mark on a merchant's goods should be honest and true.

That Mr. Jones said a great many shrewd things, made a number of happy points, gave a few hard hits and frequently struck the popular cord so as to bring down the house, is but saying what was before expected.

But the lecture, and the Thanksgiving serma as well, were not works of art, of logic, nor of argument. Both lacked coherence, continuity and logical sequence. Both were piecemeal. They were excellent as patchwork. They reminded us of the column of witticism in a newspaper, rather than the sober, solid editorial, or weighty discussion of great issues in the pages of a review. We felt that we were under the rattle of musketry, rather than the roar of cannon. The style was that of the stump speaker, rather than that of the rostrum or the pulpit. He talked for the most part at random, and apparently without any serious previous prepartion. But for all that, there was always an interest in what he said. Whatever else they might do, the people were not likely to go to sleep as long as he kept walking about the rostrum, letting things common and uncommon, clean and unclean, drop from his lips. His style, his method, his coarseness, his unblushing impudence, his propensity for calling ugly names, his natural bluntness or studied indifference to the finer sensibilities of the people, his uncouth and rugged illustrations compel the people within hearing to listen to him. The rowdies listen and laugh because from the pulpit or cultured rostrum he gives them of their kind; and people of finer tastes look and listen and blush, as with shame, that a man would dare to to take the language of the street and the jests of the clown into the house of the Lord, or use them in sacred discourse. The simple fact that he does violence to the nature and fitness of things, attracts attention, and draws the people. But the fact that the crowds are drawn is no argument in favor of sacrilege in the church or vulgarity in the pulpit.

The success of Jones is phenomenal. We greatly suspect that it is also ephemeral. He has gone up suddenly, and the speed of his ascent has undoubtedly dizzied him. He is more a balloonist, than a sturdy climber to permanent heights. Balloons often collapse in mid-air and come down quickly, ignobly. At most their voyage is not far, nor long. And unless Mr. Jones gets himself on a firmer basis, and does more substantial work, and in better ways, he will be a man of a day and the victim of his method or his folly, or both.

We were impressed by his whole bearing, language, voice and method, with the thought that Jones is vain, self-important, conceited. He acts like one who considers that the first man in the realm is present and all the rest are common folks. He talks to his hearers as though they had thimblefulls of brain whilst his might fill a tub. He does not address his auditors as by their permission or invitation, but with the autocratic tone of one having a right to be heard, or who has the authority to command, who has special license to scold, to ridicule, to rebuke, to abuse the people and to slander them, if he so chose, to their very faces.

We were disappointed in not hearing something fresh and new. His lecture and sermon were just about the same that have been published from three to four times every year, for five or six years. There was nothing new in the subject matter to those who read the papers. The same old stuff, stories and all, thrown off as a man dumps garbage upon the commons.

It is said that once, Jones, upon being asked how he studied his sermons, replied that he got them as he got his finger and toe nails. It is quite evident that he got them in some such method. And it is evident, too, that they need trimming and paring, revising and correcting. His sermons, like his finger nails, need cleaning in order to be presentable.

It strikes us that Jones has succeeded in getting a name that does not fit his composition—a name that is too heavy for him. Evidently his reputation has grown too big for the man. It is like some tall, windy structure built upon a very narrow pedestal. Expectation is kindled and the crowds go to hear him when he comes, but there is much disappointment both in the man and in the matter of his lecture. There are some elements of rude wit, but after all the vein is thin, and the wit often stale or borrowed. The merit is more in the rough method of the man than in any real power of intrinsic worth. The greatest things about him exhibited in his visit to Moberly, in the humble estimation of your reviewer, was his presumption, his conceit, his roughness, his ability to use slang, his coarse language, his vulgarisms. Coarseness and buffoonery are his two most striking traits. He may have others, but he did not show them here.

He is deficient in the qualities of a gentleman; and this seems strange in one coming from a country where men of culture are markedly polite, graceful and neat in address.

His use of language was very inaccurate, and often strained. His pronunciation was simply wretched. There was scarcely a sentence in which it was not apparent.

We think he made sorry work of it when he attempted any points in theology, or in Scripture interpretation. He treated the people as though they were, indeed, totally depraved, but his argument would land him in Socinianism. Until he does better as a theologian, his bitter, scurrilous flings at any system of theology comes with bad taste. In a mixed audience, on a Thanksgiving occasion when all denominations had united, and in a church by courtesy, whose theology is of the Calvinistic type, he took occasion to caricature and ridicule that form of faith, and then ended his unsavory climax by crying, "Its a lie! its a lie!" Never was such ruffianism exhibited before in our city.

As a lampooner, Jones is a success. He lays on with both hands and never lets up till he has, in his in his own slang, borrowed from the streets, laid it all over his victim.

He reminds us more of a moral detective whose business is that of finding out and reporting the mean and nasty things that occur under cover. He is a specialist in the business of uncovering human weakness and mortal meanness. He is a moral scavenger going about the country scraping up into hideous heaps religious barnacles. He uses such tools as suits him for that kind of work. Perhaps we should be thankful even for the coming occasionally of such a scavenger.

His terrible, low down language, and the low down tone in which he uttered it! He handles slang in sacred places worse than any street orator. But it may be said in extenuation that he uses slang as David used a sling, namely: to bring down the proud Goliahs of infidelity, hypocrisy and sham. He uses such expressions and illustrations as would not be tolerated for once in other ministers.

It is hard to see why congregations made up, as were those that heard him here, of the best, purest, cleanest, refined and intelligent people of our city, should be called dogs, hounds, lop-eared hounds, old rascals, sneaking hypocrits, liars, and such like choice names. Where was the need or the fitness, or the provocation for such manner of harangue?

Mr. Jones made many reckless assertions, both in his lecture and sermon, that can not stand a moments inspection. For example, that about the minister who takes a manuscript into the pulpit; he said, "That man does not preach Christ."

Or, again, when he affirmed that a certain class of fashionable mothers were not fit to raise a litter of pups, much less a family of children.

Or, again, when he, turning to the ministers said, in sarcastic, reprimanding tones: "If you ministers had done your duty there would be no saloons in Moberly. God forgive you, I won't." There is not a man in our city but what knows that this is utterly untrue.

Or when he said concerning one of our best substantial brick churches in the city that it was an old affair, "not fit for a hen coop." So the extravagence, bitter charges and unwarranted assertions run all through both lecture and sermon.

We certainly take exception to his manner of treating his fellow ministers and especially the pastors in Moberly. His strictures upon them amounted to a caricature. He talked of them and to them as though they were a mean, sniveling set of whipped curs; as though they had no backbone; as though they were all cowards and afraid to speak against sin; as though he were himself the only one of the brave, true kind left to rebuke sin and defend the truth. He makes more boast and pride over Sam Jones, than the Episcopal clergymen, whom he so meanly berated, do over apostolic succession. In fact, he seems to have a little succession of his own and he never lets his audience forget that.

His posing as the reprimander of his brethren, and his exaltation of himself at their expense, was in bad taste, was uncharitable, grossly egotistic and utterly uncalled for. In this role he reminded us of

"Little Jack Horner
Who sat in the corner
Eating his Christmas pie;
He stuck in his thumb, Pulled out a plum-Oh, what a good boy am I."

This manner of treating the ministers on Thanksgiving day, was outrageous, domineering, and utterly uncivil. care had been taken in arranging for the Thanksgiving services. One of the ministers was appointed to preach, and one to arrange the programme. There was a distinct understanding that a collection should be taken for the poor of Moberly. After Mr. Jones came to the city, the minister who was to preach was asked to surrender his place on the programme to Jones. He very courteously and generously did so. But that was the only thing on the programme surrendered. But lo! on Thanksgiving morning, Jones walked into the church, and utterly ignoring the programme, took the whole service into his own hands. A written programme was handed to each one of the ministers with every order of service fixed on it, including a sermon by Jones, and a collection for the poor of Moberly. But it was utterly ignored. Jones took a book, walked to the pulpit and announced a hymn. From that on, he ignored the ministers and all their arrangements, and run the service to please himself. When it came to the collection, he pushed the intended collection aside, and without ever leaving the rostrum, proceeded to take a collection for his "orphants," away in Georgia, that he said "never received anything but what went through his ten fingers." It was only to save the disgrace of a scene that kept several of the ministers from speaking out in protest. And so the great I, without permission, advice or warning, pushed in his own collection, and walked off with it without apology or explanation, thanks, or even a courteous good afternoon to the ministers. Nor have they been informed yet as to how much the Thanksgiving offering for the poor was (?) And, as the matter now stands, Rev. Sam Jones, or his friends for him, owe to the ministers and the people of their several churches an apology for his un-Christian, unbrotherly, discourteous manner of treating them, and especially in the very midst of sacred services.

Your reviewer must say that he never met a man who showed so little of the "milk of human kindness," who is, apparently, so utterly unappreciative of the respect, sympathy, favor and regard for his brethren. From what he exhibited of himself at Moberly he evidently has a full share of that which he talks so much about-meanness.

If Mr. Jones was approachable, and any friend would dare do it, it would be a benefit and a blessing to him to be told calmly, clearly, fully and in language that there is no misunderstanding, the mistakes in his method, and how he had better mend them. Indeed he might make some moral and profitable use of his enemies, and of the newspapers that give him the benefit of their usually just criticisms. But instead, he goes to saucing back. like the little fellow that said to the big boy who was too much for him: "Well, if I can't whip you, I can make faces at your sister." So Jones, instead of profiting by honest, just and needed criticism. goes to making faces at the people, cracking jokes and using slang.

What an advantage this man has to do a great word for the Master! Alas, if at every place he stops, he makes such a record as he did here, and leaves behind him such an influence. Instead of lifting up, he has lowered the estimate of religion; and instead of cheering and helping the people, he only used and abused them

If he comes this way again, we earnestly hope that it will be with a beam of sunshine on his brow and not a frown, a song upon his lips and not slang, a message of love on his tongue and not abuse, and pure, sweet language in his speech and not the unclean dialect of the street and the den.—Moberly (Mo.) #### FIFTH QUORUM OF ELDERS.

Dear Brethren:—On February 15th the secretary, W. S. Loar, of Independence Missouri, will send to each of you a blank report to make out your yearly report to the quorum upon. If any changes in your address have taken place notify him of the fact. If any traveling want a blank at another point let them so order. If any Circular Letters are wanted send for them, and if any of the late applications for licence have failed to reach the applicant, please renew them.

Read your Circular Letter carefully and note specially the third and fourth paragraphs. every one be heard from. If any have done little or failed entirely, tell us what you can and will do in the coming year. See Revelation of 1865, paragraph 2, the one of 1882, paragraph 4, and that of 1887, paragraphs 2 and 3. If any of you are without these Bro. Dancer has them. Send and get them.

A goodly number of our quorum have made a splendid record in the field this year and others by way of articles in the Herald. We look for corresponding reports.

There is room for the workers in the quorum and perhaps more by or during the General Conference. Send your reports to R. Etzenhouser, No. 2519 University street, St. Louis, Missouri.

R. ETZENHOUSER, Pres. of Quorum.

BADHAM.—At Los Angeles, California, Dec. 27th, 1888, Elder James R. Badham, president of Los Angeles branch, and Bishop's agent for Southern California district. Bro. Badham was born near Worcester, England, Sept. 9th., 1841, and accompanied his parents to America when quite young. On April 12th, 1868, he was baptized at Plum Hollow, Iowa, by Elder E. B. Gaylord, and was ordained an elder at Manti, Iowa, June 1st, 1868, by Elder Wheeler Baldwin. He was a man of great zeal and devotion, filling the positions of trust to which he had been assigned wifh acceptability.

Funeral services were held at his residence. Sunday, December 30th; sermon by Elder He-man C. Smith, assisted by Elder D. S. Mills. Services at the grave by the Knights of Pythias, of which order Bro Badham was Chancellor Commander. Our brother was greatly beloved and will be greatly missed in Los Angeles, where his untiring zeal has aided materially to build up the work of the Lord. He leaves a wife one daughter, three sons and many friends to cherish his memory.

COINER.—At two p. m., December 7th, William Edgar Coiner died of typhoid fever at Pasadena, California, after a lingering illness of several weeks. He was born in Fair View township, Jasper county, Iowa, April 15th, 1865; united with the church July 11th, 1875, at Denison City, Grayson county, Texas; baptized by James Carroll, ordained a priest May 31st, 1885, at Newton, Iowa, became identified with "Society of Modern Woodmen of America" April, 1886. His remains arrived at Newton, Iowa, on morning December 16th, where at two p. m., said date, his funeral sermon was delivered at M. E. Church before a crowded house of Newton's best citizens, by Elder J. F. McDowell. He was admired by all who knew him, and those who knew him best loved him. He was a dear young man, and passed away in hope—bright hope of eternal life.

COLLEGE FUNDS.

THE committee appointed to solicit funds for the erection of the proposed college at Lamoni, are now sending out subscription lists and circular letters to all parts where they think means can be procured, and they urgently request those into whose hands these documents may come to use their best and earliest efforts to procure subscriptions.

The enterprise is one that affects all classes of society, both in the church and out of it, and therefore no one should hesitate to present the matter wherever they think subscriptions may be procured.

Education, such as is proposed to be given through the work of this college, will bless and benefit society wherever its influence extends. Now seems to be an opportune time to introduce and push forward this matter to speedy completion. But in order to insure success, there must be a mutual and hearty effort put forth by all favorably interested in the movement.

Whoever desires to subscribe shares of stock, or canvass for it, who have not received subscription lists, can obtain them on applying by letter to the Herald Office. Any desiring to subscribe for stock, can, if they choose, notify the committee, stating the amount they wish to take, and authorize the committee to enter their names upon the subscription list. Let it be borne in mind that the establishment of a firstclass college at Lamoni, under the auspices, largely, of members of the church, will give prominence and prestige to the Saints and their work wherever the church has a membership.

It should be further borne in mind that the college is not designed as a moneymaking scheme, but that its primary object is to furnish a non-sectarian institution in which the rising generation can be thoroughly trained in all the important duties and interests of life. The committee is hopeful that its efforts will be readily and abundantly sustained, and also prove fruitful in best results.

Any information touching the movement that may be desired can be obtained by consulting the committee through Mr. D. F. Nicholson, its secretary, at Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa.

OPPOSITION.

THE work of the church has always been carried on under the pressure of strong opposition from without, as well as fears within. Opposition ought to be expected; and it is not to opposition as such that we should object, or complain of. We oppose, actively, what others deem to be essential to their own and other's well being; and to be consistent we should not too seriously condemn them who may oppose what we may choose to accept as of worth and necessary to our good. Just now there is marshalled against the Reorganization a goodly array of opposing elements, of more or less importance as factors in the solution of the various questions attendant upon and growing out of the latter day work. It is fair, at least, to admit that the men who oppose the work being done by the Reorganized Church, who are urging a belief in the work begun by the Seer of Palmyra, in some form, are honest in their beliefs; and that whatever differences there may be between us of the Reorganization and them are the results of their convictions, to which they are as undoubtedly entitled as we are to ours. Men subject those things presented to them as of eternal significance to their human judgments, and act upon the decrees thus obtained, as absolutely as they do the things of this world that last only till death. So in this controversy upon the issues pending between us and others, we recognize the fact that it is largely a conflict of human opinions, the complete settlement of which can be made only in the courts of divinity and hereafter.

It is true that each and all may appeal to the "written word," but there is much in dispute upon which there seems to be not a sufficiency written. On such themes the interpretation which each places upon what is written forms the controversy.

The Reorganized Church may be at a disadvantage in this, that it has publicly and persistently put itself on record as accepting the Bible, Bood of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants as containing the word of God to the church and believers in the latter day work, and that in consonance with what they believe is revealed in the teaching of those books God will and does continue to reveal himself to the comfort and guidance of the church. us it seems that, to be consistent, the true believer must acknowledge the standards here given: To accept less is to come short, to contend for what is contrary to, or "more than this," is to go beyond the right. Privilege to do either is conceded. however.

In the exercise of this privilege to accept the standards by which men will consent to have their faith and works tested lies, very largely, the strong opposition we are now meeting. But we think much of the sharpness of the controversy is to be found, not in the standards we have chosen to accept, but in the overestimate we place upon them, or the underestimate others fix for them, as it may appear finally who is the nearest correct. methods of advocacy, or opposition, are more to be objected to, frequently, than the fact of opposition. That men may differ from us is no more singular than that we differ from them; the one is no more strange or striking than the other. We are sure that we are right; they are sure they are in the right. We hold them to be in error, much or little, and they just as are, however, some common standards of right and wrong to which those who oppose us and we agree; by these each feels at liberty to examine and judge of his fellow believer; and upon such examination to present the several conclusions to which each may arrive. One of those standards of common belief is, that all men are to give account to God for the deeds done in the body—each for himself. This should make every one tolerant of opposition. Whatever is open and fair commands attention; whatever is secret and hidden is open to suspicion and distrust. Opposition is more to be judged and commended, or condemned, by its methods than by the fact that it is opposition. Be truthful with yourself and your fellow men in what you say and do, let the consequences be as they may.

DILIGENCE IN THE MINISTRY.

THE priesthood everywhere, and especially those engaged in missionary labors, are expected to be active, zealous and persevering with all patience in the work assigned them. An idle minister is a damage to the church of God, and a standing libel to his profession and calling as a servant of Christ, and he should not be sustained until he exhibits by his works that he has heartily repented of the evil and will diligently apply himself to the work of the Lord. Work, work, work, is the watchword of God's faithful ones, and those who will not work should step down and out, lest their example becomes a stumbling block to others and a reproach to the church and themselves. It is easy for some slothful souls to invent excuses and make apologies for misspent time and lost opportunities, but such will not satisfy the Lord, and should not exempt them from the criticism and censure of the church. The ministry should be faithful in keeping their priesthood covenants and obligations with Christ and his people, and if they wilfully or negligently violate them, they should be brought to account therefore. If a minister is at heart a sluggard, or a time server, he can easily find the weather too cold or too hot, too wet or too dry, or find it "hard" or "impracticable" to procure openings or hearers for his preaching; or, that elections, holidays, public and worldly amusements and attractions hinder-all these and a host of other excuses he can invent if he is possessed of a lazy, indolent disposition and habit.

The ministry should push forward faithfully, cheerfully, and in the spirit of love, serve God and their fellowmen, "looking unto Jesus" their "Leader and Commander" as though he and his angels were present with them. God and all good men and women will ever approve and sustain the wise, diligent, spiritual minister, but the heedless, shiftless drone stands condemned of all.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques .- If a man kills another man in a fit of insanity can he be converted, saved or repent? Ans.-Not until he becomes sane and is capable of believing and acting intelligently. .—Does the church administer the sacrament on any day except Sunday?

A.—Yes. It is not restricted to Sunday, but may be administered on any day of the week if circumstances require it, for it is a memorial of the sufferings and death of our Lord. Sunday, however, is the most convenient and appropriate day for its administration.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

President Joseph Smith wrote from San Bernardino, California, the 7th inst:

"We had two excellent meetings on yesterday at eleven a. m. and at seven p. m. I spoke both times, on gospel themes to fair audiences. Bro. Burton and I expect to go to Beaumont, to-morrow to spend a few days. Bro. Best has secured row to spend a rew days. Block and afternoon. a hall for three evenings and Sunday afternoon. Whe health is still mending, I think. Wind from the north the last few days has found a touching reminder in my jaw and face, though it is but slight as compared with other days."

Bro. J. S. Goble wrote January 9th from Lewiston, Idaho, as follows:

"Bro. Holt and myself went about twenty-one miles west, in Garfield county, Wyoming. We expect to start for Whitman county, soon. I find Bro. Holt a noble defender of the truth. He has opened the understanding of the Scriptures to a great many. There are quite a good many calls for preaching since he came here. There are no Saints here but my family. pects are that some will obey soon." The pros-

Bro. J. W. Gillen wrote encouragingly concerning his labors and the work at St. Louis as follows:

"Every thing is moving on nicely in the city. The work is onward, and the outlook flattering. I leave for Kentucky on the evening of the 10th, to be gone until sometime in the month of March."

Bro. E. Day Bennett wrote from Brinton, Michigan, January 14th, as follows:

"Bro. Cornish and I are holding forth in this place and having fair congregations. Last night the Brown School-house was packed and we are at work in earnest. This is a large field. We go to open a new place in a few days."

Bro. John Smith of New Bedford Massachusetts, under date of the 9th inst., says that he is still firm in his faith in the work of God. He further says, "I can say with the poet:

"With joy we remember the dawn of that day,
When led by the Spirit the truth to obey:
The light dawned upon us and filled us with love,
The Spirit's sure witness sent down from above.

Prest. Joseph Smith thus writes from Beaumont, California, January 9th:

"I came here yesterday from San Bernardino, in company with Bro. Joseph F. Burton, to fill some appointments made by Bro. N. W. Best, in Beaumont. We found the village piously keeping "The Week of Prayer," and so only held service last night, proposing to occupy next Sunday at three p. m., and the evenings until Wednesday evening of next week, if all is well.

We had a fair audience in Maxwell's Hall last night. I occupied from the gospel text, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

A CIRCULAR comes to us announcing that Messrs. Englehart, Winning & Co., wholesale merchants of St. Joseph, Missouri, have appointed Bro. Eli T. Dobson to represent them as salesman in Utah and southern Idaho. We are glad to know that a more active field has been opened to Bro. Dobson (whose health has been poor for some time past) by the kindness and appreciation of his firm. He is deserving of his promotion, and we bespeak for him the kind ministrations of Saints and friends wherever he goes, hoping that he will be able to encourage, bless and strengthen them.

Bro. D. Dancer has received a letter from Brooklyn, New York, dated Ianuary 10th, with two dollars in cash and a dollar and two cents in stamps for yearly subscription to the HERALD and ten extra copies of the same. The letter has no signature nor any street address. sender will please take notice and write the office giving name and address in full.

Brn. Solomon and Frederick Salisbury, sons of Sr. Katherine Salisbury, the only surviving sister of Joseph Smith, the Martvr. have been visiting Lamoni and vicinity for the past week or ten days. We were pleased to see and welcome them, as were all the Saints with whom they met. They are alive in the latter day work and imbued with the spirit of it. Bro. Solomon preached a very acceptable sermon on Sunday the 13th instant. There was no mistaking its theology: It was Latter Day Saintism to the centre. Come again

Bro. W. J. Plain writes from Elmwood, (neutral strip) which is about fifty miles south of Meade Center, Meade county, Kansas, that he with others are very anxious that an elder should come and labor among them and their neighbors. He promises good care and wagon transportation to the laborer. Can any elder respond and minister the bread of life to those afflicted ones?

Elder M. T. Short is again occupying in his field-Wisconsin-from which he writes encouragingly of present and future prospects. Bro. W. S. Pender baptized two more last Sunday and others are near the kingdom.

Under date of the 9th instant, Bro. Amos J. Moore wrote us from Cook's Point, Texas, that W. P. Brown, at the close of the discussion mentioned in Bro. Moore's letter in this issue, left Texas for his home; he also says that Brown expected to baptize quite a number and visit all our branches, but succeeded in baptizing only four persons, two of whom had been expelled from the Reorganized Church in the past. He explains in his letter that but few of the many false charges and false statements made by Brown are mentioned. He also states that Bro. Nunley had recently baptized nine, with others soon to follow, and that they are having "good meetings."

The pulpit at Lamoni was occupied on Sunday the 13th instant by Brn. S. Salisbury in the morning, and W. W. Blair in the evening. The themes discoursed upon were the confirming power and blessings of the Holy Spirit, from Mark 16: 20; and the Resurrection, from I Thess.

Bro. Alexander H. Smith, hale and hearty and big and strong as ever, accompanied by his eldest son, Frederick, called at the sanctum last week and made us a pleasant visit. He reports progress in his mission field and good news from all the workers. "Fred" is on his way to Moline, Illinois, where he goes to take charge of the milling interests of his firm. Accompanied by his wife and children, his father and sister, he spent Sunday at Lamoni. Fred is a prospering business man, and we are heartily glad of his success.

Bro. Thomas M. Parr wrote from Minneapolis, Minnesota, that he had been endeavoring to sow the seed of life eternal among the people of that great city, but had done so in the midst of opposition. Some are ready for baptism who express a desire to unite with the church if an elder can visit them. Bro. Parr expects to leave there shortly but can be addressed now at "No. 1514, Twentieth Avenue, North," should any of the ministry be able to respond to his call.

We can not at present fill orders for the Life of Joseph the Prophet by Tullidge, or the $1.50 edition of the Book of Mormon. Please order the cheaper editions of the latter for some time to come.

Brn. H. A. Stebbins and C. H. Jones are preaching at Allendale, Missouri, to large congregations. They report that "the old opposition seems to be about over."

Brn. M. M. Turpen, D. Campbell and T. Wellington have been laboring at Terre Haute, near Lamoni.

Bro. J. A. Burnham, of Independence, Missouri, writes that he desires to secure a houskeeper, and that any sister, not over forty-five years of age, desiring to go to Independence can secure a home by writing him for particulars.

Bro. Arthur Crump, of Birmingham, England, writes with excellent spirits concerning his desires to progress with the work as it advances. He feels well and rejoices in the cause of truth. He mentions the efforts of a Mr. Jarman who gave an expose of Brighamism in that city.

The Saints and friends at Davis City, Iowa, have erected a handsome and commodious church which was opened for services on the first Sunday of the new year, when Elder Henry A. Stebbins preached there to large and interested congregations, the building being completely filled by audiences of those who were interested in the present and future success of the work there. The Saints at that place will appreciate the labors of any of the elders who can assist them in presenting the faith to the people. We commend their efforts as timely and opportune, believing in their deserved success which we trust the Master will give them. Elder Mark H. Foscutt also preached there Sunday morning and evening of the 13th inst. to packed congregations. Many could not obtain seats. He resumes efforts there from Thursday the 17th to the 20th inclusive, on account of the interest manifested, and will probably be followed by Bro. Elvin or some others of the ministry.

Bro. Peter Mohr writes from McCook, Nebraska, that he is a recent convert of the faith, and is glad of being a member of the true Church of Christ. He states that he has a piece of land to sell—160 acres. Those wishing to can correspond with him in care of T. C. Richards, North Platte, Nebraska.

Bro. R. M. Elvin has just closed a series of meetings at Pleasanton, of which he elsewhere gives an account. The work in this vicinity is moving forward steadily.

SERMON BY JOSEPH THE MARTYR.

Below will be found a very interesting sermon delivered by Joseph Smith. We reprint it from the Times and Seasons, vol. 2, No. 15, (June 1st, 1841). It will also be found in the Millenial Star, vol. 18, page 535.

Sunday Morning, May 16th, 1841.—The indications of the morning promised a beautiful day. At 10 o'clock a. m. a large concourse of the Saints assembled on the meeting ground and were addressed by Pres. Joseph Smith, who spoke at considerable length. He commenced his observations by remarking that the kindness of our heavenly Father called for our heartfelt gratitude. He then observed that Satan was generally blamed for the evils which we did, but if he was the cause of all our wickedness, men could not be condemned. The devil can not compel mankind to evil, all was voluntary.-Those who resist the Spirit of God are liable to be led into temptation, and then the association of heaven is withdrawn from those who refuse to be made partakers of such great glory-God would not exert any compulsory means and the devil could not; and such ideas as were entertained by many were absurd. The creature was made subject to vanity, not willingly, but Christ subjected the same in hope-we are all subject to vanity while we travel through the crooked paths and difficulties which surround us. Where if the man that is free from vanity? None ever were perfect but Jesus, and why was he perfect? Because he was the Son of God, and had the fulnees of the Spirit, and greater power than any man.—But, notwithstanding our vanity, we look forward with hope, (because we are "subjected in hope,") to the time of our deliverance.

He then made some observations on the first principles of the gospel, observing that many of the Saints that came from different States and Nations, had only a very superficial knowledge of these principles, not having heard them fully investigated. He then briefly stated the principles of faith, repentance, and baptism for the remission of sins, which were believed by some of the religious societies of the day, but the doctrine of laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost was discarded by them.

The speaker then referred them to the 6th chapter of Hebrews, 1st and 2d verses, "not laying again the foundation of repentance from dead works, &c., but of the doctrines of baptism, laying on of hands, the resurrection, &c." The doctrine of eternal judgment was perfectly understood by the apostle, as is evident from several passages of scripture. Peter preached repentance and baptism for the remission of sins to the Jews, who had been led to acts of violence and blood, by their leaders, but to the rulers he said, "I would that through ignorance ye did it, as did also those ye ruled.-Repent, therefore, and be converted that your sins may be blotted out, when the times of refreshing (redemption) shall come from the presence of the Lord, for he shall send Jesus Christ, who before was preached unto you," &c. The time of redeptiom here had reference to the time, when Christ should come; then and not till then would their sins be blotted ont. Why? Because they were murderers, and no murderer hath eternal life. Even David must wait for those times of refreshing, before he can come forth and his sins be blotted out; for Peter speaking of him says, "David hath not yet ascended into heaven, for his sepulcher is with us to this day:" his remains were then in the tomb Now we read that many bodies of the saints arose at Christ's resurrection, probably all the saints, but it seems that David did not. Why? because he had been a murderer.

If the ministers of religion had a proper understanding of the doctrine of eternal judgment, they would not be found attending the man who had forfeited his life to the injured laws of his country by shedding innocent blood; for such characters can not be forgiven until they have paid the last farthing. The prayers of all the ministers in the world could never close the gates of hell against a murderer.

The speaker then spoke on the subject of election, and read the 9th chapter in Romans, from which it was evident that the election there spoken of was pertaining to the flesh, and had reference to the seed of Abraham, according to the promise God made to Abraham, saying, "In thee and in thy seed all the families of the earth shall be blessed." To them belonged the adoption, and the covenants, &c. Paul said, when he saw their unbelief, I wish myself accursed according to the flesh—not according to the spirit.

Why did God say to Pharoah, "for this cause have I raised the up?" Because Pharoah was a fit instrument—a wicked man, and had committed acts of cruelty of the most atrocious nature.

The election of the promised seed still continues, and, in the last days, they shall have the priesthood restored unto them, and they shall be the "Saviors on Mount Zion," the "ministers of our God," if it were not for the remnant which was left, then might we be as Sodom and as Gomorrah.

The whole of the chapter had reference to the priesthood and the house of Israel: and unconditional election of individuals to eternal life was not taught by the apostles.

God did elect or predestinate, that all those who would be saved, should be saved in Christ Jesus, and through obedience to the gospel; but he passes over no man's sins, but visits them with correction, and if his children will not repent of their sins he will discard them.

This is but a very imperfect sketch of a very interesting discourse, which occupied more than two hours in delivery, and was listened to with marked attention by the vast assembly present.

"O fearful heart and troubled brain
Take hope and strength from this,
That nature never hints in vain
Nor prophecies amiss.
Het wild birds sing the same sweet stave,
Her lights and airs are given Alike to play-ground and the grave;
And over both is heaven."

AN OPEN LETTER TO A FRIEND.

DEAR L-, You tell me that there is silence in your home where so lately the pattering feet of your little Claire made music sweeter than the chime of bells; that you go from room to room with empty arms, seeking but finding nothing to fill them; neither balm for the dull aching pain forever gnawing at your heart. You know me too well to believe that I could hear this without feeling the keenest sympathy for you; and to this you may know what my feelings are when I tell you that my grief for this is small, very small, in comparison with what it is when I read those other lines, wrung from the depths of the bitterest cup ever pressed to the lips of mortals, and yet possessing an added sting of speechless agony when the lips which quaff it are the lips of a mother.

"She is gone-my loved one, my beautiful one; gone in her sweet spring-time of life. The earth covers her form which erst laid so near my heart, and this is all of life. Life ended in death which is the end of all! Alas, why are we? Why loves the heart with such intensity of passion, that which is no more than a clod of the valley? But one short week ago and her smile answered back to mine, and from her eyes there flashed the quick intelligence which assured me she knew the grief I felt when I saw her suffering the pain no human skill had power to relieve! Death breathed upon her, and her eye took on a glazed and vacant stare; and when I called her name in throbbing agony, begging for just one word, one token that she knew me still, silence and the awful chill of death gave back the only answer. The clods of the valley hide her form, but they do not press as heavily upon it as they do upon my heart. No other child shall ever call me mother! Never again will I wake into life and being that which has power to crush me with such agony! Oh, if there were a God, what greater proof could there be of his tyrannical power than this? There is no God, no future; and my darling has but passed beyond all power of grief or pain to reach her. It is the end of all; she sleeps the sleep of death! Lost! gone! never to be again! Would I slept too! It would not bring me nearer to her, for she is no more; but I should not then know this agony which is consuming me, but which will not let me die!"

Oh, L-, dearest of friends, how could you ever pen such lines as these? They pierce my heart as the wounds of a sharp instrument. There is no comfort for you on this earth until you shall find it in the love of that God whose name you have blasphemed, whose loving care you have denied. Stop for one moment and answer me this question: If no power higher than your own brought into being that beautiful child whose life-pulse throbbed against your own, why not exert your power now and revivify that form you love so well? Answer me this, my precious friend.

It will not satisfy your soul to say, "She came into existence under the laws of my being," for the voice of your immortal, undying soul will answer you: If no higher power than you gave those laws, then you have power to control them. If there be no higher power, why is she dead? Is there a life throb in your being, one atom of force, power or strength which you would not stretch to its utmost limit to defeat this power of death? Aye, this hour you would give your life for hers; yes, just to have her with you, her warm breath upon your cheek, her loving arms about your neck, and her head nestled against your heart for but one moment-one poor, fitful moment of time!

If death has wrought no change; if a lump of clay was all there was in life, why then is not the lifeless body just the same as the living body? You say that even if you slept as she sleeps it would not bring you nearer to her, for she is no more. In all this, my dear friend, do you not see that you yourself acknowledge a power higher than your own, fixed laws from which none can escape; and yet, acknowledging this power in nature, you deny it in revelation. Forced to drink the bitter cup to its dregs, you put away from you, with a wilful, impatient hand, the cup of balm and of healing the Father offers you to drink. Let me ask you in the words of inspiration, "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?" The same power which first organized and brought into existence the life which was so dear to you, why may it not restore that life? restore it not as at first, subject to sin and death, but restore it with the power of an endless life and with a body like the glorious body of the Son of God? Why not?

Come, dear L-, and go back with me to the morning of creation. Lay aside every dark cloud of doubt, and let us together trace the history of mankind. Here in the beginning we find a great first cause, self existent, omnipotent, the essence of love and truth; yet even then governing all things by fixed laws. In order to the exaltation and glory of man, it was found necessary that he be made not like a machine, never moving except as moved upon by a force outside himself. but with an agency which left him free to choose whether he would do good and receive good as the fruit of his action, or do evil and suffer evil for the doing. God required but one thing of man, or rather gave him but one law, and that was the law of obedience which alone could lead to the good God intended man to have and finally possess as his own, an inheritance of which no power could deprive him. This law he chose to violate, and thus sin entered into the world, death following in the footsteps of sin. There was one who had the power of death, and that one was the devil: and through fear of death men were held in bondage. But deep as were the counsels of Satan, the counsel of God was deeper. Before man was given his agency, provision was made for a Redeemer, even for Jesus Christ who, by the grace of God, tasted death for every man and through the tasting of the bitter cup obtained the power to destroy him who had the power of death. Into the dark dominions of death and hell our great Deliverer descended, and wrested from him who had them the keys of his baleful power. So great was the love of God for man that in order to redeem him from sin and the bondage of sin and death, he gave his Only Begotten Son, to suffer and die that we might have life, and have it more abundantly. But as in the beginning obedience was required, so now is the the same demand made upon all who desire to gain the life of immortality which is the result of His life, obedience, suffering, death and resurrection. There is a second death which may reach you, but never can pass upon your child. She is safe with spirits of the redeemed ones in the Paradise of God. Her body-the empty casket in which her spirit dwelt while she remained on earth-will crumble back to dust; but when Jesus returns to earth he will resurrect it, and spirit and body will be united again never to be separated, and she will be a child of God-one of the redeemed, because she is a child of the resurrection. (See Luke 20: 36.) This is the great plan of redemption for all who die in infancy, or before they are old enough to sin wilfully or become accountable to God. They are redeemed from the foundation of the world through the atonement of Christ, and by the power of the resurrection are brought forth to life and immortality.

But you, dear L-, my precious friend, have as yet no claim upon God entitling you to any part of this resurrection, because you have long passed the years of accountability and yet have never obeyed the will of God. He sent his Son into the world to declare his will, and he has endowed you with reasoning faculties, judgment, and an inward monitor taking knowledge of your thoughts, words and deeds. He has placed you in a world where everything by which you are surrounded whispers to your soul: "There is a a power above the power of man; and back of all this design there is, there must be, a designer. The harmony existing in all things, the wonderful minuteness of detail all combining and blending in the perfect whole, point with unerring certainty to the One Power framing, planning and controlling all." As day by day you watch from your open window thn erection of some costly edifice, noting as it grows under your eye the gradually developing plan the outlines of which you early begin to trace, and continue from time to time to follow until in all its magnificence of design it stands before you a perfect whole, and you are constrained to feel and acknowledge the power of the master builder manifested through all; so with the works of God, which all combine to declare his presence to the soul which he has organized to trace him in his works. Had this great Designer implanted within you this undving love for your child, renewing with every morning's light the longing for her presence which follows you through all the day and colors your dreams by night, and which (if your belief is true) is only a mockery to follow you through life with its dark shadow and end in death, then indeed is there naught of sense, reason, justice or design in our life; but a being capable of the highest aspirations, the purest emotions, the grandest achievements of self conquest and love undying, becomes and is the sport of destiny so cruel that the poorest worm which crawls amid the slime of the earth is to be envied by this exalted creature we call man.

Oh, my friend, leaving entirely out of view the great injustice to your Creator, how can you be so untrue to your higher powers and attributes! Is there not implanted within you an unquenchable love of the pure and the beautiful, an ever reaching out and never to be silenced demand for the attainment of that which represents to you the highest good to which man may attain? Whence came it? From a power no greater, a standard no higher, than your own? This is impossible! Those beings who find within themselves the perfection they seek, will not reach out and long for that which is unattained. Is not the presence of the these very longings a prophecy to your soul of the heights to be attained? Are not the changing seasons as they come and go a witness which God has reserved to himself firm as the everlasting hills that man shall live again?

Can you tell when you place the tiny seed in the ground how it is, that being placed there, it will germinate and spring into life and existence, becoming a thing of beauty, which after it has yielded "seed of its kind" will fall by the breath of frost or the winter's blast? Why should you reason that it is owing to fixed laws that this marvellous change is produced, without acknowledging that Power which created these laws which are so infinitely past your searching out that you cannot tell the cause or reason why a single one of them should be? That they are you know, and this is all. If by wisdom and searching man has not found God, why will he not turn to that which it has pleased God to reveal of himself, and accept the terms upon which God is pledged to reveal himself to man? You mourn for your loved one as lost to you forever.

Do not think I speak unadvisedly or unwarrantedly when I tell you she is not lost. She will live again, and when the opening heavens shall reveal the Son of Man, coming in his power and glory, attended by the angels of heaven. he will bring your child, your beautiful Claire with him; and if you will, you may be with her. If I have not wearied you in this, and you wish to know more of my faith, belief and knowledge, I will gladly strive to point you in the way to obtain a knowledge for yourself, that you may know the truth of God as he has revealed it in his Son; and your mourning be turned into joy, your every doubt be removed, and the peace of God take possession of your heart and fill your soul to such an extent that every doubt shall be removed; and with one of old you will be enabled to say: "I know that my Redeemer liveth, and that he shall stand at the latter day upon the earth; and though after my skin, worms destroy this body, yet in my flesh shall I see God; whom I shall see for myself, and mine eyes shall behold, and not another, though my reins be consumed within me."

Glorious declaration! No wonder that the grand old man should cry out: "Oh that my words were now written! oh that they were printed in a book! that they were graven with an iron pen and lead in the rock forever!"

When I see you, dear L—, standing by the open grave of your precious child, with the cold, cruel monster of infidelity coiling around your heart-strings and torturing into almost madness your agonized soul, I think I realize fully how Job felt when he burst out in this inspired language. Will you let me come to you with a heart overflowing with love, and strive to point you to the "Lamb of God who taketh away the sins of the world?" and strive to show you how you may find him who said, "I am the resurrection and the life?" May he whom you now know not, comfort you and bring you to a knowledge of himself, is the earnest prayer of

Your true friend,

PRAYER LEAGUE.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Bro. R. J. Anthony sends in request for the the prayers of the League in behalf of Sr. Wilson of Salt Lake City who is a very great sufferer. Her house has been for years a home for the elders and she is worthy for whom this favor is asked; a very Saint indeed. Will the elders who have shared the hospitality of Bro. and Sr. Wilson also intercede with God on her behalf?

Fountain Green, Ills, Dec. 29th.

Dear Sister Walker, and the sisters of the Home Column: I thought I would write a few lines to encourage you on in the good work in which you have enlisted. I, for one, am well pleased with the interest taken in the spread of the glad tidings of life and salvation being preached to the world in these last days, of which we have had the testimony and can bear it to the world, that this is truly the gospel of Christ, which he preached when he was on earth. I rejoice that I live in a day when we can hear the gospel in its purity, and see the signs that do follow the believers. Dear sisters, I have read your letters with pleasure and desire to say to you all, be faithful, for there is a crown laid up for them that come up through great tribulation and faint not by the way. I think it is a sin to follow the fashions of the world. We are commanded to come out from the world, and be separate. Let us make our garments plain, as we are commanded to do, and not put two or three yards in a hump on the back. I think that needless expense could be put to better use. It is wicked, when the Lord formed the human family after his own image—of course that was straight and well formed and comely.

Now, sisters, I believe that your Prayer League is a very good thing; but I believe that the name "Union" would have been more appropriate, for when you meet together you want to be united as one in a band of union.

Sister Walker, I was visiting at Burlington during the conference. I attended the two preaching meetings, and heard two excellent discourses by Alexander Smith. I was in the testimony meeting also. The Spirit of the Lord was with us in power, and we were all made to rejoice, and there were many powerful testimonies borne. It was a time long to be remembered by all who were there. Bro. Ruby remained through the week. I have learned since I returned home that several more were baptized, and he was to hold meeting every evening. Alexander Smith preached there the next Sunday. I was asked by the sisters to write a letter to the Herald, and this is what I have written.

Your sister in Christ, KATHERINE SALISBURY.

OAKDALE, Jan 4th.

Dear Readers of the Home Column:—I desire tonight to express my interest in the the gospel work by again adding my humble contribution. I have just been reading the Herald of January 5th, and in so doing thought upon thought crowd themselves into my mind. How much joy and solid comfort this messenger of peace (the Herald) brings to the lover of truth. The letter of Aunt Margaret especially impressed my mind. I am personally acquainted with this dear old sister, and the dream she relates, together with the manifestation she afterward had, seem of paramount importance. Oh how much I desire that my name may be written on "the page" in letters of gold!

This letter, together with the poem "What are you writing?" affords matter for serious reflection. Yes, dear sisters, "each day" (as the poem says) we are writing a page in the great volume of life, and my heart beats with a throb of pain when I call to remembrance (as near as I can) how my volume thus far must look. I fear it is not spotless, but has many an ugly blot. But I take courage when I think it is our privilege to live and learn. God is merciful, and we have the assurance that his arm of love is ever extended. Christ our Savior knows all the sorrows, trials, and cares we mothers are called upon to endure. Let us confidingly seek his help and guidance.

Our work, if well done, will receive no inferior reward. This beautiful song in "Gospel Hymns" No. 145, comes to mind in connection with the thought offered:

"To the work! to the work! we are servants of God, Let us follow the path that the Master has trod. With the balm of His counsel our strength to renew; Let us do with our might what our hands find to do." It occurs to my mind, this is the important point for us all to see. Whatever and whenever our duty lies, if performed with an eye single to the glory of God it is just as worthy of reward as though we occupied our time and strength in performing duties of apparently much more note. If I can so live before God from day to day as to train the youthful minds in my care to love and obey His holy laws and to be able to exemplify my teachings, I shall have no fears but my ears will be greeted with the comforting sound, "Well done good and faithful servant."

Ever praying for the welfare of the cause, Your sister, MRS. C. H. DERRY.

MT. VERNON, Oregon, Nov. 28th.

Sisters of the Home Column:—Not seeing any correspondence from this little branch, I felt it my duty to write to the Home Column. It is a great comfort to me, and I have felt I was taking all the comfort and adding nothing to advance the cause of Christ: Bro. H. L. Holt has been laboring with us for the last two months. He left last week. We were all sorry to have him go; but he thought he was needed elsewhere, and of course it was his duty to go. He thought he had not done much good while here; but we think he did, for he encouraged and instructed the Saints; and some of us was sadly in need of instructions, and we do not think all the good seed he planted here fell by the wayside.

This is a glorious work being done in these last days. It is a mystery to me why more can not see the truthfulness of it than do see it, when it is laid before them so plainly.

I sometimes hear people say they believe this latter day work is true if any is, but they could not bear the name of Mormon. I often think it is a blessing sent upon the church to keep such people out. If they can not bear that much for Christ when he suffered so much for them, they would be no benefit to this church or any other. If by bearing that name we are to be separate from the world, I am satisfied it should be so.

Ever praying that this gospel will spread and convert the true and faithful, I remain your sister, CLARA THOMPSEN.

Correspondence.

Cook's Point, Texas, Jan. 4th.

Brn. Smith and Blair:—I have moved to Burleson county, near Cook's Point. Since coming here I have organized a branch of about seventeen members, and a Sunday School of about thirty, and have baptized four. Others will follow soon I think. One more has made application for baptism. We expect to build up a good branch at Cook's Point. I intend to visit the branches of the district as soon as I can, and preach to as many as I can get an opportunity as I go from branch to branch in the bounds of this district.

The work is moving along about as usual, but not as good as could be desired. I hope there will be a change for the better soon. I am expecting Bro. Moore at my house soon to engage with me in the work in this section. I understand he set aside W. P. Brown, the Whitmerite, at Rogers, Bell County. And it seems that Brown has concluded not to meet Bro. Moore again, Yours,

E. W. NUNLEY.

COAL HILL, Ark., Jan. 10.

Dear Herald:—We marvel greatly that this field has been overlooked so long. While Europe, Asia, Australia and the islands of the sea are included in our missionary work, Arkansas is virtually unnoticed.

Here in these mountainous regions are thousands who have never heard the gospel story. So many of them are innocent, unprejudiced and willing to be taught. To be sure, every neighborhood, or at least every town, has its knowing ones, who have heard some scandalous rumor about the Mormons. But in the main, there is a far better and more favorable opening for preaching-preaching that will reach the hearts of the people,-than in many northern and more highly enlightened communities. This being the case, and the Lord of the vineyard being a kind and impartial master, it seems that he desired this part of his possessions to be improved upon as well as other localities. So he moved upon a good brother-B. H. Case-a humble, earnest soul holding the office of priest, to come to this vicinity, and he began the spiritual work in private conversation. He is always ready to quietly and unobtrusively scatter crumbs of truth which inspire calm investigation, besides being fully competent to answer all doubts and queries, as he seems to thorougvly know what he believes. He has only been here since last spring, but he has disseminated much truth and caused a goodly number of persons to cast about them and compare their faith with Jesus' perfect and pure teachings.

Since the good work must be done, the same Spirit seems to send another here; that members be fully inducted into the kingdom, when honest hearted ones be found.

In November Elder E. M. Wildermuth came, and after preaching in Hartman more than a week with no visible effect, he began to hold forth here—three and a half miles further west—in the Christian Church on the Sabbath,

Last Sabbath he baptized six persons, three long tried and valued members of the Christian Church, estimable people from the north, who have only heard these gospel sermons. One was an old time Saint, buried in these mountain fastnesses as completely as if in a subterranean desert. She is favorably and widely known, and cultivated and lady like, besides being a person of firm mind and well informed of things in the past.

This is not a progressive country. It is claimed by those who profess to know that in this region was made up the train that was massacred at Mountain Meadow. And here, long years ago, Utah missionaries came and made a number of proselytes and led them away to the land of Brigham. After that, persecution and indignation would be a natural result.

The masses in general are not well or widely informed of past or even current events, and the gospel is more likely to reach them in consequence. But Satan has begun to show his teeth already, as the Christian Church is not open to us now. But last Sunday night we had confirmation meeting at E. M. Wildermuth's and prayer and testimony meeting Wednesday night at the same place. Elder E. C. Wildermuth and family are here now and intend locating in this part of the state.

There are more investigating, wondering and reading up our belief. If charity begins at home, why are not these willing souls as fully worthy of instruction as the heathen and the inhabitants of other climes?

One of the new converts, John Nanny, seems to be a shining mark for the darts of the adversary, and if the powers of darkness do not overcome he will be a chosen instrument for mighty work in the hands of the Master-builder.

Craving your prayers in behalf of this mission, we are, as ever, yours for right and progress,

PERLA WILD.

BOZEMAN, Mont., Jan, 12th.

Dear Herald:—Your weekly visits are a great help to us, as your columns are constantly freighted with words of encouragement and instruction to the hungry soul. The work in this region is on a fair footing, and the Saints here are reviving in the work and are taking hold in earnest, and I think we will see the good effects and fruits of our efforts. We are being greatly blessed in our Saints' meetings; the Spirit is being poured out upon the Saints in a marked degree in the gifts of the gospel; the sick are being healed, and all along God is giving abundant evidence of the divinity of this work. As a minister, I never before had such clear evidence of my acceptance as now.

Herewith I send a copy of a hymn given by the Spirit at one of our Saints' meetings:

Be faithful, my children, be true to the last; Forgive one another and bury the past; For thus did your Savior when he died on the coss, He prayed to the Father to pardon his foes. Anothus, if the blessings of God you'd enjoy, Your lives to his honor and work must employ.

Be faithful, my children, I've blessings in store, The same as enjoyed by my people of yore; Your lives must be pure as though tried by fire; That you might enjoy them I bid you live higher; That you may be numbered with those whom I love, And ne'er from my glorious presence to rove.

Be faithful, my children; in me put your trust;
For soon will the righteous arise from the dust;
The world will behold me when I come in the air
With the hosts of my Father the Saints to prepare.
The great thousand years will then usher in,
And the earth will be cleansed from pollution and sin.
In gospel bonds,

GOMER REESE.

PLEASANTON, Iowa, January 9th

Bro. Blair: After leaving home I spent five days with the Greenville branch. The meetings were well attended, order good, and there was a deep interest manifested. We sealed our labors there yesterday morning by leading Mr. Stephen A. D. Wood and wife into the waters of baptism We were richly blessed with the Holy Spirit at confirmation. Wise, kind and spiritual treatment, will, I believe, be productive of good to the cause we represent, and also add to our membership. Some who have left us have not failed to be untruthful in stating that we, as a church, had a sealed book that we did not let the people of the world see. This has turned the minds of some against the truth. My faith, however, is that present damage will result in future good, and those who now examine and accept will

Bro. Lloyd W. Wells of Dakota is with me, and seems to be diligently seeking to learn and understand the faith, doctrine and polity of the church more perfectly. I am pleased to see the course he has adopted. It would be well if all our elders would first seek an intelligent knowledge of the work before they attempt to become teachers of others.

I was pained in my very soul on learning of the departure from life of Bro. J. R. Badham. Years of intimate association with him gave me an acquaintance with his trials, disappointments and desires. A more humble and saint-like disposition, it has not been my lot to know. We may expect the aged to leave us, but when those in the prime of life, of our own age, are called away, we cannot help the tear and pain of heart to see the upright, useful and noble ones going on before.

Will begin meetings here this evenings. Success to the effort at Lamoni.

R. M. ELVIN.

BARNES, Kansas, Jan. 6th.

Dear Herald:-In Barnes I have not done anything. I opened the work in a neighborhood where the "friends" had found a footing and established more self-righteousness than gospel truth. I spoke there a few times and the people seemed to turn out quite liberally, but were evidently more attracted by curiosity than a desire to investigate. The silent messenger of the night from dreamland instructed me that there had been a landing prepared for me to the southward. I found large audiences and an appreciative interest. I spoke a number of evenings and closed the meeting to prosecute my mission further north and east, intending to make my way toward St. Joseph, Sweet Home, Allendale, etc., but the friends here seemed so anxious to hear more that their importunity constrained me to leave an appointment for a series of meetings to commence January 4th. I reached Bro Joshua Hightowers near Beattie. Spoke the two following nights. Sunday evening the house was occupied by the M. E. brotherhood, to continue through the week in a protracted effort and we were invited to a neighboring school-house in an adjoining district, which had been closed against all creeds, but was granted us by unanimous consent of the board. I found a large audience of expectant listeners, with that wrapt attention that seemed to say, "We want more." The following evening the interest was more intense, if possible, and I found that a goodly number had followed us from the protracted service of our Methodist friends, leaving vacant seats in that fraternity. As I closed the service announcing my obligations elsewhere, I observed a group of earnest men engaged in conversation, and I was afterwards informed that they were devising plans for my return and a series of meetings. I assured them of my return provided arrangements could be satisfactorily made among themselves within a reasonable time.

January 4th found me near Waterville in the presence of a large audience, with attentive listeners and interest good. On Sunday evening the house was filled beyond its seating capacity. They had come from miles around; had crossed the river on the ice, on horseback, in wagons and in boats. Old men were there whose presence and religious proclivities incited surprise, and their seeming interest was not less a subject of remark.

I am pleased to say that good order and quiet deportment has almost constantly attended my ministry. The local press, too, has been liberal. The Marshal county Democrat, Beattie Star, Barnes Enterprise, and Waterville Telegraph, all in Marshall county, as well as the Republic City News, of Republic county and the Guide Rock Sentinel, of Nebraska, have been generous in their notices of us and our true position. When I reflect on this favorable treatment and remember what some of my worthy brethren have and do suffer in other parts of the vineyard, I think God has been kind to us—to me—possibly beyond just deserts; but I am thankful for it.

While I have been blessed in presenting the word, my health has not been so good. In my early boyhood I had a tendency toward dyspepsia which I overcame in after years by rigid discipline in diet. Notwithstanding all my care I find the tendency returning with advancing years, that it is difficult to control in rounds of the ministry.

I find friends wherever I go and those lonely ones who have for long years been isolated from the church feel as though they can not do enough for me. God bless them and grant that I may not be unworthy of their confiding love.

JOHN D. BENNET.

PRAIRIE CITY, Indian Ter., Jan. 10th.

Bro. Blair:-I have not written to the Herald since the April conference, so I thought it proper to let its readers know what I have been doing since then. I have met and made many friends for the cause of Christ, and have also met with a great deal of opposition. Some threatened to have me put out of the territory if I did not quit preaching the doctrine of our Lord and Savior. One professed christian rode over the country advising the people not to come out to hear me, but some had independence enough to come. One lady who was very kind to sister Maloney and I, told me that she would do all in her power against me preaching. I asked her reason. She said, "I am afraid you will get my people (meaning the Indians) into your church." I told her that was what the Lord did intend to do and that she could not help it. She replied, "I am Afraid so, but you people I like," (meaning wife and I). This lady's husband is a believer, but as he told me thirty-five years ago, "Mr. Maloney, your doctrine is true but not popular." At another place I went to fill an appointment among the Shawnee Tribe. A Methodist preacher gave us a great deal of abuse, asked the congregation if they wanted us to form a church there, if so, that he would have nothing more to do with them. The people told him they wanted to hear us. He arose and went off, vexed. Bro. J. A. Davis, president of the Spring River district was then with me. He preached a plain discourse, at the close of which they requested me to leave another appointment which I did; and when I returned at the end of the month and arrived at the friend's who kindly entertained us, I was told that there was great excitement, and that it was not safe for us to go to the school-house, as this preacher had caused it. This friend would not go with us, but wife and I knowing that the work was the Lord's went on to the schoolhouse, got there two minutes before the hour, eleven o'clock, having traveled with my team twenty miles that forenoon. We found the house full and the Lord by his Spirit filled me also. Our efforts gave good satisfaction and made friends for the cause. At the close of the meeting, a gentleman arose and asked if the Bible mentioned such a book as the Book of Mormon. I told him yes, and that when I came again I would prove the coming forth of the book from the Bible, which I did when I returned in one month, for truly the Spirit of the Lord is with me in every instance in talking to the people. At another point where I have a regular appointment one man arose at the close of the meeting and abused me shamefully, and advised the people to run me out of the territory. He said his uncle helped kill old Jo Smith, and that he gloried it; and that this fellow, meaning me, was an old polygamist, and that I was branded. One sister asked him where I was branded. All these matters cause much indignation and are making us and the cause of Christ more friends, for instead of blessings our opposers bring cursings upon their own heads, and the excitement is causing me to have larger congregations. We are, in our weakness, trying to make the cause of Christ honorable by our daily walk and conversation; so that the church might be respected by our proper course. There are many believing and some ready for baptism. I have baptized two the past summer. If the weather permits, expect to baptize more soon. Being alone, I have not gone much among the full bloods, as I did not have any tracts in the Cherokee language. I wrote to Bro. Joseph last May, requesting him to send me some suitable tract to have published in Cherokee, but I never heard from him or the tract since. You will recollect us talking of the importance of such a tract, when at Independence.

There are some noble saints in this Territory who are an honor to the church, while there have been others whose acts are thrown up to us, and may be the cause of keeping some out of the fold of Christ. But the work and the people are in the hands of a merciful God and ere long he will manifest himself in power to this people; for the Spirit of the Lord says so. I must mention one of the most important matters that has transpired since the church was established; that is, last summer there was a grand council of delegates from every wild tribe of the west. The great chiefs of all the tribes were present and made speeches, all desiring to unite under one government and one law, and that they wanted the Cherokees to make the laws and be at the head, that they were tired of the acts of the white man, and of the government towards them. There were many beeves killed. They adjourned to meet next summer. I sent you papers containing all the speeches. Saints all pray for me that I may do the Lord's will among the Laman-STEPHEN MALONEY.

DETROIT, Michigan, Jan. 8th.

Dear Herald:—The Herald is a dear visitor to me. We have no Saints in Detroit that I know of except my husband, and many times when reading and thinking over the latter day work, my soul rejoices and the Lord blesses me with his Spirit, when the tears roll down my cheeks and I cry out, "O Lord open the way that poor perishing souls may hear the truth."

I love this latter day work. I have been a member for seven years, and I would rather lose my life than give up my faith. I can testify to the truth of this work, for I know that the signs follow the believers. My children have been healed time after time and I have also been healed. I had been under the doctor's care from March to September and he said I could only live a few hours. I was instantly healed by laying on of hands through brother Rathbun. I I have many dear friends in Kansas and other places that are in the same faith. Joseph Luff is a nephew of mine. If you know of any Saints in this city I wish you would let me know of them through the Herald. I praise the Lord for what he has done for me. He has taken all desire of the world and its vanity in dress away from me. I can not find words to express my joy. May God help me in doing my duty. If you see fit to put my addess in Herald for any elders who are going through, I would like them to call. Also if any saints are in this city I would like them to come and see me.

Yours in the faith,
JANE COUSER.

SAINT JOSEPH, Mo., Jan. 11th.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—I take solid pleasure in perusing the pages of the Herald. Its news from the field gives encouragement. I often think of "An Elder's Experience" published in Herald years ago, and wonder why some good active elder (the same one preferred) does not continue in line. The work in our city is in good condition—our meetings are blessed. The busy faithful workers far exceed the drones in number. Are not drones necessary "that the Scriptures may be fulfilled?"

On last Wednesday evening the branch took preliminary steps in preparing for the coming General Conference. Three committees were appointed, composed of excellent material, to make the necessary arrangements, which gives assurance that the work will be performed wisely. Due notice of arrangements will be published. Some are investigating, and some are being added by baptism. Our winter has been very "open" and prospects are good for an ice-famine next summer. Our Bishop's agent reports a general slowness in Tithing—the outgo exceeds the income. I refer the reader to Bro. I, N. White's letter in Herald for the 12th instant.

We shall soon prepare the circular letter for the Third Quorum of Elders. Those who have not sent, will please send in their addresses.

In gospel bonds,

J. M. TERRY.

OENAVILLE, Texas, January 9th.

Bro. Blair:—The debate between W. P. Brown and myself closed on December 21st. He seems to be satisfied, for he stated on the third evening that if he ever got through with this discussion, he would never sign another proposition. He then stated, "Moore was so tricky, he got me to sign these propositions."

I will not attempt to give an account of all his falsehoods and misrepresentations, but will point out a few: He stated that we had "to receive everything that Joseph Smith said, as from God's own mouth." He then held up the book of Doctrine and Covenants and read, as if it was in the book, as follows: "Joseph received a false revelation and in answer to it he received another stating that some revelations were of God, and some were of the Devil." This tickled the ears of the congregation, but when they learned that it was only another of Brown's misrepresentations, things changed considerbly. He said "Polygamy was under the law of Moses, and the Reorganizaion is going to back it;" "The Church in California is in such a bad condition over the Book of Covenants that Joseph Smith has gone there to try to get the people to accept that book." In reading from the Book of Covenants he read it in this way: "For he that is not tithed shall be burned." He further stated: "When these people send out their elders they tell them not to say anything about the Book of Covenants." He also stated that a belief in that book was a test of fellowship. "All have to pay tithes," was his statement in one speech, while in another he said, "Only the poor pay tithing."

Brown had Joseph Smith giving revelations and then giving others to get out of them. He also had the Lord fighting battles, etc., according to the Doctrine and Covenants. This was all answered from the Bible, and then from the Book of Mormon. He finally became so beaten and disgusted with himself, that he stated that he would never discuss another proposition. He had agreed to meet me in our Church, near Elmwood, but did not come. Elder Brown stated that there was no Church, no Kingdom, no officers until Pentecost. He said it was all man's work in choosing Seventy, also in having a succession in the quorum of the Twelve. He stated that our people at Independance called him a liar, and many other names which I dont wish to mention; also that his life was in danger when there, etc. Brown baptized Land, who was cut off from the church.

Our people feel satisfied that Whitmerism is a fraud. I would give Bible references, used but it would take too much space. I never was helped with better liberty than when I was defending the Doctrine and Covenants. The gospel plan is defensible. Christ is at the helm, and who will not stand up for the truth!

> CORNWALLIS, W. Va., Jan. 4th.

Bro. Fo eph: - Three weeks ago I commenced preaching here and spoke eleven times, held one sacramental, one prayer and testimony and one baptismal and confirmation meeting. Baptized Mrs, Mary E. Carpenter, a most excellent lady. Her husband, John Carpenter, seems almost ready for baptism, also, and there are many others near the kingdom.

After I left, the enemy started up a great one who proposed to discuss with us the literal kingdom and reign of Christ on earth, which doctrine he proposed to affirm was not true, but that his kingdom would be "only in the hearts of his people." This moved the brethren here to call me back. I came yesterday, but I regretted to learn that the champion had taken to his heels and fled the country, and has clean escaped out of our hands. But we had an excellent meeting last evening, great liberty and power was given in preaching the word and friends are multiplying for the cause on the right and left. The work of the Lord is in a good and promising condition at this point now, the place where Bro. E. L. Kelley routed the Campbellite champion -Archibald-the result of which is that Bro. E. L. stands highly esteemed by all parties. He made an impression for good that will remain and follow him after he shall have rested from his labors, for he won the hearts of many and may yet bring them to the Lord. I have myself started out for the war, unless sooner discharged. I have to fight a hard fight, but so far the Lord has sustained me, and blessed every effort.

I shall move on from here to Sinnett's Mill, and thence to Big Springs in Calhoun county, where I will hold forth as the way may open. I feel well in the work here because blessed with light and liberty as never before since beginning the work. I beg the prayers of the Saints in behalf of the work here.

Faithfully yours,
D. L. Shinn.

COLUMBUS, Neb. Jan. 15th.

Bro. Blair: As I was reading to-day, some of the letters and testimonies in the Herald, of some of God's people, I felt that I must write to you and bear my feeble testimony, for I know that we belong to the true Church of Christ. Every day brings forth, and nearly every paper we take up proclaims, new testimonies that the Latter Day Saints belong to the Church of God. I have striven many times to bear my testimony in company with the Saints, when assembled for that purpose; but on rising to speak could not give utterance to words. Why it is, I do not know, but I have determined if I can not talk, I will write and send it to the Herald.

I have often thought of the saying of the Savior, "He that is ashamed to confess me before men, of him will I be ashamed before my Father in heaven." I am not ashamed of Christ, but am ashamed of myself. But I am determined by the help of God to overcome this man-fearing, or evil spirit. Dear Saints, pray for me that the Lord may give me strength to at least bear my testimony to this latter day work, for I know it is of God.

I never was intended for a preacher, for I am very slow of speech, unless helped by the mighty power of God. But thank God, I can express in a measure my feelings with the pen, if not with the lips. I have wished many times that I could speak like my dear father when the spirit of the Lord rests upon him, as I have seen it many times. But we should all preach by our actions and we all do, either for or against the Lord. God grant that we may always be found striving to do his will. Yours in Christ,

GEO. N. DERRY.

CALMNESS IN ARGUMENT.

BANISH utterly out of all conversation, and especially out of all learned and intellectual conference, everything that tends to provoke passion, or raise a fire in the blood. Let no sharp language, no noisy exclamation, no sarcasms or biting jests, be heard among you, no perverse or invidious consequences to be drawn from each other's opinions, and imputed to the person; let there be no wilful perversion of another's meaning, no sudden seizure of a lapsed syllable to play upon it, nor any absurd construction of an innocent mistake. Suffer not an opponent to insult a modest opponent who begins to yield; let there be no crowing or triumph even when there is evident victory on your side. All these things are enemies to triendship, and the ruin of free conversation. The impartial search of truth requires all calmness and serenity, all temperand candor. Mutual instruction can never be obtained in the midst of passion pride, and clamor.

COME TO CHRIST.

"Come unto me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light."-Matt. 11:29, 30.

How precious to the widowed mother who toils almost night and day for the maintenance of her little ones, does this invitation and soul cheering promise come. Ah! it is cheering to all the careworn and oppressed and unfortunate of earth's children when all other friends have failed. then to believe and know that there is a friend who is all-powerful, who can "be touched with the feeling of" their "infirmities," and who will not turn them away empty, but will speak peace to their souls, increase their faith, revive their hopes, and give them the blessed assurance of a never-ending life of joy and peace with the blessed Jesus and the redeemed of earth when "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes" and "when there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying,' when all things that give pain and unrest, and which make life at times a burden. shall have vanished away. "Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need."-Heb. 4: 16.

"Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God that he may exalt you in due time: casting all your care upon him, for he careth for you."-1 Pet. 5:6, How well the divine Master knew that the proud heart of men must be humbled before they would come to him. Yes; man must discover that he is in need of divine assistance; that he is in a lost and fallen condition, before he will seek for and accept the proffered salvation. "For the Son of man is come to seek and to save that which was lost." "But when Jesus heard that, he said unto them, They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick. But go ye and learn what this meaneth: I will have mercy and not sacrifice; for I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance."-Matt. 19: 10; 9: 12, 13.

The fact that those who come to Christ are to take his yoke upon them, shows that there is a "burden" for each and all to bear; yet that yoke is to be made easy, and that "burden" light, by the divine hand, if they are willing to learn of him, and become "meek and lowly in heart.

Shall we learn?

When we think of his temptations, his trials, his tears, his groanings and sweat of blood in the garden of Gethsemane and his agony upon the cross, we wonder how he could say "My yoke is easy, and my burden is light."

Yet when the Spirit of God rests upon us, and we feel that joy in the heart which words cannot express, the mystery is solved, and the language is clear. Yes bless-ed Jesus, "Savior divine!" thy yoke was made easy, and thy burden light, because thou didst come as an unmerited favor to save all who would accept of thee. Thou didst the will of the Father and had the assurance that God was well pleased with the sacrifice, and approved of the work. "The Father hath not left me alone; for I do always those things that please him." -John 7:29.

Right here the following words of the poet impress themselves upon my mind:

"Must Jesus bear the cross alone, And all the world go free? No, there's a cross for every one, And there's a cross for me.

"The consecrated cross I'll bear Till death shall set me free; And then go home my crown to wear, For there's a crown for me."

I judge from the tenor of the Holy Scriptures that poor humanity is always on praying grounds; and that right here the work of coming to Jesus begins. "And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the Lord shall be saved"-Acts 2:21. "For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh, it shall be opened."—Matt. 7:8. Yes; but there is a proper way to come to God even in prayer, in order that he may hear our petitions and answer our prayers. And I know of no better way to make this lesson plain to the reader's understanding, than to call attention to the following teachings of the Savior bearing upon this

"After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven; hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heav-

The foregoing shows that, in order to approach the throne of grace in an acceptable way, we should do so in humility and with a holy fear, realizing that God alone is absolutely holy; realizing that he is the embodiment of perfection; all powerful, yet kind and full of mercy; while we are poor, weak and dependent upon him for life, health and daily supplies, as well as for our hope of eternal life.

We should not be influenced for a single moment either in thought, word or deed by that self-righteous feeling of the heart which prompted the Pharisee when he prayed as illustrated by the Savior in the following language found in Luke 18: 9-14: "And he spake this parable unto certain which trusted in themselves that they were righteous, and despised others: Two men went up into the temple to pray; the one a Pharisee, and the other a publican. The Pharisee stood and prayed thus with himself, God, I thank thee that I am not as other men are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican. I fast twice in a week, I give tithes of all I possess. And the publican, standing afar off, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote upon his breast, saying, God be merciful to me a sinner. I tell you, this man went down to his house justified rather than the other; for every one that exalteth himself shall be abased: and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted."

No one should be discouraged. humblest child may approach the sympathizing Jesus. For we are not heard for our much speaking, nor yet for the excellence of our language; for God looks into the inmost recesses of the heart and rewardeth us according to the righteous desires thereof. Prayer is a means by which we are permitted to hold communion with our God; and he who is found oftenest holding this sweet communion will be found to have the most of that meekness and lowliness of heart which characterized the blessed Lord. This brings the following words of the poet forcibly to mind:

"Prayer is the soul's sincere desire, "Frayer is the soul's sincere desi Uttered or unexpressed; The motion on a hidden fire That trembles in the breast. Prayer is the burden of a sigh, The falling of a tear, The upward glancing of an eye, When none but God is near.

Prayer is the simplest form of speech,
That infant lips can try;
Prayer, the sublimest strains that reach
The majesty on high.
Prayer is the contrite sinner's voice,
Returning from his ways,
While angels in their songs rejoice,
And say, Behold, he prays!"

It is but reasonable to believe that the Savior intended that all who prayed that the will of God should be done in earth as in heaven should work to that end by doing all in their power to comply with the divine law. This thought is more fully taught in the following words found in the same prayer: "Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors."

I sometimes think that this daily bread referred to, and for which we are instructed to pray, not only means that bread which perisheth, but that which cometh down from heaven; that it means that daily and hourly supply of divine grace so much needed by the child of God and which is referred to by the Lord Jesus Christ when he said, "And you shall find rest unto your souls." Thus showing that the "rest" was given from time to time just as it was needed.

If in coming to Jesus we are to call upon God for a forgiveness of our sins, we should remember that we are instructed to ask God to forgive us as we forgive our fellow men, and that we are emphatically told that, unless we do forgive, our heavly Father will not forgive us. This may be seen in the following language found in verses fourteen and fifteen of the sixth chapter of Matthew: "For if you forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you: But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses.

It is often stated from the pulpit that all we have to do to be saved, is to come to Jesus. But we discover by the reading of God's word that he that cometh must come calling; and not only calling, but calling and believing; and not only calling and believing, but calling, believing and hoping; and not only calling, believing and hoping, but calling, believing, hoping and doing the will of God in every particular. That faith and hope are essential to eternal life, is seen in Hebrews 11:6 and Romans 8: 24.

The following language of our Savior shows that he that cometh to him must work if he would find rest to his soul: "Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets."—Matt. 7:12; also Matt. 5:42-48.

The Savior not only teaches in harmony with this thought in the following language, but also teaches that the power to perform miracles in his name will not secure to us eternal life unless we continue to do the will of God: "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven."-Matt. 7:21.

The same truth is clearly taught by our Lord in the following words: "While he yet talked to the people, behold, his mother and his brethren stood without, desiring to speak with him. Then one said unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to speak with thee. But he answered and said unto him that told him, Who is my mother? and who are my brethren? And he stretched forth his hand toward his disciples and said, Behold my mother and my brethren! For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother."-Matt. 12: 46-50.

Thus we see by "coming to Jesus" in the way he has marked out for us in the word of God, there is a connection formed between us and the blessed Lord that is closer and holier than that of slave or servant, for we become the children of God and the brothers and sisters of Jesus Christ the Lord. In proof of the foregoing we offer the following: "For if ye live after the flesh, ye shall die; but if ye, through the Spirit, do mortify the deeds of the body, ye shall live. For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the Spirit of adoption, where-by we cry, Abba, Father. The Spirit itself bearing witness with our spirit that we are the children of God; and if children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ: if so be that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together."—Rom. 8: 13-17. And the Savior says: "If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed."-John 8:36. But, of course, it must be understood that, if we wish to abide in the Father's house, and be entitled to all the blessings promised to the children of God, we must not serve sin nor become the servants of sin, but must follow the example of Christ when he said,—"The Father hath not left me alone; for I do always those things that please him."-John 8: 29. Hence I reach the conclusion that, in order to come to Jesus and receive that rest unto our souls spoken of, it is necessary to believe and obey the gospel of Christ.

The apostles and early ministers of Christ were authorized to go and "preach the gospel to every creature," and the promise was that, he that "believeth"—and obeyeth—shall be saved. And Paul says: "The gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation."

We here quote from the first page of the Herald for Dec. the 15th, 1888, in order to show what the gospel is, for we think it does so in very few words: "The gospel is the good tidings of salvation in Christ Jesus, for the living and the dead, and comprises faith in God, in Christ, and in the Holy Spirit, as set forth in the Scriptures; also repentance, which means ceasing to do evil and learning to do well; baptism of water and of the Spirit; the laying on of hands for the purposes set forth in the Scriptures; the resurrection of the just and the unjust in their order and time; the eternal judgement of God upon all men according to their desires and their works; living by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God; living in the Spirit and walking in the Spirit; teaching and practicing every principle of truth and righteousness in its time and place.'

If our faith and practice is in harmony with the foregoing, we will surely be partakers of the blessings of God provided for his children in this life and will have that abiding testimony within us that a crown of eternal life will be our portion when Christ cometh to make up his jewels.

We can safely close our article and prayer in the following words: "For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen."—Matt. 6: 13.

HARMONY OF INSPIRATION.—NO. IV.

BY R. M. ELVIN.

In the spring of 1880, I was attracted by the announcement of an aged minister, who gave notice that he would, at a certain time and place, tell the people "chronologically and geographically when and where the kingdom of heaven spoken of by Daniel would be set up." I waited with a degree of anxiety to hear the exposition made, for I had in that same place given my opinion. "At Jerusalem, on the day of Pentecost" he said, "Jesus was coronated King of Kings, and then and there was the kingdom set up, never to be overcome." I did not believe it then, neither do I believe it now. The plain facts of history and revelation have decided my mind otherwise. The order of succession and of duration of the kingdoms symbolized in the image, were to be after the Babylonish, the Medo Persian, the Grecian, the Roman Empire, and the ten kingdoms of Europe. The order of these last kingdoms are as follows: "The Western Empire of Rome, between the years A. D. 356 and 483, was divided into ten divisions or kindoms: 1. The Huns in Hungary, A. D. 356; 2. The Ostrogoths, in Mysia, 377; 3 The Visigoths in Pannonia, 378; 4. The Franks in France, 407; 5. The Vandals in Africa, 407; 6. The Suevi and Alans in Gascoigne and Spanish. 407; 7. The Burgundians in Burgundy, 407; 8. The Heruli and the Rugii in Italy, 476; 9. The Saxons and Angles in Britain, 476; 10. The Lombards in Germany, 483."—Facts for the Times, p. 35.

This is from Dr. Scott, and he quotes from Machiavelli's History of Florence, lib. r. Bishop Lloyd, Newton, Faber, Dr. Hales and David Nelson, M. D. It would be uphill business to get sensible and thinking people to believe as true, a revelation that contradicted the facts of history. If ministers would remember this, and seek to comport their sermons with unyielding truth, there would not be so many sceptics as now swarm in all lands. When Christ began his ministry Roman Empire was in the zenith of its glory. I have the best of evidence for this statement, for Luke, the Physician wrote: "And it came to pass in those days, that there went out a decree from Ceasar Augustus that all the world should be taxed." Luke 2:1. It must be clear to the careful thinker, that the Roman Empire was in full power during the time of Christ, and its laws acknowledged by him; "Render therefore unto Ceasar the things that are Ceasar's." Matt. 22: 21. "And when they were come to Capernaum, they that received tribute came to Peter and said, "Doth not your master pay tribute? He saith, Yes. And when he was come into the house, Jesus prevented him, saying, What thinkest thou, Simon? of whom do the kings of the earth take custom or tribute? of their own children or of strangers? Peter saith unto him, of strangers. Jesus saith unto him, Then are the children free. Notwithstanding, lest we should offend them, go thou to the sea, and cast an hook and take up the fish that first cometh up; and when thou hast opened his mouth, thou shalt find a piece of money: that take, and give unto them for me and thee." Matt. 17: 24-27. Jesus not only acknowledged the authority of the Roman Empire, but likewise claimed to be a citizen there-

God promised to set up his kingdom during the days of the ten kingdoms; this must have been after A. D. 483. we are set adrift in search of the fulfillment of the promises made by the prophets. I will not attempt to give dates of the changes that are to bring about the setting up of the great and last kingdom of earth, but all will readily allow, that there must necessarily be some initial works of preparation, and if these be indicated we may approximate the period in which the work will begin, and, by the specifications, be assured of the identity of the work- "The shield of his mighty men is made red, the valiant men are in scarlet: the chariots shall be with flaming torches in the day of his preparation, and the fir trees shall be terribly shaken. The chariots shall rage in the streets; they shall jostle one against another in the broad ways. They shall seem like torches; they shall run like the lightnings. He shall recount his worthies: they shall stumble in their walk; they shall make haste to the wall thereof, and the defense shall be prepared. The gates of the rivers shall be opened, and the palace shall be dissolved." Nahum 2: 3-6. I offer this Scripture in evidence of a work of God that requires preparation. The railroad system is the thing most prominent in evidence. Lyman's Historical Chart gives, 1814—1829: "Carriages propelled by steam in England," and, 1832, "Opening of the Liverpool and Manchester Railway." It was during these same years that Joseph Smith received the greater portion of his revelations, translated the Book of Mormon, translated and corrected the Bible and organized the Church. And this I believe to be the work of which Nahum speaks and de-nominates "the day of his preparation," and these other events are the witnesses. We are informed that when this Liverpool railroad was projected the idea was entertained that the road-bed must be on a dead level, and that the farmers throughout whose farms the line of road ran, remonstrated against having their farms destroyed by the grading, and they further believed that the smoke from the engines would kill their crops. And the grading was done by man-power alone, with pick, spade and wheelbarrow. When the workmen began, the farmers, with all the prejudice usual on the introduction of what is new to them, raised a mob and drove the workmen away. The contractors called upon the constabulary of the country. These, however, being chosen by the people, from among the people, were heartily in sympathy with the farmers, and did not give the railroaders protection. It therefore became necessary to apply directly to the government for the asked for protection. The English soldiery clothed in scarlet, or, as we Americans would say, "red-coats," were sent, and in driving away the farmers, a number were wounded, and two men killed. This was the red upon the shield. The prophet, looking down the vista of time, twenty-five hundred years, gave a very good description of the headlight, as a torch.

Let the people of the prairie states consider how the pine forests have been scattered, to furnish lumber to our country. We might produce other minor proofs of the shaking of the fir trees.

No one who has ever road on a train going at the rate of a mile per minute or faster, will question the prophetic description of speed. The recounting of the worthies, it is thought, refers to the moblization of great armies.

No longer are the larger rivers a hindrance to the commerce and travel of the country. The gates (bridges) and locks of the canals all go to fulfill the work of dissolving the steam-boat traffic, and to facilitate the rapid settlement of the country. When this work is progressing another evidence of importance will be furnished, "And He will lift up an ensign to the nations from far, and will hiss into them from the end of the earth; and, behold, they shall come with speed swiftly." -Isa 5: 26. The ensign that God will raise unto all nations, will be the gospel of redemption which shall be preached "to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and which the ensign shall be lifted up, will be at a great distance from where the prophet was when he predicted this event. By the examination of a large school geography or globe, it will be seen at once that the location of Isaiah when he wrote, and that of Joseph Smith when God spoke from heaven unto him, are points almost directly opposite upon the surface of the earth, and in this manner could those receiving the appointment of heaven to proclaim the new covenant "hiss" or cry "from the end of the earth." And still further is it clearly shown when such work begins that it will not radiate out from the Holy Land, but come to it-be sent from some other part of the earth to the land made historic and venerated by reason of the good, great and numerous prophets who dwelt and spake on its soil. But a change took place when God made choice of a prophet to send tidings from afar to the land of ancient story. Those who go on this errand of good news shall be furnished with means of transportation with a compound swiftness. "Speed swiftly" is indicative of our fast passenger trains and ocean steamers. This religious philosophy, and the development of rapid transit by steam, have been paralell with each other, and as united witnesses testify for God. "I lifted up mine eyes again, and looked, and behold a man with a measuring line in his hand. Then I said, whither goest thou? And he said unto me, To measure Jerusalem, to see what is the breadth thereof, and what is the length thereof. And, behold, the angel that talked with me went forth, and another angel went out to meet him, and said unto him, Run, speak to this young man, saying, Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls for the multitude of men and cattle therein." -Zech. 2: 1-4. There was no necessity for this new survey of the Holy City during the time of Christ, but after the city should be destroyed, as it was during the siege under Vespasian and Titus, when the walls were all battered down, the beautiful Temple consumed by fire, and the inhabitants either killed or sold into slavery. This sad desolation was consummated A. D. 70. To obtain a comprehensive understanding of Jerusalem since the time of her downfall, one should read the account of the crusaders, who went forth with might and main to recover the "Holy City" from the heathen. King, prince, noble, priest and peasant all united with zeal in their work, but utterly failed, after the loss of many lives and oceans of money. But in the early part of this century the inspiration of God directed his servant Joseph Smith to make the proclamation that Jerusalem was now to be reoccupied as "a town without walls." He was the first to thus declare, and now it is too late for any other man to undertake the task. Yes! beyond a doubt Joseph Smith is the "young man" spoken of by Zechariah. I might continue to cull from the writings of the ancient prophets in proof of the proposition set forth in this department of the argument.

"Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, I am the light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life."—John 8: 12. We invite all to come unto the light as it is in Christ. (f) The particular item that I now take under consideration is usually called the apostacy or falling away from the truth, and also the restoration of the gospel.

APOSTACY.

While navigating this scant stream, we will assume that there was an absolute and complete departure from the doctrine, organization and spiritual gifts, as we find a list of them recorded in the New Testament, as enjoyed in the time of Christ and the Apostles. To this the Catholic priesthood most emphatically object, and strongly and most earnestly contend that their church is the oracle of God, the custodian of the divine means appointed for redemption; and that without the pale of their organization all is confusion, and eternal ruin. On the other hand some of the Protestant churches are sure that all who accept the creed of the Mother church, will go direct to Tophet, there to writhe and suffer forever, with no hope of escaping. When we assert that all are wrong and mistaken, they unite and pour out their vials of wrath in an avalanche of vituperation, and if not for hindering causes we would suffer the auto da fe.

"The earth also is defiled under the inhabitants thereof; because they have transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance, broken the everlasting covenant." -Isa. 24:5. The cause of the defilement of the earth is the action of the people, which by prophecy is called transgression, which is the violation of the divine law. This is brought about by changing the ordinance, and this changing constitutes the breaking of the covenant. In the primitive church baptism was administered to applicants who had been properly taught the true doctrine by immersing them in water. "Those adults that desired to be baptized received the sacrament of baptism according to the ancient and primitive manner of celebrating that institution, even by immersion."-Dr. John L. Mosheim.

The Roman Catholic Church is the responsible party in effecting the change in this divine rite. "The first law for sprinkling obtained in the following manner: Pope Stephen II, being driven from Rome by Adolphus, king of the Lombards, in 753, fled to Pepin, who a short time before had usurped the crown of France. Whilst he remained there the monks of Cressy, in Brittany, consulted him whether in case of necessity baptism poured on the head would be lawful. Stephen replied that it would. But though the truth of this fact be allowed-which, however, some Catholics deny—yet pouring or sprinkling was admitted only in case of necessity. It was not till the year 1311 that the legislature, in a council held at Ravenna, declared immersion or sprinkling to be indifferent. In Scotland, however, sprinkling was never practiced in ordinary cases till after the Reformation, (about the middle of the sixteenth century.) From Scotland it made its way into England in the reign of Elizabeth, but was not authorized in the established church.

Whatever there is that is blameworthy which attaches to the Roman Church for changing the ordinance of baptism, all believers in sprinkling are legal and lawful heirs to the displeasure and condemnation of an offended God. If the Mother church committed a transgression, all churches that accept her action and endorse the same, are equally guilty with her and worthy of the same punishment that will undoubtedly come upon the creed-makers who by tradition make void the commandments. Well may Christians blush with shame on account of what has been done in the name of Christ and religion. Compare the simplicity of the divine ordinance of baptism as it was practiced in the river of Jordan and elsewhere by Christ and the apostles with the buffoonery enacted a short time afterwards under the changing of God's sacred means for the cancellation of sin. "There was as a general rule but one baptistery to each city, and such baptisteries were apart from the churches. There was but one time of the year when the rite was administered-namely, between Easter and Pentecost. There was but one personage who could administer it -the presiding officer of the community, the Bishop. There was but one hour for the ceremony; it was midnight. The torches flared through the dark hall as the troops of converts flocked in. The baptistery consisted of an inner and an outer chamber. In the outer chamber stood the candidates for baptism stripped of their upper garments: and turning to the west as the region of sunset, they stretched forth their hands through the dimly lit church, as in a defiant attitude toward the evil spirit of darkness, and speaking to him by name said: "I renounce thee, Satan, and all thy works, and all thy pomp, and all thy service." Then they turned like a regiment, facing right around to the east and repeated in a form more or less long the belief in the Father, the Son and the Spirit, which has grown up into the Apostles' Creed in the west and the Nicene Creed in the east. They then advanced into the inner chamber. Before them vawned the deep pool or reservoir and standing by the deacon or the deaconess as the case might be, to arrange that all should be done with decency, the whole troop undressed completely as if for a bath and stood up naked before the Bishop, who put to each the questions to which the answer was returned in a loud and distinct voice, as of those who knew what they had undertaken. Both before and after their immersion their limbs were rubbed with oil from head to foot; they were then clothed in white gowns and received as a token of the kindly feeling of their new brotherhood the kiss of peace and a taste of honey and milk; and they expressed their new faith by using for the first time the Lord's Prayer."—Dean Stanley on Baptism.

It would seem that this eminent Divine injected considerable irony and satire in his description of this change, but there was no need of it, for such departures were foretold. "After my departure shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things to draw away disciples after them." -Acts 20:29, 30. It was not necessary for the purity or continuity of the church, that these human wolves should do their nefarious work of befouling the stream at the fountain, for inspiration said they would come, and history informs us that they did come. "For the mystery of iniquity doth already work: only he who now letteth will let, until he be taken out of the wav. And then shall that wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming: even him, whose coming is after the working of Satan with all power and signs and lying wonders, and with all deceivableness of unrighteousness in them that perish; because they received not the love of the truth, that they might be saved."-2 Thess. 2:7-10.

It must have been a cause of deep distress and agony of mind to the great apostle to the Gentiles to see the leaven of apostasy at work before he had accomplished his task, for before those personally chosen by the Savior to build up His church were released by death, Satan was at work in tearing down or sowing tares upon the soil that was dedicated to produce the fruit of life eternal. "But there were false prophets also among the people, even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruction. And many shall follow their pernicious ways; by reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of."—2 Peter 2:1, 2. Well did the historian write, "There is no institution so pure and excellent which the corruption and folly of man will not in time alter for the worse and load with additions foreign to its nature and original design. Such, in a particular manner, was the fate of Christianity. In this [second] century many unnecessary rites and ceremonies were added to the Christian worship, the introduction of which was extremely offensive to wise and good men. These changes, while they destroyed the beautiful simplicity of the gospel, were naturally pleasing to the gross multitude."-Moshiem's Church History p. 46. The false and mischievous innovation upon the true gospel plan, is invariably shrouded in mystery, and it appears the devil's best weapon to keep the people in ignorance and awe them with dark speeches and secret doings. "And this is the condemnation that light is come into the world, and men love darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil."—John 3:19. Perhaps there may be some of that same class plying their vocation and are such as are hereinafter described: "The public teachers and instructors of the people grievously degenerated from the Apostolic charac-They seemed to aim at nothing else than to sink the multitude into the most opprobrious ignorance and superstition, to efface from their minds all sense of the beauty and excellence of genuine piety, and to substitute in the place of religious principles, a blind veneration for the clergy and a stupid zeal for a senseless round of ridiculous ceremonies. perhaps, will appear less surprising when we consider that the 'blind led the blind;' for the public ministers and teachers of religion were for the most part grossly ignorant."—Church History p. 138. There rant."—Church History p. 138. are not a few in our own day who take advantage of the credulity of the masses, and through deceit and priestcraft make a laughingstock of religion and slaves of their dupes. Neither will it do to palm off all of evil and wrong in religion upon the Catholic Church, for it is not an unusual thing to hear ministers refer to her as the "old mother" and it would be an anomaly to find a mother who had no children. No one should become incensed if an item by inspiration on this be found: "And upon her forehead was a name written. Mystery, Babylon the great, the mother of Harlots and abominations of the earth."-Rev. 17:5.

I am willing to concede that the Roman Catholic church is the mother referred to, provided that her legitimate offspring do not disown their parentage and the unsavory character applied by inspiration. "A reformation of Popery was attempted in Europe full three centuries ago. It ended in a Protestant hierarchy and swarms of dissenters. Protestantism has been reformed into Presbyterianism; -that into Congregationalism,-and that into Baptistism, &c. &c. Methodism has attempted to reform all, but has reformed itself into many forms of Wesleyism. None of these have begun at the right place. All of them retain in their bosoms, in their ecclesiastical organization, worship, doctrines, and observances, various relics of Popery. They are, at best, but reformations of Popery, and only reformations in part." These are the words of one noted for his erudition and now enrolled among those called reformers. He wrote as he saw and realized things in the heat of the conflict, and there is more of solid fact than poetry in his expressions.

But here is another extract from his pen: "To fight the old battles over again, to rally under the old banners of Calvinism, or Arminianism; to propose some Episcopalian, Presbyterian, Congregational, or Methodist platform of improvement, either of theory or practice; or to adopt Scotch, English, or American Baptistism, could promise nothing better than that which already is, or has heretofore been. These have all been tried. Their whole moral and spiritual power has been made to bear upon the present and past conditions of sectarianized Christianity. And what have they done? What can they do better than they have already done? Do the new parties called "Reformed" enjoy more spirituality, more union, more harmony and peace among themselves, than the old ones? Are they more benevolent, more liberal, more active, or more successful in converting the world than the old ones? Or do they seek to unite the faithful, or to bring all Protestant parties into one communion? Are they more successful in active benevolence than those who preceded them?" It is quite evident that the cogitations of this stalwart thinker were moving in right lines, as discovering the unfortunate and sad plight of the religious world. In fact, it is much easier to see the wrong than to comprehend and apply the remedy. The plebian can tell when he is sick, but is totally ignorant as to what would be an adequate panacea. No less true is this of bodily ills than of mental disorders, and Dr. Draper, in his Conflict between Religion and Science, states that religion produces a degree of hallucination, and if we are to draw our conclusions from the incongruity we meet with in Christendom, we would be led to concede that the Doctor did not tell an untruth out of whole cloth.

DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS.

"Gone, thank God, the wizzard spell!"
Lost the keys of heaven and hell!"

My Doctrine and Covenants tells me that the priests lips should speak righteousness, and they do; for when a man counsels wrongly he is not a priest, no matter what men call him.

This message is good tidings to the meek, liberty to the captive, protection to the weak, and the year of the Lord's release at hand. And they who by voice or vote, or even silent influence, strengthen the oppressor and place fetters on the limbs, the tongue, the brain or heart of any one for whom Christ died, is surely not a priest, as—well, I may listen to him sometimes and take what little good there is in his message and in a dim far off way love as one groping in shadows only a little deeper and darker than those around me, for all of us "see through a glass darkly;" all of us grope in shadows more or less dense. Who of us understands, believes and practices the golden rule?

Who—who of us can say with truth— Scarcely have I asked in prayer That which others might not share. God's true priest can and does, "God's true priest is always free, Free the needed truth to speak, Raise the fallen, help the weak."

Oh, it is a great thing to be a priest! His message is always good tidings to the poor, the weak, the struggling, the oppressed. The Lord is the dear Father of us all, who loves us all alike, in whose home there is no room too nice tor us to enter, in whose temple there is no ark too sacred for us to touch if we have clean hands and pure hearts. Know this, dear readers, whenever your priest or teacher has a holy of holies, a sanctuary too sacred for you to enter; whenever he claims a right, a privilege, a blessing for himself that his God denies to you, he has lost the keys of heaven and hell-if indeed he ever held them. The fruit of that kind of a priesthood tree has always been bitter in all the ages that are past; it will be bitter, bitter in all the ages to come. We are all one in Christ. If we are not one we are not The truth makes us free. If in Christ. we are not apostles of freedom we have not the truth. Justice and mercy are the habitation of His throne. If we are not advocates of justice and equal rights for all we are worshipers of false gods.

I was talking not long since with a religous teacher who claimed that the Bible being a full and complete guide we do not need any other, and asked, "What is the grand and good and true in either of your other books not found upon its sacred pages?" I asked, "Did you ever in any of your preaching say anything grand and good and true that is not expressed as well or better in the sermon on the mount? No; that sermon declares as well as human language can declare it, the whole counsel of God. Then why do you preach the gospel? Every one has that sermon in his house and can, if he will, read it?" "Oh," said he, "that is different, you see." "Yes, I see," I replied, "Joseph Smith is Joseph Smith; and the Book of Covenants is the Book of Covenants; whereas you are you, and your sermons are your sermons. Verily, circumstances do altar cases!"

The fact is, Joseph Smith, notwithstanding the Bible if rightly understood and practiced would make us wise unto salvation, saw that some were not made wise unto salvation; hence he thought it his duty to write the revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants, and he did so. friend, though he knows that the sermon on the mount if understood, believed and practiced would lift us up to God and make us perfect in him, thinks it his duty to hold his little lamp aloft that another "lower-light" may be burning, and he holds it up. And inasmuch as all men, even apostles and prophets "see through a glass darkly," who does not know that both of them, and all of us, may have erred in part.

"But," says one, "if they were led wrong, how are we to know when they were right?" Well, if we have no sense there is only one way for us to learn anything. (Prov. 10: 13). But if we have any sense, there is a way for us to discern between right and wrong, without the rod.

Jesus never made a mistake-not oneyet he has been and is more misrepresented than anyone else. And I have sometimes thought that that is the way "his visage is marred more than any man, and his form more than the sons of men." For when a hypocrite wants to teach something low and mean, and a bigot something absurd, he is as likely to quote Christ's words as any other: "Give to him that asketh thee, and from him that would borrow of thee turn not thou away." "I could be a good Saint," said a sister to me, "if I might leave out that command; but it is all I can do to provide for myself and children, and I have neighbors who beg and borrow every thing I have, and they are too lazy to work." My books tell me what to do in such a case as that, and I do it. The golden rule only requires you to do as you would be done by, and if you have no wish to impose upon others, you have no right to allow others to impose upon you. "If a man smite you on one cheek, turn to him the other." The idea is, that such forbearance would, of course, shame him to humility. And so it will if there is the slightest spark of manhood in him; but if you always practice that, you will occasionally find a man low, and mean, and beastly enough to beat you to death and never feel a pang of remorse or shame. My Doctrine and Covenants tells me what to do in such a case as that, and I do it if I can. I have no use for a theory I can not practice—no use for a theology that degrades humanity. When I pray, "Father, forgive me, even as I forgive every one their trespasses against me," I dont make a single mental reservation not one. I do not expect to be forgiven for any wrong doing of mine till I repent and do all in my power to right it, and I never ask it. We are told to forgive a brother seventy times seven, if he repents. My friends often tell me we must forgive whether he repents or not, and I ask, "Do you always do that?" The usual answer is, "No; though I know I ought, I can't at times." I ought, but can't! Anything all ought to do I can do. The highest compliment Jesus ever gave any one, was, "She hath done what she could,"—not what she could not.

I can't believe the word of a liar, because I ought not. I can't trust a thief or a swindler, because I ought not. I can't respect a drunkard or libertine, because I ought not. And I can't endorse a tyrant of any sort, because I ought not. But I can pity them all; and when they, by doing all in their power to right past wrongs prove they have repented, I can and do forgive, love, trust and respect them all-because I ought. Shall a man be more just than God! Can a mortal be more pure than his Maker! We read that there is one sin that even God can not forgive. -perhaps there are more than one that I can not.

I can, and do forgive, every wrong that has been done me, if repented of. I can, and do, forgive a reasonable amount of tresspass without repentance—perhaps as much as most others can and do. And when I forgive as I hope to be forgiven, I never mention it again, not even to God in prayer. Long before I ever heard of the Docrine and Covenants, I was satisfied that there is a point where for bearance ceases to be a virtue. There is good sense and good theology in the Declaration of Independence. We have no right to sit supinely down and allow fetters to be riveted upon ourselves and our children, if we can help it. If we can't, if the fetter are already on us, and "on the side of the oppressor there is power," and we have no chance for redress at any human court, my Doctrine and Covenants telle me to lay the case before God, and that, when that is done, there is no forgiveness in this world, nor in the world to come, until restitution is made. Do you believe this? If it appeals to your moral sense as being right, no matter what you have thought of Joseph Smith or the Doctrine and Covenats. "What you bind on earth, shall be bound in heaven: what you loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven." Do you believe this?

"If any man shall offend one of these little ones that believe in me, it were better for that man that a millstone were hanged about his neck and he were drowned in the depths of the sea." Do you believe this? Place a reasonable construction upon them, and I believe them all. Place an unreasonable construction upon them, and I believe none of them. These texts all refer to the same class of events. The party who thus binds on earth and in heaven is a saint—not a hypocite, a chronic martyr, or a fool. The party bound is an "enemy"-not a brother overtaken in a fault; not a fanatic, who deserves our pity; not a bigot who might be softened and reclaimed; not an ordinary sinner, who sins without knowing or thinking of the consequences to others; for of all these Jesus says: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." No, none of these—none of these does the Saint lay before God in anything but tender, pitying, forgiving prayer. But the "enemy" is a smooth-tongued hypocrite; a conscienceless scoundrel, who knows what he is doing, and the pain he is causing you and yours. But, remember, neither your opinion nor mine will unmake a single fact.

"The Judge of all the earth will do right." He knows the difference between the adoration of a true Saint and the senseless flattery of a hypocrite. He knows the difference between the howling of a chronic martyr, and the wail of a broken heart. He knows the difference between the "reasonable service" of a free man or woman in Christ, and the cringing obedience of a slave to some superstition. When we err, he knows whether we are weak or whether we are wicked. When blamed, he knows whether we are "sinned against, or sinning." And knowing even the thoughts and intents of our hearts, he will judge us all with justice and mercy. Surely, "the Judge of all the earth will do right." MORMONIA.

AGAINST SECRET ORGANIZATIONS.

Rev. Dr. Blanchard in a late lecture read passages of Scripture against taking oaths, against concealment, secrecy, and in running comments made them apply to lodge room secrets and practices, and held that the condemnation implied in these passages is to fall upon secret societies and their members. He said that in order to become a member of the Blue Lodge of Masons a man is obliged to swear that he will stand by his brethren whether right or wrong, holding inviolate the secret knowledge of actions imparted to him. The obligation was held to be even stronger when one seeks the conferment of the Seventh Degree: The Doctor maintained that the passages that he read forbade secret societies, relying upon obligations. He continued that of the 114 000,000,000 people in the world, 800 000,000 are Pagans, and 200,000,000 Mohammedans; that these religions are the outcome of secrecy and are akin in their scope and ceremonies to the modern secret organizations. Powderly recently said that what the Knights of Labor want are secrecy and Even dictatorial powers had obedience. The Doctor been conferred on him. thought that Mr. Powderly, being a Romanist, has an understanding with the Pope at Rome. Both the ancient and modern systems of false religion teach salvation by signs and were designated as having something of Satan in their composition. The speaker then entered into an elaborate argument to show that each Pagan shrine stands in fact for a body or lodge, and quoted eminent authority to sustain this. Mohammedanism was held to be the outcome of mysticism and superstition, fed by secretism. The founding of Jesuitism by Ignatius Loyola occurred in a lodge or secret session in a cave, in which the ordeals were of 28 days' duration, and even more severe than those practiced in the initation of six members into a secret society of Yale College, who were so badly injured that they had to be taken home.

The Doctor next held that in symbolism and tendency, Masonry and Jesuitism or Catholicism are equivalent. The whole family of secret societies exclude Jesus. In their manual, the Masons cut out the name of Christ from His own book. There is no true God in the system.

The Doctor then took up the charge made that he is prejudiced against secret organizations, and said that he did not oppose slavery because he loved it. He was in those days called a crank, since then events have demonstrated the correctness of his views. The people will eventually see that the lodge is worse than slavery, substituting for the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, a mystic universality. The Doctor then said that in reality he is not prejudiced against secret societies any more than was the Presbyterian Synod at Cincinnati that considered a Christian profession incompatible with membership in some of these organizations. We need not, he said, go out of Galesburg to find opposers of the principles of secret fraternities. The Doctor came here forty-four years ago, and graduated thirteen classes. Among the graduates were Judge A. A. Smith, and Judge A. M. Craig and others now eminent. The Doctor asked the audience if it thought these men would have succeeded so had they wasted their time and a part of their means in college secret organizations. The trend of the arguments was to show that the venerable Doctor is not alone in his warfare against secret organizations, but that many are in sympathy with his ideas. The State of Vermont has had for fifty years a law making it a crime for the giving or receiving of a Masonic oath. The State was termed clear and level-headed. The enactment was shown to be one of long standing, having been passed fifty-eight years ago. speaker said that between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 American Christians are against secret fraternities. The Doctor then answered the objection, "If the lodges are undermining the country, why do so many good men belong to them?" The answer in general terms was that they join first through misapprehension, being charmed or deceived as to the true state of affairs, and that when they find out the truth they remain away, being members rather in name than in deed. The Doctor even detailed a conversation with a former citizen of this place, who was a member of the Masonic Lodge at the time of the murder of Morgan, in which conversation the citizen said that the lodge agreed to lie -affirming that Masonry had nothing to do with the death of Morgan. This falsity the citizen confessed was the result of an oath.

The Doctor next said: "If you appoint a committee of three men here and take me around to the prominent Masons, and let me question them, they will say that they don't know what is going on, as they don't attend. Two Masons-and excellent gentlemen they are—told me this to-day." In other words, the explanation why good men belong is that four men out of five don't attend, but simply put their hands in their pockets and pay their dues. Four honest men to one rogue is not so bad, even in a political party.

"The lodge is disintegrating the religion of Christ, and undermining and dissolving every institution. It antagonizes every government that it can not control." The Doctor then pictured out how things would be should every candidate for admission to the church be compelled to give passwords and go through the lodge room ordeal. If it be true that Arganism, Mohammedanism, Jesuitism, [Utah] Mormonism, and all other paganisms are lodges, the inference was left that secret societies are false religions. The Doctor then averred that lodge despotism is the worst subjection of man to man that fiends ever devised. The Grand Lodge is completely despotic. There is no appeal from the decision of its Powderly says that all that "we require is secrecy, obedience and assistance." The Doctor descanted on the word obedience, saying that lately Powderly had been made absolute dictator. These types were considered the outcropping of Asiatic and African systems and a departure from the altar of God. Cain gave the Masonic offering. The religions that have no Messiah have no God. There is no way save through Christ. There is something that charms the members of these false religions as the snake charms its victims, blinding them to the real things of God, and the devil was described as the one from whom this charm proceeds. The Doctor closed his address with a final appeal to the listeners to have naught to do with what he described as the unclean things. He went to Monmouth to-day.

Dr. Blanchard was not at his best, and at times he wandered. By many of his listeners his utterances were deemed extreme, and not altogether charitable.—Sel.

AARON ELLIS in "Bible vs. Tradition," speaking to Protestant orthodoxy says: "Full well do ye follow the traditions of your fathers; well may you call the church of Rome the 'mother church;' and by following her cunningly devised fables, too truly do ye prove yourselves to be the legitimate daughters of the 'mother of harlots,' 'the false ptophets,' or the false propounders of doctrine, that should deceive God's people.

THE GOSPEL RESTORED.

BY SR. AMY A. CHACE

Tune: "Oh, say, have you heard of those Mansions of Light."

Oh, say, have you heard of the gospel restored? They say it is taught as of old:— An angel has come from the courts of the Lord, Its precepts and truths to unfold. Oh, yes, we have heard that an angel of light Has flown through the bright starry dome, Saying, Fear ye the Lord and give glory to Him, The hour of his Judgment is come

Chorus :--

'Tis the way, yes, the only true way:—Revealed in this great latter day. The blessings and gifts follow now as before, All those who believe and obey.

Oh, where may this glorious gospel be found? By what are its principles known? Is there anything special or new in its sound, Peculiar or strange in its tone? Oh, yes, 'tis the faith once revealed to the Saints When Jesus was here among men; The spirit and power which they then received, Are sent to believers again.

Chorus:-

'Tis the Kingdom of God on the earth,' By Joseph the Prophet brought forth; The wonders and signs follow now as before, All those who receive the new birth.

Oh, what is this Kingdom and who is the King, And how may an entrance be gained? Must laws be complied with, commandments obeyed, Ere pardon and peace be obtained?
Yes, faith and repentance and baptism too:
And these with the ancients, sufficed To open the door of the Kingdom to them-The King is our Savior, the Christ.

Chorus:-

'Tis the faith that's foretold in the word Should in the last days be restored; Apostles and prophets are now, as before, Sent forth and empowered of God.

Oh, who may these wonderful blessings receive? To whom are the promises sent? Will no other way serve to open the door Except to believe and repent?
No; there is no other way known unto men, No name, neither creed nor belief; Whose climbeth up any other, saith Christ, The same is a robber and thief.

'Tis to kindreds and peoples and all, Let nations and tongues hear the call, The promise is yours, to your children and

And all whom Jehovah shall call.

Oh, when will the day of redemption begin To dawn on our wandering eyes?
Will Jesus descend to this purified earth,
Or dwell with his saluts in the skies? Oh! joy, joy unspeakable! Jesus will come; He'll come to his temple and throne; He'll come in the clouds with his ten thousand saints, And gather together his own.

Chorus:--

Yes, the scattered and lost shall return, The wicked as stubble shall burn, The poor among men shall rejoice in the Lord, The murmurer doctrine shall learn

The knowledge of God will then cover the earth, The lion and lamb dwell in peace, No foe shall molest, neither hurt nor destroy, The joys of the meek shall increase. Arise, then, and shine, for thy glory is come, Oh, beautiful city of God! Let Eden rejoice, for the curse is removed, And her primitive beauty restored.

Chorus:-

Saints of God, dry your fast flowing tears; The day of deliverance nears; The signs of the times plainly show it is nigh-The glorious one thousand years.

DIED.

GLADWIN.—Near Council Bluffs, Iowa, of putrid sore throat, January 2d, 1889, Olive May, beloved daughter of Bro. Walter and Sr. Hannah Gladwin, aged 5 years, 11 months and 14 days. Services by Elder D. K. Dodson.

Sweet and pure as blooms the lily, God has taken her to rest, There to join her cousin Willie, With the angels and the blest.

DACK.—At Sweet Home, Missouri, December 11th, 1888, Sr. Caroline, wife of Bro. James Dack. She was born November 16th, 1855, at Provo City, Utah, and at her death was aged 33 years and 25 days. She was a kind mother, a good neighbor and none knew her but to love her. She leaves a mother, husband, one sister, three brothers and nine children. They mourn but not as those without hope.

Voice that on earth will come no more,
Save in the dreams of night;
As echoes from the far off shore,
With happy thoughts of days before,
Long vanished from our sight. Long vanished from our signt.
Then come we from the grave away,
But not without bright hope
That he who in the former day
Through this dark valley showed the way,
Will raise our treasure up.

HARRINGTON .- Bertha May Harrington daughter of Cyrus and Anna Harrington, born November 14th, 1879, died August 16th 1888, of typhold fever. Funeral services by Elder W.

W. Blair at Tabor, Iowa.

To our dear little Bertha
We bid a brief farewell;
Her body in the grave must rest,
Her soul in glory dwell;
Though with the falling autumn leaves
Her spirit passed away. Her spirit passed away, We trust to meet our darling In the resurrection day

THURSTON.—Albert V. Thurston was born in Lagrange county, Indiana, September 18th, 1852; was baptized and confirmed September 16th, 1853, at Galien, Michigan; and died in Baker township, York county, Nebraska, December 20th, 1888, aged 36 years, 3 months and 2 days.

TRUMAN.—Near Pleasanton, Decatur county, Iowa, January 11th, 1889, Bro. William A. Truman, of dropsy, after suffering in patience during the past three years. He fell asleep without a struggle. His earthly pilgrimage was 36 years, 5 months and 27 days. He leaves a wife and six children, and a host of relatives and friends. He was baptized July 16th, 1871, by Elder A. W. Moffet. Funeral sermon at the house by Elder Robert M. Elvin, from Hosea 13:14. Another faithful Saint has gone to rest.

METHODIST CRITICISMS.

THE Michigan Christian Advocate, in its issue for last December 22d, is sorely troubled over the progress made by the Latter Day Saints in the midst of Michigan and the Methodist denomination. It may be very painful to that editor, but undoubtedly it is very delightful to the converts. For, to a people who have been starving on the chaff of sectarianism, the "sincere milk of the word," attended by the enlightening, gladdening Spirit of God, must be like life from the dead, and we are only sorry that the editor and his co-religionists can't-or won't-receive it. Let us now listen to the woeful lamentation of this Methodist quill-driver, and at the same time turn the light in upon his logic and theology:

"LATTER DAY SAINTS.

"A member of the Detroit conference writes us that certain people styling themselves 'the Latter Day Saints' are working ruin among the people of his charge. He sends us one of the cheaply printed tracts which they are circulating. It is called "The Gospel," but about all the gospel there is in it is perverted to sectarian use. It announces that one of the first principles of the gospel is 'the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost by those having authority;' and of course these 'Latter Day Saints' claim to have the authority."

If the "laying on of hands" is not one of "the principles" of the gospel or doctrine of Christ, then the New Testament is false, and Paul, instead of being an apostle of righteousness was an imposter. In his letter to the Hebrews, 6:1, 2, that apostle in setting forth "the principles of the doctrine of Christ" asserts that "the doctrine of . . . laying on of hands" is one of them. And to this agree numerous statements in the New Testament as may be seen by consulting Acts 8:17; 9: 12, 17, 18; 19:6, etc., etc.

Church history, for the first three centuries after Christ, proves that the doctrine and its practice were had among the faithful early Christians. Moshiem says of the first century,-"The remission of sins was thought to be baptism's immediate and happy fruit; while the bishop, by prayer and laying on of hands, was supposed to confer those sanctifying gifts of the Holy Ghost, which are necessary to a life of righteousness and virtue."-Book 1, part 2, chapter 4, verse 4.

Tertullian, one of the early Fathers of the church, who ministered during the close of the second and beginning of the third centuries has this to say: "In the next place the hand is laid on us invoking and inviting the Holy Spirit."-Epistle on Baptism, chap. 8. Also: "After baptism succeeds the laying on of hands, with praver, calling for the Holy Ghost.'

Jenks, in his Comprehensive Commentary says: "The apostles seem to have laid down a rule, that after being baptized, the proselytes should have the laying on of hands, accompanied with prayer, in order to their receiving the gifts of the Holy Spirit."

In "The Ante-Nicene Fathers," vol. 5, page 669, the teaching of one of early writers of the church is recorded thus: "By imposition of the bishop's hands the Holy Spirit is given to every one that believes, as in the case of the Samaritans."

In all this, history agrees with the Bible and proves that the Christian Advocate, professing to advocate Christianity, flatly contradicts Christian doctrine as taught by Christ's apostles and their followers.

If the Latter Day Saints have divine authority to preach the gospel in its completeness, they doubtless have proper authority to administer its ordinances and ceremonies. And one of the best evidences that they have such authority is seen in the fact that they teach the gospel and administer its ordinances according to the New Testament pattern "without preferring one before another, doing nothing by partiality;" and it is also seen in the fact that God approves their ministrations in word and ordinance by "confirming the word with signs following."

We would remind our Methodist oracle, that the early Methodists, including the Wesleys and others, founders of that body, believed in and taught the need and coming of a divinely "called" and "sent" ministry in the Church of God. Here is one of their first and most Scriptural songs, which is right to the point:

- 1 Almighty God of love, Set up th' attracting sign, And summon whom thou dost approve For messengers divine.
- 2 From favored Abrah'm's seed The new apostles choose,

- In isles and continents to spread The soul-reviving news.
- O send thy servants forth,
  To call the Hebrews home!
  From East, and West, and South, and North,
  Let all the wand rers come:
- With Israel's myriads sealed, Let all the nations meet, And show the mystery fulfilled, The family complete!

-- C. Wesley.

The Advocate goes further and says of our gospel tract:

"It next announces that one of the Scriptural terms of salvation is 'to be baptized in water for the remission of sins.' This means spiritual cleansing by physical plunging, and the proposition itself ought to brand its exponents as Scriptural falsifiers It next proposes that 'the true mode of baptism is by immersion, or being buried in water,' which can not be proved either by Scripture or reason. Immersion is a mode of baptism, but not the only mode. It next announces that infant baptism is unnecessary and un-Scriptural, but it gives no Scripture for its assertion, because it can't."

Hold! Mr. Advocate; not quite so fast. You statement that "to be baptized in water for the remission of sins . means spiritual cleansing by physical plunging" may be very flippant and funny, but no such sentiment has at any time been taught by either latter day or former day Saints. It can not be found that they ever held that immersion, plunging, or dipping by accident or for mere bathing purposes, or without faith in the gospel of Christ and divine authority to administer such immersion was of value and force in procuring "spiritual" cleansing. But, on the contrary, they have always held that God, in the gospel plan, made and makes immersion in water "for the remission of sins" a means of cleansing from sin to all who hear, believe and obey that gospel, just as He made looking upon the brazen serpent the means of healing the serpent-bitten Israelites, (Num. 21:8, 9; with John 3:14, 15), or compassing the walls of Jericho with the ark by the seven priests with seven rams' horns, for seven consecutive days, the last day seven times, and that to be followed by "a long blast with the ram's horn" and the "great shout" of the children of Israel, the means for the overthrow of Jericho (Josh. chap. 6), or that the dipping seven times in Jordan was the means appointed of God for cleansing Naaman the Syrian, (2 Kings, They hold that the virtue in chap. 5). all these instances consisted in the faithful keeping of the commandments of God pertaining to each case. God has ordained baptism by immersion as a means of cleansing from sin, to all who intelligently believe the preached gospel and repent of their sins, and it remains for man to accept it and be blessed, or reject it and be condemned. And as to the mode of baptism, immersion is the mode, and the only mode known to the Scriptures. John the Baptist, who was "sent of God" to prepare the way of the Lord and "make his paths straight," administered baptism by immersion, for it is recorded of him that he "was also baptizing in Enon, near to Salim, because there was much water there." John 3:5, 24. Immersion requires "much water," but neither sprinkling nor pouring do. And Paul who said, "Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed" (Gal. 1:8), says of baptism, "We are buried with him [Christ] by baptism." -Rom. 6:4. Man can not be thus "buried" by sprinkling or pouring, but only by immersion. And the apostle repeats this testimony when he says, "Buried with him [Christ] in baptism, wherein [in baptism] ye are also risen with him through the faith of the operation of God, who hath raised him from the dead."-Col. 2:12. Mark it well, Mr. Advocate, for Paul held that, being "buried with" Christ "in baptism" and "risen with him" in that ordinance, was "the operation," act, process, or method appointed of God. And it was not a faith, but "the faith" of the former day Saints in that "operation" that brought them into covenant relations with Christ as their Savior, and made them "heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ." And now the latter day Saints believe and teach the very same doctrine and are called heretics and apostates because of it!

Moshiem, a most eminent church historian, says of the first century after Christ: "The sacrament of baptism was administered in this century, without the public assemblies, in places appointed and prepared for that purpose, and was performed by an immersion of the whole body in the baptismal font."

The learned Beza, of the sixteenth century says: "Christ commanded us to be baptized, by which it is certain that immersion is signified."

John Wesley, in his note on Romans 6:4, says Paul in this text refers to immersion, which was the mode of baptism practiced in the primitive church. And the late Charles Anthon, Professor of languages in Columbia College, New York, said: "The primary meaning of the word [baptizo] is to dip or immerse; and its secondary meaning, if it ever had any, all refer, in some way or other, to the same leading idea. Sprinkling, etc., are entirely out of the question."

Salmasius says in his work, page 669, "Baptism is immersion, and was administered in former times according to the force and meaning of the word." And all this, very clear and conclusive, is not a tithe of the direct evidence supportive of baptism by immersion only.

The facts are, that in the wholesale apostacy from primitive Christianity, the people, as foretold of God through Isaiah, "transgressed the laws, changed the ordinance [and have] broken the everlasting [gospel] covenant."—Isa. 24:5.

And as to "infant baptism," the Saints claim it is not only "unnecessary and un-Scriptural," but that it is vain and sinful, for the gospel applies only to those who are able to hear, believe, repent and obey the gospel, and infants are not competent to fulfill either of these requirements.

Besides this, baptism is "for the remission of sins" (Mark 1:4; Luke 3:3; Acts 2:38), to "sanctify and cleanse" the church "with the washing of water by the word" (Eph. 5:26), and is "the answer of a good conscience toward God," (1 Peter 3:21), all of which does not pertain to sinless, unreasoning infants, but to those who transgress law, (1 John 3:4; James 4:17; John 8:34 and 9:41), and are capable and willing to repent of their sins. (Acts 2:38; 17:30; Mark 1:15; Luke 13:13, etc.

Authentic history records that Neander, in his Apostolic Age, volume 1, page 140, says: "It can not possibly be proved that infant baptism was practiced in the apostolic age;" and Luther said, "It can not be proved by the sacred Scriptures that infant baptism was instituted by Christ, or that it was begun by the first Christians after the apostles; while Moshiem says, "The persons that were to be baptized, after they had confessed and renounced their sins, [neither of which can infants do], . . . were immersed under water." etc., etc. Second Century 4:13. Infant baptism is a "changed" form, both as to the subjects, the objects and the mode of that beautiful, significant, and essential Christian ordinance. baptism, and has no higher authority for its origin and administration than an apostate and darkened church, and therefore should be rejected and shunned.

The Advocate goes on further to say of the church tract:

"Finally, it claims that 'the holy priesthood has been lost,' but 'is now restored to the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints.' 'The angel has flown through the heavens,' it says, 'bent his way to earth, brought the everlasting gospel, and commissioned men once more to preach.' wonder what part of the heavens that particular. angel flew through, when did he bend his way to this footstool, and where did he light? And did he look like 'a Latter Day Saint?' While at Fort Bridger, Utah, in 1865, we saw some of these so-called Saints fresh from Salt Lake. They came to sell to us soldiers their fruit and produce. But they didn't look like Saints, and their produce was not very Saintly, neither were their prices, unless it be in the one particular that the prices were high up. Unless the Michigan Saints are more Saintly than the Utah chaps, we should hate to have them lay hands on us for the gift of the Holy Ghost, or for any other purpose. This tract enumerates as the privileges of the Saints through plunging and laying on of hands, the following: 'Gifts of revelations, prophecy, visions, the ministering of angels, healing the sick by the laying on of hands, speaking in new tongues and interpreting them, the working of miracles, and, in short, all the gifts as mentioned in Scripture, or as enjoyed by the ancient Saints.' That is fine.

"When these saintly folks have turned the world upside down we shall have marvelous things revealed to us, startle our fellows with wonderful prophecies, see strange visions by day as well as by night, chat with the angels, raise up the sick with a touch, speak forty different languages with more glibness than did the workers on Babel's tower, and work signs and miracles such as have not been known since the foundation of the world. No telling what a full-blooded American will do when once possessed of the miracle-working power. A suspension bridge across Lake Michigan or the Atlantic ocean will be no trick at all. Turning fools into philosophers will be only a pastime. If anything will stick him it will be to make sober sensible people out of those who are carried away by such vain and silly pretensions as these of the Latter Day Saints. Seriously, it seems almost incredible that right here in Michigan the. populace can be swayed by such foul winds of doctrine. What are intelligent folks thinking about? Are superstition and fanatical bluster to have another reign? Is popular and religious education a failure? Certainly, only the most ignorant or morally erratic can be fired with enthusiasm for such an ism as this of these latter day ranters. The whole thing illustrates the Scripture prophecy that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits, etc."

To the above we reply first, that the fact of there having been no preaching the gospel in its completeness as found in the New Testament, no organization of the church in full keeping with its patterns, no administration of the ordinances of the primitive church, and no spiritual "signs" and "gifts" such as are found to distinguish and bless that church, affords conclusive proof of a loss of priesthood authority and power, for the Lord promised, under the gospel order, to confirm the ministrations of his servants "with signs following them that believe."—Mark 16: 17, 18, etc.

And as to the fact that the angel (of Revelation 14:6-8) having come and committed the gospel to the church of the Saints, all the evidence that is needed is found among the Saints, for they teach and administer precisely as did Jesus and his New Testament servants, and "the word" is "confirmed" in their midst as at the first, where there is faithful, fervent service toward God. Furthermore, "the signs of the times" prove that now is the time when "this gospel of the kingdom" should be found among all nations. Matt. 24:14.

As to "the Utah chaps," they must answer for themselves. We have no church affiliation with them.

The sarcasm of the Advocate is too transparent to need a reply, for it is evidently used in place of scriptural argument, the latter being impossible, and is equalled only by a similar class who derided the spiritual manifestations had in New Testament times and later.

And finally, if any of the Latter Day Saints depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits," etc., as charged by the Advocate, it is no more than what God, by his servants, declared "some" of them would do in these "latter times." I Tim. 4: 1-3. But this proves too much for the arguments of the Advocate; for when it is proven that any of the Latter

Day Saints "depart from the faith," that fact proves that "the faith" from which they "depart" is the true "faith," or plan of salvation, such as was had and taught and enjoyed by the first Christians. They could not "depart from the faith" until they first embraced and possessed it. Many thousands of the Latter Day Saints since 1830 did "depart from the faith" they at first received and as is contained in the authentic and publicly authorized standard books of the church, some of whom fulfil Paul's striking prediction concerning the wretched latter-day apostasy. We do not charge that the Methodist people have ever fulfilled that prophecy, or that they ever will, for "the faith" as taught and possessed by Paul and his fel-low Saints is widely different from that taught and possessed by the Methodists. And in saying this we mean no disrespect to the latter. They are an excellent people in many ways, and we would not, if we could, detract the least from their worth and worthiness. But "the faith" preached and possessed by Paul and the Saints of his times and that had by our Methodist friends are not the same in many points, and none knew that better than the Wesleys and first members of that society, hence they sang and preached of the restoration of the gospel and the direct call of God to his ministry under that order, as before seen.

CONSTITUTION TINKERS.

THE Battle Creek, (Michigan) Daily Journal is out in an elaborate criticism of the "Blair Educational Amendment" and claims that, properly, it should be entitled "Blair's Religious Amendment to the Constitution of the United States," it being just that in essence.

Section 2 provides that "Each state in this Union shall establish and maintain a system of free public schools adequate for the education of all the children living therein, between the ages of six and sixteen years, inclusive, in the common branches of knowledge, and in virtue, morality and the principles of the Christian religion." It fails, however, to define and provide for the particular kind, class, system or creed of that variously interpreted, numerously divided and subdivided "religion," or the sect, synod, convocation, council, or other standard by which to measure and decide just what that "religion" is and should be in which the American youth would be educated in case the said amendment became the supreme law of the land. Shall they be taught "the principles of the Christian religion" as defined by the Pope of Rome and his Cardinals? or those set forth respectively by the Methodists, Calvinists, Congregationalists, Universalists, Baptists, Agnostics, Lutherans, Swedenborgians, Adventists, Campbellites, Episcopalians, or Latter Day Saints-which! Here is a huge difficulty, a veritable Alps to surmount, which the proposed amendment does not provide for. And if it furnished a fixed criterion by which "the principles of the Christian religion" were to be defined and established, would not that amendment then be, in effect, and in fact, a law respecting an establishment of religion—the very thing already forbidden by the Constitution? We think so; for that instrument provides thus: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." The Christian religion, and every religion that professes that name, also all other forms, of whatever nature, can not be established under and by virtue of national law, yet all must be alike tolerated and protected so long as they are not in conflict with the letter and spirit of the laws of the land. Church and State must forever be separate and apart from each other so far as the laws of our nation are concerned. Nothing would disrupt and destroy our nation so certainly and speedily as the enforced establishment of any system, creed, or form of religion, under whatever guise or pre-

The Latter Day Saints should not be at a moment's loss to decide where they ought to stand on these matters; for in that book which contains the authentic and authoritative doctrines and covenants of the church, publicly endorsed by the "common consent" of the church and officially promulgated to the church and the world, it is clearly set forth that, the Constitution of our nation is a document inspired of God, and that, therefore, whatever conflicts with it is not of God nor for the good of the people. In that book the Lord says: "It is my will that my people should observe to do all those things whatsoever I command them, and that law of the land which is constitutional, supporting that principle of freedom in maintaining rights and privileges [which] belong to all mankind and is justifiable before me; therefore I, the Lord, justify you, and your brethren of my church, in befriending that law which is the constitutional law of the land; and as pertaining to the law of man, whatsoever is more or less than these, [different to, or in conflict with, Ed.,] cometh of evil."—Doc. & Cov. 95:2.

And further:

"Importune for redress and redemption by the hands of those who are placed as rulers, and are in authority over you, according to the laws and constitution of the people which I have suffered to be established and should be maintained for the rights and protection of all flesh, according to just and holy principles, that every man may act in doctrine and principle pertaining to futurity according to the moral agency which I have given unto them, that every man may be accountable for his sins in the day of judgment. Therefore, it is not right that any man should be in bondage one to another. And for this purpose have I established the Constitution of this land by the hands of wise men whom I raised up unto this very purpose and redeemed the land by the shedding of blood."-Doc. & Cov. 98: 10. From these extracts it is seen that the Lord requires His people to befriend and support the Constitution and the laws thereunder, to honor and uphold those" placed as rulers and are in authority over" them, to "importune" such officers "for redress and redemption," also that He wills that "every man may act in doctrine and principle pertaining to futurity, [matters of religion, Ed.] according to the moral agency" which he has given them, "that every man may be accountable for his own sins in the day of judgment," and that all this was designed and purposed by Him when He "established the Constitution of this land." Therefore the Constitution should have no amendments that in any way conflict with its provisions, or would in the least pervert its present manifest intent and meaning. The Saints should heartily sustain the Constitution as it is and oppose everything in conflict with it.

W. W. BLAIR'S EXPLANATION.

THE idea has obtained with some of the church, in some places, that Elder W. W. Blair has measurably lost zeal and faithfulness in the work of God and the interests of His church, and that the proof of it is seen in the fact that, in the spring of 1885, he embarked, with others, in temporal business-merchandise-and has continued in it [as a silent partner.—ED.] ever since. In reply the said W. W. Blair has this to say: I, that he did not engage in business with any thought that it would give offense to any, or that it would lessen his usefulness in the Church of God, or become a stumbling-block even to the weakest. For he is aware that Christ demands of him, with all others of his disciples, that degree of self-denial that shall promote the best interests of all and glorify the blessed Master; also that the Holy Scriptures teach that the faithful minister for Christ should say with Paul: "If meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend," (1 Cor. 8:13), and, "It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is made weak," (Rom. 14:21); and, further, to "Give none offense, neither to the Jews, nor to the Gentiles, nor to the Church of God." -1 Cor. 10:32. And 2, this mercantile venture was entered upon not from morbid, selfish motives, but purely and solely for the purpose of making business for sons who, without that or something of the kind, were liable to drift out and away from home, and church, and their influen-

Furthermore, and in order to a proper understanding of the matter, it should be borne in mind that Elder Blair laid aside all business affairs the first of April, 1859, and devoted his labors entirely to the ministry, chiefly abroad from home, till 1885, and therefore for twenty-six years had not furnished any settled business for his sons, the youngest of whom was then approaching manhood; and that he hoped by enlisting in a business venture, by means of which they could be brought into favorable connection with the business world, he could, in a measure, compensate them for lack of paternal aid in furnishing them opportunities and assistance in temporal matters.

We are not aware of any law of God or man that prohibits any minister engaging in any legitimate, proper business pursuit, provided it does not in any way interfere with his ministerial duties and covenants.

And now, lest there be further offense, jealousy, or stumbling over that matter, also to silence the tongue of the gossiper and busybody, and further, to honor God and exemplify the spirit and letter of the gospel of Christ, Elder Blair has decided to dispose of his partnership interests in the firm of Blair, Bell & Co., at no distant time, and give his sole attention, in thought and deed, to forward the interests of the Church of Christ in all the world.

REV. ARTHUR E. WHATHAM.

THE following clipping is sent us from an Ontario paper:

"Mormonism. - The following letter from Rev. Arthur E. Whatham, missionary at Cardiff and Monmouth, appeared in the Toronto Mail:-Sir,-Some time since I published in the Toronto and local papers a challenge I had forwarded to the official paper of the Reorganized Church of the Latter. Day Saints, published at Lamoni, Iowa. The nature of the challenge was a debate between myself and that paper on the truth of their theological teaching as compared with the Bible. The merits of the debate to be judged by two professors of divinity belonging to the Church of England and two ditto of the Saints. I was induced to take this step owing to an elder of the Saints coming into this back country to make converts for his church. I accused this elder of bringing strange gospel to people quite unable to answer his argument. Whereupon he affirmed he would debate the correctness of his teaching before any audience I chose, either in Toronto or Petersborough. I have just received a reply from the editor of the Saints Herald, Joseph Smith, son of the supposed prophet and seer who found the 'Book of Mormon,' refusing my challenge. Evidently the son of the 'prophet' fears a thorough investigation into the truth of the Saints' teaching by competent divinity scholars. The provost of Trinity College Toronto, had consented to act as one of the judges. It may be well for your readers to know the Saints refuted to have their teaching investigated, and also well for the Saints that they have refused."

Of it we have to say: Rev. Whatham engaged in a controversy with Elder W. J. Smith; and not being successful in causing Bro. Smith to abandon his field, he made a challenge to discuss in the HER-ALD, the merits of which discussion were to be determined by two chosen by either side. We replied to the reverned gentleman that as the field of controversy in which he was personally interested lay in Ontario, it would seem to us more necessay to keep the issue there; and that our work there was in the hands of Brn. Lake and Smith to whom he was referred. We sent Rev. Whatham's challenge to Bro. Smith, leaving the decision as to the propriety of discussion with those in the field there, of which we have not heard.

Rev. Whatham errs when he assumes that "the son of the prophet," "fears a thorough investigation into the truth of the Saints' teaching." The only hesitancy on the part of the "son of the prophet" was as to the propriety, or necessity of a discussion such as Rev. Whatham proposed, in the Herald, under the circumstances. Of the propriety and necessity of such discussion we deemed Brn. John H. Lake and W. J. Smith to be the proper judges, they being in the field where this challenger is at work in his missionary work.

"AUTUMN LEAVES."

This valuable magazine has entered promisingly upon its second year, and the first number for 1889 has been in the hands of its patrons sufficiently long for them to form something of an opinion as to its merits, future prospects and promises. It is filling, admirably, a want long felt in the church, and we confidently expect it to keep well to the front in its chosen field and supply that kind of literature to its readers that will enlighten, elevate and cheer all who peruse its pages. We are well acquainted, personally, with its editor, and most heartily, cheerfully recommend her as possessing, in an eminent degree, those indispensible qualifications requisite in furnishing its readers with a superior class of reading matter for the future. Her zeal and toil and self-denial in seeking to forward the interests of the Church of God and the wellbeing of society are entirely befitting the work she has in hand, and all who can should assist and sustain her in her efforts. Like every work ordained of God, and wisely designed for good, it is growing in many directions, and we trust it is destined to continue, indefinitely, a potent means to help forward the cause of Christ and humanity. Its editor suggests that we say to all who desire to subscribe for it, that they can do so and pay for it at their earliest convenience during the present year—the earlier the better, of course.

All letters containing subscriptions should be sent to D. Dancer, box 128, Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa; and all contributions to the magazine should be sent to Mrs. M. Walker, same address.

THE Colorado Springs Republic of January 11th, contains the following:

THE LATTER DAY SAINTS.

I have recently returned from a visit to Manitou Park, whither I had gone as a representative of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints. I delivered about thirty discourses in Manitou Park, illustrative of the faith and religious practices of the above named church. I ask the privilege of saying through your columns that the practice of and belief in polygamy belongs to the Utah Mormons only. Polygamy is a departure from the original tenets of the Church of Latter Day Saints. The discipline of our church is opposed to polygamy and kindred evils and is in favor of loyalty to existing governments. In view of these facts we think persistent efforts to make these churches identical is unjust, especially in view of the fact that the Reorganized Church has for the last quarter of a century supported a mission in Utah in opposition to polygamy.

If desired, tracts and books explanatory of our faith may be had on application to Joseph Smith, Lamoni, Iowa.

Respectfully,

JAMES CAFFALL.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

J. J. Phare, Esq., a friend we met in Utah, one worthy to be called a large hearted, liberal spirited Methodist, sent not long ago for the notorious "Manuscript Found," by Rev. Solomon Spaulding, and he now orders others for some of his friends and says:

"The copy I have excites considerable curiosity and no little astonishment. I imagine the enemies of your church are somewhat "set aback;" but it will never do to give in, you know, we must trump up a transcript, or something, sure!"

Bro. J. W. Roberts, of Rogers, Texas, writes that he appreciates the light and blessings conveyed to him in the latter day work, and desires to endure and overcome. Referring to the Moore-Brown discussion he wrote:

"Brown's foundation was built of such poor material that it would not stand the test. However, he rallied on the old plan of slander, but truth prevailed and triumphed to the confirmation of the Saints in their faith. The gospel is gaining ground here."

EDITORIAL ITEMS

By letter just received from Bro. H. P. Brown, of Oakland, California, we learn that he had a severe stroke of paralysis the 14th of last December which prostrated him and prevented his getting out the December issue of the Expositor. He is now gradually recovering and hopes to resume his work on his paper at an early time, but does not intend to publish any more after No. 12.

In the last clause of the address of Bro. R. Etzenhuser to the Fifth Quorum of Elders in HERALD of January 19th, it should read, "There is room for two or three workers," etc.

Bro. G. Jensen writes from Mott, Indiana, that the word of life is being declared in that place by Brn. J. M. and M. R. Scott and the people are considerably interested in it. He also states that our cause is moving forward in southern Indiana. Bro. Jenkins moved into the town of Mott and at once began to acquaint his neighbors with the faith. We hope he will see the fruits of his labors.

Bro. John H. Gough, an aged but devoted brother, whose address is Rolla, Phelps county, Missouri, in a recent letter expresses the belief that if a competent elder would labor in that vicinity, that his relatives, children and grandchildren, would investigate, and he hopes, accept the faith.

Sr. Julia A. Tucker, writing from Brookston, Texas, January 14th, renews for the Herald and takes occasion to say that in a visit made to Vernon county, Missouri, during the holidays, she was greatly pleased with that country, and intends to remove there when she can sell her property. She expresses the belief that the reason why many farmers in that region want to sell their farms is, because the Lord is making room for the settlement of His people in those parts.

L. D. Hickey, who claims to be a representative elder of Strangism as it was, preached in the brick church at Lamoni on Monday evening of the 21st inst, setting forth his views on a great variety of subjects. Among other things he gave his hearers to understand that he was not passioately in love with our national government. We fail to see how any one claiming to be a Latter Day Saint and a believer in the revelations given to Joseph Smith the Seer can entertain any but the most loyal sentiments to the constitution, and the authority of our heaven-founded nation. We recognize the right of every person to endorse and promulgate such religious and political views as they may choose, so they do not conflict with the rights and best interests of others; but we are confident that Elder Hickey will find few, if any, among the "Josephites" who will endorse his peculiar notions.

We were pleased the morning of the 24th inst. to receive a cheerful call from Bro. Joseph Trout, of Grand Rapids, Michigan. We knew him many years ago at Sandwich, Illinois, when he was entering upon the active duties of manhood. We are glad to learn that fortune has favored his active efforts in life, and that he is now pleasantly settled with his family in the progressive city of Grand Rapids.

Bro. David Dancer has been confined to his bed for the last ten days or more with a severe attack of sciatica. He is now, we are glad to say, steadily recovering, and we hope to see him about again as usual at an early time. The mild and open winter thus far, has caused not a little rheumatic affection to prevail in this section.

We can not at present fill orders for the Life of Joseph the Prophet by Tullidge, or the $1.50 edition of the Book of Mormon. Please order the cheaper editions of the latter for some time to come.

Below will be found an item from the Publishers of the Lamoni Patriot, which speaks for itself:

Mothers' Kome Column.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"Lo, in the midst, with the same look he wore, Healing and blessing on Geneseret's shore; Folding together, with the all-tender might Of his great love, the dark hands with the white, Stands the Consoler, soothing every pain, Making all burdens light, and breaking every chain."

AN OPEN LETTER TO A FRIEND. (Continued.)

Because of your permission, dear L-, and with gratitude to God that he is speaking to your soul through your great affliction, and with the full assurance that he will-if you will permit him-pour oil into every wound and cause you to rejoice in that which now troubles you, I resume my pen for the purpose indicated in my last. He who said: "I am the resurrection and the life," is the same who said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life." If in your early days you were led to stumble and turn aside from the truth because of wrong done you by those who professed to be his followers, the blame is not theirs only, but is yours as well. You have studied history, both sacred and profane, and from the first page to the last there is but One who ever received the endorsement of heaven to all his teachings. "Hear ye him," was the divine command concerning him, before he entered upon his ministry; and from that time unto the time of his return into heaven the Father manifested through him his divine attributes, in order that we might know God through his Son whom he has sent into the world. Go with him in his ministry during the three years he was here upon earth; study his character, weigh his words; and when in any word or act of that model you can find evil or wrong, then, and not until then, will you have any justification for doing wrong because another did the same, or for turning from the truth because of the evil you found in those who profess to be followers of the truth. Remember that all men are free agents to chose for themselves whether they will do good or evil; and God can not deal with them upon any principle which excludes this agency. When those of whom you spoke did you the great wrong, why should you not have said "Christ taught that our lives should be governed by a pure morality, principles of love, mercy, justice and truth; all the actions of these men are contrary to such teachings, therefore they are not his disciples, but are hypocrites-wolves in sheep's clothing.

Pause for a moment and see the injustice of the conclusion to which you came, and the results which have accrued to others from your following out in your life the unjust conclusion to which you did come. You said: "These men profess the religion of Jesus. They are bad men, therefore their religion is false." Do not deem me harsh in my judgment, dear friend. I do not mean to say that you viewed it in this light, or realized the injustice of your judgment when you condemned the pure principles of the gospel of Christ, instead of condemning the wicked actions of men, and came to the conclusion that there was no God, no Savior, no religion, because you had proven a few individuals to be base hypocrites. It is true they wore the garb of religion and had it always on their tongue; but had you sought farther you might have found, even among men, those who were not hypocrites-those whose lives were an example of the faith they professed. But neither the example of good, nor the want of the example found in man, will ever avail you or me in the day of judgment. To us God gave his Son for an example, and the Son has said, "This is the way, walk ye in it." The Exemplar is perfect, the way, is perfect, and they who walk therein, and are faithful unto the end, shall inherit eternal life, and come forth in the first resurrection. or the resurrection of the just, and upon such the second death shall have no power; but unto those who have said "Lord, Lord," and have not done the Lord's will, there is reserved a second death.

You tell me that even if you could have back your old falth, your firm unshaken confidence in God and the atonement of Christ, you would even then not know what to do, since there are so many conflicting creeds in the world-so many who believe doctrines which are utterly opposed to each other, and yet all claim to get their authority from the Bible. Here again, dear L-, we are safe only in following Christ. Of his teachings he said: "My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me. If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself." These words are not idle. They have been tested and proven by thousands who are his witnesses upon the earth to-day, and by hundreds of thousands who have passed from earth to join that company which no man can number.

When the mission of Christ to earth was finished, and he was about to depart and be with the Father, he promised his sorrowing disciples to be with them to the end of the world. Not bodily, for they afterwards saw him in full possession of his resurrected body taken up into heaven, until a cloud received him from their sight; but by the power of his Holy Spirit-that other Comforter which he had promised to send -which, if he went not away would not come, but which he would send when he went to the Father. There was a work for this other Comforter to do, and the ministry in the early church seemed to fully understand its nature. And now, dear L-, let me have your closest attention to the one part of that work which at this time most nearly interests you and me.

The disciples who had been with Jesus during all his ministry, were told by him that that they should receive power after the Holy Ghost (or Comforter) was come upon them, and they should be witnesses unto him in Jerusalem, Judea, and in Samaria, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth; but he charged them to tarry at Ierusalem until they were prepared for this work which lay before them to do. Do you ask if it was not preparation enough that they had been with him during all his ministry; had seen the mighty works which he had done; had seen him die upon the cross and his dead body taken down and laid away in the tomb, the door of which ewas sealed and guarded by soldiers of Rome? Nor this alone; but they had seen him after his resurrection; had eaten with him, and he had instructed them, during forty days, of things pertaining to the kingdom of God. Surely I hear you say, "If that would not qualify them to be his witnesses, what could?

Remember, dear L, that obedience is the one thing required of man. It is God's right to command, and the duty of man to obey; and I trust presently to be able to show you that they were then not qualified for the work before them. To be his witness, was to be prepared to declare the doctrine he had taught, his death and resurretion from the dead, his ascension into heaven, his second coming, and the eternal judgment which all men shall receive. I have not the least idea that any one of these men doubted in his soul one single point of doctrine the Lord had taught. Of his life and death they had been eye-witnesses; and could they doubt his resurrection, when day after day he had been with them, talking with them and opening the Scriptures to their unerstanding? Surely not. Neither do I believe that they had a doubt of that which he told them of the future; and yet, I repeat, they were not qualified for the work before them. They were to be his witnesses, but there was to be another, and these men were to have power to command the coming of that witness to the soul of every individual who would do the will of the Father; and this witness was (as the apostle said) greater than the witness of men. This power these men did not have, and as Christ was about to leave them he commanded them to tarry at Jerusalem until he should send it to them.

You tell me that once you studied the word of God. Do you remember the time when this witness came, and the results of its coming? You doubtless have not forgotten that it was on the Day of Pentecost, and are familiar with the result; and I pass to notice the question of the three thousand, who, being pricked in their hearts, cried out:"Men and brethren what must we do?" Notice, dear L ....., the similarity of the language. They ask what to do. Christ said, "If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine." member now, that one of the cardinal points of this doctrine is the resurrection from the dead. This, in your blind groping among the false lights of science and infidelity, you have denied. But mark you, Christ has said, if you will to know, you shall know, Obedience is the key, and the only key which can open this door to you; and if you choose to disobey, if you will not take God at his word and prove him, can you blame any one but yourself that you grope in darkness when you might walk in the light-that you are in bondage because you believe that which is false, and reject the truth which alone can make you free?

But to return to Peter and ascertain how he answered this question. We hear him say: "Repent, and be baptized, every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost; for the promise is unto you, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." When speaking of the Holy Ghost Jesus called it the "Promise of the Father;" and Peter says it is to all that are afar off. This is the promise Christ gave when he said: "If any man will, do his will, he shall know of the doctrine."

Do you want know, dear L—? Do you want to be convinced that there is a God, and that Jesus Christ was his Son? that he was sent into the world to declare the will of the Father and the gospel of life and salvation? Do you want to know that "It is appointed unto men once to die, but after this the Judgment?" that "as in Adam all die, even so Christ shall all be made alive?" If you do, then it remains for you to test the matter; and if God is not true to his word, if he fails you when you bave put your trust in him, then it will be time enough to say, "There is no God." But until you have done this, what madness, what folly, to deny the existence of that Being who created you a little lower than the angels, and who "so loved the world that he gave his Only Begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him might not perish but have everlasting life!"

But I fear my letter exceeds the limit of your forbearance, and I will close. If indeed you desire to know more in regard to this Witness, it will afford me great pleasure to refer you to the teachings of God's word, pointing out its place in the great economy of his plan of salvation, and the absolute need which exists in the world today for the confirming power of its testimony. May the Lord incline your heart to desire to have a knowledge of him, and lead you gently to the fountain of living waters, is my soul's earnest desire in your behalf. Your true friend,

PRAYER LEAGUE.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

In behalf of one for fifteen years afflicted with rheumatism, and at times not able even to feed herself, the prayers of the elders, as well the League, are earnestly desired.

Sr. Mary A. Light, Wood River, Holt county, Nebraska, also requests the prayers of the League in her behalf.

PRAYER UNION.

The sisters of the San Bernardino branch met in the Saints chapel to organize a Prayer Union. Sister Emma Burton was elected president. Sister Ollie Ames secretary. Term of office being one month.

OLLIE AMES, Sec.

ERRATA:—In a late letter from Sister L. J. Reynolds she is made to say, "When the branch was organized about two months ago." It should read, one year and two months.

If the sister who requested (in the Herald of Dec. 15) the prayers of the League that her health might be restored and if not the Lord's will to do so, that at least the terrible pain in her head migh the relieved, will send us her address, we will forward her a letter which may be of interest to her.—ED.

Notice:—We have one or two hundred leaflets containing the subjects of prayer for each day in the month. Any of the sisters desiring one can obtain it of us by enclosing a stamp to pay return postage.

DEPUE, Jan. 10th.

Dear Sister Frances:—I thought to day that I must write you a few words of cheer about Autumn Leaves. The present number of January, 1889, is the very best one we have had. My heart was filled with joy and gladness when I read the kind words of each of those who have sent in their loving thoughts to you to fill our beautiful little messenger of peace and happiness which comes to our many lonely but not forsaken homes. The heavenly Father sends his Spirit of love and peace to us and we know we are remembered.

What could we do without our thoughtful brother Mills? I often remember him as I saw him in Lamoni, and pray that he may live long amongst the Saints. Sister Edith Monroe's little offering to her mother is very beautiful, and "Scraps" recalled my dear and beautiful sister who is now in heaven. The morning after she died her husband came in and sat down by our mother and me and said, "Mother, do you know the first time I saw my Mary she had on a pink frock?" I had just made the bed and had seen a small piece of that same dress in the quilt that I had spread on the bed. I said, "Come Flobert and see the little piece of Mary's dress." So we went and I thought his heart would break when he looked at it. Little Kittie cut it out and laid it carefully away as a sacred relic.

We get so interested in Bro. Stafford's article that we can scarcely wait for the next number. I remember those early days so clearly myself that I can recall many circumstances. One I never can forget: Our people were terribly tried in those times. All kinds of poverty pressed heavily upon the poor, tried and afflicted Saints. One day we saw a poor family coming to our door, the father and mother and, I think, three children. They had a small cart, and a little calf harnessed to it like a horse, drawing it. All their earthly goods were in the cart, and the family walked along by it. But they were Saints and surely the heavenly Father has kept his watch over them. We never saw them afterwards. They had been living in Nauvoo, and had joined the church in England; but God is good and looks upon his chidren in great mercy.

The little children of the present time can not imagine the trials of the children in those early days. Now Sabbath Schools are established in all our branches, but it was not so then; and when the scattering came, the children could scarcely stand the shock, and many noble ones strayed far away. I know of one family (and brother Blair also knows them) by the name of Tourtilott. They lived near Sublett, Illinois, My own brothers were lost to the church because they had to live away from it, and never had the benefit of the Sabbath Schools when they were children. I do not know that I can ever make any one understand how I feel about the children. I see it more plainly because I married out of the church and my children and my grand-children will perhaps remain as they are. I can only pray for them, and if they are found worthy, the heavenly Father will care for them in his own due time.

I also remember some little children in those early times whose father was one of our best ministers. He loved the work and spent most of his time preaching. Their mother died and the children were scattered, and some so hungry that they would eat the dryest crust and be very grateful for it. I would not write their names because some of them might read this. I do not know whatever became of them, but I know their father is dead.

Sister Frances, perhaps I have written too long a letter. If it is worthy of a place anywhere, use it; if not, cast it aside.

ONE OF THE SISTERS.

THERE is a sadness and pathos in this letter which will be felt by each Saint whose memory reaches back to those early days. Our own heart responds to its sentiments; and if we are wise as saints of the Most High, such memories will brace our nerves and lead us to redouble every effort put forth, that the will of God may be obeyed and our children be established in the faith. Under the great canopy of heaven it is the only faith which has a sure foundation-whose builder and maker is God, and from everlasting to everlasting is the same. There will never come another scattering of God's people. The great Latter Day Apostacy is of the past; but there will come a time when everything which can be shaken, will be shaken, and every thing which can be moved will be moved. We may not live to see this day, but it will surely come, and our children must meet it and stand or fall according as they are prepared. In the family circle, in the Sunday School and in the halls of learning should this preparation be begun and carried on to completion. For this purpose it becomes the imperative duty of the Saints to establish higher schools under church influence, in which our sons and daughters may complete a liberal education without becoming subject to sectarian bias and prejudice, and where they may learn that of all systems of religion they have the only one which can fearlessly challenge the attack of all creeds and systems, as well as those of infidelity and science (falsely so called); and smile at the onslaught, if only they as its advocates, are prepared to defend it. God will give them that wisdom which all their adversaries can not gainsay, but this will never invalidate the command to obtain knowledge from all good books. Sisters, let us, as with one heart and voice, beseech God to move upon the hearts of his people to establish our school speedily .-- En.

WARREN, Ohio, January 2nd.

Dear Sisters:—I will now do what I intended to do some time ago, that is, write a short letter to the Saints' Herald. If others enjoy reading it as much as I have some of the letters in its columns, it will prove a source of comfort to some one of its many readers. I am not a subscriber to the Herald, (I am sorry to say) but hope to be some time. On the seventh of October last, I, (with three others,) became a member of the church, and though surrounded by the most trying circumstances, can say to-day that my faith has never wavered, and I thank God for all that he has been to me since that time.

In November, my daughter, (an only child,) was taken sick with that dread disease—Quinsy. I used all the remedies in my power, but all to no purpose; her throat kept swelling until one side was entirely closed, and the other nearly so. She could not swallow or talk without the greatest pain or difficulty. She is also a firm believer, and expressed her certainty, that no matter what ailed her the Lord could cure her. We were expecting Elder Scott in the neighborhood, and I intended when he came, to put the case in the hands of the Lord; (I did not want a doctor.) He did not come as we expected, and the swelling was making such rapid strides that we became alarmed and in our extremity we called upon the Lord to relieve her until we could comply with his requirements and claim the promises. That night she awoke about midnight and found that she could swallow without pain. Next morning she ate her breakfast, talked, and even sang. Her cure was marvelous for one in her condition the day before. Truly the Lord blessed us, even beyond what we dared to ask. May he draw us, this new year, closer to his great loving heart than ever before, and help us to realize, that, though sinful and prone to wander, the present, like the past, is full of infinite mercy

Hoping this simple statement will appear a witness to at least a part of the world,

I remain your sister,

ADINA L. PINKERTON.

Dear Sisters:—I rejoice over the many good things in the Home Column each week, and feel that I am not doing right if I do not at least thank those who are thus doing good to all the readers of the Herald. I was particularly pleased with the article entitled, "Thou shalt not bear false witness;" and am fully persuaded that the same spirit which moved those who wrote the sacred pages, inspired the one who through this article so forcibly called our attention to the law and the testimony.

As far as I know, I am the only member of the Prayer League in the branch to which I belong; and so have not the privilege of meeting with the sisters to observe the hour; but I have felt blest in keeping it by myself, and rejoice to see our prayers answered. In this branch three men whose wives were members have obeyed the gospel since the League prayed for unbelieving husbands. I wish that the League would pray for those of the Saints who use tobacco, that they may be able to stop using it, and by so doing have more strength, both of body and mind, to help in spreading the gospel. The evils arising from its use are many, and are well known to the readers of the Column.

A SISTER.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Sr. Dora Shook, Galien, Michigan writes:-"I never have been sorry that I obeyed the gospel, but I many times regret that I have not been more faithful to its divine precepts; for experience teaches me that the nearer we live to God, the more of his Spirit we enjoy. We have been blessed with hearing the word preached by Bro. C. Scott, but he expects to leave us soon, and we shall greatly miss him. In the great affliction which has fallen on the family of our beloved Bro. Blakeslee we have been made to realize how true it is that when one member of the body suffers, all the other members suffer with it. They have our prayers and constant sympathy, and do indeed, need the prayers of all God's people.

I am deeply interested in the Sabbath School work, and pray that God will help me to sow in the hearts of the children of my class, the good seed of the kingdom, which shall spring up and bear fruit unto everlasting life."

Sr. Mary A. Light, Wood River, Nebraska, writes:—"It is the appointed hour for the Prayer League to meet and the spirit of love towards God burns like a fire in my bosom. For all his tender mercy and loving kindness to me, I thank him. My prayer is that the numbers of the League may increase daily and their souls may be filled with the love of God. Perhaps some of my old friends are wondering how I am getting along upon a diet of milk and grapes. It has been six months since I ate a morsel of bread, but my health is improving; and when I get discouraged, the Lord helps me, and I renew my strength."

Correspondence.

EMINGTON, Ill., Jan. 18th.

Editors Herald:—May be you think J. C. is doing nothing, or but very little, as I have not wrote for some time.

Since I arrived in the Northern Illinois District, November 23d, I have preached twenty-one sermons in Plano, three in Chicago, four in Sandwich, nine in Emington making thirty-seven in all; baptized two. At this place I have a full house. The church at this place that was closed against Brother F. M. Cooper, a year ago, is still closed against us, and the few that control the religious part of the town are making it quite hot for themselves, for while some of the wealthy men in days gone by helped to support a preacher they now give no more, so I learn. Mrs. ---, one that carries a high head among what is called the first cut of the town, is now trying to raise money enough to get a "hireling" to speak to them. I learned to-day that the one they want writes them that he asks six hundred and fifty dollars a year, with parsonage free, and one half of his expenses in moving his goods paid. Poor blind souls; in the days of John the Baptist one of the signs that Iesus sent to John in prison was, "The poor have the gospel preached unto them." But now the poor must starve for the want of the bread of life if they can't raise about seven or eight hundred dollars. These hirelings cry out "Beware of false prophets." Of course they want the people to understand they mean "Old Joe Smith" and keep them away from hearing what we preach, forgetting Paul's advice in I Thess. 5:21, "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good." But I am pleased to say that among both young and old I never met with a better class of people than those that attended my meetings in this place. The Blue Ribbon Club met at the church last night, led by the school master of this place, Mr. A. D. Christian, but soon dismissed, and when I was about half through service came in and filled the vacant

I am blest of the Spirit of God in my ministry. Last December 31st Sister Kate Vandran, of Plano, was taken very sick; her mother wanted to send for me to administer to her, but her conition was of such a nature she thought a doctor would do better. They sent for one who treated her that day, but with no good results. About seven p. m. I was sent for and with Sister Willet and her oldest daughter, the latter a member of the church, we went to the sick one and administered to her in the Spirit of God, and as I removed my hands from off her head she rose up. All in the house wept like children. Sister Willet's daughter, who saw it, crying like a child exclaimed, "Kate Vandran, how could you doubt the latter day work! how could you send for a doctor!" Brother Vandran and his little children were crying, and I told the little ones not to cry for their mother would get breakfast for them in the morning. Sister Vandran called for something and ate. The next day she was out visiting.

Who, but the ignorant and unlearned in the work of God could doubt this great latter day work brought by the angel to Joseph Smith, wherein is revealed the fact that God is setting up his kingdom in these last days as prophets said he would. See Micah 4: 1-4; Dan. 2: 28, 44. I thank God that I have lived to see these latter days; and being called of the God of heaven, as I know I have, to help build up his kingdom and gather in the people. I wish to be found in my lot and place to present his truth to the people, and warn them of the coming of Jesus our Lord. Yours truly,

J. C. Foss.

BIG SPRINGS, W. Va., Jan. 18th.

Editors Herald:-The Saints in some sections are desirous of hearing from the work in West Virginia, and particularly from me, as I am laboring to strengthen the Saints and add to their number the many who have considered the matter after hearing the word one year ago by our brethren Devore and Beatty. I find they suffered great persecution and risked their lives to establish the work here. There was but one Saint here when they came but twenty when they left. They were beset with dangers on every side night and day. They bore witness to the truth calmly and fearlessly, and on one occasion a Bro. Clayton Maloney was to be baptized. The mob swore that no one should be baptized. They separated fifteen or twenty from the crowd. A Baptist preacher named Cubberly and his two sons were in the mob, Cubberly saying that he was ready when needed to help them. When the time came for the baptism Bro. Devore came out and passing through the cursing mob said, "Come on, Bro. Clate:" and in spite of the threats of the seemingly savage company formed for his destruction, there and then, before their eyes, administered baptism to Bro. Maloney. They stood amazed and so unnerved that not a blow was struck, but their mad ravings disgusted all sensible and good people who witnessed the scene. These brethren are greatly beloved by the Saints there. One brother remarked this morning that "he hoped he would live to see Bro. Devore's face once more." I have preached here how every night for one week, and two excellent ladies have given me their hands for baptism. The husband of one of them will join us. Sr. Sarah Sanders, the wife of Mr. Bennett Sanders, came forward first. Brn. Devore and Beatty will remember them. Many others are expected. I was threatened with mobs when I came, but prejudice is yielding to the truth and some from the mob are attending my meetings and behaving as good citizens. Some give me the hand of friendship. work is truly glorious. The Good Spirit is here in much assurance and power, and the agents and emissaries of Babylon are yielding and the champions of the work of darkness are skulking around and getting in their work behind my back, blinding the honest to resist the progress of the truth. I would be glad to have help here are there are many calls for preaching. I will baptize those who offer on Sunday and go to answer other calls.

I have announced that I will preach in the Court-house in Grantsville, the county seat, on next Thursday and Friday nights. I would like some of the ministry to come and join me in the work here.

Pray for

D. L. SHINN.

SYRACUSE, Ohio, Jan. 13th.

Bro. W. W. Blair: - After the conference at Limerick, Ohio, I went to Ritchie county, West Virginia, to labor for the Master. Met the Saints on Bear Run and commenced preaching the next day, continuing until Bro. E. C. Briggs came and preached five times for us. Bro. Briggs left us for Clarksburg to see Bro. D. L. Shinn. We also had the pleasure of meeting Bro. Thomas Smith, of Sennett's Mills, who was preaching for the disciples, who since obeyed the fulness of the gospel. May God bless him and make him mighty in the cause. The names of Brn. Devore, Beatty, Shinn and E. L. Kelley are highly spoken of in this part of the country. It is a pleasure to me to hear the people speaking thus of my brethren in the ministry. We left some almost persuaded to obey at Bear Run. During our stay in Ritchie county it rained almost all the time. Bro. Bell, priest, is in charge of the little flock at this place, Bro. Cross teacher. May the good Father bless them. Our next tramp was to Frozen Camp, Brn. Hickman and Harper sending a horse to meet me part of the way. Found the few Saints all well except old Sr. Brown, and commenced preaching at once. The little flock at this place has been persecuted very much, but I find that prejudice is giving away. The last time that Bro. Moler and myself were here there was talk of mobbing us. Bro. Williams is in charge. Left for Sand Hill, same county, where Bro. Moler and myself organized, in last August, the Washington branch. Could not get the School-house except for Friday night. Commenced to preach on Friday night the 14th. At another meeting a sealed letter was found on the desk in the School-house addressed to me. After preaching I read the notice and asked what I had done. I read also from the Doctrine and Covenants the law of the church on marriage, after which I asked a friend to read the findings of the court in Lake county, Ohio, on the Kirtland Temple Suit. 'Made an appointment for preaching at night, and with this came a crowded house, and after preaching I read the notice again and put it to a vote of the people whether they wanted me to preach for them again or not. The verdict was unanimously in our favor. Thank God for true Americans, who know the value of freedom. This is the notice with blood mark on the side:

"DECEMBER THE 15TH, 1888.

"Mr. Matthews, we notify you to leave this county in twenty four hours, for we don't want Mormon doctrine taught to our children and you must leave here, for we mean just what we say, and if you don't, you will have to put up with the penalty, and that is severe. Now you get out."

On Tuesday following we left the good friends of Sand Hill and on December 26th I received a telegram from my brother-in-law, Bro. David Hopkins, who resides at Cannelton, West Virginia, announcing the death of his son Richard. It is just two years and six months since Bro. and Sr. Hopkins buried their oldest son David, both taken away by typhoid fever. I labored in that section for some time in the midst of affliction among the Saints and friends. A coal train backed over Elizabeth, the daughter of Bro. and Sr. Parry. She lived three hours after the sad accident but never complained. After she was brought to the house she told me to tell her mother not to cry and asked me not to go away until I would see what the result would be. She had prayed many times that she might be taken from this world before her father and mother, being over-burdened and afflicted. Bro. Parry has but one arm and is suffering with asthma. May the God of heaven remember Brn. Hopkins and Parry and their affliction and sorrow is my prayer. Although in the midst of sorrow, I am, as ever, your brother in Christ,

THOMAS MATTHEWS.

St. Paul, Nebraska, Jan. 15th.

Bro. Dancer:—From a sense of duty I deem it proper to inform the authorized laborers in God's great work that I, through patience and endurance of derision and contempt, have laid the foundation of a fruitful work in this vicinity. Two months ago the cry "Brighamism, and imposition" could be heard in every direction, but now it has almost ceased. I held a discussion two weeks ago in defense of the Book of Mormon which has made friends for the work. I have been requested to send for the men who are authorized to preach and baptize. Please send one this way. I will answer any question in regard to prospect. I believe a good work will receive a rich reward.

Yours in Christ,

E. T. ATWELL, JR.

LONDON, England, January 11th.

Bro. Foseph: On the 13th of November at Plymouth, I had to trouble the waters and baptize three into the kingdom of God; and on the 6th of October three more making eleven in this place. On the 9th I confirmed them. I feel that there is a good work to be done in this place. I took my leave of them for a time to visit my brother and family at Ramsdean, near Petersfield, Hants, and on December 20th I had the pleasure of baptizing my brother Charles and his wife. Oh. I feel to thank my heavenly Father for his love and goodness to me in giving those to me that I have so long prayed for, ever since the year 1859. And there are three more and I believe they will come. I have made known to them the gospel and they can see that it is right, and I shall not give them up. On the 24th of December I baptized five more-a man and his wife and three of my brother's children; blessed six children, and many more at Ramsdean are troubled in mind and would like to throw off the trouble but can not. They say that they have lost two of their best members. On the 29th of December I was called away from there, to the Broadclist branch, as dear sister Ann Board was called home to rest. She fell asleep in Jesus on Wednesday, December 26th. She was seventyone years of age. She was one of the first that wanted to be baptized with her husband. The funeral took place on new year's day, and the sermon was preached at the grave in Broadclist church-yard. A great many were present and I had good liberty. We thought that we should have had lots of trouble, but, thank God, we had but very little. After the funeral I went to Tiverton and saw my uncle James and family and did lots of fireside preaching. Some of them believe the gospel. I gave them my address to write me when they are in need of me. On the 8th I came to this place, and I feel that there is some work to do here, and others think the same. We had a meeting on the oth and after the meeting one lady gave her name for baptism. I pray that I may keep myself humble and see my littleness, that I may do good.

Yours in Christ.

DENVER, Col., Jan. 15th.

Bro. Blair: -- In reading the Herald I see many calls for laborers, and I wonder if there is any place that needs labor more than this city of over one hundred thousand people. I have been attending the different churches and it is with feelings of sorrow that I see so many following blind guides. My soul yearns for the gift of speech and power of the Spirit that I might be able to set forth to the people the true way that leads to the tree of life. I have had a number of conversations with different ones in regard to the doctrines of our church and find many that I think are honest, who, if they had the privilege to hear the word, would become bright and shining lights in the kingdom of God. I live in one of the suburbs of the city and we have a Union Sunday School of which I was chosen Assistant Superintendent last Sunday, wherein I hope to be able to do some good. There has been a Methodist class organized here recently and the invitation is to all Christian people to come in and unite with them. They are very sociable and friendly, but have not that for which we long, namely, the communion of Saints and of the Holy Spirit. We have no meetings of our own: I don't know any reason why it is so, as there are about a dozen members here, enough to organize a branch. But we are somewhat scattered. with no one to organize or take the lead. I think that if we had a place of meeting some would come to hear us and we could at least tell them the simple gospel story. I have visited several of the Saints and find them interested and willing to work for the cause, but we lack organization and system. My heart is in the work and I only wish I was able to do more to further it on.

Love to all, your brother,

E. F. SHUPE.

REESE CREEK, Montana, Jan. 16th. Bro. W. W. Blair:—I am greatly encouraged in this "marvelous work and a wonder." As a branch of the Church of Christ, the past year has been a year of heavy clouds hovering over us. But thank God, there has been a spark of heavenly fire lingering until it has re-kindled such a union amongst those that are coming together, that it is a heavenly place indeed, such union and love I have never seen in this place.

I firmly believe that the unhappy things of the past have been overcome, and that we now see that it is necessary to live in harmony with the teachings of the servants of God. For the last four meetings our members have been increasing and we are being blest in testimony and in the glorious gifts of the gospel, that the sects say there is no need of, that they were only for the establishing of the primitive church.

I will relate what occurred in Bro. Gomer Reese's house. He was absent from home, and one of the little girls had the scissors in her hand and playing with them, when she fell, and the point of the scissors entering the child's neck near the jugular vein. The blood ran fast and could not be stopped by applying any remedy for it by the mother. Only one source was left, as the blood was running so freely that death would soon result if God would not answer prayer. Sr. Reese went in prayer to God, and as soon as she did the blood stopped instantly; to God be the praise! "These gifts and blessings are no longer needed," say the blind, who lead the blind, both fall into the ditch.

Our esteemed brother J. C. Clapp is with us now, instructing us in the way of life more perfectly, and we are very glad to have him with us, or any other servant of God who may come. Bro. D. R. Harris and Bro. John Pritchard were in Bozeman on Sunday the 6th inst., and held meeting in Bro. Martin Lundwall's house, and had an excellent time. We have concluded to have meetings in Bozeman once a month. Bro. Thomas Reese and family are in Bozeman this winter, the children attending school. I hope the year 1889 will be a year of great rejoicing in our branch, that love, joy, peace, harmony and the light of God's Holy Spirit may be our happy lot.

As a branch we rejoice to hear of the prosperity of the work of the Lord, and of the great efforts of the brethren and sisters.

May the Lord bless Sr. Francis and all her coworkers, and may the "The Autumn Leaves" grow and prosper, for it is the best magazine in the world, not only for the young but for the old also. And may we all by our works write a volume the coming year, that we will not be ashamed of, and may we all follow the example of Sr. Richards and Sr. Johnson of North Platte, is the prayer of Your Bro. in the one Faith,

THOMAS HARRIS.

ANTONITO, Col., Jan. 19th.

Dear Herald:-Your issue for the above date, otherwise luminous with cheering words and instruction was somewhat beclouded with the sad intelligence of the probable end of Bro. J. R. Lambert's ministerial career. Yes, the thought of such an event is indeed distressing. I am fully persuaded that that worthy brother and fellow laborer would not thank me for any undue applause or claim of his having evinced greater perfection, than other mortals that are staggering under the ponderousness of the cross; its weignt being more sensibly felt because of human weakness. But you will permit me to say that if the All Wise, never erring, and ever loving God, had declared (as our brother seems almost to anticipate) that his ministerial labor is nearly, or entirely closed, I shall sustain a loss of a worthy, loving, confidential, efficient co-laborer; a competent and discreet adviser; and as to the loss that the church and mankind in general, would sustain him in that event, I will say nothing.

Duty is the brother's aim.

Its omission gives him pain.

After delivering upwards of thirty discourses at Manitou Park and other points in Elpaso county and meeting much prejudice and aggravation through silly tales being wafted on the wings of the wind, and with no evidence of success save allaying some prejudice, inducing a few to investigate who occasionally spoke approvingly of our doctrine, besides, perhaps, encouraging the few members I found there, namely, Brn. A. Smith, J. Chivington, their wives, and Sr. Joy, formerly of Des Moines, Iowa, and staying a week at Colorado Springs, to know the decision of the directors of the Denver & Rio Grande Railroad relative to a renewal of a clergyman's permit to travel over their road at half rates in 1889, which, thanks to those gentlemen, was favorable; I struck this point on the oth instant, receiving a warm reception from Bro. F. B. Moyer and family. Though anxious to preach for them south, I have at the earnest solicitation of the above brother who is more favorably convinced than ever that the Reorganization has come to stay, tarried. The cessation of Bro. M's correspondonce with the Herald is only to be attributed to the force of circumstances.

I have preached six times in Manassa, one of the Mormon stakes of Zion. The attendance and interest exceeded my expectation. I only had access to a private house which was really crowded. Some persons evinced an honesty in equiring as to our faith. I preach in Antonito to-night.

During my stay in Colorado Springs I received the hospitality of Mr. T. Rudd which I appreciated. He married Sr. A. Handbury whom the Saints in Council Bluffs will remember. After considerable exertion I was promised the use of a private house at Colorado City. As per announcement, I went on Sunday the 6th instant, only to find said house closed, locked and the inmates flown; having, as I learned, been charmed by exciting news of the finding of a rich mine! Between a love for gold and silver mines and saving truth, there is an antagonism, in Colorado the former gaining ascendency, in the face of which fact the propriety of time and labor being spent in such localities may possibly be questioned. And it is quite certain that labor where places for preaching are easily obtained and the hearers flock like doves to their windows and enter the fold by the score is more desirable.

But the gospel must be spread, and the work of penetrating new localities should be continuous, hence, more solid and continuous labor in breaking up new ground is greatly needed by traveling elders or general conference appointees. One or two elders, having a circuit of several points within a radius of forty or fifty miles, visiting said points weekly, semi or tri-weekly, thus concentrating his or their labor, could do more good than delivering twenty or thirty sermons at one end of the state, then at a great expense go to the other end to do likewise. When the duties of a traveling elder are performed, whatever is the result thereof, a peace with and a justification from God is felt, that brings satisfaction. But I do not think that such position is so fascinating as to make a release from manual labor the only incentive. I think it quite proper for all to be ready to be called up higher. But I do not think a proper discretion would be evinced by making arrangements for a change in official position, and then demanding the change on the hypothesis that a sacrifice has been made.

I really think I utterly abhor anything savoring of absolute rule, despotism, tyranny, etc. But between such God forbidden extremes and heaven's imposed loyalty evinced by a recognition of law, rule and order,-I mean God's imposed law, rule and order-I always want to discriminate; such discrimination being the result of sober thought begotten by the radiation of light, from God's ordained and revealed economy. Never ignoring rule obtained or growing out of legislation of the body, in suggesting and agreeing on methods for carrying out God's designs reflected in his rendered law, or making such legislation equal to or accepting it in lieu of that the law makes imperative; for that being done, the way is open for rendering that flexible which heaven has declared to be inflexible. I know of none. I believe none, and therefore advocate no liberty but that guaranteed and regulated by law. That, to my mind, the best exposition of law since the demise of the apostles, by the Palmyra Seer in section 35. Doctrine and Covenants, become more effulgent day by day and an understanding thereof evinced by my procedure is more essential than ability to measure the distances or weigh the density of the stars, which knowledge I should by no means despise. The latter may possibly lead to the former, but the former will assuredly lead to the latter, if duly appreciated.

Mine eves have fallen upon the first number of the Return, issued by E. Robinson, in the interest of the so-called "Church of Christ." The former I should think an acquisition to the latter, in that it may aid the undecided to more readily decide. Variety is said to be the spice of life, and if the competent editor has a savory spice for the the theological olfactories of those otherwise discontented, I'm sure that no member of the Reorganization with decision of character will object to the dispensing of the spice. "The Return." Oh, yes! It has a significance, but all things considered, its applicability is a little puzzling. Its appearance and perusal induced me to thank God anew for the Reorganization, and to regret that my efforts for its perpetuity are so insignificant. I heartily wish the Editor of the Return and its supporters all the satisfaction that it is possible for them to reach. But for me, the mission begun by Joseph the Seer and continued by his posterity is good enough. In bonds,

JAMES CAFFALL.

Bro. Blair:—I see in the Herald of January 19th two mistakes. It should read, fourteen hundred instead of four hundred for local option, and five nights instead of four nights discussion. I presume I made the mistakes; at least the last one. Bro. A. Lloyd and I are holding forth here with good interest. One gave name for baptism last night. We will continue until February 1st.

Every point in which a man excels, every true virtue which he cherishes, every good habit which he acquires, every beauty of spirit to which he attains, will make his friendship purer, stronger, and better worth having.

But the total annual loss to the country at large, in health, wealth, and happiness, caused by the non-safety taps and bottles of the liquor-trafficers, is incalculable.

DANCING.

At the spring conference of 1886, there was a resolution presented making dancing a test of fellowship.

Because a substitue was passed which reads thus: "Resolved that the practice of dancing should be discouraged and that members of the church should be urged to avoid the practice as one likely to lead their minds from Christ and the gospel," therefore many of the Saints think they are justified in indulging in the practice. Wherever I have traveled, I have had to meet this question, and some who before this action was had thought it no harm to dance, now feel justified in dancing all the more. But they seem to forget that the church did pass upon this matter some years before, making the practice a test of fellowship and that act has never been repealed.

The action taken in '86 simply reaffirmed the former action, so I understand from the language "that the practice should be discouraged" etc. Numbers have been expelled from the church upon the strength of that action.

I look upon dancing as it is practiced at the present as a very great evil; one which is leading many, especially young people, down to destruction. It should be proclaimed against, just as much as the drinking of liquor or the visiting of saloons, and more so than using tobacco.

I wonder sometimes why there is not more said upon the matter, and why the question should be handled so delicately when it is referred to. Almost everywhere we go, we have trouble with some because of this. They say, "If dancing is such a great evil why is it that the church does not speak plainly if she does not endorse the practice? and if she should do so," they say, "show us the law against it." They say also, "We read in the scripture that God's people danced, then why can not we," etc.

The dance referred to in the scripture was quite a different kind to what the dance of the present day is. practiced as a religious ceremony, when the name of God was praised; but the dance of the present day is not of that kind, for the name of God is not praised while dancing, nor is it thought of. They did not gather together, some about half intoxicated, using profane language, with murderous weapons upon their persons ready to use them at any moment and where the fire of jealousy is kindled which has caused the taking of many a life, and, because of the loss of rest and after becoming over heated many have gone out into the cold air not being properly protected, and in consequence found a consumptive's grave, thus being guilty of self murder. These are plain facts. "But," says one, "Solomon says, 'There is a time to dance.'" Yes, but how do we know Yes, but how do we know that now is the time? He also says: "There is a time to kill." How do we know but that now is the time to do that? And if so, would we be justified in taking the lives of our fellows? "That would not do," say they, "for we would then be breaking the law." Well if we are justified in the one case, we are in the other. It is true the law of the land does not forbid dancing; no, but the law of God does. The church does not tolerate it, therefore if we indulge in the practice we become transgressors of the law-which is sin; and "the wages of sin is death," and while death is the penalty for the one, it is also the same for the other, only the one is of a temporal, and the other of a spiritual character.

Are we justified by the law of God in taking part in the dance of the present Dancing is one of the "evils of the world." It is one that religious people do not indulge in as a rule. It is one of the "pleasures of the world" We cannot have the fellowship of Christ and at the same time join hands with the "pleasures of the world." Having come out from the world, the pleasures that we should seek after and take part in should be of a spiritual character; the line should be clearly drawn here between the people of God and the people of the world. Hear the apostle: "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate saith the Lord. and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you." (2 Cor. 6: 17). "Come will receive you." (2 Cor. 6: 17). out of her my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues." (Rev. 18:4).

"Babylon" will fall, and none will escape who are found in her, and all who are not found in Christ at that day will be in Babylon. Jesus says: "Ye cannot serve two masters." I never knew nor heard of a Latter Day Saint, who had the work at heart, and who enjoyed the "Spirit of Christ" that took any pleasure in dancing. They find all the pleasure they want in meditating, and talking with one another, and singing praises to God; and when they know of any one in trouble, or in distress, they feel like going and ministering to their wants. This gives them pleasure that is lasting. They are conscious that by so doing they are fulfilling the law of God, thereby laying up treasure in heaven which will entitle them to go through the pearly gates into the City of God. Is that the kind of pleasure you experience in the dance? Do you have such thoughts as these there? "Oh, no! but our thoughts are upon the "things of the world;" then we are "carnally minded" which "is death." Jesus says that where your treasure is, there will your heart be also. And as a man thinketh in his heart so is he; also out of the abundance of the heart, the mouth speaketh. Now if the heart is, in the dance, the thoughts will be there; then we can not be in Christ; therefore we must to one dance they want to go to another, so that step by step they are led away from Christ. The enemy once admitted, it is very difficult to expel him.

There is a noticeable difference in the lives of those who take part in this evil and those who do not. The latter take pleasure in the things of the Spirit, but you will seldom find the former in the prayer meetings; and if they chance to go, they feel cold and indifferent, and as if they are out of place there; that they would rather be somewhere else; and all this because their treasure is not there. Whereas once they enjoyed the Spirit and liked to read the sacred books, and watched the progress of the work with delight, now they take no pleasure in such things. The Spirit has left them. Wanting pleasure of some kind, if they can not get it in one way, they will have it in another. Like Saul of old when the Spirit left him because of transgression, he was desirous of having communication with some one, so he went to the old witch; so, when the Spirit departs from us, we are then in a condition to join in with the dance. Such facts should be good evidence to all who are caried away with this evil, that they are being led by a false spirit.

The history of this church shows, that while it was humble and enjoyed God's Spirit such a thing as dancing was unknown among them; but as soon as the Spirit departed from them, they went to dancing, and notwithstanding the blood of the martyrs and of the saints was crying to God from the ground for vengeance on their enemies, yet they seemed to be happy, and to forget all this. They turned the house of God into a ball room. What a mighty change! Were they possessed of the Spirit at both times? Answer, ye who think that you are justified in dancing.

While Moses was in the mount receiving the tables, the people became impatient, found fault, etc., made a golden calf, worshipped it, and danced around it.—Ex. 32:19. I believe the dance of the present day to be of the same kind. When the Nephites were journeying to this land, some of them lost the Spirit; then they went to dancing in the ship, and they were almost swallowed up in the depths of the sea.—(Book of Mormon, pp. 41 & 514.) Yet some will say; "Where is the law against dancing?"

We ask where is the law in favor of it? We have no right to practice the same because we can not find any law that says "Thou shalt not do it,"—we read: "Thou shalt take the things which thou hast received, which has been given unto thee in my Scriptures for a law, to be my law, to govern my church; and he that doeth according to these things shall be saved."

—D. and C. 42:16.

Now is there anything in the Scriptures justifying dancing? There is not a word. That being the case, are we not going beyond that "which is written" when we do so? We are justified in doing "according to that which is written," and whatsoever is more or less than this cometh of evil. By going beyond the law we become "transgressors," the same as when we come short of keeping the law. We are commanded to watch and pray; lest we enter into temptation, and that we might keep ourselves unspotted from the world, to go to the house of prayer and pay our devotions unto the Most High, etc.; and to be looking for the coming of the Lord, as if expecting him at any moment. Also if there is any afflicted let him pray, is any merry let him sing psalms," not go to a "Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Tesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him."-Col. 3:17. We often hear it said, "that the young people must have some pleasure;" that "you can not put old heads upon young shoulders," etc.; but I fail to see where the line is drawn between the young and the old. Both are bound by the same law. Does a young person have any more right to break the law than an old one? It seems to me that we say they have when we state that we ought to let them do that which is ques tionable. We might as well say that they ought not to be baptized because they are young. Surely they should not be, if they are not expected to keep the law as well as any other member of the church. I never thought that because I was young I had a right to break any law that I was acquainted with.

The young in many places do not take as much interest in the church as they should, and in some cases it is because it is thought that they ought to be left alone until they get over "sowing their wild oats" as the saying is; but I believe that the saying of the Apostle that "whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap" will apply to the young as well as to the old.

It is said that there is "no harm in going to a social dance at a friend's once in awhile"; then there is no harm in a young man drinking a glass of liquor at a friend's house once in awhile. I see as much danger in the one as in the other. Remember the story about "the spider and the fly."

Some time ago I was reading a speech of a Catholic priest who said that "nine tenths of the fallen women in this country admit that the first step towards their downfall was taken in the ball room." felt it my duty to present these thoughts for the benefit of those who are deceived by the evil and hope they will see the folly of trying to fellowship the world with one hand and Christ with the other, and that they may not be found among those who shall "neither be cold nor hot," and therefore be "spewed out of his mouth."—Rev. 3:16. We will give the We will give the views of the prophet Joseph as found in the Times and Seasons volume five: "If we are asked what our views are concerning dancing we can only answer that they are just such as the Scriptures set forth, and when we can see such a dance, we shall join in it heartily. We do not consider that the dancing that is now practiced is of that kind. We never heard God's name praised in any of them; nor do we think that there is the least desire to glorify God in the dancing of the present day. So far then as the dancing that is now practiced is concerned, we do not believe that it is a Scriptural dancing, or the thing that was practiced in former times, and it has not a tendency to glorify God, or to benefit mankind; but when it leads people into bad company and causes them to keep untimely hours, it has a tendency to enervate and weaken the system, and lead to profligate and intemperate habits, and so far as it does this, so far it is injurious to society and corrupting to the morals of youth. Solomon says, 'there is a time to dance,' but that time is not at eleven or twelve o'clock at night, nor at one, two, three or four o'clock in the morning."

HARMONY OF INSPIRATION.-No. v.

BY R. M. ELVIN.

"HAVING long reflected upon these premises—these creeds, schisms, and parties, -as well as on the sacred writings of apostles and prophets, and the primitive communities founded on them, we are fully convinced that neither Popery, nor any of its Protestant reformations, is the Christian institution delivered to us in the Holy Scriptures. What is Popery, but an extreme defection and apostasy? What is Prelacy, but a reformed modification of Popery? What is Presbyterianism, but a reform of Prelacy? What is Congregationalism, or Independency, but a reform of Presbyterianism? And what is . Wesleyan Methodism, but a popular emendation of English Episcopacy, combined with the enthusiasm of ancient Quakerism?" These three extracts are from Alexander Campbell's work on Baptism, pp. 15 and 16, as he from the lofty height of his knowledge has freely criticised those who had gone before, (and I am inclined to the opinion he was correct in the main), but inasmuch as he makes no claim to inspiration to aid him in the attempt to get back upon the primitive platform, but undertook the task in the strength of human wisdom, it would not be amiss to consult the Word-"The world by wisdom knew not God."-I Cor. 1:21. I have no knowledge that this divine rule has been abrogated, neither this one-"For what man knoweth the things of man, save the spirit of man which is in him? Even so the things of God knoweth no man, but the Spirit of God."-1 Cor. 2:11. Mr. Campbell is no exception so far as I am aware, and although his great educational achievements would permit him to place his name at the apex of fame, yet in the things pertaining to the salvation of the soul he could not override "how shall they preach, except they be sent?" Rom. 10:15. If Alexander Campbell was sent, we might ask, By whom? And echo answers, By whom? But to conclude on the apostasy which was to gain the ascendency over the truth: "And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws; and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time."—Dan. 7:25.

The only comment I desire to make upon this, is, that this power for evil is granted dominion over the saints for a specific space of time, and is to wear them out; or in other words, the saints who are the people of God, shall cease from off the face of the earth during the reign of this evil power. This is not stigmatizing all as vile and candidates for hell; but that there was no church of God on the earth. As to the goodness and piety of individuals, I have nothing to say. "And it was given unto him to make war with the saints, and to overcome them: and power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations."—Rev. 13:7. From the manifold evidences brought forward, the possibility of doubting the complete apostasy, and that the door of divine grace as opened to the primitive church was effectually closed, can not remain. But I turn from this to the cheerful prospect of full and complete

RESTORATION.

Every effort made to reform is but added testimony to the great falling away, and of the necessity for a restoration of the gospel in its ancient simplicity and power to save, which it possessed in the age of its primitive glory, when it unified the adherents thereunto. It must be apparent to every thinking mind that if we are to realize the promises of God, his power for good must be seen and felt to a greater extent than has ever been manifested under the auspices of any reformation yet had; for they each and all but crystalize into denominational parties, partaking of the spirit and character of the body they came out from.

The spirit and genius of the gospel is not disintegration, but the bringing of all its parts into a oneness. "Thy watchmen shall lift up the voice; with the voice to-gether shall they sing; for they shall see eye to eye, when the Lord shall bring again Zion."-Isa. 52:8. A fulfillment of this will surely come in the due time of the Lord, and in his own appointed way. Man will not be permitted to dictate how God will perform his wondrous work, for "with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth: and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked. And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins. The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together, and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together; and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice' den. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."-Isa. 11: 49. This is not to be received as allegorical language, but as a plain and vivid description of world-stirring scenes that are near at hand. In no other way than by the restitution of the primitive gospel, with its inspiration and gifts of help, will the knowledge of God become universal. What marvelous changes must come unto man, and to all things in the amphitheatre of the earth, before the coming to pass of the following: "But they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree; and none shall make them afraid: for the mouth of the Lord of hosts hath spoken it." Micah 4:4. There is a period spoken of in Scripture, often used by the sacred writers, viz: "Until the fulness of the Gentiles be come in."—Rom. 11:25. When this event transpires, a revival of the work of the Lord will set in, and the agency by which it will be brought about is provided for without the aid of human wisdom: "But though we, or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed."-Gal. 1:8, 9. The standard is here made so plain and the specifications by which that claiming to be the gospel of Christ can be tested, that it does not seem possible that any need be imposed upon by fraud or falsehood. The teachings of Christ and the apostles are, in a limited degree, found in the New Testament; and while the several principles are not succinctly stated, only by Paul to the Hebrews, (that is, 1st faith, 2d repentance, 3d baptisms, 4th laying on of hands, 5th resurrection, 6th eternal judgment), nevertheless, each and all of these principles were severally taught by the Master and by those to whom he gave commission to preach the gospel in all the world.

Without particularly scheduling what constituted the items of the gospel, we turn and read the synoptical and fragmentary teachings as found scattered on the pages of the New Testament; and these are the means by which we are to judge those who come claiming to preach the This is not the rule of one man, gospel. but seems to have been mutually understood by the Apostles: "If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed."—2 John 10. Paul not only told how to detect the truth in that which was preached, but knowing that the pure gospel would cease to exist upon earth and, of necessity, be restored to earth again, he therefore announces the agency that God would employ in making the gladsome tidings known unto the world, namely, by the old reliable agents that have ever been God's messengers: "But to which of the angels said he at any time, Sit on my right hand, until I make thine enemies thy footstool? Are they not all ministering spirits, sent forth to minister for them who shall be heirs of salvation?"—Heb. 1: Whoever rejects the ministry or visitation of angels, and scoffs at those who thus believe, gives full proof that he is not an heir of salvation.

Here we have what might be termed the regular order of God in communicating with man: "The Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him, to shew unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass; and he sent and signified it by his angel unto his servant John."-Rev. 1: 1. Accepting the foregoing as the reflection of both past and future dealings of God with the race, we call attention to the following: "After this I looked, and, behold, a door was opend in heaven; and the first voice which I heard was as it were of a trumpet talking with me; which said, Come up hither, and I will shew thee things which must be hereafter."-Rev. 4: On reading this promise, we are all anxiety and solicitude as to what John was to see in the coming events. It was no ordinary occurrence, and the stupidity of sense must be extraordinary in that man who is not aroused unto deep thoughtfulness, and the exuberance of his imagination should throb into life and activity. Hear ye! Hear ye!! all mankind, unto the end of the earth: "And I saw another angel fly in the midst of heaven, having the everlasting gospel to preach unto them that dwell on the earth, and to every nation, and kindred, and tongue, and people, saying with a loud voice, Fear God, and give glory to him; for the hour of his judgment is come; and worship him that made heaven, and earth, and sea, and the fountains of waters,"-Rev. 14:6,7. This is no ex post facto publication of the gospel, but a prophetic heralding of what should take place after the time of John. We might truthfully write of the great latter day work, that it was inaugurated in 1823, when the angel of God visited Joseph Smith. And it would not be transcending the bounds of propriety, should we write of this angelic visit, The Revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him, to shew unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass; and he sent and signified it by his angel unto his servant Joseph Smith.

There are yet several phases of this branch of the subject that both harmonize and synchronize in proof of the restoration of the gospel through Joseph Smith. He and his associates preach nothing contrary to New Testament doctrine, organization and spiritual gifts; and that is the guidebook to identify the church of Christ. Let there be a "search warrant" put into the hands of a sheriff with direction to serve it upon the church of Christ, and furnish him with a copy of the New Testament to describe said church, with the admonition not to go near or interfere with the Latter Day Saints, he would be under the necessity of making his return "Not found." For there is no church that fills the bill: yea, even more, all the churches in the aggregate would not constitute such a church as we find detailed in the New Testament.

It was for this very reason that God gave revelation to Joseph Smith, who has set in order a church that has came to stay and will yet revolutionize all the organizations now claiming to be the people of God. Thus the elixir of life is now freely offered to humanity. (g) Those granted a "sheepskin" by some theological gospel mill, grow quite eloquent while in a derisive and sportive manner they decry the eldership of this church on account of their want of education, and their faulty elocution and grammar. I suppose it was the same in the time that Paul made the defense, "For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble are called; but God hath chosen the foolish things [men] of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things [men] of the world to confound the things which are strong; and base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to naught things that are: that no flesh should glory in his presence."-1 Cor. 1: 26-29. During the first ages of the church, the rank and file of her ministers were considered in one of the five classes, viz: 1. Foolish; 2. Weak; 3. Base; 4. Despised; 5. Not.

I have no particular desire to impugn the statement of Paul in describing the ministers of his time; and further, I am not abashed or ashamed of the general average of my associates when measured in a worldly standard. Men who are ministers from choice of profession, have to prepare themselves according to the standard that men have set. But God's ministers are not so manufactured for their labors of love and sacrifice. Graduating from the fishing net was not a very renowned order; and no vocation was more hateful than a tax collector for the support of Rome, nor tent-making a calling tending to produce a wonderful knowledge of ethics. The graduate therefrom says of himself, "And I, brethren, when I came to you, came not with excellency of speech or of wisdom, declaring unto you the testimony of God." To this he adds: "And my speech and my preaching was not with enticing words of men's wisdom, but in demonstration of the Spirit and of power."-I Cor. 2: 1, 4. The people said of him, "For his letters, say they, are weighty and powerful; but his bodily presence is weak, and his speech contemptible."—2 Cor. 10: 10.

The self same men who ridicule me and my yoke-fellows, will laud Paul to the very heavens. A man does not have to be an adept in grammar to be qualified to tell the truth. And one of the strongest testimonies of a divine call is found in the fact that the elders as a rule received their religious education in most all of the churches of men; while some come from the infidel ranks. Instead of coming from some College where they all were run in one mould of thought, they are called from the various avocations of industry, and so soon as they step into the religious arena as public teachers, they are put between the anvil and hammer of opposition. It would naturally be supposed that such a heterogeneous collection would make a perfect jargon in preaching, but just the reverse is true; so that in Maine or California, in Alabama or Minnesota, there is an absolute unity in what is taught as the essential principles necessary unto the salvation of the soul. This uniformity is so apparent that our opposers unite in saying, "Why, they all talk just alike; there is such a sameness in their preaching." We do not believe that this is the result of accident, or of the efforts of either man or the church, but is the direct result of the influence of the Holy Spirit, and that those who are weak and ignorant in the affairs of the world, when moved upon by the Spirit, become the oracles of heaven, and they can truthfully say, "Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to think anything as of ourselves, but our sufficiency is of God; who also hath made us able ministers of the new testament; not of the letter but of the spirit; for the letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life."-2 Cor. 3:5, 6. "It is the spirit that quick-eneth, the flesh profiteth nothing; the words that I speak unto you, they are spirit, and they are life."—John 6: 63. "Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth is come, he will guide you into all truth."-John 16:13. We have obtained this guide, and therefore can very patiently endure the cross in hope of the crown; and when men revile, and illtreat us on account of our lack of knowledge, we can pray, "Father forgive them, they know not what But let it be understood that, they do." though called in weakness and ignorance, this is not the required condition in which they are to remain, but they are to acquire knowledge by study to show themselves approved of God, and to become faithful, wise and intelligent in the things of God, that they may in truth be guides unto them who seek eternal life.

(h) When the Church of God departed from the true and living way, and went off into the wilderness, it was then that priestcraft began to flourish in the land and the communicants were little better than serfs, and the several reformations made comparatively slight improvement. The following prophecy must convince us of the state of the church during the dark ages: "For among my people are found wicked men: they lay wait, as he that setteth snares: they set a trap, they catch As a cage is full of birds so are their houses full of deceit: therefore they are become great, and waxen rich. They are waxen fat, they shine: yea, they overpass the deeds of the wicked: they judge not the cause of the fatherless, yet they prosper; and the right of the needy do they not judge. Shall I not visit for these things? saith the Lord: shall not my soul be avenged on such a nation as this? A wonderful and horrible thing has been committed in the land: the prophets prophesy falsely and the priests bear rule by their means; and my people love to have it so: and what will ye do in the end thereof?"—Jer. 5. 26-31. Under this sad departure the common people were heavily assessed for the support of the ministry, and as a consequence they allowed the ministers to perform all their devotional duties, and instead of standing in the dignity of their creation as the sons and daughters of God to the exercise of their mental powers, and being morally and solely responsible to God, they, to a degree, forgot him and violated the injunction, "Thus saith the Lord; Cursed be man that trusteth in man, and maketh flesh his arm, and whose heart departeth from the Lord."—Jer. 17:6. Perhaps in no age of the world than the present does it seem so absurd and out of place to witness men who surrender unto a heirarchy the liberties and obligations that they owe alone to God.

Here is what a popular minister stated as to why he preached as he did: "Churches now are nothing more than theological theaters, and preachers are actors who are paid so much for performing cleverly and When the priestly artists do acceptably. not draw, their engagement is discontinued. We are forced to make our sermons attractive to those who come to hear them. In consulting our household expenses we must make a liberal surrender of tastes and convictions. I receive ten thousand dollars a year. If I preached simpler and better sermons, reflecting my real views, I could not get three thousand. So, you see, bread-earning outweighs both aspiration and inspiration."—Cincinnati Times, July 28th, 1870. How different the above is from the instruction of Christ,-"Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which to-day is, and to-morrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith? Therefore take no thought, saying, What shall we eat? or what shall we drink? or wherewithal shall we be clothed? (For after all these things do the Gentiles seek) for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things. But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."—Matt. 6: 30-33. No congregation living by and in the light of the Spirit of God will pay a minister ten thousand dollars per year to preach a perverted gospel. Many have thought and said that because we believe in and accept Joseph Smith as a prophet of God, that we therefore were under the necessity of doing just whatever we were commanded, asking no questions. This is not the case, for there is no people more free to think and act for themselves than the Latter Day Saints, when we live up to our privileges, and in accord with the principles of truth as revealed. We follow no man only so far as he follows Christ, and that as pilgrims together.

(i) The right to speak in the name of God arises from two sources; first, by divine appointment with authority to act as a messenger for God in things pertaining to salvation. And, second, those who leave the walks of sin, and by obedience become citizens of that kingdom which cometh not by observation. Because we sometimes state that "we speak that we do know and testify that we have seen," a few pious ones think, or seem to think we are committing the great sin that can not be pardoned. The object God has in view for the human race, as contemplated in the gospel economy, is that throughout the whole earth, man shall come to the knowledge of God and his Son Jesus Christ, and this is absolutely necessary if they shall obtain eternal life,-"And this is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent."—John 17: 3.

We are at times misunderstood and charged with denying the meritorious blood of Christ and the atonement he has made, by preaching to the people a universal salvation. When we speak in the name of God the Lord, we ever seek to be within the bulwarks of revealed truth: "For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be saved."-John 3: 17. The tone of most of the preaching at the present time, seems to be for the condemnation of the great majority of the race, and to send them to the hot place, with no hope of redemption therefrom. While the true gospel is for the salvation of mankind in such glory, with a reward commensurate with their few or many op-portunities, and "according to their works." Unto this end did the All-Wise call and appoint from among the people men to minister the word of truth by the authority of revelation, that all who receive the word with joy into good and honest hearts might be entitled to speak in the name of God for the truth; and when the word is thus spoken, by those blessed of the Holy Spirit, God will not be unmindful of their testimony, neither shall they be overlooked when the palms and the crowns shall be given.

We have been accused from the pulpit, and in the press of substituting Joseph Smith for Jesus Christ into our form of worship. This is untrue, and is only told by either uninformed, or unprincipled persons, and has in view to feed prejudice, and injure innocent people who believe and teach that the Babe of Bethlelem is the veritable Son of God, the Savior of man. Still more, these words are as true now as when uttered by Peter, "Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved."-Acts 4: 12.

We recognize in Christ a present help in every time of need, and we are working together with him in saving souls for his everlasting kingdom; and we do not think of him as one that lived and is now dead: but we believe he told John the truth when he said: "I am he that liveth, and was dead; and behold, I am alive forermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death."-Rev. 1:18.

These two enemies of the soul are to be vanquished and the captian of our salvation will be the one to achieve the victory; and to that end He is to-day the active, present, moving power in His church, as the immediate superintendent that directs the work by revelation to guide, and inspiration to aid in this work of redemption. None need be in doubt, for "if any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine."-John 7:17. This is fair, and no one should be so illogical as to say it is not true until they have first tested the proposition. Many thousands during this century have complied with the injunction and are living witnesses for Christ that He is the Savior of the world, and for this especial purpose did the God of heaven communicate with Joseph Smith and restore the ancient and everlasting gospel, and those who run faithfully unto the end of the race will see the coming Savior with gladness.

(k) From all over the land arises a dismal wail, deploring a spiritual dearth in the churches with a corresponding growth and increase of infidelity. The churches confess their declination in spiritual power to the conversion of sinners and the pulling down of the strongholds of the devil; while the ungodly are boasting of their success and flaunt their contempt of all things divine with a hilarity fired very frequently from the bowl containing an adder. A retrospective view would lead one to think that Christ was in some doubt when he said, "Nevertheless when the Son of man cometh shall he find faith on the earth."—Luke 18:8. Here is some documentary evidence: "In every direction we hear the dolorous sound, wafting upon every breeze of heaven, chilling as the blast from the icebergs of the north, settling like an incubus on the breasts of the timid and drinking up the energies of the weak, that lukewarmness, division, anarchy and desolation are distressing the borders of Zion."—Christian Palladium. "We have also another corroborated fact: the almost universal absence of revival influence in the churches. The spiritual apathy is almost all pervading and is fearfully deep; so the religious press of the whole land testifies. It comes to our ears and to our eyes, also through the religious prints that very extensively church members are becoming devotees of tashionjoin hands with the ungodly in parties of pleasure, in dancing, in festivities, etc. But we need not expand this painful subject. Suffice it that the evidence thickens and rolls heavily upon us to show that the churches generally are becoming sadly degenerate. They have gone very far from the Lord and he has withdrawn himself from them."-Prof. Finney.

"Our church is crippled in her energies and impeded in her progress and chilled in her soul and faint in her spirit because the word is not successful as it ought to be -as it used to be."-Christian Advocate

"Sins that would shock the moral sensibilities of the heathen go unrebuked in all great denominations of our land. These churches are like the Jewish Church when the Savior exclaimed, Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites."-True Wesleyan.

THOUGHTS ON THE "GREAT MILLENNIAL."

In this world we have trial, temptation, pain, sorrow and death, but in the world to come, the Millennium of peace, "there will be no sorrow there," no temptation to do evil, for Satan will be bound for a thousand years, and God will pour out of his Spirit upon all, causing all to be gentle, mild and peaceable.

No trials then, for nothing shall then hurt or destroy. Every man can sit under his own vine, or fruit tree and none shall make them afraid. No pain then; no sickness nor death, for there will no longer be any stagnant place, no impurities of air or food or drink; nothing to cause sickness or death, for all will live for a thousand years in the bloom of health and unfailing youth. The whole earth as the garden of Eden, as a land flowing with milk and honey.

The occupations of building, plowing, planting, setting out trees to adorn and beautify their homes will be a pleasure without danger of being disturbed.

No floods nor droughts, famine nor destruction of any kind. The delight of all will be to obey God, and respect and help one another.

Every day now we have the privilege through the goodness of God to work for such great reward, by meekness, patience, love, forbearance, forgiveness, etc. From faith to faith, from strength to strength let us strive to go on and guard our thoughts, words and acts that we may all be enabled to so live that we shall all enjoy that world of peace and rest to come. #### KEEP YOUR TEMPER.

CALM demeanor under provocation is wisest and best. The greater the offense, the more need of considerate decision in respect to it.

Haste here is waste. Be slow to wrath. Conquer your irritability. Learn to speak as quietly and calmly to a threatening foe as to a loving friend. He that ruleth his own spirit is greafer than he that taketh a city. The time will come when you will be thankful that you held your anger in check. Harsh words and fierce deeds never yielded their speaker any permanent satisfaction. God has endowed us with reasoning faculties with the design that we should use them. Storm and bluster seldom have any reason in them.

Thoughtful consideration is becoming to the Christian. The only vengeance the man of God may indulge himself in is that of charity in return for wrong, and kindness in exchange for violence. "If thine enemy hunger, feed him; if he thirst, give him drink." Good deeds by you will be coals of fire on his head. They will melt him down.

But perform your deeds in the right spirit. Let not vengeance be your motive. Angry charity may prove a boomerang. Approach your opponent in a Christian's garb, but not with a devil's heart. Get right within and the outward hearing will take care of itself. Be Christlike and you will appear Christlike. Hate sin, and yet the sinner love. Make it one grand aim of your life to put down evil and save the evil-doers whether personal friends or foes. -Christian Advocate.

"The chief art of learning," says Locke, "is to attempt but little at a time. The widest excursions of the mind are made by short flights, frequently repeated; the most lofty fabrics of science are formed by the continued accumulations of single propositions."

SUNDAY SCHOOL REPORT.

Annual report of the Sunday School of Independence, Missouri, for the year ending December 30th, 1888. Number of sessions held 51. Average attendance of officers 5; ditto of teachres 7; ditto of scholars 143. Total receipts $153.
76. Total expenditures $124.69. Balance on hand $29.07. Number of organized classes 14: namely, I Bible Class, I Book of Mormon Class, Doctrine and Covenants Class, 5 Intermediate Classes and 6 Infant Classes.

H. R. MILLS, Supt.

JOHN P. WHITE, Sec. P. S. by superintendent: Our school is in a flourishing condition and is considered an honorable and worthy institution by outsiders as well as members of the church. A Bible Class Literary Society has recently been organized and meets once a week under the supervision of Brn. John A. Robinson and Eli Etzenhouser.

Latter Day Saints having families and a desire to place their children under good influences, spiritually, morally and intellectually, need not fear coming to Independence. The Lord is with us in this Sunday School work; and the bands of Zion's Hopes as they come together Sabbath after Sabbath manifest by their eager attentiveness that they are indeed partaking of the benefits of that spiritual food which the intended should be given them when he said, "Feed my Lambs."

May the love of God abide with us, and with all who are engaged in any way connected with this grand latter day work.

It is over—all over. The conflict is passed.
The struggle so fierce is ended at last;
And death is the victor, our efforts were vain—
Oh how can we bear it. this sorrow and pain?
Our darling was dearer than silver or gold.
And how much we love him can never be told.
Yes, the brightest and gayest has gone from our band,
And we miss the dear face, and the clasp of the hand.
He is gone, and our hearts are lonely and sad:
Yet we would not recall him, the dear little lad!
For we know he is safe in the home of the blest.
Where little ones gather, where weary ones rest.
"For of such is the kingdom," oh, words wondrous sweet,
"Tis Jesus that speaks them, of comfort complete.

JEMISON.—December 31st, 1888, Henry Jemi-

JEMISON.—December 31st, 1888, Henry Jemison, at his home near Osborne, Kansas, of consumption. Deceased was born January 16th, 1829, at Belleville, Richland county, Ohio. His parents having early embraced the latter day work, his early days were spent with the church in its vicissitudes and sorrows, from Ohio to Missouri, Iowa and Nebraska where he was baptized by Alfonso Young, March 19, 1863. He built the first mill in Otoe county, Nebraska, and while doing so a party of hostile Indians came and he and the crew captured them and locked them up in a log house. He moved to Kansas in in 1871 and built the first mill in Osborne county. Through a life checkered with sunshine and shadows, the church was never forgotten. He was healed a number of times by faith. Almost his last words were, "I am trusting in the Lord. If he doesn't raise me out of here I never can raise." The last were: "O, how far is it yet!" A very large number of relatives and friends followed him to his last resting place. A funeral sermon was preached by Elder G. W. Shute from Job 14: 14. He clung to the church with the tenacity that characterises only Saints befitting these beautiful words:

"Get but the truth once uttered and 'tis like
A star new born that drops into its place,
And which, once circling in its placid round,
Not all the tumults of the earth can shake."

GRIFFITHS.—At Penydairen, Merthyr Tydvil, Wales, January 1st, 1889, Bro. James Griffiths, aged 84 years. He was a priest and was faithful to the end. He had several children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren in America.

HOPKINS .- Richard, son of David and Ann Hopkins. Born at Syracuse, Ohio, January 18th, 1872; died at Cannelton, West Virginia, of ty-phoid fever, December 26th, 1888, aged 16 years, 11 months and 8 days. Funeral sermon by Thomas Matthews in the Cannelton Church, to a crowded house.

PARRY -Elisabeth, daughter of John and Martha Parry, was born at Aberdare, Wales, April 2nd, 1853. Was killed on the rail road, January 2nd, 1889, at Coal Valley, West Virginia. She was a member of the Baptist Church. Funeral services in the Baptist Church at Coal Valley by the Rev. D. W. Berger, and Elder Thomas Matthews.

TOPLIN.-At Friberg, Ottertail county, Minnesota, January 8th, 1889, of typhoid pneumonia, John H., son of Bro. John H. and sister S. M. Toplin, aged 14 years and 8 days. Funeral sermon by Elder T. J. Martin, assisted by Elder W. Barnhard. A large congregation of friends and interested listeners were present.

HUGHES .- At Cefu Bach, North Wales, July 19th, 1888, Mr John Hughes, aged 71 years. was highly respected.

JOHNSON.—At Burlington, lowa, 1889, Annie Johnson, sister to Bro. Fred Johnson of West Burlington. She was born in Denmark, Europe, in 1831; came to America in 1858; unit-ed with the Reorganization May 15th, 1880, and lived a consistent Christian life. She leaves a husband, three daughters and one son to mourn her departure, besides other relatives and a multitude of friends. Funeral services were held at her residence, January 4th, 1889, conducted by Elder James McKiernan, at which a large con-course of friends attested sympathy and respect by their presence at the home and the tomb.

In all talk about persons, let it be their merits that we hasten to disclose, their good deeds that we gladly unfold. In all discussion on character, let the good come into prominence. In all unuttered hopes for the future, let our highest ideals receive the emphasis. Let truth, and not error, light and not darkness, love and not hate be our themes. So shall we increase and perpetuate all that is good by frank utterance, while evil will decrease and disappear under the thick drapery of silence -Sel.

JOSEPH SMITH W. W. BLAIR

EDITOR. ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, Feb. 9, 1889.

RABBI Hirst in the lecture below seeks to throw the blame and crime of the crucifixion of Christ on the Romans and thus clear the Jews of it. He seems to deny or ignore the fact that when the Jews instigated, connived at and procured Christ's crucifixion, and then justified it, that they were responsible for the deed, being accessories both before and after the fact. It is a well established principle in ethics, and in the law of civilized nations, that he who incites, encourages, advises or in any way procures the commission of crime, is equally condemnable with him who personally perpetrates it; also that he who supports, sustains and defends the perpetrator of crime is likewise condemnable. This was well defined long before the times of Christ as may be seen by consulting the Old Testament Scriptures and the history of the chief nations. Benjamin was held responsible by Joseph for the (supposed) stolen cup found in his "sack." (Gen. 44: 5). The Lord condemns not only the "evil doers" themselves, but also those who "strengthen" their hands-supports them; (Jer, 23: 14); and He indicts Israel because they "strengthened the hands of the wicked." (Ezek. 13: 23). Under the New Testament this principle is clearly set forth. The Apostle John says of those who encourage, justify or support the evil doer: "He that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds."-2 John II.

While it is true that the Jews did not nail Christ to the cross, nor by official authority cause it to be done, yet it is equally true that they instigated it, incited and approved it, and thus moved Pilate, the Roman Governor, to perpetrate that terrible deed.

LECTURE ON THE CRUCIFIXION.

Rabbi Hirsch delivered his lecture, "The Crucifixion from a Jewish Standpoint," at the Art Institute last evening. The room was well filled, many of the audience being prominent people in the different denominations and a number of leaders in free thought. The lecture was an extra one, the Rabbi's regular course having been completed a week ago last night. The lecture was listened to throughout with marked attention and was a very able effort. The Rabbi undertook to prove that the Jews did not crucify Christ. He claimed that the gospel accounts of the crucifixion were necessarily defective, as they had been handed down unwritten for a full hundred years, and inaccuracies could, as a result, have crept in easily. Crucifixion, he said, was a Roman and not a Jewish form of execution. The Jews, by their laws, were not allowed to execute more than one person at a time, while the New Testament claimed that two others had been crucified with Jesus. That Pontius Pilate was a mugwump who would yield to the demands of the people without a struggle he denied. Authorities were quoted to prove the stubbornness of this Roman governor in other cases. In the trial of Jesus before the Jews he could not have been convicted, in the manner claimed, of anything but blasphemy or misleading the people. Many minor proofs were advanced to prove the inaccuracies of the gospel account. He claimed that if Jesus was tried and condemned in the manner claimed it could not have been by the regular Jewish hierarchy, but by the arrogant non-pharasaical priests who set up in defiance of Judaism. He charged that the Romans not the Jews had crucified Christ. For eighteen hundred years the Jewish people had been persecuted for this murder, but a brighter day has now dawned. He could see no reason why orthodox Christians could in any event feel enmity to the Jews, even if they had crucified Christ, as but for this fact they would still all be liable to go to a climate much warmer than this after death. He said that Christ had taught nothing but what Judaism contained, but that his advent was a fortunate event, as it had resulted in a religious movement which could not otherwise occur. He believed that Judaism and Christianity would yet come together in one fold. He believed that if Christ were to come upon earth he would scarcely find himself at home among those who call themselves his followers. He might pay a visit to the right wing of Unitarianism and the left wing of Judaism, and he might find himself like the hero of a much-advertized novel preached against in a number of so called Christian churches.-Chicago Herald.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques .- What material should be used to represent the word "wine" in partaking of the sacrament?

Ans.-"And Melchisedek, king of Salem, brought forth bread and wine; and he was the priest of the most high God."-Genesis 14: 18. "Listen to the voice of Jesus Christ, your Lord, your God, and your Redeemer, whose word is quick and powerful. For behold, I say unto you, that it mattereth not what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink, when ye partake of the sacrament, if it so be that ye do it with an eye single to my glory; remembering unto the Father my body which was laid down for you, and my blood which was shed for the remission of your sins; wherefore a commandment I give unto you, that you shall not purchase wine, neither strong drink of your enemies; wherefore you shall partake of none, except it is made new among you; yea, in this my Father's kingdom which shall be built up on the earth. Behold, this is wisdom in me; wherefore marvel not for the hour cometh that I will drink of the fruit of the vine with you on the earth."-D. & C. 26: 1. "Behold, verily thus saith the Lord unto you, in consequence of evils and designs which do and will exist in the hearts of conspiring men in the last days, I have warned you, and forewarn you, by giving unto you this word of wisdom by revelation, that inasmuch as any man drinketh wine or strong drink among you, behold, it is not good, neither meet in the sight of your Father, only in assembling yourselves together, to offer up your sacraments before him. And behold, this shall be wine; yea, pure wine of the grape of the vine, of your own make."--D. & C. 86: r.

2.—Under what circumstances does it become legal to use pure water to represent the Lord's

A.-Under various circumstances. For instance when "pure wine" of our "own make" is unobtainable, or when wisdom suggests the use of water. See D. & C. 26: 1 previously quoted.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

BRO. G. T. Griffiths wrote from New Hope, Virginia, January 22d as follows:

"I met Bro. Moler on the 8th inst. at Dayton. Virginia. From there we went to Liberty Hall, and while there Bro. Moler received very sad news which made me feel very sorrowful. On the evening of the 12th inst. as Bro. Moler and I were sitting before the fireplace, waiting for the people to gather for preaching, news came that Bro. Moler's wife was dead. And what made it so sad was the fact that she had been dead since the 10th, and he could not get home until the 14th. He had been away from home nearly four months, I do not think that I ever felt so sorry for any person as I did for Bro. Moler. The blow was a hard one. If he could have been with her during her sickness, he would have felt much better. May God bless and comfort him and his children in their present distress. He has done a noble work in this mission, having opened up a number of new places, and baptized sixteen persons, and made a host of friends to the church. He should be returned to this mission by all means.

This is a hard mission to prosecute. The people are so prejudiced against the work. We can We can not get the use of a public building for love or Almost everybody belong to some church or another and they do lots of threatning, such as "Duck him," or "Tar and feather him." The people of Davton did duck a Salt Laker some years ago. One of the Staunton papers told its readers last week that we shipped two hundred persons from Rockingham county every year."

Bro. J. A. Currie Jr., has been having a discussion with a Christadelphian at or near Medina City, Texas, in which he has realized the promise: "Ye shall not be ashamed or confounded." The following extracts from his letter of the 18th ult. are self explanatory:

"I can not explain to you how happy I have been in the discussion. The Lord has surely stood by me all through it. I have never before had such liberty, and every discussion seems better. I dreaded to meet my opponent, but it was shown ne in a dream that all would be well, which has been fulfilled. . . . O, I could tell you so much, but suffice to say, God was with me to own and bless. If any young elders who go forth to battle with the enemy should fear, let them bow before God until he accepts their labors and all will be well. The Saints seem to be strengthened, and some who never attended our meetings have availed themselves of this opportunity. My wife is a great help to me, and it seems to be the Lord's will for us to devote our time to His cause for the present. May God's blessing follow the little Compendium."

From Manchester, England, under date of January 18th, Elder Joseph Dewsnup

Sen,, wrote as follows:

"Church prospects seem very good for the year now opening upon us. Several more names have been given in for baptism in the Manchester branch, and we are looking forward to the time when our Master's work shall be recognized and valued by the honest in heart in this corner of the Lord's vineyard. The Compendium, just issued, gives me great satisfaction, and, I think, supplies a want long felt by most of the ministry."

THE following item from the Chicago Tribune, shows that the leading prelate of the Catholic Church in America is sound and thoroughly American on the question of civil and religious liberty:

CARDINAL GIBBONS ON TOLERATION.

At the dedication of the new Catholic church, St Paul's, on North Carolina street, Baltimore, Maryland, January 27th, Cardinal Gibbons, in the course of his sermon, said: "We were informed recently by the daily newspapers that a certain anti-Christian Sunday-school was organized in this city for the purpose of advocating an infidel doctrine. Several ministers appealed to the municipal authorities to suppress the school. For my part I would be sorry to see the arm of the civil law used toward the suppression of this school. Coercion is not confession. Our divine Savior never had recourse to the arm of the law or the sword in teaching his doctrine. The only weapons we ought to use are the weapons of argument and persuasion in dealing with this school. The only sword I would draw against the enemy of Christ is the sword of the spirit."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

THE attention of our readers is called to an excellent article from the pen of Bro. William Woodhead entitled "Prehistoric Civilization and Ancient Art" which appears in this issue. Some strong proofs in support of the Book of Mormon are presented which are useful and valuable. More evidences of a similar nature will be furnished to the HERALD readers at an early day.

From Detroit, Michigan, Sr. M. Millard writes in the same spirit of appreciation of the work which characterizes so many letters from the Saints. "By one Spirit are we all baptized into one body have been all made to drink into one Spirit."

Prest. W. W. Blair spent Sunday the 27th with the Saints and friends at St. Joseph, Missouri, where he held two services, finding a good interest and encouraging prospects. Suitable committees have been appointed to provide for the coming Annual Conference. They will be heard from in due time, Bro. W. R. Calhoun of Courtland, Illinois, writes that inasmuch as he has heard complaints concerning the poor binding of some books issued from the Herald Office, he desires to state that he has carried and used the various books published and sold by the church, and that they have well endured the rough use and wear and tear, and have given him satisfactory service.

Bro. John Shields writes us from Maple Valley, Ontario, that the party named in his late letter to the HERALD should be John Taylor Jr., not "Sr.;" that the obit-uary notice of Bro. John Roney should have given the date of his death as December 16th; also that the minutes of the London district should have stated that "Samuel Brown baptized five." We correct by request.

Sister Mrs. George E. Ward of North Andover, Wisconsin, sends us a letter addressed to Bro. M. T. Short, which we mail to Millersburg, Illinois. She says: "I want Bro. Short to call here as there is need of preaching." We insert the above for the information of Bro. Short.

Among the many soul-cheering and inspiring letters received we acknowledge one from Sr. Carrie M. Ward of Cadillac, Michigan. She states that upon conversion she received ocular testimony by the presence of a bright light which shone around her; also by the peaceful presence of the Holy Spirit within.

Sister Mrs. J. Tilden of Beattie, Kansas, also writes expressive of her desires-mentioning her interest in the preaching of the word to her neighbors which has been done of late by Bro. J. D. Bennett.

Bro. T. J. Martin writes from Detroit, Minnesota, concerning his labors in his district, which have thus far resulted in the baptism of three, and the prospects are that others will follow. Bro. Martin feels encouraged to continue the effort, realizing that the Lord has greatly strengthened and blessed the Saints and himself in their efforts to establish the truth among the people. Sr. Maggie Transue of Barnes, Kansas, writes bearing testimony to the truth. Isolated from the Saints, surrounded by opposition and having to ply the needle to support an afflicted companion and an invalid child, she yet rejoices in and appreciates the word and Spirit of truth. She invokes the sustaining prayers of the Saints on behalf of the families of, as well as the ministry. If Saints rejoice amid adversity, those not so situated should certainly be able to do so. "Always abounding" was Paul's significant rule for advancing and attainment by the Saints.

Elder A. J. Moore, lately returned from Texas, delivered two good spiritual discourses at Lamoni on Sunday, the 27th ultimo. Bro. Moore will labor in the Nodaway, (Missouri) district until the Annual Conference. He returns north feeling well and in good spirits.

By letter from Bro. J. W. Layton, dated Port Greville, Nova Scotia, January 20th, we learn that he is to soon leave that northern clime for Independence, Mis-

From a letter received from Bro. Walter S. Taylor of Sherwin Junction, Kansas, dated January 24th, we are reminded of meeting him at the April conference of 1859, near Beaverton, Illinois, when the church numbered, all told, less than one hundred members. He alludes to those times in these words: "I started in the work when it was but a handful in numbers; now it is a mighty host. Surely, God has verified his promise to His servants that the Reorganized Church should prosper and prevail. For He is opening the way before it, is raising up many mighty, talented men, and blessing them with spiritual power."

Sr. Delmont Smith writes from Smithfield, Rhode Island, rejoicing in the latter day work which has been confirmed to her by the revelation and witness of the Holy Spirit.

Sr. Sarah Hayer of Sheridan, Illinois, states in a late letter that, though absent from the immediate vicinity of the branch to which she belongs, yet a good portion of God's Spirit is enjoyed by herself and family.

Bro. Joseph Squires recently wrote from Brooklyn, New York, that the Saints there had been greatly strengthened by a visit from Brn. W. H. and E. L. Kelley, and Bro. Easton of Waterford, Ontario.

Sr. Lottie Ferguson wrote from Montrose, Iowa, expressing her desires to be among the faithful ones in enduring and overcoming. Her mother died about one year ago, firm in the cause of truth, leaving her, two brothers, two sisters and her grandmother for whom she asks the prayers of the Lord's people.

Bro. Henry Bird of Proton, Ontario, wrote in good spirit, expressing thankfulness for the overruling providences that have led him through life and finally to the fold of the Good Shepherd-the church. Limited space forbids inserting his entire letter, also many others.

The brethren in various parts of the country from whom we have heard with the exception of but one endorse the movement concerning the building of the Lamoni College as a move in the right direction.

The January number of the Historical Record, edited by Andrew Jensen, Salt Lake City, Utah, is devoted to a well written and important article on Caldwell county, Missouri, and gives among many other valuable points much important intormation, gleaned largely from non-Mormon sources, in regard to the causes that led to, and the methods which accomplished, the driving out of about fifteen thousand Latter Day Saints from Missouri in 1838-9. It is of a piece with "Persecution and its Causes" published in the past in these columns, and it gives some items of testimony we then did not have in hand. Truth will eventually get to the front and prevail.

Bro. George Hampshire writes from Copleston, Ontario, endorsing the Compendium, stating that he is very much pleased with it. This is but one of the many appreciative statements made concerning that work. It should be in the hands of every adult member of the church. It will enable all to obtain a knowledge of the general faith and doctrines of the church.

AN OPEN LETTER TO A FRIEND.

(Concluded).

You tell me, "dear L-," that my last was comforting, and, in a measure, consoling to you, but that you are still groping in the dark, and do not see how it is that if God gave a witness which was to remain in His church even to the end of the world, and that if it was provided by Him that this witness was to confirm his doctrine, and to rank higher than the witness or testimony of those who knew him from the beginning of his ministry even to the hour when he was taken up to heaven; that it should bear witness to doctrines so diametrically opposed to each other upon points which, if the Bible is true, must be of vital importance to the one who believes them. "For instance," you say, "one tells me that salvation is free for every one who wills to be saved, while another claims that there is an election, and only the elect will be saved, and like the guests at the last bidding to the great supper, they will be compelled to enter in whether they wish to or not. Now if one of these be true, the other evidently can not be. And yet each party claims to have the testimony of the Holy Spirit to their separate and widely different beliefs. And yet others claim that only the righteous dead will be resurrected, and that the spirit of man sleeps, or is in an unconscious state from the time of death to the time of the resurrection. If indeed this witness bears testimony to the truth of all these conflicting doctrines, how can its testimony be true? And if it is not true, where then is there a foundation for faith? Believing with all the powers of our minds that a certain event, theory or doctrine is true will not make it true. We see evidences of this on every hand. What better condition then am I in for believing, if there is not provided a means by which I can know that my belief is correct? If the means provided to witness to or establish my belief is the same which is provided as a witness to the belief which is directly opposed to mine, then to me it appears as 'a house divided against itself,' and I can not trust myself to a guide so uncertain and perfectly unreliable as this one must be. Better never to cherish a hope than to live and labor for one which can at any moment be snatched from me, plunging me again in the depths of despair."

The conclusion at which you arrive, dear L., is most certainly correct; for no true witness could testify in the manner described by you; and yet the words of Jesus are true, and God is pledged to give to every man or woman a knowledge for himself of the truth of what Christ taught. Let me speak with all possible kindness consistent with plainness, when I say to you that your mistake lies in taking for granted that either the one or the other of these parties have received that witness. Christ is not divided, and God is unchangeable. His apostles taught, "One Lord, one faith, one baptism; for by one Spirit are ye all baptized into the body;" and Jesus said, "If ye are not one ye are not mine." The question which now most naturally arises, is, if there be a body or Church of Christ upon earth, how can we find it?

In my last I told you that if you desired to know more, I would point you to the teachings of God's word; for we have no other lamp for our feet, and if our faith is not supported by that, it will not stand the test which is to try men's souls as well as their faiths.

Upon one occasion when Jesus was talking with his disciples he inquired of them, "Whom do men say that I, the Son of Man, am?" And when they answered him that some said he was Elias, some John the Baptist, and some Jeremias; as if it was a small matter indeed, what men should say, he turned to his disciples and asked, "But whom say ye that I am?" Without any doubt or hesitation whatever, Peter answered, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." I have called your attention to this passage which you will find in Matthew, 16: beginning at the 14th verse, for the purpose of asking you to notice carefully the answer made by Jesus who said: "Blessed art Ithou, Simon Bar Jona, for flesh and blood hath not revealed this unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. . . . Thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it."

If you were called upon to day, dear L., to answer this same question. Who was he that more than eighteen hundred years ago was crucified by Pontius Pilate, above whose head was placed this inscription, "The King of the Jews?" what would you say? Would you answer as the people did in his day? or would you answer boldly and without hesitation as did Peter, that he was "the Christ, the Son of the living God?" Alas, you tell me that you are groping and know not the one living and true God, therefore you could not answer. Ask it then of those who say they have the Holy Ghost; and when they answer you, "He was the Christ," ask them this other question: "If you do not believe in revelation-do not believe in God's manifesting himself to man in this day as he did anciently-how do you know this fact!" Should they answer you, "We know it because it is revealed in the word of God," you, my friend, may safely answer them, "That is not enough. It is not the way Peter knew it, for Jesus said unto him: 'Flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven,' and Paul, who was taught the gospel by Christ himself, said to the Corinthians: 'No man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost."-1 Cor. 12:11.

Should you wish to apply the test still further, ask them the direct question, "Do you believe in present revelation?" and if you obtain for an answer (as most surely you will): that "the canon of Scripture is full, and having the written word, we have no further use for direct revelation," then add yet one other question to your list—"How then can I obtain eternal life?" Should they answer you, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ," I would say to you, my dear friend, belief is not knowledge. The promise of Christ was, "he shall know."

Further than this, Christ said: "This is life eternal, that they might know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent."-John 17:3. If it be life eternal to have this knowledge, and it can not be obtained in any way but by revelation direct from God, how then can any one obtain eternal life if revelation has ceased? The angel declared to John upon the Isle of Patmos, "The testimony of Tesus is the spirit of prophecy," and Jesus told his disciples when speaking of this same Comforter, "It shall teach you things to come." He also said: "But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father he shall testify of me."-John 15: 26. Here we have the double promise of continued revelation from

And now, dear L., we find ourselves led back again to the time when Christ commanded his disciples to tarry at Jerusalem and wait for the coming of this Comforter, and to the assertion made by us that they were not prepared to preach the gospel in its fulness and power until they were prepared to say to men: "Obey, and when vou have rendered obedience you shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost; for the promise is unto you and your children and all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call." And just here, lest a doubt should enter your mind in regard to how many are called, I refer you to Revelations 22: 17, which reads, "The Spirit and the bride say, Come. And let him that heareth say Come. And let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will let him take of the water of life freely."

Turn now to the gospel by Mark, as found in the sixteenth chapter, and you will there find that after Christ had directed his disciples as to what they should do, telling them to go into all the world and preach the pospel to every creature, and affixing the penalty of unbelief as well as the blessings to follow those who believed, he made this plain declaration: "These signs shall follow them that believe. In my name shall they cast out devils; they shall speak with new tongues; they shall take up serpents, and if they drink any deadly thing it shall not hurt them; they shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." The record goes on to tell us that after he said this to them, he was received up into heaven, and his disciples (first having obeyed his command to, "tarry at Jerusalem") preached everywhere, "the Lord working with them and confirming the word with signs following."

Now it was the Lord working with them through the power of the other Comforter he had promised to send; and of whom he said: "It is expedient for you that I go away, for if I go not away the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart I will send him unto you."—John 16:7.

Come we now to the direct answer of the question, "How shall we find the church of Christ? There was a means of confirmation provided by Christ, and we read that the word, or the gospel, was confirmed eighteen hundred years ago by signs following the believer. Like causes will produce like effects, and if the gospel was confirmed by signs following then, it should be confirmed in the same way now. If it was necessary in a day when there was but one sect known as the followers of Jesus of Nazareth, how much more would it be necessary now, when they have multiplied to hundreds, all claiming to be his followers, and yet, as you have said, each teaching doctrines diametrically opposed to the others.

The ministry left to proclaim the gospel when Christ went away, not only had authority to preach the gospel, but also had the power to confer the Holy Ghost upon those who obeyed it; and it was one of the office works of the Holy Ghost to testify of Christ, and confer that knowledge which Christ promised to all who would do the Father's will. This testimony the angel of the Apocalypse called "The Spirit of propecy." If then there be no longer direct reveltions from God, it is impossible for any one to know of the doctrine, whether it be true or false.

Let me say to you, dear friend, that among the first ordinances restored to earth, when the angel restored the gospel to Joseph Smith, was the ordinance of laying on of hands for the bestowing of the Holy Ghost; and when the elders were sent forth to preach the restored gospel they went with authority to say to the people, as Peter said upon the day of Pentecost: "Obey the Father's will, and you shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost;" and there are today thousands upon thousands of living witnesses to the fact of the fulfillment of the promise. Their witness will not suffice for you; for the same promise is made to you, and it remains for you test the truth or falsity of it for yourself; and while it remains upon the record, supported by thousands of witnesses to the fact of its literal fulfillment infidelity is left without an excuse, and those who will not believe and obey, come under condemnation. Just a few quotations now, to show you the teachings of the word upon the manner of its bestowal, and I must bring my letter to a close.

Turn first to Acts 8: 17-19. "Then laid they their hands upon them, and they received the Holy Ghost. And when Simon saw that through laying on of the apostles hands the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money, saying, Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands he may receive the Holy Ghost." This quotation shows that while Simon did not apprehend the terms upon which it was given, he yet saw clearly how it was bestowed.

In the 19th of Acts you will find where Paul met with certain disciples, and in a plain matter of fact way, asked the quesion, "Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed?" and when they answered him that they had not heard of it, he asked immediately, "Unto what then were ye baptised?" and when they told him "John's baptism," he immediately told them that John taught that they should believe on Christ; and he baptized them in the name of Christ: and "when Paul had laid his hands on them, the Holy Ghost came on them and they spake with tongues and prophesied."

Here was the confirming of the word with signs following, just as Jesus intended it should be, confirming the doctrine he taught, bearing witness of him that he was the Son of God, and that he has given assurance unto man of life and immortality beyond the tomb. Nor is this all, dear L——; "He hath appointed a day in the which he will judge the world in righteousness by him whom he hath ordained; whereof he hath given assurance of this unto all men, in that he hath raised him from the dead."

Trusting that I have been enabled to show you that the trumpet of God's witness (so to speak) gives no uncertain sound, and that we, as Latter Day Saints, offer to men the same terms of life and salvation which Jesus authorized his church anciently to offer, I will close by praying you to accept of his terms, take him at his word and test the matter for yourself; and when you have received a witness from God which no man can give, it will not be in the power of man to rob you of that testimony, and remember that it is the seal of that power above and beyond all others-seal and pledge that man shall live again and that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and of the unjust, and after the resurrection, judgment.

That you, dear L——, may be clothed upon with the righteousness of Christ, and be prepared to meet him at his second coming, attended by the angels of God, and the righteous dead (among whom will be your beautiful Claire—your dearly loved and early lost child,) is the earnest wish of

Your true and loving friend,

M.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Sister Flora Hannah, Sand Run, Ohio, writes: "I would like to tell the sisters how gratifying it has been to me to see those to whom I sent the Autumn Leaves last year, now in the church and subscribing for their own copies. I knew they were number one neighbors, and I had the Magazine sent to them; and now they cheerfully pay for them and think them worth double the price. I have sent to two others this year, hoping for the same results. Not only are these in the church, but their husbands and children are with them, and they are rejoicing together in the fulness of redemption. If others of the good sisters would try the same method they might be the means of spreading the light. Why should we not fish some in our own weak way? God can show his own strength through our weak efforts, if we indeed desire to serve him, knowing that he is, and is the rewarder of those who diligently seek him."

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Iowa.

Dear Sister Frances:-We write to inform you that the sisters of this branch are endeavoring to serve the Lord and keep his commandments. Quite a number met at our church the 27th of December, and organized a society to be known as the Prayer Union. The officers chosen were Sr. E. C. Dodson, president; Sr. C. A. Riley, vice president; Sr. C. A. Beebe, secretary; Sr. A. Deuell, treasurer. The following regulations were adopted: That each member should pay ten cents for membership and five cents monthly dues; but that if there should be any who can not afford to pay these fees and dues, that they shall be cordially received, and their names recorded, and be entitled to all the privileges of the society. It was resolved that we meet every Thursday afternoon when the weather is favorable.

We met again the 3d of January. Two more names were enrolled, and we had a pleasant and profitable session, and were blessed in prayer and testimony. We earnestly desire that all the sisters who can, will meet with us and pray that God may bless us in this effort to have oil in our vessels and our lamps trimmed and burning, and to be ready to go out to meet the great Bridegroom. Your sisters in Christ,

JUNIATA, Tuscola Co., Mich., Jan. 9th.

E. C. Dodson, C. A. RILEY, C. A. BEEBE.

Dear Sisters:- I see one sister in speaking of teaching our children calls it our first and most sacred duty. Yes, I believe it is. In D. & C., page 251, it says: "But I have commanded you to bring up your children in light and truth, but verily I say unto you * * * you have continued under this condemnation. You have not taught your children light and truth according to the commandment; and that wicked one hath power as yet over you; and this is the cause of your affliction." Read the remainder of this section, also page 200. Many do not think it right for their children to be baptized when eight years old. They either think that God does not know at what age their children are accountable, or reject the commandment. Let us read what one of the twelve has written: "Perhaps some of the parents may say, 'Well, I do not believe in persuading children to be baptized.' That is, they mean that they do not believe in persuading their children to love God and to keep his commandments. They do not believe in persuading their children to regard the injunction, 'Rember thy Creator in the days of thy youth.' If the devil and his agents of the pleasure-loving world will agree not to persuade the children to serve the world, the flesh and the devil, and to forget God and his service, then will I say it is right upon the part of the parents not to persuade. But be assured, O, foolish parents, that while you do not coax or persuade your children to believe the gospel and to repent and be baptized, the devil is unceasing in his efforts to persuade them to not do these things.

The world ceases not to persuade them to become its votaries, and the flesh is daily persuading them to gratify its lusts. Ah, yes, the enemies of your child's soul are not so squeamish about this matter of persuading as you are. I do not believe in coxing, or hiring, or bribing, or scaring, or forcing children to be baptized; but to teach a child the gospel in its fullness as early as it can comprehend it and exhort him to obey the gospel, and thus early in life begin to serve God and work out his salvation, if even it be with fear and trembling, is not coaxing, or hiring, or frightening, or compelling him to be baptized. It is simply doing what God commands parents to do."

There is a great deal for us to do. We have no time to waste in light reading, or idle jesting and frivilous talk. We need all our time to prepare ourselves for the life beyond; and there is a great responsibility resting on us as mothers, as the poet has said in the following lines:

"Infancy, the tender fountain;
Power may with beauty flow.
Mothers first to guide the streamlets;
From them souls unerring go
Go they or, for good or evil,
Sunshine streamed or darkness huried,
For the hand that rocks the cradle
Is the hand that rules the world."

This is a great deal for us to think of, that from us souls unerring go; and whether it be for good or evil will depend on how we bring them up. Let us be very careful how we train their young minds.

I think we should try to take our children to meeting once a week: at least bring our children up to do while they are young what we will like to have them do when they are older. Some, I see, seldom ever take their children to meeting. When they are grown up you will feel to mourn if they do not care to attend meeting; but how can you expect it to be different if you have not brought them up to attend?

Some think they ought to keep their children at home, and seldom ever take them any place, in order thus to keep all temptations from them. When those children get from under their parents control, and launch out into the world unequipped for the battles of life, they are met by storms of temptation and they yield to them; and can we wonder at it? Whose fault is it? Did you teach your children to resist temptation? "Why, no," you say, "we kept it from them as much as possible." Take a young animal and keep it shut up for a while, and when you let it out it is wild with delight. Can you wonder then what makes your children so wild? On the other hand we can let our children go too much; but we should try not to carry it to extremes either way, but use judgment in all things.

I should like to see more written concerning Sunday Schools. They are a great help in teaching the young. I agree with a brother who wrote a piece in the Herald not long ago. He carried the idea that it was as necessary to have the Sunday School as the meeting for the older ones. Is it right for Saints to send their children to Sunday Schools of other denominations? For my part, I do not believe in teaching my children the doctrines of men. If we have no Sunday School of our own, we can take the Hope and teach them from the lessons in that. All who will try those lessons will find them a great help. We have nearly forty here in our branch. There are twenty two of the Saint's children here at present that are old enough for day school and under fifteen, besides those that are older than that, and some among the out-siders that would attend a Sunday School here if the Saints were alive enough to have one. But the human family seems prone to selfishness. They are willing to go to any amount of trouble to have a big meeting, because it will be a pleasure to themselves, but do not care to go to the same amount of trouble for the benefit of the rising generation. The devil is ever ready to bring excuses against anything that is for good. Read in D. & C., page 171; to W. W. Phelps it says, "And again, you shall be ordained to assist my servant Oliver Cowdery to do the work of printing, and of selecting and writing books for schools in this church. that little children may receive instruction before me as is pleasing unto me."

Ever praying that I may live by every word that proceedeth from the mouth of God, I remain your sister, Anna Phelps.

ARE THEY NEAR US?

Written on seeing a poem signed Carrie A. Thomas.

In looking over Zion's Hope some verses caught my eye, And as I spoke methought I heard a well known voice reply

So suddenly I scarce could move. The words were plain and clear

As though the tongue that uttered them was speaking in mine ear.

In deepest wonder, while I gazed upon the written word, Came recollections of the past. T'was not her voice I

For I had watched beside the corpse of her whose name I read

Signed at the bottom of the page. I knew that she was dead,

And yet the one that penned those lines seemed standing at my side.

I turned as though I fain would grasp the hand extended wide

To welcome me with look of love as she had done before, And words of kindly sympthy as in the days of yore.

How strange that I should hear her voice—as plain as it could be!

But gone the dear familiar face I longed so much to see! No better woman could be found, a friend in time of need, A faithful follower of the Lord, a saint in word and deed!

She feared not death, but loth to leave her home, her children dear.

aTwas for thir sake she clung to life through pain and suffering here;

But death undaunted heeded not. He took away his prize. He left us weeping here below, and bore her to the skies.

It is a mystery we can not solve, though studied every day, Why those who are much needed here, should thus be called away.

Aias, we can not comprehend, nor of His wisdom tell;
But those who love the Lord will know, "He doeth all things well!"

In all talk about persons, let it be their merits that we hasten to disclose, their good deeds that we gladly unfold. In all discussion on character, let the good come into prominence. In all unuttered hopes for the future, let our highest ideals receive the emphasis. Let truth, and not error, light and not darkness, love and not hate, be our themes. So shall we increase and perpetuate all that is good by frank utterance, while evil will decrease and disappear under the thick drapery of silence.

Scholars are men of peace; they bear no arms, but their tongues are sharper than Actius's sword; their pens carry feathers and give a louder report than thunder. I had rather stand in the shock of a basilisk than in the fury of a merciless pen.

Correspondence.

TULARE CITY, Cal., Jan. 21st.

Bro. Blair: On the fifth day of last October, in company with Bro. D. Brown, I left my home (Mulberry, San Benito) for my appointed field of labor. We passed on to Peach Tree, Monterey county, preached a few times and baptized four. Went then to Long Valley, same county, preached a few times and baptized one. We left Saints there with their sweet spiritual songs rigning in our ears, and three days after we were grasping the hands of the Lord's noble sons and daughters in Tulare county. We labored here as best we could under the circumstances, it being one of the greatest farming counties in the state and our visit in the seeding season. But on Saturday the 19th instant I baptized six who live near this city, a Mr. John Walker, his wife, two sons and two daughters. He, when a boy, lived in the family of Joseph the Seer, and now desires to see "Young Joseph." They all are now rejoicing in the truth which makes us free. A few others in the county are near the kingdom. I married a couple here on the thirteenth. Your co-worker,

J. H. LAWN.

Cook's Point, Tex., Jan. 14th.

Dear Brethren:-The work still moves on at Cook's Point. I have baptized eleven this month and think some others will follow. I expect to start out from this point, which is now my home, in company with Bro. A. J. Moore to preach in Burleson and Bell counties. Where can I find the written authority for consecrating oil to anoint the sick? Where can I find the authority for using consecrated oil internally and externally by lay members of the church? Where can I find the authority for an elder to give a little consecrated oil to the sick to take before anointing them with the oil? Remember that I want these questions by a "thus saith the Scriptures," for we are to live by every word which proceedeth out of the mouth of God.

Yours in gospel bonds,

E. W. NUNLEY.

[Replying to these questions all and severally: Oil was issued in ancient times in religious worship and for the benefit of the sick. Whatever was used for religious purposes was consecrated or set apart by prayer. It was used as a type of the blessing and healing powers of the Holy Ghost-that which gives bodily and spiritual light, life, health, joy and peace, and which sanctifies the soul. Further than the indirect proof and the reasonable conclusion that oil was blessed by prayer, and so set apart for sacred purposes, we know of no direct Scriptural statement to that effect. The fact of its use and the command so to do is sufficient, and personally, we should anticipate no difficulty in meeting objection to the blessing of it. Bread and wine were blessed in consecration as typical of the body and blood of Christ, and why should not the type of the Holy Spirit be so consecrated? What means more appropriate? What objection can possibly be urged against it? We have not a full account of all the teachings of Christ and the apostles, but we have sufficient to justify that method of blessing oil. "Ask and ye shall receive" is applicable to the reception of every favor and blessing from God. James 5:14 is authority for internal or external use. As to giving oil before anointing "Against such there is no law." Oil set apart by the servants of God may be used by the laity, being designed for the good of God's people, just as Saints may present the healing power of the gospel to their neighbors, although not called and ordained to preach. It is fair to presume that the church has been directed aright in matters not requiring especial command for every detail. Read 1 Timothy 4:5; 1 Thessalonians 5:17, 18; Hebrews 9th and 10th chapters. _Ep]

FARWELL, Mich, January 22d.

Bro. Blair: Our cause has been withstood by our enemies in Brinton, twelve miles from here. Bro. E. D. Bennett and I stood by it, and God caused the wrath of men to praise him in that place. By accident a young man shot his little sister, and I was requested to preach her funeral sermon. I did so, and was blessed by the good Spirit of the Master; much good was done, and some hard hearted old men, who scarce ever shed a tear, turned their faces to the wall and wept. One man said "Brother Cornish, I am convinced that this is the true gospel." Said he, "You may talk about power, and fall down and vell and make such noise as some do around here. but I tell you that is power, the power of the Holy Ghost. I felt its power and so did that congregation. I am ready for baptism; and I am not alone—there will be others with me."

Brother Blair, God is with his people, and the Holy Spirit, through his servants, is convincing this world of sin, of righteosness and of a judgment to come. Oh, may we ever live so we may enjoy that Comforter!

J. J. CORNISH.

SWEET HOME, Mo., Jan. 23d.

Bro. Blair: - The work here is moving along slowly. We have the opposing power to contend with. I have read a small paper sent to this district by E. Robinson called the Return On the eighth page I find this statement: "We do not wish or intend to compromise any one in what we may write and publish in these columns. We issued the prospectus for the publication of this periodical at our own volition, influenced, we believe, by that peaceful, quiet Spirit which has been our friend all our life." On the twelfth page we are told that, May 3d, 1834, the name of the church was changed. That was one year before E. Robinson joined the church, because on the first page he tells us he united with the church in Kirtland, Ohio, in 1835. On page thirteen he tells us he alwys regretted this action of the church in changing its name. Then if I am to believe E. Robinson, that Spirit that he says was his friend all his life, led him into a false church and kept him in that condition for fifty three years, and that now that same Spirit moves him to write and invite all true Latter Day Saints to return! What confidence can I have in a Spirit that will lead me into errors and keep me there for fifty-three years of the best part of my life, and then, when I have become old and childish, invite me into some more errors! In the letter of J. C. Whitmer and John J. Snyder, on page five, we read that D. Whitmer had written Bro. Joseph that he loved him and loved his father, but that Bro. Joseph had doubted this; and on page six we read: "Many of the Latter Day Saints do not believe Bro. David when he says he loves them." Well, Bro. Blair, how else could Bro. Joseph and "many of the Latter Day Saints" doubt when they know that this same David Whitmer, in 1828-9, hauled powder and lead and other war material to drive the Saints out and away from their homes in Missouri in the dead of winter!

On page thirteen Mr. Brown objects to the name Jesus as part of the name of Christ's Church, and E. Robinson tries to sustain Mr. Brown; but on page fourteen Mr. Robinson says: "We doubt if there are any people on the face of the earth who believe more firmly that Jesus is the Christ than do the members of the Church of Christ." Then why object to the name "Jesus?" The Return is full of contradictions. It can do Yours, James Thomas. no harm here.

LISBON FALLS, Maine, Jan. 3d. Brother Blair:-I am pleased to inform you we are continuing our work in preaching the gospel for a witness. The year past has been one of encouragement for us in Maine, and reports will show well for additions by baptisms. The inauguration of a yearly Reunion for New England was had by one at Jonesport during the summer which was a success and already reported in the Herald. After my return from New Hampshire where Bro. Bond and I made an effort to introduce the work in that state, to be followed up at some subsequent time, I went to Oxford county, this state, into regions where our people have not been. At Dixfield Centre I found a people not creed-bound, which is something so seldom found that it is worthy of notice. The eagerness displayed by them to hear was cheering and of an intelligent kind. As many as twenty written questions were sent up to the desk to be answered, affording an opportunity to get at points not fully explained in the preaching. I preached twelve times for them, including one funeral sermon. From there I went to East Dixfield and preached in the Union church. There is another church in the place owned by the F. W. Baptists which I did not get although some friend tried for it. At my second meeting I was opposed by a man at the close of my discourse, who propounded several questions the tendency of which was to arouse the passions and prejudices of the people and have them shut the church against me. He brought a book to read and besmear me with Utah Mormonism and such trash: but it only served to bring out a greater number to hear me preach. My opponent proved to be a Deacon of the F. W. Baptist church. This caused me to issue a challenge to his church to meet me in fair, honorable debate governed by proper rules. His absence was conspicious during the remainder of my meetings there.

I don't wonder that there are skeptics and that people lose confidence in religious matters, when such cowardly doings are had by men professing to be Christians. God cannot condemn people for rejecting such manifestations of religion, for "God is light and in him is no darkness at all." The nature of such institutions are clearly seen by the way they shun the light and avoid investigation, and the consequence is that the brave and noble minds are leaving the churches and become Agnostics, Liberals, etc., etc. And they serve a good purpose in society by keeping in check these religious intolerants while the gospel message gradually wends its way throughout the world "as a witness."

It appears clear to my vision, as time advances, that our work as defenders of the gospel of Christ in its entirety is needed—a supply to a demand. They have divided Him up so into parts-"The Historical Christ," "The Ideal Christ," "The Ethical Christ," "The humanitarian side," "The medium," that Paul, if alive now, might well say "Is Christ divided?" To accept of Him in one sense and deny Him in another is inconsistent. To speak of Him as an Ideal and then deny Him doctrinally is a sample of it.

I also preached at Severy Hill and Science Hill where the people were desirous of hearing. Found many generous folks there. It is a pleasure to talk to such. I left them to spend Christmas at home, and am now ordered to the Massachusetts district for a while. Bro. Green is operating in the eastern part of Maine, and at last accounts was meeting with some success.

F. M. SHEEHY.

PLEASANTON, Iowa, Jan. 23d.

Bro. Blair:-I went to the Keller school house on the evening of the 20th inst. to hear Mr. Booth reply to our preaching there in December last. After he got through we announced meeting for the next evening in order to correct some of his teachings. We had a good hearing and fair liberty, and the next evening we had excellent liberty. We intend to continue until next Sunday evening if the interest continues good. The Christian Brethren are aroused and they said last evening that if we could get the M. E. Church their minister from Cainsville would meet us in discussion on the three propositions discussed by Bro. Kelley and Mr. Braden at Kirtland. Ohio. We don't know what way it will end, but by the help of the Lord we intend to stand for the truth against opposition from every source. Pray for us that we may be blessed. and the truth be triumphant. Bro Wells is with In gospel bonds,

M. M. TURPEN.

WHEELER'S GROVE, Iowa, Jan. 21st.

Bro. Blair: - Bro. H. Kemp has been here according to appointment and has created quite an excitement by his discussion with an Adventist on the immortality of the soul. The Adventist affirmed that the soul was not immortal. There was an individual there that helped the Adventist all he could by carrying some of Pratt's works to him and the new translation of the Bible. He tried to show by that, that the doctrine of the pre-existence of man was a dangerous doctrine and would lead into polygamy, although he said that he was well aware that the Saints at this place did not believe in that doctrine. But he could not see why they did not. He tried to make light of the New Translation, in regard to man's creation, and said that it looked bad for Joe Smith. He made some remarks about what he heard Pratt say in the pulpit about one year

Brother Kemp in his reply said that he must have seen a spirit, but that that could not have been, for he did not believe in spirits; for, said he, "Pratt has been dead several years." Bro.

Kemp referred to Christ's transfiguration on the mount. The reply was so weak that he had to resurrect Moses before Christ, and the people all saw the weakness of that argument.

He was preaching in the Christian Church for awhile, but they closed it against him, and he is now in our church. Last night he preached for two hours on the apostasy of the church and the angel's proclamation. Can we not have some good elder come and reply to him? I think it would do good. Yours, S. C. SMITH.

LEXINGTON, Tenn., Jan. 15th.

Dear Herald: The work is not moving along fast here at this time, but Elder John Thomas is in our midst preaching all that he can when he can get a house to preach in. We have a branch here, organized by Elder Thomas. He has had to battle against opposition, but has made many friends, and a goodly number are investigating. I am satisfied that all the seed sown will never be rooted up. Bro. S. Reed and I were ordained elders and we expect to do all we can to defend the work, for we know it is the work of the Lord. Every sectarian church is closed up against us. Even the Court-house was closed against Bro. Thomas, and there is wailing and gnashing of teeth because they can't have the power to put us to death. They won't meet Bro. Thomas in discussion, but all the falsehoods that can be thought of are in circulation and they pass at par. I don't know but what a premium is on a goodly portion of them.

Elder Thomas has made an opening in Decatur county, Tennessee, fifteen miles from here and has an appointment for the first Sabbath in February at the same place. He thinks there is a very good interest there.

There is one church, built by a man who does not belong to any sect. This house is open for us yet. If there ever was a time when the Saints should pray for the Lord to send more laborers into his vineyard, now is the time, for I think the harvest is nearly ripe.

May the Lord bless the church in all her departments is the humble prayer of one of the poor despised servants of the Lord Jesus Christ.

J. H. Scott.

Monmouth, Ontario, Jan. 15th.

Dear Herald:-I do like to read the letters in your columns. They are cheering to me and I often think that if it were not for you I would grow careless, but when I read the encouraging testimonies of God's people it cheers and strengthens me. God has blessed me in many ways, and I feel that the more humble and faithful we live the more blessings we will enjoy. My desire is to serve God with all my heart, ever striving to keep his commands. Although I feel my weakness very much, my desire is to go on to perfection. I know I can not be perfect all at once, but by patient continuance in well doing I shall be able to overcome. I hope to lay up treasures in heaven, for Jesus said, "where your treasure is, there will your heart be also," and God forbid that my treasure shall be in that which can not endure when all things are to be tried and shaken, for only that which can not be shaken will remain. I was baptized at Cameron and came here. There were no Saints here then but my two brothers and myself, and sometimes I would go to church, but felt that the truth was not preached there, and I would long for the time when the servants of God would stand where the hireling was and preach the gospel, that the honest in heart might no longer be fed on false doctrine. Thank God the time has come and there are now over fifty Saints in this branch and meet together and rejoice in the truth and feel happy to think that now in this day and age when we are told there are so many roads to heaven, that we can safely say we know we are on the right path, and feel that the word of Jesus is being fulfilled when he said, "If any man would do the will of the Father he shall know of the doctrine whether it is of God." We have enemies but feel that they can do us no harm. We had Bros. J. H. Lake and W. J. Smith with us a while this summer and enjoyed some grand sermons delivered by them; we also remember their wise counsel and hope to be enabled to put their advice in practice. We feel that if we do not it will stand as a testimony against us in the great day for which we hope to be prepared. We also had Bro. McIntosh with us for a short time and feel strengthened and edified by his talk and preaching He had a young elder with him by the name of Hough. He is a fine young man and we think he will yet be an able man in the work.

our sister,

Margaret J. Braden.

PLANO, Ills. Jan., 23d.

Brother Blair:-When the Herald office was here and about to move away, it was feared this branch, and consequently the work of the church would go down in Plano; and so it doubtless would if the good Lord had left the place also. But He was pleased to remain and bless the sheep that were left, for he was their Shepherd still, and was willing to lead if they were willing to be led. For the seven years since the office was removed he has blessed us and has sent to our aid some of his servants from time to time, such as Brn. M. T. Short, A. H. Smith and J. C. Foss, not forgetting some two or three visits from Bro. Joseph Smith, all of which were productive of good. The labors of Bro. Foss were more continuous than were those of the others, and more united with the branch under his labors. I will say (and when I say it I am speaking the the sentiments of the Plano Saints) we love to have the brethren come, and we appreciate their labor of love.

You know the most of the Plano Saints are not rich as to this world's goods, but in these years they have put a new roof on the meeting house, papered, painted and varnished the room, have also put a new fence around the church lot, and last of all have purchased a new organ, and a new carpet for the platform and aisles

I have not got the exact figures, but altogether these improvements have not cost less than $500 Great credit is due to some outside of the church for aid rendered. And in that same time there has been about 100 added to the branch, and 62 removals leaving us a net gain of 38. Many are scattered to other places, and have not called for their letters, which, if they would do, we would be glad to grant them, for we like to keep our numbers as near as possible to those living near. Our spiritual condition is about fair. Of course it can be improved. We have services Sabbath mornings at 10:30; evening at 7:00, with two prayer meetings in the week, also tellowship meeting the first Sunday in each month at three o'clock p. m. There is a very prosperous Sabbath School in charge of Bro George VanDran. He is a new beginner, or nearly so, in the Sabbath School, but he is the right man in the right place. The Lord has blessed him since he took charge of the school.

Bro. Foss is now down in Livingston county. He writes me he has crowded houses

I love to hear of the growth of the church as the news comes to us through the Herald (one of the best papers in the world if not the very best, and I think it is the latter,) and my prayer shall ever be for the wellfare of Zion, and the building of the kingdom in these last days.

I think Autumn Leaves the paper for the youth, and it ought to be in every family sure. May the Lord bless his Saints in all the world and especially those who are sending such good news.

Yours in love, W. VICKERY.

HASTINGS, Victoria, Aus., Dec. 21st.

Bro. Foseph: We have just arrived here from New South Wales and find all well. Bro. Butterworth and Bro. Trembath have been laboring in several new fields around here; one baptized. Bro. Wight has been up the country and has created an interest in several new places. He has stirred up the wrath of another Braden; and may have a discussion—that is, if he can condescend to dispute with him. Is it not strange that so many men are to be found who, while professing to be the ministers of the gospel, and servants of Christ, are neither gentlemen nor Christians. These chaps profess to "prophecy"—that is, preach (for they call that prophesying) and who "cast out devils" by converting gamblers, drunkards, etc., (as they say they do) and "do many wonderful works in the matter of leading souls to Christ, etc., and they claim to do it all in the name of Christ. Yet in the day of Christ's coming they will hear him declare that he never knew (that is, recognized) them; and they certainly never knew him, for they to a man deny the only way by which they can know him, that is by revelation through the Holy Spirit, which they claim is found only in the written word, and of course is not understood, received or enjoyed by them any more than by any and all others who own (or can borrow) a Bible and can read it, and whether moral or vicious characters. There are many fine, noble people among the "Disciples" of Campbell, Scott & Company, but there are many who, as I said above, are neither gentlemen nor Christians.

I left the branches in New South Wales in as good condition as possible. The Saints in Nambucca branch, who never until recently had any prayer or testimony meetings only while Bro. Burton was among them, have been holding them regularly ever since we were there, and many, indeed most all now take part, and lately some of them have received the gift of prophecy, to the edification of themselves and others. I completed the branch organization as far as suitable material could be found. It is in far better condition in every sense than it ever was. The Forster branch is splendidly officered. The presiding, elder, priests, teachers and deacon are well qualified for their respective posts and are zealous and faithful, and the members generally are earnest and faithful. Bro. Wright-lately appointed Bishop's Agent-is universally esteemed as a man of energy, uprightness, and fine business ability; and as Bishop's Agent he will give the church the best of satisfaction. Bro. Loving (a Swede by birth) lately ordained an elder by me, is developing into a first rate preacher, and others there are improving fast.

The Wallsend branch is in quite fair condition. There is a young man (a priest) there who has fine abilities and would make a capital laborer in the ministry, but he is hardly sound on a point or two of the faith, and therefore I can not encourage him to go into the field; but he may get into more perfect harmony with the spirit of the work, and can if he will do efficient service in the ministry, providing he will be more humble.

The Hamilton branch has some excellent people in it, and some good material for active use in the ministry. It is in as good condition as it can be placed at present. They have a fine singer and a good musician in the person of Elder H. Broadway, who is also zealous in the ministry. This brother came very near being lost to the church through the influence of a pseudo-elder named Williams, who has been always a source of trial to the branch by his rebellious and factious spirit. He has caused all the missionaries much trouble through his contentious course. He assumes that the whole church is wrong, and under condemnation because it takes the ground that branch priests must preside in the absence of the presiding elder. It can not be denied that the letter of the rule favors the idea of a priest not presiding when there is an elder present, yet as the general authorities have decided that it means differently, I insist that their interpretation shall be observed. It would be a good thing if the paragraph was more clear and definite, or at least less ambiguous. But concerning Bro. Broadway, he has concluded to observe the church rule and has been restored to full fellowship. But Williams is contentious, and does not recognize our authority, nor indeed yours or that of any body among us. His wife insists that he is now and ever was a Brighamite.

The branches in Victoria are in quite good condition. There are several elders quite well qualified to go out to preach, but one only is at liberty to go away from home at present. The Bishop's Agent, Bro. E. McGurk, is an efficient officer, and will give a good account of his stewardship. The Saints in Australia are zealous, faithful, intelligent and generous hearted. They are liberal with their means, as a rule; and will do all in their power to assist with their means the missionaries who are sent here. We have not lacked for anything as yet, but all of our necessities have been willingly suppplied. I do not mean that all our wants have been met, but we have not lacked anything that we have really needed. I believe that the cause in Australia is in a first rate condition, and I am quite confident that it will not be the fault of brethren Wight and Butterworth if it does not continue so. The religious portion of the people are decidedly priest-ridden in Australia. Not many are independent in spirit, but follow blindly their blinded leaders. This is particularly true of the older people. The younger class are the reverse, for they are too independent, and are generally indifferent to religious or spiritual matters. Their whole attention, when not engaged in business matters, is taken up with amusements, such as cricket matches, boat racing, horse racing, foot ball matches and other sports take up their spare moments. They are not indifferent to our faith only, but to all others likewise. In fact they have become disgusted with the tyranical spirit of the priests of the various denominations, as exhibited toward their parents and others; and also with the servile disposition shown by the people toward these priests; and they care not for religion nor religious teachers. As a rule the people will not come out to our meetings—many because of prejudice and many through indifference to religious things.

If Bro. Wight could get up a discussion in every town and village, he would have crowded and jammed houses because it would amuse the people and a few might become interested in our faith in that way. But as it takes more than one to make a bargain, so it is necessary for some one to take up the challenges that we always throw out to the clergy to show us our error by discussing our respective faiths, before there can be a debate. The very fact of our being so bold and saucy, perhaps, has kept us from being challenged before this.

But while as a general thing the people will not turn out to hear us, yet there are some few places where a number will turn out, but they are principally places where a prospect of a discussion or wrangling over the Scriptures is expected. In Sydney, Newcastle, Hamilton, etc., the people will go out on the public domain or parks and stand for hours in the sun listening to men arguing upon religion, or science, or politics, but if invited to a comfortably seated hall where they could rest while hearing, they will not come. We have held meetings where not a soul except church members were present, yet within fifty yards (just far enough away so they could not hear) there would be scores of people standing or sitting on doorsteps or curbstones. The only plan that will work here is to thoroughly advertize the meetings; give the people three or four good chances to hear, and when they will not, move to another place; and so on till a place is found where they will listen, and then keep up the meetings as long as the interest lasts. Then go over the route again in a few months, and if they will not come out, then shake off the dust of our garments against the place. Of course in some places where we have branches there is a stumbling block in the shape of some unwise or improper action of some sort or other on the part of a member or more. It is not always nor often anything especially immoral. It may be overzeal, or unwise statements, or difficulty with a factious and quarrelsome officious neighbor. But the world stands waiting for an excuse, and when one does not in reality exist, they will make one to order. In looking the field over it is a hard one, and if great numbers uniting with the church was the great point to be reached, we may well feel discouraged; but if only one soul. one honest, earnest, worthy soul should be converted to the truth, it would justify any amount of labor, trouble and sacrifice. If Christ should consider that the gaining of the whole world would not compensate the loss of a soul, we should consider that the saving of a soul is worth the expenditure of any amount of means, or any measure of time and talk. The seed must be sown everywhere. Most of it may fall among thorns, or stones, or on barren soil; yet some may fall in good ground; it may be but a few grains, but if the sowing was not done, or if the grain was not planted, it never would grow. Unsown it would simply wither away, or dry up, or perish in some way; at any rate it would not reproduce its kind or bear fruit. No one can tell whether the seed sown in apparently good soil, will all grow to maturity, or bring forth fruit, but as we do not know that it will not bring forth even abundantly, we must sow and water and leave the result with God. We will have done our part, and the responsibility (if any) of a failure at the harvest time, will not be on our shoulders.

I do not think that I have kept back anything that was profitable to the churches. I certainly have not shunned to declare all the counsel of God, that I am required to declare. I feel conscious of having done my duty here to the church, and that seemed to be my special, if not my only duty here. I feel therefore free to retire, but not with any pleasure, for two reasons: 1st, I love the Saints here very much; we could not be treated more kindly, hospitably, or brotherly and sisterly. 2d, I know that discomfort, inconvenience, exposure and vexation await us on the Islands. Of course there are some things that encourage, but not much, or not as much as will discourage. Duty called us there before, and it does so again. I do not expect to have my motives in going there at first, nor for leaving there, nor for leaving here so soon, and for returning there to be properly judged by all. I have been misjudged and found fault with by some in all of my movements; but I have been vindicated by the Lord so far, and I leave the issue with him. By the grace of God I expect to disappoint some in their expectations and surmisings, as I have been by that grace enabled to do thus far.

Unless restrained by the Spirit or counselled differently by the First Presidency, under whom I labor, I shall expect to leave here about the fifth of February for Tahiti, and if the Lord will I trust that we may return to America some time previous to the General Conference of 1890, which I hope may be a "General Assembly" as well.

We can be adddressed at Papeete, Tahiti, via San Francisco. If we should not go there so soon, or at all, letters will be forwarded to us. But we expect now to go there at the time named.

Your brother in Christ.

Constitution de la recommendation de la recommendat

SHERIDAN, Nev., Jan. 20th. Bro. W. W. Blair:-The church has taken a new start here since brethren Thomas Daley and W. O. Skinner came to us from California some two months since. Bro. Daley baptized quite a number. The Spirit of God was with these brethren and much good was accomplished. They organized a branch of about twenty-five members and we have our regular meetings. Brother Daley made quite a stir among the different religious sects. Rev. Gardner reviewed Bro. Daley's preaching, but he resorted to slandering the founder of the church Bro. Daley represented. A discussion was held by Rev. Gardner, of the M. E. Church and Elder T. Daley, each gentleman was to maintain his respective church from the Bible-King James' Translation. It came off the 9th of December in the M. E. church at Genoa before a full house. Elder Daley made a powerful defence from the word of God to the astonishment of the congregation, many of whom would not come to hear us only for the debate. The Rev. Gardner did not stick to the Bible, but brought another book, contrary to the agreement. Elder Daley then used the same as a weapon against his opponent to the amusement of his hearers and the disgust of his opponent. Six were baptized the next day or two following.

The Genoa Courier the week following, by the influence of Rev. Gardner, published a slanderous article against Elder Daley, representing him as not of a sound mind. The article made great dissatisfaction among disinterested parties, but the truth finally came out and some that would not have heard otherwise have read the article and may inquire after the truth. Bro. Daley is a faithful expounder of Scripture and is calculated to do much good. The Saints in Nevada desire him to return and labor among them.

PREHISTORIC CIVILIZATION AND ANCIENT ART.

BY WILLIAM WOODHEAD.

WITH the light of modern research, which is revealing to us the past lives of prehistoric nations, we begin to see them busy in life struggling for existence, similar to man at this day; and the further we get from those men who were supposed to be the first lawgivers among men and founders of empires, the nearer they are getting to us. This is remarkably the case with Egypt. Its chronology has been, and is yet, one of the stubbornest to reconcile with the Bible. For instance: Herodotus who studied its history at the feet of the Egyptian priests, in the fifth century B. C. concluded that the empire had then existed eleven or twelve thousand years. (Herodotus 2, pp. 100, 142). Manetho, a native priest of the third century B. C., who wrote for the Greeks after the Greek conquest, made the empire to reach to Menes whose reign was 500,400 B. C., but Eratosthenes reduced the 2,900 years of Manetho's old empire to 1,076. (See Rawlinson's Egypt, vol 2, p. 4). The Armenian, Eusebius, however, raises the number again to 3,023. (See note 20, vol. 2, p. 281).

Pandorus cuts down the 5,000 or more of the entire thirty dynasties to 3,555. (See vol. 1, p. 4; also Muller's Fragmental Gr., vol. 2, p, 537.

"Bockh gives for the year of the accession of Menes, the supposed first Egyptian king, the year B. C. 5702; Ungen, the year B. C. 5613; Mariette-Bey and Lenormant, B. C. 5004; Brugsch-Bey, B. C. 4455: Lauth B. C. 4157; Lepsius B. C. 3852; Bunsen, B. C. 3623 or 3059; Pool, B. C. 2717; Sir Gardner Wilkinson, 2691;" (See Rawlinson's Egypt, vol. 2, p. 1); Rawlinson, B. C. 2450. (See note 65, p. 273, vol. 1). He says: "It is not now questioned by any historian of repute that the Egyptian monarchy dates from a time anterior to B. C. 2,000, while there are those who carry it back to B. C. 5004. Egypt and Babylon, p. 115. Concerning Menes, Birch says: "Nothing known to have been made at the time of Menes remains and he must be placed among those founders of monarchies whose personal existence a severe and enlightened criticism doubts or denies."—Birch's Egypt, p. 25. "The name has not been found on any monument of the old empire."-Rawlinson's Egypt, vol. 2, p. 15.

From the above we see the uncertainty of Egyptian chronology and the difficulty in reconciling the same with the lectures on faith in the Book of Covenants.

Of Menes, Prof. Hutson says: "It has been remarked, by the way, that the traditional founders of Empires or early lawgivers, have, in name, a striking similarity with Menes in Egypt. Compare Menu in India, Manis in Lydia, Minos in Crete, Mannus in Germany, Numa in Rome, Manu and Manco in Peru! The tradition, so widely spread, would seem to point to the coming of a higher development of humanity than had hitherto existed, the 'mu' sound indicating 'thought,' and 'memory' in many languages."-Beginnings of Civilization, chap. 3, pp. 33, 34. The Manu of India would seem to be the Noah of Moses, for it is "from this Manu the earth was repeopled, (after the flood), and from him mankind received their name-'Manu-dsha.'"-Asiatic Researches, vol. 1, p. 2304.

The prehistoric civilization of Egypt is a wonder. It attained its highest development at a very early period. Prof. Hutson says the Egytian civilization went on improving for about five centuries, reaching its hight of material grandeur at the time of the building of the great pyramid of Ghizeh during the reign of Khufu. This pyramid was begun in the year 2170 B. C. It may be asked, How do we know this date so exactly?

proves that the slant passage beneath the base of the pyramid, running three hundred and fifty feet through the solid rock on which the pyramid is built, was cut for the purpose of observing the passage of the chief star of what was then the polar constellation. This was done in order to 'orient' the base of the pyramid; that is, to have its faces true to the points of the compass. This star looked down that tunnel either in the year 3350 B. C., or in the year 2170 B. C. The pyramid then must have been begun at one of these dates. . . . Certainly, if we are to date the Egyptian monarchy under Menes, no further back than 2700 B. C., the latter date, given by Proctor's astronomical estimate, will be the true one for Kufu's pyramid."—Beginnings of Civilization, pp. 34, 35. "The solid masonry which it contained is estimated at more than 89,000,000 cubit feet, and the weight of the mass at 6,848,000 tons."—Vyse's Fergussen says: "Nothing more perfect, mechanically, has ever been erected since that time."—Fergussen's Egypte, vol. 1, pp. 91, 92.

Egypt, vol. 2, p. 113. The basement stones are, many of them, nearly thirty feet in length and nearly five feet high. (Herodotus 2, 124).

Vyse says: "The masonry of the central chamber is probably the finest specimen in the world."—Vyse, vol. 1, p. 289.

Some modern writers "have doubted whether they could really be the works of human hands." - Richardson's Travels, vol. 1, p. 119; and Dr. Russel in his

Egypt, p. 124. "It was in this wonder-land that the Tewish nation was born, having been a a servant there in some of its great public works, as appears by the cuneiform tablets recently taken from the Egyptian tombs, and now in the British Museum it connects them with the building of the pyramids and the great walls."

The pyramids there referred to are probably the brick pyramids at Dashoor, Illahoun and Howara. (See Vyse, vol 3, pp. 57, 63, 83).

It was before Abraham went to Egypt, if Proctor's estimate is correct, that the great pyramid was built, which has so astonished the best engineers of our times. And the Egyptian tombs are revealing their hidden secrets which have been hid since the time of the great Pyramid Kings, in which are evidences of a much higher civilization than was supposed to exist in those early times.

Some writers labor hard to prove that the human race has existed in childhood till their days. Such are now being taken by surprise, and "wonder," and "stagger" at the revelations of modern science. About the time the Book of Mormon revealed the prehistoric civilization of America, Egypt was being dug up, its hieroglyphics deciphered, and its chronology reconstructed. And there is a remarkable coincidence in the prehistoric civilization of America as revealed in the Book of Mormon and that of the old world in some of the arts. For instance: The art of forging iron was known to the ancients on this continent at a very early time in their history, as appears by the statement of Moroni. He says that Shule "did moulten out of the hill, and made swords out of steel for those whom he had drawn away with him."—See Ether 3:8; 4:7. This "Shule was the son of Kib, and Kib was the son of Orihah, who was the son of Jared, which Jared came forth with his brother and their families, with some others and their families, from the great tower at the time the Lord confounded the language of the people."—See Ether 1: 1. The mocker says, "There! That shows how ignorant Joe Smith was, for iron was unknown at that time, the human race being yet in its babyhood." That this is a mistake may be seen at once, for Prof. Vyse found a thin plate of iron imbedded in the masonry of the great pyramid.-See Rawlinson's Egypt, vol. 1, p. 235. This piece of iron is now in the British Museum, in the first Egyptian room, and forms No. 2435 in the Egyptian collection. -See note 314 for chapter 11, p. 309. "Some iron implements and ornaments have been found in the tombs with nothing about them indicative of their belonging to a late period."—Rawlinson's Egypt, vol. 2, p. 235. These are also in the British Museum and form Numbers 2916, 2918, 5410 and 5423.—See note 313, p. 309; and Wilkinson's Egypt, vol. 3, p. 246.

Prehistoric iron mines have been found "between the Nile and the Red Sea, at a place called Hanmani." See Rawlinson's Egypt, vol. 1, p. 47; and note 329 for Chap. 2, p. 271. Then the art of forging iron was known in Egypt at the time the great pyramid was being built; and-trusting to Proctor's lowest estimate—2170, B. C., at which time Egypt reached "its height of material grandeur" in civilization.

Hutson says in his "Age of Iron," "The bones of a horse with a shoe, found under a peat bog, are considered as proving the knowledge of the use of iron in this part of Europe for a great number of years back. Quiguerez (an expert) who examined and described these remains, claims for this horseshoe an era of some twenty-one centuries B. C.—See p. 204. Rawlinson in his chapter on bronze says: "Iron was not absolvtely unknown in Ancient Babylonia, but almost all the weapons and implements found are of bronze."-See Egypt and Babylon, p. 71.

The "Shule" of Moroni was the third in succession after Jared, and, considering the great age to which people lived between the times of the flood and the birth of Christ, which longevity is constantly affirmed by Moroni, he mentioning the 142 years of Coriantum and the exceeding many days Oriah (the first Jaredite king), and taking into consideration the long leadership of the brother of Jared, and that Orihah appears to be Jared's youngest son, Shule, then, could not have lived earlier than 2000 B. C So that before Shule's day that strap of iron was in the pyramid and that horse was wearing an iron shoe in Europe. It may be asked, "If the dispersion was in 2234 B. C., how came Egypt to be settled before that time?" It is answered. A part of Ham's family had settled in Africa, and another branch in Arabia before that time, and from thence to Shinar; and then the historic period opens with the tower. See Five Great Monarchies, vol 1.

Prof. Hutson also makes the civilization of Egypt 200 years older than the Chalde-See Beginnings of Civilization, p. 34.

Watson, quoting Berosus, makes it appear that there had been a separation before the Babel troubles. See E. R. K., p. 872. Calmet held similar opinions. See same, p. 159. When we take into consideration that the founder of the Babel Monarchy was Nimrod, who appears to be the seventh son of Cush, the greatgrandson of Noah, and that those saved in the ark were still alive, it looks reasonable that a separation had taken place, and that those builders of the ark and preachers of righteousness could hardly be builders of that haughty pile, challenging the skies

The common version places the flood at 1656 of the world. See Lectures on Faith, 2:41. And Moses informs us that Noah died 350 years afterwards, which would be in the 2006th year of the world, or 1998 B. C. He appears to have been contemporary with Arphaxad, Salah, Eber, Reu, Serug, Nahor and Terah; and died but 2 vears before Abraham was born.-See Lectures on Faith, D. & C.

Iron was known to Tubal Cain.-Gen. 4:22. . He was the eighth from Adam in the line of Cain.—Gen. 4. Noah was born in the year of the world 1056, and Enos died 1140, Cainan 1235, Mahalaleel 1290, Jared 1422, Methuselah 1656 and Lamech 1651; so that Noah was contemporary with all the patriarchs between Enos, the third from Adam, and Terah, Abraham's brother. And, trusting to Profs. Proctor's and Quiguerez's statements of the Great Pyramid of Egypt, and the fossil horse in the peat bog in Europe, Noah was yet alive when both those pieces of iron were in use. In this way we may account for the Hittite iron bedstead-Deut. 3: 11; the iron of Job 28: 2; and the iron of Ether 4:7.

As for tempering edge tools, the ancients were no doubt acquainted with the art, for their works, which remain to this day both in Egypt and America, prove it. G. Rawlinson says of the materials used in the tombs and towers that, "Egyptian skill and inventiveness succeeded in finding means to subdue even the most intractable materials; and we shall find the pyramid kings employing freely such stubborn substances as syenite, arragonite, red granite and green basalt."—Rawlinson's Egypt,

vol. 2, p. 25.

The question arises, what kind of tools did they have to "subdue the most intractable materials?" Such materials require the best of tools to work them to-day, yet the ancients "appear to have worked them with ease," making a finish on the "most stubborn as smooth as glass."-Furgussen's Egypt, vol. 1, p. 91. G. Rawlinson says: "The manufacture of bronze was by far the most extensive branch of Egyptian metallurgy. Arms, implements, household vessels, such as cauldrons, bowls, ewers, jugs, buckets, basins, vases, ladles, etc., . . . mirrors, tweezers, razors, pins, earrings, armlets, bracelets, finger rings; artistic objects, figures of gods, of sacred animals, and of men; tools, such as saws, chisels, hatchets, adzes, drills, and brad awls are usually, or at any rate, frequently, of this material. . . . The bronze was very variously composed; sometimes it contained as much as fourteen parts of tin, and one of iron to eightyfive parts of copper. . . . The bronze arms included swords, daggers, battle-axes, spear-heads, arrow-heads, and coats of mail; the implements, ploughshares, sickles, knives, forceps, nails, needles, harpoons and fish hooks, etc."-See his Egypt, vol. 1. 236.

Bronze tools have been found in both Europe, Africa, Asia and America; and the question arises again, how were they tempered? Prof. Hutson says of Egyptian bronze, they possessed the secret of hardening copper, an art which has never been recovered."—Beginnings of Civilization, p. 44.

The pre-historic Americans were "learned in mining and the use of various metals, and skilled workers in gold and gems."-Prichard's Natural History of Man, vol. 2.

"A timbered shaft 100 feet deep has been discovered on Valley River, Cherokee county, North Carolina."-See W. C. Keer's report Geological Survey for 1869, p. 56.

A pre-historic mine has also been found in Macon county, North Carolina.—See American Nat.

The six brass plates found in a mound near Kinderhook, Pike county, Illinois, in 1843, were fastened together by two iron wires.—See account from the "Quincy Whig" in Orson Pratt's Works.

These things establish the truth of Moroni's saying in Ether 4:7, and confirm that which was regarded as a "false state-

It has been supposed that the pre-historic races in America, Babylonia, Egypt and Europe were unacquainted with iron at so early a time; but we see from the above that they used it at a very remote age. And, further; their skill in tempering soft metals was superior to that of the present day.

The Book of Mormon is confirmed again in a singular way, as we see by the following: "There were an exceeding great many who departed out of the land of Zarahemla, and went forth unto the land northward to inherit the land; and they did travel to an exceeding great distance, insomuch that they came to large bodies or water, and many rivers; yea, and even they did spread forth into all parts of the land, into whatever parts it had not been rendered desolate, and without timber, because of the many inhabitants who had before inherited the land. And now no part of the land was desolate, save it were for timber, etc., but because of the greatness of the destruction of the people who had before inhabited the land it was called desolate. And there was but little timber upon the face of the land. Nevertheless the people whe went forth became exceeding expert in the working of cement; therefore they did build houses of cement, in which they did dwell." (See Helaman 2:1). The same people built cities both of wood and cement. (See Helaman 2:3). Now Zarahemla was near the Isthmus of Panama. (See Helaman 2:8). The country near it is said to be but a "day's journey" from the east to the west sea. Zarahemla was near a narrow strip of wilderness which ran from the east to the west sea (Alma 13: 11) and the Nephite capital. (Helaman 1:6).

M. Charnay, a Frenchman who has studied the prehistoric civilization of Central America and Mexico, and explored the ancient Tula eighty miles north of Mexico, says of the buildings there: "The walls were perpendicular and the roofs flat, and there were winding staircases upon the outside that led from the lowest apartment to the highest. Inside were steps going from room to room. In the inner apartments the flooring was of a red cement, and, in fact this cement was used everywhere, whether for roofs, ceiling, floors, pavements or roads." (See Charnay's Ant.) But still further northward in Arizona "the Hemenway expedition, under the direction of Frank Cushing, has been at work for several months, and has excavated the ruins of a city three miles long and two miles wide. The excavalong and two miles wide. tions are not continuous, but have been made at various points along the main street and at the limits of the town, the extent of which is clearly established. Mr. Cushing acquired from the Zuni Indians -among whom he has lived for some years-the knowledge of customs and tradition which enabled him to find the burried cites of the Salt River Valley. first one excavated is called Los Muertos, the city of the dead. Others that have been partially explored are El Ciudad, De Los Puellitos and El Pueblo de los Hornas, the city of ovens, etc. But these are only a part of the chain of cities that once covered the desert. There are nineteen buried cites in the Salt River Valley alone, and Los Muertos, which had a population of at least 10,000, is one of the smallest. The entire valley was once a system of cities with adjacent farms, and up in the mountains are sacrificial caves and pueblos of stone, many of which never have been explored and are entirely unknown to the wandering tourist and sightseer.

The people who lived in these cities were not Aztecs, as has been supposed. They were of the race that preceded the Aztecs, and had upon this continent a civilization older than the pyramids. This is proved by the human remains and relics found in the houses that have been dug out. Ethnological research prosecuted by Mr. Cushing by the comparative method, demonstrates that the dwellers of the plain were Toltecs; and that they reached a high state of civilization many centuries before the Aztecs appeared. They were probably of Asiatic origin, but not Mongoloid, (that is, not from Japheth; see Noah's three sons). . . . The ruins of Los Muertos are being thoroughly examined, because they are typical, and also because they have been buried, and, therefore protected from the ravages of time, tourists and ranchers. Twenty-two large blocks of buildings have been uncovered, and three car loads of relics have been sent to Boston. These relics consist of pottery, implements and skeletons. One of the ruined buildings measured 400 by 375 feet; another is 480 feet long, and many of the buildings are 300 feet square. The adobe walls are sometimes seven feet thick and two stories high. Connected with each building is a pyral mound, around the base of which are the funeral urns containing the ashes of cremated Toltecs. Entrance to the buildings were sometimes through doorways and sometimes through holes in the roofs. Each building was divided into a great number of small rooms, indicating a large population to each block. The roofs were of concrete, (cement), supported by timbers, and most of them have fallen in. Here and there the concrete remains in position, retaining an impression of timbers that have disappeared utterly.

It is evident that these cities were destroyed by earthquakes. In most cases the roofs have fallen in and the side walls have fallen outward. Time has disintegrated the adobe blocks, and the rains have spread the material so evenly that the buildings are indicated only by slight irregularities in the surface. The work of excavation is simply to clear away the surface material. That the cities were suddenly overthrown is proved by the finding of skeletons under the fallen roofs and walls in positions indicating violent deaths. One skeleton, photographed as found, shows that the man was caught under the fallen roof and thrown upon his face. His chest is pushed forward by the weight, and his right hand stretched out as he fell, is crushed and flattened. The large number of bodies found proves that the calamity was wide-spread and complete."—New York Sun. The words in brackets are

The Book of Mormon has been quietly telling its readers for fifty-nine years that a highly civilized people moved into the land northward, and that on account of the scarcity of timber they became experts in the use of cement. And Mr. Cushing is convinced of one thing, and that is, that these pre-historic Arizonians were not Mongoloid. Here again is a witness for that despised book. It affirms with a clear voice that they were Semitic, and that they preceded the Aztecs; though not as early as the pyramids. That migration early as the pyramids. commenced in the forty-sixth year of the Judges. (See Helaman 2: 1). The end of Mosiah's reign was in the five hundred and ninth year from the time that Lehi left Jerusalem, (Mosiah 13: 7), which would make it about forty-five years B. C.

Nephi says that at the crucifixion of Christ, there was a terrible tempest in Central America. That it did shake the whole earth as if it was about to divide asunder; some cities were destroyed by fire, others sunk into the sea, and the inhabitants thereof were drowned. The earth was carried upon some others, and the place of the city became a mountain. There was also a terrible destruction in the land southward.

But there was a greater destruction in the land northward. The whole face of the land was changed; highways broken up; the level roads were spoiled, and many smooth places became rough, and many great and notable cities were sunk; and many were burnt; and many were shaken till the buildings thereof had fallen to the earth, and the inhabitants thereof were slain, and the places thereof left desolate. Mr. Cushing is right then when he says, "The calamity was widespread and complete;" and that the destruction was "suddenly."—The cities of the Salt River valley seem to be of that class that were "left desolate."

Other evidences of such a catastrophe have been discovered on the coast of Ecuador. Pottery vessels, images and other articles finely wrought were taken from a stratum of ancient surface earth which had been submerged below the sea level, with a marine deposit over it of six feet, "and again elevated to its former position above the level of the sea."—Baldwin's Ancient America, pp. 274 & 275.

The articles found below this marine deposit are such as are in use by highly civilized people, some of them being of gold "finely wrought." The Book of Mormon constantly affirms such a civilization in South America, and had told this story of submerged cities and towns with all their inhabitants and wealth thirty years before antiquarians found them.

As we have seen, some cities were covered with earth and the "place thereof became a mountain." This is confirmed time and again, "Where the river beds have been washed out, and have been covered again to the depth of from three thousand to four thousand feet more since the flow of the lava, and 'evidences of human habitants,' and 'human relics,' and 'human industry,' and 'extinct animals' prior to the 'GREAT VOLCANIC OUTBURST.' These discoveries are made in running tunnels for mining purposes.—See D. L. Yates, in San Francisco Bulletin, March, 1888.

Mme, Le Plongeon, wife of Dr. Le Plongeon, 'the eminent man of science,' who, with her husband spent twelve years studying the antiquities of Yucatan, is quoted as saying that "Among the manuscripts of the Mayas, [Lamanites,] the pre-historic inhabitants of Yucatan, is an account of the sinking of Atlantis."—Scientific American, Sup. No. 649, p. 10,374, for June 9th, 1888.

We see from this that the Mayas have in some form a knowledge of that great calamity said to have taken place during their historical period. This, we are told, is coming in manuscripts. And again, Nephi is confirmed in chapter 4:6, where he relates the sinking of several cities.—The voice declared: "The waters have I caused to come up in the stead thereof, to hide their wickedness and abominations from before my face."

HARMONY OF INSPIRATION.-NO. vi.

BY R. M. ELVIN.

"Our Zion is in a state of mourning. The Holy Spirit has not visited us as in former years, and we have great cause for deep humiliation in view of the sins, and worldliness and spiritual indifference of most of our churches."—Genessee Evangelist

"Alas, what object, nay, what bauble of earth, has not been made a rival to her Lord, even in the church herself? 'Upon every hill she has wandered, playing the harlot,' 'scattered her ways under every green tree.' There has she made her bed and her home, instead of dwelling with her covenant Lord! This the American church has done far more flagrantly than did Israel of old, and yet God threatened to 'pour upon them his fury and his jealousy for it,' and did do it. And, again, where does all this necessarily place the church—in what connection, what service, what fellowship? Our Lord himself has decided that question: 'He that is not with me is against me.' But to be against Christ is to be with Satan. It leaves the church, then, in a virtual alliance with Satan—married to the Devil! This language may seem harsh, and I utter it with pain and grief; but the dreadful truth it declares is forced upon us, and it is of no use to conceal it. God sees it, yea, the world sees it, and the church herself must see it."—Oberlin Evangelist.

These pointed statements of the several witnesses, all exhibit both the necessity and the wisdom of the divine interposition that faith might indeed increase in the earth. It can not be charged that these several writers were in collusion with Mr. Smith; neither can it be said that they wrote for the exclusive benefit of the Saints and their cause. But we will acquiesce in that they wrote the truth, and therefore their evidence is of importance in fixing in the mind the fact of the spiritual dearth that is distressing the wouldbe religious of all names and classes. And unless the God of Heaven shall make bare his arm of salvation unto the nations of earth, we would be lead to conclude that instead of living under the "reign of peace," we are in that "little season" when Satan is let loose.

In the examination of this item of the revelation, that it was given that faith might increase in the earth, are there any promises of scripture that justify us in the hope of an increase of faith or confidence in the Lord? "For yet a little while, and he that shall come will come, and will not tarry."—Hebrews 10: 37. This was written concerning the second coming of Christ, and inasmuch as that event is one of the unfulfilled promises, and as he is to come to his temple (church) that church must be prepared for him, and he will receive it, as a groom doth a bride. Thus it becomes absolutely necessary that a communication take place between them, and to this end that the preparation may prove acceptable, "Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him: for the marriage of the Lamb is come, and his wife hath made herself ready. And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white: for the fine linen is the righteousness of saints."-Rev. 19: 7, 8. All this clearly indicates that time will be granted for the church to prove unto God, not to man, that they are able to abide the righteous laws of God, and in so doing they will be ready to enter into the everlasting kingdom when the Lord shall come to receive his own. And let those who have ill treated the Saints be admonished that there are two kinds of promises that will be fulfilled at his coming, to one class joy, peace, and the title deed to their everlastinheritance, so that his word may be true and be realized—"Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth."-Matt. 5: 5. But to those who reject the gospel and the church that preaches the same in in its purity, will he come "in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ."—2 Thess. 1: 8.

People have their choice in this matter, they may dwell with God, or make in hell their abode, so wrote the poet.

(1.) The increase of a true and living faith among the people is but the prelude to the establishing of God's covenant with man, ever since God said unto Lucifer, "And I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed; it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel," (Gen. 3:15), has the race been struggling in tears and agony, with supplications unto the Most High, that they be freed from the power and the dominion of him that was cast down from Heaven. Isa. 14:12.

Among the things man had in the fall was, that he suffered banishment from the presence of God; that sickness and death should be his portion, and that with pain and perplexity he would earn his bread. This curse came upon man for, or in consequence of, the violation of law; and that by one. Nevertheless there was entailed upon the entire offspring the evils and ills imposed upon Adam. Now God made a covenant to redeem man: "For since by man came death, by man came also the resurrection of the dead. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ Jesus shall be made alive."—I Cor. 15:21,22.

The real and vital importance of the gospel being preached, is that there may be a people with whom he can make his covenant, and that man shall not only be freed from all that is inimical to his best good and happiness, but that the full fruition of childship may come; likewise the felicity to associate with God, Christ, and the holy prophets and apostles, even as it is certified unto us: "But ye are come unto mount Sion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly Jerusalem, and to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of the first-born, which are written in heaven, and to God the Judge of all, and to the spirits of just men made perfect, and to Jesus the Mediator of the New Covenant." -Heb. 12:22-24.

What is here stated is so grand and so far above the thoughts of the sordid mind, that most read it with no idea that it may be realized on this earth. But if the Bible be true, (and I feel that it is an injustice to God to write "If the Bible be true; but I do so to emphasize the thought, and not to vitiate any promise made), here are some of the rights, blessings, and emoluments that shall accrue unto those who are included in the great and everlasting covenant of God: "And I saw thrones, and they sat upon them, and judgment was given unto them: and I saw the souls of them that were beheaded for the witness of Jesus and for the word of God, and which had not worshipped the beast, neither his image, neither had received his mark upon their forheads, or in their hands; and they live and reigned with Christ a thousand years,"-Rev. 20:4.

This promises a companionship of a thousand years with Christ, and if there was no Scripture more definite, we might be imposed upon by the ethereal and fantastical ideas of a heavenly abode "beyond the bounds of time and space, where the eye of man can never trace."

It must have been some such parataxsis, that caused the French philosopher to say, "Religion will do very well for women and children." But I am of the opinion that the women and children of America want something more substantial to fill their conception of the future condition. "And I saw a new heaven and a new earth, for the first heaven and the first earth were passed away, and there was no more sea. And I, John, saw the holy city, New Jerusalem coming down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. And I heard a great voice out of heaven saying: Behold, the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people, and God himself shall be with them and be their God. And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes; and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away. And he that sat upon the throne said: Behold, I make all things new. And he said unto me, write: for these words are true and and faithful. And he said unto me, It is done. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end. I will give unto him that is athirst of the fountain of the water of life freely. He that overcometh shall inherit all things, and I will be his God and he shall be my son."—Rev. 21: 1-7.

The reading of these glowing words of promise, should thrill every soul with ecstatic joy, because there is no ambiguity therein. God and man shall dwell together, and the word of truth gives us to know just where the mutual abode shall be: "And hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth." -Rev. 5: 10. To this agrees the word by the prophet Daniel: "But the Saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom forever, even forever and ever. * * * And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the Saints of the Saints of the Most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him."-Dan. 7: 18, 27.

Saints are to obtain the benefits of that great covenant and kingdom, and that is the peculiar and distinguishing title of the church that was organized by the prophet Joseph Smith, and if we comply with the necessary requirements, God will most assuredly establish his covenant, and when he comes we shall be with him.

(m.) It has occasioned not a few theological rencontres on account of the representatives of the gospel restored, in our claiming a dispensation of the "Fulness of the gospel," but such was promised: "Having made known unto us the mystery of his will, according to his good pleasure which he hath purposed in himself: that in the dispensation of the fulness of times he might gather together in one all things in Christ, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth; even in him: in whom also we have obtained an inheritance, being predestinated according to the purpose of him who worketh all things after the counsel of his own will: that we should be to the praise of his glory, who first trusted in Christ,"-Eph. 1: 9-12. Let this be read and considered with an impartial desire to learn the truth of God relative to what the Father will accomplish in the fulness of times. Should some caviling critic urge that this scripture was fulfilled in the time of Christ, we would ask, where is the proof that all things were gathered, or united in ONE then, during any time since or now.

Sin and disobedience may be considered as an ailment, and sometimes powerful and searching remedies have to be administered, we submit the following as an illustration; "And for this cause God shall send them strong delusion, that they should believe a lie: that they all might be damned who believed not the truth, but had pleasure in unrighteousness."-2 Thess. 2:11, 12. If what the world is pleased to call Mormonism be a delusion, and people are deceived thereby, the success of the delusion is quite limited. Mr. Charles Bancroft, in his "Footprints of Time," gives on page 724 the population of the world at 1,380,000,000. While we may safely estimate the aggregate membership of the Reorganization at 30,000, and if these be the deluded ones, the proportion would stand thus, 1-46 oooth or one in every forty-six thousand. But if Christ spake the truth, "And as it was in the days of Noe, so shall it be also in the days of the Son of Man," (Luke 17:26), it was the great majority working wickedness that caused the overthrow of the world by the flood. The reader will, therefore, not think us egotistical, if we suggest that it might be possible that the one might be right, and the forty-six thousand in error. As strange a thing as that took place when Israel worshipped and danced before Aaron's molten calf.

In presenting the proposition that we are proclaiming the fulness of the gospel, we wish it distinctly understood that we appeal to the Bible in defense of the claim. I have already stated what the principles of the doctrine were, as they were taught by Christ and the apostles in the first century. The organization during that same period is described thus: "And God hath set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings helps, governments, diversities of tongues."—1 Cor. 12: 28. And to the Ephesians the same author wrote: "And he gave some apostles; and some, prophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers."—Eph- 4: 11. This was the constitutional, organic body as instituted, and which was to remain. And inasmuch as Christianity abandoned the organization as revealed in the New Testament, therefore God hath made a reorganization of the church in the same order as left by the Redeemer himself.

We not only preach the old original doctrine and organization, but likewise the spiritual gifts as manifested in the apostolic church. We recognize the voice of God commanding, "Thus saith the Lord, stand ye in the ways, and see, and ask for the old paths, where is the good way, and walk therein, and ve shall find rest for your souls. But they said, We will not walk therein."—Jer. 6:16. If we observe the fiat of Jehovah, and with fealty enquire for the good way, and call the attention of the people to the path that leadeth unto the fountain of life, and they reject our invitation, and treat the call of heaven with utter neglect and contempt, we should not be regarded as censurable. For the gospel as taught by Jesus is for a "witness" to mankind, and all should know that the object in taking testimony is to exculpate one party, and to convict the other. "And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come."-Matt. 24: 14. Without cessation we propose to continue preaching the unadulerated gospel of salvation until the foregoing prediction has its accomplishment, for we are painfully aware that "to the one we are the savor of death unto death; and to the other the savor of life unto life."-2 Cor. 2: 16. "But if our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost."—2 Cor. 4: 3.

In the name of Him that died that we might live, we entreat all to turn from the vain allurements of a sin-loving world; put away your foibles, and live unto God, a light unto those around you, that the gospel may become efficacious in spreading and increasing in righteousness from the rivers to the ends of the earth; that the dwelling place of our God shall be glorious when He shall take delight in all His saints, for "These are they which come out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb."-Rev. 7: 14. That is, they have suffered much for the gospel and the hope of eternal life with God in the kingdom of everlasting peace, rest, and exaltation.

(n.) On account of the unification and harmonious agreement of the doctrine as taught by the Saints' Church, as also the absolute perfection of the organization and polity of the church, with the obtaining of the gifts of the Spirit, it would seem that the wise, learned and refined would be among the first to accept and propagate the heaven-sent economy. But it has never been so, and the prophet Joseph Smith, in the very inception of his work and revelations, said it would be the "weak and simple" who would declare this gospel. And the more vehemently the gainsayers persist that the eldership are hardly up to the mediocrity of humanity, the more clearly and more positively do they prove the truthfulness of his revelations, and that there is no friction between them and those in the Bible. For "the law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul; the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple."—Ps. 19:7. From the Lord's standpoint it would appear that the simple had largely the advantage in the great struggle for gaining wisdom and his favor. The irrefragable word is that "it giveth understanding unto the simple."—Ps. 119: 130.

The most of our great inventors, explorers and philanthropists, have in their time and age been considered simple and silly. It takes the lapse of time, and the after generations to make the discovery of the real worth and character of the true benefactors of man. Honesty, uprightness and purity are the qualifications to entitle the simple and weak to obtain a diploma authorizing them to preach the gospel. "We are fools for Christ's sake, but ye are wise in Christ; we are weak, but ye are strong; ye are honorable, but we are despised."—I Cor. 4: 10. If Paul and his associate ministers, with the above record, could fight a good fight, and win a crown, there need be no necessity for us to sit down discouraged, and cease the conflict. Why may it not be said of the earnest workers in the harvest field of this age as of the ancients that "out of weakness [they] were made strong."—Heb. 11: 34. A faithful continuation in well doing will surely result in the gaining of divine knowledge, for it is a known fact with the artisan, that practice makes perfect. So we expect that by practicing the acts of righteousness unto the end of the earthly race, to receive in return perfection, justification, and sanctification.

(o.) Had the conception, the draught and architecture of the church and work. known in the common parlance of the world as "Mormonism," been wholly of human origin, as is so vociferously charged by the traducers of Joseph Smith's character, and conceding his want of education, and, therefore, his igorance of the world, its ways and its history; but still more so of all the fine points of distinction, and matters of controversy in the religions, how can it be accounted for that in giving to the world a new church at the time he set in motion his strange work that he should have been so much more successful than all his predecessors in church building? That he should have brought into being an organization that has proved to be cosmopolitan, and which, after enduring for nearly six decades the most bitter oppositoin and persecution that any church has met with in "the land of the free, and the home of the brave," and in addition, internal disturbances as well, also one of the most gigantic apostasies that ever befell the church of God, and notwithstanding that foes without, and foes within have been indefatigable in their attempts to overthrow the work, the old ship Zion weathered the blast, and it has not been found necessary, since launching upon the tempestuous waves of public enquiry, to alter in the least, either by elimination or emendation, and there has been gathered into its folds people from all churches and nations, and the circle of its operation is steadily widening, to the far distant nations and islands of the sea? If there had been no inspiration from God in the initial of this work, instead of the symmetry it now exhibits, indicating the Supreme will that gave it to the world, we would find the patchwork of vascillating man, seeking to suit his system to the customs, people and fashion of the times.

Changes are no mark of progress or improvement; but the gospel as introduced by Joseph Smith will meet every emergency and contingency; the rich and the poor, the learned and the ignorant, male and female, bond and free, white and black; all with equal propriety can receive of the ordinances and blessings thereof, and in the time of rewards receive for a faithful living of its principles, a crown that fadeth not away; "For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female: for ye are all one in Christ Jesus."—Gal. 3:27, 28.

Thus we believe and thus we teach, and all the world must hear.

CONCLUSION.

In collating evidence that sustains the fact that the revelations of Joseph Smith, are in harmony with the inspiration of the ancient prophets of God, I have thought to be concise, without being so brief as to mar or impoverish the theme. We protest, in the name of him who gave his life to redeem the race that we are not misguided, neither fanatical in our acceptance of the faith and doctrine of this church. And if at times we may appear to be enthasiastic, it can be accounted for on the basis of our being in earnest; for our zeal to comply with the injunction: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself."-Luke

The man or woman who will intelligently and faithfully observe and keep this commandment will have no time for the follies and blandishments of the world; and while many religious people have seasons of great piety, followed by lukewarmness and then revival efforts, the Saints pass through no such periodical changes, but seek with an abiding trust in God to be firm and faithful, having obeyed the first principles of the doctrine of Christ, let us "go on unto perfection,"-Heb. 6:1. "And besides this, giving all dilligence, add to your faith virtue, and to virtue knowledge, and to knowledge temperance, and to temperance patience, and to patience godliness; and to godliness brotherly kindness; and to brotherly kindness charity."-2Pet. 1: 5-7.

Can it be said truthfully of a people who labor with an indefatigable zeal for the promotion of all that is pure, good, virtuous and ennobling, as taught by the Lord, his holy apostles and faithful servants, that they are perverse, evil, wicked and pernicious, and that their doctrine has a tendency to nuchristianize people. Never! No, never!! We are not ashamed to believe and teach the truth of heaven, as Jesus spake of himself: "I am the way, the truth, and the life; no man cometh to the Father, but by me."—John 14:6. "All things are delivered unto me of my father: and no man knoweth the Son but the Father, neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him."—Matt. 11:27. That was true when the Lord spoke to the hardhearted, stiffnecked Jews; and it is true now while the so-called Christians are erecting costly houses to the name of the departed dead, and rejecting the revelations of the present hour, perchance they came through Joseph Smith. We can afford to abide the arbitrament of time to prove the harmony of inspiration.

EUROPE'S STANDING ARMY.

London, Jan. 21.—Europe enters upon the second decade of her existence under the Berlin treaty with less apprehension of immediate trouble than she has felt in any preceding new year. The chances of international provocation are indeed for the moment reduced to a minimum. There is, for the time being, internal peace throughout the Balkan States and the great powers inside the triple alliance find themselves so evenly balanced against those on the outside that no one sees reason to fear any precipitate tipping of the scale.

These ten years of peace under the arrangement of Lord Beaconsfield and Prince Bismarck have not, however, been distinguished by blessings which such a long and pacific term might be expected to bring. Every nation in Europe has paid most dearly for the privilege of quiet. Since 1872, then the last elaborate computation of the armies of Europe was made, the tax-payers of the Continent have expended $7.500,000,000 on preparations for a war that has not come, or nearly twice what we at home expended on our four years of civil war.

A big struggle ten years ago, with results of such a sweeping character that a partial disarmament could have followed, would have been infinitely cheaper and better for Europe than this long nightmare of dread and ruinous preparation. Since 1872 Germany and France have both more than doubled the actual war strength of their armies, and the total war strength of the seven Continental Powers, counting the Baikan States as one, has risen from 6,142,000 to 10,480,000. If we add to this host of trained fighters on a war footing the classes of partially trained men in the second and final reserves we get an imposing total of 28,000,000 soldiers all liable to be drawn into the next European war, and now more or less withdrawn from peaceful vocations, at a total annual public cost of $600,000,000.

This vast war taxation wrung from peoples who do not hate each other, who do not want to fight, who ask only for opportunities for peaceful industry and mutual traffle, is a terrible burden. The blood money must be borne, however, for no better reason than that it is still in the power of a few families—the Hohenzollerns, Hapsburgs, Romanoffs, Beurbons, and Coburgs—to embroil the whole continent with their dynastic intrigues and ambitions. It is only when these modern figures of armies and war taxation are studied, figures at which Frederick the Great or Napoleon would have been paralyzed with amazement, that we realize what kingship means.

CHURCH SECRETARY'S NOTICE.

Presidents and clerks of districts will confer a favor if they will make out their statistical reports for the past year and send them in by, or as soon after the 1st of March, as possible. Include with them a brief statement of the ministerial labor performed, present condition of district and prospects for the future. I will supply those who have not the regular blanks on which to make reports if they will notify me by card.

H. A. STEBBINS.
Church Secretary.

NOTICE.

To Lester R. Tyson, Flora Tyson, Charles H. Hendricks, Emma J. Grass, Martha I. Grass, Samuel C. Grass, Eleanor Grass, George B. Hendricks, Minnie Cain, Hugh Thornton, Elisabeth Thornton, Mary K. Thornton. An action was taken by the Platte River branch, in business capacity, January 18th, and you are hereby notified to report to the Secretary of said branch and get your letters of removal before March 25th 1889, or you will be reported as scattered members.—J. W. Hollenbeck, Secretary, Elmwood, Cass County, Nebraska.

READ THIS.

To the Saints in Far West (Missouri) District: Many of you having expressed a determination and desire to aid the church financially the past year, I trust you have not forgotten that purpose and hope you will speedily comply with the in-struction of the Bishopric and carry into effect your good resolves by sending me your tithings and oblations, and those who can not pay all at once should pay on the installment plan, but be sure to be prompt and pay what you can. No one can expect to have the special blessings of God, either spiritually or temporally, who do not aid financially when they can and thus keep the commands of God and render effectual the letter and spirit of the gospel. We should show our faith by our works, and thereby prove God and the church and secure the blessings. I trust you will at once pay in your tithes and offerings, for my report for the past year will be sent to the Bishop about the 25th of February, and I desire to have it appear creditable to the district in showing our faith and good works in the cause of Christ. I am pleased to say there are some in our district who consider obedience and faithfulness in the financial affairs of the church a vital duty and act accordingly. All should do so. "Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse," is the command of the Lord to his Israel, and when this is obeyed he promises to "open the windows of heaven" and "pour" them "out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Please don't delay, and send by post office order or registered letter to me at 623 Messanie street, or registered terror to M.
St. Joseph, Missouri. Yours,
Wm. Lewis, Bishop's Agent.

TWO DAYS MEETING.

A two days meeting will be held at Bayport, Michigan, on Saturday and Sunday February 9th and 10th. An invitation is extended to all Saints and friends to attend. WILLIAM DOWKER.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE HIGH PRIESTS' QUORUM, GREETING:

Beloved brethren in the Lord, and fellow laborers in the cause of truth, I have been impressed to write to you and to exhort you to diligence in the great work of the last days. Many of your heads are silvered over with age, others are enter-ing the period illustrated by the "sere and yellow leaf." The labors performed by you have been many and arduous, but while life and health remain our duties remain. The day of rest will come, but not until our work is done. At no period of our lives can we lay down the weapons of warfare, with God's approval, until he calls us Yet he will demand no more of us than hence. he gives us strength to perform, and that strength is promised according to our day. We may not possess the vigor and vitality of youth, nor will God require the Herculean labor performed in our youth, in enduring hardships, undergoing privations and laborious toil. But our labor should have given us experience, and that experience wisdom, thus fitting us for duties, if not of a higher order, of equal importance and equally essential in other spheres. To my mind, while there are different departments in the kingdom of God, the labor to be performed in each is equally essential and equally honorable. foot can not despise the head, the head can not despise the foot, without the whole body suffering loss. Each member must perform its part, and to do that each must know their duty. Hence the necessity of profiting by our past experience as well as drawing from the well-spring of heavenly wisdom and knowledge such lessons as shall fit us for our work. God has made this imperative upon us in these words: "Wherefore, now let every man learn his duty and to act in the office in which he is appointed, in all diligence. He that is slothful shall not be counted worthy to stand, and he that learns not his duty and shews himself not approved, shall not be counted worthy to stand. Even so, Amen."—D.

C. 104: 44.

The call to "come higher" is not merely to invite us to more honorable positions or but it means greater excellence in our works, our characters, our lives, in fact to a higher plane of wisdom, virtue, knowledge and every qualification necessary to fit us as co laborers with God. And when clothed with these qualities there will be no obstacle to our rising to glory and power in this kingdom. God will take care of our honor But to the slothful and negligent there can be but shame and contempt.

It is hoped that there will be full representation of all the quorum at our next General Conference, in St. Joeseph, Missouri, either in person letter, as circumstances permit. trust all will report good labors done; but if you have done nothing, say so and give your reasons. Let us know of your faith, be it weak or strong; and of your determinations for the future. If you have not been appointed by church authority to any special duty or calling, remember that does not free you from the obligation to do all you can for truth in your respective localities, and that, too, in harmony with local authority of whatever grade. Work where you can, not where you would, and every barrier will fall before you, for the God of heaven will honor the willing worker.

Address all reports to the Secretary, Bro. Henry A. Stebbins, Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa, at the latest by the first of March next.

Brethren, many of you I have never seen and may never see in the flesh; but I would love to form the acquaintance of all. In corresponding by mail, it will be necessary to enclose a postage stamp to ensure a reply, as my correspondence is large and my income is small. Praying that the blessing of God may rest in abundance upon every member of the quorum, I remain your broevery member of the questions ther in the one great cause, Charles Derry.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Pittsburg and Kirtland district conference will convene at Pittsburg, Pa., Saturday, March 2d, at 2 o'clock p. m. Saints are requested to bear in mind the resolution of conference, that delegates should be elected to bring reports of branches, as declared in D. & C., sec. 17th, and it is hoped that every branch will be represented. The appointment of delegates to the Annual Conference, to be held at St. Joseph, Mo April 6tn, will be acted upon, as well as other matters in which all should be represented. Brethren W. H. & E. L. Kelley, James Brown, Leonard Scott, and other brethren of the ministry are expected to be present. Branch conferences should be held not later than February 20th, and reports brought in person by the branch delegates to the conference. Where it is absolutely impossible to send by delegate, reports should be forwarded to W. H. Garrett, district secretary, Greenville, Mercer county, Pennsylvania, not later than February 25th. Brethren, come with the spirit of prayer and humility, that the presence of the Master may be with us that we may do the Lord's business acceptably.

E. C. Briggs, Pres. of Mission.

The conference of the Philadelphia district will be held at the Saints' Hall 156 Rockaway Ave., Brooklyn, February 23d at 7: 30 p. m. Bro. W. H. Kelley is expected to be present. All officers of the district are requested to report. Send all reports to Joseph Squire, Sr., 99 Hinsdale St., Brooklyn, New York, district president.

MARRIED.

RUCKER-CLARK.-At the residence of the bride's parents, Sunday evening, January 13th, 1889, by Elder J. H. Lawn, Mr. J. J. Rucker, of Visalia, and Miss Dora S. Clark, daughter of Bro. and Sr. Matthias Clark, of Tulare City, California.

DIED.

HOFFMAN.—Andrew Hoffman was born in Montgomery county, Ohio, October 12th, 1826; died in Monona county, Iowa, December 16th, 1888, after a lingering illness. He joined the church in an early day, therefore he passed through many of its trials; was ever ready to defend his faith and bear his testimony to the truth of the work. He had much experience in the church, understood the doctrine well, and was always ready to sacrifice his all for Christ, spent time and money freely for the spread of the gospel and has accomplished much good in the world both by example and precept. He joined the Reorganized church in 1865 and was ordained an elder the same year; was ever faithful, patient and true under most trying circumstances, and murmured not when called to bury his youngest son, the pride of his old age, the hope of his declining years. He was a noble, honest man, of kind disposition, a worthy, respected citizen, esteemed by all who knew him. He leaves a wife and two daughters to mourn his death, also two sons and one daughter by his first marriage. "Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

FORD .-- Sister Evie Ford was born October 12th, 1866; died December 24th, 1888, aged 22 years, 2 months and 12 days. Joined the church November 16th, 1883, being baptized and confirmed by elder T. W. Smith. She was a young lady of rare firmness and a consistent Saint. She died strong in the faith of the latter day work. She said she was prepared to go. Funeral services by elder M. R. Scott. Text Revelations 14: 13: Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, saith the Spirit, That they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow

One sweet flower has drooped and faded. One sweet flower has drooped and faded,
One dear sister's voice has fled,
One fair brow the grave has shaded,
One dear sister now is dead.
We ought to feel no thought of sadness,
For we know she's happy now;
She has knelt in heartfelt gladness
Where the blessed angels bow.

JONES.-Joseph M. Jones died August 1st, 1888, aged 23 years, 3 months and 12 days, of dropsy. Calvin E. Jones died October 20th, 1888, aged 19 years and 18 days, of heart disease. Not members of the church. By request their funeral was preached by elder M. R. Scott, at Riceville, Indiana, November 12th to a large gathering of friends

LEACH .- At her home near Elkhorn, Nebraska, January 8th, 1889, after a long and painful illness, Sr. Alice R. Leach, in her 37th year. The deceased was born in Sandusky county, Ohio, in 1852, and came to Nebraska with her parents in 1863 where she became acquainted with the latter day work and was baptized in June, 1867, by Thomas J. She ever remained a firm believer and exemplary christian until her death. She left a husband, mother, brothers, sisters and a host of relatives and friends to mourn their loss.

SLATTEN.—At Independence, Mo., January 22d, 1889, of congestion of the brain, Nellie, only child of Mr. and Mrs. George Slatten, aged 6 months and 23 days Funeral sermon by Elder F. C. Warnkey at the residence. Thus a bud of promise is transplanted from this world of sorrow into the Paradise of God.

BYERREGAARDE. -- A. N. Byerregaarde died 26th of November, 1888, in Nodaway county, Missouri, aged 74 years, 10 months and 1 day. Funeral sermon was preached in the Methodist Church in Guilford, December 30th, by Elder J. Thomas. He leaves a wife and several children to mourn his death.

CHURCH RECORDER'S NOTICE.

District presidents and clerks, or others, who have in their hands branch reports that have been received at district conferences, will eonfer a favor by forwarding them to me immediately. And the reports to the February and March conferences, please send them in as soon as possible after the sessions, so that all may be recorded before April. H. A. STEBBINS, Church Recorder.

TOBACCO.

Tobacco contains an acrid, dark brown oil, an alkaloid, called nicotine, which is a deadly poison, the virulence of which can be compared to prussic acid. Birds are killed by inhaling its vapor in quantities too small to be measured. An application of this poison, therefore, would be fatal to every living thing with which it came in conto every living thing with which it came in contact. It is shown by this that the intemperate use of tobacco is very hurtful and the majority of men who use it all go beyond the bounds of reason. In smoking a cigar the part between the teeth should not be sucked or chewed. A cigar holder is needful. Cigarettes are very harmful, on account of the great amount of nicotine absorbed and the almost invariable practice of drawing the smoke into the lungs. In boys the use of the weed is attended often with serious results and in almost every case growth is impaired. As an example of the injury which the constant use of tobacco will work on a people, take the Maoris of New Zealand, who before the introduction of tobacco, for which they developed a passionate liking, were the most finely developed and powerful men of the tribes of the Pacific islands. Now they have become decimated in numbers and at the same time so reduced in stature and development as to be an altogether inferior type of men.—Sel.

THE CHURCH AND THE WORKING. MAN.

WE clip the following from the Enquirer. of Provo, Utah, which credits it to Rev. C. M. Morse in January Forum. It is well worth reading by all our patrons, for it exhibits in a striking way the antagoism existing between the churches and the laboring man and also between capital and labor. These are crying evils and should be remedied speedily lest wrath and ruin sweep them down at the cost of vast amounts of life and property. "God is just and his justice will not slumber forever."

Apropos of this we may here say that, had the industrial system proposed by Joseph the Seer and set forth in his revelations and letters to the church been fully established, the world would have had a practical demonstration presented them that would solve in an easy, natural, humane and ennobling way the industrial problems which now oppress men and menace the peace and integrity of society. The system he proposed provides that wealth be taken from where it can be spared and placed where most needed, also that all should labor first for the common good, and at the same time each person be held accountable for his personal stewardship. Provision was made for the honorable employment of all, also for the discouragement of idleness and the punishment of "the idler," and that all who embrace that system should be made "equal according to their wants, their circumstances, their families and their needs" as should be determined by competent, authorized, unselfish, disinterested managers. But neither the world nor the church were prepared to adopt that nor anything approaching it, but followed in the old grooves of "get wealth and place-if possible, with grace-at any rate get wealth and place." And we know of no place where this latter has been carried out to greater extremes than in Utah under B. Young and others there. We are pleased to see the Enquirer and other Utah papers agitating these matters and facing toward the light.

"The time was when in our land there was no recognized antagonism between the working classes and the churches. It is a new problem in our civilization. The cause should be easily discovered by unclouded eyes. Fifty yeare ago aristocracy pretensions were looked upon as vagaries and treated with contempt. In the churches people felt nothing of the chill of caste. A glance at the centers of population must convince us that now all is changed. There is an evident rivalry in the erection of splendid edifices and in the social and oratorical qualifications of the ministry. The poverty of the workingman's home is accentuated by comparison with the richness of the sanctuary. The chief seats are vivid with purple and fine linen. Outside the house of God exists a social aristocracy, bulwarked by inferior cliques, and governed by unwritten rules making distinctions between man and man. We have a moneyed aristocracy, a political dictatorship, landed proprietors, a rapidly increasing tenant population, the 'working man' and the 'tramp.' With the vast augmentation of wealth in the possession of the few, and the increasing poverty of the many, the time is at hand when there will exist between classes gulfs as impassible as that between Dives and Lazarus. Intensifying social struggles are working a transformation in the character of the church, as is manifest from the new terminology coming into general use, such as 'star preachers,' 'first class churches,' 'wealthy congregations,' and 'our poor charges.' The obverse of this if found in the expressions of the workingmen: 'We can't dress well enough to go to church;' 'your leading members don't notice us on the street;' 'your preachers run after the rich;' 'the ministers side against us in the matter of strikes.' They are, in stern reality, at the mercy of employers; are compelled to stand in the market-place and sell their labors at a rate fixed, not by the golden rule, but by the ceasless, grinding competition of the hungry unemployed. As a result of this condition, their situation is becoming daily more aggravated. One million of unemployed men, constantly recruited by the drift from foreign sewers, compete with those who are at work, content if they but receive a pittance for their toil. The iron law, universally accepted, that the tendency of wages is to the lowest point of subsistence, is in our time absolute. Here, then, is developed the problem that confronts us, and in the statement of which is presented the relation of the church to labor. The two great classes of our population, capitalists and working men, are separated by an irreconcilable antagonism in assault and defense of a system which, in the thought of the masses, is founded on injustice and denounced by God's word. And while the economic law is not grasped in all its bearings by the working men, its results are felt in their unceasing toil, the galling sense of deprivation and injustice, the sufferings of loved ones, and the overshadowing presence of the almshouse. The churches, slow to accept ecclesiastical and economical reforms, have reached the last stage of conservatism. They maintain, at least by implication, that the great fortunes of the day are the fruit of legitimate industrial enterprises, and belong to their possessors as against the world. Men who, under ancient legal provisions have monopolized the store of wealth which God has placed in the earth, are upheld as possessing under divine sanction; while they who undertake to show that the masses are defrauded of their birthright, are classed by many with communists, whose aim is the subversion of the rights of property.

"With regard to poverty, leading religious thinkers hold that it is due to laziness and inefficiency, waste, mismanagement, extravagant, injurious indulgence, and absence of a definite and resolute purpose to escape from poverty. The church seems to believe that the cure of present social ills will result from the reform of individuals, independently of any change in or by legislative enactment or industrial methods; which is to assert that the prosperity of a people will be better conserved by the charitable contributions of a class than by securing equal opportunity and exact justice for all men. The workingman knows from experience that the position is untenable. The church says to the man who is supporting his family by his wages of one dollar per day, that he may become wealthy if he will; it points to the millionaire who began life in humble circumstances, and tells the man who is striving to keep his dollar-a-job against the competition of a freshly imported Italian, that his poverty is the result of his own faults and deficiencies—that he alone is to blame. It preaches to him that his lot is providential; that God gives to some men (instance, Abraham) peculiar ability to secure wealth and withholds it from others; that poverty is a blessing tending to promote spiritual growth; that he must not become discontented, nor question the justice of God's dealings with men as observed in the affairs of society; and that, above all things, he must not antagonize the current doctrine of vested rights.

The laborer is not unreasonable in his temperament. He does not dislike a wealthy man simply because of his prosperity. He is willing to do the heavy work if need be; he rejoices in the merited advancement of his fellows, and is the stanchest supporter of our institutions. He objects to the industrial sytem, believing that the producer of wealth should retain that which is fashioned by his labor and skill, instead of handing it over to another man, to receive in return a pittance out of that which he has created.

All wealth is the result of the application of labor to natural opportunities: they who create it occupy the lowest and most wretched level of existence; the few, who do not create the wealth, but who take possession of it by means of indirect processes, constitute the highest class in society and the church. If the system which produces such results is sanctioned by religious teachers, they who suffer because of its operations will reject the teachers and the religion they profess. To champion the cause of labor would alienate at once the majority of those who possess wealth, and of the large class who hope at some time to secure riches."

NOT A "SECT."

THE Denison, (Texas), Gazetteer of the 27th ult., in the clipping below styles the Reorganized Church a "peculiar Christian sect." That will do, except that it is not a "sect" in fact, for it was never "cut off" nor "separated" from another body. It is the continuation of the Church of Christ organized April 6th, 1830, holding the same doctrines, ordinances, ceremonies, church organization, promises, and spiritual blessings. It is the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints reorganized, as its title and its history sufficiently prove. The church, as an organized body, was "rejected" of God as to its specific quorums and councils and their functional and correlative relations, and authorities, but not as to its membership nor general priesthood authority. The Lord declared that it would be "rejected as a church" (D. C. 107:11) if the Saints failed to keep certain command-ments given them. They did tail in this, ments given them. and the consequence was, the church, as an organization, was rejected of God, "cursings, wrath, indignation and judgments" came upon the Saints, they were smitten, oppressed, and scattered, the quorums and councils were distracted and dissolved, various factions were organized under different leaders, all in conflict with the order and law given for the government of the church as set forth in its standard books; rank heresies crept in "privily" among the confused and bewildered members and ministers, and all the evidences of such rejection are but parts of the history of the Saints from 1844 until the present day. The Twelve (nine of them), who led away the largest of all the factions, immediately upon the death of Joseph and Hyrum usurped the leadership of the church, entered into the Nauvoo "stake" and overrode the rights and authority of its officers, violating their own calling and authority, and invading the offices and duties of others, thereby increasing the confusion, perplexity and blindness that then seemed to reign triumphant. Joseph the Seer had solemnly charged the Twelve when organizing and setting that quorum in order, saying: "The Twelve will have no right to go into Zion, or any of its stakes, and there undertake to regulate the affairs thereof, where there is a standing High Council; but it is their duty to go abroad and regulate all matters relative to the different branches of the church."-Millennial Star 15:261, and Messenger and Advocate 1:151. But, forgetful or reckless, they went into the Nauvoo "stake," dictated and dominated its officers, invaded the rights and duties reserved to the High Council and other quorums, proceeded to the ordination of Bishop's, contrary to the law of the church, (D. C. 68: 2; 104:4), and then, by a perversion of Doctrine and Covenants 104:30, 31, and in violation of the well established precedents of the church, undertook, finally, to ordain all the officers (and more) of the church, thereby creating the "sect" properly called Brighamites, (Brigham Young being the chief originator and builder thereof), organized without due authority, organized contrary to the laws and precedents of the church, and then governed and indoctrinated it utterly at variance with the regular, authentic, publicly endorsed and publicly promulgated word as set forth in the standard books and records of the church. As to the usurpation of the Twelve, it is clearly set forth in the "Autobiography of Parley P. Pratt," pages 372-3, &c., for he there admits that he opposed and denounced the calling of "a public meeting" in Nauvoo by Pres. William Marks, who was both president of that "stake" and of the High Council. Matters went on from bad to worse under this usurpation of the Twelve, followed by the organization of Strangism, Rigdonism and various other isms and ites, all of them in violation of the specific order laid down in the law and accredited precedents of the church, in all of which is seen the fruits of a "rejected" church, a darkened, bewildered and captive people, many of them fulfilling Paul's predictions of the latter day apostasy, (I Timothy 4: 1-3), also the predictions of Joseph the Seer and the Book of Mormon on the same matters.

Now, the Reorganized Church, by divine call in 1851 and later, proceeded to take steps preparatory to the reorganization of the church, and afterwards did reorganize it by the commandments of the Holy Spirit, in strict accordance with the patterns set forth in the approved law and precedents of the church as they existed and were taught and observed in the days of the "choice Seer" whom the Lord called, authorized and empowered to "lay the foundation of his church and built it up in its most holy faith." Hence the "Reorganized Church" is not a "sect," but is the Church of God reorganized by the appointment of heaven and in strict accord with the authorized law and precedents of the church. And the evidences confirming this fact are found in its work harmonizing with the law and the precedents, and in the confirmation and approval of its work by the gifts and blessings and favor of God.

Here is what the Gazetteer has to say: "Comparatively few people are aware that there is a Mormon Church that has no connection with the Utah organization, and repudiates polygamy as a crime. When Mormonism is mentioned the mind instinctively reverts to Salt Lake City and Brigham Young. There are, however, Mormons in nearly every state in the Union, who repudiate Brigham as a prophet. They have strong church organizations in many places, notably in Iowa and Missouri, and they are carrying on active missionary work, not only in this country but in Europe. They call themselves "The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." A few days ago arrangements were perfected by delegates appointed for the purpose, to hold a world's conference of this peculiar Christian sect at St. Joseph, Missouri, early in April.

The following editorial from the Lamoni, Iowa, Idependent Patriot, may be read by all with profit as to its prominent facts touching the Jewish race and their influence upon the world's civilization and progress, also as to Hirsch's liberal sentiments relative to free non-sectarian education. Broad, unselfish, unshackled views on education are rapidly gaining ascendency the world over. These are not only cheering harbingers of future good, but they are solid, satisfactory evidences of great gains already accomplished.

The prophets have all predicted good for Israel in these latter days, and all who love God and their fellow man may well rejoice and be glad in seeing the Jews come forward in the grand march to better, higher conditions.

"THE GIFT OF A JEW.

"The merit of giving can not be justly measured by the amount alone; but when all other things are equal, this may fairly enter as an element in the computation.

"As all acquainted with Jewish history know, the Jews of Russia, Poland, Hungary and Austria, by the persecution and cruelty of centuries, have been reduced to a condition of servitude to ignorance and superstition which, considered with reference to its causes, present effects, and future consequences, is indeed deplorable.

"But a ray of light has come. Another name has been added to the list of great philanthropists. Forty million dollars have been given by Baron Hirsch for the purpose of establishing schools in the waste lands of Russia, Austria, Hungary and Poland, that the poor, ignorant Jews who inhabit those countries may become educated and thus delivered from their race and religious prejudices. The vouchers for the money were recently placed in the hands of a committee of twenty Jews, who waited on the Baron in Paris, who are to superintend the construction and management of the proposed schools.

"The effect which will ultimately be produced by the work thus begun, can hardly be conjectured; but the object specifically pointed out by the baron—the deliverance of the Jews from race and religious prejudices—gives assurance, if his hopes are realized, that a great and desirable work will be done.

"Whatever the particular beliefs indulged with reference to the Jews, all who desire the emancipation of the human race as a whole can but look with favor upon the work inaugurated by this unparalelled gift. The ignorance, superstition and unsociability of the great Jewish race have prevented them from justly estimating and appreciating either their past history or their present condition; and their foes taking advantage of their coldness and exclusiveness, have inflicted the most cruel punishments. Both the Jews and their persecutors need enlightenment. Both need to be more thoroughly informed as to the facts of the past and present and the possibilities and probabilities, and in some instances, certainties of the future.

"The Jews are a part of a great and peculiar race. As the instruments through which came an important record, accepted by Christendom as divine, they are invested with a peculiar charm and interest of which they can not be robbed, neither by the persecution of foes nor the misguided zeal of friends; and whoever is seeking to map out the course of the world in its march towards freedoom and enlightenment will do well to give the Jews a prominent place in his calculations.

"The breadth and enlightenment of the Baron's project are particularly commendable. He does not propose that this people shall be educated as Jews nor as Gentiles, but as men. When the view obtains that education is for the race; that whatever good the world affords is for all the inhabitants of the world; that no walls erected by nations, religious schools or social organizations are sufficiently strong to withstand that mysterious influence which is marshalling the forces of good for the final emancipation of the race, we shall have reached a plane of thought which makes the progress and elevation of all men both desirable and possible.

"Baron Hirsch has marked an era in the exercise of charity. He has risen above race and religious prejudices and only asks that his people shall be enlightened, and when that work is accomplished he confidently expects that their coldness, selfishness and seclusion will vanish. The confidence the Baron exhibits in the effects of free education illustrates his breadth of information and the scope and character of his mind. Only those who have gone but half way into anything fear to have it thoroughly explored. The lions and hyenas are generally pictured by the untrodden path. The monsters are generally in the unexplored South Seas.

"There are but two classes of people who fear full investigation: Those who are conscious that they do not possess the truth, and those who have been frightened by misrepresentation and falsehood from a full investigation of that which is said to make against the things they have received as true.

"We hope that the Baron's breadth of thought may be impressed upon the faculty of every school his bounty may establish; and that like a contagion it may spread to the other institutions of Europe and tend to relieve them from their bigotry and exclusiveness."

THE following remedy for Diphtheria should be known and kept at hand, for as explained, it is also of great value in other afflictions. We can from personal experience and observation bear testimony to the very excellent results following the use of bacon for cuts, bruises, snake and insect bites, lame joints, putrid sore throat, and like troubles.

Chadron, Neb., Jan. 26th.—Editor of the Chicago Tribune.—For a period of twenty years the writer has used a simple remedy—to-wit: bacon, applied to the throat in the following manner; Cut the bacon in strips of one-half inch in thickness by one and one-half or two inches in width, and long enough to pass entirely around the throat. Remove the bacon rind and any lean meat there may be in it to prevent blistering the throat or neck. Sew the bacon to a strip of cloth so as to hold it in position and prevent slipping, and then apply the bacon to the throat and neck, and sew it or pin the strip around the neck so that it will not be uncomfortably tight. The throat and neck should be completely swathed with the bacon, and let it remain until after the soreness is gone, or, if after an application of eight hours the disease does not yield, put on a new bandage prepared in the same manner.

The bacon remedy for a wound in the hand or foot caused by a rusty nail is as old as your greatgrandmother. I suppose it is nearly a specific for blood poisoning for the class of wounds last above described. Creosote is an active poison and is an active ingredient of bacon [from the smokel. Creosote is contained in the smoke of wood, and perhaps the best is obtained from the beech. Creosote is an antidote for certain poisons. Salt is also an antidote for certain poisons, such as bee stings, etc. It is a well known fact to those living on the frontier that a live hog is not susceptible to the bite of a rattlesnake, but on the contrary hogs eat live rattlesnakes with avidity and impunity. Bacon contains the necessary elements-to-wit: "Hog's flesh," "salt," and "smoke" (creosote), to neutralize several poisons. Why is it not possible that these antidotes in combination (bacon) are not the specific for diphtheritic poison that the medical profession have long sought and not found? A single experiment will prove that the tissues of the throat absorb most of the fat of the bacon. After an application of bacon to the throat for six or eight hours what is left after removal has the appearance of having been cooked over a fire.

The writer has raised a large family of children, and during the last twenty years, upon the slightest appearance of diphtheritic sore throat, has applied bacon in the manner herein pointed out with unvarying success and the universal effect of changing the whitish appearance of the throat to a red in three or four hours. This simple remedy has been used by many others upon the writer's recommendation with the same result. The "bacon" remedy is not exclusive and can be used in connection with any internal remedy prescribed by the family physician and without the slightest possibility of doing any harm. If bacon is a specific for diphtheria, as the writer believes it to be, the remedy ought to be known and given the greatest possible publicity. Bear in mind that salt pork is not bacon. Salt pork has not been smoked, and therefore contains no creosote. Use bacon if you try this Pro Bono. remedy.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Our contributors will remember that we can not make use of manuscript written on both sides of the paper or across double columns. We trust this will be borne in mind as we usually reject articles so written. We also hope that all contributors will carefully revise their communications after writing them; correcting so far as they can and seeing that they clearly express the ideas sought to be conveyed.

As we go to press (the 9th inst.), we learn that "Willie," the only and fondly loved son of Bro. and Sr. John Scott, died at their residence in Lamoni, at two o'clock this morning. Bro. Scott is foreman of the Herald Office. Particulars will be given in next week's issue.

The January 29th issue of the Calhoun Chronicle, published at Grantsville, West Virginia, contains a defense of the faith by Bro. D. L. Shinn who has been preaching in that vicinity.

By recent letter Bro. E. T. Bryant informs us that he intends to locate in Hebron, Taylor county, Nebraska, the first of next month, and he desires to become acquainted with the Saints in that region. The president of that district in which Hebron lies will do well to correspond with Bro. Bryant at Hebron after March 1st.

Bro. E. Day Bennett, writes from Coleman, Michigan, where he is laboring with Bro. J. J. Cornish that they are having good congregations with an excellent outlook.

Bro. W. F. Clark writing from Caney, Kansas, states that he lately went into that vicinity and began preaching, the result of which has been to arouse an interest and make friends for the cause. He expects to reap at no distant day.

Elder R. M. Elvin was preaching at Wilber, Nebraska, the 4th inst., and wrote that quite a good interest was aroused there in the word preached, also that he had good success in selling the new Compendium, and that he would do his best for the work of the gospel and the interests of the Herald Office, all of which we are very glad to know. The Compendium should be in the hands of every adult in the church, and it is well nigh indispensible to the ministry. As for the church publications, they are a mighty force in spreading abroad the latter day work and should be thoroughly sustained.

Bro. A. Campbell, of Montrose, Iowa, writes that about twenty-one persons at that place, some of whom are not members of the church, have organized a Book of Mormon class. They meet every Tuesday evening and after sing and prayer read from two to five chapters of the Book of Mormon. Bro. Campbell states that all participating feel blessed in the matter.

Bro. W. W. McLeod wrote from Cormorant, Minnesota, expressive of hope and good cheer in the onward movements of the work. Among other things mentioned he expresses an interest in the success of the Lamoni College. The Saints there would like to have Bro. A. H. Smith, H. N. Hansen and H. L. Holt appointed to that mission by General Conference.

Sr. Ellen Aurner, of Boone, Iowa; also Bro. C. L. Munro, of Boston, Massachusetts, while renewing Herald subscriptions make mention of the blessings they receive in the news of God's dealings with His people.

Bro. H. P. Brown, of Oakland, California, wrote us the 31st ult., saying: "I shall not publish the Expositor another year. I was paralyzed in December last, and am unable to do anything now." We sincerely regret the sore affliction of Bro. Brown, but all have to bow to the stern experiences of life, let them come as they may, and humbly, meekly submit to the dispensations of the Almighty whenever and wherever they are manifest. We indulge the hope that his condition will gradually improve, and that he will yet be spared to many years of usefulness and happiness. May heaven bless, guide and prosper him.

Pres. W. W. Blair expects to attend the conference of the Galland's Grove district which convenes at Salem, Shelby county, Iowa, Friday, February 15th, at two p. m. He hopes to meet a large attendance.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"I can not paint, nor write, nor sing, and yet
There seems for me some quiet niche to fill Somewhere in God's great world; I stand and wait
Where he may find me ready for his will.
Ungifted is my life with talents great,
And yet that joyful happiness within
Tells of a deep contentment that abides,
And of a friendship sweet and strong with Him."

PATIENCE, WEARY MOTHER!

"WHAT have I done to-day?" the tired mother asks at night. "Nothing but take care of baby and plan the meals and 'pick up.' My life is wasted on trifles." Take courage, weary mother! The progress of the world depends on the devotion of good women to just such "trifles." Who can do a greater work than these-care for a child and look after the interests of a home? She who with patient mother love prepares a human soul for life's responsibilities, does valiant service for both God and man. The first years of a child's life must, of necessity, be devoted to the care of the body, but the body should be made a fit temple for the indwelling of an immortal soul. Taking care of the baby is surely no trifle when viewed in this light.

And what are the other services that go to make a home? Innumerable as the sands of the seashore for number, and in themselves almost as insignificant in character, but the grand sum total serves, as does the sandy shore, to stem the swelling tide of outside sin and suffering that menaces with sullen war the sanctity of home and the safety of society. The husband and the children who know the comforts of a happy home are safe from many woes that prey on those outside that shelter. Blessings on the wife and mother who "looketh well to the ways of her household, and eateth not the bread of idleness."

"The heart of her husband doth safely trust in her." "Her children arise up and call her blessed." "Strength and honor are her clothing, and she shall rejoice in time to come."—Sel.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Sr. Jane Knight, San Francisco, California, writes: "You may call this a wail from San Francisco if you think best. In this great city there are so many places of amusement to attend, so much that interferes with any serious thought, that the people go in crowds and seem to take no thought of the morrow. They will flock to hear Dr. Dowe and Mr. Moody, but will they turn out to hear brother Joseph when he comes? We answer, No they will not, except a few who care more for truth than popularity. There are a few here who are doing all in their power towards helping on the work, and among them are some promising young elders. I love this work better than all else on earth, and pray for grace to endure to the end."

Sr. Mary Hoague, Fulton, Wisconsin, writes: "We feel to thank Sr. Frances for the Home Column and its many kind words of encouragement and also the help it often contains from the sisters scattered abroad. We hope the Prayer League may be of great benefit, and it will be if God sees fit. Kind wishes for all the church papers."

Sr. Mary Elliot, Richmondale, Ohio, writes: "It is Sunday evening, and having no one of like precious faith to talk to, I will write the Home Column. What a blessing the Herald is, coming every week freighted with good tidings from all over the world, and how my heart rejoices while reading the grand testimonies of my brethren and sisters. God is near me in my loneliness and affliction, and hears my feeble petition. He has promised grace for every trial and I have proven his promises true. I have been a member of the church four years last August, and have never regretted the step I then took. The grandest step of my life was taken when I demanded baptism of Bro. Devore, and was buried with Christ in baptism, arising to walk in newness of life. Not many days after I received the knowledge, through the gift of the Holy Ghost, that the work was of God and that I was accepted as his child. I have many doubts of myself, but not one of this grand work. When I first accopted the gospel it raised such an uproar in the neighborhood where I lived, and there were so many things said against the Prophet Joseph that I confess it was hard for me to accept him; but after receiving the knowledge by the Spirit that the work was of God, it was, and still is, to me, a testimony that Joseph Smith was a prophet of the living God.

PRAYER LEAGUE.

Memory texts for March:—1st Thursday, John 2:17; Eph. 4:14-16. 2d Thursday, 2 Chron 15:12; Jer. 14:8; Col. 4:2. 3d Thursday, Dan. 12:3; Gal. 6:6. 4th Thursday, Ps. 102:16, 17; Dan. 12:10. ELEANOR.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Request is made of the Union for prayer in behalf of the work in San Francisco, and for the sick of that branch, especially for those who have for a long time been afflicted.

The united faith and prayers of the sisters, with all those who love this work, are earnestly requested in behalf of one whose life for years has been devoted to preaching the gospel, but who now feels that unless God removes the disease which is preying upon his system, that his labors in this life must soon close.

(This request is in behalf of one whose life and labors witness to the world that "he has been with Jesus," and we trust every soul that feels the need of faithful laborers in God's vineyard will intercede with Him, that if it be His righteous will He will restore to health and prolong the life of one whom the church can ill afford to spare.—ED.)

Bro. W. H. Bowen, of Kansas City, is helpless from paralysis together with other afflictions, and asks the prayers of the Union, that if it be the Lord's will he may be restored, that he may be a help in furthering the work.

Sr. M. S. desires the prayer of the Union that she may recover her health.

Sr. Phœbe M. Wolvin requests the prayers of the Union in her behalf, as she is suffering and afflicted.

The Saints of the Flagler's branch desire your faith and prayers in behalf of two afflicted sisters.

We feel constrained to ask the attention of those sending in to have prayer made for their families to the fact that the 2d Thursday of each month the sisters of the Union are under covenant to pray for the families of each other and those of the ministry and for the youths of the church in general. And the third Thursday for the sick and afflicted. Special cases only demand special requests.

TO THE PRAYER LEAGUE.

Dear Sisters:—The year 1888 has passed, leaving the record of our renewed covenant in the service of God; and as I read your testimonies concerning the blessings received for even the weakest attempt made to keep that covenant, I am gladdened and encouraged, with you, to still more diligent efforts, and in return I wish to add my testimony.

Since this work began I have been greatly blessed, both spiritually and physically. I am in the enjoyment of better health than for years, and I feel that I owe it under God, to your united faith and prayers in my behalf; and I desire that you will continue to sustain me, that I may the more effectually labor for the furtherance of the work. The year just opening to us should witness an increased effort by all to obey the invitation to "Come up higher." Higher in spiritual life and light, and the gospel law of love to God and to one another.

The lessons of the few months past have been sufficient to show us the value of earnest, united effort to strengthen and sustain each other's hands. But, sisters, we have just begun; away before us stretches the white harvest-field, where we are to glean and gather up the scattered stalks of golden grain that have escaped from the sheaves of the reaperss. Our faithfulness in saving from loss these scattered handfuls of the Master's wheat, will be as truly approved of Him as the greater work of our brother harvest-

Let us move steadily onward, intent on our Fathers's business, allowing no discontent at the seeming insignifiance of our task to turn us from our purpose, and out of the way. "Woman's sphere" is as wide as the world, wherever there is a home or a child. Is it a small thing, or a mark of inferiority, that God has confided to woman's hands and heart the training and keeping of young minds pure and true for Him? Let us take a view of the question from this light; not that I think you have any doubts on the matter, but let us strengthen each other's faith. For illustration, we have observed a careful gardener turn a bottomless cask over some plant, checking its tendency to branch out, in order that it may grow tall and symmetrical. So if the heavenly Gardener has restricted woman's sphere. He has left the cask open at the top, knowing that thus she will put forth every exertion to grow upward towards the sunlight of God's love. He also knows that the greater freedom and opportunities of man tend to make him forgetful, or heedless of the source of life and light, and renhim prone to grovel on the earth out of which he sprang. With such a tendency it is doubtful if he ever would look upwards towards heaven's light if he was not compelled to see it through the face of mother, wife or sister.

For this reason there is implanted in him a nature to reverence a good woman, and that woman's energies directed upward impel him upward too. "My mother's God" has been the guiding star of multitudes. Let women be justly proud of the noble trees with far reaching branches, growing up into God's sunlight by her side. Let her turn a deaf ear to every tempter that would seek to turn that pride of man's greatness into discontent of ourselves; for neither we nor they would be anything but unsightly branches in God's garden with those restrictions removed that give an upward tendency to woman's love, to religion and civilization.

As it has been given to woman to make the first and most lasting impression on the mind of childhood, let her remember that those impressions, like water, cannot rise above their source; and the higher she is exalted in those truer, firmer instincts, the greater will be the impetus that starts them on their way to seek the source of their being, God. And as neither man nor woman can exceed the stature of Christ, it is enough that they reach that measure of perfection together, in God's appointed way.

In beginning the work of this new year, I earnestly advise the sisters as far as possible to organize local unions in all the branches. And as some have asked for instructions as to the manner of proceeding, I think it would be well for all such unions now organized to report to the column how they are conducted, with a view to a better understanding and harmony of action. Such an understanding may also, in time, lead to a more perfect organization of the general union, as thereby its needs will develop. As to whether the name shall be called "League" or "Union,"makes no difference to me. It is the spirit of the work alone, that I am anxious to see carried out; but as many have expressed a desire that the name be changed, we will hereafter style it the Prayer Union.

In bonds,

ELEANOR.

CLEAR WATER, Neb., Feb. 1st.

Dear Sister Walker and Sisters of the Home Column:—I have been thinking for some time that I would cotribute my mite to the Home Column, and today made up my mind that it was the time.

How we all enjoy reading the letters from the mothers and young sisters; and then Sr. Walker's editorials always contain something instructive and encouraging. I like the late talk on plainness of dress, and think our garments can be made plain and neat, and yet not be so unlike the fashion of the times that it will be conspicuous. The cry against fashion, to me, looks absurd. If we wear a garment it must of necessity be of some fashion, and is the style of to-day any more sinful than that of a hundred years ago? and if a woman is lucky enough to have more than one dress she ought not to be called proud because she did not make them exactly alike, any more than if she arranged her furniture to suit her taste, or did not always boil her potatoes with the skins on.

Another thing I wish to speak about. Is there a true L. D. S. who would teach his or her children to steal, either by precept or example? Yet how many excellent mothers and fathers we constantly meet, who make a practice of lying to their children, either to avoid answering questions, or to enforce obedience; even resorting to scaring them, telling them that something, a dog or a bear, or a black man, or a pig, will catch them, or eat them or carry them off. How terrible! In after life the grown up child may master that feeling of fear to a certain extent, because of his better judgment, but he will never erase from his memory the terrors experienced in childhood. And then, how soon children learn that their parents are not truthful, and they reason if they would tell an untruth about things of that kind (and I think they could do nothing worse), they would about other things; and so the foundation for teaching them right from wrong is undermined. And again they reason, if their parents tell untruths, they can too; but how soon the parents reprove and severely punish a habit of this kind in the child.

Why is it that some of our children are fond of frequenting the ball room, the horse races, the billiard halls, saloons and like places where none but those of low morality should be supposed to be found? We certainly have missed our aim somewhere.

I want to tell you that we have Vol. I of the Autumn Leaves nicely bound, and it makes a book fit for anybody's library, and we are very proud of it; and if nothing happens to prevent, I think next Chirstmas will find its companion in our house. Some of the Saints I hear, are finding fault because some of the stories, they think, are fictitious. If that is all the fault it has, why do they not go to work and make it better if they can, and not sit and growl like the dog in the manger; but then, Sr. Walker, you need not expect to please every one for Christ did not, and the president of the United States can not.

Times are hard, I know, but let us all save our pennies and nickles and support the Autumn Leaves. Our young folks need it, and it will not harm the older ones. I have a little girl, seven years old, who eagerly reads all the magazine, except the very hardest. She will read, if not that something else, and if I fail to provide her with pure literature, I have made a great mistake, and one that perhaps, may never be corrected. We all make mistakes enough, let us not make more than we can help, or those that in after years we will deeply regret.

It may be that I have already wearied you, so I will close, ever praying for the prosperity of the workers in Zion's cause and the good of all.

I remain your sister,

Емма Х. Самет.

There is but one (the Master) whom we are trying to please, and if we do please him we must seek the highest good of all. Allegory there has been in the magazine, but even our New Years story had its counterpart in real life, though the names, of course were not the real ones.—ED.

NEW PROVIDENCE, Ind. Jan. 27th.

Brother Blair: - The work in southern Indiana is gaining members and friends in many places, and is extending out in several directions. I returned home a few days ago with my father. James G. Scott, from Lawrence county. We went to Mitchell and sought a house to preach in, but in vain. We got permission of two elders of the Campbellite church to use their church. but Mr. Martin the third elder, refused us the house. He said he had all he could carry now, and that we had nothing to lose there. But he said he would pay his part if we would rent a hall. Father preached there in November, and the elder saw that he would have to make an attempt to defend his church, and he shuddered at that. He said he would not meet us there in a discussion.

We did not feel to pay $5.00 a night for a hall. I was directed in a dream and heard a voice say: "Go out of town and preach: there you will find an empty house;" but I thought I did not like to do that. The next morning we were directed by a man to a house three miles east on the O. and M. railroad, and we went to the Hostetler's school-house, and called on Mr. Elijah Burton, and were kindly received. The director said we could have the house and a large crowd came to hear. We held several meetings with excellent liberty, and good attention. Several confessed that we preached the gospel. We had an invitation to another school house. The entire neighborhood seemed lit up by the effort we made, and earnestly requested us to come there again soon to hold a series of meetings. We expect to to return some time in February; also opened up a place on the Air Line railroad, with the assistance of Bro. G. Jenkins, at Mott's station; were also at Byrnville. We left some investigating.

We were made glad while Bro. J. W. Gillen was with us. He did us much good, and is an excellent man, and a good preacher. He baptized four into the Eden branch—my two daughters; also Mr. John and Miss Nancy Goss, the long expected ones. He preached twice at New Providence and removed much prejudice. People liked him, and several said he preached more Bible than ever had been preached there before. We hope he will return to our district soon.

We call the attention of the Saints of the Southern Indiana District and also the collectors of the different branches for the Bishop's agent to the fact that they haven't done a great deal financially in the past year. Begin with the first of the year paying tithes and offerings. Let all see that we are doing something for the cause we say we love. We earnestly request every member to help what they can before I make my annual report, the first of March. I request an effort by all my collectors by the 20th of February. Remember that we are all responsible.

JAMES M. SCOTT.

SAGINAW CITY, Mich, Jan. 31st. Drar Herald:-I left Dakota on the 27th of last November, laid over one day in Aberdeen, Dakota, spent nearly a week in Sioux City, Iowa; from there I went to Dow City, held three meetings there, and went to Woodbine to attend the conference of the Little Sioux District. This was the first conference of the church that I ever attended, and I enjoyed it hugely. Sunday the 9th of December, Bro. Charles Derry delivered the dedicatory sermon on the occasion of the dedication of the Woodbine chapel. He held the people for nearly two hours. It was grand. The 13th found me in Lamoni. As I stepped off the train and took a good view of the town on to the west, I saw the large brick chapel, situated on a hill, while to the north stands the Herald Office, on which in large letters 1 read, "Latter Day Saints' Herald." This building is built of red brick. I spent five days in Lamoni, and I can say since I have been to "headquarters" I take much pride in presenting to the people the claims put forth by the Latter Day Saints, now I can give the world a better understanding of the class of people of which the church is composed, and I am glad that I have the privilege of representing this people. I can now realize more fully the significant saying of the Seer, "Where this people is, there is always good company."

From Lamoni I went to Centerville, and from there to Chicago, where I met Bro. Good, president of the Chicago branch. In a few hours I was off for Saginaw City. I staid one night at Bro. G. A. Blakeslee's, Galien, Michigan.

The evening of the 21st of December found me at home in Saginaw City, where I remained for two weeks trying to spread the work of the Master. I think the outlook is quite promising for an ingathering there soon. January 5th I left for active work in my field-Northern Michigan. I went to Farwell where I held meetings for a week with quite good results, and on the 12th Bro. Richard B. Campbell took me to Brinton, at which place I met Bro. J. J. Cornish, and we continued in and around that place till the 22d. One evening we found the schoolhouse in which we were holding meetings locked, and the director refused to open the door. At last some of the citizens prevailed upon him to unlock the door for that night, and the next evening meeting was held in the "Letson Hall," and this director then attended the meeting for the first time. On Sunday the school house was again opened. Bro. Cornish spoke in the forenoon on the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, and in the afternoon I spoke on marriage. After service this director asked us if we would preach again on Monday evening. Not knowing the man, we answered that the house was locked against us on week-day nights. "O," said he, "that is all right; if you will only preach you can have the house." We spoke on Monday night to a packed house, and after meeting this same director said to us, "I want you two gentlemen to go home with me to-night." went and had a very pleasant time. This is but one of the many radical changes wrought in the minds of the people in that vicinity, as was plainly manifest by their actions.

The Free Methodists held their district conference in Brinton on the 18th inst., and continued over Sunday. Friday night, the 18th, we preached out in the Johnson school house, and came back into Brinton early Saturday morning, and the first thing we heard was, "You fellows got a terrible raking last night over at the Free Methodist meeting. They said you were Mormons and were deceiving the people, and that when you got them caught you would take them to Salt Lake; and that the doctrine of probation after death was a damnable doctrine; and he (the minister), was willing to face any man or devil that taught that doctrine; that it was a doctrine of the devil and he could prove it," etc. "Now," said they, "if you can prove your doctrine we want you to go right over there to their meetings and tell the minister you are willing to meet him." We went, and in an intermission Bro. Cornish asked permission to say a few words, but was refused, and he was told to sit down. He complied, but after the benediction was pronounced Bro. Cornish said: "Say, Elder, are you going to give me the privilege of saying a few words to this congregation?" "No sir; I am not," was the short reply. "Well," said Bro. Cornish, I will say a few words to you then." He went up and tried to talk with the Reverend (?) but abuse was all that he received in return. He was called a liar, etc., a number of times by this so-called Rev. White, of Clare, Michigan. At one of their last meetings, one of the citizens of the town went to their meeting, and after meeting said: "I want to make a confession to this people. You would not give me a privilege while your meeting was in session, now I want to make it. I confess I have lied to the citizens of Brinton. I told them when Elder White came they would find him to be a Christian gentleman and they would have some good preaching. But," he continued, "I lied to them; for when we come here to your meeting we get abused for attending the Latter Day Saints' meeting, and we hear them abused also; but when we go over to their meetings they are preaching the gospel and abuse no man." At last, on Sunday night, when the Reverend (?) heard that we had gone out to the Brown school house to preach, he said that he had concluded to debate the question with the "Mormons:" but when we were unexpectedly called back to town the next morning to preach a funeral sermon, we found that the Goliath had fled!

A young man on the day before (Sunday) was carelessly handling a rifle and it accidentally went off and shot his little sister. She lived only a short time, and the parents wished Bro. Cornish to preach the funeral sermon. We therefore went back, and when within about a mile of town a brother of Mr. Letson, the child's father, came out to the road to meet us. He is a Baptist minister I understand. "Are you the gentlemen who have been preaching in the Brinton school house," he asked. Bro. Cornish answered that we were. "Well," he said, "in regard to that funeral of my brother's child we have that all arranged. There is a minister in the house whom I have secured to preach it. My brother wanted me to do it, but I told him it would look bad, and that I would get some one to preach in my place, and I have got Bro. - to stay over; so you men need not go down." Bro. Cornish replied, "I guess we will go on into town, and then we can get back in time to catch the train." "O," said the Reverend, "if you are tired you can stop in here and rest a little and then go back." "No," said Bro. Cornish, "I guess we will go on into town." We went on and reported what we had been told. Mr. Letson said, "If Mr. Cornish don't preach the sermon it will not be preached." A few of the Methodists gathered around them and asked, "Will it not make hard feelings to have Elder Cornish preach this sermon?" The only answer was, "We want Mr. Cornish. We believe his doctrine." The Reverend came at last, and he said he would rather give fifty dollars than to have Elder Cornish preach that sermon for his brother's child. But Mr. Letson had determined on "Elder Cornish or none," so Bro. Cornish delivered the sermon to a crowded house, and when he finished there was hardly a dry eye to be seen. That night the Brinton school house was filled to its fullest capacity. Many are believing, and some said that when we came back they were ready for baptism. We went down to Farwell, held a few meetings and then on down to Coleman where we are having large congregations. We can surely say, "Tis a glorious thing to be in the light." My address is 502 Oakley Street, Saginaw City, Michigan.

Yours, E DAY BENNETT.

PLUM HOLLOW, Iowa, Feb. 5th. Bro. W. W. Blair:-I went to Wheeler's Grove last January 3d., and met with Major Howe of the Adventist Church. Some of the members of that church who live in that neighborhood had told some of our brethren that they were going to get one of their ministers to come and "clean the Mormons out." This same gentleman had occupied the Christian church tor about two weeks previous, and set forth their views to some considerable extent. I met him the evening of the 5th of January, and he seemed anxious for debate, in order, as he stated, to discuss the difference on some points at issue between us and them. I told him I was not at all anxious for anything of that kind, but still was on hand to defend our position as a church, and that I would affirm that the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints was in harmony with the New Testament Scriptures, both in Church organization and doctrine. This he would not accept, neither would he affirm that their church was the Church of Christ. He wanted to lead me off on their pet theory, the unconscious state of the soul between death and the resurrection. We made arrangements, and commenced work in good earnest on the following night, he taking the affirmative of the question. We debated the question six nights before a packed house of very attentive listeners. This was done in a fair, impartial spirit, and with the best of feelings between Mr. Howe and myself. The majority of those who heard, outside of our own people, were of the opinion that he utterly failed to substantiate his position. In addition to this I preached seven sermons to good and attentive audiences, and I think with good effect.

Our people were willing to let this gentleman have the church, and did so, in order that he might have the opportunity of presenting the views of his church before the public. In this they manifested a liberal spirit.

I saw Bro. Frank Green who was there a week later than myself, and he told me Mr. Howe was still holding forth in the place, and that nothing of note was taking place.

I went to Farm Creek and preached seven sermons, and the same in Emerson and Keystone. All is well with the Saints and the work so far as I know. Bro. Brand preached here yesterday in the morning, and myself at night.

Yours Truly, H. KEMP.

SULPHUR ROCK, Independence Co., Arkansas, February 1st.

Editors Herald:-I have been thinking some time that I would write to you and state that I like the doctrine of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Salnts better than any I ever investigated. I am not a member of the church, therefore I do not hesitate to so speak. In my investigations I have not found any doctrine so pure in principle and so apostolic and biblical as this church. I have often read and heard of the Mormons and how they were treated on account of polygamy, etc., but I find the Reorganized Church is as much opposed to polygamy as any of the other churches. The doctrine of the Reorganized Church suits me exactly. It is precisely the plain and simple teaching of the Holy Scriptures and is the same gospel that the apostles preached in every particular.

About one year ago, while I was in California, I heard three sermons preached by Elder J. H. Lawn. I see nothing wrong about this church, and I think it is the right one, and would be very glad to hear some more preaching by this denomination, and I know of no better way to get to hear it where I now live, than for you to publish this in the Saints' Herald, that probably some of the elders in this state can make it convenient to call and see me. If any should do so, my door is open to them. Accept my heartiest wishes for the growth of the church and prosperity of the great truths preached by it.

Yours respectfully, W. G. Thomas.

Angus, Iowa, Jan. 26th.

Bro. Blair:—Since embracing the latter day work I have had many strange and wonderful experiences, and my understanding of God's purposes have been quickened to such an extent that I often wonder that the great Ruler of the Universe should condescend to notice and bless such an one as I.

When I first received a testimony by the power of the Spirit, showing me the divinity of the work, neither tongue or pen can describe the joy and satisfaction it gave me; and oh, how my heart went out after my former brethren of the Methodist persuasion! The way seemed so simple and plain that none could misunderstand it, and I thought all I would have to do would be to call their attention to what was written and bear testimony that for myself I had tested and proved the words of Jesus to be true. But alas! I, like a great many others who have had the same idea, was doomed to disappointment. For awhile I thought it strange that they would neither receive my testimony nor the record they professed to believe in, but I don't wonder at it now. While men make a profession of Christ, a great many are not willing to abide by his teachings, being taught by their ministers to simply believe and trust in Christ and he will cancel all their sins of whatever nature; that he died for that purpose - neglecting to show their flocks the narrow way which leads us unto life. They are thus led to scoff at anything like law and order. They will tell us there is no law, for by the deeds of the law shall no flesh be justified. "By grace are ye saved through faith." "The blood of Christ cleanseth us from all sin," etc., and many other passages of Scripture will they quote and when we wish to examine them, they will tell us they know they are right; the Spirit has borne witness with their spirits that they are born of God, and their minds are fully made up to know nothing save Jesus Christ and him crucified. They are able to quote considerable scripture from which one unacquainted with the words of life might be led to believe that they were all right: but when we turn to what is written we learn that the enemies and opposers of Jesus and his disciples could quote scripture and declare they knew this or that. But Jesus told them all their pretensions and worship were vain for they made void the law of God by their traditions; and that in vain did they worship him teaching for doctrine the commandments of men.

In talking with a minister of the United Brethren about the order of the kingdom and who were proper ambassadors of the same, he asked me what church I belonged to. I told him. He then said I was anything but a Christian, and that he did not think as much of a Latter Day Saint as he did of a dog; that we occupied the lower round of the ladder in the scale of humanity. I felt thankful, however, at the time, that I had not been educated to that kind of Christianity—that if his climbing three, four or five rounds up the ladder had made him so large as to think his felow mortals so small, I would rather occupy the lower round the rest of my days.

John Bunyan says:

"He that is down need fear no fall, He that is low no pride; He that is humble ever shall Have God to be his guide."

There is one thing certain, if we will follow the pattern Jesus has given, we will be well received by him at the end of life's journey. As he has advised us not to be too forward or to think of ourselves more than we ought to think, but to willingly submit to ill-treatment, leaving all things in the hands of the righteous judge who has said, "Vengeance is mine and I will repay," he will without fail exalt us in due time if we are faithful.

I find much comfort from what is written. We can now see the great wisdom of Jehovah in causing his laws and commandments to be written. I find them to be good weapons to use in battling against the various conflicting creeds and systems.

It is very seldom that a traveling elder finds his way here. We many times long for some one to to come to our assistance, but the field being great and the laborers few, we have to content ourselves by toiling on the best we can amidst prejudice, bigotry and superstition. Occasionaly one or two enters the fold which shows us that our labors are not altogether unfruitful, and also increases our courage and renews the diligence of the adversary.

I am sorry to notice in the Herald of late that there is not suffcient money coming into the treasury to maintain the few missionaries we have in the field. I for one have not been able to assist in that line during the past year—work in the mines being so poor at this place. I believe I have taken every advantage that has presented itself to preach the word. I expect to continue to bear my testimony to this work though sectarian ministers may rage and their flocks imagine vain things. I am determined to leave this people without excuse when they stand before the judgment seat of Christ. With great desire for the welfare of the kingdom of God.

Yours in bonds,

WM. THOMAS.

FRIBERG, Minn., Jan. 14th.

Bro. Blair:-I came to this place last Thursday, being called to preach the funeral sermon of Bro. Toplin's son, a promising boy fourteen years of age. They have been in much trouble, two of their oldest children having had the typhoid fever, and their youngest child is now sick, but is much better, for God has heard prayer. A large number came to the funeral and there is quite an interest. I commenced meetings Friday night and shall continue as long as circumstance permit. Shall baptize two of Bro. Toplin's children this week, and think others will obey, but do not know; God knows. He gives me liberty and his Spirit in preaching the word. I never was blessed as I have been this winter, lacking neither thought nor words.

That sermon on baptism for the dead was grand. I had been talking to a Cutlerite on that principle and we did not agree, but he can't go back on the teachings of Joseph. We feel that there are some that ere long will come out of that delusion. Prospects were never better for introducing the work than they are now. Many have expressed a desire to hear me preach. I was in doubt whether to go, but the Spirit said to come here; so here I am and will try and all I can. Yesterday I was with the Silver Lake branch and had a good time, for the Spirit was there.

Praying for Zion's welfare, I remain yours in the love of Christ, T. J. MARTIN.

PLEASANTON, Iowa, Jan. 16th.

Bro. Blair:—The two-days' meeting held here on the 12th and 13th insts. was a success. The people turned out well, and the best of order was maintained during every service. Brethren R. M. Elvin and J. Shippy were the principal speakers; the sermons delivered were scholarly and seasoned with grace and humility. A close observer would readily conclude that experience and access to an extensive library, together with the aid of God's Holy Spirit had made them efficient workmen that need not be ashamed. The Saints were encouraged and built up, and a good impression was made upon the audience. Bro. Wells preached at 2: 30, p. m. on Saturday, Bro. Elvin being called away to conduct the funeral services of Bro. A. Truman.

We as a branch feel encouraged over the good prospects before us. While visiting the scattered members of the branch I was made glad to hear of the good work of Bro. D. Campbell and M. Turpen some four or five miles south of Pleasanton. The people there speak well of those brethren and their spiritual labors. Bro. Wm. Anderson the president of the branch was temporarily called to St. Louis. In the mean time Bro. A. Reese and myself will conduct the affairs of the branch the best we can.

J. M. Brown.

ALLENDALE, Mo., Jan. 19th.

Dear Herald:—I wish to tell your readers that we are neither dead nor asleep, for opposition without and the blessings of God within are enough to keep us wide awake. We realize that the more this work is opposed the more it will prosper. Our numbers are increasing fast, being about sixty now, with not less than a dozen more who are convinced of the truth. We have enjoyed a visit from brethren H. A. Stebbins and C. H. Jones during the past week. They were blessed with the Spirit of the Master in preaching the word of life.

Our little chapel 24 by 40 feet was at times crowed to its utmost and ere long we will see the fruit of their labors. Come again brethren. Bro. Stebbins left us to-day to open up the work in Grant City with Bro. Keeler who resides at that place. May the Lord bless the effort.

Yours in bonds, WM. BIRK.

VALLEY VIEW, Iowa, Feb. 4th.

Dear Herald:—In your issue for February 2d, I read an article written by W. M. Rumel, on Dancing, which I liked very much. I think much more should be found in your columns upon the same subject.

I thought it not amiss to give you my experience on the same subject. I was about fourteen years old and had been taught by my parents to believe the church as established by Joseph Smith to be the true church, but, like many others, I was surrounded by evil influences-one being dancing. A new school-house was built near our home, and when finished the builder announced a dance to be held in it. In time the evening came, and as the sun was setting, a black cloud arose in the west accompanied by a fierce wind. But I with two others started to go, and when about a quarter of a mile from the house the wind blew much more fiercely than before. Thunder rolling and lightning flashing brought many thoughts to me. But being somewhat stubborn, I still went on until with the others I reached the house. But this guilty feeling did leave me. A wretched night I passed. In connection with the thunder and lightning were torrents of rain. Some present were drunk, some trying to make rows, yet it was called (by some) a civil dance. What think ye? But this did not satisfy the man who built the house, so about two weeks afterward there was to be another dance there. I decided to go again, but on the evening appointed another cloud arose in exactly the same manner as before. I do not think there was any difference, at least I saw none, and I watched the storm very closely. When I saw this I knew for myself it was wrong so I decided never to go to a dance again. I can truly thank God for such a testimony as was there and then given me.

In gospel bonds,

BENJAMIN CHAPMAN.

NEWARK, Dak., Feb. 1st. .

Dear Herald:—I wish to say a few words for this latter day work. I can say that I know it is of God, for many times I am blest with God's Holy Spirit, and it causes me to rejoice. Oh, it is a great privilege to call upon our Heavenly Father and know that if we ask in faith believing, we shall receive whatsoever we ask for. I thank God that he has let me into this light, and I can say with truth that I know that this is the Church of Christ. Many times when sick I have been healed by the power of the Lord—praise be to His holy name.

Your sister in Christ, MARY C. ODE.

Oxford, Idaho, Jan. 27th.

Bro. Blair:-It has been said that this branch had ceased to be, but it is a mistake. We are holding regular Sabbath services, and the interest is good among the few that attend. Bro. Benjamin Croshaw is our presiding elder and takes a great interest in the work. We had a visit from Bro. John Lewis, of Malad, recently, which did us good, and we are looking for Bro. Anthony who will be a welcome visitor as he is known to be a good worker and a faithful Latter Day Saint. His name will ever be remembered here for his good works. He was the one who first preached the gospel here, and to some of us it is just as precious as when we accepted it, although there is room for great improvement. Some seem to have lost the love they had for the gospel. Perhaps their trials have been too great for them. Trials will come, and at times they seem more than we can bear. This world is full of trials and disappointments, and will continue so until the consummation. The promise is to those who "overcome" and "endure to the end." If we gain the prize it will be through humility and constant labor. We must love God with all our might mind and strength; and if we so love him, we will keep his commandments, and then our reward will be great. The Master is pleading with all mankind to turn to him with a broken heart and a contrite spirit and find rest and a reward that is far superior to anything that can be gained in this world.

Yours in the gospel of peace, W. H. HARRIS.

MULBERRY, Cal. Jan. 19th.

Dear Bro. Foseph:—I have belonged to the church about eight years, and have received ample testimony from the Lord that it is true; every day more strongly convinces me of the fact. I thank my heavenly Father daily for His manifold mercies and blessings unto me, and I fear we hardly realize how thankful we should be for such a glorious church paper in which to write and tell of our experiences in that which is so sacred to us. Since I have been more earnestly engaged in reading the Herald I find it so interesting that it would be almost impossible to do without it.

Although there are but a few Saints here, (eleven in all), and no officers, we meet together every Sunday in the capacity of Saints' meeting, fully believing this could do no harm, and thinking that we might do some good, if nothing more than to be a strength to one another. It is hard at times to battle against the world, but when we know we are in the right and are doing the will of the Lord, we should not feel backward but do what we can for the truth, until the final consummation. We would feel more encouraged if we could have an elder here to preach for us, but we will try and be contented as it is. Pray for us, dear Saints, in our efforts, that we may gain wisdom and strength to go on. The Lord has said, "Where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them."-Matt. 18:20.

I will teil you (as near as I can remember) a dream I had shortly after I was baptized; A vast amount of people were gathered at one place. (I did not know why it was). In the center of the crowd was a large building, and I noticed that it was full of people, and I went to the door to see what they were doing. I saw the Lord in the midst of them, enrolling their names on a large book, and I desired that mine should be enrolled, but I found that I had not been living near enough to the covenant which I had made to permit its being placed any higher than on the next to the last line of a column.

I thought this was pretty low, and felt almost discouraged, (for I thought that I had been trying to live about right), but the Lord said to me, "Do not feel discouraged, for I will go away a short season, and you must live as righteous a life as possible while I am gone, and I will prepare a place for you according to the way you have lived." (Please read the fourteenth chapter of St. John.) This was encouraging, and I determined, let come what may, I would strive to serve my Master, for His will is to be obeyed if I expect to gain a bright reward. He walked through the crowd, (carrying His large book and pencil), and was soon out of sight. The whole assembly were wondering about Him. They soon left, and then it seemed that I was at my own home.

Before long I with my little sister went outside and were going around the house when I heard a great hissing noise. I turned and saw in a dead tree not far from us, a large serpent. (My sister was nearest it and I had hold of her hand.) The serpent's head was a brighter red than the rest of the body. It seemed that we were being drawn as it were by magnetism closer to it. Every time that it would open its mouth it would be brighter than day around it. It was very attractive and I was endowed with a soothing feeling and almost overwhelmed; but still I was afraid of it and kept hold of my sister's hand trying to go from it, but it was very hard to do. Finally I got turned and then it was much easier to go the other way. I had gone but a few steps (my sister was not with me then) when I beheld a beautiful green tree, and O, what a feeling of joy came over me; for I knew, dear Saints, that this was the everlasting tree of life; and that the other which I had been very near to and had just turned from, was the tree of destruction or of death. I then saw the Savior coming towards me with the same book under his arm, He came up very close to me and took His book and lenghthy pencil and inscribed my name in a much higher place than before and said (as near as I remember) "This is because you have turned and are striving to serve me." He then disappeared and I awoke. I lay the rest of the night studying about it, and the whole of the next day I hardly felt like a mortal being. My steps were light and the day was brighter than any I had ever seen before. This dream was not an imagination. Some wonder at the serpent giving any light, but you will please give an explanation to it, as you understand it much more fully than I.

[Satan and his emissaries have power to deceive and mislead by mingling truth with error. Good food may be used to conceal and disguise the deadly poison.—ED.]

There was a great meaning in it. This I know, for it has been fulfilled. I have passed through many trials since then and given way many times to that which I knew to be wrong; but it seemed that the tempter blinded me and I was led against my will. I thank my heavenly Father that I have found the tree of life, and, aided by His strength, I mean to stay by it. I am but nineteen years old, and it is very hard to live as I should. There are no young associates here in the church, except my own brothers and sisters, yet I know if we but ask him in faith our Master will help us to stand.

I will tell you of a circumstance which hapyened on November 13th early in the morning: I had been awake most of the night thinking of God's mercies and blessings unto me and also praying for a testimony-one strong enough that I might know for myself of His supreme power. I occupied the back part of the bed and my sister was asleep in front. As I was thinking of heaven and the many blessings received therefrom, it seemed that although it was not my desire, something of an evil nature had just started to enter my mind, when all of a sudden I heard just in front of the center of the hearthstone a noise, (it seemed as from a large stone rolling and jumping lengthwise across the room in which we were). It made a rumbling as of distant thunder, and struck the door close to the head of the bed with a mighty crash, just in the center and half way up to the knob, and immediately I felt the Spirit of the Lord in great power. It seemed that His breath was on my cheek; and it was impressed upon my mind at the time that He was saying, "Strive hard to resist evil and I will give you strength." I was wide awake at the time, and no one need doubt it, for it is the truth and my heavenly Father can bear witness to the same. No one except those that have received such blessings can realize how my heart overflowed with gratitude to my heavenly Father. If you have the interpretation of it I should like to know of it. [The powerful demonstration was probably intended to remove all question as to your being awake and fully conscious of your situation and surroundings, so that no one could justly have it to say that your experience then was a mere mental hallucination.—ED.] Ought we not to strive hard to serve Him who has done so much for us? The blessings are for us if we but live for them. Of course I can not expect those who have no light to understand how it could be possible; for not long ago I could not help wondering how such things could be, even when I heard it from people that I knew to be reliable. But if the honest in heart would accept of the gospel and live to it as best they could, they would see for themselves that what we say is true, and not to be laughed at. If telling them of my experience would convince them, how gladly would I do so. But I do not feel like telling the world of such sacred things to have them made light of. I desire to ever be found faithful to the covenant I have made that my soul may be a fit dwelling place for God's Holy Spirit. It seems that I am not at all worthy of the many blessings I have received; but God is kind and merciful and knows the hearts of all.

It is very strengthening to me to read the testimonies of others, and this letter may be encouraging to those who are weak in the faith.

> "May faith and hope and love abound, Our sins and errors be forgiven; And we from day to day be found Children of God and heirs of heaven."

EMMA LAWN.

ELMWOOD, Nebraska, Jan. 19th.

Bro. W. W. Blair: The Master's work in our part of the vineyard is not in a very flourishing condition. We have but one officer in our branch -Bro. James Ferguson, Priest. Most of the Saints meet the first Sunday in each month for sacrament and prayer meeting, The Saints in our business meeting yesterday formed themselves into a bible class, to more fully study the scriptures, and to meet with the different families of Saints each Sunday except the first of each month. We have no elder to preach for us. Bro. Caffall was here the last of July. The members are so badly scattered they can't all get out to our meetings. The Autumn Leaves made its first visit to our home last week. What a grand messenger of truth! It should be in the home of every Saint, and from every family altar prayers should ascend that it be sustained in its mission.

It would not do to neglect to speak a kind word for the Herald. On getting the mail from the office the Herald is the first to be glanced over to see what good news it contains. How can any Saint do with out it! It cheers the weak ones of earth and brings good words to the lips of the strong.

The college movement is a grand one, a move in the right direction. It should have been kept exclusively within the church, provided you can get enough subscriptions. A school entirely within the church would meet the demand much better.

Your brother in Christ,
J. W. HOLENBECK.

WILSONBURGH, Ill., Jan. 17th. Dear Herald:-We are still trying to hold on to the "faith once delivered to the saints." Bro. Isaac M. Smith, of Brush Creek Branch, came here on the 4th instant and preached eleven sermons; eight at Freedom school house, and three at Wesley M. E. Church. The people were astonished at his doctrine and said it was the most "powerful" preaching they had ever heard. Indeed they might well say so, for he spoke as "one having authority, and not as the scribes." Many are searching the Scriptures to see if these things are true. He left us yesterday for Bellair, Crawford county, to labor three or four weeks. He is to return here for awhile. Many were grieved to see him go away and wished him to stay longer. Another church has been promised to us, and I think some will obey ere long. May the Lord add to us such as shall be saved is our prayer.

The first number of Autumn Leaves for 1889 is at hand and gives us much pleasure. May our Father bless the editors and publishers of our papers and periodicals, is the prayer of

Yours in hope, JASPER M. Tousley.

BAY CITY, Mich., Jan. 20th.

Bro. Blair:--A short time ago I visited Prescott, where I joined in marriage Mr. Sumnerville and Sr. Mary Van Allen. Before leaving I baptized Mr. Sumnerville, leaving them not only rejoicing in the marriage covenant, but also in the everlasting covenant of the gospel. Soon afterwards, in answer to a telegram from Tawas City, I visited the sick and administered, and preached twice, left a good impression and have since learned that the sick are improving. Last Wednesday I baptized one here, and vesterday one more. All seem interested, and we feel to rejoice. The good work is moving right along, and in this place seems to demand the attention of at least one elder. I look for others to unite As ever yours,

PREHISTORIC CIVILIZATION AND ANCIENT ART.

BY WILLIAM WOODHEAD.

(Concluded from last week.)

THAT the ancient inhabitants of America knew at one time in the dim past, that they had a Savior who died for their redemption is proved by their knowledge of the cross as a religious symbol. See Baldwin's Ancient America, pp. 109, 110, 293; also Stephen's Central America, vol. 2, p. 347.

Clavigro quotes Accosta as saying that at a certain festival at the City of Mexico it was anciently the custom at certain ceremonials and consecrations to sacrifice an image as they sacrificed the human victims; "and his body was broken into small pieces, which, together with those portions called the flesh and bones, were distributed among the people who received the same with tears and reverence. With them it was an admirable thing, saying that they did eat the flesh and bones of God, wherewith they were grieved. Such as had any sick folks demanded thereof, for them, and carried it with great reverence and devotion." So that all through the dark history of that race they have retained in practice the Lord's supper; he having administered that holy sacrament, setting the pattern himself after his resurrection. (See Book of Nephi 8: 6). The Roman Catholic priests declared this to be the devil's counterfeit of the Lord's supper, and explained it all away for the time; but we consider it another link in a long chain of evidence in support of the work of God who declared that he would work a marvelous work and a wonder in the latler days, at which the wise would stagger, but not with strong drink. But the meek are increasing their joy in the Lord, and the Saints have reasons for being comforted, knowing that God is vindicating his own works.

In language, the Book of Mormon is confirmed: "Many Chipanecs and Hebrew words are almost the same in son, daughter, father, star in zodiac, king, name applied to Adam, afflicted, God, September, more, rich, Seth (son of Adam) and, to give;" and McNair Wright says that the natives of "South America had five cities with names identical with cities in Asia Minor and North Africa." regards this as indicating the point from whence their forefathers migrated, and adds, "this could hardly be accidental." (See Bricks from Babel, p. 164).

Of the two inscribed stones found in a mound near Newark, Ohio, Mr. G. R. Lederer says: "I recognized all the letters except one (the ayin) though the forms of many of them are different from those now in use. This, however, is not the case with the stone found first (that is, in July, 1860), which has the form of an ancient jar, bearing Hebrew inscriptions on its four sides, which are imperfectly such characters as those generally in use now." Another relic found in the "Wilson Mound" in the form of a human being has "on the forehead five distinct Hebrew characters." Another has three "Hebrew inscriptions" on it. A stone found three miles from Newark in 1860, "has engraved upon it a figure of Moses, and the ten commandments." (See Blair's Divine Calling of Joseph Smith, pp. 153-155). The writers of the Book of Mormon being Israelites, the relics are strong collateral evidence of the latter day work and the Book of Mormon.

But the writers of that book wrote it in Egyptian. Nephi says:--"I make a record in the language of my father, which consists of the learning of the Fews and the language of the Egyptians. At this the first writers against the book said, "How ridiculous! This foolish and ignorant young man disproves his own work in the very beginning; because neither Egyptian nor Hebrew was ever known upon this continent!" And Moroni the last writer in the book, seemingly increasing the difficulty, says: "And now behold we have written this record according to our knowledge in the characters which are called among us the reformed Egyptian, being handed down and altered by us, according to our manner of speech. And if our plates had been sufficiently large we should have written in Hebrew; but the Hebrew hath been altered by us also; and if we could have written in Hebrew, behold ye would have had no imperfections in our record."-Mormon 4: 8, p. 500.

It may appear strange that the Nephites wrote in Egyptian, but not more so than that Ezra, after the Babylonian captivity, should rearrange and rewrite the whole of the Jewish scriptures "in the Chaldaic

ledge, p. 522.

The Jewish nation was born in Egypt, and when it moved out, it took with it Egyptian civilization and art. That affinity is seen all through their history and was finally the cause of both nations (Israel and Judah) being overthrown-the former by Shalmanezer, King of Assyria, during the reign of Hoshea, king of Israel, because he refused to pay tribute to Assyria and had formed a conspiracy with So, king of Egypt; the latter during the reign of Zedekiah. The young king wanted to serve Egypt notwithstanding Jeremiah's plea and warning, and trusted to Egypt for assistance when Nebuchadnezar was moving a large army the third time against Jerusalem. But for some unexplained reason Egypt did not, render the assistance expected, and Jerusalem was destroyed and the kingdom broken. And colonies moving from Jerusalem might be expected then to take with them a knowledge of Egyptian writing and art.

"Egyptian writing is of three distinct kinds, which are known respectively by the name of hieroglyphic, hieratic and demotic, or enchorial."—Rawlinson's Ancient Egypt, vol. 1, p. 58. The hieroglyphic is that of almost all monuments, and is also found occasionally in manuscripts. The hieratic and demotic occur with extreme rarity upon monuments, but are employed far more commonly than the hieroglyphic in the papyrus rolls or "books" of the Egyptians. Both of them are cursive forms of the hieroglyphic writing, invented to save time, and suited to rapid writing with the pen, but in no way suited for carving upon stone, and manifestly not intended for it. They have been called "abbreviated forms;" but this is scarcely correct, for they occupy more space than the corresponding hieroglyphics; but they could be written in (probably) one tenth of the time. There is not much difference between the hieratic and the demotic. The former was the earlier of the two, having been employed as far back as the time of the eighteenth and nineteenth dynasties, or perhaps even earlier; it preserved the hieroglyphic forms to a certain extent. These are nearly lost in the demotic, which appears to have been introduced about the seventh century, B. C., and which rapidly superceded the hieratic; being simpler, and consequently, easier to write. Both the hieratic and the demotic were written from right to left.

It is the essential characteristic of the hieroglyphic writing that all the forms used, if we except those expressive of number, are pictures of objects. At the first glance, we see in a hieroglyphic inscription a multitude of forms, those of men, women, children, beasts, birds, reptiles, insects, human hands, legs, eyes and the like, with which we are familiar; but these shapes are mixed up with others not so readily recognized; as circles, squares, half-circles, circles crossed diagonally, ovals, triangles, curved lines, wavy lines, small segments of circles and the like. . . . All the forms used are pictures, more or less successful, of objects which they were intended to represent. The circle represents the sun; the curved line, placed either way, the moon; the oval an egg; the square, with an opening, a house; the pointed oval, a month, &c. Originally, it would seem that Egyptian writing was entirely picture writing, nothing being capable of being represented by it but objects and actions that the eve could see. Ultimately, however, the system became much more complicated; and the hieroglyphics, as employed in the historical times, must be divided into at least four classes. First, there were some which continued to be used in the old way, to designate the object represented, which have been called ikonographic, representational, or imitative hieroglyphics. were such as the circle for the sun, the curved lines or cresent for the moon, &c. . . . These direct representations were used in two ways: Either they stood alone to represent the object intended, or they followed the name of the object written phonetically. Thus the word Ra, 'sun,' might be written in letters only, or be also followed by the ikonograph of the solar disk (which, if alone, would still have the same meaning); and as we might write the word 'horse,' and place after it a figure of that animal, etc. . . In these cases it is evident that the ikonograph was mere surplusage; but perhaps it facilitated the rapid reading of the word preceding it."-Rawlinson's Ancient Egypt, vol. 1, chap. 4, pp. 58-60.

"Altogether the number of signs used is not less than from nine hundred to a thousand."—Bunsen's Egypt, vol. 5, pp.

"Hence the difficulty of reading the inscriptions, even now that—thanks to the Rosetta stone-the veil has been lifted. The student has to bear in mind the force of (say) a thousand characters, and not only so, but the various forces that many of them have. He has also to determine whether any are purely superfluous, the Egyptians having had a fancy both for repeating characters unnecessarily, and also for expressing the same sound twice over by variant signs. . . . They are read, when written in line, from left to right, or from right to to left according to the direction in which 'the chrarcters face.'"-Burch in Bunsen's Egypt, vol. 5, p. 595.

Prof. Hutson in chapter "The Egyptians," says: "They painted history and daily life on their walls and told the story of both in hieroglyphics. Possibly you may have but a vague conception of what these hieroglyphics are, and a brief explanation of their nature may be useful. They are characters representing language pictorally; that is, they are drawings of sun, moon, stars, human forms in all attitudes, parts of the human body, beasts, fishes, reptiles, geometrical figures and other visible objects. They were cut into stone or written on it; written or painted on papyrus, and sometimes painted in colors on both. They are of two kinds: Ideographs, or those which represent ideas: and Phonetics, or those which represent sounds. The ideographs were at first pictures pure and simple of actual objects. A large number of them became ultimately symbolic, representing any one of a large class of ideas, and needing its nearest group of phonetics to give it definiteness. phonetics expressed the sounds of syllables, not of letters, as in the case with our alphabets. Some of these phonetics even came to be used eventually as representatives of letters. This use being adopted very generally for proper names, and these names being fenced off from the other hieroglyphics, Young and Champollion were, by these concurring circumstances, led to take the first step toward deciphering Egyptian inscriptions."— Beginnings of Civilization, chap. 4, pp. 39,40.
This system seems to have been in use by most all the first nations of which we read before authentic history finds them. Hutson says in his chapter on "The Hit-

"Their inscriptions, which have only lately been collected, and which scholars like Sayce, are only beginning to decipher, are found-cut generally in the living rock-from the Aegean sea to the Euphrates, and from Phrygia to Palestine. These inscriptions in Asia Minor-at Karabel, in the neighborhood of Smyrna; at Gurum, Tyana, and other points in Cappadocia; at various points in Phrygia; at Ibreez near Tarsus, in Cilicia—taken into consideration with the curious resemblance of the Hittite syllabary characters with the Cypriote, the Lycian, and other slightly variant syllabaries of that region, seem to prove that the civilization and the political influence of the Hittite confederacy either preceded that of the Phoenicians in Cyprus and Asia Minor, or was identical with it." -page 61.

In describing the Hittite inscriptions he says: "They are generally in relief, not incused like those of the Assyrians and The sculptures are in hard Phoenicians. stone and, unlike those of the Assyrians, face outwards. The inscriptions are in syllabic characters, and are believed to be the original type of the syllabaries of Cyprus and Asia Minor, which have so puzzled scholars by their curious points of resemblance to one another. The inscriptions read from right to left for the top line, and then from left to right, and so on alternately as an ox ploughs. Ideographs are combined with syllabics in the characters."-p. 67.

In his chapter on "the Phoenicians" he says:-"It was the discovery by Lang of a bilingual inscription which led to the decipherment of the Cypriote characters. The known characters were Phoenician. On applying the knowledge derived from this part of the inscription to the unknown characters, it was found that the language was Greek. The Cypriote syllabary consists of characters representing syllables ending with a vowel."—p. 79.

In chapter on "Aryan" he says, referring to the Assyrians: "The last of these great conquerors (Asshur-banipal) was the collector of that grand library of clay tablets at Nineveh from which so much has been learned of the history and life of the Chaldeans, Elamites and Assyrians. neiform inscriptions were made on stone slabs, on hollow terra-cotta cylinders, clay tablets, bricks, bulls and lions, stone obelisks, and seals. When their preservation was important the clay documents were carefully baked, often in duplicate. The Assyrian characters were syllabic and amounted to more than three hundred in number."-p. 101.

Bancroft says: "One of the most striking traits of pre-historic times is the simplicity and awkwardness that characterize childhood. The Chinese language has been remarked upon as showing the extremely infantile cast of mind among the people who formed and retained it to our times. Each word is a sentence, standing by itself originally; the tone and gesture give it much of its signification. It would seem as if its authors had never grown to the idea of an elaborated sentence. There is an average of eight words, spelled and pronounced exactly alike, for every sound used. There are, it is said, 212 characters pronounced che; 138 pronounced foo; and 1165 which all read e, and each letter is a word, a phrase and a sentence; and may be an adjective, a noun or a verb, or all three together. The difficulty of expressing shades of meaning, or all that may be in thought, where so much must be acquired before expression is possible, has kept the Chinese mind, in many respects, in a state of childhood; though they have preserved a stability of character and institutions nowhere else observed. The primitive mind and habits are maintained as if crystalized. The principle of decay, so universal elsewhere, would seem, by some sigular process, banished from a vast nation, as it is in the human body in the Egyptian mummies. The same feature is observable in a smaller degree among the Hindoos, and seems to have characterized the ancient Egyptians."-Footprints of Time, p. 36.

Then before the Phoenicians invented an alphabetical form of writing, which sought to express each elementary sound by a special character, and which spread in one form or another all over the civilized world, there was a system, the characters of which each represented a syllable, or a word, a sentence or ideas. This system is found in various forms, from southern Egypt and Spain to China; on monuments, obelisks, pyramids, tombs, the living rock, cylinders, columns, clay tablets and black granitewhich remains to this day. But as we have seen, the ancient system was "inelastic" and "lacking in shades of meaning." They could not express all that "was in the thought."

Prof. Hutson says: "The tongues of the early civilizers were by the very fact of civilization, through the conservative energy of established laws and customs, struck with the rigidity of premature old age, and could never again move upward into the free and rich inflections achieved by the speech of the Aryan's. The hoof of the horse or the claw of the bird is the fit type of the one; the trunk of the elephant, strong enough to uproot a tree, flexible and precise enough to pick up a needle, is the type of the other."—Beginnings of Civilization, p. 19.

The readers of the Book of Mormon will have noticed how those men confessed their imperfections and prayed the Almighty to give the Gentiles charity; they knowing their weakness would be seen by its readers in the latter days. Their weakness was the imperfect system of writing of ancient times, and was common to all those old systems, till they were improved by an alphabet which sought to express each elementary sound by a separate character.

It has been thought that the amount of plates from which the Book of Mormon was translated could not contain so much reading as we have in that book; "it containing nearly as much reading as the Old Testament." The plates are said to have been "not far from seven by eight inches in width and length, being not quite as thick as common tin. They were filled on both sides with engravings in Egyptian characters, and bound together in a volume as the leaves of a book, and fastened at one edge with three rings running through the whole. This volume was something near six inches in thickness, a part of which was sealed." See Orson Pratt's Works; chapter on B. M., p. 6.

Suppose the unsealed part was five inches in thickness. "I. C." tin is "common tin." and we are told by tinners that seventy-five sheets of it will lay to the inch. Five times that would be three hundred and seventy-five, and the plates were engraved on both sides, and the characters were small. -Ibid. So that would be seven hundred and fifty pages of small characters. Not far from seven by eight would make nearly thirty-five hundred surface feet. The Egytian syllabarie are small, as we see the characters on the plates were. A small circle but little larger than the letter s, is "sun;" a curved line about the size of the letter I is "moon;" the oval an "egg;" the square arch with opening a "house."-(This character may be seen in the fac simile of the Kinderhook plates, at the left hand corner of the third plate, on the bottom row; see O. Pratt's Work); but it is larger than as given by Rawlinson; see his "Phonetics."

A pointed oval, a "month;" the circle not only represented the sun, but a "day." A bee is "king;" a bird a "son;" vulture for "mother;" two water plants for "Upper and Lower Egypt." A fore quarter of a lion meant the "beginning of any thing"—the hind quarter "the end." A leg in a trap meant "deceit;', the head and neck of a lion meant "vigilance;" a beetle meant the "world;" an ostrich feather "justice;" a man killing himself, "wickedness" or "atrocity;" a circle crest was the name of a place in "Egypt;" a small crooked character meant "mountains;" the end of the crocodile's tail was "Kemi" or "Khem," which seems to be the native name for Egypt.—Rawlinson's Phonetics.
The charcters which afterwards became equivalent to letters, were as large as the phonetics, in fact many of them were the same. And by repeating the same sound twice (which was often done) by variant signs, it became very cumbrous.

The Nephite "Reformed Egyptian" was no doubt the syllabic and ideographic system, changed by them. We have no means of knowing in what direction those changes were made. If they increased the ideograph they would increase the difficulty of writing, it being too inelastic already to express thought and feeling. If they dropped the charcters that represented ideas, it would require more space, yet be more flexible. It may be that those changes were in the form of the characters, as we have seen was the case with the Hebrew. The hieratic and demotic were an approach towards an alphabet, but either would require more room than the Hebrew. It may appear strange, but we are told that the signs in common use were by far the most cumbrous system of the three. -See Rawlinson's Egypt, vol. 1, plate 6.

To illustrate what ideographs are, we will notice Dan. 5: 26-28.—"Mene, Mene, Peres." Those three words contain thirteen letters, and are rendered, "God hath numbered thy kingdom and finished it. Thou art weighed in the balance, and art found wanting. Thy kingdom is divided and given to the Medes and Persians." The first Mene, translated, has 38 letters; the second Mene, 45; and Peres, 48—altogether 131. The Bible has 3,566,480 letters in the sixty-six books.—See Conkling's Handy Manual, p. 157. The ratio of increase is tentimes and two-thirteenths; the english letters reduced to Ideographs at the same ratio, would reduce the number to 37,621 and 3 tenths. We may not by this, however, perceive the amount of difference this would make, so we will take down our Bible and commence at one end and count ten leaves, then cut nine of them out, and so on all the way through the book, we will at last have, out of, say 1,000 pages, but 50 leaves left. In this way we account for the reformed Egyptian requiring less room than the Hebrew.

"One of the most interesting sources of comparison between Mexico, Peru and Egypt is to be found in an investigation of their Hieroglyphic system. Each of these countries had a peculiar method of recording events by means of hieroglyphic signs, sculpturing them on monuments and buildings, and portraying them on papyrus and maguey."—Delafield, p. 42. And still quoting Humboldt he says: "Baron Humboldt considers the Mexican paintings as rather corresponding with the hieratic than the hieroglyphic writing of the Egyptians, as found on the rolls of papyrus in the swathings of the mummies, and which may be considered paintings of a mixed kind, because they unite symbolical and isolated characters with the representations of an action. It is the opinion of the author that further investigations and discoveries in deciphering Mexican hieroglyphic paintings will exhibit a close analogy to the Egyptian. . . . We see the three species of hieroglyphics common to Mexico and Egypt."—See p. 46.

It appears now quite evident that Delafield will be confirmed in the above opin-I see Le Plongeon is quoted in a lecture on this subject as saving that he has found the Egyptian alphabet on Maya Humboldt's day in America was before Young and Champollion had deciphered the first Egyptian hieroglyphic. They with the Coptic—their legitimate descendant-was dead, and the Coptic had been replaced in Egypt by the Arabic; but since 1828, at which time the veil was being lifted from both Egyptian and American pre-historic civilization (the records of both countries being made known about the same time), we find a remarkable coinci-

We have substantially four systems of writing identified in America out of the five said to have been known by the prehistoric races on this continent. The Jaredite system was different from any known to the Nephites, as may be seen by Mosiah interpreting the Jaredite inscriptions by the means of the Urim and Thummim. These five systems vary in appearance, possibly as much so as the five races of man, and to look at any two and say, "This don't look like that," and on that account try to impeach the claims of Book of Mormon, is much more inconsistent than the man who, on account of the difference in the outward appearance of the human race says, "We are not all of one blood."

THE KINGDOM OF GOD ON EARTH. God has the right to reign over all the earth including the children of men. Men claim the right to rule by virtue of discovery, by conquest, or by heirship; but God has a greater claim than thesethe right by virtue of being the Creator of the earth and of man who inhabits it.

Man at creation was under the government of God, but rebelled against that government and as a rebel or traitor forfeited his life to the government against which he rebelled. The sentence of death was pronounced, man was consigned to endless misery and estrangement from God's government, unless a ransom could be found to satisfy the demand of heaven's king, to prepare the way that man might regain his citizenship. That ransom was found in the person of the "Lamb slain from before the foundation of the world" -"The Savior of all men." But as man can not be saved out of the kingdom of God that kingdom must be established upon earth and the mode of adoption into it made known in order for him to become an adopted citizen, entitled-while faithfully serving his king-to all the rights and privileges of that kingdom. kingdom of God proper is his government, whether in the heavens where he dwells or on any of the innumerable worlds that he has created and peopled.

That God claims the right to rule over the inhabitants of the earth is made known in his declaration to Samuel the prophet I Samuel 8:7: "And the Lord said unto Samuel, Hearken unto the voice of the people in all that they say unto thee; for they have not rejected thee, but they have rejected me that I should not reign over them."

Here it is plainly made known through the prophet that God had reigned over them as their king up to this time, but now they had rejected him from acting in that capacity over them. And he, having given man his agency from the beginning would not coerce him, but allowed man to choose between him and their fellow man. But that they had done wickedly in his sight and displeased God in rejecting him and desiring a man to rule over them is made known in 1 Samuel 12:17: "Is it not wheat harvest to day? I will call on the Lord and he shall send thunder and rain; that ye may perceive, and see that your wickedness is great which ye have done in the sight of the Lord in asking you a king." The context shows that the Lord did answer Samuel's prayer and that the people asknowledged their evil in asking for a king.

If it is true of one portion of the human family that they acted wickedly and displeased God in rejecting him to be their king and choosing their fellow man to rule over them, it is true of every portion who have done likewise; consequently the Gentiles as well as Israel came under this condemnation. All saved beings must be under the immediate government of God, and, as a consequence, must be in the kingdom of God.

A citizenship in an earthly kingdomone ruled over by man-can not entitle a man to a citizenship in God's kingdom, for the Savior says, "Except a man be born again he can not see the kingdom of God;" "except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he can not enter into the king-dom of God," thus showing that a change must be wrought, that he must experience a new birth to become a citizen of God's kingdom.

It is stated by a class of religionists that a man does not enter into the kingdom of God in this probationary state, or as they term it in this earth life, and they profess that the Holy Scriptures sustain them in this position. According to our understanding of the Scriptures we learn that the people of God enter the kingdom of God in this probationary state. The Savior, when accused by the Pharisees of casting out devils by Beelzebub the prince of devils, said: "Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and every house divided against itself shall not And if Satan cast out Satan he is divided against himself; how then shall his kingdom stand? And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, by whom do your children cast them out? Therefore they shall be your judges. But if I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the king-dom of God is come unto you." He refuted the statement of the Pharisees, by proof irresistible, and then says, "But if I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is not, shall come at the end of the world, or when Christ comes in person to reign] come unto you. Will any believer in Christ's word have the hardihood to say that he did not cast out devils by the Spirit of God? If not, they must concede the proposition that the kingdom of God had come to that people and that it was upon the earth. We quote from the answer of Christ to the Pharisees on another occasion: "And when he was demanded of the Pharisees when the kingdom of God should come, he answered them and said, The kingdom of God cometh not with observation; neither shall they say, Lo here, or lo there; for behold the kingdom of God has already come unto you."—Luke 17. King James' Translation says "The kingdom of God is within you." "Yes," says another of my Christian friends, "that shows it is not an outward organization, but that it is the Holy Ghost shed abroad in the hearts of the children of God, and in this manner it comes without observation." Have you not formed a hasty conclusion? Who asked the question of the Savior? The Pharisees. Were they the children of God, they whom the Savior charged so often with being hypocrites, a generation of vipers, adulterers, &c., and who went about seeking the life of the Savior, and finally with other sects of the Jews accomplished his death? Were their hearts in a condition to receive the Spirit of God? Paul says that the Holy Ghost dwelleth not in unholy temples. What then does the text mean? Simply this; as the first translation we quoted says, "The kingdom of God has already come unto you," or is set up within the Jewish commonwealth. And as for its coming without observation of the Jews, it is proven in the question asked by the Pharisees, for they certainly had not observed its establishment, or they would not have asked when it should come. The Savior here confirms his first assertion that the kingdom of God was upon the earth. Another proof that the kingdom of God was established among the Jews is recorded in Matthew 23:13: "Woe unto you, scribes, Pharisees, hypocrites! For ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men; for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in."

The kingdom must have been organized in their midst for the scribes and Pharisees to have the privilege of entering if they would comply with the conditions, but they would not, and strove to hinder those who were striving to enter at that time—not at a future period. Anything short of an organized government does not represent a kingdom, and Jesus knew that the word kingdom would suggest to their minds a king, officers, subjects and laws; and, to a worldly kingdom, territory.

The worldly governments have usurped the ruling power and all the territory of the earth. God having given them their agency has allowed them to, until the time that he revealed unto Daniel in the seventh chapter, when all the thrones of men will be cast down and the Son of Man, the rightful king, shall reign in person over the earth, or to the time revealed unto John, (Rev. 11:15), "When the kingdoms of this world shall become the kingdoms of our Lord and his Christ." Territory, then, we do not expect to be added to God's kingdom on earth until that time when "the kingdom and dominion and greatness of the kingdom under the whole heavens shall be given to the people of the Saints of the Most High."—Dan. 7:27.

Then Soverign power to rule over or govern (which Webster defines "dominion" to be) the whole earth will be given to the people of God. Till then the kingdom in its probationary state will be given; but then the kingdom in its smallness will be swallowed up in the kingdom and dominion and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heavens; like the stone that Nebudchadnezzar saw-cut out of the mountain without hands-that became a great mountain and filled the whole earth. "My kingdom is not of this world," says the Savior, and from this statement some have decided that the kingdom did not exist then upon the earth. This interpretation would destroy his positive assertions already quoted and many more that we could bring to sustain the position of the kingdom being upon the earth. must therefore look for another interpretation that will harmonize with the array of testimony that is against this isolated construction, In all language spokenwhether human or divine-it is safest and best to let the individual that speaks be his own interpreter. We will therefore observe this rule in the language of the Savior under consideration: "My kingdom is not of this world; if my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews." This is recorded in John 18. In the seventeenth chapter, in his memorable prayer to his Father, is the Savior's definition of the word world, and shows that it does not have reference to the earth, but the people that inhabit it. Speaking of his disciples (followers) he says, "I have given them thy word and the world hath hated them, because they are not of the world, even as I am not of the world." It is here shown that the world mentioned in this connection were capable of hating. This could not apply to the inanimate earth, but to its inhabitants; and the world hated them, (the Savior said), because they were not of the world, even as he was not of the world. We perceive that the king, Jesus, was upon the earth; his followers or citizens of the kingdom were upon the earth, yet they were not of this world; and one great reason assigned that they were not of this world was, that they would not fightlike the kingdoms of this world—to deliver their king from the Jews who were seeking to put him to death.. No, it was very evident that they were not of the world or they would do like unto them. Like begets like, and these citizens of Christ's kingdom being begotten of Godor born of water and of the Spirit and having entered the kingdom-they would partake of the nature of God, one great element of which is love.

They were commanded of God to love their fellow men, even those who were their enemies, and loving their king they would not disobey him, hence would not fight their enemies against his will, even to save him from the wrath of the Jews. How plain it is that they were not of the world, and yet how plain that they—the citizens of the kingdom of God—were upon the earth. "But," says one, "Christ can not he a king till he comes on earth to reign and therefore his kingdom can not exist here until that time."

To this we reply: 1st, That you antagonize a fact that is well known to the civized world. The Queen of Great Britain reigns over a great portion of the earthyea, it is said that the sun does not set upon the British possessions-and yet she has never seen the major portion of that territory over which she reigns. She reigns by virtue of her representative government there which carries out her instructions. Will you deny to him who created the worlds and all things therein --"for without him was not anything made that was made"--the same authority and power that you would grant unto a creature of his? May he not by his representative government upon earth, reign as king over the citizens thereof although the territory is usurped by man, the creature, at present; and by his wisdom, power and love, give laws that shall prepare those citizens for the time when these usurpations shall cease and he shall reign as king, in person, over the whole earth. 2d, You contravene not only the positive assertions of the Savior, but of the Apostle Paul, who says: "Giving thanks unto the Father, who hath made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light; who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son." He also recognized the fact that the kingdom was on the earth, for he was upon the earth, and those he was addressing were upon the earth. They were changed or translated from the power or kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of God's dear Son-not that they should be at some future time. Although the Savior had declared, "My kingdom is not of this world," yet we see that Paul said they were translated into his kingdom while in this earth

John the Revelator makes use of the following language (Rev. 1:9): "I, John, who also am your brother, and companion in tribulation, and in the kingdom and patience of Jesus Christ." Here John states—in language that can not be misunderstood nor privately interpreted—that he was a brother among other brethren, a companion among other companions, and that they were all in the kingdom of Jesus Christ. As they were dwelling upon the earth, to be in the kingdom it must be organized upon the earth.

The kingdom of God, body, or Church of Christ, household of God, sheepfold, &c., are all used in Scriptural phraseology to express God's spiritual government upon the earth. To enter the kingdom, Jesus says, a man must be born of water and of the Spirit. To enter the sheepfold a man must go in at the door, to be an honest sheep entitled to stay there—and as the birth of water and of the Spirit is the mode of entrance into the kingdom of God and the doorway the legitimate mode of entrance into any enclosure, the kingdom and sheepfold being the same, the mode of entrance, or door is the same. The mode of becoming a member legally, in a strange family, is by adoption.

Paul tells the Saints in one place:—
"Ye have not received the spirit of bondage, again to fear, but ye have received the spirit of adoption whereby we cry Abba Father." God had adopted them as his children and they were entitled to call him

Father.

There is a prevalent objection to the church and the kingdom being identical. Paul, in reasoning on and illustrating the body of Christ in its perfect form, with all its officers and gifts by the perfect body of a man having all its members complete, at the conclusion of his demonstration, says, "Now ye are the body of Christ, and members in particular. And God hath set some [members] in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers," etc.—1 Cor. 12: 28.

Here the body and Church of Christ are terms used expressive of the same thing. The apostle says in the 13th verse of this chapter, "For by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body, whether we be Jews or Gentiles, whether we be bond or free, and have been all made to drink into one Spirit." If the reader is not satisfied as to its general application, let him turn to the beginning of this letter to the Corinthians and he will there see that Paul is addressing "the church of God which is at Corinth, to them that are sanctified in Christ Jesus, called to be Saints, with all that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ our Lord, both theirs and ours."

It then includes all the body or Church of Christ; indeed it would be folly to think that the body of Christ consisted only of those at Corinth. There is therefore no question about all of the members of the body being in the body, baptized into it, or into the Church of Christ. The apostle includes himself as being baptized—with all the rest—into the church.

In the quotation from Colossians he also includes himself with the rest as being translated into the kingdom of God's dear Son, "who hath delivered us from the power of darkness, and hath translated us into the kingdom of God's dear Son." We see that Christ's followers are baptized into the church, also that they are translated into the kingdom of Christ. We can readily see that the apostle uses the terms, church and kingdom as meaning the same thing.

The burden of Christ's preaching was the kingdom of God. On a certain occasion—recorded in Luke fourth chapter when the people desired that he would not depart from them he said: "I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also, for therefore am I sent." In fulfillment of the above we hear him saying, "The kingdom of heaven is like a net cast into the sea, which gathered of every kind, which when it was full, they drew to shore, and sat down and gathered the good into vessels: but cast the bad away."

Will any professing Christian say that this applies to the kingdom of heaven above, or to the kingdom when Christ comes to reign in person, that either one of them gather of every kind, bad as well as good?

It can not allude to where God dwells, for no unholy thing can dwell there. It can not allude to when Christ comes, for it is written of him that, "He will smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked."—Isaiah 11. Also, "When the Lord Jesus shall descend from heaven with his mighty angels in flaming fire, taking vengeance on them that know not God, and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, who shall be punished with everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord, and from the glory of his power; when he shall come to be glorified in his Saints."-2 Thess. 1:7-10.

No place for the bad where the Father dwells; no place for them when Christ comes to reign before his ancients gloriously. Hence we must look for the kingdom where there is a possibility of the bad being gathered, as well as the good—but the bad will be cast away when the separating time comes and that kingdom must be on the earth.

In further proof of this we quote the Savior's preaching of the kingdom as contained in Matthew twenty-fifth: "Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps and went forth to meet the bridegroom, and five were wise and five were foolish," etc. "Then," an adverb relating to time, has reference to the statement made about the second coming of Christ, in the end of the previous chapter; indeed it shows also in the quotation itself that it would be at a time when the virgins spoken of were going forth to meet the bridegroom.

The kingdom spoken of could not be the one above where God dwells, for several reasons. 1st, No foolish virgins could dwell there. They must be in that kingdom represented by the net cast into the sea. 2d, The virgins are represented as going to meet Christ, or the bridegroom, who would start from heaven, for Peter declared that the heavens must retain Jesus till the time of his coming to reign; so that if it were possible for them to be there, they would have no need of going to meet him, for they would be already where he was. 3d, As he was leaving heaven to come on earth to reign, those who go to meet him must be upon earth.

Paul in 1 Thessalonians, fourth chapter, establishes this point: "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; Then they who are alive, shall be caught up together in the clouds, with them who remain, to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord." It is plain from the foregoing that some of the people of God will be alive upon the earth when Christ comes, and that as Christ predicted that at the time of his coming the kingdom would be likened unto ten virgins who would go forth to meet the bridegroom, those who are alive and go forth to meet him must be citizens of the kingdom of God on earth.

The very fact that there were foolish as well as wise virgins, shows a probation or trial, and through that probation a portion of the citizens had acted wisely and kept the laws of that king they were expecting to meet. The word says that they were permitted to enter into the marriage, while the other portion who had acted foolishly could not enter. We think that this parable, with other scriptures, will prove the church and the kingdom to be identical. These virgins were going to meet the bridegroom.

It will not be disputed by the scripture student, that Christ is that bridegroom; it is also generally acknowledged by professing Christians that the church is the bride, the Lamb's wife. In Rev. 21: 7, 8, it reads: "Let us be glad and rejoice, and give honor to him; for the marriage of the Lamb is come and his wife hath made herself ready. And to her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen, clean and white, for the fine linen is the righteousness of Saints."

The Revelator was permitted to see, in heavenly vision, the time when the marriage of the Lamb would take place, when the wife would have made herself ready, being clothed with righteousness, represented by fine linen, which was the clothing of the Saints. Paul in the majority of his epistles to the people of God, in the different localities of the earth, addressed them as Saints. In his first letter to the Corinthians, which we have before quoted, he addresses them thus: "Paul, an apostle of Jesus Christ, through the will of God; and Sosthenes our brother, unto the church of God which is in Corinth, to them that are sanctified, called to be Saints," etc.

Here it is plainly seen that part of the church of God at Corinth were called Saints, and as a consequence we reason that other parts of the church at different localities were also called Saints—indeed others were addressed as such. The apostle in Ephesians, fifth chapter, having his eye on the time shown in vision to John, concerning the marriage of the Lamb, speaking of Christ, says: "That he might present it to himself a glorious church, not having spot or wrinkle, or any such thing, but that it should be holy and without blemish."

The church would certainly be a glorious one if holy and without blemish, without spot or wrinkle. Surely, then, its clothing represented by fine linen clean and white, would be righteousness; and surely she would be ready as a bride for the marriage with the bridegroom.

The conclusion is, from the foregoing, the bride, the Lamb's wife being clothed with the same clothing that the Saints were, that the Saints compose that bride. The Saints also compose the church, therefore the church is the bride, the Lamb's wife. The Lamb's wife (prospectively) is making ready for the bridegroom, so is the kingdom of God also making ready for that event; therefore the church and kingdom are one and the same. One more proof and we draw our remarks to a close.

In Matthew 16: 19, 20, the Savior says unto Peter: "And I say also unto thee, that thou art Peter; and upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven; and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven, and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven."

In the eighteenth chapter in reads: "Moreover if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone; if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother, but if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word shall be established. And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church; but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto you as an heathen man and a publican. Verily, I say unto you, Whatsoever you shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven."

We perceive in the first place, that Christ asserts that he is going to build his church—upon a certain foundation.

Second, that he was going to give Peter the keys or authority to act in the kingdom of heaven-no doubt in a presiding capacity, to "feed his sheep"-whose actions in that kingdom would be upon earth, in the earthly part of the kingdom of heaven. For the binding and loosing were to be done upon earth, and after that were to be endorsed in heaven.

In the third place the same language is used concerning the loosing and binding on earth, and endorsing in heaven, in the church, that is used concerning the same acts in the kingdom of heaven.

We thus conclude that the earthly portion of the kingdom of heaven, and the church, or body of Christ, are identical: that when the Savior said he would build his church, it was tantamount to saying that he would organize his kingdom on earth. And this kingdom or government of God was established for the salvation of man. The king upon his throne and the most abject of his subjects, with all of his subjects between the two extremes, are all on a par with respect to salvation, and can not by any enactment of their own be brought into relationship with God, or become citizens of his kingdom. It follows then, that if redemption from the fall is brought about, it must be by the enactment of the God of heaven and earth; and such enactment establishes the fact of government upon the earth by the power that so enacted.

This government would be that of God, or the kingdom of God though upon earth. We have seen that it was established upon the earth at our Savior's first advent, and we have also seen that it would be upon the earth at his second advent, and all the faithful citizens of it will be received of their king when he comes to reign as King of Kings over all the earth; and, according to God's revealed will to Daniel, they will have the greatness, and dominion of the kingdom under the whole heaven given to them, when the territory of the whole earth shall be the domain of him "whose dominion shall be from sea to sea, and from the rivers to the ends of the earth."

How necessary it is for the fallen sons and daughters of Adam to become adopted as citizens in the kingdom of God, in this preparatory state, "And be prepared for the days to come in the which the Son of Man shall come down in heaven, clothed in the brightness of his glory to meet the kingdom which is set up on the earth; wherefore, may the kingdom of God go forth, that the kingdom of heaven may come, that thou, O, God may be glorified in heaven, so on earth, that thy enemies may be subdued; for thine is the honor, power and glory, for ever and ever. Amen."-D. and C. (Old Ed.), sec. 24.

A SIGN OF CHRIST'S COMING.

We live in an epoch which is characterized by some plain and clearly discernible "signs of the times," which indicate the second coming of the Lord Jesus Christ. While some are expectant in regard to "that great and notable day of the Lord," the majority of the Christianized world are continuing the even tenor of their way, and in their worldliness, lethargy and general indifference to that important event, are but exhibiting some of the signs of Christ's coming by fulfilling the prophetic statements of the Savior and of Peter, namely: "But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only. But as the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. For as in the days that were before the flood, they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark, and knew not until the flood came and took them all away: so shall also the coming of the Son of man be." Mat-24: 36-39.—"This second epistle, beloved I now write unto you, in both which I stir up your pure minds by way of remembrance: that ye may be mindful of the words which were spoken before by the holy prophets, and of the commandments of us the apostles of the Lord and Savior: knowing this first, that there shall come in the last days scoffers, walking after their own lusts, and saying, Where is the promise of his coming? for since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning of the creation."-"But the day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night, in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat, the earth also, and the works that are therein shall be burned up."-2 Pet. 3: 1-4,

However, while the disciples of Christ have been commanded to "watch" and "be ready;" they have also been cautioned to "beware;" for many "false Christ's," deceptive spirits, erroneous; elgious systems, "false prophets,"and various other insidious manifestations were to appear among other signs which were foretold as indications of the near approach of the day of the Lord. Hence all should be careful lest they be deceived through undue credulity and over auxiety in these matters as well as through unbelief. The rule given by the Savier applies here: "Whoso treasureth up my words shall not be deceived." Inasmuch as the word is but the expression of the Holy Spirit, the safety and correctness of this simple rule is apparent in the harmony of both.

Although the Latter Day Seer anticipated all others therein, we are not the only people who are calling special attention to the second coming of the Savior. But among the teachings of some religious bodies who are preaching that doctrine are to be found many things which are deceptive and blinding, and which, although in termingled with some of the principles of the gospel, serve but to increase division and strife, and to darken counsel without knowledge; for it requires all truth to

One sign to which those referred to call especial attention is the "Dark day of May 19th, 1780," which some of them de-clare to be "The sign of the coming of the Son of man." Let us apply the word to that occurence and observe the effect of the test: "And I will show wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood and fire and pillars of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and notable day of the Lord come."-Joel 2: 30, 31.—"And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars; and upon earth distress of nations, with perplexity; the sea and the waves roaring." -Luke 21:25.- "And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, and lo, there was a great earthquake, and the sun became as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood."—Rev. 6: 12.—"Immediately after the tribulation of those days, shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken."—Matt. 24:29.

The dark day of May 19th, 1780, is referred to as a fulfillment of the foregoing; but while we admit that that event was a sign of the times, yet in comparison to the event referred to in the foregoing Scriptures, to us it always appeared as almost comparatively insignificant, and the preaching of it as a fulfillment thereof as likely to lessen, rather than to increase faith in the general indications of the times. For the Scriptures seem to convey the impression that that event will be one of universal and startling import to the inhabitants of the earth; while in contrast that of May 19th, 1780, was observable only in New England and the adjacent countries. We have no European nor any other foreign testimony concerning its occurenece elsewhere.

But in order to definitely settle the question concerning "the" sign, we call attention to that "sure word of prophecy, whereunto ye do well that ye take heed, as unto a light which shineth in a dark place, . . . knowing this first, that no prophecy of the Scripture is of any private interpretation."-2 Pet. 1:19 In Matthew 24th chapter of the Inspired Translation, the Savior gives his disciples a connected narrative of the principal events which should occur from that time until his second coming. In the early part of the chapter he tells them of the destruction of the Jewish temple; of their offlictions, persecutions and death; of the abomination of desolation (war of conquest) against Jerusalem; its final overthrow and the scattering of the Tews." Following these events is the significant statement in verse 21, "Behold these things have I spoken unto you concerning the Jews." He then proceeds to mention other events in order, such as the appearance of false Christs; wars and rumors of wars; the gathering of his elect; the preaching "again" of the gospel of the kingdom, for a witness unto all nations, after which the following takes place: "And again shall the abomination of desolation spoken of by Daniel the propher, be fulfilled. And immediately after the tribulation of those days, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of heaven shall be shaken. Verily I say unto you, this generation, in which these things shall be shown forth, shall not pass away until all I have told you shall be fulfilled. Although the days will come that heaven and earth shall pass away, yet my word shall not pass away; but all shall be fulfilled. And as I said before, after the tribulation of those days and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken, then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven; and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn. And they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven, with power and great glory. And whose treasureth up my words shall not be deceived."-Matt. 24:33-39.-I. T.

From these statements we learn that after the gospel is restored, and preached in all the world for a witness, and after Jerusalem is again besieged in the latter days, (which is evidently the same siege referred to in Ezekiel 38:8-23; Zech. 14: 1-3,) that immediately after the tribulation of those days "the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of heaven shall be shaken." See also verse 37 of Matthew 24th chapter, I. T. Mark and Luke also agree with the above in their narratives.

In this connection we call attention to the revelations of God through his servant Joseph Smith, contained in the Doctrine and Covenants. They are plain and perfectly harmonious with other and more ancient Scriptures. It will be noticed that they are predictions of future events: "Abide ye in the liberty wherewith ye are made free; entangle not yourselves in sin, but let your hands be clean, until the Lord come, for not many days hence and the earth shall tremble, and reel to and fro as a drunken man, and the sun shall hide his face, and shall refuse to give light, and the moon shall be bathed in blood, and the stars shall become exceeding angry, and shall cast themselves down as a fig that falleth from off a fig tree. And after your testimony cometh wrath and indignation upon the people; for after your testimony cometh the testimony of earthquakes, that shall cause groanings in the midst of her, and men shall fall upon the ground, and shall not be able to stand. And also cometh the testimony of the voice of thunderings, and the voice of lightnings, and the voice of tempests, and the voice of waves of the sea, heaving themselves beyond their bounds. And all things shall be in commotion; and surely men's hearts shall fail them; for fear shall come upon all people; and angels shall fly through the midst of heaven, crying with a loud voice, sounding the trump of God, saying, Prepare ve, prepare ye, O inhabitants of the earth, for the judgment of our God is come: behold, and lo, the Bridegroom cometh, go ve out to meet him. And immediately there shall appear a great sign in heaven, and all people shall see it together. And another angel shall sound his trump, saying, That great church, the mother of abominations, that made all nations drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication, that persecuteth the saints of God, that shed their blood: she who sitteth upon many waters, and upon the islands of the sea; behold, she is the tares of the earth, she is bound in bundles, her bands are made strong, no man can loose them; therefore she is ready to be burned. And he shall sound his trump both long and loud, and all nations shall hear it."-Doctrine and Covenants, 85: 24-26. Again: "And it shall come to pass that he that feareth me shall be looking forth for the the great day of the Lord to come, even for the signs of the coming of the Son Man; and they shall see signs and wonders, for they shall be shown forth in the heavens above, and in the earth beneath; and they shall behold blood and fire and vapors of smoke, and before the day of the Lord shall come, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon be turned into blood, and stars fall from heaven; and the remnant shall be gathered unto this place; and then they shall look for me, and behold I will come; and they shall see me in the clouds of heaven, clothed with power and great glory, with all the holy angels, and he that watcheth not for me shall be cut off."—D. & C.

These revelations give us clear and definite information regarding the signs of the times, hence we need not be deceived by the false and misleading interpretations of sects and men who, denying and ridiculing the organization, helps, governments, gifts, and some of the ordinances which the Lord appointed as a means to prepare and perfect His people, presume to "figure out" the meaning of the various scriptural prophecies by their own wisdom, forgetting the counsel of God which declares that, "No man knoweth the things of God but by the Spirit of God;" that "spiritual things are spiritually discerned," etc., etc.

In the full blaze of the Holy Spirit's inspiration the Saints are put in possession of the uncorrupted word of God through His servant the prophet. The more we study the three books the more will our knowledge and spirituality grow. For therein are safeguards against all the devices of the evil one.

It is a painful thing to witness the doings of some who, once enlightened, have suffered the light within them to vanish and become darkened; but such are also "signs" of the times. Becoming first careless, then darkened in mind, their love "waxes cold," and it is not long before they are bitterly opposing the truth. But the counsel of the Savior was, "Take heed to yourselves;" and "Whoso treasureth up my word shall not be deceived." Let us study the word of the Lord as revealed and contained in the three books and live by every word which proceedeth (present tense) out of the mouth of God. The revelations contained in the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants bring light and harmony when studied in connection with the Bible. And we predict that the assaults made upon them will serve but to awaken inquiry and stimulate a closer study of the Inspired Translation, the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants. The first organization of the Church was rebuked for treating lightly the Book of Mormon and the former commandments in these words:

"And now I give unto you a commandment to beware concerning yourselves, to give diligent heed to the words of eternal life; for you shall live by every word that proceedeth forth from the mouth of God. For the word of the Lord is truth, and whatsoever is truth is light, and whatsoever is light is Spirit, even the Spirit of Jesus Christ; and the Spirit giveth light to every man that cometh into the world; and the Spirit enlighteneth every man through the world, that hearkeneth to the voice of the Spirit; and every one that hearkeneth to the voice of the Spirit, cometh unto God, even the Father; and the Father teacheth him of the covenant which he has renewand confirmed upon you, which is confirmed upon you for your sakes, and not for your sakes only, but for the sake of the whole world: and the whole world lieth in sin, and groaneth under darkness and under the bondage of sin: and by this you may know they are under the bondage of sin, because they come not unto me; for whoso cometh not unto me is under the bondage of sin; and whoso receiveth not my voice is not acquainted with my voice, and is not of me; and by this you may know the righteous from the wicked, and that the whole world groaneth under sin and darkness even now.

And your minds in times past have been darkened because of unbelief, and because vou have treated lightly the things you have received, which vanity and unbelief hath brought the whole church under condemnation. And this condemnation resteth upon the children of Zion, even all: and they shall remain under this condemnation until they repent and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon and the former commandments which I have given them, not only to say, but to do according to that which I have written, that they may bring forth fruit meet for their Father's kingdom, otherwise there remaineth a scourge and a judgement to be poured out upon the children of Zion; for shall the children of the kingdom pollute my holy land? Verily, I say unto you, nay."—D. & C. 83: 7, 8.

When these commandments are lived up to, the testimonies of God's Spirit will be given to His people, bearing witness to the precious and wonderful truths revealed in these last days.

Let us "treasure up" (study and remember) the revelations of the Lord that we may not be deceived. The example of some of God's people who have been so sorely misled by false shepherds in our own times should be sufficient to warn us to not repeat their mistake in failing to to acquaint ourselves with and live by the word of the Lord.

In connection with the foregoing we publish an extract from the account of the expulsion of the Saints from Independence and Jackson county, Missouri, in 1833. The incident referred to occurred early in the morning of November 13th, the day following the cruel expulsion of the Saints. From this it will be seen that Joseph Smith the Seer regarded the special sign which is the subject of our article as a future event. We quote from Times and Seasons, vol. 6, page 898:

"November 13th. About four o'clock a. m., I was awakened by Bro. Davis knocking at my door, and calling on me to arise and behold the signs in the heavens. I arose, and to my great joy, beheld the stars fall from heaven like a shower of hail stones; a literal fulfiment of the word of God as recorded in the holy Scriptures as a sure sign that the coming of Christ is close at hand. In the midst of this shower of fire I was led to exclaim, How marvelous are thy works O Lord! I thank thee for thy mercy unto thy servant, save me in thy kingdom for Christ's sake: Amen.

"The appearance of these signs varied in different sections of the country: in Zion, all heaven seemed enwrapped in splendid fire-works, as if every star in the broad expanse had been suddenly hurled from its course and sent lawless through the wilds of ether. Some at times appeared like bright shooting meteors with long trains of light following in their course, and in numbers resembled large drops of rain in sunshine. Some of the long trains of light following the meteoric stars were visible for some seconds; those streaks would cut and twist up like serpents writhing. The appearance was beautiful, grand and sublime beyond description, as though all the artillery and fire-works of eternity were set in motion to enchant and entertain the Saints, and terrify and awe the sinners on earth. Beautiful and terrific as was was the scenery, which might be compared to the falling figs or fruit when the tree is shaken by a mighty wind, yet it will not fully compare with the time when the sun shall become black like sackcloth of hair, the moon like blood; (Rev. 6:12); and the stars fall to the earth as these appeared to vanish when they fell behind the trees, or came near the ground."

SUSTAIN THE HOPE.

Now that the Compendium and the Sunday School Question Book are at the service of the several Sunday Schools, the opinion may prevail that it is no longer necessary for the Sunday Schools to continue taking the number of Hopes for-merly subscribed for when the weekly lessons were published. Should such an idea obtain and result in individuals or schools withdrawing their support, to any extent, from the HOPE, we think they will make a great mistake, and thereby not only fail to sustain a worthy and necessary publication, but also suffer great loss themselves and fail to continue in line with the requisite progress, attainment and unison of the Sunday School work.

The HOPE has but just fairly begun its mission of usefulness, and not until Sunday Schools have fully accomplished their work can we do without the weekly issues of the little paper; which, by the way, we expect to see largely increased in size, and teeming with life giving, vitalizing suggestions and experiences concerning the successful operation of that great and as yet but partially comprehended work—the religious education and development of the young—the hope of the Church.

To the early Church was given a commandment of the Lord concerning a work the object of which was that "little children also may receive instruction before me as is pleasing unto me." The organization of Sunday School Associations in the various districts is indicative of the inspiration of the Holy Spirit constraining the Lord's people to more fully obey that injunction—for He neglects no feature of His great work, but constrains each department with all its factors as "helps" and "governments" to perform their appointed part, omitting no essential feature, thus keeping the entire system perfect.

If we shall rightly discern the spiritual signs of the times, those who are incrested in Sunday School work will not suffer the HOPE, the organ and exponent of whatever is progressive in the methods of that particular and valuable department of the great latter day work, to decrease in circulation and influence by reason of slackness on their part. There are yet undeveloped "reserve forces" to be brought out for the perfection and equipment of the Sunday Schools and their officers, teachers and scholars. Let no one look back or contentedly halt simply because we have made a partial progress, but let the HOPE, through which we expect to receive the benefit of the experiences of many talented school workers, be continued, its subscription lists steadily grow, and its size be increased. It is the natural complement of the Sunday School. The children anticipate receiving and reading it, and its perusal by them at their homes increases and enlivens their interest in the school.

We are confident that the editor of the HOPE, Sr. Walker, will energetically continue to make the little paper more and more interesting, and that, aided by original contributions of those who have that work at heart, she will be able to increase its size and also the interesting features of its contents. In the last issue she commences a series of questions which will be invaluable as suggestions to those using the Compendium.

Let all the Sunday Schools and subscribers increase rather than diminish their subscriptions. We trust that all school superintendents will labor and publicly call attention to this matter from time to time. We also urge all adult members of the Church to take an interest in the Sunday School cause. There is great need of a prompt and earnest awakening in this matter. How can our work in behalf of the stranger be acceptable to God while our own flesh and blood are uncared for!

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

ESPECIAL attention is called to the "Essay on the Bible," which appears in the communication department of this issue of the Herald. It is worthy of the careful study of Bible and Book of Mormon students.

From Plain City, Utah, February 7th, Bro. R. J. Anthony writes that he expected to soon begin a campaign at Slaterville, Utah.

A letter from Bro. T. M. Parr of Minneapolis, Minnesota, informs us that Bro. E. A. Stedman has been preaching there to good audiences and that quite an interest has been awakened and four have desired baptism.

Bro. Edward M. Davis wrote from Beaver, Utah, the 3d instant urging that ministerial aid be furnished the work there. He says Rev. Lane of Provo, made Beaver a call of late, abused Joseph the Seer and Bro. Luff, blinded and misled some and tried to get him to abandon the faith. But Bro. Davis rebuked his slander and refused his proselyting solicitations. We hope our missionaries may visit that city and vicinity and build up the gospel work there.

Bro. Charles M. Morgan wrote from Sigel postoffice, Michigan, that Bro. Robert Davis had been among the Saints there and his labors had been productive of good. He and Bro. Davis went to Gore, Michigan, where they labored for a time and baptized two.

Bro. J. E. Staley of Sutton, Kansas, writes that Bro. G. E. Deuel had been preaching some in that section of country last January and the word was well received. He expresses the opinion that "homeless Saints would do well to settle here. Land is cheap and soil good but we had a bad drouth last year which makes times bad in a new country like this. Many of the settlers have proved up on their lands and left the country leaving it very thinly settled."

In a recent letter Bro. J. W. Chatburn states that the Saints at Harlan, Iowa, have organized a Sunday School, J. B. Swain superintendent, Sr. Hardman assistant superintendent, Willie Hardman clerk and Pearl Swain treasurer. He thinks its prospects are good.

Bro. John Trantor of Iowa City, Iowa, writes that he would be glad to have elders call and preach there when passing.

Sr. Eliza Eichorn, 30 Lincoln street, Columbus, Ohio, desires that the gospel be preached in that city. Her husband is not a member of the church, but she thinks he may become interested if he would hear the principles of the gospel.

Sr. Zelia D. Carter of Kilchis postoffice, Tillamock county, Oregon, states that they would like to have an elder come there and preach for the few Saints and their neighbors.

Sr. Mary E. Bozarth wrote from Ruskin, Nuckolls county, Nebraska, that herself and family have not heard any preaching for five years. She rejoices in the Lord's goodness and in his blessings to her children when afflicted. She would like an elder to go there and preach the gospel.

Bro. D. L. Shinn who has been laboring at Big Springs, Calhoun county, West Virginia, writes that he had baptized six, blessed sixteen children and reorganized the branch, leaving it with twenty-six members and in good condition. Mobocracy had died out there and the minister who started it was losing his influence among the people. Bro. Shinn was called away for a time but expects to return to Calhoun county soon.

Bro. William Parsons recently wrote from North Branch, Kansas, expressive of the interest he fells in the cause to which he was at one time interested and without the benefits of it. He enjoys the church publications and renews therefor.

Bro. J. D. Bennett is working his way to St. Joseph, Missouri, preaching enroute. His contemplated route is along the Kansas state line toward Pawnee City, thence via Hiawatha and Fanning to St. Joseph. Those desiring his labors should address him care of M. J. Cutler, Manley, Kansas

This office desires to obtain a copy of "Mormonism Exposed," by E. D. Howe. A fair price will be paid for it.

President W. W. Blair left Thursday, February 14th, to attend the conference of the Galland's Grove district, which will be held with the Salem branch, on Friday, February 15th. He expects to labor in that vicinity about one week.

Let it be understood that we print no letters, communications or questions, unless the writer signs his or her full name. If the writers do not wish their proper names to appear to their papers, they can state the same and their wishes will be complied with. Please do not forget this, lest offense results by those writing—not by this office.

The Herald Office Manager desires that all who can should settle their arrearages with the office soon, so that there may be made as favorable an annual exhibit as possible to present to the next General Conference. The Board of Publication will meet probably some time before conference and make up their report. Let all concerned see to this matter at once. Send all moneys to D. Dancer, box 128, Lamoni, Decatur county, Iowa; also all statements of accounts with the office, whether for books, papers or other publications.

Bro. John Shook of Buchanan, Michigan, writes that the work is prospering somewhat at that place—that the Saints are being blessed.

Bro. Nicholas Stamm wrote February 11th, from Des Moines, Iowa, giving account of an extended trip through several counties in Iowa, in preaching and administering to the Saints and to the world. He has baptized three since last May. Although realizing it to be a sacrifice he yet desires to continue to fulfill his mission and preach the word. He found many of the Saints alive, but others almost asleep at the post of duty.

The Cambria Leader of January 31st, published at Swapsea, Woles, contains a brief account of a discussion between Bro. E. A. Davies and a Christadelphian named E. Speck which occurred at Morriston. The Leader does not state how the matter was decided. We are glad that our brethren in Wales are attracting attention.

We print marriage notices for one dollar each, and death notices free. But we can not print verses with death notices, except they occupy small space; and even then we sometimes find it best not to print them at all. But when men are so fortunate as to get married—well married—they may think themselves highly favored if they have the glad tidings of that fact published abroad in the Herald for the small sum of one dollar. Send on your marriage notices—and don't forget the dollar.

It is gratifying to be able to note that Bro. David Dancer is now (the 14th inst.) gaining rapidly and promises to be soon fully restored to his usual good health. We have missed him very much during the post four weeks, for he is ever at his post when in health.

Bro. D. W. Murphy wrote from Kit Carson, Colorado, that he would like an elder to go there and preach to his neighbors. His faith in the work is firm and established. Although lately afflicted by the presence of death in his family he feels desirous to be resigned and continue faithful unto the end.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. J. C. Clapp, in a late letter, says:
"I have thoroughly examined the new Compendium and do not hesitate to pronounce it the best book of the kind I have ever seen. I admire the arrangement of the subjects and the choice of texts quoted and believe when the merits of the little book are known that no elder or Sunday School teacher will be without it."

Pres. Joseph Smith wrote February 17th from Newport, California, as follows:

"Your letters contained good news. I forward one from Bro. R. J. Anthony containing good news. I am to speak on Tmeperance in Spurgeon's Hall, Santa Ana, to-night; and if the fates do not will otherwise, in same place to-morrow night on the marriage question."

Bro. J. C. Tipton wrote February 1st from Augusta, Texas:

"We are getting on with our church work at Evergreen, Texas, very well. Have had good preaching by Brn. Moore, Roberts and Nuniey. The Saints here are strong in the faith."

Bro. Joseph Lampert writes from Oshkosh, Wisconsin, in this earnest spirit:

"I am very thankful for the blessings of God. I suppose you remember what I said in the Herald a few weeks ago what I would be willing to do if I had fair luck; that is, sustain a good and true elder in the field, etc., etc. I think I have not much longer an excuse, as I was extraordinarily blessed since that time for a poor man. I believe if all members in the church would try hard there could be one thousand to two thousand elders sustained in the field, and the church would gain wonderfully. So much is used in the church in luxury and unnecessary things too numerous to mention."

THE following, taken from the York, (Nebraska), Republican, contains so much solid good sense on the topics treated that we cheerfully give it place in our columns:

"WHICH should a minister do, preach the gospel, or preach to suit the congregation? It certainly was always the purpose, and anciently the practice, for a minister to preach the gospel and teach the people the truth and the way to do right and to follow in the footsteps of Christ, that they might have everlasting life. The Bible tells us that when Christ was on the earth he taught the truth and gospel. But of late years, since the Bible is taught by machinery, as it were, (for the ministers are all regularly stationed at different points, at different periods, then after a certain time has elapsed and they are a little worn in their community, their places are filled with bright new men). Thus the whole religious machine is changed at regular intervals. Another very important fact is the one that our ministers of the present day are hired for a certain salary, and this is the thing that raises the question at the beginning of this article. The people think, "If we pay you, Mr. Preacher, you must preach to suit us. If you do not, short will be your race in this vicinity." Therefore it has come to pass that the truth must not be preached if it hits any of the members of the church. We think the moral influence of the churches a fine thing for the rising generation, because our children are taught the Bible in the Sunday Schools as it reads, and as it was intended to be taught. But when it comes to that point where a minister must not tell the adults of their faults and their almost unpardonable sins, without being kicked out of the church, then the moral influence ceases and it is time to call a halt. In too many instances, to-day, the minister is as potter's clay to be moulded by the congregation, instead of the congregation being clay to be moulded by the preacher and the word of God. Though the above facts exist, and are generally known, yet when revival meetings are in progress, these very members who are ready to oust the preacher if he does not preach to suit them, will come around with crocodile tears streaming down their hypocritical cheeks and beg you to let them pray for you, or ask you to go up to the altar. They are asking to pray many times for those whom they need to pray for them. They talk about grace, but grace in an ungracious mouth is but prorane."

THE following extract is from the New Albany, Indiana, Ledger, of recent date, which was sent us by Bro. M. R. Scott. Threats in anonymous letter had been sent to Bro. Scott, warming him to desist from further preaching at Byrnville. He writes that said threats were traced directly to some religionists there who sought by that means to put a stop to our work there. Bro. Scott states that the opposition is now about at an end and that some have requested baptism:

"The Ledger's correspondent at Byrnville, Harrison county, where the Church of the Latter Day Saints have a number of members and for some time carried on successful revival meetings, writes as follows in relation to these people:

"The impression abroad that the people of Byrnville and vicinity are doing a great wrong in permitting 'Mormons' to preach here is very extensive. Just here we would like to speak a kind word for the Mormons and exonerate the people of Byrnville. The members of the church of the Latter Day Saints have been among our people now for almost a year, and during that time no one can say aught against them with regard to business or religion; and the absurd idea that they preach, teach or believe in polygamy is without the least foundation for belief. One thing we do know, and that is that no sectarian creed wants to 'monkey' with them in debate, and since they have been preaching here no other minister of any other denomination can be induced to come, for the reason that they will be likely to hear something detrimental to their doctrine.'

"In a conversation with a gentleman residing at Byrnville, a few days ago, the Ledger was informed that 'these Latter Day Saints are all good citizens.' The gentleman added: 'A person attending their service without knowledge of their denominational character, would suppose he was in a Methodist or United Brethren revival meeting. They use the same Bible as other denominations and their preaching and worship is full of zeal. There is really no similarity between them and the Mormon Church.'"

Inexhaustible good nature is indeed the most precious gift of heaven, spreading itself like oil over the troubled sea of thought, and keeping the mind smooth and equable in the roughest weather.

VAIN HOPES AND FEARS.

[By Archbishop Trench.]
One time I was allowed to steer
Through realms of azure flight;
Henceforth, I said, I need not fear
A lower, meaner flight;
But here shall evermore abide,
In light and splendor glorified.

My heart one time the rivers fed, Large dews upon it lay; A ireshuess it has won, I said, Which shall not pass away, But what it is, it shall remain, Its freshness to the end retain.

But when I lay upon the shore,
Like some poor wounded thing,
I deemed I should not ever more
Refit my shattered wing—
Nailed to the ground and fastened there;
This was the thought of my despair.

And when my very heart seemed dried,
And parched as summer dust,
Such still I deemed it must abide;
No hope had I, no trust
That any power again could bless
With fountains that waste wilderness.

But if both hope and fear were vain,
And came alike to naught,
Two lessons we from this may gain,
If aught can teach us aught,—
One lesson rather—to divide
Between our fearfulness and pride.—Sel.

MARIOURIS TO WE END TIME.

Holden, Johnson Co. Mo., Jan. 30th. Dear Sister Frances:—Not quite two years have passed since I became a Latter Day Saint, and I can truly say they have been the happiest years of my life. I was a member in good standing in the Christian Church, for twenty-five years and enjoyed a portion of the Spirit of God, enough to make me hunger and thirst after righteousness, but I could not find it there. I always felt there was something more for me; but how I was to attain it, was the earnest prayer of my heart.

I would go to the Methodist and Baptist Chnrches, and as thereseemed to be such a spirit with them I would go to the mourner's bench to be prayed for: but I did not receive any more of the spirit there. The first sermon 1 heard preached of this gospel, Bro. I. N. White preached. I saw that I was in darkness and did not belong to the Church of Christ; that I had not been baptized by one having authority. I was convinced that this was the true Church of God. I was in very poor health when I came into this Church. I had been afflicted since the year fifysix, and I was in the last stage of consumption. I thought my days were but few on this earth; but I thank and praise God that I was healed instantly by his power, through the laying on of Bro. I. N. White's hands; and I can rejoice in this gospel, for I know it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion,

I am your sister in Christ,

Lucy A. V. Horn.

Lucas, Iowa, January 18th.

Dear Sister Praces:—I have been engaged in the work for thirteen years, and God has many times blessed me in a wonderful manner. The last week of the old year was one of severe trial for me; but, praise the Lord! with the incoming of the new year this darkness has fled. May God increase our faith, and give us wisdom that we may know what to pray for. I know the gift of tongues, healing and prophecy are enjoyed by the faithful ones of to day, as in days of old; but I also know it requires diligence in the service of the Master, and a consistent walk before all to obtain those blessings. I remain your sister, MARY E. DAVIS.

MILLERSBURG, Ill., Jan. 7th.

Dear Sister Frances:—Some restless spirit seems prompting me to write you and the readers of the Home Column to night. Your supposition that I am busied with home duties and the care of my little children is in a great measure correct; and speaking of children leads me to say, that I, for one, feel that the care and responsibility involved in training a child "in the way it should go," is by far the greatest burden that mothers have to bear.

The sisters of our branch have been conducting a mite society for over three years, which I have tried in a humble way to aid, and had meant to tell you of our success, but the report of the Lucas branch so completely overshadowed any we could make that I feel like keeping quiet. Yet we enjoy the fruits of our labors, as also the look of pleased surprise that comes over the faces of strangers on entering our neat little chapel; and still we are working away, lending now and then a helping hand to the needy, and the end is not yet.

But it is not of this I wish to write, but rather on the subject of dress. I confess I was not much interested when it was first discussed in the Home Column, yet the more I think of it, the more important it seems. Aunt Katherine Salisbury's letter in a late Herald reminded me anew of my visit to Burlington, for it was also my good fortune to attend the conference there, of refreshing from the presence of the Lord; but it is more especially of something else in connection with my stay there that I wish to speak. We stopped at the home of Sr., and I would like to say Bro. Wright, for I am sure that should be his name. The evening we arrived, husband and I attended a meeting of the Free Methodists, their church being near by. On entering the house of worship, I was at once struck by the plainness of the apparel of the women present, -men in general are not so subject to criticism in matters of dress; -and the sisters there, too, were not arrayed in aught that could be termed "finery." Not even a feather, a flower, nor a "dressy" hat or bonnet did I see in the whole goodly congregation, but all were so neatly and plainly dressed, and I thought I never saw a prettier sight; and I can truthfully add it was the first time I ever saw such a sight in any house of worship-the Latter Day Saints not excepted. I did not get converted to the Free Methodist religion as a whole. The minister was earnest, very earnest, and I thought what he lacked in knowledge he made up in zeal. He read something about the restoration of the children of Israel, and the burden of his comments thereon was that this was the way the Lord wanted us to live, etc. But those plain bats and bonnets! there they were, and I couldn't get over them. After an enlivening hymn, the congregation had a season of prayer. Yes, the congregation; for those that did not lead in prayer, said "amen" fervently and frequently. It was noisy and novel to me; but there were those plain bonnets and hats, and I couldn't help thinking of them. Then they had a season of speaking, and many heartfelt testimonies of God's goodness; and many protested that they had left the world with its follies and vanities behind them, and there were those plain bonnets and hats, and how could I doubt it? I caught the spirit of the hour, and felt in my heart to say "Yes; wear your plain bonnets, and in so doing you are surely fitting your heads for a better crown bye and bye." As one after another arose and told of what God had done and was doing for them, something whispered: "Can you not, will you not tell this people what He has done for you?" I obeyed the impulse, and trust no harm was done thereby. In conversing with a dear sister in Burlington on the plain dressing of the people mentioned, she said, "Oh, I tell you, sister Short, they are just as proud of their plainness as anyone who dresses differently;" and I wondered if it wasn't something to be proud of. Don't the good book say, "Him that glorieth, let him glory in the Lord?" Perhaps this is what it means, among other things; who knows?

and with the Saints assembled to enjoy a season

Dear sisters, the sum of all this is, or so it looks to me: If our theory and practice were equal, our power for good would sweep over the world as an avalanche; and have we, sisters, no weight to lay aside? Let us question our own hearts deeply, seriously and prayerfully, and not put away, or crowd back the whisperings of the still small voice, but

"Listen to the Spirit's pleading;
To its warning voice give heed."

I call to mind the story of a converted native woman in India. When told by the missionary that she must now lay aside her glittering gems and ornaments she had hitherto worn, she looked at them with loving pride,—woman-like—but laid them aside as she firmly and decisively said, "I love Christ better than these." Oh, sisters, do we realize that "sacrifice brings forth the blessings of heaven?" Are we walking in the humility that becometh those "whose souls are lighted with wisdom from on high?" May God help us and be with us all, and enable us to choose the better part. With kind love to all the household of faith, I remain your sister, VIOLA V. SHORT.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Sr. Annette of R.—, Iowa, writes:—"I do not often have the privilege of meeting with the Saints, but the Herald brings to me glad tidings each week, and the Home Column is to me like a spring of living water which the lonely traveler rejoices over when found in desert places. I have been repeating agaid the words,

"Make my mortal dreams come true."
"How much they mean to me and how earnestly I pray that I may be all I covenanted to be—a true Saint. We are in the midst of the Holiness people here, and I lately went upon one occasion to their meeting, and have felt ever since more thankful for the testimony of the gospel of Christ. But I felt that I had put an outrage upon my own self respect by going to such a place. It recalled old plantation revivals in the negro quarters. Truly 'the scourge goes flaming past.' May God deliver his people from all such scourges."

Sr. Violet Jordan, Kingsley, Iowa, writes:—"I feel that there is a work for me and for each young Saint to do—

'God is marshalling his army for the rescue of his truth, He is calling now to battle both the aged and the youth;' and I desire to be numbered with those who are on the Lord's side and to battle for him. I rejoice in this work, and hope to be able to stand until the Lord's coming, and not be numbered with those who can not abide that day. We have a branch organized here now, and we have good prayer meetings. We enjoyed the visit of Brn. Peak and Davis here very much. They thought, that they might be back soon again. Many here are interested in their coming."

Sr. Elizabeth Andes, Elmira, Kansas, writes:-"My faith in the latter day work grows stronger every day. The Home Column is a great help to me, as I am the mother of a large family, and I pray the Lord will strengthen me to bring them up in his admonition and fear. I have had many testimonies of the truth of this work. The promise was given me when I first joined the church, that if I was faithful I should have some of my relatives with me in the church. It has been partly fulfilled, but I expect to have more yet. You will remember that I asked the sisters to pray for my mother, Catharine Winn, who was troubled in her mind. My sisters write me that she is now much better. I feel to give God all the praise. I ask your prayers that she may yet see the importance of becoming obedient to the gospel. I believe the Prayer Union will result in much good."

Sr. Hattie A. Nichols, Cleveland, Iowa, writes:
—"I have been greatly blessed since I obeyed the gospel, and I realize that greater blessings would have been mine if I had been more faithful. I rejoice in the spread of the good tidings of salvation. I know the work is of God and will prosper. The Lord is remembeling his Saints in this part of his vineyard in a very marked degree, and I feel encouraged and determined to press on to the end."

Sr. Hannah, of Riverside, California, writes:-"I have many times been strengthened by reading the Home Column. The Father has promised that those who do his will shall know for themselves that the gospel his servants are preaching is the same that was taught by him and his apostles in ancient times. I sometimes feel that my lot is hard standing all alone without any one of like faith, but God has been very near to me and has given me much comfort and joy and answered my prayers. Don't be discouraged, dear sisters, but hold on to the end. I have no preachers but the church papers, but they are a great power in themselves, and I pray God to bless all who contribute to their pages. They are a very great help especially to those who have no other way of hearing the gospel in its fulness and truth."

[Sr. Hannah, as we have not your full address, we take this way of informing you that the party in Peoria requested us not to send any more papers to them. What shall we do with the money? Please write.—Ep.]

LITTLE PRAIRIE RONDE, Mich.

Sr. Frances:-I think the Prayer League a good move and that the Spirit of the Lord is with it. Twice before I had thought of joining it I was impressed to go to my room and pray, which I did, when it suddenly came to me that it was the day and the hour that the sisters of the League met for prayer; and I thought surely the Spirit of the Lord is with them and has reminded me of my duty; and my heart was filled with gratitude and love for our Father who is mindful of the least of these little ones who are striving to do His will. We are a feeble little band of Saints here, being only ten in number that can meet every Sunday for prayer and testimony, who have had much prejudice and opposition to encounter; but we have been trying in an humble way, by scattering tracts and loaning Voice of Warning and our Herald to overcome it. And there are some who know that they imagined a "vain thing," and there are some we think who are not far from the kingdom. We wish the sisters of the Prayer League to remember us as a branch in their prayers, that our number may be increased when the word of truth and life shall again be preached among us. .

Your sister in Christ,
MARY E GOODENOUGH.

AVENUE CITY, Mich.

Dear Sister Frances:-There is a branch of twenty-seven members here and we are rejoicing in hope of etermal life. We feel that much good will be done through the sisters meeting together to pray. There are four of the sisters here that meet every week and God has answered our prayers and said he would guide and direct us and for us to lift up our heads and rejoice for our redemption draweth nigh. Sisters, be faithful in meeting together for the Lord is well pleased therewith. I can not thank my heavenly Father enough for the great blessing he bestowed upon one of my daughters who was afflicted so severely with inflamatory sore eyes that sometimes she could not see anything at all; but through the prayer of faith God healed her eyes. They are sound and well. Truly he is the great physician, and he is a God worthy of being praised. A few of the sisters here have organized a Prayer League by choosing Sr. A. Hailey president and Sr. Mary Moultray secretary. We have been blessed with God's Spirit in power in our meetings and we pray God will bless his people.

ARTILLA HAILEY.

CLARKSDALE, Mo., Jan. 3d.

Sister Walker:—The sisters of the Pleasant Grove branch met at the house of sister Head for the purpose of organizing a Prayer Union, and have been greatly blessed in meeting together. There were not so many as we should like to have seen, for the weather was bad. We organized with the following named sisters as officers: Sr. M. Head, President;

Sr. H. Flinn, Secretary.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

The prayers of the Sisters of the Prayer Union are requested for Sr. Annie McKee, whose mind is seriously affected. The cause is a very distressing one, and would enlist the sympathy of every Saint, was it deemed best to make it known.

Sr. Finley, of Everest, Kansas, asks your prayers that the way may be opened for her to attend the Annual Conference.

Sr. E. E. Cobb, of Lower Lake, California, desires your prayers in her behalf, and also for her granddaughter, that they may be blessed with health.

Sr. Turnour requests your prayers in behalf of Bro. Henry Mance of Hartford, Michigan, that if it is God's will, he may be restored to his right mind.

Correspondence.

LINCOLN, Neb., Jan. 3cth.

Bro. Blair:—The district conference held at Nebraska City, January 20th and 21st was well attended, and a good time was experienced by the Saints. The attendance at the meetings was good, and best of all, the Spirit's influence was enjoyed. The afternoon meeting of Sunday was a time of enjoyment to all present. The spiritual gifts were manifested, and the tesimonies given show that the work in the district is progressing.

At the business sessions of the conference the brethren all seemed to strive to come to a unity of thought concerning the work in the district, and we believe that all felt amply repaid for coming, and that when they separated it was with the determination to be, if possible, more diligent in the prosecution of the work. I left the "City" on the 24th and stopped with the brethren of the Palmyra branch, and at Bennett until the 28th. The brethren at those places are having good meetings and are rejoicing in a renewal of the Spirit in their midst.

From Bennett I came to Lincoln and am holding a series of meetings at the home of Bro. Young. We are having a good hearing and the meetings are highly appreciated by the Saints, some of whom have been in this place a long time, and have hitherto had to fight their way without the aid of preaching. I am certain that these meetings will result in good, for they have been the means of bringing Saints together who before were unacquainted with each other. Last night there were ten Saints present, and to-night we expect one or two more. The neighbors also attend and are apparently greatly interested. The work in the district was never in better condition since the writer has been acquainted with it than now. It is impossible to respond to all the calls for preaching. We are doing all we can, and wish we could do more.

Your brother in Christ, C. H. PORTER.

HATFIELD, Missouri, Feb. 1st.

Bro. Blair: To-day finds me in a very lonely condition. It seems as though I was alone in this world and cast down for trying to battle for that which I know will bring eternal happiness in the world to come. But if God will give me strength I will endeavor to overcome that which keeps man in the darkness and prevents the light of God from lighting up his pathway. To some it seems as though this life is all they care for, never stopping to consider the grand life which lies before them or to give it a second thought. They do not stop to consider that there is a great responsibility resting upon them for the way they conduct themselves through this life. If they will stop and consider for a moment that this world and its pleasures shall vanish away, and wickedness shall be swept away at the coming of the Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, in their souls they would exclaim, "O that I had my life to live over-I would try and live nearer to my God." As you sow in this life so shall you reap -if you sow peace and happiness to your soul so shall you reap, but if you sow to the contrary that shall you reap. "For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on him should not perish but have everlasting life."-John 3: 16. We should study the written word with great care. for it will bring us nearer to God and prepare us for the life beyond. My desire is to live and so conduct myself that when Jesus comes it may be said of me, "Well done good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joys of thy Lord." May this glorious work go on till it fills all the earth. Pray for me, dear Saints, that I may not fall by the way. EDWARD E. MARSHALL.

NEWARK, Dak., Jan. 30th.

Dear Herald:—I am glad and rejoice that my Heavenly Father has spared myself and companion through life this many years that we groped though darkness, and in His divine wisdom finally let us through darkness into the light of his everlasting gospel which we long sought for. This is indeed the Church of God. Our Lord has said, "These signs shall follow them that believe;" and, thanks be to God, they do follow the Saints of God.

A little over two years ago I came to this part of Dakota. I heard of a people called Mormons, and at the time I wondered if it was possible that I had come among them; supposing of course they were Utah Mormons. I attended one meeting. I liked that, then I went to another. That was all right, and the gospel truths that rolled from the lips of Bro. Robert Oehring was the sweetest bread of life that my soul ever feasted upon, and my soul could not be filled. The more I received the more I wondered. I feasted upon the gospel bread of life until my soul was satisfied. My wife and I invited Elder J. Pride and Bro. P. C. Fisher to come and see us. They came; also Bro. Robert Oehring, and before night they had our names for baptism. Myself and wife and my aged father and mother and two sons of Bro. Oehring were baptized and I have often rejoiced and do thank my Heavenly Father that I have at last found the true church of our Master. I do pray that he will guide and strengthen me that I may prove faithful in the cause of Christ. I am striving to bring others into the sheepfold of the Good Shepherd.

We had a series of meetings every evening for two weeks this winter, and they were meetings long to be remembered by the Saints. The outsiders say they never heard such preaching; others said, that is the way to preach," and many are near the waters there to fulfill all righteousness. I have tried to serve the Lord for the last sixteen years. I have read the Bible, but its contents were never so clear to me as now. It seems as if a mist had been lifted from my darkened brain and everything seems more bright and clear. I hope we may always be found faithful, and that all our children will yet be in the church. Yours in Christ,

CHARLES H. HUNTLY.

Council Bluffs, Iowa, Jan. 30th.

Bro. Blair: - Since you left I have labored some in the ministry, not as much as I would like to have done, but hope from now until Spring to give most of my time to preaching the word. I have an appointment for next Sunday night at Bro. Bybee's on Pigeon. Will try and labor in that locality as circumstances permit. I have opened a new place for preaching in Weston, ten miles East of Council Bluffs, in the Methodist Chapel, Preached there last Sunday: had a fair attendance and was invited to return. I left another appointment. I believe it is the first time any of our elders could get the chapel. Thus I feel encouraged that God will bless his work and we will find favor in the eyes of the people. Bro. William, often when thinking of Zion and her redemption, my very soul is moved within me, and tears course down my cheeks, and the Spirit says, "Be faithful, not many days hence the Lord will glorify his holy name in the eyes of the nations, in behalf of his afflicted people."

Two have been baptized at Loveland Mills since you left here, and four in Council Bluffs; prospects for more. In bonds of peace,

D. K. Dodson.

BYRNVILLE, Indiana, Jan. 21st.

Brn. Joseph and William: On my return from Jefferson and Ripley counties, I was immediately called to Mott. Some Utah elders had been near there holding meetings. I have not yet come in contact with them. They seem afraid of a Josephite elder. I have been preaching in Mott and in this place since the 15th instant. On the night of the 18th, I spoke in Mott to a crowded congregation of attentive listeners, on some of the points of difference between the Reorganized Church and the Utah church, and had pressing invitations to continue our meetings. But I must have a few days of rest, for I have been on the go day and night since the 14th of December last. I baptized one more to-day at this place, and the prospects are good for many more soon. The work is spreading rapidly. I have more calls than I can respond to. Please find inclosed some specimens of argument I have had to meet in opening up the work in this mission. It is encouraging to know that these are the best arguments that sectarianism has; for had they any better, of course they would use them. Here is one: "Mr. M. R. Scott: I am going to send you these (postal) cards until the White Caps take you out and beat all the hide off of your back. If they don't I will address the next one in their name. You are a thief and a dead beat." And here is another: "July 25th, 1888. You are hereby notified to stop your services immediately, without any hesitation whatever. We have endured your conduct as long as we can. Take fair warning and walk out of this house right now, or take what will certainly follow if you do not. By order of the community."

God has given us the victory, and a better state of feeling is had, and those who did this dirfy work are found out and have fallen flat.

Yours, M. R. Scott.

W. W. Blair:-I am happy to inform you that this branch is in a better condition spiritually than for many years past. The active members are earnest and zealous, the prayer meetings are well attended and a good degree of the Spirit is enjoyed. I never saw the Saints more earnest and desirous "to bring to pass much righteousness" than now. The gifts of the gospel are enjoyed from time to time and the promise of the Spirit is that we shall be greatly blessed if we continue in our efforts. I never saw the sisters so active with the work and concerned in its welfare and anxious to learn doctrine. We have a band of young men and women that we can rightly call a band of hope. This branch gives hundreds of dollars that are never recorded outside of our own book unless it be in heaven. Father Watkins is still at the helm of the branch being well sustained in the faith and prayers of Yours in Christ, the Saints.

E. B. Morgan.

SALEM, Dakota, February 1st.

Dear Herald:—I have been laboring in Mc-Cook county and the southern part of Miner county the last two months. Elder Charles Howery has been with me, and has been a wise and valuable helper in opening up the work in this new field. He came into the chuuch in the dark and cloudy day, some time in the fifties, and has been with it ever since. Was ordained to the office of an elder by Zenas H. Gurley, Sen., but did not get a license from him. Was reordained by C. W. Lange.

I feel greatly encouraged in the work, and have been blessed in presenting the word to the people. Have greater hopes of building up a work here than any other part of Dakota that I have been in. Quite a number are deeply interested, a great deal of prejudice has been removed and a few have expressed a willingness to unite with the church. If I am not mistaken in my impressions, a good work may be organized here in McCook and in Miner counties by upright living and sowing more of the good seed of the kingdom. I think this field should be sustained next year, by all means, that the labor that has been done this year may not be in vain. Southwest Dakota and southern Minnesota need at least two elders, and I hope circumstances will be such that they can be sent. This is not an easy field but is far from it, and the only way to build up the work here is for missionaries to come and stay and stick to their work until they reap the fruits of their labor. Have had a nice winter, only two light storms so far. Weather has been very favorable for gospel work.

Prejudice is strong in most places. I am trying to reach the people through the local papers, with short but pointed communications. Myself and family have been kindly cared for by the few Saints and friends here, for which I am thankful. Have been blessed with good health.

Your brother,

E. WHEELER.

PLUM HOLLOW, Iowa, Feb. 11th.

Bro. Blair: Our conference has just closed. It was one among the very best. The house could not hold more than half of the people that attend the preaching meetings. The branches were fairly represented; peace and harmony and God's Holy Spirit prevailed throughout the entire session. We would have been highly pleased to have seen you with us, but as it was we did the best we could. Bro. D. Hougas did the most of the preaching. The Saints here have decided to build a church, and by the time we hold another conference at this place we expect to have one completed that will accompdate all that may want to attend. There is a noble band of Saints here, and I am fully persuaded they will accomplish what they undertake.

I am now on the way to the Richards settlement, below Sidney. Shall go from there to Mill Creek. God bless your in your arduous labors for truth and right. Yours,

HENRY KEMP.

BELL, Iowa, Jan. 17th.

Bro. Blair:-In travelling and preaching in the Galland's Grove district, which is comprised of over twenty counties. I find that although it is an old district, and one in which there has been much preaching done, yet there is much of its territory which has never been canvassed by our elders. There is no end to opportunities for preaching the word if they are sought after with godly zeal. It is not best to wait for the Macedonian cry, "Come over and help us," to come from those not of our faith before we try to "rescue the perishing," for that cry, so far as the writer's experience goes, generally comes from the Saints, or those almost persuaded to be Saints. Many honest people may be found who would gladly listen to the "good news" of the restored gospel if the elders persevere in seeking for opportunities to reach them and are diligent and consistent in presenting the truth to them.

My heart has often been made glad when traveling over this district where our beloved brother Thomas Dobson once preached, to hear even non-professors say of him. "If there was ever a good man, if there was ever a truthful man, Uncle Tommy Dobson was one" It is pleasant indeed to follow such men. And it is pleasant to preach the gospel where the elders and members have been living their religion. How true is this saying of Jesus, "He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad."—Matt. 12:30.

I must tell you a good story about Bro. William Carroll, of Auburn, Sac county, Iowa, and the preacher. A few weeks before I visited Auburn, the Holiness Methodists held there a revival meeting of several weeks duration, Bro. Carroll, in his kindness, acting as their junitor without pay. They succeeded in making only two new converts-a gentleman and his wife. But lo, and behold! a Mr. Albert Reynolds of the same town whispered in the gentleman's ear that he had better go a little slow and find out "more perfectly the way of truth," or words to that effect, before he went too far, referring him for further information to Bro. Carroll. Presently this newly converted gentleman requested Bro. Carroll to go to his house and spend the evening with him and his family, and Bro. Carroll did so cheerfully. During this friendly visit the conversation naturally turned upon the subject of religion, and our brother improving the opportunity, presented all the truth he could. The gentleman was much concerned, continued to pray, and tried to read the Bible but could not because something seemed to whisper in his ear, "Go and get Bro. Carroll to baptize you." He obeyed the voice by requesting to be baptized. So a few of the Saints and this gentleman went to the North Coon river, a distance of about three miles, and the ordinance was administered about sundown, confirmation taking place shortly afterward. This newly made brother was so overjoyed that on their way home he said, "Why, Billy, I feel like shouting for Jesus!"

While this gentleman was meditating upon the subject of religion, his wife became somewhat uneasy on his account and she asked some advice of the Methodist minister, who told her, among other things, to "beware of that people who preached so much doctrine and had so little religion." And after her husband was baptized this minister borrowed a work written against the Mormons and took it to her to read in order that she might not be deceived. But she continued to investigate, and as a result she, too, was baptized by Bro. Carroll, and is now with her husband rejoicing in the truth with the people of God. The joke is, that the janitor baptized all the converts without the preacher's consent! Some of the Holiness people say that Bro. Carroll stole their converts; but to me it illustrates the good a faithful deacon can do for God, also the truth of the Savior's statement in Luke 14: 11: "For whosoever exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted." I noticed with pleasure that Bro. Wm. Carroll is so far respected by the good people of Auburn that he was chosen superintendent of a Union Sabbath School at that place.

At Coalville, Webster county, I found a prospering Sunday School superintended by Brn. Wm Jordison and Wm. Ray. Bro. Samuel Jordison, who presides over the little band of Saints at that place, is an energetic and faithful minister and holds the office of Priest. The Saints at Coalville who are rich in the faith, though poor in this world's goods, never forget to help the traveling elder on his journey in a financial way. Three of these brethren accompanied the writer on foot to the station, a distance of two miles, carrying his satchels and offering words of encouragement. The love of the Saints, especially those of Coalville, brought forcibly to mind the love of the early christians for one of their ministers as found recorded in Acts 20: 36-38. Space forbids that I should mention the names of all who showed us kindness, but I wish to thank all the Saints, and Mr. C. Thompson, residing near the Union Church in Calboun county, Mr. Skinner and lady of Camp Creek, and Mr. and Mrs. Wallace of Twin Lake township in the same county.

Sunday eve, January 6th the writer attended a meeting of the Bible Research Society, of Dow City, and was much edified in listening to the young men expound the gospel. These meetings have been held once a week for over a year under the care of Brn. A. F. and J. R. Rudd. The good Spirit has manifested itself in their meetings greatly cheering all present, and in the regular branch meetings the Lord has stated, by the Spirit, that he was much pleased with the effort of the young men in this particular as well as with the effort being put forth in the Sunday School work. This society might be called a school of the prophets on a small scale, for the object had in view is to educate the young men of the branch in Scriptural lore and to give them practical experience in presenting the word, and thus accustom them to speak before the people. Considering the limited time our young men have for study and practice, they are making rapid progress. While it is just possible that these meetings might be improved, I believe it is an effort in the right direction. Such meetings could be held in many of our branches with profit. If it was thought wiser and safer, these meetings could be presided over by the branch officers. Why not give the young men a chance to improve upon their talents in this way? We can educate the young by placing responsibilities upon them, if we are kind and encourage them all we can. For one, I admire the efforts of Bro. J. F. McDowell in seeking to draw the young men into closer communion with God and Christ that they may be educated by the Holy Spirit to perform their duties as followers of Christ. How lovely it is to see the young people of the church alive in the work and full of faith and hope and the Spirit of God, with their hearts overflowing, like a mighty fountain, with the love of God showing itself in their efforts to save fallen humanity!

The Boyer Valley branch is wonderfully proud of her boys in Australia, J. W. Wight and C. A. Butterworth; and she has other young men who will take the field before many years if they continue faithful, who are now excellent men. I presume the brethren and sisters of the Union branch of the Little Sioux District will say, "Hold on there. We have a claim on J. W." All right, brethren, all we want to say, is, that we have the first claim, but are willing to divide these sentiments of esteem with you, for your interest is our interest, and our interest is yours. Ah! it must not only extend to these two branches, but to the entire church, if we would prosper and enjoy the Spirit of God as we should. When I look over the Galland's Grove District I sometimes think the General Conference ought to send us twenty elders who could spend their entire time in the ministry. But when I think about those two boys in Australia, that great territory, or look still farther and see the whole world and the vastness of its territory, knowing how few are sent out, I am forced to exclaim, "We ought to be satisfied, for we surely have our share of laborers." All things considered, the General Conference has dealt with us kindly. It makes no difference how much money this district pays into the treasury, or how little of that money comes back into the district, so long as it is expended wisely for the good of the whole church. For we are only a part of the church. All the districts, all the branches, and all the members are parts of the body of Christ so long as they live in communion with him. "For we are all members one of another" and our interests are one. It is the duty of the church to send her ministers into all the world. and therefore she must draw heavily upon each and every district and branch, not only for men, but for means with which to maintain the ministers' families and to assist the poor. Let us therefore all work together in love and pray that the "Lord of the harvest" will send forth more "laborers into his harvest."

"The golden grain is waving,
Inviting us to reap;
And sin is fast enelsying—
Why should we longer eleep?
We will thrust in our sickles,
Help us, thou God above,
Each one to do a little,
Inspired by sev'reign love."

C. E. BUTTERWORTH.

Lucas, Iowa, February 11th.

Bro. Blair: - The dear Herald comes to us each week with its columns freighted with cheering intelligence of the prosperity of God's "marvelous work and a wonder" throughout the world, and it fills my soul with real joy to learn that God is indeed blessing his covenant people in a wonderful manner, that he is blessing his ministry in preaching the word throughout the different missions, and that those who believe on our Lord through their teachings are, like Saints of old, testifying that God is confirming the word with signs following. But it causes a feeling of sadnees in our hearts to read of the unprincipled and cowardly attacks made upon our elders in many places. We are made to rejoice when we learn of the awakening there is in the world, and of the increasing desire to learn more of the truth; that the "blind guides" in many places are made to feel the effects of the introduction of gospel truths among their flocks to the endangering of their "crafts" but to the salvation of honest souls.

The work in our locality is in fair condition. We are doing what we can in its defence. Our meetings are characterized by a goodly degree of the Holy Spirit in its gifts and blessings, also in healing the sick. For valuable aid in the establishment of the work in this place we are indebted to many of the traveling ministry any of whom we would welcome again. Bro. Henry A. Stebbins, our beloved district president, has done good work for us, both in preaching the word and in otherwise edifying the Saints. His earnest, consistent efforts are worthy of more than passing notice, for he has labored a great deal in our branch and has preached some of the grandest sermons ever delivered in this place. He occupies a warm place in the hearts of the Lucas Saints.

Our church publications are simply grand. Our Herald, with its articles, correspondence and Mother's Home Column; Autumn Leaves, with its pages of pure literature—there is no dispensing with it. Bro. Stebbins' "Story of the Book of Mormon" alone is worth many times the price of the Magazine to me. The Compendium is aiso a valuable acquisition to our church publications. Thank God for such men and women, possessed of noble hearts and giant intellects, to sow the seeds of purity and truth that will some day yield an abundant harvest. No home should be without our church papers and books; for no one can persue their pages and not be instructed, for they contain the right kind of material for the Saints old and young to read. The Compendium should be in the hands of every young man in the church as a ready aid in defense of the truth. It is splendid. I would like to see such an interest taken in Autumn Leaves that would soon warrant its publication semi-monthly instead of monthly. Praying that God will bless every means for advancing the truth, I am yours in L. W. POWELL. Christ.

Perdue Hill, Alabama, Jan. 31st. Brn. Smith and Blair:—I rejoice that the time has come that the Saints can worship God unmolested in this country and elsewhere. The gospel is winning its way throughout this country, and we are highly favored and are gaining ground little by little. I have opened up several new places this fall and winter. What the result will be time will tell. I baptized one and more are ready. The debate that was to come off failed to take place, because my opponent would not meet the issue.

I will preach to-night and Sunday at a new place. We have had plenty of rain and snow—the winter has been bad for precahing throughout this country. We had a snowstorm here which covered the ground in ten minutes. It continued six hours.

Yours in Christ,

G. R. Scogin.

MEDINA CITY, Texas, Jan. 30th.

Dear Herald:-Since my baptism, ordination and election to preside over this branch, in June and July last, I have not been as faithful as I should have been, often dividing the spiritual and carnal mind, invariably giving the larger to the carnal, and lacking in the spirit of humility so needful. However I am determined by the help of God to do otherwise and arise to duty and spend the remainder of my days in the service of my Master. A great deal of preaching has been done in this county by Brn. H. Lytle, S. Smith, T. W. Smith, D. H. Bays, H. C. Smith and a number of others. Then came Brn. I. N. Roberts and J. A. Currie. These last named brethren have done a great deal of labor in this and adjoining counties in the last few years. Last June they organized a district consisting of Bandera, Oakwood and Indian City branches. They have done much towards getting the church in a working condition. Bro. J. A. Currie, Ir. is a meek, humble man of God-filling daily the measure that God has given him. He is one among the many that have forsaken all for the love of God and the truth. He is evidently in the service of the Master, and as for the goods of this world, he can say with the Master "he has not where to lay his head." In all this he seems to rejoice that he is free from the cares of this world that he may proclaim the gospel. He commenced a debate with a Christdelphian minister on the 18th of this month. The C. P. minister (Mr. Banta) affirmed that the church he represents is the church of Christ. Bro. Currie denied. Mr. Banta affirmed that the breath of man is the spirit and the only spirit of man, and that the breath and body were the soul. In this he brought forth what seemed to our weak minds strong proof, but when it came to Bro: Currie's half hour, with the bright beaming influence of the Holy Spirit shining upon his brow, all the arguments of Mr. Banta would melt like the frost before the bright rays of the morning sun. This continued for ten sessions of two hours each when Mr. Banta called for a two days rest which was granted. And the next question was that the church of Jesus Christ of L. D. S. was the true church-Elder Currie affirming. The appointed time came, but Mr. Banta did not appear. The house was full and by a unanimous vote Bro. Currie was requested to preach. The meeting was opened by prayer by a member of the Methodist Church who had been very bitterly opposed to us. Bro. Currie preached an excellent discourse on prophecy, dreams and interpretations.

To the traveling elders coming this way, I would say that they will always be met with comfortable conveyance at Centre Point unless other points are preferred.

Pray for me that I may overcome all my weaknesses and be able to fill the measure of my calling to the honor and glory of God.

Омана, Neb., Feb. 10th.

Bro. Blair: So far as I have read the Compendium, I have a few objections. One is a typographical error on page 13, line 8, the word "rest"—Heb. 4: 3, 7. The other, page 237, twelfth Century. As I am born a Vaudois, (French language-Valdenses, or Vallences, latin term.) I do not accept the statement that the famous sect of the Valdenses arose in the twelfth century, taking the name from Peter Valdus. I am ready to discuss the point; but it is not my intention to do it now, as it would take too much time and space in the Herald. I will only say, that if any desire to know exactly the origin of the Vaudois, to read the history by Atoine Monastier, formerly paster in the canton de-Vaud, Switzerland. . They will find the truth. We never were heretics from the Roman church, because we never did believe the errors of that church. Yours in bonds.

JOHN AVONDET.

[The word "rest" occurs in the Inspired Translation, which was used in preparing the Compendium. Standard historians record what the Compendium states concerning the Waldenses. However, it does not say that the Waldenses were heretics from the Romish church.—Ed.]

WILBER, Nebraska, Feb. 12th.

Bro. Blair:—I filled two appointments at Nebraska City for Bro. Bronson, who was confined to his room with lameness. He went home Monday morning, January 28th, so I did not see him. The weather was cold and the attendance was small. On my arrival here I found great religious excitement. The "Cyclone" (Rev. Mallery) of Lincoln had just closed a two weeks union revival. His style is that of Sam Jones. He and Rev. Dye, the Baptist, did not harmonize, and they came to words in public. Mr. Dye told me that the "Cyclone" had more lungs and brass than Braden, and he explained that his part in the revival was like the fellow who had the bear by the tail-death to hold on, and death to let go. I have held fifteen meetings, and I never saw the interest so good here. Some of the best people are attending and investigating. Last Sunday evening we had the largest meeting we ever held in the old Tent. Two outsiders asked for the M. E. church, and were refused. This created a small blizzard, and will cut short the "all-needful" of the M. E. preacher. The time seems favorable for our people to build a house of worship here. Both the Saints and outsiders favor it. I never felt better or more confident in the gospel than now; and my joy and delight is to be active for the Master. And be assured it is some pleasure and satisfaction to me, that after ten years labor in this locality, and notwithstanding such men as Braden, Luce, Parker and Bechtle, and the vile falsehoods against the church, her leading ministers, and myself as an individual, that I still have the respect of the Saints and friends, and that only the religious(?) and "baser sort" oppose. I pray that God will grant health and faith to Emma, and protect my children, that my undivided time may be devoted to the work. Hope you were blessed while at Pleasanton, and that good was done. I sent eighty-three pages manuscript last week, on the Book of Mormon, and will soon send more, I return thanks for your kindness and aid on this deeply interesting subject.

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

DENNISPORT, Mass., Feb. 1st.

Bro. Blair:—The Massachusetts district conference closed last Monday, and was one of the most peaceable and profitable ever held in this district, to my knowledg at least. At the business session of last Saturday, Bro. John Smith tendered his resignation as district president, having served about eight years, which service has been faithfully, honorably and gentlemanly rendered. A vote of thanks was extended to him by the conference.

Brother Thomas Whiting also resigned as district clerk. Bro. Myron H. Bond was unanimously elected as Bro. Smith's successor, and Bro. Geo. Gates succeeded Bro. Whitney as clerk.

On Sunday evening elder E. L. Kelley preached a practical sermon on the tithing question, Elder W. H. Kelley, M. H. Bond and F. M. Sheeby preached during and subsequent to conference. The chapel was well filled and sometimes crowded at the preaching services.

Last Thursday morning seventeen of the Saints went to East Dennis, about seven miles distant, in a large party wagon, and we were pleasantly entertained by Sr. Abbie Chace, and Bro. and Sr. John Sears. Some of the party made a call on Sr. Jeressa Sears, who has been confined to her home three or four months by sickness. In the afternoon Brn. Sheehy and Bond conducted a social meeting at the home of the aged Bro. and Sr. Luther Sears. The Holy Spirit was present in power to confirm us in this glorious truth of the latter days.

The view of Barnstable Bay from the top of East Dennis hill is quite picturesque. We returned to Dennisport in the evening and a numof the Saints went to the Holiness church and after the members of the latter body had testified, liberty of speech was granted to those not of their number, a privilege never before granted, especially when any of the Saints were present.

Bro. F. M. Sheehy responded and expressed his appreciation of the liberties extended. He said: "I see one peculiar feature of your testimonies is that you know you are saved. Now I like this 'know.' But I meet with Quakers and Catholics and they say they are saved. But I prefer the Bible method." Bro. Wellington Bearse also gave in his testimony at the above meeting. We had one of the best social meetings here (Attleboro) yesterday afteenoon that we have enjoyed for a long time. One lady expressed a desire for baptism. Bro. Charles Coombs preached to us in the evening, and also administererd the sacrament. Expect to be at General Conference. Would like the address of some of the Brooklyn Saints, as I expect stop there the first or second Sunday in March on my way to the west.

Yours in the glorious hope,

ARTHUR B. PIERCE.

EUREKA, Cal., Feb 4th.

Bro. Blair:—My health has been quite poor lately; but thank the Lord he has heard the prayer of faith and I am much better. Bro. Daley and I are preaching here to small congregations with good attention. Four have been baptized—some of the effects of seed sown long years ago by others. We will continue as long as the interest will justify. The Saints are, as a general thing, showing a greater interest and taking a higher stand than ever before in this part if I am rightly informed. Yours,

A. Haws.

NEWARK, Dakota, Jan. 30th.

Editors Herald: -God in his divine wisdom has seen fit to prolong my days. I am now in my seventy-seventh year, and, thanks be to Almighty God, I am permitted to hand to the editors of the Herald my feeble testimony. Blessed be the name of the Lord! I am able to say that I am at home with the children of God. I became a member of the Free-will Baptists when in my eighteenth year. I continued with them until I became acquainted with the Firstday Adventists. I thought they were nearer the truth and joined them, but not feeling satisfied I began to lean towards the Seventh-day Adventists. But my soul was not satisfied; there was something lacking and what it was I knew not. I wanted to be child of God but my soul could not get that nourishment required; nor could I feel safe in saving, "It is well with my soul." I knew that I had not complied with all the requirements of the Master and that the churches I attended did not teach them; nor did they tell what I must do to be saved. But thanks be to our heavenly Father, praise His holy name, He has at last heard and answered my prayers; and in my old age led me to this new country where I would find his servants and be told what to do When I heard of the Mormons I to be saved. had no use for them and did not pay any attention to them, supposing of course they were Utah Mormons. But my son Charles and wife attended their meetings and spoke well of them so my wife and I went. And that Sunday was sacrament and testimony meeting, Bro. Robert Oehring presiding elder. We found the Saints all happy, and the manner in which the meeting was conducted, the Spirit of God working with them rather pleased me. We went again; then the elder, learning that I was quite deaf, kindly invited me to sit on a chair in the stand so I could hear all that was said. We were told what to do to be saved, and, thanks be to God, my wife and I heard the voice of the Good Shepherd and knew it and were baptized. My daughter and son will soon be baptized, and I hope all my children will also be. I have received more light in the short time I have been with the Saints than I have in all my past life. I may read the Bible where I will and I find that the Saints of God teach it—the gospel is taught in all its fullness. A short time ago while at family worship the Spirit of the Lord came over me. Oh, dear Saints, I was the happiest man on earth. Let us be strong and faithful to the end.

Yours in Christ,

STEPHEN HUNTLY.

Bro. Dancer:—Bro. W. Newton is with us in London and is meeting with success, fixing up well, and baptizing a few. He has done the branch a vast amount of good by his wise counsel and firmness of speech. He has the spirit of his calling. I think I can safely say that our London branch is on a better understanding than before. It bids fair for good work in the near future. I remain your brother,

DEATH.

The fiat of death is inexorable. There is no appeal for relief from the great law which dooms us to dust. We flourish and fade as the leaves of the forest, and the flowers that bloom and wither in a day have no frailer hold upon life than the mightiest monarch that ever shook the earth with his footsteps. Generations of men will appear as the grass, and the multitudes who throng the world to-day, will disappear as footsteps on the shore.

Men seldom think of the great event of death, until the shadow falls across their pathway, hiding from their eyes the faces of loved ones whose living smile was the sunlight of their existence. Death is the antagonist of life, and the thought of the tomb is the skeleton of all feasts. We do not want to go through the dark valley, although the passage may lead to Paradise. We do not want to go down into deep graves, even with princes for bed-fellows.

In the beautiful drama of "Ion," the hope of immortality, so eloquently uttered by the death-devoted Greek, finds deep response in every thoughtful mind. When about to yield his life a sacrifice to fate, his "Clemanthe" asks if they should meet again, to which he responds: "I have asked that dreadful question of the hills that look eternal—of the clear streams that flow forever—of the stars among whose fields of azure my raised spirits have walked in glory. All are dumb. But as I gaze upon thy living face, I feel that there is something in love that mantles through its beauty that cannot wholly perish. We shall meet again, Clemanthe."—Geo. D. Prentice.

Ir any one speaks ill of thee, flee home to thy own conscience, and examine thy heart; and if thou be guilty, it is a just correction; if not guilty, it is a fair instruction; make use of both, so that shalt thou distil honey out of gall, and out of an open enemy create a secret friend.—Quarles.

BISHOP McILVAINE'S ESSAY ON THE BIBLE.

[WE herewith present to the readers of the HERALD an essay from the pen of Charles P. McIlvaine, an eminent clergyman of Ohio, which we take from Delafield's work entitled "An inquiry into the Origin of the Antiquities of America," which was published in 1839, at New York, London and Paris. The essay was published as an introduction to Delafield's work. It contains so many valuable outlines of evidences in favor of the Bible and Book of Mormon that we regard it as a valuable document. As the work is now out of print and accessible to but few, we publish it for the benefit of those who have not had the opportunity of perusing the work referred to. It will probably be followed by other choice extracts from Delafield's and others works upon the same subject.—Eds. HERALD.]

PREFACE.

BY THE RIGHT REV. CHAS. P. McILVAINE, D. D. BISHOP OF THE DIOCESE OF OHIO.

WHAT a wonderful book is the Bible! But what connection has the Bible with American Antiquities? Because of all Antiquities, it is the most valuable and marvelous specimen; because with all antiquities it is associated in the most important and interesting relations; because the most valuable discoveries in antiquity must appeal to the Bible for interpretation; and the registers of long lost events and generations, inscribed upon the rocks and buried in the fossil remains of far distant ages, or scattered far and wide in the ruins of once mighty empires, are so many witnesses, constantly multiplying, to the history contained in the Bible.

As a specimen of antiquity, what is comparable in point of interest with this Book? Suppose that in searching the tu; muli that are scattered so widely over this country, the silent, aged, mysterious remembrancers of some populous race, once carrying on all the business of life where now are only the wild forests of many centuries, a race of whom we ask so often, who they were, whence they came, whither they went; suppose that under one of those huge structures of earth which remain of their works, a book were discovered, an alphabetic history of that race for a thousand years, containing their written language, and examples of their poetry and other literature, and all underiably composed many hundreds of years before any of the nations now possessing this continent were here! What a wonder

What intense interest would this be! would attach to such a relic! What price would not the learned be willing to give What fragments of Egyptian inscriptions; what unintelligible characters among the ruins of Belus; what remains from the bowels of the earth, telling of some ancient convulsion of its rocks, could be compared in value to such a specimen of the mind, the language, the literature, such a detailed history of the deeds of a nation otherwise unheard of? But much more than this is the Bible. It contains histories, specimens of literature, examples of poetry and eloquence, unquestionably written some eight hundred years before the writing of the oldest book of any description which the literature of the world has preserved. Greece was a land of barbarians for many centuries after Moses composed his history of the world and of Israel. There is no evidence that alphabetic writing was known when he wrote, except among the nation over which he ruled.

But then, what should we know of the history of the world, and its nations for three thousand years, if all that has been derived exclusively from the Bible were obliterated from all memories and all books? Where should we go for knowledge of that immense extent of time-one half of the age of the world? To the most ancient nations, the Babylonians, the Egyptians, the Phenicians? Alas, it is all wilderness there; a few fragments of pretended annals, which, like the gloomy remains upon the plains of Shinar, can neither be referred to the right place in chronology, nor interpreted so as to give them their right estimate in point of truth; mere continuation of the confusion of tongues at Babel. Do we inquire of Egyptian literature for an ancient book containing authentic details of far ancient times? We are referred only to Manetho. But he wrote so late as the third century before Christ. All his professed authority was certain sacred inscriptions on pillars, which probably never existed. And nothing is extant, of even such history, but a few inconsiderable fragments. We enquire next of Babylonian literature; and are told only of Berosus, a Priest of Belus. When did he write? No one knows, except that it was somewhere in the period of the Macedonian dynasties. What remains of his writing? A few fragments preserved by Josephus, Eusebius and Tatian; of value indeed, because confirming the history in the Bible, but almost useless, without that his-We enquire next of Phenician history and are referred only to the work of Sanchoniathon, famous for having been used by Porphyry, (the shrewdest antagonist Christianity ever had) in opposition to the writings of Moses. What remains of it now? One book only, and that upon the Phenician theology, and of course full of fable; and as a history, unaided by any better, useless. But does Greece, ancient, classic, learned Greece furnish nothing more valuable concerning the first three thousand years of the world? Alas, of Greek historians, the antiquity of the oldest, whose names have been preserved, does not much exceed the times of Cyrus and Cambyses. Of many of these, we have only their names; no knowledge even of their subject. Of the remainder, nothing extant is older than the Persian war. And of that nothing is to be depended on, connected with times prior to the Peloponesian war. Thucydides asserts, and proves this: "The matter preceding that time, (about four hundred and four years B. C.), can not now, through the length of time, be accurately discovered by us." Plutarch, in writing of the earlier periods, has to "implore the candor of his readers, and their kind allowance for the tales of antiquity." "As geographers thrust into the extremities of their maps, those countries that are unknown to them, remarking, at the same time, that all bevond is hills of sand, and haunts of wild beasts, frozen seas, marshes and mountains that are inaccessible to human courage, or industry; so, in comparing the lives of illustrious men, when I have passed through those periods of time which may be described with probability, and where history may find firm footing in facts, I may say of the remoter ages that all beyond is full of prodigy and fiction, the regions of poets, and fabulists, wrapt in clouds, and unworthy of belief."

So said that learned Bootian, who knew not the Scriptures. So appeared to him the history of more than three thousand years of the world. Such also would it be to us, were we destitute of the Bible. Just as we now wander among the mysterious remains of the race which once possessed all this land, and pausing beneath some lofty mound, crested with sturdy oaks, which have stood for centuries and are now nourished with the decayed materials of a former generation; or, measuring the exact angles and regular outlines of some vast system of warlike defence, for which the traditions of no race now known among us have the least explanation, are deeply impressed with the evidence that we are constantly walking over the graves of an immense population, and pained with a sense of utter darkness, as to everything connected with them, except that they bequeathed to posterity those existing and confounding traces of their existence; so precisely should we be situated, with regard to all the human race, and all the mightiest changes in the surface of the globe, were we, as Plutarch was, destitute of all that history for which we are exclusively indebted to the Old Testament Scriptures. We should have the tumuli which, from the days of Homer to the present, have been seen on the plains of Troy; the frightful heaps of desolation on the foundations of Babel; the ruined tombs, temples and pyramids of ancient Egypt, sculptured with characters, which curiosity has decyphered, only to be disappointed; the gigantic remains of distant antiquity in India, as silent and gloomy as the quarried temple of Elephanta; to such as these the geologists might add their theories of mighty convulsions in nature, and immense periods of time; and in the midst of all, the several traditions of the nations might be heard speaking with a confusion of tongues which would do credit to an ancient emigration from Babel, each needing an interpreter nearly as much as the secrets it pretends to unveil; so that were we to attempt from such sources, an account of the progress of the human family during the vast period we have mentioned, what better could we do, than imitate the geographer, and write terra incognita over the whole. The curious hieroglyphic map connected with this work, intended doubtless for a history of a numerous people, great movements, long periods, divers changes, wars, afflictions, successes: intended, moreover, to teach something of the geography, natural history, and vegetable productions, of the countries in which they occurred, but so curiously blind, may be taken as no inappropriate illustration of the plainest traces we could discover under such circumstances, of all that transpired from the creation of man, through more than thirty centuries of his posterity. Yes, the whole reason of the wide difference, between our present chart of the history of man, during all that period, and the chart contained in this volume, is founded in the knowledge for which we are indebted alone to the Bible.

But exceedingly insignificant as are all resources for the earliest history of the world independently of the Bible, they may be of great consequence in connection with the Bible. They may add no facts to what it contains, but they may contradict or confirm what it contains. A single line of inscription upon a Theban tomb; a bone dug up from the depths of the earth; a stratum of rock, or rubbish, discovered in the interior of a mountain, may add very little to our knowledge of facts, illustrating the history of the globe; but it will become of great importance, if it conflict, or harmonize, with any statements which Moses, professing to write under divine inspiration has recorded. One discovery of the Antiquarian, or the geologist perfectly authenticated, accurately interpreted, certainly speaking the truth, and certainly contradictory to the Mosaic record; what an evidence against his inspiration! Then how singularly has the Bible exposed itself to attack; what an immense frontier has it had to defend; what a chain of posts in the wilderness to protect. Relating minutely the most important events, from the creation of the world, for several thousand years; events, such as tradition, and inscriptions, and monuments, and strata of the earth, if they speak of anything, can hardly avoid recording, in some shape or other; thus, coming into contact with all the researches of literature and science at innumerable points, and inviting investigation; challenging attack along the whole line of its details; what book in such circumstances, and from so distant an age, could stand such a trial, were it not inspired? It would be wonderful, could we only say that every search into tradition; every interpretation of inscriptions; every trace of nations; every remnant of ancient history; every development of the geology of the earth, has failed to contradict the history in the Bible. We go much farther. It | has continually been adding new confirmations to that history. Assaults have often been made; fears excited; pœans sung; but when the smoke of the artillery had blown off, truth has always appeared, as ever, resting her right hand upon the Bible; so that now after a trial of more than three thousand years since the first book of Scripture was written, the people of God may exclaim in triumph: "Walk about Zion—tell the towers thereof; mark ye well her bulwarks;—God will establish it forever."

Hume asserted that the Books of Moses are "corroborated by no concurring testimony." Dr. Campbell answered: "As little is it invalidated by any contradicting testimony; and both for this plain reason, because there is no human composition that can be compared with this, in respect of antiquity." But are the books of Moses without collateral evidence? Thales measured the height of the pyramids, by the length of their shadows. What if we measure the truth of the facts, narrated by Moses, by the number and variety of the traditions, among all nations, concerning them? Traditions have been distinctly traced, in opposite regions of the globe, and in the most unconnected nations, of the creation; of the production of all living creatures out of water by the power of the Supreme Mind; the formation of man, last, in the image of God, and his being invested with dominion over all other animals; the primitive state of innocence and happiness; Paradise; the Sabbath; the division of time into weeks; the fall of man; (the mother of mankind is represented in American tradition as fallen and accompanied by a serpent); the promise of a de-liverer; Cain and Abel; the general degeneracy of mankind; the longevity of the Patriarchs; the general deluge; the escape of only a single family in an ark; the dove sent out by Noah; the rainbow as a sign; the number of persons in the ark; the Tower of Babel; the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah—these with divers circumstances and details illustrating the main particulars. So remarkable were the traditions of several of these facts, among the inhabitants of America, at the time of the Spanish conquest, that the priests who accompanied the army, were induced to suppose that Christianity, or at least Judaism, had been inculcated among them at some very distant period. Humboldt, however, sees no need of such explanation "since similar traditions, (he says) of high and venerable antiquity, are found among the followers of Brama, and among the Shamans of the eastern steppes of Tar-

The traditions of the deluge are particularly numerous. They are derived from the oldest nations of antiquity—the Chaldeans, Egyptians, Greeks (and mentioned by Berosus, Hesiod, Plato, Plutarch, Lucian, &c.), as well as from people the most recently discovered; as the natives of North and South America and of the islands of the South Sea. The Antipodes of the earth unite in testimony to the deluge. Chinese and Sanscrit literature concurs with Chilian and Peruvian and Mexican tradition in bearing witness to that catastrophe. Among the natives of America it is commemorated by a fable similar to that of Pyrrha and Deucalion. "These ancient traditions of the human race (says Humboldt) which we find dispersed over the surface of the globe, like the fragments of a vast shipwreck, are of the greatest interest in the philosophical study of our species. Like certain families of plants, which notwithstanding the diversity of climates and the influence of heights, retain the impress of a common type, the traditions respecting the primitive state of the globe present among all nations a resemblance that fills us with astonishment; so many different languages belonging to branches which appear to have no connection with each other, transmit the same facts to us. The substance of the tradiditions respecting the destroyed races, and the renovation of nature, is everywhere almost the same; although each nation gives it a local coloring. In the great continents, as well as in the smallest islands of the Pacific Ocean, it is always on the highest and nearest mountain, that the remains of the human race were saved: and this event appears so much the more recent, the more uncultivated the nations are, and the shorter the period since they began to acquire a knowledge of themselves. When we attentively examine the Mexican monuments, anterior to the discovery of America; penetrate into the forests of the Orinoco, and become aware of the smallness of the European establishments, their solitude and the state of the tribes which retain their independence; we can not allow ourselves to attribute the agreement of those accounts to the influence of missionaries and to that of Christianity upon national traditions."

Singular, also, is the concurrence of tradition as to the era of the deluge. Cuvier remarks that the famous astronomical tables of the Hindoos, from which such distant antiquity has been inferred, were calculated backwards. Speaking of the agreement as to the period of the renewal of mankind, he says: "It is not to be conceived that mere chance should have given rise to so striking a coincidence between the traditions of the Assyrians, the Hindoos and the Chinese, in attributing the origins of their respective monarchies so nearly to the same epoch, of about four thousand years before the present day. The ideas of these three nations, which are so entirely dissimilar in language, religion and laws, could not have so exactly agreed on this point, unless it had been founded on truth." Again, the same writer: "All nations which possess any records of any ancient traditions, declare that they have been recently renewed after a grand revolution in nature. This concurrence of historical and traditionary testimonies respecting a comparatively recent renewal of the human race, and their agreement with the proofs that are furnished by the operations of nature, might certainly warrant us in refraining from the examination of certain equivocal monuments which have been brought forward by some authors in support of a contrary opinion. But even this examination, to judge of it by some attempts already made, will probably do nothing else than add some more proofs to that which is furnished by tradition."

Baron Cuvier discovers testimony confirming the Mosaic era of the deluge, in the researches of geology. The following is taken from a report of a course of lectures of that distinguished naturalist in the Edinburg New Philosophical Journal for January, 1830: "While the traditions of all nations have preserved the remembrance of a great catastrophe, the deluge, which changed the earth's surface, and destroyed nearly the whole of the human species, geology apprizes us, that of the various revolutions which have agitated our globe, the last evidently corresponds to the period which is assigned to the deluge.

"We say, that by means of geological considerations alone, it is possible to determine the date of this great event with some degree of precision.

"There are certain formations which must have commenced immediately after the last catastrophe, and which from that period have been continued up to the present day with great regularity. Such are the deposits of detritus, observed at the mouths of rivers, the masses of rubbish which exist at the foot of mountains, and are formed of the fragments that fall from the summits and sides. These deposits receive a yearly increase, which it is possible to measure. Nothing, therefore, is more easy than to calculate the time which it has taken them to acquire their present dimensions. This calculation has been made with reference to the debris of mountains; and in all cases has indicated a period of about four thousand years. The same result has been obtained from the other alluvial deposits. In short, whatever may have been the natural phenomenon that has been interrogated, it has always been found to give evidence in accordance with that of tradition. The traditions themselves exhibit the most astonishing conformity. The Hebrew text of Genesis places the deluge in the year 2349 before Christ. The Indians make the fourth age of the world, that in which we now live, commence in the year 3012. The Chinese place it about the year 2384. Confucius in fact, represents the first King Yeo, occupied in drawing off the waters of the ocean, which had risen to the tops of the mountains, and in repairing the damage which they had caused."

The age of the world is another topic on which ingenious and diligent efforts have been made with a view of discrediting the Mosaic writings. In vain, however, have the bowels of the earth and all the discoveries of modern science been ransacked, for the purpose of fastening a single mistake upon the Jewish Legislator. "If more time be required to account for appearances in the interior of the globe than the six thousand years, since the formation of man, more time may be taken, yea as much as can possibly be required by the most covetous advocate of demiurgic ages, without the least contradiction to the Mosaic narrative of the creation." We would adopt the statement, which has been increasingly adopted and supported by our divines, that the two first verses of the book of Genesis have no immediate connection with those that follow. They describe the first creation of matter; but so far as anything to the contrary is stated, a million of ages may have elapsed between this first creation, and God's saying "Let there be light," and proceeding to mould matter into a dwelling place for man. You can not show that the third verse is necessarily consecutive on the two first, so that what is recorded in the one may not be separated, by a long interval, from what is recorded in the others. On the contrary, it is clear that the interval may be wholly indefinite, quite as long as geology can possibly ask for all those mighty transformations, those ponderous successions, of which it affirms that it can produce indubitable evidence. Creation was the act of bringing out of nothing the matter of which all things were constructed; and this was done before the six days; afterwards, and during the six days, God made the heaven and the earth; He moulded, that is, formed into different bodies the matter which he had long ago created. We seem, therefore, warranted in saving that with the third verse of the first chapter of Genesis, commences the account of the production of the present order and system of things; and that to this Moses confines himself, describing the earth as made ready for man, without stopping to speak of its previous conditions. But since he does not associate the first creation of matter with this preparation of the globe for its rational inhabitants, he in no degree opposes the supposition that the globe existed immeasurably before man, and underwent a long series of revolutions.

"For our own part, we have no fear that any discoveries of science will really militate against the disclosures of the Scriptures. We remember how in darker days, ecclesiastics set themselves against philosophers, who were investigating the motions of the heavenly bodies, apprehensive that the new theories were at variance with the Bible, and therefore resolved to denounce them as heresies, and stop their spread by persecution. truth triumphed; bigotry and ignorance could not long prevail to the hiding from the world the harmonious walkings of stars and planets; and ever since, the philosophy which laid open the wonders of the universe, hath proved herself the handmaid of the revelation which divulged secrets far beyond her gaze. And thus we are persuaded shall it always be; science may scale new heights, and explore new depths; but she shall bring back nothing from her daring and successful excursions, which will not, when rightly understood, yield a fresh tribute of testimony to the Bible. Infidelity may watch her progress with eagerness, exulting in the thought that she is furnishing facts with which the Christian system may be strongly assailed; but the champions of revelation may confidently attend her in every march, assured that she will find nothing which contradicts, if it do not actually confirm, the word which they know to be divine."*

In these sentiments, we entirely concur. Times will doubtless come, again and again, when, in consequence of imperfect investigations, hasty theories and rash conclusions, the calm surface of a settled belief in the unvaried accuracy of the inspired record, as to matters of fact, connected with science or the original circumstances of mankind, may in some minds, be troubled, and the progress of religion, founded upon such belief, be threatened with sform and wreck; but the Lord is in the ship, and in his time will rebuke the wind and waves, and the little faith of his people, and the light of truth shall shine out, as when "the Lord looked unto the host of the Egyptians, through the pillar of fire and of the cloud, and troubled their host, and took off their chariot wheels." The Bible asks nothing but matured, accurate investigatigations of all departments of knowledge connected with its statements, whether in the traditions of nations, the phenomena of the elements. or the registers of geology.

The Antiquities of America are an immense field for inquiry, hardly entered; abounding in promise of reward for the most devoted investigations. Let it be thoroughly explored for the truth's sake. The Scriptures have yet to gather a richer cabinet of illustrative and corroborating collections from the long buried and unknown depositories of American Antiquity.

In reference to the question, whether all the races of men have descended from one common stock, the Antiquities of this continent are specially interesting, and may prove of very great value. It is a question, indeed, forever settled by the researches of Bryant, Faber and Sir William Jones: "The dark Negro, the white European, and the swarthy Asiatic, being plainly traced to their respective ancestors in the family of Noah." But much confirmatory testimony may yet be obtained. The contingent of America to the host of evidence already in array is yet to take its entire place in the line. If the present volume shall only increase the ardor of investigation and the number of minds turning their energies upon the disinterment of the buried antiquarian treasures of this continent, it will do a good work and deserve the thanks of all lovers of truth.

DEFENSIVE.

In the Herald for last January 12th and 19th, my pamphlet, entitled "Whitmerism Unmasked," was investigated, and an error regarding Dr. W. E. McLellin pointed out. I acknowledge that error, and feel very sorry it occurred. It was unintentional. I believe that truth needs not to be bolstered with wrong statements but will ride triumphantly over error; hence in addition to what has already been given in the Herald, I wish to say that my statement that Mr. McLellin was baptized by Brighamite authority, was based upon a statement in the Herald for June 4th, 1887 that he was baptized on the 13th of February, 1847; and that I concluded, (as did also several prominent elders who have since written to me regarding the matter, besides some with whom I have conversed) that he was so baptized. I do not state these things, however, to justify myself in the error committed, or to throw the responsibility of it on others. I should have been positive before I wrote. But seeing the error has occurred, I willingly "make the plaster as large sas the wound," and hence I use the Herald to correct the blunder.

But I do not propose to submit to undue criticism, and hence I call attention to an article in "The Return" by E. Robinson, a very weak defense of Whitmerism.

Mr. Robinson does not tell where Mr. McLellin was baptized, or whether the man baptizing him was a Brighamite, Strangite, Brewesterite or Rigdonite. But granting he was not a Brighamite, the question arises: "By what authority was he baptized?" I have been credibly informed he was baptized by a person who had been expelled from the old organization. If this be true, I can't see that he was in any better condition than though he had been baptized by the Brighamites. For the old organization being the Church of Christ, she certainly, in the act of excommunication, annulled any and all authority previously conferred, upon the ground that "Whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever thou shall lose on earth shall be loosed in heaven."—Matt. 16:19; John 20:23. Upon the other hand, if she was not the church, then she conferred no divine authority upon him. Hence, no matter which horn of the dilemma is chosen, it still leaves Mr. McLellin outside of the Church of Christ. And if so, was David Whitmer baptized by divine authority when receiving immersion at the hands of Dr. McLellin? David Whitmer was baptized by a man who had no authority; then by virtue of what baptism or what line of authority can the Whitmerites claim valid baptism? It can not be traced to and through the baptism David Whitmer received at the hands of Joseph Smith in 1829, for he was expelled from the church April 13th, 1838. Besides this, David Whitmer acknowledged being legally expelled from the church in 1838 by being rebaptized in 1847 by Dr. Mc-Lellin. Hence, being legally expelled, (which he in his second immersion acknowledges), he was then outside the church, and if admitted again it must be through the ordinance of baptism—the door-for he that "climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber."-John 10:1. Baptism, be it remembered, is not the mere dipping of a person under water; but to make immersion valid baptism it must be administered by divine authority. And as we have seen the faulty channel of authority through and by which the Whitmerites are immersed, and find it without divine and regular authority, does it not follow that they have not I been legally baptized—have not come in through "the door," but are trying to "climb up some other way," and are woefully deceived? This, in either case, leaves them outside of Christ's Church.

This may seem harsh to some; but be it remembered that Jesus said, "Strive to enter in at the strait gait; for many I say unto you shall seek to enter in and shall not be able."-Luke 13:24. And Paul tells us the reason why those striving shall not obtain, it is because they do not "strive lawfully."-2 Tim. 2:5.

Mr. Robinson says that "not less than one hundred and eighty columns of the Saints' Herald have been devoted to the subject." Very well, large space was given to print documents for the Whitmerites, and large space was required to refute them. Does it therefore follow that the latter was devoted for any other reason than to show errors and the "inward corruptions" of Whitmerism? No other paper would have published the Whitmerite documents as did the Herald; and when it did so it was bound to faithfully expose its cant, false reasonings, false applications of Scripture and history, and frankly puncture its shallow sophistry and show up its dangerous deceptiveness to the satisfaction of all fair minded people.

But now to show how little confidence is to be placed in the views, opinions and statements of Mr. E. Robinson I call attention to The Return where he seeks to sustain the position of the Whitmerites where they deny that Jesus is the Christ by making garbled quotations from W. P. Brown's pamphlet. My quotation he calls a "partial quotation," and says: "Now we will give you the quotation from W.P. Brown's pamphlet, No. 1, page 10, as it reads;" and yet his pretended verbatim quotation leaves out nineteen words! These words are left out of his pretended verbatim quotation. O, for shame! Why did you leave out those words, Mr. Robinson? Evidently because they prove what I set forth in my pamphlet, and you, realizing that fact, craftily attempted to lead your readers away from the issue and deceive them by leaving out those nineteen words. They prove just what I claimed in my pamphlet, that the Whitmerites deny that Jesus was the Christ, for the words "Christ offered up the man Jesus," prove it. Mr. Brown argued that Jesus was not the Christ, but that "Christ offered up the man Jesus.'

But, Mr. Robinson, I will prove from your own quotation from Mr. Brown's pamphlet that the Whitmerites deny that Fesus is the Christ. You quote as follows: "We must pray to the Father in that name, baptize, &c., in the name of Jesus. But when we come to the name of the church, it must be called after the Son of God." Mark the statement, they "pray, baptize, &c.," in the name of Fesus, but call the church after the Son of God, which is equivalent to saying that Jesus was not and is not the Son of God. Brown says (and Robinson endorses him), "I also object to the name of Jesus as part of the name of Christ's church." Here you have them denying again that Jesus was and is the Son of God. But the Scriptures say emphatically, "That holy thing which shall be born of thee [Mary] shall be called the Son of God."—Luke 1: 35. Thus the angel declared, and the Scriptures record it that Jesus was and is the Son of God, yet Brown & Co. object to the name of Jesus forming a part of the name of the church, because the church "must be called after the Son of God." But let us look further at Robinson's quotation from Brown's pamphlet: "Jesus was the son of Mary, Christ was the Son of God." These words deny Jesus being the Christ. They tell us, in effect, that while Jesus was the the son of Mary, yet he was not the Christ, for "Christ was the Son of God." Here, then, in his own quotation from W. P. Brown, is a flat denial that Jesus is the Christ. And John says: "Who is a liar but he that denieth that Jesus is the Christ." -I John 2: 22.

I wish it understood that I, in my pamphlet, do not claim that the Whitmerites disclaim the name of Jesus altogether. I merely show that, in their argument that "Jesus was the son of Mary," while "Christ was the Son of God," they do deny that Jesus is the Christ. It is true they claim to baptize in the name of Jesus. But if Jesus is not the Christ as they argue, and as they baptize in the name of Yesus, then according to their own logic they do not baptize into Christ, and hence are outside of Christ, for the Scriptures say that only "As many of you who have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ.'

—Gal. 3:27.

One thing is very noticeable, that their efforts at proselyting is confined, mostly, in a few branches of the Reorganized Church. But it is consoling to know that the most of these (but not all) whom they succeed in getting to swallow their contradictory, foolish trash, are unstable, conceited, ignorant, lawless, spiritless, cranky persons, whose domineering proclivities unfit them for the society of well informed Saints, or they pick up those cut off the church for adultery or other rank evils. But we read that God "will gather out of his kingdom all those that offend, and them that do iniquity. Perchance Whitmerism may be of use to "gather out" the unworthy, that the Lord may preserve unto himself "a pure people." Perhaps we should not hinder this work, other than to see that the honest-hearted are not deceived.

PROCRASTINATION.

PROBABLY no one evil so enthralls and enslaves the souls and bodies of men as that of procastination. Other evils may, as a rule, be detected at a glance; but this one is so insidious that it seems to need especial mention, just as a hidden pitfall needs an extra signboard. "Time enough yet," is the old argument which Satan has used to entrap the sons of men, no doubt ever since the world was created. And, notwithstanding the accumulated and constantly increasing weight of evidence which goes to show the fallacy of such reasoning, no bait which he has to offer is so greedily bitten at by old and young as that which tends to procrastination.

We were highly edified by an article called "Triune Baptism," published in a late number of the Herald. A few thoughts suggested by its teachings may not be out of place here. The writer took the position that the earth, cursed on account of man's transgression, is included in the vast plan of human redemption; and that in working out this far-reaching plan, the earth, in common with mankind, would undergo, first, the baptism of water, (the flood); second, the baptism of the Spirit, when God's Spirit will be poured out upon all flesh; and, third, the baptism of fire at the end of the thousand years, when the earth is purified by fire, and raised to her celestial or crystalized state.

We perfectly agree with this writer in the magnificent scheme he has so beautifully presented. We have held the same for years, but in reading his excellent article some thoughts presented themselves in connection therewith that we thought might be beneficial to others.

Suppose, for instance, that men in the antediluvian age of the world had said, "What need is there of our being baptized with water for the remission of our sins? There is a universal baptism coming bye and bye and then we shall get the benefit of water baptism without any volition on our part." And so they did; but we find And so they did; but we find these same men in prison over two thousand years after that, when Christ preached the gospel to them after his crucifixion. (See 1 Pet. 1:18-20), and all because of their procrastination! Think of a jail sentence of two thousand years, and just because of a little pleasure of a few short years of vanity upon earth! And then suppose that Christ had ascended to the Father instead of going to preach to those imprisoned spirits, and sitting calmly down upon his throne, had said: "I have had a pretty hard time of it. Now I guess I will rest awhile before I preach to those spirits in prison. There is time enough yet." How differently would these words have sounded to the antediluvians under such excruciating circumstances, to what they did as they were revelling in sin and basking in iniquity! And yet they would have been just as consistent and just as righteous under the latter as under the former circumstances.

How prone men are to note the sins of their forefathers and commit the same themselves! Let us see if there is not some lesson that we may learn from the antediluvian world. We have supposed them as waiting for the universal baptism of water. We do not think this supposition at all improbable, judging from human nature in general, and from the experiences of these individuals in particular. But now suppose we should commit the same error and wait for the universal baptism of the Spirit. How much better would we fare? We read of those of the telestial world that they were those who knew only of the Spirit, and who were cast down to hell. It is possible for us to receive this universal (world's) baptism of the Spirit and yet be "thrust down to hell."

Let us bear in mind that those universal baptisms are for the world and the world's people; and they will receive them at their appointed time. But for the Lord's people, for those who can exercise faith, it is recorded in the sacred word, "To-day is the day of salvation."

Away back as early as the time of Enoch, he and all his people received the complete work of the plan of salvation, even to translation by faith."—Heb. II:5. Then let us not be backward in asking of God for such things as we need, remembering that he has promised to give "grace and glory, and no good thing will he withhold from those who walk uprightly." Even so, Amen.

Any person who can give us any information of the whereabouts of any or all of the brethren whose names are below, will please inform Arthur Allen, secretary of the First Kansas City branch, 1320, East 23d street, Kansas City, Mo. William E. Crumb, Alma Caudwell, and George H. Dunham.

BORN.

January 11th, 1889, to John R. and Mary M. Allen, a son, named Thomas Lot Allen.

MARRIED.

McKee.—Stephenson.—At the residence of the groom's parents, three miles north of Stewartsville, Mo., at one o'clock Sunday, February 3d, 1889, Bro. William McKee and Sr. Ina Stephenson, both of DeKalb county, were united in the bonds of matrimony by Elder D. E. Powell, in the presence of a house full of relatives and friends, after which many congratulations were given the happy pair, and a bountious dinner served.

Lydic.—Wayt.—Near Glen Easton, Marshall county, West Virginia, Christmas day, 1888, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. Jacob S. Lydic to Sr. Amanda J. Wayt, Elder James Brown officiating. May peace and joy attend their pathway through life.

DIED.

PERKINS.—At her home in Lucas, Iowa, of old age and general debility, Sr. Louisa L. Perkins, wife of Bro. James Perkins, Dec. 13th, 1889. She was born Dec. 9th, 1824, at Trowbridge, Wellshire, England, and united with the church at an early date and went with others to Utah; but on Oct. 22d, 1862, she received the Reorganized Church and proved faithful until her decease. Her experience has been long and full of incidents of interest; and having tasted of the wormwood and gall hidden in the "vallies of the mountains," she could well appreciate the claims of the Reorganization. Funeral services were conducted by John Watkins, Sr.

GOODE:—On January 16th, 1889, Bro. John Goode, at his residence, near Tabor, Iowa. He was born March 28th, 1817, at North Hampton, England; was baptized May 16th, 1875, by E. C. Brand and ordained to the office of an elder, September 26th 1875, under the hand of T. W. Smith. Bro. Goode lived a life worthy of his profession. He was consistent, just, and honorable, and through a godly life and Christian deportment gained the confidence and esteem of all the Saints who knew him. He sought to magnify his calling to the best of his ability, and died firm in the faith, having a strong hope of the resurrection of the just. He told the writer that he wanted it stated at his funeral that he was a firm believer in the gospel of Christ, and had within him the assurance of all that God had promised through obedience to his truth.

Funeral services were conducted and sermon preached by Elder William Leeka, at the residence of the deceased, to a large circle of relatives and friends. His remains were interred in the Tabor Cemetery. Thus has gone to the paradise of God another of Israel's noble chieftains. He leaves behind a loving and faithful wife, six sons and five daughters, who keenly feel their loss, but mourn not as those without hope.

RICHARD.—Mrs Margaret, wife of David Richard, died Jan. 5th, 1888, and was buried at Reno, Washo county, Nevada. She was 72 years of age, and was born in Aberdare, Glanmorgan shire, South Wales. She had four children, two boys and two girls, the two girls and one son are living.

RASMUSSEN.—At Omaha, Neb, Sunday, February 3d, 1889, Sister Christina Rasmussen, of dropsy of the heart. She was born in Copenhagen, Denmark, November 9th, 1823, and had a life of trial but was faithful unto death. Several days before she died having called her daughter to her bedside, told her of the beauties of the other world which her heavenly Father had permitted her to see, and telling her she wished to go—it was such a beautiful place—and that she also saw her husband there. Funeral service by Bro. Nicholas Rumel, on the 6th inst., in Saints' chapel.

OBITUARY.

Scott.—At Lamoni, Iowa, on the morning of February 9, 1889, of heart disease and brain fever, Bro. John William, only son of Bro. John Scott, foreman of the Herald Office, aged 19 years, 9 months and 7 days. His illness was but for a little over one week. He was born at Plano, Illinois, May 2d, 1869; was blessed on July 3d by Elders Isaac Sheen and Wm. Marks; was baptized April 11th, 1881, by Elder F. G. Pitt. Though during the past year he had some experiences with the powers of evil and unbelief yet he conquered, and during his sickness he made clear statements of his confidence in God and in the gospel of Christ, and assured us that he was happy in the truth of heaven. He was a member of the Students' Society of Lamoni, and the young brethren and sisters of this band attended the funeral and marched from the home to the church, and from there to the cemetery in a body. The sermon was preached by Elder H. A. Stebbins. He was assisted in the services by Pres. W. W. Blair. Elders A. S. Cochran and R. S. Salyards conducted the services at the home and at the grave. There was a very large attendence, and it was a solemn occasion.

The following preambles and resolution were adopted by the Students' Society at its meeting on February 12th:

Whereas, for the first time in the history of the Students' Society of Lamoni, death has invaded our band, in that on the 9th day of February death removed from our midst Bro. John William Scott; and Whereas, while we deeply feel the loss of our associate and friend, and do mourn his departure, yet we realize that his absence must be far more keenly felt by his family; therefore be it Resolved, that we hereby convey to his bereaved parents, sisters and friends our heartfelt sympathy in this the time of their affliction, and pray that God will administer abundantly to them of his consolation and peace. And, while we feel deep regret and sorrow because of his absence from them and from us, yet we would say that we rejoice with them in the certainty that he died in the faith of the gospel and in the hope of a glorious resurrection with the just. And we feel that if we are faithful and diligent we shall meet him in the mansions of light, and have joy with him where pain and death have neither place nor power.

CHURCH RECORDER'S NOTICE.

PROVIDE FOR YOUR OWN.

Paul the Apostle, the most eminent of all the teachers and interpretors of Christianity says: "But if any provide not for his own, and especially for those of his own house, he hath denied the faith and is worse than an Infidel."—I Tim. 5:8. This doctrine can not be excelled. The commonest instincts of decent manhood and womanhood respond to it heartily and forcefully. Even the animal creationbeast or bird, great and small-bear ample evidence that they, too, are largely actuated by that commendable quality. But, sad to say, there are some beings in human form-and occasionally one of them gets into the church—who seem well nigh barren of that natural love for its kind which prompts and impels to care for and provide with what is needful "those of his own house." Such parties, whoever they may be, are a living libel on Christianity, a living disgrace to society, and are lacking the natural good there is in brute beasts. The rules of the church are strict against idlers and idleness, and vet there are instances where both are suffered in the church to the disgrace of the church and the harm of the idler. This should not be, and the officers and members should see that law honored which says: "The idler shall not have place in the church," and, "He that is idle shall not eat the bread nor wear the garments of the laborer."—D. C. 75:5; 42:12. This applies to all, whether members or ministers. Persons having families should spare no effort to provide for their suitable wants. God and the laws of the land demand it; and all well disposed and properly balanced persons need not be told it. All should provide for their own, so far as they have power and ability; and this should be their first object and effort. They should not seek to crowd on their brethren and sisters, or any one else, those whom God and society and nature require them to provide for. If they do attempt anything of the kind, such offenders should be dealt with promptly and thoroughly.

Every one should "bear his own burden" so far as he can. It is time enough to ask others to bear them when we can not do so ourselves. It is Christian to kindly aid the needy, and to be forward in that good work; but it is not Christian for any to neglect to provide for their own or seek to force that work on their friends, neighbors, or any one else. Let all see to it and honor the laws of God, the laws of the land, and the high impulses of all noble natures by caring for their own and not crowd upon the kindness, forbearance, or good nature of any one.

LE PLONGEON'S LETTER.

HAVING obtained permission from the parties interested, we publish, with much satisfaction, the following letter from the renowned and justly celebrated achaeologist and antiquarian, Dr. Le Plongeon.

This letter manifests the fact that in the antiquities of America are found abundant evidences that its ancient inhabitants were thoroughly acquainted with Egyptian art and well versed in Egyptian languagejust the things set forth so prominently in the Book of Mormon, for the Nephites and Zarahemlaites being of Israel, carried over this knowledge from Palestine, their fathers having been intimately acquainted with Egyptian civilization from the times of Abraham. The letter is of value also as showing the untiring efforts of Rev. Lamb to destroy the very foundations of God's "marvelous work" in these latter days by proving false the claims made by the Book of Mormon in respect to animals in ancient America, and that its ancient inhabitants were skilled in Egyptian language and art-in all of which the Rev. gentleman miserably fails, as will be seen.

Many of our readers will be amused on reading the Doctor's theory of the origin of the Book of Mormon. But God has said in connection with the coming forth of that book and the work that would follow, "the wisdom of their wise men shall perish, and the understanding of their prudent man shall be hid."-Isa. 29: 14.

Dr. Le Plongeon is doubtless one of this world's "wise men," and is doing good in his way. We recognize the fact that heaven uses such men, though they know it not, and we shall be pleased to investigate his forth-coming works.

Here is his letter:

204, Washington, St., BROOKLYN, N. Y., January 8th.

S. F. Walker, Esq., Dear Sir: Your favor of December 28th came to hand three days ago.

My various occupations have prevented me from answering sooner.

Mrs. Walker is welcome to reproduce my comparative table of the Maya and Egyptian alphabets. I am the publisher of "Sacred Mysteries" and have the copyright. I am sorry not to be able to comply with your request as to the sending of the original plate. It forms part of the page on the one hand, and on the other I have not got the plates in my possession. They are in a storage house, and the keeper informs me it would take a whole day to reach the boxes which contain the plates. If you can have it made in your parts of the country from the book, you have my permission.

As to your remarks concerning the masonic signs discovered by me in Yucatan, or any other facts stated in my works, you will please notice that I merely mentioned them without passing any comments.

History is formed by the recital of events which have occured; not of speculations as to what may or may not have taken place. In all my writings I try to confine myself to bring together such facts as I find them recorded in the archives of the various nations of which we have definite knowledge.

Revelation recorded in the sacred books of the sects into which mankind is divided is no criterion for me-I do not believe in one of these books more than in another. The Book of Mormon is just as good for me, so far as revelation is concerned, as the Old Testament or Apocalypses. The Book of Henoch is not revelationat least to me. I have read it carefully, and am satisfied that it contains many of the secret teachings imparted to the initiates in the secrecy of the temples of Egypt, transcribed in an ambiguous style to to conceal the knowledge therein contained from the uninitiated.

Whoever wrote the Book of Mormon had read some of the relations at least of the voyages of Japanese and Chinese travellers to Fusang, and made use of said relations in concocting said

This calls to my mind the visit of a certain Rev. Mr. Lamb, who introduced himself to me by stating that he resided at Salt Lake City and was there combatting the Mormon doctrines and showing that their pretended revelations were all humbug. He presented me with a book published by him in which he pretended to show the many absurdities contained in the Book of Mormon. He finished by telling me that he had called upon me in order to obtain my opinion on what is said in the book relatively to the animals, such as the horse, the pig, the cattle and sheep that lived anciently on the Western Continent, which, he continued, prove that the whole book is an absurd fabrication, and hoped that I would help him with my knowledge in showing it to be such. The man evidently either had been misinformed concerning me, or had not taken the trouble to inquire. When he ceased speaking I asked him if he was a Christian, to which he emphatically answered, Yes; and I, as emphatically replied, No! because he did not follow the doctrine of Jesus—"Do not do to others what you do not wish others to do to you."

I informed him that I did not care a straw if the Book of Mormon was a revelation or a fabrication; that I considered that every man had an absolute right to worship deity as best he thought; that on the other hand, I could not join him in disproving the Book of Mormon in the part in which the animals mentioned are said to have lived on the American Continent, because I was not in the habit of making a fool of myself if I could help it. Then I informed him that seventeen species of fossil horses had been discovered in America; that the buffaloes were cattle; that the mountain sheep still lived in the Rocky Mountains, and that peccaries, or wild pigs roamed yet in large numbers in the forests of Central America. After that I gave him a piece of my mind and bowed him out of the house. I met him once more in a reunion; but he did not try again to enlist my sympathy in his war against the Mormons; but I informed him that I had written to my old travelling companion, Mr. John Taylor, and had informed him of what had taken place. * * *

When I have the means of publishing my large work, "The Monuments of Mayas and their Historical Teachings," something unknown to the world will then be presented concerning ancient American history and the origin of the primitive traditions of mankind, and of many notions still existing among us.

Mrs. Le Piongeon returns thanks to Mrs. Walker for the January number of Autumn Leaves. It is certainly a very interesting publication, and I join her in wishing Mrs. Walker every success, even if we are not sectarians, for we believe that the contents of Autumn Leaves will be productive of good among the many. . .

Will Mrs. Walker accept the copy I forward by this mail of Mrs. Le Plongeon's-"Here and there in Yucatan." Yours very respectfully, Augtus Le Plongeon, M. D.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

President Joseph Smith writes as follows from D. S. Mills' ranch, Santa Ana, California, February 13th, 1889:

Am reasonably well though having some twinges of my old enemy, neuralgia, still lingering; a change of air, a "Santa Ana" wind, or a pending storm creating nervous uneasiness and irritation of the side of my face. I spoke last week in Spurgeon's Hall, Santa Ana, on Wednesday evening on temperance; and Thursday evening on "The Marriage Question." Had only mediocre liberty, and am not elated over either effort, though some spoke favorably of them. The hall was very noisy, and men and boys kept tramping in and out during the time I was speaking, which much disturbed me.

On Sunday, the 10th, I spoke in the Saints church near Bro. John Garner's, in morning and evening, presenting the subject of the Resurrection in the morning, and the Judgment in the evening. The Saints seemed to enjoy the services, so I had no reason to complain. Application was made for the rite of baptism, and on yesterday, at two p. m. we gathered at Bro. S. Penfold's, where I baptized the wife and son of Bro. Joseph Dustin, Bro. Mills' son Frederick and daughter Mary, Bro. Charles Best's daughters Cleora and Flora, and Bro. George Barr's son Glaud. The young people are fine additions to the army of workers. So goes the work. I was but watering what others had sown—God gave the increase. The branch met at evening for confirmation when a most excellent spirit prevailed. After confirmation I spoke to them from the words "Do good unto all men, especially to them who are of the household of faith." The liberty was good, and the Saints seemed pleased with the effort. Altogether it was an eventful day for the "transient elder." It was never my privilege to baptize so large a number so promising for good, as it seems to me these young people were. Bro. Mills' son is the oldest of the boys baptized yesterday, and is a young man of marked and strongly reliant character, who will, if he persists in his choice to serve God, be of good service to the men of his time and sphere.

Bro. Garner is very low, is hardly able to raise his head from his pillow, and to all human appearances has not long to stay with men in this life of the flesh. He has no wish to stay, and is ready to go hence.

On Sunday I baptized Lewis St. Clair, who, with his wife lived at Plano in 1870. She was baptized there, and now, after nineteen years of wandering, he has obeyed. They live at Santa Yesterday morning a strong "Santa Ana" was blowing at daylight and continued until about two p. m. The mercury went up to 80° in the shade at Bro. Penfold's, and it was hot. The air almost parched one's lips. It is now feared that crops on the "Mesa" will be ruined. The whole San Joaquin valley has been sown to wheat and barley. These "Santa Ana's" as they are called here, are hot, searching winds off the desert east and north, and they scorch like the Kansas hot winds. "They say" that "they don't often have winds here," but the one yesterday is about the fourth since I came to the state, and the second here within a week. The "rule" seems to be all "played out" when I come here.

The Laguna branch was reorganized last week by advice of Bro. Burton, and under his care. Bro. A. W. Thompson was chosen to preside; Bro. Harvey Hemenway to act as priest, and Bro. Charles Salter as clerk.

There is little or no sickness among our folks here, and what there is seems to yield to the administration of the elders to a marked degree. A good feeling appears to be prevailing, and the branch under the care of Bro. Daniel Garner, who is presiding, is doing well.

The disaffection obtaining among some arising from the peculiarities and defection of Bro. R. Huntley,—who unfortunately misconstrued and misrepresented the action of Bro. Rogers, the Bishop, in the matter of the money left by Bro. Huntley in the Bishop's hands for the publishing of the still unrevealed portion of the Book of Mormon—has returned upon Bro. Huntley to his hurt; but some who were involved are still suffering distrust, and hold aloof. It is hoped this will pass away.

Bro. J. C. Foss wrote us the following from Plano, Illinois, the 18th instant. It gives us unmixed pleasure to know that the Lord is confirming his work mightily where the church was planted about 1859, when the church numbered less than one hundred souls, and like the "mustard seed," had its excellency in its divine origin and vitality, and not in its wealth, human wisdom, or worldly power and influence. God was and is its author, helper and guide. He approves His own church by His free Spirit:

"Our conference at this place on Saturday and Sunday last, was one long to be remembered by all present The business was all done in the best of feeling—as God would have it everywhere in his church. Saturday evening we listened to a powerful sermon by our noble brother Thomas Hougas, followed Sunday morning by Elder A. Whitaker, of Wisconsin. In the afternoon we had a testimony and sacrament meeting; and during that three hours' meeting our heavenly Father did remember us his children. The whole house seemed to be filled with the Spirit of God. While prayers were offered and witness borne of God's power among his people, the power of God was made manifest in several unknown tongues with interpretations; as also by the gifts in prophecy. O! how glad we are, my beloved brother, that our God "is not asleep," nor "on a long journey," but is always with us if we are found at our post. In the evening we listened to our little brave "boy preacher," Bro. Pender."

Bio. John Hawley thus writes in a late letter:

"I start tomorrow with my family for Sheridan, Missouri, hoping it will better my condition temporally, and I think a spiritual work will be done in that part. My lameness is so improved, I think I will soon be able to devote my whole time to the work."

A letter from Bro. Frank Criley, of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, dated February 19th, brings us sad news as follows:

"I am sorry to report to you that our beloved brother E. C. Briggs is lying very low with typhoid fever, and I desire for him an interest in your prayers that he may recover. He is at my house and we are doing all we can for him. We sent this morning for some of his family. He does not seem to realize that he is sick; only wonders why he is so weak that he can not leave his bed."

We very much regret to hear of Bro. Briggs' illness and earnestly hope for his speedy recovery. We are pleased to know that he is with kindhearted Saints who will care for him as tenderly as if one of their own, and will see that he lacks nothing necessary for his welfare.

"SEVENTH DAY ADVENTISM RE-NOUNCED."

THE above is the title of a work of about 150 pages published by Elder D. M. Canright, who for twenty-eight years was an active member, minister, writer and debater-laboring in defense of that faith. The work does not appear to be written in a spirit of bitterness, but is rather a frank exposition of the fallacies and erroneous doctrines of that peculiar faith. Elder Canright seems to have been beset with doubts long before his renunciation of Adventism, and while continually honored with responsible positions among them, he was finally forced to admit that their doctrines were Scripturally untenable and deceptive. He discusses briefly and tersely their favorite theories, such as "Mrs White's Visions," "The Sanctuary," "The Sabbath," "The Law," etc., and in the closing chapter gives "An experience of twenty-eight years in Adventism." He considers the Seventh Day Adventist movement to be in a very shaky condition. both internally and externally.

Inasmuch as our people have been and are continually being attacked by that society we call attention to this work which can be obtained at this office on application. It will be useful to all interested in meeting that issue. Although the elders of the latter day work have long anticipated Elder Canright in the true Scriptural status of Adventism, there are many facts presented in his book which will be of value as revealing much of the inner history and weakness of that movement.

His references to Joseph Smith and the work inaugurated through his instrumentality are manifestly unfair and unsustained by proof. His examination of Adventism is discussed upon its merits, history and Scripture being the basis of the examination—a proper method in the discussion of such questions.

LOCATION BOOMING.

WE frequently receive letters from persons desirous of "booming" their favorite localities and of inducing immigration thereto. Some of these we have published in the past, many of them have gone the way of the waste-basket, and, if we are rightly informed, it would have been well if some others had never been published, for they served to induce emigration to parts which have proved most unsatisfactory to those going there. Very few have tastes alike; a climate suiting some is not good for others; and unless persons have most excellent judgment touching climate, soil, fuel, water, markets, society, and a score of other things affecting these matters of location, and then have had experience of years in such locations, they should move with caution when seeking to advise others. We have said before, and we repeat it, that the best and safest way is to let the Bishopric advise in these matters and then hold them responsible for the counsel they give. Let no one feel hurt if they fail to see their letters published inviting the Saints to locate in their newly found and favorite localities. We shall seek to do for the best in respect to these as also all other matters coming to us.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Not long since a brother in Independence expressed through the Herald a wish to obtain "a housekeeper," and now it turns up that some thought he thereby desired to say he wished to obtain a wife. What he intended, if anything different from what he wrote, we do not profess to know. This department concluded he meant what he said, and it is needless to say there are hosts of housekeepers who are not wives. If the brother really intended to advertise for a wife, he caught us, (if no one else), with guile, but we hope no sad results will follow.

Bro. Duncan Campbell of Pleasanton, Iowa, has just recovered from a recent illness sufficiently to begin replying to the attacks made upon the faith at that place by two elders of the Seventh Day Adventists. He says: "I am feeling some better but still weak. The Saints have been benefitted by the fire to which they have been exposed, so that prayer meetings are much better attended and there is much more unity among them." We await developments and full particulars.

Bro. Thomas H. Andrews, of Fall River, Massachusetts, renews for the HERALD and says: "It grows better all the time. I would feel sorry to have to give it up." We receive numerous commendations of this kind, and therefore hope all the HERALD readers will seek its prosperity by wise, timely contributions, pithy letters, well chosen selections, and prompt, liberal subscriptions.

A letter from Bro W. H. Kelley, dated Boston, Massachusetts, February 19th, informs us that Bro. E. L. Kelley is having an eight nights' discussion with Mr. F. C. Whitehead who represents the Christadelphians. The propositions are two in number; Bro. Kelley affirming the conscious state of the spirits of the dead; while his opponent affirms that the Kingdom of Heaven as referred to in Mark first chapter is not to be set up until the Second Coming of Christ. Bro. Kelley states that the discussion is witnessed by an attentive audience in Monument Society Hall, at the foot of Bunker Hill. The coincidence of place and teaching are striking and we hope that Bro. Kelley's effort at the Mars' hill of our modern Athens will bring the truth to many there by whom it is now "unknown."

Bro. M. T. Short wrote from Lyons, Wisconsin, February 18th, sending money to the missionary fund from an aged Sr. Ann Davis who embraced the faith in Canada in 1837, and who, residing in Kirtland in 1838, afterwards passed through the Missouri troubles. At the age of eighty-seven she continues the good fight of faith.

Sr. C. E. Carpenter, of Ashmont, Ohio, sends for publications that her neighbors may read the word. She says a few there look with favor upon the work and she hopes that the word may at some time be preached there. She is alone in the faith and feels weak in ability but strong in faith.

Sr. Mary Huffman writes from Sinnet's Mills, West Virginia, that the four Saints there, who with her represent the total membership in that section are rejoicing in the truth although surrounded by enemies of the cause of truth. She was baptized by Bro. Devore, and states that as a result she has received light and comfort and blessing and peace. She would be pleased to have any of the elders call and preach for them.

Bro. F. C. Warnky wrote, February 19th, from Independence, Missouri: "We are all well, but there is a good deal of sickness in the city and some deaths. Bro. Edward Noble died yesterday and others are low. I am glad the church is taking steps in the direction of a good school. I heartily endorse the movement you are making at Lamoni."

Bro. James Christensen, of Barnard, Missouri, has just completed his studies as book-keeper and stenographer, and desires a position in both or either. Would prefer one among church members.

Bro. S. B. Kibler, of Woodbine, Iowa, in a recent letter says: "I am trying to spread the gospel as fast as I can by putting our works into the hands of those who will read them. I think I will be able to send some new subscribers to Herald and Autumn Leaves soon."

Bro. F. G. Pitt of Independence, Missouri, whose house and furniture were burned last fall, insured in the Western Home, of Sioux City, Iowa, and he now claims that the company did not treat him justly and fairly in adjusting his claims. This we regret to hear.

By the letter of Bro. Henry Tabbiner which appears in this issue, it will be seen that Mr. Jarman, who has been giving an expose of Utah Mormonism in England and Wales, has been willing to clearly illustrate the difference between Brighamism and the work of the Reorganization. We thank him for his fairness in so doing. We also commend the efforts of Bro. Tabbiner in looking after the interests of the church as stated.

Bro. B. V. Scott, of Independence, Missouri, wrote February 15th that there had been considerable of sickness of late among the Saints there, but that the Lord had blessed them in some instances in a marked manner. Some were still very ill but hopeful. Work on the new church was progressing slowly but surely.

Sr. Agnes Durrett, of Rosston, Texas, wrote February 12th stating that she was the only member of the church in that vicinity. Having recently lost her husband and another member of her family she requests the prayers of the Saints in behalf of herself and children in their severe afflictions.

Bro. I. Hogaboom wrote from Bloomington, Dakota, the 14th ult., that he had many to hear him preach the gospel, and thinks a large branch can be built up there, with care.

Bro. G. L. Spencer wrote from Trinidad, Colorado, February 10th, that he was trying to do what he could to call attention to the truth. He finds much opposition to contend with, but thinks that truth will prevail. He states that many Brighamites are located in his vicinity, but are quiet, having but little to say.

Bro. J. C. Foss wrote cheeringly from Emington, Illinois, in a late letter. The opposition had caused a church and schoolhouse to be closed against the elders in that section, but as usual such action served but to aid the cause of truth. Bro. Foss, being threatened with personal violence, replied that he had served two terms in the war of the rebellion and claimed the protection of the flag. Some were about ready for baptism.

Sr. Emma Brackenbury of Bayport, Michigan, writes expressive of her confidence and love of the truth.

We clip the following from the Chicago Tribune of the 19th ult., and if true, it proves that polygamy still rules in the hearts of some of the Utah missionaries. Its treatment in this case is in keeping with what it receives elsewhere. The institution is damned and doomed and dying—as it should be:

WARM FOR THE MORMONS.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., Feb. 17—As a culmination of the iniquitous Mormon proselyting system a saintly row occurred at the depot yesterday. The trouble arose in a car-load of sixty Scandinavian converts who had been enlisted by Elders Marvin and Greely. Chris Jansen, one of the most prominent converts, had noticed on the trip that Elder Marvin was attentive to his two handsome sisters. He addressed them on the subject and was horrified to learn that both were to be married to Marvin according to Mormon rites on their arrival in Utah. He concluded to act before it was too late, and when the train was fifty miles east of Cheyenne he took the elder to task. The latter gave him no satisfaction, and Jansen called upon his friends to join him in mutiny.

The more ignorant and faithful sided with the elder, and a terrific free fight ensued. Jansen led an attempt to lynch Marvin with the bell-rope, and saved his own life by wrenching a revolver from the elder's hand. The battle became furious, and many heads were battered in the encounter. Pulling on the bellrope caused a stoppage of the train, but no one dared to enter until a plucky express messenger named King appeared with a shot-gun furnished to resist trainrobbers. The din subsided when he discharged his weapon through the roof of the car. In the melee women and children hnd been piteously trampled upon and a number were seriously injured. Marvin, who had fought with desperation, was completely exhausted and covered with bruises. While the emigrants were lunching here the trouble broke out anew, and Jansen, his sisters, and twenty others who had money, left the car in a body and boarded the train for Denver.

A GOOD OPPORTUNITY.

By letter from Bro. J. H. Peters, of Coleman, Michigan, we learn that he has over one thousand copies of the Voice of Warning still remaining of the edition which he had published expressly for use as a free circulating library among those willing to Those desiring to acquaint read them. others with the word can obtain the books from Bro. Peters by sending their address, stating the number they can use. hope those who can make good use of the books will obtain and circulate them among their neighbors. By so doing friends will be made to the cause, prejudice allayed and many brought to a knowledge of the truth.

Bro. Peters' effort in furnishing free reading matter is a noble one and should be heartily appreciated and accepted by those desiring to "warn their neighbor."

FRANKLIN'S FAMOUS TOAST.

Ben Franklin was dining with a small party of distinguished gentlemen when one of them said:

"Here are three nationalities represented: I am French, my friend there is English, and Mr. Franklin is an American.—Let us each propose a toast."

It was agreed to, and the Englishman's turn came first. He arose, and in the tone of a Briton bold, said:

"Here's to Great Britain, the sun that gives light to all nations of the earth."

The Frenchman was rather taken back at this, but he proposed:

"Here's to France, the moon whose magic rays move the tides of all the world."

Our Ben then arose with his air of quaint modesty and said:

"Here's to George Washington, the Joshua of America, who commanded the sun and moon to stand still—and they stood still."

Truth, like pure minds, and upright hearts, shall stand and live when time shall be no more.

Selected Poetry.

ONE LESS AT HOME—ONE MORE IN HEAVEN.

One less at home!
That charmed circle broken—a dear face
Missed day by day from its accustomed place,
But cleansed and saved and perfected by grace!
One more in heaven!

One less at home!
One voice of welcome hushed and evermore
One farewell word spoken; on the shore
Where parting comes not, one soul landed mere—
One more in heaver!

One less at home!
Chill as the earth-born mist the thought would rise,
And wrap our footsteps round, and dim our eyes.
But the bright sunbeam darted from the skies—
One more in heaven!

One more at home!
This is not home where cramped in earthly mold
Our sight of Christ is dim—our love is cold,
But there, where face to face we shall behold,
Is home in heaven!

One less on earth!
Its pain, its sorrow and its toil to share;
One less the pilgrim's daily cross to bear;
One the crown of ransomed souls to wear,
At home in heaven!

One more in heaven!

Another thought to brighten cloudy days,
Another theme of thankfulness and praise,
Another link on high our souls to raise
To home and heaven!

One more at home!
That home where separation can not be,
That home where none are missed eternally
Lord Jesus, grant us all a place with thee,
At home in heaven!

NEVER PUNISH A CHILD IN ANGER.

Anger is not always wrong. A parent may be angry without sin. And, as a matter of fact, most parents do get angry, whether they ought to or not. Children are sometimes very provoking, and parents are sometimes very much provoked. It is not always wrong to punish a child. A child may need punishing, and it may be the parents duty to punish a child accordingly. But it is always wrong to punish a child in anger; and however great may be the need of a child's punishment, a parent ought never to administer punishment to a child while angry. Here is a rule which properly knows no exception; yet as a matter of fact, probably nine-tenths of all the punishing of children that is done by parents is done in anger. And this is one of the wrongs suffered by children through the wrong-doing of their parents.

Anger is hot blood. Anger is passion. Anger is for the time being a controlling emotion, fixing the mind's eye on the point against which it is specifically directed, to the forgetfulness of all else. But punishment is a judicial act, calling for a clear mind, and a cool head, and a fair considering of every side of the case in hand. Anger is inconsistent with the exercise of the judicial faculty; therefore no one is competent to judge fairly while angry, If, indeed, the anger itself be just, the impulse of the angry man may be in the right direction, and the punishment he would inflict may be a fitting one; but, again, it may not be. At all events he is not in a frame of mind to decide whether or not it is so; and it is his duty to wait until he can dispassionately view the case in another light than that in which it presents itself to his heated brain. No judge is worthy of the office he administers, if he acts on the impulse of his first estimate of a case before him, without taking time to see what can be shown on the other side of that case. And no parent acts worthily who jumps to the punishment of a child while under the impulse of an angry mood.

There are strong provocatives to anger in many a child's conduct, especially to a parent who is of an intense nature, with an inclination to quickness of temper. A child is disobedient at a point where it has been repeatedly told of its duty; it is quarrelsome with its playmates, or insolent toward its nurse; it is persistently irritable or it gives way to a fit of ungovernable rage; it destroys property recklessly, or it endangers life and limb; it snatches away a plaything from a little brother, or it clutches its hands into its mother's hair; it indulges in foul language, or it utters threats of revenge; it meets a proffered kiss with a slap or a scratch; its conduct may be even that which would excite anger in a saint, but it certainly is such as to excite anger in the average parent-who is not a saint. Then, while the parent is angry, and while punishment seems merited by the child, the temptation of the parent is to administer punishment; but that temptation is one that ought never to be yielded to, or if yielded to, is a sin.

Punishment may be needed in such a case, but the punishment, to be surely just and to be recognized as just, must be well considered, and must be administered in a manner to show that it is not the outcome of passionate impulse. No punishment ought to be administered by a parent at any time that would not be administered by that parent when he was cool and calm and deliberate, and after he had had a full and free talk on the subject with the child, in the child's best state of mind. Whether the punishment that seems to the parent to be the desert of the child, while the parent is still angry, is the punishment the parent would deem the fitting one in his cooler, calmer moments, can be better decided after the parent has looked at it in both frames of mind, than before he has had the advantage of a view from the standpoint of fuller deliberation.

"What?" inquired a surprised parent, in conversing with the present writer on this very subject, "do you say that I must never punish my boy while I'm angry with him? Why then I should hardly ever punish him at all. It is while I am sitting up for him hour after hour, when I've told him over and over again that he must come in early, evenings, that I feel like taking hold of him smartly when he does come in. If I should say nothing to him then, but should leave the matter until the next morning, I should sleep off all my feeling on the subject, and he wouldn't be punished at all." And that father, in that statement of the case, spoke for many a parent, in the whole matter of the punishing of a child while angry. The punishment which the child gets is the result of the passion of the parent, not of the parent's sense of justice; and the child knows this to be the case whether the parent does or not.

How many boxes of the ear, and shakings of the shoulders, and slappings and strikings, and sentences of doom, which the children now get from their parents, would never be given if only the parents refrained from giving these while angry, but waited until they themselves were calm and unruffled before deciding whether to give them or not! It is not by any means easy for a parent always to control himself in his anger, so as to refrain from acting on the impulse which his anger imparts; but he who has not control of himself, is the last person in the world to attempt the control of others. And not until a parent has himself in perfect control ought he to take his child in hand for the judicial investigation and treatment of his case as an evil-doer.

Of course, there are cases where instant action on the part of parents in checking or controlling their children's conduct is a necessity, whether the parent be excited or calm; but in such cases the action, however vigorous or severe, is not in the line of punishment, but of conservation. A child may be thoughtlessly tugging away at the end of a tablecloth, with the liability of pulling over upon his head all the table crockery, including the scalding teapot; or he may be endangering himself by reaching out toward a lighted lamp or an open razor. No time is to be lost. If he does not respond to a word, he must be dealt with promptly and decisively. A sharp rap on the fingers may be the surest available means of saving him from disater. So, again, he may be aiming a missile at a costly mirror or a playmate's head in a fit of temper. Not a moment can be wasted. Angry or not angry, the parent may have to clutch at the child's lifted arm to save property or life. In such a case wise action is called for regardless of the trame of mind of him who acts. But this is the action of the peace keeper, rather than of the minister of justice. The parent fills for the moment the place of the policeman on his beat, rather than of the judge on his bench. The question of punishment for the child's action is yet to be considered; and that, again, must be delayed until passion has cooled, and there is no anger in the parent's mind.

A child knows when punishment is administered to him in anger, and when it is administered in a purely judicial frame of mind; and a child puts his estimate accordingly on him who administers the punishment. In a city missionschool, many years ago, there was a wild set of boys who seemed to do all in their power to anger and and annoy their teachers. Cases of discipline were a necessiy there; for again and again a boy attempted violence to a teacher, and force was required to save the teacher from serious harm. But love swayed those teachers even when force on their part was a necessity; and the boys seemed to understand this. There came a time, however, when the young superintendent, who had often held a scholar in check by force, was made public sport of in such a way, with a coarse linking of a young teachers name with his in ridicule, that his indignation was aroused, and he evidently showed this as he took hold of the oftender with vigor and positiveness. Instantly the boy started back in evident surprise, with a reproachful exclamation: "Trumbull, you are mad, and that's wicked." Those words taught a lesson to that young superintendent which he has never forgotten. They showed him that his power over those rough boys was a moral power, and that it pivoted on his retaining power over himself. It was theirs to get him angry if they could; but if they succeeded, he was a failure, and they knew it. And that lesson is one that parents as well as superintendents could learn to advantage.

When a parent punishes a child only in love, and without being ruffled by anger, the child is readier to perceive the justice of the punishment, and is under no temptation to resent passion with passion. A child who had been told by her father, that if she did a certain thing he must punish her for it, came to him on his return home and informed him that she had transgressed in the thing forbidden. He expressed sincere regret for this. "But you said, papa, that you would punish me for it, 'she added. "Yes, my dear child, and I must keep my word," was his answer. Then, as he drew her lovingly to him, he told her just why he must punish her. Looking up into his face with tearful trust, she said: "You don't like to punish me,-do you papa?" "Indeed I do not, my child," he said, in earnestness. "It hurts you more than it hurts me, -doesn't it papa?" was her sympathetic question, as if she was more troubled for her father than for herself. "Yes, indeed it does, my darling child," was his loving rejoinder. And the punishment which that father gave and that daughter received under circumstances like these, was a cause of no chafing between the two even for the moment, while it brought its gain to both, as no act of punishment in anger, however just in itself, could ever bring, in such a case.

Punishment received by a child from an angry parent is an injury to both parent and child. The parent is the worse for yielding to the temptation to give way to anger against a child. The child is harmed by knowing that his parent has done wrong. A child can be taught to know that he deserves punishment. A child needs no teaching to know that his parent is wrong in punishing him while angry. No parent ought to punish a child except with a view to the child's good. And in order to do good to a child through his punishing, a parent must religiously refrain from punishing him while angry.—S. S. Times.

PRAYER LEAGUE.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Sister P. A. Springer, of Medina City, Texas, requests your prayers that her affliction may be removed and health restored, if it be the Lord's will.

Sister L. M. Richards, North Platte, Nebraska, sends the following: "Pray that God will help every member of the church who uses tobacco in any form to put the habit away without delay."

ERRATA. Sister Hannah, when we inserted notice to you last week we were laboring under a mistake and have sent the magazine as you requested to the party in Peoria.—ED.

Dear Sister Walker:-The Herald, Hope and Autumn Leaves are still welcome visitors to our home. They bring us words of cheer and comfort, encouraging us to press onward, never doubting, through all trying scenes of life. I feel glad to see so many interested in this great latter day work. My husband is with me in the faith. God blessed us with two bright little boys; one of them he has since taken to himself after a short stay of seven weeks. The one left us now is nearing two years, and begins to take notice of all we do and say, and needs much watchful care from us to guide his little feet in the way they should tread. As parents it is our earnest desire to set before him a good example, that he may grow up in the light and knowledge of gospel truths.

A late Herald brought us sadder news than we had looked for. The thought of having to call some of the ministry from the field of labor, when so many are calling for more preaching, and many who as yet have never had this gospel preached to them, is painful indeed. Where are we as Saints? What are we doing? Oh, may the Lord help us to awake from our slumber, to a sense of our duty. Can it be that we as Saints shall neglect our duty in helping to support the families of the elders and sending out more ministers into the field? I look every week in the Home Column list for names I never have seen, or do not yet see; those whom I know are blessed with an abundance of this world's goods, and who profess to love and delight in the work. They are spending their money for fine dresses, making costly presents, where they are not needed, and buying trashy reading in the place of Herald, Hope and Autumn Leaves. Could not such things be dispensed with, and many poor hungry souls be fed with the bread of

Dear Saints, can we love the cause of Christ as we ought, and not pay in our tithes and offerings as we should do? The money is not our own; it is only loaned us for a time by our heavenly Father, and it is our duty to give the Lord what he requires of us. If every Saint would lay by ten cents each week to help support the elders, it would not be very much at the time, but during a year it would amount to a great deal, and we would not be any poorer for it, and I know we should each one be abundantly blessed. If done willingly, it is better to give than to receive.

A neighbor of mine (a Methodist) told me the other day they had been holding meetings for nearly two weeks, at the school house, so when their meetings closed and their minister went away, they still wanted to hold meetings there, (and would like to have preaching there all winter). They sent for a Latter Day Saint Elder, living four miles from there, to come and preach for them. They went to the school house, (he promising to come) lighted and warmed the house, and waited till they were all tired, and he never came. Two elders living within four miles of the school house, and neither one of them could fill the appointment! Dear Saints, is that the way we let our light shine before the world? doors open and people all waiting, and no one to preach to them? One man offered ten dollars and another seven toward helping to have preaching every night. It seems hard to have doors closed against our elders; but how encouraging it seems for an elder to find the doors open and the people all waiting to receive him, hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and he, with a heart full of love, points out to them the way in which they can be saved.

I remain a sister in hope of eternal life,

SHERIDAN, Iowa, Feb. 5th.

Dear Sisters:—Since I last wrote you I have felt to rejoice over the crowded houses and good attention with which Bro. Bozarth has been met in our School house where he has been laboring for some three weeks. He has won to the cause of Christ many warm friends, who in time, I hope, may see it is their duty to enlist in the army of the Lord.

Prejudice has melted like snow in springtime, and one worldly man felt so enthusiastic that he offered a lot off his farm and one hundred dollars in addition towards building a church. I would much rather he would have given his name for baptism. Friends have asked me if Bro. Bozarth would return again. I told them I presumed so; if it was the Lord's will he would, and that it would be decided at conference. My prayer is that we may not be forgotten, but that some good elder may be sent to help us.

Since our rejoicing over the meetings, death has visited our home and taken my cousin, a young man of twenty-five years, who came from Colorado to visit us this winter. May God have called him like a wanderer home. While the black cloud of gloom rests upon us my heart goes out in sympathy for his aged and bereft parents in their home in the far west, for he was their home-boy and stay in their declining years. We called the elders twice, but it was "Thy will, O God, not ours," and he passed peacefully away.

We asked for the use of the M. E. Church in which to preach and it was kindly granted, the presiding pastor withdrawing his appointment. May the Lord still continue to show his people favor. Yours in gospel bonds,

SOPHIE REAMS.

FERNDALE, Cal., January 20th.

Dear Sister Frances:—I do not know that I shall write anything of interest, but I would like to thank you for the words of comfort I have received, both from the Home Column and Autumn Leaves. I am alone, as it were, in the Church here. The few Saints in this part of the country are so far away, that I am not able to see them often in the winter, but I feel strengthened by trying to keep the law of the Lord. I think the Prayer League is a great help to us scattered ones; and though I am not able to meet with any Saints, I try to keep the subject for each week, and learn the texts. I feel that I have been blessed in so doing.

ELLA DUDLEY.

Massillon, Iowa, Feb. 3d.

Sister Frances:—I desire to add my testimony to the latter day work. There are no Saints here except my husband and myself. We have been in the church about three years; and how often my soul has been made to rejoice when I read those cheering letters in the Home Column. We are isolated from any branch of the church, but Bro. Turner has preached here every four weeks for more than a year, and has removed a great deal of prejudice; but the sermons are so far apart that the people forget from one to the other.

On the 18th of January we were made to rejoice by the coming of Bro. J. S. Roth; for he is no less than when we last saw him about three years ago, and he has not lost any of his ability to preach. He gave us about fifteen sermons here. The last two weeks Bro. Turner was also here and assisted him; and everybody says that there has been more Bible reading done in these parts in the last two weeks than ever before, old and young, professor and non-professor finding nothing to talk about only the Bible and the Latter Day Saint doctrine. The brethren did a great deal of fireside preaching and then could not fill all the invitations. Bro. Turner left for home on the 1st and now Bro. Roth talks day and night, so he is almost worn out. He says he knows that God has some sheep here who will ohey his voice yet. I hope that General Conference will return Bro. Roth to this district again next year; for I believe he will do a good work here; for even those who are enemies to our faith love to hear him preach, and all say he makes everything so plain that no one can misunderstand him. He will leave on the 5th or 6th and go to some other parts of the field. Our School-house is crowded every night with interested hearers, and quite a number are almost ready for the water; and many have expressed their regret that the meetings should close for the present. But the brethren think to hold another week or two some time time this spring. May God bless all his people and bring many more into the fold is the prayer of your sister in the one faith. S. J. HARDY.

Correspondence.

St. Louis, Mo., Feb. 18th.

Bro. Blair:—The work of the Lord is onward in St. Louis. The Saints as a rule are trying to come up a little higher. Some are feeling like paying their tithing and the Lord is greatly blessing such. One of the many blessings was that one taken violently ill thought they would have to send for a doctor, but in prayer to God that if God would heal, the doctor's fees would go into the church funds as tithing. The afflicted one was healed; to God the glory. Evidences of the divinity of the law of tithing are increasing. I hope the Saints will soon know their duty in this respect, and do it, so that more laborers may be in the field. For the field is large, the harvest ripe, and the laborers few. In our new chapel we have fair congregations. Bro. R. Etzenhouser is still with us. May the blessing of the Master be with his people.

FLORA VISTA, New Mexico, February 8th.

Dear Herald: In response to the wailing of Bro. E. F. Shupe in your issue for February 2d, I respectfully submit that among the number of members he names there are two priests and a teacher-aggregating more than when the church was organized in 1830, to cope with the whole world, and it would seem that they should do something towards arousing the attention of the hundred thousand in the large city of Denver. If Bro. Shupe can not tell why they have no meetings of their own, who shall divine? I recently received an inspiring letter from a sister, telling of a prayer meeting with four or five members in a private house. I have always believed that wherever there are a few members that they should do all they can to help themselves. The fact of no organization need not preclude them from worship.

Let Bro. Shupe, so far as wisdom directs, move, and confer with the members; and if nothing more can be done, hold a prayer meeting once a week—thus help themselves all they ean. The organization of branches is proper and very essential, but a start in this work involves a necessity for some evidence for a continuance when begun. Too hasty moves in this direction have proved detrimental. Shall the dozen members thus move—and I hope they may—additional help may come when needed. Move right along, Bro. Shupe; do your duty and God will take care of results.

JAS. CAFFALL.

P. S. Commenced a series of meetings in the school-house on the 3d which has been intercepted by a dance. In the second paragraph of my letter in Herald for February 2d instead of "though anxious to preach for them south," please say though anxious to push farther west, &c. Instead of sec. 39, D. C., say 85, par. 4.

REED CITY, Michigan, Feb. 11.

Bro. Blair: - For the last month we have been fighting with the editors and others around these parts. Some of them are very unfair with us. I have tried to answer all as best I could, and it is waking up a considerable interest here. A man with whom I was talking last summer who had refused to read our tracts, stopped me and said he would like now to read our works and wanted me to give him some tracts, etc. Said another, "Say Elder, you are not connected with those people in Salt Lake City, are you?" I said No. "Well," said he, "It made me angry to read that piece in the Democrat. I want to read that Book of Mormon now." I have always felt satisfied when I have seen their articles in their paper, that it would turn out for our good, no matter what it was, as long as they would give us a privilege to reply to anything that was false. It awakens a spirit of inquiry in the minds of the people. Opposition is all right; if we do wrong we ought to be opposed in the wrong, but if they speak evil of us falsely let us defend ourselves, and when done in a proper spirit it will all turn out for our good and the advancement of this glorious work. One of the greatest enemies, or rather the means by which some of our enemies try to stop the progress of this work is "Keep away from them, don't go to their meetings." Yes, that is the worst argument—the "stay away" argument. Our cause is onward. In Coleman we have aroused some to a sense of duty, who say, "When you come again we think we will be ready for baptism."

Two noble men were baptized at Hersey yesterday, and the brethren are alive to the work there. For the greatest part of the last ten months I have had so much district work to do that I have not spent as much of the time in new places as I wished. All the elders and others are doing what they can; we have an addition of one Elder, Bro. E. Day Bennett, but we want several more yet. Most all of the young officers are moving right along—doing well.

Angus, Iowa, February 3d.

Bro. Blair: Our faith being held in derision by the Rev. J. Prince, minister of the M. E. Church at Dawson, Brn. Thompson and Johnson being present and hearing the many false statements made, Bro. Thompson requested permission to speak but was denied; whereupon Bro. Thompson announced that he would reply on the following evening. Considerable excitement prevailed and many of the Methodists were disgusted with the conduct of their preacher. I was present on Monday night and was interested and pleased at the brother's defense of our faith. There was a good turn out and marked attention. A number of Methodists present. Bro. Thompson allowed any one to ask questions or reply to any erroneous statements if he should make any. A preacher who met Bro. Thompson in discussion in May, 1887, tried to show the iniquities of Mormonismwanted a debate. He was told that when they brought a man that knew something and who would come with the love of God in his heart and a desire to do him good with an open Bible he would gladly meet him. Bro. Thompson continued a defense of the church for five nights and I have reasons to believe he received much strength and comfort from the Holy Spirit. There is a prevalent prejudice of long standing in this place and in Dawson. Bro. Thompson has with great zeal stuck to the law and testimony under very unfavorable circumstances but was always ready to defend the truth where there was an opportunity.

THE BAY PORT MEETING.

BAY PORT, Mich., Feb.

The two days meeting appointed at Bay Port, Michigan, February 9th and 10th has passed off pleasantly. It was a season of rejoicing long to be remembered by all present. The Saints of Bay Port did all in their power to make the meeting a success, and the weather was very favorable, considering the season of the year. The meeting opened Saturday morning with Bro. Levi Phelps in the chair, and Bro. F. C. Smith in charge of the song services, Bro. Phelps gave the Saints an excellent exhortation, and we are sure if they give heed to the advice given, they can indeed claim the title of children of God.

The afternoon was devoted to prayer and testimony, in charge of Brn. J. A. Grant, and F. C. Smith. We were blessed with the calm, quiet Spirit of the Master, which he has promised to bestow upon his children when they assemble in humility to worship him. The Saints were drawn closer together by the bands of love which Christ said should characterize his people. The evening service was conducted by Brn. E. D. Bennett and F. C. Smith. Bro. Bennett placed before the minds of those assembled the necessity of entering in at the strait gate. He had the pleasure of addressing a full house of attentive listeners.

On Saturday morning the Saints met for prayer and testimony. Brn. Bennett and Phelps in charge. The Spirit was present in power. I have had the pleasure of attending numerous spiritual meetings in Dakota, Iowa, and Michigan, but I do not think I was ever in a meeting where more of the power of God was felt. Those present can truly say, that in these last days God is greatly blessing his children. At 10: 30 Bro. Phelps ably addressed us. At 2:30 Bro. Bennett was the speaker. He showed the necessity of being built upon the Rock. The house was filled. After this service we assembled on the bay, while Bro. F. C. Smith led two precious souls down into the clear water and buried them with Christ in baptism. At 6 o'clock we again met at the Saint's chapel; the two baptized were confirmed and the sacrament was administered by Brn. Bennett, Dowker and J. A. Grant. About three quarers of an hour was then occupied in prayer and testimony, and we were again blessed with the outpouring of the Spirit. Bro. Robert Grant then spoke to us on the fulfillment of prophecy. Thus the two days were occupied, and the Saints separated with regret, but with heartfelt joy to know that the God of heaven owned them as his children. Bro. Bennett spoke Monday evening, and Bro. Smith Tuesday evening. We can with joy exclaim with the inspired poet: "Oh 'tis good to be a Saint in Latter-days."

ONE PRESENT.

DEER LODGE, Mont., Feb. 13th.

Elder W. W. Blair:—I have just returned from a four weeks' visit to the Gallatin Valley, where I tried to tell the way of life to the people, preaching about eleven discourses. I felt well in preaching and am persuaded that my efforts were not in vain.

I can not say that all things are just as they ought to be, but I found much of the good old fire, and some of the old soldiers are determined to keep it blazing, which may the Lord so order. One can scarcely find a more generous lot of souls than the Montana Saints, and it is a great pity that anything should ever disturb their spiritual enjoyment, for the most of them know that "'tis good to be a Saint of latter days."

Besides our preaching meetings, I enjoyed two most excellent prayer and testimony meetings with the Saints and I felt to ask, "If this, which is but the crumbs from the Master's table gives such joy, what will it be when we shall eat and drink with Him in the Father's kingdom?"

The Saints kindly ministered to my personal wants, which they are famous for, as all the elders that have traveled in Montana, can testify. May the Lord bless them and all that pertains to them.

Bro. Thomas Reese and his family live in Bozeman, and he has stirred up some interest by circulating tracts and books and I expect by the time we return he will have them ready for preaching. Bozeman has hitherto been considered a hard place for us. Bro. Joseph, when he was out here, thought it was a little too soon for Bozeman.

Bro. Lundwall, if he has not already, will soon move out into the country near Reese Creek.

I go this week to Stuart, and from there on to Butte; thence to Weeks. As soon as the spring opens I shall travel by team as I can get no half fare permit over the N. P. R. R., and besides I can hear of many of the scattered sheep that wandered off during the day of spiritual darkness that do not live in close proximity to railroads, and if I am continued in this field I shall try to hunt them from the hills and valleys of Montana, and try to show them that the Lord, true to his covenant, is remembering Zion.

Your brother in Christ,
J. C. CLAPP.

HANLEY, England, Dec. 17th.

Editors Herald:-It is nearly five years since I obeyed the gospel. I was visiting and was induced to go and hear the Latter Day Saints. How strange did the name sound to me, one who had been taught the doctrine of the Church of England! But owing to the hollowness of it I gave it up, and almost all thought of there being any good in any religion, I was completely sick of it, and had many times brought down the hot displeasure of would be teachers for asking straight questions and expecting straight answers; and when they had not been forthcoming I had ventured to give my own opinion, which more or less got me in trouble and led them to put me down as going wrong in the upper story. But, alas! I could get nothing to rest upon, so I drifted out into the world, but not to take up with its ways and what I knew to be vanity and emptiness. No, my very nature revolted at the idea, when I looked around and viewed the wonderful works of God, and ever bore in mind that God was unchangable and those comforting works of our blessed Master to the disciples, "Let not your hearts be troubled, "How often would I have gathered you as a hen gathereth her chickens and ye would not," etc. Because I wanted to be gathered into that particular straight and narrow way. I was made the object of scorn for the whole school, so there is no wonder at me taking time to consider, bearing in mind the advice of Paul, "Prove all things, hold fast that which is good." However, time went on and evening drew nigh. I and my friends repaired to meeting room, and with a very peculiar feeling hovering over me, I mounted the staircase, and, believe me, the moment I entered the room that feeling left me and I felt free and breathed easier, for what I saw was anything but what I expected. No richly decorated aisles or chancel or finely appointed altar, but only a comfortable room, (which very much reminded me of the upper room where the disciples of the Lord were gathered and were endowed with power from on high) and a peaceful congregation waiting to be fed with the bread of eternal life. A kind welcome from the door keeper greeted me, and when I would have taken the seat nearest at hand, I was greeted with, "Friend, come up higher" and the loan of a hymn book. I followed up to a seat in a good position for both seeing and hearing and must confess that I then and there, for the first time, heard the gospel preached according to my ideas and understanding. I left that room fully satisfied that I had gained something by being there and determined that if ever I united with any church again that was the one. I was presented with a leaflet on which I saw where there was a room in my own town where the Saints met, but I never went while they were there. I was full of what I had been wanting and some to spare, so I gave it away freely the following day to my work mates and got heaps of "Brighamism in return for it. Well, I fought that down as best I could; I said I had not heard anything about that. I was told "they get you in and then they talk about the Utah business;" so I gave that up as another swindle. Months rolled by and the still small voice kept on, "Prove all things; hold fast that which is good." I went to the room as addressed on the leaflet and found that the Saints had left, but I afterwards found them and still I kept away until one Sunday there was a good company of friends at my home, (a rare day for visiting and feasting in this country), and as time wore on each made a fuss about going to church or chapel and I knew that there was not one of them cared any more about religion than my cat on the hearth. So they all went and I and my wife were left by ourselves, when I was suddenly reminded by that still small voice, so I said to my wife, "Let us go to the Saints' meeting room." We went and experienced the same kind welcome as before and once more heard the same gospel preached and the same testimonies borne, though every one in the room were strangers to me. Again I was satisfied with what I had heard, and that it was true, but nothing was said about "Brighamism," and I took it to be nothing less than an insult to question them about it. In the course of a few few weeks a message was brought me that the gentleman whom I had heard preach at Stafford was coming to Hanley, which is no other than our very much respected brother, Elder Joseph Greenwood; so I went to the room and after the meeting invited him to tea, which was thankfully accepted. Just what I wanted, so, "now for it," thinks I. If I can just get at the back of that Utah business I shall be satisfied and Bible proofs will help me out with other matters. So you may guess I lost no time, and before that tea drinking was over I was well informed on what I wanted to know. And if ever a man earned his tea by talking it was that day. Well, it ended in my wife and I uniting with the church. And, oh my, what a sin we had committed! Why did we not join some respectable society! Any one would have done but the Latter Day Saints. Plenty of charges but no proofs; and it was not long before we had not a friend to talk to except our new ones of the covenant; and seeing I was not to be ridiculed out of my possessions his satanic majesty set to work in other directions. It is well known that in work shops, etc., there is always a certain clique which hangs together, and the one who does not come up to their standard is soon made the butt for all. In less than three months I was out of work and have never had anything to depend upon until this last August. I never had been a strong supporter of the standard of drink, tobacco and profane language; so when I gave it a clean cut I must have polluted our work shop, and it was discovered I was no longer needed, though there was plenty of work in and more hands employed.

Since then I have tramped about here and there, working where I could get it, and if ever any one has been put to the test, I have. Yes, I have been sorely tried and tempted and in the greatest of distress, yet had I been a man of the world I should probably have had friends of the world, and my position would not have put me about so much, for when I have got in everybody's debt and could get no more credit, I would have to get an administration order and then there would be a leveling down, or in other words, wholesale swindling a proud and honest tradesman, but the words of the poet ever flashed across my mind:

"Courage, brother, do not stumble, Though thy path be dark as night; There's a star to guide the humble, Trust in God and do the right."

I did so, and now reap the benefit. I will mention a case of great temptation in the hour of need. It was three years ago just before Christmas and I had been out of work many weeks. I had engaged with a good firm in our town and one day I could have lifted over six hundred pounds of English money which is equal to three thousand dollars of American, and with little trouble and cunning could have got clear away. I am a carpenter, and often have to work in curious places, but in this case I had some work to do in my employer's private office, and having heard some one in, I went down so as to do the work while my employer was in. I knocked; no answer. I tried the door; it was undone. I made an inquiry; no answer. I went in, looked around but could see nothing to indicate that he was about. I went to the clerk's office and found that locked up. I went back to the private office and saw what I took to be something wrong. I knew that unless my employer was back within a few minutes he would not be back for two or three hours as was usual, and there was only one other person in that block of buildings and myself and that one in the top story, and on the office table lay this amount of money, for I counted it. I looked around thinking some one might be behind and on the watch, but could see nothing, and there I stood, a little fortune before me, while at home I did not know how to make ends meet, say nothing about tying them, as the saying goes. Think you I was tempted? Well, I just turned my back on it, uttering this prayer: "O may God preserve me from bringing shame and disgrace on the name I bear." Had I taken it and been found out it would not have been me so much that would have been pointed at, but the church. My brethren and sisters would ever have been assailed by the unscrupulous as being a harbor for thieves and such like characters. I then called the operator down from the upper room and showed her in the office, and after some talk on the affair it was decided I should watch that office and she to communicate with the police office by telephone, so I kept watch for over two hours on the landing where whoever went out must pass me. The first to turn up was my employer nearly exhausted by a journey on foot, who was rather surprised to see me on guard, but when he took in the state of affairs went off into a fit and instead of the police being wanted a doctor had to be called. The money he had so carelessly laid out was not his own, but was being used in a business account. It was not this that upset him, but the fact of it being there where he had left it and none of it gone. I was thanked and congratutated on my honest principles, but not one fraction did they give mebut they little thought of the truth in the matter, so I stated my case to the astonishment of my hearers, and when my work was finished they did not say "We will send for you again," and they never have. So I have endeavored to press forward, passing through many trials which I will not here mention, but will say this, there now appears the silver lining of that dark and bitter experience.

Thanks be to God who giveth the victory, however, I have made progress in church matters-more so in theory than practice-while under these ordeals. I have done some little in branch duties and in some things (though I make no boast) I have been instrumental in extricating our little branch from the web woven by Satan around us, when all looked blank and others hed forsaken the ship to the mercy of the enemysome looking on condemning my actions, but not helping to set me right. But let those acts now speak and what do they say? Just this, that wisdom, forethought and purpose were well directed. There are times when circumstances demand that some one must with unflinching, steadfast purpose and against all odds take hold on the wheel and bring the good ship up to windward and clear her decks so that the sea in making a breach over will not totally swamp her. I have done it once, twice, yes, thrice and more and will do it again should it be needed.

Hanley branch has suffered terribly and does so now by the injudicious acts of various brothers so and so, and so long as others keep in the same strain of feeling the branch will never look up if it depends on their efforts. Yet still there are those in the branch willing to work and do work who would feel encouraged if the members would show that they appreciated the efforts made by coming up to time. I would, by the grace of God, that the Saints would awaken out of their lethargy and come to help roll on the work. Some will ask, "What keeps them away?" I answer, the fear of men; the respect of persons in preference to the Church of Christ. Yet on the whole I am pleased to say there is a better spirit manifest among us, a kindling up of old flame of love and friendship and seeing more eye to eye. My testimony concerning the work is that it is true in all its bearings, and claims for itself nothing more than it was ordained to. namely, the visitation of angels from heaven to this earth; the restoration of the gospel; the bringing forth of the tribe of Israel; a prophet with the people; the establishment of Zion, and eventually the final gathering of the Saints and many other things of great worth in knowledge to the Saints. How assuring are the lines, "Angels from heaven and truth from earth have met and both have record borne." I, for one, am prepared to give a reason for the hope of eternal life. I have taken the Bible as my guide to the kingdom of God, and the testamentory evidences in (and the coming forth of) the Book of Mormon and the glowing revelations and commandments in Doctrine and Covenants all harmonizing together to show the just and fair dealings of God with his people. I am satisfied that the contents is not culled from the Spaulding Manuscript, but that it has come forth by the power of God to the confounding of false doctrine, though much is said about it locating the birth place of Christ at Jerusalem. A poor argument is better than none at all. For instance, I work at Stoke upon Trent, yet in reality my work is in Cliff Vale, a place within the bounds of Stoke on Trent, and so it may be in regard to the birth place of Christ. As a Saint of God and a believer in the Book of Mormon no matter what is said or done about it, I shall endeavor to be just while I present a few items in honor to whom it is due. We have many things said against us, especially of Brn. Joseph, Hyrum and their colleagues. I would not give a rap for the parties who think they are hurt by any remarks passed upon the patriarchs and do not attempt a contradiction. Let such ones read carefully the leading article in Herald for December 29th, 1888, and view the situation time past and present. For some years it has been a hard task for the Saints in Hanley to get a fair hearing by reason of the Utah business which alone has been a mighty barrier in the way and those who could not stand the buffetings have grown careless and indifferent, clamoring for outdoor work, stating that if we had some good elders here we should get along. Why don't they support those that are here and help to make them good ones by their faith and prayers? The people are so prejudiced that they would not believe there was any difference between us and the Utah Mormons, but they have had the difference and with a vengeance. Early in this month I saw bills posted announcing "Lectures on Mormonism by Mr. W. Jarman, an apostate High Priest from Utah, Mechanics Hall, Hanley, December 10th-16." I went at the hour appointed and found another brother there. We listened very attentively and were interested by the discourse and the dissolving views. The only thing that jarred on our feelings was that all was Mormonism, and having heard all that Mr. Jarman knew of the Reorganization we thought it strange that he made no remark concerning it. We afterwards learned why. When the lecture was ended we asked questions respecting the Reorganization, aud he [Mr. Jarman] gave us a good testimony concerning it, adding very strongly, that he was opposing Utah Mormonism only, and that when he got to certainly know there were Josephites in the places visited, he made the distinction. He told us that he found he did more harm than good in stating this distinction everywhere because elders of the Brighamites made use of it by saying they were Josephites; but if our people would come to him and let him know, he would do all he could to explain the difference. He promised us he would do so in Hanley. We thanked him and I think by the week's end he was fully convinced that we were Josephites. I would suggest that a license or certificate of membership would be the readiest way to prove to Mr. Jarman that you are Josephites. We proved ourselves and that we were able to hold our own. We handed round some epitomes and tracts and were very soon called upon by some to defend our position. We did so, and while they claimed to disbelieve that Joseph Smith was a prophet, we claimed to believe that he was, we parted on friendly terms. Tuesday night we did not goother engagements prevented. Wednesday night I was there on time and owing to an unlooked for circumstances I spoke to the audience for about three minutes by which I think I settled the question whether we are Brighamites or Josephites in the minds of all present. Thursday night Mr. Jarman annouced that he would on Friday night explain who were the true Latter Day Saints and who were not, and so he did like a man and those of the Hanley branch who were not there missed a treat. Friday night a few of the Saints had turned out, a fair audience of from four to five hundred of the average intelligent people of Hanley and Mr. Jarman commenced his lecture and gave his first half hour in explaining the difference between the Josephites and Brighamites and the general uprightness of the officers and members of the Reorganization, especially the present Joseph Smith. He dwelt some little time on the way in which Brigham Young became leader and rehearsed the prophecy of the first Joseph that if ever Brigham Young led the people he would lead them to hell; in fact he left no loop hole in which the people of Hanley could support the assertion that we are all one and the same any longer. He also quoted paragraph five of his chapter on the remedy for the abomination in Utah. Here it is: "I would also advise the government to aid the 'Josephites' or true law-abiding Mormons with all its power to disseminate their principles of law and order among the Utah fanatics. For there are thousands that will never be satisfied with anything but Mormonism, hence they should be supplied with the best there is. This is the best remedy I can suggest short of a war of extermination." He also spoke of the friendship that exists between him and many of the Josephites both in America and England, chosing his timely remarks by advising us to change our name. Not wishing to let so good an opportunity slip I stood up in the midst of that audience and tendered Mr. Jarman my thanks on behalf of the Reorganization for his honorable and out-spoken endeavor to show his audience who were the true Latter Day Saints, telling him I believed his statements would do us in Hanley much and lasting good. I further stated that over against the polygamy mole hill we had mountains of sectarian prejudice and religious bigotry to level down. The lecturer thanked me for my reply and and the audience to show their appreciation of my remarks gave me a good ringing clap of the hands.

On Saturday night previous to closing his discourse the lecturer announced that a gentleman (your humble brother) would address them for a short time. I spoke of the first principles of the gospel and as there were many temperance people present I gave them an account of the late contest at Independence, which rather amazed some. I also told them that when they were ready for the vote of prohibition in Hanley we would show them in what groove we worked. Well, I made a mark among them that will do good service in a day to come, and on the whole I believe that Mr. Jarman's visit to Hanley and the privilege he grauted me is a good turn in our favor and if all would bear a hand we should greatly profit thereby. All that I could wish for Mr. Jarman is that he were better posted in facts respecting the Reorganization so that when he endeavors to divide the truth from error he could demonstrate it with more confidence and assert that if his audience wished to enjoy a perfect religion tell them to investigate our claims. We went to our book agent for a copy of the Manuscript Found but he was out of them. This and such tracts as "Truth Made Manifest" I think would be useful. I think he has Rev. W. Sheldon's "Mormonism Reviewed" and had I the means we should have Bro. Blair's reply to that work.

There are vet other events developing in which the Saints in Hanley will be able to assert themselves if faithful. There are those even now who give us the friendly greeting as we pass to and fro, that would at one time have spurned us out of sight. I gave the people a few items to consider and if it was worth their while to take them in hand they could do so and I would meet them, namely, that Joseph Smith was a prophet sent of God; that the church is Christian in all its teachings; and its members law-abiding; that Joseph Smith did not receive a revelation from God commanding him to teach and practice polygamy; that Joseph and Hyrum Smith did not practice polygamy; that polygamy was not an original tenet of the church; and that the Book of Mormon is not culled from the Spaulding Manuscrint.

There is yet a faithful little band of soldiers holding the fort in Hanley and it will be gratifying to some now in America to know that Sr. Edwards is one of that little band which only numbers about one fifth of our recorded number. We work and wait with patience for the reinforcements which surely must come if faithful. If I have erred in judgment in the minds of any I am sorry. Your co-worker,

HENRY TABBINER.

THE "ONE FAITH."

"ONE Lord, one faith, one baptism."-Eph. 4:5. Faith being "The substance [assurance] of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen," (Heb. 11:1), it is the assurance which men have of the existence of things which they have not seen and, must be the principle or motive that induces them to act in order to obtain things desired and expected. Without it both mind and body would be inactive. Without a believing that he would reap a harvest the farmer would never sow or plant; consequently our very existence depends upon our faith. Without the assurance of obtaining food and raiment through our exertions we would remain inactive and death would be the result. As matemporal so it is in spiritual things: for unless we obey the gospel we would not obey its requirements. And as all temporal blessings come through faith so all spiritual blessings are obtained in like manner. Without faith we can not please God, (Heb. 11:6), for they that come to him must believe that he is a rewarder of those who obey him. And as there is but the one faith that must be the only one that will please him. And so Paul wrote to "All that in every place call upon the name of Jesus Christ," (I Cor. 1:2), and says to them, including us, "Exemine yourselves, whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves," (2 Cor. 13:5), and as in

Jude all are exhorted "to earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the Saints,' and as "faith comes by hearing the word of the Lord," (Rom. 10: 16), the Saints in Jude's day must have known what that system, order, or plan of faith that was delivered to those former Saints, what God required of them and how he had rewarded them when obeying him, and the penalty inflicted upon them when disobedient. God must have required the same obedience of them and us; promised the same reward and taught to expect the same penalty for disobedience. That must have been the "one faith" all will agree, and in order to "examine ourselves, whether we be in the faith once delivered," let us carefully examine the word and learn what that faith was among the former Saints as a standard to examine our own selves by. Paul tells the Gentile Saints that Israel. the former Saints, had fallen because of unbelief, and says: "And thou standest by faith. Be not high minded, but fear." And why? "For if God spared not the natural branches, take heed lest he also spare not thee."-Rom. 11: 20, 21. Here we learn that "the faith once delivered" to Israel had been departed from by them, hence their fall, and that this same faith by which they stood had been obtained by those whom Paul addressed. They must have obtained this faith by hearing it as formerly taught to Israel. Their obedience for a season was seen in the fruits and rewards of this faith and obedience, and the fall of Israel was through rejecting it. In this they had the assurance that, if they should depart from this "one faith," God would no more spare them than he did Israel. Paul further reasons that it would be far more reasonable to suppose that, as God had "broken off" the natural branches, the seed of his "friend" Abraham, also the house of David, the royal ancestor of Jesus Christ, his brethren after the flesh, how much less might we expect him to spare the Gentiles, the seed Esau, of whom it is written, "Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated," (Rom. 9:13), if they should depart from the "one faith" by which alone Israel had been accepted as God's people and the departure from which had caused their overthrow when the wrath of God was poured out upon The kingthem to the very uttermost? dom was taken from them as Jesus had said in Matthew 21:43: "Therefore say I unto you, the kingdom of God shall be taken from you and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof." Israel was almost exterminated by the Roman bringing forth the fruits thereof." sword, the miserable remnant left was scattered among all nations, where untold suffering, tribulation and anguish have been their heritage until very recently, whilst the unalterable decree went forth from the great loving heart of Him who would have gathered them and restored to them the "one faith" again as he wept over them becase they would not believe him and through the "one faith" again bring forth the "fruits of the kingdom," that "Jerusalem should be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled."-Luke 21:23. Who will deny after reading those Scriptures that the faith of the Gentile Saints, by which they stood and obtained favor with God, was the same faith once delivered to Israel, the "one faith" by which they brought forth the fruits of the kingdom? And as they were the nation to whom the kingdom was transferred from Israel they brought "forth the fruits thereof" by that "one faith."

Now let us carefully inquire into this. That former Saints had the gospel is evident from Hebrews 4:2: "For unto us was the gospel preached as well as unto them," &c. And included in the promises unto them was that of an everlasting priesthood whereby they were distinguished from all other people. Proof: "Now therefore if ye will obey my voice inded, and keep my covenant, then ye shall be a peculiar treasure unto me above all people, for all the earth is mine; and ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests and a holy nation."—Ex. 19:5, 6. Compare this with what was said to the Gentile Saints after they had received the kingdom through obedience to the gospel; "Ye also as lively stones are built up a spiritual house, a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God by Tesus Christ." "But ye are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a peculiar peo-ple."—1 Pet. 2:5, 9. Who can not see that it was the same "kingdom of priests," with its "peculiar" fruits, that was transferred from Israel to "a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof!" This is further evident from the continuation of the ninth verse: "That ye should shew forth the praises of him who hath called you out of darkness into his marvelous light" or kingdom. They showed for his praises by "bringing forth the fruits thereof." What were the fruits of the kingdom? and how were they produced in ancient Israel? They were the gifts and blessings of the Spirit of God conferred through faith in and obedience to His word as revealed through the "royal priesthood." Read of the wondrous miracles done in Egypt, at the Red Sea and in the wilderness through Moses; also the plagues on Pharaoh, the sea divided, water bursting forth in the wilderness, a nation healed of the bite of deadly serpents, etc., all by "faith." Under Joshua who was called of God and ordained by the putting on of Moses hands as his successor (Deut 34:9) and who was filled with the gift of wisdom. Thereby the waters of Jordan were divided, the walls of Jericho thrown down, armies overthrown, the day lengthened out, etc., and all by faith. Read Hebrews, chapter eleven, in regard to the wonderful fruits of the kingdom under Moses and the prophets. Miracles, healings, cleansing of lepers, healing the bite of serpents, prevailing against deadly poison (2 Kings 4: 40, 41), the dead were raised, violence of fire quenched, dreams unfolded and explained, tongues interpreted by wise Daniel, and all by faith, and all through the "royal priesthood" set in that kingdom, and a continued succession of the priesthood as long as they were permitted to live in that kingdom. Compare this with the promises of Iesus Christ in Matthew 16:16-18. to all that would come into his kingdom, and we learn that all the fruits of the kingdom were promised to them through And that they did bring forth all the fruits of the former kingdom is evident from Paul's word in r Corinthians 1:1-7: "I thank my God always on your behalf, for the grace of God which is given you of Christ Jesus, that in everything ye are enriched in all utterance, and in all knowledge; even as the testimony of Christ was confirmed in you; so that ye come behind in no gift." As they came behind in no gift they must have brought forth all the fruits that had ever been conferred upon Israel before the fall. member that Paul was not writing for the instruction of the Saints at Corinth only, but "To all that in every place call upon the name of the Lord." And he therefore confirms the promise of Jesus in Mark 16, that "signs" should follow believers in all the world to confirm the truth of Jesus' word, for "they went and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, confirming the word, with signs following." By saying, "to all in every place," he shall also confirm you unto the end," (I Cor. I: 8), "to the end of the world" as promised in Matthew 28:19, thus confirming his word with signs following all who "earnestly contended" for the "one faith," even as those at Corinth had been confirmed. And "signs following" was the only way of confirming known in Paul's day.

How can we know that we are in his kingdom to-day unless He by His Spirit confirms the promise unto us? No other way of confirmation is revealed in His word only by conferring its fruits—signs following the "one faith." This plan of rewarding those who diligently seek him" is more fully explained in chapters 12, 13 and 14 of this Corinth letter. The Gentile Saints were also blessed "With all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ."—Eph. 1:3. All the fruits of the kingdom that had been conferred upon the former Saints.

Peter writing to the Gentile Saints, "Which in times past were not a people, but are now a people of God" (I Pet. 2: 10) says: "According as his divine power hath given unto us all things pertaining to life and godliness."—2 Peter 1:3.

All the fruits of the kingdom "certainly pertained to life and godliness, and they had all those things given to them, and all brought forth by the "one faith." Hence we learn that all the blessings that had been conferred upon Israel as "a kingdom of priests" was transferred with the kingdom to the other "nation" that received the kingdom, and that it also was "a kingdom of priests," "a royal priesthood." Not that all were priests, for the Lord was so particular that none should act in the priests office without a direct revelation from himself unto them that Korah, Dathan and Abiram, men of renown, with all their kindred and two hundred and fifty were destroyed for attempting it. (Num. chap. 16). None were even to touch or look into the Ark of the Covenant except the priest; but Uzzah, in his blind zeal to do good, was stricken with death for even putting forth his hand to steady the Ark-slain because of "his error." (2 Sam. 6:7). Over fifty thousand perished at one time for even daring to look into the Ark. (1 Sam. 6:19). Even a mighty king in Israel was stricken with leprosy for daring to act in the priests office. (2 Chron. 26: 16-20). Such was the nature of the priesthood in the kingdom that it was transferred with its priesthood from Jew unto Gentile. Jesus Christ having received from his Father the "royal priesthood," which Israel had lost because of transgression, conferred the same upon the twelve apostles first: "As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I sent them into the world," (John 17: 19), setting apostles first in the transferred kingdom as Moses was first in the Israelitish kingdom. "Secondarily prophets" as the seventy were next ordained to assist the twelve (Luke 10:1) so seventy elders were ordained to assist Moses, who also became prophets. (Num. 11:26). "Thirdly teachers, after that miracles, and then other members, by whom were brought forth all the fruits of the former kingdom as seen in I Corinthians, chapter 12. This is more fully explained in Ephesians, chapter 14, where the order and duties of the priesthood are set forth by whom all blessings are received. And the same unchangeable law governing the calling of the priesthood is given in Hebrews 5:4, as in Moses' day; "No man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God as was Aaron," and was exemplified in the calling of Saul and Barnabas in Acts 13:4.

Having learned what the "one faith" was by which Israel retained the kingdom and secured God's blessing for a season, let us inquire into the cause of their falling away, and their ceasing to bring forth its fruits. In 2 Pet. 2:1 we learn that there were "false prophets" among them, who privily brought in "damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them," and brought upon "themselves swift destruction." How did they deny the Lord? Tesus said unto his disciples: "He that receiveth you receiveth me,"-Matt. 10:35; and those who rejected his servants also rejected or denied him. He also said: "O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets and stonest them that are sent unto thee."—Luke 13: 35. Here we learn how it was that they denied the Lord-by killing and stoning his servants-his priesthood placed in his kingdom to instruct and bless them.

And why did they do this? Because these false prophets, whom all honored because of their irreproachable character, all speaking well of them, being inspired by Satan, introduced the "damnable heresy," no doubt believing it, that true prophets were placed in the kingdom at first, for the purpose of receiving and writing the law like Moses and a few others, and that after this was done—the law written—it was an all-sufficient rule of faith and practice, consequently prophets were no longer needed, but were to cease, were done away because no longer needed; the Scriptures with uninspired men of learning to expound them were an all-sufficient guide until the Messiah, or the end should come; no more need of such a kingdom as was organized in Moses' day with inspired prophets, seventies, priests and miracles in it, but all done away! They could now select their own priesthood who would teach to suit them.

As a result, the Holy Spirit left them, and division ensued. Instead of "one body" and "one faith," as in Moses' time, there were Scribes, Sadducees, Pharisees, Herodians, etc., with as many different faiths as there were sects. Instead of inspired prophets and elders, there were rabbis, doctors and lawyers, all differing only in one thing; that there was to be no more true prophets until the Messiah should come at the end of the world. They all agreed upon this.

They would all unite to persecute the true prophets. The Scriptures, according to the wise interpretation of their manmade teachers, taught there was no need of any more prophets. This was their condition for near five centuries before Jesus came and told them they were all wrong, that they understood not the Scriptures, but had made void the law by their traditions; that he had come just as their prophets whom they professed to believe had foretold; that if they believed Moses, they would believe him. Yet so great was the influence of their false teachers, that he could not persuade them to believe him; but as a nation united in putting him to death, in consequence of which they were punished as here-in-before stated. All our religious opponents must admit the truth of this; also that an inspired priesthood was essential to the existence of the kingdom from Moses until Christ for the work of the ministry, edifying, perfecting and instructing them in the Scriptures. For although they had the law even written by the finger of God upon tables of stone, also their law written by Moses, and handed down to them in their own tongue, yet, without prophets, these false teachers, uninspired men, let them be ever so zealous and sincere, would so differ in regard to the meaning of the written word that good and honest men could not tell what it meant. As the Eunuch, no doubt a man of learning, answered Philip, when asked if he understood what he read, "How can I except some man guide me?"—Acts 8:

And strange as it may seem, those who can understand that all that I have said in regard to the kingdom of ancient Israel is correct, are so fearfully infatuated by the traditions of uninspired men, that they will persist in the same terrible mistake in regard to the kingdom of priests as transferred to the Gentiles, as the Jews did in regard to the kingdom of Israel, and claim that apostles, prophets, etc., were only placed in that kingdom to remain until they should write a very brief account of what Jesus said and did, and of the events for a few years after that.

And the greatest of these writers admits that they only "knew in part, and prophesied in part;" saw "through a glass darkly."—1 Cor. 13:9-12. Yet the fable is believed that, when only a part of those writings were collected, compiled, and translated by uninspired men differing in nearly every translation, that the uninspired translations of those writings, expounded by uninspired men so differently as to create hundreds of different sects' (vastly more than there were among the Jews) is an all sufficient guide without an inspired priesthood in the kingdom now! They hold also that the faith by which the Gentile Saints were enabled to please God in Paul's day, by which they brought forth the fruits or gifts of the kingdom, without which the Jews could not continue in favor with God, the "one faith" was only to continue until some one having this faith could write a history of the gifts of the Spirit being given to confirm the word everywhere it was preached; and then it was done away, and a common faith was all that was required, one that would produce no such fruits; and this "history" to suffice for our confirmation without those gifts; that, indeed there is no use of such a faith today, neither of inspired apostles, prophets, evengelists, pastors or teachers as Jesus gave to the Gentiles with the kingdom, to minister for, edify and perfect them, until they "all, in the unity of the faith, come to a knowledge of the Son of God; unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ;" that we might be enabled to escape "the sleight of men and cunning craftiness whereby they lie in wait to deceive," as taught in Ephesians, chapter 4.

Although Paul has taught in 1 Cor. 12: I, that he would not have us ignorant "concerning spiritual gifts;" (and he was writing to you and me, "to all that in every place call upon the name of the Lord Jesus."—I Cor. 12:1, 2.) And after here enumerating nine of the gifts, he states the purpose God had in giving them, "dividing unto every man severally as he will," in order that those having the different gifts might compose the body or kingdom, as the different members of the human body constitute the man. This is a beautiful and comprehensive analogy, one that the weakest capacity ought to understand. And after reasoning upon the folly of some of the members of the human body saying that they could get along and perform the various functions of the body without the assistance of all the other members, he makes the application to the Church or kingdom-"But now hath God set sfixed as unchangeably as in the human body the members every one of them in the body [of Christ] as it hath pleased him." v. 18. And then he forbids one member saying to another "I have no need of thee," but says emphatically that all "are necessary." Every member that God "set" in his church when given to the Gentiles, was just as essential to its existence and "effectual working" as were the members placed in man's body. He then says to those possessing the nine different manifestations of the Spirit, qualifying them to perform the different functions of the Church or body of Christ, (as he had reasoned that the ear, eye, nose, hand, foot, etc., were all members of the human body, with specific functions assigned them), "Now are ye the body of Christ, and members in particular. And God hath set some [of you] in the Church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues," (v. 27, 28), therefore to covet earnestly the best gifts, v. 31.

In chapter 13 he extols the beauties of charity, without which we might possess all the gifts and yet be "nothing." In 1 Cor. 14: 1, he says: "Follow after charity, and desire spiritual gifts." And he then instructs all how to use the gifts to edification, that if there is no interpreter it is best not to speak in tongues. But he says: "Ye may all prophesy one by one," and ends his lengthy instructions upon this important matter of which he would "not have us ignorant" thus; "If any man, [in every place think himself to be a prophet, or spiritual, let him acknowledge that the things that I write unto you are the commandments of God. But if any man be ignorant, let him be ignorant."

This is not very complimentary to those who say: "Oh yes, all he wrote were God's commands, but they are not now, they are all done away with." Yet they will say in partaking of the sacrament: "Examine yourselves; for he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself." Why so? "Oh, Paul said so in 1st Cor. 11: 29." We might just as well say, That is all done away. Sheer ignorance, Paul reasons, if nothing more, to deny a dozen commands and then teach one right in their midst!

"Wherefore, brethren, [in every place] covet to prophesy, and forbid not to speak in tongues. Let all things be done decently and in order."—1 Cor. 14:37-40.

If the "one Spirit" should manifest itself now in an "orthodox" congregation, in tongues or prophecy, would not the minister in charge be under the necessity of forbidding its repetition as contrary to their faith? I think so. If Moses' writings had been as plain to Israel as the New Testament Scriptures are to the Gentiles, do you think they could ever have turned away? Paul was only reiterating the promise of Jesus in Mark 16: 16-18, in the quotations I have made.

Among the fruits of the kingdom that Jesus promised in all the world, through faith, was: "They shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." James reiterates the promise and gives instructions in regard to the ordinance: "Is any sick among you, let him call for the elders of the church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord, and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up, and if he have committed sins, they shall be forgiven him."-James 5: 14-16.

This is as unlimited and universal a command as any in the Bible, even as the one to "repent and be baptized for the remission of sins."—Acts 2: 38. Yet it is utterly ignored by those professing to be the church of Christ to whom James was writing. Though professing faith in the power of God to heal, even to the appointing a day of fasting and prayer for this great nation that God might spare and raise up the late President Garfield from his sad affliction, yet never thinking to honor God by keeping his commandment in regard to this very thing-"Let him call for the elders of the church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord."

No, that would be too humiliating for this proud nation. Oh, that God would help them to remember that "in vain do ye cry Lord, Lord, and keep not his commandments." Another tradition of men is, that if they have committed sins by reason of which they may even become sick, (as Paul says in I Cor. chap. II, that because of sins "many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep"), that by confessing to the priest they can obtain forgiveness of sins without complying with the ordinance by which is the promise of forgiveness. The inference is that all have not faith to be healed yet all should obey God in order to obtain forgiveness of any sins they may have committed, through this manifestation of humility, faith and obedience.

That the fruits of the kingdom should have remained in the transferred kingdom is taught by the Lord in explaining "the mysteries of the kingdom" to his disciples in Luke 8th chapter. In the parable of the sower he says: "The seed is the word of God." Every seed shall produce fruit after his kind; Gen. 1. So when the word of God is sown in honest hearts and brings forth fruit, it must be after its kind -the word of God. As exemplified in Acts chapter 19, Paul sowed the seed, the "word of God" and it produced fruit-"And they spake with tongues and prophesied"—which tongues and prophecies were the word of God. Here a continued revelation, where the word, the "one faith" is preached, obeyed, and brings forth fruit, is incontrovertably proven.

All must admit that the "one faith" required of Israel to believe that the kingdom of God organized according to the command of God under Moses, with its priesthood, including inspired prophets, elders, Aaronic priests, etc., with all its gifts and blessings conferred through that priesthood, should have continued as when first organized; notwithstanding they had enough inspired Scriptures to make men "wise unto salvation" as taught by Paul in 2 Tim. 3:15.

As the Old Testament Scriptures were all that Timothy had been acquainted with "from a child;" as without those inspired prophets to continually instruct the people they were at the mercy of false prophets who soon persuaded them that the Scripwere all-sufficient without continual revelation, and because of their rejecting the prophets (although they continued in that kingdom for a thousand years) they were led astray by false teachers who so perverted their "Holy Scriptures" that they were easily persuaded to reject their Messiah, although the manner, purpose, time and place of his coming had been the theme of all their prophets whose writings they professed to believe.

Reasoning from analogy, (as all agree that God is unchangeable and no respecter of persons), would not that same faith that had been required of Israel, and which they had departed from, they having lost the Spirit with its attendant blessings, and the kingdom, and this same faith being accepted of by the Gentiles by which they received the Spirit of revelation that Israel had lost with its attendant blessings, also the same kingdom of royal priesthood without which God's spiritual blessings were never conferred upon any people,-would not that "one faith" require of the Gentiles to believe in the continuation of the same form of government as God was pleased to organize for them when he had conferred upon them the kingdom? The one that was so plainly described to them by Paul and other writers as I have shown? Who can believe that if Israel had continued in that faith, had continued to receive God's servants instead of appointing their own priesthood, that they would at any time have ceased to produce the fruits of the kingdom, or that it would ever have been said of them, "The kingdom of God shall be taken from you?" Or that He could reject Israel because they had ceased to perpetuate the same kind of government that He first gave them, consequently lost its blessings, and yet recognize the Gentiles as His church or kingdom when they have utterly failed to continue the form of church government given them at first "as it pleased Him," and ceased to bring forth any of its fruits, being utterly destitute of any of its officers, gifts and blessings as were the Jews when doomed to destruction? Who can not see that they have departed from "the one faith" as much as ever Israel did? Who now believes in the form of church government as Paul describes it in 1st Corinthians. chapter 12; or in the gifts of the Spirit without which, he said, the "body of Christ" could not exist? These are serious questions. "Examine yourselves, and see whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves." Is it the work of God that caused the Gentiles to have hundreds of churches, all differing in faith, instead of the "one body and one faith?" Or is it caused by the adversary, the same as in ancient Israel? Let the Scriptures answer. Peter in the same verse where he speaks of the false prophets that caused Israel's fall, says to the Gentiles who had received the kingdom-"Even as there shall be false teachers among you, who privily shall bring in damnable heresies, even denying the Lord that bought them, and bring upon themselves swift destruc-Here we learn that a like fate awaited the kingdom among the Gentiles as had come upon Israel-"swift destruction"-and that it would be brought about from the same cause-"false teachers" bringing in similar "damnable heresies" as the false prophets had among the Jews. "And many shall follow their pernicious ways" as had the Jews, teaching that they had "Moses and the prophets," (or their writings) which they held was all-sufficient without living prophets to continually give revelations, and all folly to believe in such things now: it might have been necessary in Moses' time, but everybody knows there is no need of such things in our day." The same things were taught by the false teachers among the Gentiles, -that "apostles and prophets were all right for awhile until they should complete revelation, form a constitution or code of laws and write them, but now we have their writings—an all-sufficient guide without a continuation of apostles, prophets, or any inspired men now; and the gifts of the Spirit have also accomplished their purpose, guiding the church until we got the written law, and now we don't need them, neither that miraculous faith and the Holy Ghost by which they were given. The 'common faith' and indwelling Spirit is all we need now; no need of men 'called of God as was Aaron' to qualify them for the ministry now, since they have had the written word." An appointment by the church of learned men, educated for the ministry to expound the Scriptures was now all-sufficient. And those thus called could not be expected to preach and work at a trade as did Paul, Peter, and other inspired men, but they would devote their entire time to the work, studying to make themselves workmen approved, reading the Scriptures in order to be able to properly explain them. And in order to do this they must know how they were to live, hence a salary, and a pretty good one at that, for people are more refined now than in the apostles day, and they could not appear before them successfully in tent-making or fishermen's garb, as others had done.

"By reason of whom the way of truth shall be evil spoken of; . . . and through covetousness shall they with feigned words make merchandise of you."-2 Pet. 2: 1-3. That is, you must pay them as much or more than others—the lawyer, doctor, or other professors-or you can not obtain their services in expounding the Scriptures. Paul, upon the same matter said to the Elders at Ephesus: "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock over which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers. For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise, speaking perverse things to draw away disciples after them."-Acts 20: 28-30. Elders, ordained no doubt by Paul himself, turned away to false doctrines, so powerful was the influence of these false teachers even in his day. He said soon after this, "All they which be in Asia are turned away from me." As the Jews had fallen, so Paul, in 2 Thessalonians, 2: 2, 3, foretells the "falling away" of the Gentiles before Christ's second advent. He explains to Timothy thus in regard to it,-"Now the Spirit speaketh expressly, that in the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits and doctrines of devils, [just as Israel had done], speaking lies in hypocrisy, having their conscience seared [as] with a hot iron; forbidding to marry, and commanding to abstain from meats," etc., (I Tim. 4: 1-3), just what the Papal church did do. He further describes this terrible falling away farther down the stream of time: "This know also that in the last days, perilous times shall come. For men shall be lovers of their own selves, covetous, boasters, proud, blasphemers, disobedient to parents, unthankful, unholy, having a form of Godliness, but denying the power thereof."—2 Tim. 3; 1-7. Read the chapter and see if it does not describe modern christendom, "Ever learning, but never able to come to a knowledge of the truth," (verse 7), having, as did Israel, discarded the only means of obtaining knowledge of God, namely, confirmation "with signs following," "The fruits of the kingdom." Paul therefore charged Timothy to "Preach the word. . . . For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine. But after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers having itching ears, [just as Israel had done formerly], and they shall turn their ears away from the truth, and they shall be turned unto fables."-2 Tim. 4: 1-4. Fictitious stories, such as the prophets taught Israel. "We have no need of prophets," say they, "since Moses and others have written us such a perfect law. Any one who can not understand our learned Rabbis explain the Scriptures without prophets to reiterate them ought to be condemned." And now men say, "Our ministers having such superior advantages, and are so far ahead of men in Moses' time in literary attainments, that they don't need inspiration to qualify them to teach as men did in those dark ages."

Of this character, no doubt, were the "fables" with which the false prophets corrupted Israel, forgetting that "the wisdom of the world is foolishness in the sight of God." Education is necessary and very desirable, but it can never suffice for inspiration of the Holy Spirit in ministering in the things of God. The strange part is, that almost all Israel were soon led to believe them. Sad experience, however, has caused many of them to admit that all their learned, man-made teachers were wrong.

That similar "fables" are taught to-day by those who deny "the word" that men should be "called of God as was Aaron" in order to minister acceptably before God, can be proven by asking them in regard to their authority. And just as sure as God is a just, unchangeable being, "no respecter of persons," "the same yesterday, to day and forever," and "spared not the natural branches", (the Jews) for teaching and believing such "fables," neither will he spare apostate christendom. Prophecy said they would fall after the same manner of unbelief as had Israel; and history abundantly proves its fearful fulfillment.

In conclusion, I ask if all can not agree with me that the "one faith" once delivered to the Saints required of them to believe in, honor and obey God by earnestly contending for the necessity of the continuation of just such a kingdom as God organized for them through Moses, with all its gifts and blessings such as they did receive during the existence of their "royal priesthood" as enumerated in Hebrews, chapter 11, and "the fruits of the kingdom," notwithstanding they had the constitutional law, written with the finger of God on tables of stone, also written in books, with all the statutes and judgments by Moses, the great type of Jesus Christ, as directly given him from the mouth of God; and that those tables of stone, with the ark of the covenant constructed expressly to contain the law, the mercy seat and two cherubim, especially prepared for the purpose of God's High Priests receiving continual revelations to guide the people as long as the kingdom should be in existence, would have remained with them until Christ, if they had continued to receive God's servants? Also that "Holy Scriptures," written by the finger of God, was not sufficient for the government of his people without an inspired priesthood to continually receive revelations to guide them in all their changing circumstances? I think so. The kingdom, with its priesthood, could not be destroyed; but when Israel rejected this priesthood to rule over them, they thereby rejected God as their king. (1 Sam. 8: 7.) After sore chastisements to induce them to repent, still they continued to kill those he sent unto them, and "he sent unto them his Son, saying, They will reverence my Son."-Matt. 21: 27. But they also killed him, and then the kingdom with its "everlasting priesthood" was taken from them as a nation, and "given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof."—Matt. 21: 43. This "nafruits thereof."—Matt. 21: 43. This "nation," the Gentiles, understood perfectly why Israel were "broken off" and lost the kingdom. It was because of unbelief,-"And thou [the Gentiles] standest by faith," (Rom. 11: 20), the same faith by which Israel formerly stood in favor with God; the faith in the necessity of the perpetuity of the same organization as God "set in the church," "the kingdom of his dear Son" as it had been given to them "as it hath pleased him," described so plainly hereinbefore, with all its gifts and blessings. Who can show that any other faith ever did or ever can please God? Yet with the terrible example of apostate Israel "written aforetime for their profit and learning," (Rom. 15: 4), they soon began to "bring in privily," (for it was too glaring an absurdity after Israel's example to be publicly taught at first) the same "damnable heresies" that had caused Israel's overthrow, such as, that after the Twelve had established the church, written the law for it, that they then needed no more revelations; no more apostles or inspired men, and no more gifts of the Spirit. And as "all Asia" had turned away from Paul, it is evident that they had even denied his apostleship, claiming perhaps, that there were to be no successors in that office! and that only the first twelve, and their writings, were all that was necessa-

Reasoning from analogy, if Jesus had written with his own finger all the requirements of the gospel, and the statutes and judgments pertaining thereto, upon imperishable material, placed it in as secure a place as "the ark of the Covenant," and the church had remained in one land, used only the one language, as did ancient Israel, yet there would have remained the same necessity for an inspired priesthood to administer in its ordinances, preaching, baptizing, laying on hands for the gift of the Spirit and in ministering to the sick, etc., as from Moses until Christ. This was and is the "one faith." Dear reader, is this your faith? "Examine your own selves whether ye be in the faith; prove your own selves."

PRESERVATION OF HEALTH.

IT cannot be too generally known that we practically breathe through the skinin other words, that the skin has a function something like that of the lungs. It can not, of course, be active unless kept clean. But in other ways than by neglect of cleanliness can its usefulness be impaired. Tight clothing cripples it and keeps the poisons which should be thrown out at the surface locked up in the system, and also shuts out pure air which should reach the skin. In purchasing underclothing, therefore, it should be so large that, even after frequent washing and shrinking, it will be loose and permit a volume of air between it and the body. It naturally follows that the outer garments should also be comparatively large, and at least enough so to permit every movement to be made with as much ease when they are on as when they are off.

There is a habit which all, without exception, should practice, and yet it is safe to say that not one man in ten of our people do follow it. Reference is made to the removal of the undervest on retiring, and the substitution of one kept for night wear alone. The underclothing, during the day, becomes filled with emanations from the body, and must be well aired regularly every night, otherwise it becomes to a considerable extent poisonous, and the noxious matters are again absorbed by the skin. This self-poisoning is sure to go on unless the rule given is observed.

Safety from "colds" depends in no slight degree upon how the neck is dress-Nothing should be worn about it which interferes with its freedom of movement, nor should it be encumbered with handkerchiefs, which so many wear as much for appearance as for comfort. Let each one now choose a certain kind of collar, and wear no other style until spring comes. Even a very slight variation in this important article of dress will favor a The habit of wearing the sore throat. fashionable bandages-silk handkerchiefs is an exceedingly bad one to get into, and, as a rule, those who have it are frequent sufferers from throat troubles. Practically the collar and necktie will be sufficient protection for the throat. When the cold is intense, turning up the coat collar will be a sufficient additional protection, unless one is riding far in a strong wind.

When leaving the cold air and entering warm rooms, remove the outer wraps at Ladies fail to observe this rule oftener than do men. When people have been long enough in warm rooms to become heated, they should not leave them and at once enter their carriage or a street Under those conditions they are chilled even by a short ride. Before attempting to ride they should walk a few blocks, until the body is accustomed to the change and circulation is active. During prolonged exposure to cold, as on long drive, hot drinks should not be indulged in, for they render the body yet more sensitive to cold.

A word about foot coverings. Woolen stockings, of course, should be worn by all. Wear now heavy shoes, and delay to put on overshoes as long as possible; when once they are on, keep them in service until next spring. Car drivers, conductors and other men out all day in the cold will be by far more comfortable if they discard leather boots and shoes and wear cloth shoes inside their overshoes. Then their feet will be better ventilated, perspire less, and hence keep much warmer.—Boston Herald.

EXPERIENCE.

A RELIGION of mere morality and formality, however perfect of its kind, falls short of the divine pattern. Morality is not to be undervalued, nor can formality be dispensed with; but when these exist as a substitute for true religion, instead of being its appendage merely, danger of a fatal nature is seeking supremacy, and blinding the eyes, and should be repelled. A radical heart renovation is the only experience that will take a carnal man out of the bondage of corruption, and prepare the heart for "the spirit of adoption," whereby it can cry "Father, Father;" and nothing short of this experience can introduce one into the divine family. "Because ye are sons, God hath sent forth the spirit of his Son into your hearts"—and with that heart experience there is internal joy, that will manifest itself outwardly, whether through prescribed forms or otherwise. "First pure, then peaceable," is the sacred rule; and with this purity of heart morality will be an inevitable result.

A clean fountnin will send forth a clean stream. A clean heart will produce a clean life. This constant struggle to correct the life may well lead us to question whether the heart is correct. Let the heart be so fully under divine rule as to change its relish, and there will be less trouble about faulty conduct—not that there will be no temptations, but there will be a strong power to control the heart and regulate its aspirations.— W. S. in World's Crisis.

PLAINNESS IN THE PULPIT.

A MAN who can not make things plain is not qualified to fill a pulpit. First of all let a preacher think out his subject so thoroughly that his ideas shall lie clear and distinct, like crystals, in his own mind; and then let him remember that a "straight line is the shortest distance between two points," and speak accordingly. What right has he to use an involved and tortuous manner when declaring the great things of God—darkening counsel by words without knowledge? What right has he to come before plain people in the straight jacket of professional dignity, and talk of "volition" instead of will, "intellectual process" instead of thinking, and "moral obligation" instead of duty, and the like, as if the very use of language were, as Talleyrand suggests, "to conceal ones thoughts?"

What right has he to give his hearers the hard stone of metaphysics, when they are dying for the bread of heaven? What right has he to bring forward profound disquisitions and curious speculations, when the command is, "Preach the preaching that I bid thee?" And what right has he to hide that Christ whom he is to make known, amid the flowers of rhetoric, as Verlst in his portrait of James II. virtually hid his Majesty, in a profusion of sunflowers and tulips? When the late young preacher, Erskine Haws, was dying, he said, "I wish to live to preach the gospel more simply." How many at death's door have felt as he felt!—Dr. C. Fish.

Evans.-Near Scranton, Pennsylvania, November 18th, 1888, to Bro. Francis and Sr. Elizabeth Evans a daughter. Blessed December 30th, 1888, by W. H. Kelley and named Margaret.

MARRIED.

FANNING-HARRIS.-At Stuart, Montana, at the residence of Sr. Mary Harris, February 11th, 1889, by Elder J. C. Clapp, Mr. William Fanning to Sr. Margaret Harris, daughter of our dear departed Isaac Harris. About one hundred guests were present and at four o'clock the piano under skillful hands poured forth the wedding march in most enchanting strains, which was the signal for the appearance of the candidates with their attendants. As they entered and took their positions the music softened down to a low, sweet pitch while the ceremony was being performed. When completed and the minister had introduced the Bride as "Mrs. Fanning" the music struck up more lively than ever and amid congratulations, music and song the hours were made joyous until six p. m., when we were invited to sit down to a dinner that I will not undertake to de-Suffice it to say that Sr. Harris superintended it; that it was the occasion of the wedding of her eldest daughter, and that is enough to say that it was elegant as were also many presents brought in by admiring friends. May the tide of love roll smoothly on.

DIED.

McKinney.—On February 1st, 1889, Andrew J. McKinney, husband of Sr. McKinney, aged 25 years and 14 days. He was born January 17th, 1864. He leaves a wife and one child. He was esteemed by all that knew him. He was a loving husband and a kind father. Funeral sermon by Bro. W. Weston.

GRIFFITHS - Amaleia, daughter of Bro. aud Sr. John and Jane Griffiths, at Cleveland, Iowa, February 7th, 1889. She was born at Zero, Iowa, May 4th, 1888 Funeral services by Elder John Watkins, Sen. Funeral services by Elder John WOLLISCROFT — James Henry, infant son of Mr. James and Sr. Mary Wolliscroft. He was born June 6th, 1888, and died, February 9th, 1889, at Cleveland, Iowa. Funeral services by Elder John Watkins, Sen.

NELSON.—Bertha Christina Nelson, the beloved wife of Bro. Peter Nelson, fell asleep on February 12th, 1889, with a glorious hope in the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ. She said that she was not to live long and had all things in readiness. After a brief illness of three days without a struggle she called her children to her and bade them good bye at the last moment, and passed away in peace. She was born October 21st, 1849, in Denmark; baptized by Bro. A. H. Smith on the way back from Utah in Grand River on the plains. She was 39 years, 3 months: and 22 days old and leaves a husband and four children, a father and mother and sisters and a host of friends to mourn their loss. Funeral services by elder M. W. Sampson from 1 Thessalonians 4:13.

McCue.—At Manchester, Lancaster, England, September 30th, 1888, Bro. John McCue, aged 68 years. He was first baptized in 1842 at Carlisle, Cumberland, by Elder John Irving. Was born at Brampton, Cumberland, June 3d, 1819. He received an early testimony of the truth of the latter day work and at once commenced to labor in its interest at the place of his birth and in Carlisle and vicinity and was, in company with his brother-in-law, Elder Samuel Hargreaves, instrumental in establishing a branch of the church in Lanark, Scotland. Was in Manchester at the Lanark, Scotland. Was in Manchester at the time the Reorganization was there introduced and identified himself with the same by baptism January 13th, 1878, and was ordained an elder the same day by Elders J. Miller and J. Dewsnup. At the time of his death and for some time previous he held the position of branch teacher. Buried at the Manchester Southern cemetery, Elder Joseph Dewsnup officiating. mon by Elder Henry Greenwood. Funeral ser-

THE CHICAGO TIMES believes that news makes and "sells" a newspaper.

IT BELIEVES that the public wants the news, all the news, the latest news.

IT BELIEVES that in printing the news a newspaper must print the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

IT BELIEVES in printing the truth without fear or favor, uncolored by prejudice or predilection, unbiased by personal interests or preferences, regardless of parties, cliques, or individuals.

THE CHICAGO TIMES, with wise extravagance, uses its unrivaled facilities for collecting and spreading all the news before its readers in an attractive manner and in a readable style.

THE CHICAGO TIMES has quadrupled its circulation in less than one year under its new management since the reduction of the price of its daily edition from 5 to 2 cents a copy.

THE CHICAGO TIMES is in every sense of the word a great metropolitan journal. It circulates in all parts of the United States and Canada, and and is read wherever the English language is spoken.

THE CHICAGO TIMES, while printing all the news of the day, from all parts of the world, likely to be of interest to its readers, chronicles with careful attention to details the daily history of the great city in which it is published and of that great western country of which Chicago is the political, financial, commercial, and social center-

SIMEON ATWOOD.

WE were pleased on receiving lately a letter from Bro. and Sr. Simeon Atwood, of Spanish Fork, Utah, whom we met in Kirtland, Ohio, in September, 1860, when holding a two-days' meeting there in company with Bro. James Blakeslee. those times "the number of the disciples" in the Reorganization were few and humble, but the Lord greatly blessed them with his Spirit, and marvelous favor and power were shown forth among them frequently. In the Kirtland temple, on a Sunday afternoon, Martin Harris, Leonard Rich and Bro. Atwood were holding services, and a Spiritualist medium from near New York City, sitting in one of the front pews, suddenly leaped to his feet, screamed, stamped his feet, hissed, shook his head violently and threateningly, and presently jumped upon the top of the pews, ran directly in front of the speaker's stand where the three aforementioned and Bro. Blakeslee and myself were, and, with a bound, leaped onto the top of the speaker's desk, then to the top of the next pulpit, then to the top of the next, and lastly to the top of the fourth and highest one where, amid screams and stamping and ominous shakes of his head he pulled off his fine black broadcloth coat and tore it in shreds, the meanwhile shouting re-peatedly, "Now is come the time of your trial!" Upon this the congregation fled from the temple rapidly and in great confusion, during which the "medium" leaped down from his high perch first upon one pulpit and then another till he at length sprang from the speaker's desk to the top of the pews, and running along on the partition between them to the pulpits in the east end of the temple he again ran up to the topmost pulpit as he had done in the west end of the temple, and he there stamped, hissed, shouted and swung violently his ragged coat with horrid threatnings. He next sprang down, pulpit after pulpit, and again leaped upon the tops of the pews, ran about half way across the temple, then turning to the right ran out on the back of a pew to near its end, and, with a hiss, thrust forward his outstretched arm in the direction of the north-east door where there were a few women hastily moving out as they could, and down fell a young lady prone and helpless on the floor. At this sister Atwood and Mrs. Whitley, the mother of the young woman, seized her and with the aid of others dragged her limp and unconscious into the vestibule, and to the outside door of the temple, where she went into dreadful spasms, and was so bound of the evil one that she could neither move, speak nor breathe. Her mother, frantic with fear and excitement, implored the child to speak, but in vain. Impressed with a stern sense of duty as ministers for Christ, Elder Blakeslee and the writer laid their hands upon her and, praying, in the name of Jesus Christ, with the power and authority of the Holy Spirit, rebuked the spirit that posessed her, bidding it depart, and instantly she was released, was lifted to her feet, and was led down the steps of the temple by her mother and sister Atwood to her home near by.

On invitation we called presently and saw the young woman and her mother at their home and from them learned that the young lady had once been a Spiritualist medium. And this it was, no doubt, that made her so susceptible to demoniacal possession as to be brought under the power of that wild, raving medium from New

Soon after the young woman had stepped down from the temple, the leapingmedium came out hastily in his shirtsleeves, his torn coat rolled up and tucked under his arm, and striking out rapidly down the hill toward lower Kirtland swung around on his heel, bowed himself and said, "I will see you again, gentlemen!" But that was the last we ever saw of him.

We were told by prophecy in the preceding conference, held in June, 1860, at Bro. I. L. Rogers', four miles from Sandwich, Illinois, that on our mission east we would be greatly blessed and have power given us to cast out devils. But we little thought it would come to pass in the manner we have related. No; we shall not forget Bro. and Sr. Simeon Atwood, nor the strange and wonderful circumstances under which we first met. And we write of this affair now for the reason that they are among the very few Saints now living who witnessed it, although there were probably four hundred or more persons who attended that meeting, the most of whom may have witnessed the transaction whether they understood it or not.

We bid Bro. and Sr. Atwood Godspeed, and hope to meet them in the happy beyond.

EBENEZER ROBINSON.

WE are asked, with comments, by brother L. B. Richmond, of Wellsville, Kansas, and others, if E. Robinson, the editor of the Whitmerite paper, The Return, is the man who proposed to build the "Missouri and Iowa Line Railroad." To all such inquiries we reply, Yes; he is the man. And in this connection we may say, we never regarded Mr. Robinson's dismal failure in that project as the result of a dishonest purpose when originating it, neither do we now. We have always thought, and now think, that he really believed he could build the road by the subscriptions of individuals along its line and those he might obtain from his friends in other quarters, he hoping at the same time for a grant of land by congress, and, possibly, a subsidy from the same source.

We never had the least confidence in his building the road, and when importuned by him to favor the project and take stock in it, we persistently declined and assured him we had no confidence whatever in it, for it had no substantial financial basis on which to build. We then knew as well as now that railroads could not be built without money or solid and extensive credits-or both-and we knew he lacked both.

We feared for him, and also for our confiding brothers and sisters whom he persuaded to buy stock in his projected road; for we knew if he failed-and we were very confident he would fail-then it would be charged that his motives were bad, his intentions and administration dishonest, and that disappointment and heartburnings would result all around. know of many in the church, east and west, who put their little sums into stock in his road, or worked on it with the promise of pay in due time, who have blamed the church and denounced some of its leading men because Mr. Robinson made such a bad failure and was still retained and fellowshipped in the church.

Many who read this will bear witness that we told them that Mr. Robinson's venture had no connection with the church, and that the latter nor its officers, were in no wise responsible for either its success or failure. It is nevertheless true that the church and some of its officers have suffered in reputation from that source, but it was and is unjust and unfair that they should, for that matter was solely a business venture, whatever the motives may have been that actuated and controlled those who projected it.

That Mr. Robinson's judgment in the premises was faulty—very faulty—and that his methods were most unwise and unreliable, we need take no time to argue, for the cold logic of accomplished facts placed that matter beyond question when, in the final burst up, he failed to pay the stockholders—at least some of them—even one cent on the dollar of their subscriptions. Many then, and some now, think he could and should have paid back their moneyin part at least. Of this we are not prepared to speak; but we still think that Mr. Robinson, in his first design to build the proposed road, did not act from dishonest intentions, but from unwise zeal, over anxiety to speculate and make money, and from false reasonings and deficient judgment. We have many grounds for this opinion which we do not care to mention now; and we write as we do to answer many questions and suggestions coming to us by letter and otherwise, touching this matter. And in the absence of manifest dishonest intentions, the church authorities could not call Mr. Robinson's conduct into question, and those suffering loss by his efforts at railroad building were and are left to seek redress by the laws of the land as our church law requires when it says: "We believe that men should appeal to the civil law for redress of all wrongs and grievances, where personal abuse is inflicted, or the right of property or character infringed."—D. C., 102, 11.

"THE RETURN."

In the letter department of this issue will be found a trenchant letter from Bro. Daniel Jones of Webster, Nebraska, in which he very effectually dissects The Return and the vascillating conduct of its editor. Surely the more Whitmerism is placed in the scales, the truth of a former verdict is clearly apparent—"Found wanting."

In this connection we publish some pointed comments made by Bro. E. L. Kelley in a letter written from Kirtland, Ohio, shortly after the first appearance of The Return. They are as follows:

"Your letter found me well, comfortable in the faith, and in good hope for the future. Will you please be good enough to tell me what it is that Father R --- at Davis City has returned to? Is it the evils that were carried on in Missouri, Nauvoo and Pennsylvania? It is the one hopeful sign of our body over the various factions, that we repudiated all such from the beginning and now. Is it to be a return to raking up the acts of men? Where will Abraham, Moses, David, Hosea, Peter and Paul appear? I have lived long enough in this world to learn that it is easier for a man to return to the shades of evil than to battle on for the good. A sow can return to the mire or a dog to his vomit, but it takes a strong, noble man to wage a warfare for Christ and not forsake his work because he sees failings and failures in his co-workers. I have heard of none so bold as to declare that the church has been rejected a second time. If not, when we pretend to return, it is from Christ-not to him.

"There are no evidences of any rejection of the Reorganized Church. Its acceptance with Christ is as much a certainty to me as that the New Testament is true—not an acceptance of the weakness of man, but of the work as Christ's—carried on as he best can with fallible man; hence you will find on my part no desire to return. I am determined to press harder the battle. I was sorry to see a squib in the Robinson Return misrepresenting the tithe and offering system of the church. If it is bad, let him attack it as it is—not attack a mistaken thing. It is wholly unlike the Utah system in theory and practice, and yet he tries to associate the two.

"There are no stipulated sums for the ministry, but he asserts there are. A systematic plan for meeting legitimate expenses and a salaried ministry are two different things. If the Return means to go back to the rule where there was no order or system but to give out the means in such a way as a 'Brigham' may get a half million, while a constantly faithful elder's family may be in distress for the necessaries of lifethen I want no return. There can be no just rule to guide without order; and order is not possible except in placing all upon the same plan and equality, which requires an examination into the matter of sustenance, and from this the Bishop and elder are able to make such 'estimate' as belong to a business properly managed. No, sir; no return to a way of doing business wherein there is no order; no law; no rule to guide."

Bro. Gomer Reese, of Bozeman, Montana, sent us the Montana Register of the 16th ult. containing the following item:

"Four converts to the faith of the Reorganized Latter Day Saints were baptized in Lake Crystal, near Minneapolis, recently. This sect differs from Mormons in Utah, on polygamy, in that it defends the tenet laid down in the Book of Mormon, which reads: 'For there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife, and concubines, he shall have none.'"

We clip the following from the Los Angles (Cal.) Tribune of the 17th ult.:

THE SON OF A PROPHET

STANDS UP FOR THE FAITH TAUGHT BY HIS FATHER.

Joseph Smith, son of the great Mormon prophet and president of the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints, is in the city, and will preach at the Church of Latter Day Saints to day.

He was called upon by the Tribune man, and to his inquiries in regard to the growth in the number of their followers he replied: "Yes, we have now over 400 congregations, representing a following of 25,000. We have churches on this coast at San Francisco, Oakland, San Benito, Pomona, San Bernardino, Los Angeles, and other places.

In addition to this, we have prosperous missions established [abroad] in England, Wales, Australia, and the Sandwich Islands. No, we have no reason to complain. We meet with good success, except where the word 'Mormon' is made to mean polygamy. We do not countenance that crime, and condemn all who do.

My father was killed in '44, and the doctrine of polygamy was not publicly proclaimed till 1852 by Brigham Young."

"Do you believe your father ever had any copper [gold] plates or stone spectacles?" "Yes, young man."

"What became of them and why didn't he keep them?"

"We believe, as he teaches, that the plates were given back to the angel after they were translated, and along with them were the Urim and Thummim, or 'spectacles,' as you call them."

"Did you ever see them?"

"No. I was not born at the time, 1827, but my mother says she saw them."

"Where do you go from here?"

"In a few weeks, to Utah. Yes, the polygamists call me an apostate, but some will listen to me, and I believe I can do them good."

THE Davis City, Iowa, Advance of the 28th ult. says:

"Rev. Mark H. Forscutt baptized three on Sunday, and five on Monday last. This makes fourteen baptized by him here in the last few weeks."

THE Wilber, Nebraska, Republican of February 21st thus refers to the labors of Bro. R. M. Elvin at that place:

"Elder Elvin baptized Mr. and Mrs. Sharp in the Blue, yesterday afternoon. The meetings which Mr. Elvin has been holding, the past two weeks, closed last evening."

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

President Joseph Smith wrote from Los Angeles, California, February 18th:

"Bro. Burton and I arrived here Friday the 16th at noon. I spoke twice yesterday, to very attentive audiences, though they were not large. The attention at night was very marked. Rev. Sam Jones has just left the city after a three weeks' "wrassle" with the "devil and his cohorts" He took $2.500 for his services, lived at the Westminister Hotel at a $100 per week, and left the churches to "divide the spoils"—converts. Barnum was nearly right when he said that "men preferred to be humbugged rather than to have the truth." It is as true of religion as of shows The impression left on the average mind is that Sam Jones is over-rated as a man and a preacher—but "he makes it pay."

Sr. Ann Johnson, of Little Sioux, Iowa, renews for her Herald and says:

"I would not do without it so long as I can get means to pay for it. It contains the best of reading—none excepted."

Sr. Johnson is one of the veterans; joined the church with her husband in an early time in England, came to western Iowa, and united with the Little Sioux branch about 1861, as did also her husband and family.

Bro. Hiram Rathbun in a late letter from Fremont, Indiana, says:

"We are usually well, cheerful, hopeful and happy. Hope to get home before General Conference long enough at least to say good-by. I am sorry to say that our very dear, indefatigable Bro. C. Scott's health is rather poor. We bespeak for him the prayers of the Saints. The work in this district generally is as hopeful as could reasonably be expected for so large a field, restricted to so few laborers. Though clouds for the time may flit over the sky, yet all must give way before the light of truth and God's work move on. For this we work, talk, pray, hope and trust. Yours in the faith of Jesus."

Sr. Margaret Kelley thus wrote, February 19th, from Cuba, Kansas:

"I have unmistakable evidence of God's power and willingness to heal the sick and afflicted that call upon him in faith and obedience for manifestations. The work here has seemed to languish, but Bro. G. W. Beebe is now with us and is holding some meetings at Prairie Home, which seem to be well received.'

In a letter from St. Thomas, Ontario, Bro. James Bently writes as follows:

"Brn. J. H. Lake and R. C Evans have been preaching in St. Thomas, resulting in the bap-tism of fourteen persons during the last two months."

Sr. J. Irvine of McDonald's, Pennsylvania, subscribes for the HERALD and

I joined the Utah church in Scotland in 1852. My son, daughter and myself were baptized into the Reorganization three years ago at Pittsburg. I desire to be in the church and be kept faithful."

Bro William Leeka writes from Thurman, Iowa, February 20th:

"The work is progressing slowly, but surely.
In our branch the members seem to manifest good interest, and the meetings indicate spiritual progress. Quite a number of outsiders generally attend our meetings, and some of them claim that our church makes the best showing in regard to religious worship of any of the denominations within their knowledge. With some, however, our claims are too much. When we merely preach Christ and him crucified they accept it as good gospel preaching; but when we tell them that it is the everlasting gospel restored in its ancient purity by an angel as predicted and in direct fulfillment of prophecies in the Scripture, they turn away, apparently in disgust, and say it is making us equal with Christ and the holy apostles and borders on blasphemy! We feel much encouraged at the present outlook and hope to be able to report further progress."

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE cannot, until further notice, furnish the Book of Mormon; Rules of Order; Jothe following books: $1.50 (best) edition of seph the Seer; and Prophetic Truth. last named is out of print. The others will be announced when again on sale. We can supply the $1.25 edition of the Book of Mormon. We have a new edition of the bound book of tracts at 75 cents each. Such tracts as "Brighamism" "Idolatry," etc., were expunged, and others, such as the "Cowdery Letters," and other good ones placed in their stead.

Sister Clara Smith of Marathon, Iowa, mentions the labors of Brn. Whiting and Wedlock, who have been preaching in that vicinity.

Brother James Caffall wrote from Flora Vista, New Mexico, the 15th ult. He had held eleven meetings, and two persons had requested baptism.

Brother Henry Green wrote from Whiting, Kansas, that while at Richmond, Missouri, they had hoped to organize a branch, but that lack of work in the mines prevented. He left some inquiring. There is a varied feeling there concerning our work, which probably needs to be preach ed to be properly understood.

By recent letter from Bro. Anthony Delap, of Delavan Wisconsin, we learn that Brn. Short and Cooper are there preaching with success, and that some are ready for baptism. Bro. Delap says his faith is unwavering. He has grown old in the Church, and now rejoices in its prosperity and progress.

Brother J. T. Kinneman and W. T. Bozarth have been preaching at Spickardsville, Missouri, and vicinity of late, and the latter wrote from there the 26th ult., saying he intended to remain there for a season. His efforts were being opposed by a Rev. Padget of the Campbellites. We await results.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"The Night is mother of the Day, The Winter of the Spring, And ever upon old Decay The greenest mosses cling."

GRANDMA.

Before my mind there comes to-night My dear old Grandma's face; I see her sitting by the fire, In her old accustomed place.

I see those dark and lovely eyes Look full into my own. I see her smile, and hear her voice In soft and tender tone

She lays her aged hand in mine, And speaks of days gone by, She tells me of her many friends, While tear-drops dim each eye.

She speaks in tender, loving tones, Of those whom we call dead; Recounts their many acts of love, And kindly words they said.

She tells me of the living ones Who're scattered far and wide, And grieves because they cannot meet Around the home fireside.

She tells me of her dear old home E're Death had entered there; Of youthful days, when hope was strong, And life seemed bright and fair.

She speaks of many sorrows borne. Of trials hard to bear: Of failing health and bended form, Of years of pain and care.

And now, in half impatient tones, She says "She wonders why, When folks have passed their usefulness, They're not allowed to die."

No one has passed life's usefulness While love beams from the eye: While pleasant smile and cheering words, Bring Heaven to Earth so nigh.

There's nothing else in all the world Can thrill my being so As happy smiles and love-lit eyes And tones so soft and low.

They speak of a wealth of tenderness, And a soul that is pure and true; Of an unstained life and honest heart, Which seemed possessed by few.

As I, in fancy gaze upon My dear old Grandma's face, I think, "Who else in all the world Could really fill her place."

More than fore-score weary years Have weighed her down with care; Have made her steps so slow and weak, And bleached her lovely hair.

I know full well that soon they'll say, "Your Grandma's laid to rest, The tired hands will folded lie On a cold and pulseless breast."

But Grandma ne'er can die (to me). For memory's magic power Will e'er surround me with her love, Like fragrance from a flower.

In childhood's hour she tended me, In sickness bathed my brow; With mild reproof she taught me right, Can I forget her now?

Can I forget those handsome eyes, So filled with love's own light?

Or the gentle voice and loving words, Which made my childhood bright?

Earth may claim the feeble form, But Grandma's lovely face In the sacred halls of memory Shall have an honored place.

Selected.

Lamoni, Iowa, Feb. 28th.

LAMONI, Ia., February 22d. Sr. Frances:-As our president requested me, I will try and write of what we have done and are still doing in our Mite Society at Lamoni.

It is as the name signifies, a mite society. We have no dues except ten cents as membership fee, and have very few donations. Our work is mainly sewing rags and making carpets.

We have the names of eighty-three on our books;

twenty-two have moved away, and five are lying in "God's garden" with their hands folded, peacefully at rest.

We held our first meeting April 12th, 1883, and have met regularly ever since, once a week, with but few exceptions. Have received $640.10 and expended $637 to leaving a balance of three dollars in the treasury. Nearly two-thirds of our funds have been given to the poor, and the rest to the church. Our bell cost us $147, and is worth much more to us. It has reminded many of us of services at the church in the evening that domestic cares have made us forget. We have gained a reputation at least.

A family, who did not belong to the church, came here from Missouri, and as they seemed to be in destitute circumstances, we sent some of our members to see them. The woman said, after we had helped them some, that they heard where they lived that the "Mormons always helped the poor," so they moved here. We thought our charity misplaced in that instance, as the man was able bodied and could work.

Our society has not met with the encouragement it should have here in Lamoni, outside of those belonging. There are many mothers here who could donate old clothes or carpet-rags who feel that they can not spare the time to attend. We make use of almost anything; you would be surprised to see how every scrap is utilized. We do any kind of work in the way of quilting, tying comforters, plain sewing or sewing rags, and I can assure you the work is well done and cheap. We have a carpet to sell now. We would like to see a little more interest shown in our work. The little we have done is nothing to what we could do if we only had means. We have had calls for money from Saints in other states, and have aided them when we could.

The merchants here have been very kind in selling goods to us at, and below cost, for which we heartily thank them.

Sister Viola, we would like to hear from your society. We know that the record would show a faithfulness to duty some of us might well emulate. The success of the Lucas society encouraged us greatly, and we hope this will encourage others. However much these societies are laughed at, they are the means of doing much good; and as God blesses everything that is good, let us try to work faithfully even in the Mite Society.

We spend one-half hour in prayer with the Union, commencing at three o'clock, after which we attend to our regular business.

ELIZABETH J. BLAIR, President, ALTHEA DEAM, Secretary.

GLEN EASTON, West Va. Feb. 3d.

Dear Sisters: - I often think how thankful the young mothers ought to be for the instructions there are in the Home Column. I surely would have been glad if I could have had something of this kind to encourage me while I was raising my children. I have been a member of the church for the past eleven years, and never since I obeyed the gospel have I for one moment doubted its truth; and though I have passed through many severe trials, yet I can say God has always been a present help when I trusted in him. I have been healed at different times by his power, and I have seen others healed, and his power manifested in various ways. We have had Bro. James Brown with us for about six weeks. He did some splendid preaching while here. He is a noble brother, and his instructions to the saints are always good. He left our place vesterday to labor elsewhere; and may God bless his labors wherever he may be. We are lonely ever since he left us. I think the Autumn Leaves are just splendid, not only for the young, but for the old. I love to read their contentssuch grand instructions!" "So near and yet so far" in January number is so truthful.

I think the Prayer Union will accomplish much good. May God bless your labors; and I hope to be one of you ere long. Pray for me that I may see my way closely and have God's Spirit to lead me in the way that I can do the most for his glorious cause. We are most of us strangers in the flesh, but I seem to know you all in the spirit; for we are one in Christ our living head.

As this is the first time I ever attempted to write to the Home Column, I do not wish to weary you; so I will close, hoping that the dear Saints I have met in the past, when they read these few lines and see that I am still among the living, will breathe a word of prayer in my behalf, that I may be enabled to make my way from earth to heaven and meet loved ones to part no more. God's people are my people, and oh how sweet is communion with Saints.

Your sister in hope of eternal life, CAROLINE WAYT.

Friday, Feb. 15th.

Sister Walker:—I would like to say a few words through the Home Column. I am not yet a subscriber to the Herald but will be soon. It has proved a great source of comfort and instruction to us. Elder Scott is with us now, but is going away soon; to return after a time, we trust. He has held two meetings at Cline's Hall, Cortland, Ohio. The attendance was fair, but the deportment was not good. Most of the people were afraid to come out and hear, but in endeavoring to open their eyes to the truth he has performed his duty, and his reward is certain.

I think the outlook is brighter here than ever before and some almost persuaded to obey. The Saints, though few, are happy and contented. As for myself, every day develops some new beauty of this religion. Surely it is a light from heaven flooding our pathway, and awaking joy in the hearts of believers. I think all objections will be removed, by the coming summer to my baptism. I shall embrace the very earliest opportunity of being adopted into the kingdom, that I may be one with the sisters in all good words and works. The Lord has been very near to me of late; verily he is Father and friend to those who trust him.

Ever praying for the welfare of Zion I remain Your sister in hope,

M. ALICE PINKERTON.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Sr. Sarah Jane Butler, Long Island, Kansas. writes: "I would ask, Can there not be an elder sent this way. Our branch is in a disorganized condition. We have no preaching, but recall with pleasure the time when we were privileged to listen to Elders A. H. Parsons and G. W. Shute, and we hope to hear from them again. In conversation with the minister of the Free Methodist persuasion to other day, we were made to realize most forcibly, 'Blind leaders of the blind.' Oh, how I hunger for the bread of life, spoken of by the Prophet Amos. How can people who study the word of God fail to see that this doctrine is the same as that taught by Christ and his Apostles? One by one the dear Saints are departing this life and being gathered home; but we have the assurance that the dead shall live again, and the dead in Christ shall rise first. May we so live, so strive to be faithful to the cause of Christ, that when he shall come to reign we may be accounted worthy to reign with Him."

Sister Flora Hannah, Sand Run, Ohio, writes: "How is it that more of the elders do not come here? We are able and willing to pay their expenses. We feel that several here are ready to unite with us, and there is a great cry for a preacher, because there is none in our branch who have authority to lay on hands. Bro. Beatty and Bro. Matthews did good work here, but we need laborers in this vineyard. Those who were brought in were among the best citizens of Sand Run, the Lord calling them out because of the honesty of their hearts. One great cause of our being so firmly united is, we are all in the same position; all are working in the bowels of the earth for substance. When the work is slack for one, it is slack for all. There are among us no rich, no poor; consequently Ephraim don't envy Judah, nor Judah envy Ephraim. This is the grand secret of our unity. The Saints all have their own little homes and land sufficient for a garden, so when work is slack and times are hard we can not be put out of them because rent is not paid. There are four of us who meet for prayer every Thursday forenoon at ten o'clock, and such blessed seasons as we enjoy will never be forgotten. An aged and afflicted brother by the name of Vener, sent for us to come and pray for him. When we went he was very low, and was spitting blood. We prayed with him; and from that time the bleeding stopped, and now he is able to come to meeting and has received the gift of tongues, and my son Samuel had the interpretation. I told you before about Samuel's wife. She was given up by the doctors after they had tried four different ones. At last when she thought she was dying she sent for the sisters of the Prayer Union to pray for her, (you must remember we have no elders here), and she recovered from that hour. Thus you see God can take the weak things of the world to bring to pass his purposes."

CENTERVILLE, Iowa, Feb. 22.

Dear Sisters:—I now think I will write a few lines, though with a sad heart, after laying our little son to rest. We ask an interest in your prayers, for we have one now sick, hoping that God will bless him and spare him to us. Oliver was only two years and three months old, but could say his prayers, every word. But the Lord's will be done, and with this thought we console ourselves. We would like to say a word of thanks to Bro. Russel Archibald, for in him we had a friend in need.

Little Oliver was born at Cheltenham the 11th day of November, 1887, and died in Centerville, on the 18th day of February, 1889. He was blest by Bro. Gillen. Sr. David Thomas.

Dear Sister Frances:-Meditating upon the things of God, the affairs of the church and the approaching General Conference, it came vividly to my mind that at this conference all those ministers who have not quit the use of tobacco will have their licenses withdrawn; and remembering this, I feel to ask the sisters of the Prayer Union to pray earnestly to God that our brethren may see the evil of its use and acknowledge the loving kindness of God towards them in his counsel and that they may plead with him for strength to overcome. I feel that the Lord wants us to come up higher, and if we follow the admonitions of his Spirit we shall know how to dress, and conduct ourselves in other particulars. We shall be a peculiar people, not caring what others may say, but so live that they may be constrained to to acknowledge that we are serving God as becometh his children.

"The Science of Healing" by Elder D. S. Mills

in Autumn Leaves, is a very interesting article; and is just what I had been pondering about—oh, it did me so much good! Yes, indeed, we do so much need the gift of discernment, with wisdom, knowledge and understanding; and if we continually have our hearts lifted up in prayer to God he will not let us be in want of it.

Your sister, MARY KNIPSCHILD.

LLANELLY, Wales, Feb. 4th.

Bro. Blair:-The apostate condition of this part of the world has been the cause of meditation to me. That to transgress the laws of the Creator is injurious to man can be plainly seen in this field. I have not been able to do as much as my desires would lead to, owing to circumstances, but have tried to do all I could. The records kept above may, in time, tell that some good has been done. It is but justice to the brethren who have labored here in the past, as their financial affairs would permit, to state that all labor in this field is done under difficult circumstances. Unknown to the brethren who have had the pleasure of confining their labor to a republican form of government toleration of liberty in religious thought and practice has a heavenly ring to it, and hence the beauty of the law of life in Christ Jesus.

While the latter day apostasy pressed its feet into the free soil of America and left its footprints there to the disgrace of truth and the partial impeding of the little stone, the beast itself came over here and died, and the unpleasant odor of the carcass is still in the nostrils of the people. The spirit of the Evil One imitates a portion of the work of "that unction," even bringing things of the past to their remembrance when the New Evangel is offered to them.

There are no School-houses to be occupied in this isle by those wishing to publish "Glad tidings of great joy." That feature belongs to a nation whose constitution was authorized by inspiration. This nation is heavily taxed and tithed; the latter applied to the national church. The Protestants are prominently situated and have supplied themselves with commodious chapels, into which pride (one of the barriers against truth in the last days) and prejudice have crept. After taking in the situation we have tried to adapt ourselves to the best way at present available to publish salvation abroad by getting private houses to speak in and to speak on the streets when the weather is permissible.

Personally, I am laboring under great disadvantage, in that I can't use the Welsh language to any advantage. The men best calculated to further the cause in this field are those who can use both the English and Welsh. If limited to one the Welshman has the advantage by far.

I rejoice to read of the onward march of our cause in other localities throughout the world. And while the favorite anthem of this kingdom is "God save the Queen," my prayers are, "God speed the noble cause." Father has been and is yet wisely devoting portions of the time trying to recall those that during the dark hours of the past through the influence of evil and designing men have been induced to wander from the fold. It is hoped that through wise labor and the influence of the Holy Spirit all will be well. In this town is to be found the only chapel in Wales that is owned by the Latter Day Saints. There are only a few Saints in this branch, and a little more life and energy in those few would be commendable.

"Come up higher" was not only good and timely, but necessary to accomplish God's eternal purposes. May God bless his people with strength and wisdom to mold an acceptable character on earth and his servants with the necessary qualifications to fill their callings, and then further His work with rapidity. Hoping ere long to give better tidings from this quarter, I solicit the faith of all in our behalf.

Yours in bonds,

E. A. Davis.

SPRINGDALE, Ark., Feb. 17th.

In answer to numerous inquiries concerning this section of country, perhaps it is well to give a brief description of its merits and demerits.

The northwest portion of the state is admitted to be the most desirable, considering everything. The counties of Benton, Washington, Madison, Franklin, in fact the area bounded east by the ninety-third meridian, and south by the Arkansas river, is similar in soil, climate and productions—taken as a whole.

The Arkansas River Valley and the foot hills adjoining are best adapted for cotton raising—at least cotton is the staple product. There is no hay raised save a very little millet, and only a small percentage of corn and oats; of these barely enough for the use of the growers, in most instances. There is virtually no market for anything but cotton.

Some claim there is no market for grain, cattle and hogs, because none are in market. Others say there would be no sale for them if they were produced.

Very few cattle or hogs are to be found in a marketable condition. They are expected to get their own living—which is a very poor one this season—as the acorn crop, their main dependence in winter, was almost a failure the past season.

There is a heavy growth of timber on the Arkansas River, and in the valleys of all the principal streams. The soil in these low lands is very rich, but very sickly, with very few exceptions.

The bench lands and foot hills have a lighter soil, and contain more or less rocks, especially on the brow or declivity of the hills. But the rocky ground is said to be richest. These higher lands are healthier. And then the mountains! Occasionally a twenty, forty, or even eighty acre farm is to be found on the bench or second bench of the mountains; but usually it will be in disjointed patches. More or less of these mountain farms, (usually more) are very rocky. But in Newton county, and some other sections, the summit of the mountains is broader, extending for miles, giving room for goodly sized farms, it is said. But there are so little railroad facilitiesand their better mountain regions are so hidden and hemmed in (almost inaccessible) that people who wish to live as civilized enlightened and progressive communities do, are slow to settle there. Nevertheless the natural advantages are all that could be wished for. The soil produces abundantly about everything one could desire in fruit, vegetables and grain. Peaches are the principal fruit (save wild berries which are plenty in many places) on the south side of the mountains, bordering on the Arkansas Valley. Apples are as good a crop, however, a few miles back—and up.

There is a broad coal belt, reaching from the west line of the state nearly half way across eastward, and from the Arkansas Valley to the north line of Washington county, undeveloped, however, except in a few localities. At Coal Hill, Johnson county, on the line of the Little Rock and Ft. Smith Railroad, there are a number of coal mines in successful operation—successful at least to the managers.

And right here let it be stated, what is an undisputable fact, that certain parties at Coal Hill are and have been flooding the United States with printed circulars holding out inducements to settlers, and making statements concerning the natural advantages of that immediate locality which are false in every important particular. One man near there told us there were over forty families in Coal Hill, really starving. We can not doubt it.

Here in the vicinity of Springdale—near the north line of Washington—there seems to us near every facility for making a perfect home as we can well imagine existing in one place on this mundane sphere. The climate is delightful—neither subject to extremes of heat or cold. The February of here is similar to April in Lamoni or farther north. There is an abundance of nearly all the common fruits, and the face of the country is level or rolling, though mountains are in plain view. In fact this is a kind of plateau, from 1,300 to 1,500 feet in altitude, it is said.

To those purposing going south of here—even to the Grand Prairie, or Lonoke country—we would say, Don't go there to live. Or if you do, get your life insured and leave your families behind you. We have seen enough of the plain lowlands, and conversed with so many who have traveled over the whole state, those who have resided in these beautiful level localities—and we are confident that they are without an exception, sickly, especially for northern people, and to them fatally so.

Here we find fine fields of clover and timothy are raised, most kinds of grain, and every vegetable common to any of us, besides worlds of fruit. Timber is plenty, water good—usually freestone—soft and pure.

We hear of very little work just at present here, in or near Springdale. The railroad line which enters this state from Missouri, passes through here, the St. Louis and Frisco having branch connections ten miles north at the booming little station of Rogers, and the same distance south at Fayetteville. There is said to be plenty of work both at Rogers and Fayetteville. There are flattering prospects of another railroad here. And we are told that there will be plenty of call for laborers here in a few weeks, as soon as business opens.

Some are plowing for corn already, but to-day a two inch fall of snow covers the plessing land-scape in every direction. Springdale has a large canning factory, one of the finest roller mills in the country, woolen mill, two fine school buildings, besides churches, stores, smithies, etc. Claims 1,500 inhabitants. There are some rare chances for obtaining cheap, desirable homes, provided one has a few hundred dollars. Town property is, in most instances, preposterously high, however.

The soil is principally ginger color, with a clay

subsoil-sandy enough in most cases for successful, easy fruit-raising, deeper and richer in the creek regions where it is more broken. The oldest cultivated farms-in fact most of them owned by native "mossbacks,"—are tilled year after year without fertilizing, and with not more than half the amount of labor usual in the north, and still good, or fair crops are the result. There has been considerable emigration hereabouts from the north and east lately; and the people are beginning to wake up to the reality that there is a different way of living and a better way of farming. It is said, and we are satisfied of the truth of the statement, that a family can live comfortably here on half the amount of expenditures necessary in the north, after once being located

Dry goods, groceries, hardware, etc., are fully as cheap here as in towns of similar size further north. But away from the railroad, or even at stations along the Arkansas River, goods are much higher. The White River has its source in Madison county, south east of here, but it meanders northerly by us, within a few miles, on its way to Missouri.

There is a strong element of southern party spirit among the leading people nearly all over this part of the state. It seldom develops into true bravery or even to desire equal rights. But there is a wholesome fear of law, and northern unionists persist in remaining on southern soil whenever they choose to do so. But the snapdog yelp and venom will crop out in sneaking threats even as far north as we are.

There is a Grand Army Republic lodge at Springdale in successful operation. The old veterans are no easier frightened now than they were in time of the war.

Any further information concerning our country will be willingly given.

PERLA WILD.

HARTMAN, Arkansas, Feb. 10th.

Dear Herald: - I came to this place last March, rented a farm and went to work to get rich, not stopping to pray or talk religion to anybody, not even telling any one that we even belonged to any church. Finally my son told a man that we were Latter Day Saints, and the next Sunday the man and his wife came to see us, saying they came on purpose to learn what we believed. He was well pleased and during the day there were twenty or more came to eat peaches, it being about the first Sunday in June. All who came learned to what church we belonged. I will say that my farming was a failure, not raising enough to pay expenses. Whether it was because we tried to hide our religion or not, I can not say, but we got thoroughly advertized the day referred to. Finally a Baptist preacher came and wanted to know what our religious faith was. We talked on the subject some time when he said we were right and he was wrong and his flock was without a shepherd; that he would never preach again. He lives about sixty five miles from here and wants an elder to come there and preach. About this time quite a prominent man came into this part. He came to my house, he said, on purpose to learn what we believed and was wholly taken up with the doctrine. He was a member of the Christian church. I afterwards saw him several times and the last words he said to me were that if I would come over there and preach I could baptize him and his household. I did not tell him that I held any office in the church. He lives about forty five miles from here and is a Justice of the Peace-lives south of the Arkansas river. While all this was going on the Holiness people were holding meetings, abusing everybody that did not bow to their whims of doing away with all the ordinances taught in the New Testament. On the 23d of September two other men-John and David Nanny-members of the Christian church-began to enquire about our faith and were convinced the same day. They were entire strangers to me. They and their mother were baptized in January. Judge Moss, Probate Judge of Newton county came and visited me and is convinced of the work and invites an elder to come there and preach. He will furnish a home for him. I have just got a letter from a Bro. Worthington thirty miles from here wanting preaching at his place.

Bro. Wildermuth got here in November; was quite hard run. Went to work making rails and chopping cordwood for a living and preaching at night and when he could. He baptized six while he was here. He has gone from here to Springdale, where he expects to settle. There were a great many calls for preaching when he was here and full as many since. I cant see why there has not been an elder sent here to work this territory up long ago. Will say that if the Conference sends one here it would do well to send one that does not use tobacco. Bro. Wildermuth could not go to any of those places to preach as he could not spare the time nor the money.

WEIR, Kan., Feb. 20th.

Bro. Blair: Since last writing I have been preaching at two new places in Barton Co., Mo., and at Arcadia, Kansas, where much interest was manifested. Sickness in my family prevented my returning there as yet, and I have been preaching near home where I could return, often getting home near midnight. The first of the month I received a challenge from the Christadelphians to debate the unconscious theory, (and the Book of Mormon because it teaches contrary to that), with their local minister. I went to their head quarters, Scammonsville, seven miles away, to see them, and preached there to crowded houses the most of one week and part of the next, they opposing until after ten o'clock often. then agreeing to debate, requesting to be allowed to bring any of their church to meet me, to which I agreed, the debate to begin the 25th and continue twelve evenings.

I have just returned from our district conference at Angola, Labette Co., Kansas. Peace and union prevailed. Steps were taken towards procuring a tent for missionary purposes the coming season. Many places are waiting for me to return and preach more. One place, where there is a Seventh day congregation, where I preached a week last spring, one of their elders opposing one evening. Bro. Walter Taylor tells me they wish me to return, and if their elders can not refute our teachings, especially in regard to the Sabbath, some will leave them. I would rather meet that than any question I ever investigated. I want to go there soon. Many are admitting the truth, but it is hard to convince them of the necessity of present obedience.

As ever yours,

D. S. CRAWLEY.

COAL CREEK, Colorado, Feb. 11th.

Dear Herald:-I am young in the church. My husband, our oldest son, fifteen years of age, and myself were baptized November 15th by Bro. James Caffall. Since then we have had our other five children blessed by Bro. David Crow. I do believe this to be the work of God, for the testimonies I have received are enough to convince me. I was as sick as a woman could be, and I requested Bro. Crow to administer to me, and before he had removed his hands I was entirely free from pain. My desire is to ever be faithful and live near to God. I ask an interest in the faith and prayers of the Saints. I thank God for the day that Bro. Caffall came here. May God bless his works wherever he may go. My husband and my oldest sons are in Pennsylvania, where we expect to make our home before long. I am sorry to say there is not a Saint there, and my desire is that the Saints will pray for my husband and son that they may be kept in the true faith which they have obeyed. We know that prayers are much availing if we walk upright and just.

We have meetings here every Sunday afternoon and prayer meeting every Wednesday night; we hold our meetings at Bro. Menzie's house. Though few in number we rejoice. Bro. Caffall's words have come true that we would lose our nearest earthly friends as soon as we obeyed the truth. But that is nothing. What would it benefit us if we gained the whole world and yet lost our souls?

Your sister,
MRS. MARY WINSHIP.

BRINTON, Michigan, Feb. 22d.

Bro. Blair: With pleasure I write, having just closed a three evenings' discussion with Elder A. Weeks of the Seventh-Day Adventists upon the "Sabbath Question," and I feel it was a success upon our part. The first two nights each had two half-hour speeches each evening, and on the third evening we had three half-hour speeches each; then five minutes each for closing speeches. We had no moderators. The people put in one of the school officers for chairman to keep order, time, etc. Mr. Weeks acted fair, and with a good spirit, outwardly; but to my mind, and to the minds of a large majority of the people, he utterly failed to sustain his points. The proposition read as follows: "Resolved: That the Seventh-day Sabbath as given to Moses is binding upon man in all ages of the world." A. Weeks affirms, J. J. Cornish denies. The Seventh-day people have been in this part for several years, and my coming in among them seemed to stir them up a little, and one or two gave up keeping (or trying to keep) the seventh day. So when the elder came, he said he understood that some one wanted to discuss the Sabbath question, and gave the people to understand he was prepared to meet any one upon it. One of the men who had formerly believed that doctrine wrote me, so I accepted the challenge, and am satisfied that Elder Weeks will be like Elder Leland was two years ago, who said, "This is the first Elder of the Latter Day Saints I have met in debate, and I'll never meet another one." A vote was taken after the debate was over which stood fifteen for Elder A. Weeks, and eighty-nine for me. Many did not vote either way. I now learn that two who voted on the other side, said they knew I proved my points, and that the other man did not prove one point, and said the reason they voted as they did was because I was a Mormon. I expect to see several obey the gospel soon. Some have manifested a desire to obey. I have given them tracts and asked them to investigate thoroughly the doctrine before they come into the church. Our cause is onward. Several are now ready in Coleman to obey the truth. The First-day Adventists, I learn, are trying to work up a debate with me upon the "Soul question." Bring it along! I would like it splendid.

Mr. Weeks once threw out a little on the "pit," "prison," etc. I gave him to understand I was ready to meet the issue, and would not take a back seat for him nor any other. But he passed it off by saying he hoped they would get the other man to come out and challenge me. It seems strange that after they boast of their college-taught men-their great scholars-and of not sending their men out until they are able to meet the world etc., and yet they have to take a back seat when an unlearned, despised Latter Day Saint says, "I will take up that challenge, and take the Bible for it." But say they, "O, I didn't mean you, I meant the Methodists or Baptists or some of those other fellows."

I believe we should have a good tract gotten up upon the "Soul Question."

In bonds of love, I remain your brother in the one faith, J. J. Cornish.

BLUE RAPIDS, KAN., Feb. 12th.

Saints' Herald:-There is no remarkable news to write at present of the progress of the gospel in our district. We are still alive, however, and during the past year have seen several most excellent men fall into our ranks-men who have a wide reputation and influence for good throughout the counties where they reside. Of these might be named Frank Curtis of Clay county, Mills Stewart of Washington, and Wm. Parsons of Jewell county. These three men alone, new members though they are, have the influence and financial ability sufficient to preserve, build up and extend the work throughout this district if they will.

The North West Kansas District is not what it once was. The western portion of the state, weary of the slow progress of the eastern part, have disunited, divided and made arrangements o set up a district for themselves. The kingdom of Israel is divided; some Jeroboam, unwisely perhaps, or unadvisedly, has sown the seeds of disunion, and the result is that a district which, when united and in its most prosperous period, was small and weak compared to many others, is now broken into two comparatively weak and insigficant fragments. Henceforth Ephraim, with all his high hopes, with his glowing promises and enterprizing zeal, unembittered by the first tossing of the tempest, shall carve his own destiny and make his way alone among the elements; yet the remnant of Judah still survive at Mount Zion, and the name of the Lord still lives at Jerusalem—(that is, the original district.) We shall hope that the wicked Assyrian may not take advantage of our weakness and distress, and make both sections entire captives to his will.

The last conference of the old northwest Kanass district, showed a very decided growth of interest in the work. The three original branches and one newly organized, were fully represented and reported, and one promising young man was baptized. There are two missionaries who are devoting their entire time to the ministry in the district, this winter, under the direction of the Presiding Elder, viz, Elder George Beebe of Superior, Nebraska, (though he has been south of the state line,) and Bro Chas. Duncan of Kingston, Missouri. The former is doing a good work locally as well as travelling through the district. He should have the everlasting love, confidence and respect of the Saints everywhere, for the reason that when he is not engaged in building up this great work, he has always been exempt from that common weakness of human nature of periodically tearing down and dividing, not only what himself but many others have labored many years to establish.

Bro. Duncan is yet young in the ministry, but is doing splendidly so far as I have heard from him. He spent a week in Blue Rapids and left a very large and interested congregation at the close of his appointments. Bro. Duncan is of purely Scotch extraction, and claims that he was shown by God that he was of the stock of Israel, of the tribe of Simeon.

The future prospects for the work in this district are perfectly good, even though we have but half our former territory to operate on. All the work needs here is that the conditions may be made favorable for the natural workings of the work, and the use of a little-money, and the beatiful and fertile valleys of the Blue, the Republican and Solomon rivers be made happy and rejoice on account of the unexampled blessings of God's people. For instance, in passing through the district last fall, weak and discouraged though it was, I visited at least twenty-five brethren who were abundantly able to pay annually at least twenty five dollars for the encouragement of this great work. This would aggregate annually the sum of $62500. Let this sum be raised and expended annually as follows: To aid three of our. local elders, under appointment by General Conference by recommendation of district conference to work as much as their circumstances and this help would permit in our district, $100.00 each-$300.00. To General Conference appointees having oversight of this, and several other districts (by this disrict)-$200 oo To the worthy poor (and by the Spirit the writer knows such still are among us and should receive aid and assistance from this source)-$125 00-Total $625. oo. The above is but what should be expected if conditions are made favorable for this work to work as it should. And though defeated in our purpose we have worked and shall work that this may be so. I verily believe that if this reasonable enterprise could be brought about and the conditions simply made favorable for it, that five years hence our number would be at least a thousand, and ten years hence at least ten thousand saved and immortalized souls. In addition to this we should ourselves be a happier, wealthier and more contented people, worthy to inhabit so grand and glorious a country as are the valleys of Kansas named above.

We beg pardon for writing so long a letter of local interest only, but we believe God will soon bring about great things for the progress of his work here and desire to encourage all to hope and pray to that end. We believe the "sifting time" to be nearly over. We invite all the Saints.

who desire a home in the west, to look over this beautiful land, to which, if one ever leaves, they are sure in time to return.

Our district conference will be held at Blue Rapids, March 30th and 31st. We hope to have a good and profitable time, and that all things may work together for the growth and prosperity of the work. If it would be proper, and desirable, arrangements can easily be made for such as would enjoy it to take an excursion ride on the steam yacht "Gem City" to the forks of the Big and Little Blue rivers a distance of four miles above town. In hope of Zion's growth, prosperity and triumph, through the bestowal of the precious gifts of the Holy Ghost upon many precious souls.

Editors Herald: - Without any desire to dictate to, or assume to control other people's business, I have often felt inclined to write a few lines on the subject of complaint towards delinquent subscribers which I occasionally see made in many of the newspapers and periodicals of the day, and sometimes in the Herald. Now if editors would stop every person's paper who did not renew as soon as the time expired for which his subscription was paid, or satisfactory notice given for continuation, I am persuaded that much fault-finding towards delinquent subscribers might be avoided.

The old credit system in regard to newspapers and the like, ought to be entirely obliterated, and editors have it largely in their power to put it down. I have often heard an old saying and I think it a very good one too, that a man had better cry over his goods, than to have to cry after them.

Now I am much in favor of a law being made that when editors send their publications without some special contract on the part of the subscriber, that payment can not be compelled.

I have been for some time past as liberal a subscriber and reader of all that my circumstances would justify, of many of the publications in circulation, and have tried to keep up an invariable rule of pre-paying all my subscriptions. And now I wish to say a word to ye editors of the Herald and Hope, and I want you to post it up in your office, where you can see and not forget it, that when the time expires for which I have paid and I fail to remit the subscription price of each paper, or make special contract for them, and you fail to discontinue them, you may come up missing about the pay, unless you collect it by

I have a number of times in my life been much annoyed by having papers continued after my subscription and prepayment had expired, even after sending notification beforehand.

With kind regards, I am yours for the right, O. E. CLEVELAND.

THE ANTEDILUVIAN WORLD.

According to Josephus the name "Eden" was a general term used to designate the known antediluvian world. This Eden was bounded by, or at least included the great Nile, the Euphrates, the Tigris and the Ganges rivers, and on the south was separated from the Indian ocean by the shining coral strand that separates that ocean from the main land. The Armenian and Caucasus mountains on the north separated this sunny land from the "north country" which remained an unknown and unexplored waste until the time of the Assyrian monarch, Esarhaddon, B. C. 680. On this (Eden) land primitive man was born and here only attained nearly the age intended for him, that is, a thousand years. It was undoubtedly in the broad and fruitful valley between the Tigris and Euphrates rivers, now known as Mesapotamia, that man first sinned, fell, and thereafter fast deteriorated toward the level which he now occupies. By the time of the flood the average age attained by mankind could not have been more than onetenth that enjoyed by the first parents. God saw fit, therefore, to cleanse Eden of her first original inhabitants and hence brought on a flood of water and Edenic mankind disappeared, save only Noah and his family. These, being saved, increased rapidly and a hundred years after the subsidence of the flood the descendants of this man commenced the organization of the primitive nations or kingdoms of mankind. Of these nations we desire to give a brief sketch only of a small section of their history. Before noticing their decline and fall we will simply note the RISE OF THE EDENIC NATIONS.

The five principal nations of Eden named in the order of their antiquity were as follows: Egypt, Chaldea, Susiania, Kingdom of Israel, and Assyria.

The Egyptian race and nation were known to the first annals of history. It was in existence and flourishing when the others were founded.

The kingdom of Chaldea was founded by one Nimrod who became its first king and made Babel (Babylon) its capital city. This Nimrod was the fifth from Noah.

The Susianian kingdom was almost if not quite as ancient as the Chaldean and had its capital city at Susa and Susub, (Kudeer Nak hunta) became its first king.

The kingdom of Israel comprising the descendants of Abraham, the tenth from Noah, may be said to have originated when Abraham left Chaldea at the command of God 1921 B. C. This race was kept unmixed from the others by the rite of circumcision which was observed from the time of its founder.

Assyria, the last, was founded by a Chaldean colony led by Asshur who founded Nineveh to the north of Babylon. About the year 1400 B. C. Chaldea became very oppresive to Israel then just commencing to flourish under the judges, and Chushrithathine, the Chaldean king, brought Israel under heavy tribute to her for 8 years. This was followed by the growing Assyrian power making both Chaldea and Susiania tributary to Assyria -mere Assyrian provinces. In this condition these nations prospered until about 1000 years B. C. which was perhaps the most prosperous period in the history of these nations. We will briefly note

THE PERIOD OF EDEN'S GLORY.

During the reign of David and Solomon the kingdom of Israel may be said to have attained to its greatest glory. This also might be said of Egypt and Assyria. Five hundred miles to the southwest of Jerusalem ancient Egypt enjoyed the inexhaustable products of the great Nile valley. This rich valley, with its system of irrigation, probably projected by the patriarch Joseph and constructed wholly or in part during the period of Hebrew bondage, (its principal channel was called the river of Joseph), had become Eden's great southern garden. It was the granary of the whole world. The majestic flood of the Gihon (Nile) never failed to annually bring its supply of rich sediment which it distributed lavishly over the whole valley. This made the productions of that valley incredibly great. Herodotus says the valley contained 20,000 inhabited cities. Egypt at this time, as well as Assyria, aspired to universal sovereignty. But the land of Israel lay directly between, and it only had any promise by God of this distinction. Solomon, king of Israel, was the son-inlaw of the great Pharaoh of Egypt and he might reasonably have expected to obtain all Egypt by peaceful annexation in fulfillment of God's promise to his forefathers of universal sovereignty to the throne of David eventually, but this was not then to be.

Assyria lay to the northeast of Jerusalem some five hundred miles. Assyria proper occupied northern Mesopotamia, Chaldea central, and Susiania lower Mesopotamia. The last two were mere dependencies or provinces of Assyria at this time. This Mesopotamia (meaning the between river country) was Eden's great eastern garden. It contained thirty thousand square miles, while the alluvial valley of the Nile only contained twelve thousand. It lies between the Tigris (Hiddekel) and the Euphrates rivers. The land in some places between these streams is nearly as level as a floor for a distance of eighty miles and at this time would produce from two hundred to six hundred fold for every bushel of wheat, barley or doura sown upon it. Either of these three nations could easily raise and put in the field an army of one million men. The other portions of Eden were occupied, Arabia by the race of Edomites and Ishmaelites, and India, the Ganges valley, Ophir or the East country, by the descendants of Abraham by Keturah, all unfortunate or unfavored offshoots of the house of Israel proper. Of the Edenic nations the kingdom of Israel undoubtedly had the brightest prospect and the most glorious hope of holding universal sovereignty over all Eden with its fruitful gardens and its glorious residence mountains in the center, the best portions of which had been given them by Israel's God in an everlasting covenant with their forefathers forever. But alas, Israel was the first of these nations to decline and We will accordingly notice some events connected with the DECLINE AND FALL OF THE EDENIC NATIONS.

In the year 975 B. c. Rehoboam, son of Solomon by a Moabitess princess, was crowned king of Israel. This was made the occasion of the secession or revolt of ten of the tribes of Israel. The expressed motive of the revolt was the oppressive taxes for the support of the government and building the temple at Jerusalem. The real motive, however, was no doubt the aspiring ambition of the tribe of Joseph on account of the patriarchal blessing of that tribe through Jacob, who, blessed them in the following language: "But his bow abode in strength, and the arms of his hands were made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob; (from thence is the Shepherd, the Stone of Israel) even by the God of thy father, who shall help thee; and by the Almighty, who shall bless thee with blessings of heaven above, blessings of the deep that lieth under, blessings of the breast and of the womb; the blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my progenitors unto the utmost bound of the everlasting hills; they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren." With this glowing and preeminent blessing the tribe of Joseph resolved not to quietly and willingly pay longer the exactions laid on them for the aggrandizement of a line of sovereignty solely vested in the tribe of Judah. Henceforth the ten revolting tribes, including the tribe of Joseph, were known as the kingdom of Israel, while the tribes of Judah and Benjamin [and Levi?—Ed.] alone constituted the kingdom of Judah at Jerusalem.

The vexation between the powerful half-tribe of Ephraim and the tribe of Judah soon brought on a civil and sanguinary war. The armies of the two kingdoms met near Bethel where Jacob had his vision of the ladder and of the universal sovereignty of his descendants so many years before. The army of Israel numbered eight hundred thousand men; that of Judah five hundred thousand. The result of that day was that Israel fled, leaving five hundred thousand men slain in that dreadful carnage. The command of Sinai "Thou shalt not kill," was disregarded by God's elect and covenant people themselves. No other event need be recorded as the cause of Israel's decline and downfall as a distinct race and nation; Egypt and Assyria had no further rival for supremacy. Israel's destruction and captivity came first.

After lingering two centuries Assyria came and first carried away three tribes into captivity, viz., Reuben, Gad and Manasseh; and on another occasion Dan and Naphtali. Very many now left Samaria voluntarily and went to their captive brethren in Assyria, who occupied a rich and productive country in the interior of the kingdom now known as Migdonia. About the year 725 Shalmanezer IV came against Israel for the last time, laid siege to Samaria, its capital, for three years, which he finally reduced and made the insignificant remnant of Israel, numbering twenty-eight thousand two hundred and eighty, prisoners of war. Shalmanezer had but just effected this purpose when tidings came to him that a usurper by the name of Sargon had seized the Assyrian throne in his absence, and the doomed monarch found himself deserted by his army and himself in a more dangerous condition than the Hebrew captives whose government he had so long sought to destroy. Samarıa fell B. C. 722, and B. C. 721 these last captives of the kingdom of Israel were taken into Assyria by Sargon and the kingdom of Israel was no more.

The remnant of Israel was left with but a hope and a promise. In the year 725 B. c. their prophet, Hosea, saw the army of Assyria invest Samaria to carry off its last feeble fragment, and knowing that it would soon disappear vice Damascus and be swallowed up by the heathen or Gentile nation of Assyria, prophesied this for their encouragement: "I will be as the dew unto Israel. He shall grow as the lily, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon. His branches shall spread, and his beauty shall be as the olive tree, and his smell as Lebanon. They that dwell under his shadow shall return; they shall revive as the corn, and grow as the vine; the scent thereof shall be as the wine of Lebanon. Ephriam shall say: What have I to do any more with idols? I have heard him, and observed him; I am like a green fir tree. From me is thy fruit found. Who is wise, and he shall understand these things? prudent, and he shall know them? For the ways of the Lord are right, and the just shall walk in them; but the transgressors shall fail therein."

The next great event which effected the interests of all these nations occurred in the land of Judah-or Judea. The kingdom of Judah had been tributary to, and the ally of Assyria in her oppresion of Israel. But for some reason she had now thrown off the Assyrian yoke. Accordingly Sennacherib, son of Sargon, invaded Judea, and of his first expedition the Assyrian monarch himself says: "Because Hezekiah, king of Judah, would not submit to my yoke, I came up against him, and by force of arms and by the might of my power, I took forty-six of his strong fenced cities; and of the smaller towns which were scattered about, I took and plundered a countless number. And from these places I captured and carried off as spoil two hundred thousand one hundred and fifty people, old and young, male and female, together with horses and mares, asses and camels, oxen and sheep, a countless multiitude."

Sennacherib had no sooner returned from re-imposing a heavy tribute on Hezekiah, which took the very gold and silver from the temple to pay, than Judah again threw off the Assyrian yoke, and appealed to Egypt to aid her in asserting her independence. Sennacherib again invaded Judea with an immense army consisting of one million infantry, one hundred thousand cavalry, and ten thousand armed chariots. This great force was aimed more especially against Egypt, as Judea was, like Israel, reduced to a mere shadow by former Assyrian expeditions. This great army passed by Jerusalem and marched southward to Pelusium, in order to meet the combined Egyptian and Ethiopian army which was advancing to the aid of Hezekiah. While encamped within sight of the Egyptians a destroying angel, in the night, slew all the captains and chief men of the Assyrian army, to the number of one hundred and eighty-five thousand. This terrible visitation threw the balance of the army into a panic and they fled, being pursued and cut to pieces and many of them slain by the Egyptians.

Assyria now lost her prestige and her power over her tributary provinces. This event no doubt gave the Hebrew captives in Assyria the opportunity of escaping their captivity. In the alarm, consternation and despair of the Assyrian nation over this event, the captives from Judea, as well as the ten tribes, so-called, undoubtedly took their leave of Assyrian captivity according to the prophecy of Isaiah. See 10th chapter.

This also gave the old Susianian kingdom at the mouth of the Tigiris and Euphrates rivers a chance to throw off the Assyrian yoke. Isaiah, who was living while all these events were in progress, says in his eighteenth chapter, "Woe to the land shadowing with wings, which is beyond the rivers of Ethiopia; that sendeth ambassadors by the sea in vessels of bulrushes upon the waters, saying, Go, ye swift messengers, to a nation scattered and peeled, to a people terrible from their beginning hitherto; a nation meted out and trodden down, whose land the rivers spoiled."

It seems that Ethiopia, seeing Assyria's weakness, sent at once an embassage in the vessels common to that nation made of the large bulrushes common to the banks of the Nile and its tributaries in Equatorial Africa (which vessels the Ethiopians made water-tight by a thick coat of bitumen) to the Susianians who had been oppressed by the Chaldeans and Assyrians ever since the time of Abraham (Chedorlaomer, whom Abraham defeated, being the last king of the former Susianian supremacy), The effect was that Susiania regained supremacy over both her own country which had now become a mere delta, "whose land the rivers have spoiled"), and also as far north as Babylon. Instead, however, of entering into a league with Ethiopia, Merodach Baladan, the new king of Babylon and Susiania, sent messengers to Hezekiah king of Judah and formed an alliance with Judah according to the prediction of Isaiah: "In that time shall the present be brought unto the Lord of Hosts of a people scattered and peeled, and from a people terrible from their beginning hitherto, a nation meted out and trodden under foot, whose land the rivers have spoiled."—Isaiah 18.

The career of Merodach Baladan was very brief, however. He was defeated by Sennacherib and fled for safety to an island in the Persian Gulf, and with the alliance with Judah yet in force, the downtrodden, ancient kingdom of Susiania lost its national supremacy forever. The woe pronounced upon Ethiopia, or the "land shadowing with wings," came upon them under the reign of Esarhaddon, son of Sennacherib, who made a conquest of that country, divided it into twenty fragments and appointed Assyrian Governors therein. From the above events which occurred about 700 B. c., nothing of particular importance occurred until about the year 634 B. C. In that year the remaining Edenic nations were made acquainted with a power they hitherto knew not of. Pouring through the zagross passes of the Armenian Mountains, there came an irresistible force of northmen, who, to the astonishment of all these luxurious southern nations, displayed superior military tactics to them all. Well armed, well disciplined, well mounted, they swept through Assyria like a tornado. The Assyrian army was defeated and shut up behind the walls of Nineveh. Cities, towns and villages were sacked, pillaged and burnt to the ground. The inhabitants were cut to pieces and slain without mercy and none escaped except by flight to the mountains or by taking refuge behind the walls of the largest cities. Leaving Assyria a blackened desolation, these so-called barbarians swept south to Chaldea and to the walls of Babylon. The "land of Nimrod" was desolated with almost demoniac fury. Bereft, seemingly, of all reason or mercy, "like a young lion among the flocks of sheep" the ruthless marauders swept large provinces at once of their inhabitants and their rich spoils. Mesopotamia, Eden's largest, most populous and productive garden was "torn down and trodden in pieces" so to speak. The sins and oppressions exercised for so many centuries by these nations against weaker powers, and especially the kingdom of Israel, had at last found them out. The enemies and adversaries of Israel had at last been "cut off" as nations, not totally, but they had received their mortal blow. From Babylon the invaders started for Egypt and the valley of the Nile. Halting at Ascalon to rest their horses the Egyptian king sent an embassage to entreat the mercy of the invaders, who named an immense tribute at the time as well also as an annual tribute thereafter, which the Egyptians paid the invincible invaders rather than see the desolation of their country. All the civilized nations of Eden were at last tributary to one power. They had at last fallen under an unexpected and completely universal sovereignty and supremacy. That mysterious and unknown "north country" had at last become their king and the dreams of universal sovereignty on the part of either Assyria, Chaldea or Egypt, were now at an end forever. The invaders are said to have exercised dominion over all these countries for twenty-eight years and held them under firm tribute during that time. Their headquarters during their stay was in a beautiful province of Media which they named Sacaseue or Sacasuiae, meaning Sacas land. At the end of this period the Sueyans withdrew, the most of them returning northward from whence they came, and others making their way eastward to a colony of their people who had established themselves in what is now Chinese Tartary but was known to them in that day as Indo-Scythia. The nations of Eden never recovered from this mysterious northern invasion, which was their mortal

We will now pass on to the final and total destruction of Nineveh and the Assyrian empire. The dynasty of the Sargonids which ruled Assyria the last century of its existence was as follows; 1st Sargon (who usurped the throne from Shalmanezer IV); 2d, Sennacherib; 3d, Esarhaddon; 4th, Ashur Bani Pal; 5th, and last, Saracus.

The invasion of the northmen occurred during the reign of Ashur Bani Pal. After this invasion such of the inhabitants as had survived in the strongly walled cities soon revived and regulated the affairs of the Assyrian government which was only now a remnant of its former self, The powerful province of Media which had escaped the severity of the invaders to some extent, now withdrew her allegiance to the Assyrian throne. War consequently ensued between Assyria and Media. dispatched his ablest general, Nabopolassar, to Babylon to raise an army there and return to his relief. Nabopolassar went to Babylon, raised the army, but instead of returning to the assistance of the Assyrian king, secretly and treacherously negotiated to join Cyaxares, the Median king, together with the Babylonian army, against the Assyrian king, on condition that Cyaxares would give his daughter, Amyitis, in marriage to Nebuchadnezzar, Nabopolossar's oldest son. This was agreed to and the allied armies of Media and Babylonia soon invested the city and walls of Ancient Nineyeh.

Nahum, second chapter, says: "The shield of his mighty men is made red; the valiant men are in scarlet; the chariots shall be with flaming torches in the day of his preparation, and the fir trees shall be terribly shaken. The chariots shall rage in the streets; they shall jostle one against another in the broadways; they shall seem like torches; they shall run like the lightnings. He shall recount his worthies; they shall stumble in their walk; they shall make haste to the wall thereof, and the defence shall be prepared. The gates of the rivers shall be opened and the palace shall be dissolved," etc.

Historians render very marked and pointed fulfillment of this prophecy of Nahum in the following particulars of that remarkable siege. The national color of the military equipage of the Babylonian army of red and scarlet. The immense and ponderous war chariots of Babylon, drawn by elephants, their investure of the main suburb of Nineveh outside the principal wall, the broad streets of that suburb lined with fir-trees, the flaming torches of the chariots by night, and the glittering swords and spears of their armaments by day, the stubborn and irresisti-ble defence of the walls against all attacks for two years, the unusual rise of the Tigris river, the breaking way finally of the floodgate between the Tigris and the artificial Khosrsu rivers and the washing away of a part of the wall leaving a breach two miles long, the dissolving of the palace of Saracus, the most unsubstantial of any of the king's palaces, being constructed of sun-dried brick only, all these particulars point to the remarkable and entire fulfillment of Nahum's prophecv in the destruction and total downfall of Nineveh and the Assyrian empire some six hundred years B. C. After the subsidence of the water the allied armies of Media and Babylon soon entered the great and proud city, and the miserable remnant of the once proud and oppressive Assyrian monarchy was at last reduced to captivity and chains. The territory of the conquered nation was reduced and divided into two kingdoms, Byaxares adding the old Assyrian province to the kingdom of Media, and Nebuchadnezzar, his son-inlaw, soon became king of the southern portion of Babylonia and established his capital at Babylon. The reverses of Assyria gave Egypt an opportunity to rise above the extreme captivity and degradation to which it had been reduced by Esarahaddon, but it only became "a base kingdom" and always remained "the basest of the kingdoms" thereafter. Nebuchadnezzar soon conquered Judah and took them into captivity to Babylon, B. C. 588. Egypt became helplessly tributary to the new Babylonian empire, and the ancient Edenic monarchies were at last no more forever. Judah at last emerged from the depths of captivity but was thereafter but a mere remnant, a vassal of some greater power such as Babylonia, Persia, and lastly of Rome.

We have now briefly and informally sketched the downfall of the primitive nations of mankind. The races, nations and kingdoms of the present day are all descendants of these five great Edenic nations. You, O reader, are descended from either one or the other of them. Which is it? All Eden was given to perpetual paganism and idolatry save Israel only, through all these centuries of their rise, progress, decline and fall. Romulus was made first king of Rome the very time that Samaria was taken into captivity, i. e. 721-5, B. C., and the Romans then were an insignificant colony who had boldly penetrated the unknown "North country." the present home of all the civilized nations of mankind, the present descendants of these Edenic nations. Of these Judah alone can prove her identity, or so it is generally believed. The intellectual and sagacious dealer who generally presides at our dry goods stores may be very sure that his ancestors once occupied Judea and reverently worshipped the true God in the temple at Jerusalem. But ask the Frenchman, German, Russian or Scandinavian which of these nations was the first fountain of his race and he is unable to return a satisfactory answer. The remnants of the Samaritan kingdom have generally been considered as lost from the time of the Assyrian captivity. This is no more a wonder than that the remnant of Assyria, or of Chaldea, or of Egypt are now lost. The writer of this believes that a true, reliable and satisfactory history of the whole house of Israel may now be written, and that such a history will soon be written by some instrument raised up by God for that purpose, whether of our church or not. He has spent several years in research on the particular subject of Israel's history, (such time as he could reasonably spare), and this research more and more convinces him that it is now time that the great career of the "remnant of Jacob" should now be made fully known, in general, at least, if not in detail. I should be glad to present this narrative to the church and to mankind but can not spare more time at present to prepare it on account of temporal necessities and the need of devoting my time for several months at least to business affairs. Should the writer, however, ever present his narrative of Israel's history to the church, there will be several renderings of old testament scriptures in it which differ from the general opinions of the elders of the church concerning those old ancient This article is intended to convey a sample of those differences. The "chariots of Nahum" and the "land shadowing with wings" of Isaiah, appear in a very different light herein than that in which they generally appear in the Herald. The interests of Israel and their history demand a proper rendering of those two chapters (Isaiah 18, and Nahum For instance, the 2d verse of 2d Nahum reads: "For the Lord has turned away the excellency of Jacob as the excellency of Israel, for the emptiers have emptied them out and marred their vine branches." This we believe was fulfilled just before the destruction of Nineveh and is an important link in the chain of history of the few years preceding the destruction of Nineveh and shows very evidently an important event in the history of the people to whom it refers.

Hoping the arrangement and composition of this hastily written article may excite more criticism of those who may take notice of it than its subject matter, and that we may treat each others peculiar views on matters of minor importance with the utmost charity, I shall hope the time may soon come when the inhabitants of ancient Eden may be all of one heart, of one mind, and of one nation, even the kingdom of Israel, the kingdom of God, and that the sword of Israel, which has I believe been the sword of all the earth, will henceforth and forever be peaceably buried in eternal and immortal, blessed MAHLON SMITH. peace.

> THE "SEALED BOOK."-No. I. BY ELDER R. M. ELVIN.

"And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book that is sealed, which men deliver to one that is learned, saving, Read this, I pray thee: and he saith, I can not; for it is sealed: and the book is delivered to him that is not learned, saving, Read this I pray thee; and he saith, I am not learned."-Isa. 29: 11, 12.

"And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one Shepherd."-John

"And hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitations."-Acts 17: 26.

INTRODUCTION.

The inquisitive mind thirsting for divine knowledge will never tire in gleaning for evidence that the sealed book of Isaiah has made its appearance for public inspection or that Jesus has done, or is doing, something to establish all his sheep in one fold, and likewise that a proper understanding may obtain concerning the promise made by Paul to the Athenians. ly in the year 1830, a book was presented to the world claiming to be the one mentioned in Scriptures as sealed. Of this book W. H. Carpenter and T. S. Arthur, write: "That an obscure individual. without money, education, or respectability, should persuade hundreds of thousands of people to believe him to be inspired of God, and cause a book, contemptible as a literary production, to be received as a continuation of the sacred revelations, appears almost incredible."-History of Illinois, p. 214.

Had the book been published as a history of aboriginal civilization, it would have met with universal approval; but on account of the claim that most of the writers thereof and the translator were guided by inspiration in their work, the larger portion of mankind reject and oppose the book without investigation.

Two extensive civilizations upon the American continent are referred to in the Book of Mormon. The first was under the brother of Jared, who left the tower of Babel. Those ignorant of the antiquities of America may think this absurd, but let all such withhold judgment till they have read this paper carefully. The renowned historian, Flavius Josephus, writing relative to the dispersion of the people from the plains of Shinar, says: "The confusion of tongues naturally occasioned the dispersion of the people, who formed themselves into distinct colonies, and occupied those parts of the earth to which they were providentially conducted; so that not only the shores, but the continent were amply filled with inhabitants. Some constructed vessels, and took possession of various islands."-Antiquities of the Jews, chapter 5.

The non-commercial character of the people at the time of their dispersion, and their inability to understand each other's speech, all clearly indicate that there were no incentives for the families to keep up a constant interchange with each other. Three things indicate conclusively that the Jaredite migration is a veritable truth: First, The well established evidence of an ancient and widespread civilization far superior to that of the Indian, as found by the white man on his coming to this land of surprises and wonders. Second, The Bible statement that God made of one blood all nations, and appointed the dwelling place thereof; and, third, That some left in vessels at the dispersion, going over the sea to distant islands. These three forceful items make it reasonable to conclude that people did come to this country at a very remote period. And if so, why hesitate to accept the Jaredite company as the first to fulfill the will of the great I

I next notice the Lehi migration. This company consisted of two families, and one man, who left Jerusalem about six hundred years before Christ, and some twelve years later landed upon the western coast of South America. Like favors to those bestowed upon Joseph the eldest son of Jacob by the wife of his choice, were granted to Nephi, the fourth son of Lehi, and with similar results upon the feelings of his brothers; so that they soon divided into two parties, which eventually grew into two opposing nations, known as the Nephites, who were a religious people, and the Lamanites, who were savage and delighted in bloodshed. That the evidence I shall present may have a direct application, I herewith give the migrations of the Nephites.

PROCLAMATION OF THE KING AS TO THE DIVIDING LINE OF THE TWO NATIONS.

"And it came to pass that the king sent a proclamation throughout all the land, amongst all his people who were in all his land, who were in all the regions round I they did spread forth into all parts of the about, which was bordering even to the sea on the east, and on the west, and which was divided from the land of Zarahemla by a narrow strip of wilderness which ran from the sea east, even to the sea west, and round about on the borders of the seashore, and the borders of the wilderness which was on the north, by the land of Zarahemla, through the borders of Manti, by the head of the river Sidon, running from the east towards the west; and thus were the Lamanites and the Nephites divided."— Alma 13: 11.

"And now it was only the distance of a day and a half's journey for a Nephite, on the line Bountiful, and the land Desolation, from the east to the west sea; and thus the land of Nephi, and the land of Zarahemla, were nearly surrounded by water; there being a small neck of land between the land northward and the land southward."

Alma 13: 11.

This last quotation clearly shows that the Isthmus of Panama was the line of division between the two peoples.

NORTHWARD

Was the direction the Nephites moved in their migrations. "And it came to pass that Hagoth, he being an exceeding curious man, therefore he went forth and built him an exceeding large ship, on the borders of the land Bountiful, by the land Desolation, and launched it forth into the west sea, by the narrow neck which led into the land northward. And behold there were many of the Nephites who did enter therein and did sail forth with much provisions, and also many women and children; and they took their course northward. And thus ended the thirty and seventh year. And in the thirty and eighth year, this man built other ships. And the first did also return, and many more people did enter into it; and they also took much provisions, and set out again to the land northward. And it came to pass that they were never heard of more. And we suppose that they were drowned up in the depths of the sea. And it came to pass that one other ship did also sail forth; and whither she did go we know not. And it came to pass that in this year, there were many people who went forth into the land northward. And thus ended the thirty and eighth year. And it came to pass in the thirty and ninth year of the reign of the Judges, Shiblon died also, and Corianton had gone forth to the land northward, in a ship, to carry forth provisions unto the people who had gone forth into that land."—Alma 30: 3-5.

"And there was no contention among the people in the forty and fourth year; neither was there much contention in the forty and fifth year. And it came to pass in the forty and sixth, yea, there was much contention and many dissensions; in the which there were an exceeding great many who departed out of the land of Zarahemla, and went forth unto the land northward, to inherit the land; and they did travel to an exceeding great distance, insomuch that they came to large bodies of water, and many rivers; yea, and even land, into whatever parts it had not been rendered desolate, and without timber, because of the many inhabitants who had before inherited the land. And now no part of the land was desolate, save it were for timber, etc.; but because of the greatness of the destruction of the people who had before inhabited the land it was called desolate. And there being but little timber upon the face of the land, nevertheless the people who went forth became exceeding expert in the working of cement; therefore they did build houses of cement. in the which they did dwell. And it came to pass that they did multiply and spread, and did go forth from the land southward to the land northward, and did spread insomuch that they began to cover the face of the whole earth, from the sea south, to the sea north, from the sea west to the sea east. And the people who were in the land northward did dwell in tents, and in houses of cement, and they did suffer whatsoever tree should spring up upon the face of the land, that it should grow up, that in time they might have timber to build their houses, yea, their cities, and their temples, and their synagogues, and their sanctuaries, and all manner of their buildings. And it came to pass as timber was exceeding scarce in the land northward, they did send forth much by the way of shipping; and thus they did enable the people in the land northward, that they might build many cities, both of wood and of cement."-Helaman 2: 1-3.

The Nephite civilization from its establishment, until its destruction by the Lamanites was about one thousand years. Its cradle was near the Isthmus of Panama, and its grave in western New York, having gone northward during these many years through Honduras, Guatemala, Yucatan, Mexico, United States and into British North America. The Lamanites who overthrew this wide-spread empire and civilization, still survive and are known in our time as the Aborigines or American Whatever will shed light upon the Red Sons of the forest, and their ancestors, and the pre-historic civilization of America shall be my task to compile, and while I do not anticipate exhausting the subject, I request an impartial examination without the blinding and truth-destroying influences of prejudice.

NEGLECTED DUTY.

The first white men who visited this land were, as a rule, adventurers seeking wealth, who gave little or no heed to the history of the people whom they despoiled and murdered. Those who came in the name of religion were little better, for whatever written annals came into their hands that did not agree with their peculiar ideas of religion were committed to the flames. "It has come to us through Bishop Landa, one of the early missionary bishops, who confessed having burnt a great number of Maya books because they contained nothing but the works of the devil."-Atlantis, p. 217.

The money-making spirit seems to be the mania of the American people, and this has clogged the channels of this class of education. "If, as has been said, the proper study of mankind is man,' then there has been much neglect on the part of ethnologists and students of history concerning the aborigines of America, to whose possessions we have succeeded. Nearly four centuries have passed since the white man's first intrusion upon the native inhabitants of the country."-American Indian, p. 23.

DOMESTIC ANIMALS.

When the Book of Mormon was first published it was supposed that the folly of those who printed it was clearly manifested in mentioning the horse, cattle, sheep and other large animals as having existed upon the American continent for centuries; but the discoveries of the past sixty years have brought wonders to the world. "When the animals and plants of the Old and New World are compared one can not but be struck with their identity; all or nearly all belong to the same genera, while many, even of the species, are common to both continents. This is most important in its bearing on our theory, as indicating that they radiated from a common centre after the Glacial Period. . . . The hairy mammoth, wolly-haired rhinoceros, the Irish elk, the musk-ox, the reindeer, the glutton, the lemming, etc., more or less accompanied this flora, and their remains are always found in the post glacial deposits of Europe as low down as the south of France. In the New World beds of the same age contain similar remains, indicating that they came from a common center, and were spread out over both continents alike." - Westminister Review, January, 1872, p. 19.

To the foregoing I add the statement of Prof. Alexander Winchell. He says: "In the United States we detect also some evidences of the co-existence of man and extinct species of quadrupeds. Dr. Koch, the reconstructor of the Tertiary Zeuzlodon, insisted long ago that he had found in Missouri such an association of Mastodon and Indian remains as to prove that the two had lived contemporaneously. have myself [says the author | observed the bones of the mastodon and elephant imbedded in peat at depths so shallow that I could readily believe the animals to have occupied the country during its possession by the Indians, and gave publication to this conviction in 1862. More recently [he says] Prof. Holmes, of Charleston, has informed the Academy of Natural Sciences of Philadelphia, that he finds upon the banks of the Ashley river a remarkable conglomeration of fossil remains in deposits of post-tertiary age. Remains of the hog, horse and other animals of recent date, together with human bones, stone arrow-heads, hatchets and fragments of potterv, are there lying mingled with the bones of the mastodon and extinct gigantic lizards. Cotemporary with these American animals, but not yet found associated in their remains with the relics of the human species, lived in North America horses much larges than the existing species, grazing in company with wild oxen and herds of bison and shrub-loving tapirs.

The streams were dammed by the labors of gigantic beavers, while the forests afforded a range for a species of hog, and a grateful dwelling-place for numerous edentate quadrupeds related to the sloth, but of gigantic proportions."-Sketches of Creation, p. 356-7.

"It is a curious fact that so many genera, now extinct from the continent, but living in other quarters of the globe, were once abundant on the plains of North America. Various species of the horse have dwelt here for ages, and the question reasonably arises whether the wild horses of the Pampas may not have been indigenous. Here, too, the camel found a suitable home."—Ibid, p. 210.

"Desire Charnay believes that he has found in the mines of Tula the bones of swine, sheep, oxen, and horses, in a fossil state, indicating an immense antiquity."-Atlantis, p. 350.

The above proves the following: "We did find upon the land of promise, as we journeyed in the wilderness, that there were beasts in the forest of every kind, both the cow, and the ox, and the ass, and the horse, and the goat, and the wild goat, and all manner of wild animals, which were for the use of man."—First book of Nephi, 5: 45

"Recent discoveries in the fossil beds of the Bad Lands of Nebraska prove that the horse originated in America. Professor Marsh, of Yale College, has identified the several preceding forms from which it was developed, rising, in the course of ages, from a creature not larger than a fox until, by successive steps, it developed in the true horse. . . . The fossil remains of the camel are found in India, Africa, South America, and in Kansas. The existing alpacas and llamas of South America are but varieties of the camel family." Atlantis, p. 54-5.

Had what we here quote been in print at the time the Book of Mormon was published, it would be cold comfort to now bring them forward as evidence; but as these discoveries have been made and published to the world since 1830, I, for one, am sincerely glad for this class of books, and as they multiply our task is less difficult.

ANCIENT INHABITANTS.

As to the older inhabitants of North America, known to scientists as "Mound Builders," and to Book of Mormon readers as Jaredites, the Book of Mormon gives this people a remote antiquity by asserting that they came directly from the Tower of Babel to this country. Speaking of the tumuli of Georgia and surrounding states, Jones says: "Some of these tumuli are not less than eight centuries old, while at least one, as we have already intimated, was thrown up after the European had visited the new world. In the absence of all definite information, the antiquity of these tumuli may be readily inferred from their location, internal evidence, and from the growth of the forest trees which overshadow them. the time probably consumed in the actual construction of some of the largest tumuli, we add the period intervening between their completion and abandonment-the length of which, although entirely a matter of conjecture, could assuredly have been by no means inconsiderable—and then note the fact that when first observed by the whites they were deserted and overgrown with forest trees apparently as large as any which composed the surrounding forests-not forgetting the further circumstance that the Indians who were domiciled here could impart to the enquiring European not even a tradition of the time when, or of the peoples by whom they were built-in endeavoring to ascertain their age, the mind is irresistibly led back to a remote date."-Antiquities of Southern Indians, p. 133-4.

This from a standard history: "It is very seldom that the human bones found in them, except those of later and evidently intrusive burial, are in a condition to admit of their removal, as they crumble into dust on exposure to the air; while bones in British tumuli, known to belong to the Roman period and to ages older than the Christian era, are frequently taken entire from situations as regards soil and moisture, much less conducive of their preservation than those of the mounds."—Bryant's History of the United States, vol. 1, p. 21.

Not less interesting is the statement of Nott and Glidden: "From the ruins of Nineveh and Babylon we have bones of at least two thousand five hundred years old, from the pyramids and the catacombs of Egypt, both mummied and unmummied crania have been taken of still higher antiquity in perfect preservation; and numerous other proofs might be brought forward to the same effect; nevertheless the skeletons deposited in our Indian mounds, from the lakes to the gulf, are crumbling into dust through age alone."—Types of Mankind, p. 289.

Again the same authority states, "That their monuments, as seen in their architecture, sculpture, earthworks, shell-banks, etc., from their extent, dissemination, and incalculable numbers, furnish evidence of very high antiquity."—lbid, p. 296.

Upon the relationship supposed to exist between the works of circumvallation of the Mound Builders and their religious ideas, Mr. Bryant says: "If the grounds of such a supposition may be considered rational and sufficient, and in the absence of any other theory it seems the most obvious, it is only the more remarkable, that at a period so remote that much if not the whole of Europe was still in the darkness of primeval barbarism, so large a part of North America should be inhabited by a numerous population so advanced in a civilization advanced by themselves, that they could spend upon a single phase of life so much evident reflection and accurate knowledge, and devote to it an amount of manual labor so immense and continuous." -Hist. of United States, vol. 1, p. 27.

Could the scholars who devote time in study, and who write on the Archaeology of America be prevailed to accept the truth that the ancient dwellers upon this land were enlightened by the divine Spirit, the cause of their surprise and amazement at the intelligence and civilization manifest in the ruins found, would soon vanish as the mist before the rising sun. John D. Baldwin, M. A., says: "That the Mound Builders and their works belong to a distant period in the past is evident."—Ancient America, p. 47.

"Great antiquity is indicated by the skeletons taken from the mounds. Every skeleton of a Mound Builder is found in a condition of extreme decay."—Ibid. p. 48.

"The great age of these mounds and inclosures is shown by their relation to the primeval forests in which most of them were discovered."—Ibid, p. 50.

"There are many indications to warrant the conclusion that the Mound Builders occupied their principal seats in the Ohio and Mississippi valleys during a very long period."—Ibid, p. 51.

"Their long occupation of the country is suggested by the great extent of their mining works. All who have examined these works agree with Colonel Whittlesey that they worked the Lake Superior copper mines 'for a great length of time.' How long they had dwelt in the Ohio valley when this mining began can not be told, but a very considerable period must have elapsed after their arrival at that point before the mines were discovered."

— Ibid, p. 53.

"No view that can be taken of the relics left by the Mound Builders will permit us to believe their stay in the country was short. Any hypothesis based on the shortest possible estimate of the time must count the years by centuries."—Ibid, p. 56.

Of no less note is Bancroft, and of equal authority. Upon these topics he writes: "How long a time has elapsed since the Mound Builders abandoned their works? Here again a minimum estimate can only be sought. No work is more enduring than an embankment of earth. There is no positive internal proof that they were not standing one, five, or ten thousand years ago. The evidences of an ancient abandonment of the works, or serious decline of the builders' power are as follows: First, The fact that none of them stand on the last formed terrace of the rivers, most on the oldest terraces, and that those on the second bear in some cases marks of having been invaded by water. The rate of terrace forming varies on different streams, and there are no sufficient data for estimating in years the time required for the formation of any one of the terraces, at least scientific men are careful not to give a definite opinion in the matter; but it is evident that each required a very long period, and the last one a much longer time than any of the others, on account of the gradual longitudinal leveling of the river beds. Second, The complete disappearance of all wooden structures, which must have been of great solidity. Third, The advanced state of decomposition of human bones in a soil well calculated for their preservation. Skeletons are found in Europe well preserved at a known age of eighteen hundred years. Fourth, The absence of the Mound Builders from the traditions of modern tribes. Nothing would seem more likely to be preserved in mythic or historic traditions than contact with a superior people, and the mounds would serve to keep the tradition alive. Fifth, That the monuments were covered in the seventeenth century with primitive forests."—Native Races of Pacific States, vol. 4, p. 789. Another opinion is granted us by Mc-Lean, towit, "We can only judge of the condition and civilization of a lost race by the remains which they have left. Nor is it to be supposed that these will give perfect representations, for many things, especially in the fine arts, must necessarily sooner or later perish. The coarser works made of durable material, the stupendous monuments, are not easily effaced even by the wearing influences of time. The intelligence of the Mound Builders has been variously rated. That they were superior to their Indian successors, perhaps no one will dispute. That they were a settled people every evidence clearly shows. A wandering people or a people who lived simply by the chase never could have erected these structures, even in the condition in which they are now found. Their erection would have required a knowledge of the mechanic arts by a permanently settled people. Nor is it just to rank them much below the ancient people of Mexico and Central America. To the Mound Builders we assign a much greater antiquity, and long ages elapsed from the time of the desertion of these until their discovery and investigation by Europeans. Hence they were not found in the same condition in which they were left by their makers. If the earth-works of Central America had been exposed to the action of the elements as long as the mounds of Ohio, we probably would see but little difference in their general appearance." -Mound Builders, p. 84.

All these writers are a unit in according to the Moud Builders a very remote antiquity, and a reasonable degree of enterprise, intelligence and civilization. Here is another, with more to follow,—we will now hear from Josiah Priest: "If so, then it is clear that the inhabitants of America who had the knowledge of this kind of fabrication, did indeed belong to an era as aucient as the first people of Asia itself, and even before the settlement of Europe; this is not a small witness in favor of our opinion of the extreme antiquity of those ancient works of the west."—Priest's American Antiquities, p. 258.

"We have it definitely settled, then, that a great antiquity must be assigned to the Mound Builders." "That the Mound Builders occupied their principal seats in the Ohio and Mississippi valleys for a long time there is abundant proof."—Mound Builders, p. 137.

"Probably thousands of years elapsed from the time they entered the valley, until they took their departure, and other thousands to the present time."—Ibid, p. 128

There is constantly appearing in the newspapers of the country interesting articles upon this subject, and for a change, to rest you, I will give a couple of clippings. In the Newport Vt., Express and

Standard of August 15th, 1882, is the following copied from the New Orleans Democrat. "In several of the western states and along the extended valley of the Mississippi huge pyramids, tumuli and mounds dot the surface of the country: while in Ohio, Indiana and Illinois, hundreds of miles of regularly constructed fortifications have justly claimed the attention of American archæologists. The presence of these vast monuments proves beyond doubt that ages ago THE NORTHERN PART OF THIS CONTINENT WAS INHABIT-ED BY A RACE OF BEINGS WHO HAD AR-RIVED AT A HIGH STATE OF CIVILIZA-TION, while the Greeks were yet a rude and savage people, and while the inhabitants of the British Islands and of northern Europe sacrificed human beings to their sanguinary gods, and afterwards held cannibal orgies over the remains of their victims, these civilized and enlightened Americans were building temples, and raising vast mounds. The fact is certain that the northern portion of this continent was thousands of years ago, perhaps, inhabited by a race of beings who were skilled mechanics, astronomers and mathematicians, and who possessed a written language. It is probable that they existed anterior to the builders of Palenque in Chiapas, and Papaulta in Vera Cruz, and for long ages before the temples of Thebes and Memphis were raised on the great Egyptian River."

A lover of antiquities, writing in the Youth's Companion of February 9th, 1882, says: "We know them by the name of 'Mound Builders.' Who and what they were; when they flourished and how perished, are wholly matters of conjecture. In the record of human events what story is stranger than that of this extinct people? Their gigantic earth works still exist. . . . The traditions of the Indian do not mention them, save a race that had disappeared long before his coming. . . . From data gathered among the Ohio Mounds, an age of not less than six thousand years has been assigned this ancient people. The art of arrow making was carried to a high state of perfection among the Mound Builders. Some of their weapons are delicately and beautifully carved, though by what means we can only guess. Flint is very hard and difficult to work, and their tools doubtless were of the most primitive kind. Modern skill would find it difficult to imitate these ancient workmen."

In one of the mounds of earth-works on Big Harpeth River, Tennessee, was found a leaf-shaped stone sword, about twenty inches in length. The Mound Builders were pre-eminently a river people, for their densest settlements and greatest works were in the Mississippi valley and along its main tributaries.

Says Foster: "The navigable streams were the great highways of the Mound Builders."—Pre-Historic Races, p. 110.

While Mr. Fontaine claims that the ancient people constructed "levees" to control and utilize the bayous of the Mississippi for the purpose of agriculture and commerce, and states that the Yazoo river is called Yazoo-ok-hinnah—the River of Ancient Ruins. "The number of monuments left by the Mound Builders is extraordinarily great. In Ohio alone there are more than ten thousand tumuli, and from one thousand to fifteen hundred enclosures. Their mounds were not cones, but four-sided pyramids—their sides like those of the Egyptian pyramids, corresponding with the cardinal points."—Pre-Historic Races, p. 112.

The foregoing was introduced to prepare the way for the following which is worthy of more than passing thought: "The Mound Builders had attained a considerable degree of civilization; they were able to form, in the construction of their works, perfect circles and perfect squares of great accuracy, carried over the varying surface of the country. One large enclosure comprises exactly forty acres. At Hopetown, Ohio, are two walled figuresone a square, the other a circle-each containing precisely twenty acres. must have possessed regular scales of measurement, and the means of determining angles and computing the area to be enclosed by the square and the circle, so that the space enclosed by each might exactly correspond."—Atlantis, p. 372.

In view of what we have found upon this part of the subject, how foolish it must appear to hear those who have made no effort to gain an acquaintance with the antiquities of our country condemn the plain and consistent statements found in the Book of Mormon, of which we will give ample proof and satisfaction to the reasonable, considerate thinker and lover of truth and knowledge.

ROBERT ELSMERE.

What about this book about which the orthodox Christian world is going crazy? Such was the question that confronted me; and finally induced me to read the book. Strictly speaking it is a novel. Robert Elsmere, the hero, an Oxford graduate, was a rector of the church of England with a prosperous living. A man of great natural force and fine attainments he became the hero in fact of his parish. Apparently his status was fixed, and he would for very love and fitness for his calling live and die in his chosen field of labor. One of his neighbors is a learned German skeptic. In the course of their frequent neighborly talks, Elsmere is finally brought to see the inconsistencies of the position of his church.

The system established by Jesus was one embodying both the personal revealment of God, as well as the miraculous in nature. The Orthodox systems rejected both as present facts. This knowledge appalled him. All the traditions of his church would compel him to reject the idea of present supernatural manifestations. His idea of God was incompatible with the idea of the existence of these manifestations in one age and not another. So he comes to the conclusion they never existed except in the imagination; that even the story of the resurrection and ascension were myths. He saw Jesus only as a historical character much as Josephus saw him; the founder of a new religion indeed, but the founder of one that "only superseded Judaism by absorbing and recreating all that was best in it," a religion that appealed to us principally because of its hold upon modern civilization. Speaking of Jesus he says: "Do what you will, you can not escape him. His life and death underlie our institutions as the alphabet underlies our literature. Just as the lives of Buddha and of Mohammed are wrought ineffaceably into the civilization of Africa and Asia, so the life of Jesus is wrought ineffaceably into the higher civilization, the nobler conceptions of Europe." Again: "Granted the true story of Jesus of Nazareth was from the beginning obscured by error and mistake; granted that those errors and mistakes which were once the strength of Christianity are now its weakness, and by the slow march and sentence of time are now threatening, unless we can clear them away, to lessen the hold of Jesus on the love and remembrance of man. "What then? The fact is merely a call to you and me, who recognize it, to go back to the roots of things, to reconceive the Christ, to bring him afresh into our lives, to make the life so freely given for man minister again in new ways to man's new needs." . . . "To reconnew needs." . . . . "To reconceive the Christ! It is the special task of our age, though in some sort and degree it has been the ever recurring task of Europe since the beginning."

His honor as a man forbade that he should act the hypocrite, so he resigned his position as vicar and stepped out of the Anglican Church, He now finds himself standing apart from all accepted systems of Christian belief, in name at least, if not in fact. He is reminded by some of his late associates that many pulpits are regularly occupied by persons who, like him, are dissenters in thought, though in active service in the church. But with him it is different. "If I remain an honest man," he says to his wife, "I must cease to be a minister of the Church of England."

Dark, dark indeed, was the hour that seemed to impel him to accept this course. Yet from his standpoint of faith and honor it was inevitable. He was living in an age when the prophecy "They are drunken, but not with wine; they stagger, but not with strong drink," was being fulfilled. God had indeed caused the Sun of righteousness to be again revealed, but its life-giving, darkness-dispelling rays had not yet fallen upon his benighted vision. All the best elements of the natural man were dominant in him. He had an absorbing passion for doing good. He was a positive-not a negative quantity. So he advocated a turning "our backs on negation, and have done with mere denial. Suppose we throw all our energies into the practical building of a new house of faith, the gathering and organizing a new company of Jesus,"

So the "New Brotherhood of Christ" is formed. "The basis of the whole is 'new bottles for new wine,'" in which the ideas are "essentially modern, expressing the modern spirit, answering to modern need, as I imagine the first Christian prayers expressed the spirit and answered the need of an earlier day."

But in this transfer of spiritual allegiance, a host of armored, active doubts beset him-not a moment but some of them are hurling their shafts at him-a specimen: "While the man of science looks forward to his last hour as a moment of certain intellectual weakness, and calmly warns his friends beforehand that he is to be judged by the utterances of health and not by those of physical collapse, the Christian believes that on the confines of eternity the veil of flesh shrouding the soul grows thin and transparent, and that the glories and truths of heaven are visible with a special clearness and authority to the dying." Then the old skeptic dies and Elsmere sees his life "dropping into the abyss of ken." . . . "Sixty years of effort and slavery to end so-a river lost in the sands." And then like the piercing agony of the poniard's thrust comes the query of one of the least credulous of his pupils: "You, who preached to us that consciousness, and God, and the soul are the only realities—are you so sure of it, now you are dying, as you were in health? Are your courage, your certainty what they were?" And his agonized soul is made to cry out as the rippling waters of the river of death kiss his feet, "My God! my God! no time, no future!"

Such in brief is the picture. Is it overdrawn? Are there not in every hamlet, every neighborhood, aye, nearly every family of the nations composing what is called the Christian world actual scenes that would to a greater or less degree justify the sketch? Why then should the orthodox pulpit, the orthodox press belabor the picture. To the Saints the answer

Because the dark background in which is shown the hypocrisv and corruption, and the inconsistencies of the so called Christian churches is a startlingly true repro duction of the facts as they exist. God instead of being as at first taught, an ever present helper, has been relegated to the realms of mysticism and inapproachable remoteness. The blessed Spirit of Truth which the Saints of old were taught should "be with them always" "to guide into all truth" "to take of the things of the Father and show unto us," &c., &c., is now said to be a creation of fancy, an antiquated relic of ancient ignorance and superstition. Miracles are no longer needed and this statement so glibbily proclaimed from the orthodox pulpit raises the question in the intellectual mind as whether said pulpit honestly believes that they ever existed -and so on to the end of the chapter. Infidelity, and the spirit of anti-Christ is rampant, in and out of the church. No, Mr. Elsmere, your picture is true. wonder the churches are aghast and the ministry mad. But you are on the wrong You have emerged from the wilderness but on the opposite side from the true haven of repose. Your face is not toward Jerusalem but toward the wilderness of sin. Doubt and darkness it is true are behind, but despair and death are ahead. Turn back and retrace your steps, "ask for the old paths" and "walk therein." God is an unchangeable being; his ways are one eternal round. Man not only has sought out many inventions but will continue to do so. "New faiths" for "new needs" has always been the cry and the stumbling-stone as well of poor soul-darkened man. But after all, when the wisdom and experience of age shall come upon the world as it did upon the sage of Jerusalem it will cry out with him, "All is vanity." OBSERVER.

DIED.

Wood,—After a life here of 68 years, 4 months and 16 days, Elder James Wood passed peacefully away on February 11th, 1889, at 2:45 a. m., at his home, near Stewartsville, Missouri. Brother Wood was born in Ludlow, Staffordshire, England. In that county he was Stanfordshire, England. In that county he was baptized in 1843. He afterwards emigrated to Utah and passed through the experiences peculiar to Brighamism. Through the instrumentality of Bro. Wm. Summerfield he was redeemed from that condition, and on the 15th day of November 1867 he was baptized by him, into the Reorganization, and on the same day was ordained an elder by Bro. J. W. Gillen. Since that time he has been a faithful witness for Christ. He suffered many years from asthma, but always with patience. As a friend to the sick he was always ready to alleviate their suffering and pour in the oil of consolation to the troubled in spirit. He was known for his integrity to the cause of his choice, and his high standing as a neighbor and brother was attested by the large attendance at the funeral. He was interred at the DeKalb branch burying ground February 12, 1889. He leaves a wife, children, grandchildren and many friends to mourn their loss; but they mourn not as those who have no hope. Elder J. M. Terry preached the sermon to a large congregation.

REA —On February 14th, 1889, Sr. Mary Rea, died of spinal disease. She was a native of Ireland, but emigrated to this country early in life. Was baptized some time in the winter of 1888, into the Garafraxa branch, and was about one year in the church. She suffered acutely for some days previous to death, but seemed assured for several weeks that she was going to leave us, as she constantly affirmed so in opposition to all attempts to dissuade her of that fact. She was 55 years of age, and leaves a husband, son and daughter, all in the work. The sermon was preached by Elder J. A. McIntosh, from Rom. 14:7-12, and was listened to by a large congregation; most of them accompanied the remains to the cemetery.

COPELAND.—Elder Asa Copeland died in Philadelphia, Pa., Feb. 17th, 1889, of Bright's disease, after a lingering illness of three months, aged 72 years. He was a faithful brother and has been in the church for about forty six years. He was in Nauvoo at the time Bro. Joseph was shot and after that he returned to Philadelphia, and was ever willing to do all he could for the cause of truth. I visited him in his sickness and we talked a great deal on the gospel of the kingdom of God, and he expressed strong faith in a glorious resurrection and reign on the earth with the faithful Saints when Christ comes to reign. He leaves a wife and three children to mourn We bore his remains to their last resting place in Philadelphia Cemetary on the 20th of February. Funeral service by Elder John Stone, assisted by Elder Joseph A. Stewart.

"INDIANA MORMONS."

WE are in receipt of influential papers from Louisville, Kentucky; Utica, New York; Detroit, Michigan, and elsewhere, containing an article on "The Indiana Mormons" in particular, and "Mormonism" in general, illustrated with cuts of Elders M. R. and Columbus Scott, "Rev. W. W. Blair," "Mount Eden Temple," "Scott's Grave," etc., etc., some parts of said article being true, but much of it distorted or false. As the document was gotten up principally, no doubt, to create a sensation and gratify morbid tastes rather than to state clean, well authenticated facts, it has doubtless been published in scores and hundreds of leading sensational papers in America. And while it panders to the fun lover and yarn-reader, it nevertheless tells some truths touching the faith, doctrine, good moral character and progressiveness of the "Josephites" that, being true, we are thankful for, because on those points it presents us fairly well. Besides this, it makes the distinction sharp and broad that exists between the "Josephites" and the "Brighamites," and prominently so on the questions of polygamy and the leadership of the church. Paul said to the Philippians, "Some indeed preach Christ even of envy and strife; and some also of good will; the one preach Christ of contention, not sincerely, supposing to add affliction to my bonds; but the other of love, knowing that I am set forth for the defence of the gospel. What then? notwithstanding, every way, whether in pretence, or in truth, Christ is preached; and I therefore do rejoice, yea, and will rejoice." And we rejoice in the agitation of the matter of the great latter day work, even though it be done through "envy," or "strife," or "contention," or "pretense," for we know that the more opposed and talked of the greater headway it will make in due time when the unsuldied truth reaches the people by means of our teachers of the press, the pulpit, or the fireside. Only last Sunday one of our efficient helpers in gospel work told us her mother and father filled her mind with yarns against Mormonism when young, which served to cause her to investigate and obey the gospel when opportunity offered. When Satan, his emissaries, or superstitious and misguided people, seek to hinder and overthrow the work of God and good men and women, the results of their efforts are often found to be the very reverse of what they sought. And of no people has this been more true than of the faithful Saints in these latter days who have waited upon the Lord faithfully, and patiently endured in keeping his commandments. We thank our opposers when they spread abroad even a little truth about the latter day work; and if they ignorantly or maliciously misrepresent us and our work, we still thank them for calling attention to the work so that the public may be advertized of it and be led to investigate it and judge for themselves as to its merits.

Our recent visit (March 3d to 5th) to Lucas, Iowa, was a season of refreshing, for we found the Saints united, active and spiritual. We have never met with that branch when we were better pleased with The Lord was present by the power of his Spirit and all were edified and cheered. We think prospects are good for further increase both in numbers and in usefulness and goodly influence. Their Sunday School, now under the superintendency of Sr. Birchell, is making fine progress, and notably in the direction of good order. This is well. By the way, the entire Decatur district is making very decided gains in every direction, but especially in unity, in diligence, and in spirituality. Lamoni, Davis City, Pleasanton. Lucas, Allendale, and other branches and localities, all show solid and important gains in every way.

W. P. Brown and others, his fellows, or sympathizers and helpers, predicted many months ago division and overthrow for the Reorganization here and elsewhere. It is time they saw the falsity of the spirit and hopes by which they were led, for the Reorganized Church was never as prosperous and progressive as now and during the past two years; nor has there been a time in the past twenty years when the Saints have been edified and confirmed by the gifts and signs and graces of the Spirit as they have been since 1886; nor has there ever been a time when the faithful elders have been universally blessed of God in their ministration of the word and ordinances to a greater degree than during the past two years. The fires of opposition have come to the church from without, and also by some who were once in the church, but the Infinite One is turning it all to good account for the faithful Saints, and to the utter exposure and discomfiture of those who either openly or secretly seek to annoy, injure, or overthrow the work of God. Let the Saints "Be still, and know that the Lord is God," and that "the reins are in His hands."

"THE RELIC LIBRARY."

SUCH is the title of a prospectus sent us, accompanied by a letter, by John K. Sheen, of York, Nebraska, in which he seeks subscribers for his work and says, "DON'T GET LEFT. Don't delay in sending in your name and subscription, as only a limited number of each issue will be published, and delay may cause you to lose the first issues. Send immediately. Two dollars for 24 numbers." And in another place he says, "No single numbers sold."

When at Lucas, Iowa, a few days since, this same "prospectus" was shown us and inquiry made about it and as to the responsibility of its author. Since then similar inquiries have been made.

We do not propose to accept Mr. Sheen's solicitations and send him "Two dollars" for his projected uncertainty. We have known him and some of his very peculiar movements since 1867; and his "cheek" in asking us to subscribe for his unborn, unendorsed and unsecured —— is only equalled by his brazen presumption. No; we have not the slightest intention of sending him the "Two dollars" he so urgently requests, and for the best of reasons some of which will appear in this.

To inform our readers somewhat in regard to Mr. John K. Sheen, we have to say, first, that he is not and never has been a member of the Reorganized Church (though some suppose he is or has been); second, that he has been an enemy to some of the leading officers of the church since or before 1868; third, that he was discharged from the Herald Publishing House about that time for alleged disorderly and abusive conduct; fourth, that he violently assaulted Bro. Henry A. Stebbins, in the presence of Brn. I. L. Rogers and E. Banta, in Plano, Illinois, about July 7th, 1874; later on he violently assaulted Bro. E. Banta on the streets of Sandwich, Illinois, and was arrested therefor by order of the City Marshall, and since then, by letters and slips sent to various persons, he has sought to bring discredit on editorial statements of the HERALD and to invalidate historical facts of the past; and now he writes me saying: "So far as you and I are concerned there are no bygones to let be bygones,' that I am aware of."

As to his responsibility, we are not

As to his responsibility, we are not aware that he has any settled business, or that he owns a dollar, but have been told that he derives support for himself and family at the hands of his aged mother. We mention this that those whose subscriptions he solicits may judge of his responsibility to publish such a work as he advertises. And we have written as we have that our patrons may judge whether John K. Sheen is likely to publish such a work as they desire to patronize.

Those who are known and tried friends of the Latter Day Saints are publishing works in the interest of truth and right, and they will continue to increase and multiply such works as tast as demanded. It is not wisdom to trust, or to strengthen the hands of those who have ever been and still are the enemies and opposers of the work of God, whoever they may be. Jesus said. "Take heed that no man deceive you," and such is our advice now.

W. W. BLAIR.

THE CHURCH-WHEN ORGANIZED.

Bro. L. B. RICHMOND of Wellsville, Kansas, asks to know how many had been baptized before the church was organized April 6th, 1830, also as to whether there were any elders ordained before that day. He says the reason he asks these questions is because David Whitmer, in his "Address," states that before April 6th, 1830, three branches of the church had been established, also that he (Whitmer) claims to have been baptized and ordained an elder in June, 1829.

David Whitmer, in his old age and confused condition of mind evidently made numerous mistakes besides those indicated by Bro. Richmond, and it is not at all strange that he, forgetting, should make mistakes as to dates especially.

As to the time when the church was organized, the united testimony of the public records of the church fixes it on April 6th, 1830, as set forth in the "Book of Commandments," which David Whitmer and his fellows endorsed, (see sec. 24: 2); also in the "Evening and Morning Star, published in Independence, June, 1832, page 2, in both of which the same language is used as in Doctrine and Covenants 17:1. These facts were uniformly taught and published to the church and the world in the most public manner, and, so far as we are aware, were never questioned until the rise of Whitmerism. If these statements, so commonly and publicly set forth, were incorrect, why were they not opposed, refuted and corrected during the lifetime of the men and women who were the first members of the church and knew the facts? Is it reasonable that they, knowing the facts, were so unjust and unchristian as to sit idly by and see them misstated or perverted? These same records-"Evening and Morning Star," "Book of Commandments," also the "Doctrine and Covenants" publicly discussed and adopted by the assembled quorums of the church in Kirtland, August 17th, 1835, (five years and four months after the church was organized), including the "Minutes" of that Assembly, all assert that the church "was organized April 6th, 1830." "President John Whitmer," present and acting for "the High Council of the church in Missouri," (of which David Whitmer was then the president) "testified that it [the Book of Doctrine and Covenants] was true," thereby endorsing its statements that April 6th, 1830 was the time the church was organized, also the time when Joseph and Oliver, the first ministers of the church, were ordained elders. See Messenger and Advocate, page 161.

To this may be added the personal testimonies of Joseph Smith the Seer, and Oliver Cowdery, his "spokesman," (2 Nephi 2:2,3), who uniformly and publicly taught the same things. When these united testimonies, given so near the times when the church was organized, are contradicted by darkened souls who "hid away their talent in a napkin" and became saddened and soured through their own unfaithfulness and wilfulness, the result will finally appear in their own inconsistency and untrustworthiness. Such wouldbe reformers lack the divine credentials of truth, and reason, and Scripture, and heavenly call and appointment for such work, and in due time "their folly will be manifest to all men."

It is not improbable that there were more than six persons baptized prior to April 6th, 1830. The history of the church on the points in question reads as follows:

"We still continued the work of translation, when in the ensuing month, (May, 1829,) we on a certain day went into the woods to pray, and inquire of the Lord respecting baptism for the remission of sins, as we found mentioned in the translation of the plates. While we were thus employed, praying and calling upon the Lord, a messenger from heaven descended in a cloud of light, and having laid his hands upon us, he ordained us saying unto us, 'Upon you, my fellow servants, in the name of Messiah, I confer the priesthood of Aaron, which holds the keys of the ministering of angels, and of the gospel of repentance, and of baptism by immersion for the remission of sins, and this shall never be taken again from the earth, until the sons of Levi do offer again unto the Lord an offering in righteousness." He said this Aaronic priesthood had not the power of laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, but that this should be conferred on us hereafter; and he commaned us to go and be baptized, and gave us directions that I should baptize Oliver Cowdery, and afterwards that he should baptize me.

"Accordingly we went and were baptized; I baptized him first and afterwards he baptized me; after which I laid my hands upon his head and ordained him to the Aaronic priesthood, and afterward he laid his hands on me and ordained me to the same priesthood, for so we were commanded.

"The messenger who visited us on this occasion and conferred this priesthood upon us said that his name was John, the same that is called John the Baptist in the New Testament, and that he acted under the direction of Peter, James and John, who held the keys of the priesthood of Melchisedeck, which priesthood he said should in due time, be conferred on us, and that I should be called the first elder, and he the second. It was on the 15th day of May, 1829, that we were baptized and ordained under the hand of the messenger."—Times and Seasons, vol., 3: 865-6.

To this agrees the testimony of Oliver Cowdery, published October, 1834, in Messenger and Advocate and as found in the "Cowdery letters," page 3. In the following month of June, Joseph the Seer baptized Hyrum Smith and David Whitmer, and Oliver Cowdery baptized Peter Whitmer Jr., in Seneca lake, New York. Later on in the same month the following events transpired as is related in the "History of Joseph Smith," found in the Times and Seasons, volume 3, page 915:

"We now became anxious to have that promise realized to us which the angel that conferred upon us the Aaronic Priesthood had given us, viz., that, provided we continued faithful, we should also have the Melchesidec Priesthood, which holds the authority of the laving on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. We had for some time made this matter a subject of humble prayer, and at length we got together in the chamber of Mr. Whitmer's house in order more particularly to seek of the Lord what we now so earnestly desired: and here to our unspeakable satisfaction did we realize the truth of the Savior's promise, 'Ask, and you shall receive, seek, and you shall find, knock and it shall be opened unto you;' for we had not long been engaged in solemn and fervent prayer, when the word of the Lord came to us in the chamber, commanding us that I should ordain Oliver Cowdery to be an elder in the church of Jesus Christ, and that he also should ordain me to the same office, and then to ordain others as it should be made known unto us from time to time: we were however commanded to defer this our ordination until such times as it should be practicable to have our brethren, who had been and who should be baptized assembled together, when we must have their sanction to our thus proceeding to ordain each other, and have them decide by vote whether they were willing to accept us as spiritual teachers or not, when also we were commanded to bless bread and break it with them, and to take wine, bless it, and drink it with them, afterward proceed to ordain each other according to commandment, then call out such men as the Spirit should dictate, and ordain them, and then attend to the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, upon all those whom we had previously baptized; doing all things in the name of the Lord.

"The following commandment will further illustrate the nature of our calling to this Priesthood as well of that of others who were yet to be sought after."

Passing on to April 6th, 1830, we have the following which sets forth where, when, how and by whom the church was organized:

"Whilst the Book of Mormon was in the hands of the printer, we still continued to bear testimony, and give information, as far as we had opportunity, and also made known to our brethren that we had received commandment to organize the church; and accordingly we met together for that purpose at the house of the above mentioned Mr. Whitmer, (being six in number) on Tuesday the sixth day of April, A. D. one thousand, eight hundred and thirty.

"Having opened the meeting by solemn prayer to our heavenly Father we proceeded, (according to previous commandment) to call on our brethren to know whether they accepted us as their teachers in the things of the kingdom of God, and whether they were satisfied that we should proceed and be organized as a church according to said commandment which we had received. To these they consented by an unanimous vote. I then laid my hands upon Oliver Cowdery and ordained him an elder of the "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." After which he ordained me also to the office of an elder of said church. We then took bread, blessed it, and brake it with them, also wine, blessed it, and drank it with them. We then laid our hands on each individual member of the church present that they might receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, and be confirmed members of the Church of Christ. The Holy Ghost was poured out upon us to a very great degree. Some prophesied, whilst we all praised the Lord and rejoiced exceedingly. Whilst yet together I received the following commandment:

"Revelation to Joseph Smith Jr., given April 6th, 1870.

"Behold there shall be a record kept among you, and in it thou shalt be called a seer, a translator, a prophet, an apostle of Jesus Christ, an elder of the church through the will of God the Father, and the grace of your Lord Jesus Christ; being inspired of the Holy Ghost to lay the foundation thereof, and to build it up unto the most holy faith; which church was organized and established, in the year of your Lord eighteen hundred and thirty, in the fourth month, and on the sixth day of the month, which is called April. [See Book Commandments p. 45.]

"Wherefore, meaning the church, thou shalt give heed unto all his words, and commandments, which he shall give unto you, as he receiveth them, walking in all holiness before me: for his word ye shall receive, as if from mine own mouth, in all patience and faith; for by doing these things, the gates of hell shall not prevail against you: yea, and the Lord God will disperse the powers of darkness from before you, and cause the heavens to shake for your good, and his name's glory. For thus saith the Lord God, him have I inspired to move the cause of Zion in mighty power for good; and his diligence I know, and his prayers I have heard: Yea, his weeping for Zion I have seen, and I will cause that he shall mourn for her no longer, for his days of rejoicing are come unto the remission of his sins, and the manifestations of my blessings upon his works.

"For behold, I will bless all those who labor in my vineyard, with a mighty blessing, and they shall believe on his words, which are given him through me, by the Comforter, which manifesteth that Jesus was crucified by sinful men for the sins of the world; yea, for the remission of sins unto the contrite heart. Wherefore, it behooveth me, that he should be ordained by you, Oliver Cowdery, mine apostle; this being an ordinance unto you that you are an elder under his hand, he being the first unto you, that you might be an elder unto this Church of Christ, bearing my name; and the first preacher of this church, unto the church, and before the world; yea, before the Gentiles: yea, and thus saith the Lord God, lo, lo, to the Jews also. Amen."

Such is the authentic and well sustained history of the time, and place, and manner of conferring the two priesthoods, the ordination of the first Elders, also the organization of the church, the facts of which were publicly taught and known to the church from the first, and were never questioned or contradicted till long after the death of both Joseph and Oliver and many other of the early witnesses, and when questioned it was by those who, for what were considered good reasons were disfellowshipped by the church, to whom may be added a small class of opinionated, self-willed would-be reformers and selfcalled leaders, a similar class to some who turned away from the early Christian church, rejected some of its doctrines, resisted and maligned its chief officers, and vet claimed to be advocates and defenders of the primitive, true faith. The Saints may ever watch and pray that they may escape the blindness, confusion and ruin of such self-made reformers. They should ever stand with and by those whom the Lord appoints, and who are approved of heaven by the power and light and gifts of the Holy Spirit.

E. ROBINSON'S VISION.

WE give herewith by permission of Bro. Walker, a letter he received from Ebenezer Robinson which speaks for itself and proves that the latter has but little confidence in the vision related, or that he has some "private interpretation" for it so that it will not (with him) apply to the gathering of the Saints by the Reorganization, "in the regions round about," beginning at and about Lamoni. If his vision related to a gathering of the Saints by the Reorganized Church "a few miles west" of Pleasanton, Iowa, why is he not obedient to that vision? Why is he arrayed against those whom he claims "a multitude of voices" testified from heaven were "Zion's children!" Is he now wiser than the Giver of that vision? or is he blinded by the "mists of darkness" and "found fighting against God?"

We have heard him—and scores who read this have also heard him-endorse the location made at Lamoni and relate his vision in confirmation of it. And again we ask, If heaven by open vision and "a multitude of voices" revealed the fact to him in 1868, or 1869, that "Zion's children" would begin to locate "along the state line of Iowa and Missouri a few miles west of my [his] then residence near Pleasanton, Iowa," why is he now found opposing and contending against the work these "Zion's children" have in hand? Their doctrines, principles, theories and general working are now the same as in 1868-9; and inasmuch as heaven then endorsed them as "Zion's children," thereby endorsing their general work, by what authority and on what grounds does Mr. Robinson turn against them and advocate theories never held, but always controverted and denounced by the Reorganized Church? Mr. Robinson, your own words condemn you—here they are:

DAVIS CITY, Iowa, Dec. 6th, 1888.

Bro S. F. Walker:—Your letter of a recent date came to hand when my time was very much occupied in preparing matter and arranging for my forthcoming periodical, The Return, and other pressing duties; but notwithstanding, I have devoted some time in looking up my journals, which I kept in those days, to see if I could find any allusion to the subject you inquire about, but so far have not found any, therefore can not give the exact date of the occurence.

In 1868 and 1869, (some years after I had united with the Reorganized Church, and after it had been spoken of by the brethren at Plano and Sandwich, Ill., to look out a location for a settlement, or gathering place for the Latter Day Saints), I spent a considerable time in Washington City on business, and while there, one morning, after daylight, just as I awoke from sleep, I heard, as it were, a multitude of voices singing the first verse only of the hymn commmencing with these words: "Give us room that we may dwell, Zion's chidren cry aloud," and at the same instant it was manifested to me the country where they were located. It was west, and along the state line of Iowa and Missouri, a few miles west of my then residence, near Pleasanton. Iowa. Respectfully your Brother,

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE have many letters on hand which we can not publish for want of space. We have others we do not print because too long, while others are too personal in pointing out real or supposed errors and evils of other people. When persons write for the press they should avoid personalities so far as possible; they should condense their words into as small space as at all practicable; and they should write only when they have something of value to the general readers to communicate. Besides all this, they should write plainly so the compositors can read their manuscript, and write on one side of the sheet only.

President Joseph Smith wrote us from Los Angeles, California, the 25th and 26th ult. He was having some interesting meetings. He and Bro. Burton were called to Santa Ana by telegram saying that Bro. John Garner was dying.

Sr. Ellen Oakman of Ponders End, England, writes that she rejoices in the good cause. Bro. William Newton had visited them, and by his labors and wise counsel had brought much good to the Saints there. She states that she loves the Home Column which has done her much good and prays that the Lord may bless it to many.

Bro. William Anderson, formerly of Bro. William Anderson, formerly of St. Louis, Missouri, and late of Pleasanton, Iowa, has permanently located his family at Lamoni.

Bro. D. W. Shirk of Crawford, Nebraska, writes that he feels well in the faith and is trying to make use of every opportunity to do his duty.

Bro. J. W. Chatburn writes from Harlan, Iowa, the 28th ult., that Bro. C. E. Butterworth preached "two good sermons" there of late, and that prospects were fair for having prosperous times in church matters.

Sr. Mary Anable of Grand Blanc, Michigan, also expresses gratitude to her heavenly Father for the gospel and the blessings that obedience to it has brought to her family. She mentions the faithful labor and toil of Bro. J. A. Carpenter through whose preaching she heard the truth. Herself and husband are trying to let their light shine as all should do.

In our last issue we called attention to a letter from Bro. Daniel Jones of Webster, Nebraska. It failed to appear in that issue, but will be found in this. Read it.

In its proper department will be found an interesting letter from Bro. R. J. Anthony in respect to the death of the late Sr. Wilson of Salt Lake city. We knew Bro. and Sr. Wilson, and have passed many happy seasons in their society when in Salt Lake city. We trust our Father in heaven may console and sustain our bereaved brother.

Bro. I. N. Roberts writes from Cooke's Point, Texas, the 27th ult., saying: "Good news from all parts of the mission. We have built us a good church house here."

In a late letter from San Francisco, California, Bro. C. A. Parkins says: "All goes well in our branch. Am doing the best I can to live in harmony with the section in Doc. & Cov. on faith, and am trying to present the word as often as practicable."

We are compelled to simply make extracts from a large number of letters, owing to the large number received.

Bro. J. M. Terry wrote from St. Joseph, Missouri: "Our quarterly conference passed pleasantly. We had a good attendance at the Sunday services. I never loved this great work so well as now."

Sr. Annie B. Fisher, a young convert to the faith of but fourteen years of age, writes from Newark, Dakota, in earnest spirit; testifying of her gratitude for blessings received since entering the fold.

Bro. David Brand, of Marengo, Illinois, an aged and faithful veteran in the cause, writes that he is still firm in the faith and knows it will prevail. He mentions the inconsistent teachings set forth in "the Return" a copy of which has reached him, and states that he is not beguiled by its deceptive philosophy. He says, "It is no use to send me such stuff for I received a witness that I can never forget. This church is of God and nothing can overthrow it, unless it shall transgress the law of God given in the three books."

Bro. J. F. McDowell wrote us from Magnolia the 4th instant that, by request of Saints in Iowa and permission of Bro. J. R. Lambert, president of mission, he had been laboring in various places in Iowa of late, with fair success, and intended to prolong his stay for a season. His health has improved very much, also his nervous and spiritual condition. He intended to labor some in Little Sioux, and perhaps engage in a discussion at or near Marathon, Iowa, in the near future.

We answer no questions nor print letters or communications except signed with proper name of writers.

We have scores of questions on hand, and hope to find time and space by and by to answer them.

Bro. W. A. Wibberley of Ironton, Lawrence county, Ohio, writes that he baptized two recently at that place.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

WE extract the following from a letter dated Wilbur, Nebraska, March 6th, from Bro. R. M. Elvin:

"My trip here has been productive of good both spiritually and temporally. Five were added by baptism, all adults; over six hundred dollars was raised to build a church, and three hundred and eighty dollars tithing placed in the hands of the Bishop's agent. The outlook is the best for the work that I ever saw here."

It should be remembered that Wilbur is the place where Clark Braden declared his intention of killing Mormonism root and branch. "War to the knife and the knife to the hilt," was his pompous declaration, and the above is a result of the "extermination."

Under date of March 4th, Bro. Frank Criley thus wrote from Allegheny City, Pennsylvania:

"Our district conference was held here Saturday and Sunday, and all passed off pleasantly and up to expectations with the exception of the sorrow felt for our beloved Bro. E. C. Briggs in his sickness. His son is here, and we are doing all we can for him. We had quite a good attendance at conference. Brn. E. L. Kelly and G. T. Griffiths were present. Bro. W. H. Garrett is now district president, and Bro. W. C. H. Noble secretary, and prospects are bright, if we only get the proper missionaries from General Conference. I think we as a district are entitled to our share of good ones. Our treasury makes quite a good showing—over three thousand dollars were paid in this year—you know our numbers and ability. Expect to be present at the General Conference."

THE following preamble and resolutions are a clear and ardent expression of the esteem in which our late Bro. J. R. Badham was held by those who knew him in intimate social relations:

Castle Hall, Gauntlet Lodge K. of P., No. 129, Los Angeles, Cal., Jan. 16th, 1889.

Whereas: The silent Messenger of Death has entered our midst, removing therefrom our beloved Chancellor Commander and brother, J. R. Badham: And

Whereas: Feeling that in the death of J. R. Badham, our order, and Gauntlet Lodge in particular, has lost a valuable and earnest worker; and

Whereas: By his death the family of our deceased brother have suffered a deep and irreparable loss, Be it therefore

Resolved: That Gauntlet Lodge No. 129 K. of P., tender the bereaved family of our late brother our sincere and heartfelt sympathy in this the hour of their deep affliction. And be it further

Resolved: That a copy of these resolutions be spread in full upon the minutes of this Lodge, and a copy of the same engrossed and forwarded to the family of our deceased brother.

CLIVE A. RICHEY, W. M. TAYLOR, M. C. WESTBROOK, THE Independent Patriot's Davis City correspondent thus reports the labors of Bro. M. H. Forscutt in the issue for February 20th;

"Elder Forscutt came in last Saturday and preached Saturday evening, Sunday morning and evening in the Saints Chapel. On Sunday he baptized three and on Monday five more. One of the number had been previously baptized by E. Robinson and not feeling satisfied she desired rebaptism. Others are believing."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Do you think Saints should visit go-asyou-please walking matches, or theaters, or take friends to visit beer cellars and disreputable parts of the city?

Ans.—No. Evil associations corrupt character. All should shun the appearance of evil.

2.—Does an elder need an ordination to act as teacher in a branch to which he belongs?

A-No. An elder may officiate in all the offices less than his, if regularly called to them.

The manhood never bought nor sold!.,

WINTER.

The bright autumnal days are past, And winter, stern, has come at last, With chilling winds and frosts severe, And snowy storms so cold and drear.

How dry and hard the leafless trees! How sad their wailing 'mid the breeze! Like those who mourn for lost ones dear— Fit requiem for a dying year.

The song-birds cheerful voice is still, Ice-bound each murmuring creek and rill, Snow-clad the fields. Alas! how drear Is winter, when it comes severe!

And oh, how dreaded when one's lot By heaven is cast where wealth is not; Where want comes in. and day by day Compels each one to toil away!

No doubt the widow's heart is sad, Her little ones so poorly clad; Her stock of fuel almost gone, And snow still deep on wood and lawn.

The soldier, too, with gallant form, Exposed to each rude blast and storm, Must oft' at night-fall rest his head Upon earth's cold and frozen bed,

Yet, there are those whose lot is such That winter ne'er is dreaded much; Who e'en with pleasure greet the snow, And smile to hear the storm-winds blow.

Oh, what a contrast! Oft with those Who ought to share alike earth's woes. The rich should give the poor relief, The strong help bear the weak ones grief.

Thus soon, might earth's "poor suffering ones, Be like unto her "favored sons;" Then. too, might Winter, as it comes, Be met with joy in all our homes.

CARRIE A. THOMAS.

In the above lines there is such a sweet, homelike naturalness, and yet an undertone of sadness and pathos which will bring the unbidden tears to the eyes of many who knew the writer; and if we mistake not, will stir emotions in many a heart which perhaps has become encased with selfiishness, all unconscious of the fact. They will recall a delicate, fragile woman, who while upon earth bore uncomplainingly her lot of privation and toil, and perhaps they will wonder that as she went out and came in among them they never guessed the beating pulses of her heart were keeping time to thoughts so sad. Today, oh, blessed thought! safe in one of the many mansions Iesus promised to prepare, she feels no more the rude blasts of winter, nor toils beyond all her strength that loved ones may be cared for. Selfishness shall never enter that blessed abode, for the Lamb of God is the light of it and they who are permitted to enter there will know "All ye are brethren."

God has made this earth very beautiful. There is beauty and delicacy of workmanship even in the weed growing up by the highway. These beauties come from the molding hand of God, at the bidding of his word, and they have their purpose-they trace their lesson. Shall we read it?

"Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow. They toil not, neither do thy spin; and yet I say unto you, that even Solomon in all his glory, was not arrayed like one of these." What praise is here bestowed upon God's workmanship in contradistinction to that of man. Jesus, while imparting a never-to-be-forgotten lesson of the necessity of avoiding undue carefulness with reference to food and raiment, yet taught to him who readeth carefully, another one. Consider the lilies-how beautiful they are! yet is their simplicity the perfection of their beauty. The crowning workmanship of God was man, and perhaps the most royally arrayed of the sons of men was Solomon. "Yet I sav unto you," were the words of Jesus, "that even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these."

Could we estimate the care bestowed upon the richness of that arrayal—the money wrung from the hard hand of poverty and toil to provide therefor-then might we know how little God regarded such display; nay more, how displeasing it is in his sight.

It is considered the perfection of art that its apparent simplicity shall conceal its elaborateness. We do not believe God ever intended the people of his church to be swathed and bundled up specimens of ugliness; for if he had, the command never would have been given, "Let all your garments be plain." If the person does not beautify the garments, then good taste would assert the less ornamentation the better. But this ornamentation, have we ever thought of its cost? Have we ever dreamed that what was actually of no use or benefit to us, converted into warm clothing, food or fuel, would mean to others comfort, warmth and hope? Have we ever thought that the time and labor saved, would not only enable us to visit the sick, to cheer the despondent and comfort those who mourn, but also to adorn the imperishable part of our beings with intelligence which would fit us to be the companions of those pure intelligences inhabiting the mansions of our Father's house?

> "No doubt the widow's heart is sad, Her little ones so poorly clad, Her stock of fuel almost gone. And snow yet deep on wood and lawn."

Life-this present life-is unequal, thus giving opportunity for the disciples of Christ to exercise self-denial and charity. Oh, that we might feel and realize this, lest the time come when the grave mistake we have made reveal itself and it be too late to remedy it.

Dear Sisters:-I hope that I may say something which may be cheering to you. I love the gospel and am trying with all my heart to obey it and keep all the commandments of the Lord. I can not do it of myself, but God is good and will give me of his Spirit to help me, for he has promised that his Spirit would guide into all truth. I am so thankful that among so many churches I have found the church of the living God, and that God is gathering his people out of the organizations of men into his own church, established by his authority in these last days to prepare a people for his coming. The bridegroom will not come until the bride is ready to receive him. Let us make ready, that we delay not his coming. Let us be decidedly on the Lord's side, for we can not serve God and mammon, and it is so much easier to serve the Lord willingly. To be decided and say I will, Lord help me. How quickly the needed strength will come! Then we will grow in grace and in a knowledge of the truth. Let us make our garments plain and put into the treasury of the Lord the means saved by so doing, and many who know nothing of the pure gospel and its fulness will hear and embrace it. The people are fed on such adulterated stuff that many are starving for the pure gospel and the bread of eternal life.

Sister Frances:-When I read the He ald, and Autumn Leaves and rejoice in the good things told therein I feel that I must write and express my appreciation of the effort that is being put forth to keep the Saints posted in the progress of the great work. To my eyes it seems that there is a general awakening to the fact that the time is short; that the Lord's set time to favor Zion has surely come.

Why should we not awake, and strive earnestly to put from us every vain and foolish thought. word and deed, and conform ourselves to the perfect law of the gospel? Oh, while the time is still ours, may we realize that we all have a great and important work in the establishing of righteousness and truth in the earth, by making ourselves ready to meet the Savior without fear or shame! What a work before us, and how little we seem to accomplish! But let us patiently press onward day by day, remembering that "His mercy endureth forever."

> > CLEVELAND, Iowa, Feb. 19th.

Sister Walker: -- I feel happy to say that I am counted worthy to bear a humble part among God's people, for I know this work is true. Many a testimony have I had that it was of God, and not of man. The Mite Society and the Prayer Union are doing great good in our branch. I have felt the benefit of the latter. When we met last Thursday the Spirit was with us and that to bless us, and I can say for myself that I have more love for my sisters than in times past, and more love for reading the Scriptures and church books. Still I do not like to bear my testimony. Pray for me that I have more strength to overcome that man-fearing spirit.

I am a mother and have one daughter and four sons; two of the oldest are in the church. I have my mother living with me. One sister in the church, and four sisters belong to the M. E. Church. They never had the chance to hear this gospel preached. From your sister in Christ,

CLARA SIMPSON.

FULTON, Iowa, Feb. 27th.

Sister Frances: It is only a few months since I was baptized by Bro. J. S. Roth, and I rejoice that I was led to obey the truth. It took me a long time to make up my mind to yield to God's demands: not because I did not believe it to be the truth, but for fear that in my occupation as a teacher, I could not live as I ought to as a professor of religion. But since I obeyed the gospel I have discovered my mistake, for I can be far more patient now than before. Oh, how essential-it is for mothers and teachers to have a portion of God's Spirit to help them to be patient in leading the young, and to be able to set a good example before them, which shall be worthy of imitation; for children are great imitators.

Our hearts were made glad two weeks since by the return of brethren Roth and Ruby, for we are all young in the work in this branch, and the sermons of God's servants are always encouraging and edifying to us. On the evening of the eleventh the brethren opened a new place at the Cherry Grove School house, and brother Ruby preached a good sermon on living faith. After the sermon Bro. Roth announced that he had some tracts for distribution, and it was interesting to see the number of hands reaching over each other to get them. But while Bro. Roth was handing out tracts, an Advent preacher and Bro. Ruby came in contact in the other part of the house, and the Advent brother, in a very rough way made many false assertions concerning our faith. Bro. Roth immediately invited him to be there the next night, and he would answer him. On the following evening the house was again packed so full that there was no standing room. Bro. Roth was well prepared for the task and the Spirit of light was upon him. He examined a number of different histories and showed up the conflicting stories in each; he also proved by the church books and the Kirtland Temple suit and by other documents our position as a church to have been grossly misrepresented. The Reverend demurred at different times during the discourse; but Bro. Roth was in earnest about his work, and many times almost the entire congregation applauded him.

After the sermon Bro. Roth sold ten copies of the Voice of Warning, and had not enough to supply the demand. Many said, "I would not have missed that for ten dollars; no, I would have walked ten miles rather than missed it," etc., etc.

The gentleman has not disturbed nor attended our meetings since. It opened the eyes of many who did not know much about our church, and removed mountains of prejudice.

It makes me rejoice to know that Satan with all his craft can not overthrow this work, for it is founded on the rock.

The good work is onward in this district, and we all hope that the General Conference will return Bro. Roth to this field again, for we know he is the right man in the right place. May God's work grow everywhere is my prayer.

Your sister in bonds,

OLLIE SUTTON.

Correspondence.

Boston, Mass, March 1st.

Editors Herald:—The discussion between Elder E. L. Kelley and Mr. Whitehead, of the Christadelphian church closed last evening. Two propositions, lasting eight evenings in all, were debated. I, the unconscious state between death and the resurrection: 2, that the Kingdom of God referred to in Mark first chapter, is not to be set up until the second coming of Christ.

To the Herald readers it is unnecessary to state that under the circumstances the issue of the discussion could hardly be a doubtful one; and it is probable that challenges for discussion may be fewer, by these people, and contact with the Latter Day Saints very particularly avoided.

While it is expected that many or most will remain as in Christ's day, who, having eyes see not, ears hear not, neither hearts to understand or receive the truth, yet I believe both parties in this debate are satisfied that the spoils are with us, and that no attempt to retake them will be offered. Bro Kelley received the credit from the opposition of conducting himself gentlemanly, and I believe credit should be given Mr. Whitehead in this regard. Of course, when hard pressed, or out of anything like reasonable argument, the temptation to ridicule, or bring in the name of Joseph Smith was great, or to make postulates for us and proceed to argue from them. Reading from Pratt's Voice of Warning, and assuming for us that the Kingdom was organized on the day of Pentecost; that we were wrong in going to law (referring to Kirtland Temple suit) with our Brighamite brethren etc., reading 1 Corinthians 6: 5, 7, as a rebuke to us, the line between us having previously been clearly drawn, were tactics employed, more especially the last two nights, to cover inevitable defeat, throw dust in the people's eyes and create a prejudice against what they could not help seeing was the glorious truth of God. The Saints are cheered and encouraged, those attending having, in many respects, a better understanding of their own faith—an education which is sometimes neglected by a failure to earnestly and persistently make themselves acquainted with church literature and the standard books of reference.

Several persons have signified their intention of uniting with us.

Bro. W. H. Kelley was in attendance during the discussion of the first proposition, but left Saturday evening to attend the Brooklyn conference, and yesterday we reluctantly parted with Bro. E. L. Kelley, who has been doing us good service during his brief stay among us. Matters are progressing slowly, but we believe surely, toward the higher and better understanding of the law of God in the Massachusetts district, the one patent fact always shining out clear as a waymark and guide in the pathway of the just, that those whose lives conform to the word of God and are willing to take the Holy Spirit for their guide are not deceived.

May the Lord bless this people and enable us to so live as to possess that wisdom which cometh from above, which is first pure, and then peaceable. A peace obtained by sacrifice of principle and dishonor of God's law, always has and always will tend to destruction and can never subserve the interests of good government. What a glorious hope—to feel assured that our work is known, and our reward to be decided by One with whom misjudgment will be impossible. Were it not for the continued assurances with which we are reinforced, how hard and unequal the contest with the forces that have in the past, and do yet, seek to destroy the Church of God!

As for myself, every day's experience almost, teaches me the necessity of leaning upon God for counsel and advice, and through the means of grace granted we hope to make the task of overcoming a life-work, and in the end an accomplished success. Care and responsibility for which we do not feel adequate are placed upon us and which can only be discharged with any degree of general success by a universal desire to abase self and exalt and promote the interests of our great work, looking for reward and honor only when the fight shall be finished and victory—which lies at no place but the end of the race—won.

The calls for wise laborers are many—very many—and the supply very meagre. No preacher however, no matter what his eloquence may be, can supply the lack which a godless and unspiritual life will inevitably produce. Those who live their religion make it easy for the minister of Christ when he meets with them to preach, teach and expound the law of the Lord; and that testimony which "maketh wise the simple," received into good and honest hearts blossoms and bears fruit unto eternal life.

"He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit. If ye abide in me and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will. Herein is my Father glorified that ye bear much fruit."—John 15:7, 7. May this fruit abound more and more unto the praise of God and the disenthrallment of the people.

We expect to remain here over Sunday and next week to present the work in a new field near Taunton. I am thinking some of attending the General Conference; am willing, however, to go or stay as I may be directed, and as shall be for the good of the work.

I obtained yesterday a clergyman's permit from the agent of the C.B. & Q.R.R. in this city, over all their lines, and have been generally fortunate and courteously treated by railroad lines.

I feel strong in the great latter day work, and rejoice in the multitude and fast accumulating evidences of its truth and ultimate greatness and power for good in the world.

Brother F. M. Sheehy is doing good work, and laborers are working unselfishly and effectually for the good of the cause.

Editors Herald:-Some time ago I received from a friend in New York a copy of The Return, published by Ebenezer Robinson of Davis City, Iowa; and while reading it my thoughts carried me back to the fall of 1881: to the semiannual conference of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints held near Council Bluffs, Iowa, where I met Bro. E. Robinson and became somewhat acquainted with him. I there heard him speak from the stand in glowing terms of the piety and brotherly love and godly zeal of Joseph Smith the Seer, and and the members of the church at the time he joined in 1835 and before. And during a conversation with him afterwards, he told me that he had been intimately acquainted with Joseph Smith from the time he (Robinson) first worked for him in the printing office in Kirtland, Ohio, until within a few days of his martyrdom, when he, (Robinson) was sent by the church to Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, on a mission in company with Sidney Rigdon. And I asked him at that time if he ever knew of Joseph Smith teaching or practicing polygamy, and his answer was, "I never knew him to teach anything but righteous principles." And as he claims that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God and founded the church according to the revelation of Jesus Christ, and taught nothing but righteous principles from that time (1835) until the time of his death, and that he, (Robinson) was baptized into the church during that time, I fail to see any consistency in his being re-baptized by John C. Whitmer in April, 1888. It looks to me like being baptized out of the Church of Jesus Christ into the Church of David Whitmer, just as the Brighamites were required by Brigham Young to be re-baptized in his church after arriving in Utah. Now it seems very strange to me that during an intimate acquaintance with Joseph Smith for a period of ten years-the last ten years of Joseph's life-E. Robinson failed to find that he taught anything but righteous principles, and that up to the year 1881, when I met him, (a period of forty-six years) he had failed to find anything to the contrary; that all at once, in April, 1888, he found that the church had gone wrong during the lifetime of Joseph the Seer! It seems to me that undue influences must have been brought to bear on the old man's mind in his declining years and second childhood; else he must have been a terrible fraud during more than fifty years of what should have been the best part of his life, which I am not willing to believe.

I will now relate a dream which I had after reading said copy of The Return: I seemed to be looking at some poultry sitting on some roosts in a hen-house. Amongst them was quite a large fowl of a common grey color. In form and size it had the appearance of a turkey about two-thirds grown, and it seemed to be quite tame. I reached up to it and caught it, when I found it had claws and a head like a very large hawk; and as soon as I caught it, it began to show fight. I held it closely to my breast with my left hand and arm and placed my right hand behind its neck, and pushed forward a little, and to my great surprise and astonishment, the head and neck came off close to the body, just as if it had no connection and was just placed on the body, the feathers on the neck hiding the flesh where they came together. And while I was amazed and astonished an account of the head and body coming apart, the interpretation came to me that the fowl represented Whitmerism; and that there being no connection between the body and head.

"Iesus" appeared to Mary after his resurrection; (Mark 16: 9, and Matthew 28: 9). "Jesus" appeared to the disciples after his resurrection, (Luke 24: 36); appeared to them the third time after his resurrection (John 21: 1-14); and the gospel was revealed to Paul by Jesus Christ, (Gal. 1: 12). "Jesus" commissioned the apostles to preach, baptize, and perform miracles after his resurrection; (Matthew 28: 18-20; Mark 16: 13-18). In the year A. D. 60 Paul was "a servant of Jesus Christ;" (Romans 1:1); A. D. 60 James was a servant of "Jesus Christ;" (James 1:1). Peter in A. D. 66 was a servant and "apostle of Jesus Christ." Jude was "a servant of Jesus Christ," A. D. 66; (Jude 1: 1). The church had fellowship with "Jesus Christ" in A. D. 90; (I John 1:3) "The Revelation of Jesus Christ" was given to John in the year A. D. 96. (Revelations 1:1). The Savior calls himself "Jesus" 63 years after his resurrection and ascension, (Rev. 22: 16); and John's prayer at the end of his Revelation was "even so come Lord Jesus." And Paul said: "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a name which is above every name; that at the name of Iesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father."

Quotations might be multiplied to show that our Savior never dropped his given name, "Jesus," but enough has been quoted to convince any person of average intelligence.

Then as his name was and is "Jesus Christ," why not call his Church "The Church of Jesus Christ"—his full name! DANIEL JONES.

GARFIELD, Arkansas, Feb. 21st.

Dear Herald:—When I last wrote I had just closed a debate with an Independent preacher, at Nathan, Pike county. I continued preaching in that county, as circumstances would permit, until September 24th when the Spirit directed to other parts. The last six weeks of my stay there was not attended with as much interest as formerly because of politics; everybody being so enthused over what they called "the issues of the day," that they would not listen to anything else. The Spirit directed to Craighead county. We went to Bro. Ivie's. I was in very poor health at this time and did not feel that I could do anything else that I could do anything else.

preaching, but at the earnest solicitation of the people, I consented to try the next Sunday, and would not say that I could not until I had tried. Sunday came, and I felt no better, and it was with much pain that I reached the school house. The time for preaching arrived and I commenced, and if there was any pain in my body during that hour and a half, I have no recollection of it; but I remember something about my feelings as I returned; they were any thing but good. I continued preaching there for about two weeks, and a portion of the time I would have to remain in bed all day and then walk half a mile and preach at night, until finally, the disease suddenly left me, and I have not been traubled with it but very little since. Quite an interest was created there and many friends were made. For reasons that, to my mind, were justifiable, I went to Cabool, Missouri, where I preached several discourses assisted by Bro. Atwell. Our next place was Mountain Grove. We obtained the use of the Christian church and I preached to the people of that place and awakened an interest there that will be productive of good. We went to Seligman, but had been there but a short time when I was callenged to debate Church identity with a Baptist minister by the name of Bandy, which I accepted; and at the close of the debate, all the people-a few Baptists excepted-gave their verdict in our faver. After this I preached at the following new places in Barry county, viz New Salem, Lone Star, and Washburn. The Holiness folks have been creating quite an excitement in this country. They are sanctified-wholly sanctified and without sin; the kingdom in their hearts. Yet I hear them say, "If I am not right I want to get right." If a person is without sin, why say If I am not right I want to get right? I went to Rogers, Arkansas, where Sr. Wickes procured the North Methodist church for five evenings at a cost of one dollar per night. The first evening a fair audience greeted us. I left an appointment for the next evening, and when the time came I was on hand and found the Parson also on hand with a crowd to sing us out; and sing us out they did. I next went to Garfield, where I kept up appointments as often as the weather would permit. People in the south (as a rule) will not attend church in bad weather. A Campbellite elder challenged me to debate church identity with him. Two weeks from that time the debate began, and at the conclusion of the first proposition, which was that the church of which he is a member is the church of Christ, some of the ladies of that country met at the school house and adorned the stand that had been brought there for me by a friend, with a beautiful stand cover, with a boquet on each end of the stand, and a nice lamp in the center. This together with the many congratulations and words of encouragement that I received from the audience at the close of the debate, created feelings within me that are easier felt than described. It wos only a few days before this that I was looked upon by a majority of the place as their worst enemy. Now they invite me to their houses and say I can find a home with them whenever I come. This was general among all except the Campbellites. I was told that I had never gained a more complete victory than there. I attribute it to the Spirit and the impregnability of the doctrine; hence ascribe the honor and praises to God. The elder's name is W. A. Inman. Bro. E. A.

Davis once held a debate with him at Seligman. If Bro. D. can say he is a gentleman, he can say more than I can. There are threats of prosecuting him at the next session of the Circuit Court of Benton county for the indecent language he used during the debate. He has no regard for truth.

Invitations are coming from all places where I have been to come and preach which I hope to be able to respond to at some time. My only aim is to labor for the best interests of the Church, and I can truly say that God has blessed me more than I could, in my most sanguine expectations, hope to receive. O, that I could know just how to appreciate as I should, the blessings that God bestows upon me; I can not praise him enough. I have been greatly encouraged by reading some of the late letters from Texas. At Milano I opened up the work several years ago; and now, thanks be to God, I can see that the seed sown has began to generate and I hope "thirty, sixty and an hundred fold" will be the result. Where is Bro. Gillen? I can not hear from him. He can address me at Seligman, Barry county, Missouri. I go next week to Cabool, Texas county, Missouri. Yours in bonds,

A. J. CATO.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Feb. 26th.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—This morning I write you some of the particulars of the last illness and death of Sister J. W. Wilson. Death is not a pleasant thing to write of, neither to contemplate. It is of the living we would rather write and speak, yet there are times when it is proper to speak of those who have passed through the "valley and shadow of death." You personally know of the long years of suffering she endured; how many times she was prostrated and rallied again.

On the 5th of last January she was confined to her bed, and from that time she gradually declined.

During her last illness she was cheerful at times when her sufferings were not acute, and would converse freely with the Saints and friends who called to see her. I was confident from the first she would never rally. Something seemed to say, "Her time of departure is near."

At one time she asked me what I thought about sending a request to the Sisters' Praver League" to be remembered before the Lord. She wanted me to write Sister Frances. She said she wanted rest-that if she could only get some relief it would be a blessing indeed. I told her I thought it would be proper to write. But at the time I wrote I could only hope that the Lord would be merciful and relieve her suffering. As the end drew near, she saw her mother who had passed over to the "silent land" long years ago. Her mother told her to tell her sister and brother to obey the gospel as it was at first-the doctrine her mother had espoused in the early history of the church. Her sister, Mrs. Benson, is a member of the "Utah Church," and a dear, good soul. Her brother is of kind and generous heart, and a "Free Thinker." She had the opportunity to tell her sister, but her brother came too late.

She passed away quietly, and in great peace, on the evening of the 21st instant. From three o'clock in the afternoon she was unconscious, only answering Bro. Wilson once when he talked to her. During her illness she could not rest when he was not at her side. When she was sleeping, when he left she seemed to miss him at once; and up to the last half-hour she seemed to know when he was not near. At just twenty minutes to nine o'clock the supreme hour came. Myself and daughter, Lenor, and sister Stewart, were watching. Sister Benson and brother Wilson had both laid down to rest when the two girls sitting at the bedside spoke to me and said she was passing away. I stepped to the bedside and saw she was almost gone.

I shall never forget that hour. We all stood reverently around her we all loved so dear, and while our hearts were filled with sorrow and our eyes with tears, we could, and in our hearts did say, "Lord, thy will be done." I looked on that calm and peaceful face while a vital spark remained. There was not a struggle, not a wrinkle or frown upon the face.

Brother Blair, the Lord was with us! We felt him nearer in that hour than ever before. I had walked into the room that afternoon and put my hand upon her head and said, "Lord, let thy handmaiden depart in peace,"—and it was so. We all realized the literal fulfillment of the Lord's promise,—"And it shall come to pass that those that die in me shall not taste of death, for it shall be sweet unto them."

Herself and Bro. Wilson heard you preach in the "Liberal Institute," in 1879 They believed the gospel; and in 1880 both were baptized by Bro. Joseph Luff and confirmed by you and him.

She was born March 1st, 1838, and died February 21st, 1889.

Brother and sister Wilson's house has been a home to me occasionally, for over eight years, and I had learned to love them very much. They were so kind to me that the separation was a sorrowful one; yet I felt to thank the Lord fervently because he took her as he did, and that I with my daughter, were present to aid all we could in the hour of death for those who had done so much for us. We all felt we had a testimony of the Lord's goodness to us. He was near to us and heard our prayers.

Bro. Wilson's house has been a home for the elders for years past, and both he and his wife have had many testimonies of the Lord's love to them. When President Joseph Smith came to her house she saw him just as he was previously shown to her in a vision.

When Brethren Wight and Butterworth were appointed to the Australian mission and Bro. Wilson received a notice of their coming, she told her sister and Bro. Wilson she would know them. When they arrived in the city, brethren Wilson and Charles Barrows met them at the depot. Sister Wilson, resting on the lounge, looked out of the window and saw them coming and pointed directly to Bro. Wight, and said, "That is Bro. Wight; but where is Bro. Butterworth?" He was carrying the lunch-basket and she took him to be a boy; but on their coming in she recognized him. When they left the city, her prayers and loving kindness went with them. She spoke to me of "that boy," many times, and talked of their going so far away from kindred and friends.

In this letter we can only mention a tithe of interesting testimonies. All the elders who have had a resting place with brother and sister Wilson will remember their kindness and feel in their hearts to bless the bereaved.

The conduct of the funeral service fell to my lot and proved to be the greatest trial in all my ministerial experience. The Saints and friends did all that kind and loving hearts could do. God bless them; we love them more than ever because they were so good.

Bro. Blair, please pardon this long letter. Our hearts are full. May God help us all to meet the just and good. Yours in bonds,

R. J. Anthony.

MT. OLIVE, Neb., March 4th.

Bro. Blair: - I came into this vicinity on the 23d ult. Spoke four times at Freeman to full houses, closing my labors by baptizing Wm. A. Foreman, James H. Pethoud and wife. More than two years ago I saw in dream the baptism of Bro. Foreman, and when leaving home for this trip, I told my folks that I expected to visit Freeman and administer the rite. Sister Pethoud desired to unite with the church six years ago, and is now happy with her union in Christ. There is a favorable prospect for a good work in that region, but it will require faithful, consistent and continuous labor. Bro. H. O. Smith, did good work in that vicinity and left an excellent impression in favor of the cause, notwithstanding he was opposed. I enjoyed the same treatment. Such actions if kindly received and wisely used are often more of a benefit than an injury to our cause. I spoke five times here, and the attendance, order and interest were good. I have received richly of the sustaining grace of God by his Holy Spirit and believe that this visit to my old field has been productive of good. With a contrite heart I render all praise to our Heavenly Father.

Wilber, March 5th.—The Saints here are actively seeking the erection of a church. In less than a week they have raised about $500. They are hopeful to have it up and enclosed to hold conference in the 21st of next month. I spoke here last evening, expect to this evening, and then go to Nebraska City to morrow for a few days.

I was peculiarly wrought upon, and pained at heart when I read of Bro. E. C. Briggs' sickness.

Weather is delightful, and farmers are very busy getting ready for their spring work.

The law of tithing is being complied with by the saints here with marked unanimity.

ROBERT M. ELVIN.

SPRINGDALE, Ark., Mar. 3d.

Dear Saints:—No doubt many of you wonder what has become of Bro. Eli, so I write that you may know, and what I am doing. "Woe unto me if I preach not the gospel." Notwithstanding the depletion of the church treasury, our supplies being thus cut off and we thrown on our own resources, I have failed not to declare the glad tidings of salvation to the people, and I find them on every hand eager and glad to learn something of the great plan of salvation. They are not satisfied with the religion of the day.

By permission, and in accordance with what I believe to be the dictation of God's Holy Spirit to me, I left the Wisconsin mission and brought my family by wagon away down here "to the land of cotton," penetrating over a hundred miles farther south east in "Arkansaw," than any of our elders had ever gone to my knowledge.

When we arrived in Johnson county, we found that Bro. Ben. Case had been scattering seeds of truth by the wayside, and some were beginning to germinate; so I soon began to open my mouth and sound the gospel trump. Notwithstanding I was compelled to split rails and chop cord wood, that I might get food for my loved ones, I failed not to preach the gospel. It was hard after mauling rails all day to preach every night, but so I did for a week, and the result was that six precious souls were added to the church; and others are very near the kingdom. Although I mauled and chopped, and worked at everything I could find to do, we should have perished, or at least have suffered for food had it not been for the timely succor received from some dear, kind Saints at Lamoni—God bless them for the gift.

After a week's preaching at Hartman, I continued to preach at Coal Hill, and out in the country some three or four miles, until we came to this place. In the country I found the people anxious to hear more of the truth. And now I find that the people here are just as anxious to hear the gospel as they were further south. This forenoon I went with an old man who had an appointment at a school house some three miles west of here. By his courteous request I took the stand and did the preaching. He arose and bore a strong testimony to the truth of what I had said. The Spirit of the Master was with me, and I had the best of liberty. I left an appointment for the next Sunday, at the same school house. From the unmistakable expressions of good cheer and kindness tendered me, I am satisfied that there was a good impression made in favor of the truth.

I find that some ten or twelve years ago there was a man named Collins came into this country and began preaching a doctrine, so far as I can learn, almost identical with that preached by us, only he did not tell them, (if he knew) anything about the organization of the church, or the authority. There were quite a large number converted and baptized by him. He went back to Kansas after some years, and they heard no more of him. Most of these people still hold fast to that same faith and when I present the gospel to them they seem to lay right hold of it with an eagerness that is almost surprising, yet gratifying.

I am told that over east of here there is another bunch of these same people, of like faith; they too, no doubt, will gladly accept of the truth when they hear it. Oh, what a field of labor there is now in this land where they never heard the true sound of the gospel! Truly did the Spirit of the Master speak when it said to me that there was a greater and wider field of labor in the south, and that the time had come for the work to be begun there. But let me tell you, dear Saints, that it takes courage and perseverance to prosecute the work here, as I have it to do.

Now I am not whining or finding fault or blaming any body, but when we are reduced to the depths of poverty and can hardly keep starvation from the door, although we work at anything and everything we can find to do, I say this takes courage and perseverance. Yet with all this, I feel that I must labor untiringly, and woe unto me if I preach not the gospel.

Now, Saints, the summing up of all this is, that in my humble opinion, there is not a larger and grander field for gospel work in the world than in Arkansas. This is a singular field to labor in. Had I gone down on the Arkansas river alone, without my family, I don't think the leading citizens would have ever allowed me to preach at all. They have all heard of Salt Lake and its abominations, and but few have ever heard of the Reorganization. They don't read the papers like they do in the north, and are full of prejudice. As it was, we were told that they threatened to drive us out—some of the leading ones—but when I tell them that my family are here, and that we expect to make our home among them, they seem satisfied.

Somebody must preach to this people. Who will do it if I don't? There is plenty in the country, but we have not the money to buy with. My heart and soul are in the gospel work, and I must strive to do my Master's work. May God prosper and bless his work.

ELI M. WILDERMUTH.

BOSTON, Mass, Feb. 20th.

Editors Herald:—In the latter part of December last I assisted in adjusting matters at Scranton, Pennsylvania, and held a number of meetings which seemed to be enjoyed by those in attendance. At a business meeting held at the Hall of Bro. Gill, Bro. Frances Evans was elected branch president, Bro. Harris, teacher, sister Maggie Gill, secretary, and sister J. Morgan treasurer. The Saints exhibited a good spirit and expressed a desire to go forward in the work with a zeal and earnestness commensurate with the importance of the faith.

By the kindness of Sr. Jones of Plymouth (who accompanied me and furnished the finances) I visited the Saints at Danville. Bro. Crum and family and sisters Harris and Cook are the chief representatives of the faith there. They are of long standing in the church and have zealously stood for its interests. They have but little to encourage them, however, in their present circumstances, other than the fact that they are in the right. May their devotion and usefulness to the cause not cease. The prize is at the end of the race.

January 10th, I went to Brooklyn, New York, in part to help complete arrangements being made to meet Mr. William O. Owen in debate on the 15th following. He had put a note in the papers characterizing the faith of the Reorganized Church as false and vicious, and that he could prove it. The following is an extract from what appeared in the Sun, December 13th, last:

'I, therefore, with God's help, engage to prove that the teachings and doctrines of this sect are not only not according to the word of God, but subversive of Christianity itself; dishonoring to God, and inimical to the souls eternal welfare."

Yes, he was willing (?) to meet any man of ability in debate, but preferred the "prophet," to let him tell it. E. L. Kelley arrived on the fifteenth, on his way to aid in the eastern work, ready for the fray; but his highness, the Rev. Mr. Owen, failed to show up. We thought that under the circumstances we might be able to hold him level till the "prophet" arrived, at least. But he turned head 'tother way, and from all accounts, has permanently subsided. Just as well. The meetings held were well attended and enjoyed by those who heard the word.

The 18th, we went to Providence, R. I., tarrying over night on the way, with Mr. and sister Brown, at Bridgeport, Connecticut, who made us welcome at their pleasant home.

There was a good attendance at the three meetings held in Providence, on the 20th, and the Saints gave us a warm greeting, quite a number of outsiders being present at the afternoon and evening services. It was a pleasure to meet those who so cheerfully and zealously sustain the work; counting the pleasures of the world as naught compared with the riches and glory to be awarded those who are faithful to truth and duty here.

On the evenings of the 22d and 23d Bro. E. L. Kelley preached in Fall River to small audiences, and on the 24th, we visited our esteemed brother, John Smith, at New Bedford, Massachusetts. The day following, in company with brethren Smith and F. M. Sheehy, we went to Dennisport to be present at the district conference to convene the next day. Arrived in time to hear Bro. Bond's closing at the evening service and meet a number of the Saints present. Was then assigned to the home of brother and sister Young where we were kindly cared for during our stay. Thanks.

The conference was well attended, the house being packed at the preaching services, although it rained the greater part of the day on Sunday. Brethren John Smith, F. M. Sheehy, Thomas Whiting and M. H. Bond, of the general ministry, were present. A number of the local ministry were also present, and others reported by letter, and in an encouraging way. Their names will appear in the minutes. Bro. John Smith, after having served the district as its president for some eight years, resigned the office peremptorily. With thanks extended for past services he was released and Bro. M. H. Bond was elected to take the office by a unanimous vote. Bro. George Gates, of Providence, Rhode Island, was appointed secretary of the district. The conference, though not as animated as we have seen, was in every way a success. An excellent social and hospitable feeling prevailed; and it was easy to see that the brethren are improving in their methods and manner of doing business. An earnest desire seemed to inspire each one that the best thing be done; and at the close I think a united sentiment of acquiescence and satisfaction prevailed over accomplished results. So that there are omens of good for the future. God bless the earnest, devoted workers, the consistent and faithful livers in this greatest of all causes.

In due time we met with the Saints at Boston. Helped them to solve some difficult matters pending that stood in the way of their progress, which were permanently settled, without injury to any one, provided all parties carry out agreements, which will doubtless be done. We were blessed in our efforts at holding meetings, here, and the Saints were edified. They have a stiff sectarian opposition to brook all the time and are entitled to the prayers of the Saints.

February 4th, I attended the regular business meeting of the Saints at Providence. An excellent representation was present, including brethren Sheehy, Bond, and E. L. Kelley. Due notice had been given that a change of officers would be attempted on that evening. The meeting was orderly and a deep interest taken in what was being done. The voting was done by informal ballot leaving each one to express on a silent piece of paper, without being even subject to criticism, his or her preference for officers. This resulted in the election of M. H. Bond, E. O. Toombs, James McKenny, William Perthel, Uriah Gondolf (I am not certain about some of these given names), George Gates and one or two men whose names I failed to get as branch offiers, each receiving a large majority vote in his favor. Bro. Gondolf resigned after having been elected. On motion these were sustained by an almost unanimous vote, but six or seven voting in the negative. There has existed a portisan feeling in this branch for some time-good meaning Saints engaging on either side-each thinking that his way of thinking doubtless was the only true way. But this is nothing new or strange. The majorities were so overwhelming in the election that no doubt is left regarding the judgment of the majority at present. And that must be reckoned a very bad and vicious distemper that refuses to respect and acquiesce in the decision of the majority; most especially when it is upon this that rests both our church and national governments.

Some may prefer dictation by one or many, but we say all hail to the democratic majorities-"Common Consent!" Here lies the safety and freedom of the Saints in both Church and State -in the elective franchise-which right is sustained by the inspiration of the past and present; and from it has grown the wonder of the world. our own free and triumphant government. As Saints let us follow the road of progress, acquiesce with the majorities, and if they chance to be wrong, agitate in a lawful, honorable and Christian way till the people are better educated and a different verdict had. It is better to suffer wrong than to do wrong. This ought to admonish every well-disposed person to settle down, after the movement of excitement is past, to a conservative course of thought and action which is the true road to success. Who can say, certainly, that his course is the best? What if we don't get our particular way to day? There will be another day, and the right will prevail in God's time; and it may turn out after all that we have erred, been hasty, when the final account shall be rendered.

On the evening of the seventh, I met with the several officers of the Fall River branch, in council, Bro. F. M. Sheehy presiding, to advise in the interest of the work there—the president of the district being present also. It appeared to be the only practical thing to leave Bro. Sheehy in charge of that branch for the present. This met the demand. We were pleasantly and cheerfully entertained at Doctor Gilbert's.

The evening of the eighth, a number of the Saints who had met at the house of Bro. Steffes, in Boston, gave me a cordial greeting on my arrival there, and I preached to them with ease, the Spirit being present in an assuring and comforting way. A brother and sister were present from Nova Scotia, on their way westward to Independence.

The brethren are doing well here under the presidency of that staunch old vetran, Bro. E. N. Webster. A good interest and excellent spirit was manifest in all of the meetings I attended in Boston.

While in the district we learned that some of the sect known as Christidelphians had become quite aggressive—with words without knowledge—and were spoiling to find some one to dispute with them on their pet theories. After some effort, by the evening of the eighteenth, Bro. E. L. Kelley and a Mr. F. C. Whitehead were arranged for, to commence an investigation on the two accepted questions, and to last eight consecutive evenings, the result of which will doubtless appear in due time.

An interest still obtains in the east for the success of gospel principles, and the Saints in the main, are doing what they can to sustain and make honorable the work, so that we are hopeful.

Very truly, Wm. H. Kelley.

Ironton, Ohio, Feb. 28th.

Dear Herald:-I am glad that I have been baptized into the fold and family of Christ. Last Sunday my cousin, Lizzie G. Williams, and myself were baptized and confirmed. They had to break the ice. I was blessed when I was six years old by Bro. George Potts and was baptized by my father, who is an elder, when I was twelve years old. I know this is the true Church of God and I pray that I may be faithful to the end. I had a dream before I was baptized. I thought I saw a beautiful river of water. I stood on one side of the water and our Savior on the other, and I thought he was holding out his arms saying, "Come unto me." I thought I could not get to him without going through the water. My father next morning said that it was Jesus calling me to be baptized and that I could not get to him unless I was. Pray for me,

HONORIA ETHEL WEBBERLEY.

ST. MARY'S, Ont., Feb. 28th.

Editors Herald:-I have been busy in the field, and have met with variety in the way of experiences, finding something of interest at each place visited, also in the many man-made theories and inividual ideas to be met. While at Toronto I haptized seven. I saw an advertisement that Mr. Reynolds, of Philadelphia. would lecture on psychology. I attended, and noted some things. Mr. R. ciaimed to be a master of that science, so far as it is yet known. Claiming that it is the only science by which the actual existence of God can be proven-by it could prove the actual correspondence between God and man something as follows: One who is expert in the science conceives an idea, or thought, conveys the thought to the mind of another man, and the other puts the thought into words and utters it; hence if one man can convey thought to and have the other speak it, there being no collusion, and nothing is asked for but strict attention to the operator, and preventing of the wandering of the mind of the second party-then why can not God communicate thought to man and operate so as to have the man speak the mind of God? When between man and man it can be done on scientific principles with private judgment, etc., then why not God who is infinite?

Leaving Toronto I came to the Garafraxa branch where I found a neat brick church erected and dedicated, where the word was planted but a year before, and the members nearly all alive to the work—some few to the contrary, choosing rather to go back to their wallowing. Only two, I believe, became tired of the journey. Left there, but a messenger arrived to convey me back to Garafraxa, as our respected sister Rey had passed away to her future destiny. Went back to preach her funeral sermon. The attendance was large.

While in St. Thomas I found all things working together for good. Bro. Evans had worked up a good interest and was striking the irons while they were hot, and when he got them into the right shape immersed them in the water, repeating this until ten more had been added. Elder Lake parted with the "boy" and myself, leaving us to hold the fort awhile, he going westward to cheer Kent and Elgin Saints, whom I expected to have visited long ago—but was sent to the east. I am now at St. Mary's and expect to go to Stratford City and open the work, in company with Elder J. B. Watson, newly ordained, an eloquent orator who has been a most successful lecturer for years, and possessing merit and talents, which, when he gets right hold of this doctrine of Jesus, he will make tell. I was also assisted by Brn. D. E. Hough and A. H. Lake.

It seems to be my happy lot, if not forte, to get the young ministry out into the field, and I enjoy it. Bro. D. E. Hough is the making of a good and noble defender of the faith; wise in doctrine, but needs experience in the field, which I believe he will take soon. Amos H. Lake is of a very peaceful, non-aggressive disposition, and just the man to visit the branches and cheer them into a good spiritual life; being zealous, yet he is fond of home. He has disposed of all his earthly possessions, his wife being dead, and family all grown up or married, so his way is clear to stay in the field if he will. He would be well cared for among the Saints, as they all speak very warmly of him, where he labored. I hope Sr. Lizzie Bates, his daughter, will rout him out

I hope Bro. D. E. Hough will communicate with and inform me what he intends doing. I find others who are willing to take the field for a time, noticeably Elder James Mortimer of Garafraxa; also priest John H. Taylor of same place. I specially recommend Elder Arthur E. Mortimore of London who is willing and able to present and defend the faith. The last named brother is willing to be appointed by the General Conference and asks to be enrolled in the fifth quorum of Elders; also Bro. D. E. Hough. For Bro. R. Etzenhouser's benefit I give their names and addresses, as they will probably come up for enrollment: Arthur E. Mortimer, London, Middlesex county, Ontario; D. E. Hough, Port Carling, Moskoka district, Ontario.

I am feeling well, temporally and spiritually, and the work is progressing. A better understanding of the law of tithes and offerings is being had by many, who are preparing to act. I have been preaching the law relating to temporal things in the absence of the agent, and I hope he will not be offended.

Stratford will be my next objective point of attack; expect opposition and increase.

May peace abide with Zion.

J. A. McIntosh.

LATAH, Wash. Ter.

Dear Herald:—I have been taking the Herald four years, and have never as yet seen any of the elders of the church. I have often wished they would get into this vicinity that we might learn more about the ways of the Lord and that we might have the gospel here in the midst of this people. This is a well settled place and they are without the knowledge of the church. I think this would be a good field. I do not belong to the church but I think the cause is just and true. I have read the church books with great interest. I joined the Brighamite Church in Australia and came to Utah in 1880. The work there did not suit me and they did not do as they taught. They taught the doctrine but did not practice it. I thought if that was the church of the Lord it had greatly changed of late, but for truth there was none there. If any of the elders come into this vicinity I wish them to call as my doors are open to them. I want to do all I can to help the work of the Lord along. I love the work of God and I seek truth and wisdom. I ever ask your prayers. I remain your friend in truth,

LUKE STOREY.

VALLEY JUNCTION, Wis., Feb. 26th.

Bro. Blair .- I wrote you some time ago to send us an elder and I greatly rejoice in informing you that Bro. F. Hackett came and commenced work on the 17th, remaining until the night of the 24th. In that time he baptized nine at this place and organized a branch to be known as the Evergreen branch. He preached eight sermons, blessed six children, held five prayer and testimony, one business and one sacrament We enjoyed a great feast of good things, and through the Spirit received grand testimonies, instruction and comfort through the power of revelation. One priest and one teacher were called to keep this work going in this place. Two more have given their names for baptism and others are very near. Those that were our bitterest enemies could not stand before the power of the Holy Ghost. Among the nine baptized were my old father and mother who were solid Spiritualists and have been for about fortyfour years. Now they resign everything and come rejoicing in this grand work; also my two sisters and brothers included.

I have a few questions:—Does a priest have authority to lay on hands to confirm members in the church, that is when there is no elder near; and do they have authority to bless little children and administer to the sick and perform marriage ceremonies. We have no elder nearer than North Freedom, Sauk county.

FRANK SAWLEY.

[Priests have not authority to lay on hands for any purpose except to ordain a priest, teacher or deacon. It requires an elder to administer in confirmation, to the sick, and to bless little children. A licensed priest has ecclesiastical authority to solemnize marriages. See D. and C., sec's. 17 and III.—ED.]

NORTH-WEST KANSAS.

I will be in Gaylord, Smith county, March 15th to 20th; and in Osborn the 20th to 25th; and at Blue Rapids the 25th through the quarterly conference, which will convene on the 30th, where I shall be glad to meet as many of the Saints as possible at the different places. Come to the conference at Blue Rapids and show to God and all the people that we are interested in the cause.

Jerusalem is rapidly growing as a trade center. One hundred thousand dollars' worth of objects of devotion in mother-of-pearl and olive wood are exported to America and Europe every year. Vine cultivation is being extended, and the price has risen sixfold within a few years.

Every point in which a man excels, every true virtue which he cherishes, every good habit which he acquires, every beauty of spirit to which he attains, will make his friendship purer, stronger, and better worth having.

THE LAW OF TITHING.

ABRAHAM kept it. When Melchizedek met him returning from the slaughter of the kings and blessed him, he paid him tithes of all.

Jacob, when the Lord appeared to him in Bethel, vowed that of all the Lord would give him, he would return the tenth unto the Lord; and the Lord prospered him greatly.

Multitudes in the present day have proved the Lord in this way, and their universal testimony is, that he has opened to them the windows of heaven and poured them out a blessing that there has not been room enough to receive it; so that they have had to enlarge their border and strengthen their stakes that they might receive still more of the blessing of the Lord.

The law of tithing is based on the doctrine of the creatorship of the Almighty. He who made all things by the word of his power own and controls them by right of creation. Nothing belongs to man in the absolute and eternal sense;—not even his body. He is simply a steward over God's heritage, and is everywhere so regarded in the Scriptures.

When God requires a tenth of that which he loans us, he is simply demanding that which we acknowledge as a just principle in the dealings of men with men. It is the violation of this principle that the prophet Malachi justly calls "robbing God," and against which he pronounces a curse.

Some will say, "Oh, that was under the law; that is all done away now." And yet they will have the assurance to come before God and ask Him to pour them out a blessing, when they have not complied with the condition upon which it is promised. If tithing pertained exclusively to the Levitical dispensation and was done away with that covenant, then the promised blessings which were to be received through its observance were done away with it, and can no more be claimed by the children of men. We consider this proposition a self-evident truth not in need of argument to support it.

But was tithing done away with the old dispensation? We answer, No. When Jesus reproved the Pharisees he said unto them, "Ye pay tithes of mint, and anise, and cummin [the smaller garden products] and have neglected the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy and faith: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone." If it be said that the approval of the law of tithing was of that as a thing of the past, then it may be said that the approval of "judgment, mercy and faith" was the same. Here again we find tithing coupled, in the teachings of the Savior, with things which can not well be spared from even the Christian dispensation, which some people seem to think can get along without almost anything that anybody sees fit to expunge from it. We do not teach a go-pel, however, that dreams of something

"Beyond the bounds of time and space, Look forward to that heavenly place, The Saints' secure abode."

Now if this doctrine is too ethereal for us as Saints, let us show our faith by our works. If we can not live "beyond the bounds of time and space," let us not ask our ministers to live on something as ethereal, or place them in the position of recipients of charity. For shame! written, "Thou shalt not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn;" and "They that preach the gospel shall live of the gospel." Then if we love the truth let us show our love by our deeds. Remember that "not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven."

EXAMINE THYSELF, WHETHER YE BE IN THE FAITH.

READER, I can see you and hear you, yet I can not examine your heart. But I will try honestly and examine my own, and while I do so please take the benefits, if any accrue.

My conscience condemns me for not believing the whole book of Doctrine and Covenants. I believe that Joseph the Martyr was a good man, but I think that he got some revelations from the prince of darkness (?) such as "Baptism for the dead; that tobacco is not good for man; the gathering, and the Nauvoo house," &c. (?) Now if the church is right in receiving these, I am not in unity with it, and Christ said, "If you are not one you are not mine."

My conscience tells me that all the priesthood take all these doctrines as true from God, but I do not like to take them as standard, or as a criterion to prove anything by it (?) for Saul of Tarsus persecuted the Saints with "all good conscience." Now this seems to be a bad conscience and not a good one. It must have been brought up, in its infancy, in the wrong school. I am not a unit with Paul here, and can not be; for it is not good to kill, or help to kill, it being a transgression of the law. Yet I have some sympathy with Saul, for he was, like myself, brought up in the wrong church. He was a Pharisee and I a Presbyterian. My grandfather, father and his brothers all use tobacco and they all pronounce it good. But now, lo! and behold! in my days the Lord said to Joseph, "it is not good for man!" And I, with my father and uncles and all say it is good, and can not think it is a sin to use it. Now, when I am convinced that it is truly a sin then I must quit it.

I keep a small store here, and I sell tea, coffee and tobacco. And my conscience tells me I should not deal in things that are not good for man. What shall I do! If I will not, others will sell them, and there is some money in them. It is evident that neither of them nourish the body. But what shall I do? sell them or not sell them? I have my theories, my traditions (of the fathers, my habit of tobacco using) put me in a quandry to know whether I am in the faith or not.

The good Lord has blessed me of late in my labors that I could support an elder's family, but I even do not pay my tithing, nor even take the church papers, yet I pronounce myself a Latter Day Saint, but my conscience growls at the assertion.

Am I in the faith? Am I a unit with the church? If I am not, Christ will not own me. Christ wants me to deny myself such things as do not nourish the body, and my wife ought to put her bangs and fashions aside, too.

Dear readers, you can not squeeze blood out of a turnip, nor give consolation to any man that has such experience as this. But it is not too late for such to repent and be converted and become a true child of God.

THE "SEALED BOOK."-No. 11.

BY ELDER R. M. ELVIN.

CENTRAL AMERICA.

THE Book of Mormon represents the second principal civilization of Central America as having had its commencement six hundred years before Christ. This migration was that of Lehi and his company. Some have made sport of such names as Lehi and Nephi, but be it understood that the Jews had a practice of using the same name for both person and place, and by using an affix or a prefix, other names are made for persons or places. The name Lehi is found in Judges 15:9, 14, 19. In 1 Chro. 5: 19 is found the word Nephi-sh, while in Neh. 7: 52 is found the name Nephi-shesim. Thus the reader may perceive that the use of names as found in the Book of Mormon, are not inventions and without authority, but are Jewish as is claimed for them in the book.

"The Mexican and Central American ruins make it certain that in ancient times an important civilization existed in that part of the continent, which must have begun at a remote period in the past. If they have any significance, this must be accepted as an ascertained fact."—Ancient America, p. 151.

Again; "In the ages previous to the beginning of this immense forest, the region it covers was the seat of a civilization which grew up to a high degree of development, flourished a long time, and finally declined, until its cities were deserted, and its cultivated fields left to the wild influence of nature. It may be safely assumed that both the forest-covered ruins and the forest itself are far older than the Aztec period; but who can tell how much older?"—Ibid, pp. 151, 152.

This last has more particular reference to Yucatan. Of the same country Stephens says: "The ruins of Mayapan cover a great plain, which was at that time so overgrown that hardly any object was visible until we were close upon it, and the undergrowth was so thick that it was diffiult to work our way through it. Ours was the first visit to examine those ruins. For ages they had been unnoticed, almost unknown, and left to struggle with rank tropical vegetation."—Incidents of Travel in Yucatan, vol. 1, p. 131.

Desire Charnay, in writing up the ruins of Central America, says: "The ocean of ruins all around, not inferior in size to those of Egypt."—North American Review, January, 1881, p. 44.

At Teotihuacan he measured one building two thousand feet wide on each side, and fifteen pyramids, each nearly as large at the base as Cheops. He says of the place: "The city is indeed of vast extent; ... the whole ground, over a space of five or six miles in diameter, is covered with heaps of ruins—ruins which at first make no impression, so complete is their dilapidation. . . . This continent is the land of mysteries; we here enter an infinity whose limits we can not estimate. . . . I shall soon have to quit work in this place. The long avenue on which it stands is lined with ruins of public buildings and palaces, forming continuous lines, as in the streets of modern cities. Still, all these edifices and halls were as nothing with the vast substructures which strengthened their foundations."—Ibid, p. 43.
"In Yucatan the traditions all point to

"In Yucatan the traditions all point to an Eastern and foreign origin for the race. The early writers report that the natives believe their ancestors to have crossed the sea by a passage which was opened for them."—Landa's Relacion, p.

Dr. Le Plongeon, in a newspaper article states: "Of the Nahan predecessors of the Toltecs in Mexico the Olmecs and Xicalancans were the most important. They were the forerunners of the great race that followed. According to Ixtlilx-ochitl, these people—which are conceded to be one—occupied the world in the third age; they came from the East in ships or they commenced to populate."—Atlantis, p. 167.

How faitfully does this agree with the statement of the Book of Mormon: "And it came to pass that the voice of the Lord came unto my father, that we should arise and go down into the ship."—I Nephi, 5:

barks to the land of Potonchan, which While in the location of civilization (as already noticed) the Book of Mormon locates the principal aboriginal settlements of America in what is now known as Central America, and in Central North America. This was in opposition to the scientific knowledge possessed at the time of the publication of the Book.

The interesting query now arises, Is such location in accordance with present scientific knowledge? One of the best informed historians of our times, Mr. Bancroft, says: "The Ohio river and its tributaries, would seem to be in a certain sense the center of the Mound Builders' power."

Native Races of Pacific States, vol. 4, p. 740.

749. While of the Mississippi valley system of ancient works the same author says;

"The great Mississippi valley system of ancient works, consisting of mounds and embankments of earth and stone, erected by the race known as the mound builders, extends over a territory bounded in general terms as follows: on the north by the great lakes; on the east by western New York, Pensylvania, and Virginia in the north, but farther south extending to the Atlantic coast and including Florida, Georgia, and part of South Carolina; on the south by the gulf of Mexico, including Texas according to the general statements of most writers, although I find no definite account of any remains in that state; on the west by an indefinite line extending from the head of Lake Superior through the states of Minnesota, Nebraska, Kansas, and Indian Territory, although there are reported some remains farther west, particularly on the upper Missouri which have not been thoroughly explored."-Ibid, vol. 4, p. 747.

The reader will readily understand that the evidence we find in the writings of the historian and traveler, were not prepared especially to become witnesses proving the Book of Mormon true, but under the providence of God, while no outside evidence of any consequence was published at the time the Book of Mormon was printed at Palmyra, N. Y., all its statements are found to be true. MacLean says of the extent of the Mound Builders' works: "Their works are traced through a great extent of country. They are found in the western part of the state of New York, on the east; thence westwardly along the southern shore of Lake Erie, through Michigan to Nebraska, on the west; and as far as Isle Royal, and the northern and southern shores of Lake Superior, on the north. From this line they extend to the gulf of Mexico. They occur in great numbers in Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, Tennessee, Illinois, Wisconsin, Missouri, Arkansas Tayas Louisana Missicipio Arkansas, Texas, Louisana, Mississippi, Alabama, Georgia, and Florida. They are found in less numbers in North and South Carolina, western parts of New York, Pensylvania, and Virginia, and Michigan, Iowa, and a portion of the Mexican Territory."-Mound Builders, p. 14.

Pidgeon says: "There is probably no portion of the United States that presents so great a diversity of tumulus form as that known as the state of Wisconsin. Although works of much greater magnitude frequently appear in Ohio and the regions south, yet the earthern effigy is of rare occurence in the immediate valley of the Mississippi south of Wisconsin and Illinois, and is not often met with east of those states, In Indiana, Ohio, and that portion of the states of Pennsylvania and Virginia lying west of the Allegheny mountains, various groups of earth-works appear; and in some parts of this territory earth-works of colossal proportions, and adjacent to each other, abound, especially on the leading tributaries of the Ohio river, the Muskingum, Scioto, Great Miami, &c."—Traditions of Dee Coo-Dah, p. 81.

Of the location of the Mound Builders, Baldwin says: "This ancient race seems to have occupied nearly the whole basin of the Mississippi and its tributaries, with the fertile plains along the gulf, and their settlements were continued across the Rio Grande into Mexico; but towards their eastern, northern and western limit, the population was evidently smaller, and their occupation of the territory less complete than in the valley of the Ohio, and from that point down to the gulf."—Ancient America p. 22

cient America, p. 32.

Do not forget the "NORTHWARD" migrations of the Nephite population. Again we cite Mr. Pidgeon: "The number, variety and vast extent of the earthworks found within the state of Ohio arrest the attention of every thoughtful observer, and have long been regarded with especial interest by all American Antiquarians."—Traditions of Dee Coo-Dah,

p. 239.

MacLean says: "An ancient race, entirely distinct from the Indian, possessing a certain degree of civilization, once inhabited the central portion of the United States."

-Mound Builders, p. 13.

Having thus clearly established the coincidence between the location of the principal seats of the Mound Builders, or Jaredites, as given by the Book of Mormon and as ascertained by scientific explorations since its publication, we turn to the Central American civilization. Baldwin says: "Here, in the last ages of American ancient history, was the seat of the Mexican or Aztec civilization, but the monuments in this part of the country are mostly older than the Aztec period. The most astonishing remains are found still farther south, in Chiapa, Tabasco, Oxaca, Yucatan, Honduras, Tehuantenec, Guatemala, and other parts of Central America. In this southern region, mostly buried in heavy forests, are wonderful ruins of great cities and temples. Only a small part of Modern Mexico is included in the region where these ruins are situated, and most of them, probably, were not much better understood by the ancient Mexicans than they are by us. Many of those explored in later times were unknown to that people, just as others, more in number, doubtless, than those already described, still remain unvisited and unknown in the great and almost impenetrable forests of the country."--Ancient America, pp. 76, 67.

"To find the chief seats and most abundant remains of the most remarkable civilization of this old American race, we must go still farther south into Central America and some of the more southern states of Mexico. Here ruins of many ancient cities have been discovered, cities which must have been deserted and left to decay in ages previous to the beginning of the Aztec supremacy. Most of these ruins were found buried in dense forests, where, at the time of the Spanish conquest, they had been long hidden from observation."—
Ibid, p. 93.

YUCATAN FORESTS.

"A great forest of this character covers the southern half of Yucatan, and extends far into Guatemala, which is half covered by it. It extends also into Chiapa and Tabasco, and reaches in Honduras. The ruins known as Copan and Palenque are in this forest, not far from its southern edge. Its vast depths have never been much explored. There are ruins in it which none but wandering natives have ever seen, and some, perhaps, which no human foot has approached for ages. It is believed that ruins exist in nearly every part of this vast wilderness. According to the old Central American books and traditions, some of the principal seats of the earliest civilization, that of the 'Colhuas,' was in this forest-covered region. In their time the whole was cultivated and filled with inhabitants."—Ibid, pp. 94, 95.

The vast forest which is spread over the northern half of Guatemala and the south ern half of Yucatan, and extended into other states, covers an area considerably larger in extent than Ohio or Pennsylvania. Does its position relative to the know ruins afford no suggestion concerning the ancient history of this forest-covered region? It is manifest that, in the remote ages when the older of the cities now in ruins were built, this region was a populous and important part of the country. And this is shown also by the antiquities found wherever it has been penetrated by explorers who knew how to make discoveries, as well as by the old books and traditions. Therefore it is not unreasonable to assume that Copan and Palenque are specimens of great ruins that lie buried in it. The ruins of which something is known have merely been visited and described in part by explorers, some of whom brought away drawings of the principal objects."-Ibid, 103, 4.

From the statements of Mr. John D. Baldwin, M. A., I am led to believe that we are only in the infancy of discovery upon the continent of America, and when the full and complete history of the antiquity of our country is written, if that time shall ever come, then will the Book of Mormon be fully vindicated. In summing up, Stephens says: "In our long, irregular, and devious route we have discovered the crumbling remains of forty-four ancient cities, most of them but a short distance apart, though from the great change that has taken place in the country, and the breaking up of the old roads, having no direct commucication with each other."-Incidents of Travel in Yucatan, vol. 2, p. 444. Bancroft says: "Yucatan presents a rich field for antiquarian exploration, furnishing perhaps finer, and certainly more numerous specimens of ancient aboriginal architecture, sculpture, and painting than have been discovered in any other section of America. The state is literally dotted, at least in the northern central, or best known portions with ruined edifices and cities. I shall have occasion to mention and describe more or less fully, in this chapter such ruins in between fifty and sixty different localities. While these monuments, however, are the most extensive and among the best preserved within the limits of the Pacific States, they were yet among the last to be brought to the knowledge of the modern world."—Native Races of Pacific States, vol. 4, p. 143.

Of Yucatan he further says: "Notwithstanding the extent of Mr. Stephens' explorations, a very large part of Yucatan remains yet untrodden by the antiquarians's foot. This is especially true in the east, except on the immediate coast and in the south toward Guatemala. That extensive ruins yet lie hidden in these unexplored regions, can hardly be doubted; indeed it is by no means certain that the grandest cities even in the settled and partially explored part of the peninsula, have yet been described: but the uniformity of such as have been brought to our knowledge does not lead us to expect new developments with respect to the nature, whatever may be proved of the extent of the Maya antiquities."-Ibid, vol. 4, p. 148.

Of Palenque and her seeming metropolitan position he writes: "Thus the monumental relics of Central America by themselves and by comparison with other American ruins, point directly to the existence of a great empire in the Palenque region; and the observed phenomena of myths, language and institutions agree perfectly with such a conclusion."—Native Races of Pacific States, vol. 2, p. 169.

Thus another striking coincidence between the narrative in the Book of Mormon and the discoveries of antiquarians since its publication is established.

DERIVATION OF CIVILIZATION.

The Book of Mormon (see the whole Book of Ether) represents the Mound Builders, or Jaredites, as a distinct people from every other people that has ever occupied the continent of America; and also that their civilization, being developed on this continent, under the special direction and blessing of God, and while they were separated from every other people, was wholly independent of every other form of civilization. What are the scientific views of the present age in regard to this matter? First, Are they a distinct people? The following evidences are more particular in their bearing upon the Mound Builders, or the first civilization:

Bryant says: "But behind these Indians who were in possession of the country when it was discovered by Europeans, is dimly seen the shadowy form of another people who have left many remarkable evidences of their habits and customs, and of a singular degree of civilization, but who many centuries ago disappeared. The evidences of the presence of this ancient people are found almost everywhere upon the north American continent, except, perhaps upon the Atlantic coast."—History of the United States, vol. 1, p. 20.

Baldwin says: "No savage tribe found here by Europeans could have undertaken such constructions as those of the Mound Builders. The wild Indians found in North America lived rudely in tribes. They had only such organization as was required by their nomadic habits, and their methods of hunting and fighting. These barbarous Indians gave no sign of being capable of the systematic application to useful industry which promotes intelligence, elevates the condition of life, accumulates wealth, and undertakes great works. This condition of industry, of which the worn and decayed works of the Mound Builders are unmistakable monuments, means civilization."—Ancient America, p. 34.

Again he says: "There is no trace or probability of any direct relationship whatever between the Mound Builders and the barbarous Indians found in the country. The wild Indians of this continent had never known such a condition as that of the Mound Builders. They had nothing in common with it."—Ibid, p. 60.

Of the structures in Ohio and adjoining states, Pidgeon says: "That those structures have not originated with the present Indian tribes, or their ancestors is abundently evident, in the fact that they never have used them, either as enclosures or places of defense, nor are they recognized as such in their traditions."—Traditions of Dee-Coo-Dah, p. 17.

This book was published in 1852.

Of the Mound Builders, MacLean says: "That they were superior to their Indian successors, perhaps no one will dispute."—Mound Builders, p. 84, while Pidgeon affirms "That the present Indians and the ancient Mound Builders were of distinct national origin, is equally evident."—Traditions of Dee Coo-Dah, p. 101.

Equally as positive upon the distinct race, is MacLean: "An ancient race, entirely distinct from the Indian, possessing a certain degree of civilization, once inhabited the CENTRAL PORTION OF THE UNITED STATES."—Mound Builders, p.

Mr. John Delafield stands high as an authority upon American antiquities. He says: "We find in North America tumuli, ramparts, etc., which the Indians know nothing about. And from what has thus far been shown, these works prove to be the remains of some other, and a more civilized race."—Inquiry into the Origin of American Antiquities. p. 84.

The work of Mr. Delafield was published at New York, Paris and London, in 1839. Speaking of the tumuli near Sparta, Georgia, C. C. Jones says: "The fact has been distinctly attested by early travelers, that the Indians of this region never worshipped idols. We have the further testimony that they not only never manufactured these symbols of Pagan worship, but emphatically disclaimed all knowledge of the people by whom they were made. Who, then, were the Mound Builders, and who the artificers that chiseled these rude stone images which did not fall down from Jupiter?"—Antiquities of Southern Indians, p. 146.

To this quaint but proper interrogation I add Pidgeon's statement: "When we treat of primitive deposits, we mean those deposits at the time of the erection of the monument; as there are also many deposits found in mounds that have evidently been placed there within the last century, such we term recent deposits; some of those were probably made by the pioneers of civilization and some by Indians of modern times. We are not aware, however, that tribes of the pure Indian race ever practiced, to any considerable extent, the custom of tumular deposits."-Traditions of Dee-Coo-Dah, p. 138.

The full extent of the lines of earthen walls or embankments that have been thrown up by the Mound Builders in the great Valley of the Missisippi, apparently designed for covered pass-ways, will probably never be fully ascertained, in consequence of the past and present demolition of them. The remaining relics, however, that may be traced in the Ohio valley alone, indicate enterprise and energy among the Mound Builders that would compare favorably with the present advancement of internal improvement, and show a national character for energy unknown in the annals of savage nations. The extent of this class of works alone, forbids the idea of Indian origin."—Ibid,

"The rich valley of the Mississippi seems long to have been the favorite abode of the Indian, but is now becoming the home of a portion of the surplus population of many nations that are blotting out the most ancient trail of the Indian, and levelling with the earth the last remains of an older race of men, disinterring their idols, and such other relics as were formed of materials indestructible in their nature, together with others susceptible of corrosion, among which we find specimens of art unknown among Savage nations, as presented in the appended cut."—Ibid, p. 292.

Speaking of a mound on the Ohio river near Wheeling, Priest says: "It is not credible that this mound was made by the ancestors of the American Indians. magnitude, and the vast number of dead deposited there, denote a population too great to have been supported by mere fishing and hunting, as the manner of Indians has always been, and must therefore have been erected by a people more ancient than what is commonly meant by the Indian Aborigines, or wandering tribes."—American Antiquities, pp. 38-9.

In speaking of a mound near Cincinnati, the same writer says: "Who were those ancients of the west, and when and for what purpose, these mounds were constructed, are questions of the most interesting nature, and have engaged the researches of the most inquisitive antiquarians. Abundant evidence, however, can be procured, that they are not of Indian origin."—Ibid, p. 51.

"Not even their [the American Indians], traditions afford a glimpse of the existence of such things as forts, tumuli, roads, wells, mounds, walls enclosing between one and two hundred, and even five hundred acres of land; some of them of stone, and others of earth twenty feet in thickness, and exceeding high, are works requiring too much labor for Indians ever to have performed. The skeletons found in our mounds never belonged to a people like our Indians."-Ibid, p.

Of the monuments of the Mound Builders, Bancroft says: "The monuments described are not the work of the Indian tribes found in the country, nor of any tribes resembling them in institutions. Those tribes had no definite tradition even of past contact with a superior people, and it is only in the south among the little known Natchez, that slight traces of a descent from, or imitation of, the Mound Builders appear. Most and the best authorities deem it impossible that the Mound Builders were even the remote ancestors of the Indian tribes; and while inclined to be less positive than most who have written on the subject respecting the possible changes that have been effected by a long course of centuries, I think that the evidence of a race locally extinct, is much stronger here than in any other part of the continent."-Nat. Races of Pacific States, vol. 4, p. 787.

Not less positive upon this topic is Baldwin, who says: "It can be seen without long study of their works as we know them, that the Mound Builders had a certain degree of civilization, which raised them far above the condition of savages. To make such works possible under any circumstances, there must be settled life, with its accumulations, and intelligently organized industry. Fixed habits of useful work, directed by intelligence, are what barbarous tribes lack most of all."-

Ancient America, p. 33.

Mr Atwater's work was published in 1833, and he says: "This circumstance I wish the reader to keep in mind. Indian antiquities are always on, or a very short distance below the surface, unless buried in some grave; whilst articles evidently belonging to that people who raised our mounds, are frequently found many feet below the surface, especially in river bottoms."—Atwater, p. 22.

Speaking of the artificial mounds of Georgia, Jones says: "We marvel at the amount of labor expended in their construction, and conjecture that they are either the product of the combined energies of a population by no means inconsiderable, or else the representatives of the successive industry of perhaps several generations. Of one fact we may be persuaded, that there was not in the eighteenth century a single Indian tribe in this vicinity possessing either the disposition or the means of subsistence sufficient to enable it to apply the unproductive labor necessary for the erection of such works."-Antiquity of Southern Indians, p. 39.

He again says: "Unique specimens of idol pipes, stone plates, large shell ornnaments, and other relics not common among the Cherokees, confirm the impression that these tumuli were not the results of the labor of the modern Indians."-

-Ibid, p. 144.

The Mound Builders, then, were a distinct race. Was their civilization distinct and original? Of the Mound Builders' civilization Bryant says: "But there is certainly enough to show that they had developed a civilization of a vigorous and original growth, though as yet in its earlier stages, and enough to justify a belief that there must have been much else in their culture to answer to those evidences of combined labor and abstract thought exhibited in their public works of defense, and their apparent devotion to some ceremonial system."—History of United States, vol. 1, p. 28.

In contrasting the civilization of ancient with all others the same author says: "This dead and buried culture of the ancient people of North America, to whose memory they themselves erected such curious monuments, is specially noteworthy in that it differs from all other extinct civilization."-Ibid, p. 30.

In the most terse and emphatic manner he declares the work to be original, and not the result of contact with foreign instructors. "The works of the Mound Builders stand as distinctly original and independent of any foreign influence."-

Ibid p. 33.
Mac Lean is equally terse when he says: "When every part is taken into contemplation, their civilization and condition must appear remarkable. That they were a remarkable people of an original civilization there is no room for doubt."-Mound Builders, p. 129.

THE ARMED CONTINENT.

During the past eighteen years—a period which, upon the whole, has been a peaceful one—the armies of the continental powers have assumed proportions such as were never dreampt of at any era in the previous history of the world. The increase in their strength, and also of course in their cost, has been steady and continuous ever since the days of the Franco-German war. It is now no exaggeration to speak of Europe as an armed camp. The following table, which has been prepared after reference to the most recent official documents and declarations on the subject, shows (1), in the column headed "War strength," the approximate number of men disposable for offensive purposes in the event of the outbreak of war in 1889: (2), in the column headed "Second reserves," the approximate number of men who in the event of the outbreak of war would join the colors but remain at home unless their services were very urgently needed at the front; (3), in the column headed "Final reserves," the number of men who, in addition to all the above, would be available for defensive purposes in case of their country being in-All the men in the first two columns are trained soldiers who have served with the colors. Many, but not all, of the men in the last column are also veterans.

Here we have a mass of men, in number equal to the population of a firstclass state, who may at any moment be called on to take the field. Over 28.-000,000 of Europeans, all in the prime of manhood, are liable to expose their lives in the next great war.

than two-thirds of them are at present engaged in civil pursuits; but war might drag every one of them from the office, the field, the workshop, and thus, at a few hours' notice, the commercial, man-ufacturing, and agricultural interests of half Europe might be paralyzed by the withdrawal of all the best and most active workers. The present population of the German empire is about 47,000,000. Of this number about 24,000,000 are females. and about 14,000,000 males, who because of infancy, old age, mental or physical weakness, or deformity, are of no practical use in the rougher affairs of the world. There remain, therefore, about 9,000,000 able-bodied men in the empire. than one-fourth of these would have to don their uniforms and throw up all their civil ties at the moment of a declaration of war. More than one-half would have to join the colors if any considerable hostile force effected an entrance on German territory. And that which is true of Germany is true of all other countries, Russia only excepted, in the above table. One-half of the able-bodied men of Germany, France, Italy, Austria, Turkey and the Balkan States are at this moment held in readiness to take up arms. It is, therefore, no exaggeration to speak of Europe as an armed camp, although not more than about 2,800,000 men, in the countries under consideration, are now actually with the colors. The annual cost of the armies to which we have referred exceeds £120 000,-000. The extent and significance of their increase may be gathered from the fact that in 1872 the full war strength (corresponding with that given in the first col-umn of the table of the various countries was: Germany, 1,205,000; France, 1,200, 000; Russia, 1.300,000; Italy 750,000; Austro Aungary, 822,000; Turkey, 700,-000; Balkan States, 165,000 men, or only 6,142,000 men, as against 10,480,000 men to-day. Yet even in 1872 the armaments of the central powers were generally regarded as "bloated." Since that time-it is only 17 years ago—the preparations for the great war which is still to come have cost those powers sums equal to over £1,-

Some returns which have been prepared primarily for the information of the Austrian war office convey a vivid idea of the wonderful rapidity with which some of the states in the above list can now mobilize and send across the frontiers portions of their immense forces. It is supposed that war breaks out absolutely without notice. It is estimated that in such conditions, Germany could, with her present organization, and in 72 hours from the declaration of war, set 230,000 fully equipped troops upon French territory. At the end of a week she could set 750,000 men there. Russia, it is estimated, could throw no more than 25,000 men into Austria in the first three days, and only 110,000 in the first week. Austria, on the other hand, could in the first three days carry 60,000 troops into Russia. Germany's preparations for war with Austria or Russia are much less perfect than her preparations for war with France. Nevertheless, in three days she could put 120,000 men into Russia or 100,000 into Austria. France is about to strengthen her railway system on her eastern borders. Already she could, it is computed, bring 200,000 men to the frontier in three days, and 600,ooo in a week; and upon the completon of the contemplated improvements it is conjectured that the numbers thus to be rendered available will be 260,000 and 850,000 respectively. But these figures have, of course, only a theoretical interest. slight railway accident or a momentary loss of coolness by some highly placed official may wreck the best laid plans for the sudden concentration of troops either in Germany or in France; and, as a matter of fact, it has never yet happened that any pre-arranged scheme for the conduct of even a small portion of a great campaign has worked with perfect satisfaction.—London News.

Bear. Priests: J. W. Peterson, C. Duncan. F. W. Curterson, J. W. Peterson, C. Duncan. Priests: J. W. Peterson, C. Duncan. F. W. Curtis asked for an appeal wherein the Pleasant Grove branch was plaintiff and he defendant. Chair appointed a committee to investigate whether he was entitled to an appeal. Middleton Estes asked for an appeal from a decision of an elders court held ten years ago. Chair appointed an investigating committee. J. S. Constance and J. M. Terry were appointed a committee on resolutions of memorial in memory of Bro. James Wood. Bishop's agent's report: Rebring pagent's report: Received during quarter $288 45, expended $264 41, balance $24 04. The report was received and committee appointed to audit his books found correct and adopted. On resolution: General Conference was requested to continue Bro. Joseph R. Lambert in his present field should his health permit. Delegates to General Conference were instructed to ask that a missionary be appointed with headquarters at St. Joseph, and to labor in that city, he not being debarred, however, from laboring elsewhere when the interests of the work in St. Joseph will permit. That our delegates to General Conference be instructed to labor for the passage of the resolution, that was presented to the last General Conference by the Bishop which was laid on the table. Committee in the case of F. W. Curtis reported. Report was received, adopted and the secretary requested to send a copy of the report to F. W. Curtis. Committee in the case of Middleton Estes reported. Report was received and adopted; the secretary to send a copy of the committee's report to him. Committee on memorial: "Whereas death has removed from our midst Brother James Wood, Therefore, Be it resolved, That while we submit meekly, yet we recognize in this removal the loss of a faithful worker for Christ;—having spent more than a score of years as an active elder—and that we offer to the bereaved, our condolence and with them mourn the loss-yet not without hope of meeting him again at the resurrection of the just. By request of Brn. C. Duncan and J. F. McDowell, they were released as General Secretary and General Superintendent, respectively, of the Far West Sunday School Association. Brn. J. T. Kinneman was elected president, W. Summerfield vice president, and C. P. Faul secretary for the next quarter. William Lewis was sustained as Bishop's agent. J. T. Kinneman, W. Summerfield, W. Lewis, J. Burlington Sr. and R. Winning were chosen delegates to General Conference. Resolved, That it is the sense of this conference that when an officer of the church accepts appointment from General Conference, subject to direction of First Presidency, the Twelve or other church authority, and leaves his field of labor without the approval of those presiding over it, or neglect to labor faithfully therein while accepting for his family financial support from the church, that he be declared unfaithful to his trust, and that such officer be not reappointed. Resolved that our delegates to General Conference endeavor to secure legislation to that end. Preaching by W. Summerfield and J. T. Kinneman. Adjourned to German, Stewartsville, branch 10 a. m., Safurday, June 8th.

Miscellaneous.

FIRST QUORUM OF PRIESTS.

As the time of our Annual Conference draws near, I take this means of informing you that we expect a report of your last years' labor, as to what exertions you have made that your fellowman may become acquainted with the restored gospel. Last year there were but nineteen reported and I hope this year to hear from every member. Send your report to Secretary C. P. Faul, Clarksdale, Missouri.

J. B. GOULDSMITH, Pres. 1st Quorum.

FIRST QUORUM OF ELDERS.

The annual gathering of the church is now near at hand and the time for each member to send in his yearly report; let none neglect this duty, and give a brief account of how you have magnified your office. Be also free to express your faith in the work. If there are any who have not yet obtained a blank upon which to make report, drop a postal to Bro. V. White, secretary, and he will supply you. His address is Lamoni, Iowa. Through deaths and ordinations quite a number of vacancies have occurred in our body, therefore it would be for the good of our organization that there be a fair attendance to do business during the sitting of the General Conference. Prospects for the general work were never more promising. Please send all reports not later than April 1st, to Robert M. Elvin, box 224, Lamoni, Iowa.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

THE CHICAGO TIMES believes that news makes and "sells" a newspaper.

IT BELIEVES that the public wants the news,

all the news, the latest news.

IT BELIEVES that in printing the news a newspaper must print the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

IT BELIEVES in printing the truth without fear or favor, uncolored by prejudice or predilection, unbiased by personal interests or preferences, regardless of parties, cliques, or individuals.

THE CHICAGO TIMES, with wise extravagance, uses its unrivaled facilities for collecting and spreading all the news before its readers in an attractive manner and in a readable style.

THE CHICAGO TIMES has quadrupled its circulation in less than one year under its new management since the reduction of the price of its daily edition from 5 to 2 cents a copy.

THE CHICAGO TIMES is in every sense of the word a great metropolitan journal. It circulates in all parts of the United States and Canada, and and is read wherever the English language is spoken.

THE CHICAGO TIMES, while printing all the news of the day, from all parts of the world, likely to be of interest to its readers, chronicles with careful attention to details the daily history of the great city in which it is published and of that great western country of which Chicago is the political, financial, commercial, and social center.

JOSEPH SMITH W. W. BLAIR -

ASSOCIATE EDITOR

Lamoni, Iowa, March 23, 1889

JOSEPH APPROVED OF GOD.

Now that there are a few who claim to be Saints and yet allege that Joseph Smith, "the Choice Seer," had no specific calling beyond translating the Book of Mormon, or that if he did have authority to preach and build up the Church of God he lost it in 1834 or soon thereafter, it is proper to learn well authenticated facts in respect to whether God approved and confirmed his priestly ministrations after those times or not. For if the Lord blessed his administrations in preaching, prophecy, healing the sick, and in his various special services as an officer and first president of the church after 1834, that is conclusive evidence that he enjoyed the favor and approval of God in such offices and administrations, and that the latter were endorsed of God. And, let it be borne in mind, the manifest approval of God is the best and highest evidence that can be given as to matters of priestly calling and authority. When men claim to be called and sent of God to act in certain offices, and to perform certain works, if the Lord does not bless, prosper and confirm their administrations therein, according to the conditions and provisions governing and to govern those offices and callings, then the lack of such divine endorsement and approval is good evidence against such But, on the other hand, if the claims. Lord sustains, approves, confirms and endorses the ministrations of a person when acting in a certain office and calling while claiming to be the Lord's servant, then we have the very best evidence that such person is the Lord's servant, and that he has rightfully the authority and calling which he claims. God does not confirm nor approve the pretentious claims of impostors, deceivers, nor rejected prophets and ministers. Mens' opinions, theories, judgments and conclusions may all be very wrong-but God never errs.

Now, it is historically true that the Lord greatly blessed Joseph Smith in his labors in the ministry up to 1844, both as to his preaching, prophecy, administering to the sick and afflicted, receiving professedly the word of the Lord touching the church, individuals, and many notable events both in and out of the church, which word has been and is being fulfilled with that precision, exactness and completeness which alone marks what is given by the inspiration of the Almighty. His revelations and prophesyings to the Twelve and the church in 1837; those he gave when in Liberty Jail, Missouri, in the winter of 1838-9; those he gave in 1841; those he gave in 1843-4 in respect to his own death, the breaking up and scattering of the church at Nauvoo as testified by William Marks, Josiah Ells, Emma Smith and many others; his prophecy at different times in 1844, in the presence of scores, and hundreds, that Brigham Young, if he led the Saints would "lead them to hell;" also his remarkable public prediction in 1840. in Washington, D. C., concerning Rev. Cookman, as related by Dr. Foster, who heard it delivered from the prophet's lips, being with him at the time, the account of which from his own pen has been twice published in these columns since 1875.—these all, with much more that might be cited, prove that Joseph was not only not rejected of God, but that he enjoyed the inspiration of God in a large degree and therefore continued to be the Lord's servant, notwithstanding his personal sins, shortcomines and weaknesses, which, like God's servants of old, he seemed ever ready to confess and seek forgiveness for. He, by the knowledge God gave him in the Spring of 1844, told William Marks and others that his work on earth was about done; that polygamy was a curse and must be resisted; that the church would be broken up at Nauvoo and be scattered, instructing Bro. Marks that when that was imminent, he (Marks) should take as many Saints as would go with him and locate away up to the north of Nauvoo and wait for the Lord to move for the redemption of his people. By that same divine knowledge he told Bro. Iosiah Ells and others, when on his way to Carthage Jail, that he was going to his death. By that same knowledge he told his wife and family at the time of his departure for Carthage Jail, that he should never see them again in the flesh, telling them that calamity, scattering and division awaited the church in and around Nauvoo, and that when that took place the family should either go to Kirtland or remain in By that same knowledge he Nauvoo. then gathered together his household and gave them his last blessing with laying on of hands and prophecy. And by that same knowledge, when in Carthage Jail, he told Col. Bryant, commander of the Mc-Donough county troops, that if he removed his troops from Carthage Joseph would be a dead man in a very short time. The troops were removed by order of Governor Ford, and the prediction was fulfilled. All the way along his life-work, from 1823 to 1844, there are unmistakable evidences that he was actuated, largely, by the inspiration of heaven, in preaching, teaching, administering the ordinances and in prophecy.

When in Pennsylvania and New Jersey in 1840—and after—the Lord gave great and multiplied testimonies, confirming his ministrations. We heard from the lips of brother and sister William Small, brother and sister Josiah Ells and others, that the Lord gave marvelous and unimpeachable witness to the words and works of Joseph the "choice Seer" in those times, as they heard, saw, and experienced in person at various times and on various occasions. And when we read or hear the flimsy carpings of shallow critics and "goody goody" would be reformers who seek to poison, pervert, or subvert the souls of those we accept him for just what is claimed for him in holy writ, we find it difficult to supress the supreme contempt we have for their absurd pretensions. The Lord said of him to Joseph in Egypt: "He shall be esteemed highly among the fruit of thy loins,"-Ephraim and Mañasseh. He further says of him-Joseph the Seer-And I will make him great in mine eyes; for he shall do my work. And he shall be great like unto Moses."-2 Nephi 2: 2.

This is heaven's prophetic endorsement of the ministerial, prophetic and seeric qualities and qualifications of the great seer who, as chief, laid the foundations of the great latter day dispensation and builded it up during his life-time.

Those who Who are we to believe? say Joseph was a false revelator, a false prophet, a false organizer, a false builder and a false pretender in the greater part of his ministerial labors? or shall we believe what is predicted of him in the Book Mormon, and in the Doctrine and Covenants, and what has been and is witnessed of his ministerial labors by his friends and intimate fellow laborers?

We neither worship nor toady to any man—never have and never expect to—but when we accept of books which testify that Joseph would be recognized of God and of faithful Israel as "a Choice seer;" a prophet "like unto Moses," and that God would make him "great" in His eyes, also that he would be "highly esteemed" by God's Israel, then I must accept the testimony of said books with all its sequences and let the fault-finders, quibblers, and self-conceited would-be reformers go to "their own place" and find their own level—which they are destined to, as have their predecessors in the same blind, mischievious work.

The Lord made no mistake when he chose, appointed and ordained Joseph the Seer to translate the Book of Mormon, receive revelations, found His "marvelous work" and organize and build his church. And when men busy themselves seeking to obstruct, undo, or tear down the work officially performed by that seer, the Infinite God has declared such "shall be confounded."—2 Nephi 2:3. This is our confidence—this is our trust—and we can afford to wait till it all comes to pass.

EBENEZER'S ERRORS.

It would take too much space, and time, to expose a tithe of the errors found in Ebenezer Robinson's "Return" thus far, yet there is one which should be ventilated just now, for it is a mischievous, hurtful one, whether it be the fruit of malice, blindness, or reckless blundering.

On page 37 of his paper for March he alleges that Bishop Blakeslee's Report for ,1887 shows that Bro. R. M. Elvin received in "cash" "between March 1886 and 1st of March 1887 $944.36." This statement is not true. The Report shows nothing of the kind; but it simply sets forth on page 413, third column that R. M. Elvin was credited with "back pay" for the years 1883 up to February 28th, 1886, "$364.70," also a post office order for $35.30; while on page 414, second column, he is charged back with the $364.70, as "back pay;" and on same page, first column, he is charged with $35.10, and on page 418 he is charged with $375. oi, making a total of $410.11. On page 418 he is credited with $25.60, which with the aforementioned $35.30, paid in 1886, makes $60.90, leaving the net amount received by him and his family in the fiscal year from "April 1st 1886 to March 31st 1887" just $349.21,—a difference of $595.15 between the amount alleged by Mr. Robinson and the showing of the Bishop's Report!

Now, whether this should be attributed to the bad judgment, the mental blindness and confusion of Mr. Robinson, or to a desire to be mischievous and malicious, we neither assert nor suggest. But one thing is very apparent, his statements are both unreliable and dangerous. His misstatements in the case now in hand, and those exposed of late in the HERALD by Bro. Willard J. Smith show Mr. Robinson to be a very sorry sort of reformer, one who is not likely to rank high in that field. either as to his assertions, his opinions, or his mental calibre; for in these he exhibits, unmistakably, very bad defects, to put it in the mildest terms at all justifiable.

Mr. Robinson asserts again that the HERALD "endorsed" Elder W. J. Smith's "Whitmerism Unmasked." This is not true. And, moreover, the HERALD Editors were the first to call Elder Smith's attention to his erroneous statement as to when where and by whom William E. McLellin was baptized, (matters of but little importance) after he was expelled from the church in Missouri, by the "Bishop's Court," May 11th, 1838.

"Whitmerism Unmasked" was written, published, owned and advertised solely and alone by Willard J. Smith, and to state to the contrary is to display ignorance, or mendacity—or both. It does not follow that what is advertised in a paper is "endorsed" by it. The attention of our readers has been frequently called to that fact—a fact patent to all level-headed, sound-hearted people.

It is most unfortunate for Mr. Robinson's lofty pretensions that he is detected in his numerous mistakes—to call them nothing more—and in his misleading and untrue assertions.

In the death of Bro. John Garner, Sen., at Newport, California, at the age of sixtyeight, the church has suffered a great loss. He was long a member of the church, being baptized in the days of Joseph and Hyrum by Elder Solomon Hancock, from which time he followed the church through evil as well good report, until 1851 when he migrated to California, from Utah. He united with the Reorganization quite early and was never known to do discredit to the cause. He was a man of singularly good judgment, as a citizen had no superior, and won the respect of the community by honesty and an upright walk. His conduct was of such a nature as to win the confidence of all in the honesty of his convictions. He leaves a family of grown sons and daughters, who are blessed in having lived in family relationship with a father for whom they have no cause to blush when honorable men are spoken of; a strong incentive, truly, to so live that they too, may enter in and enjoy the rest and glory of the world to come, for which that father was prepared and worthy. He was made an honorary member of the Pioneer Association at San Bernardino, many of whom assisted at his obsequies and followed his remains to the grave. We learn of his departure with regret, but gratefully pay tribute to his worth as a man and a brother.

ELIAS LAND.

In the letter department will be found an open letter by Bro. A. J. Moore to Elias Land, a chief correspondent of The Return, who claims he left the Reorganized Church because of its defective theology, and he now invites others to follow him, assuring them that "the Church of Christ is in Temple, Texas," and he further says "the authority is here." If we were and are righty informed, this same Elias Land was cut off from the Reorganized Church because of his adulterous conduct. We were officially notified of this at the time of his expulsion, but out of compassion to all concerned we did not publish the fact. But now that he poses as a reformer of the theology of the Reorganized Church, taking front rank with his fellow reformers of The Return persuasion, all of whom "seek to draw away disciples after them," inviting them to come to them and "be ingrafted into Christ," we think it proper that the real cause—or causes—leading to Mr. Land's severance from the church be known. We have documents at handofficial ones-amply sustaining what we have stated, but find them in their description of Mr. Land's lecherous conduct unfit for publication. And we publish what we do that this sort of men men may not deceive and mislead the simple minded. We feel it right to warn the people of danger, for that is a duty of the Lord's "watchmen." When men of Mr. Land's kind find fault with the doctrines and the government of the Reorganized Church they will bear watching. For when "the inwardness" of their doings is brought to the light it will reveal that the motives which actuate their pretensions and their work are basely different. Men and women, called Saints, may and do sincerely differ with the Reorganization; but we have reference now to Mr. Land's kind and those. who "strain at a gnat" and yet swallow contradictions, absurdities and "old wives fables" by the cart load.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

WE again admonish our correspondents to make their letters to the Herald brief and pointed. Valuable time and space are wasted when stereotyped phrases and expressions are written and rewritten in the letters to our columns. It is well to first determine whether there is anything edifying to communicate and then write in as few words as possible. "Vain repetitions" should be avoided both in writing and in public speaking. Our letter column would be far more interesting if this advice was heeded.

Sr. A. C. Baldwin of Danville, Illinois, is anxious for a competent minister to visit and labor in that place. This field is, we believe, in charge of Bro. F. M. Cooper. If so, let him note the call.

Bro. T. J. Hughes of Rhodes, Iowa, writes for publications. He rejoices in the work and expresses confidence in its ultimate triumph.

We were made glad by receiving the following good news in a late letter from Bro. F. Criley of Pittsburg, Pensylvania: "Bro. Briggs is better, and if no accidents happen he will be able to attend General Conference. His son is with him."

Read: "There are several here who will send their old Heralds to those who send me their address and postage. Mrs. J. L. Hart, Angola, Labette county, Kansas"

The Woman's Standard, a plucky, ably conducted monthly, published in Des Moines, Iowa, comes regularly to our desk, and we are pleased with much of its work. It treats of "Home, Health, Purity, Culture, Temperance, Education," and of the "legal and political interests of woman, and of her right to the Franchise." We heartily wish it success, and hope it may prove a mighty power for good in its chosen field.

For Railway rates to and from General Conference, also as to board, etc., etc., for conference visitors, see notice in this issue.

Bro. J. A. Lawn wrote from Tulare City, California, the 6th instant. He had recently baptized a worthy family, six in number, parents and children, also three others. These with others he had previously baptized since he left his home last October makes twenty. He writes encouragingly and says he feels joyful in the Lord.

This conference year has been marked by a steady increase in nearly if not quite all directions. Truly, the church is moving on, and upward, and the Saints should be joyful and renew their efforts in unity and wisdom to build it up in righteousness and truth.

We acknowledge the receipt of the Normal and Commercial Collegian for the month of March. It is published by the Humeston, Iowa, Normal College and is a neat and useful publication.

Bro. and Sr. Amos Rice of Luddonia, Audrian county, Missouri, write that for the past four years they have not seen one of the Saints nor heard a sermon from any of the eldership.

Sr. Martha L. Givens writes from Captina, Ohio, bearing testimony to the manifestations of God's power in healing her children from severe afflictions.

her children from severe afflictions.

Bro. William T. Jones of No. 126
Grant street, Akron, Ohio, writes expressing the hope that some of the elders will call there soon and preach the word. He also sends for copies of the Voice of Warning which are loaned free for careful distribution by Bro. J. H. Peters of Coleman, Michigan, in order to acquaint others with the truth.

Bro. G. W. Beebe of Strawberry, Kansas, wrote under date of March 6th that he had been constantly in the ministry since January first and had labored in many places.

Sr. Nancy Davis of Silver Hill, Arkansas, writes that she is thankful for the Herald. She is blind and therefore can not read it herself, but others read for her. She says they are trying to do the best they can. Bro. Erwin is doing what he can for the cause there.

Bro. W. J. Plain writes from Elmwood, Neutral Strip, Kansas, that Bro. G. E. Deuel had been laboring there some of late and had awakened an interest—good attention being paid to the word spoken.

Bro. John Pett of Dow City, Iowa, wrote us the 7th instant that church affairs were moving on quietly in that region, with additions to the church occasionally.

Bro. W. W. Whiting of Deloit, Iowa, writes that a good work is being done in and about Marathon, Iowa, and hopes Bro. McDowell will hold a discussion there soon. Sr. Margaret Hunt, he writes, was lying dangerously ill at her home in Deloit.

Bro. E. Strom wrote from Anaconda, Montana, saying: "Inclosed please find five dollars in payment for the Saints' Herald, the best religious paper in the world."

Bro. William M. Gibson of San. Bernardino, California, has been laboring some of late in San Diego county, finding a home with Bro. Casteel's excellent family while preaching in their vicinity. He thinks additions to the church will be made in that region at no distant time.

To day (March 12th) we read a telegram from Michigan City, Indiana, to the Chicago Times, dated the 11th instant, stating that the body of Mr. Alma Blakeslee, son of Bishop George A. Blakeslee, was found in the harbor. He has been missing since Thanksgiving day. It is a great relief that the body is found. We await further particulars.

Saturday and Sunday, the 9th and 10th instants, the conference of this district, (Decatur, Iowa), was held in Lamoni and proved to be the largest, most spiritual, united and happy conference ever held in the district. The sermons were good, business was transacted orderly and with despatch, the social meeting Sunday was pleasing, edifying and graced with the gifts of the Spirit in a large measure. All seemed delighted throughout the entire session. This is just as it should be. Conferences should never be disgraced by contention, strife for mastery, nor by crafty, political methods to gain either personal or partisan points. The outlook for the district was never so good as now.

We are at work getting out a revised and enlarged edition of "Joseph the Seer." There are many calls for it, and we regret we can not supply them at once. Due notice will be given when they will be on sale.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Brother Alexander H. Smith thus writes from Colchester, Illinois, March 7th:

"Have been holding meetings here with much seeming interest for the past ten days. Am in moderate health and good spirits and hope for the future work in Zion's welfare."

Brother J. L. Hart renews for the Herald and Hope and in his letter says:

"I would as soon think of doing without my meals as without the Herald, Autumn Leaves and the Hope, let alone the good we do the cause we profess to love in sustaining them. I think they are the best papers under the shining sun, and I hope soon to see our publishing house far advanced financially to what it has been, for its prosperity means prosperity to the truth which we should all strive to spread, Please excuse me for adding to a business letter; the thoughts came and I couldn't help it."

Brother W. R. Calhoun, of Courtland, Illinois, in a late letter says:

We are having glorious times here, and have had for nearly two weeks. Bro. Pender, who labored with Bro. Short, is with us and he is truly a preacher that the Saints may well be proud of. He is an able expounder of the scriptures and one calculated to draw the closest attention of both Saint and sinner. I verily believe that under his preaching seed has been and is falling on good ground. Our meetings are well attended."

Pres. Joseph Smith wrote from San Bernardino, California, the 8th instant,

"Bro. Burton and I arrived here by buggy yesterday evening from Los Angeles, via Covina, Lordsburg, Ontario and other town sites more or less lost in the weeds, grass, gravel and sand of a busted boom."

Elder Willard J. Smith had baptized about eighty persons since last April up to the 23d ult. He is a faithful minister and we are pleased to know that heaven gives him many souls as seals of his ministry. Of Bro. J. J. Cornish he writes:

"Bro. Cornish has just had a three nights' debate with a Seventh Day Adventist which resulted in a complete victory for the truth. The debate was on the Sabbath question. The adventist refused to meet Bro. Cornish on the Soul question."

Sr. S. M. Sullivan of Biddeford, Maine, says in a late letter:

"I find solid comfort in this latter day work and it is a great joy to me when I can spread it abroad."

Bro. L. M. Sollenberger has removed from Harrisburg, Pennsylvania, to Atlanta, Georgia, and says:

"Send my Herald, Hope and Autumn Leaves here. I can not do without them."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques — Can a baptized but uncofirmed believer be granted the rights of a member and partake of the Lord's supper, and especially when there is no elder present to give legal confirmation?

Ans—We think so for in the church history we have the following precedent, at the time the church was first organized:

"Having opened the meeting by solemn prayer to our heavenly Father we proceeded, (according to previous commandment) to call on our brethren to know whether they accepted us as their teachers in the things of the kingdom of God, and whether they were satisfied that we should proceed to be organized as a church according to said commandment which we had received. To these they consented by a unanimous vote. I then laid my hands upon Oliver Cowdery and ordained him an elder of the "Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints." After which he ordained me also to the office of an elder of said church. We then took bread, blessed it, and brake it with them; also wine, blessed it and drank it with them. We then laid our hands on each individual member of the church present that they might receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, and be confirmed members of the church of Christ. The Holy Ghost was poured out upon us to a very great degree. Some prophesied, whilst we all praised the Lord and rejoiced exceedingly."-Times and Seasons. vol 3. p 945.

To this agrees the book of Mormon, 8: 6. 9, and Doc. Cov. 17: 18.

A.—We understand this to refer to a temple in Jerusalem, Palestine, when rebuilded, and that then Jerusalem will be the "holy city" mentioned. See Ezek ch.'s 40-48.

2.—When will the "forty and two months" be fulfilled?

A.—In the last days:—See Ezek. ch. 38, and Zech. ch. 14

Q—Are the "forty and two months" the same as the "1260 days" of the 3d verse?

A.—We think so.—See Concordance to D. C., last page: also 2 Nephi 5: 9, and the text in the Inspired Translation.

Are the "1260 days" in the 3d verse the same as in Rev. 12:5?

A —We think not for the Inspired Translation renders the latter "years." We have the promise in Book of Ether, 1: 12, that in these last days the Revelations given to John will "be unfolded in the eyes of all nations." Until this takes place we should not be unduly certain and decided as to the meaning of their obscure passages.

Q.—Will all the wicked be destroyed from the face of the earth at the beginning of the millennium?

A.—Yes as to the nations; and No, as to individuals. For "the kingdoms of this world" are then to "become the kingdoms of our Lord and of his Christ."—Rev. 11: 15, etc., etc. But the remnants of the nations will be left, as Isaiah 61: 5, 6, Zech. 14:9-19, etc., etc.

Q—Where will those wicked persons come from spoken of in Rev. 19: 14-19, and 20:8?

A.—These passages clearly relate to two seperate events; the first to take place near and at the second Advent—preceding the millennium—and the last at the close of the millennium, or after the "thousand years" and the "little season," Rev. 20: 2-4, 7, 8. And the people gathered by Satan at that time are, evidently, of the remnants left at the Second Advent, heretofore referred to.

Q.—Are not church members under obligations to pay tithing now?

A.—Yes, morally and religiously.

Q.—The Bible says in olden time they paid onetenth of all they possessed. The Doc. Cov. says we should pay one tenth of our interest annually and also one-tenth of our surplus. If we have no interest or surplus (and a good many have neither), what must we pay?

A.—Aid as you can by free-will offerings. Be just with your conscientious convictions of duty according to the best light you can get—that's all.

Mothers' Home Column.

"CHRISTIAN SCIENCE" (?) EX-AMINED. *

It has for some time been our intention to examine the claims of what is commonly known to our readers under the title of "Christian Science." Various causes have heretofore prevented us from carrying our intention into effect, but we trust that if any Latter Day Saint has been pondering this matter in his or her mind, or hereafter should have it presented to them for consideration, they will read carefully that which we shall write, and if found wanting in clearness of argument or presentation, let it at least have sufficient weight with them to lead them to make a careful examination of the subject for themselves; compare it with the law and the testimony, and see the extent of agreement or disagreement therewith.

Talking with an elder not long since, one who is actively engaged in the work, he said: "It is a difficult matter to convince any one that has gone to these Christian Science people, suffering pain, laboring under infirmities and has been relieved of this pain, healed of these infirmities, that the source from whence this relief has come is evil. I have had it to deal with and I know it is a difficult thing to do; but by the help of God I was enabled to do it, and convince them that the gospel of the Son of God embraced all good, and no Latter Day Saint can with any assurance of safety venture outside the gospel plan."

We have never seen any one who was healed, or even treated by one of this persuasion; but we have known those who claim to have received great benefit from such treatment, and afterwards to have benefitted others, and we have no doubt that their claims, so far as temporal relief from physical suffering is concerned, were correct.

But there is a question which goes deeper than this, and is of infinitely graver importance. It is this: Under what influence have they placed themselves, and from whence comes this apparent good? "But," replies one, "Is not health an absolute good? why then should you call it apparent?"

Before answering the question we wish to say that we are writing only for those who accept the word of God as a rule of evidence, and this being taken as our standard we reply: Under certain conditions it is, and under other conditions it is not. Paul found himself placed under the latter condition, and besought earnestly that his affliction might be removed. It was not removed, but the answer came, "My grace is sufficient for thee."

It was agony of body and mind which wrung from Jesus the prayer: "If it be possible, let this cup pass from me." It was not possible, but there appeared an angel from heaven strengthening him.

Sorrow and physical affliction have their ministry. To both the Master answered; "Nevertheless, not my will, but thine, O, Lord be done;" and Paul, the faithful servant of the Master, responds: "Most gladly, therefore, will I rather glory in my infirmities; that the power of Christ may rest upon me. Therefore I take pleasure in my infirmities, in reproaches, in necessities, in persecution, in distresses for Christ's sake; for when I am weak them am I strong."

It is possible for man or woman to enjoy such perfect exemption from disease as not to be able to sympathize with the afflicted ones of earth. Sleep which is never disturbed, perfect digestion, buoyancy of spirit, freedom to enjoy God's pure air and sunshine, muscles that never know weariness, these are the possessions a king might covet. What bond of sympathy can there be between having such favor and a confirmed invalid? How can such know the weariness of the head which day and night for months and many times for years tosses upon a feverish pillow, wooing sleep in vain? How can they know the craving for a morsel of food which when partaken of is like the book eaten by the Revelator? What can they know of that languor, that utter weariness of body and spirit, from which hope seems to have taken its departure forever? Hardest of all, what can they know of the long weary days and nights of imprisonment between the four walls of a house, perhaps of one room, until the longing for heaven's pure air, the dew, the sunshine, birds and flowers becomes an intense craving like the parched lips of the rich man for a drop of water from the finger of Lazarus? What, we repeat, can the strong man, full of health and vigor, know of all this? Nothing, absolutely nothing.

Again, add to this the trial of dependence, uncongenial surroundings, neglect, unkindness and the bitterness of knowing that you are regarded as a burden and that your removal in any way, even by death, would be considered a relief; then answer, what can those who have plenty, and kind friends who anticipate every want, who know that if absent even for a day they are keenly missed and welcomed home with joy—what can they know of such painful conditions, or how can they fully sympathize with such an one?

"We call the angels happier than we:
But if they count among their higher powers
The vision that will let them watch and see
The manifold wide sorrows that are ours
With passing of the hours;

If they can look upon a town by night,
And see the suffering, and hear each cry
That rises from sick hearts, and know the blight
Of sin, and feel how many long to die,—
If all of these they spy,—

Then would it seem we mortals are more blessed,
We mortal folk who mercifully are blind
To half the hatefulness from east to west.
And so have room to think the world is kind,
And gain a gladder mind.

Or is it that these self-same angels' eyes
Are never dimmed by tears, because they know
That all their Master's plannings are most wise,
That all the years are good that come and go?
God grant that it be so!"

The world is full of suffering. Pain, remorse of conscience, sin and woe seek shelter in some form beneath every roof. They gather with us around the evening fireside, and sit with us at the social board. They go with us at our outgoings and return with us at our incomings. From the cradle to the grave they are our constant attendants. It is natural for the human heart to seek relief from their unwelcome presence, and when it is obtained we can not realize that it may be a doubtful blessing. Hence in all ages of the world the suffering and afflicted have been the most easily persuaded to believe the representations of the unscrupulous. As proof of this witness the numerous fortunes made by men out of quack nostrums which claimed to possess wonderful healing properties. Any one who has ever been afflicted and whose name has by some means transpired to the public as being so, will tell you that in a short space of time letters will pour in from different sources and from parties entirely unknown, offering remedies said to be a positive cure for the affliction under which one is laboring; and many times the price to purchase these is sent at a sacrifice of every thing but the bare necessaries of life, and then the poor sufferer finds himself deceived, and when too late discovers his mistake.

This is the key-note of Christian Science (falsely so-called). Its first appeal is made to those who from various causes are dissatisfied with life and the results which it has brought to them.

Many a life has been wrecked upon the false supposition that happiness was a legitimate pursuit; and many a person so blinded has believed himself a Christian because weary of the world and its unsatisfying pleasures, he was willing to give in his allegiance to God if he could find that which he had sought for vainly in the world. It surely is not necessary for us to say that such an one has entirely misapprehended the nature of the gospel of Christ, and will have to elevate his standard before he can take one single step in the religion of Christ; for the requisition which is written over the straight gate which gives entrance to the narrow way is Self-denial: "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross and follow me."

The Science we are considering starts out with this proposition, "Christian Science offers to open the path to satisfaction." "We teach that God is;

is Spirit; is Good; is All."-Christian Science Healing, page 20. Let the Christian who is investigating this subject, especially the sick and afflicted who are seeking to be restored to health, pause just here and consider the teaching of the gospel of Christ upon this point, and see if they can reconcile the two. Of Christ, Paul, that great expounder of the Christian faith, wrote: "Though he were a Son, yet learned he obedience by the things which he suffered. . . . But we see Jesus who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory aud honor; that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man. For it became him . . . in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings."

Weary, suffering children of humanity, lift your eyes and behold your great High Priest. Consider what must be the tender, loving pity of his heart, who forsook the courts of glory, the home of his Father's love that he might prepare a way for his brethren to return. As we were partakers of flesh and blood, he also took it upon him, and through suffering was made perfect. He knows your every want and heart throb. Every pain of body, every grief of mind or distress of soul touches a chord in that great heart which once bled as yours is bleeding now. Is pain and suffering necessary for us? How can you doubt it? Even to the dregs he drank the bitter cup, and faltered not until his pale lips could utter, "It is finished."

Thus with the Master, how with the disciples? "In labors more abundant, in stripes above measure, in prisons more frequent, in deaths oft. Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods; once was I stoned; thrice I suffered shipwreck; a night and a day I have been in the deep; in journeyings oft, in perils of waters, in perils of robbers, in perils by mine own countrymen, in perils by heathen; . . in weariness and painfulness, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness. . . If I must needs glory I will glory in the things which concern mine infirmities."

If Christ was made perfect through suffering, then is there no other way for his disciples to attain perfection. But what does "Christian Science" teach upon this point?

"Sin, sorrow, sickness and death are not realities. There is no evil."—Page 38.

One feature of their philosophy is, "Avoid all discussion." This binds the victim hand and foot, and when once allegiance has been rendered, what opportunity is there for enlightenment? If you are not willing to give up your mind entirely to the influence of their teachings, at least until your twelve lessons are finished, then it is not worth while to begin. And we would remark just here, that any one professing to believe in Christ who knowingly endorses the foundation upon which this superstructure is reared, has parted with his reason forever. Do not think the assertion a severe one, and bear in mind that we are speaking of those who believe in a personal God, who believe in his Son Jesus Christ and in the necessity of the atonement made upon Calvary.

Paul when writing to the church at Thessalonica, told them not to be troubled concerning the coming of Christ, and to let no man deceive them. He spoke of a falling away which should take place first, and of strong delusions which would come which those who had rejected the truth would receive, that by believing a lie they might be damned. It is a wonderful field of contemplation to follow out the results either collectively or individually following in the train of those who have rejected, and those who have departed from, the work of God in these last days. But as our object in this article is to present our readers with a concise statement of the foundation upon which this Science rests, we will not pursue this thought further at this time.

NOTE: We will say just here that any who wish to possess themselves of a most fair, candid and thorough examination of this Science (if it be a science) will do well to send 25cts to Cranston snd Stowe, Cincinnati, or Philips and Hunt, New York, for "Christian Science Considered," by James B. Taylor, M. D. We have given a close and attentive reading to their own accepted teaching and so far as we are capable of judging we think he has done the subject justice from both standpoints of observation. We would especially recommend this little book to our elders, many of whom, doubtless, have to meet and contend against this enemy. In regard to the necessity of such a preparation we quote from this work: "If, as a last word, the reader feels that this movemene has not sufficient dignity or magnitude to merit systematic consideration and handling, let him turn to the latest Chicago catalogue of Christian Science supplies, and note the advertisement of over twenty journals and one hundred books offered for the enlightenment and conversion of the people in the new truths."

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 3d.

Dear Sisters: - While our precious Herald goes on its weekly journey around the world, and is looked for so eagerly by thousands with thankful hearts, I can say I may be numbered with those who are very greatful for all our church literature. Our dear Autumn Leaves, how elevating and pure-toned is the reading therein. As a parent I feel (even if my babies are too young to read themselves) that I would come far short of my privileges and lose many blessings if we did not help support the church literature. I realize that to nourish these young minds committed to our care, that they may live eternally, is of the first and greatest importance, and to successfully accomplish the same we need, for one thing, to furnish them with carefully selected literature, and then read to them, that they may learn to cultivate taste for good reading if they seem to be void of the same. Then when the taste is formed, be sure to see they have proper, pure, true and elevating mind-food, and let the physical nourishment come next in importance, for it is the soul that will live on after the body has mouldered to dust.

I thank you all, dear sisters, for the many wise talks on different subjects which the Herald has contained. I am trying to live by the "Word of Wisdom," and the discussions of the "garment" question has helped me to be rooted and grounded as to what is right, or in other words, I am thoroughly converted on that subject; not that I do not admire pretty things, but I am willing to sacrifice my desires in this life, and be moderate in all things. I feel there is not enough pretty things in the world that would be of as much value to me as one precious soul belonging to God; and I wouldn't care to have the weight of that souls' destruction in the balance against my gratified tastes and desires.

With a prayer that we all may live up to our privilege, (one of which is the Prayer Union) and may realize the extent of our influence, and more closely follow after the pattern of our dear Redeemer, I remain

Sister Lottie.

WATERFORD, Ont., February 12th.

Brethren Smith and Blair: - We have been favored with a visit from brethren J. H. Lake (who remained two weeks) and R. C. Evans who staid over a month. The result of their labors has been that nine more dear ones have obeyed the gospel, a total here of thirty-four, all convinced and obedient since last July. For the greater light we thank our Heavenly Father and his servants. Others are now convinced of the truth and probably will soon obey. May God grant unto us his Spirit that we may continue faithful and promised gift of God to the ones that the world may see we have indeed been with Jesus and have learned of him. The gifts of prophecy and of healing have been among us and the gift of tongues and interpretation by R. C. Evans at the organization, he being also the officiating elder at the time the gifts of healing were manifest. One, a young brother, was cured at once of chronic catarrh and remains so; thus the signs are confirming the word. We were sorry to have the brethren leave us and pray that God will bless their labors and give them the joy that comes from success in the work of the Master, and that his Spirit may guide them where the work of God most requires. We need them yet here, but may God direct them, is our prayer. They came as strangers to us but they have left many warm friends and many dearer than friends who bless God that ever they came to us and did show to us the fulness of the gospel of the Son of God. Our earnest desire is that we may prove by our lives that we are in the right and narrow way and give no cause for reproach. May God help us by his Spirit. for if He does not find us faithful and help us, then are our human efforts vain.

We desire answer to a query inclosed to be published in the Herald. It has been submitted to Bro. R. C, Evans, the district president, and in proper order also to Bro. J. H. Lake, the mission president, who advise the course I now take as they have never know a case decided by authority. Nor have they had the case brought up before. Also I enclose stamp for a reply to a personal inquiry inclosed Trusting God for strength as we shall need strength, I draw to a close.

May God bless all the honest ones.

Yours in the faith,

JAMES W. EASTON.

Magnolia, lowa, March 4th.

Sister M. Walker:—On the afternoon of the 27th of February a goodly number of sisters met at the home of brother and sister Emmerson in persuance of a call by Bro. J. F. McDowell. After prayer and a talk by him upon the merits of the cause of the Prayer Union, nine sisters identified themselves therewith. I herewith send names.

On account of our weekly sewing work coming on Thursday, we shall have our private devotions on Wednesday afternoon, weekly, and meet together on the last Thursday of each month. Sister Josephine Chambers was chosen president and sister Laura Blackman secretary.

Your sister in bonds,

LAURA BLACKMAN, Sec'y Prayer Union.

Correspondence.

PITTSBURG, Kans., March 9th.

Bro. Blair:—Our district conference at Council Bluffs closed February 24th, being one of the best I ever attended in Iowa. The Spirit of peace prevailed during the sessions which edified and strengthened the Saints. I think I am safe in saying that the district is in good condition and the prospects for the future are flattering.

There are several local elders doing splendid work. Brn. John Carlisle, Dodson, Hansen and others are putting their shoulders to the wheel and their efforts are commendable. I was intending to visit the Saints at Auburn, Iowa, thence to Kingsley where I had labored some in December and January, and on to other points; but death visited our family and I was called home to to my father's on the 25th ult.

Since I have been in Kansas, looking over the land of my childhood and associating with those with whom I grew up to manhood, a strong desire to labor in this district has made itself manifest to me

Here, in south eastern Kansas, is where I first heard the proclamation of eternal trnth. Here is where I first prayed to God, where I first felt the necessity of serving my Maker; where I walked one bright sunny day down into the water to follow the example of our Savior and where I was called and ordained to the office of an elder.

These things may appear of no importance to some, but to me they will never be forgotten. I was compelled to fight the battle alone as far as receiving any assistance or consolation from those near and dear to me by the ties of nature, but that One I covenanted to serve was with me to aid and assist in every time of need. Oh, the joy and peace that filled my soul can never be forgotten! It gave me a desire to tell others how to obtain the same blessings. That desire has never yet left me and I hope it never will.

I preached in this district before I was sent on a mission, so I know something of the condition of the field and I would like to have the privilege of laboring here again.

It will be three years this April conference since I left my home to labor as a missionary in Pennsylvania. Since then I have passed through scenes of joy and sorrow but, thank God, it all has strengthened my faith, and shown me brighter prospects for the future and a final triumph if faithful. May God bless his Saints.

WARREN E. PEAK.

CASTLE ROCK, Ore., Feb. 17th.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—Yours of the 10th of January is at hand. I am Josiah Sumner's son that you knew up in Monona county, Iowa. My father died at our old home near Onawa, Iowa, in January, 1863. My father was as firm a believer in the latter day work as any man of his time, and had been ordained an elder, but never preached much. I was baptized into the church about 1861 and have held the faith ever since; but have had some hard trials in life.

My request that a minister of our faith would call on me has been granted, for Bro. Holt was preaching at or near Lewiston, Idaho, and he saw my request in the Herald and he called on us as he was on his way home from California. He stayed with us ten days and preached nine sermons. But as this country is thinly settled and some prejudiced against us, we did not do very well, still be baptized one, a brother Jacob Petre, and lots of good seed was sown, and I think some others will receive the truth. I see by the Herald that there has been a great revival of the Spirit of God among the Saints throughout the whole church, and I have felt the same myself.

Yours in the truth. From one of the old stock,

JOSIAH W. SUMNER.

CHICAGO, Ill., Feb. 22d.

Dear Herald:—I feel so well to remember the last conference at Plano that was held the 16th and 17th of this month. How they met like glad little children to see each other in this life again. When they worshipped the Lord there was life in them too

O, what meetings can be found better than social prayer, song and testimony meetings, and the Lord's supper of remembrance of our blessed Redeemer; also the blessed ordinance—for administration—to the sick? I remember that I sat among five or six of the afflicted on the front bench on the left side of the pulpit from the entrance, seeing five elders ready to lay their hands on us, but before that, hearing the voice of our beloved president—Bro. Cooper—having a bottle of oil, pour some on the top of the head of each of the afflicted, with a soft hand, and well sounding voice in their behalf. After that four other good hearted elders with him pleaded to Almighty God for healing. The next that struck my feelings was the last hymn sung in the conference by the choir, No. 623, "When shall we all meet again?" I thought of next conference to be held in Chicago, June 29th, this year, but also another; I thought of the next better state, when the body and spirit would be reunited, to dwell with the just, immortal, eternal and free. I felt at home during the conference.

ERIC JOHNSON.

WALLACEBURG, Ont.. Mar. 5th.

Dear Herald:—Bro. A. Leverton has just finished seven discourses here, creating considerable of a stir. Many rejoiced; others felt wrathy. One old lady on hearing immersion presented so strong, interrupted and said, "I would like to have a barrel of water. I would drown you in it!" Good attendance, attention and good liberty made the latter day work shine here. Some have expressed a wish to join. We expect a branch will be raised up here before long. Bro. Leverton is just the one to break up new ground. So rolls the "stone."

Yours in the gospel hope,
JAS. H. TYRRELL.

MEDINA CITY, Tex, Feb. 16th.

Dear Herald:—Our district conference which closed last Sunday night was one of the best that it has ever been my lot to enjoy. The inclemency of the weather caused much disappointment in that many we desired to see were not there—they living a distance of two days journey by wagon, no railroad line, and wagon-roads almost impassable.

We had in all eleven services including preaching, prayer meetings and conference sessions. commencing Friday night, and ending on Sunday. The Spirit of God was enjoyed in abundance, and many grand testimonies to the work of God were borne, and in conference much good was done. Our district membership is spiritually healthy, with few exceptions. Bro. W. H. Davenport presiding over the Bandera Branch, is, with the assistance of a number of faithful members, earnestly contending for the faith once delivered to the saints. Although we have heard but little from the Oakwood branch of late, we feel sure that peace, harmony and the love of God prevails in that part. For our own little branch (of forty members,) I have only to say, that we are continually trying in our weak way to serve God and obey the mandate of the Spirit to "Come up higher."

Bro. J. A. Currie Jr., or Bro. Johnnie as we all call him, is again on the wing; he has been summoned to Wilson county to answer some cannonading, of General Brooks, an aged minister of the Chritian faith, said to be a very able man. But we have no fears. As long as Bro. Johnnie puts his trust in God, we know that the battle is his. His faithful wife is by his side, and when I think of her, I pause to reflect, how many young sisters are there in the faith, who are willing, like her, to leave a luxurious home with father and mother; and who had been raised to want for nothing, and face a cold world and bear all the hardships with the finger of scorn pointing from every direction, and count it all joy, as she does? I don't wish to be understood that I think her soul is more precious in the sight of God than any other, but her faith certainly should be taken as an example.

Our heart's desire goes out in prayer to God for the many honest souls that are scattered along those mountain streams in western Texas. Yes, when we consider that in many parts throughout the globe are scattered ones, who have never been fed, save on the husks; then I cry unto God to have mercy and spare them a little longer, and open the way for more laborers. My heart's desire is to cast in my mite to help carry on this glorious work. We ask an interest prayers of your readers, that we may grow in the faith.

In conclusion we invoke blessings of heaven upon you and your associates in all your laudable undertakings, and for the truth.

L. L. WIGHT.

LENOX, Iowa, Feb. 18th.

Dear Herald: - My aged mother who has been sick the past six months and in poor health for a long time requests the prayers of the Saintts, not that she may get well, but that she may be relieved of her suffering while she lives and be given strength to bear all patiently until the Lord calls her home. It is now over fifty years since she embraced the latter day work, and she still holds to the rod of iron and contends for the faith as strong as ever. She says the last preaching she heard was at a conference in Lamoni a few years ago, and since that has not seen the face of a Saint except her own children. She would be glad to have any of the elders or Saints traveling that way call and see them. She belongs to the Des Moines branch. Many who read this will remember.

ELIZABETH BALLARD.

WHEELER'S GROVE, Ia., March 3d.

Bro. Blair: We, at Wheeler's Grove, are all yet in the faith so far as I know, after the contest is over. The Adventists have put forth a strong effort at this place. First he was met by Bro. Kemp on the question of the immortality of the soul, of which you have been informed. Next he was met by Bro. Peak on the same proposition and I will say in regard to this discussion, that the Adventist was badly used up and if it had not been for the aid he received would not have been able to carry through the second night. I have made inquiry of the people at this place for opinions regarding the discussion. Most all say the Adventist proved nothing. All the Christian people of this place say Bro. Peak is a gentleman and a Christian, and "a mighty smart boy." We are well satisfied with the result and that the cause has not suffered loss. Since Bro. Peak left there has been another discussion on the Sabbath question, between the same man and a Methodist minister. The question affirmed was that the first day of the week is the day to observe according to the Bible. Mr. Rouly brought some strong proofs from the New Testament and from history to prove his position. He took the position that the ten commandments were done away in Christ and he made some as good arguments as I ever heard. He used Elder Canright's work exposing Adventism. It seems that if the Methodists can handle them on the Sabbath question that our elders surely can. This last discussion was held in our church as the Methodists would not let their own preacher hold it in their church. He stated this fact before the public and gave us great credit for our kindness.

S. C. Smith.

KNOB NOSTER, Feb. 20th.

Bro. Dancer:—I am not yet a year old in the kingdom, but I love the gospel and rejoice to hear of the good work that is being done by the elders everywhere. Am sorry there is not enough money coming in to support the ministry. I herein send you my mite. Having but little myself I have but little to give; so praying for the welfare of Zion and striving for the good of the kingdom, I remain your brother,

J. K.

OAKDALE, Neb., Feb 26th.

Bro. Blair:- I visited Stuart, the home of brother and sister Dawson, and tried to obtain the use of the school-house, but was refused. Then went to my mother's to spend the holidays, and while there received a card from Bro. Dawson, stating that I could have the use of the school house. Returned to Stuart and found prejudice quite strong. The director of the district who had refused me the house when I was there before, saying that he would not let his family come and hear me; but he and his wife came the first night, and after that he brought his whole family, and the last day I was there, at the close of the morning service, he invited me home to dinner. After dinner, in conversation on the theme of the gospel, in speaking of the progress of the work, I made the statement that prospects were not very encouraging for me, there being such an amount of prejudice against us as a church, which it would be necessary to overcome before we could reach the people. The lady answered, "Mr. Smith, you do not know how how much good you are doing; you are sowing the good seed and you can not tell how much fruit it may bring forth." I told her that I thought I had already removed some prejudice from some people's minds. The answer was: "Indeed you have from my mind for one; I think altogether differently in regard to your church from what I did when you came here." It was quite encouraging to me.

I spoke there seven times but the severe cold and bad weather hindered the people from coming out. On Monday I went to town on the promise of the use of the Presbyterian Church, but the door was locked and I could not get the key. I tried to get the Baptist church but could not. I then tried all the halls in town but could not get any place except for one sermon on Sunday. The people there are too religious already.

From there I came here and have been preachlng for three weeks out in the country where I was raised, or at least spent about thirteen years of my life. Had good congregations most of the time, but the people there have the same disease that troubles the Stuart folks. Began meetings here last night, but secret societies are the bane of these small country towns; "The Young Peoples' Alliance" on Monday evening, and other meetings on every other night completes, except Sunday, and then all the churches are going, and what chance is there to gain the ears of the people to sound the gospel? Verily the chance is slim. There is a vast field in this Central Nebraska district and it ought to be thoroughly canvassed, but it is hard work to reach the people. I expect to return to Petersburg from here; from there to Columbus; from there to St. Joseph to be be at General Conference if all goes well.

Yours in bonds, Hyrum O. Smith,

LAMONI, Iowa, March 11th.

Bro. Blair:—I wish, through the Herald to make a denial of Mr. Elias Land's statement published in the Return for March, 1889, and ask him to meet his statements in public, at Rogers and Elmwood. Will Mr. Land meet his assertions like a man, or will he state through the Return again that he will not meet us? He well knew his statements were not true and would be called in question. He says: "They need not ask me to discuss with them."

Why, Mr. Land, you are the man that challenged me to meet Brown at Rogers, and now you repent and say, "I will not meet them." I don't ask you to discuss the merits of, or defend your church, for I am aware that you haven't any, but to meet what you have written; and yon will have to meet it as I will send the articles to C. C. Holcombe. Mr. Land, you say I "went back on the Book of Covenants." I deny it, and you garbled my statement. I did say the Book of Covenants was not a test of fellowship, but that the church endorsed the book, and that I accepted it, and would stand by all in that book, and claimed that it was much clearer than the New Testament on many doctrines, and then answered Brown's objections from the Bible. And if you have any representatives, as I stated before, I will meet them in any branch in Texas. I also stated that we asked no one to believe in our books until they had read them.

Mr. Land, your statements in regard to the vote is not true. And what you said in regard to locking you out of the church is also false. I ask you to meet these statements in public before those who heard. Mr. Land, have you forgotten that I met you and Mr. Brown at C. C. Holcombe's, and that Brown said he would not discuss, and would not stay all night? and that you then said, "We will wait until the day of Judgment?" and that I told him that was a long time to wait to discuss questions?

I am well acquainted with those you call "clear headed of the Reorganized Church," and they are acquainted with the spirit of Whitmerism; also that Mr. Land is so well known around Temple and among our people that he can not harm A. J. Moore there. Mr. Land says also, "I hope Elder Moore will one day see the error of his ways and become one with me in the Church of Christ." Mr. Land I have no such hopes—don't smother me with your glory.

Amos J. Moore.

SNICARTE, Ills., Mar. 9th.

Bro. Foseph:—I am a member of the church of Latter Day Saints. Four or five others living here have belonged to the church. There is only a Baptist church here, and some of their members have grown cold. I believe that, if one of our elders would come here much good could be done. There has never been one of our elders in this part, and if one can be sent, I request that he come as soon as possible. Address Snicarte, Mason County, Illinois.

Your sister in the gospel,
MRS. ALICE CURRY.

PLEASANTON, Iowa, March 13th.

Bro. Blair:—I pen a few lines this morning hoping that they may be a means of assisting to remove prejudice from the name of Joseph Smith. I have always had a double regard for the name; first, because I have ever thought him to be a true servant of God, also that God had chosen him out of all the world to bring forth the Nephite record, and to lead in establishing the restored gospel of the Son of God; and, secondly, my parents informed me that I was named after him. So I have always had a kind regard for the name. But of late I had been wonderfully cast down. A Mr. Larson, representing the Seventh Day Adventists, had been delivering lectures here on Mormonism, telling all the "ghost stories" he could, and doing all he could to darken the name and character of Joseph Smith. And then, a few days ago, I read David Whitmer's pamphlet, and in it I read many things that I had never heard of before, and saw the whole tenor of the work was intended to prejudice the mind against the prophet Joseph. After reading it I felt sad and gloomy. But the night before last, while wrapped in slumber, a beautiful picture was presented before me, and it was the name "Joseph Smith" in large letters. The letters seemed to be transparent, so that the azure sky beyond reflected through every letter. making it far superior to any painting I had ever seen before. And around the name was a wreath that added greatly to its beauty. I gazed upon the picture with admiration, and thought that, while designing men are trying to darken his name, with God it shines like the stars in the firmament forever.

The name "Emma Smith" also appeared before me much the same as the former, only in smaller letters, and the wreath was arranged with fine feminine taste. A voice then spoke and said that she had gone to rest, but that her name would ever live after her. I further thought, O, if I could have a motto written with such letters to place over the door in my house, what a comfort it would be! I awoke overwhelmed with joy, and with the impression that Joseph Smith's prophetic work was accepted and his name held in sacred remembrance with God.

J. M. Brown.

Boston, Mass., March 4th.

Dear Herald:—The discussion between Bro. E. L. Kelley and Mr. F. C. Whitehead closed last Wednesday night. Bro. Kelley was blessed with the Spirit throughout the debate, and when his opponent tried to bolster up his theory with Bible evidences Bro. Kelley swept them away like chaff before the wind. Mr. Whitehead would say, "Wait until the last night when I sum up my evidences, and then you will see what I will do." So we waited; but alas, in vain! and on the last night of the first question Bro. E. L. Kelley buried him so completely under Scripture that none but a Christadelphian would think of his resurrection. On the second question after the first night he began to call for signs and miracles, and when that failed he tried to show that we had been to law with our brethren, which he said was contrary to the law of Christ, in evidence citing the Kirtland Temple suit. But Bro. Kelley showed him that they were not our brethren in any way whatever. There were several interruptions during the discussion by the Christadelphian and one by an outside party, but no harm was done and although during Bro. Kelley's last speech there was a decided rumble as of an approaching storm, but it was held in check by the wiser ones and thus ended the first public discussion ever held (to my knowledge) in the vicinity of Boston. The Saints are strengthened and encouraged, and we expect to see the fruit of the labor performed at no distant day.

As we sat there night after night and listened enraptured by the eloquence of the spirit as poured forth through God's servant, and realized that we were in the kingdom he was defending our hearts swelled with gratitude to God that among the scepticism and doubt, the lo heres, and lo theres, God had made it possible for men in obedience to law to know of the doctrine.

The comfort and strength we have received from Brn. W. H. and E. L. Kelley will long be remembered by the Saints in Boston, and if it be the providence of God to send them into this district again (which we assuredly hope) they will find a welcome in "Modern Athens."

I can not close without expressing a wish for the success of the Herald, believing that it carries joy and comfort to many hearts, and I think it can be truthfully said of the Herald, it expresses truth, impresses knowledge, represses error and oppresses none. Yours in bouds,

G. W. ROBLEY.

BAY PORT, Mich, Feb. 6th.

Bro Blair:-I am having a lively time in my field of labor. I baptized four in the vicinity where I met with the rotten egg argument. When I find that there is a minister of any other denomination present, after I am through I give them an invitation to speak, but in that place only one accepted it, and he sanctioned what I had said. But when I talked to him after the meeting and our conversation led to the work of Joseph the Seer, he had but little to say. They soon closed two of their school houses to all meetings. The Methodists and United Brethren were willing that they should be closed out so they could get rid of me, but it proved a failure, for private houses were opened, so I will be able to continue my labors there.

On February 8th I left that place to attend a two-days meeting at Bay Port, and from there I went to Caseville. Of all the towns that I have labored in, it is the worst. I have my doubts about Sodom and Gomorrah being any worse. While I was baptizing there the people were very disorderly, and the language used by both men and women would truly astonish you. On last Wednesday morning we had a confirmation and testimony meeting, and the Spirit was with us in power, and by prophecy we were warned that persecution was coming upon us. On the evening of that day I was preaching in Bro James Burwell, s house, and when I had spoken about fifteen minutes there came crashing through the window where I stood an iron of two or three pounds weight. It was undoubtedly intended for me, as I stood in front of the window, and about two and a half feet from it, and the party that threw the missile was near enough to remove a wire screen from the window before he threw it. There was a light curtain before it but not sufficient to prevent the iron performing the mission upon which it was sent, but the Lord's power was manifested and it dropped to the floor between me and the window. In a few minutes I succeeded in getting the people seated again and finished my discourse, while two or three of our brethren officiated as guard outside.

On the following morning I was instructed by the Spirit to go to Bay Port. I obeyed the counsel given, and it was well for me that I did as I have learned since that there was a mob organized to take me out of the meeting and lynch me. One of our members informed me that a young man heard them plan it and told one of our young sisters. I expect to go there again in a few days. I have baptized twenty six this conference year, and I never felt better in this work than I have of late. Persecution only makes me stronger, and the counsel of the Lord encourages me so that I am willing to endure all with patience. Your Bro. in Christ,

LEVI PHELPS.

NEW BEDFORD, Mass., March 12th.

Bro. Blair:—The morning of March 2d found me at the historic town of Plymouth, on business connected with God's "mission of mercy to mankind." I was met at the depot by Brn. Hansen and Hemmerly, and was escorted to the home of the latter, which certainly is a pleasant one, made happy by the presence of a good sister and two loving, prattling children.

We partook of supper, which was served with true gospel freedom, and felt that we were in the company of Saints. Our coming having been heralded, several brethren called upon us, and the answering of questions became the order of the evening. We gave advice as we understood matters. Whether we pleased the questioners or not the future must determine.

It is expected by many that an elder should be a walking "book of law," but it is hardly among the possibilities that a poor mortal can be the "embodiment of all wisdom," but every man should answer according to his knowledge, and the Spirit will assist in bringing to remembrance those things which before have been stored and treasured in the mind.

What a wonder-working power is the Holy Spirit, to bring to mind those things that are essential to be taught to the Saints! As the hours flit by we were reminded of the Father's word, "Retire to thy bed early, that thy mind and body may be invigorated," and being supplied with a neat, cozy and clean bed, we enjoyed a good sound sleep.

Sabbath found us ready for work, so at 10: 30 a. m., we met with the Saints and spoke upon the financial law, explaining the principle by blackboard exercises. The Saints were both attentive and interested, and before leaving we heard the usual reply, "We owe the Lord." Well, all honest persons will pay when they know they owe.

In all our travels upon this errand, in instructing the Saints to become partners with the Almighty we have yet failed to find any person who can prove how it is possible for a person to become poor by paying his honest debts to the Lord: but the universal testimony is that it is a benefit. And, permit the writer to say, it is also his personal experience, that the principle carries with it the blessing for those who faithfully serve it.

The evening found us together again, when we spoke upon the Mission of Christ, and during the services of the day, we were blessed with that freedom which makes speaking upon gospel themes a delight. The Saints were pleased and encouraged with our visit, and of course we were asked to come again, but could not say when. The Father above knows, but we must keep praying for the Lord of the vineyard to send laborers into the "harvest field."

Monday, having a few hours to spare, it was decided to visit some of the historic spots; so having as guides Brn. Sears, Hanson and another whose name I do not now remember, we visited the stone upon which the Plymouth colony set their feet to step ashore, in the winter of 1620. The city of the dead received our attention and as I stood upon the graves of the two last persons who came in the Mayflower, and thought upon their courage, fortitude and endurance, we were made sensibly aware that God in blessing this land to Joseph and his seed intended that it should be used for better purposes than to be the home of wild beasts.

We also looked into Pilgrim Hall where are gathered whatever relics have been found of the Mayflower colony, and as we gazed upon the massive picture hung npon the wall, where Elder Robinson is invoking heaven's blessing upon that little company as they are about to sail to unknown lands, we raised our hat in reverential admiration, and with a struggle for the mastery hindered the tears from flowing down the cheek, but by silent prayer to the great Father of us all, thanked him that we were not obliged to travel to unknown lands as these poor pilgrims had to do for the purpose of trying to "worship God in spirit and in truth."

In looking over the history of the place, we were both surprised and pleased to find that the Smiths were early visitors to this locality. For in 1614, six years before the arrival of the Mayflower, John Smith was there and returned with a chart of the coast from Penobscot to Cape Cod. And it is therefore probable that from this chart of Smith's, the early pilgrim colony obtained some information about the coast upon which they made a landing, (Of course Smiths were a necessity to the proper construction of society.)

While upon this visit I came in possession of what is known as the "Sunday Blue Laws of Connecticut," and as the public mind is now being agitated concerning the Sabbath Amendment to the constitution, I will try at an early day to favor the readers of the Herald with a few extracts from them, so that they may see what people had to do when church and state were one. Our thanks are due to the brethren and sisters of Plymouth for favors received during our brief visit among them.

THE JOSEPHITE COVENANT.

BY A. J. DENNIS.

IT IS common among sectarian ministers to refer to the covenant that God made with Abraham and renewed in Isaac and confirmed in Jacob; but it seems that after Israel passed away, popular modern theology loses all trace of any covenant of the Lord with his people until the time of Moses, when he made what may be termed the Sinaitic, or, in New Testament phraseology, the "old covenant," which vanished away upon the introduction of the new under the ministry of Jesus Christ and his apostles. Heb. 8:7-13.

As a matter of fact, every covenant which is made becomes old when it is superseded by another; hence when God promised Isaac, "Unto thee and to thy seed will I give all these countries," (Gen. 26: 3.) he did not need to depend alone upon the promise made to his father Abraham. For although that was of the same character as the promise made to him, yet that promise was not enough for the needs of his case; had it been so, God would not have renewed it to him, for he never does anything that is unnecessary, or not for the good of his people.

On a parallel with this is the command of Jesus to the apostles, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature; he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; he that believeth not shall be damned."

Some have thought this command sufficient authority to enable them to go out into the world and preach the gospel, and seal unto damnation all those who rejected their message; and though it has been but "a man's covenant," wherein God has seen fit to confirm it, no man has been able to disannul the same. But the exception is not the rule, and can not become such, unless God should change; which we know he does not do.

But now the question arises, What one of the sons of Israel inherited the especial promises or covenants made with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob?

Certainly we can not say that it was bestowed upon all indiscriminately. Abraham had two sons, but the word of the Lord came to him, "in Isaac shall thy seed be called." Ishmael was the "son of the bond woman," and could not be "heir with the son of the free woman."

Now Jacob also had sons by concubines or servant women, and even Leah was, to all intents and purposes, a polygamous wife, as Jacob had earned Rachel by seven years of faithful service and really supposed he was marrying her when Laban perpetrated the fraud of substituting her elder sister in the marriage bed instead of Rachel as Jacob supposed.

We may see here, perhaps, a retribution upon Jacob for deceiving his father in order to obtain the blessing which had been promised him by the spirit of prophecy; but Jacob evidently considered Rachel as his true and only wife, (See Gen. 44:27), and Joseph and Benjamin as his only legitimate sons, and consequently the ones in whom all his hopes of the fulfillment of the promises made to the fathers.

In view of this fact we can the more readily understand his anxiety to keep Benjamin with him when his other sons wanted to take him down into Egypt. Joseph, his favorite son had been (as he supposed) devoured by wild beasts, and if Benjamin should be taken from him he was bereaved indeed. In no other light than the foregoing can we understand the words of Jacob, "His brother is dead and he is left alone?"—Gen. 42:38.

And in no other light can we understand the wonderful dreams of Joseph in which the promise was made to him that he should prevail above his brethren and be their ruler, and that even his parents should be subject to him. The careful student of the Bible sees more than the mere going down into Egypt foreshadowed in these remarkable dreams.

Paul tells us that the experiences of the children of Israel [Jacob] "happened unto them for ensamples, [examples], and were written for our admonition, upon whom the ends of the world are come."—I Cor. 10:11.

An example is something that is like something else that is to follow it; so we find that the whole system of types and shadows instituted by Moses, was typical of that more perfect tabernacle "which the Lord pitched and not man;" (Heb. 8: 1-6); and wherein better sacrifices were offered than the "blood of bulls and of goats."___ Heb. 9:23. It is also evident that the hand of promise itself was of a typical character in common with all the other experiences that happened to that typical people in that dispensation. Some have applied it as a type of heaven. But are we to have enemies to overcome after entering into that promised land? None of us expect to have, hence we must look for the fulfillment of this type on earth among the children of men in a time of probation.

This brings us to consider the fact that in many places the Scriptures mention another "house of Israel" besides the first one who inherited the land of Palestine. This seemed to be shadowed forth in the division of the typical house itself into two branches, "Israel" and "Judah."

But we are not left altogether to surmise in regard to another anti-typical land of promise, nor as to who should inherit it. The blessing bestowed upon Joseph by his father Jacob not only overflowed the bounds of all previous blessings, but showed by direct reference to the progenitors of Jacob that it was preeminently the blessing or the covenant which had been made first with Abraham and then with Isaac and afterwards with his son Jacob.

The blessing reads as follows: "Joseph is a fruitful bough, even a fruitful bough by a well, whose branches run over the wall. The archers have sorely grieved him and shot at him: but his bow abode in strength, and the arms of his hands were made strong by the hands of the mighty God of Jacob; (from thence is the shepherd, the stone of Israel); even by the God of thy father, who shall help thee: and by the Almighty who shall bless thee with blessings of heaven above, blessings of the deep that lieth under, blessings of the breast and of the womb: the blessings of thy father have prevailed above the blessings of my pregenitors unto the ut-most bounds of the everlasting hills: they shall be on the head of Joseph, and on the crown of the head of him that was separate from his brethren."—Gen. 49:22-26.

"Whose branches run over the wall." The sea was a wall to the inhabitants of Canaan, but Joseph's branches (descendants) were to "run over the wall." This could only be fulfilled by the discovery of a new continent, and its settlement by the descendants of Joseph. Those who do not receive the explanation given by the Book of Mormon of the branch that was broken off (of the stock of Joseph) and carried to this land, must at least accept the truth from this prophecy, that Joseph has descendants in this country, and that they are the rightful heirs thereof according to the words of Joseph, and that they shall, in process of time, inherit it as their land of promise.

Further light is thrown upon this interesting subject by the prophecy of Joseph, the greater part of which designing men have removed from what is called the King James Translation, but which may be found at length in the Inspired Translation. It reads as follows:

"And Joseph said unto his brethren, I die, and go unto my fathers; and I go down to my grave with joy. The God of my father Jacob be with you, to deliver you out of affliction in the days of your bondage; for the Lord hath visited me, and I have obtained a promise of the Lord, that out of the fruit of my loins, the Lord God will raise up a righteous branch out of my loins; and unto thee, whom my father Jacob hath named Israel, a prophet; (not the Messiah who is called Shiloh;) and this prophet shall deliver my people out of Egypt in the days of thy bondage. And it shall come to pass that they shall be scattered again; and a branch shall be broken off, and shall be carried into a far country; nevertheless they shall be remembered in the covenants of the Lord, when the Messiah cometh; for he shall be made manifest unto them in the latter days, in the Spirit of power; and shall bring them out of darkness into light; out of hidden darkness, and out of captivity unto freedom. A seer shall the Lord my God raise up, who shall be a choice seer unto the fruit of my loins. Thus saith the Lord God of my fathers unto me, A choice seer will I raise up out of the fruit of thy loins, and he shall be esteemed highly among the fruit of thy loins, his brethren; and unto him will I give commandments that he shall do a work for the fruit of thy loins. And he shall bring them to the knowledge of the covenants which I have made with thy father; and he shall do whatsoever work I shall command him. And I will make him great in mine eyes, for he shall do my work; and he shall be great like unto him whom I have said I would raise up unto you, to deliver my people, O house of Israel, out of the land of Egypt; for a seer will I raise up to deliver my people out of the land of Egypt; and he shall be called Moses. And by this name he shall know that he is of thy house; for he shall be nursed by the king's daughter, and shall be called her son. And again, a seer will I raise up out of the fruit of thy loins, and unto him will I give power to bring forth my word unto the seed of thy loins; and not to the bringing forth of my word only, saith the Lord, but to the convincing them of my word, which shall have already gone forth among them in the last days. Wherefore the fruit of thy loins shall write, and the fruit of the loins of Judah shall write; and that which shall be written by the fruit of thy loins, and also that which shall be written by the fruit of the loins of Judah, shall grow together unto the confounding of false doctrines, and laying down of contentions, and establishing peace among the fruit of thy loins, and bringing them to a knowledge of their fathers in the latter days; and also to the knowledge of my covenant, saith the Lord. And out of weakness shall he be made strong, in that day when my work shall go forth among all my people, which shall restore them, who are of the house of Israel, in the last days. And that seer will I bless, and they that seek to destroy him shall be confounded; for this promise I give unto you; for I will remember you from generation to generation; and his name shall be called Joseph, and it shall be after the name of his father; and he shall be like unto you; for the thing which the Lord shall bring forth by his hand shall bring my people unto salvation."--Gen. 50: 24-33, (I. T.)

Notice in verse twenty-eight, "He Ithe choice seer ] Joseph the son of Joseph, shall bring them [the fruit of Joseph's loins, Ephraim and Manasseh] to the knowledge of the covenants which I have made with thy father; and he shall do whatsoever work I shall command him."

The "knowledge of the covenants" made with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, in the light of other predictions accompanying this statement means more than simply obtaining historical information concerning them; the sectarian world had that before Joseph, the son of Joseph, made his appearance upon the stage of action. It can mean nothing less than the renewing of those covenants with the seed of Joseph in the latter days. And this was fulfilled in the work of God through Joseph Smith, as his first and chief minister, and in that work alone. But the objector may ask, Where does the work of Christ come Paul says that Christ was the "seed" of Abraham in whom the promise was fulfilled, and consequently all subsequent claims are excluded by this fact. But let us see if this conclusion is necessary or logical from the promises.

To begin with, then, let us see if Christ was the first "seed" of Abraham to whom the covenant pertained. If he is not first, he may not be the last. But we learn that God said to Abraham, "In Isaac shall thy seed be called." Then Christ was not the first in point of time, although he was first in importance. And although Christ was and is the "end of the law for righteousness, to every one that believeth," yet he was not the last in that line of promised seed in whom "all nations of the earth should be blessed," for he was the "firstborn [in the importance of his work] among many brethren," and when he appears again, he will find those whom John says will "be like him."

In the salvation of the world Jesus stands pre-eminent and alone; but in the carrying out of the redemptive scheme, the twelve apostles are counted as a part of the "foundation" upon which the church is built, while Christ himself is designated as the "chief corner stone." Here again we find him not alone really in kind, but in the importance of his work as the foundation of all that should follow.

But after the foundation has been laid what does it profit if the building be not built thereon? And it is not until the capstone is put on that the full benefit and design of the foundation is realized. Whether Joseph Smith the Seer was that capstone or not that was to be brought on with shoutings of "grace, grace unto it," yet we who have embraced the latter day work know that the rock revelation cut out of the mountain of truth without hands, is increasing and will yet, according to the sure word of prophecy which can not fail, become a great mountain and fill the whole earth. And let all the people say, Amen.

UNITY.

THE Mound Builders, or the most ancient inhabitants of America, are represented by the Book of Mormon as one very numerous race, though sometimes divided into warring factions. Is this true? After enumerating the different classes of work into which the Archæological remains of the Mound Builders may be divided, Bancroft says: "These different classes of remains, although sufficiently uniform in their general character to indicate that the Mound Builders were of one race, living under one grand system of institutions, still show certain variations in the relative predominance of each class in different sections of the territory."-Nat. Rac. of Pac. States, vol. 4, p. 749.

Speaking of the Mound Builders, the same author further says: "They were a numerous people, as is sufficiently proved by the magnitude and geographical extent of their works. They were probably one people; that is, composed of tribes living under similar laws, religions, and other institutions. Such variations as are observed in the monuments are only those that would naturally occur between central and frontier regions."-Ibid, p. 785.

The testimony of Baldwin is more preprecise and direct.: "This ancient people, whose remains indicate unity and civilization, must have been organized as a nation, with a central administration which all recognized. They must have had a national name."-Ancient America, p. 57.

Concerning the region near Sparta, Georgia, Jones says: "Every indication suggests and encourages the belief that this locality was for a long period of time, densely populated. The surface of the ground, not only within the enclosure, but up and down the valley for a considerable distance, is replete with various relics. They lie also in considerable quantities, commingled with human bones in the sepulchral mounds."—Antiquities of Southern Indians, p. 147.

MILLIONS OF INHABITANTS.

Pidgeon says: "It can not be any longer denied that there has been a day when this continent swarmed with millions of inhabitants, when the arts and sciences flourished, when men lived and labored and reigned, and fought and were were in turn conquerers and conquered, subjects and kings where now the deep silence of the forest has overcome all such evidences of life and civilization. Nineveh and Egypt and Greece, have left in almost imperishable stone, the relics of their magnificence. The American nations have left their record in soil, and have written their history in legible and ineffaceable characters on the hills and valleys of their beautiful land, from Labrador to Patagonia."-Antiquarian Researches, p. 5.

Bancroft says: "The total number of mounds in the state of Ohio is estimated by the best authorities at ten thousand, while the enclosures were at least fifteen hundred."-Nat. Rac. of the Pac. States,

vol. 4, p. 752.

SIZE OF MOUNDS.

MacLean says: "As has been already noticed, the mounds in Ohio are very numerous. They principally occur near large streams and are found in great numbers along the two Miamis, Scioto, Kanawha, White, Wabash, Kentucky, Cumberland, Tennessee and other tributaries of the Ohio and Mississippi rivers. They are all dimensions, varying from a few feet in height, and a few yards in diameter, to ninety feet in height, and covering seveal acres at the base. The usual ering seveal acres at the base. dimensions range from six to thirty feet in perpendicular height, by forty to one hundred feet in diameter at the base. Some of the mounds are so great that it would require the labor of a thousand men for months with their best and latest improved implements to erect."-Mound Builders,

p. 41. All the evidences I have introduced are united and in harmony with the statements found in the Book of Mormon. It is therefore, not illogical nor unreasonable to claim that the chronicle of history as set forth by the ancient writers, and translated in our own time is true. Its inspiration and data stand the test of antiquarian and scientific explorations, and more. No law or rule of life, either human or divine, are weakened or made void by receiving the Book of Mormon upon its claims. There is nothing to lose, and much, very much to be gained by receiving it.

A SECOND CIVILIZATION.

The Book of Mormon states that after the time of the Mound Builders, another civilized people occupied a portion of North America. In this connection reread the Book of Mormon quotations I cited of the people emigrating "northward," and in addition, and to give occasion for certain evidence I wish to present, I cite the following: "And it came to pass that many of the Lamanites did go into the land northward; and also Nephi and Lehi went into the land northward, to preach unto the people. And thus ended the sixty and third year. And behold there was peace in all the land, insomuch that the Nephites did go into whatsoever part of the land they would, whether among the Nephites or the Lamanites. And it came to pass that the Lamanites did also go whithersoever they would, whether were among the Lamanites or among the Nephites; and thus they did have free intercourse one with another, to buy and to sell, and to get gain, according to their desire. And it came to pass they became exceeding rich, both the Lamanites and the Nephites; and they did have an exceeding plenty of gold, and of silver, and of all manner of precious metals, both in the land south and in the land north. Now the land south was called Lehi, and the land north was called Mulek, which was after the sons of Zedekiah; for the Lord did bring Mulek into the land north, and Lehi into the land south. And behold, there was all manner of gold in both these lands, and of silver, and of precious ore of every kind; and there were also curious workmen, who did work in all kinds of ore and did refine it; and thus they did become rich. They did raise grain in abundance, both in the north and in the south. And they did flourish exceedingly both in the north and in the south, and they did multiply wax exceeding strong in land. And they did raise many flocks and herds, yea, and many fatlings. Behold, their women did toil and spin to make all manner of cloth, of fine twined linen, and cloth of every kind to clothe their nakedness."-Helaman 2:26, 27.

Has scientific research found the remains of this race? MacLean says: "It is pretty well established that since the time of the Mound Builders, and prior to the advent of the Indian, a race known as the "Villagers" occupied certain districts of this country, and made the garden beds found in northern Indiana, lower Missouri, and in the valleys of the Grand river and St. Joseph's, Michigan. These beds exist in the richest soil in that part of the country. Some of the lines of the plats are rectangular and parallel, others are semicircular and variously curved, forming avenues differently grouped and disposed. beds are laid out with great order symmetry, and have certain peculiar features that belong to no recognized system of horticulture. These beds are entirely difterent from the system of field culture as practiced by the Indians, and no similar remains are connected with the enclosures of Ohio. It is evident that these beds do not belong to the epoch of the Mound Builders, for in some cases they extend over mounds, which certainly would not have been permitted by the builders. Nor is it to be presumed that these villagers immediately succeeded their predecessors, for these encroachments must have been long after the mounds had been abandoned and their purposes forgotten. The Indians have no traditions concerning them, and know nothing about this people. It is a singular fact that but few, if any, of the usual aboriginal relics are found within them. The beds are the only memorials of this race. But from them we readily draw the conclusion that they were a settled peaceable people, of industrious habits, and advanced tastes. Their implements and dwellings must have been of wood."-Mound Builders, p. 131.

All that does not belong to the savage in the antiquities of this country, is by many writers credited to the Mound Builders, which I am inclined to believe to be a mistake. The second civilization, according to the Book of Mormon, lived in tents, houses of wood and cement, and I believe they likewise used adobes. Donnelly says: "The Mound Builders made sun-dried brick mixed with rushes, as the Egyptians made sun-dried brick mixed with straw."-Atlantis, p. 376.

The Chicago Times for July 17th, 1876, in its special correspondence, contains the following: "Many of these interesting spots have been obliterated by the plow, but several remain intact. The damp cli-mate and rich soil of the Mississippi valley have dissolved and covered up the greater part of the remains of this southwestern empire. Vast roadways of more than Roman proportions are found on the broad bottoms of the Mississippi in Union county, and levees, miles in length, which would indicate that agriculture was practiced to a great extent. Among the many relics of this primeval empire few have a greater degree of interest than the fortification at Makanda, in Jockson county, a rocky gateway by which the Illinois Central railroad enters the Grand Chain. This work is simply known as "Stone Fort," and is a favorite resort for gatherings of all kinds, from its matchless beauty of scenery. The fort proper is a projecing rocky promontory, extending into a deep valley, in the shape of an acute triangle across the base of which extends a wall of rough masonry from side to side. This wall has been torn down and dug under by the ignorant in search of treasure. The inclosure contains about an acre. The sides are perpendicular bluffs of sandstone eighty feet high, at the base of which the valley stream doubtless flowed, and from which water could have been drawn by means of ropes. The work is indefensible against firearms as the hill in the rear rises gradually to higher ground, and the opposite bluff, about forty rods distant, overlooks the whole. It could cover its water supply by arrows, and perhaps a village under its walls. It is impossible to trace the age of this work. It is generally ascribed, however, to a race subsequent to the Mound Builders. But there are no inscriptions and the rocks are dumb."

Speaking of earth-works in Straddle Creek, Illinois, Pidgeon says: "After a thorough examination of the group I was satisfied that there had either been a change at some past era in the common mode of burial, or that this region was inhabited by an immense population, at different eras, who practiced tumular burial in different ways. The traditions of De-Coo-Dah sanction the latter theory. From these facts in connection with the traditions of De-Coo-Dah respecting the ancient inhabitants of these regions, as of various languages, customs and color, we are led to the conclusion that at least two distinct races of men have occupied this territory at different eras, and that both became nationally extinct anterior to the occupation of the present Indian race."-Traditions of De-Coo-Dah, p. 176-7.

I now turn to the derivation of Central American civilization. But before entering upon this topic, another question must be answered, namely, Were the aborigines of Central America one numerous race of people, divided into two branches of Hebraic origin, as the Book of Mormon represents them to be? Norman says: "The builders of the ruins of the cities of Chi-Chen and Uxmal excelled in the mechanic and fine arts. It is obvious that they were a cultivated, and doubtless a very numerous people."—Norman's Rambles in Yucatan, p. 175.

In regard to the ruins of Palenque, Stephens says: "The intermediate country is now occupied by races of Indians speaking many different languages, and entirely unintelligible to each other; but there is room for the belief that the whole of this country was once occupied by the same race, speaking the same language, or at least having the same written characters." -Travels in Central America, Chiapas and Yucatan, vol. 2, p. 343.

Bancroft says: "Closely enveloped in the dense forests of Chiapas, Guatemala, Yucatan and Honduras, the ruins of several ancient cities have been discovered, which are far superior in extent and magnificence to any seen in Aztec territory, and of which a detailed description may be found in the fourth volume of this work. They bear hieroglyphic descriptions apparently identical in character; in other respects they resemble each other more than they resemble the Aztec ruins, or even other and apparently later works in Guatemala All these remains bear and Honduras. evident marks of great antiquity. Their existence and similarity in the absence of any evidence to the contrary would indicate the occupation of the whole country at some remote period by nations far advanced in civilization, and closely allied in manners and customes, if not in blood and language. Furthermore the traditions of several of the most advanced nations point to a widespread civilization, introduced among a numerous and powerful people by Votan and Zamna, who, or their successors built the cities referred to, and founded great allied empires in Chiapas, Yucatan and Guatemala. And moreover, the tradition is confirmed by the universality of one family of languages or dialects spoken among the civilized nations, and among their descendants to this day. I deem the grounds sufficient, therefore, for accepting this Central American civilization of the past as a fact."-Native Races of Pacific States, vol. 2, p. 116.

Upon the sameness of those ancient cities in ruins Bancroft says: "To fully describe a few and point out contrasts in the rest, is the only method of avoiding a very tiresome monotony in attempting to make known some hundreds of structures very like one to another in most of their details as well as in their general features. similarity observed among the different monuments, is a very great advantage to the antiquarian student, since it will enable me, if I mistake not, to give the reader in this chapter as clear an idea of the antiquities of Yucatan, notwithstanding their great number, as of any portion of the Pacific States."—Ibid, vol. 4, p. 149.

As to the unification of the original American, Nott and Gliddon say: "In reflecting on the aboriginal races of America, we are at once met by the striking fact that their physical characters are wholly independent of all climatic or known physical influences. Notwithstanding their immense geographical distribution, embracing every variety of climate, it is acknowledged by all travellers that there is among this people a pervading type, around which all the tribes, (north, south, east and west) cluster, though varving within prescribed limits. With trifling exceptions, all our American Indians bear to each other some degree of family resemblance quite as strong, for example, as that seen at the present day among full-blooded Jews."—Types of Mankind, p.

The above remarks apply exclusively to the aborignes of America, and do not refer to the ancient people or Mound Builders. But one Mound Builder's skeleton has been found in a sufficient state of preservation to admit of examination.-See Types of Mankind, p. 290; also Monuments of Mississippi Valley by Squire and Davis.

MUMMIES.

Stephens says: "Dr. M. Orton says that the mummies from Peru have the same peculiarities in the form of the skull, same delicacy of the and the same remarkable smallness of the hands and feet, with that found in the sepulchre at San Francisco, Central America. He says too, from from an examination of nearly four hundred skulls belonging to older nations of Mexico and Peru, and of skulls dug from the mounds of our western country, that he finds them all formed on the same model, and conforming in a remarkable manner to that brought from San Francisco; and that this cranium has the same type of physical conformation which has been bestowed with amazing uniformity upon all the tribes on our continent, from Canada to Patagonia, and from the Atlantic to the Pacific Ocean. They are not the works of people who have passed away and whose history is lost, but of the same great race which, changed, miserable and degraded, still clings around their ruins."

Of the ruins of Mayapan he says: "So far, although the fragments of sculpture were of the same general character as Uxmal, we had not found any edifice sufficiently entire to enable us to identify that peculiar arch we had found in all the ruined buildings of this country; but it was not wanting. At the end was a door way, encumbered and half filled with rubbish, crawling through which we stood upright in apartments exactly similar to those at Uxmal, with the arch formed of stones overlapping, and a flat stone covering the top. The apartments were ruder and narrower, but were precisely of the same character with all the others we had seen. Of one thing, however, we had no doubt, the ruins of this city were of the same general character with those at Uxmal, erected by the same builders, probably of older date, and suffering more from the corrosion of the elements, or they had been visited more harshly by the destroying hand of man." -Incidents of Travel in Yucatan, vol. 1, p. 138.

ANCIENT SCIENCE.

Stepens says: "The fact that though the inhabitants of Yucatan and Mexico speak different languages, their calendar is substantially the same, I regard as extremely interesting and important, for this is not like a similarity of habits, which may grow out of natural instincts or identity of position. A calendar is a work of science, founded upon calculations, arbitrary signs, and symbols, and the similarity shows that both nations acknowledged the same starting points, attached the same meaning to the same phenomena and objects, which meaning was sometimes arbitrary, and not such as would suggest itself to the untutored. It shows common sources of knowledge and processes of reasoning, similarity of worship and religious institutions, and, in short, it is a link in a chain of evidence tending to show a common origin in the aboriginal inhabitants of Yucatan and Mexico."—Ibid, vol. 2, p. 120.

Of this similarity the same author says: "In the similarity of diversions we see a resemblance in manners and institutions, and trace an affinity between the people who erected the ruined cities of Yucatan, and those who inhabited Mexico at the time of the conquest."—Ibid, p. 307.

THE SAME GREAT RACE.

He says again: "But they have a higher interest than any that attaches to them as mere specimens of art: for among them are seen designs and figures which call forcibly to mind the well known picture-writings of the Mexicans; and if these analogies are sustained, this building attached to the walls of the tennis-court stands an unimpeachable witness that the people who inhabited Mexico at the time of the conquest belonged to the same great race which furnished the builders of the ruined cities in Yucatan."—Ibid. p. 311.

COMMON ORIGIN.

Delafield says: "No annals have been found proving a direct connection between Mexico and Peru; yet their languages and manners and customs, as well as their anatomical developments and equal advance in the progress of civilization, indicate a common origin."—P. 16.

ISLAND OF COZUMEL.

Relative to the ruins on the island of Cozumel, Stephens says: "These buildings were identically the same with those on the mainland; if we had seen hundreds we could not have been more firmly convinced that they were all erected and occupied by the same people; and if not a single corroborating circumstance existed besides, they afford in themselves abundant and conclusive proof that the ruined cities on the continent, the building of which has been ascribed to races lost, perished, and unknown, were inhabited by the very same Indians who occupied the country at the time of the conquest."-Incidents of Travel in Yucatan, vol. 2, p. 375.

THE ANTIGOUS.

Was this race divided into two branches, one "white" and the other "miserable and degraded?" "Around it were the ruins of a city without any other visible means of supply, and what rarely happened, with the Indians it was a matter of traditionary knowledge. They say that it was not discovered by them; it was used by their fathers; they did not know when it began to be used. They ascribed it to that remote people whom they refer to as the antigous."—Incidents of Travel in Yucatan, vol. 1, p. 357.

NOGPAT.

Speaking of a figure at Nogpat, Stephens says: "The Indians said that it was the figure of a king of the antigous, and no doubt it was intended as the portrait of some lord or cacique."—Ibid p. 364.

DABAH.

Of the ruins of Dabah he says: "The Indians say of them as of all the other ruins, that they are the works of the antigous; but the traditionary character of the city is that of a great place."—Ibid p. 415.

"MY OPINION."

Speaking of the ruins he explored, Stephens says: "My opinion on this question has been fully and freely expressed; that they are not the works of people who have passed away, and whose history is lost, but of the same races who inhabited the country at the time of the Spanish conquest, or of some not very distant progenitors."—Ibid vol. 2, p. 445.

GOLDEN AGE.

Speaking of the antiquity of Palenque, he says: "Here were the remains of a cultivated, polished and peculiar people who had passed through all the stages incident to the rise and fall of nations, reached their golden age and perished entirely unknown."—Ibid p. 356.

TWO NATIONS.

Ellen Russell Emerson thus relates a tradition of the Shawnee tribe of Indians: "One night upon an important occasion the numerous tribe of Shawnees encamped together on a wide prairie which they had selected for rest until the following morning, it being very pleasant, smooth and level. After having been in camp a few hours one half of them fell asleep and so passed the night; the other half remaining awake until dawn betook themselves eastward to where the sun rises. Those who fell asleep, however, on awakening continued their course to the west where the sun sets. This division was the origin of the two nations, the first of which was called Shawnee, and the second Kickapoo. Now prior to this separation these nations were united in bonds of friendship and were blessed with the bounties of the Great Spirit far above those which are now enjoyed; but when they had disunited and become two tribes, he withdrew his favor from them. Among the many blessings lost, was the power of walking upon the surface of the sea, by which they crossed from the east to the west without the aid of canoes; also the art of restoring the dead, which they were able formerly to accomplish by the aid of medical powers. Prophecy and mysterycraft were once practiced without feigning; all things were within their power of performance; while now, alas! after the Shawnees have wandered to the remotest west, and returning eastward to the original place of separation, the world will have finished its career."—Indian Myths,

It is an inexpressible satisfaction that this Shawnee mythical tradition is not found within the lids of the Book of Mormon. Nevertheless I feel to extend my sincere thanks to Mrs. Emerson for the same.

DEPARTED GREATNESS.

Bancroft says: "The nation that built Palenque was not of those found by Europeans in the country, but its greatness had practically departed before the rise of the Quiche, Cakchiquel and Yucatan powers."—Native Races of Pacific States, vol. 5, p. 167.

He further states concerning the tradi-

WHITE MEN:

"Besides there are numerous vague traditions of settlements or nations of white men who lived apart from the other people of the country and were possessed of an advanced civilization."—Ibid p. 24.

Dr. Le Plongeon says: "Besides the sculptures of long-bearded men seen by the explorer at Chichen-Itza there were tall figures of people with small heads, thick lips and curly short hair or wool, regarded as negroes. 'We always see them as standard or parasol bearers, but never engaged in actual warfare.'"—Maya Archaeology, p. 62.

Taylor says on the question of color among the inhabitants of America: "On the whole, it seems that the distinction of color, from the fairest Englishman to the darkest African, has no hard and fast lines, but varies gradually from one tint to another."—Anthropology p. 67 another."—Anthropology, p. 67.

While Prichard says: "It will be easy to show that the American races show nearly as great a variety in this respect as the nations of the old continent; there are among them white races with a florid complexion, and tribes black or of a very dark hue; that their stature, figure and countenance are almost equally diversified."—Researches into the Physical History of Mankind, vol. 1, p. 269.

On complexion, John T. Short says: "The Menoninees, sometimes called the 'White Indians,' formerly occupied the region bordering on Lake Michigan, around Green Bay. The whiteness of these Indians which is compared to that of white mulattoes, early attracted the attention of Jesuit missionaries, and has often been commented on by travellers. While it is true that hybridy has done much to lighten the color of many of the tribes, still the peculiarity of the complexion of this people has been marked since the first European encountered them. Almost every shade, from the ash-color of the Menominees through the cinnamon, red, copper, and bronze tints, may be found among the tribes formerly occupying the territory east of the Mississippi, until we reach the dark-skinned Kaws of Kansas, who are nearly as black as the negro. The variety of complexion is as great in South America as among the tribes of the northern part of the continent."-North Americans of Antiquity, p. 189.

In foot note of page 107 of volume 3, of United States' Explorations for a Railroad Route to the Pacific Ocean, we are told: "Many of the Indians of Zuni (New Mexico) are white. They have fair skin, blue eyes, chestnut or auburn hair, and are quite good looking. They claim to be full blooded Zunians, and have no tradition of intermarriage with any foreign race. The circumstance creates no surprise among this people, for from time immemorial a similar class of people has existed among the tribe."

Winchell says: "The ancient Indians of California, in the latitude of forty-two degrees, were as black as the negroes of Guinea, while in Mexico were tribes of an olive or reddish complexion, relatively light. Among the black races of tropical regions we find, generally, some light colored tribes interspersed. These sometimes have light hair and blue eyes. This is the case with the Taureg of the Sahara, the Afghans of India, and the aborigines of the banks of the Orinoco and the Amazon."—Preadamites, p. 185.

Let me here urge this pungent query to all those who doubt, deny or oppose the claims of the Book of Mormon: How did the red men of Central America know anything about black men and white men if they never came in contact with them or associated with those of such complexion? People who never saw or heard of bearded men, would not be likely to take pains to carve the pictures of such upon the walls and pillars of their temples and public buildings.

Bancroft says: "The resemblance in the different groups of ruins in Chiapas, Yucatan and Honduras, are more than sufficient to prove intimate connection between the builders. The differences pointed out prove just as conclusively that the edifices were not all erected and dedicated by the same people, under the same laws and religious control at the same epoch." -Native Races of Pacific States, vol. 5, p.

Stephens says, speaking of the Image at Palenque: "The head represents a different species from any now existing in that region of country; and supposing the statues to be images of living personages, or the creations of artists according to their ideas of perfect figures, they indicate a race of people now lost and unknown."-Travels in Chiapas, Central America and Yucatan, vol. 2, p. 311.

Miscellaneous.

GENERAL CONFERENCE.

To the delegates and Saints generally who may desire to attend the session of General Conference convening at St. Joseph April 6th, the committee on special arrangements appointed by the St. Joseph branch would respectfully announce that arrangements are being perfected by which a uniform charge for board and lodging will be made to every one at $3.50 per week. Those desiring to attend should at once notify the members of our committee by letter so that the necessary arrangements for their accommodation may be made. All visitors by railroad should go to Union Depot where they will be met by members of said committe who will be distinguished by blue ribbon badges They will be conducted to Saints' Hall north-west corner of 5th and Edmond streets, the committee's headquarters, where they will pay one week's board and lodging, and the committee will assign each and all suitable boarding places. The committee will settle all bills.

It will readily be understood that there being but few Saints in this place, board and lodging can not be obtained as cheaply as at some other points. The accommodations must of necessity be largely furnished outside; and the rate named we feel sure, the circumstances being known, can not fail to be satisfactory.

The conference will be held in the auditorium of the Young Mens' Christian Association building, north-east corner of 7th and Felix streets, centrally located and of easy access from all quarters, on good paved, well lighted streets.

By letter from Bro. W. W. Blair we learn that Bishop Blakeslee is negotiating with the various railway associations for reduced fares.

CONFERENCE RAILWAY RATES.

CHICAGO, March 13th, 1889. G. A. BLAKESLEE, Esq, Galien, Michigan: Dear Sir:—In regard to your application for reduction in fare in favor of persons attending the Latter Day Saints Conference to be held in St. Joseph, Missouri, on April 6-20, I have pleasure in advising you that authority has been given for the rate of a fare and one-third for the round trip, upon the certificate plan, from Association points over the railways in the territory of this Association, named on the enclosed list.

Certificates to be signed by yourself. On the certificate plan the passenger pays full fare in going to the meeting, and secures a certificate thereof of the ticket agent, by request, at the time of purchase, and this certificate, when countersigned by the proper official at the meeting, becomes authority for the sale of a return ticket over the same road, between same points, at one-third fare, thus making one fare and a third tor the round trip. Where the journey is made over more than one line, it is necessary for the passenger to purchase separate local ticket, and procure certificate thereof for each of the lines in this territory over which he travels in going to the meeting, as none of these lines honor the certificates of any other line.

The tickets purchased for going passage may be either unlimited or limited, according to rate paid or regulations in effect on the line over which it reads; but the return tickets sold at the reduced fare will, in all cases, be limited to continuous passage. Certificates will not be honored for return tickets at reduced rates unless presented within three days after the date of adjournment of the meeting (Sunday not being counted a day), nor will certificates be honored in cases where going tickets were purchased more than three days prior to the commencement of the meeting.

For your information a sample of the standard form of certificate, which is used by nearly all of the railways referred to, is also enclosed.

JNO. M. ABBOTT, Chairman.

NOTICES.

All General Conference appointees in Kansas and Missouri mission will please forward their annual reports to the undersigned, so that they will reach me by April 1st, at Independence, Missouri. Give full reports for the year, and condition of work in localities represented.

JOSEPH LUFF, Missionary in Charge.

Brethren of the Twelve, greeting:-Matters of importance in the experience of the missionary year just ending, indicate the necessity of wise counsels for the coming year in the conduct of its ministerial work. Therefore, I deem it to be my duty, as your presiding officer, to request those of the quorum who can, to meet for the work in council on the 1st day of April, 1889, at 10 a.m., in St. Joseph, Missouri, to prepare for the duties of the General Conference of the Church there to be convened on the 6th day of said month and year.

ALEX. HALE SMITH, Pres. of Quorum.

If those desiring a daily paper containing a report of every day's proceedings of the General Conference to be held at St. Joseph, Missouri, convening April 6th, will send their address with fifty cents to H. C. Bronson, 315 North 9th street, Joseph, Missouri, they will receive a copy mailed to their address every day during conference. Arrangements have been made with the St. Joseph Herald in which we expect to have a fair and full report. Write your name and address plainly, and send early so that we may know how to order.

H. C. Bronson.

QUORUM OF SEVENTY.

Dear rethren: The Secretary has mailed each member a circular letter containing a list of all additions, corrections, etc. to date. Your attention is called to the requests contained therein and it is hoped that every member of the quorum will comply and send in a written report. last General Conference reports were received from all but one member, and this year we hope to hear from all. The grand record of 538 bap-tisms was made last year by our quorum, and, excellent as it was, we want to exceed it until we shall in that and in other equally as important respects perform our full measure of labor in the great latter day work.

Your colaborers, E. C. BRAND, President, R. S. SALYARDS, Secretary.

INFORMATION WANTED.

George Wesley Underwood, son of Mordecai and Deborah Underwood. Any one knowing anything of his whereabouts will please make known the same to Martha L. Givens, Captina, Belmont county, Ohio.

DIED.

BLAKESLEE.—G. Alma Blakeslee was born April 14th, 1860, in Galien, Berrien county, Michigan, where he lived up to the time of his death, which occurred Thursday night, November 29th, 1888. He had gone to Michigan City, Indiana, on the fatal day, to attend to some business matters, where he met his death at the hands of evil and cruel men, as many marks of violence were found on his body. They took his life for money he was thought to have had on his person; however, secured only about $60, after which they threw his body into the harbor, where it remained for fourteen weeks and four days. The body was found at 4:30 p. m., March 11th, 1889. Funeral from his home, Wednesday, March 13th. Services were conducted by Elder Leonard Scott; text 2 Thess. 4: 13-16, to a large concourse of relatives and friends. He was baptized June 27th, 1875, by elder W. W. Blair, and confirmed on the 28th, by W. W. Blair and Geo. A. Blakeslee.

It was, we believe, by the answer of prayer and the goodness of an All-wise God that his body, when found, was in a remarkable state of preser vation, so much so that all who saw it were astonished. He always cherished the hearth-stone of his birth as a sacred place; his home was his all in this life; his religion his only hope for the future. He was a man of wonderful faith, always found kneeling at the altar of his God in times of adversity, and praising and thanking him in times of prosperity. He had a kind heart for humanity, always lent a helping hand in time of need. The poor and needy ever loved him as a kind friend. He leaves a father and mother, a brother and six sisters, a dear wife and sweet babe, who deeply mourn his death. Our prayer is that our tears of sadness may be glorified to the joy of our lonely hearts in realizing that, "our loss is his gain," and that he has only exchanged spheres till Christ shall call back the dead to life and arrays the elect in his own immortal likeness; for "Our eyes can not soar to that beautiful land,

But our visions have told of its bliss;
And our souls by the gale from its gardens are fanned
When we faint in the descrit of this
And we sometimes have longed for its holy repose
When our spirits are torn with temptations and woes,
And we've drank from the tide of the river that flows
From the ever-green mountains of life."

Mosell.—After a life of 52 years and 6 months, Sr. Christina Mosell, wife of Bro. John Mosell, after a lingering illness of one year, passed peacefully away March 4th, 1889, at her home in Nebraska City, Nebraska at 7 p. m. Sr. Mosell was born in Sweden and in her native land first heard the gospel and was baptized there. She moved to Nebraska City in 1865. She lived and died a Saint, always bearing a faithful testimony to the latter day work, and was a dutiful wife and mother. She was belov ed by all who knew her, which was attested by the large attendance at the funeral. She was interred at the Nebraska City cemetery on the 6th instant. She leaves a husband and three daughters to mourn their loss. Funeral sermon at the residence by Elder J. Armstrong, assisted by Elder J. Thompson.

WIGHT.—Harriet Wight was born at Litchfield, Connecticutt, March 19th, 1801. She united with the church in its infancy and suffered the persecutions in common with the Saints in Missouri, being driven from her possessions by force, and at her death held deeds to land in the above named state. One incident of suffering seems worthy of particular mention: At the time her husband, Lyman Wight, in company with others were sentenced by the mob to be shot on the public square in Far West, she was forcibly taken from bed in the night and placed with her children in an open wagon without sufficient wraps when her youngest child was but eight days old and driven across the country forty miles. She passed through the trials of the church at Nauvoo, was a witness to the sorrow consequent upon the death of the prophet and patriarch and the con-fusion that followed. She went with a company of Saints to Texas, and on the presentation of the Reorganization by Elders Hugh Lytle add Spencer Smith, she renewed her covenant, being baptized by Elder Lytle about 1865. She remained firm in the faith until her death, which occurred February 26th, 1889. Her's was the death of the righteous, and it found her ready and waiting. No particular disease distressed her and she had the use of her mind, it was thought, to the very last; and when too weak to utter words she seemed to understand what was said to her. Her departure was without a struggle or a moan. She was buried at Greeley, Holt county, Nebraska. Funeral services by Elder L. Gamet.

GRIMWOOD -At Providence, Rhode Island, February 22d, 1889, of dropsy of the heart, Daniel C. Grimwood, husband of Sr. Susan M. Grimwood, in the 73d year of his age. The funeral services were conducted by Elder Thomas Whiting, of New Bedford. There was a large attendance of friends and relatives, including a delegation of "The Veteran Firemens' Associaof which the deceased was a member. The friends sent a number of beautiful floral offerings.

McKee.-Near Stewartsville, Missouri, John, son of Thomas and Sr. McKee, aged 21 years, 7 months and 1 day. He was born July 27th, 1867, at Santa Rosa, California. He was baptized by T. W. Smith August 29th, 1877. He was a kind and dutiful son and now awaits the resurrection of the just. He leaves an aged father and mother, brotners and sisters to mourn his death. Funeral sermon by W. Summerfield, assisted by J. D. Flanders.

RUTTER.-At Council Bluffs, Iowa, John Rutter departed this life September 27th, 1888, aged 65 years. He joined the church when very young, before the death of Joseph, and he rejoiced in the gospel of Christ.

THE CHICAGO TIMES believes that news makes and "sells" a newspaper.

IT BELIEVES that the public wants the news,

all the news, the latest news

IT BELIEVES that in printing the news a newspaper must print the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

IT BELIEVES in printing the truth without fear or favor, uncolored by prejudice or predilection, unbiased by personal interests or preferences, regardless of parties, cliques, or individuals.

The Chicago Times, with wise extravagance, uses its unrivaled facilities for collecting and spreading all the news before its readers in an attractive manner and in a readable style.

THE CHICAGO TIMES has quadrupled its circulation in less than one year under its new management since the reduction of the price of its daily edition from 5 to 2 cents a copy.

The Chicago Times is in every sense of the word a great metropolitan journal. It circulates in all parts of the United States and Canada, and and is read wherever the English language is spoken.

THE CHICAGO TIMES, while printing all the news of the day, from all parts of the world, likely to be of interest to its readers, chronicles with careful attention to details the daily history of the great city in which it is published and of that great western country of which Chicago is the political, financial, commercial, and social center.

JOSEPH SMITH W. W. BLAIR

ASSOCIATE EDITOR.

Lamoni, Iowa, March 30, 1880

WILL JOSEPH ATTEND CONFER-ENCE?

BRO. E. C. BRAND wrote us from Atchison, Kansas, the 17th instant, saying: "A rumor has got out that Bro. Joseph will not attend conference."

Yes; and a similar one "got out" a year ago, and yet he attended conference; and we hope this latter "rumor" will meet the same fate as the former one. We look for him to attend, and shall continue to do so until forced to do otherwise. President Joseph Smith will do what he deems is for the best, let that be what it may. And it will be well if all the Saints and friends do the same, and not seek to "cross the bridge" till they reach it.

RAILWAY RATES.

In our last issue we published a list of the roads which will carry visitors to our General Conference at one and one-third fares for the round trip. Don't fail to note the following facts:

1. All persons must procure a certificate, signed by the Ticket Agent where they purchase tickets when going to conference, setting forth that they have purchased a full-fare ticket over said road, such certificate to be preserved so as to be signed by Bishop G. A. Blakeslee, in order to get return ticket over the same road at one-third regular fare.

2. All those going over two or more of the roads mentioned in the list advertised, should be particular to procure certificates over each of those roads, asking for them at the offices where they purchase tickets when going, and preserve those certificates that the Bishop may sign them in order to get return tickets at one-third fare over each of said roads.

3. All persons passing over the Chicago and Alton railway must purchase full fare ticket to Kansas City, and obtain certificate from the Ticket Agent at the station where they purchase their ticket. Said "certificate" must be kept for the signature of the Bishop, at St. Joseph as before mentioned. At Kansas City, each will purchase a ticket over either of the roads entering St. Joseph and obtain a certificate from the Ticket Agent so that it may be signed by the Bishop, at St. Joseph, and return fare be secured at onethird regular rates.

4. If through tickets can not be procured at starting points, passengers must purchase to the most convenient point where such tickets can be procured, and re-purchase through to destination, requesting certificate from the Ticket Agent at the point where such ticket is purchased.

Certificates are not transferable.

6. Tickets issued on certificate for return journey will be limited by Agent for continuous trip, no stop-over privileges being allowed.

7. No refund of fare will be made on any account whatever because of failure to procure certificates before starting on the going journey.

8. No certificates will be honored which bear date of issue more than three days prior to the date announced for commencement of conference; and no certificates will be honored later than three days after the date announced for the close of conference.

9. Don't fail to procure certificates at the stations where you purchase tickets. Finally, read and follow strictly instructions given on pages 190 and 191-last Herald.

THE editorial below from the "Patriot," (Lamoni, Iowa), of the 21st, is so fully in harmony with the views we entertain on the subjects of which it treats that we gladly transfer it to our columns:

"PRE-REQUISITES TO COLLEGE BUILD-ING IN LAMONI.

"The suitability of Lamoni as the location for a college building, cannot be denied. Its acknowledged morality as compared with other towns, its quietude, its healthfulness, the expressed determination of its people in favor of progressive educational work and methods, all unite to make it pre-eminently fitting as a place to which to send the young for educational work.

"But in order to the successful performance of the work of college building in Lamoni, several prerequisites must exist, prominent among which are the follow-

"Assurances of some kind must be given, either in the articles of incorporation or in some other satisfactory way, that one of the prominent features of the institution shall be the incalculation of virtue and morality, and that no person shall be hired or retained to perform any kind of work connected with the college, who is known to possess either loose sentiments or to engage in loose practices in either of these regards.

"This done, every phase and semblance of sectarian character must be waived. It must be clearly and positively stated, that the school is for no other purpose than the imparting of general information to be used after its reception in the defense of any theory or the accomplishment of any work, that may seem proper and right, the person, not his tutors, being the judge in the premises. Neither the dogmas of religion nor the dogmas of science should be imposed upon the students of any institution, conducted for general educational purposes. Herein we are strongly impressed too great care can not be exercised. It should be regarded as the special business of an educational institution at Lamoni, to widen and deepen the channel of educational progress. It should take a step in advance of other like institutions. It should be marked by the fearlessness which characterizes those who are conscious that they possess a part of the truth and are anxious and willing to possess it all. It should be a college set upon a hill, shedding the peaceful and life-giving rays of moral and mental development, utterly free from sectarian or scientific bias. The world needs honesty and information. These united will emancipate the race. Separated, no amount of dogmatic teaching will accomplish that work. If pupils are taught to do right because it is right, they will be placed at once upon the basic principle of honesty. If instruction is freely imparted concerning language, science, history, information will be abundantly supplied, and the harvest of good to the world will finally be reaped. The Patriot places itself squarely upon record in favor of this kind of a college in Lamo-

"But in order to the erection of a suitable building, somebody possessing sufficient means, and having a sufficient influence to lead people to watch his actions and to some extent determine their own thereby, must give the practical part of the work a "start." It will hardly do for the moneyed men to wait to see what others will do; for others are evidently waiting to see what they will do, and with far the best reason upon their side. The latter doubtless reason, that if the moneyed men who are thoroughly acquainted with Lamoni, and also with the college movement have not sufficient confidence in the project to take the lead, that there are no good reasons to expect it to be successful, and therefore they can not afford to invest their money in it.

"Lastly, the people of Lamoni and vicinity should all with one accord unite, not only to welcome assistance from abroad, but to give the movement substantial aid at home."

THE SIGN OF CHRIST'S COMING.

"And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory."—Matt. 24:30.

The Savior used to teach his disciples that the old prophets had spoken quite minutely of his first advent. (Read Luke 24: 27). Everything that the Savior passed through was foreseen and recorded by the prophets hundreds of years before his first By reading the words of the advent. prophets he became familiar with everything that he passed through, consequently he knew that he had to suffer and to die on the cross for the sins of the whole world, and to get a glorious victory over death, hell and the grave. Jesus not only taught his disciples what Moses and all the prophets had written about his first advent, but he told his followers in Matthew 24: 29, Luke 21:25-31 that the signs would be seen in the sun and in the moon and in the stars previous to the setting up of the kingdom in the last days. Just read Luke 21:31. These signs were to be seen just previous to the setting up of the kingdom by Joseph Smith, "so likewise ve when ve see these things come to pass know ye that the kingdom of God is nigh at hand," as much as to say, when the signs were seen in the sun and in the moon and in the stars, and when these signs were seen it would be a testimony that the kingdom of God would be set up soon.

Matthew 24: 29 says, that after the coming of false Christs and false prophets, in these words: "Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened and the moon shall not give her light and the stars shall fall from heaven. The large black spots that have been seen on the face of the sun during the last sixty years ten or twenty thousand miles in diameter would darken the sun somewhat. Matthew 24:30 says: "Then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven." The Savior appeared to be perfectly conversant with the sign. He makes use of the definite article "the" referring to some sign he understood perfectly well. I presume there are but few who know the constitution of the sign of the Son of man which is the last sign that Matthew speaks of which is to be seen before the Savior comes: "Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judes in the daya of Herod the king, behold there came wise men from the east, saying, 'Where is he that is born king of the Jews, for we have seen his star in the east and are come to wor-ship him." Herod charged the wise men to go to Bethlehem and search for the young child, and when they had found him to bring him word again that he might come and worship him also. When they had heard the king they departed and, lo, the star which they saw in the east went before them till it came and stood over where the young child was.

Now when this same star that the wise men saw as they were watching their flocks by night is seen in the heavens, that is the sign of the coming of the Son of Then all the tribes of the earth shall mourn, and then all the tribes of the earth shall see him coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory. The next sign that will be seen of any importance relative to the Savior's second coming is the only and last sign which will precede his second coming. Now let the Saints watch and pray that they may be prepared for that great and notable day (Matt. 24:30) which is not far in the L GALLUP.

[WE suppose the above was written to refute the positions taken in an editorial entitled "A sign of Christ's coming," contained in the HERALD of February 23rd, but after a careful examination of the foregoing we are but confirmed in the opinions expressed in said editorial.

It will be remembered that we therein endeavored to show that "the dark day of May 19th, 1780" was not the sign referred to in the prophesies, but that the prophetic event was a future one. We did not deny that that dark day was "a" sign, but we did deny that it was a fulfillment of the prophecies contained in Joel, Matthew, Revelations, etc. We called attention to the matter because it has been preached and published by some of our own and other people that the said dark day was a fulfillment of the prophecies mentioned. Let the editorial in HERALD of February 23rd. be carefully read again and we think the correctness of the position taken will be apparent.

In studying the various prophesies it is necessary to think, and compare, and discriminate, "rightly dividing them:" not forming hasty conclusions by reading one to the exclusion of others. When such rules are observed, much that appears to be conflicting will be found clear and harmonious with other scriptures; for some statements are modified or limited and explained by others.

In the above article the first point to which attention is called is a reference to Matthew 24: 29, and Luke 21: 25-31, with which the statement is made "that the signs would be seen in the sun and moon and stars... just previous to the setting up of the kingdom by [through] Joseph Smith."

King James translation does not support this theory; but inasmuch as a considerable portion of Christ's statements are omitted or lost in King James, we refer to the Inspired Translation in which we suggest a careful reading of the passages mentioned.

Had the brother read the editorial carefully, he would have seen that the event stated in Matthew concerning the sun moon and stars was to be fulfilled long after the organization of the church in the last dispensation, and also after the second siege of Jerusalem—in the latter days. The kingdom of heaven referred to in Luke 21: 31 might consistently be regarded as referring to the kingdom in its glory when Christ shall reign; but the words "kingdom of heaven" are not found in that quotation in the Inspired Translation.

, We do not deny that the various sun spots and other signs shown forth in the sun may be and are signs of the second coming of Christ, but we do deny that the startling predictions of the prophets concerning that great event have yet been fulfilled

The assertion that the star seen by the wise men is the specific sign mentioned in scripture is not proof that it is such. It is not, can not be that sign. It does not necessarily follow that that which was a sign of Christ's birth will also be a sign of his second advent. Whatever it may be, it is certain that it will be of such a startling character and be so universally visible that "then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of Man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory . . . . For the Son of Man shall come, and he shall send his angels before him with the great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together the remainder [the scattered ones who had not been gathered to Zion and Jerusalem] from the four winds: from one end of heaven to the other." Matt. 24: 37, 38, 40. I. T.

The following is also significant in this connection: "And I beheld when he had opened the sixth seal, and, lo, there was a great earthquake; and the sun became black as sackcloth of hair, and the moon became as blood; and the stars of heaven fell unto the earth, even as a fig tree casteth her untimely figs, when she is shaken of a mighty wind. And the heavens opened as a scroll is opened when it is rolled together; and every mountain, and island, was moved out of its place. And the kings of the earth, and the great men, and the rich men, and the chief captains, and the mighty men, and every bond man, and every free man, hid themselves in the dens and in the rocks of the mountains; and said to the mountains and rocks. Fall on us, and hide us from the face of him that sitteth on the throne, and from the wrath of the Lamb; for the great day of his wrath is come; and who shall be able to stand?" Rev. 6: 12-17. Read also Rev. S: 12; Dan. 7: 13.—ED.]

PROF. HUXLEY.

In this issue will be found an interesting article by Prof. Huxley. It is valuable for its good words concerning Jesus Christ, and for the doctrines he taught, when and where faithfully observed; also the author's clear discovery and honest statement of the need of superhuman knowledge being given to the individual to confirm the Christian faith and hope of a life beyond this present one.

We think he is unfortunate, however, in holding that the Jesus of the first book, and the Jesus of the second book of the New Testament are not the same. These books, written by different authors, give the shadings and personal perceptions of their authors concerning Christ and his work. Each treat of him from their own personal standpoint and speak of what is foremost in their respective minds as they write. Matthew writes on certain phases and facts touching Jesus and his work, while Mark writes of others. Where both write of the same phases and facts, they are not equally elaborate and specific, and yet there are no irreconcilable conflicts. Faithful witnesses seldom, if ever, see and testify of given events in precisely the same way.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

SINCE the close of the Decatur district conference six promising young people have been baptized into Christ at Lamoni. They were confirmed at the prayer meeting on Wednesday evening, the 13th inst., and the Spirit of confirmation was present to the joy and satisfaction of all who were in attendance on that occasion. The young people of the church are coming to the front in the army of workers and have but to enter more actively upon the performance of duty to enjoy the greater blessings awaiting all.

"The Biblical Hades," taken from late issues of the Lamoni Independent Patriot, is the title of a very instructive article on the subject of the intermediate state of the dead, which will be found in this issue. It should receive a careful reading.

Sr. Winnemore of Morris, Illinois, says there are a few there investigating the faith and some are anxiously waiting an opportunity to unite with the church. Brn. F. M. Cooper and Thomas Hougas should look to this call.

Bro. R. M. Elvin wrote from Wilber, Nebraska, the 6th instant: "Baptized one this afternoon."

Bro. S. B. Kibler of Woodbine, Iowa, writes: "Bro. Derry is preaching here. I trust good may be done in bringing precious souls into the faith."

Bro. M. R. Scott wrote from Galena, Indiana, the 7th that their late district conference was a decided success, not a dissenting voice being raised in all the proceedings. He states that he baptized three of late and that the work was moving on.

Bro. T. H. Moore lately wrote from Providence, Rhode Island, that the good news of the progress of the general work enabled him to better fight the good fight of faith. He felt blessed in the good cause.

We have a few copies of Elder D. M. Canright's pamphlet, "Seventh Day Adventism Renounced," for 75 cents cloth or 50 cents paper covers. Those desiring copies should order soon as the number received is limited.

Bro. F. C. Smith writes from Kilmanaugh, Michigan, giving an account of the persecution brought against the young Saints, and Bro. Levi Phelps who has been preaching in the vicinity of Caseville. He says that they chased Bro. Phelps around like a rabbit, but that he would always manage to be on hand to fulfill his appointments; also that the Saints were strong in the faith.

Bro. W. M. Rumel wrote February 28th from Fremont, Nebraska, that the work was onward at Clearwater where he had attended the conference of the Central Nebraska district. The Saints in that vicinity were suffering somewhat from the effects of poor crops, but withal the prospect was hopeful.

WITH mingled sorrow and gladness we chronicle in this issue the death of Bro. Elijah Banta and Sr. Phebe Gaulter—sorrow in having to part with these beloved ones, but gladness that they have "fallen asleep" in Jesus. There have been other deaths in this vicinity of late. among them that of Mr. Francis, also a child of Bro. John Harp, the particulars of which have not yet been given us. Early last winter Brn. Joseph Smith, A. S. Cochran and others, were talking with the writer as to the very few deaths that had occurred in and near Lamoni during the past three years; and the remark was made that such conditions could not be expected to con-The change came; for since the first of January there has been more severe sickness and deaths in and near Lamoni than in all the three years previous. And still the town, and the country about it, are not now what would be properly termed unhealthful, but to the contrary. In the death of Bro. Banta, the church and the country loses an active worker and a generous helper. He was a man of excellent business abilities, loved the Lord, the Church of God, his country and his fellow men, and he now rests from his labors. See obituary.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. J. D. Storts (or Shorts) wrote from "Eight miles of Oakley, Thomas county, Kansas," as follows:

"If any of the Elders can make it convenient to call on us and preach to the benighted people, I will meet them at Oakley, and bring them out. We have a large frame school house, and my son and son-in-law are directors; so there wont be any trouble in getting the house."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

Ques.—Should a branch give a member a letter of removal when the member is not intending to move away from the vicinity of that branch?

Ans—The rules of the church require that members shall unite with the branch of the church convenient to them; therefore it is not proper to give letters of removal to any except such as really intend to remove from the limits of such branch as they belong to.

Q.—At what time will the events mentioned in Doctrine and Covenants 85: 25-35 inclusive, be fulfilled?

A—Paragraph 25 is now in process of fulfillment; while the 26th to the 33d are to be fulfilled just prior to and at the second coming of the Lord. The 34th and near ten lines of the 35th are to be fulfilled during the millennial age, and the balance during the "little season" after the millennium, and immediatey thereafter.

2.—When the president of a branch refuses to act, in his office and calling, is it necessary to take a vote for his release before another is chosen?

A—Yes; for otherwise a branch might have two presidents instead of one. Refusal of an officer to act is just cause for removal. But it requires the voice of the body that chose him to release him. The "Rules of Order" should govern in this matter.

"CHRISTIAN SCIENCE" (?) EX-AMINED.—No 11.

It will be well to know just as nearly as possible the character of that which we are examining. What are its doctrines and its claims? Of all people, we as Latter Day Saints can least afford to accept or reject anything save on its own merits. Its tenets from its most accredited sources of information are: No matter; all mind or spirit; all God; all good; no evil.

Deductions:—Since there is no matter, there are no bodily organs. Since there are no bodily organs there can be no body. Our five senses are five personal lies. All which they report to us (and as there are no such things how can they report at all) is a delusion. As there is no body there can be no bodily diseases.

Our diseases, they affirm, are purely and entirely conceptions of the mind, merely perverted

Dr. Taylor has handled the relations of this system to philosophy, and also as a healing art, in a masterly manner; but as our object is to examine its relations especially to Christianity, we simply admit that they do heal, but it is by methods known to all who have ever made the human mind a study; and these methods Dr. Taylor admits the medical faculty have heretofore placed too little stress upon, because they have been too much wedded to the use of drugs. These methods he classes under four heads:

Fixation of attention.

Influential relations of brain.

Pseudo-Paralysis and other hysteric phenomena.

Hypnotic nullification of pain, including production of sleep

But while this admission is made, from his own personal observation he affirms many and distressing failures, and also that many reported triumphs have been proven fallacious as to the fact of cure, the nature of the malady and the cause of relief. He says: "There is no disorder which Christian Science will not willingly or ignorantly undertake to cure. There are no dangers which it will not thrust upon a community through the perversity of its doctrines or its purposed unfamiliarity with the qualities of disease." After giving many illustrations of failure and ignorance he adds: "Our illustrative citations are drawn from personal experience, and might be multiplied manifold, with merely increased emphasis of the fact that the included germ of truth in Christian Science becomes an unreliable and dangerous element in the hands of its practiioners."

But for causes heretofore mentioned we dismiss this relation, and give our attention wholly to examining its relations to Christianity; and before we have completed this examination we think all will agree with us that the name 'Christian Science' is strangely misapplied.

We here quote from Dr. Taylor:

"The staple of Christian Science is its theology. As said, it draws its philosophy from this source rather than by the usual metaphysical processes. With either conscious or instinctive shrewdness it has surrounded its head with what we may call, meaning no irreverence, an ecclesiastical nimbus. It appeals largely through this to the respect, awe and the unlimited confidence of the people. This movement takes it into the realm of the supernatural. This makes all things possible. It removes the question from the domain of all the ordinary courts. With those who accept the claim, it gives the case a predetermined verdict in spite of any and all seeming to the contrary. It establishes, if the ground be allowed, a wise co-partnership with the Almighty, which shuts all mouths, silences all doubts, rebukes all skepticism, It is therefore a very important point to be made and a very important point to be examined. Many are won by it. More are made hesitant by it. It makes ministers cautious. It renders other good people, to say the least, agnostic and open to conviction. Even the typical unbeliever is wary lest he speak against the Most High. On this religious wave, this assumption of vital union with Christian truth, the school has ridden into its present degree of acceptance. The religious argument has told, and, except as examination neutralizes the claims, bids fair to tell. Lo, what has not been done under the theological cloak!

"Let us come to the immediate point. If pantheism, if denial of a personal God, if denial of individual existence and responsibility upon the part of man, if rejection of the doctrines of death and the resurrection and the probationary relations of this life, denial of the reality of sin, and hence of the need of provisions of atonement as the Christian world understand them-if these are Christian, then is this school of healing Christian in its theology. Think of a school claiming to be Christian which does not believe in the actuality of a Jerusalem, nor that there was a real Galilee! Think of a body claiming to be Christian which does not believe that the cross of Christ was actual! Think of a sect claiming to be Christian which does not believe in a Christ who came with the mission of revealing to us our moral estrangement from God, and helping us, by repentance and the following of him, to return to our Father's house and our Father's moral likeness; but so far as Christ is concerned, prattles of a man who conceived and taught the idea that we are stainless and complete, if we only realize it; that the only regeneration we need is to open the eyes of our mind and appreciate that we are perfect! Whatever germ of truth may lie in Christian Science, its parade and claim as Christian is, if the cause be worthy such a dignity the burlesque of the century. The short of it is this: Christian Science, using the name of Christ, proceeds to practice healing by a theology at complete variance with what the Scriptures teach."

It is easy to make assertions. Let us prove them. Here are some extracts substantiating our declarations as to theology ("Science and Health" vol. 11, p. 146, under Platform of 'Christian Scientists.') "God is supreme, the only life, substance and intelligence of the universe and man; there is neither a personal Deity, a personal devil, nor a personal man." (Ibid p. 147): "Man was and is the idea of God, the conception of eternal mind. This idea was co-existent and co-eternal with mind: hence man was forever in mind, but mind was never in man. . . . If a portion of the infinite could enter limits, that portion would lose the nature of Deity. . . . The whole expresses infinity or God and nothing else can, and if this entirety be lacking, God is lacking. The Scripture saith, 'God is all in all.' We understand this to be so; but if God is all, there is nothing for him to enter but himself. All is mind; there is no matter. All is harmony; there is no discord. All is life; there is no death. All is good; there is no evil. All is God and his idea." (Ibid, p. 150): "God which is life, truth and love, never forgives sin; for life destroys death, truth destroys error, and love destroys hate: these therefore being destroyed, need no forgiveness. Error is supposed to be real, though wrong and both real and wrong; but this statement is incorrect. Error is not truth, and is unreal because it is not true." (Ibid, p. 151): "Life, truth and love are the trinity or triune principle, the three in one, the same in action and entity, and these are the one God.

The Holy Ghost is divine science revealing and explaining this triune principle and leading into all truth." (Ibid, p. 152): Our church is built on Christ, not a person, but the principle that Christ said is the way, the truth, and the life. Christian Science is the way and its foundations are eternal."

We pause in our extracts just here to call the attention of the reader to that which is most plainly embodied therein and to ask Latter Day Saints especially, if they are willing to receive healing at the hands of this science? It is not for us to answer for any one else, but for ourself we can say—never. We have felt (for we too carry about with us an infirmity of the body) that no chastisement for the present is joyous, but grievous, and yet when God gives us the grace to bear it—bear it patiently, looking to him for strength—what more can the Christian ask? Was not Christ "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief?" and is it not enough for the servant that he be as the Master?

We are almost persuaded that the statue of "Christian science" (?) as we have endeavored to unveil it to at least a casual glance, possesses a character of ripeness or full development (if we may be allowed the expression), which does not always appear on the surface or in every stage of its unfolding. But let us assure our readers that Dr. Taylor has not made a single assertion in any extract here copied which we have not verified from a work of their own recently published in Chicago, by Francis Lord, entitled "Christian Science Healing: Its Principles and Practice." Let us here assert that this latter work goes a step farther, and while asserting on the face that "Re incarnation is actually no part of Christian Science," the author yet speaks of it in this way: "While we frankly state that the doctrine of reincarnation is no part of Christian Science as hitherto taught, and is regarded as 'debatable' and 'speculative' by many earnest people, we must also say that we think it gives the key to many so-called 'incurable' cases; and that these would often prove curable, if understanding led the sufferer and the healer to perceive that the 'cause' of illness lay farther back than this life. It is therefore a doctrine which might prove the right key to many a rusty lock." Christian Science Healing, p. 412.

In every system there are steps of progression, and many times it is wisely so ordered. We can not help feeling however, that in the case of Christian Science the advantage is all upon the side of evil, for what individual who is a believer in the word of God, even though he should not be a professing Christian, would stand ready to give in his allegiance to doctrines so utterly subversive of the life and teachings of Christ as are these? It has been said and has passed into a proverb, "No lie is so harmful as the one which is half truth." This finds in a measu-e its illustration in Christian Science. We say in a measure, because the germ of truth mixed with it is small,--very small indeed,--and yet so potent and undying is truth, no matter where found, that it gives to this philosophy a power for evil which it never could possess but for the garment it has stolen, and which possessing itself of by fraud, has so adjusted as as to cover its horrible deformities from the sight of the unwary and unsuspecting victim, until once entangled in its meshes, like the poor opium eater, he has not the desire to resist its baleful influence, though its evils may be known to him.

In our next article we purpose to notice its teachings with reference to similarity of gospel teaching upon the surface and the utter perversion of it when carried out.

Perhaps some of our readers as they went over the list of the Home Column Missionary Fund in the Herald of March 16th, may have wondered when they saw the contribution from "The Anti-Slang Society," of Shenandoah, Iowa. If so, the following letter from Sr. Fisher will explain it, and we feel that every lover of pure English owes Sr. F—— a debt of gratitude for this praise-worthy effort in behalf of the young, and we sincerely wish that her example might be followed by many if not all.—ED.

Shenandoah, Iowa, Feb. 25th.

Mrs. M. Walker, Dear Sister:—Enclosed you will find bank draft for two dollars and seventy five cents. Fifty cents apiece for myself and three children as birth day offerings and seventy-five cents as the product from our "Anti Slang Society." The nature of this society was that each member should pay into the treasury a penny for each slang word or phrase he used and that the proceeds were to be sent as an offering in the name of "Anti-Slang Society." This society was composed of students who were here attending college and boarding with me. Miss Emma Tomlinson being secretary and myself treasurer. I would be glad to receive the October number of Autumn Leaves if you have any in stock, as mine was lost and I desire to have the volume bound. Enclose invoice. Trusting the good work will keep progressing, I remain yours in Christ, SARAH E. FISHER.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Sr. F. P. Bram, of Columbus, Kan., writes: "I feel that I have not been as faithful in this good work as I wish that I had been, but my faith in the gospel increases day by day. I ask an interest in your prayers that my health may be restored, as I would like to give to forwarding the work of God the money spent for medical advice."

Sr. Mariah Rainbolt, Galesburg, Mo., writes: "My husband is not in yet in the fold, but I think he will soon be with us. I have some good neighbors to whom I loan my books and papers, for it would rejoice my heart to see them one in the fold with us."

Sr. Emma Sutherland, Medina, Tex., writes: "I have been a member of the church for years, but wandered far from the fold, until God saw fit to send his servants again with that spiritual food for which we were so much longing and so greatly needed. We are now striving to live near to God. I bear testimony that through the administration of the elders my health has been restored, and I know God will sustain and help those who put their trust in him. I love the Home Column, there is so much strength to be gained from it, and my husband says he would not be without it for ten dollars a week. Sisters pray for me that I may not faint by the way."

Sr. Mary Anway, Highland Station, Kansas, writes:—"I enjoy the Home Column very much, and think it a good thing for the mothers of familes. I liked that article on punishing children. I think we should teach our children to love and obey us because it is right to obey, and that God will not love them if they do wrong, and if the child is taught to love God, it will be easier to lead them by love than to drive them. I have raised six children; five of them are in the church, and I am striving to keep them there by prayer and example."

Sr. Florence sends us quite a lengthy letter, stating her views in regard to the responsibility resting upon every wife to bear her own share of the burdens of life. After describing a very unsatisfactory sort of a woman, one who expects to be petted and waited upon by her husband and who seems to fancy herelf of no use in the world whatever, she adds: "I hope there is not a Saint in the world who does as I have described?" We repeat the hope Sr. Florence, and furthermore we add, We know there is not, for no matter what her claims or pretensions to being a Saint may be, any woman who spends her time in idleness and neglects her duties to her husband and family is not a Saint. There is a mistake somewhere, and she needs to be taught that "The idler shall not eat the bread of the laborer."

Correspondence.

PLYMOUTH, England, March 5th.

Bro. Foseph: When in London I had plenty to do and it gave me great pleasure in doing it. For things were not in as good shape as I would like to have seen them; so I did what I could to get things right, and I believe that they are all glad of my coming there. I hope and pray that they will keep themselves humble and be one. On January 13th I had the pleasure of baptizing two precious souls into the kingdom; on the 21st two, on the 22d two, on the 28th two, one on the the 31st, and on the 6th of February one more, making eleven in London. Two of them are from the Endfield branch. I have been laboring there some; also at Ponders End. On the 19th of February I had the pleasure of baptizing two at Broadclist branch, and on the 20th Bro. Edward Tucker baptized one. I hope and pray he will be the means of leading many into the kingdom of God.

I came to Plymouth on the 21st and am trying to get things in better working order before I leave, as I shall have to return home in the spring for various reasons. I am sorry that I have to leave, as there is lots of work to be done in this land. I think, for one, that this part of the mission ought to be thoroughly cared for by the church, as there are thousands of honest souls to be gathered in. Your brother in Christ,

WM. NEWTON.

WEIR, Kans., March 18th.

Bro. Blair: Seeing in the Herald that the Christadephian friends are on the warpath elsewhere, I will state that that after challenging me to meet their debator here, and my acceptance, that I gave them the privilege of getting any one else, as they were inclined to back out. So they brought one of their champions from Waterloo, Iowa, a Mr. Thomas Williams, a lawyer, who boasts of "doing up" Bro. E. L. Kelley a few years since. We debated four propositions, I affirming the "Book of Mormon;" he the "Unconscious condition of the souls of the dead." I "The laving on of hands and the perpetuity of spiritual gifts;" and he that the "Kingdom was not to be set up until the second advent." Three evenings to each proposition. The roads were very bad, yet there were from three to four hundred persons present most of the time. Great interest was manifested. He showed a bad spirit from the start, slandering the character of the dead, and disgusting many who wanted the issue fairly discussed. Almost every one but their own members admitted that we had the Scriptures on our side. He was in such a hurry to return home that he left after the eleventh evening, although they had advertised it through the country with posters for twelve nights. I could not get any of their preachers to take his place, so I had it all my own way the last night.

An Irishman, a Catholic, expressed himself to me thus: "Divil a bit o' good feelin' did he have in his hide; but when you got up we all felt well."

Disributed numerous tracts and the Voice of Warning, and am to return there next Sunday.

I find it best to speak evil of no man in debate, but to "earnestly contend" for the one faith. As they so zealously claim that the "laying on of hands and spiritual gifts were all done away," I wrote out and put up notices offering them a reward to show one sentence, line or word, intimating that Jesus Christ, the author of all gospel principles and promises, ever disannuled one principle or promise he ever taught. This opens the peoples' eyes, and they say, "If it is there, why dont they read it?" The one challenging me is to debate with one of our young men in May. We doubt it. Yours in gospel bonds,

D S. CRAWLEY.

NEWARK, Dak., Feb. 18th.

Brn. Foseph and William:— The gospel seed sown in Dakota has fallen on good soil and has brought forth an abundant harvest. Since the 16th of last December, eighteen worthy have obeyed the Master's command by going into the waters of baptism. Our little branch has almost doubled this winter; thanks be to God. Sunday, the 10th of February, I baptized twelve, of these ten were confirmed the Sunday following. The other two did not come on account of bad roads. Others are awaiting baptism, and others who have been the most bitter against us are now investigating our work and they seem to think that we are about right, since the Lord is working with us. The sick are being healed.

This field is worked by Bro. Robert Oehring and myself. He ordained me to the eldership on the ninth day of last December. We then commenced a series of meetings, and on the sixteenth Bro. Robert baptized six, and the good work rolled on until the tenth of February, when I baptized twelve.

Oh, I long to see this grand latter day work roll on, that the gospel in all its fulness may find lodgment in the hearts of poor, lost Israel! Two years ago I was an enemy of this great work, but now I am a worker in it. Truly the Lord has a wonderful way of accomplishing his purposes.

May the blessings of our Lord Jesus be with the Saints. Yours,

PHILIP C. FISHER.

VICTORIA, Ill., March 10th.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—We have no branch here, so it is hard to get vitality from the parent vine. I sometimes fear we are only cullings from the vine, stuck in the ground to take root or die; and I find by experience that it is a hard way to get a vine started.

We had some good seed sown here by Elder M. T. Short in January 1887. Also in the summer, but none since.

My wife had suffered for twelve years with enlargement of the spleen, and doctors told her they could do her no good. Elder Short administered to her January 24th, 1887, and the disease left instantly and has never returned.

Last summer our little boy was taken very sick, and as there was no elder short of twenty-four miles, we united our prayers of faith in his behalf—we did not think he could live till we could get to Kewanee and so did not start—and he was healed and at play by evening.

Last Wednesday I came in from work at noon and found my wife in great pain and almost helpless. She bore her suffering bravely, saying she would not have a doctor, and there were no elders nearer than Kewanee. Sister Cook came in Friday morning, and we united our faith in her behalf. Before we arose from the bedside she felt that the Great Physician had begun repairs. That night (as we had not asked for the pain removed) pain was still with her, and I saw she had fever, and her face very red; so I kneeled by her and prayed for the pain to be taken away. When I looked up the fever had left and her face was no longer red, and in a half-hour she was healed and got up and ate.

MARION ARNOLD.

Magnolia, Iowa, March 13th.

Bro. Blair:—I spent last sabbath at Nebraska City and spoke twice. The attendance was good, but it was a labored effort on my part for there seemed to be a lack of spiritual union between the audience and the speaker. I confess that it was a new experience for me.

Last evening I was with Bro. J. W. Waldsmith at Plattsmouth. There are some good Saints there, but they are starving for the bread of life. They need immediate help from some patient, active and wise minister for Christ. Actions unbecoming and foolish have clouded the work in that place. However, we should do this; "In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thine hand: for thou knowest not whether shall prosper, either this or that, or whether both shall be alike good."

Human wisdom and prudence only, are not safe as a rule in the things of God. The faithful servant trusting in the promises of God, will not wait but under sunshine or cloud diligently labor on in hope that God will accept the work performed, the success and increase being in His providence granted or withheld as seemeth Him good. I learn that Bro J. F. McDowell is here, ill. I will commence a series of meetings tomorrow evening.

R. M. ELVIN.

ROCKVILLE, Mo., March 19th.

Dear Herald:-I commenced meetings as I was directed by Bro. I. N. White on the 16th at the Elm Grove school-house, where Bro Luff so ably met Elder Price of the Christian Church when he attacked the Book of Doctrine and Covenants. At my first meeting the three roughs who were fined twenty-four dollars for breaking the windows so they could throw eggs at Bro. I. N. White, were there. They were drinking and one of them would pound on the bench with a cornstalk while I was speaking. They would whisper, throw rocks on the house when they went out or something else. When we started home they threw the bottle and some rocks or something at us, but no one was hurt. The bottle had about a gill of whisky in it. They came out three times, coming in one at a time. The last night they were all that were out except two little boys and the Saints, three in number. I did not preach to them but walked to the stand, gave them some good advice, sang the six hundred and twenty-third hymn and dismissed them: so when we went to start they actually held the lantern for us to see to get in the wagon. I told them all good-bye and they went away peaceable. Sunday at one o'clock we had prayer and testimony meeting at Bro. Lyon's house, sister Lyons being the first to obey the gospel here. She is one of those stones that were laid in the house of God by Brn. I. N. White and E. Curtis that Satan and all of his forces can not pull up, though they have tried it in many ways. While in prayer and testimony meeting Bro. Irvin Roberts had a vision in which he saw the Temple and the Saints gathering to it. Some had on white robes and some didn't. The Temple looked white as if built of granite. He saw a light start up from the earth which looked like a candle, and which represented the Saints, and angels came down and lifted them higher and higher.

Bro. Roberts was baptized February 8th, by Bro. E. Curtis. He was shown in a vision the place where he should be baptized; he saw the grass, the trees and everything just as it was, the night before he was baptized. To God be all the praise.

Yours in bonds,

D. E. TUCKER.

FERNDALE, Cal., Feb. 28th.

Bro. Blair:—The church here has taken a new start since Bro. Thomas Daley has been with it, as several have been baptized and others are just on the brink of the water. The people seem to be very hard to convince but Bro. Daley explains the scripture to plainly that a little child might understand it. He is a faithful expounder of scripture and is calculated to do much good. The Saints here desire him to return and labor among them.

James Worthington.

HILLSDALE, Iowa, March 15th.

Brother Dancer :- I had thought not to take the Herald any longer, but you continued to send it, and there is a good deal of instruction in it, and some pieces from the editors and others that are worth the price of Herald. And then again there are some pieces, in my opinion, that nearly covers up the truth. Now to me David Whitmer's Address seems to have an honest face and a humble spirit. It seems to be the spirit of truth and love and the spirit of the gospel of Christ. It is truth I want. The question was asked, "Lord, who shall abide in thy tabernacle: who shall dwell in thy holy hill? He that walketh uprightly and worketh righteousness and speaketh the truth in his heart. He that backbiteth not with his tongue, nor doeth evil to his neighbor, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbor; in whose eyes a vile person is contemned; but he honoreth them that fear the Lord." Isaiah says: "Thy eye shall see the king in his beauty; for the Lord is your judge. The Lord is your law giver. The Lord is your king, he will save you." Now, brethren, I believe these things to be true. It is not because I have any feelings against any of the brethren or sisters in the Reorganization, but it is a very honest differerence as to whether you are right or we are right. I do not know. It is a matter of belief with me. I do not want to put any person between me and God but Christ. The voice of God said in the Bible and Book of Mormon, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased. Hear year him." And Christ said, "I am the true vine; my Father is the husbandman. Abide in me, and I in you. As the branch can not bear fruit of itself except it abide in the vine, no more can ye except ye abide in me." So you see, if we expect to get sap, or spiritual food, it must come through Christ; for he has said so. "As the Father has loved me, so have I loved you. Continue in my love. If ye keep my commandments and abide in my love, even as I have kept my Father's commandments and abide in love." So you see the nearer we can come to Christ and keep his word, God and Christ will love us and we will love one another. Now, I pray for you, brethren, that God will show both you and me how to worship him aright, and I hope there will be no feelings between you and us. Whatever inviteth to do good comes from above; and that which inviteth to do evil comes from beneath. Yours truly,

SOLOMON THOMAS.

WHEELER'S GROVE, Iowa, March 10th.

Bro Blair:—The Adventists have come and gone, and the Saints are still firm in the faith. We feel to thank God that we obeyed the doctrine of Christ and have received the Holy Spirit of promise, that we are not tossed to and fro and carried about with every form of doctrine and cunning craftiness whereby men lie in wait to deceive.

Bro. Kemp changed views with him for six evenings and did splendid. Then Bro. Peak came just as the Saints were getting anxious to have some of our elders come and put the Adventist theory in a proper light before the people. He discussed the question of the immortality of the soul with him for three evenings and drove the Adventist to the wall so that he denied saying that Christ only bath immortality, and then the Methodist minister and the Adventist discussed the Sunday question and also the Sabbath question. The Methodist came out ahead. The Saints at this place hold Sunday School quite regularly and have a fair attendance. We are to have Bro. Hansen with us on the 16th of this month. The Saints at Wheeler all seem to feel well and strong in the faith. May God give us all strength and courage to press on.

G. W. NEEDHAM.

EASTON, Pa., March 17th.

Bro. W. W. Blair:—On Tuesday, March 5th I bade adieu to the Saints of Attleboro to attend—under the providence of God—the General Conference of the church for the first time in my life; it is also my first trip through this western country. On the 6th inst. I met with faithful members of the Providence, Rhode Island branch at a social, prayer and testimony meeting at the home of Bro. and Sr. E. O. Toombs. The meeting was conducted by Bro. M. H. Bond, who has recently received the honors of presiding officer of the latter branch; also of the Massachusetts district. I trust and hope that he will be returned to this district by the general church officials.

I arrived in New York city via. the palatial steamer "Old Colony" of the Fall River line on the following Friday. I was invited by Bro Joseph Squire, elder in charge of the Brooklyn branch to speak to the Saints on Sunday evening the 10th, and did so with fair liberty. In the afternoon I listened to a disgusting harangue by a Mr Owen, formerly an elder in the church and now a representative of the Whitmerite faction of Mormonism,—at least he (Owen) so claims. About the only correct and commendable statement that he made in his very spirited address was that "Joseph Smith, president of the Reorganized church, wrote him a very gentlemanly letter." He was very blatant about extending a challenge to any representative of the church, and I offered to defend our position but he, like all barking dogs, did not bite. Bio. George Baty made an able defense against this opposer of the truth.

While In Brooklyn I enjoyed the hospitality of Bro. Squires and family and Bro. and Sr. George Potts. I believe that the interviews with each other were to our mutual advantage.

During the past week I visited the famous Central Park in New York and saw some of the wonderful works of God in the brute creation.

Yesterday the mountain and valley scenery on the line of the Central railroad of New Jersey showed in a remarkable degree the handiwork of the Master Mechanic.

Still trusting in the redemption of Zion, I remain, Your brother,

ARTHUR B. PIERCE.

SONORA, Iowa, March 14th.

Dear Herald:—I have a number of letters before me, from different ones, asking me to come and preach to them. As I can not answer all of them, I will state that it is impossible for me to fill all the calls, but will do the best I can. And may we all unite in asking our heavenly Father to send more laborers into the vineyard, to feed those souls that are starving for the bread of life. For there seems to come up a general cry from many parts of the Lord's vineyard, "We want to hear more of that kind of preaching." Sometimes there is an exception to this, as a woman said a few days since, "If they only wouldn't preach so much Bible." Ah, yes, too much Bible for some and not enough fables!

On the 8th instant I was called on to preach the funeral sermon of the dear little son of Bro. and Sr, J. C. Reams. For about six weeks he suffered with the mumps. See obituary notice.

The work is onward in the eastern Iowa district, and prospects are favorable for an ingathering this summer; only we need many more laborers. While I was in Jones county I visited the state penitentiary at Anamosa. This immense edifice covers about eleven acres of ground. The walls are built of heavy rock, and are eight feet thick on the ground, and four feet at the top. At the lowest place the wall is twenty-seven feet high, at the highest is forty-seven. The entire building is warmed by steam. There is a sixty horse power engine to do the work. There is an electric light plant in the building of five thousand candle power. They have a room for worship, a chapel. The prisoners are compelled to attend preaching every Sunday forenoon, and in the afternoon they have a Sunday School. The chaplain told me that there was a conversion or two every Sunday. They have a library of several thousand volumes. The books were bought by the attendance fees,. They have day school for the convicts every afternoon on week days; the chaplain is the teacher. The cells are neat and substantial, each side is made of one stone only, and in the floor is the same. The floor and sides are six inches thick in each cell, and the cells are all inside the main building, which is inclosed with an eight foot wall, from twenty-seven to forty-seven feet high. They intend to build several hundred more cells this summer. There are two hundred and fortythree convicts; 19 females.

The following is the religious complexion of the convicts as taken from the Warden's and Chaplain's report of January 1889: Catholics 53; Methodists 51; Presbyterians 18; Lutherans 17; Baptists 14; Christians 7; Episcopalians 7; Congregationalists 5; Evangelical 5; United Brethren 4; Jews 2; Infidels 1; Universities 1; Spiritualists 1; not accounted for 23. I was glad there was no L. D. S. among them.

In bonds,

I. S. Roth.

Avoca, Kansas, March 10th.

Mr. W. W. Blair, and others:- I wish to say a few words in regard to the Strangites at Avoca. We do not recognize L. D Hickey's authority, nor is he authorized to represent us in any way. He changes so often that we could not follow him were we so disposed, and he assumes just as much authority to represent you among those he meets. As I said to Elder Brand when he visited me last summer, I have no fight to make with you. I think we are doing a work God has called us to do. You think the same, therefore why should we cavil or dispute. There is room for both, and we must each give an account to God for our work. So go ahead in the way you have marked out, we will do the same, and let us deal fairly with each other; and may God bless the right is my prayer.

Yours in bonds,

S. H. MARTIN.

SANTA ANA, Cal., March 8th.

Bro. Joseph has been with us at Newport and Santa Ana (4½ miles apart) for three Sundays. He cheered our drooping spirits very much, and strangers here in Santa Ana were very much pleased with him, and could he have continued here the people would have filled Spurgeon Hall to overflowing. Prejudice does not run very high in this country. The latter day work is gaining ground on the Pacific coast.

Yours.

J. G. Walker.

SAGINAW CITY, Mich. March 11th.

Dear Herald:-The work in this district is moving along finely. Bro J. J. Cornish has had a debate on the Sabbath question at Brinton, and it was a complete victory for our side. Last week two Reverends thought they would try and tear down what the Saints had built up at or near Farwell. The Rev. Mr. Gettings, of the Free Methodist Church, gave out that on Monday evening, March 4th, he would examine the "Scriptural proof" of the Book of Mormon and show that the proof texts produced by the Saints supportive of the coming of the sealed book had no reference in fact to said book, as claimed. Monday evening came, and Bro. C. F. Smith and myself made it a point to get to the school house early. The time to open the meeting arrived and the house was packed. Extra seats had to be brought in, yet the preacher made no appearance. We waited and waited until it began to be whispered about that they dare not come, as there was some one there to defend the divine origin of that book. At last the Reverend arrived and with him a Freewill Baptist brother, -Reverend Sifton.

It was ten minutes to nine, local time, when they opened services. Mr. Gettings spent fortyeight minutes in trying to show that Isaiah twenty-ninth chapter, had its fulfillment away back in the days of Christ. He acted like a gentleman all the way through, and then gave way to Mr. Sifton, who addressed the congregation for fifty-five minutes and a good share of his time was spent reading parts of the "Pomeroy Letters," much of it not fit to be read before a congregation. Mr. Sifton informed the people that he could not believe the Book of Mormon.

After he had finished Mr. Gettings arose and thanked the people for their attention and requested them to go home.

As soon as the benediction was pronounced I arose to my feet and requested the privilege of saying a few words. This being granted I requested the people to seat themselves as "soon as the benediction was pronounced."

The people again seated themselves and I walked up and shook hands with the two ministers and requested them to stay and hear the other side. "No; it was late," and they could not. I turned and requested all those who wished me to reply to what had been said to manifest the same by raising the right hand, and I think every hand in the room went up (the ministers and three others had left); "all that do not wish this replied to this evening signify by the same sign," I said.

"O," cried some one away back in the room, "they have gonn." I spoke till about fifteen minuts to twelve to a very attentive assembly, and it was a grand success for us. I think much good was done, but time will tell.

Yours in gospel bonds,

E. DAY BENNETT.

STEWARTSVILLE, Mo., March 20th.

Bro. W. W. Blair: I do not often write up to headquarters to report every thing I do, therefore some may think I am not doing anything. Since I met you at our Grove meeting last fall, near Clarksdale, Mo., I have done about all I could for this good cause. I have been twice down into Platte county, at Edgerton Junction. The work there was opened up by Bro. William Summerfield. I held a series of meetings, preaching six times on my first visit, and eleven times my last trip; baptized one and left many believing. I found one man that said he was going to change his manner of living, but that he had something against all the churches. I asked him what he had against the church I had the honor to represent. He said he heard so much about "old Joe Smith." I said, "Will you take hearsay evidence that would hang you or me?" He then came out and said, "I am a plain man, and do not want to hurt your feelings." I told him to shoot; I would consider the game and might fire back. He said, "I have seen Smith when I was small, myself, and know for myself." "When was you born," I asked. "In 1852," he said. "Your sight must be good," I replied, "and your memory extraordinary, for Joseph Smith was killed in June, 1844, eight years before you was born." He looked to me like the chickens had eaten his bread. And so it is; these wise ones know a great many things that are not

I have also been in Grundy county, at Spickardsville, and at Fairview school house, preaching, and had good liberty and good congregations, also was up north of Marysville, in De Kalb county, and at other places, and have many calls not yet filled. I think some will obey the gospel in Platte and Grundy counties, soon. The work I love better every day I live, and wonder why others do not accept; 'tis so plain and easy of demonstration.

Weather fine; health good; buoyant in spirit. Yours in bonds,

J. T. KINNAMAN.

Lucas, Iowa, March 13th.

Bro. Blair: Shortly after leaving Lamoni, on Monday, I became a listener to a conversation between three gentlemen who sat near me. The subject of "Mormonism" was under discussion. and such a biased, unfair representation was given of "Joe" Smith and the work he introduced, that I was constrained to participate. One was a presiding elder of the Methodist faculty; another a "missionary" of five years experience in Utah. The elder was the most bitter and sarcastic in his remarks. I however addressed him, and while I was presenting evidence to substantiate Joseph Smith's work and teachings, he could not meet them on fair Scriptural statements, but was compelled to refer to the Greek version, changing the meaning of such words as he found proper. When the subject of the officers in the church was broached by another gentleman, the elder, in order to refute the argument, stated thas he held all the offices enumerated, patriarch, prophet, elder, pastor, evangelist, &c; quite a complicated authority. When I listened to his flimsy, shallow and evasive arguments, I thought of the poor, ignorant, "wise" ones spoken of by Isaiah. One of his arguments was, that I was a young man and when I had attained to his age and understanding I would learn something. I pray God that I may! I felt that I knew what he with all his wisdom did not possess, and could not refute on a Scriptural basis, but must squirm and change to suit his whims and caprices. I asked him if it necessitated a scholastic education, a familiarity with Latin, Greek and Hebrew to understand that gospel. what would become of me and myriads of individuals like me who did not possess such attainments? With my whole heart I thank God for the light He has given me and which He will give all others who will accept the gospel through the instrumentality of Joseph Smith, whom I revere, and whose work I hope to defend until my dying day. I learned that the Utah missionary was billed to lecture on "Mormonism and its evils" in Chariton that evening. I communicated the intelligence to Bro. Powell, after which we resolved to remain, and should they attack the church, making no distinction between our church and Brigham Young's hierarchal doc-duced Bro. Powell to them, who expressed our intention of remaining, when the lecturer, who was George N. Jeffreys of Provo, Utah, stated that he was not sure whether an appointment had been made! We soon felt that our absence was preferable, but having a proficiency of "cheek" we resolved to remain and trust to consequences. We went to the M. E. Church where the lecture was being held, and took a seat near the front that we might be under his immediate scrutiny. Before commencing upon the body of his lecture, he drew a mark of distinction which is seldom made, between the "Josephites" and "Brighamites" from the public stand, stating that the Reorganization was at "swords ends" with Brighamism; that they were doing all they could to overthrow polygamy, and that he himself had allowed their ministers to preach in his church in Provo. When I noted his candor and fairness which I believe was shown because of our presence, I felt to thank God that we were there. At the close Bro. Powell in a short, pithy manner tendered thanks in behalf of the Reorganization for his candor and merited justice. He gave a brief outline of the work, and fully impressed upon the minds of the audience that the practices of Brigham Young were not countenanced by Joseph Smith, and that prior to his death he taught no such doctrine. It was seed sown in an opportune time, and I think will result in good.

When I consider how ignorant the general public are of the fact and claims of the Reorganization, and how willing they are to confound one with the other, I realize the needs of the church. O, that the time had arrived when the church in general would awaken to the great responsibility which rests upon it to contribute of their substance as God has ordained; that men whom He has called to the work may be liberated from temporal cares to go out with their minds and spirits in the work, to refute opposition, allay prejudice and lay the truth bare before the people!

My heart was made sad a few days past to read a letter from an efficient elder in the field, in which he stated that he would be under the necessity of refusing a mission the coming year, being compelled to provide for his family; or else he would come under the anathema of Paul. O, how pained I felt! and I thought, were I able, I would support the same myself. I trust that God, by his Spirit, will, in the near future, establish that confidence between the church membership and those who have charge of the church finances, that the ministry will use wisdom in curtailing expenses, and judiciously appropriating those funds received from the coffers of the church to accomplish the greatest good, by which means the church in general would be willing to comply with the law of tithing. I long for the time when peace shall be established in Zion and her stakes; when the ministry will be more harmoniously blended in one, both as to thought and intent; that by their acts and counsel they may bring about such an era of good will as to obtain the approval of God and In Christ, & man.

T. W. WILLIAMS.

BAY PORT, Mich., March 15th.

Bro. Blair:—I am pleased to tell you that the work is moving on in good shape almost every place. Several are coming into the church. Over one hundred saints are rejoicing in the true gospel here in Bay Port. The work commenced here a little over two years ago. At present I am visiting all the branches in the district. Prospects for the future are good, especially in Sanilac and Huron counties. Yours,

J. J. CORNISH.

BY ELDER R. M. ELVIN.

DERIVATION OF CENTRAL AMERICAN CIVILIZATION.

WITH the fact before us that the American Indians and the civilized aborigines of Central America belong to the same race, and of course have the same origin, we proceed to inquire into the origin of that race. We shall present the arguments presented in favor of three apparently conflicting theories, but which will be easily harmonized upon the basis of the Book of Mormon: Original civilization, Egyptian civilization, and Hebraic civilization. The Book of Mormon represents the people who built the principal cities of Central America as those highly favored of God, and who, under his especial direction, developed largely an original civilization. It also represents them as a people well acquainted with the customs, language and general learning of the Egyptians, thus making very reasonable the finding of elements of Egyptian civilization. Lastly, it represents them as Tews, acquainted with and observing Jewish customs and laws, and hence makes reasonable the finding of numerous relics of the Mosaic economy among the American Indians.

ORIGINAL CIVILIZATION.

Speaking of a portion of the ruins of Labna, Stephens says: "Above the cornice of the building rises a gigantic perpendicular wall to the height of thirty feet, once ornamented from top to bottom, and from one side to the other with colossal figures and other designs in stucco, now broken into fragments, but still presenting a curious and extraordinary appearance, such at the art of no other people ever produced."

—Incidents of Travel in Yucatan, vol. 2, p.

"They are different from the works of any other known people, of a new order and entirely and absolutely anaomalous. They stand alone."—Travels in Central America, Chiapas and Yucatan, vol. 2, p.

On this Baldwin says: "The more we study them [the Mexican and Central American ruins] the more we find it necessary to believe that the civilization they represent was originated in America, and probably in the region where they are found."—Ancient America, p. 184.

Of the architecture of Chiapas and Yucatan Prescott says: "It must be admitted, however, to have a character of originality peculiar to itself."—Conquest of Mexico, vol 3, p. 408.

EGYPTIAN CIVILIZATION.

Bancroft says: "I find no writer who goes so far as to affirm that the new world was actually peopled from Egypt; we shall, therefore, have to regard this merely as a culture theory, the original introduction of human life into the continent in no way depending upon its truth or fallacy."—Nat. Rac. etc., vol. 5, p. 55.

The above neither affirms nor denies the Egyptian origin of the people who first inhabited this continent. How strikingly confirmatory of the Book of Mormon! Delafield says: "On a review, then, of the architectural evidence, we trace identity between the Mexicans and Peruvians, and the Egyptians, in (1) The coincidence in pyramidal sarcophagi and temples, and their peculiar structure. (2). The possession of the same architectural and mechanical genius which enabled them to remove masses which our mechanical skill has not attained to. (3). The peculiarity of hieroglyphic inscription, the Zodiac and planispheric sculpture in their sacred buildings. (4). An identity of architectural sepulchral decorations. (5). An analogous construction of bridges. (6). A singular analogy in the specimen given of their sculpture."-Delafield, p. 61.

Here is another who believes in the same relationship of the two continents. Garcia Y. Cubas claims the following analogies between Teotihuacan and the Egyptian pyramids: "The site chosen is the same; the structures are oriented with slight variation; the line through the center of the pyramids is in the 'astronomical meridian; the construction in grades and steps is the same. The Nile has a 'valley of the dead, as at Teotihuacan there is 'a street of the dead;' some monuments of each class have the nature of fortifications; the smaller mounds are of the same nature and for the same purpose; both pyramids have a small pyramid joined to one of their faces; the openings discovered in the pyramid of the moon are also found in some Egyptian pyramids; the interior arrangement of the pyramids is analogous."

Native Races of Pacific States, vol. 5,

p. 56.
With this agrees Humboldt, who, speaking of a ruined structure at Mitla, says: "The distribution of the apartments of this singular edifice, bears a striking analogy to what has been remarked in the monuments of upper Egypt drawn by M. Denon, and the savants who compose the institute of Cairo."—Essai Politique, Book 1, p. 265.

Imagination is not overstrained in accepting the view of similiarity of some of the learning found in Egypt and ancient America. Bancroft says: "Resemblances have been found between the calendar systems of Egypt and America, based chiefly upon the length and division of the year, and the number of intercalary and complementary days."—Native Races of Pacific States, vol. 5, p. 62.

Three thousand five hundred and seventy-five years from the mummies of Egypt to the mummies of Kentucky. Pidgeon says: "Ancient Egypt, first in science and famous in art, has also left her impress here. In 1775 some of the first settlers in Kentucky, whose curiosity was excited by something remarkable in the arrangement of stones that filled an entrance to a cave, removed them, and, on entering, discovered a number of mummies, preserved by the art of embalming in as great a state of perfection as was known by the ancient Egyptians, eighteen hundred years before Christ, which was about the time the Israelites were in bondage in Egypt. This custom it would seem is purely Egyptian, and was practiced in the earliest age of their national existence. A trait of national practice so strong and palpable as is this peculiar art, should lead the mind without hesitation to the belief, that wherever it was practiced, its authors or their pupils existed."—Traditions of De-Coo-Dah, p. 19.

Delafield says: "The investigations of Delafield says: "The investigations of Mons. Bailey in the astronomy of the ancients generally, of Mons. Jomard in that of Egypt, and of Baron Humboldt in that of Mexico and South America, present most striking incidents of coincidence, not only their divisions of time, but also in the Zodiacal signs."—Delafield, p. 48.

Mr. Jomard says: "I have also recognized in your memoir on the division of time among the Mexican nations, compared with those of Asia, some very striking analogies between the Toltec character, and institutions observed on the banks of the Nile. Among these analogies is one worthy of attention. It is the use of the vague year of three hundred and sixty-five days, composed of equal months, and of five complementary days equally employed at Thebes and Mexico, a distance of three thousand leagues."—Ibid. p. 52.

of three thousand leagues."—Ibid. p. 52.

The same author says: "As to the Mexicans, it would be superfluous to examine how they attained this knowledge. Such a problem would not soon be solved; but the fact of the intercalation of thirteen days every cycle, that is, the use of a year of three hundred and sixty-five days and a quarter, is a proof that it was either borrowed from the Egyptians, or that they had a common origin. A second analogy which I have remarked between Mexico and Egypt is, that the number of weeks or half lunations of thirteen days, comprehended in the Mexican cycle, is the same as that of the years of the sothic period; this number is 1461."—Ibid. p. 53.

Delafield says: "Another feature pre-

Delafield says: "Another feature presents great analogy. Their buildings, particularly the sacred houses were covered with hieroglyphics. Each race,— Egyptian, Mexican and Peruvian,—recorded the deeds of their gods upon the walls of their temples. Nay, science was also sculptured thereon in both countries, in the form of Zodiacs and planispheres, corresponding even in signs."—Ibid. p. 60.

Having traced the Egyptian mark on the American continent, I now turn to the consideration of the

HEBRAIC CIVILIZATION.

In order that this topic may be simplified we shall proceed, first to show an Asiatic origin of all American aborigines, and then, narrowing the inquiry, show a Jewish origin of the race which built the principal cities of Central America, of which race the Indians are the "miserable and degraded" branch. Speaking of Dr. Warren's work, John Delafield, Jr., says:

"The most important item therein is thus stated: 'Anthony shows that there is much resemblance between the crania of the race of the mounds and Ancient Peru, with those of the modern Hindoos.' The similarity too, is so striking as to induce him to draw the conclusion that the race of the mounds and of Peru are derived from the southern part of Asia."—Delafield, p. 20.

Speaking of Votan, Bancroft says: "Votan, another mysterious personage, closely resembling Quetzalcoatl in many points, was the supposed founder of the Maya civilization. He is said to have been a descendant of Noah, and to have assisted at the building of the tower of Babel. After the confusion of tongues, he led a portion of the dispersed people to America."—Nat. Rac. Pac. States, vol. 5,

p. 27.

Bryant says: "The theory that America was peopled, or, at least partly peopled, from eastern Asia, is certainly more widely advocated than any other, and, in my opinion, is moreover based upon a more reasonable and logical foundation than any other. . . . If we must suppose that they originated upon another continent, then it is to Asia that we must first look for proofs of such an origin. 'It appears most evident to me,' says the learned Humboldt, 'that the monuments, methods of computing time, systems of cosmogony and many myths of America, offering striking analogies with ideas of eastern Asia-analogies which indicate an ancient communication, and are not simply the result of that uniform condition in which all nations are found in the dawn of civilization." -(Humboldt's critical examination, vol. 2, p. 68) Native Races of Pacific States, vol. 5, p. 30.

Prescott's conclusions are: "That the coincidence are sufficiently strong to authorize a belief that the civilization of Anahuacica was in some degree influenced by that of eastern Asia. And, secondly, that the discrepancies are such as to carry back the communication to a very remote period; so remote, that this foreign influence has been too feeble to interfere materially with the growth of what may be regarded, in its essential features, as a peculiar and indigenous civilization."—Conquest of Mexico, vol. 3, p. 418.

Mexico, vol. 3, p. 418.

Dr. Wilson says: "If, as I believe, the continent was peopled from Asia, it was necessarily by younger nations. But its civilization was native growth, and so was far younger than that of Egypt."—Prehistoric Man, p. 615.

Upon the source of immigration to this continent Col. Smith says: "That immigration was continuous for ages from the east of Asia, is sufficiently indicated by the pressure of nations, so far as it is known in America, being always from the north-west coasts, eastward and southward, to the beginning of the thirteenth century."—Human Species, p. 238.

Dupaix says: "That America was peopled from Asia, the cradle of the human race, can no longer be doubted, but how, and when they came is a problem that can not be solved."—Rel. 2d exped., p. 28.

Gallatin says: "After making every proper allowance I can not see any possible reason that should have prevented those, who after the dispersion of mankind moved towards the east and north-east, from having reached the extremities of Asia, and passed over to America within five hundred years after the flood. However small may have been the number of those first immigrants, an equal number of years would have been more than sufficient to occupy in their own way every part of America."- American Ethnology, vol. 1, p. 179.

Again the same author says: "America was probably first peopled from Asia, but the memory of that ancient migration was lost."—Ibid, pps. 158-9.

Carbajal Espinosa says: "There are strong resemblances in all things with Asiatic nations; less in languages than in other respects, but more with Asia than with any other part of the world. Anatomical resemblances point the same way." -History of Mexico, vol. 1, pps. 196-203.

Venegas says: "The Americans most probably came from Asia soon after the dispersion and confusion of tongues; but there has been found no clear notice among them of Asia, or of their passage to this continent, nor in Asia of any such migration."-Notes on California, vol. 1, p.

And upon this theme we find that Mr. Priest has much to inform us: "But the authors of the great works found in the west, seem to have retained the first ideas received from their fathers at the era of the building of Babel, equally, if not superior, to many nations of Europe, as they were in the year eight hundred after Christ. This is consented to on all hands, and even contended for by the historian Humboldt. We give the tradition of the Aztec nation. The tradition commences with an account of the deluge, as they had preserved it in books made of buffalo and deer skin, on which account there is more certainty than if it had been preserved by mere oral tradition, handed down from father to son. They begin by painting, or as we would say, by telling us that Noah, whom they call Tezpi, saved himself, with his wife, whom they call Xochiquetzal, on a raft or canoe. Is not this the ark? The raft or canoe rested on or at the foot of a mountain, which they call Colhuacan. Is not this Ararat? men born after the deluge were born dumb. Is not this the confusion of language at the tower of Babel? A dove from the top of a tree distributes language to them, in the form of an olive leaf. Is not this the dove of Noah, which returned with that leaf in her mouth as related in Genesis? They say, that on this raft, beside Tezpi and his wife, were several children and animals, with grain, the preservation of which was of importance to mankind. Is not this in almost exact accordance with what was saved in the ark with Noah, as stated in Genesis? When the Great Spirit, Tezcatlipoca, ordered the waters to withdraw, Tezpi sent out from his raft a vulture, which never returned, on account of the great quantity of dead carcasses which it found to feed upon. Is not this the raven of Noah, which did not return when it was sent out the second time, for the very reason here assigned by the Mexicans? Tezpi sent other birds, one of which was the humming bird; this bird alone returned, holding in its beak a branch covered with leaves. Is not this the dove? Tezpi seeing that fresh verdure clothed the earth, now quitted his raft near the mountain Colhuacan. Is not this an allusion to Ararat of Asia? They say the tongues which the dove gave to mankind, were infinitely varied, which when they received, they immediately dispersed. But among them there were fifteen heads or chiefs of families, which were permitted to speak the same language, and these were the Toltecs, the Aculhucans and Aztec nations, who embodied themselves together, which was very natural, and traveled, they knew not where, but at length arrived in the country of Aztalan or the lake country."-American Atiquities, pps. 100, 200.

The same author says, relative to the paintings of the natives: "Among the vast number of painted representations found by this author, (Humboldt) on the books of the natives, made also frequently of prepared skins of animals, were delineated all the leading circumstances and history of the deluge, of the fall of man and of the seduction of the woman by means of the serpent, the first murder as perpetrated by Cain on the person of his brother Abel."

-Ibid, p. 200.

In reading the above it seems like the Book of Mormon in a perverted state, or the attempt of some one to present the same facts under cover of novel word paintings. We again quote from Priest: "As favoring this idea of their coming immediately from the region of the tower of Babel, their tradition goes on to inform us that the tongues distributed by this bird were infinitely various and dispersed over the earth; but that it so happened that fifteen heads of families were permitted to speak the same language; these are the same shown on the plate. These traveled till they came to a country which they called Aztalan, supposed to be in the region of the now United States, according to Humboldt. As favoring the idea, we notice the word Aztalan signifies in their language, water, or a country of much water. Now, no country on earth better suits this appellation, than the western country, on account of the vast number of lakes found there. If so, it is evident that the Indians are not the first people who found their way to this country. Among these ancient nations are found many more traditions corresponding to the accounts given by Moses respecting the creation, the fall of man by means of a serpent, the murder of Abel by his brother, etc., all of which are denoted by their paintings as found by the earlier travelers among them, since the discovery of America by Columbus, and carefully copied from their books or prepared hides, which may be called parchments, after the manner of the ancients of the earliest ages."—Ibid, pp. 202, 203.

"The Chiapenecs of Central America claim to have been the first people of the New World, that according to the traditions of the Chiapenecs there was a Votan who was the grandson of the man who built the ark to save himself and family from the deluge; he was one of those who undertook to build the tower that should reach to heaven. The Lord ordered him to people America. He came from the east."-Atlantis, p. 313.

"Montesinos tells us that at some time near the date of the deluge, in other words, in the highest antiquity, America was invaded by a people with four leaders, named Ayar-mancotopa, Ayar-chaki, Ayar-aucca and Ayar-uyssu."—Atlantis p. 391.

This corresponds with the statement found in the Book of Mormon concerning the four sons of Lehi, who became the four leaders, namely Laman, Lemuel, Sam and Nephi. Thus the truth is reflected in the taditions of the Indian. "Clavigero, in his history of Mexico says, that among the Chiapanec Indians was found an ancient manuscript in the language of that country, made by the Indians themselves, in which it was said, according to their ancient tradition, that a certain person named Votan, was present at that great building which was made by order of his uncle, in order to mount up to heaven; that then every people was given its language, and that Votan himself was charged by God to make the division of the land of Anahuac.—So Noah divided the earth among his sons. Votan may have been Noah."

"Of the ancient Indians of Cuba, several historians of America relate, that when they were interrogated by the Spaniards concerning their origin, they answered, they had heard from their ancestors, that God created the heavens and the earth and all things; that an old man having foreseen the deluge with which God designed to chastise the sins of men, built a large canoe, and embarked in it with his family, and many animals; that when the inundation ceased, he sent out a raven, which, because it found food suited to its nature to feed upon, never returned to the canoe; that he then sent out a pigeon, which soon returned, bearing a branch of the Hoba tree, a certain fruit tree of America in its mouth; that when the old man saw the earth dry, he disembarked, and having made himself wine of the wood grape, he became intoxicated and fell asleep; that one of his sons made ridicule of his nakedness, and that another son piously covered him; that upon waking, he blessed the latter and cursed the former."-American Antiquities, p. 203.

The foregoing is almost as comprehensive as the Bible account. The same author further states: "Many of the nations of America, says Clavigero, have the same tradition, agreeing nearly to what we have related."—Ibid, p. 204.

Ellen Russel Emerson says: "The Indian symbols are, as has been shown, like those of the older eastern races. Statues and hieroglyphics of the most ancient character, the purpose and meaning of which have been heretofore unknown, are those whose resemblance to the devices of the Indians is most complete."-

Indian Myths, p. 300.

Her translation of the Lenni-Lenape tradition of the deluge is most intensely interesting, and is as follows: "Long ago came the powerful serpent, when men had become evil. The strong serpent was the foe of the beings and they became em-broiled, hating each other. Then they fought and despoiled each other, and were not peaceful. And the small men fought with the keeper of the dead. Then the strong serpent resolved all men and beings to destroy immediately. The black serpent monster brought the snake-water rushing. The wide waters rushing wide to the hills, everywhere spreading, everywhere destroying. At the island of the turtle was Manabozho, of men and beings the grandfather. Being born creeping, at turtle land he is ready to move and dwell. Men and beings all go forth on the flood of waters, moving afloat every way, seeking the back of the turtle. The monsters of the sea were many and destroyed some of them. Then the daughter of a spirit helped them in a boat, and all joined, saying, come, help! Manabozho, of all beings, of men and turtles, the grand-father. All together, on the turtle then, the men then, were all together. frightened, Manabozho prayed to the turtle that he would make all well again. Then the waters ran off, it was dry on mountain and plain, and the great evil went elsewhere by the path of the cave." —Ibid, p. 355.

"The Ojibway Indians also possessed similar records."—Ibid, p. 352.

Mark well the proof of kinship: "Since a mystery still surrounds this race, [the Assyrians] from which sprang the Chaldeans and, according to Judith, the Jewish race, it is of more than passing interest, when is found a similitude between their legends and symbols and those of the North American Indians. A comparison of Assyrian with Indian records reveals a kinship between two worlds of primeval savagery, disclosing a leaven of religion, destined like a fiery seed to burn off the husk of barbaric worship."—Ibid, p. 388.

"From an analysis of these words of synonymous meaning, it appears that the Chaldeans and Babylonians agree in their conception of the primordial condition, while the principal feature of the Babylonian and Indian legends are similar."-

Ibid, p. 389.

Again she says: "Combined with the account of the creation among the tablets of Babylon, a Mr. Smith found fragments of a series of stories, in which the various animals speak and act, as depicted in similar fables in Hindoo and American Indian literature."—Ibid, p. 389.

I accept without qualification the first principle of our fathers that every boy born into the world should be put in the way of maintaining himself in independence. No education which does not make this its first aim is worth anything at all. There are but three ways of living one has asid, "By working, by begging, or by stealing."
Those who do not work, disguise it in whatever flowery language we please, are doing one of the The practical necessities must take precedence of the intellectual.

THE AGNOSTIC CREED.

THE following is from Prof. Huxley's article in the Nineteenth Century:]

I was brought up in the strictest school of evangelical orthodoxy, and when I was old enough to think for myself I started upon my journey of inquiry with little doubt about the general truth of what I had been taught, and with that feeling of unpleasantness of being called an "infidel" which, we are told, is so right and proper. Near my journey's end I find myself in a condition of something more than mere doubt about these matters. Looking back nearly fifty years I see myself as a boy whose education had been interrupted, and who, intellectually, was left for some years altogether to his own chances. At that time I was a voracious and omnivorous reader; a dreamer and speculator of the first water, well endowed with that splendid courage in attacking any and every subject which is the blessed compensation of youth and inexperience.

Among the books and essays on all sorts of topics, from metaphysics to heraldry, which I read at this time, two left indelible impressions on my mind. One was Guizot's "History of Civilization;" the other was Sir William Hamilton's essay "On the Philosphy of the Unconditioned," which I came upon by chance in an odd volume of the Edinburg Review. latter was certainly strange reading for a boy, and I could not possibly have understood a great deal of it; nevertheless I devoured it with avidity, and it stamped upon my mind the strong conviction that on even the most solemn and important of questions men are apt to take cunning phrases for answers, and that the limitation of our faculties, in a great number of cases, renders real answers to such questions not merely actually impossible but theoretically impossible.

Philosophy and history, having laid hold of me in this eccentric fashion, have never loosened their grip. I have no pretension to be an expert in either subject, but the turn for philosophical and historical reading, which rendered Hamilton and Guizot attractive to me, has not only filled many lawful leisure hours, and still more sleepless ones, with the repose of changed mental occupation, but has not unfrequently disputed my proper worktime with my liege lady, Natural Science. In this way I have found it possible to cover a good deal of ground in the territory of philosophy. The reader will now see why my mind steadily gravitated toward the conclusions of Hume and Kant.

When I reached intellectual maturity and began to ask myself whether I was an atheist, a theist, or a pantheist; a materialist or an idealist; a Christian or a free-thinker, I found that the more I learned and reflected the less ready was the answer, until at last I came to the conclusion that I had neither art nor part with any of these denominations except the last. thing in which most of these good people were agreed was the one thing in which I differed from them. They were quite sure they had attained a certain "gnosis"-had, more or less successfully, solved the problem of existence—while I was quite sure I had not, and had a pretty strong conviction that the problem was insoluble. This was my situation when I had the good fortune to find a place among the members of the Metaphysical Society. of my colleagues were -ists of one sort or another. I, who was a man without a rag of a label to cover myself with, felt like a fox who had lost his tail. So I took thought and invented what I conceived to be the appropriate title of agnostic. It came into my head as suggestively antithetic to the gnostic of church history, who professed to know so much about the very things of which I was ignorant, and I took the earliest opportunity of parading it at our society, to show that I, too, had a tail like the other foxes. To my great satisfaction the term took.

Agnosticism is not a creed, but a method, the essence of which lies in the rigorous application of a single principle. The principle is of great antiquity. It is as old as Socrates; as old as the writer who said "Try all things, hold fast by that which is good;" it is the foundation of the reformation, which simply illustrated the axiom that every man should be able to give a reason for the faith that is in him; it is the great principle of Descartes; it is the fundamental axiom of modern science. Positively the principle may be expressed: In matters of the intellect follow your reason as far as it will take you without regard to any other consideration. And negatively, in matters of the intellect, do not pretend that conclusions are certain which are not demonstrated or demonstrable. That I take to be the agnostic faith, which if a man keep whole and undefiled, he shall not be ashamed to look the universe in the face, whatever the future may have in store for him. The only obligation accepted is to have a mind always open to conviction. If you were to find an agnostic who never failed in carrying out his principles, and to tell men that you had discovered that two and two make five, he would patiently ask you to state your reasons for that conviction and express his readiness to agree with you if he found them satisfactory. The apostolic injunction to "suffer fools gladly" should be the rule of life of a true agnostic. I am deeply conscious how far I myself fall short of this ideal, but it is my personal conception of what agnostics ought to be.

I know no study which is so unutterably saddening as that of the evolution of humanity, as it is set forth in the annals of history. Out of the darkness of pre-historic ages man emerges with the marks of his lowly origin strong upon him. He is a brute, only more intelligent than the other brutes; a blind prey to impulses, which as often as not lead him to destruction; a victim to endless illusions, which make his mental existence a terror and a burden, and fill his physical life with barren toil and battle. He attains a certain degree of physical comfort and develops a more or less workable theory of life in such favorble situations as the plains of Mesopotamia and of Egypt and then for thousands and thousands of years struggles with varying fortune, attended by infinite wickedness, bloodshed and misery, to maintain himself at this point against the greed and ambition of his fellow-men. He makes a point of killing and otherwise persecuting those who first try to get him to move on, and when he has moved on a step foolishly confers post mortem deification on his victims. He exactly repeats the process with all who want to move a step yet farther, and the best men of the best epochs are simply those who make the fewest blunders and commit the fewest sins.

In the course of other inquiries I have had to do with fossil remains which looked quite plain at a distance, and became more and more indi-tinct as I tried to define their outline by close inspection. There was something there-something which, if I could win assurance about it, might mark a new epoch in the history of the earth, but, study as long as I might, certainly eluded my grasp. So has it been with my efforts to define the grand figure of Jesus, as it lies in the primary strata of Christian literature. Is he the kindly peaceable Christ depicted in the Catacombs? Or is he the stern judge who frowns above the altar of SS. Cosmas and Damianus? Or can he be rightly represented in the bleeding ascetic, broken down by physical pain, of too many medieval pictures? Are we to accept the Tesus of the second or the Jesus of the fourth gospel as the true What did he really say and do, and how much that is attributed to him in speech and action is the embroidery of the various parties into which his followers tended to split themselves within twenty years of his death, when even the three-fold tradition was only nascent?

That one should rejoice in the good man, forgive the bad man, and pity and help all men to the best of one's ability, is surely indisputable. It is the glory of Judaism and of Christianity to have proclaimed this truth, through all their aberrations. I verily believe that the good which has been effected by Christianity has been largely counteracted by the pestilent doctrine on which all the churches have insisted that honest disbelief in their more or less astonishing creeds is a moral offense -indeed, a sin of the deepest dve, deserving and involving the same future retribution as murder and robbery. If we could only see in one view the torrents of hypocrisy and cruelty, the lies, the slaughter, the violations of every obligation of humanity, which have flowed from this source along the course of the history of Christian nations, our worst imaginations of hell would pale beside the vision. I am much disposed to think that the encouragement, the consolation, and the peace afforded to earnest believers in even the worst forms of Christianity are of great practical advantage to them. What deductions must be made from this gain on the score of the harm done to the citizen, the ruler, legislator, the philosopher, and the consciscientious soul, I need not now consider; but they are assuredly not small. If agnostics lose heavily on the one side they gain a good deal on the other.

Whoso calls to mind what I may venture to call the bright side of Christianity; that ideal of manhood, with its strength and its patience; its justice and its pity for human frailty; its helpfulness to the extremity of self-sacrifice; its ethical purity and nobility; which apostles have pictured, in wich armies of martyrs have placed their unshakable faith, and whence obscene [ill-omened?] men and women, like Catherine of Sienna and John Knox, have derived the courage to rebuke popes and kings, is not likely to under-rate the importance of the Christian faith as a factor in human history, or to doubt that if that faith should prove to be incompatible with our knowledge, or necessary want of knowledge, some other hypostasis of men's hopes, genuine enough and worthy enough to replace it, will arise. But the incongruous mixture of bad science with eviscerated papistry, the new anthropolatry known as positivism, will not climb into the vacant shrine. When the positivist asks me to worship "humanity"—that is to say, to adore the generalized conception of men as they ever have been and probably ever will be-I must reply that I could just as soon bow down and worship the generalized conception of a "wilderness of

I had, and have, the firmest conviction that I never left the "verace via"-the straight road; and that this road led nowhere else but into the dark depths of a wild and tangled forest. And though I have found leopards and lions in the path; though I have made abundant acquaintance with the hungry wolf that "with privy paw devours apace and nothing said," as another great poet said of the ravening beast; and though no friendly specter has ever yet offered his guidance. I was, and am, minded to go straight on, until I either come out on the other side of the wood, or find there is no other side to it, at least none attainable by me.—Chicago Times.

THE BIBLICAL HADES.

BY SAMUEL T. SPEAR, D. D.

THE term Hades, placed at the head of this article, is an anglicised Greek word that occurs eleven times in the Greek New Testament, and, with a single exception, is, in the common English version of the Testament, translated by the word Hell. This is an unfortunate, and, indeed, an erroneous translation, since the latter term, is, by common usage, applied only to the place of punishment to which the wicked go after death. The Revised Version of the New Testament avoids this error by simply anglicising the Greek word Hades and using Hell to translate the Greek term Gehenna, which, in the time of Christ and his apostles, was employed by the Jews to designate the place for the future punishment of the wicked. Our Savior, in speaking to the Jews, adopted this term, and used it in the sense which is now commonly attached to the word Hell.

Etymologically considered, the term Hades is derived from the Greek letter Alpha, used as a privative, and a Greek verb which signifies to see, and hence means that which is not seen. This term was by the Jews applied, in a general sense to the invisible world or abode, in which human spirits, subsequently to death and prior to the resurrection and final judgment, were supposed to exist separately from their bodies, without reference to the question whether they were good or bad, happy or miserable, rewarded or punished. The corresponding word in the Hebrew language is Sheol, and in the Septuagint version of the Old Testament, Hades is used to translate Sheol. There is no word in the English language that is the exact equivalent of these terms. Hell, in the generally received sense, is not such an equivalent.

The Greeks employed the term Hades in the same general sense in which Hades and Sheol were used among the Tews, and had their Elysium as the particular abode of the good and also their Tartarus as the abode of the wicked, both of which, though different abodes, were regions in Hades separated from each other. Tartarus corresponds with the English term Hell in the usually accepted sense of the latter; and Elysium also corresponds with the word Paradise in the sense in which Christ used this term when he said to the penitent thief: "To-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise," (Luke 23:43). The Greek term Tartarus occurs nowhere in the New Testament; yet Peter, in his second Epistle, uses the verb derived from this noun to represent the abode and condition of the angels that sinned, and whom, as he declares, God cast "down to Hell, [Tartarus,] and delivered them into chains of darkness, to be reservunto judgment" (2 Pet. 2: 4). These fallen angels were, according to this description, in that region of Hades which the Greeks called Tartarus, and for which Gehenna was the title among the Jews, and were there waiting for the final judgment.

Dr Robinson in his "Greek and English Lexicon," says:

"According to the notions of the Hebrews, Hades was a vast, subterranean receptacle, where the souls of the dead existed in a separate state until the resurrection of their bodies. The region of the blessed during this interval, or the inferior Paradise, they supposed to be in the uttermost part of this receptacle, while beneath was the abyss, or Gehenna, Tartarus, in which the souls of the wicked were subjected to punishment."

Dr. Meyer, in his "Commentary on the Gospel of Luke," p. 478, says:

"Hades corresponds to the Hebrew Sheol, which in the LXX [the Septuagint version of the Old Testament] is translated by Hades, and hence denote the whole subterranean place of abode of departed souls, divided into Paradise (23:43) for the pious, and Gehenna for the Godless."

Dr. Gloag in his Commentary on the Acts of the Apostles," vol. 1, p. 106, says:
"The souls both of the righteous and the wicked are in Hades; the former inhabiting the region of the blessed, or Paradise; the latter being confined in the dungeon of Tartarus."

The Jews, as also the Greeks, clearly had the idea of an invisible world or place of abode to which human spirits go when by death they leave their bodies of flesh and blood, and in which they exist separately from these bodies; and this idea the Jews expressed by the terms Hades and Sheol. Both these terms are a declaration of belief in spiritual existence after death, separately from the body, and prior to the resurrection at the final day. This existence, sometimes designated as the intermediate state-namely, the state intervening between death and the resurrection-was not regarded as as a conditon of unconsciousness, but rather of consciousness; and, as indicated by the terms Paradise and Gehenna, a state of happiness or misery according to antecedent conduct and character when in a body. Christ and his apostles spoke to people who had such ideas, and to these ideas made reference in their public ministry. What did they say? The following is the answer to this ques-

1. Christ, when upbraiding "the cities wherein most of his mighty works were done because they repented not," spoke thus in regard to Capernaum:

"And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted unto Heaven shalt be brought down to Hell [Hades]; for if the mighty works, which have been done in thee, had been done in Sodom, it would have remained until this day. But I say unto you, that it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom in the day of judgment than for thee" (Matt. 11: 23, 24) "And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted to Heaven, shalt be thrust down to Hell" [Hades] (Luke 10: 15, 24.)

Heaven and Hell or Hades are here placed in contrast: the former being used to set forth the exalted privileges of Capernaum by reason of the personal ministry of Christ, and the latter also used to indicate the destruction and desolation of that city as the consequence of not improving these privileges. Heaven being conceived of as high, and Hades as low, or far under the ground, both terms as thus contrasted were suited to convey this idea, and were so used by the Savior. A similar contrast between Heaven as high and Hades or Sheol as found in other parts of the Bible, (Job 11:8; and Amos 9:2). Such a contrast, in itself considered, makes no reference to punishment after death. It simply conveys the idea, whatever it may be, that was intended to be conveyed by the contrast.

Our Savior, however, in this case, adds a supplementary thought when looking forward to "the day of judgment," and speaking of the people of Capernaum as they will appear in that day, he declares that it will then be more tolerable for the inhabitants of Sodom than for them. Their guilt in not profiting by his preaching was greater than that of the Sodomites; and hence they will in the final judgment deserve and receive severer punishment. This is a thought added to the bringing down of Capernaum as a city to Hades or hell.

2. Jesus, on a certain occasion, put to his disciples this question: "But whom say ye that I am?" Peter replied: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." Jesus then said to Peter:

"Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona; for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in Heaven. And, I say unto thee, That thou art Peter, and, upon this rock will I build my Church; and the gates of Hell [Hades] shall not prevail against it."—Matt. 16:

Here Hell or Hades is conceived of as a place of abode, which was the Jewish idea, and as having gates of entrance thereto. The idea intended to be conveyed is that the Church of Christ would be preserved and perpetuated as against any destruction by an entrance through these gates. It would not, like Capernaum, be "brought down to Hell," or Hades, and would not pass through the gates thereof, or be swallowed up therein, and thus disappear from the earth. It would remain upon the rock on which Christ declared that he would build it. The phrase "gates of Hell" was a fitting form of words for this idea.

3. Jesus, having in the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, spoken of Lazarus as dying and being "carried by the angels into Abraham's bosom," proceeded to say:

"The rich man also died and was buried; and in Hell [Hades] he lifted up his eyes, being in torments."—Luke 16:22, 23.

The fundamental conception of this parable is the contrast between the rich man and Lazarus, as they were in this world, and as they are when both have passed into Hades or the invisible world. Their respective conditions in the latter are just the reverse of what they were in the Though both are in Hades, the one has the society and companionship of Abraham, who is also there, while the other, in a different part of Hades, is represented as "being in torments." one is in Paradise, and the other in Gehenna, or the place in Hades for the punishment of the wicked. "A great gulf" intervenes between them, making it impossible for either to go to the place of the other. It is implied in the parable that Lazarus was a godly man, and that the rich man was godless. The doctrine of punishment for godless men in Hades, and in that portion called Tartarus by the Greeks, and Gehenna by the Jews, and also of reward for godly men in Paradise, is clearly taught in this parable. All men pass into Hades when they die; but whether they go to Paradise or Gehenna, depends on their spiritual condition. Reward and punishment in Hades, prior to the resurrection, lie upon the very face of the scene which Christ presents; and to one or the other of these conditions men are consigned at death, and before the final judgment of the race as elsewhere taught in the Bible.

4. Peter, in his address to the Jews on the day of Pentecost, quoted the following words from one of the Psalms of David:

"I foresaw the Lord always before my face; for he is on my right hand that I shall not be moved; therefore did my heart rejoice, and my tongue was glad; moreover also my flesh shall rest in hope; because thou wilt not leave my soul in Hell [Hades], neither wilt thou suffer thine Holy One, to see corruption."—Ps. 16:8—10, and Acts 2:25–27.

Commenting on the passage thus quoted, Peter proceeded to say:

"Men and brethren, let me freely speak unto you of the patriarch David, that he is both dead and buried, and his sepulcher is with us unto this day. Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne; he, seeing this before, spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in Hell [Hades], neither his flesh did see corruption."—Acts 2:29-31.

Peter here applies the language quoted to Christ, and makes it prophetic of his resurrection from the dead, and thus proves to the Jews the fact of such a resurrection. The human soul of Christ, though going to Hades at the time of his death, was not according to the prophecy, as Peter explains the passage, to be left there, but was to return back to his body, and again inhabit that body. The body would see no corruption. Being raised from the dead, it would again become the residence of the soul which had departed therefrom. The soul of Christ went to Paradise in Hades and not to Gehenna or the place of "torments;" and in that Paradise the penitent thief was with him on the same day. Hades, as here used, plainly does not mean the place of punishment in respect to either Christ or the penitent thief.

In the Apostles' Creed it is said of Christ that "he descended into Hell."
This means that his human soul at death, being separated from the body, passed into the post-mortem abode of human spirits, and into that part of this abode which he himself called paradise. Hell, in the ordinary sense of this term, has no application to him.

5. Paul, having, in the fifteenth chapter of the Frst Epistle to the Corinthians, considered the doctrine of the resurrection, finally breaks forth in the following exultant strain.

"O, death, where is thy sting? O grave [Hades], where is thy victory?" (1 Cor.

Here Hades is, in the common English Version of the New Testament, translated by the term grave, which is not the proper meaning of Hades, although Sheol, the corresponding Hebrew word, is sometimes so translated in the Old Testament. The Revised Version of the New Testament renders the passage as follows:

"O death, where is thy victory? O death, where is thy sting?"

This, though not essentially changing the sense of the passage, rests on the better authority as to the original text.

6. Christ, in the personal manifestation of himself to John on the Isle of Patmos, thus described himself:

"I am he that liveth, and was dead; and, behold, I am alive for evermore. Amen; and have the keys of hell [Hades] and of death." (Rev. 1:18.)

The obvious meaning of the words "And have the keys of Hell [Hades] and of death," is that Christ has full power over Hades and death, and can deliver therefrom, and consign thereto, at his pleasure. Death in this world and Hades or the invisible world are alike subject to his supreme control. He holds the keys of power in respect to both.

7. John says, in respect to one of his symbolic visions:

"And I looked, and behold a pale horse; and his name that sat on him was Death, and Hell [Hades] followed with him."

(Rev. 6: 8.)

Here death and Hades, both being personified, are grouped together as companions, the latter following after the former. Death riding on the "pale horse" is attended by Hades as an inseparable companion. The meaning is that the spirit at death passes into Hades. The scene connected with the opening of the fourth seal indicated a great destruction of life by death, and this would be followed by a corresponding passage of the dead into Hades. The two are hence connected together in the symbolic vision of John.

8. The same apostle says in respect to a vision which he had of the resurrection and the final judgment of the race:

"And I saw the dead, small and great, stand before God; and the books were opened; and another book was opened, which is the book of life; and the dead were judged out of those things which were written in the book, according to their works. And the sea gave up the dead which were in it; and death and hell [Hades] delivered up the dead which were in them; and they were judged every man according to their works. And death and hell [Hades] were cast into the lake of fire. This is the second death. And whosoever was not found written in the book of life was cast into the lake of fire." (Rev.

These words clearly refer to the resurrection of the dead and the final judgment of the world, as taught by Christ in the days of his flesh. (John 5: 28, 29, and Matt. 25: 31-46.) All the dead stand before God for judgment: and the books are opened, including "the book of life." Death and Hell [Hødes] are personified, and represented as delivering "up the dead which are in them." The result of this judgment is, that those whose names are "not found written in the book of life," are "cast into the lake of fire." This is defined to be "the second death." "The lake of fire," is terrific imagery to represent the final punishment of the wicked. The Savior himself used the same imagery when he declared that he would say to those on his left hand, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels," (Matt. 25:41).

This embraces all the passages in which the word Hades, with a single exception, translated Hell in the common English version, occurs in the Greek text of the New Testament. Hades, or the invisible world-considered as the abode or place to which departed spirits go at death, and in which they exist as conscious beings in the condition of happiness or misery according to their conduct and character when in the body, prior to the resurrection and final judgment of the race, and separately from the bodies which they had on earth—is by no means merely a heathen or a Jewish fancy, but a Biblical reality; as much so as is the earth or the planet Jupiter, or the solar system an astronomical reality. The fact that it is not discoverable by the naked eye, or by the telescope, does not make it any the less real. Man, when he dies, goes, as to his spirtual nature, to Hades, and there consciously exists, as truly as he ever removed from one place to another, and as truly as he ever consciously existed in this world. This Hades is not only a condition, but a place of abode, and in both respects rests, as to its reality upon the teachings of the Bible.

The Materialism that excludes from man all conscious existence after death, while contradicted by the general faith of the race and utterly without any proof at the bar of reason, has absolutely no standing in the word of God. The Hades to which that word commits itself, no matter when or where the idea first originated, settles the question that man, in his soul nature, has a post-mortem life, and that that life begins with and at the event of death. Death then, as to the question of existence, is simply the passage of the soul into Hades, and not at all its extinction. Let this fact be sounded with the loudest emphasis through all the chambers of human Brooklyn, N. Y. thought.

Conserence Minutes.

FREMONT.

Conference met at Ross School-house Saturday, February 9th, Henry Kemp presiding, T. A. Hougas clerk, pro tem Branches reported: Plum Creek, Elm Creek, Union, Shenandoah, Farm Creek and Keystone. Elders reported: H. Kemp, D. Hougas, W. Leeka, Bro. Hershey, W. Gaylord, Bro. Benedict, M. W. Gavlord, G. Kemp and Bro. Dykes. Priests: J. B. Cline, Bro. Wolsev, L. Donaldson. Teachers: J. Good and S. Dykes. District secretary reported, also the Bishop's agent. Motion prevailed to sustain Brn. H. Kemp as district president, W. C. Matthews as clerk, W. Leeka as Bishop's agent and all the authorities of the church. Here Bro. H. Kemp stated that he was impressed that Brn. A. Badham and T. A. Hougas should be ordained priests, and that there was a work for them to do. After a brotherly discussion of the matter a motion was carried "to request the Farm Creek branch to take action on the matter."

Delegates to the General Conference, H. Kemp, D. Hougas, W. Leeka, S. S. Wilcox and M. W. Gaylord. It was resolved that the delegates ask the General Conference to return Bro. H. Kemp to this mission. It was resolved that we bear Bro. Kemp's expenses and that the matter of collection be referred to branch presidents. (Branch presidents please take notice and act accordingly.) Bro. T. A. Hougas spoke at length of the absence and death of father John Good, and submitted the following resolutions: "Whereas, It has seemed best to the Lord of Hosts to call from our midst one of our vetern brethren; one who was ever a lover and supporter of the work, and one who lived and died strong in the faith of the gospel; Therefore be it resolved, That we as brethren in conference assembled extend our heartfelt sympathy to Mother Good and the remainder of the bereaved family in this their hour of affliction, and that the prayers of the Saints be given in their behalf, for their comfort, and for the strengthening of their faith." Adjourned to Farm Creek, June 8th and 9th.

DES MOINES.

Conference convened at Boonesborough, March 8th. President of district being absent, Bro. J. S. Roth presided, W. Thompson assistant, H. A. McCoy secretary, Bro. Roger assistant. Branch reports: Edenville 75; I died. Sheridan 66. What Cheer 23; I baptized. Newton 47; I died. Des Moines Valley 55; I received. Keystone 28. Boonesborough 62; 4 baptized, 3 received, I expelled. Union 25; 7 baptized, 4 received. Elders reports: J. S. Roth (baptized 10), N. Stamm (baptized 2). S. McBirnie, (baptized 4), J. X. Davis, W. Thompson, J. Sayer, W. S. Barbee, W. C. Nirk, R. Nelson, W. McBirnie. Priests, J. Troughear and J. Botts. Teachers, J. Coiner, J. W. Walters and J. Clark. Deacons, H. Pratt and R. McBirnie. Resolved that hereafter all officers shall report in writing, stating amount of labor performed by them and condition of things under their charge. J. S. Roth, Bishop's Agent, reports: On hand last report $84,73: collected $689,56, total $774,29; paid out $689,56; balance $84,73. Report accepted. W. Nirk was sustained as president for six months; W. Thompson as vice president; J. S. Roth as Bishop's and Book Agent, and H. A. McCoy as secretary. J. S. Roth was elected delegate to General Conference with instructions to vote for the next General Conference to be held at Lamoni. Resolved that we as a district follow the instructions of the General Conference regarding not dropping members from church records, and reporting them as scattered. Preaching by W. C. Nirk, W. C. Thompson and J. S. Roth. Adjourned to Rhodes, Friday, September 6th, at 7:30 p. m.

TENNESSEE AND KENTUCKY.

Conference convened Saturday, March 9th, P. B. Seaton presiding, S. L. Cooper clerk. Elders' reports: J. Thomas, W. H. Griffin, C. Scott, S. Reed, J. H. Adair, P. B. Seaton. Teacher, S. L. Cooper. Deacons, J. F. Roberts and F. Stephens. Branches: Foundry Hill 17. Farmington 26. Halley's Creek 12. Eagle Creek 28; 1 expelled. P. B. Seaton was elected Bishop's agent. One George H. Brush resided near Fulton, Kentucky, had not united with any branch nor been cut off from the church. John Thomas was chosen delegate to General Conference. This district requests of the General Conference that Bro. J. Thomas be returned to this field. J. McCline Ross was ordained Teacher of the Foundry branch. The authorities of the church were sustained and J. W. Gillen as our missionary in charge. Preaching on Sunday by J. Thomas. Peace and harmony prevailed. Adjourned to Farmington branch at call of president.

GALLAND'S GROVE.

Conference convened at Salem branch, February 15th, 16th and 17th, C. E. Butterworth president, J. Pett secretary. Branch reports: Mason's Grove, 122; 4 removed. Union 58; 9 received, 1 removed. Boyer Valley 73; 2 received, 2 removed. Salem 84; 1 died. Elders reporting were, W. Whiting, C. E. Butterworth, J. Hawley (baptized 5). J. Turner (baptized 1), J. W. Chatburn, C. Derry, W. W. Blair, J. Pett and G. Sweet. Priests, J. Bullard, J. Pearsall, S. Jordison, D. Brewster and Wm. Bullard. Teachers, T. Bell, R. Leythem, J. Cross and C. J. Hunt. Deacons, J. Baker and G. D. R. Jones was sustained as district president.

Miscellaneous.

TO THOSE WHO CIRCULATE THE VOICE OF WARNING.

For the past six months I have been so busy that I have done nothing with the Voice of Warning, except to fill orders. Since they have recently been mentioned in the Herald a large number of orders have come in for them, and it is plain from the expression of many of those ordering that they do not understand the design of this They seem to think that it nearly all consists in handing the books to some one who will read them. But this is not more than one-tenth of the work; the other nine-tenths consists in getting them back again, or selling them as the case may be. Those who have had from five to ten books heretofore, have had the best success; and many of them have sold enough of the books before they were worn out to pay for new books. thus making their part of this work self-sustain-This makes me feel certain that we can make it all self sustaining if all those who loan the books will carefully observe the suggestions in the forepart of the Memorandum books that are always given with the Voice of Warning. And I feel just as certain that it will never be a success until they do. During the year 1886-7, eighty seven persons ordered from five to forty books each, amounting to nine hundred and thirteen in all, not one of whom ever let me know whether they received the books or not. During the same time about twice that number of persons ordered books in about the same proportion, one half of whom sent in one report, the other half two reports, since which time I have not heard from any of them. Besides these, there is quite a large number who have made their part of this work self-sustaining, which makes me think that all can do so if they try.

I wish to say to those who think of sending for books, do not order more than five or ten until you have tried it. When you are certain that you can care for more they will be forwarded if I have them. Do not let the books go so far away that you can not get them again in two weeks, as that is long enough to leave a book in one place without enquiring after it, as they are generally laid away before that time. ject is to keep them at work. If any desire the book, sell them one. If not, loan it to another. The more you enquire after, and talk about the books, the more good they will do, if wisdom be used. Agitation is life, stagnation death. If the temperance workers did not agitate the cause of temperance they would accomplish nothing. Just so with the gospel or any other cause that has truth and right on its side. I wish to sell as many of the books as can be sold before they are lost or worn out and with that money buy new books to take their places. I fell that I have made a mistake in the past by not acting upon the advice given me by Brn. Joseph Smith and W. W. Blair which was to publish the progress of this work about every six months in the Herald. Had I done so, I think a good understanding might have been had by this time, and the book business been self-sustaining. Please observe the rules in the Memorandum book.

Yours in Christ,

Coleman, Michigan.

INVITATION.

I very respectfully request the loan or donation of such books, pamphlets, tracts and newspaper clippings as will furnish evidence in sustaining the statements of the Book of Mormon, relative to the civilization, arts and sciences of the ancient people of this continent. I have been, and am still engaged upon the subject of proving by antiquities and archaeological discoveries, that the Book of Mormon is just what it claims to be. I shall be very thankful to each and all for aid given. The object and end desired should be mutual with all those who believe the book to be true. R. M. Elvin, Box 224, Lamoni, Iowa.

NOTICE.

Being authorized, I hereby notify A. J. Willoughby to report or call for a letter of removal from the Eagle Creek branch of the Tennessee and Kentucky district; otherwise he will be dropped as a scattered member.

S. L. COOPER, Sec. of Dist.
[He should not be "dropped" but enrolled on the record as a scattered member, according to rule of General Conference.—Ed.]

MARRIED.

Wight-Stewart.—On January 26th, 1889, at Queensferry, Victoria, Australia, Elder J. W. Wight to sister Lizzie J. Stewart, daughter of the late Alexander Stewart, by Elder T. W. Smith.

LIZZE J. Stewart, Gaugiter of the late Alexander Stewart, by Elder T. W. Smith. CUTHBERT—STEWART.—At same time and place, by Elder T. W. Smith, Bro. George Cuthbert to sister Annie Stewart. The ceremony was performed in the presence of a large number of invited guests, in the Atheneum, at a feast prepared by the brother of the brides', Willie Stewart. Bro. Wight "came, and saw, and"—was "conquered." The common verdict seems to be that both couples are well mated, and bid fair to lead contented and happy lives. At the conclusion of the marriage services and the feast, Bro. Andrew Minnis, who had been investigating the faith for a long time, was married to the Lord in baptism and confirmation.

DIED.

CLARK.—David Clark was born May 28th, 1816, in Lancashire, England. He came to Nauvoo, Illinois, with relatives and friends and was baptized in the Mississippi river by Joseph Smith the prophet. In 1850 he took up the line of march with the wandering ones to the "Salt Land" and located where the town of Lehi now stands; the same year when Joseph the son of the Seer was called to the presidency of the church. Bro Clark responded to the call. He was baptized by Elder Thomas Job in the early days of the Reorganized Church. He lived and died true to his convictions. Few men have left a better record than Bro. Clark as two of his oldest neighbors in neat little speeches testified at the funeral. The affliction which caused his death vas long and painful—enlargement of the heart. He passed peacefully away on March 2d, 1889, and was laid to rest on the 3d. His friends, Goats and Evans and myself officiating at the funeral which was largely attended. A good and God blessed man has gone to rest and left a wife and two sons and three daughters to mourn their loss.

BLAKE.—Near Clarksdale, Missouri, February 28th, 1889, Flavius, son of Bro. and Sr. Samuel Blake. Born January 26th, 1880, and aged 9 years, 1 month and 2 days. He was sick for five days with conjection of the bowels. Buried at the DeKalb branch cemetery. Funeral sermon by Elder J. T. Kinneman.

Garner.—At his home, near Newport, Los Angeles county, California. February 26th 1889, Elder John Garner, Sen. Bro. Garner was born at Davidson. North Carolina, May 1st, 1820, and was at his death aged 68 years, 8 months and 26 days. The body was taken to San Bernardino, California, on the 27th, and was buried from the Saints church building, corner of Flith and G. streets, on the 28th, services beginning at eleven a m. Bro. Garner was formerly a citizen of San Bernardino, and was well known, commanded and deserved the respect of all, and his remains were followed to the grave by many of the citizens, his family and friends, all of whom sincerely mourned his departure. Services in charge of Elder Heman C. Smith, sermon by Pres Joseph Smith, from Acts 2nd.

SMITH.—Mrs. Eliza E., wife of W. B. Smith, who was stricken with paralysis some four weeks ago, died March 7th, 1889. Deceased was born in Cattaraugus county, New York, April 6th, 1827, thus being 61 years, 10 months and 19 days of age at the time of her death. In 1856 she was married at Kirtland, Ohio, to William B. Smith, and in 1860 they came to Clayton county, where they have since resided. Mrs. Smith was a woman of retiring disposition, yet during her nearly thirty years of residence in Clayton county she had made many warm friends, to whom her death will prove a severe shock. Quiet in her manners, she was accomodating to all, and was always ready to extend a helping hand to a neighbor or friend in distress, and many can testify to her noble character of soul and mind. By her death she leaves five grown children to mourn the loss of a kind and true mother, and an aged husband to travel the balance of life's journey alone. How great is his loss is not for tongue or pen to tell. Having traveled life's rugged road together for over thirty years it is a hard blow to be parted now. To these sorrow-ing ones we extend our heartfelt sympathies. The funeral took place from the Universalist Church on Saturday last, and it was largely attended. Rev. S. S. Cooley of the M. E. Church officiated, taking as a subject for his discourse, "The Resurrection." After the services her remains were laid to rest in the east side cemetery.

Mr. Smith and family desire us to return their heartfelt thanks to the neighbors and friends who rendered them assistance during the sickness and death of the wife and mother.—Elkader (Iowa) Register.

REAMS .-- On March 7th, 1889, of mumps, William Gurley, son of Bro. J. C. and Sr. Lucy Reams, aged 5 years and 9 months. Funeral sermon by Elder J.S. Roth, at the M. E. Church, assisted by the M. E. minister. There was a very large and sympathising congregation present who gave good attention.

BANTA .- Died, of paralysis and general debility, at his residence, in Lamoni, Iowa, at 7 a m., Tuesday, March 19th, 1889, Elder Elijah Banta, aged 66 years, 2 months and 14 days.

Elijah Banta was born in Shelby county, Kentucky, January 5th, 1823. His mother died when he was but six years of age, soon after which his father and family settled near Franklin, Johnson county, Indiana, where his father died in 1851. In 1844, being about 21 years of age, he united with a faction of the Latter Day Saints near Buffalo, Iowa, and soon after went to Pittsburg, Pennsylvania. At the latter place he became acquainted with and married Mrs. Emeline Hodges-Campbell, October 6th, 1846. Shortly after this himself and wife located in Franklin, Johnson county, Indiana, where he filled with acceptance many positions of public trust with honor and success, among them that of County Auditor, and State Representative. He also served a term in the armies of the Union. April 8th, 1863, he united with the Reorganized Church at Amboy, Illinois, since which he has been an active member of, and an important helper in the church. He presided with acceptance for many years over the Sandwich branch of the church; he prosecuted a successful mission to California in 1868-9, he became the first president and business manager of the United Order of Enoch, incorporated in 1871, and with brethren D. Dancer and I. L. Rogers, purchased land and located the order in Decatur county, Iowa, where he engaged actively in the interests of that corporation, also in making a home for himself and family in Fayette township. In 1876, without his consent or knowledge, he was nominated for County Supervisor and was elected by a fair ma-In 1883 he was elected to the Iowa State Legislature, leading in his own county the State ticket of his own party 189 votes. He has served the church in late years as branch president, as a member of the Board of Publication, (having served in Illinois, at times, as its president and business manager), and he has also served as a Counsellor to the Bishop, all of which shows the activity, energy, and faithfulness that ever has marked his character. His first wife died in Sandwich, Illinois, May 14th, 1876. He was again married November 29th, 1877, to Miss Hattie E. Crosby, to whom were born two sons and two daughters, all surviving him except their first born son.

As a faithful, helpful citizen, a kind, obliging neighbor, as an active, trustworthy business man, he had few equals. He was an affectionate, provident husband, a fond and loving father. was always most decided in his religious convic tions, and for that reason his zeal, at times, made him aggressive and outspoken, from which some have taken offense, though none was intended.

His religion was dearer to him than life. And as he drew near the hour of death, his quiet resignation, his perfect composure, and his immovable trust in Christ and His gracious gospel was most remarkable and cheering. Since about three years ago, when first stricken with paralysis, he often said to his intimate friends that his days were few in this world. Three weeks ago, when first confined to his bed, he freely expressed the opinion that he would not rally again. He retained his mental powers apparently to near or quite the last, though he had not strength to speak so he could be understood for some hours before his death. He suffered but little or no pain for many days and even weeks before his end. Death found him in the peaceful hush and solemn quiet of sleep-asleep in Jesus-and the supreme moment came to him as a sweet release. And we may trust that the angels came and bore away the chastened, tried soul of our beloved brother, neighbor, and dear friend, to God and His Christ, and to the great assembly of the redeemed in paradise.

A great and good man has fallen in Israel. An active, worthy citizen and a kind neighbor has passed away from the busy scenes of life. Let us emulate his virtues, be encouraged by his faith and zeal, and be comforted in his gospel triumph.

A funeral sermon was delivered in the Saints' Church to a large and sympathizing assemblage, at 2:30 p.m. by Elder W. W. Blair, assisted by Elders A. H. Smith and R. S. Salyards; and the remains were interred in Rose Hill Cemetery under the conduct of Elder David Dancer.

GAULTER.—Near Lamoni, Iowa, March 17th, 1889, Phebe, beloved daughter of Bro. and Sr. Lewis Gaulter, aged 30 years, 6 months and 21 Her health had been feeble and precarious for the past eleven years. About three years ago when on the very brink of death, the Lord spared her in answer to the prayers of her parents and kindred and the administration of Elders Gillen and Cochran. During all the years of her feebleness, and up to the very moment of her death, she exhibited patience, resignation and a loving, faithful trust in the Lord as her Helper and Savior, here and hereafter. Early on the morning of her demise, Elders Cochran and Stafford were called to administer to her. She was sitting in an easy chair when they arrived, and she bade them welcome and shook hands with them. Immediately all present bowand swint them. Immediately all present downled in prayer, and in a moment the Spirit of God came graciously and in power. As they arose, her sister, (Mrs. Witter), exclaimed, "She is gone!" And so it was, the pulseless form was left; but the tried Spirit of this child of God had departed, "and was carried by the angels" into the paradise of God. This is the first death in the family of Bro. and Sr. Gaulter—a family of eleven children. The esteem in which Sr. Phebe and her family are held was seen in the large attendance of friends and neighbors at the funeral, though the day was stormy and forbidding Funeral services were held in the Saints' Church, Lamoni, the afternoon of the 18th instant, under the management of Elder A. S. Cochran. Sermon by Elder W. W. Blair, assisted by Elder J. R. Lambert. The remains were buried in Rose Hill Cemetery.

DUTY.-At Peakville, Clark county, Missouri, March 2d, 1889, of old age, sister Mehitable Duty, in the 92d year of her age. She was born in Newberry, Orange county, Vermont, September 5th, 1796. Sister Duty was the mother of nine children, (one of whom is Sr. E. A. Newberry). She had twenty-six grandchildren, thirty-four great-grand-children, and one great-great-grandchild. She united with the church in an early day, in the state of Ohio, and received a Patriarchal blessing under the hands of father Joseph Smith, September 5th 1836, with the glorious promise of long life and great faith. She was truly a woman of great faith, and was blessed with other gifts of the gospel, realizing fully the fulfillment of the promises made. The persecutions in Missouri, and those that followed, were endured by her with steadfast faith, and when the Reorganization was effected, she increased her joy in the Lord by uniting with it, and being faithful to the end. The Herald was her only preacher for years. Some time before her death she had a beautiful vision of the kingdom to be given to the Saints of the Most High, they kneeling down to receive it, and then all saying "Amen." Her joy was that she had triumphed over all fear of death, and was ready and willing to go, cheered by the hope of a glorious resurrection. A short time before expiring she asked Sr. Newberry to "pray in faith that she might be easy a short time." The prayer was offered that the sting of death might be removed, and she then quietly fell asleep, and so passed away.

Thou hast left us, dear mother,
So lonely and drear;
Thou hast gone to bright mansions above;
Ah, this will our sad hearts ever cheer,
To move onward in faith hope and love.

Lines given by Sr. Newberry. Funeral sermon at Peakville church, by Elder James McKiernan; text, "I will ransom them from the power of the grave." A vastassembly attested the esteem in which the deceased was held by relatives and neighbors.

LAMBSON.—At Plattsmouth Nebraska, September 10th, 1888, Bro. Edwin H. Lambson, of a complication of diseases, after ten weeks suffering. He was baptized some sixteen years ago, by Elder Howard Smith. His earthly pilgrimage was 57 years, 4 months and 1 day. Funeral sermon by the Rev. Mr. Wright. He leaves a wife and five children. It was comforting to his family that he had no fear of the change called death, and expressed confidence in the restored gospel.

PRAYER UNION.

"Please state your views in regard to the 'Prayer Union' in the Herald." It is stated by some of the brethren that Bro. Joseph does not favor the Prayer Union; "because he never says anything about it in the Herald."

The foregoing is the substance of a request received lately from a sister.

It by no means follows that because Bro. Joseph does not mention a thing that is being done by the Saints in the different branches that he is opposed to that thing, or does not approve or sanction it.

It is practically none of Bro. Joseph's business whether the sisters do or do not meet at stated times, agreed upon among themselves, for the purpose of prayer for a given object, or for a season of spiritual communion and enjoyment in spiritual exercises. Or, if they choose, to engage in sewing rags, cutting and making garments, quilts, carpets, or whatever in their judgment may be advisable to be done to aid in charitable purposes. What business has Bro. Joseph or any other elder or member to interfere with any laudable enterprise or commendable labor which the mothers, wives, sisters and daughters of the church may choose to engage in?

Our opinion is that Dorcas Societies, Mite Associations, and Prayer Unions are laudable and permissible associations; and stand to the sisters of the church in the relation that business meetings, quorum associations, and priesthood councils do to the brothers. If the latter are warped from their legitimate purpose to cabals, story telling bouts, or schools for wrangling and back-biting, they become useless and bad; and the same is true, if the sisters associations are permitted to interfere with other legitimate duties of the wives and mothers, or if in them the sisters attempt to interfere with branch or church work that belongs to the elders; in such cases wrong and bad work are sure to fol-

Conducted for the purpose of its institution the Prayer Union, or Prayer League of the sisters is productive of good, and fathers, husbands and brothers should not only be willing that their women folks should attend these stated meetings, but should help to so arrange home affairs that such attendance would not do harm or make neglect.

The Proverb says that a good housewife looketh well to the ways of her household and maketh provision for it. No prudent woman will permit her home affairs to go at sixes and sevens while she attends to other affairs and thus bring herself and family into disrepute; but careful and wise administration will in most houses grant the woman sufficient leisure for the work of the Dorcas or Mite Soci-etv and the Prayer Union.

No duty is imposed upon the sisters by the church, its rules, or the traditions of the elders, by which they must become members of Dorcus or Mite Societies, or the Prayer Union; but it is certainly their privilege to so be members if they want to; and why any well disposed brother Saint should object is more than we can see to be reasonable.

We have not heard it intimated that the Prayer Union has been perverted from its purpose, nor have we heard that its privliges have been abused. Until such a thing occurs, no cause exists for complaint; and in case reason for complaint should arise, it would undoubtedly be a local matter, and a perversion of its rules, and not a legitimate result of the Union itself.

The Lord said to the church in August, 1831, that "men should be anxiously engaged in a good cause, and do many things of their own free will, and bring to pass much righteousness; for the power is in them wherein they are agents unto themselves."—Doc. and Cov., Sec. 58, par. 6.

In this passage the word "men" means the race. Women are of the race. The power to do good is in them; and in this they are agents unto themselves. The man who unnecessarily interferes in the exercise of the agency of mother, wife, sister or daughter, simply because he has a show of authority to do so, is hardly a "man after God's own heart," or a "manly man" among manly

The associations among the women folks referred to, are some of the efforts put forth by them to evince their anxiety to bring to pass righteousness; and we bid them a hearty "God speed." Let us "Lords of Creation," "wiseacres," "longheaded-elders" who may be so much in love with woman kind as to never wish ours to be out of sight, whether at mites meetings, or Prayer Unions, where we are not invited and don't go, either do the good these mothers, wives, sisters and daughters are doing for the cause in the different directions in which they are working, or else let us get out of the way of the gospel carts loaded with benefits which they are trundling; for it is folly to be idle, doing no good, and vicious to find fault with those who are doing good.

We are assured by what we have seen and heard, that the Prayer Union has done good. As a means to do good we sanction it. We are well acquainted with many of its leading workers, and have confidence in them. They will not permit evil to come of it if they can prevent it; and they know how to stop if the result seems at any time to be bad.

More harm has resulted, and will result from a captious opposition by some man, or elder outside of the Prayer Union, than has resulted so far, or is likely to result from the sister's assembling to read the scriptures, sing hymns and pray for the success of God's cause. Many of these same sisters who are in this praying band, are self-sacrificing mothers and wives, who not only pray, but work to help the cause along. Some of them have fathers, husbands, brothers or sons in the field, and are bearing a full share of gospel burdens along with the mass of workers in the great harvest field of the world.

We believe that the Prayer Union is not only permissible, but is a commendable means of doing good-that is our view of it.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

BRO. RICHARD SCOTT wrote from Galena, Indiana, that the Saints had just closed a successful and enjoyable district conference. While some were earnest in the work in that region others were careless and the prospect was not very flattering. He rejoiced, however, in the general progress being made by the church throughout the world.

Please read in another place the doings of the "Blue Grass League" of south-western Iowa. Now that stock raising and dairving are being agitated throughout the west, the "Blue Grass League" is likely to reap good fruits in calling attention to the superior claims of south-western Iowa and north western Missouri.

Bro. Rob't Oehring, of Newark, Marshal county, Dakota, says, "Twenty have been baptized here this last year.

Bro. J. C. Foss wrote us the 22d ult., that his address will now be Independence, Missouri. He says the Northern Illinois district is in very good condition.

Sr. Lizzie Williams of Ironton, Ohio, wrote us the 21st ult., that the few Saints of that place hoped soon to have meetings there. Elders traveling in that region should note this and aid them when they find it proper.

By late letter from Bro. L. C. Donaldson of Riverton, Iowa, we learn that Bro. Henry Kemp baptized four there recently, and that others would soon follow.

The Tune Book is not yet published, and we can not now say when it will be, nor what the price of it will be. After conference something may soon be said on these points.

Bro. E. L. Reed of Sinking Springs, Ohio, informs us of late that the Saints and friends there are now building a church, and he hopes they soon may peacfully enjoy gospel privileges and that freedom of worship guaranteed by the Constitution. He feels strong in the faith, and firm.

Bro. D. Bowen of Fremont, Nebraska, wrote that the Saints there were trying to keep the faith and let their light shine. He expresses his appreciation of AUTUMN LEAVES and the church publications.

JOHN K. SHEEN.

THAT I did did not judge unwisely, or speak too soon, in regard to this man's unfitness and unreliability as a would-be publisher of important church documents in his proposed "Relic Library," noticed in our issue of the 16th inst, may be seen in the following extract from a letter he wrote me under date of the 18th ult.:

"If any man says I am, or have been, or ever expect to be a member of the Reorganized Church, 'Shoot him on the spot.'

JOHN K. SHEEN."

I have just seen a letter he wrote to the "Independent Patriot" soliciting its editor to write up matter and publish against me, and says:

"I am told by a letter written by one G. P. Dykes (now in my possession), that the said W. W. Blair had to 'skip' out of California in hot hast, to avoid the effects of lying against his fellow man.'

Comment on the above is quite needless. I wish all men well, Mr. Sheen included. But I don't propose to sit idly by and see the church imposed on by any one—if I can help it.

W. W. Blair.

THE BITER BITTEN.

[The following is another among the multiplied evidences of the blindness gendered by prejudice and sectarian hate and how often it exposes those who are so foolish as to yield themselves willingly its victims.—Ed.]

"Editors Humboldt Standard: I have been reading in your paper, the "defense" of the Mormon Elders in Eureka. I have had no controversy with Messrs. Haws and Daley, and have nothing to say to them or about them. They themselves may possibly be ignorant of the character of the founder of the doctrine they represent, and I know there are few people here old enough to have a personal knowledge of him, so I consider it my duty to 'rise and testify,' as some of old Joe Smith's first performances were in our immediate neighborhood in Ohio. Joe Smith, the founder of the Mormon Church, was an ignorant, low-bred, profane man and a noted debauchee.

"He was the originator of polygamy, or, as they then termed it, 'spiritual wifehood,' which was brought about in this way: Old Joe got himself into a few bad scrapes and was obliged to get up a 'Revelation' to get out of them. His followers were low, ignorant people, and greedily swallowed the 'Spaulding' nonsense, and it was called the Mormon Bible in those davs. Rigdon lived next door to my father's, a lazy loafer, but shrewd. They scoured the whole country to make proselytes and broke up once happy families. They tell pitiful stories about being driven out of Kirtland. I know all about that. The reason was, they defied the laws of the country and even common decency, just as they do now in Utah. taught their followers that it was no harm to cheat the 'Gentiles' or even to steal from them, or destroy their property, and it got to such a pass that the militia had to be called out. Now these men still claim old Ioe Smith as the founder of this very 'Church of Christ'(?)—but repudiate the name of Mormon. 'O, Consistency, thou art a jewel!' This Book of Mormon, (to my certain knowledge) they claim to be equal with the Bible. If these men were trying to have sinners converted, instead of forcing themselves into Christian families as they are doing and trying to proselyte, 'Old Madam Rumor' would not trouble them.

"ONE WHO KNOWS."

Of this document the editor of the Standard had this to say:

"In another column will be found a communication of a lady who lived during her younger days in close proximity to the Mormon Church and no doubt knows of what she speaks. The editor of this paper knows nothing of the teachings of Joseph Smith save what he learned from his brother, W. B. Smith of Elkader, Iowa. W. B. Smith denounced polygamy in the severest terms, and claimed that his brother never taught it. The branch of the church with which he affiliated is known as the 'Josephites,' who have their principal publication office at Lamoni, and they certainly denounce polygamy as severely as any branch of the Christian church, while holding sacred the teachings of the Book of Mormon. We do not desire to take part in any religious controversy, but feel like giving both sides a chance for a hearing through the columns of the STANDARD. The author of the article alluded to is a member of the Methodist Church, who has lived several years past 'three score and ten,' and has no object in view but the cause of truth."

And Elders A. Haws and T. Daley reply with this:

"EDITOR HUMBOLDT STANDARD:—We would gladly let the mantle of charity fall upon the false and malicious statements made by your correspondent, and cover them and her up. But our duty, as representatives of the Church of Jesus Christ, which has been maligned throughout your columns, forces us to bring this correspondent—an old lady who professes to be a Christian—and, also, her calumnies, to the front, and show them and her in their true light. This old lady has evidently deceived herself, by trying to put on a Christian sheep-skin to cover up a wolf's heart, but this is an impossibility, for the mouth is sure to betray them sooner or later. 'For out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh.'-Matt. 12: So it is with this poor old lady—her little narrow-contracted Christian sheepskin is altogether too small to cover up the wolf, tale-bearing, backbiting habits which she evidently contracted in her youth, when the character of the person is so largely moulded by surroundings. This habit was then formed by too hastily accepting and reporting hearsay evidence as truth. These habits seldom find a sheepskin large enough to cover them. But in the case under consideration, they seem to have grown with her growth, and strengthened with her strength, until now, in her dotage, they have become chronic.

"We now proceed to prove that our conclusions are correct. It is written, Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor.'-Ex. 20:16. 'Thou shalt not raise a false report; put not thine hand with the wicked to be an unrighteous witness.'-Ex. 23:1. An unrighteous witness is one who puts his or her hand upon paper to bear false witness against his or her neighbor from hearsay This old Madam Rumor, evidence. (which we are forced to call your correspondent, from consistency, that jewel, and from the eternal fitness of things and names,) has done when she rises and testifies that Messrs. Daley and Haws are Mormon Elders, and that they are forcing themselves into Christian families.' These statements are false and have no foundation in fact; and this willing witness could only have derived her supposed knowledge from hearsay, or from her chronic imaginings, for she never saw or conversed with either Daley or Haws, to their knowledge. All her statements about Mr. Smith, the Book of Mormon, and Mr. Rigdon, show plainly that they had their origin from hearsay, and not from a personal knowledge, as she states. First, she states that Mr. Smith was 'old.' This is false, for he was born December 23d, 1805, and could not have been over twenty-five or twenty-six years of age when she claims to have known him in Ohio. Second, she says his name was 'Joe.' This is false, for his name was Joseph. Third, she states that 'old Joe Smith's first performances were in our immediate neighborhood in Ohio.' This is also false, for Joseph Smith's 'first performances,' as she calls them, were not in the State of Ohio, but in Palmyra, New York, in March, 1820, where he had his first vision, and the visitation of angels, and where he translated and published the Book of Mormon; wrote a part of the Doctrine and Covenants, and organized the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints on the 6th day of April, 1830. These 'first performances' continued for nearly eleven years before he went to Kirtland, Ohio, February 1st, 1831, where Madam Rumor says his 'first performances were, in our immediate neighborhood in Ohio.' Fourth, 'Joe Smith, the founder of the Mormon church.' This is false, as he did not found the Mormon church; but by the direction of the angels he founded the Church of Jesus Christ, after the primitive order. The name 'Mormon' was a nickname given by the enemies of truth, but never accepted.

"If Mr. Smith 'was an ignorant, low-bred, profane man, and a noted debauchee,' where and how did he get more wisdom than any and all of the reformers, from Luther to the latest addition. None of them ever established a church after the primitive order. But this 'low-bred, ignorant' young man comes to the front, 'and set some in the church, first apostles, secondarily prophets, thirdly teachers, after that miracles, then gifts of healings, helps, governments, diversities of tongues.'

— I Cor. 12:28. (See also Eph. 4:11-20)

"The above historical facts show conclusively that this witness got her 'personal knowledge' from hear-say. Want of space will only permit a summary of the rest of her falseboods, and a general denial, with the findings of the Court of Common Pleas, of Lake county, Ohio, and the sworn testimony of four witnesses who were not members of the church. We positively deny that there is any reliable evidence to prove that Joseph 'Smith originated polygamy' or 'spiritual wifehood,' or that he 'got into bad scrapes,' got up a revelation to get out of them,' or that his followers were ignorant people,' or that the 'Spaulding nonsense' was the 'the Book of Mormon,' or 'Mormon Bible;' or that 'Rigdon was a 'lazy loater,' ar that they were 'driven out of Kirtland' by the militia for 'defying the laws of the country,' or that 'they taught their followers to cheat, steal, or destroy the property of the Gentiles.'

"Following are the findings by the Court of Common Pleas, Lake county, Ohio: 'That the church in Utah the defendant, of which John Taylor is president, has materially and largely departed from the faith, doctrines, laws, ordinances and usages of said original church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and has incorporated into its system of faith the doctrines of celestial marriage and a plurality of wives, and the doctrine of Adam-God worship, contrary to the laws and constitution of said original church.'

"The following testimony was taken before a justice of the peace in Kirtland: Mr. William Smith, a member of the Christian Church, being duly sworn testifies:

"Q.—Did you know Joseph Smith, Oliver Cowdery or Martin Harris to do any immoral thing? A.—No, I never did; I never heard any complaint about Sidney Rigdon here in Kirtland.'

"Reuben P. Harmon testifies: 'I came to Kirtland in 1822; was acquainted with Joseph Smith. I never knew anything bad about him. I knew him from the time he came here till he went west.'

"Q.—Did you know what his reputation was for truth and veracity? A,—I had opportunity of knowing it."

"Q.—Did you know? A.—Yes, I did know.'

"'Q. What was that reputation?' A. 'I regarded it as good.'

"'Q.—What was his reputation for hontv, state that.' A.—'I never heard it questioned.

"'Q.—Did you belong to the church?' A.—'I did not belong to the church.'

"'Q.—Now, I will ask you to state with regard to the people known as Latter Day Saints who lived here at that time; what was their general character, as compared with other people?' A.—'If I was to state what I know, I would say that I had no reason to question their honesty.'

"Q.—Did you know Sidney Rigdon? A.—I think I knew Sidney Rigdon in 1828 or 1829. He was then preaching for the Disciples.

"Q.—What was his reputation for truth and veracity? A.—I never heard it questioned."

This man also testified that Mr. Rigdon was a good English scholar, well versed in the Bible and in Grecian and Roman history, eloquent in language, and that he went into Mr. Morley's field and went to plowing, and worked at common labor for some time.

"Q.—Tell us what you know about any of them having more wives than one. A.—There was nothing of the kind that I ever heard of. I have heard them speak against polygamy.

"A. E. Stanborn, duly sworn, testifies: "Q.—Were you personally acquainted with Joseph Smith? A.—Yes, sir.

"Q.—Do you know what his reputation was for truth and veracity? A.—At the time he lived here until he went west it was not questioned.

"Q.—You may state all you know about him. A.—Well, I knew him to be a kind, generous and truthful neighbor. He was a very kind man.

"Q.—What was his moral character? A.—It was good.

"Q.—Were you acquainted with Sidney Rigdon? A.—Yes, sir. I never saw anything about him but what was all right as to character.

"Q.—What did you know of this people when you lived here that was immoral? A.—I did not know anything. There was some stealing going on at the time the Mormons were here. It was laid on the Mormons by some at the time, but afterwards there was a revival in the Presbyterian Church in which the parties who did the stealing confessed it. They were Presbyterians.

"Q.—State whether they were in the practice of polygamy here or not. A.—Not that I know of.

"Q—You would have known it if they had been? A.—I ought to."

"F. C. Rich, who came to Kirtland in 1831, being duly sworn, testifies as follows:
"The moral character of Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon was good.

"Q.—State whether they believe in having more than one wife. A.—I never heard they were in favor of anything of the kind here.

"Q-You heard them talk with your father, heard the elders preach, was in their meetings, and mixed with them in all the affairs of life; if there had been anything wrong or bad in their teachings and habits would you not have known it? A.—I am perfectly satisfied that the church did not teach or practice polygamy or any other immoral doctrine while they were in Kirtland."

"These four witnesses were old men and non-members of the church. Now, in conclusion, we say, we will pay this old lady's expenses and give her ten dollars to go before any Justice of the Peace, and, under oath and cross-examination, testify to what she asserts through your paper. We have abridged the testimony of these witnesses for want of space.

"EUREKA, California, March 3d, 1889"

WE present below an excellent editorial from the Desert News of the 19th ult., which, like many articles we have read of late years in the Brighamite publications, goes to show that that people are gradually feeling their way back to the teachings contained in the original, authorized and accepted standard books and documents of the church and are abandoning the strange teachings that obtained with their leaders from 1844 till 1860 and later. We have often noted of late that in their conflicts with their opposers, especially with the United States authorities, the Brighamites would flee for refuge and support to the principles set forth in the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants, or the letters or sermons of Joseph the Seer. This is gratifying and encouraging, for if they continue on in this direction they will come on to the same doctrinal platform with the Reorganized Church. In view of their return to "Old Mormonism" as set forth in the original, authorized and accepted foundations, we bid them God speed, and shall watch with deep interest their progress in this direction.

"COUNSEL AND COERCION.

The right to counsel is not the right to coerce. The two terms have different meanings. One does not imply the other. Counsel means advice, coercion signifies compulsion. The authority of the Holy Priesthood, in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, carries with it no element of arbitrary force, no power to compel men and women to accept any doctrine or policy, or to do or refrain from doing any particular act. The functions of that Priesthood are ministerial and advisory, and when exercised in presidency are governmental only by the consent of the governed.

Though God may endow a man with the keys of the Priesthood, and the gifts of a prophet, a seer and a revelator, yet if the people to whom he is sent do not choose to receive him in that capacity, or while acknowledging his divine calling decline or neglect to follow his teachings and carry out his counsels, he is not authorized to inflict upon them any punishment involving life, liberty or property, or to use any coercive measures to bring them to compliance. He can declare a message, proclaim the divine will, explain the benefits to be derived from obedience and the consequences of rejection, but he must not force submission or exercise personal dominion by which the free agency of any person is infringed.

God, Himself, the highest of all, from whom sacerdotal authority emanates, does not force the human mind or compel obedience to His commands. As in natural laws so in spiritual laws; the will of the creature is as free as the will of the Creator. Men violate what they know to be the laws of nature. In the same way they may disregard what they know to be the commandments of God. The consequences in either case are inevitable; but the volition of man is undisturbed.

Deity never compels the choice of the right nor prevents the choice of the wrong. Herein is the sphere where justice claims its own. If mankind were not free, mankind could not be judged as accountable beings. There could be no just punishment or reward if the liberty of the individual was not preserved. The final judgment is predicted on man's free agency. Good and evil are ever present in this mortal life, and as with the life-tree and the death-tree in the primeval paradise, both are within the reach of man's free will until the choice is made and the consequences ensue.

Then, if the Almighty, who has the right to command, abstains from coercion, His servants, who have no such right in and of themselves over their fellows, would be outside of their prerogatives if they attempted to compel compliance with their counsel.

There is a wide difference between counsel and commandment. One may come legitimately from a man holding authority in the Priesthood, the other can only come properly from God. When men assume the powers reserved to Deity, they may terrorize the weak for a time, but this abuse of authority is sure to injure the person who thus seeks to grasp dominion over the souls of men, more than those who may temporarily suffer from the wrong. The counsels of the Priesthood must be given in all righteousness, meekness, brotherly kindness and charity, or they will not be accompanied by that living, spiritual power which alone can vitalize them and endow them with power from on high. For, it is only as the ministers of the Lord that the authority even to give counsel to others may be exercised in the Church.

Revelation declares that one man is not to be in bondage unto another. There is no man-worship or human distinction in the Church of Christ. "The rights of the Priesthood are inseparably connected with the powers of heaven," and "these withdraw themselves" when those who hold the Priesthood here undertake to "exercise control, or dominion, or compulsion in any degree of unrighteousness." Reproof may be administered with sharpness when necessary, but only as inspired by the Holy Ghost and to be followed by an increase of love to those who are reproved. (Doctrine and Covenants). That is the doctrine of heaven and is the essence of priestly power in "Mormonism."

The gospel is "a perfect law of liberty." But even under the Mosaic code the rights of the people were recognized and protected. The Almighty said Israel should not have a king. But when they determined to have one and risk the evils He portended as the result, God did not interfere. Israel chose kings and were not hindered in establishing monarchial government, because it was their choice and they had the right of choice under the law of free agency.

In the Church of Christ the rights of the people as to church government are declared by revelation. The Presidency consists of "three presiding High Priests, chosen by the body, appointed and ordained to that office, and upheld by the confidence, faith, and prayer of the church." This presiding quorum or council is balanced by the Council of the Twelve Apostles, [and also by the Seventy, Ed.], which "form a quorum equal in authority and power" to the First Presidency. This precludes the idea of a "one man power" such as is represented by opponents of the church to be its form of government. It is further ordained that "eyery decision made by these quorums, or either of them, must be by the unanimous voice of the same; that is, every member in each quorum must be agreed to its decisions in order to make their decisions of the same power or validity one with the other" (Doctrine and Covenants). Every officer in the church is such by the sanction and consent of the people to whom he is to minister. He can not be forced upon them.

The powers of state are separate and distinct from those of the church. They spring from the people under the laws and genius of the republic. The government revealed to the Latter Day Saints, democratic as it is in its feature of common consent, is distinctly declared by the Divine voice to be only church government. "Behold, the laws which ye have received from my hand are the laws of the church, and in this light shall ye hold them forth." (Doctrine and Covenants). No man in Utah holds a civil office by virtue of his ecclesiastical office. Every office holder must be elected by the people except to such offices as are filled by civil appointment. In neither case does the office come from the church. No matter how many of the voters may belong to the same church, it is not in the capacity of church members but of citizens that they cast their ballots, and that is done under the civil law. They may elect one of their own faith or not, as they determine. And they may seek advice from whom they choose as to the best men for office.

There is nothing in the Constitution or laws or institutions of our country which forbids a man who holds an ecclesiastical calling to counsel another as to political affairs. But that counsel must not be accompanied or followed by coercion. Compulsion in such matters would not only be repugnant to republican principles, but contrary to the spirit and letter of the true creed of the "Mormon" Church. If any man thinks that by virtue of some office he holds in the Priesthood he has the right to compel others to vote at his dictation, he mistakes the nature and scope of his authority and the spirit of the religion of which he is the minister.

It is also wrong to give way to anger when counsel is not accepted. If that counsel is wise, prompted by the Divine Spirit, and for the benefit of the person to whom it is given, pity, not wrath, should be evoked in the breast of the adviser. The consequences of rejecting good counsel will fail on the rejecter, not the im-And it is a sign of personal motive in giving the monition, when neglect or refusal to follow it arouses rage on the part of the counsellor.

"Dictation" is a word that grates on the ear of a free man. In its imperial sense it has no place in "Mormon" lexicography. That a presiding officer should lead, direct, guide and counsel those who have accepted him in that capacity, no reasonable person will deny. But this does not imply autocracy, infallibity and dogmatic egotism. "Great I and little you" is foreign to the genius of our church and repugnant to its fundamentals. It also defeats its own purpose. There is no more effectual way of lessening one's own dignity and influence than to assume unwarranted powers and attempt to exercise undue authority. "Let him that would be greatest among him become the servant of all" is among the sayings of Him "who spake as never man spake."

On the other hand consistency would say that the people who sustain by their votes, in church meetings, men in the Priesthood to be their presidents and leaders, should be willing to hearken to counsel and prompt to follow in a selected path, providing it is all "in righteousness." this they need not forfeit or suspend their own agencies. Voluntary acquiescence in or submission to any plan or advice implies no servility. In all forms of government, civil or ecclesiastical, there must be some yielding of individuality for the common welfare. And this need not and should not establish any form of despotism nor render any man a serf. The liberty of the creature is part of the economy of the Creator, and none less than He has the [right?] to deny or abridge it.

Counsellors are chosen in the various orders of the church, so that imperialism may not be established even in form, and that the presiding officer may have the benefit of competent assistance and advice. It is the duty of counsellors to counsel, as the name of their office denotes. But this does not mean obstruction or direction of the head. The deciding power is in the presiding power. Three minds are more likely to see a matter on all sides than one mind, and when the three are agreed the conclusion is more likely to be right. It is always unsafe to base judgment on a one-sided view of the case, and different minds perceive the same thing from different standpoints, hence the wisdom of a presidency of three instead of one, and of a council [High Council?.—ED.] of twelve to sit in judgment in "the most important cases."

Coercion really finds no vantage ground within the so-called "Mormon" system. The utmost extent of power to punish its members for any cause is excommunication. That is, persons who have voluntarily accepted certain rules and regulations may be excluded from membership for refusing to comply therewith. This power is claimed and exercised by all religious bodies and is essential to their identity.

Civil and religious liberty are ingrained in the system known as "Mormonism" and its aim is to make man truly free. It inculcates the liberty of law but does not favor license. It establishes the true relations of government and the governed. And when fully developed and established, it will bring the creature into the most intimate relations with the Creator and make all redeemed intelligences, unfettered, independent members of the universal brotherhood of the Gods, who are the emancipated and glorified sons of the Eternal Ruler of the universe.

EDITED BY SISTER "FRANCES."

"The harp at nature's advent strung Has never ceased to play; The song the stars of morning sung Has never died away."

"CHRISTIAN SCIENCE" (?) EX-AMINED,—No III.

LET our readers bear in mind a remark made in our last with reference to the steps which lead up to the full development of this science and which would never be suspected as tending in such a direction had they not been followed from the starting point to the conclusion with the open eye of an examiner, and not as those who at the very first gave up all will of their own and affirmed and reaffirmed a falsehood until at last the skeins and meshes became so entangled about them that, lost in a labyrinth they sought in vain for a way out.

The first of the denials required to be made is, "There is no evil." Now let the Christian who believes in the Bible as the word of God place over against this the words of Christ:

"Suffer us not to be led into temptation, but deliver us from evil."—Matt. 6: 13.

"I pray not that thou shouldst take them out of the world, but that thou shouldst keep them from the evil."—John 17:15.

"Marvel not at this, for the hour is coming in which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they who have done good in the resurrection of the just and they who have done evil in the resurrection of the unjust."

—John 5: 28, 29.

We might fill pages with quotations upon this point, but we surely have no need for more, as the Christian must accept the teachings of Jesus as final. "Deliver us from evil," "Keep them from evil," because the time is coming when there will be a separation of those who have done good from those who have done evil.

The second affirmation required to be made is, "There is no matter."

Place beside this denial the following: "And the Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life, and man became a living soul."—Gen. 2:7.

"Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was, and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it."—Eccl. 12:7.

"It is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body."—I Cor. 15:44.

"The paradise of God must deliver up the spirits of the righteous, and the grave deliver up the bodies of the righteous."—2 Nephi 5:6.

This ought to be forever conclusive, upon this point, to any one believing in its divinity and when we assert that these two false statements are the affirmations upon which the system is built up, we marvel how it is possible that in an age considered to be pre-eminently practical, it could have obtained any following, especially among professed believers in the Bible. But it has a grain of truth, and herein lies the secret of its power. It has a very sweetly seductive sedative powder which once it is taken, as we have before said, becomes an opiate which few wish to resign.

The gospel of the Son of God demands of man confession of sin. It requires of him who would be a follower of Christ, to humble himself, become as a little child, submitting to the ordinances of God's appointing in order that he be adopted into the kingdom of His Son.

"Christian Science" (?) tells you "there is no sin, all is good;" and "sin, sorrow, sickness and death are all made up from belief in evil and matter, and as these are not realities, sin, sorrow, sickness and death are not realities." (C. S. H., p. 28.)

It requires of you to affirm these things, and not only to affirm them, but believe them; and, while it acknowledges that it can not and does not undertake to prove these propositions, it affirms that you have but to accept them and the truth will reveal itself to you. We can not repeat, for we feel it sacrilegious to write what they claim in regard to the Comforter, leading into all truth. But we come to consider the grain of truth which they have, and we find it is that they do sometimes heal the sick. We affirm, however, that this healing is done by a purely natural process, that it is no proof of the truth of their philosophy which is a falsehood, and a damaging falsehood from first to last; and, moreover, that any individual who will yield as faithful compliance to the requirements of the gospel law (not embracing, but independent of the gospel ordinance of healing) as the patients of these false teachers yield to them, then the same results of healing may be attained. If this be true, what results would follow if, to the observance of the gospel law in all other points was added the law laid down for administering to the sick?

Man is a complex being, and the physician who has not observed the important part which the mental faculties have in conducing to health or sickness of body, may well be termed blind.

We have before referred to Dr. Taylor's lucid explanations under this head, and will only try to elucidate our own assertion with reference to the gospel law; and however far we may come short when the test of measurement is applied, we shall not shrink from it, but silently pray God that we may apply it without fear, and strive to improve by its plain revealments.

The first requirement of the gospel law is Faith, faith in God and in Christ; and faith in its fullest and broadest sense, in the perfection of the gospel plan of salvation, and in God as its Author. As Latter Day Saints have we this faith? Do we practice it? It is not the blind denial of evil which quiets the conscience, soothes the nerves, and puts the deceived scientest in a condition in which nature may sustain him in vigor, or restore him, if not in health; not this, but it is the faith which, having reasoned with God, (as he invites all his creatures to do,) has discovered that high above and infinitely better than all of man's reasoning power, is the reasoning power, the wisdom of God.

Once convinced of this, what will be the result? Do we count it a wonderful thing that without a question, without a murmur, Abraham arose and took his son-the son of promise-and bound him upon the altar? Look at it calmly, just for one moment, and pray God silently for the aid of his Holy Spirit to enable you to realize it. Was it wonderful? Was not God to Abraham the all in all of truth, mercy, justice, love and wisdom? Not one of these attributes could he violate without dethroning himself; and faith (the article which is worthy the name) stands ready to justify the Creator, and under all trials, beneath the heaviest cloud which ever lowered, the fiercest storm which ever swept across our life is able to say: "It is his appointing, and is better than our own."

The love and faith demanded by the gospel, and without which it is impossible to please God, require of us in all things to say: "Thy will be done." When God commanded Abraham to lay his son upon the altar and bind him there, was his faith of that character which caused him to bow his head in sorrow, to plead with God the promise he had given him, "In thee and in thy seed shall all the nations of the earth be blessed?" Let us who have hugged our grief and trials close to our bosom-who have told and retold the story of the trials we have endured since we entered this Latter Day Work—ask this question fairly and squarely of ourselves, and not be afraid to meet the issue. Is this faith? Is it that article which, being manifested by Abraham, gave him the right to the title bestowed upon him-"father of the faithful?" Nay! Abraham loved and trusted God to such an extent that he knew it was impossible for him to make a mistake, and therefore in obeying the command of God he was walking in a safe and sure way-why should he grieve? Was not God the embodiment of truth, and was not his word pledged to Abraham? Was not God the embodiment of holiness? Could he be this and yet sin? Was not God the embodiment of justice? Could he be this and build hopes in the heart of his creature which he never intended that creature should realize? Nay, the faith of Abraham was the faith which had mixed with it that "perfect love which casteth out all fear." The faith which enabled him to take that mountain walk with his only legitimate son-the child of promise-with a heart as free from care as when he entertained the angels of promise with the fatted calf in his tent. God had promised, and the promise of a son had been fulfilled. It was His part to appoint and Abraham's part to accept or reject his appointment.

This was the faith which enabled Job to say: "Though he slay me, yet will I trust in him," and which enabled the captive Hebrews to be perfectly indifferent in regard to answering the mighty king of Babylon when he boastingly said to them, "Who is that God that shall deliver you out of my hands?" "O Nebuchadnezzar, we are not careful to answer thee in this matter. If it be so, our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and he will deliver us out of thy hand, O king. But if not, be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up."

As Christians let us strive to understand this latter clause of the answer made to Nebuchadnezzar. "But if not"—what a world of meaning is concentrated in those three words; what a study for every soul professing trust in God! "But if not"-if he deliver us not, and if our bodies are consumed what is that in comparison to sinning against him? It is his appointing; for we know, proud king of Babylon, that unless our God suffers it in his wisdom to be so thou couldst have no power at all over us. If it be his appointing then it is just and right, and though it be not of our own choosing, it is better than ours. What room, let us ask, can be found in the mind, heart, or soul of the individual possessed of this faith, for distressing doubts and fears? What place for the disquietude which unsettles the brain, disturbs the nerve forces, and more or less disarranges the whole physical machinery of man, who is fearfully and wonderfully made? Let us think of it as we may, but this is the faith that God requires of us, and without it we can not please him, and when the soul possesses this restful quieting faith, then is she clad in the armor of God's own provision against every care, sorrow, and grief which is not of his appointing; and in those which are of his appointing, she is prepared to glory. It is right here that this monster, this wolf in sheep's clothing having found in thousands of nominal Christians an entire absence of this faith has said to them, "You are dissatisfied with yourself and your conditions of life; you are seeking satisfaction and happiness. Come with me, put your hand in mine, follow me with implicit confidence, and you shall attain to what you are seeking." The result is that the man or woman who could not trust God follows at the bidding of this disguised serpent, and is soothed into the most blasphemous infidelity by accepting, for the teachings of Christ, that which is utterly subversive of his gospel, and which gives, if true, the death blow to every incentive and hope held out to fallen humanity by him who came to redeem them from sin and its consequences.

NOTICE.

The money received for the sale of the spool stand, sent to the Home Column, was credited to Bro John Wonders, in the Herald of January 31, 1889. We saw the stand on the table of one our popular dress makers a few days since, who felt very proud in the possession of it as a birth-day present from her husband.—Ed.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

Sr. Helen Nash of Sugar Grove, Michigan, requests your prayers that her eyesight may be restored, as she is nearly blind.

Bro. Edwin Sandy of Lynn, Washington county, Kansas, earnestly desires your prayers in behalf of his wife who is now an inmate of an insane asylum and leaves her husband with a family of helpless children. In her rational moments she has said that nothing but the prayers of the Saints would ever release her from the claims of Satan by which she is bound.

[Dear Sisters:—Be not weary in well doing, neither let your faith fail, but let the prayers of the three hundred and twenty-seven whose names are now enrolled in "The Union" ascend to God as the heart of one. Is not this sympathy what the apostle meant when he said, "Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the perfect law." The world is full of sorrows and affliction and sympathy is an angel of comfort, bearing healing on her wings. Bro. Brown of Kansas City, for whom your prayers were requested, writes us that he has been better and stronger from that time.—Ed.]

Your prayers are requested in behalf of Sister Cynthia Graham, of Henderson, Iowa.

Sister Frances:-According to request made by Sr. Eleanor in last Herald I now submit the following, being the form by which the Union meetings are conducted in this branch. There is a president and secretary. Term of office one month. The first Thursday of each month the president and secretary are either sustained or others appointed to take their places. The president may preside or invite another to do so. The meetings are opened by singing a hymn, and she who presides offers a brief opening prayer, invoking the presence and aid of the Spirit of God in their own, and all the meetings of the Union. Then a chapter is read and principal points noted, by way of fixing them on the minds of the hearers; after which the subject for the day is read and also the memory texts; then all bow in prayer, the president leading in the same and others follow, not by routine, but according as they feel the desire. If the members present exceeds six we rise from our knees after about half the number have offered prayer and sing a hymn to rest the body and invigorate the mind; then kneel again and continue prayer until all have taken part that wish. The special requests are then read or spoken of and prayer is then made for them by the president and as many as feel led to. When prayer is over there is liberty for testimony or any suggestions that will be beneficial to the Union, after which a verse or more is sung and a short benediction or rather closing prayer—is offered and the meeting dismissed.

I will state that in our first meetings there was no chapter read. We have adopted that since and are still open to amendment.

E. BURTON, Pres.

MEDINA CITY, Texas, Feb. 26th. Dear Sister Frances:-Sad, sad intelligence comes to us to-day, February 18th, of the death of our beloved brother, who has been roving since the death of his wife, which took place July 27th, 1884. She on her death-bed requested us to raise her two little girls, Effie and Ettie. Oh, what a joy at that time mingled in the then grief-stricken hearts of ours, that God should put it into the heart of our sister to leave the dear little ones to our charge. Their mother was not a member of any church, but was religiously inclined, and taught the little ones in their earliest childhood to pray. Soon after they came into our family they were both baptized into the Church of Jesus Christ. Their father, Loami L. Wight departed this life on the 13th of this month. He was the youngest son of Lyman and Harriet Wight, and was born while his father was in Liberty jail in company with Joseph the Martyr. For six months they were chained in the same room or cell, and were at the mercy ot demons in human form, thinking (yes knowing) it was all gain to suffer for Christ. His dear, aged mother still lives, but is very feeble. Oh, what heart-rending scenes she can relate of the early days of the church; the trials and persecutions they had to undergo. Her heart is like the oak, staunch and true; but her body will soon be laid in the tomb. She needs the prayers of the the church. If this meets the eye of sister Mary

Hoffman, we will be glad to hear from her.

Dear Sister Frances:-As from time to time the church papers come to us and we are comforted and encouraged by the good and instructive reading so abundantly provided for us, I have often felt reproached for not letting you know how much we appreciate the efforts and sacrifice made. Though thousands of miles separate us yet while reading the letters in the Column we sisters are drawn very near to each other and learn to love each other; and in our endeavors to go on in the good work so dear to us all, it greatly aids us to know that we have the prayers and sympathy of those of like faith, whose experiences so often resemble our own that our courage is stimulated, and we get fresh strength to go on. In reading the letter and verses of Sr. M. Rodger, in December number of Herald, it seemed like renewing an old friendship, so vividly did it bring to our minds the brother who first brought the gospel to us, whose memory is still very dear to us. Knowing him we knew his family, for it was his delight to talk of them. so we naturally read with interest anything written by them.

We, (the young folks here) are all delighted with Autumn Leaves. Our twelve months' trial of it leads us to hope it may never cease and we trust Sr. Frances' efforts for its success will be as blessed in the coming years as they have been in the past. That she will continue in the good work in which she is engaged is the sincere wish of all of us.

Our Christmas was made glad by the presence of Bro. and Sr. T. W. Smith and brethren Wight and Butterworth. But now the first named have just paid us their farewell visit ere their return to Tahiti. We are sorry to lose them, and they have our heartfelt sympathy in their isolated home in the South Seas. May their labor of love there be amply rewarded with Heaven's best gifts to comfort and sustain them till they are restored to relatives and friends so long parted from in America. Their work here has been attended with many blessings. The Saints have been built up and encouraged; especially have the discourses of Bro. Smith enraptured while they have enlightened us.

I must not close without adding my testimony to the truth of the latter day work. That it is the work of God I have not a doubt. That the blessings promised in the gospel are enjoyed by those obedient to it I know. Oh what a comforting what a soul cheering faith is ours! It brings us into such close relationship with our God, that he reveals himself unto us by making known his will and purposes concerning us! Truly what light and blessings would be ours if we would live up to our privileges! Alas for the weakness of human nature, that so hinders our spiritual progress. That God will give us strength to overcome and grow in grace daily that we may not only learn our duty but do it, is the prayer of SISTER "LILLIE."

Correspondence.

South Arm, Michigan, March 8th.

Dear Herald:-It was four years ago the 29th of last September since I obeyed the gospel, and I never regretted the step, as the Lord has been good to me. He has fulfilled his promises to me in many ways, healing me of an affliction that troubled me for over eight years. He has always been a friend in the time of need and has heard my prayers in behalf of my little ones when sickness rested upon them. I know this gospel is the power of God unto salvation. There has been eight more added to our number in this place and there is still an interest. I hope the time will speedily come when we can put our shoulder more firmly to the wheel and help roll it along. I, for one, am willing to bear anything for my Master's cause.

ELIZA A. DAVIS.

CANEY, Kansas, March 24th.

Bro. Blair:-I wish to bear my testimony to this great latter day work, and to the Spirit of the Master that leads us into all truth, and shows us things to come! I have been preaching here all winter, and, by the help of the Master have awakened a great interest among the people. Many are investigating, and some are still trying to hold out against us, but their fighting is weak. For the past two weeks, Bro. I. F. Johnson and myself have been comparing the King James translation, with the Inspired translation. This is the first time I had read in the latter to amount to anything. I don't believe I have ever read three chapters in it before; and now comes the testimony: While I have been under the influence of the Spirit, standing and declaring the word from the King James translation, many passages have been like a parable, or of a symbolical nature, but the Spirit would make them clear to my mind, and I would yield to the Spirit and give it as it was given to me.

Since reading the Inspired translation, I find that it explains many things just as I have explained them while endeavoring to preach to the people. This is another testimony to this great latter day work, and that the Saints of God are all led by the same Spirit. I have received others, but space would not permit me to relate them all, for they are many; and I rejoice that the Lord has spared me to see this day to hear and obey the gospel. We compare the two translations; one reads the King James, while the other corrects from the Inspired translation. If the Saints would do this the beauties of the Inspired would be seen, for the Spirit of the Master attends our readings. May all Saints sing, "O, for a closer walk with God," and try to walk very close to him. I remain yours for the truth,

W. F. CLARK.

DELOIT, Iowa, February 27th.

Dear Herald:-I love to read your pages, fraught with good and cheering news from the Saints of God. Surely the Lord is abundantly blessing his people; I can not express the gratitude of my heart and thanksgivings to God for his manifold blessings to me. I feel that he has blessed me continually. A few days ago I was taken sick, seemingly unto death, and by his almighty power, through the administration of his servants, I was raised from the bed of affliction and restored to health and strength, and I rejoice and thank God that he has given me another testimony that I know the signs do follow the believer and that the sick are healed. Yes: I thank and adore his holy and blessed name which is precious to my soul. I love the Saints of God, and feel that we are as one family in his church; that there is a sacred tie that binds us together which the world can not sever. Yes, dear saints, when you have trials and sorrows, I feel to share them with you; and when you are happy, and the Spirit of God is burning within you, I too rejoice. I thank God for his love; I thank him for the bright hope he has given me for the future, that hope which is an anchor to the soul, sure and steadfast and reaches to that within the vail.

A SPIRITUAL DREAM.

I saw a great table and it seemed to be in the Latter Day Saints church at Deloit. On it was spread all manner of good and precious things to eat, and many of the Saints were partaking of this food. And what was most remarkable, when the Saints had partaken of this bountiful repast it did not diminish but was just as bountiful as before. All of this repast seemed to belong to Bro. Goff, the president of our branch, and he was standing at the head of the table.

THE INTERPRETATION

"You saw a great table and it seemed to be in the Church: This represents the many services which have been held here from time to time in my name. You saw that it was spread with all manner of good and precious things to eat: This represents the everlasting gospel as has been declared from the lips of my chosen servants. You saw that many of the Saints were partaking of this food—that it did not diminish but was just as bountiful as before: This represents the Saints of God partaking of the bread of life; that bread which came down from heaven, which is from everlasting to everlasting. You saw that my servant was standing at the head of the table and all this grand repast seemed to belong to him: This represents his faithfulness in standing at the head, presiding over and watching and feeding the little flock over which I have given him charge. And verily I say unto you, I am that living bread which came down from heaven, and whosoever partaketh of that bread shall live forever. I am the light, the truth, and the way; follow thou me and thou shalt find rest unto thy soul."

KATE TURNER.

RODNEY, Iowa, March 8th.

Dear Herald:-I am yet in the faith, and although rather isolated from the brethren, there are a few Saints scattered here and there. The people here are greatly prejudiced against the work, but I think it has lessened some since I came two years ago. I live here about three miles east of Rodney on the C., M. and St. P. R. R., and about the same distance northeast from Ticonic on the Cherokee and Dakota branch of the Illinois Central R. R., and about five miles dne west of Mapleton on the Maple Valley branch of the C. and N. W. R. R., in Monona county, Iowa. An elder coming to either station can easily find me by inquiring. I will say that an elder to do the most good here, must be neatly attired and of good address, as the people here are somewhat "stuck up," and they must have a stuck up preacher. I should be glad to have an elder call and see what can be done. I have not done any public preaching here at all from the fact that I can not make the appearance in public that the people here demand. All this may seem strained but it is a fact all the same.

Yours in the gospel,

NATHAN LINDSEY.

CARBON, Wyoming, Feb. 25th.

Dear Herald:-Whether on the mountains or in the valleys, at the ranch, or in camp, you are a welcome visitor. Yes, you are the welcome messenger that tells us of the progress of the good Master's work, from far and near. You tell us where the servants have great success, that we may rejoice, and praise God for the victory; and you also bring us word of those who have to struggle on against great opposition; and thus we are warned to humble ourselves before God and plead with him to send angels to assist those who are closely pressed; and you bring us the workings of the Holy Spirit among the members of the great body, in dreams, visions, tongues and interpretation, healings, and other miracles, which gives us opportunity to rejoice with those present on each occasion, for these are the "signs" by which we may know that the body is inhabited by the true Spirit; and that you, dear Herald, are a true messenger, representing a true body, for you have the true signs of life written upon you. But at times I have seen your back when it put me in mind of a target after a shooting match at long range. Not that the target, or you, are at fault; but I think those marksmen could have made a better score at a shorter distance.

If I understand the position we occupy, we are fellow laborers "in the dispensation of the fulness of times." We have a law and commandments peculiar to the dispensation in which we live, to govern us in our labors. And if I should lav this work one side and try to re arrange the creation, or assist Noah in building the ark, or Moses in compiling his laws and statues, or the Savior in his resurrection and visit to the prison, or assist in easing down the New Jerusalem onto the earth that it may not make too heavy a jar, I would be like a city dude out on the western range playing hunter, and firing at a band of antelope at long range.-I would be out of place and would likely injure the antelope once in fifty shots, but never be a benefit to myself. The greatest good given to man becomes the greatest evil if misused, or used out of place. And it is for this cause that we all should be very careful what we entrust to your care, for I consider you one of our greatest means for good, because you do not carry "the letter" only, but you are invariably accompanied by the spirit of each writer; and for this cause you have become greatest among us; being "the servant of all."

Happy it would be for us if we would patronize your example, and as servants of God present faithfully those things entrusted to our care, accompanied by the Spirit of him who has given us this great trust, and not seek to meddle with what is entrusted to others.

THE HUNTER.

PERSIA, Iowa, March 22d.

Bro. Dancer:—The Herald gives joy and peace to my soul. My heart rejoices to read its colums and hear of the spread of the gospel. I can truly say that I love the work of God. I am trying, in my weakness, to serve the Lord and obey his law. The first of this year I invoiced what property I had and paid one-tenth of it to the Lord. I know that God will bless me; and I pray that I may become strong in the work and prove faithful to the covenant I have made.

Yours in the gospel,

WM. A. SMITH.

TOPEKA, Kan., March 17th.

Bro. Dancer:-I received the books all right. They are a great comfort to me. There is no branch of the church in this place. I have been in the church since 1840; went through the persecutions in Nauvoo and passed through the dark and cloudy days; and thank my heavenly Father I have kept the faith. At the time our beloved Prophet and Patriarch were slain, we thought that Sidney Rigdon was the one to lead the church, and went with him as far as Pittsburg, but soon found that he had lost the Spirit of God. So we kept quiet until the time that young Joseph was called in 1860, when we joined the Reorganized Church. And I still feel to press onward in the good work. I see in my last Herald that some think Joseph the "choice seer," had no specific calling beyond translating the Book of Mormon. But I know that he was a prophet of God in 1840, for when on his way to Washington I met with him; and in talking with him about his work, he took my husband by the hand and told him to not put his trust in man, or any set of men, but go to God and he would make it known whether it was of God or not. And thanks be to God, it was made known in

And again, I know that he was a prophet of the Lord up to the time of his death. I heard him say on the stand in Nauvoo, that the work the Lord had given him to do he had done, and that he was now as liable to die as any of us; that he translated the Book of Mormon, and brought forth the book of Doctrine and Covenants to lead the church, and had done all that the Lord had commanded him, and that then he was as liable to die as any of us; he had accomplished the Lord's work; that the plan of salvation was so plain that a wayfaring man though a fool should not err therin. I thank my heavenly Father for the light that I have received by obedience to the gospel. I moved to Nauvoo in 1841, and remained there until the murder of the servants of God, and I never knew that Joseph taught or practiced polygamy, but always opposed it. I am surprised that so many "smart men" who have been in the work many years and were the means of bringing many souls to the kingdom, should turn away from the truth.

I am 77 years old this month, and my health is not good, but I believe that God will spare me to go to Conference. Your Sister,

J. A. Twist.

Atchison Junction, Mo., March 5th. Dear Herald:-I have just finished reading the last Herald and feel so strengthened in reading so many grand testimonies. The thought came to me while reading that I had grand testimonies of this work, and why not my testimony strengthen some weak brother or sister? The Lord does not forget me for it has not been but a few days since I was very sick with the measles, followed with a smothering sensation until I thought my time had come. My neighbors and friends who uisited me said I was as bad as I could be to live. I would pray, my husband would pray, and we called one of our brethren in to pray, but no relief. At last my husband dispatched to St. Joseph for Bro. Lewis to come, as I was warned in a dream about him. I dreamed before I took sick that I saw Bro. Lewis coming to my house with all kinds of carpenter's tools strapped close to his body with ropes and leather strings. He got to our house about eight o'clock and administered to me and I never had another smothering spell since, and have been gaining strength until I am able to do my work again. During my sickness every time my eves were closed I could hear a knocking; knock, knock, knock, three times every few minutes. I was disturbed with that knocking and after Bro. Lewis administered to me I never heard it again. It surely was an evil spirit-I can't tell what else it was. I am glad and rejoice that I am a Latter Day Saint. Your sister,
