treasures were lost. The origin of the Polynesian race is wrapped in mystery. Having no historical records, their whole knowledge of the past being confined to oral traditions, and being a wandering race, they knew little about themselves and less about their origin. Our ethnologists have tried to trace the history of the Polynesians by their past wandering; but they have ever been a race who trode lightly on the land with naked feet and their foot-prints have long been obliterated by the trampling of nameless invading hosts and their abiding places have been lost under fields of battle, volcanic eruptions, and tidal waves. Out of the darkness they came, an unfortunate, fateful race, driven by a strange destiny from their birthplace, doomed before time to annihilation, asking not whence they came or whither they went, or if asking, answered only by gloomy parable and mystic sayings. There are some who believe that the wonderful vigor and physique of the Polynesians will enable the race to exist. The Polynesians are the finest and most interesting native race in the world without a doubt. They are as bold as the frontier tribes of India, whom, indeed, they much resemble, without being so sordid. In many customs, words, and legends they resemble the ancient Peruvians—the inhabitants of Western South America and yet it appears that the race once inhabited a mainland which is believed to be India-inland India, the plains and foothills of the Himalaya, with their borders touching the sea on the Persian Gulf. Ages must have passed whilst the people dwelt in those parts; they became navigators, crossed the neighboring seas, acquired many customs from some race of a Semitic origin, together with some words of their language. This race was probably dwelling in Arabia and the shores of the Persian Gulf. But a time came when the Aryan race began to make its appearance in India, a race of superior caliber, and probably more numerous. Before this intruding race, the ancient Polynesian gradually retreated; but not at once. There was a period when much intercourse took place between the two races. It appears that gradually the Aryan drove the Polynesian race out of India, and that the Polynesians, gradually acquiring the art of navigation, pushed out into unknown seas and made their way into the Pacific. If all the native races in the world were paraded in any country, it is the Polynesians that would win the most favor for physique, for character, for history. We can respect and admire the Polynesians for their bravery and sterling virtues. have fought against them and found them worthy foemen; they have fought with us and we have proved them loyal comrades. Obstinate and self-willed, proud and superstitious, warlike and poetical, at one time recklessly brave, at another time helpless in a panic of fear, royally liberal today, shamelessly mean tomorrow, they are withal light-hearted, good natured, and capital company. They have been likened to our own savage forefathers, and in many respects they have similar characteristics, but where our race was doggedly persistent the Polynesian is erratic and uncertain; and whereas our race proved their capacity for development and advancement in the march of civilization, the Polynesian has been left behind, and in many things shows that he belongs to a decadent race. The photo herewith presented of a handsome, full-blooded Maori girl shows a great resemblance to the Hawaiians, and the kinship is easily detected.

LANGWORTHY, Iowa, May 15.

Dear Saints:-Lest I am considered as having strayed from my field of appointment (Idaho), I will say, nothing of the kind is likely to occur. After conference adjourned at Independence I went to Hume, Missouri, My brother, Daniel, had moved there last November; and as that was a new place (for "the faith once delivered to the Saints" appeared to have shied around, or passed over, or at least had not lighted upon that locality), I thought it would be proper to offer the bread of life which had not passed through the "modern theological roller mill." Bro. Daniel and I applied to the several pastors, or church officers having charge of the Methodist South and North, also the Christian church, which had no pastor to consult, but Mr. Oldsclaw had charge of the house. He was not anxious to let us occupy it, but said if we were refused the other churchhouses to return to him and we should have the Christian church. We were to ask the reason for the refusal of the other churches. The pastor of the North Methodist gave us a very crisp refusal, but gave no reason. I was told the pastor of the South Methodist said he would not honor us enough to attend our meetings. Neither did Rev. Bell, of the Methodist North attend. Mr. Oldsclaw attended each service, -there were three. He told me afterward there was an agreement or mutual effort to keep me out. We attended prayer meetings of both Methodist churches, as well as what preaching services we could, and in my bones I felt like saying if those pastors were proper representatives of their several faiths, God be merciful to them, for they know not of what spirit they are.

One local brother had charge of the Methodist prayer service one eve, and asked me to offer prayer, but it did not seem to meet the approval of the pastor. Verily, verily Babylon is tottering to her fall, and is fast becoming "the habitation of devils, and the hold of every foul spirit, and a cage of every unclean and hateful bird." "Come out of her, my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and that ye receive not of her plagues."

Saints, or all "who have been called to be Saints," will we not take warning and cleanse the sanctuary of the Most High? The saints are to possess the kingdom. Let us read this straight, and ponder it well in our hearts. But the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom forever and ever. But the long suffering of God is waiting today as it waited in Noah's day. While the world is fast ripening for destruction, things are "noted in the scriptures of truth," for our admonition and learning, which the wicked shall not understand, "but the wise shall understand." The wise are those who fill their lamps and keep them full and brightly burning; "who take the Holy Spirit for their guide." "Light and truth forsaketh that evil one." Jesus "received grace for grace; and he received not of the fullness at first," but continued from grace to grace until he received a fullness. But shall we not wake up from our lethargy, and heed what is "noted in the scriptures of truth." He that hath the hope of eternal life abiding in him purifieth himself even as God is pure. "But as he which hath called you is holy, so be ye holy in all manner of conversation." And as "he who hath received his testimony, hath set to his seal that God is true."

How many called to be Saints, read scripture with a vail over the understanding. Individually, I cannot afford to do less than scan closely the pattern, and appeal to the law and the testimony. The law of the Lord must be my lamp, and the Holy Spirit the light thereof. Frowns or smiles of foes or friends must only serve to enable me to get more fully in the light. No sensible person will take offense at criticism, adverse or complimentary. "Great peace have they who love thy law and nothing shall offend them." The fact is, all who truly know their Redeemer lives, and who abide in his love, need have no worry or concern as to what others think or say of them. They can sail the seas over; cross mountain or vale; they have a heavenly friend who never deserts them, by day or by night. It is the Saints' privilege to learn the wonderful mission and destiny of man. The secret of the Lord has been unveiled to man in days of old, who sought earnestly and faithfully to get within the circle of the divine law, and perfect holiness, not alone for their own welfare, but that they might be a "light to those who sit in darkness," and many hungering souls have felt the conviction that some have been more highly favored of the Lord than others; but they too received "grace for grace," "line upon line," "and virtue loveth virtue, light cleaveth unto light," "wisdom receiveth wisdom;" so we must all ascend the ladder of exellence, out of darkness into light, and the freedom and fullness of manhood or womanhood in Christ Jesus.

I aim to get to the mountains this month, but the people of Iowa need the application of the gospel law as much as any people can. For Zion's weal,

CHARLES ALBERTSON.

POND CREEK, Oklahoma, May 10.

Editors Herald:—I feel I cannot do without the spiritual food the church papers contain. I love to read the beautiful sermons and letters they contain, and wonder how any Latter Day Saint can be satisfied without them, especially those who are isolated as I am and as a great many others are.

We moved to this country last November. from Alma, Illinois. We have had four elders here to preach since we came: Elders R W. Davis, George Montague, W. R. Smith, and J. M. Brown. Some of the people are investigating this beautiful gospel restored in these latter days; but some rage and imagine vain things; say we are connected with the people of Utah. One Baptist preacher got up and read a Utah pamphlet, and tried to make the people see that because we believed the Book of Mormon and the angel's message we were like them; but I think Bro. R W. Davis explained it to the satisfaction of the majority. He used a map of the eastern and western continents; spoke on the Book of Mormon; traced the Book of Mormon characters from the eastern to the western continent, and proved it by the Bible. A great many had pencils and paper and took notes. Some say they never heard so much scripture quoted before. But Satan worked on the hearts of a few, influencing the directors to close the schoolhouse on us the next time the elders came, after preaching a few nights. It has only made friends to the cause, for sensible people could see there was no justice in it. Bro. W. R. Smith gave particulars in a former HERALD.

Bro. and Sr. Hemmingsen, of Iowa, came here and bought a farm on which the school-house stands. I heard one lady say she thought the parties who closed the school-house ought to apologize to them for the way they were treated. I told some of the people we would have the gospel preached again here. I hope they will bring a tent and set it up out there. I think they would have good audiences.

We now live in Pond Creek.

Elder W. H. Rhoads has been here. We think of having services, as there are several families of Saints in the country round about Pond Creek.

A few days ago a couple of Utah elders stopped at our house and left a tract. I asked them if they were members of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, or of the Utah Church. They said, "The original or Utah Church." I told them I was a member of the Reorganized Church, as was my husband, and that I knew it was the true church, for I was led to it by the power of God in answer to prayer, and I knew God would not let me be deceived, and I had had many evidences of the truthfulness of this work. I told them the people shut us out of the schoolhouse because some thought we were like the Utah people and believed in polygamy. They said they did not teach nor practice polygamy now, but a person could not take the Bible and prove it was wrong if God give a command. They wanted to talk on authority; said the keys of the kingdom were delivered to the Twelve having equal authority, and at the death of the prophet had authority to govern. I told them the prophet anointed his son, Joseph, as his successor, and the authority should remain in his lineage till Jesus should come. He said that could not be proven. I told him that I had read "Presidency and Priesthood," and other works, and I was certain it could be proven and I knew this was the true branch, for the Lord had revealed it to me. I told them I would be glad if I could say or do something that would convince all the honest in heart who were scattered in the dark and cloudy day, that this was the true church, and that they might all be united in the truth, and be gathered to Zion.

I heard they preached on the streets in Pond Creek the next night. How sad that they are out teaching such a doctrine that the way of truth is evilly spoken of. I hope the church papers and our elders may keep agitating this question, showing the people the difference between them and our people, as I am positive many would listen to this gospel if they knew we were not like the Utah people. Pray for us that we may be faithful and useful.

Ever hoping and praying for the redemption of Zion, I am, your sister in Christ,

MRS EFFIE J. McCullough.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., May 15.

Dear Brethren:—I am busy going from house to house and holding cottage meetings, and twice on Sunday in our hall. I have two new openings in a part of the city that has not been worked.

As I move out the work opens up before me. I talked and read with a Christian lady last Monday, and she made up her mind to be baptized; so she and another lady and man are ready for next Sunday, and there are others who told me they are going to come in just as soon as they can get things arranged. I feel encouraged very much.

We had two Brighamites with us last Sunday, and I had a little hitch with them, and one of them gave in and said that he believed that Joseph should have taken his father's place, and we were right on the tithing. He is coming back next Sunday. He seemed to be honest, and if so, no doubt he will come into the right body.

The Saints all feel encouraged over the work here.

It seems that since I have decided to give all my time to the work, many inducements to quit have been brought before me. The B. F. Avery Plow Works sent for me to come down to see them, so I went, and they tried every way to get me to accept a position of foreman at a good salary. But I could not. I told them I was appointed to do missionary work and I must be true to my trust; but still they insist, and say they will wait on me for four weeks, to see if I can make some arrangements to take charge of their works. I had rather do the will of my Father and live, than to lay up great treasures on earth and be a beggar over on the other side.

May the dear Lord help us to be faithful in this great work.

In gospel bonds,

J. W. METCALF.

HUNTSVILLE, Mo., May 16.

Editors Herald:—After General Conference
I visited with mother at Holden, Missouri, for three days. I am glad to see the work at Holden looking so well. Several families of Saints have located there, which helps the

I had the pleasure of attending the meeting called to organize the Independence Stake. I came then to Bevier, and met Bro. J. A. Tanner, and together we went to Higbee, Missouri, stopping on the way a few hours at Macon and Moberly. At Higbee we preached over two Sundays, and on the 13th we came to Huntsville. We were met at the depot by Bro. George Tryon. Bro. Tanner called the Saints together in a business meeting, and after some pleasant remarks they made choice of Bro. George Summerfield as president; Bro. Louis Tryon priest; Mark Edwards teacher; George Tryon, secretary and treasurer. We hope better things will be heard from Huntsville now.

I expect Bro. Earl Corthell to join me here, Saturday. We have an appointment this week at Bro. George Summerfield's house; and Sunday at eleven a. m. at Mt. Hope, a Presbyterian church three miles northeast of Huntsville.

There are three or four protracted meetings going on in this part of the vineyard, and the people are quite busy, but we will sound the battle cry, and do what we can. In hope of victory,

Your brother, WALTER W. SMITH.

CLAY CROSS, England, May 4. Dear Brother Joseph:-It has long been talked about, but has at last become an accomplished fact, that the Clay Cross branch has a chapel of its own to worship in. It was opened April 28, 1901. Bro. Thomas Taylor, of Birmingham, was invited, but sickness prevented his coming. Our district president, Bro. Samuel Platts, had charge of the day's services. Bro. J. W. Rushton was the preacher for the day and the ensuing week. Brn. Joseph Arber and Sharp were present, which helped to make the day enjoyable and pleasant. The day was a special feature in our lives. The sermons delivered by Bro. Rushton have been inspiring. Some outside the church say they never heard the like before. The writer thinks the church has an able and excellent worker in Bro. Rushton, and believes he is worthy the support of the church. May God bless him in his labor of

There seem to be good prospects for an ingathering here. For a number of years we have been renting a room built by Bro. Simon Holmes, Sen., which is like many more of the Saints' meeting rooms, in a back street. But when we consider that the brother built this room specially for a Saints' meeting room, and that he has been the means, largely, of holding the work together in Clay Cross for a number of years, and that through his aid the new chapel has been built, the writer thinks it speaks volumes for him. The Saints, realizing that this room was becoming unsuited for the work, at a business meeting, November 5, 1896, resolved that a building fund be started, and that each member should pay a shilling as a start, and three pence per week after. Two brethren were selected to collect the money, and a treasurer and secretary appointed. However, none were expected to pay who were not able to do so. The writer has not been able to pay a single cent, being unable to support his family for over six years, through sickness, but he has done what he could other ways.

Bro. Simon Holmes, Sen., was selected treasurer and myself secretary. By this means, with donations which some gave, there was accumulated, October 17, 1897, £6. 11s. 11d. This is quite a sum, considering our numbers. Then a cloud arose which threatened the work, but it was overcome. The fund kept increasing, and in course of time the Saints thought they must be looking for land to build upon. Three brethren were selected to inquire about a piece which they had in view, but it couldn't be obtained, so it was left for awhile. Then the branch selected myself, Brn. E. Wragg, and J. Holmes a committee to select and buy ground suitable to build a chapel on. This was done. with the aid of Bro. Simon Holmes, Sen., at a cost of £50, with the turn-over. Bro. John Holmes and the writer were selected a committe to let the building contract, and to them was largely left the design of the building. Bro Simon Holmes, Sen., promised to furnish £200. as a loan to build with, at five per cent interest. On November 12, 1900, the contract was let to Mr. Eustace Tinkler. of Clay Cross, to build a chapel according to the plans passed by the Urbun, district council, for the sum of £200. Immediately the work was commenced, and was completed in March, the contractor receiving his money on April 1, 1901. After the building was completed, the next thing was for the sanitary inspector to pass upon it. While we were waiting for the walls to dry, the brethren and sisters cleaned it, ready for use. In the meantime the committee obtained the seats; Bro. Joseph Naylor bought a piece of cocoa matting for the sisles; Bro. Simon Holmes, Jr., and children, bought carpet for the platform, and his children gave £1 towards six chairs for the platform, and then it was ready for opening. Bro. Simon Holmes, Sen., being in business, solicited aid from friends and travelers, and obtained quite a considerable sum. This, together with collections and profits from a public tea which was had in the new chapel, April 29, has paid for everything except the £200. loan.

We are all pleased. Every member has done his best. All are praiseworthy—there is no exception.

The tea on April 29 was arranged by Brn. G. H. Holmes and F. Cousins, and netted £4. 17s.  $1\frac{1}{2}$ d.

The chapel is thirty-six feet long and twenty-four wide, outside. It is built of brick and the roof is slated. It stands east and west, and has seven windows, three on the north side, three on the south, and one in the west end; two ventilators, two feet square, one at either end. Ventilation can also be had from every window; the top end of three panes, each a little over twelve inches square, can be swung in about seven inches, the bottom end working on hinges. This means gives us about sixteen feet of ventilation. The windows are arched, being five feet high and three feet six inches wide. The building stands on front end of lot, with entrance from east end. The front is best pressed brick. The floor is three inches higher than the causeway. There are two pillars on either side, upon which are two principals for the roof. The ceiling is boarded and varnished. The room is twelve feet high at walls. The walls are plastered. In the west end there is a platform eighteen inches high, six feet wide, and nineteen feet six inches long, leaving an entrance on the north side into an antercom. In the platform there is a baptismal font, seven feet long, four feet wide, and four feet deep, with steps into it. The platform is railed, with entrance in center. The seats are movable, with back rail, and varnished. They are nine feet long. Six of the seats have reversible back rails to accommodate Sunday school classes. On the other seats the rails are fixed. Should the room be crowded, it will seat two hundred people. In addition to this there is an antercom on the north side joining the chapel twelve feet long and nine feet wide which has an entrance at the back, and also from the chapel, with water and other accommodations to it. The outbuildings are, water closet, coal house, and ash pit.

On the south side we have twelve feet of our own ground, with boundary wall built along the front. On the north side an alley runs along the building twelve feet wide. We bought six feet of this, and the next party to us will have to buy the other six, so they cannot shut out our light. Many people have admired the building and remark of it being so light. You will see by the newspaper that we are trying to get the people to see the light. We are trying to get them to see who we are, and what we believe. We are determined, by God's help, to do our utmost for the advancement of his work, and the writer realizes that when we have done our utmost, we shall have only done our duty.

I am not able to be a subscriber to the HERALD under the present circumstances. but other brethren let me have theirs, and when I scan its pages, many times that peaceful influence of God's Holy Spirit pervades my being, giving me to realize those letters and articles which have been penned by its direction, and I often feel that "It's good to be a Saint in latter days." The more I see of this latter-day work, the better I like it, for I know that it is the work of God. In the various departments of the HERALD there comes food for thought, and all are of equal worth. When I have read its contents penned by my brethren and sisters, some defending the work, some portraying it, some bearing testimony to its truthfulness, some writing on Sunday school work, some upon child training, some upon preserving our bodies and health, etc., it makes me feel proud that we have such able brethren and sisters in the church, and the writer's prayer continually goes out for them that our heavenly Father will bless them and make them equal to the occasion that is before them. To all I feel to say, Do not be discouraged. No matter what others may do, it is our duty to do right.

We have been pleased with our brethren the church has, at different times, sent into this country from America. Their counsel and advice have been good, and we have been pleased when they have been in our midst. I shall ever remember the day when our worthy Bro. Caffall was seventy, when that Sabbath morning he stood up in a priesthood meeting clothed with God's Spirit and imparted instruction to those present. It was grand; it was meat in due season, and though it stung me pretty sharply, it was a lesson which I trust will remain with me all the days of my life.

I have no doubt that Bro. Caffall and the brethren which have been here, will be sorry to learn that Sr. Emma Holmes, wife of Bro. Simon Holmes, Sen., is dead. She was buried April 27, 1900, the writer preaching the funeral service. She has gone to rest; her end was peace.

I have been unable to work for over six years, the doctors say I am suffering from consumption, and I know that it is true, but I am not in despair. Some might wonder why. Let me say that it's because the God of heaven has revealed unto me the fact that in his own due time he will raise me up by his power, and give me health and strength, and I trust that I may be an instrument in his hands to accomplish much good, and bring praise and honor to his most holy name. Ever praying for the welfare of Zion, and God's people everywhere, I am,

Your brother in Christ, CHARLES COUSINS.

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, May 18.

Editors Herald:—For the benefit of coworkers and all others in any way concerned, I am pleased to be able to report a spirit of increasing and commendable liberality existing among the leading authorities of the church of the Latter Day Saints in this city toward the Reorganized Church.

Before starting upon my mission to Utah a year ago, I called upon Dr. E. A. Scammon, of Columbus, Kansas. He told me he had a cousin living in Salt Lake City, Apostle M. F. Cowley, whom he wished me to call upon, while in the city, giving me a letter of introduction. Through the acquaintance thus developed, I resolved to make application to the quorum of twelve, through Apostle Cowley, for the use of their ward meetinghouses. The following correspondence will indicate what we asked for and the results:

"SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, March 27, 1901. "Elder M. F. Cowley, Dear Brother:—As an authorized representative of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints I have a request to make of you. If you can grant the same, I shall esteem it a great favor, both in my own behalf and that of the church in whose interests I am laboring.

"I wish the privilege of delivering three or four discourses in the various ward meetinghouses in the city, at such times as may be suitable to your people, and agreed upon by them and us. Any expense involved in heating, lighting, janitoring, etc., we will of course, defray.

"In these efforts, I shall confine myself exclusively to an affirmative presentation of our reasons for believing Joseph Smith to be his father's successor in the presidency of the church.

"I think I may depend on your acquaintance with me, brief though it has been, and your own knowledge of the character and spirit of some at least of my efforts here, as a sufficient and satisfactory guarantee to you that I will not abuse any privileges that you may find it practicable to offer to me, and that I will duly appreciate any favors you may grant; and manifest, not only in conducting the services contemplated, but at all times, a proper appreciation of your kindness.

"These considerations, together with the fact that it is the custom of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints to extend to your elders a free use of their church edifices, emboldens me to ask you to present my petition to your fellow apostles, and return to me the decision or opinion of your quorum respecting the propriety of extending to me the courtesy asked; or, if you prefer, present the matter to all the quorums assembled at the approaching general conference, or to the general conference itself for decision. Your friend,

"W. S. PENDER."

"SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, April 4, 1901.

"Dear Mr. Pender:—In answer to your request to use our ward meetinghouses in this city for the purpose of delivering some lectures, I find it agreeable to my brethren on the conditions named in your communication. Of course you will have to arrange with the ward bishops as to time, light, heat, etc.

"Trusting that this will be satisfactory, and that you will meet with cordial treatment by all, I remain,

"Very respectfully,
"M. F. COWLEY.

"P. S.—Please call on the president of the stake also, Pres. Angus M. Cannon, as in all matters pertaining to his stake he should be consulted.

M. F. C."

Later I called on Pres. Angus M. Cannon and asked for the use of the second ward meetinghouse, where I had previously had some discussion with Elder H. S. Tanner. He gave me the following note to the bishop of the ward, viz.:

"SALT LAKE, April 19, 1901.

"Elder Heber C. Iverson, Bishop of Second Ward, Salt Lake Stake of Zion, Dear Brother:
—It has been decided by the council of the apostles to authorize Elder W. S. Pender, of the 'Reorganized Church,' to occupy our ward meetinghouses to deliver several lectures specified in his letter of 27th ult. It is accordingly my wish that you arrange with him unto the end that he occupy your building at such times as may be convenient to you each. Respectfully, etc.,

"Angus M. Cannon."

Arrangements were readily effected with the bishop of the second ward, Elder Heber C. Iverson, and services held April 29 and May 1 and 2 at eight p.m. The attendance was good and attention excellent, the house being quite well filled the last night, though a heavy rain was falling at and before the hour of convening. No charge was made for lighting or janitoring. Elder B. H. Roberts was present at each of the services and reviewed the last two efforts. This was rather unexpected, as I understood they were averse to discussion and did not expect me to engage in such.

In his first review, Elder Roberts propounded some questions which he requested me to answer the next night. At the conclusion of the service I told him, privately, that I would be compelled to ignore both his questions and criticisms and proceed with my "affirmative presentation of our reasons for believing Joseph Smith to be his father's successor in the presidency of the church." Otherwise I would violate my own terms proposed in the application for the use of the churches, and my agreement with Apostle Cowley. He insisted that I reply. To this I could not consent until he procured the following note from Elder Cowley:

"Dear Mr. Pender:-Incidentally I learn that from conversation and correspondence with me, you entertain the idea that you are not at liberty to reply to any remarks or arguments which may be offered by any of my brethren. In this view I wish to say you are mistaken, and that we hold no such restrictions over you. You are at perfect liberty to answer any of the brethren who may reply to your statements. Trusting that this will correct any misunderstanding you may have on this subject, I remain,

"Very respectfully,

"M. F. COWLEY."

Elder Roberts' reviews were made in a friendly spirit. His closing speech was an able effort. I especially appreciated his courtesy in refraining from criticising any of our positions, in his closing speech, other than those I had introduced and discussed. In this respect, the self-imposed restriction which forbade us criticising the faith of the people here, found a ready response from Eider Roberts.

I next arranged with President Cannon and Bishop Isaac Barton of the nineteenth ward, speaking there May 15, 16, 17, at eight p. m. Elder H. S. Tanner reviewed me each night. The attendance here was rather small, there being about two hundred out each night.

At the close of these meetings the people were very friendly. Some did not hesitate to so express themselves. The more acquaintance I have with the Latter Day Saints here the better I like them. I prefer decidedly to work with the people, so far as possible, and enjoy their friendship, rather than work against them and incur their enmity.

The old-time prejudice existing between the two organizations is not nearly so rabid now as in the past. That it may continue to subside until it is finally eradicated, and a full and dispassionate consideration of differences made possible, is my prayer, in the name of Jesus Christ. Amen.

ENFIELD, England, April 5.

Dear Brother Joseph:-I am a priest working in this part of the Master's vineyard and being blessed in my labors by the power of his Holy Spirit, working under the London branch and among the poor Saints,-poor in temporal things, but rich in the Master's

I hold meetings in my house, where we have from three to sixteen in attendance; we have an elder from the London branch nearly every Sunday. Those who meet here are mostly young, and are seeking the truth.

Since I have thrown my doors open God has, in his loving mercy, blessed my labors far more than I deserve. On the first Sunday of this year I baptized our brother, J. A. Judd, and hope in a few weeks to baptize two of my children, my eldest daughter and son, aged sixteen and fourteen years.

My hope and prayer is that by the help of our Father I shall be able to wake up some of the sleeping Saints here. I see signs of an awakening already, and thank God for the same. A young friend of our beloved Bro. Judd meets with us every Sunday, and is waiting to enter into the family of our Master. I often travel to the next town, Ponder's End, to encourage the Saints there. It is about one and three fourths miles from here. It always fills me with thankfulness and joy when I see them in our meetings, which is verv often.

We shall soon begin in the open air here, and we shall then form ourselves into a branch, by God's help.

> Your brother in gospel bonds. JOSEPH ABRAHAM KEMP.

WILLIAMS BAY, Wis., May 18. Editors Herald:-This finds me in my mission field, holding meetings over Sunday with Bro. W. A. McDowell. Had the pleasure also of meeting Bro. P. Muceus here.

Williams Bay is on Geneva Lake, a Wisconsin gem of the first water, and is in extent four miles wide by ten long. We noticed along its shores, and skirting the lake all around, parks, summer cottages, and homes of millionaires. The Y. M. C. A. has its grounds, hotel, large tabernacle for meetings,

The town of Lake Geneva is a sort of western Bar Harbor. Some of the residences are million dollar affairs. On an eminence near the lake is the Yerkes Observatory. Its telescope is sixty feet in length; diameter of lens forty inches; weight of telescope twenty tons. It is of one quarter greater power than the Lick Observatory telescope in California, and the largest in the world mounted in the same way, so our informant told us. The machinery for revolving the dome, and operating the telescope, is, of course, perfect for observing and photographing the heavens, though our visit was wrongly timed to see the manner of adjustment.

From points of vantage along the lake, not many fairer views meet the eye anywhere than this beautiful body of clear water in its picturesque setting. Splendid chances for kodakers!

Twelve years ago, in company with my sister, thinking nothing about missionary work, and altogether innocent of Latter Day Saints near by, or their doctrine, I spent a summer vacation at the lake. Then the visible was the all, now it is but an incident, yet one to be appreciated by a lover of nature or art. Our Latter Day Saint church is one mile north from the bay.

I expect to meet Bro. Muceus at Janesville the first of the week, and move on still north to conference at Valley Junction, June 1 and 2.

While in places and among faces new, the old friends are not forgotten, and a shade of sadness comes o'er us in the separation and change of field. But we move along, hopeful of good. Success to the HERALD and its force. Your brother.

M. F. GOWELL.

OUNGAH, Ont., May 18.

Dear Herald:-I think I was at Wabash when I wrote last. I have been doing the best I could under the circumstances. I was at Wallaceburg, St. Clair, Kimball, Wilksport, Bear Creek, St. Thomas, London, Chatham. In the suburbs of Chatham I found a new opening, a store rented by Bro. Tyrrell, president of branch. I am now with the Green Valley branch. The new opening at Chatham is continued by officers of the branch and Sunday school. They have Sunday school Sunday mornings at Taylor avenue, and preaching in the evening; and in the hall on King street Sunday school and prayer meeting in the afternoon, and preaching in the evening, dividing up the work the best the brethren can to suit.

Bear Creek is also a new opening about ten miles from Kimball.

I am glad to see the old Olive branch revived again at Kimball, one of the oldest branches of Canada. Their officer is a teacher, Bro. Johnson, an old time Saint of about twenty-eight or thirty years. This is the branch where Brn. Robb, Chute, Davis, Duncan Campbell, and others had their starts; also some of Lamoni's brethren in the great latter-day work. In the winter Bro. Phelan Shaw was ordained a priest and made president of the branch. Bro. David Johnson was made teacher and recording secretary; Bro. John Gow financial secretary; and Bro. John Andrews treasurer. Some thought wise to send for Miss Jessie Hackett, of Stevenson, to come and organize a Sunday school. It was done, and now there are two divisions, one at Kimball, and one at Wilksport, ten miles away; but all meet the first Sunday in every month for sacrament at Kimball, old and young having both meeting and Sunday school.

Elder G. Skinner, president of the St. Clair branch, goes to Kimball monthly to administer the sacrament. He is well apprecisted.

I had a church full at Wallaceburg, conducting a funeral. A young man, not of the church, died of consumption. I was called to St. Clair to attend another funeral, that of Sr. Katy Patterson; she died of consumption. Had been married about two years. She was sick for some time. Funeral services were held in Baptist church.

From there to Kimball, and met with Bro. Green. We labored together for about a week. Went then to Petrolia. Met Elder Samuel Tomlinson, who was caring for a sick and dying mother. At death Sr. Tomlinson was seventy-eight years old, the mother of, I think, twelve children, two sons elders in this church, Samuel and George.

At St. Clair I told the people that the time was coming when all would bow the knee and all confess the great name of Jesus; although now we were so divided religiously the time was not far distant when we would understand one another better, and especially our position towards all peoples and tongues. I told them Christ's mission did not only reach man but all that were cursed through man's disobedience would be made right by Jesus, the Savior of the world. His mission was to destroy the works of the Devil. Thank God for such hope. I had a good, interested audience. Good feeling seemed to prevail.

I am here now with Bro. Thorp, priest and president of the Green Valley branch. We are holding preaching meeting nightly. Fairly good turnouts in the schoolhouse. I came here from Chatham a week ago. Intend to stay as long as interest and wisdom demand.

The Chatham district conference will be held at the hall at Zone on June 7, 8, 9, and 10. Hope we shall come in meekness and be punctual. We must come prepared to combat evil, and ever be on guard against the wiles of Satan. We should avoid fault-finding; that is anti-Christ rather than Christlike.

Come, then, rally with sacrifice and good will towards all at the Zone conference, so we may rejoice in the Holy One of Israel.

I thank you one and all, dear Saints, for your kindness to me. If any have found me lacking or in fault, please forgive me and pray for me, as I do for you, and the progress of this great latter-day work.

Yours in hope,

T. A. PHILLIPS.

PIPESTONE, Minn., May 20.

Editors Herald:—Bro. Hayer and the writer left home on May 8, Hills Minnesota, being our objective point. Arrived there the 10th. Although only about four hundred miles from Lamoni, yet we found quite a change in the weather.

There are only two families of Saints here, but they let their light shine; hence their lives are felt for good. We also found Bro. Ben Johnson here, one of Graceland's students, and he is trying to play his part in this great latter-day work.

I spoke Sunday morning, and Bro. Hayer in the evening, at Hills to small but interested congregations. Came to Pipestone on the 17th. There is not much interest manifested here, but we held meeting morning and evening Sunday. After morning service we retired to a little lake located on the Indian reservation to attend to the ordinance of baptism, which had been previously arranged for. As we gathered at the water, with nature smiling upon us in all her splendor, our minds went back to the time when Jesus, our blessed Master, went under the liquid wave; and it brought peace to our souls that years will not be able to erase. The candidate was dressed in white; and after singing and prayer Bro. Hayer led her into the water and buried her with Christ. It was a beautiful scene.

At present we are domiciled with Bro. and Sr. Henderson, who know how to make a lonely missionary feel at home. There are only two families of Saints here, Henderson and Dickes, and it was their godly walk and saintly lives that added one more to their number here. May the good Lord help his people everywhere to live lives that will be worthy of imitation.

We expect to travel this summer with horse and buggy. We have a good buggy and harness, but as yet no horse, but think we will get one soon. We shall try to reach as many places as we can; and if there are any Saints in South Dakota or southern Minnesota who have openings for preaching, if they will write us at Pipestone, in care of Bro. A. F. Henderson, we will try to comply with requests.

Ever praying for the final triumph of Zion, Your brother in Christ,

GEO. W. THORBURN.

COLUMBUS JUNCTION, Iowa, May 19. Editors Herald:—When I read Bro. C. Scott's letter, and he said he had been silent for several months, I remembered that I had not written to the HERALD for a year or more, and perhaps it was also my duty to write.

The last week in March I had the pleasure of fulfilling a promise made several years ago. That was to stop a few days for a visit with the St. Joseph Saints on my way to General Conference. Sr. Pearl Best met me at the depot and conducted me to their cozy home on the hill. There Bro. Best and family gave me a warm greeting. Had a good time with all the Saints. Preached seven times while there to good sized and appreciative congregations. May our Father bless them all. Hope I have not violated any rules of courtesy by preaching there without first getting permission from missionary in charge

I need not say anything about the General Conference, for I believe it is a conceded fact that we all enjoyed it. I know I did. Also the kindness of the Independence Saints.

Bro. Williams, president of the Armstrong branch, Kansas, requested me to come and preach for them, which I did on Sunday after conference at eleven a. m., and 7:30 p. m., to a large house full of attentive listeners. I was blessed in presenting the truth. God truly has a devoted people there. In the afternoon we had one of the best testimony meetings I have attended for a long time. I had intended to leave next morning but the Christian tie that binds was too strong to break, and I stayed over one day more.

On Monday our good colored brother, G. H. Graves, of Chicago, and the writer, by special request of the generous-hearted Sr. Henry Loosemore, attended the sisters' aid society. To say the least they had a good, profitable time, and we enjoyed it. Bro. Williams has reason to thank God for so noble a class to preside over; they are truly willing workers. Their Sunday school reminded me of a beehive in flower time. The Saints there truly make one feel at home with them, notwithstanding they were all strangers to me except Bro. Williams. May our heavenly Father reward them for their kindness.

On Tuesday I started for Iowa. Before I left Independence I received an urgent request from Burlington, Iowa, to come and administer to a sick girl, which I did as soon as I could. She was wonderfully blessed. I was there one week. Baptized six,—she was one of them. That makes 425 for me in my eighteen years in the field.

On the 16th I came here in answer to a request of I. M. Lane. He hired the opera house at three dollars a meeting. Small crowds so far. Yesterday I sent my notices to the editor of the Columbus Safeguard, published here by Mr. O. S. Todd, but he refused to publish them for us; he would do nothing which would help Mormonism along. I gave his statement a public airing last night. The town is all astir today over his acts: I anticipate a lively time. The gospel is a new thing to this people. Mr. Lane and his noble wife are doing all they can to get the gospel before the people. God bless their effort. In bonds,

J. S. ROTH.

WALLSEND, N. S. W., Australia, April 16.

Editors Herald:-When I last wrote I was out on the frontier at Lismore, fighting against heavy odds, bent on planting the standard of light and freedom in that place. We found that a stout heart and a stiff upper lip, inspired by a loving trust and confidence in God, were proof against the treacherous tactics and smokeless powder of the opposing forces. We had no open opposition, for the enemy preserved a "masterful silence" in this respect, and did their work secretly by going from house to house, warning the people to keep away from our meetings. However, we succeeded in getting a few to come and hear the angel's message, and after a good deal of patient labor, our efforts were crowned with a measure of success. On March 20, it was my pleasure to baptize Mrs. Lewis. Mrs. Singh, and the Misses Kate and Annie Claney, in the waters of the Richmond river. On Sunday, March 24, we again troubled the waters by burying Mrs. Hicks, Mrs. Hutley, Miss M. E. Claney, and Miss Elsie Hardy, beneath the liquid wave, and inducting them into the Church of Jesus Christ. These are the first authorized baptisms that have taken place in the Richmond river, but we trust that this small band of Saints will form the nucleus of a good branch at Lismore.

The same afternoon, the eight new members were confirmed, and so marked was the Spirit's presence, that one lady who could not understand the laying on of hands previously, was thoroughly convinced of its efficacy. A few days later, I left to attend our district reunion in Sydney, leaving Bro. C. Avery to keep the interest up for a little time by holding Bible classes. We have now some fourteen members on the Richmond river.

Our district reunion convened April 5, 6, 7, and 8, and proved very encouraging and beneficial to all.

In the social meetings the serene, holy presence of the Spirit's power was felt. At one session words of reproof, admonition, and encouragement were spoken from on high, telling the Saints that they had not been faithful in obeying the voice of inspiration in the past, and that some had not been willing to hearken to those whom the Lord had raised up to teach his laws, and to preach his gospel before the world. The cheering promise was given that if the Saints were faithful in hearkening to God's voice, and to those whom he had sent to teach his laws, they should become a mighty people in this land. Those of the priesthood were warned not to seek for pride of place, but "in honor to prefer one another."

The preaching was done by Bro. Kaler and the writer. Meetings were carried on by the Balmain branch until the following Thursday. We left for home on the 13th, to attend to a little church work in the Newcastle district before leaving again for the Richmond. Am pleased to find that our noble little band of workers in Wallsend are slowly collecting the funds necessary to erect their new church building. May God bless their faithful efforts. Hopefully yours,

WALTER J. HAWORTH.

DEER LODGE, Mont., May 21.

Editors Herald:-Please announce that I am booked to leave for Australia July 26, and five days before this date will be traveling to the coast. I am authorized to receive subscriptions to the Australian mission paper-75 cents a year. If paper is not started, all money will be refunded. Subscriptions continue to arrive. Those who have sent their names may now send money to me and I will receipt for it. Several have donated handsomely, others their mites. Bro. Haworth writes me that "fail" or "give up" are not recognized in this matter, and he means to "pray and not faint" until the American Saints have furnished two hundred fifty subscriptions, or the equivalent of it. He is of Cornish extraction, and it is a quality of the Cornish character never to give up. Every week brings encouragement, and the brethren on this side of the big pond must not be surprised to hear these appeals quite eften, till the above number has been realized. I take this means of thanking all who have thus far given their support, and to say that it is not going to fail. One sister, who helps everything in the church, said: "I want that Australian mission paper to go-put me down for $25.00." Another gave $5.00. Others gave pamphlets, Bro. Hunt fifty, Bro. I. N. White fifty. Many gave twenty-five cents, fifty cents, and one dollar. This paper is not an imaginary but a real need. It takes three months to get a notice to Saints of that mission through our HERALD, and much of the matter in our American papers is not suited to the peculiar local demands of that country. Shall we wait ten years, or shall we have your loyal support this year and have this paper going and meeting our present needs by the first of next January.

Another thing: A paper over there will give our church prestige and better denominational standing. It means a voice in local affairs that we have not now, only in a very limited way, on sufferance, in the secular press. There ought to be fifty out of the thousands who read this who can send seventy-five cents each, and not distress themselves nor the church treasury. Let us have them in the next few weeks, and I promise not to bother you any more on this subject. Till July 20, address me at Bozeman, Montana; after that, G. P. O. Sydney, N. S. Wales, Australia.

GOMER R. WELLS.

Editors Herald:-I have been in the church over six years. I received a marvelous testimony of its divinity, at the first, when being confirmed under the elders' hands. I by command of God's servant, who said, Receive ye the Holy Ghost, received the power of God which penetrated my system from head to foot. The joy was unspeakable! I can see why Peter said he knew the moment, the day, and the hour that God revealed himself by his Spirit.

I find that there is no standing still in this work. I hear some complaining after being in the church for years that things are not as they used to be. The way I see it is that at first God greatly blesses us with his Spirit to make us strong, and we are apt to lull in confidence that we have found God of a truth, and forget our duty toward God and the church; for instance, to think of supporting the missionaries and their families by our dues in tithes and free will offerings. Some say our missionaries do not go like they used to in olden times, without purse or scrip. Truly the apostles and seventies sent out by Jesus testified that they lacked nothing; but watch Paul's testimony where he suffered privations; the scene changed. The Master proved that the laborer was to be provided for when there were no Saints, scarcely, to do it: hence the difference, and all the difference, God could provide some other way now. But the law of tithing and free will offering was ordained very early, and will make us better in many ways, teach us to care for one another,—the first principles for establishing a Zion,—like the city of Enoch. The easiest time to obey God's laws is when we have his Spirit to ground us in the faith for the day of trial and adversity.

I am pleased to think that God has heard and answered the prayers of many in Wales. Brethren and sisters, we in the Eastern district feel that God has answered our prayers by the revealing advice given to the president of the church. We need aid here, in missionary work. The counsel as to administering to the sick was for me, and others too. Our desires for the recovery of the sick have led us to have sorrow, being prompted by sympathy, more than the Spirit. We are in a church of learning, line upon line, no standing still.

The work moves slowly here, indeed, but surely. It is God's work, and not man's.

We grieve that Bro. Bishop has been removed, as he had adapted himself to the way of moving the work on. Preaching out is the only way to reach the people here. They will not come in.

We are fourteen members here, and we hope to all endure to the end, knowing the race is not to the swift or the strong.

Your brother in Christ,

THOS. JONES.

MONDAMIN, Iowa, May 25.

Editors Herald:-I came to this district (Little Sioux) immediately after General Conference, and have since held meetings in various places. For the past two weeks I have held meetings in Mondamin on Sundays and at other points through the week.

I have met many who were brought into the church through the efforts, I believe, of the ministry who were here last year, and they are rejoicing, wondering why the whole world cannot see as they see. There are some others, to all appearances, who have humbled themselves before the Lord and repented of their sins whom I think will soon knock at the door. These are the kind we want and the kind we need. The records that show the baptism of such will stand the test of the law of God. (D. C. 17: 7.)

In many places clouds of prejudice and ignorance are hanging in the sky, and they cast their darkening shades over the sons of men. I have found one class of people I cannot reach,-those who will not investigate. Prejudice and ignorance make a peculiar composition. When the mind is crammed with it there comes from the mouth strange words and from the bands strange deeds. As I gaze upon the history of the past and view the conditions of the present I am more and more convinced that reason should go hand in hand with religion, otherwise deception may be fostered and the truth forsaken. How lonely many creeds would be, how few followers would the systems of men have if all that claims to be divine was considered seriously.

The world moves on in the footsteps of its ancient forefathers who often chose of two lights the lesser as the greater, and this because they wanted their opinions honored and their works complimented.

Strange! when books like "Ben Hur" or "Uncle Tom's Cabin" come along, their authors are praised and the books esteemed; when the Book of Mormon comes along, claiming to be inspired, lo! it is condemned and with nothing for the author but slander and "fraud!"

With Christ and his work it was the same. When the Jews could not overthrow his positions they turned over the rocks hunting for a flaw in his character. When this could not be found, they asserted that his character was bad, when this could not be proven they resorted to the cross, nails, and vinegar! The same kind of procedure has been carried on against the work of God in these last days. The world will some day learn that much of what is beautiful in the eyes of men is not beautiful in the eyes of heaven; that all that is bright in appearance is not of a lasting character, and that the lowest stone in the foundation of God is infinitely higher than the highest pinnacles of the temples of men.

My earnest desire is to walk in the paths of wisdom, learn my faults wherein I may offend others, and then throw them to the four winds.

In hope of a blessed immortality,
PAUL M. HANSON.

BARNES, Kan., May 22.

Editors Herald:—In the last conference year I was able to cause Satan to rage at times. He surely would not have become so uneasy unless he fears to an extent.

While here last July, Bro. Mannering and I were holding meeting in the tent. As I was taking a walk one afternoon, five young men, as I passed by them, gave me a terrible cursing. I felt awfully downcast as I returned to my room; there I prayed that these thoughts might be removed from my mind. When Bro. Mannering came I almost forgot to tell him about it. We went on to Ness county. There I was threatened by some young men. At another place I was ordered out of the house. At the first place they said, "He is a Mormon;" second, was because I wanted order; third, "I will learn you how to come around here proselyting." The latter perhaps had other fears. Three times in the one year, for a new missionary to receive such treatment causes him to reflect.

I also saw the hand of God displayed when he sent an angel to prepare the hearts of the people for my coming. I feel better now than ever before in the ministry. Am preaching in the Christian church building every night, they largely furnishing the music. Interest is good. May you prosper and all be well.

I am in the conflict.

PREPARED READING FOR JUNE MEETINGS OF DAUGHTERS OF ZION LOCALS.

Dear Sisters:-As usual I have given to this the title of "Readings," and yet it is simply a talk which I wish to have with you this morning. Without doubt you have all read the report of our president, Sr. M. E. Hulmes, also the secretary's report, before the general meeting held at Independence during the session of our late General Conference in April. From these you will have learned of the progress and present condition of the work and will discover that the present year finds us in advance of where the last one left us. That this advance is not so decided as we could wish, leaves no room whatever for discouragement, but should rather be an incentive to the doubling of our diligence. It is the soldier who is found at his post of duty when time drags its weary flight through the long hours of uncheered night and darkness, who is the soldier that may be trusted. It requires far more courage then to be vigilant, alert, and faithful, than it does when the banners of success are flying, and an approving multitude stands by ready to applaud and cheer. The former condition requires both nerve and purpose, the latter may be met by individuals devoid of any great measure of either. It is my firm conviction that we have in our working band a large majority of the former class and far more are heart and soul enlisted with us than the number attending our meetings, as a rule, would indicate, for, in many cases, this non-attendance is in itself a tribute to the principles they together with ourselves are seeking to establish. Duty at home prevents attendance.

But it is barely possible that some of us by making a greater effort, coupled with some slight sacrifice, might be present oftener than we are. Let us then make this sacrifice, put forth this effort and cheer the faithfully attending sisters by our presence.

We are entering upon the labors, not only of a new year, a new century, but of a new epoch in the history of our faith. For the past three months we have been giving our attention to the consideration of what may be called the fundamental principles of all home training, namely: Faith, Obedience and Industry. Some excellent papers have been prepared and sent in. Some of these have been published and others will appear later.

I said we were entering upon a new epoch in the history of our faith and it is the ushering in of a state of things absolutely demanding the exercise of these principles and in which the individual who has not been trained and has not acquired each one of them, will find himself handicapped in the race, if not indeed wholly unprepared to enter the list with those who are striving lawfully for the prize of eternal life. And it is well in this connection to notice what Paul has said in regard to absolute need of striving lawfully, if we expect to be crowned.

It must be seen at a glance that in order to trust much of our temporal interests in the hands of others, faith, great faith, is required. And yet this is nothing more nor less than what God requires of us, and what we subscribed to when we joined the church. Have we so taught our children that they understand and are ready to obey this law? Have we this faith ourselves, and are we ready to obey it? We are only a little in advance of many in the world who by the enlightenment of the universal light which Christ brought into the world are convinced that the present organization of society is wrong. That God never intended this beautiful world of his to be monopolized by the few, nor its wealth to be held by them, while the many toiled for a bare subsistence and thousands went supperless to bed. In saving this I am not speaking of political agitators, but of the dispassionate utterances of calm thinking men who have made of this matter a careful study. But when we reflect that by direct revelation this law of temporal things was given to us, ought not our faith to be so strengthened, our gratitude to be so quickened, that this could not long be truthfully said of us? But obedience and industry are just as essential as faith, and it is in the home and by the mother's knee that these principles must be instilled, and it is under her special watchcare that they must be cultivated and developed. The idler in Zion shall not eat the bread of the laborer. If our children are not taught to work—it matters not whether we are rich or poor—they are idlers, and when the law of the Lord becomes fully operative, there will be found no room for such in Zion.

In the consideration of the principle of "Industry," so far as I have been able to glean from the papers sent to me, the subject has by no means been exhausted. Of course its influence and effects may properly be traced through the entire life of the individual, but it is right at the fountain head, the period of childhood, that period in which habits are formed for life, that we want to discuss it. Are we teaching our children that labor is not only honorable but is absolutely necessary not only to success in this present life but that the want of it (or idleness) may endanger in a thousand ways the salvation of our immortal souls? Do we ourselves realize that labor is one of the greatest blessings God ever bestowed upon us, or as Mrs. Browning puts it, "God in cursing gives us better gifts than man in benediction." I am not speaking now of the ceaseless toil amounting to drudgery which seems to be the lot of many of earth's children. Such toil God never intended to be the portion of anyone, but am speaking of industry and labor for which the strength of the individual is equal, and which instead of debilitating, increases and develops strength. both of body and mind, and helps to make of us self-respecting children of our heavenly Father, who himself worked and rested from his work.

The cultivation of faith, obedience, and industry is as necessary in one sex as the other. The sterner qualities are sometimes thought more needful for men, the milder ones for women. But men have need to be tender, full of love and patience, quite as much as women; while women, though in a different way, have as much occasion to becourageous, self-reliant, strong of purpose, and persevering. The training from babyhood should be to develop these qualities equally in boys and girls. Health and strength in both, needful alike for their own good and the good of future generations; but especially equal in moral goodness and fully conscious that the act or thought which is sin for one is sin for the other.

This much in a general way—showing the need of home work, such work as our organization is designed to foster, and now I come to the more direct object of this informal talk with you, and, begging your undivided attention for a short time, I put the direct question to each one of you, "In what way are you going to aid the work this year?" I might suggest many ways to you, but it is sufficient for my present purpose to leave the question with you, only asking that you think of it carefully and answer it honestly to yourself. At the same time, after you have thought it over carefully and decided what you can do, I will esteem it a personal favor as well as a great help to the cause, if you will write me a personal letter. This will bring me into closer touch with you as an individual, and enable me to form a more correct idea as to the exact needs of the department under my special care.

In writing I wish you to discuss the subjects of our readings for the coming year. If there is any particular subject which you would like to see treated or discussed, will you kindly mention what it is and give me your views upon the same? This may seem a simple thing to do (and indeed I have no wish to ask a difficult thing), but I know of nothing which will be more helpful.

I have not yet replied to the letter of our secretary, Sr. Robinson, notifying me that I was continued on the preparation of readings, and it may be that my answer will be largely governed by your response to this request. This being the case please let it be a prompt one and in it let me know what help you will be able to give me along the line of your suggestion. This request will apply to every member of the organization. Not those alone who meet in our locals, but those who are scattered and who are debarred the privilege of meeting for consultation with the other members. If you will kindly inclose a stamp in your letter it will insure a personal reply.

DAUGHTERS OF ZION NOTICE.

All local organizations of Daughters of Zion are urgently requested to contribute funds for the publishing of literature, and other needs of the work as soon as possible. Send all moneys to treasurer, Mrs. Anna Murphy, Independence, Missouri.

THE GOSPEL OF MEDITATION.

Thou art considerate, O Solitude!
So truly bland thy welcome is for me
That on thy privacy I must intrude:
Why smilest thou on my poor company,—
Because thy cloisters oft my sweet joys be?
Yea, therein swarming fancies free do brood,
And images do people pleasantly
Arcadian forests. Ah! thy neighborhood
Brings magic balm to heal the ailing soul:
No sordid changer trades within thy court,
Nor sacrifice ungrateful therein brings.
Hushed voices through thine aisles this message roll:

"Whate'er is lovely, pure, of good report
And true, ye meek of heart, think on these things!"—By Clifford Lanier, in the June

OUR DISTRICT.

"Be not content. Contentment means inac-

The growing soul aches on its upward quest.

Satisfy is twin to satisfaction;

All great achievements spring from life's unrest.

"Prize what is yours, but be not quite contented.

There is a healthful restlessness of soul By which a mighty purpose is augmented In urging men to reach a higher goal."

In the Independence district we have eight schools, with the officers and teachers who carry on their work. Most of these schools are progressing nicely. Some of them have been quite a happy surprise to us. The workers are, seemingly, doing their best, and, "He who does the best he can, does well, acts nobly—angels can do no more."

The schools have done well, and as we are all desirous of advancing and doing better, and I believe doing all we can to make this one of the best—if not the best—of the districts of the association, I thought it advisable to treat, in this paper, of some of the obvious needs of the work.

First we should have

as there are two branches in the district which are without such organization.

Then, we need more workers in the interest of the home department, that the isolated ones may be well cared for. This work requires clear direction of the superintendent, fidelity by visitors, sympathetic entering into circumstances of the members visited. The work must be heartfelt and loving. Give it thus for Christ's sake, and reap the fruits of your labor.

CO-OPERATION.

If a new method is tried and found successful, it should be reported to the district superintendent, that it may be brought before the next district convention, thereby benefiting all the schools.

As workers in the Sunday school, we are called up into the life of Christ,—made partakers of his great truth and sent from work to work. As the rays of God's sunlight shine in upon our minds, causing good new ideas to unfold and develop, let us lose no time in communicating these ideas to the district.

Our strongest motive power should be the good of all. Unless we are united and in sympathy with each other in all our efforts, what good can we do? Of what benefit can the association be to us, unless we associate? We want more

DEVELOPED TALENT.

Some say we need "better teachers," "more workers," etc. Talent we have in abundance: all we need is the development of what the Lord has given us. Some who have been called on during the past year, who thought they were unqualified, on account of lack of experience, have, with the help of the Master, astonished all who have watched the result of their work. In Sunday school work, personal contact counts for much; we must be thoroughly in touch with those we teach. A successful teacher will know intimately his pupils, will be able to adapt his truths to their needs. He will have found God in the experiences of his own life, and will rely on this knowledge of the Father rather than on what men have said of him. He will have a love for the work, will be thoroughly interested in the children, and come to a level with them. It is not so much what we teach the scholars as what we get them to grasp for themselves, that will result in good.

The teacher must understand the lesson before he attempts to breathe it out upon those around him,-must have become thoroughly saturated with its spirit and truth; then, putting away his book, speak out of the fullness of his heart. The pupils will surely be interested if this plan is followed. He must be on time, for a class sitting by itself, wearily watching the door, wondering when its teacher will come, is a sight to grieve the thoughtful heart. He must be progressive; he must pray over every detail. "The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." Loving. tender sympathy, kindly encouragement, a readiness to discern and praise the efforts of pupils are qualities which characterize the successful teacher.

ve want more

LITERATURE. more libraries. Above all things we want more reading of what we do have. Not long since I heard a superintendent say, "Look at our library, the shelves are nearly all full; I think there is hardly a book out." Do we as parents and teachers take the interest we should in our libraries? Do we act as inspirers of the children by reading the books ourselves? Do we talk with the children of the beautiful thoughts in the books they have read, thus spurring them on to greater action in this line? Have we done all we could? Have I? Have you? It is not so much whether we read one book or two; it is how we read and what we read. One paragraph well read is worth a dozen- merely skimmed over. We must not only read, but study and think, if we wish to advance. We cannot be too careful in the selection of literature for our libraries, for in the atmosphere of good books there is something tonic and bracing. The child who listens to the voices of good books will "Do noble deeds, not dream them all day long;" for, "By a law of nature, he who dwells habitually among beautiful thoughts will become imbued, in mind and feeling, with their beauty."

We are according to what we read, what we think, what we grasp, what we assimilate of truth. Thus it is true that as a man readeth he thinketh, and as a man thinketh so is he. How often the dreams of childhood are the deeds of manhood! The child who reads widely is unconsciously laying up vast riches which his manhood will discover with glad surprise.

We should, so far as practicable, assist the district librarian in his efforts to uphold the libraries of the district, thus heeding the call, "Come up higher."

Let us feel our

INDIVIDUAL RESPONSIBILITY.

Let us not think, I wonder what I can do? I wonder where Christ wants me to go to work? but whenever and wherever we see the need of work, there is our part of the field. Jesus said, "Lift up your eyes and look on the fields, for they are white already to harvest." Each member in this district should feel that he is in the Sunday school harvest field to gather all the grain he can. There comes to us, as to the twelve, the words, "Freely ye have received, freely give." This is the spirit of the gospel-this is the genius of the Sunday school work. We have received freely from the Lord, and in the same free spirit should we give to help and bless our fellows. "But this I say that he that soweth sparingly shall reap also sparingly, but he that soweth bountifully shall reap also bountifully; and he that reapeth receiveth wages, and gathereth fruit unto life eternal." EVA M. BAILEY.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints of the Southwestern Mission: -After long delay caused by my sickness, as stated recently in the HERALD, I greet you again, in the beginning of this the second year in charge of the field. I have appointed as assistant missionaries in charge, W. S. Macrae, 2318 Empire street, Joplin, Missouri, in charge of Arkansas and Western Louisians. Hubert Case Red Moon, Oklahoma, in ana; Hubert Case, Red Moon, Oklahoma, in charge of Oklahoma and Indian Territory; T. J. Sheppard, Oklaunion, Texas, in charge of Texas. All calls for preaching and reports will be made directly to these men in their respective fields. I have deemed it necessary to make some changes in the men because of to make some changes in the men occause of the needs of the different localities. J. T. Grimes, whose mission reads Arkansas, will labor in Indian Territory; W. M. Aylor, whose mission reads Oklahoma and Indian Territory, will labor in Indian Territory; also Bro. R. M. Maloney, if he can do so. I shall endeavor so far as nossible, to at-

I shall endeavor, so far as possible, to attend the different reunions and conferences in the various parts of the field, if the brethren having charge of these things do not get the dates of holding them to conflict, as I cannot be in two places at once.

Much depends upon the Saints in the different localities, as well upon the ministry. Cooperation of all the forces will give us the victory. Saints, do not forget that the elder must have traveling expenses paid, and that it is your duty to pay them. Don't forget that as another has said, "God has commanded his servants to study, hence they need books sometimes, unless the church would leave their thirst for knowledge unquenched, and an ignorant ministry barring its doors, instead of an intelligent one opening wide its doors to all the world;" and it is your duty to furnish the means so far as in your power. If you labor in the affairs of business and of work and impart of that which you receive to the support of the ministry and their families, by your tithes and offerings, you are entitled to just as much glory, honor ward as though you stood in the pulpit and proclaimed the word. Let the ministry be diligent and careful in the use of time and money placed in their hands.

Last year there was a lack of prompt reporting by some of the ministry, which was embarrassing, and caused the reports to show up poorly, as all the labor done could not be included in the reports. Let me say again that reports are due the FIRST of July, October, January, and March. The report made July first must include the labor done in March, April, May, and June. It is just as easy to make your report the first as to wait until the second, third, or fourth, or later, Reports are expected from every one of the ministry, whether they have done anything or not; so do not forget.

Home address: St. Joseph, Missouri, 12271 N. Eighth street. May peace abide, and prosperity attend each, is the prayer of your prosperity attenu coo., brother and colaborer, HYRUM O. SMITH, Missionary in Charge. St. Joseph, Missouri, May 21, 1901.

Dear Saints:-As the time has again rolled around for the missionary force to go to their respective fields of labor, and as we have been favored with four missionaries in Southern Missouri district, I trust this year will prove to be the most successful year Southern Missouri has ever seen.

Now in order to accomplish good results from the labors of those sent amongst you, it will be necessary that we have the cooperation of all Saints in assisting the elders in obtaining new openings; also helping them to get from place to place, or by a little money, or help to buy clothes and pay railway fare, etc. The Doctrine and Covenants says fare, etc. The Doctrine and Covenauts says the that clothes you and gives you money is my disciple. . . By this you may know my disciples."—83:16. If that is one of God's tests of a true disciple, let us see to it that we do not fall below the standard. We also want the addresses of all the scattered Saints, so our missionaries can visit them and have meeting. I consider we have the best force of missionaries this year t_at this district ever has had, and I feel confident that with the cooperation of all it will prove a success. I also wish to remind the Saints that I am Bishop's agent, and money sent to Springfield. even if you forget my street and number, will always find me. For those that do not live convenient to money order office you may pay money to either Bro. Baker or Bro. Thomas. They will receipt for the same.

I wish to say to the missionaries placed under my charge, that as I am requested to keep in touch with our general missionary, I request you to write me every two or three weeks, that I may be able to direct your labors for the greatest good of the work. Trusting God may bless you, I remain your colaborer, H. SPARLING.

REUNION NOTICES.

To the Saints of Eastern Colorado District: Your committee appointed at last conference of the above district to make the necessary arrangements for a reunion at Conifer, Colorado, in July, take this method of in-forming you, that after giving the matter careful attention, we find ourselves unable, under the existing circumstances, to make arrangements for said reunion that will arrangements for said reunion that will insure any degree of success. We therefore think it best to not try to hold said reunion.

S. D. CONDIT, Pres. Home address, Logan, Utah.

Kewanee will meet at Millersburg, Illinois, June 8. Those desiring to attend can get off at Joy, if coming from the west, or at Aledo if from the east. They would also do well to notify J. L Terry, president of the Millersburg branch, when they arrive, so that some one will be there to meet them.

RELIGIO NOTICE.

To All Whom it May Concern:-An effort will be made at the Arthur, Ontario, conference, June 15-17, to organize a Religio association in the London district. There are five locals and this number is certainly sufficient. All Religians are requested to come prepared to take an active interest in this matter. It is also suggested that the locals act in business capacity in relation to this movement. Niagara Falls and Low Banks have already done so, and that favorably, and Humber Bay and Selkirk intend to do likewise. We are not sure about London but feel reasonably certain that it also will fall into line. We look to it for help since it is the oldest local in the district. The writer regrets his inability to be present, but Sr. Floralice Miller or some other competent person will be there to take charge of the work. ALMA C. BARMORE.

A NOTEWORTHY COMBINATION.

The consolidation of the Chicago Record and the Chicago Times-Herald was one of the most important events in the history of modern metropolitan journalism. People familiar with the newspapers published in the great capitals of the world say that the best daily papers are made in Chicago, and it is well known that the Chicago Record and the Chicago Times Herald ranked at the very front among Chicago's best dailies. Each covered the world's news thoroughly every day, and each possessed also distinctive special features giving it that individspecial features giving it that individ-uality so attractive to its readers. Now that the two have been combined, all the resources and worldwide facilities of both papers are united in the Chicago Record-Her-ald. It is in truth "a great combination"—a combination without parallel in American journalism. The fortunate readers of the Chicago Record and the Chicago Times Hegald now receive every day a newspape news facilities are unequaled by any other American newspaper.

The American Journal of Sociology is a publication of the University of Chicago, and is devoted to the study of social conditions. It is a bi-monthly magazine, and occupies a field by itself. The May number is up to the usual standard, and contains many things to interest the student. Among other articles there are the following: "Relation of Charity-organizations Societies to Relief Societies and Relief-giving," by C. M. Hubbard, "Societies and Relief-giving," by Sarah E. Simons, "Ethics of Wealth," by T. F. Moran, and "Study of Man," by Arthur MacDonald.

The Mental Science convention of 1901 will convene at Sea Breeze, Florida, beginning November 28. The secretary of the association, Charles F. Burgman, has secured special railroad rates, which can be learned by addressing him at Sea Breeze. The official organ of the association is published at Sea Breeze, and is called Freedom. Its editor, Mrs. Helen Wilmans, is a noted "healer," and has made Sea Breeze famous.

A strange phenomenon was recently wit-essed in Southern Italy and Sicily. This nessed in Southern Italy and Sicily. This was a heavy red cloud which extended over this territory, and the rain resembled drops of coagulated blood. This phenomenon, which is called "bloody rain," is attributed to dust from the African deserts transported by heavy south winds. - Scientific American.

WHY NOT A TRIP TO COLORADO NEXT SUMMER?

The price for a round-trip ticket on certain days will be less than half fare. Call and see me about it?

We are doing everything possible this year, by making unusually low ticket rates and running unusually fast and comfortable trains, to make it convenient and not too expensive for people of moderate means to spend their vacation in the Colorado moun-tains. There is no country in the world like Colorado for invalids and others in search of rest and pleasure. The pure, dry climate has the most astonishing permanent effect on the health and spirits of visitors, and especially is this so in the case of those from that part of the country near to the level of the sea. # DOWIEISM AND CHRISTIAN SCIENCE IN COURT.

Dr. John Alexander Dowie, first of Australia, then of San Francisco, and then of Los Angeles, California, but now of Chicago, has managed by his own acts and those of some of his trusted agents to get himself into conflict with the city authorities of Chicago. Some deaths have lately occurred in Dr. Dowie's Healing House, notably a Mrs. Christiansen, who was suffered to die in childbirth without medical attendance, and a Mrs. Judd, who died from burns, but whose life might have been saved if she had been given proper attention; so testify the medical men.

In the din raised over the death of these two women, an investigation is being carried on by the authorities, in which the methods of procedure adopted in the House of Healing in the treatment of disease and injuries to the body from accident, by Dr. Dowie and his assistant believers will be inquired into and restraint put on those responsible for abuses, should any be found to exist.

It now appears that Dr. Dowie, not contented with calling himself the Lord's overseer and Zion's steward, has announced himself to be the "reincarnated Elijah." He has ordained his wife to be the overseer and priestess of Zion's women.

He has been making an effort to establish a local Zion out toward Milwaukee way, and erected a silk weaving establishment. It is now stated that there is disaffection among the silk weavers.

A number of defections from the ranks of Dr. Dowie's supporters have occurred lately, and some who have paid money into the hands of Dowie are now charging that the money was obtained by the Doctor through misrepresentation and false pretenses; and these parties are demanding a return of the money.

The legal inquiry began May 29.

It is not out of order to notice that is going on in the "Hub" (Boston), in which Mrs. Mary Baker Eddy, the putative founder of the Health Science movement, and now leading in that society cult, has been sued by Mrs. Josephine Curtis Woodbury, in the courts of Massachusetts, for $150,-000 damages in a libel suit.

Mrs. Woodbury, who was one of Mrs. Eddy's intimate and ardent advocates of Health Science under her lead, and who discarded the theories of her teacher and set up a counter theory, that of mental suggestion, or in plainer words hypnotism, charges in her declaration for damages that Mrs. Eddy professes to claim that "in her own life she was the realization of the biblical prophecy or vision contained in the twelfth chapter of Revetion, and there appeared a great wonder in heaven; a woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head a crown of twelve stars.

It further is alleged that Mrs. Eddy "in a message read before the congregations of the mother church had special reference to Mrs. Woodbury;" using in that message the biblical quotations of the seventeenth chapter of Revelation, by which quotations it was made to appear that Mrs. Woodbury was a "bad woman." This is about the way it appears in the report of the initial proceeding in the case. It will be interesting to read the developments.

Apropos of this: The Presbyterian convention authorized a revision of the creed and appointed a committee, of which Rev. Minton, the moderator, is chairman.

The doctrine of the reincarnation of the ancient heroes and sages of biblical lore and heathen history and fable teaching is a dangerous one, and has done much mischief. It is not strange that both Dr. Dowie and Mrs. Eddy should have fallen into its intoxicating labyrinths. The Doctor has had a phenomenal career, and it appears that for a time he had great success in healing. This opened the way to the greed of ambition, and this has been a fruitful source from which the Doctor's troubles have at last arisen. One of his elders said of the movement: "It has degenerated into commercialism."

Mr. Dowie may get out of his present trouble; but the pomp and circumat the same time a singular struggle | stance he has fallen into the clutches | to observe the rules of good behavior,

Mrs. Eddy has been before the public a long time. Success, or apparent success in her chosen career has turned her Christian Science theories into the channel of thought which has made it possible to find in herself the fulfillment of the prophecy of Revelation 12, if she is now represented correctly by the press; but these journalists do not always state the truth about men, women, things material, or spiritual. There is therefore reason for waiting developments.

"REPENT YE; AND BELIEVE THE GOSPEL."-JESUS.

Declare nothing unto this generation but repentance.

As a principle repentance follows faith, and in the efforts of the ministry to teach the gospel and enlighten men in regard to the ways of the Lord great stress is laid upon the acceptance of the doctrine of repentance as a part and very essential feature of the teaching of Jesus. It is very properly argued that before a man can receive the fullest benefit of the clemency of God as manifest through Jesus Christ, and be crowned with the divinest of blessings, the remission of sins, he must repent. This repentance is understood to be not alone a mental or spiritual sorrow for having sinned, but must be this accompanied by a positive and practical turning away from sinful practices and all that has the appearance of sin, a restoration, or reparation for wrongs done to his fellow man, so far as reparation and restoration are possible, and an earnest endeavor to learn and do well, that which is good and right. No other sort of repentance will or can possibly do any man any good. This is repentance that "Needeth not to be repented of." No other kind of repentance is in accord with the divine command, "Be ye clean."

While we insist upon the importance of repentance in preaching to those outside of the church, we should remember that the teachings of both the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants all enforce strongly the necessity for the church, in all its membership, from the highest officer to the humblest member.

and a due regard for and observance of the church articles and covenants, and that these require, firstly, that members must not commit sins to be repented of; secondly, if a sin or wrongdoing is committed, the member so offending must repent; thirdly, the repentance must be of the practical sort; fourthly, if the nature of the offense is such that a restitution, restoration, or reparation can be made, it must be made; fifthly, if the wrong is such that no reparation can be made, confession must be made and reconciliation must be effected; sixthly, whether the wrong done by a member is committed against a fellow member, or against an outsider, the obligation to make the wrong right so far as it can be done rests upon the wrongdoer; and no matter who the offender may be, he cannot be in safe standing in the eyes of the church and before the Lord until he repents, and his repentance brings forth the fruits that are meet.

It is sometimes asserted that Latter Day Saints do not like to hear repentance talked of as being applied to the membership of the church. This to us is a great mistake; for our experience of now over forty years testifies to the contrary.

We seldom hear an elder, whose audience is wholly composed of members of the church, who does not take occasion from the opportunity offered to enforce upon his hearers the necessity for a rigid application of the declarations of the Great Teacher; such as:

Except ye repent, ye can in no wise inherit the kingdom,

Repent, therefore, and bring forth fruits meet for repentance,

Except your righteousness exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of God,

Thus enjoining repentance of the most practical sort on the membership, in order to make themselves teachers of the saving efficacy of the gospel, by an active carrying into effect in their own lives this great principle of the gospel economy.

In our prayer and testimony meetings, the members as well as the ministry are constantly reminding themselves and others of the beauty and grandeur of this sacred principle in the "faith once delivered to the saints," as well as showing its application to the lives of the members and the beneficial results to follow to the Saints as individuals and as a body by carrying the principle into effect daily among the Saints.

At our last annual conference the leading men of the church in their discourses to the Saints all enforced upon the members the need of applying this principle in its highest and best meaning to the every-day life of every member, whether high or low, meek and humble, or in high standing and power. All, all were made amenable to the rule. And it was meet for them to do this. For only the righteous, those who depart from iniquity and repent of their wrongs, shall be permitted to finally stand in Zion when the Master comes.

Our exhortation to the Saints, individually and collectively, minister and layman, is that you repent of all your wrongdoing and sinfulness, of every name and nature, "cease to do evil and learn to do well."

WHO MAY LAY ON HANDS?

We are sometimes asked, Have the sisters the authority or right to lay on hands for the healing of the sick?

There is but one answer, so far as we understand the provisions of the church law. The authority to lay on hands is stated to be in the Melchisedec priesthood; and neither priests, teachers, nor deacons are authorized to so officiate.

It stands to reason then, that if a part of the men of the church are not authorized to lay on hands, though they have and hold priesthood authority, there is nothing derogatory to the piety, devotion, character, or worth of the women of the church in the fact that they are not entitled to thus officiate.

Neither are the officers of the lower order of priesthood authorized to lay on hands for the conferment of spiritual blessings.

As the laws stand we are not authorized to say that women may of right officiate in those offices and mintrations, and rites and ordinances in which the laying on of hands is a part of the rite or ceremony. Those women who do this and persist in it, are simply laying themselves liable to a charge of walking disorderly.

As to what course should be pursued toward those sisters who may persistently contend for the right to lay on hands and continue the practice, we hardly know how to advise; from the fact that we can hardly conceive that any worthy sister would so put herself in such a singular position if remonstrated with.

Those who may think it to be a duty to proceed against a sister for a charge of laying on of hands contrary to the usages of the church, will do well to carefully make proper inquiry into the alleged practice, for the reason that there are many good, spiritual minded sisters, who are natural and skilled nurses, who, when their intuition, wisdom, experience, or judgment tells them that rubbing, massage, or even the placing the hands upon the head, forehead, or temples of a sick person might be beneficial will not hesitate to follow their leadings in the matter, without a thought of arro-gating to themselves any right or privilege of authority, or desire or intention to be disrespectful to authority of the officers or laws of the church.

There are plenty of cases of sickness in which it is beneficial, and sometimes a necessity, that the sick member should be thoroughly anointed with oil; women and children are of this class; and there is reason to know that it would be improper for elders to do such anointing, and would be quite proper for some sober-minded, sympathetic nurse or sister to do it. This would not be an infringement of any rule that we are aware of, neither would it be taken as a priesthood act.

We are impressed with the thought that some of our sick fail to receive the full benefit of the command, "They shall anoint them with oil," because of a failure on the part of the ministering officers to thoroughly "anoint" with the oil. We believe this to be the case; especially in cases of fevers and lung affections.

We are further inclined to the belief that as there are some among the eldership who have the "gift of healing" as stated in 1 Corinthians 12, and Ephesians 4, it is possible that some of the sisters in the church may have the gift to care for and "nurse" the sick by reason of the same divine providence. Physicians of every class prefer a nurse with such a gift to any other, and will secure the services of such a one if they possibly can. And why not? Are the gifts of God to his creatures to be overlooked, treated lightly, or despised? Nay, verily.

Great care should be exercised that those who may minister to the sick among the Saints are not subject to what is known as mediumistic, or spirit forces diverse from the Spirit of the Lord, for final results in such cases are not good. Good personal living is an excellent prerequisite qualification for those who minister to the sick.

HERRON WEDS AGAIN.

Dr. Herron, one-time professor at Grinnell, Iowa, and founder of a social order styled "The New Social Apostolate," has taken to wife Miss Carrie Rand, of Burlington, one of his converts. Mr. Herron was divorced from his first wife on March 22, last, at Algona, Iowa, by action of court in response to petition of Mrs. Herron, who sued for divorce on the ground of desertion.

The union of Herron and Miss Rand took place in New York, May 25, in the presence of a number of friends and converts to the professor's religion, there being, as declared by Mr. Herron, no ceremony. The groom announced to the gathered friends that he chose Miss Rand as his companion, Miss Rand declaring that she so chose Mr. Herron. Dr. Brown, a partial convert to Herron's peculiar doctrines, delivered a short address in which he presented the ideas held by Herron and his present wife. He said:

I cannot but feel-as all of us must todaythe impotence of words fittingly to express or announce to the world that which this occasion means.

This is the time and place for the music of a poet, the speech of a god; the office of priest or magistrate were an intrusion here. Better than all would it be if the fact of which we are here conscious might be announced to the world in the sweet strains of some wordless music.

Nowhere has the religious institution so nearly approached the frontiers of vital truth as in conceiving marriage to be a sacrament. But nowhere has it departed so far from all that is divine and ennobling as in supposing that any word of priest or prelate can be sacramental. Neither statute nor official, civil or religious, can ever create this sacred thing. Neither has it the smallest sanction to give to that which is sacred, if at all, by the supreme fiat of a pure and perfect love.

The divine is not in legislature or council, church or state. It abides forever in human life. Human life alone incarnates God-and laws and civilization are tolerable only in the measure of their recognition and service of that life.

We are not here to establish a relationship which otherwise would not have been. are not here to inaugurate a marriage. No words of ours or anyone's can add to or take from the truth and solemnity of the sublime fact that a reciprocal love unites soul to soul by a sanction, in presence of which all human enactments seem profane and importinent, for this is the supreme sacrament of human experience. There is something about it which transcends all other things and proclaims its inherent divinity.

We are here today to announce to the world the oneness of two human souls in a love that reflects, and manifests, and reproduces somewhat of the essence of that infinite love which sways and animates the universe. This oneness no more begins today than God does. It has no beginning, and can have no end. The discovery of such oneness is the It has no beginning, and can have no discovery of life—the laying bare the very soul of the cosmos. Time loses its meaning. There is no yesterday and no tomorrow in the married harmony and the joyous rhythm of two such souls. There is only an eternal life rises above its narrow limitations and seems to merge in the all-living and allloving.

Let the fleeting years bring what they may, it cannot matter. Love holds all the years that have, or are to be. It is supremely a gospel. No note of peace, or power, or purity is wanting.

These friends of ours announce today their marriage. They do so not primarily because our faulty human laws require it at their hands, but for a deeper and diviner reason. They do not assume that their life belongs to them alone. They announce a fuller, deeper, richer harmony with that divine life which is emergent in the unfolding aspirations of the world than could have been theirs as separate individuals.

Inasmuch, therefore, as George D. Herron and Carrie Rand are thus united together by the bond of a reciprocal love, I announce that they are husband and wife by every law of right and truth, and I bespeak for them the fervent benediction of all true souls and the abiding gladness that dwells in the heart of God forever.

The bride's mother presented the united pair with a thirty-acre farm near Metuchen, New Jersey, where the professor will work this summer, together with other members of the "New Apostolate."

Dr. Herron in speaking of marriage once said:

People who love each other, and who, therefore, ought to live with each other, need no laws to bind them together. The coercive family will pass away with the coercive economic system. Even when love exists on the part of one and not on the part of the other there can be no possible good in the two being kept together by external law.

If the professor believes as above, we can readily see why he would have no compunctions in putting away his first wife, and yet, if he be a man of principle, of integrity, of honesty, we fail to see how he can so ruthlessly push aside his bosom companion, the mother of his children,—to give place to an untried girl. What assurance has he that the love he and his present wife now have for each other is any more abiding and "eternal" than was that he had for his first and deserted wife? If he finds that what he now believes to be warm love for his present wife becomes cold and dies out, will he ruthlessly set her aside and try it again? He did,—he probably would.

To where would such a policy lead It is a step backward in the development of civilization. It is a retrogression,—an undoing. It reminds us of tribal laws and customs, and calls our attention to the history of the times when wives were property, the possession of which was determined by might.

We fear Dr. Herron's socialism tends towards the abolition of law, and as such is dangerous.

WHY NOT?

Bro. Henry A. Stebbins hands us the following, cut from the Record-Herald, of Chicago, for April 29, 1901. We are not surprised to hear the inquiry, Why not Preach the Gospel? from the secular press, but what a comment on the pulpits of Chicago! Jesus the "Light of the World," and yet ministers fear to preach him as he himself taught.

WHY NOT PREACH THE GOSPEL?

Has the Christian pulpit ceased to preach the gospel? Are the clergymen of the various denominations laboring under the delusion that they must get away from the teachings of the lowly Nazarene in their pulpit discourses in order to hold their congregations?

The preachers, of course, would answer these questions vigorously in the negative. But let us look over the subjects of the various Chicago sermons as reported in yester-day's Record-Herald. Here they are: "Professor Herron's Teachings."

"Mrs. Humphry Ward's 'Eleanor.'"
"The Almighty Dollar."

"Tragedy of Human Greatness." "Doctrine of Spiritualism."
"The Card-Playing Habit."

"The Religious Situation." "The Churches and Bigotry."

"Three fourths or Four fourths of a Man."

"Review of the Trial of Dr. Thomas for Heresy.

"The Southern Negro."

It is doubtless a fact that among the hundreds of churches in Chicago many congregations enjoyed the privilege of listening to sermons that were based upon scriptural texts and that drew their inspiration from the incomparable teachings of Christ.

It is also admitted that it would be easily possible to preach gospel sermons on any one of the texts enumerated above. The preachers, no doubt, thought they were delivering gospel discourses. It is not denied that the truths they enunciated may have edified some one. Even as mere intellectual gymnastics they were productive of some good.

The question that is suggested by these sermons, however, is this: When will the preachers stop defending the gospel from the assaults of the unbelievers and resume the preaching of the simple truths that were proclaimed by Christ? A reading of all the sermons delivered in the United States on last Sabbath would reveal an amazing proportion devoted to a discussion of the various arguments advanced against the church and its creeds.

FAVORABLE TO JEWISH OCCUPATION.

A dispatch in the Daily Mail dated at London. May 30, states that "Dr. Theodore Herzl, founder of the Zionist Movement and the Palestine Association, has recently had several audiences with the Sultan of Turkey, who has decorated Dr. Herzl and presented him with valuable gifts. Dr. Herzl has obtained valuable concessions towards his project of Zionist colonization in southern Palestine, in which he was strongly supported by Emperor William."

OUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

In a branch where an elder, two priests, two teachers, and two deacons have been elected as its officers; in the absence of elder and presiding priest who has the right to preside—the associate priest, or presiding teacher, etc.?

The Book of Rules, sections 163, 164, states in effect that if the presiding elder is absent it will be the right of the presiding priest, or priests, either of them, to preside. If then the elder and presiding priest are absent it will be the right of the associate priest to preside; so, if the priests both be absent then the teacher, or his associate, etc. Book of Rules is quite plain on the point.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. R. E. Martin, under date of May 27, writes from Empire, Kansas:

As a little band of about thirty-five Saints living in and around Galena we have not been forgotten of our brethren, sisters, and our heavenly Father. We were organized into a branch March 10, Bro. F. C. Keck in charge, assisted by Bro. W. S. Taylor. The Spirit of the Master was felt by all present. Bro. T. S. Hayton was chosen president of the branch, Bro. R. E. Martin priest, Bro. John Powell teacher, Bro. Charles Powell deacon, Sr. Pearl Travis secretary. While we are all poor in this world's goods, yet we try to be rich in faith towards God, and judging by the Spirit we have enjoyed at our prayer meetings, I think we are. As presiding priest of the branch I have visited most of the members, and find them feeling well in the work. I have never felt better than when doing my duty in my office. I desire to do more in this great latter day work. I never felt more encouraged and am striving to do all I can for the Master and the good of man. I desire the prayers of the Saints that I may be blessed with strength in the work.

Bro. John Bricker, of Prescott, Arizona, wrote the 27th inst:

I am a native of England. I left there twenty-three years ago. My wife died four years ago. Should any of the elders come this way I should like them to call on me. I am very lonesome; seventy-six years old.

V. M. Goodrich, North Columbus, Ohio, May 27:

I came to this place on the 23d. Commenced a series of meetings. Prospects are good for an early ingathering here. May we have your prayers in our behalf. I am well and happy in the work. I am not only willing but anxious to be busy.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

By card from C. Edward Miller, of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, we learn that he has been selected to take the place of J. W. Luff on the Ensign force. We wish the brother success in his work on the Ensign, and trust that he will be pleased with his new work. The Ensign is to be congratulated in procuring so worthy a successor to Bro. Luff. Bro. Luff, we understand, is to take a position with Bro. Wm. Crick, in his foundry.

By a copy of the Colorado Republican, of Buena Vista, Colorado, of date of May 30, we notice that Bro. James Kemp has been preaching at Buena Vista, in the church building of the Seventh Day Adventists. The Republican states that Bro. Kemp has made clear the difference between the church he represents and that of Utah, and our belief in regard to marriage is set forth.

"ZION AND HER LAW."—NO. 3, BY JOSEPH FLORY.

We now begin to see the characteristics the children of Zion must exhibit; and the whole system is to be established upon and governed by the great commands as given by the Savior:

Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself.—Matt. 22: 37-39.

With a law based upon such perfectly equitable principles as we have found this one to be, and its subjects governed by the law of love—supreme love to God and universal love to their fellow man—and the blessings of heaven resting upon the whole, what may we not expect? Certainly great and grand and glorious results.

Reader, do you believe the declaration in Doctrine and Covenants 1: 7, 8, which says:

Search these commandments, for they are true and faithful, and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall all be fulfilled. What I the Lord have spoken I have spoken, and I excuse not myself; and though the heavens and the earth pass away, my words shall not pass away, but shall all be fulfilled.

The works, and the designs, and the purposes of God, cannot be frustrated, neither can they come to naught, for God doth not walk in crooked paths; neither doth he turn to the right hand nor to the left; therefore his paths are straight and his course is one eternal round.—D. C. 2:1.

If you accept these sayings as true, then you have one of the grandest and most glorious themes to contemplate that the mind of man can conceive; such as my pen cannot do justice to; such as sages have desired to see, poets have dreamed of, and prophets have prophesied of; even the golden age of the world, the great millennial reign of Christ, which God has again in this dispensation declared should come. (D. C. 43:7.)

As the Saints would arrive in increased numbers, Zion's borders would be enlarged, and her stakes strengthened, until we would have a vast commonwealth of people who were just and honorable in all of their dealings and transactions with each other. Then there would be no poor among them; and with the surplus of all those who gather to Zion, and their annual payment of one tenth of their increase into the hands of the bishop, to be used for the purpose of advancing the interests and happiness of the whole, every man would seek his neighbor's good as well as his own—a virtue so rarely found in this present evil world. Under this system the church would soon be wealthy, and be able to take hold of and successfully prosecute all the various industries necessary for the advancement of the material prosperity of the inhabitants of Zion, and it would own mills, factories, foundries, "houses and lands, and cattle," mines, hotels, merchandising establishments, and means and institutions for the development of the arts and sciences, inventions, machinery, etc.; and in process of time would own telephone and telegraph lines, railroads, steamship lines, and everything necessary for the public benefit of the people; and in all these varied industries would be found ample employment for a host of laborers-mechanics, artisans, clerks, etc., etc.; all of whom would receive a just compensation for labor done. But in all the departments of the system there will be no place found for the (Sec. 42:12; 46:5; 68:4; 75:5; 85:38.)

Under this development the accursed system of landlordism and tenantry would be unknown, and such a thing as a poor widow or orphan children being turned out of their places of shelter into the cold street, would never occur; but every one would have his own home, and the taxgatherer would only collect one tenth of the increase; and if one had no increase there would be no tax, unless it would be for state and government taxes, for a time, and in all probability that would be settled in bulk for the people out of the funds in the hands of the bishop. But, however, be that as it may, if there were any that were not able to pay the taxes required by the government, we are sure that under such a system none would be allowed to lose their homes by their being sold by the sheriff for taxes. For every principle connected with such a people, and such a system, would forbid such an occurrence ever taking place among them. A portion of the people would cultivate the soil, and would raise all the productions the earth was capable of producing; others would be engaged at the merchant's counter, at the shop or forge, or conducting hotels, mills, factories, managing railroads, telegraphs, mines; and in all of the many and varied honorable ways that men are today engaged in for the purpose of gaining a competency or for In fact, earth and sea, air, profit. electricity, and all the elements of nature would be utilized for man's prosperity and happiness, and every man would receive a just recompense proved machinery would doubtless be employed for accomplishing the ends sought, but not for the purpose of selfaggrandizement, or to benefit only the few: but that all might be benefited thereby, and thus a deathblow would be dealt to the curse of the nineteenth century, i. e., heartless trusts, monopolies, and combines; which, octopus-like, have stretched themselves out far and near, and gathered into their coils the poor of every nation. And those two species of the genus homo-millionaires and tramps, now so prevalent-would only be known as another pair of twin relics of the past.

So far as civil government is concerned, the Saints are instructed that "honest men and wise men should be sought for, diligently, and good men and wise men, ye should observe to uphold" (sec. 95: 2); all of which could, should, and doubtless would be observed, and then we would have a realization of the truthfulness of the saying, "When the righteous are in authority the people rejoice;" while upon the other hand, in the worldly governments, as they are at present existing, we have the realization of truth, "When the wicked beareth rule the people mourn." (Prov. 29: 2).

Now, kind reader, tell me how many of the evils that curse the world today -social, civil, religious, political, or financial—could exist under such a beneficent rule as we have described. Here we have a cooperative system-God's plan of cooperation—that will supply all the requirements of men's righteous needs or desires. There will be no need of beneficiary societies, who collect periodical dues from their members, in order that the membership may have help in time of need; no need of life insurance companies, who collect premiums so that the families or friends of those who are dependent upon the insured for the means of support may have something to depend on when their sup-porter is taken by death. How far those human institutions can righteously or profitably be patronized by the Saints, until all things can be done according to God's law, we leave to the judgment and conscience of the We will not pass an individual. opinion, nor offer criticism. But we feel assured that in the latter-day work we have found the ideal plan, the sure panacea for the woes and evils that now exist because of man's inhumanity to his fellow man—the result of the perversion of the principle of self-preservation, which is a principle implanted in man for his good if properly used, but resulting in untold evil if perverted.

Reader, look around you and see the dissatisfaction existing in the world today in every department of life—social, civil, political, financial, and religious! Why this unrest? Why this spirit of reformation and even revolution, and the thousand and one plans that are proposed to reform all these temporal interests of man? Is it not because the world is in an abnormal condition? A condition brought about by sin—the transgression of God's law; a condition of things that God has sworn should not continue, for he has sworn, "As I live, abomination shall not reign," and "the wicked shall not stand." (Section 28: 2, 5).

The best thought of the age is recognizing these things, and truly men's hearts are failing them for fear. In contemplating them they see that an inevitable crisis is near at hand; but what the result will be they do not seem to know. Whether it will be an utter overthrow and ruin of man's hope—an ever craving desire for something better—or whether from the wreck and ruin will arise the ideal golden age that the world has ever been looking and hoping for, they do not know.

We will here quote an extract of an article from the pen of John Clark Ridpath, the historian, as we find it published in the Signs of the Times for December 6, 1899, pages 774 and 775, under the title, "The Harvest of Greed:"

We may, without disparaging our fathers—which we would never do—censure their almost uncurbed spirit of acquisition. They seized the lands. They took them by what they vainly called the right of discovery; afterwards, by conquest. They dispossessed the aborigines. They clutched at forest and river. They exhibited that passion for gain which is to this day the rampant and predominant spirit and purpose of the English-speaking races. It was said of the Puritans that they kept the Sabbath—and everything else on which they could lay their hands!...

The destruction of the state theory and social polity of the Old South was the opening opportunity for the displacement of what Henry Watterson has recently designated the "idiosyncrasy of liberty"—as though a nobler sentiment than liberty could ever have possession of the human breast. The result of the Civil War was to make way for a new seed-sowing in which the hand of Greed should scatter its pernicious germs more widely and successfully than at any previous epoch in the history of mankind. Then it was that the sons of Avarice went forth in the darkness and all night long sowed far and wide the seeds of a harvest which has only begun to be gathered at the end of the century.

Alas, what a harvest it is! I am not one of those who would disparage the glory of the age he lives in. I am not slow or dull in recognition of the vast reservoirs of human power which have gathered and are now dispensing their floods of force through all the world. Behold the splendor of the earth, and behold the majesty of the sea! Harken to the footfall of the millions! Mark the white-winged ships! Dazzle thine eyes, O man, with the glory of the cities, and listen, O doubter, to the thunder of the guns! Note the greatness of the nation! Behold how all governments have waxed; how they built their bulwarks and their citadels; how they have stored their arsenals; how they have consolidated their powers. Glance over the landscape of the world and see the shining spires, the double bands of steel, the long, smooth pavements, the wide viaducts of trade and travel, the flying sheets of intelligence that whiten the dawn and retard the twilight of every day. Behold the apparel of the sons and daughters of men. They rob the mulberry groves of the Ottoman Turk for the summer silks, and the wild creatures of the Arctic Zone for the fur cloaks of winter. Mark the habitations of men. How splendidly they are adorned! In them wealth has purchased everything, and with it has decorated both hall and corridor. Behold the tables burdened with viands and fruits and wines. There is ease; there is leisure; there is luxury. Than all this can anything be better and more glorious?—Yes; one thing is better and more glorious—Freedom! Yes; one other thing is better and more glorious hereafter—the Brotherhood of Man!

This one prophecy is historically certain. The future has in store for the human race one of two goals. One of these goals is an Empire supported with the sword, built on gold, nourished by the liveried commissaries of Greed, and administered for the few with the enslavement of the millions. The other goal is the Cooperative Commonwealth, under that democracy of man which was declared aforetime by the Good Revolutionist of Nazareth, exemplified in the free States of the Greeks, and believed in through all the Middle Ages by the sturdy Teutons of the North of Europe. This is the single alternative before mankind,—democracy or despotism. The former springs from the free spirit and aspiration of man, and the latter is the gilded progeny of Greed. . . . .

The weeds of Greed are growing high. They are so high that man gropes in the jungle and fears to speak lest the echo of his voice shall arouse the enemy who never sleeps. Out of this attempted suppression comes paralysis. Only the strongest of the strong are able to stand up and defy the assailants of freedom. And yet freedom is the condition of intellectual excellence in all the world. The human genius flourishes only under conditions of free initiative and equality of rights. All the great intellectual work has been done in epochs of emancipation and reform; it has never been done in the epoch of glory and retrogression. . . .

the epoch of glory and retrogression. . . . Greed fills the granaries of the world with the threshed-out hopes and virtues of mankind. Greed has hedged the way of aspiration and made the sincere truth of life read like a lie. In the lexicon of gain, truth and falsehood are the same word. In the Decalogue of Greed, the word not is nine times omitted, and in the fifth commandment the not is inserted. In the New Testament of Greed, the place of the Sermon on the Mount is marked only with a foot-note, which reads, "Omitted for business reasons." By Greed, the Declaration of Independence and the Rights of Man have been placed on the Index Expurgatorius; and by Greed the Farewell Address and the Emancipation Proclamation are declared taboo.

By Greed the free, outdoor, industrious life of the American people has been converted into a life of turmoil, beginning in competition and ending in fraud and faro. By Greed the great palaces of the avenue have been substituted for the humble homes of the people, and by Greed, the doors and windows of the palaces have been nailed up, while the occupants have gone off yachting to Norway and Venice. Within a single square mile of the New York City Hall, more than three hundred thousand human bodies are left to swelter, and three hundred thousand human souls are left to starve, through all the burning months of summer, while the cool sea washes but a few furlongs away, and the hills of Westchester are green, and the sky bends blue over the Tappan Zee and the Catskills.

tion, depravity of life, and dishonor in death such is the Harvest of Greed.

Greed has a prince for his son and heir, tramps for his grandchildren, and brigands and anarchists for his posterity.

Surely this is a truthful picture of the condition of affairs today. What he proposes for the remedy, we know not; but perhaps the same as many others do, some system devised by man, and to be brought into operation by man-man who in his unregenerated condition does not possess that wisdom that cometh from above, but that which is "earthly, sensual, devilish" (James 3: 15; please read the context), and which will result in the future as in the past with failure and ruin. Man alone is not capable of self-government, as witness the history of nearly six thousand years. From whence then is deliverance? Surely none other but He who created him can save or redeem him from his present woeful condition; but it must needs be done in God's own way.

Ignored and despised as has been the prophet of God and his followers in the nineteenth century, yet God has declared that they were Laying the foundation of a great work; and out of small things proceedeth that which is great.—D. C. 64: 6.

The stone of Daniel 2: 34, 35, although small at first, eventually filled the whole earth (see D. C. 65) and only when the new song of Doctrine and Covenants 83: 17 is sung, and the declaration of Revelation 11:15 is an accomplished fact, will the design of God in behalf of man on this earth be This was what Joseph Smith prayed for at the dedication of the temple at Kirtland, Ohio, March 27, 1836. (Church History, vol. 2, p. 44.)

Says one, Surely you have drawn an ideal picture; one which will never be realized.

Is not God allwise? Are not his ways perfect? And cannot he formulate a perfect plan upon perfect principles? Certainly he can, or else he is not God-the God that created the universe. (See Isaiah 59: 1, 2.) And if the picture we have drawn is not realized by the Saints, it will not be the fault of the system, but the fault of those who have not brought them. selves into harmony with its terms and conditions. If we do not meet the requirements given, God has declared he will raise up unto himself a pure people that will serve him in righteousness (Sec. 97: 4).

We have found that in adopting and carrying out the law of consecration, that eventually a great amount of property will be in possession of the church, being the accumulation of the consecrations of property to the church by its members, and placed in the hands of the bishop or bishops, as there may be many bishops. (See sections 68: 2; 104: 33; 117: 10.) Our understanding being that both a bishop and a high council will be appointed in Zion, and in each of her organized stakes, the number of bishops will only be limited by the number of stakes appointed. However, whether we are correct or not in this, certainly there may be two or more bishops in the church. The first statement we find in reference to appointing a bishop and his counselors, and as to the duties of the bishopric, will be found in section 38: 8. There we find that "this shall be their work, to govern the affairs of the property of this church." In section 42: 10 we find the duties of the bishopric more fully defined, and that the high council of the church is to be associated with the bishopric in those duties. In section 48: 2 we find instructions given in reference to procuring and saving money for buying land in Zion-which, however, had not yet been revealed. That the gathering was then to begin, and that in appointing unto them their inheritances, the presidency was also to have a part with the bishop in this work, which of necessity was connected with the handling of the church property, "according to the laws and commandments which ye have received, and which ye shall hereafter receive."

In a revelation given April 26, 1838, at Far West, Missouri, that place was appointed as a stake of Zion. This revelation, however, is not found in Doctrine and Covenants, but is in Church History, volume 2, page 151. On July 8, 1838, the revelation on tithing (section 106) was given, and according to an edition of Doctrine and Covenants in my possession, under the heading of "Revelation given through Joseph, the Seer, at Far West, Missouri, July 18, 1838, making known the disposition of property tithings," as named in the revelation given on the 8th instant (referring to section 106):

Verily, thus saith the Lord, the time is now come that it shall be disposed of by a council composed of the first presidency of my church, and of the bishop and his council. and by my high council, and by mine own voice unto them, saith the Lord. Even so.

While this revelation is not found in Lamoni edition of Doctrine and Covenants, nor in Church History, it is quoted by a writer in the HERALD for May 29, 1886, page 331, over the signature of "E. B.," while writing on the subject of consecration, and is We now without doubt authentic. have a chain of evidence showing that the first presidency, the high council, and the bishopric, are to have charge of the church properties, subject to the commandments of God.

We shall see if we can find who was commanded of God to enter into the organization commonly known among in which revelations relating to that order the principle of having all things in common is taught.

The Lord spake unto Enoch, saying, The time has come, and is now at hand; and, behold, and lo, it must needs be that there be an organization of my people, in regulating and establishing the affairs of the storehouse for the poor of my people, both in this place and in the land of Zion, or in other words, the city of Enoch for a permanent and everlasting establishment and order unto my church, to advance the cause which ye have espoused, to the salvation of men, and to the glory of your Father who is in heaven, that you may be equal in the bands of heavenly things; yea, and earthly things also, for the obtaining of heavenly things; for if ye are not equal in earthly things, ye cannot be equal in obtaining heavenly things; for if you will that I give unto you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing the things which I have commanded you and required of you.

And now, verily thus saith the Lord, It is expedient that all things be done unto my glory, that ye should, who are joined together in this order; or in other words, let my servant Ahashdah, and my servant Gazelam, or Enoch, and my servant Pelagoram, sit in council with the saints which are in Zion; otherwise Satan seeketh to turn their hearts away from the truth, that they become blinded, and understand not the things which are prepared for them: wherefore a commandment I give unto you, to prepare and organize yourselves by a bond or everlasting covenant that cannot be broken.

And he who breaketh it shall lose his office and standing in the church, and shall be delivered over to the buffetings of Satan until the day of redemption. Behold, this is the preparation wherewith I prepare you, and the foundation, and the ensample, which I give unto you, whereby you may accomplish the commandments which are given that through my providence, notwithstanding the tribulation which shall descend upon you, that the church may stand independent above all other creatures beneath the celestial world, that you may come up unto the crown prepared for you, and be made rulers over many kingdoms, saith the Lord God, the Holy One of Zion.—D. C. 77:1-3.

Therefore, verily I say unto you, that it is expedient for my servant Alam and Ahashdah, Mahalaleel and Pelagoram, and my servant Gazelam, and Horah, and Olihah, and Shalemanasseh, and Mehemson, be bound together by a bond and covenant that cannot be broken by transgression except judgment shall immediately follow, in your several stewardships, to manage the affairs of the poor, and all things pertaining to the bishopric both in the land of Zion, and in the land of Shinehah, . . . therefore, I give unto you this commandment, that ye bind yourselves by this covenant and it shall be done according to the laws of the Lord. Behold, here is wisdom, also, in me, for your good. And you are to be equal, or in other words you are to have equal claims on the proper-ties, for the benefit of managing the concerns of your stewardships, every man according to his wants and his needs, inasmuch as his wants are just; and all this for the benefit of the church of the living God, that every man may improve upon his talent, that every man may gain other talents; yea, even an hundred-fold, to be east into the Lord's store-house, to become the common property of the whole church, every man seeking the interest of his neighbor, and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God.

This order I have appointed to be an everlasting order unto you and unto your successors, inasmuch as you sin not; and the soul that sins against this covenant, and hardeneth his heart against it, shall be dealt with according to the laws of my church, and the Saints as the order of Enoch, and shall be delivered over to the buffetings of Satan until the day of redemption.—D. C. 82:4.5.

Here we find commandments and instructions given to organize certain individuals into the "Order of Enoch;" to be an everlasting order, composed of the ones specified under fictitious names, and their successors. (Sec. 81:5.) The term successors evidently has reference to an officer, or the following after or taking the place of one who has preceded or been a predecessor in the same office. (See Webster's definition of "predecessor" and "successor.")

Here we have an organization evidently composed of official characters; the work to be done by the organization was "the regulating and establishing the affairs of the storehouse for the poor of my people" in Zion and in Kirtland (77:1). Their stewardships were to manage the affairs of the poor, and all things pertaining to the bishopric, in Zion and Kirtland. (Sec. 81:4.)

Without question, they were to take charge of the accumulated properties of the church, which had been received from the consecrations of those who had tithed themselves according to the law of consecration. Those composing the order of Enoch were to enter into that organization with a bond and covenant which could not be broken without incurring severe penalties (Sec. 81:4); and he that breaketh it shall lose his office and standing in the church. (Sec. 77:2,3.)

This organization was to prepare them whereby they might accomplish the commandments which were given unto them. (Sec. 77:3.) The commandments here referred to were doubtless those concerning the business of the bishopric, the storehouse of the Lord, the properties of the church. Having shown that the organization was composed of officials, and their business that of handling the church property, the question is, What were the true names of those who were commanded to enter into this arrangement?

The names given in Doctrine and Covenants, as we have stated, being fictitious, we will now give the correct names, so far as we can, by instructions which we find on page 29 in "Concordance to Doctrine and Covenants," and elsewhere. In sections 77, 81, 101, for Enoch or Gazelam, read Joseph Smith; for Ahashdah, read N. K. Whitney; for Pelagoram, read Sidney Rigdon; for Olihah, read Oliver Cowdery; for Mehemson, read Martin Harris; for Shederlaomach, read F. G. Williams; for Zombre, read John Johnson. Now we have of the first presidency, Joseph Smith, Sidney Rigdon, and F. G. Williams; the latter two being ordained to the office of counselors to the president of the church, March 18, 1833. (Church History, vol. 1, pages 639 and 641.) It is true that the name of Sidney Rigdon (Pelagoram) is mentioned in section 81: 4, in connection with the order of Enoch, which revelation was given April, 1832, and he was not or-dained until March 18, 1833. But the first presidency was not yet, in 1832. organized (Church History, vol. 1, p. 282); and the Lord foreknowing who would be called to that office, mentioned him as one to be organized into that order, and who, when ordained to the first presidency, was legally entitled to a place in that organization, as we will fully prove further on. As members of the high council, we find the names of Oliver Cowdery, Martin Harris, and John Johnson, as found in Doctrine and Covenants 99: 15, which high council was organized February 17, 1834, some of whom are also named as members of the order of Enoch, previous to the time of the organization of the high council. But the above remarks in reference to the first presidency will apply also to the high council. Of the bishopric we find N. K. Whitney.

We have now found that the individuals named in the revelations commanding the organization of the order of Enoch were all, without exception, as far as we have been able to get their true names, members of the three quorums; namely, the first presidency, the high council, and the bishopric, who, as we have already shown from Doctrine and Covenants, were the ones who were to have charge of and handle the church property according to the law as given in Doctrine and Covenants, and which the quotation of a revelation (not in Lamoni edition, of Doctrine and Covenants) which we have already given, and which was referred to and quoted by "E. B." in his communication in HERALD for May 29, 1886, page 331, which we think authenticates the revelation sufficiently so that we are safe in accepting its teachings, and which in unmistakable terms shows that the three quorums above named -and which composed the order of Enoch—were the ones to handle the church property by direction of revelation.

It is true we have a few names; namely, Alam, Mahalaleel, and Shallemanasseh, which we have not been able to interpret, and thus not able to locate. But we feel that it will not be an unreasonable assumption to conclude that they also were members of either the high council or the bishopric, either of Zion or Kirtland, as both evidently were included in the organization at first (Sec. 77:1 and 81:4), but afterwards were dissolved. (Section 101:9.)

and the three quorums—first presidency, high council, and the bishopric—are one and the same work in every particular, we come to the conclusion that the organization of the officers named into the order of Enoch was absolutely necessary in order to enable them to do the work assigned them. In fact section 77:1, 2, 3, most unmistakably teaches this.

We shall endeavor to show that there were two classes of stewardships; one we find was for the general membership, received from the bishop at the time they entered into the requirements of the law of consecration, and which stewardship was called "his [their] own property," and over which he was a steward-in a limited sense—was made accountable, in that he was required to pay one tenth of his increase annually into the church treasury, but over which stewardship of his own property he was the absolute owner, and held a deed according to the laws of the land, thus making all things sure-a deed that could not be broken, and from which stewardship the church could not remove him, even if he transgressed and was cut off from the church as unworthy of membership, —and those rights to the stewardship or inheritance also descended to the widows of all members in case of the husband's death, who also held absolute title to the property, even if they should transgress and not have fellowship with or in the church, as we have fully explained by quotations and references heretofore.

We will now examine the nature of the stewardships of the members of the order of Enoch, and show some very marked and distinguishing characteristics between the two classes of stewardships.

I give unto you this commandment, that ye bind yourselves by this covenant, and it shall be done according to the laws of the Lord.

... And you are to be equal, or in other words, you are to have equal claims on the properties, for the benefit of managing the concerns of your stewardships, every man according to his wants and his needs, inasmuch as his wants are just; and all this for the benefit of the church of the living God, that every man may improve upon his talent, that every man may gain other talents; yea, even an hundredfold, to be cast into the Lord's storehouse, to become the common property of the whole church, every man seeking the interest of his neighbor, and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God.—D. C. 81:4.

Here we find that all had an equal claim or right to the properties (which belong to the church), for the benefit of managing the concerns of their several stewardships upon an equitable basis, and all this for the benefit of the church at large and not for their individual benefit; and that in improving upon their stewardships and making gains, even an hundredfold, all of which was to be cast into the Lord's storehouse to become the common property of the whole church.

Here we have what unquestionably is a case of casting all the increase of a class of stewardships into the church treasury, and is the only "all things in common" feature to be found in connection with any class of stewardships. In paragraph five, same section, we find that this order was to be an everlasting order unto those named and their successors (in the offices), inasmuch as they sinned not, leaving the inference that if they did sin they would, as stated in section 77:3, lose their office and standing in the church, "and be delivered over to the buffetings of Satan, until the day of redemption."

SIGNS OF THE TIMES.

The subject matter found in the first, second, and third verses of the sixteenth chapter of Matthew affords a pretext, as I think, for belief that the acquirement of a proficiency for discerning the signs of the times is not out of harmony with the Spirit and genius of the gospel of Christ. I incline to the opinion that the present status of the religious and political world is a striking evidence of the verity of the apostle's prediction, reflective of a universal apostasy from the organic structure of Christ's church, and the doctrines our predecessors in the divine life taught, under the auspices of that organic structure, as per Christ's command. And, therefore, however sad the thought, it furnishes to the God-fearing biblical student confirming evidence as to the truth of prophecy-acting as a spiritual mirror, reflective of God's designs, which none see or know save those who by faith in God and righteous lives strive for a proficiency to discern the signs of the times.

With profit we may contrast the position of Simeon, a student of prophecy, (Luke 2:25,) at Christ's appearance, and the position of the Jews as a nation, who misunderstood, misapplied, or rejected prophecy. (Matt. 21: 43-44.) And the contrast And the contrast is just as visible today, between those studying the prophecy reflective of Christ's second coming, and those who are indifferent to this important study. And then we may claim as visible a difference (to our credit we hope) in our spiritual rectitude and that of those who are inveigled in the meshes of apostasy. Let us think on these things, with the understanding that God is not mocked.

From the columns of the Omaha World-Herald, May 20, I read a lengthy report under the following lines:

Working hard at routine. Presbyterians hear from ministerial relief, education, and its own. Sunday schools not so largely attended. Candidates for ministry are fewer Here's an item under the heading, 'Growth of the church." Says the board of church erection in its report:

While there is no ground for discouragement, yet it can hardly be said that the prog-ress of the church, as indicated by the multiplication of houses of worship has kept pace with the wonderful advance of our country in its increase in population, growth in wealth, and swelling tide in business, which, during the last three years has attracted the attention of the world.

If, as we have been accustomed to think, that there is no surer index of the growth of the church than number of new houses of worship which it demands, then we cannot say that during these late eventful years our church has much more than held its own in the midst of an ever increasing population.

A summary of the year's work shows that loans or grants have been made to churches, to the aggregate amount of $122, 232 Add to these the special gifts, v.z., $1,252.31 to twenty churches and $123,484 31. During the year there have been reported as completed without debt 134 churches and manses, the aggregate value of which is computed at $476,918.

The Sunday schools of the church have suffered a great loss by the withdrawal of pupils in the last three years, according to the report of the board of education.

LACK OF FUNDS

Attention is called to the fact that since 1886, when the churches gave more to the current fund of the board than ever before or since in any one year, church collections have steadily decreased. Unless there is a vast increase over the $80 836, collected in 1901, the board says it will be compelled to make the most painful cuts in the amounts asked by the presbyteries for deserving ones under their care, etc., etc.

Much more might be added, but the above suffices to afford food for thought for Latter Day Saints who so study and live as to acquire a proficiency to discern the signs of the times.

Without exaggeration or false accusations, it may be claimed that some, composing that known as the Presbyterian Church, which dates back to the year 1643, known as the Westminster Assembly which convened by order of the British Parliament, in a part of the celebrated Westminster Abbey. It was composed of Episcopalians, Independents or Congregationalists, and Presbyterians, the three principal denominations in Great Britain at that time. The assembly was engaged more than five years and a half in preparing, discussing, and adopting the Confession of Faith, the Larger and Shorter Catechisms, Directory for Worship, and the form of church government, which, with a few alterations pertaining to civil government, now form "The constitution of the Presbyterian Church in the United States America." See the Confession of Faith of the Presbyterian Church! Yes, some members of the Presbyterian Church have been foremost in denouncing Joseph Smith and the doctrine he taught, with correspondfreedmen board. Report that church re-cently has been but little more than holding ing efforts to paint in glowing colors should be, for, forsooth! if he would the magnificence, endurance, final triumph of that known as the reformation: they, the unterrified, daring Presbyterians, being fired by the inspiration of the glorious reformation, playing an important part, in that known as modern orthodoxy, to crush error, and elevate truth, etc., now as it were, struggling in the throes of death, unless a revival of that zeal of 1886 is witnessed, by which a similar augmentation of funds shall flow into the hands of the managing board! Watchman, what of the night?

All hands are weak; all hearts are faint. There's trembling in the powers that be. Who shall endure?

In bonds.

JAMES CAFFALL.

THE HOLY GHOST.

The Spirit of the living God and his dearly beloved Son is omnipresent. eternal, and all powerful; as also merciful, just, and true. This manifestation of the divine will doth create, perpetuate, or change the heavenly bodies, from systems to satellites, and from suns and fixed stars to planets and meteors. This supervising, directing, protecting influence is witnessed by the Pleiades; the recurring seasons, with seedtime and harvest; the periodical tides that bring in commerce and trade, and bear forth sickness and premature death. diurnal and annual revolutions of the earth, the sweeping, silvery streams, the sparkling gushing springs, the widespread forthcoming grasses, the budding, bursting flowers, the rustling ripening grain, the aromatic, savory fruitage; and all expressions of the stupenduous, ponderous universe, from the greatest to the least atom, or the merest mote, are neither too great nor too insignificant to come in for their full share of protection and care. The migrations of man, the winged flight of the birds of passage, the streaking forth of the vivid lightnings, or even the dartings forward of the swift shafts of light cannot out distance the presence and power of that law by which all things are governed. Bad people and fallen angels may seek to hide away from the presence of the Monarch and Maker of all; but the darkness and the light are alike to his ever-vigilant eye. Earth, heaven, and hell, as well as the past, present, and future, are as an open book to his critical inspection. It is a solemn thought indeed that our every thought and desire, act and deed, is beneath the searching view of him that requires our loval allegience, and loving trust.

When we look at the matter seriously and aright, we are bound to conclude that affairs are as they withdraw his hand from us, breath and life would fail us. When Satan is allowed in the heart, vain and foolish imaginations, and cruel, and wicked devices darken the highway, and render the victim altogether unhappy. When the eye is single to truth and justice, even the light and glory of God, the blackness of despair is far away, and peace, prosperity, and happiness abound.

While we frankly allow that this good agent of the heavenly Parent gives man in general light and reason, it is fully apparent that it abides in the humble, faithful disciples of the Good Shepherd. As a monitor, comforter, and guide, it heralds forth a warning cry against danger, and harbingers the advent of forthcoming blessings, and steereth our frail barks safely to the harbor, from amid shoals and breakers. This grace, favor, and blessing received, cherished, and shed abroad, attaches humanity to divinity. When this copartnership is fully completed the most feeble stockholder is richer by far than the Rothschilds. Goulds, Vanderbilts, Astor, Peabody, Stewart the merchant prince, or Rockefeller the oil king. Without this bond of unity the most affluent are lazzaronis so far as heavenly treasures are concerned. While it has been laconically said, "The Lord pity While it has the rich, the poor can beg," "there may be more truth in it than poetry,' for "He that hath the riches of eternity is rich indeed." Albert, because he had a royal parentage, sits on one of the great thrones of this fleeting earth. The humblest peasant of the land, or the poorest beggar of the highway, may be or become "a child of the King," and form an important factor in the royal family. The mighty Cæsars, the ancient Pharaohs, the more modern emperors, and the present monarchs, in the absence of truth and righteousness, doctrine and devotion, with all their pomp and splendor, are but the transitory playthings of a passing pageant and a fleeting, feverish hour. The names of tyrannical rulers and ambitious warriors are forgotten or only remembered to be loathed and execrated. The conquests of peace and the empire of love will flourish and sweep abroad, while thrones will crumble, crowns decay, and the lust of royalty will die out in oblivion.

We need this providential care, and sacred influence not only above, beneath, around, and about us, but at all times and on every hand within us.

This great guest asks for a clean house, a pure habitation, and a holy dwelling place. All filthiness of flesh and spirit are obnoxious and revolting to the divine presence, the witness of God. A dirty tabernacle will keep away the pure Spirit, and a defiled abode will cause it to withdraw. We within as a wellspring of life, or a can have this pearl and treasure in earthen vessels if we possess them in honor and sobriety. As Paul was a "chosen vessel" so may we be if worthy. "This earthly house of our tabernacle" must be swept, garnished, fumigated, and kept sweet and clean. Then through obedience to the gospel, and by the sanctification of the word of life, the good Lord will be in you of a truth, to sojourn all along the This gracious, everlasting, celestial power calls the ministry and qualifies them to preach and act. Their best endeavors would be worse than useless without this endowment. in that all their words would be in vain, and the ditch would be the receiver. All rites, ceremonies, and ordinances administered would be an abomination where the sanction and seal of the omnipotent One did not follow. Let the unwary and the would-be wise take heed that no one deceive them, and do them an irreparable injury.

To claim to be in possession of the resurrection power when not heeding the stipulations and requirements of the doctrine of Christ, is a monumental reproach. Such arrogant presumption and assumption of fanatical pretenders is a stupid comment on consistency, and a sad scandal on pure and undefiled religion.

When a person undertakes to pray himself into the favor of God without complying with "the law of the Spirit," he has struck an eternal Gibraltar. The blood-bought plan is not a toy, neither is the author thereof to be cajoled, flattered, or swerved. We ought to hear and heed, look into and love the holy law if we wish our prayers to avail. To treat lightly, act hypocritically, or turn away from the hearing of light and truth, seals the heavens with brass, paves the earth with iron, and fills perdition with blasphemous frauds and impious knaves. The great I Am keep us from the domain of presumptuous sins, the jurisdiction of unjust and unreasonable men; and the miraculous power of fallen spirits, demons, or devils.

The unction from above can be relied upon to guide us on our entire earthly pilgrimage, reveal the future, testify of the Lord's Christ, strengthen the memory, ward off and cure diseases, tranquilize and comfort the heart, inform and inspire the judg-ment, bestow signs, spiritual gifts, the manifestations, and divers things of the wonder-working God; and all things needful.

My paternal ancestors' remains have fallen into decay; but in my heavenly Father I live, move, and have a being. May he ever be before us, around us, at our right hand, and cherishing fountain; then we shall neither hunger, faint, nor thirst.

The rain is now falling copiously over the beautiful plains and fair fields of this western Kansas; but my soul crieth out for my Lord; as the hart doth pant for the water brook, or the camel of the desert the stream. Away from family ties, and home and the church; away from the presence of the All Father, and the adorable Son, the heavenly host, and the beautiful environments thereof, I might murmur and complain were it not that to exist even here is sweet indeed. and more so when we are fitting up a caravan for the goodly land.

My faithful predecessors in the missionary field elsewhere will be pleased to learn that Gottfried Kueffer was ordained a priest on May 4; and May 12 his wife and two brothers were baptized. His parents and others of the household may do likewise ere this could appear in the dear old HERALD. The blessings of God are upon me to fit me for the duties imposed, and the Spirit is within to aid, comfort, uphold, and grant utterance; so I conclude, against all odds, that woe is me if I preach not. I feel that Zion's cause will move, and we all want to help promote her welfare I most sincerely believe.

M. T. SHORT.

______ CHINA.

Upon reading that part of the late revelation instructing the church to prepare tracts in several languages. and especially for some people whom we call heathen, I was impressed with the importance of what God advised or directed as early as May 6, 1833, "to obtain a knowledge of history, and countries, and of kingdoms." While I have tried to comply with the instruction as far as means and time would permit, yet I find myself lacking, and far short of the knowledge I desire.

To me, new light and life is put into the word which saith:

And it shall be more tolerable for the heathen in the day of judgment.

A late lecture was by an educated Chinaman, in which he stated that five hundred millions of his people were now worshiping in the religion of their fathers.

It is somewhat startling that God should have an interest in strange, vast empire at this particular What is the trend of events? Does the shadow of the soon coming Lord fall askance the path of the socalled Christian nations? Who is able to comprehend the hastening time?

The historian Demetrius Charles Boulger, says:

It might be more instructive to trace the growth of thought among the masses, or to indicate the progress of civil and political freedom; yet, not only do the materials not exist for such a task, but those we possess all tend to show that there has been no growth to describe, no progress to be indicated, during these comparatively recent centuries. It is the peculiar and distinguishing characteristic of Chinese history that the people and their institutions have remained practically unchanged and the same from a very early period. Even the introduction of a selement has not tended to disturb the established order of things. The supreme ruler Even the introduction of a foreign lished order of things. The supreme ruler possesses the same attribu es and discharges the same functions; the governing classes are chosen in the same manner; the people are bound in the same state of servitude, and enjoy the same practical liberty; all is now as it was. Neither under the Tangs nor the Sungs, under the Yuens nor the Mings, was any change in national character or in political institutions to be noted or chronicled. The history of the empire has always been the fortunes of the dynasty, which has depended, in the first place, on the passive content of the subjects, and, in the second, on the success or failure of its external and internal wars. This condition of things may be disappoint-ing to those who pride themselves on tracing the origin of a constitution and the growth of civil rights, and also would have a history of China a history of the Chinese people; although the fact is undoubted that there is no history of the Chinese people apart from that of their country to be recorded. The national institutions and character were formed, and had attained in all essentials their present state, more than two thousands years ago, or before the destruction of all trustworthy materials for the task by the burning of the ancient literature and chronicles of China. Without them we must fain content ourselves with the history of the country and the empire. - China, pp. 159, 160.

From time immemorial there has existed an arbitrary, inhuman, and soulless rule as to the value of human life, and from emperor to the most menial citizen, all seem to be acquiescent in the summary disposal of fellow citizens, as well as foreign enemies.

The first emperor of a new dynasty seeks to first rid himself of all blood relatives of his predecessor in office, and this leads to the indiscriminate slaughter of the aged, the middleaged, and the children; neither wealth, office, age, nor sex, is any shield or protection, and the execution is done in a perfunctory manner, as a necessity for the peace and success of the government, the same as we for self-protection and the good of society put to death a mad dog.

Most of China's wars have been internecine, and for that reason the of wars is very history those meager.

One strange things is, the emperor has absolute and undisputed control of all the data of history during the time of his reign, and no part of the chronicle is allowed to go to the public, or to the government archives until his death, and if his successor should be unfriendly, the whole history might be ordered destroyed.

As the emperor is supreme in his right to put to death all whom he may fear, or that displease him, so also, every general in the army may execute any subalternate officer or soldier in his command; and when either officer in the army, navy, or the civil government fails in his appointment, or is called to an account for his unfaithfulness, he has the choice of escaping to a foreign country, suicide, or decapitation.

Like the pope of Rome, when a new emperor comes to the throne of China, he takes, or is given, a name, and the name is usually selected by reason of its signification of something pertaining to the divine, or great and noble among men.

Not till 1834 were foreigners permitted to visit other than the seaports of China. Since that date, through the influence of England and France, the interior of that vast empire has been explored to a limited extent.

Russia and Japan are considered by the Chinese as their most hated enemies, and at present, America and England their most trusted friends.

These have been my observations as gleaned by the reading of Boulger's history of China.

Never have I imbibed the spirit of ill will and hate entertained by my fellow Caucasians against the people of the "Flowery Kingdom." while our nation has enacted, and can enact, anti-immigration laws, I am led to ask: Can any nation on earth preto ask: Can any name to vent God from doing his act, his vent God from doing his act, his strange act among the nations? it not written of old:

Yea, many people and strong nations shall come to seek the Lord of hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the Lord. Thus saith the Lord of hosts: In those days it shall come to pass, that ten men shall take hold out of all languages of the nations, even shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, say ing, We will go with you: for we have heard that God is with you. - Zech 8: 22, 23.

Arouse, ye sons of Ephraim, upon whom is the promise of the horns of the unicorn in the last dispensation; be faithful to your God imposed duty, and glorious will be your reward.

At work, ROBT. M. ELVIN.

WORD FROM HEAVEN.

LET ALL RESPOND.

THE LORD HAS SPOKEN.

THE COLLEGE DEBT SHOULD BE PAID.

The church by direction of General Conference built an edifice known as Graceland College, at Lamoni, Iowa. The building committee, to complete the house with furnace, outbuildings, etc., together with the expense of running the school for a time, incurred a debt of about twenty five thousand dollars. It was then required of the Bishopric by the General Conference to raise the money and pay the in-debtedness. They accepted the responsibility and went to work in good the obligation. At the conference of 1900 they proposed to raise the money by getting one thousand subscriptions of twenty-five dollars each or its equivalent, to be paid when the necessary amount was subscribed. sent out subscription papers and asked the agents, missionaries, and others to aid them by getting subscriptions. Many responded and worked nobly; some made but very little effort, and a few even opposed it, after General Conference had sanctioned the plan proposed, and sent them out to represent the church and its interests. This made it very hard for the Bishopric to carry out the order of the conference and was very embarrassing, and perhaps not more than half enough to cancel the debt had been subscribed.

This spring the church as a whole sought the Lord by fasting and prayer, asking for light, guidance, and direction in the work, and their pleadings prevailed with the great Lawgiver; the Lord knowing all the circumstances and what we needed, spoke, and among other things said:

The college debt should be paid, and ministers going out from the conferences held by the elders of my church are not expected or authorized to throw obstacles in the way of the accomplishment of that which has been intrusted to the bishopric to pay this great debt. Their right to free speech, their right to liberty of conscience, does not permit them as individuals to frustrate the com-mands of the body in conference assembly. They are sent out as ministers to preach the gospel, and their voices if opposed to what may be presented to the conference should be heard in the conferences, and not in the mission fields, to prevent the accomplish-ment of the object with which the officers of the church have been intrusted.

This comes to us with great force in the light of present existing conditions. The Lord has said he would "give unto the faithful, line upon line, precept upon precept; and I will try you, and prove you herewith."-D. C. 95:3. Now after asking and receiving, let us show our faithfulness by doing what the Lord has said, and let the college debt be paid. Let all who have subscribed send in their subscriptions, and enough more subscribe and send in their subscriptions to lift the debt at once or as soon as possible; in this way all can prove their faithfulness by what they do. Jesus said, Luke 6:46, "And why call ye me Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say?" Now after we have called on the Lord and he has spoken, and said the college debt should be paid, will we faithfully and willingly respond? Consistency says, Yes. Do what he has said before you ask again, or expect an answer if you should ask. I have said and believed that the majority of the Saints wanted to do the Father's will; and having confidence, we make this appeal, and ask the bishops and Bishop's agents, faith to raise the means and discharge presidents of missions, districts, stakes, and branches, together with all missionaries, to bring this matter before the Saints and friends in their several charges and fields as soon as possible, and let all who can give, subscribe liberally, and the amount necessary to lift this burden be sent in to the Bishop at once, and by so doing, relieve the church of this great debt before the Bishop goes to Europe. We all shall then be made glad by doing what the Lord said in the last revelation should be done, and thus place ourselves if faithful in other things where we may ask again, and expect the good Lord to answer. The presiding Bishop concurs in this. "The college debt should be paid."

G H. HILLIARD, of the Bishopric. INDEPENDENCE, Mo., May 29.

THE OXYRYNCHUS PAPYRI.

BY SARA Y STEVENSON.

[Reprinted by permission from The Literary Era.]

In the season of 1896-7, when at work for the Egypt Exploration Fund at Behnesa, an Arab town some eighty miles south of Cairo, on the edge of the western desert, Mr. Flinders-Petrie found that the ruins were mainly Roman, and having discovered what seemed to promise a rich harvest of Græco Roman papyri, he at once passed it over to Messrs. Bernard P. Grenfell and Arthur S. Hunt, who had come to Egypt expressly to search for MSS., and transferred his own camp to Deshasheh.

The site, which was that of Ancient Oxyrynchus, a flourishing Græco-Roman town, proved of richest and unexpected promise. A veritable mine of waste documents was found to underlie a large part of the mounds, and the searchers found several solid masses of discarded archives.

Such was the quantity and importance of the material that the London Committee felt warranted in subdividing the Egypt Exploration Fund's activities. A Græco-Roman branch was at once established, with a separate subscription list, and since then, with one single intermission, Messrs. Grenfell and Hunt from year to year have continued their work for the Egypt Exploration Fund.

The task of steaming, unrolling and otherwise preparing these ancient MSS., as well as that of sorting and deciphering them, is a tedious one. Not only does it require the greatest patience and delicacy in the mere handling of the brittle material, which crumbles at once under a careless touch, but the finding and piecing together of separate fragments is an operation in the performance of which deliberation, as well as the most expert skill, is needed. These technical difficulties, added to the ordinary delays which inevitably attend the accurate translation and careful publication of ancient texts, have made a distribution of any part of the collection impossible before this year.

The fragments were read, classified, and catalogued, and prior to their distribution they were excellently published by the Egypt Exploration Fund in special volumes, of which two have already appeared under the title, Oxyrynchus Papyri, Volumes I. and II. In these volumes the more important MSS. are presented in extenso with a critical translation of the text and a commentary. An occasional facsimile plate is added. The less important are catalogued with a brief reference to their contents. Too much credit cannot be given to Messrs. Grenfell and Hunt for the admirable manner in which they have conducted their arduous work.

Portions of Thucidides, Homer, Xenophon, Plato, Euripides, Sophocles, Demosthenes, Herodotus, Alcman (?), Menander, Aristophanes (?), and Sappho are found in the collection. To students of classic literature these must especially appeal—and such unique documents as a hitherto unknown poem of Sappho of the third century A. D. stand out with peculiar attractiveness.

Sweet Nereids, grant to me That home unscathed my brother may return And every end for which his soul shall yearn Accomplished see!

And thou immortal queen, Blot out the past, that thus his friends may know Joy, shame his foes—nay rather, let no foe By us be seen.

And may he have the will

To me his sister some regard to show,

To assuage the pain he brought—whose cruel blow

My soul did kill.

Yea, mine, for that ill name Whose biting edge, to shun the festal throng Compelled, ceasing awhile; yet back ere long To goad us came.

The piece above quoted is written in the Æolic dialect. Although much mutilated, portions of twenty lines remain—enough to enable the clever palæographers, aided by Professor F. Blass, to reconstruct the text. This seems to be part of an ode to Charaxus, Sappho's brother, a trader in Lesbian wines, who, infatuated with Rhodopis, the famous courtesan, then a slave at Naukratis, went to Egypt, rescued her and ruined himself for her. This led to an estrangement with his sister, who, however, made repeated, though vain, advances for a reconciliation. The ode seems to refer to the return of Charaxus across the sea and to a desire on the part of the poet to forget and forgive the past.

In the eyes of the general public, however, a special value is sure to attach to the famous "Logia" and to the earliest known versions of the Gospels of Matthew, Mark, John, and of one of the epistles of Paul, and the corroboration afforded by these early texts of the authorized version derived from the Codices will seem of the deepest interest to Biblical students, and indeed to the Christian world at

Not less interesting, perhaps, from the scientific and historic standpoints is the mass of public and private documents that must prove of invaluable help, not only to the historian for the reconstruction of the administrative and official life of the Græco-Roman colonists of Egypt, but to the archæologist for a clearer understanding of the work a day existence of the people, from the first to the seventh centuries of our era.

Prominent among these is a petition addressed by Dionysia, daughter of Chæremon, an ex-gymnasiarch of Oxyrynchus, to the præfect Pomponius Faustianus in the twenty-sixth year of Commodus against her father. who attempted to defraud her of her dowry and to separate her from her husband. The acting strategus decided that she should send a complete brief of her case to the præfect. The case is stated at length, giving evidence and legal precedents. It is interesting as showing the claims which a father might make over a married daughter, as well as by indicating the methods of procedure in such cases. Chæremon, in his appeal from the decision of a former præfect to his successor, adduces the Egyptian law and several decisions in similar cases, and although we have no means of knowing whether Dionysia ultimately won her case, her father having appealed from decisions rendered in her favor, much light is thrown by this important document upon the manners and legal practice of the second century A. D.

On the verso of this papyrus is written the fifth book of the Iliad.

A mere glance at the admirable index of the documents published in each volume of these important publications will give a slight general idea of the scope of the collection. The first volume contains one hundred and fifty eight documents, which are selected from twelve hundred to thirteen hundred now at Oxford in good or fair preservation, plus one hundred and fifty rolls left at the Gizeh Museum. At the time of publication the bulk of the collection had not yet been unpacked. The first selection is to a certain extent a random one, although an effort is made to give an idea of the variety of the material.

The second volume includes one hundred and ninety-three selected texts of the first century A. D., with the addition of theological and classical fragments and of "the petition of Dionysia" (No. CCXXXVII), which is given precedence owing to its great size and importance.

This, we are told, by no means exhausts the fragments of the first century, and leaves untouched the mass of papyri of the second and third centuries, as well as those of the Byzantine period. These facts convey some notion of the enormous bulk of the material.

It must be a matter of sincerest congratulation that a goodly share of these valuable documents have found their way to America. In 1897, when the discovery of these papyri was made, Philadelphia already for many years had been a regular subscriber to the Egypt Exploration Fund and to Mr. Petrie's work, some of its citizens having generously assumed a permanent responsibility in the matter. When the Græco Roman branch was organized, Philadelphia was among the first to extend its interest to that branch. It was therefore likely to receive recognition from the London Committee when recently the distribution took place.

Twenty-nine of the fragments were accordingly sent to the American Exploration Society, which, under special agreement, is acting as a local centre of the Egypt Exploration Fund, and have been turned over to the Egyptian Section of the Free Museum of Science and Art of the University of Pennsylvania. Among them are documents of the highest interest, not only as museum showpieces, but intrinsically as scientific material of reference. Such is the fragment of the Fourth book (ch. 36-41) of Thucydides, of the first century A. D., which forms a striking exception to the general rule that papyrus texts, posterior to the Ptolemaic period, are unimportant for purposes of textual criticism. number of its readings have been adopted by K. Hude in his new edition of Thucydides (Leipzig, 1898), and it has given rise to serious and learned discussion.

The fragment which, however, is likely to excite the most general interest is part of the first chapter of the Gospel of St. Matthew (verses 1 to 9-12 and 14 to 20), the date of which cannot be later than the beginning of the third century, and may be as early as A. D. 150. It gives a part of the genealogy, the narrative of the Virgin's conception by the Holy Ghost, and it breaks off with the statement of the Angel of the Lord sent to Joseph in a dream: "Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary for thy wife, for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost."

fragment are few, and mainly involve the spelling of proper names. It belongs to the same class as the Vatican and Sinaitic Codices, and is untinged When not with Syrian influences. peculiar to itself, it agrees with the two above mentioned MSS., more especially with the Vatican Codex, especially in matters of spelling-although in one important instance it agrees with the Codex Sinaiticus.

In connection with this important accession to Philadelphia's possessions, it may not be without interest to record the acquisition, this year, by the Bibliothèque Nationale, of Paris, of a MS. containing a considerable part of the same Gospel (St. Matthew) which, it is stated, because of its antiquity and palæographic character, is likely to occupy an important position among New Testament Codices. It is ascribed to the time of Justinian, A. D. 527-565-i. e., over three centuries later than the Philadelphia fragment.

The text is written in exquisite gold uncials, upon purple parchment, and is illuminated with beautiful miniatures of scenes in the Life of the Lord. At the sides of these, as in the Rossano Codex, are portraits of the prophets bearing scrolls representing the Messianic prophetic books.

The finest previously known purple codex, the Rossano, is inscribed in silver letters, and this purple and gold codex is therefore probably unique.

The more humble Philadelphia papyrus fragment has, however, the distinction of being the earliest fragment of any part of the New Testament so far known to be in existence. and as such must be regarded as a Museum specimen of the highest importance and value.

Another interesting fragment in the Philadelphia collection gives a proclamation of the reign of Alexander Severus (223 A. D.). On the verso is a list of Roman emperors from Augustus to Decius, in the first or second year of whose reign the list must have been made. It states the years of each reign, omitting, however, coeval reigns, when curiously enough only the years of the emperor who lived the longest are given.

Part of a MS. of Demosthenes' Contra Timocratem (145-146-150), of the third century, written in small uncial, and in which corrections in a second hand appear, is worthy of note, as well as a fragment of Euclid giving the enunciation and diagrams of II. 5.

The other fragments are an order for the arrest of one Pachoumis.

An order for a payment of wheat drawn on the overseers of the grana-

An account of a cook for meat consumed during a little over a month.

An invitation to a wedding feast in the third century A. D.

The acknowledgment of one Flavius Apion, or his heirs, for the loan of one solidus to one Ptollion.

An oath addressed to a scribe of the name of one Epimachus.

A canceled note of hand with the acknowledgment and repayment and docket of the bank of Pamphilon.

A list of private embankments with assessment of contributors in proportion to the value of their holdings.

A registration of the sale of one half share in a slave thirty years of age, dating from the end of the first

A request to the agoranomus to free a female slave, also of the first cen-

A fragment of the same date relating to a cession of land, and another relating to the tax to be paid on a mortgage of forty aroure of land in the district of Olympiodorus and on other land in that of Heracles and Callistratus.

A letter from a certain Tryphon to his friend Ammonas, begging him to try and recover a bad debt from one Dioscorus is sufficiently interesting as a specimen of a business document of the period to be given more fully:

"Tryphon to his dear friend Ammonas, also called Macer, greeting. If you can please worry Dioscorus and exact from him his bond. gives you the money give him the receipt, and if you find a safe person give him the money to bring to me. My salutations to all your household. Good bye."

With this is attached a copy of Dioscorus' note, agreeing in case of non-payment on the 30th of the month Cæsareus of the current third year of Nero — of 52 drachmæ of imperial coinage received through the bank of Archibius, son of Archibius—to pay one half more with proper interest for the overtime "for which you have the right to levy upon me and upon all my property as if in accordance with a legal decision. This note of hand is valid wherever produced, and whosoever produces it."

Besides the twenty one fragments enumerated above there are eight fragments of papyri from the Fayûm, the numbers of which can only be identified when the special volume on Fayum Towns and their Papyri, just issued, has arrived.

Eighteen papyri have been sent to Harvard, the most important of which is a fragment giving the first seven verses of St. Paul's Epistle to the Romans, dating from 316 A D., written in large rude uncial, no doubt a schoolboy's exercise. There are mistakes in the spelling, and verse six is omitted. Two lines, which have no connection with the text, and which are in a cursive hand, can be assigned with certainty to the first half of the fourth century. This is, therefore, the oldest known text of St. Paul yet known.

The other MSS. sent to Harvard are a fragment containing seven hexameters, in a dialect of mixed Æolic and Doric, such as is found in Alcman, and written in a small, neat, round uncial of the latter part of the first or the second century.

"We came to thee Demeter's fane, we nine, All maidens, all in goodly raiment clad: In goodly raiment clad, with necklets bright Of carven ivory, that shone like (snow)."

A letter on land distribution.

An order for the payment of wine, fourth century.

A list of personal property, third or fourth century.

A letter requesting that a sale be registered.

An agreement by which three persons become sureties that another shall remain in his holding. Sixth century.

A document relating to extortion by a tax collector, about 50 A. D.

An extract from a tax receipt for the forty-two years of Cæsar Augustus, early first century.

The beginning of a notice to register a sale, about A. D. 85.

A fragment of an account, thirteen lines. On the verso is an order on Stephanus, a banker, to pay certain amounts to Zoilus, a sailor, third century.

An acknowledgment of the repayment of a loan of five hundred silver drachmæ, contracted three months before, dated seventh year of Vespasian, A. D. 75, nearly complete.

Johns Hopkins University of Baltimore has received a fragment of Thucydides and two MSS. of orations by Demosthenes, besides other frag-

To Columbia University have been assigned, among other fragments, one of Xenophon and a letter to a king of Macedon.

Chicago, Princeton, and a few other localities have each received specimens of the collection, and it is desirable that a complete catalogue of these scattered MSS. should at once be prepared for the convenience of American scholars and for purposes of reference.

No recent event in the scientific world has done more to give us a clear understanding of the intellectual and social life of the early Christian settlements in Egypt.

From the "Logia," or sayings of Jesus, to "Scholia" on the Iliad; from Xenophon's "Hellenica" and Plato's "Phædo" to a list of Olympian victors; from a treatise on metres or an horoscope to medical prescriptions, an invitation to a wedding, a notice of death, a cession of land, a marriage contract, a deed of divorce or of bail for a prisoner, down to a lament for a pet—this marvelous collection brings vividly before us the early years of the Christian Roman world.

The waste paper baskets of a whole thriving and lettered Christian community have been saved from destruction by the friendly accumulation of sand which for two thousand years has concealed and preserved to us their contents. And, as we read the private archives and personal notes of these men, they exhale an atmosphere of life and activity that is positively Contracts, wills, leases, startling. petitions, tax accounts, private family letters, here a contract with an apprentice, there a loan of money or an indemnification of a surety, all lie before us pele-mele, bringing with them a far more intimate knowledge of the men than volumes from the pen of any learned historian could give us.

Truly the earth is giving up its dead.

CHICAGO, Ill., May 29.

Editor Saints' Herald:—I exhort all who are witnesses of the sufferings of Christ. I myself, also a partaker of the same glory that shall be revealed, am here at work feeding the flock of God where I have oversight, willing and ready to be an ensample to the flock and to do all I can to build up the kingdom of God through faith and righteousness.

I left General Conference on Sunday, April 21, after morning services, for Kansas City, Kansas, and arrived at the Armstrong branch where they had gathered quite a number of colored enildren in Sabbath school, with a few older ones. Quite a nice time was had. The school was in charge of Bro. Robert Clow and Sr. H. Loosemore. I stopped two nights with Bro. and Sr. Loosemore, in company with Elder J. S. Roth, and a good rejoicing time we had together, talking over this blessed latter-day work. I stopped one night with Bro. and Sr. John Tucker, and in company with Elder Joseph Ward, of Mountain Home, Arkansas, at Bro. and Sr. Tucker's house, with other brethren and sisters of the same faith, what a time we had! I was royally treated by all the Saints of Armstrong. The Saints there know how to make a colored missionary happy. May their cup of blessing always be filled up and never run out. On the evening of April 22 I had the pleasure of hearing Elder J. F. Burton and his companion elder from the islands of the seas. It was fine indeed. Bro. M. B. Williams, pastor of the Armstrong branch, treated me with hospitality and care. I preached on the evening of April 23, at Armstrong, to a full house of Saints and strangers. About twenty-five or thirty colored people were present with their children.

I cannot begin to tell you how I enjoyed myself at the conference at Independence, Missouri. What a fine lot of Saints live at Independence, and how I enjoyed myself with them! While at dinner with Bro. and Sr. O. L. James, in company with Elder R. C. Evans and wife from London, Canada, I was reminded of old times when I lived in London and Bro. Evans and I were boys together in the ministry. I also took dinner with Elder M. T. Short and family and also at Sr. Clark's, and with another sister who lives not far from the church. How glad I felt to have the pleasure of shaking hands with Saints from all parts of the globe!

To those who have obtained like precious faith with us through the righteousness of God and our Savior Jesus Christ, grace and peace be multiplied unto you all through the knowledge of God and of Jesus our Lord. According to his divine power he hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue.

Your brother in hope of eternal life,

G. H. GRAVES.

PARKERTON, Mo., May 26.

Dear Editors:—We have been doing the best we could for the Master's cause. Since coming to Grundy county we have been preaching in new places and trying to get the gospel planted in the regions round about, and thus build up the waste places.

May 14 I took a flying trip to Rock Island, Illinois, to officiate in the marriage ceremony of Bro. W. F. Crull and Sr. Edith M. Lloyd, of the Tri-cities. There I met a large number of Saints and friends. Met Bro. E. A. Stedman who had just arrived the day before. As he was a stranger and I was acquainted with the cities, I stayed over Sunday and acted as guide for him. Had the pleasure of listening to the brother preach his first sermon in the place, and I also got to sound the gospel trumpet once more where I did my first missionary work. After Sunday evening service I took train for Spickard, Missouri, and to my surprise, when I got on the train I met Sr. R. S. Salyards, who was on her way to Lamoni, from Illinois. We had a very pleasant visit for about three hours.

Arriving at Spickard I learned that my colaborer had come to Parkerton, so I hastened here to assist. The day Bro. Haden began here the Baptists announced that they would begin a protracted effort in a week from that day, so we thought our time was short. But we preached seven times, and went to Trenton to try to get a place, but failed, so we came back here to hear the Baptists over Sunday. Their man spoke Saturday night, then he asked us if we had anything to say. Of course we were too bashful to refuse an offer like that, so I replied to some things he said and had splendid liberty. Sunday they had another man. He spoke at eleven a. m. and four p. m. and tried to get at our teaching, but had hardly courage enough; but he did not give us a chance to reply. He tried to organize a Baptist class out of the fragments of one that was here a few years ago, but failed, and then said they would hold no more meetings at present. We took advantage of the opportunity and made an announcement for meeting Monday night. Then some came and asked us to preach Sunday night, and we announced that we would, and Bro. Haden spoke to a nice crowd that night. The Baptists left and we have possesssion of the field. We preached a funeral sermon yesterday near here, thus giving us a splendid chance to show the grandeur of the gospel. have many friends here, but no Saints. were entire strangers when we came, but God promised to raise up friends and to bless us in our work when we started from home the last time, and he has been true to his promises.

Farmers are very busy here, but they come to meeting anyway. We think of closing soon and returning later when people are not so busy. We have had some opposition, just enough to brighten us up. Bro. Haden and myself have had wonderful liberty in presenting the gospel. I feel that the Lord has a people here, and we are sure the other fellow has some. We showed the difference between ourselves and the Brighamites, and one man said he knew what we said was true, then he said we were all the same. Ever toiling and praying for the welfare of Zion, Your brother in Christ,

J. W. ADAMS.

I have been administered to twice by Brn. Hunt and Kephart, and hope and pray that God may soon restore me to health and strength. If it is his will, I should be so thankful and so happy! I am going to be baptized just as soon as I get a little stronger, and I think my husband will too. Oh, I will be so glad! I think it is the true teachings of God. The elders are such nice, good, kind men: I like them so well. I told them if I got well again that they should come and stay here with us and preach in this town, and they said they would. Editors Herald:-I am still trying to be at work for the Master in his blessed cause. My attendance at General Conference was of an educational and uplifting character. I shall never forget the good things I learned in both seeing and hearing. The Religio and Sunday school conventions are by no means small things. The amount of business transacted in these departments of church was truly astounding. And my brief acquaintance down there with the several officers and workers have greatly increased my confidence and esteem for them. May God abundantly bless all in our grand forward march this coming year. Methinks the time is right here when the church cannot longer afford to carry drones and shirkers. Our cry is onward and upward in every good word and work. To my mind, Bro. W. H. Kelley, of the Twelve, struck the keynote when he recently wrote in HERALD that "faith in God will not avail us unless we magnify it in our lives." That comprises a great deal; for without an active faith it is impossible to please God, as saith the Holy Scriptures. Let us all daily examine ourselves in the light of God's word.

My patriarchal blessing received at Independence is more precious to me than gold, for I am wonderfully comforted and strengthened thereby. It is just what I needed, and I praise God for it.

Held four meetings with the Saints at Horton, and thrice since coming to this place. Expect to occupy again next Sunday. Of late the farmers have been very busy with their crops, working early and late.

With an united effort the work in this district will advance more rapidly than hitherto. Each Saint should ask himself the question, What can I do to further the cause of Christ in my home, in my branch, and throughout the district? With a strong, determined effort come to the reunion at Atchison this fall. Make a big sacrifice in order to secure a big blessing. Where there is a will there is often a way.

Editors Herald:—Brn. M. R. Scott, Wm. Marshall, and the writer commenced a meeting on May 11, closed the 19th. Large attendance, good order. There was good interest on the part of membership of the church. Five precious souls came forward for baptism. They were young persons. We are proud of them. They will be quite a help to the branch. Quite a number are talking of joining the church at that place the next meeting. That will be the fourth Sunday in June. We think there will be quite an ingathering in Southern Indiana this year.

Dear Brethren and Saints:—Since I have given all of my time to the work and have gone out into new parts of the city there is a good interest manifest. I baptized four last Sunday a week ago, and five others have told me they expect to be baptized. The work will be established in this city, and many of the true in heart will be gathered out and planted in Zion the true place of safety. We have a splendid little branch here, and I trust there will be more than double as many by next year. Pray for us, that the Lord may bless us to his glory.

COLUMBUS JUNCTION, Iowa, May 30. Editors Herold:—Bro. J. S. Roth has just closed a series of meetings here, and has gone to Burlington to be at the conference there June 1, 2. We held five meetings in the opera house, then changed to our photograph gallery. Attendance small, but audience seemed interested, and Bro. Roth was wonderfully blessed with liberty through the entire fifteen sermons.

Sunday morning, the 26th, three were baptized: the writer and wife, and a young lady from the Presbyterian Church. She held prominent offices in the Sunday school and Endeavor. She is also one of the telephone girls. Confirmation took place in the afternoon. The Holy Spirit was present in a marked degree. This is testimony that our sacrifice is pleasing to our heavenly Father. Some of the Presbyterians are making a great howl about it, even threatening to drive us out of town.

Several seem interested and some investigating. Now as the ice is broken, as the saying goes, we would like to have any of the elders stop whenever they can, as they will always have a place to preach as long as we are here in business, and will be cared for. Every praying for the cause we love,

I. M. LANE.

TO THE FOLKS AT HOME.
BY ELBERT A. SMITH

Afar in the land of pepper and palm,
Where the grape and the orange grow,
Where mountains ancient, and stately, and calm

Look down on the vale below,

Where sad winds sigh from the sea in the west,

And the desert lies to the east,

There dwell the dear ones who love you the best,

But who see you, alas, the least.

The mountains are so high, the plains so wide, We catch no glimpses of faces bright, As you talk of us in the eventide, At the solemn dawn of night.

But the night winds list to the words you speak,

And bear them over a sleepy land; O'er desert, and plain, and mountainous peak,

To hearts that will understand.

The future of life no mortal can tell,
It is known to our God alone;
May the Father of Mercy guard you well,
'Till we come again to our own.

May the power of darkness bide away, And the Spirit of Peace remain; We fain would see no vacant place that day, Nor know one of you vexed with pain. San Bernardino, Cal, March, 1901.

The June number of the Arena completes the twenty-fifth volume of that standard review. It contains a number of contributions upon topics of interest to students of advanced thought. Liberal and even radical views of politics, economics, religion, and social reform are always to be found in this magazine, which aims to give "both sides" of public questions. Editor McLean announces the beginning, with the July number, of a series of papers on "Great Movement of the Nineteenth Century," by Prof. Frank Parsons, of the Boston University School of Law.

NECESSITY AND CHARACTER OF OBE-DIENCE

Obedience, as we understand it, implies rules, laws, or conditions to be obeyed, by which the individual or individuals are to be, or are supposed to be, benefited. All civilized countries and peoples have laws by which they are governed and controlled, and also persons, duly authorized by the government to which they belong, to execute or enforce such laws, that the rights of all persons living within their jurisdiction may be properly considered and protected; and we believe that man-made laws are based upon divine law in proportion as they are just and equitable, and we find they cannot be disobeyed or ignored, to any great extent at least, without punishment or loss to those who elect so to do.

Obedience is the first lesson a child should learn. If a child is obedient to parents, or those whose right it is to control in the home, it will be much easier for him to obey the rules in the school, in the shop, in the factory, or in any walk of life they may choose to follow; for certain rules must be observed and obeyed to make a success in any line of life we may adopt. In the army and navy, the rules of discipline are very strict, and disobedience brings swift and certain punishment. It is a necessity, for if the men were not well disciplined, prompt to obey orders in times of emergency or danger, all would be disorder, confusion, and disaster.

We call Washington the father of his country, and honor him as a great leader, a man born to command; but it also required obedience on the part of his followers to gain independence. Had they been divided, disobedient to those in command, the colonies would never have gained their independence. and conditions would doubtless have been very different today than we find them; and while there is yet room for great improvement in conditions, we believe we may safely say there is greater liberty of speech, better opportunities obtaining here to the masses, than under any other form of government on the earth. All growing out of obedience to right principles.

But let us go back to the great Lawgiver, who created man in his own image, placed him in the garden of Eden, surrounded him with the beasts of the field, and fowls of the air, all gentle and biddable; with vegetables, fruits, and flowers on every hand, everything to please the eye and minister to the needs of the physical man, and made him ruler over all; also gave him woman to be an helpmeet unto him. God commanded him that he should eat of the fruit of all the trees that grew in the garden except one; of that he

the voice of the Lord, ate of the forbidden fruit, was cast out of the garden; and by disobedience, sin, sorrow, suffering, and death were brought into the world. (And, dear sisters, let us note the fact that the woman given to man to be a companion and helpmeet unto him, was the means by which he fell, and may we realize our power or influence is great, either for good or evil, and strive to be helpmeets indeed to our companions, as the Lord designed woman should be from the beginning.) In harmony with this thought read 1 Peter 3:1-6. We are also admonished in the scriptures to be submissive to the ordinances of man for the Lord's sake, and to pray for those in authority; and in the Book of Covenants we are told if we keep the law of the Lord, we have no need to break the law of the land. In Romans 2:13 we read that not the hearers, but the doers of the law are justified. Children also are commanded to be obedient unto their parents in the Lord. We believe this language is addressed to the Saints, and they are expected to be reasonable in their demands upon their children, for there are some parents so wicked their commands surely were better disobeyed than obeyed, and children of parents who demand that which is directly opposed to the law of God, are surely justified in disobeying such commands, for we believe the parents thereby forfeit their right to command. In the history of God's dealings with man, as contained in the Bible and Book of Mormon, we find him (man) blessed and prospered while striving to live in obedience to God's commands, while disobedience brought the opposite. The physical man requires food, sleep, and rest, and cannot exist any great length of time without a reasonable amount of each. It is true nature has supplied us with a surplus of strength, upon which we may draw in case of emergency; but, like a bank account, it will eventually fail if not replenished. On the other hand, if we indulge to excess in eating, sleep, or rest, we suffer for such indulgence. The old adage, "All work and no play makes Jack a dull boy, while all play and no work makes him a mere toy," is certainly true. So we see the wisdom of Paul's admonitions, "Be ye temperate in all things." for obedience to nature's laws (which are a part of God's laws) brings its blessings, and disobedience the opposite.

The character of obedience should be willing and cheerful, prompted by love. Christ said, "If ye love me ye will keep my commandments;" and in Isaiah 1:19 we find these words, "If ye be willing and obedient ye shall eat the good of the land," hence we believe it is necessary to be obedient to the laws of God, and also of man so far as they are just, and when they are not it may be better to obey them while we protest against this injustice, and use all lawful means to have that which is unjust changed.

We also believe it is very necessary that children should be taught obedience. We are aware this is no easy task with a child that has a will of its own, but we also know that such a child has within itself possibilities of great good or evil, according as its powers are directed. It is like the elements of fire and water, when they are kept within bounds they are elements of great good to all men, in fact we could not live long without them; but when they get beyond our control they become elements of destruction, sweeping everything before them. So it is with those of strong will power. If their faculties are properly directed they are a blessing to their fellowman, but if allowed to go unrestrained they become a curse unto themselves and others.

Much more might be said upon this subject, but hoping we have been able to show some of the necessity and character of obedience, and praying we may all grow together in the knowledge of the truth and willing obedience to God's commands,

Your sister in the one faith, MRS. E. O. SHUPE.

DENVER, Colorado.

IF I WERE YOU.

If I were you, I often say
To those who seem to need advice,
I'd always look before I leaped;
I'd always think it over twice.
And then I heave a troubled sigh—
For, after all, I'm only I.

I'd ne'er discuss, if I were you,
The failings of my fellow-men;
I'd think of all their virtues first,
And scan my own shortcomings then.
But though all this is good and true,
I am but I, I am not you.

If I were you and half so vain,
Amidst my folly I would pause
To see how dull and light a fool
I was myself. I don't because—
(And here I heave a pitying sigh)
I am not you, I'm only I.

If I were you, no selfish care
Should chase my cheery smile away;
I'd scatter round me love and hope;
I'd do a kindness every day.
But here again I find it true
That I am I, and you are you.

I would not be so very quick
To take offense, if I were you;
I would respect myself at least,
Whatever others say or do.
Alas! can no one tell me why
I am not you, instead of I?

INFLUENCE OF SUNDAY SCHOOL CLASS.

Each of us, whether young or old, wields an influence to a certain extent, either for good or evil, in whatever society or circle we move. If we desire our influence to be for good, desire to impress the world with what we believe, we must become well acquainted with what is contained in the scriptures. We must educate ourselves, so that when we are called upon to answer questions concerning our belief or defend the same, we shall be prepared to do so.

The Sunday school is a means by which we become instructed or better acquainted with what is contained in the scripture; that is, we are instructed if we pay proper attention to the various questions that are being discussed or take part in the discussion ourselves, which is the better way. But if we come to Sunday school without preparing our lessons, and during the discussion of questions pay attention to everything in the room other than the lesson, how much profit can we gain? And how much will we influence those about us? Will our influence not be to the opposite instead of for good? For others will say, If the members do not care to take part or prepare their lessons, why should we? But on the other hand, if we prepare our lessons, pay proper attention to the discussion of questions, take part in the discussion ourselves, our influence will be felt perhaps to that degree that others will take a greater interest in the Sunday school and in preparing their lessons. And when we are called upon to answer questions, perhaps some that we have discussed in our Sunday schools, we can answer them more readily because we have given them serious thought. and understand them better than if we had just read or listened to them.

If we are called upon to fill some office, or perform some task in the Sunday school, let us respond readily, and be willing to help advance the cause of Christ, and show to others that we are willing to be a laborer in the Master's vineyard. Perhaps through our sincerity and example we will cause others to investigate what we believe. May our crowns be made the brighter, through our efforts for good! MANDA THOMAS.

COLLEGE SUBSCRIPTION LISTS.

Attention of the Saints and Friends of Graceland College is called to lists now being sent to the Bishops and Bishop's agents of the stakes and districts of the church, for circulation and use among the people, in the church educational interests.

We have drawn up these lists making them due and payable on or before one year after July 1, 1901, thus assuring ample time and opportunity to all parties who are willing to aid in this work.

Many of the Saints have already subscribed what they were able to meet in this direction. To these we are not sending out new lists but a word of commendation; but to those who have not entered their names and made an offering and consecration for this purpose, we urge that they call for the lists and enter their names at once. Subscribe as you feel that will be proper and as you are able to give. The twenty-five dollars if you can-or more if you can do so; if not so much, let us have the amount together with your good will toward the institution and we are content.

The Bishops and Bishop's agents are instructed to present these lists to every member of their respective districts and make returns of same by the 10th of July next. We trust that every member of the church will awake to the interests of this work and assist in the notice and circulation of these subscription lists that we may have them complete at the time indicated. Those who may wish to pay cash at the time of the subscription may do so, handing to the agent and taking his receipt, and the money will be applied at once upon the college debt and stop interest on the amount paid. We desire and should have upon these college lists the name of every member in the church.

May the Lord especially bless every one who shall make a faithful effort to discharge this obligation.

LAMONI, Iowa, June 3, 1901.

EXPLANATION OF REPORT BLANK.

It will be remembered as a result of questions asked as to meaning of headlines on ministerial report blanks, one result was it was requested by the president it be written up for HERALD by the chairman of the committee who framed it.

"Whole number of services attended," means all services of every kind held by the church they who report represent, and such other services as they have a part in as representatives; such as replying to or taking notes for reply where our position is assailed. Simple presence at the services of another people should not be counted. The reports are to show work and the interest had in our church work.

"Times preached" and "times assisted" are certainly clear enough. The next one only of all remaining may not be clear to all.

"Other services held," means any other service than the "times preached" or "times assisted" reported under those heads. Prayer services, confirmation, business, or any other services under the auspices of the several societies within the church. In conversation with the other members of the committee, Brn. M. H. Bond and I. M. Smith, the above was concurred in and intrusted to my presentation. By sickness of myself and family this and other correspondence has been delayed, as also my departure for R. ETZENHOUSER.

WARNING.

One Frank Anderson, a member of the Newport branch, Garden Grove, California, has obtained money on false pretenses, by altering checks and giving false ones. When last heard from he was in St. Louis. Let all the Saints take notice and not be swindled by A. CARMICHAEL, Pres. of Newport Branch.

REUNION NOTICES.

We do not think it too early to remind you of the "big time" we are going to have at Berry's Ferry, Indian Territory, four miles north of Fairland, in August. The exact date will be given later. The Spring River district conference declared some months ago that we would hold a grand reunion of all the Saints that could be induced to come. The same conference also appointed a committee to supply the meals or arrange for a boarding house on the grounds, to be conducted on the coöperative plan. This will relieve all the mothers, wives, and sisters from the burdensome task of cooking, dishwashing, etc. The cooking will all be done by two cooks and their assistants, and meals served on seven long tables accommodating two hunseven long tables accommodating two hundred people. Coöperation means that all concerned will work together to successfully accomplish the end desired; hence all attending will be willing to help as directed by the general committee. We all know by experience that there is truth in the old maxim, "Many hands make light work." We are "Many hands make light work." going to request of every one, where it is practical, to bring a breakfast plate, and if you use coffee, a cup and saucer, and families will bring enough plates for each, and two extra, also bring two or three tablecloths and two tea towels. None of these articles need be your best, but put your names on them. Bring your own toilet articles for your tent use. The committee will pay you market price for flour, produce, chickens, etc., but if you have to haul it very far, better sell near home and bring the money. Your meals will not exceed seven cents and we believe less than six We want to engage two practical, experienced cooks who can furnish recommendations. Any cook who thinks he will fill the place, write to secretary immediately, stating terms for ten days service. The committee on the above arrangements is, O. P. Sutherland, M. S. Frick, W. S. Macrae. Address all communications to,

PASTORAL.

To the Saints and Fellow Missionaries of the Southwestern Mission:—I find it necessary to write this additional letter. Bro. W. H. Smart, who was appointed to northern Texas, will, by his request, be permitted to labor in Oklahoma until August. I will endeavor to get into my mission soon. Will probably go direct to San Antonio, Texas, and from there endeavor to reach the various points in my field, My address in San Antonio will be 1217 S. Flores street, care of J. P. Neal. Last year I made a request that no discussion be entered into except with the knowledge and consent of the missionary in charge of field where the discussion is to be held. Some have been unwise enough to disregard that request, but I make it again this year, and do so, not with any desire to use the gag upon any, but that the interests of the work be subserved, and that all things may be done decently and in order. And I urge upon those who may have these matters in charge that they be not hasty in challenging, or if challenged, in accepting. There is more lost by haste than by the possibility of us being called slow or cowards. Be sure first that there is a necessity for the discussion, and then humbly and prayerfully proceed. I would advise that no agreement be entered into to hold more than one session each day. Give yourself plenty of time to get your evidences together and the people plenty of time to digest the evidence. We are always placed on the defensive, no mat ter which side of the question we take. All the different denominations consider us legitimate prey, and any means to down us is fair to them, and their champions desire to carry everything with a flourish of trumpets and by throwing dust in the air and not giving us time to clear the atmosphere so the people can see clearly. Insist on having your rights and maintain an honorable controversy, and God will give you victory. Another trick of the opposition is to lessen the number of sessions to be held. I would not consent to less than six on each proposition, if church propositions are to be discussed, and I would advise more. You will then have little enough time to get our faith fully before the people, besides answering the slanderous statements that are always or nearly always made against us and which must receive more or less attention from us in refutation. We are anxious, or should be, for the fullest and freest investigation. Hence the necessity of plenty of time. I never have held but one debate, hence cannot call myself a debater, and while I have had but little experience personally along this line, I believe that there is at least common sense in the above suggestions, so commend them to you for a trial. Hoping that the utmost unity may prevail in the ranks of all my colaborers in their intercourse with each other and myself, I am, Yours in bonds.

HYRUM O. SMITH, Missionary in Charge.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., May 28, 1901.

To the Saints and Friends of Ohio District: Having been placed as sub-missionary of this district, I wish to state that my address is Byer, Jackson county, Ohio. All mail addressed as above will reach me. All those desiring preaching, please let your wants be known, and your requests will be granted so far as practicable. I desire the hearty cofar as practicable. I desire the hearty co-operation of all, and hope the local brethren will occupy so far as opportunity affords, thus assisting to spread the truth of our Master's great kingdom. The general church appointees will please labor as wischurch appointees will please labor as wisdom may direct for the present. Hoping that each may be richly blessed with the Spirit of the Master, and that our labors will be crowned with many "sheaves," I beg to subscribe myself, Your brother and colaborer in the kingdom of God,

V. M. GOODRICH.

To the Saints of Central Nebraska District, Greeting:—Having been appointed to missionary labor in this district, we desire to say to the Saints that we are now starting in for a summer campaign. We propose to com-mence the use of the district tent in the near future, and shall need funds to defray necessary expenses. Those who desire to contribute can do so through their branch treasurer or by sending directly to Levi Gamet, Inman, Nebraska, or to W. M. Rumel, Clearwater, Nebraska.

We again call attention to the necessity of sustaining the work with your tithes and offerings. These may be sent by draft, post office, or express order, or registered mail to Levi Gamet, Bishop's agent, Inman, Nebraska, and will be duly receipted for.

Those desiring labor in their respective neighborhoods please communicate with us at the above addresses, stating what are the opportunities for getting a hearing.

In order that all may know where the Central Nebraska district is, we will name the counties, as follows: Howard, Sherman, Valley, Garfield, Keya Paha, Rock, Custer, Dawson, north of the Platte, Loup, Blaine, Let all the Saints feel that they and Brown. have an individual interest in spreading the knowledge of a restored gospel among their associates, and be found active in the work "intrusted to all," for wherein we seek to bless others we bless ourselves.

W. M. RUMEL. LEVI GAMET.

To the Missionaries Appointed to Labor in Texas, and all the Saints in the Lone Star State, Greeting:—Having been placed in charge of the work in this state, I trust we may all labor together in peace and unity as we have done hitherto.

The work is spreading and advancing in many ways throughout the entire church, and I hope to see the time soon come when we will be able to report greater advancement in every avenue of church work throughout the state.

I enter upon the work this year with more confidence and assurance that the master will bless our efforts with greater success than any previous year. My mission address is Oklaunion, Texas.

I hope that all will fully realize the necessity of standing by that which is written as a law unto the church, and be governed thereby, rather than by any manifestation otherwise presented. Let us endeavor to so work that the fruit of our labor will be a gradual development, which is far better than any spasmodic movement could possibly

Brethren, please let me hear from you often, that I may know your condition and

Yours for truth, T. J. SHEPPARD.

MARRIED.

SMITH-COCHRAN.—At the home of the bride's parents, near Dyke, Oklahoma, May 1901, Bro. Samuel S. Smith, of Alpha, Oklahoma, and Sr. Emma M. Cochran, Elder W. P. Pickering officiating After congratulations, a nice supper was enjoyed by the guests. The bride is an estimable young lady, the groom one of our missionaries to Oklahoma, and are highly esteemed by all who know them. Bro. and Sr. Smith left the 20th, with best wishes of many friends, for the home of Bro. Smith's parents, whence they go soon to their new home in Day county, Oklahoma.

DIED.

GREEN.-John Green died May 22, at his home, Council Bluffs, Iowa, aged 69 years. Wife, three sons, and three daughters survive him. He was a native of England, where he joined the Utah church; ordained an elder; subsequently emigrated to Utah; but becoming disgusted with some of the workings of that system, he repudiated the church. In the early 'sixties he welcomed the coming of Brn. Briggs and McCord and built a bowery in which they preached the original faith of the church, and the claims of the Reorganization to that people. left Utah, located in Council Bluffs, and connected himself with the Reorganization. He was laid away in Fairview cemetery, Sunday, May 26; services at the home. Remarks by Elder F. M. Cooper. BABER —Grover C., son of Bro. Richard and Sr. Mary Baber, was born at Dow City, Iowa, March 3, 1885, and died at their home May 25, 1901. He was baptized into Christ by Elder C. J. Hunt, May 25, 1896. Funeral services were conducted at the Saints' church at Dow City, Sunday, May 26, 1901, at three p. m., by Elder C. E. Butterworth, assisted by Elder J. M. Baker.

MOLYNEAUX.-Martha Alice Molyneaux, born in St. Louis, Missouri, June 18, 1881; died at Las Vegas, New Mexico, April 21, 1901, aged 19 years, 10 months, 3 days. She was baptized into the church March 29, 1890, and has ever been a zealous laborer in church and Sunday school work. During an illness of about four months she endured patiently and with Christian fortitude the ravages of disease upon her system. As a last resort she was taken to Las Vegas, New Mexico, in the hope that that climate would benefit her, but she fell peacefully asleep about one hour after reaching her destination, death being due to consumption. She was dearly beloved by all who knew her, being of that amiable disposition which made her presence and companionship a pleasure. Her loss is deeply mourned by a host of relatives and friends. She was borne to rest from the Rock church, St. Louis, April 25, loving hands, as a last token of affection and typical of the hope of the resurrection, strewing her grave with a veritable bed of flowers. Funeral services conducted by Elder R. Archibald, Jr., assisted by Elder M. H. Bond.

THE RELIGION OF A COLLEGE STUDENT.

A great many people imagine that the years from seventeen to twenty-two are not likely to be years of natural piety. world, it is urged, is just making its appeal to the flesh and to the mind with overmastering power, while the experience of life has not yet created for itself a stable religion. Fifteen years ago it was determined in Harvard University that religion should be no longer regarded as a part of academic discipline, but should be offered to youth as a privilege and opportunity. It was then argued by at least one learned person that the system was sure to fail because by the very conditions of their growth young men were unsusceptible to religion. They had outgrown, he urged, the religion of their childhood, and had not yet grown into the religion of their maturity; so that a plan which rested on faith in the inherent religiousness of young men was doomed to disappointment. If, however, the voluntary system of religion applied to university life has proved anything in these fifteen years, it has proved the essentially religious nature of the normal, educated young man of America. To offer religion not as an obligation of college life, but as its supreme privilege, was an act of faith in young men. It assumed that when religion was honestly and intelligently presented to the mind of youth it would receive a reverent and responsive recognition.

The issue of this undertaking has serious lessons for the Christian church. It disposes altogether of the meager expectation with which the life of youth is frequently regarded. I have heard a preacher, addressing a college audience, announce that just as childhood was so assailed by infantile diseases and mishaps that it was surprising to see any child grow up, so youth was assailed by so many sins that it was surprising to see any young man grow up unstained. There is no rational basis for this enervating scepticism. fact is that it is natural for a young man to be good, just as it is natural for a child to grow up. A much wiser word was spoken by one of my colleagues, who, having been asked to address an audience on the temptations of the college life, said that he should devote himself chiefly to its temptations to excellence. A college boy, that is to say, is not, as many suppose, a peculiarly misguided and essentially light-minded person. He is, on the contrary, set in conditions which tempt to excellence and is peculiarly responsive to every sincere appeal to his higher life. Behind the mask of light-mindedness or self-assertion which he assumes, his interior life is wrestling with fundamental problems, as Jacob wrestled with the angel and would not let it go until it blessed him. "Your young men," said the prophet, with deep insight into the nature of youth, "shall see visions." They are our natural idealists. The shades of the prison-house of common life have not yet closed about their sense of the romantic, the heroic, the noble.—Prof. Francis G. Peabody, in the June Forum.

HOW TO ESCAPE FROM PURGATORY.

The ceremony in the old South Gate was held to release a spirit from hell, says the author of a delightful paper on Korea, in Leslie's Monthly for June.

In the middle of the dense crowd filling the pavilion was a rectangular space. At each end stood a man with big folds of loose cloth in his arms. Beside each of them a woman stood. Around them ran the folds of the cloth, which also crossed the rectangle diagonally. On the folds were Chinese characters, and in the midst of them, in the open space, stood the sorceress, wearing a red shirt with red bands over her shoulders, and long, loose sleeves flopping in the air. With long, loose sleeves flopping in the air. her was an old woman beating big cymbals together. Before them were the widow and son of the man whose spirit was by this ceremony to be released from hell. At one side a woman beat a drum resembling two hourglasses, and behind her were three great tissue paper figures suspended in the air and waving wildly. These represented spirits. The crowd shunned them awesomely. On the floor before the sorceress was a little table holding two peeled melons, one red, one yellow, some wine in a green bottle, and three green apples, which it was pleasant to think would surely give the little devils cholera morbus. The diwod, an ugly, scarredfaced woman, poured out some wine and prostrated herself before the table several times. The son, a well-dressed fellow, did the same, while the sorceress, kneeling down, beat the cymbals to call the devils to the offering. A native told me that the man had been dead four years, that the devils had presumptive rights for three years, but that the deceased could now be got off, provided, of course, the moutong woman was satisfied When the perwith her remuneration. formance lasted three days, it would often cost $100. The pieces of cloth would be burned, the natives said, to make a ladder for the spirit from hell to heaven. The surplus folds in the men's arms went to the sorceress.

A FAMOUS NEWSPAPER CORRESPONDENT.

There are few if any newspaper men in the United States with a more brilliant record than that achieved by Mr. William E. Curtis, the famous Washington correspondent of the Chicago Record-Herald. Among newspaper men as well as among the careful readers of newspapers, it is generally con-ceded that Mr. Curtis is the dean of the large colony of trained journalists at the national His relations with the eminent men in Washington are so intimate and so personal, that he has an immense advantage over the ordinary correspondent. They give over the ordinary correspondent. They give to him their confidence, knowing that he will properly discriminate what should be said and what should not.

The newspaper career of Mr. Curtis began in Chicago in 1872. Starting as a reporter, he worked his way upward rapidly to the postition of managing editor, which he resigned to become the Secretary of the South American Commission—a government appointment. While in this position, Mr. Curtis traveled extensively in Central and South America, producing several popular volumes as the literary result of his labors. Later on, in ccöperation with Secretary of State, James G. Blaine, Mr. Curtis organized the work of the Bureau of American Republics, and was placed in charge of that organization; and at the World's Columbian Exposition, he distinguished himself by his labors as the executive head of the Latin-American departments. As correspondent of the Chicago Record, Mr. Curtis' travels carried him not only into all quarters of the United States, but almost everywhere abroad. letters to the Record from Japan and China were published in book form; likewise his letters from England, Germany, and France, and also those resulting from his travels in Mexico and in South America. A letter from Mr. Curtis is published in every issue of the Chicago Record-Herald daily and Sunday.

THE SIZE OF A PENNY.

The only way to determine the size of a penny is to handle it; and even so its circum. ference will vary according to the quality of each handler's touch, just as the size of rising moon differs with different eyes.

There are parents who teach their children to be economical by giving them nothing to be economical with; thus enlarging upon the necessity for a right appreciation of something which to the child is nothing. only way to teach the boy or girl the size of a penny is to give the child one to spend, so that he or she may discover independently its worth in marbles or stick peppermint candy. If you buy him just the quantity of marbles or candy you think he ought to have he will forever remain in ignorance of the value of a penny; also the amount his stomach will hold without a pain; two branches of elementary knowledge most necessary to practical economics.

There is no doubt but American children are given too much money to spend; not because the handling of money makes them extravagant, but because they are not judiciously limited to the actual requirements of their juvenile pleasures and profit, and at the same time required to render an account of their expenditures. The nature extravagant with money is more than likely to be travagantly generous and extravagantly kind; indeed, unthinkingly free with his own, no matter whether it be in deeds or money, be-cause that nature knows not moderation and is not at all concerned with little things; therefore, the first step toward restraining his impulse to throw pennies about is attained by showing him how much they weigh when he has to pick them up again. Measure a penny by your own appetite and you will know how big it is.—The National Magazine for June.

COUNTRY LIFE.

No social philosopher can consider the increasing love of country life by all classes of people without a thrill at the sociological results—saner living, more robust physical characteristics, a growing love of nature, more wholesome sports, the beautification of the earth, better agriculture-all the things that are the antitheses of upholstery, consumption, obesity, bad temper, nervous prostration, and a despondent theology. The quantity of land that is every year brought into use as gardens or parks is a widestretching evidence of the artistic development of the people; for the art of the American people is the landscape gardener's art, however crude its general development may yet be. The time is coming when we shall have the most beautiful continent that man ever lived on .- From the World's Work.

MODERN METHODS OF DEALING WITH CONSUMPTION.

It is now definitely established that consumption is a curable disease. Like every other chronic malady, if it is permitted to possess itself of the system and complicate itself with other disorders, it is beyond remedy. But taken in time, and dealt with in its incipient stages, recovery is practically assured. When the character of the microbe became known, it only remained to subject it to the conditions most unfavorable to its existence. Oxygen destroys it. Its deadliest enemies are pure air and light. Half an hour of sunshine is sure to kill it. And the most efficient treatment is, therefore, that which gives freest play to these

Hence, hygienic and dietetic methods are of the highest importance. Whatever has been done through medication is of slight value in comparison. Therefore, the great results come when patients are merely subjected to a simple and rational regimen whose chief elements are pure air, sunlight, and abundant nutrition under conditions that allow these factors to exert their influence to the greatest possible extent. With the new methods it is no longer held necessary for the patient to seek a climate of the kind that has been supposed to possess some specific property against the disease. The benefits from mild climates are now seen to be due chiefly to the effects of the outdoor life that the climate encourages. But whatever the advantages of such a climate, they are liable to be offset by the depressing influences that follow separation from home and friends, with consequent melancholy. The expense, for the great majority of patients, also bars the way to the change. Therefore, the most desirable treatment, on the whole, is that which keeps the patients near home. This is the conclusion reached by the author of one of the most important works on pulmonary tuberculosis, Dr. S. A. Knopf, of New. York, who expresses his thorough disbelief in the specific curative quality of any climate, and therefore would place a sanatorium where it would do the greatest good to the greatest number. He holds that it is essential to the majority of tuberculous patients to be treated and cured in the same, or nearly the same, climate where they will have to live and work after their restoration to health .-Review of Reviews for June.

THE PLATONIC LOVE LETTERS OF CHARLES DICKENS.

For more than fifty years an Englishwoman (who is still living) has cherished a little sheaf of letters written by Charles Dickens. These charming letters show the novelist in a new part—that of the successful match—maker. They tell the story of another man's courtship and show how the writer spurred a faint heart into winning a fair lady.

They will be printed—for the first time—in the Saturday Evening Post for June 15.

G. K. W.

It is reported that a fond husband on one occasion, when looking over his wife's accounts, found frequently she had been giving money to G. K. W. Perhaps a little jealousy was mixed with his curiosity, when he asked who the man was, and the innocent wife re-plied that G. K. W. was short for "Goodness Knows What." This is a good story if true; for we presume that many a woman has a habit of writing down in her account book "to sundries" more often than she ought to do. Ellen H. Richards, of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, contributes an article to the June Delineator in relation to household accounts. It contains a great deal of useful information for those women who watch the expenditure of their husbands' money in domestic directions.

THE NEGRO AT HOME.

WHAT THE NEGRO REALLY IS.

A veritable searchlight is turned upon the Negro problem at its center by Prof. W. E. Burghardt DuBois, of Atlanta University, in the World's Work for June. Prof. DuBois, himself a Negro, has taken the Black Belt of Georgia, where the black population is densest, as a particular locality, and tells frankly of the real Negro as he is at home. The movement to the country and its reaction, the growing ownership of land, family and home conditions, the heritage slavery has left the Negro, his shiftlessness, his good nature; in fact, a glimpse of the inner heart of the man is given. The text is illustrated by some remarkable pictures made by Mr. A.

Radclyffe Dugmore.
"Slave ancestry," says Prof. DuBois, "and a system of unrequited toil have not improved the efficiency or temper of the mass of black laborers. Nor is this peculiar to Sambo-it has in history been just as true of John and Hans, of Jacques and Pat, of all ground-down peasantries. Such is the situation of the mass of the Negroes in the Black Belt to-day, and they are thinking about it. Crime and a cheap, dangerous socialism are the inevitable results of this pondering. I see now that ragged black man sitting on a log aimlessly whittling a stick. He mutters to me with the murmur of many ages when he says: 'White man sit down whole year; Nigger work day and night and make crop; Nigger hardly gets bread and meat; white man sittin' down gits all. It's wrong.'"

THE CHURCH OF CHRIST AND DISCUSSION,

STILL WAITING.

When Elder Wight replied to the remarks of Elder Haldeman, Presiding Elder Richard Hill made a request of Elder Alexander Smith that the discussion of the differences between the Church of Christ and the Reorganization be continued. Bro. Smith promised to lay the matter before the conference and "let us know." More than three weeks have passed and still no word. What is the trouble? Surely the Reorganization with its vast array of ministerial talent is not afraid to continue the discussion, no, surely this ruthless pursuer of Brighamites, Campbellites, etc., will not turn tail when it comes to "discussing" with a few "Hedrickite" elders. No! indeed. Let us hear from you—please.— Evening and Morning Star, May 15.

The request of Elder Richard Hill made to Elder Alexander Smith, was by him placed in the hands of President Joseph Smith, president of the conference; and the discussions had between Elders Hill and Wight, and Elders Halderman and Wight, occurring during the last week of conference, President Smith put the request before the body, and it was turned over to the Independence branch, for their consideration and action.

We supposed that some of the "Hedrickite" brethren were present and took notice of said action.

Whether the Reorganization is afraid to discuss with a few Hedrickites or not remains to be seen.

Elders Hill and Haldeman both attacked the baptism for the dead theory, when both knew that the Reorganization did not teach nor insist upon a belief in it as an essential prerequisite to salvation.

Just why Elders Hill and Haldeman should attack this doctrine when allowed to address the assembled church at Independence we are at a loss to discover; when there may be other and more difficult questions of difference existing between the two bodies. Had the conference been composed of representatives of the Utah Mormon Church it would seem to have been more appropriate for them to have pursued the course they did.

Elder D. W. Wight was selected to said:

review what Elders Hill and Haldeman presented for the reason that he is a young man of a good and sober habit of thought, who would give a fair review without resorting to abusive or recriminating statement. Besides, he was a comparative stranger to the "Hedrickite" brethren and had no previous prejudices in himself to contend with.

Elder D. W. Wight's statement that the building of the temple is or was a "secondary consideration" upon which the Evening and Morning Star makes unfavorable comment we leave to Bro. Wight himself, as we did not hear the remark, and do not know in what connection it was made.

We presume that the brethren at Independence are both able and willing to stand on the defensive of the faith when it is needed. At all events it is with them to decide; for we gave Elder Hill's note to Elder W. H. Garrett, one of the officers.

PERSONAL RIGHTEOUSNESS.

The foundation of all real success lies in right conduct.

Nothing is permanent that is not right.

Purity of life is essential to the reception of divine wisdom; and in proportion to the extent we are willing to heed the commands of God as they are given to us, will we be able to develop in discernment of his mind and character. In the revelations given from time to time, the thought is constantly emphasized that righteousness of character is the basis of acceptance with God. As we attain this, we are enabled to accomplish other things demanded of us in the progress of the work. Much that men do may be brought to what they consider a successful issue without regard to personal righteousness. In so acting they flatter themselves with the thought of success, honor, renown, and power. But the fondest hopes of the human soul, based upon such premises, must ultimately give place to disaster and despair. God's laws are immutable and supreme, and everything out of harmony therewith must eventually suffer defeat. are laborers with him to the degree that we are able to think as he thinks, to reason as he reasons, to act as he acts. Upon this point the Lord has

Now, as you have asked, behold, I say unto you, Keep my commandments, and seek to bring forth and establish the cause of Zion. Behold, I speak unto you, and also to all those who have desires to bring forth and establish this work; and no one can assist in this work, except he shall be humble and full of love, having faith, hope, and charity, being temperate in all things whatsoever shall be intrusted to his care.—D. C. 11: 3, 4.

The spirit of this statement ought to be pressed upon our attention at every turn, reiterated in our hearing, and thoroughly ground into our lives, until we fully realize the fact that nothing evil can harmonize with the mind of God. Every incorrect thought, every wrong conception, every unholy act, prevents us to that degree from accomplishing work that will meet with his divine approval. In spite, however, of all that God has said regarding the nature of his work, and the manner of life demanded of his people, it seems to be the most natural thing in the world for us to overlook the duties of the present, in our zeal for the wider developments of the future. We reach for things beyond us with the simplicity of a child that cries for the moon; and would be about as capable of managing some things for which we long as would the child to take care of the moon, were it placed within its grasp. It is a grand thing to be called as a colaborer with God; but it is a grander thing to be able to so work, that the beauty of his designs shall not be spoiled by unwise and hasty effort upon our part.

At the present stage in the history of the world and the church, conditions are appearing before us, aweinspiring in their character. Only as we may be ready to meet everthing that may arise with a supreme degree of humility, an earnest reliance upon God, and a determination to be diligent in the study of his laws, ought we to feel any degree of safety. Righteousness is always in demand, and none are too poor to possess it. No power, however great, can prevent our association with God when clothed with this saintly robe. Without it the soul is weak and helpless, though classed among the princes of the earth.

While we cherish the glorious ideal of a government where peace and harmony reign, where no wrong or oppression may exist, where everything conduces to the best good of the individual, let us remember that so long as we are disposed to deal dishonorably with a brother, so long as we cherish any degree of malice, and are not willing in every way to do as we would be done by, it will be impossible for us to live under such conditions. If we would be free from sin. we must banish it from us. If we desire the society of Saints, we should be Saints. If we wish to be dwellers in Zion, we must be pure, for Zion is "the pure in heart." God will take care of his part of the work, shall we be ready with ours? While some are called to various positions of service in the government of God, all are called to be righteous citizens, and if with an eye single to the perfection of our characters, the glory of God, and the good of man, we continue to faithfully occupy in the positions assigned us, there need be no fear of the results.

FOR GRACELAND? YES.

The following letter handed us by Bishop Kelley illustrates how easy it is for those who are used to sacrifice and self deprivation to meet the demands these make upon them.

How many will go without the equivalent of the sister's new dress for the college? How many? Who?

COTTAGE GROVE, Lane Co., Oreg., May 29, 1901.

Dear Sir:—Seeing your trouble for the want of money for the college, I thought I would send you two dollars. I am very poor and have no money but what my friends give me; but I thought I would not get me any new dress this summer, but would send the money to the college. I hope that you will excuse my bad writing, as I am getting old and can't hold my pen very well. If I live until the 20th of next July I shall be ninety years old. From your sister.

LAURA M. OLIVER.

THE following appeared in the Nauyoo Rustler for June 4, 1901:

THIS SETTLES IT.

A pamphlet is said to be published by A. C. Schroeder of Salt Lake City, Utah, making several charges against the original L. D. S. Church, and states that Joseph Smith, while living in Nauvoo, was the husband of eighty wives. It certainly looks like a pipe dream, to listen to, or read such stuff, when dozens of men are living in Hancock and Lee counties today who knew Joseph Smith and who knew that he was the husband of but one wife.—Montrose, Lee Co., Iowa, Journal.

THE following from the Burlington Hawkeye of date of May 11 is interesting to Latter Day Saints:

IMMERSED IN THE RIVER.

A little knot of quiet people on the levee, just south of the Diamond Jo boathouse, attracted the attention of loungers and news gatherers about eight o'clock last evening. A handsome, stout, elderly gentleman was seen to lead a young lady out into the stream. After pronouncing a few words, he immersed her in the chilly current. The brief and simple ceremony was repeated six times, five young ladies and one young man receiving baptism in the form in which it was administered in earliest times. The elderly gentleman was Elder J. S. Roth, who will conduct services at the church of the Latter Day Saints on Thirteenth and Locust streets today. The young people have been accepted as members of the congregation.

In another place we noted a letter which Bishop Kelley received regarding the college debt, and here we present another which he received since:

NAPONEE, Neb., June 8.

Bro. E. L. Kelley:—About one year ago you preached a sermon at Stewartsville, Missouri. You spoke of the college debt. I was at the conference in 1894, and when the vote was taken to build the college I voted yea; and when I read Bro. Hilliard's article in the HERALD of June 5, I went straight to the bank and got draft for twenty-five dollars payable to E L. Kelley, which you will find inclosed. Hoping the debt will be paid, I remain, Yours in gospel bonds,
WILLIAM A. MOORE.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. F. G. Pitt writes from Pittsburg, the 6th inst.:

We find the Saints very kind in caring for us, and we have every reason to believe we shall like our mission. We may have to devote most of our time to this city, as Independence takes away another one of our leading men. As a result Pittsburg branch is at present without a presiding elder. We are encouraged in the hope that the way is opening up for the erection of our new church this summer. I had the pleasure of preaching in the Congregational church in McKeesport last Sunday evening. I had excellent liberty and good interest. I am promised the church two nights next week. McKeesport is only about eighteen miles from Pittsburg and connected by trolley cars. We have hopes of opening up the work there. Mr. Cadow is a friend to the work, and I think will soon be with us.

Bro. J. B. Carmichael in sending notice of the death of Bro. J. M. Putney, says:

Bro. Putney was conscious to the last minute, almost. His death came to him without fear or tremor—he passed away as if going to sleep. Sr. Putney and daughters keenly feel their loss. We feel that He who gives comfort will now remember them.

Bro. T. W. Davis, writing from Burke, Idaho, June 6, says:

I have engaged the schoolhouse for Sunday evenings, and intend to start preaching here. I do not think any of our men have been here before. Thought I would like to tell the people what I know.

"ZION AND HER LAW."—NO. 4.
BY JOSEPH FLORY.

In section 101: 1 we find promises of blessings for obedience and threatenings of punishments for disobedience. In section 101: 2, God gave a commandment that they should organize themselves and appoint every man his stewardship, that every man may give an account unto the Lord of his stewardship which is appointed unto him. In paragraphs 3 to 8 a number of individuals are named and their particustewardships specified, which were appointed unto them and their seed or house after them, inasmuch as those receiving the stewardships were faithful. The stewardships were to be a blessing to them and their seed after them, thus seemingly establishing a sort of lineal or hereditary right in this respect. But the language will no more convey such a right, irrespective of faithfulness and other qualifications, than we find for lineal or hereditary right to the offices of the leading elders and members of the leading quorums of the church, as taught in section 124:7. And nothing is more natural than that the sons of those high in authority, either in spiritual or temporal affairs of the church, should be more or less associated with, or at least acquainted with, the affairs of their fathers, and would naturally be better qualified to take the places of their fathers than anyone else, provided, however, that they were faithful in the sight of God.

And again, a commandment I give unto you concerning your stewardship which I have appointed unto you; behold, all these properties are mine, or else your faith is vain, and ye are found hypocrites, and the covenants which ye have made unto me are broken; and if the properties are mine then ye are stewards, otherwise ye are no stewards. But verily I say unto you, I have appointed unto you to be stewards over mine house, even stewards indeed.—D. C. 101: 10.

Webster defines a steward as being "one who manages the domestic concerns of great families." Here we have a man or a number of them in different departments, appointed to manage the affairs of the storehouse of the Lord, and the Lord declares that they are stewards indeed-in every sense of the term-and if stewards indeed, the properties are not their own, as in the case of the other class of stewards; and if not their own property, then as a matter of course they have no right to any part of it, or the increase that may accrue in the management of the same, but they were to have a just recompense for all the labor done. (See sec. 42: 19.) Hence the command to cast all the increase into the church treasury, to become the common property of the whole church. (81:4.)

And again, there shall be another treasury prepared and a treasurer appointed to keep the treasury, and a seal shall be placed upon it; and all moneys that you receive in your stewardships, by improving upon the properties which I have appointed unto you, in houses or in lands, or in cattle, or in all things save it be the holy and sacred writings, which I have reserved unto myself for holy and sacred purposes, shall be cast into the treasury as fast as you receive moneys, by hundreds or by fifties, or by twenties, or by tens, or by fives, or in other words, if any man among you obtain five talents let him cast them into the treasury; or if he obtain ten, or twenty, or fifty, or an hundred, let him do likewise; and let not any man among you say that it is his own, for it shall not be called his, nor any part of it; and there shall not any part of it be used, or taken out of the treasury, only by the voice and common consent of the order. And this shall be the voice and common consent of the order; that any man among you, say unto the treasurer, I have need of this to help me in my stewardship; if it be five talents, or if it be ten talents, or twenty, or fifty, or an hundred, the treasurer shall give unto him the sum which he requires, to help him in his stewardship, until he be found a transgressor, and it is manifest before the council of the order plainly, that he is an unfaithful and an unwise steward; but so long as he is in full fellowship, and is faithful, and wise in his stewardship, this shall be his token unto the treasurer that the treasurer shall not withhold. But in case of transgression the treasurer shall be subject unto the council and voice of the order. And in case the treasurer is found an unfaithful, and an unwise steward, he shall be subject to the counsel and voice of the order, and shall be removed out of his place, and another shall be appointed in his stead.-D. C. 101:12.

This latter quotation is in perfect accord with the quotation we have already made from section 81:4, but is more explicit and full as to the nature of the rights of the members of the order of Enoch to the properties of the church, i. e., that they, if necessity requires, may draw on the treasurer for means to assist them in carrying on the business of their several stewardships, until proven unfaithful and unwise, and how they as well as the treasurer are to be dealt with if unfaithful or unwise.

Now notice that those in the order of Enoch, if not faithful, would lose their office and standing in the church; and as the bishopric was to be in that order, the same rule applies as given in section 64:8, wherein it is declared if not faithful in their stewardship they should be condemned and others placed in their stead in their office, and in charge of the properties of the church or their stewardship. have shown that persons who are stewards over their own properties cannot be deprived of their stewardship or inheritance, even if disfellowshiped. It will be seen that those who have stewardships in the order of Enoch were of a different class, and subject to a different rule, or could be removed from their office and others placed in their stead, and be subject to the penalty—whatever that may be of being turned over to the buffetings of Satan, while the others were under none of those penalties, so far as we can learn.

In latter clause of section 101:10 the Lord refers to the command found in section 70:1, where certain ones were appointed and commanded to take charge of or become stewards over the revelations and commandments already given and yet to be given, and to manage the concerns thereof. From the language used we understand that all the increase accruing to those in charge of the revelations as their stewardships, more than was necessary for their support. was to be cast into the storehouse of the Lord; but the revelations themselves were not to be given unto the church nor to the world, but were in their charge; that "an account of their stewardship would be required of them in the day of judgment.

The persons named in section 70:1 were members of the three quorums organized into the order of Enoch, and the property was church property, which makes us safe in concluding that the stewards and stewardships all were under the same general rules and regulations as the order of Enoch, although they were to be kept separate from the other property of the A superficial reading of what follows in paragraph 3, same section, would likely lead us to the conclusion that all men who receive a stewardship would be subject to the same law—that of giving all the increase into the church treasury. Let us see whether such conclusion is tenable:

Behold, this is what the Lord requires of every man in his stewardship, even as I, the Lord, have appointed, or shall hereafter appoint unto any man. And, behold, none are exempt from this law who belong to the church of the living God; yea; neither the bishop, neither the agent, who keepeth the Lord's storehouse; neither he who is appointed in a stewardship over temporal things.—D. C. 70: 3.

This sweeping declaration includes every man who has a stewardship in the church and kingdom of God. In the opening paragraph of this section the Lord declares:

Behold and hearken, O ye inhabitants of Zion, and all ye people of my church, who are far off and hear the word of the Lord, which I give unto my servant Joseph Smith, Jr.—D. C. 70: 1.

Certainly there is something to be revealed of universal importance and application to all in the church. What is it? Certainly not the theory that all who have a stewardship must give all their increase into the church treasury, for we have found "a standing law forever" in section 106, which only requires one tenth of the increase, annually, of those who come under its requirements. We have found the one being stewards over their own property, and the others "stewards indeed" over the Lord's property—the storehouse of the Lord, including the revelations mentioned in section 70. The Lord says in paragraph 1, section 70:—

An account of this stewardship will I require of them in the day of judgment.

And this universal principle will certainly apply to paragraph 3, where the Lord says:

Behold, this is what the Lord requires of every man in his stewardship, even as I, the Lord have appointed, or shall hereafter appoint unto any man. And, behold, none are exempt from this law who belong to the church of the living God.

See also section 101: 2; 42: 9; and 72: 1.

If we remember aright, this is the first time this principle of requiring an account of their stewardship in the day of judgment was declared, or as we would understand it, giving an account, both in time and eternity, as definitely stated again in section 72:1, just referred to above. Thus, by rightly dividing the word of truth, we have a perfect harmony in all its parts; but if we insist that this same rule or law must apply to the increase of all who have a stewardship, whether of a similar character or not, we will have a conflict between the different revelations which cannot be harmonized in any other way ever brought to notice of the writer.

We have now found two classes of individuals, one of which may be called the private members or citizens of Zion, the other the official members or citizens of Zion, whose privileges, duties, and obligations are in some respects radically different, yet all are under the rules and regulations of the same general law of consecration. The one class pays one tenth of the increase, the other turns into the general storehouse all of the increase, but receives a just recompense or remuneration for services. We see nothing to prevent those who compose the order of Enoch from having an inheritance and being stewards over it as their own property, the same as the members, and of course it and all their increase over and above their needs, either from their inheritance or as a compensation for services rendered would be subject to the rule governing that class of stewardships. See section 58: 8, 9, where some who are in the order of Enoch were to have an inheritance. The order of Enoch, or official members composing it then as will be seen, have charge of all the public property of the church, or the common wealth of Zion, whether it be houses and lands, or cattle, or mills, or mercantile institutions, or foundries. or factories. machine shops, hotels, telephone or telegraph lines, electric light plants, railroads, etc., etc.; all these industries will be carried on for the general welfare of the whole church. Managers and employees will all receive just and fair compensation for services rendered, and goods sell at such prices as will pay all expenses, and leave a safe margin of profit, which profit or gain will become the property of the whole church, to be used as wisdom and the voice of revelation may direct.

Reader, can you see in this system the hand of God—a God of infinite wisdom and love for his people, those who are willing to make every sacrifice which he may require at their hands, in order to receive his blessing? Such a system, which certainly is far superior to anything now extant in the world, when once in successful operation, would attract the attention of the world, and God has declared it will.

For, behold, I say unto you that Zion shall flourish, and the glory of the Lord shall be upon her, and she shall be an ensign unto the people, and there shall come unto her out of every nation under heaven. And the day shall come, when the nations of the earth shall tremble because of her, and shall fear because of her terrible ones.—D. C. 64: 8.

But firstly, let my army become very great, and let it be sanctified before me, that it may become fair as the sun, and clear as the moon, and that her banners may be terrible unto all nations; that the kingdoms of this world may be constrained to acknowledge that the kingdom of Zion is in very deed the kingdom of our God and his Christ; therefore, let us become subject unto her laws.—D. C. 102: 9.

Now, reader, what part will we take in this great work? Are we ready to fall in line and work with God for the consummation of so desirable an end? If so, he is ready to work with us for its accomplishment, and he has said he would hasten his work in its time. In section 118:1 and 119:4, and in HERALD for 1899, page 478, one of the bishopric, in an excellent article under the head of "The Gathering," says:

I thought we should proceed, as the hastening time had come, to set the law in operation and accomplish God's purpose as soon as possible.

But remember the terms are of God's own appointment, and they must be made our choice if we wish to receive his favor.

I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say, but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise.—D. C. 81:3.

If we do not wish to choose his plan, we can stand aloof. But, remember, God has declared that he will not "spare any that remaineth in Babylon" (sec. 64:5).

Reader, if the hastening time has come, are you ready to help hasten the work of God? May God help us to do our duty.

We shall now consider tithing as applicable to the church in its scattered condition. We stated at the beginning of this communication that we did not expect to any great extent, at least, to treat upon the obligations we are under to the law of consecration in the present scattered condition of the church, yet we will present a few thoughts along that line, by first tracing in part the history of the application of that law, both in the old church and in the Reorganization.

In the old church at one time, as already referred to, the teaching of the bishop was that the paying one tenth of what a man owns was to be the beginning of tithing, and one tenth of the increase annually thereafter.

In the Reorganization the epistle of the Twelve in 1861 set forth that the law required first the surplus as a beginning of tithing, and one tenth of our increase from time to time, referring directly to the law itself as found in section 106 (Tullidge's History, pp. 637-640.) Six years afterwards we find that they concluded it required one tenth of the properties of all who possessed a surplus and afterward one tenth of their interest annually. (Tullidge's History, page 675.) The tract entitled "Tithing," as issued by the church some years ago, was plain and in harmony with the law itself; surplus first, and one tenth annually afterwards, to be observed in Zion and her stakes, and that it was to be the means whereby an equality should be brought about. In 1878 the conference resolved that the law of tithing was now in force, making no exceptions as to its surplus clause. See minutes of conference for 1878, in HERALD, October 1, pp. 293, 294. In a sermon by one of the bishopric, published in HERALD for January 13, 1883, we are taught that the surplus clause is not applicable to the church now, nor will it be unless again so commanded; while in Herald for June 12, 1886, page 362, the Bishop says the surplus clause will be in force when we gather to Zion. The Bishopric has admitted that a variety of ways have been set forth for observing the law of tithing. HERALD for March 1, 1884, page 141. although the Bishopric has for a number of years past been advocating the theory that the paying of one tenth of what a man possesses is proper for a beginning of tithing, with one tenth of the increase annually thereafter; just the same theory as taught in the old church by the Bishop, when from the dissatisfaction then existing the question was asked of the Lord, "How much is required as a tithing," and the answer was given as found in section

We need not wonder that such questions and thoughts as, "Will some one please explain," as found in Herald for 1899, p. 668, and the very sensible remarks following it are agitating the minds of the Saints, and will continue to do so until something more in harmony with the law is presented in defense of the one-tenth-of-all-a-man-possesses as -a- beginning - of-tithing theory than we find the writer has done who in HERALD for 1899, page 720, wherein an attempt is made to answer the question, "Will some one please explain." The writer says,

It seems to me that the only safe position on the tithing is to interpret the word surplus to mean one tenth. The word tithe means tenth. To begin our tithing would be to pay the Lord what we owe him, and as he requires one tenth, that would be our just obligation to commence with.

He gives no reference or quotations from Doctrine and Covenants to sustain the idea. The statement that to him it seems the only safe way to interpret the word surplus, is to interpret it to mean one tenth, "seems" to me to be merely an assumption, inasmuch as he has as yet failed to find one sentence in all the revelations given on the subject that could be thus interpreted, and yet be in harmony with the designs and purposes of the law as found in Doctrine and Covenants, and explained in section 106, given at a time when a theory was entertained in the old church such as is now advocated in the Reorganization, and which did not then nor does it now prove satisfactory. Genesis 14:20, as found in common version of the Bible, proves nothing one way nor the other, as to what is to be a beginning of tithing. It simply says, "He gave him tithes of all." But if we go to Hebrews 7:1-4, we find that Abraham gave a tenth of the spoils he had captured from those with whom he had just been at war. And it does not say whether or not it was his first or the beginning of tithing for Abraham. We find the same event more fully given in the Inspired Translation, Genesis 14:17-39, and from which we shall prove that Abraham paid tithes only at the time mentioned in Genesis 14:20, common version, on the spoils taken in war. and which was an increase subject to be tithed according to the law in Doctrine and Covenants, section 106. And we shall take Abraham's case to prove the correctness of our position on tithing, as set forth herein, instead of its proving something to the contrary, and something which cannot be proven from Doctrine and Covenants. If we examine the history and character of Melchisedec, as found in the reference given in Inspired Translation, we shall find that he and his people were practicing an order of things like described in Doctrine and Covenants section 36, i. e., the order of Enoch, and which is also found described in Genesis, seventh, Inspired Translation. Abraham, being a servant of God, was doubtless practicing that which was required by that same order, which order we find occasional glimpses of in the history of God's people, as already referred to in Book of Mormon, also mentioned in Acts 4: 32-37, and 5: 1-11, and again revealed in this dispensation. Those whom we have already shown were commanded to organize into the order of Enoch, and whose work was to bring about the same condition of affairs as we believe all those other instances mentioned were working to bring about, and without question were all working under the same general law, even the law of consecration.

Believing our premises to be correct, and that our conclusions are in harmony therewith, we shall see if we can prove that the case of Abraham sustains the claims which we have all along made, that section 106 is the explanation of what had previously been given, and that the former commandments will and do harmonize with section 106 when properly understood.

And this Melchisedec, having thus established righteousness, was called the king of heaven by his people, or, in other words, the King of peace. And he lifted up his voice, and he blessed Abram, being the high priest, and the keeper of the storehouse of God: him whom God had appointed to receive tithes for the poor. Wherefore, Abram paid unto him tithes of all that he had, of all the riches which he possessed, which God had given him more than that which he had need.— Gen. 14: 36-39, I. T.

We find that Melchisedec was the keeper of the storehouse of God; him whom God had appointed to receive tithes for the poor. He must have been a bishop, at least he was engaged in the bishop's office. And if the reader will carefully examine the fourteenth chapter of Genesis, from verse 17 to the end of the chapter, he will find, as we have already stated. that Melchisedec was at the head of an established institution, or a people that were established in the institutions and laws of God-the church of God. And Abram also had long been in the service of God so that we shall first assume and then prove that he was only paying tithing on his increase, and consequently had already complied with the law which required all of his surplus. In verse 20 we are informed that.

Abram gave him [Melchisedec] tithes of all he had taken.

Nothing is said about the property he had before the war. See verses 1-15. In verse 39 we read:

Wherefore, Abram paid unto him [Melchisedec] tithes of all that he had, of all the riches which he possessed, which God had given him more than that which he had

Notice the word wherefore, in beginning of verse 39. Webster defines "wherefore" to mean "for reason;" for the reason of something just stated, and that was that—in our modern phrase-Melchisedec was a bishop, wherefore Abram paid to him mentioned in verse 20, but "of all that he had, of all the riches which he possessed, which God had given him more than that which he had need."

If we view this statement in the light in which we have presented this matter all along, we shall find that he paid tithes, or one tenth of the spoils taken, as mentioned in verse 20; and that he had also, as described in verse 39, been paying tithes, one tenth, of all that God had given him more than he had need since he had, as required by the law given in Doctrine and Covenants 106: 1, placed himself under obligations to the law of tithing, by consecrating his surplus, if he had any, as a beginning of tithing, and then one tenth of his interest-increaseor, as it says, of all that God had given him more than he had need. This statement certainly is in perfect harmony with the law as found in section 106 and elsewhere in Doctrine and Covenants, and to the writer's mind cannot be harmonized in any other sense than that it was the increase over and above his needs that was being tithed. This law has often been attempted to be construed and made to convey the idea that one tenth of all a man possesses is the proper beginning of tithing, by referring to the case of Abram in Genesis 14: 20, which, however, when we take the Inspired Translation, proves just the reverse.

"Then who is to determine the question of excess?" When Zion is redeemed, and the time comes for God's "commandments concerning Zion and her law [to] be executed and fulfilled," there will be a way of determining that matter; for when we go and take our money or property to Zion, or any of her stakes—the only place or places where the law in its fullness both of letter and spirit can be or ever was designed to be executed—we shall there find a bishop, to whom we shall give an account of what we have to consecrate, and of our wants and needs and circumstances, families, etc. And if we can agree with him as to how much or how little, if any, is surplus, we can without further trouble settle the matter satisfactorily. But if we cannot agree, then the matter must be laid before a council of twelve high priests, who, as disinterested parties, can adjust the matter. See letter of Joseph Smith to the bishop, already quoted in this

But says one, Did not God speak to the Reorganization in 1861 (D. C. sec. 114), and instruct them to execute the law of tithing? What are you going to do with it?

Certainly he did; and what do you want us to do with it? Certainly not to place a construction upon it that will conflict with other revelations tithes, one tenth, not only of that already given. We have shown that in Zion and in her stakes alone can the law of consecration be fully carried out. God has instructed us that his commandments concerning Zion and her law were to be executed and fulfilled after Zion's redemption, which was not in 1861, neither was it accomplished up to 1899. Then what can we do with it, so that it will harmonize with those formerly given, and which we have already been examining and harmonizing? To the writer's mind, all that could be claimed for it. or that was ever designed to be understood, would be to teach the Saints the spirit of the law, which was to give of their means for the use of the poor, and for any and all church purposes that were required in our scattered condition, as far as they could do so in justice to themselves and those dependent upon them for a support, leaving every man to act on his agency, acting honorably before men and conscientiously before God in this respect. To us it seems that the attempts made to apply a rule requiring a definite amount to be paid have been a source of contention and confusion upon the subject. If each were left to act on his own responsibility, it would give each the opportunity to exercise his selfish propensities; but better that than to urge the observance of a rule that is unequal in its requirements, or be more burdensome on some than on others, and which never will, neither in Zion nor elsewhere, answer the designs and purposes for which the law was intended—i. e., make them equal—nor even approximate towards it.

Let us illustrate: Suppose two individuals come into the church whose circumstances are about alike, so far as family support and necessary expenses are concerned. One is worth $10,000: the other one is worth $1,000. Under the rule above stated, one owes and pays one thousand dollars, and the other one owes and pays one hundred dollars. After paying this, one has $9,000 left, the other $900. As before being tithed, one has ten times as much as the other. How much nearer are they equal after being tithed than before? Not one particle. And certainly the one who paid the one hundred dollars was less able to do so than the one that paid the thousand dollars, for the latter was still in much better condition, financially, after being tithed, than the other was before being tithed. The parable of the twelve sons, in Doctrine and Covenants 38:5, 6, teaches contrary to such a system, and we could give quotations from the writings of some whose standing in the church should have been of weight on this matter. who with the writer claim that such a system is unequal, is harder on the poor than the rich, and consequently is not in harmony with God's ways, who says, "Are not my ways equal?" Ezek. 18: 29.

We do not wish to be understood as charging anyone in the past with wrong motives, or a willful desire to teach wrongfully; neither do we wish to deny but what many have been blessed in complying with the various teachings given; but they have been blessed upon the same principle that many who are now Saints were blessed while connected with the various churches in christendom, while living up to the light then in their possession, were blessed for their sacrifice and good motives. When Zion is redeemed and we gather there, we will have to meet the requirements of the law as given in section 106, whether or not we have complied with the present system as now taught; but we will in no wise lose our reward for what we have given to the church. We believe the reason which was assigned by the Lord in associating the twelve with the bishopric in the revelation of 1861, as explained in section 122:5 i. e., is to quite an extent true today, judging from the different opinions on that subject which are being advanced in the church papers, and from the resolutions lately adopted by the conference of Southern California district. (Ensign, November 30, 1899, p. 8.) See also paragraph 6 of section 122.

The Lord, in section 122:6, stated that the law given in section 42 "is as if it were given today," etc. (given April 15, 1894). It shows that we are and have been for years in some respects in the same condition the church was for a short period between the time of the giving of the law in section 42 (given February 9, 1831), and May, 1831, the time they were commanded to organize. (See section 51.)

The instructions to them then, as given in section 44:2, 3, were to be faithful in preaching, etc., and in course of time they would have power to organize according to the laws of man, and eventually be enabled to keep the laws of God, etc. And in the meantime that they must visit the poor and needy, and administer to their relief, that they may be kept until all things may be done according to my law which ye have received.

Today we have a number of revelations relating to the law of consecration which cannot be carried out until Zion is redeemed. The commandment given in 1861 evidently must be construed to mean that we must work along those lines marked out by the law previously given in section 42 and elsewhere, just so far as we can; take care of the poor, preach the gospel (which takes means), purchase the lands specified in Missouri by revelation; in fact, observe all the commandments referred to in section 117:11. and which teaches a gathering into the regions round about until it shall be otherwise given. The question now is, Are we going to stay just where we are, or shall we make a move all along the line, according to the instructions given by the Spirit to come up higher. God's laws all being of an elevating nature, the more of them we observe the higher we will ascend in the scale of perfection, or the nearer we will approach unto him.

GEOLOGY AND THE DELUGE.

REMARKABLE GEOLOGICAL DISCOVER IES IN CENTRAL ASIA AND SOUTH-ERN RUSSIA, SHOWING THAT THE NOACHIAN FLOOD IS A SCIENTIFIC POSSI-BILITY.

BY DR. FREDERICK G. WRIGHT, PROFESSOR OF THE HARMONY OF SCIENCE AND REVELATION, IN OBERLIN COLLEGE

(From McClure's Magazine for June. By permission.) That about 4.000,000 square miles of North America and 2,000,000 in Northwestern Europe were once covered with ice a mile or more in depth, is one of the most widely known facts of geology. . . . As Asia, like North America, stretches toward the North Pole, and faces a great sea on the east, I naturally expected to find there evidences of a glacial period similar to that in this country. But. contrary to all my expectations, I found no sign in Central Asia and Southern Siberia of glacial work. On the contrary, the geological conditions I found were such as are only to be explained by an extensive submergence of the region where the Scriptures and tradition locate the Flood which destroyed the whole human race, excepting Noah and his family. . . .

NO GLACIAL PERIOD IN CENTRAL ASTA.

Starting from Peking, we went inward 200 miles, and ascended the eastern border of the great Mongolian plateau near Kalgan. We were here in almost the same latitude as that of New York City, and in a mountainous district from 5,000 to 6,000 feet above the sea. But we found there no signs of the glacial period. We then went to Port Arthur, and made a northand south section through the center of Manchuria to the Amur River, and thence up the river to about latitude 54° N., being, at Chita, 2,500 feet above the sea, and at the eastern base of the Vitim plateau, whose general level is 5,000 feet. But though we were here sixteen degrees farther! took us through innumerable villages north than the southern point to which the ice extended in the valley of the Mississippi, we could find no signs of the glacial period.

We then crossed the Vitim plateau to Lake Baikal, and, after touching the Yenisei River, at about latitude 56°. proceeded to Omsk, on the Irtish River, where we turned to the south, and for 1,400 miles drove in a Russian tarantass along the northwestern base of the Alatau Mountains to Tashkend, and thence, through Samarkand, Bokhara, and Merv, to the Caspian Sea. In reality, this entire trip from Lake Baikal to the Caspian Sea is at the base of the mountains which border the great plateau of Central Asia. The distance traversed at their base was more than 4,000 miles. To the southeast of us, mountain peaks from 10,000 to 16,000 feet were constantly in sight, all glistening with the dazzling brightness of miniature glaciers and extensive snowfields. To the northwest, however, there stretched a continuous plain as far as the Arctic Ocean, except where interrupted by the Ural and some minor mountains. But we found no indications that glaciers ever extended out from the mountain valleys crossed. . . .

EVIDENCES OF A GREAT SEA AROUND MT. ARARAT.

On the contrary, throughout this entire region we were confronted with the evidence of a great subsidence of the land which had taken place in recent geological time, and which, in date, would correspond roughly with that of the glacial period in North America. For several hundred miles, while driving through the region south of Lake Balkash and the Aral Sea, we were evidently upon a terrace of the fine loam which is called loess, about 2.500 feet above sea level. Indeed, at different elevations this loess extends continuously in a broad shelf along the base of the mountains, from the Irtish River to the Caspian Sea, and is found in extensive level areas over various portions of the Caucasus and Northern Persia around the base of Mount Ararat; while the so-called "black earth" of Southern Russia is a deposit of the same material, and probably of the same age, 100 or more feet in thickness. The distribution of this loess is the key to the whole situation. . .

It can be easily cut with the spade, and caverns excavated in it make comfortable and permanent dwelling-The bluffs at Vicksburg, on places. the Mississippi River, consist of this deposit, and during the celebrated siege of that city the people found safety in caverns excavated along its side. In China millions of people live comfortably in such excavations.

Our trip through Eastern China

thus constructed. In some places in China the loess is 1,000 feet in thickness, and houses may be seen on the slopes one above another. . . All Northeastern China proper is enveloped in this deposit. It is the sediment gathered from the loess which renders the great rivers of China so turbid and gives appropriateness to the name of the Yellow Sea. When forty miles out from land, the traveler upon this sea will meet with a sharply defined line, on one side of which is the clear ocean water, and on the other side water which is fairly opaque with the heavy load of sediment brought in by the streams, and which is constantly increasing the shoals along the border of the continent, and adding to the margin of dry land which is rapidly encroaching upon the sea. So rapid is this process that it has effected great changes upon the Chinese coast since the beginning of the historic period. In the year 220 B. C. Putai was a seaport; now it is fifty miles inland. During the Handynasty (about 200 A. D.) Tientsin was a seaport; now it is forty miles inland.

DEPOSIT OVER CENTRAL ASIA IS THE WORK OF WATER, NOT OF WIND.

Twenty-five or thirty years ago Baron Richthofen endeavored to make out that the loess was a wind deposit. . . Upon returning from our trip to the Mongolian frontier, we were inclined to accept it, for we had seen and experienced, in the dust-storms encountered, enough to make us ready to attribute almost anything to the power of wind. . . . But there were constantly appearing other things which were difficult to explain by the action of wind. . . .

On coming around to the northwestern side of the great Asiatic plateau, in Turkestan, which is in almost the exact center of the continent, the wind hypothesis became entirely incredible, and the evidence accumulated that the land had lately been depressed to such an extent that the water of the ocean reached the base of the bordering mountains, rising to a height, certainly, of about 3,000 feet; for, at this level, south and southwest of Lake Balkash, we found the loess spread out in such an extensive terrace that the wind would be entirely incompetent to produce the results. . . .

ARCTIC OCEAN SEALS IN ASIATIC LAKES.

Lake Baikal is a remarkable body of water lying in a longitudinal trough on the edge of the Central Asiatic plateau, whose surface is 1,600 feet above the sea, with which it is connected with the Yenisei River after flowing across the northern plains of Siberia for a distance of about 2,000 miles. A most curious fact, long known to scientific men, is that this lake is occupied by a species of seal almost identical with those found in the Arctic Ocean. The same species with slight variations are also found in the Caspian Sea, but not anywhere else along the 3,000 or 4,000 miles which separate these bodies of water. The most probable explanation of this fact, and the one usually accepted by scientific men, is, that these species of seal, were thus widely distributed during a continental subsidence in which the waters of the Arctic Ocean covered all of Northwestern Siberia. and extended up to the base of the great Asiatic plateau which we followed for such a long distance on elevated shore lines in Turkestan. When this depressed area emerged from the sea, it left the seal isolated in the two great bodies of water which still remain on its former margin. So lately has this taken place, that there has not been time for any great changes to be effected in the specific characteristics of these animals. . .

EXAMPLES OF DEPOSITS LEFT BY THE SEA AT TREBIZOND AND THE DARIEL PASS.

At Trebizond, upon the Black Sea. we found positive evidence of a comparatively recent subsidence of the land, amounting to 750 feet. evidence consists of a deposit of beach gravel 100 feet thick and extending for a half mile, or more, along the face of the precipitous volcanic mass of rock which forms the background to this picturesque and historically interesting city. The gravel is very fresh in appearance, and was deposited subsequent to all the rock erosion of the locality. . . . Its upper surface is 750 feet above the present level of the sea. . .

Another clear evidence of the subsidence of the land in this region appeared in the lower part of the Dariel Pass on the north side of the Caucasus Mountains. Here, at an elevation of about 3,000 feet above the sea, it was clear that after the rock gorge had been eroded to its present depth of about 2,000 feet, it had been partially refilled by water action with clay, sand, gravel, and pebbles to the extent of from 300 to 400 feet. The fine material was at the bottom and the coarser material at the top. There was no chance for a glacier to have entered that part of the gorge, so that it was evident that the deposit was made by water during some recent extensive changes in the level.

MAN IN THE WORLD BEFORE THIS DISTRICT WAS SUBMERGED.

The crowning point of interest is reached in the discovery by Professor Armashevsky at Kief of flint implements and burnt stones in connection with the bones of extinct animals fifty-seven feet below the undisturbed | destruction of all forms of animal life surface of this soil. The discovery whose existence was unconnected was made in the bluff of loess bordering the River Dnieper, whose general surface is 633 feet above the sea and 340 feet above the present stream, and totally unconnected with any deposits that may have been made by it.

In this discovery we have the link connecting the recent geological changes in the East with those in the West. The flint implements of glacial man found in France, England, and the United States indicate the same stage of culture as that attained by the men who were overwhelmed in the great subsidence of Central Asia and Southeastern Russia, and of the region about the base of Mount Ararat.

THE RELATION OF THESE DISCOV-ERIES TO THE BIBLE STORY OF THE DELUGE.

. . . A flood of the short duration described in the Book of Genesis could not be expected to leave any permanent record in the superficial deposits made during its continuance. The most which science can do is to remove the objections which she herself has raised. These objections have principally been in the line of showing that such changes of level as are implied in the story of the flood are so highly improbable that scarcely any amount of human testimony could establish the fact. What the recent discoveries have shown is, that during, and subsequent to, the glacial period, and since the advent of man, there has existed such an instability of the earth's crust that the present cannot be a measure of the past. . . .

But it is important, in conclusion, to obtain correct ideas of what we are required by the narrative to believe. This end can best be reached by noticing, first, certain prevalent ideas which originate in false or imperfect interpretations of the narrative. rather than in its essential meaning.

(1) The biblical account of the flood does not imply, as many seem to assume, that the waters of the earth increased to such a degree that it swelled the circumference of the globe to the extent of the tops of the highest mountains. . . . The narrative itself implies that the apparent rise of the water was really a subsidence of the land. The sacred sidence of the land. narrative is careful to say that the fountains of the great deep were broken up.

(2) Nor is it necessary, except for the purpose of effecting the destruction of the human race, to suppose that the flood was, in the strict sense of the word, universal. We may well believe that the end in view, namely, the destruction of the human race, with the exception of Noah and his family, was accomplished without the

with the general moral reasons for the flood. . . . If the entire present land surface of the earth should sink into the ocean, it would raise the level of the water only a little more than 200 feet, which is only three times as much as the tide sometimes rises in the Bay of Fundy.

It has been well said that the biblical account reads like the logbook of a sea captain, and the general language used would be more satisfactory in its meaning if reference was had to the realm of observation within reach of the scene in which the particular events took place. "All the mountains and hills under the whole heavens" means all those within the horizon of the writer's vision or within reach of his knowledge. When we say, "Everybody knows it," or "The whole country turned out to see him." we have no difficulty in explaining that these phrases, though absolutely general in their form, are yet much restricted in their meaning. The objects of the flood were all satisfied if the destruction of the human race was fully accomplished, so that history could make a new start with a selected family.

(3) It is not necessary to suppose that the date of the flood is correctly given in the margin of our Bibles. That date is based on a particular interpretation of genealogical tables which is by no means generally accepted, even by the most conservative critics. On the contrary, so learned and conservative a Hebrew scholar as the late Professor William Henry Green, of Princeton, maintains that back of Abraham there are no certain data for chronological calculations; so that any objections to the flood based on evidence of the great antiquity of man may be set aside as irrelevant. . . .

HARMONY OF BIBLICAL STORY AND THE GEOLOGICAL FACTS.

But if, in conclusion, we may be permitted briefly and provisionally to summarize the facts as they appear probable, both from the biblical story and the illustrative geological facts, the completed narrative might be made to read something as follows:

Some time during the prevalence of glacial ice over Northern America and Northeastern Europe, man came into existence in Central Asia, where the climate was still congenial. From this point he spread as far west as the Atlantic seaboard in Europe, and eastward to the Pacific coast, where he succeeded in reaching, by way of Bering Sea and Alaska, the western coast of North America, and thence migrated to the Atlantic coast, where his remains are found in the glacial gravels of Trenton, New Jersey. But the extreme and rapid changes incident to the closing stages of the glacial period naturally, and very likely exterminated man in company with many of the animals accompanying him both in America and in Europe. The destruction of many of the species of animals accompanying man at the close of the glacial period is a well-known fact. It also seems probable, from scientific evidence, that man shared largely in the destruction. There is everywhere a sharp line of distinction between Palæolithic and Neolithic man, i. e., between the men who were limited to the use of flaked or rough stone implements and those who used smoothed stone implements. It is Palæolithic implements only which are found in the glacial gravels of America and Northwestern Europe, and beneath the loess at Kief and at three or four other localities in Southern Russia. The Palæolithic man of science may well be the Antediluvian man of Genesis.

In Asia the rapidity of the subsidence spoken of, though so great that man could not adjust himself to it, might still have been so slow as to be almost imperceptible. But towards the close of this period there were 120 years (specially mentioned in the Bible as a time of warning) in which the movement was accelerated to such a degree that the rising waters gave point to the preaching of Noah. During the last 371 days of this period the catastrophe culminated in the facts specifically related in the Book of Genesis, when the reverse movement began and cleared a space near Mount Ararat on which the ark could rest. and where the race could make a new start under more favorable conditions.

THE UNITED STATES.

IS IT A SUBJECT OF PROPHECY?

To the above question, conservative Bible students, six months ago, would doubtless have answered in the nega-But the present war and the complete change in public sentiment in regard to the international relations of the United States to the affairs of the world, have suddenly opened up such a perspective for this nation, as permits quite different conceptions in reference to its future course.

In view of this we would call attention to the 18th chapter of Isaiah, with the thought that it may possibly refer to the United States.*

The chapter has been a puzzle to

*We recognize that the Bible is a Jewish book, and that, since the time of Abraham, is a subject of prophecy unless its national life is definitely connected with that of Israel. Hence some have asserted that the United States is excluded from prophecy. But there are two facts which are sufficient answer to this:

First. There are now about one million Jews in this country.

both translators and commentators. It occurs in the midst of some maledictory pronunciamentoes by the prophet against Damascus, Egypt, the Desert of the Sea, Dumah, Arabia, Tyre, etc. Hence it seemed that this was also an exclamation of woe, and the translators have apparently tried to harmonize the subject of the prophecy to the woe with which they introduce it. But, as will be seen from the study of the chapter, the nation described is not one that is oppressed, but quite the contrary. The following is the authorized version, with the marginal readings:

1. "Woe to the land shadowing with wings, which is beyond the rivers of

Ethiopia:

2. That sendeth ambassadors by the sea, even in vessels of bulrushes upon the waters, saying, Go, ye swift messengers, to a nation 1 scattered and peeled, to a people terrible in their beginning hitherto; 2a nation meted out and trodden down, whose land the rivers 3 have spoiled!

3. All ye inhabitants of the world, and dwellers on the earth, see ye, when he lifteth up an ensign on the mountains; and when he bloweth a trumpet, hear ye!

4. For so the Lord said unto me, I will take my rest, and I will 4consider in my dwelling place like a clear heat ⁵upon herbs, and like a cloud of dew in the heat of harvest.

- 5. For afore the harvest, when the bud is perfect, and the sour grape is ripening in the flower, he shall both cut off the sprigs with pruning hooks, and take away and cut down the branches.
- 6. They shall be left together unto the fowls of the mountains, and to the beasts of the earth, and the fowls shall summer upon them, and all the beasts of the earth shall winter upon
- 7. In that time shall the present be brought unto the Lord of hosts of a people 'scattered and peeled, and from a people terrible from their beginning hitherto; a nation meted out and trodden under foot, whose land the rivers have spoiled, to the place of the name of the Lord of hosts, the mount Zion."

Marginal readings: ¹Or, outspread and polished. 2Of line and line, and treading under foot, or, that meteth out and treadeth down. 3Or, despise. ⁴Or, regard my set dwelling. after rain. 6Or, outspread and pol-

The Revised Version is as follows:

"Ah, the land of the rustling of wings, which is beyond the rivers of Ethiopia; that sendeth ambassadors by the sea, even in vessels of papyrus upon the waters, saying, Go, ye swift messengers to a nation tall and smooth, to a people terrible from their beginning onward; a nation that meteth out and treadeth down. whose land the rivers divide! All ye inhabitants of the world, and ye dwellers on the earth, when an ensign is lifted up on the mountains, see ye; and when the trumpet is blown, hear ye. For thus hath the Lord said unto me, I will be still, and I will behold in my dwelling place; like clear heat in sunshine, like a cloud of dew in the heat of harvest. For afore the harvest, when the blossom is over, and the flower becometh a ripening grape, he shall cut off the sprigs with pruning hooks, and the spreading branches shall he take away and cut down. They shall be left together unto the ravenous birds of the mountains, and the beasts of the earth; and the ravenous birds shall summer upon them, and all the beasts of the earth shall winter upon them. In that time shall a present be brought unto the Lord of hosts of a people tall and smooth, and from a people terrible from their beginning onward; a nation that meteth out and treadeth down, whose land the rivers divide, to the place of the name of the Lord of hosts, the mount Zion."

A comparison of these shows very clearly what a mistake the translators of the authorized version committed. The nation described is not one that is "meted out and trodden down," but, on the contrary, one that meteth out and treadeth down.

It is not "scattered and peeled," but spread out and polished, or furbished. Its land the rivers have not "spoiled," but divided or despised.

The Hebrew word "Hoi," with which the chapter opens, may be an exclamation of woe, or it may be a hailing of attention. In the latter sense it is used in the 55th chapter of Isaiah, "Ho every one that thirsteth," and the whole tenor of the chapter shows that it is in this sense that it should be translated here.

The wonderful importance of the nation described in this prophecy may be clearly seen from the third verse. to wit, that all the inhabitants of the earth are concerned, and called to see and listen when the nation raises the ensign and sounds the trumpet for battle.

The general sense of the chapter we would suggest to be as follows, and carefully invite the attention and criticism of Bible students upon it. And just here, we wish to acknowledge that our attention has been called to this chapter by the Rev. J. F. Wilcox, who has prepared a manuscript, which it is hoped may soon be published, and if so, due notice of it will be given in the Jewish Era.

"Ho, to the land of fluttering wings (wings of protection) which is beyond the rivers of Cush (Ethiopia, and possibly to the boundaries of Palestine; ern part of Africa, or beyond Africa altogether).

Second verse. "That sendeth ambassadors by the sea, even in vessels of papyrus upon the waters" (its only communication is by the sea). "Go, ve swift angels, to a nation spread out and polished (having a great land and furbished like a sword ready for battle) to a people terrible from their beginning onward (terrible to their enemies, never conquered); a nation that meteth out and treadeth down (Hebrew of line, line, and of treading down, i. e., it may signify line, lineeducation, and of treading down-great strength and power), whose land the rivers divide" (its land is divided up by rivers, or the same word may be "despised." that is to say, the rivers, symbolically the nations, despise its form of government and take little account of it in the great questions of balance of power, etc.).

Third verse. "All ye inhabitants of the world, and ye dwellers upon the earth, when he lifteth up an ensign on the mountains, see ye, and when he bloweth a trumpet, hear ye" (when the nation spoken of sounds the tocsin for war, it will be of great significance to the world).

Fourth verse. "For thus hath the Lord said unto me, I will be still and I will behold in my dwelling place; like clear heat in sunshine, like a dewy cloud in the heat of harvest" (God looks on in sublime quietness. guiding and protecting, when He calls this agent to execute His will).

Fifth verse. "For before the harvest (before the end of the dispensation), when the blossom is over, and the flower becometh a ripening grape. he shall cut off the sprigs with pruning hooks, and the spreading branches shall he take away and cut down." (The foe attacked shall be stripped of its outlying colonies and possessions.)

Sixth verse. "They shall be left together unto the ravenous birds of the mountains, and to the beasts of the earth, and the ravenous birds shall summer upon them, and all the beasts of the earth shall winter upon them." (The foes attacked by the nations, which is the subject of the prophecy, shall be overturned, and their disputed governments plunged into anarchy, as signified by the ravenous birds and beasts of the earth.)

Seventh verse. "In that time shall a present be brought unto the Lord of hosts, a people spread out and polished (probably the Jews) and from a people terrible from their beginning onwards, a nation that meteth out and treadeth down, whose land the rivers divide (the same nation is described in verse 2), to the place of the name of the Lord of hosts of mount Zion."

In this last verse it would seem that two peoples are referred to, the first. hence a land that must be in the west- a people that are presented to the lions. He left a good impression among the Lord, and the other, a people that present them, which may signify that the nation described in the prophecy will be specially instrumental in the restoration of the Jews to Palestine.

If this remarkable prophecy does refer to the United States, the time of its fulfillment is evidently at hand; for already, all the inhabitants of the earth are aroused with interest and attention as described in verse 3: and the sprigs and branches of the foe are certainly being cut off.

Doubtless the wrongs of the oppressed people of Spanish misrule are not the only ones to be relieved. Madagascar, Armenia, and Palestine may next claim attention.

Four hundred and six years ago, Spain added to her other cruelties the monstrous crime of expelling the Jews from her land. Ever since. disaster and ruin have been cumulative upon her, and now it would seem that this nation is the instrument in the hands of God to complete the chastisement. And this is exactly in accord with the promise of Abraham, Genesis 12:3, "I will bless them that bless thee, and curse them that curse thee." Afterwards repeated to Isaac, Jacob, and the children of Israel. Literally is this pronunciamento being fulfilled upon Spain, and we may well cry, Woe to all the anti-Semitic countries in the world. But if the curse is so literally fulfilled, so shall the blessing be. Oh, that our people, in the spirit of Captain Philips, of the Texas, and the proclamation of our beloved president may humble ourselves before God, ascribing all praise to Him, and receiving from His hand the blessing he has promised to bestow. - William Blackstone, in The Christian and Missionary Alliance, August, 1898.

GUILFORD, Mo., June 1.

Editors Herald:-Yesterday was our Sunday school day. Only a few were present, owing to the busy season; but a profitable time was had. The Spirit was present, causing all to be encouraged.

Bro. I. N. White was present and preached an instructive sermon from the text. "Be ve perfect even as your Father in heaven is perfect." He showed that there is not a moment to lose or spend in pleasure of the world.

The missionary force with us are I. N. White, Peter Anderson, J. S. Snively, F. L. Sawley, and E. S. Fannon. Bro. White came here from St. Joseph on May 22. Held two meetings at Bro. K. C. Knudson's house on account of the church at Guilford being under quarantine. He preached two good sermons on the Word of Wisdom and tithing. He then went to Barnard, where he preached from May 24 to 29, with increasing congregapeople and promised to return in the fall during our reunion.

I feel the great responsibility resting upon me to come up higher and live more uprightly as an officer in a branch,—leading in living right rather than following.

We organized a Religio in the Platte branch. Have had one session. Had a profitable time. The Saints belonging are interested, so I think it will be a success.

May God bless us. We contemplate a good time at our conference. There are three or four who will be baptized. Several children will be blessed. For Zion's weal.

W. B. TORRANCE.

MOUNTAINVILLE, Maine, May 29.

Dear Herald:-This is my first attempt to write for your pages; but I feel somewhat impressed to tell you how finely our work is progressing here. Bro. Cunningham has been laboring here with us and has convinced many of the truth of the gospel insomuch that he has baptized twelve into the fold and kingdom. One noble brother who formerly belonged to the Congregational Church has been in our church one week, and he says it is the happiest week he ever experienced in his life. May God bless him is my prayer.

There is a very good interest here, and our little branch is increasing in numbers rapidly.

Our conference of the 4th and 5th of May was a success. A good spirit was manifest, and a goodly number were present, considering the weather. All enjoyed themselves and were sorry when the time came to part. Preaching by Elders J. N. Ames. S. O. Foss. and S. G. Cunningham. Bro. Cunningham has done a good work here, and the people appreciate it very much. He is an able defender of the cause.

Let us be faithful, dear brethren and sisters, and not become weary in well doing, for those that endure until the end shall receive a crown of life.

ROYLET, Texas, May 29.

Editors Saints' Herald:-A few words from Northeastern Texas. I am in my field of labor striving to do my Master's will. I have been greatly blessed since I returned from General Conference, and feel more like standing before the people to declare the angel's message than ever before. church has been presented to me in a grander light than ever before. The time for us to receive great blessings is close at hand if we will get ready to receive them. There has been quite an improvement in the Saints in this country in the last few months, and my prayer is that the Saints will begin to realize that they must live God's laws in order to bring about the great day which the people of God have hoped for in all ages of the world,-the building up of Zion and the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. As David said, "When the Lord shall build up Zion he will appear in his glory."

We have just closed an interesting meeting at this place. Some are about ready for baptism. Bro. Lankaster and Bro. Will Calley live in this vicinity, and by their godly walk and conversation they have gained the favor of the people and an appreciation for the gospel. Bro. Jenkins and I will start after meeting tonight on a six mile drive to the little town of Lydia, the home of Bro. Jenkins, where we will begin a meeting tomorrow night.

The prospects are very good for a work here this year. I have more calls for preaching than I can fill. I wish some of the brethren who have been sent to northern Texas would come and help me some. Bro. S. W. Simmons, try to get around here soon.

I am meeting with some persecution, -some talking of trying to give me poison and others threatening me with guns; but God will be with me until my work is done. May God bless us to do his will.

Dear Editor:-When I last wrote I was laboring at Cedar Valley. Am pleased to inform you that the work there is in a flourishing condition. The Saints there have put up a large driving shed, and it is quite an improvement. Elder R. Tarzwell with the other officers of the branch are trying to build up the work. Priest K. Cooper baptized two fine people by the name of Aurey. They were good standing members of the Baptist Church. This caused a great talk. and it was thought wise that a missionary come and labor among them for a little while. As it was in my field, I was asked to come, and did so when I could leave other parts. I tried to tell the beautiful story of the restored gospel; and before I left for home nine more were baptized by the writer; and under the hands of the elders, R. Tarzwell and myself, five children were blessed. Twenty-five sermons were delivered and much visiting done, which was very helpful to the work. I had to leave them to go home after being away some four months. I remained in London for thirteen days, and was kept very busy with home and church work. Before I left home the Saints and friends arranged a surprise party on myself and family. About twenty were present, and we were much delighted, and we had a very enjoyable time. I could not but feel that it showed love and respect, and it did us good. Elder R. C. Evans was home, and helped make the evening pleasant.

We labored together; and on the 18th he baptized one, and on the 19th three more. He had baptized one before I came, making five in all. This caused great talk and a little persecution; so a hall was rented in town for one week, giving notice of seven lectures, with the privilege of proving whether our claims were right or wrong. Only a few came out, but the gospel has been preached as a witness, and we look for good results. We were refused the school, so we are holding out in the houses of Thomas Ferguson and Thomas Tomlinson.

Elder G. C. Tomlinson was called away on the second night of our lectures, to attend to the rites of the dead at Stratford, Ontario, leaving me alone. The few Saints here are desirous of being taught, so I expect to be with them till conference, June 14-17, at Arthur, Ontario, when I expect to be sent elsewhere.

I am intrusted with church work, also Sunday school, and expect in a few days to organize a Sunday school here. Books and copies of Quarterly have been sent for, and welook for good results to follow. I expect tobaptize some before I leave. One has given: his name for the same. I also believe in trying to advertise the papers of the church, and have taken two subscriptions, one for the HERALD and one for the Ensign.

I find it hard at times to get this work before the people; there are so many to oppose it. I love the work, and love to tell it to others, and while there are those that speak evil of it, a few are obeying it and I trust others will see the divinity of this great work and rejoice with us in the same.

Your brother in gospel bonds, R. B. HOWLETT.

ST. MARYS, Ont., May 29.

Editors Herald:-I arrived home on the 28th inst. I was called by message on the 23d to conduct the funeral service of Sr. Lindsay, at Stratford, beloved mother of Elder George Lindsay, her only son. She accepted the restored gospel about eight years ago under the hands of Elder William Newton, and has lived consistently. The sermon Sunday evening was from the text, "Who can count the dust of Jacob, and the number of the fourth part of Israel? Let me die the death of the righteous, and let my last end be like his!"-Numbers 23:10. I enjoyed good liberty, and all felt it was good to be a saint. My labors have been principally confined to Kincardine of late, a new opening. Baptized five good people there, one a member of the Methodist church for twenty years and a class leader, it made them furious; closed the school against me at once. The hireling priests were busy crying Mormon! Fraud! Deceiver! How the mighty are fallen! etc., others falling in line with them with threats and slander most cruel; but amidst it all those baptized remain firm and are rejoicing in the truth. Bro. R. B. Howlett came to assist me, and is now there, and we expect he will do a good work, as others are persuaded that we have the way of life and salvation. I wish to thank the Saints and friends all along the line who have so nobly assited me in caring for my needs and the work we love; and if any mistakes on our part have occurred or seemed to, let us forgive each other, and in the language of the poet, Let us anew our journey pursue.

Yours in Christ.

G. C. TOMLINSON.

PAPEETE, Tahiti, May 16, 1901.

Editors Herald:-I send you a few words from this far off corner of the world, that the church in general as well as the officers in particular may become better acquainted with this mission and understand more fully its needs.

Since last I wrote we have had a world of experience which I hope will be of value to us in our future work. We also have been made better acquainted with native character, which will enable us to direct our work better than heretofore, we hope. From childhood I have taken great interest, though I cannot say great pleasure always, in reading human nature and the forces that seem to actuate the minds of men. Native character is not so difficult to read as that of their white brothers, and yet in some respects they are a peculiar people. I find it more difficult to understand them, however, the more I become acquainted with them. It may be that after awhile I shall conclude that it is a more difficult task than I have heretofore supposed, to judge them righteously. A white trader and myself were one time talking of the open frankness of the natives, or rather I was talking along that line when he replied: "That's just where they will fool you. You missionaries all get fooled by them. I secretly saw a murder committed by three of their number and know that several others know of it; and though it has been twelve years ago, not a word or a whisper has ever leaked out concerning it."

Many think they have a secret society-a sort of secret government among them; but if so it is very secret. My opinion concerning such things will have to be reserved till some future time.

Our conference and conventions convened in Papeete and continued from April 1 to 18. In some respects it was a very peculiar conference, and owing to the epidemic that afflicted us I presume no such trouble was ever encountered before at a conference of the Saints in this or any other country. The soldier sickness as before mentioned in the HERALD, which attacked Papeete in February, was not completely extinguished when the Saints began to arrive for conference. Nearly as soon as they arrived and before many of them had rented or otherwise secured houses to dwell in, they were taken with the sickness before mentioned, and till near the close of conference only about one hundred people out of about eight hundred were enabled to attend to the business of the conference. One day we were compelled to adjourn for lack of attendance. Older people suffered worse and much longer than the younger ones. Besides this sorrow and trouble of mind I was constantly being broken of my rest, as I was called to administer to the sick at all hours of the night. Many, many times I was compelled to refuse that I might get a little sleep: but to behold their fallen countenances and hear their sighs as they faintly bade me good-night while they went to seek other elders, compelled me to go more often than I should have done for my own health. It was at these times as I passed in and around the city at all hours of the night that I got a peep behind the scenes such as no missionary before me perhaps ever witnessed. That is why I said we have had a world of experience and understand native character better than before.

Twenty-two of our number, some of them our brighest and best, succumbed to their sickness and we buried them in the land of Zion seven miles from Papeete. It was indeed a lamentable time. I do not care to witness such a time again in this world or any other.

I conceived the idea last year of organizing Religio societies among the young to teach and instruct them in the history of the church and the principles of righteousness, to hold them in check a little until they arrive at maturer and wiser years. These Religios met in convention to organize a kind of mission association, just before the time of conference. For years the missionaries have all seen that it is unwise to baptize unmarried persons, and even go so far as to prohibit them from attending conference, all of which was the exhibition of sound judgment. I foresaw to some extent what a gathering of young people in Papeete might do, and guarded against the open doors as much as possible. I warned every branch beforehand and each of them made provisions to control the young folks, and the young folks made promises repeatedly to obey; but the older ones were taken sick and the young did as they pleased. If I ever felt like repenting of any good thing I ever did it is for organizing the Religios. However, they are not a bad thing in the branches, but the conventions are a decided failure here. Because of this strain and worry added to the work of the conference which lasted one day longer than the General Conference in America. I was taken sick immediately after conference with something akin to spinal fever. After about eight days in bed I was up again and am now quite as strong as before. Most of the Saints have returned to their islands, many of them with sad hearts because of the loss of their relatives, and the health of the Saints is good again.

We got through with the business of the conference quite peacefully, and some important matters were passed. We indeed presented a lamentable spectacle. Here and there would be a brother too sick to hold his head up, and resting it on the seat in front of him, but he managed to raise his hand to vote either for or against the motions. Here and there would be others with their heads bandaged with white, red, or blue cloth, while others silently bore the grief occasioned by the death of their friends. The quorums tried time and again to gather together enough to do business, but scarcely succeeded. The elders managed to hold one quorums of priests, teachers, and deacons failed completely.

Some important business was done, notwithstanding our appearance was much that of a hospital. With the consent of the Presiding Bishop in America the conference ordered the purchase of a money safe for the Bishop's agent, and also made provision for building him an office adjoining the missionary house. Since conference the safe has been purchased and the office built, also other improvements made, by conference order. The conference also placed a boat in the hands of the missionary until next conference. This will be a very good thing and will help the missionary work greatly.

Not many missionaries were sent out owing to there being no available material. The General Conference in America seems to have found among the natives available material which we could not see ourselves as I see from the conference minutes thirteen of the natives were appointed to missions here. Their names were all presented to the conference here by me, but were all rejected except three. This leaves us rather complexed. One conference appointing, another at the same time rejecting the same men. It is not difficult to see why the prophet was directed to say: "Authorize the Patriarch as one of the Presidency to visit Australia and the islands of the sea, the Society Islands, authorizing him to assist the authorities there in arranging their missionary labor by his advice."

This is one of the most direct proofs of the inspiration of the Prophet, as he could in no other way know of the existing circumstances. One of these men thus appointed by one conference and called home by the other is eighty-four years old, and so asks to be released. Another was called home owing to the fact that his conduct is quite unministerial. Another is guilty of immorality, and all of them from one thousand to several dollars in debt. Gladly would I see them out of debt, and gladly would I see them in the field, for they are capable of doing much good; but their creditors positively refuse except in the case I think of three whose debt is not large and who will pay before going.

We are heartily glad of more help. There should be at least three missionaries here all the while. We have labored as best we could, and shouldered the responsibility brayely, but we are perfectly willing that others should share our trouble, or bear the blame before the great Judge for not administering much of the law which it seems impossible to administer here.

Our conference adjourned for eighteen months for the especial purpose of securing a visit from the First Presidency, the Lord also advising such a visit. It seems we will thus be blessed. It takes news a long while to travel here to all the islands. Some of them are not visited with boats more than once or twice a year. These especially should have the privilege of seeing our Presiding Patriarch and son of the man they so much love. It will be an event of a lifetime to them. I sincerely hope and pray that we or two quorum meetings, but I think the may have plenty of time to spread the news and gather the people. I hope, therefore, the Patriarch will consider our desires for our scattered brethren. However much we may desire to see him soon, we also feel for our brethren.

All are well and everything moving nicely J. W. Peterson. at present.

Editors Herald:-I am pleased to inform you, and the readers of the HERALD that on the 26th of May there were six added to the church by baptism in the eastern part of this district, and also last evening, June 4, there were six others added to the church here. We are thankful that the work is moving along with us. There was a very pleasant time had at the confirmation.

In gospel bonds,

JOSEPH SQUIRE.

SOMERVILLE, Victoria, Australia. Editors Herald:-This present writing finds me at home, where I have been for about seven weeks, laid up with sciatica in my left leg, and have been unable to do scarcely anything except preach two or three times. At first I thought it rather strange that just at a time when I expected to go to New South Wales and assist the brethren there in their reunion I should be confined to my bed and unable to work; but the Lord kindly informed me through one of his servants that he had permitted my light affliction to come in order to retain me in my present field of labor, as my presence was needed here. This gave me much peace and comfort, besides teaching me a lesson of patience. I already partially see the wisdom in not leaving the district, for at our recent conference we held a meeting of the officers, which ought to have been held years ago, and arrived at a mutual understanding on several important matters, which hitherto have been a bar to progress. The mainspring to permanent success and happiness seems to be couched in the fact of one knowing his duty and doing it. Duty neglected is a block to the wheel of progress, which brings disgrace upon the careless and final loss to all concerned.

As we are now in the midst of the hastening time, the words of Longfellow would not come amiss to any of us, I fancy:

> Let us then be up and doing, With a heart for any fate; Still achieving, still pursuing, Learn to labor and to wait.

I feel it is a duty, yea, a great privilege, to labor in the interest of God's kingdom and patiently wait the time of reaping, though it should be left for others to accomplish; "for one soweth and another reapeth."

I have nothing out of the usual to report from this field, save that the Saints are enjoying a goodly measure of the Spirit in their meetings, which tends to strengthen and establish them in the faith. Bro. Walter Haworth has succeeded in gathering in a nice little harvest of above a dozen souls lately.

We are anticipating the assistance of a new and hope the time has come to raise our standard in New Zealand, that the misguided Saints there may see and come to the true light. In bonds,

HENDERSON, Iowa, June 9.

Editors Herald:-Our district conference held in the Saints' church near Henderson was indeed a success. We had the best turnout we have had for two or three years. The Sunday school convention was really excellent. With Bro. Mintun's help in connection with the able help of Brn. T. A. Hougas, Charles Fry, and Sr. T. A. Hougas, and leading teachers of the district, everything moved harmoniously and satisfactorily to all present.

The business of the conference was done inteiligently and approved by all, the good Spirit being present to assist.

Our preaching services were well attended, and the word preached to the joy of all lovers of truth. Our sacrament and social meeting was just grand, our heavenly Father owning us as his children by bestowing upon us his Holy Spirit, giving us comfort and consolation, and pointing out our duties for the future, with promise to reward according to our diligence in performing.

Bro. Mintun, our missionary in charge by appointment of general missionary, was welcomed by the president of district, and received gladly by all present. Quite a number of officials and members of the district were with us, heart and hand, for the good of the cause so dear to all, and quite a number of our friends greeted us with their presence and approval. So we move out in the line of duty feeling hopeful of success this present year, determined as ever to do the best we can for the onward progress of such a glorious cause.

We think Bro. Mintun the right man in the right place, having a great desire to stir us all up to a sense of duty.

We hope our general missionary in charge will not forget us at our reunion, to commence August 24, at the place where it was held last year, three and a half miles south of Tabor, as so many of our friends desire he should be with us.

May God bless the work, and prosper his servants engaged in the same, enabling them to bring souls into his kingdom that shall be eternally saved, is my prayer.

In bonds,

HENRY KEMP.

Editors Herald:-The work of another conference year we begin with cheerful hearts. Thanks to the conference for responding to our petition for more help in this mission. The work is onward and we hope to be equal to the emergency. Calls for preaching in new places are numerous, and I hope we may leave the care of the work in branches to Brn. Montague and Pickering, our district president and assistant, and devote our time to preaching in new places.

Brn. S. S. Smith, Hancock, and I are holdmissionary or two from General Conference, ing meetings at Redmoon, with fair interest and attendance. Our doctrine is new to them; some are wondering and some reading our literature. But I never met a more friendly class of people. Now is the time to move our work in western Oklahoma.

Please let me hear from any who desire preaching. Address either Bro. George Montague or me at Redmoon, Oklahoma, regarding tent work. I expect to remain in western Oklahoma until after harvest in the eastern part of Oklahoma.

I hope to visit Indian Territory as soon as practicable. According to Bro. H. O. Smith's request, Brn. Maloney, Aylor, and Grimes will labor in Indian Territory, Bro. Grimes taking charge of the work at Wilburton for the present at least.

The sickness and death of my wife's mother, Sr. Montague, also our move west, and work building a house to locate my family on our homestead, has taken some of my time and attention.

The Saints of this mission I think did well last year in caring for the ministry, as suggested by Bro. H. O. Smith; and as the Lord has prospered them. I believe they will do equally as well this year.

Bro. S. J. Hinkle, of Stillwater, Oklahoma, is Bishop's agent.

May the blessings of health, peace, and prosperity attend each, is the humble prayer of your coworker and brother,

HUBERT CASE.

HITEMAN, Iowa, June 5.

Editors Herald:-If the little I have to write will be of any comfort to any, I shall be glad. I have been of late years under burdens hard to bear, often wondering within myself if I ever would be able to overcome. Then the thought would enter my mind. Have you not appealed in prayer and fastings to know of this work, and have you not been granted that privilege to know, as is promised in James 1:5, If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him? And I can bear my testimony to the church and all the world that the wonderful works of God are like the unfolding of a book, to those who will keep his commandments. His promise is that he is bound unto us as long as we do his will.

When we as Saints peruse the Scriptures, we can see from the beginning of the creation the admonition is to come up higher. We find that after everything was created for the comfort of the human race that God gave sovereign authority to man.

Everything goes to prove at every dispensation that if God's servants will do his will the promise is sure to follow.

When the stake conference was held at Cleveland, June 1 and 2, I made it a point to go, for I have had little privilege of associating with the brethren, as I am the only brother here at present. Bro. Lowden lives about three or four miles from here. We have but few to attend; sometimes I meet with only three sisters to hold prayer service. And I can assure you that when we come with contrite hearts to offer our oblations before Him, the presence of the Holy Spirit brings things to our minds and we part rejoicing. That has only been of late, for the branch in general has been lukewarm for some time, and a spirit of surmising has been quite general.

While I was not at General Conference at Independence, yet I feel satisfied the business transacted was acceptable with God. When the stake conference was in session the Spirit of peace was present and the preaching was instructive; the admonition to come up higher was the theme. While social meeting was in session the thought came to me as I saw the younger ones taking part in singing: We are now in the stake of Zion; the care for those little ones in time to come will be of such character that they will not need to be mixed up with the world, where iniquity abounds. And when Bro. Elvin was allowed fifteen minutes to address conference at close of the meeting, my whole being was illuminated by what he presented pertaining to college debt. I am satisfied, beloved Saints, that it requires all our effort to redeem the burden. Beloved Saints, remember the widow's mite; it's not the amount we give; pennies make dollars.

My well wishes to all Saints upon the earth. Pray for me that I remain faithful.

Your brother in Christ,

M. D. LEWIS.

FAIRBURY, Neb., June 2.

Dear Herald:—I see by the HERALD a brother thinks that before scattering tracts one should be assured they would be read. I have scattered many tracts, and people would say, I will read them; but I was not assured they would read them.

In Iowa I once gave a lady reading matter, tracts and HERALDS, talked some with her, and when she was preparing to move away I left some for her to take with her. Twelve years after I learned through a sister that my neighbor had moved into her neighborhood, and her first inquiry was, Are there any Latter Day Saints here? and she was told of this one. She, the sister, called on the new neighbor and learned from her that she still had the reading matter I gave her, and had never met a Saint but me, but believed what she had learned from me and the reading, and said there was no church right but the Latter Day Saints. She tried one of the other churches but did not find the Spirit there that she read ought to be in God's true church. I pray that some of God's servants may pass through Springfield, South Dakota, and baptize her. I believe her to be one of the sheep the Master will like gathered into his kingdom.

I hope to clasp glad hands with many precious souls that I have handed tracts to in over thirty years that I have been in the church.

I ask prayers that I may be faithful and worthy to enter into the rest prepared for the faithful.

Your sister in this restored gospel, MRS. M. A. CHRISTY.

Selected Poetry.

"The day of the Lord, it cometh!
It comes like a thief in the night;
It comes when the world is dreaming
Of safety, and peace, and light;
It cometh, the day of sackcloth,
Of darkness, and storm, and fire,
The day of great avenging,
The day of his burning ire.

"The day of the Lord it cometh
When the virgins are all asleep,
And the drunken world is lying
In a slumber yet more deep:
Like the sudden lurch of a vessel
By night, on the sunken rock;
All earth in a moment reeleth,
And goeth down with a shock.

"The voice of the awful trumpet
Arresteth the march of time:
With terror, and woe, and judgment,
It soundeth through every clime,
It speaketh aloud to the living;
It speaks to the slumbering dead;
Earth heareth the final summons,
And boweth the trembling head.

"The flash of the sword of havoc,
Foretelleth the day of blood,
Revealing the Judge's progress,
The downward march of God:
The fire which no mortal kindles,
Quick seizes the quaking earth,
And, labors the groaning creation,
In the pangs of its second birth.

"The day of evil it endeth;

The righteous reign comes in:
Like a cloud of sorrow, evanish
The ages of human sin.
The light of the morning gleameth;
A dawn without cloud, or gloom:
In chains lies the ruler of darkness,
And the Prince of Light is come."

"If I can stop one heart from breaking
I shall not live in vain;
If I can ease one life the aching,
Or cool one pain,
Or help one fainting robin,
Unto his nest again,
I shall not live in vain."

THE BEST MEANS OF SECURING OBEDIENCE.

We are told that this problem is as old as recorded time, yet it is ever new, and demands a practical solution each day. There are two kinds of obedience, voluntary and forced. In voluntary obedience the child is led to a desire to do a thing; he then voluntarily does it. In compulsory, we endeavor to obtain obedience against the child's will, and without planting the right seed.

The moral will power of the child becomes strong only in proportion as his conscience becomes enlightened and educated. We as could.

parents are responsible for the education of the consciences of our children.

The word tells us to "Train up a child in the way he should go, and when he is old he will not depart from it." Again Paul says, "And ye fathers provoke not your children to wrath, but bring them up in the nurture and admonition of the Lord." Another quotation from the law received on the mount: "And thou shalt teach them diligently to thy children, and shalt talk to them when thou sittest in thy house, and when thou walkest by the way, and when thou liest down and when thou risest up." King Benjamin said to the Nephites, as recorded in the Book of Mormon: "And ye will not suffer that your children transgress the laws of God, and fight and quarrel one with the other and serve the devil, who is the master of sin; but ye will teach them to love one another and serve one another."

Sometimes the intense desire to have obedience creates in the parent a sternness which compels the child to obey, and thereby the child's will power is weakened, and the parent's will often grows into tyranny. There are others who go to the other extreme and require no obedience, but leave all to the decision of the child.

There are many ways which will aid the mother in leading a child to voluntary obedience. For instance, with a strong willed child (and these are in the majority in this age), a good plan I have found is to give the child a choice of two things. For example, "You must pick up your playthings or you cannot have them tomorrow." This gives an opportunity for the child to choose and a certain amount of obedience is exacted.

For disobedience I believe we should use the retributive punishment rather than the arbitrary. If we do this we must teach the child early that the disregard of law brings trouble and sorrow. This kind of punishment appeals to the child's inborn instinct of justice, and he will readily see whatever of pain or discomfort he may feel is the result of his own deed. Let me give an illustration of this I read some time ago. A mother was absent from home one day. On her return she learned that her little boy had taken a younger brother over to a wagon shop across the street; a place they had been forbidden to go, and while there they had smeared their aprens with wagon grease. Her first thought was to whip the boy, but considering a moment she changed her mind and resolved to try a different plan. She said to him, "Why, that is too bad, it will be rather hard for you to get the grease off, but I think I can help you. You can go to the drug store and get some turpentine." On his return she took the two aprons and spread them out on the floor of the back porch, then giving him a sponge and the turpentine she showed him how to begin his cleaning. In a few minutes he said: "Oh, mamma, this stuff smells horrid!"

"Yes," she said, "I know it does. I dislike the smell of turpentine very much, but I think you will get through all right."

So the little fellow kept on scrubbing until he had cleaned the aprons as well as he could.

"Well," said his mother, "I think my little boy will be more careful about going to the wagon shop, will he not?"

"You bet I will!" was his emphatic reply. I have tried this plan and many times it has been successful.

Dear Sisters of the Home Column:-What has become of all ye good writers? Do you not know there is not a letter written but what it does some one good-just the very words that they needed? So do not be weary in welldoing.

But this is not what I took up my pen to write about, but rather a word for Graceland. I know that Bro Elvin must be tired talking to the men, so I will give him a little help by talking to the sisters. Now cannot we all (not two or three, but all), make a point of giving one dollar? Make a sacrifice in one or more things until we get the dollar. If you buy butter go without until you have saved the sum; or in buying wearing apparel, no difference of what kind, get it cheaper to save the amount. You know it is written this is a day of sacrifice. I know that money could be raised if we would all try. We must not do like some brother did with his insurance money. Put our money into some other association and wait for the Lord to tell us to help Graceland. We must do good whenever and wherever we can without being told all the time. Now let each one that reads this letter see what she can do and how quickly she can do it! Yours for Graceland, and the good of Zion,

A CALIFORNIA SISTER.

THEN YOU'LL THINK OF MOTHER.

When her weary hands shall rest, Folded on her quiet breast, Then you'll think of mother; How in work those hands once moved For the children that she loved, Those toil-worn hands of mother.

When her eyes shall close in sleep, From which they'll never "wake to weep," Then you'll think of mother. O, the vigils they have kept, In the night while others slept, Those love-lit eyes of mother!

When her tongue shall silent be, Read no more, nor sing for thee, Then you'll think of mother; Then your aching heart will long For the counsel, prayer, and song, From the tongue of mother.

When the lips shall part no more With the dear, sweet smile of yore, Then you'll think of mother; You will not forget the kiss Which thrilled your childish heart with Pressed to yours by lips of mother.

Years will pass-they're fleeting now-Bring no shadow to her brow, But kindly think of mother;

Help her often as you may, Life with her is such brief day, Your life on earth with mother.

Wait not till her soul at last To the home above has passed, But show your love to mother; Cheer her while on earth she stays, By your loving acts and ways, Be dutiful to mother.

SOUTH SEA ISLANDS.

April 4, 8:00 a. m.—Business meeting called to order by the president. After singing and prayer, minutes of last convention read and approved, after which reports were read. But few were correct. Those were from Niau, Manihi, Avatoru, Tibuta, Tarona, Arutua. No perfect total of membership could be got from the reports. After some lengthy discussion on the mistakes of reports, meeting adjourned until two p. m.

Two p. m.—Meeting called to order by president. Minutes were approved. Discussion on the laws and by-laws of the Sunday School Association followed. All desired to adopt them, but time was too short to go through and adopt by articles, and as there were but few out on account of so much sickness, it was moved and carried to defer until the next convention, and if the conference order the publication of the paper, to have the laws printed therein so each school could come prepared next year ready to vote understandingly. If the paper is not published, take up the discussion of the laws at the next convention. This closed, convention proceeded to election of officers; last year's officers were reëlected: Tapu, president; Pou, first assistant; Lillie, second assistant; Teuira, secretary; Lillie, foreign secretary.

The president then spoke, encouraging each school to strive for the banner this coming year, using the system of committing to memory the answers. He announced that Sunday would be the review of this year's work, and that the Sunday school of Avatoru, Rairoa, would receive the banner this year, with Manihi second, and class No. 1 of Arutua the banner class of this mission. He then advised the Sunday school to try the Christmas tree, and explained to them how to arrange and prepare for one, saying it encouraged the children more in the Sunday school work, and to attend each Sunday for the reward at the end of the year. Pou then spoke telling how Manihi tried the plan; how some at first objected, but at the close asked to have it repeated the next night so that they could give their gifts. Tears flowed down the faces of children and parents as the children, after receiving their gifts, would kiss their parents, and some arose and begged forgiveness for disobedience. A feeling of peace prevailed and more money for Christmas offering was received than any previous year because they felt and realized as the children received their gifts it was more blessed to give than to receive, and that implanted in each heart that night a destrated over five hundred gifts were taken down, and he hoped it would be double that this year. The exercises were by the children only. We encouraged them in the coming year's work and praised them for the past, telling them by diligent effort on the part of all we could reach a higher standard than by letting only a part turn the great wheel of progression. The exercises for the following day were announced, after which one energetic branch president asked if he could not have the right to choose a new superintendent for their school, as the present one was too slow and had no life, hence the school was spiritually dead, and for that reason fell below the average this year. He was told to put the matter in the hands of the school. The president then announced to the schools to use the new book until finished.

Moved and carried to adjourn until two days before our next conference at the place where said conference is to meet.

The Mahana Oaoa was a beautiful day for such work, but so far as the heart feeling glad it could not, with the thought of three hundred Saints sick in bed, some dead and others at death's door, with the grip. But the Saints took courage and by nine the church was well filled, the mayor of the city being present. It was almost impossible to hear anything for the continual coughing, but forty-six songs and dialogues were recited during the day. What was best could be best judged by others than ourselves, for what pleases the white man's eyes and ears may not please the natives. But we thought both classes of Manihi's children did well. One class of girls, carrying a young plant, com-pared its growth to the growth and training of a child—as you bent the plant and trained it, so with the child. The class of boys each carried a boat, comparing the boats to the church, sails to the laws, then by turning the boat over it could not make progress on the sea; so with the churches who turned the law of God by baptizing infants, they could not make progress, but are like a boat that capsizes on the sea. Tarona class of children was splendid, for they sang beautifully, keeping good time. A class of young women with Houa as teacher from Bairoa was good. with Houa as teacher from Kairoa was good. A class of children with flags making the words "Mahana Oaoa," with a song led by Tapu's adopted boy, from Arutua, with French colors, was good; also from the same branch a dialogue by seven children dressed as the seven days of the week with their work, and comparing the everyday work with their spitch work spitch works and longer and longer and longer the control of the seven days of the seven days of the week with their work, and comparing the everyday work with their spitch and longer the seven days of the seven days of the seven days of the seven days of the week with their work, and comparing the everyday work works. with our spiritual work and lives. A large class of singers from Kaukura sang their song, Sweet By and By, as translated in their language, with the organ, which seemed to please the natives. All did their parts well. please the natives. All did their parts well. The singing was good considering the sickness with the coughs. Nothing marred the day except one Manihi girl fainted from weakness while trying to take her part in the class, but the class and little teacher went through without a blunder or stop during the excitement, for which they received abundant praise from the mayor, for he said few old ones could go on without a hesitation few old ones could go on without a hesitation if one of their members fainted in their midst, and spoke in praise of their training, and was pleased with all. We were pleased with all, but think it yet can be made better, and hope it will be. MRS. J. W. PETERSON, Sec.

THE MARTYRS' MEMORIAL FUND.

To the Saints:—With this week's HERALD we notice subscriptions to the Memorial Fund to the amount of $160.69 sentin. If the Saints will take proper interest in this fund we should have enough to close it out within the next two or three weeks, and all who wish to contribute should send in their names at once so that the amount will be sufficient to place the graves of the Martyrs and the surroundings in proper condition with proper monument, and thus stop one call upon the Saints for contributions. Those wishing to contribute to this fund we hope will do so within the next thirty days at least so that it will not be necessary to run it further upon our books.

TO SECRETARIES OF QUORUMS.

The secretaries of the various quorums of elders, priests, teachers, and deacons are requested to forward to the undersigned lists of names and permanent addresses of the membership of their respective quorums, to date, 1901, including all changes made during the last General Conference. It is necessary that correct lists of every quorum be had in the Secretary's office, for general church

Lists of names and addresses only are wanted. Items of birth, baptism, ordination, etc., are not required in the lists asked for.

Secretaries of quorums are also requested to report changes, or to furnish new lists annually, that lists on file may be kept up to date.

Early compliance with request is solicited. In bonds, R. S. SALYARDS, Church Secretary.

LAMONI, Iowa, June 5, 1901.

TO THE MEMBERS OF THE SECOND QUORUM OF SEVENTY:

Dear Brethren:-I wish to call attention to some errors that exist in our last circular letter. By mistake the name of Bro. A. E. Mortimer, of Canada, was placed in our list; this was due to the fact that the quorum took action on his name and asked for his ordination, but later he was ordained a high priest. Also through some unaccountable mistake, the name of Bro. J. D. Stead, of Lamoni, Iowa, was omitted from the list. Bro. Stead was ordained at the Lamoni conference of 1900 The address of Bro. C. L. Snow should be "Kirksey," instead of "Kirby," as shown in the circular.

In looking over the record, I find that the items of birth and baptism of the following named brethren do not appear: viz., Swen Swenson, C. L. Snow, J. L. Goodrich, Silas

D. Condit, F. J. Ebeling, R. J. Parker, D. W. Wight, D. C. White, M. R. Scott, Jr., W. A. Smith, Columbus Scott, W. D. Ellis, E. A. Erwin, J. M. Stubbart, George W. Thorburn, Peter Muceus, and Eli Hayer. I also lack ordination items of F. J. Ebeling, and C. Scott.

I have not as yet learned of the ordination of Brn. J. R. Sutton, of Iowa, and J. W. Rushton, of Scotland. I would like items of Rushton, of Scotland. birth, baptism, and ordination, as soon as practicable after their ordinations.

Will the other brethren please respond and give me the needed information so that the record may be kept complete.

If Brn. Sutton and Rushton accept ordination to the office, it will make our number stand at fifty-four. In the work,
H. E. MOLER, Secretary.

THIRD QUORUM OF ELDERS.

Brethren:-Your attention is called to the resolution passed at our late quorum meeting. Please see that a record is kept of all your official labors; namely, All services attended, times preached, other official acts, such as number baptized, confirmed, assisted in confirming; ordinations: elders, priests, teachers, and deacons. Branches, Sunday schools, Zion's Religios organized; marriages solemnized, children blessed, sick administered to, etc., etc. We want our quorum to be one of the foremost in the church. Do all the labor you can this coming conference year. Only fifty of our members reported at our late session. We should have at the next session ninety-six reports if all are living. The fifty reports were good. We can, by making a special effort, double the labor reported. I hope and pray that our Father in heaven will greatly bless you and give you his divine grace to assist you in your labor of love. Your colaborer.

CHARLES P. FAUL, Sec.

CLARKSDALE, Mo., June 5.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints of the Northern Nebraska District, Greeting:-You will perhaps have noticed that your general missionary in charge, Elder James Caffall, has extended my mission field so as to include the entire district, so that my responsibilities as a missionary have been increased. In addition to this, the district conference held at the Valley branch, May 31 to June 2, 1901, has chosen the writer to act as district president.

Being unacquainted with the territory and a stranger to most of the Saints, I wish to state as follows: For the officers of the district to be successful in their work, they need the cooperation of every member of the church within the district, both spiritually and financially. This requires a godly walk, chaste conversation, and a consistent and persistent effort to discharge every duty which God and his church have imposed. The work before us is of vital importance to ourselves, to the church, and to the world, and should be undertaken at once. We should endeavor "to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bonds of peace," which will make our work both pleasant and profitable to all.

By action of General Conference, the boundary lines of the district were so changed as to embrace the following counties: Dakota, Dixon, Cedar, Wayne, Thurston, Burt, Cuming, Stanton, Platte, Colfax, Dodge, Washington, Douglas, Sarpy, Saunders, Butler, and Polk.

We shall be pleased to hear from branch officers and scattered Saints with reference to the demands for any work properly belonging to missionaries and district officers, and promise to do the best we can to comply with every proper request or lawful demand. However, as there are but two missionaries in this large field, it will be necessary that every local minister and branch officer do all he can to nourish and feed the church and keep the truth before the people.

If the Saints desire that the district tent be used this season in gospel work they should respond, at once, to the request of the district, made some time ago, for financial help for this purpose, without which the tent cannot be successfully used. Send all money you wish to pay in as tithes and offering or for district purposes to the Bishop's agent, James Huff, 1818 North Twenty-first street, Omaha, Nebraska, who will be glad to receipt you for the same.

Every member of the church should be acquainted with our work in its various de-partments and be ready at all times to give, in meekness, a reason for the hope which he has in Christ, and ever be prepared to tell why he believes the church to which he belongs is the true church of Christ, and this restored gospel the power of God unto salvation. Those who take the church papers and read them will be much better prepared to do this than those who do not. No family of Saints can afford to be without the HERALD, Ensign, or Autumn Leaves, and if they can take them all it will be so much the better.

My permanent address is box 132, Dow City, Iowa, and my mission address is 2207 Farnam street, Omaha, Nebraska. Letters addressed to me at either of these places will reach me promptly. Bro. A. W. Ballard, 2208 Clark street, Omaha, Nebraska, is assistant president of the district, and he will do all in his power for the advancement of the work in the district.

Yours in gospel bonds, C. E. BUTTERWORTH.

To the Saints of the Lamoni Stake and Nauvoo District, Greeting:-This is to serve notice that Bro. R. M. Elvin has been transferred from the former to the latter field, such transfer to take effect at Bro. Elvin's earliest convenience.

J. W. WIGHT, Missionary in Charge. Burlington, Iowa, June 8.

To the Saints of Arkansas and Western Louisiana:-The opportunities and duties of another year are before us. Several thousand people live in the above territory who have never heard the restored gospel. To us has been committed the duty of teaching as many of them as time and opportunity will We have two ways of accomplishing admit. this work. First, By living our religion. "Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father who is in heaven."—Matt. 5: 16.

ENTERTAINING NEWSPAPER FEATURES.

Probably no other newspaper in the United States can show so brilliant an array of special features as is found in the columns of the Chicago Record-Herald, which combines in one great newspaper, all the entertaining departments of both the Chicago Record and the Chicago Times-Herald. The daily and Sunday news and special features of the Chi-Sunday news and special features of the Chicago Record-Herald include the Washington letter of William E. Curtis, the Record-Herald's special New York dispatches, its unequaled foreign news service, embracing its own special cables with those of the New York Herald, the New York Tribune, and the Associated Press; its pages devoted to the markets and financial and commercial intelmarkets and financial and commercial intelligence—exhaustive to the most satisfactory degree, its popular sporting page, its extended editorial department, 'Queer Sprigs of Gentility," Kiser's humorous "Alternating Currents," "Stories of the Day," "The Current Topics Club," the departments of railroad and insurance news, music and the drama, society and clubs; the column of book reviews, the continued story, the "Woman Beautiful" department, the daily fashion article, "Meals for a Day," news of the great lakes, etc.—all uniting to furnish to the people of Chicago and the northwest, a newspaper which commends itself to discriminapaper which commends itself to discrimina-ting readers as only a newspaper can which combines the world-wide facilities of two of the greatest metropolitan newspapers of modern times.

The July number of The Delineator is a superb one, and shows a gratifying excellence of mechanical arrangement. The crowning feature for July is the article on the Pan-American Exposition, illustrated by three color illustrations taken from the original sketches by C. Y. Turner, Director of color to the Exposition. The work is excellent, and the Delineator is to be congratucellent, and the Delineator is to be congratulated on its enterprize and development.

PUEBLO POTTERY.

WONDERFUL SPECIMENS OF WORK DONE BY THE ANCIENTS.

A fine lot of Pueblo pottery and relics of different sorts is shown in the Ethnology building of the Pan-American Exposition. The Pueblos, who were dwellers in the plains and in the cliffs as well, are one of the most interesting, from an archæological point of view, of all prehistoric people. Their civilization was remarkable, and their ingenuity in pottery making, basket weaving, bead work and many other things, very great. They had many peculiar customs, ceremonies and symbolic rites, and their pottery is ornamented with figures the significance of which puzzles the novice and expert alike. One of their peculiar symbols was a broken instead of a continuous line drawn about a bowl or other dish, suggesting perhaps the finite character of life. A bowl shown in the exhibit of Pueblo pottery has the reproduction of two feet upon the bottom of it, inside, suggesting possibly the transitory and insignifi-cant character of terrestrial existence.

Fine specimens of famous 'black and white ware" are shown, as well as the "red ware," most of which is black on the inside. A number of specimens finished so as to give the outside a corrugated appearance, are shown.

Many ingenious fine tools, finished stone implements, ornamental trinkets, presumably having religious significance, are on exhibition in the cases.

The basket work of Indians is very wonderful. Baskets made by comparatively modern Indians are shown. Water-tight baskets in large numbers and in many varieties are seen in the exhibit. All are ornamented with figures woven in when the basket was made.

The Pima Indians are those most famous for basket making. They even use baskets for cooking utensils, covering them with a thin layer of clay to keep them from being destroyed by contact with the fire.

CHEESE MAKING IN IOWA.

Iowa enjoys the proud distinction of the foremost dairy state in the Union. The but-ter product of the creameries in 1900 amounted to nearly 88,000,000 pounds and it was worth over $17,000,000 on the market. The cheese product of the state, however, amounted to only a little over 4 000 000 pounds and Iowa annually imports cheese for home consumption. It is sometimes claimed that Iowa is not adapted to cheese making. These conditions have led to a careful investigation of the subject of cheese making at the Iowa Experiment Station at Ames and it has been clearly demonstrated that practically as good cheese can be made in Iowa as in the most famous factories of Canada, the products of which have made such a favorable reputation in foreign Bulletin No. 57 of the Iowa Experiment Station gives a report of this work, and furnishes information about the best methods of making cheese and the conditions essential to success. This bulletin is for free distribution.

"TEACHERS WERE SCARCE."

Listen to the voice of latter-day wisdom, as it issues from a modern church Advocate:

God's way of educating the race in the early age of the world was by verbal instruction, for teachers were scarce. As the centuries passed, facilities were multiplied and knowledge became more general. Moses and the prophets were the instructors of the people, and they taught Christ's first and second coming. When the fullness of the time had come God spake to the people by his Son, by whom he hath made the worlds. Any one claiming divine revelation since Christ spake through the apostles is an impostor. This takes in all, Missouri Mormons, Utah Mormons, S. D. Adventists, and all the mystic churches. "Hear ye him" comes ringing down from the clouds of heaven. Christ is the one we must hear, and he said of the lo-heres and the lo-theres, believe them not. Pay no attention to them. Paul said, "Though we or an angel from heaven preach any other gospel, let him be accursed." This is a little hard on these new gospel teachers with their meats and drinks. The day of with their meats and drinks. The day of revelation is passed and ended with the death of the last apostle. The Holy Spirit is given, not to reveal new matter, but to bring to our remembrance whatsoever God has revealed in his Word. We need to understand God's Word, for it is a sufficient rule for all time to come. - The Bible Advocate, June 4.

The foregoing is a strange medley of ideas. According to the first sentence of it the wisdom and resources of Deity are circumscribed. Because God had no teachers in the "early age of the world" he adopted the plan of "educating the race" by "verbal instruction;" which, from what follows in the article can only mean that God adopted the giving of revelation as the means of "educating the race" because of or for the reason that "teachers were scarce." The teachers referred to were men, of course, or there is nothing in what follows after this expression. Is it not curious, then, that the "Early age of the world" lasted for four thousand years until Christ and for some ninety-six years after him?

The date given in the margin of the Oxford Teacher's Bible at the opening of the Book of Genesis is 4004 before Christ, and the Book of Revelation as 96 years after, a whole period of 4100 years of the "early age" in which God taught by "verbal instruction" through the medium of revelation "because teachers were scarce." And this, too, while he had chosen prophet after prophet, and had cared for the hosts of Israel with all their elders, high priests, and teachers, and had continued to employ the same method through the long centuries, and always reached his people in the same way. And then when the Christ came. the Shiloh, the Mediator, the Messiah, he was heralded to prophets. wise men, humble shepherds, and to kings by the voice of revelation, the inspiration of God. He instituted the faith and regime which was before the law, and during which men walked with God and he gave them needed direction by his voice. With this oldnew way, the Lord's way, "the way of the Lord," there came in a renewal and continued course of instruction by revelation through chosen teachers whom the Lord called and ordained, as we believe in plentiful supply for his purposes; apostles and elders who were sent out, and while out were still led by the voice of revelation.

What a travesty upon the Savior's work is this screed about the scarcity of teachers!

"The day of revelation is passed and ended with the death of the last apostle." How does the learned Advocate know this? Jesus said.

Lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world.-Matt. 28: 20.

Why, even the next sentence in this peculiar statement betrays the unwisdom of the writer. Notice it.

The Holy Spirit is given, not to reveal new matter, but to bring to our remembrance whatsoever God has revealed in his

Where did this learned Advocate get this idea? He found a part of it in the promise of the Savior as stated in John 14:26:

But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you.

Continuing his instructions unto these same teachers he said:

I have yet many things to say unto you, but ye cannot bear them now. Howbeit when he, the Spirit of truth, is come, he will guide you into all truth: for he shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak: and he will show you things to come. He shall glorify me: for he shall receive of mine, and shall shew it unto you. All things that the Father hath are mine; therefore said I, that he shall take of mine, and shall shew it unto you.

How long was this promised aid to last?

Matthew 28: 27, says:

I am with you, even unto the end of the John 14:16, says:

And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever.

This 'Comforter' is the 'Spirit of truth." "Even the Spirit of truth;"

says John 14:17.

Jesus said of this Comforter, the Holy Ghost, the Spirit of truth, that it would be a testimony-bearing power. "He shall testify of me," was Jesus' statement concerning this "Spirit of truth."

The Lord seems not to have intended to fix any time limit to this testifying by the Comforter. He tells us plainly that it should "abide forever." See John 14:16.

The Advocate takes a part of John 14:26, in which it is promised that the Comforter would bring things already known to remembrance, and limits the power and operation to that one part of the office work of that Spirit of truth, the Holy Ghost, to that and that alone; so far as our own day and period of times are concerned. Why does the Advocate do this? There is nothing in the word of God, "his Word" as the Advocate writes of it, that warrants such a statement.

On the contrary, Jesus stated in the twenty-first verse of this same chapter whence the Advocate takes the idea that the Holy Ghost will bring things to the remembrance of the disciple, that

He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, and I will love him, and will manifest myself to him.

This is a direct open promise of the same structure, nature, force, and import as the one in Mark 16:

He that believeth and is baptized shall be

It has no limit as to time, period, or age, none as to person, nationality, or country. Any one, every one, may in earnestness and sobriety, without hesitancy, or fear claim the keeping of the promise on the Savior's part.

What right has the Advocate to take a part of the word, accept, believe, and claim the applicability of that one part and leave out other parts? Who has authorized such a course of procedure? Has the Advocate received "verbal instruction" upon this point? We are curious to know.

If it is an imposture for any one to "claim divine revelation since Christ spoke through the apostles," is it not equally an imposition for any man, learned or unlearned, shrewd or simple, to claim that a part of the word is essential and operative, the rest not? Surely it must be. And if it is a revelation for the Holy Ghost to "take of the things" of Jesus and show them, to "show things to come:" is it not equally a revelation, the operation of the Holy Ghost to bring to the remembrance whatever may have been said by the Savior? If one is the act of the Holy Ghost, so is the other. If one is an act of revelation testifying of Jesus, making him manifest (i. e. to appear), so is the other. Both statements are from the same august Author, the same divine Head of the church.

Surely, "Hear ye him," does come "ringing down from the clouds of heaven." But, a similar injunction was given long before the dove was seen at the banks of Jordan or the voice of the Holy Messenger was heard and recorded by John. Fourteen hundred and fifty years before John saw and bore record, the voice of revelation was heard and this was the burden of it:

The LORD thy God will raise up unto thee a prophet from the midst of thee, of thy brethren, like unto me; unto him shalt thou hearken.—Deut. 18:15.

Fourteen hundred years after that, a prophet and an apostle stood before the successors of the tribes of Israel and hurled this promise at them in stinging rebuke for their hardened hearts of unbelief:

For Moses truly said unto the fathers, A prophet shall the Lord your God raise up unto you of your brethren, like unto me; him shall ye hear in all things whatsoever he shall say unto you.—Acts 3: 22.

There is no need to cavil as to whom this prophet was and is, for Stephen the Martyr, identifies him as the Christ Jesus.

Ye stiff-necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost: As your fathers did, so do ye. Which of the prophets have ye not persecuted? and they have slain them which shewed before of the coming of the Just One; of whom ye have been now the betrayers and murderers: who have received the law by the disposition of angels, and have not kept it.—Acts 7:51-53.

But what will be said of the acumen of the Advocate which makes the early age of the world to last from the year one of Bible history to the period of the Apocalypse, or till the last apostle chosen immediately by Jesus died, during which period the verbal instruction by "God's way" continued? If by the increase of facilities and the general diffusion of knowledge—the need for such instruction has passed with the apostles, and the later age of eighteen centuries has nothing of the office work of the Holy Ghost "to bring to our remembrance whatsoever God has revealed in his Word," to what agency shall the multiplied diversities of religious faith and the peculiarities of dostrine and practice existing among those studying to understand "God's word," be attributed? To whom has been delegated the right to say, To us has come the Holy Messenger, the Comforter, and has brought to our remembrance that Jesus said thus and so; hence, all you who believe contrary to our view harken unto us, for now all that the Holy Ghost does is to "bring" things to remembrance?

To whom will the Advocate have the ominous "our remembrance" apply? gave the Advocate, learned though it may be, the right to write all believers in present instruction by divine revelation out of the courts ecclesiastical by a single line, "Anyone claiming divine revelation since Christ spake through the apostles is an impostor"? Does the Advocate speak ex cathedra? Does the Holy Ghost bring the things spoken by Jesus to the memory of the Advocate and its patrons only? Are these the only ones to whom the royal envoy brings the boon of understanding? If so, then ought "Missouri Mormons, Utah Mormons, S. D. Adventists," and other churches the members of which accept the words of Jesus, that Prophet whom Moses said should be raised up, and whom the voice of inspiration heard from the heavens charged the world's races to hear, should sell out their Bibles, leave off worshiping in their various synagogues, and making a pilgrimage, sit down at the feet of them whose memo; ries are so divinely quickened and learn how little and how much of the words of the Prophet should be believed, disbelieved, accepted, or rejected.

Who may the Advocate mean by "Missouri Mormons"? Who may be the "Mystic churches" referred to? Are the followers of Dr. John Alexander Dowie, the reincarnated Elijah, the devotees of Health Science, the worshipers in Mrs. Woodbury's temple of mental suggestion, the Bible spiritualists, and the spiritists of science all included in these "Mystic churches"? Does the Advocate intend to strike from the word of God all who may believe that the obligation resting upon the believer in the Word of God demands a fuller, broader view of what the words of Jesus as contained in the scriptures are, than the narrow philosophy outlined in the quotation we have made from that journal appears to be? We hope not, for the reason that if he intends to apply the term "Missouri Mormons" to the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, we most emphatically deny his right to so do, as denying as he does the presence and work of revelation divine to men now, he has no authority from God, or the Master.

We confess that Jesus Christ has come in the flesh for the salvation of the race, and will again come unto the glory of God and the sanctification of all who believe in his word; and this is not anti-Christ.

COLLEGE WORK.

Elders D. W. Wight, Geo. W. Beebe, Sen., and A. J. Moore report from their respective fields of labors, the Rocky Mountain Mission, Clinton, Missouri, district, and the Texas mission, expressing the hope that they will be able to do much more for the college than ever before. It is encouraging to know that the brethren in the different fields are thus making efforts to comply with the late instruction. It was once said by the Master: "Ye are my disciples if ye do whatsoever I command you." Let us one and all prove now our discipleship.

HARDY, Nebraska, June 12.

Bishop E. L. Kelley; Dear Brother:—It affords us much pleasure to send the twenty-five dollars subscribed for Graceland last year, and also fifteen dollars more to aid in cancelling the debt. My husband though not a member of the church thinks this debt ought to be paid and is willing to aid in paying it. I hope that all the members will be as willing to help, and that the college will be free from debt in the near future.

SR. JENNIE BARRETT.

CASTLE GATE, Utah, June 10.

Bro Kelley:—I am located where I presume no subscription list will be likely to reach me. Nevertheless, I want to have an interest in Graceland College, therefore forward a little to help pay the debt and stop the interest being paid thereon. It is not good to be in bondage. I trust those who claim membership may awake, and by their actions speak as their circumstances and conditions will permit. If this would be done there would be enough and some to spare; at least I feel so. Inclosed find post office order for twenty-five dollars.

ANOTHER WAY TO HELP.

We desire to call attention of Herald readers to an article in this issue by J. P. Anderson in which he gives instructions as to how to preserve botanical specimens. Read it carefully, and then see what you can do for our college. Every little helps. Many who are unable to do much in the way of offering financial aid to the school can assist to quite an extent in this way. Do not wait; go to work at once. If you desire any further instructions on how to collect, Bro. Anderson will gladly assist you. Help him do a good work for Graceland.

AINSWORTH, Nebraska, June 10.

Bro. E. L. Kelley:—I received the subscription list yesterday morning. I came to this place last night from Inman, and today have written to three men in as many places to circulate lists and solicit subscriptions. If the Saints everywhere would sacrifice as Bro. and Sr. Gray of this place, the debt would soon be paid. They are aged people, and he nearly blind so he can do no manual labor outside, but helps his wife at the loom—they are carpet weavers. I spoke of the matter to them and they gave me their last dollar,—one they had laid away to buy wallpaper with. I felt loath to take it; but remembering that it is written "It is more blessed to give than to receive," I concluded it would be wrong to deny them the privilege to thus express their wish for the welfare of Graceland College.

PRESBYTERIANS TO REVISE CREED.

At the General Assembly of the Presbyterians held recently in Philadelphia the question in which interest was chiefly centered was, "Shall the creed be revised?" In an earnest debate the question was discussed pro and con and disposed of as follows:

"A. We recommend that a committee, as provided for by the form of government, chapter xxiii., section 3, be appointed by this Assembly. B. We recommend that this committee be instructed to prepare and to submit to the next General Assembly for such disposition as may be judged to be wise, a brief statement of the reformed faith, expressed, as far as possible, in untechnical terms. The said statement is to be prepared with a view to its being employed to give information, and a better understanding of our doctrinal beliefs, and not with a view to its becoming a substitute for an alternative of our Confession of Faith. C. We further recommend that this committee be instructed to prepare amendments of chapter iii.; chapter xxi., section 3; chapter xvi., section 7; chapter xxii., section 3; and chapter xxv., section 6, of our Confession of Faith, either by modification of the text or by declaratory statement, but so far as possible by declaratory statement, so as more clearly to express the mind of the church, with additional statements concerning the love of God for all men, missions, and the Holy Spirit. It being understood that the revision shall in no way impair the integrity of the system of doctrine set forth in our Confession and taught in the holy Scriptures."

According to the above the question, "Shall the creed be revised?" is settled affirmatively, and indications of how it shall be revised appear, though actual revision remains to be accomplished by the General Assembly of 1902.

The action as expressed by the foregoing is the outgrowth of a dissatisfation which has existed for some time in the Presbyterian Church. The creed has not expressed the views in some particulars of many of the leading ministers as well as of the laity, and some parts of the long established articles of faith have led those not of the Presbyterian persuasion to misunderstand and hence misrepresent the attitude of that church on several points. Hence came the demand for revision.

As expressed by many supporters of the revision idea, the Presbyterian Church had grown away from the conditions which produced the articles of faith by which they had stood for years, and the progress made brought about new conditions which demanded changes in the creed. In this the Presbyterians are experiencing what some other churches have,—no man or set of men can make a creed to fit all time. Divinity alone can do that. Where is it?

CENTRAL NEBRASKA DISTRICT.

By request of Bro. Levi Gamet we correct the report in the notice given by Brn. Levi Gamet and William Rumel, in HERALD of June 5, page 469:

In order that all may know where the Central Nebraska district is, we will name the counties, as follows: Howard, Sherman, Valley, Garfield, Keya Paha, Rock, Custer, Dawson north of the Platte, Loup, Blaine, and Brown.

To these add Knox, Pierce, Madison, Antelope, Boon, Nance, Merrick, Holt, Wheeler, and Greely. All interested please notice and heed it in time.

BRO. W. H. DEAM, on the ground in the city of Chicago, writes us June 9, correcting our errors in regard to Dr. Dowie. He writes:

"Your article on Dowie is pretty badly mixed. There should be a reversal of Mrs. Christensen's and Mrs. Judd's names. Also the silk factory should be lace factory."

We acknowledge and accept correction with them.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Read in another column Bro. A. M. Fyrando's appeal to the Saints of the Little Sioux district. It is good enough to be read by all the Saints. Let us pay the debt!

There is a series of meetings being held near Ellston, Ringgold county, Iowa, at present writing, June 17, which was opened about June 9, and which will continue until the 23d if interest continues. Brn. R. M. Elvin, H. N. Snively, and Joseph Smith have contributed to the preaching services, Bro. Elvin in charge. Excellent audiences were present at the services Saturday morning and all day Sunday the 15th and 16th inst. and the interest seems to be good so far. May the good work go on. Bro. C. J. Anderson, his sons and their families are the patron Saints of the meeting held near Ellston.

"ZION AND HER LAW."-NO. 5.

BY JOSEPH FLORY.

We now give some quotations concerning the gathering, the consideration of which is very important:

Verily I say unto you, that ye are chosen out of the world to declare my gospel with the sound of rejoicing, as with the voice of a trump; lift up your hearts and be glad, for I am in your midst, and am your advocate with the Father; and it is his good will to give you the kingdom; and as it is written, Whatsoever ye shall ask in faith, being united in prayer according to my command, ye shall receive; and ye are called to bring to pass the gathering of mine elect, for mine elect hear my voice and harden not their hearts; wherefore the decree hath gone forth from the Father that they shall be gathered in unto one place, upon the face of this land, to prepare their hearts, and be prepared in all things, against the day when tribulation and desolation are sent forth upon the wicked; for the hour is nigh, and the day soon at hand, when the earth is ripe; and all the proud, and they that do wickedly, shall be as stubble, and I will burn them up, saith the Lord of Hosts, that wickedness shall not be upon the earth; for the hour is nigh, and that which was spoken by mine apostles must be which was spoken by mine aposties must be fulfilled; for as they spoke, so shall it come to pass; for I will reveal myself from heaven with power and great glory, with all the hosts thereof, and dwell in righteousness with men on earth a thousand years, and the wicked shall not stand.—D. C. 28:2.

And the Lord said unto Enoch, As I live, then so will I come in the last days—in the days of wickedness and vengeance, to fulfill the oath which I made unto you, concerning the children of Noah: and the day shall come that the earth shall rest, but before that day, shall the heavens be darkened, and a veil of darkness shall cover the earth; and the heavens shall shake, and also the earth; and great tribulations shall be among the children of men, but my people will I preserve; and righteousness will I send down out of heaven; and truth will I send forth out of the earth, to bear testimony of my Only Begotten; his resurrection from the dead; yea, and also the resurrection of all men: and righteousness and truth will I cause to sweep the earth as with a flood, to gather out my own elect from the four quarters of the earth unto a place which I shall prepare; a holy city, that my people may gird up their loins, and be looking forth for the time of my coming; for there shall be my tabernacle, and it shall be called Zion, a New Jerusalem.

And it came to pass that Enoch saw the days of the coming of the Son of Man, in the last days, to dwell on the earth in righteousness, for the space of a thousand years. But before that day he saw great tribulations among the wicked; and he also saw the sea, that it was troubled, and men's hearts failing them, looking forth with fear for the judgments of the Almighty God, which should come upon the wicked. And the Lord showed Enoch all things, even unto the end of the world; and he saw the day of the righteous, the hour of their redemption, and received a fullness of joy.—D. C. 36:12, 14.

And it shall come to pass, among the wicked, that every man that will not take his sword against his neighbor, must needs flee unto Zion for safety. And there shall be gathered unto it out of every nation under heaven; and it shall be the only people that shall not be at war one with another. And it shall be said among the wicked, Let us not go up to battle against Zion, for the inhabitants of Zion are terrible, wherefore we cannot stand. And it shall come to pass that the righteous shall be gathered out from among all nations, and shall come to Zion singing, with songs of everlasting joy.—D. C. 45:13, 14. (Please read the whole section.)

From the foregoing quotations it will be learned that the gathering of the Saints must take place before the coming of Christ and the destruction of the wicked, so that none who are faithful and willing to be counseled by the Lord and the elders (section 117:11) in this matter need fear of being left when the great destruction does come, for if necessary he will, as he said he would, send his angels to save his people. See Matt. 24:28, 40, I. T.

In the revelation on the rebellion, in that part having reference to war, famine, pestilence, etc., being poured out upon all nations, the Lord says it will continue "until the consumption decreed shall make a full end of all nations." This, doubtless, is the destruction mentioned in Isaiah 24, and which will be accomplished in the times in which we are living. Surely there never was a time in the world's history when it was as ripe for such a destruction as now; and he who will not take the sword against his neighbor must needs flee to Zion for safety.

Verily I say unto you all, Arise and shine forth, that thy light may be a standard for the nations, and that the gathering together upon the land of Zion and upon her stakes may be for a defense, and for a refuge from the storm, and from wrath when it shall be poured out without mixture upon the whole earth. (Revelation, given at Far West, April 26, 1838; see Church History, vol. 2, p. 151.

In Isaiah 26:20, 21, we find language which we think is quite applicable to the events which we think are near at hand.

Come, my people, enter thou into thy chambers [places of safety], and shut thy doors about thee: hide thyself as it were for a little moment, until the indignation be overpast. For, behold, the Lord cometh out of his place to punish the inhabitants of the earth for their iniquity: the earth also shall disclose her blood, and shall no more cover her slain.

In Daniel 12: 1 we are told—having reference as we believe to the latter days—that

There shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time.

In the twenty-fourth of Matthew, Inspired Translation, where Christ foretold the destruction of Jerusalem and the events that should precede his coming, he says:

When you, therefore, shall see the abominations of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, concerning the destruction of Jerusalem, then you shall stand in the holy place. . . . For then, in those days, shall be great tribulations on the Jews, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem; such as was not before sent upon Israel, of God, since the beginning of their kingdom until this time; no, nor ever shall be sent again upon Israel. All things which have befallen them, are only the beginning of the sorrows which shall come upon them; and except those days should be shortened, there should none of their flesh be saved. But for the elect's sake, according to the covenant, those days shall be shortened. Behold these things I have spoken unto you concerning the Jews.—Verses 24: 12, 18-21.

Then in explanation of the things that will come to pass between the time of the destruction of Jerusalem and Christ's second coming, verses 30-35 say:

For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom; there shall be famine and pestilences, and earthquakes in divers places. And again, because iniquity shall abound, the love of men shall wax cold; but he that shall not be overcome, the same shall be saved. And again, this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world, for a witness unto all nations, and then shall the end come, or the destruction of the wicked. And again shall the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, be fulfilled. And immediately after the tribulation of those days, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of heaven shall be shaken. Verily I say unto you, this generation in which these things shall be shown forth, shall not pass away until all I have told you shall be fulfilled.

Notice in verse 32 he says,

And again this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness. This passage is generally understood among the Saints as now being fulfilled in the preaching of the restored gospel, which is the original gospel again being preached.

Notice the similarity of the language used in verse 33, where he says,

And again shall the abomination of desclation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, be fulfilled:

And then goes on to tell the special signs of the darkening of the sun and moon, etc., which shall immediately follow the tribulation of those days; and then as he repeats in part the same events in verse 37 and that just following, those events shall be the sign of and the coming of the Son of Man. Verses 37 and 38.

In verse 18 he says that the tribulations there described as coming on the Jews and inhabitants of Jerusalem should not again be sent upon Israel. If the Jews had to drink the bitter cup prescribed for them for rejecting Christ and his message (See Matt. 23:37-40, I. T.), and the abominations of desolation should again be fulfilled. who is it that shall experience its second fulfillment? It must be the nations that in the dispensation of the fullness of times have—as the Jews formerly did-rejected the gospel. which is today again being preached as a witness to all nations, and then the end will come, or the full and complete overthrow of the nations of the earth, by experiencing or drinking a similarly bitter cup, just as the Jews did after rejecting Christ. And thus the prophecy in Daniel 2:34, 35, will be fulfilled, and the kingdom of God will become universal over all the earth.

Verily, this is the word of the Lord, that the city New Jerusalem shall be built by the gathering of the saints, beginning at this place, even the place of the temple, which temple shall be reared in this generation; for verily, this generation shall not all pass away until an house shall be built unto the Lord, and a cloud shall rest upon it, which cloud shall be even the glory of the Lord, which shall fill the house.—D. C. 83:2.

Mine indignation is soon to be poured out without measure upon all nations, and this will I do when the cup of their iniquity is full. And in that day, all who are found upon the watchtower, or in other words, all mine Israel shall be saved. And they that have been scattered shall be gathered; and all they who have mourned shall be comforted; and all they who have given their lives for my name shall be crowned. Therefore, let your hearts be comforted concerning Zion, for all flesh is in mine hands: be still, and know that I am God. Zion shall not be moved out of her place, notwithstanding her children are scattered, they that remain and are pure in heart shall return and come to their inheritances; they and their children, with songs of everlasting joy; to build up the waste places of Zion. And all these things, that the prophets might be fulfilled. And behold, there is none other place appointed than that which I have appointed, neither shall there be any other place appointed than that which I have appointed for the work of the gathering of my saints, until the day cometh when there is found no more room for them; and then I have other places which I will appoint unto them, and they shall be called stakes, for the curtains, or the strength of Zion.

Behold, it is my will, that all they who call on my name, and worship me according to mine everlasting gospel, should gather together and stand in holy places, and prepare for the revelation which is to come when the veil of the covering of my temple, in my tabernacle, which hideth the earth, shall be taken off, and all flesh shall see me together. And every corruptible thing, both of man, or of the beasts of the field, or of the fowls of heaven, or of the fish of the sea, that dwell upon all the face of the earth, shall be consumed; and also, that of element shall melt with fervent heat; and all things shall become new, that my knowledge and glory may dwell upon all the earth.

Again, verily I say unto you, I will show unto you wisdom in me concerning all the churches, inasmuch as they are willing to be guided in a right and proper way for their salvation, that the work of the gathering together of my saints may continue, that I may build them up unto my name upon holy places; for the time of harvest is come, and my word must needs be fulfilled. Therefore, I must gather together my people according to the parable of the wheat and the tares, that the wheat may be secured in the garners to possess eternal life, and be crowned with celestial glory when I shall come in the kingdom of my Father, to reward every man according as his work shall be; while the tares shall be bound in bundles, and their bands made strong, that they may be burned with un-quenchable fire. Therefore, a commandment quenchable fire. Therefore, a commandment I give unto all the churches, that they shall continue to gather together unto the places which I have appointed; nevertheless, as I have said unto you in a former commandment, let not your gathering be in haste, nor by flight; but let all things be prepared before you: and in order that all things be prepared before you, observe the commandments which I have given concerning these things, which saith, or teacheth, to purchase all the lands by money, which can be purchased for money, in the region round about the land which I have appointed to be the land of Zion, for the beginning of the gathering of my saints; all the land which can be pur-chased in Jackson county, and the counties round about, and leave the residue in mine hand.

Now, verily I say unto you, Let all the churches gather together all their moneys; let these things be done in their time, be not in haste; and observe to have all things prepared before you. And let honorable men be appointed, even wise men, and send them to purchase these lands; and every church in the eastern countries when they are built up, if they will hearken unto this counsel, they may buy lands and gather together upon them, and in this way they may establish Zion. There is even now already in store a sufficient, yea, even abundance to redeem Zion, and establish her waste places, no more to be thrown down, were the churches, who call themselves after my name, willing to hearken to my voice.—D. C. 98: 4, 5, 9, 10.

In section 102: 8 we learn that it is the Lord's will that after those lands above referred to had been purchased his Saints should possess them according to the laws of consecration which he had given, and in section 117:11 he says:

Let my commandments to gather into the regions round about, and the counsel of the elders of my church guide in this matter until it shall be otherwise given of me.

But before the great day of the Lord shall come, Jacob shall flourish in the wilderness; and the Lamanites shall blossom as the rose. Zion shall flourish upon the hills, and rejoice upon the mountains, and shall be assembled together unto the place which I have appointed.—D. C. 49:5.

For Zion must increase in beauty, and in holiness; her borders must be enlarged; her stakes must be strengthened; yea, verily I say unto you, Zion must arise and put on her beautiful garments.—D. C. 81:4.

Also please read in this connection section 108.

We believe with the writer in Herald for 1899, page 636, that we should be sanctified in order to gather; but as we are to be sanctified through the truth, or by obedience to the truth—and God's word is truth—so that the shortest way to sanctification is to take hold of and work along those lines pointed out, and to which we have already called your attention, and which are referred to in revelation of 1873, Doctrine and Covenants 117:11.

Let all my people who dwell in the regions round about, be very faithful, and prayerful, and humble before me, and reveal not the things which I have revealed unto them, until it is wisdom in me that they should be revealed. Talk not judgment, neither boast of faith, nor of mighty works; but carefully gather together, as much in one region as can be consistently with the feelings of the people; and, behold, I will give unto you favor and grace in their eyes, that you may rest in peace and safety.—D. C. 102: 7.

We see nothing to prevent, but much to urge, that at this coming conference the same plan that was given to the old church in August, 1831, should be adopted where the Lord by commandment to Sidney Rigdon instructed him to write an epistle and subscription, to be presented unto all the churches, to obtain moneys, to be put into the hands of the bishop, to purchase lands for an inheritance for the children of God, of himself or the agent, as seemeth him good, or as he shall direct. For, behold, verily I say unto you, The Lord willeth that the disciples, and the children of men, should open their hearts even to purchase this whole region of country, as son as time will permit. Behold, here is wisdom; let them do this lest they receive none inheritance, save it be by the shedding of blood.

And again, inasmuch as there is land obtained, let there be workmen sent forth, of all kinds, unto this land, to labor for the saints of God. Let all these things be done in order. And let the privileges of the lands be made known, from time to time, by the bishop, or the agent of the church; and let the work of the gathering be not in haste, nor by flight, but let it be done as it shall be counseled by the elders of the church at the conferences, according to the knowledge which they receive from time to time.—D. C. 58: 11, 12.

This in connection with section 98: 10 certainly would be in harmony with that which has been given in relation to the subject, and we verily believe that all that is wanting is for the church to make a move along the right lines, and God will bless the move, and in a very short time we shall be ready to organize at the center place, or at such place as God might designate as a stake; and without doubt, so soon as we are ready, a revelation authorizing such organization will be forthcoming from the Lord.

The writer stands ready to assist in such a move whenever it is inaugurated, but believes that it would be best to have the move to be general throughout the church, and not of a local character; then so soon as a sufficient amount of lands and other properties are purchased—and God commands—the work can commence, and there need not be a great amount of lands, etc., purchased before the work does commence.

The church was organized with six members, so this work can commence with even that number of heads of families.

And now let us suppose that six families which are in the main in like condition, or would require about a like amount of land and other things to make them a living; then let the bishop purchase an equal number of farms, with stock, farming implements, etc.; let those families consecrate or give over to the bishop whatever means they may have, let the properties be numbered one, two. three, etc., and an equal number of tickets be likewise numbered; let the tickets be placed in a receptacle, and each head of a family draw a ticket, which shall entitle him to the property numbered to correspond to the ticket drawn. Let this be done under the supervision of the president of the church; let the bishop deed them the land as their inheritance, and thus all room for jealousy, or for saying that one man was more favored than another, would be done away; and it would also be the fulfillment of a prophecy, which says:

I, the Lord God, will send one mighty and strong, holding the scepter of power in his hand, clothed with light for a covering, whose mouth shall utter words, eternal words, while his bowels shall be a fountain of truth, to set in order the house of God, and to arrange by lot the inheritances of the saints whose names are found, and the names of their fathers, and of their children, encolled in the book of the law of God.—Church History, vol. 1, p. 260.

And thus when the work is once started, it would increase and spread until all that was promised would eventually be realized.

We do not expect that all we have portrayed in our picture of the condition of affairs as they will exist under the law of consecration when fully accomplished will be done without friction. But if those who are permitted to go into that arrangement will try to be guided by the right spirit, it can all be accomplished. There may be some who, like Ananias and Sapphira, will undertake to practice deception; but we are assured that "liars and hypocrites shall be proved" and God has declared that he will not be mocked in reference to those things pertaining to the order of Enoch (sec. 101:1). Therefore we expect that he will visit summary judgment on such in that order that are found transgressors before him, and thus they would be taught to fear the penalty for transgression, even if some might otherwise be disposed to practice evil.

It is not necessary to wait until all are ready to go into this order of things; if it were, we never would go into it, for doubtless some will never be ready to obey that which will be required. But let the work commence, and then let those who are willing take hold, while those who are not willing can stand aloof, if they wish, and take the consequences.

While the agitation of this question of the gathering will doubtless cause some to become restless, and possibly to act unwisely, yet the question must not only be agitated at some time, but the work must also be commenced; so we see no good reason for putting it off, for now is certainly as good a time we will ever have to investigate and see what the Lord has taught and required of the Saints, and begin to work along those lines marked out, and do our part so far as we can, regardless of what others may do or think in reference to the matter; and if the elders will counsel and work in harmony with the revelations given on the subject, there need be no unwise movement made, to any great extent at least.

And now, reader, if when you have carefully and without prejudice followed our line of thought, and are able to pass a decision as to whether we are in harmony with God's law or not, we trust you will pass that decision in the spirit of love for the truth, which is the only object of the writer in presenting the same to you. And if you accept our conclusions, and they are as satisfying, comforting, and strengthening to you as they have been to us, we shall feel repaid for our labor; and furthermore believe it will help to encourage us along the lines of duty laid down for God's children to observe, in order that his work may be accomplished.

While we have been very positive in many of our statements, we have been so only because we felt greatly assured that our position cannot be overthrown by the word of God, when properly interpreted, and that in this presentation we have something grand and glorious to contemplate; something worthy of our admiration and our cooperation; something for which the world is hungering, and which they are making efforts to obtain, but which will prove fruitless, from the fact that they ignore God's plan and are attempting to bring it about by their own wisdom, by the alreadymentioned thousand and one plans which are being proposed, in all of which God is practically ignored as having any direct hand in the matter; but eventually they will have to acknowledge his hand, and will be willing to yield obedience to his laws. Sec. 102:9; 64:8; 94:5.

While we have to some extent come in conflict with many leading elders of the church, this gives us no trou ble, from the fact that if anyone ever does present this matter in full, in its correct light, they must of necessity come in conflict with many of the various interpretations as acknowledged and mentioned in an editorial in HERALD for July 26,1899, page 473,

Tithing, or the law of tithing, is the only rule of finance the church has; and as variously interpreted forms the basis for the receipt and disbursement of moneys by the

And certainly we do not desire to remain in a condition where we must have to admit that God's perfect law allows of various interpretations. Just the idea we are combating against almost universal in christendom, in reference to the law of God, by which we may become members of his church here upon the earth. We feel to respect all men in their stations in the church, from president down to deacon, and would dictate to none; yet upon the other hand we are not disposed to yield to the dictation or teaching of any man or set of men as to what are our rights, duties, or privileges, as a member of the church unless such instruction be based upon God's law—upon principles of justice, truth, and righteousness.

Our two years' observation in Utah, under the rule of "follow your file leaders," "do as you are told," and "pay your tithing, and it is none of your business what is done with it," most completely spoiled us for a tool to be used along that line. And, thank God, we have found that in the Reorganization such a spirit is the exception and not the rule. Yet our experience has been such that we have realized that it does exist in the The following has been church. credited as the saying of Joseph Smith:

We have learned, by sad experience, that it is the nature and disposition of almost all men, as soon as they get a little authority, as they suppose, to immediately begin to exercise unrighteous dominion.

With a writer in the HERALD for February 26, 1887, page 141, I agree,

There is a time when men, holding office in the Church of Christ, may and should speak with authority, and all are required to submit, unless the matter is reversed by a higher tribunal; but it is not the privilege of any, no matter what office they may hold, to "Lord it over God's heritage." The Saints should be taught to see the right, and to obey as their duty becomes apparent. And while every man should be respected in his office and calling, it should be borne in mind that the gospel law insures liberty to all its votaries, and every member in the Church of Christ has rights and privileges. "I would not rule, nor yet be ruled; I scorn the tyrant as I scorn his slave." Open criticlsm, I do not fear. It may be unjust, but it gives me an opportunity to defend my elf. If the criticism be just, it helps me see the wrong, and gives me an opportunity to re-

We accord all men the same right to think and judge for themselves that we claim for ourselves, and are willing to respect every man's opinions and views sufficiently, so as to examine and compare them with the law and the testimony. But be it understood that we have a greater respect for the written law than we have for any or all men's opinions, or even official declarations, under certain circumstances, when in our judgment they are not in harmony with the law. As Paul advises, we only follow leaders as they follow Christ. 1 Corinthians 11:1. We even go farther than that, and indorse the teachings of the president of the church, in a sermon, as reported in HERALD for December 15, 1888, page 794. President Smith here emphasized in a striking manner the necessity of the people abiding in the faith as laid down in the books, stating that under no circumstances whatever would they be justified in accepting that which was contrary to what was written; that if he should present anything unto them contrary thereto, and even declare that an angel stood by him and gave him such a revelation, they had better reply, "Well, Bro. Joseph, we will wait awhile before we accept it, and be sure that we are not deceived!" He here repeated a characteristic statement which he had made to a person while in Plano, Illinois. A Strangite had asked him plainly if he would not accept the doctrine of polygamy if an angel should declare it unto him. To the astonishment of the questioner he replied that he would tell that angel to go back and tell the Lord that he would not preach polygamy or anything else which was contrary to what the Lord had previously revealed, and that he should feel perfectly safe in so doing. He did not apprehend that God ever had or ever would send an angel with a revelation to any man contradicting or conflicting with a former revelation; but if any man, or even "an angel with a drawn sword" should make such a claim, the people should see to it for their own safety that they refuse to receive such teachings. For Paul says that though himself or an angel from heaven teach contrary to or different from what he had taught and the church had received let him be accursed.

So we learn that even angels are not to be followed unless they teach right.

Our prayer is that God may hasten the time when his Saints shall see eye to eye on all the features of his law, so that they may be of one heart and one mind, and serve him in righteousness, and enjoy all that God has promised them in so doing. Even so. Amen.

COLLECT SPECIMENS FOR GRACE-LAND.

Being much interested in the botanical department of Graceland College, I wish to urge those who can do so to help make this department a success.

A department of botany is essential to any first-class institution of learning; and among the essentials to the study of botany is an herbarium or collection of dried plants. It is in this that we want you to help us. Do not know how to collect and preserve the specimens? Well, we will give you a few instructions.

A specimen to be of scientific value should show as many parts of the plant as possible. It should show leaves, a part or all the stem, and either or both flower and fruit. Fruit here signifies a seed-bearing vessel of any kind. Many plants can be obtained so as to show both flower and fruit on the same plant. Most herbs should be taken with the root also. Plants that send up a long shoot may be folded back or folded in the shape of a capital N, as the size of the specimens should not exceed sixteen by eleven inches when pressed.

Secure the most characteristic parts if possible. Many plants are equally characteristic in either flower or fruit. In some (as for instance the oaks and grasses) the fruit is most characteristic, while in others the flowers contain the best distinguishing features.

The words press and pressing used in connection with preserving botanical specimens sometimes give a wrong idea. The object is to keep the specimen straight while it is drying and only enough pressure to keep the plant from shriveling should be used. Carpet paper cut into sheets 12 x 18 inches makes very good dryers, but common newspaper will do. The poorer the quality of newspaper used the better. These dryers need to be changed daily, especially in warm weather, as the specimens will mould if allowed to remain between folds of damp paper. After removing from the plants, take the drying papers and spread them out where they will dry. They can then be used again; in fact, can be used an indefinite number of times.

When the plants are dry, place them between folds of newspaper, and on a little separate slip of paper give the date of collection, place, and in what kind of a place it grew, that is, state whether it grew in water, wet places, meadow, woods, prairies,

When ready to send in the specimens, place the papers containing the specimens between very stiff pieces of pasteboard and tie well. They can be sent either by mail or express, the latter being the better method. We will pay charges. We assure you that all specimens sent to the undersigned will be duly taken care of and safely deposited in the case provided for the same by Graceland College.

If anyone desires to know the names of any plants sent in, let him number them, retaining duplicate numbers at

There are several who have promised to collect for us, but we want more to take an interest in this part of the work. We want several in every state and territory in the union, and in foreign countries also. Let us make the herbarium of Graceland one that we may be proud of-second to Yours for Graceland,

IS DANIEL'S LOT ON EARTH?

If so, the Jews will surely have a prophet in 1905. Let us reason together and see. Go to Daniel 11:21; we find there shall stand up a vile person, to whom they shall not give the honor of the kingdom, but he shall come in peaceably, and obtain the kingdom by flatteries. I cannot say who this vile person is; but did not the Pope of Rome obtain his power over the kings of the earth just in that way? We will notice that

Read some in the 12th chapter. Here we find that God is revealing the future to Daniel through an angel. as his custom is, and he says:

Shut up the words, and seal the book, even to the time of the end: . . . Then I Daniel looked, and, behold, there stood other two, the one on this side of the bank of the river, and the other on that side of the bank of the river. And one said to the man clothed in linen, which was upon the waters of the river, How long shall it be to the end of these wonders?—Daniel 12: 4-6.

In the 7th verse of the same chapter

I heard the man clothed in linen, which was upon the waters of the river, when he held up his right hand and his left hand unto heaven, and sware by him that liveth for ever, that it shall be for a time, times, and a

The same time that the woman be nourished. Revelation Whatever time that may should be nourished. 12:14. mean, we know that the first change came in 1830, when the gospel was restored to earth by an angel. The next thing to happen was the scattering of the power of the holy people by this evil person spoken of in the beginning of our article, which happened in 1844, when the prophet, seer, and leader of the church was killed, and its members scattered everywhere. Is there an incident in the annals of history that will fulfill that prophecy except that? It seems that was all that Daniel understood, for he says:

I heard, but I understood not: then said I, O my Lord, what shall be the end of these things? And he said, Go thy way, Daniel: for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end. Many shall be purified, and made white, and tried; but the wicked shall do wickedly: and none of the wicked shall understand.—Verses 8-10.

Was not that so? Were not the Saints most severely tried from 1844 until 1860? did not the wicked ones of the church do some of the most wicked things during that time, ever perpetrated by man? Have any of them ever understood yet? Some may say, why say until 1860? Because that is the next time designated to Daniel, see eleventh verse:

And from the time that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away, and the abomination that maketh desolate set up, there shall be a thousand two hundred and ninety days.

Now if time, times and an half: or one thousand, two hundred, and sixty days, ended in 1830, then this brings us 30 days (years) later, which brings us to 1860, when the church was reorganized, or the holy people with their power reëstablished in order.

Now, it is no great trouble to see prophecies that have already come to pass, but here is something in the future. In the 12th and 13th verses the angel says:

Blessed is he that waiteth, and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days.

This brings us forty-five days (years) later; forty-five added to 1860 brings us to 1905. Something will happen then! What is it? The angel said in verse 13,

But go thou thy way till the end be: for thou shalt rest, and stand in thy lot at the end of the days. G. L. RATHBUN.

MYSTERY OF ARCTIC REGION.

SCIENTISTS PUZZLED OVER MIRAGE CITY SEEN IN ALASKA.

The announcement that a party of scientific men will leave Vancouver for Alaska next June to study the socalled "Silent City" mirage directs attention to a phenomenon which has been the subject of much discussion during the last ten or twelve years. As long ago as 1887 a mining prospector who had explored southern Alaska extensively created a sensation in Juneau and gave newspaper correspondents a first-class topic by exhibiting a photograph which he pretended to have taken of a mirage. This prospector, one Willoughby, was particularly familiar with the region about Glacier Bay and is said to have piloted Prof. Muir's vessel to the glacier which now bears the latter's name. The story which Willoughby told in Juneau was substantially this:

Several years before, while he was near Glacier Bay, the Indians told him of the occasional appearance of what looked like a city suspended in air. Finally he witnessed the strange spectacle himself. There seemed to be a number of huge buildings, all of beautiful and imposing architecture, whose spires and buttresses strongly suggested the cathedrals of the old world. Lest his story should be discredited, he made several successive attempts to photograph the picture, which the Indians called the "Silent City." Whatever doubt may attach to the genuineness of the picture, the rest of Willoughby's statement may be accepted without hesitation, because there is plenty of corroborative evidence.

Independent testimony of great value is that offered by Dr. Filippo De Filippi, who accompanied the Duke of the Abruzzi to Alaska in 1897, and subsequently wrote an account of the Italian expeditions to Mount St. Elias. The Duke and his companions had reached the summit and had descended part of the way when night overtook them. encamped on the slope. With returning day they pushed on over the Malaspina toward Yakutat Bay, where lay their ship. The weather was fine, but there was a breeze. The air was not calm and this fact may partially explain the imperfections and unsteadiness of the mirage. Doctor Filippi says:

"The southern ridge of Mount St. Elias stood out clearly, merging in the long chain of Chaix hills, which, as it approached the Malaspina Glacier, assumed a series of strange shapes which we were no longer able to recognize. Their outlines underwent changes before our very eyes, assuming the forms of spires, belfries, minarets, and architectural outlines of fantastic cathedrals, all of which slowly appeared and disappeared, to be succeeded by buildings of lesser height, severely rectilinear. This proved to be the mirage known as the 'Silent City,' an optical illusion to which this wide ice surface is prone in common with the burning sands of the desert. The marvelous spectacle continued throughout the afternoon."

It should be added that this glacier is fully twenty-five miles in width, but as it is something like 150 or 200 miles west of the Muir Glacier, where Willoughby was when he saw the mirage, it is open to question whether the scene was precisely the same. Willoughby declared, however, that the suspended city lay off to the westward of him, toward Mount Fairweather, which stands between Glacier Bay and Mount St. Elias. It is to the vicinity of Fairweather that next summer's expedition is to go. Other testimony in regard to phantom cities seen at twilight, and not in the middle of the day, is furnished by Professor Russell, the well-known authority on American volcanoes. It was Professor Russell, by the way, who effectually disposed of the theory that Mount St. Elias is a volcano. The mirage witnessed by him was at the head of Yakutat Bay, or at a point between Mount St. Elias and Mount Fairweather.

Spectacles of the same kind have been seen off the coast of Greenland, too. Scoresby, writing thirty odd vears ago, remarked: "Hummocks of ice assumed the form of castles. obelisks, and spires, and the land presented extraordinary features. In some places the distant ice was so extremely irregular and appeared to be so full of pinnacles that it resembled a forest of naked trees. In others it had the character of an extensive city, crowded with churches, castles, and public edifices." Gen. A. W. Greeley in his "American Weather," makes a passing reference to the phenomenon. He does not mention having seen a mirage himself, but he refers to the marvelous tales which he has heard, more especially about their appearance in the Arctic regions, and declares that he is prepared to be-

Practically all writers on the theory of the mirage hold that, while the images presented to the observer's eye may be distorted and obscure, they have a certain basis in fact. They are representations (accurate or inaccurate) of real things. Napoleon's army, crossing the sands of lower Egypt, saw remote villages which were yet below the horizon lifted into view. At sea it is not uncommon to detect ships that are yet too far away to be seen normally. Indeed there are multiple images, one above the other, and some of them upside down, perhaps. But in spite of their eccentricities there is a real ship involved in the phenomenon.

In some mirages there is great magnification of the objects seen, but only in a vertical direction. The passage just quoted from Scoresby illustrates the point in a measure. This effect is closely allied to the apparent lifting of a scene above its true position, or what sailors call "looming." For instance, a mirage once showed people at Hastings, England, the French coast near Boulogne, forty or fifty miles away. The curvature of the earth is here sufficient to hide one city from the other under ordinary conditions. Prof. J.D. Everett, of Belfast. Ireland in a lecture delivered over a quarter of a century ago, dwelt at length on the false ideas of nearness and the distortion of form that results from looming. "This vertical magnification is shown in cliffs and icebergs at sea." said he, "and produces an effect of pinnacles, spires, columns, or basaltic cliffs. . . . The magnificent columns which constitute a part of the Fata morgana (a mirage) in the Strait of Messina are in like manner to be attributed to vertical magnification. An appearance of the same kind, known as the 'Merry Dancers,' is often seen by boatmen off the Giant's Causeway."

In his book on Alaska mines Bruce says that the "Silent City" has been identified as a view of Bristol, England. But it is possible that he has somewhat hastily accepted some one else's conviction of the subject. At any rate there are several reasons for demanding further evidence. It is doubtful whether any object shown in a mirage was ever more than fifty or a hundred miles from the observer. and in many instances it has been much nearer. From Dr. Filippi's account of the experience of the Duke of Abbruzzi party it is evident that a line of hills only a few miles away afforded the basis of what they beheld. Mr. Bruce mentions the popular suspicion that Willoughby's picture was a "fake," and adds that he himself was under such obligations to the prospector that he could hardly confess the truth if he had any doubts of his own. Hence any fancied resemblance between that photograph and Bristol will not count for much. Dr. Filippi's book contains no representation of the "Silent City," although it is full of other photographs of Alaskan scenery. Perhaps the image was too unsteady for a camera to register it. If the Vancouver expedition brings back a well-attested picture that looks like Bristol, one will be justified in taking stock in the notion of identity. But until then it is wiser to suspend judgment or to discredit the idea altogether. Indeed, the phenomenon is enough of a marvel without any such assumption.-New York Tribune.

"THE HOLY CATHOLIC CHURCH."

To a greater extent than ever before the Methodists of the world are repeating the apostles' creed as a part of public worship, and therein they continually recite: I believe in the holy catholic church. In this they join with much the larger part of Christendom and declare their faith in the unity or oneness of the church throughout the world. It is not a little astonishing that now and then we meet with persons who are grieved at this exercise, as they cannot separate in their minds "the holy catholic church" from the Roman Catholic church. One of the purposes of the repetition of the creed in all the evangelical churches is to effect this separaration, and to lead all Christians to clearer ideas of the one church of Christ. It is a holy church, a catholic church, the one true and apostolical church which Christ bought with his own blood.

The Romanists have arrogated to themselves this title, and sought a monopoly of it, although without any just right to be called "holy" or "catholic." Theirs is not a catholic church, because it is not general or universal. The Greek church claims the title with as much right and consistency as does the Roman church, although neither is in fact catholic. The English church sets up the same claim, and with about equal right, but does not pretend to be the one universal There is no ecclesiastical church. establishment to which this venerable title should be applied. It does not belong to an organization. It has no relation to church polities. The holy catholic church is the spiritual body of Christ. It is composed of all the saved, of all who are vitally united to Christ and live in fellowship with him. Christ is the head of his body, the church, and every individual believer is a member of his body. Joined to him they are joined to the church. Being in him they are in the church.

With this proper view of the "holy catholic church," it is easy enough to see why the phrase should not be monopolized by any one denomination or sect, and why it is the privilege and right of all Christians, of whatever name or order, to join in the recital of these words as expressive of his faith in the one universal church, which includes all the saved of all the ages. In this view we also find a sense, and the only sense, in which there is truth in the allegation that there is no salvation outside of the "holy catholic church;" for the moment one is saved he is brought into this church and made a lively member of the same. The very process of salvation inducts him into it. "Ye are all baptized by one spirit into one body."

It is a common saying that there are good people in all the churches. It may also be said as truthfully that there are saved people in all the churches. There can be scarcely a doubt that this is a fact. Then it must follow, and it does follow, that there are people in all the churches who belong to the "holy catholic church." They came into it by regeneration. They were born into it when they were born from above. As they became subjects of the kingdom of God, they became members of the body of Christ, for the lines of the kingdom quadrate exactly with the lines of the universal church of Christ. This conception of the church is beautiful in its simplicity and also in its sublimity. One cannot grasp it without feeling himself exalted. It lifts him into the holy fellowship of the apostles and martyrs, and identifies him with the noblest spirits that ever walked the earth, besides opening to him a brighter and broader horizon than is possible with any other view.

We can apply the epithet "holy" to a church like this without any misgivings. All who are in it are consecrated. Millions have "washed their robes and made them white in the blood of the Lamb." Millions more are following after to apprehend Christ for all that for which he has apprehended them. They are striving together for the faith of the gospel. Christ dwells in their hearts by faith. They are a holy nation, a royal priesthood, a peculiar people.

In comparison with this "holy catholic church" our denominations and our denominational badges and peculiarities appear ensmalled, if not insignificant. They are like scaffolding to the building-they have their place and their use and their value and are not to be despised, yet they are not the building. Not one of them can say, without arrogance, "The temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord are we." It has been the folly of the Romish church to attempt this—a folly which continues with it. Indeed, it has become so interwoven with its life and spirit that there is little hope that a better condition will come to it. The pity is that there are imitators of this folly in in other denominations. Instinctively we find a feeling of commiseration springing up within us when in the presence of such people. Good and fallen behind the march of ideas!

We appreciate denominationalism. In the conflicts of thought and feeling inseparable from the independence which is the right and boast of Protestantism, there is scarcely a possibility that believers in Christ can be brought to see eye to eye on modes and methods of work; so that for all to find liberty and congenial fellowship, divisions on incidentals seem necessary and expedient. Possibly, after a higher development in the line of the essentials of the faith a fuller agreement may be reached, so as to reduce the number of divisions: but we are content to leave that to providence and the future. Cooperation of different bodies is as promising for efficiency in the Lord's work as would be the lethargic movements of one great body without the incitements of competition. When all the denominations recognize in all the others the relation they bear to Christ and think of Christians of any name as fellowdisciples, belonging with themselves to the "holy catholic church," hurtful rivalries will cease and the obnoxious spirit of sectarianism will die out. The continued reciting of the creed in the congregations will contribute to this end. The young people and the children will come to know its meaning and the habit of associating the "holy catholic church" with the Church of Rome will become a thing of the past. It is not wise to give up a good thing because other people have made a wrong use of it.-Northwestern Christian Advocate, May 22,

GUY, Okla., June 1.

Editors Herald:-After debate at Deighton. Oklahoma, with Seventh Day minister, ending in February, they held no more meetings there; over half their members have turned away. I baptized two there in North Canadian river, March 4. I returned there in April and preached near a week on the mission of Joseph Smith, the preachers, some of them, having turned all their efforts to defaming him. On April 28 I baptized three more; Mr. Hamilton, the artist, a Methodist; and Mr. Clark Smith and wife, Seventh Day Adventists.

May 4 returned there and found Millennial Dawn preacher ready to oppose; a few families of them there, very nice people, who are using great efforts to capture those turned from the Seventh Day friends. Held six sessions of debate with him, I affirming that Latter Day Saints teach Bible restitution, three sessions; he the same for the Dawn brethren. I think good will result. Their great cry is, "Come out of Babylon, O my people." I ask, how any become God's people in Babylon, if all the churches are Babypious they may be, but how they have lon, as they claim no church for them to come into? No authorized ministry, as required in the Bible, to officiate in adopting them into his family or church; denying the necessity of baptism, laying on of hands, etc., for that purpose.

Many kind invitations to visit and talk to the people. I am greatly assisted by my wife, who goes with me. Was to return there the 19th, but high waters prevented until the 25th, when we found many inter-

Bro. Montague, district president, is here now, and preparations are being made to pitch the gospel tent near Deighton next week. I am hopeful that a small branch can be raised up there. Bro. Grant Moore and wife, who moved from Missouri to that neighborhood, are doing much good there. Some were talking of having an infidel endeavor to overthrow us, but they have changed their policy and are advocating to stay away from us.

A Baptist preacher near there tells Bro. Wright (lately baptized) that he is anxious to meet us anywhere and oppose the laying on of hands and spiritual gifts. I wrote some propositions to be taken to him this week. Investigation brings out the people who would not hear otherwise, hence I think does good.

Mrs. Hughes, the Christian preacher's wife whom I baptized Christmas, came to Guy and was baptized the 19th, her husband being ordained a priest the same day.

A Methodist minister, Dr. DeFord, who attended the debate between Rev. Savage and Bro. T. W. Williams, at Council Bluffs or Omaha, years ago, lives twenty miles southeast and invites me constantly to come and stay with him and occupy his pulpit. Says he is almost persuaded. Others are very favorable in that vicinity, and I want to go there today, if I can stand the ride. I am crippled in my leg that I have suffered so much with in my life, so that it is terrible misery for me to walk with a crutch, but I hope to get better soon, as there are calls here on every side for preaching.

Yours in the faith,

WESTON, Iowa, June 10.

Editors Herald:-We are striving to hold aloft the gospel banner. Since coming into this district (Pottawattamie) we have striven to occupy as often as opportunity would permit. The conference that convened with the Boomer branch was in every way a success. The business was transacted with dispatch, and the preaching attended by the Spirit. I find that everywhere I go our submissionary in charge, Bro. D. R. Chambers, is well spoken of, and as this is his third year in this district he ought to be known. This is as it should be. I am in hopes to conduct myself that at the close of the mission year I may merit the esteem of those I am associated with in this district.

The branches I have visited seem to be striving to come up to a higher moral standard, and all along the line there seems to be an inspiration manifesting itself, born of increased confidence because of the great spiritual step taken by the church at and since the last General Conference. It seems by reading the HERALD that the great spiritual vibration is being felt over all this broad land of ours, and extending to the islands of the sea. Now all that is needed to continue this agitation is an individual spiritual development. The inspired Paul has said that the gospel was calculated to liberate and not enslave, and the Christ has revealed to us that it makes us free. So, then, all those things that we were in the habit of practicing before entering into compact with our Father in heaven to serve him we ought to eliminate, and strive to set good examples before those around us. Jesus has said to "search the scriptures." Are we doing it? He has said also to search the commandments, and when we find anything in the word that would make us more like God we ought to apply it in our everyday lives, for it is written that it is the doer and not the hearer that is justified.

I, like a great many boys, became addicted to the use of tobacco. This was in open violation to the commandments of God, and I persisted in it and said by the act that I did not love him, because he has said, "If you love me, keep my commandments." But while reflecting on my rebellious condition I resolved to cease its practice; and I did, and have never ceased thanking God that I overcame the appetite. One reason why I began thinking seriously was that when I partook of the Lord's supper I sometimes had more or less of the tobacco in my mouth, and when drinking the wine or eating the bread I swallowed them both. I thought it decidedly wrong, when the Lord had told me in the revelation that "tobacco is not good for man," and also to avoid the use of tobacco and be not addicted to strong drink. My reason for writing this is because I have come in contact with this evil, and know there are hundreds in the church using the weed, who know it is wrong and would like to quit but it seems impossible. I sympathize with them and I write in the spirit of love and with a desire to give them encouragement. because what one can overcome another can. I know there are many evils that are in advance of this one, but "each victory will help us some other to win;" and it is the little foxes that spoil the vines.

LAMONI, Iowa, June 9.

Editors Herald:—Realizing that my condition might be much worse than it is, I strive to be truly grateful for the precious privilege of doing even a little for the Master's cause.

I left home on the 17th ultimo and returned on the 3d instant. While gone, preached seven times at Lucas; two times near Norwood, ten miles into the country from Lucas; three times at Cleveland, which includes one effort made at the conference. No one, perhaps, is as well prepared to appreciate the light, liberty, and confirmation of the Spirit, enjoyed while declaring the word, as myself. When I think of it, a deep sense of gratitude wells up in my soul. The Saints were kind, and at the places where I made my home, were thoughtful about my physical condition. It is sad, however, to find so many on back grounds. May our gracious Father enable them to read "the signs of the times:" give them a clear insight into the necessity of activity in the Master's cause, and furnish them with strength to move forward.

Bro. David A. Anderson, sojourned at Lucas and Cleveland on his way east. He preceded me one day; but, as I understood him, had sent no appointments. However, we agreed that it would be best for one of us to occupy at Lucas, the other at Cleveland; so Bro. Anderson held a short series of meetings at the latter place, and the people speak well of his efforts. We were together every few days, and in connection with Bro. D. E. Daniels conducted the grove meetings in the country. Our associations were pleasant, and I trust profitable to both of us. I recognize with pleasure that Bro. David is making an effort to do right, and become useful in the Master's cause.

Our conference—first conference of Lamoni Stake—passed off pleasantly, with, perhaps, but little exception. The Saints felt well, and seemed to be anxious that the right should prevail, which is, of course, an excellent indication. Still, it must be admitted that a leading prerequisite to progress, is the ability to see that there is room for and need of improvement. Bro. John Smith, assisted by his first counselor, Bro. J. A. Gunsolley, presided with dignity and earnestness, manifesting more of the vigor which belongs to youth than the slowness which usually accompanies one of his age.

Yours in the faith,

J. R. LAMBERT.

HOOD RIVER, Ore., June 5.

Editors Herald:—I am at last in my field of labor and trying to "Speed the plow."

I left Lamoni the 14th of May, and after a visit of four days with my mother and other members of the family at Little Sioux, also meeting with the Saints and friends at Porter Hollow schoolhouse, Johnson schoolhouse, and at the Saints' church at Mondamin, and preaching at each place besides participating in the Sunday school at the former place. All of these meetings occurred on the 19th of May, keeping me quite busy for one day, with the twenty mile drive necessary to make these points. My mother, who is in her seventy-ninth year, accompanied me on this day's work, and the next morning bade me good-bye at the depot in Mondamin, and I was soon on my journey "westward ho."

I bought my ticket for Portland, via Sacramento, so that I might meet Bro. Crumley as I came up through western Oregon. From Sacramento the Southern Pacific very obligingly gave me a free ride to San Francisco and back so that I was privileged to meet with some of the California Saints once more and spoke to the Saints of San Francisco Sunday evening the 26th of May. In the city I was pleased and surprised to meet with Bro. Crumley who was there waiting for his boat to sail. It had advertised to sail the 24th, then advertised for the 25th, and again changed to Sunday the 26th; and when I bade him good-bye he was expecting to get away Monday the 27th. If the boat has sailed I suppose he is now in Coos county, Oregon.

Well, we had a conference and agreed upon the Cascade mountains as our boundary. My field address will be Hood River, Oregon. I had written ahead to the Saints at Looking Glass that I would give them a call as I went through, as I expected to meet Bro. Crumley near there. Meeting him in San Francisco, I only stopped off one night at Looking Glass, and that night I had the pleasure of preaching to a goodly number of Saints and friends in the house where four years ago I preached my first sermon in Oregon.

Reaching Portland the evening of the 29th, I went up to Castle Rock, Washington, the 31st, and visited with the Saints there, preaching four times and participating in the Sunday school and sacrament meeting. Monday the 3d I reached my field of labor.

I forgot to state that one reason for visiting Castle Rock was that our gospel tent was there, and I wished to get it out. I shipped it for this point from there, and expect to commence operations with it here Friday evening next. Bro. W. A. Goodwin writes me that he will join me about the 20th. Cur tent is very old and worn, and probably will give out on us the first brisk wind that gets a strike at it. Here we put it in a grove where it will be sheltered. If the Saints of this district can remember us in a way that will help us with tent expenses we will gladly give them full credit for any such remembrances as they may send to us. The field is very wide, and we are few in numbers; but we will do our best to meet the demands of the work. Don't forget that our field address is Hood River, Oregon. We shall be glad to near from the Saints.

Yours for the work's sake,
A. M. CHASE.

SEILING, O. T., June 5.

Editors Herald:-We are still alive to the interest of the work here. Bro. George Montague, our district president, is with us, and treated us to an excellent discourse on Sunday, the 2d inst., and also gave us much pleasure by aiding in effecting an organization of a branch to be known as the Seiling branch, with our esteemed Bro. Peter Moldrup as president, with twenty-five members under his watchcare. We are expecting to build a small church in the near future; have most of the money subscribed now, and arrangements made to borrow the remainder to buy the material. The man who located the town site has offered to give us a lot whenever we are ready to build. We have written him about it, and now are awaiting his answer.

The cause of Christ is gaining slowly but we think surely. The honest in heart are coming in one by one as the light comes to them. Bro. D. S. Crawley baptized three recently, and more are near the door. We regret to write that Bro. Crawley is quite poorly at this writing. How earnestly we pray that God may spare his life to labor in the gospel work, as he seems to be the most successful of any in this mission. Would that all were as earnest and desirous of the prosperity of the cause as he! We dislike to see poor Saints labor and sacrifice to support those who will not support themselves and are getting aid from the church while their efforts are of little or no benefit to the gospel cause. May God hasten the time when the Spirit (through the right channel) may designate who are the worthy ones, that the work may not be hindered, but that the glad news may spread until all the honest may hear and obey the gospel, is the prayer of,

H. F. DURFEY.

JONESPORT. Me., June 8.

Editors Herald.—I am in my field and at work. I left Carson, Iowa, May 9, and after making stops at Kirtland, Boston, and Fall River, reached here May 29.

The Eastern Maine district conference convened in Jonesport on Saturday, June 1, and continued over Sunday. J. N. Ames, U. M. Kelley, S. O. Foss, H. J. Davison, and myself, of the missionary force, were present; but Bro. Davison left on the following Tuesday for Nova Scotia, his field of labor for the coming year. All seemed to be in the faith, alive to the interests of the work, and a good time was had during the conference. The ministry are now in the field and at work, and we are hoping for good results from the year's labor. Let us remember, brethren, that "faith, hope, charity, and love, with an eye single to the glory of God" (D. C. 4:1), qualifies a man for this work; and let us try to cultivate those principles in ourselves, and stimulate others to do the same. We are living far beneath our privileges, and by so doing are cheating ourselves out of many precious blessings. It is no use to deceive ourselves or shut our eyes to the real situation; there is but one thing to do, and that is to obey God's commandments. This we must do if we would receive his blessings.

And to the Saints in the state of Maine let me say: Study the books, and live much of your time in prayer. We must get closer to God, and live more in touch with him. If you are not taking the church papers, please do so; they are edifying, instructive, and a great help to the Lord's people. Remember your tithes and freewill offerings, and neglect no means of grace, growth, and development, which our heavenly Father has ordained and commanded. We cannot live by bread alone now any better than they could in the days of the Savior or the days of Moses. We must live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of the Lord.

As submissionary in charge, I ask a special interest in your prayers, that God may give me wisdom for the work. Shall be glad to receive counsel and advice from the ministry and others, as to the needs of the work and the best way of supplying the same. Remember we are all of one family, brethren and sisters of the household of faith, and that our interests are one. Jealously, envy, strife, evil surmising, and evil speaking should not be indulged in nor tolerated. "Charity thinketh no evil." The man who speaks evil of his brethren, whatever may be his motives.

is lacking in charity, as a rule. He may have other noble qualities, but he is sadly deficient in the chiefest of the Christian graces. Let us look to ourselves, brethren and sisters, and we shall find failings and shortcomings at home sufficient to keep us engaged, without meddling with the failings of others, only as the Lord has commanded. You may help the Devil destroy the influence of a brother or sister; but you are weakening your own influence at the same time. The very fact that you are doing the Devil's work-he was the accuser of the brethrenis evidence that you are on his side. So just leave that to him; he will look after his own work, and he will have plenty of help without the Saints lending their aid in that work. There is plenty to do that is pure and ennobling, uplifting, and there is no excuse for our trying to pull each other down. May the Lord help us! My address for the present is Jonesport, Washington county. Maine. In gospel bonds,

ISAAC M. SMITH.

PERHAM, Minn., June 9.

Editors Herald:—Since leaving Lamoni I have preached at Audubon, Friberg, Clitherall, Silver Lake, Amor, Ever Green, and Girard. Good interest manifested and some baptisms. All are feeling well and hopeful. Many outsiders are interested, and I look for a good harvest of souls for the missionaries of Minnesota this conference year.

Bro. F. D. Omans has taken the lead in building the new church in Amor. Bro. Huntington is helping him. They are so earnest about the building they even worked near a half day bareheaded. Two more days and it is ready to preach in. Bro. Omans has announced that he will preach the first sermon in the church on Sunday, June 16.

I came here today, and tomorrow take train for Bemidji, where some work is to be done before our reunion. Will the brethren of Southeastern mission please send their reports to me at Lamoni, Iowa, by July 1. I will leave for Lamoni perhaps before the reunion is over, and then on to my field in the south. I hope to have the assistance of all the Saints that we may push the work ahead with all our might. Onward to victory is the cry!

I. N. ROBERTS.

WESTON, Iowa, June 8.

Editors Herald:—Our convention and conference has just closed and we truly had a time of rejoicing. The general superintendent met with us, and we were much pleased to meet him, and trust we may all profit by his many good instructions concerning Sunday school work, in which I believe we should all be interested, and willing to do all we can to advance it.

The conference was all we could desire. We met Sunday morning for prayer meeting, and the melting influence of God's Holy Spirit was present in much power, and our hearts were made glad to know that God still recognizes us as his children.

thinketh no evil." The man who speaks evil Quite a number of the ministry were presof his brethren, whatever may be his motives, ent, and they were truly blessed with light and power from on high in presenting this glorious gospel to about three hundred people, many outsiders being present. One was baptized, and we feel much good was done. Bro. D. R. Chambers, our worthy missionary here, truly has the love and confidence of the Saints in this vicinity. All were glad to have him return to our district, where he has done a noble work.

Bro. R. Wight, our new missionary, met with us. I have not heard him preach yet but believe his heart is in the work. May God abundantly bless these brethren as well as all others who are laboring to build up the work, that a great good may be done and many honest hearts gathered into God's kingdom.

Dear Saints, let us do our part by living a godly life, and let each one try to do his duty. I believe we should uphold the servants of God by our faith and prayers. We should try to make things as pleasant for them as possible, as they are sacrificing for the gospel. We should pay our tithing. We should observe the Word of Wisdom. We should have more charity and love in our hearts for one another, always willing to forgive as we expect God to forgive us. Why not do as God wants us to, that we may enjoy the gifts and blessings of the gospel in this life and receive the gift of eternal life in that which is to come!

I feel much encouraged in the work, and greatly desire to do all I can to advance the same. May the blessings of God be with all his people. Your sister,

CHRISTINA RASMUSSEN.

BEAVER, Texas, June 4.

Editors Herald:-I came to north Texas from the April conference with A. J. Moore. The main reason for coming to this point, two of my sons with their families had located four miles from Vernon, twenty miles west of this point. There is quite a branch organization there. Bro. Wilcox in charge. There I have done the most of my work; not so much preaching as visiting the people both in and out of the church. Last Sunday Bro. Sheppard baptized five children at Oklaunion. That was Children's Day with the branch. and Bro. Sheppard preached at 10:30, and three hours were spent in Sunday school exercises in charge of E. P. Hawley, superintendent. About one hundred fifty were in attendance. A very pleasant time was had, all feeling well.

A week ago last Friday I took a trip twenty-three miles south of Vernon to the home of two brethren by the name of Hawley. I had a very pleasant visit, and preached Saturday night and Sunday. As near as we were able to trace our genealogy, we are second cousins. They, as well as all southern people, were very hospitable, and they invited me to return, and I intend to do so after harvest, as the people in the country would not turn out nights to hear preaching while harvesting, and all in this part of the state have just commenced that business. This northern Texas is a fine farming country.

I am feeling well in my mission. If my wife were willing to live in Texas, I would spend my days here. I think the mission work of the elders is to build up branches of the church in all the land, and so may it be. My address is Vernon, Texas.

JOHN HAWLEY.

CHEROKEE, Iowa, June 6.

Editors Herald:—As a missionary I have been laboring some as circumstances would permit. I have moved my family in Dow City and like the place very much. I find good Saints who are alive in the work.

I have been permitted to speak twice since I have been here. I visited Deloit May 19 and spoke twice with fairly good liberty. I find some good, earnest Saints there, and enjoyed my short stay.

May 26 I was at Denison and spoke once in Bro. Montgomery's house. About a dozen Saints were present; and though few yet we were blessed.

Our district conference closed last Sunday night. It was a profitable one to me, for I felt the presence of the Holy Spirit. Four were baptized.

I feel my weakness in this latter-day work; but realizing that God is all powerful I hope and pray that he will help me in my new work, for I desire to do his will and keep his commandments.

I was called upon to perform my first marriage ceremony day before yesterday.

I expect to commence tent work the middle of next week at Washta, assisted by J. M. Baker and C. J. Hunt, or rather I expect to assist them.

My address is Dow City, Iowa.
Your brother in Christ,
N. V. SHELDON.

LINN, Kan., June 7.

Editors Herald:—Owing to sickness in my family I did not reach my field as soon as I desired. Arrived at Barnes May 25, where I found Bro. Gurwell holding forth in the Christian church to interested congregations. Quite a stir was created among a few of the self-constituted religious leaders, and we expect an attack. Well, we are here to present and defend the gospel, and they will find the truth will withstand all their puny efforts.

Came to Linn, commencing operations in schoolhouse on the evening of May 31. Held three services, when the Advents kindly opened their church for our use. Audiences are not so large as at Barnes, owing principally, we think, to religious inertia. Then there are so many other attractions—lodges, lectures, shows, ice cream socials, buggy and bicycle riding in the evening just at meeting time, it is a difficult thing to get a large crowd out to preaching services. However, we cheerfully perform our part, preaching the gospel to those who come to hear, praying that our labors may not be in vain, that the seed sown may bring forth fruit in the future.

Have been blessed in my efforts to present the truth to the people. I know it is the power of God and the liberty of the Spirit that enables me to stand and preach the gospel. "Of myself I can do nothing."

Our people here are a credit to the work, and do much to help advance the cause. Many are observing the "Word of Wisdom" so far as they are able to do so under present conditions, and are blessed accordingly. The Saints lend their aid in every way to make the meetings a success. Some come a distance the Saints at home do not think of traversing in order to be present at meetings. All this is commendable and encouraging to the missionaries. The wants of the missionary are also remembered. The Lord reward them.

I am well pleased with my mission. My work would be pleasant, indeed, were it not for the oft recurring thoughts of home.

My address is Greenleaf, Washington county, Kansas, care Box 261.

In the conflict,

JOSEPH C. VAUGHN.

ST. CHARLES, Iowa, June 12.

Editors Herald:-When leaving Lamoni in the latter part of May for my field of labor, to again try the realities of missionary life, I started for Boonesboro to attend the district conference, in order to consult with the district officers, so as to labor where it would be most advantageous. The conference was a pleasant as well as interesting one. All seemed to take an active part in the meetings; and while the business meetings were not as largely attended as might be desired, those present manifested activity and wisdom in the decisions reached. Bro. H. A. McCoy presided over the conference, as well as the Sunday school convention, and manifested to the Saints his qualifications as a good presiding officer. He was also chosen for the ensuing year as president of the Des Moines district, with Bro. M. H. Cook, of Des Moines, as his associate.

While at Boonesboro I made the acquaintance of many noble-hearted Saints, both from that place and from other places in the district, whose hearts are in the work and who desire the gospel preached in their respective localities.

It was thought best for me to accompany Bro. C. J. Peters to his home when leaving the conference, and labor in his locality for awhile. Accordingly we set about and secured aschoolhouse and commenced preaching the second night after leaving the conference. Have just closed one week's meeting. Left several interested and anxious to hear more, but thought wisest, owing to the busy times in the country not to tax their capacity more at present. Promised to come back again. It was an entirely new place, and it was new to nearly all of them.

Last night we commenced at another schoolhouse, where some little preaching was done last year. Had a good congregation for the first night.

Bro.Peters will labor under district appointment, and is a zealous worker having just moved into this locality this spring. He is anxious to have his neighbors know his religious proclivities, and is going to give nearly all of his time to the work. Such efforts are commendable in all local officers, and evince a desire to magnify the office and calling to which they have been called, thus honoring him who is the author and finisher of our faith.

The scattered Saints in the Des Moines district who may know of opportunities for openings in their respective localities will confer a favor on me by writing to me and so informing me, and I shall try and comply with requests as far as possible.

Our object is to branch out to those who are not acquainted with the sound of the gospel, that all may have an opportunity to hear it, and thus fulfill the injunction of our divine Master and that the gospel may be preached as a "witness." This I understand is principally the object, or should be, of general church missionaries; and having a desire to do my duty as I understand it, I make this request of the isolated Saints, who may desire to be colaborers with us in the accomplishment of this great latter-day work. My home address is Lamoni, Iowa. May God's peace attend us all!

Your colaborer,

S. K. SORENSEN.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., June 12.

Editors Herald: — Matters relating to church interests are moving along with an upward tendency in this district, encouraging signs of activity being noticeable among the young people especially, Religio and Sunday school work and workers contributing their helpful influence in this direction. The good work, and heavenly recognition had at the Sunday school district convention held at Fall River, May 11 and 12, was certainly encouraging and full of hope for workers.

Brn. Bullard and Rich are having interesting meetings and awakening interest in several new openings and places near Silver Lake—the place of last year's reunion and so appointed for this.

We are hoping and expecting the Bishop with Bro. G. T. Griffiths will be with us at our N. E. reunion convening last Saturday in July, and it is not unlikely that we shall have our singer, Bro. F. G. Pitt, with us again this year.

Last Sunday we occupied the pulpit at morning service here in Providence. In the afternoon, "Children's Day" exercises were held. The church was made bright by the presence of a fine display of plants and flowers. The exercises, conducted by Superintendents Charles Whipple and Ed Fox, showed what they have been trying to do, by way of care for the interests of the young, and how they succeeded in a gratifying measure, though surrounded by discouraging elements.

Dr. John Gilbert came in with us and occupied the pulpit in the evening, giving us a good gospel talk, relating to gospel restoration.

Had charge yesterday of exercises at funeral of our aged Sr. Ann Platt, of Thornton. Rhode Island.

Expect to be in Plainville and Attleboro next Sunday; probably Boston the Sunday following, and hope to see the Brockton people between times.

Am feeling well over results of late conference at Independence. The Lord is evidently willing to lead as fast as we are willing or able to follow. There was only little of the time that I did not feel easy and restful in spirit at least, notwithstanding fears expressed by some in early sessions of the convention. The first meeting of the priesthood in basement of church with fasting and for prayer was an occasion for me which I shall not soon forget, an experience which had relation to the prayer given through or by Bro. Metuaore, our missionary representative from far off Tahiti, and especially that portion of it which in the interpretation given by Bro. Burton referred to the blessing of Pres. Joseph Smith; and while I did not then interpret it as relating to any communication which the church might receive through him, yet I knew and my soul was at ease concerning the outcome of things relating not only to their effect on the conference assembled, but extending, like the waves of the sea as they wait objects borne upon their bosom away and from even out of our sight to discern, from our present standpoint of view, in its effect upon our church history and work.

"There is a great work to be done by mine elders," the Lord said in 1887, and the greatness as well as its character may have begun to dawn in a more complete sense upon some of us while at or since the late General Conference. Will the "elders" be able to move wisely and successfully forward in the great work of redemption of the "pure in heart?"

I was pleased to read in HERALD of recent date of Bro. Pender's success in getting at some of the people in Salt Lake City. If the eve-opening process and work of exchange of views regarding the wide breach that has been made in the past between people mutually professing to be true Latter Day Saints in faith, eoctrine, practice, etc., has been fairly inaugurated after an honorable and Christian-like fashion in the city of Salt Lake or anywhere where their church representatives have made a stand. Bro. Pender and all others like him are to be congratulated on the beginnings of a revival of past history, and that the day may be hastened in God's good providence, when both people may at once conscientiously and intelligently worship at one shrine, the shrine of God's pure and unchanging truth.

I was glad to read of the mention in this convention of Apostle Cowley, as I had the pleasure (and it was a pleasure) of listening to this young man, here in the city of Providence in his delivery after an excellent spirit and fashion an able defense of the work inaugurated by the "choice Seer," and saving a reference to B. Young and a word in regard to Utah history, the sermon was such a one from a Biblical standpoint as would not be heard in any of the great fashionable churches in this city probably in a man's lifetime.

But, as with us at times, few were there to hear. Three strangers and an audience of six or seven, in a fine hall. The meeting had been well advertised; though the night was stormy. To tell the plain truth, also, I have reason to honestly believe that Bro. Cowley had been already handicapped by work in this city of a character, by predecessors of his duct the funeral exercises of Bro. and Sr.

church affiliation that would not stand close investigation. But our heart warmed toward him in his good defense of the faith so dear to us; and oh! how we regretted and do still and always regret the "Mystery of iniquity" that has made the breach between honest men and women.

In the faith,

M. H. BOND.

LAWTON, N. Dak., June 12.

Editors Herald:-I pen a few lines from these remote parts in fullfillment of what I deem a missionary's duty, trusting it may be helpful to some, realizing how greatly I am benefited by perusing the columns of the HERALD

The two Dakotas comprise a vast field for missionary openings, being over five hundred miles from the southern line bordering northwestern Iowa and Nebraska to the Canadian province of Manitoba, and four hundred from Western Minnesota to the Montana line, containing approximately two hundred and fifty Latter Day Saints, about two hundred of whom are enrolled in four widely scattered branches. The initial work was largely done by Brn. I. N. Roberts and Swen Swenson. We are sometimes warned by some conservative brother through the church papers about undue praise, etc., so I simply say I am glad I ever met them, and I know there are scores who will join me in a fervent "God bless them wherever in the providence of God their lot may be cast!"

At present three of us, assisted by a faithful local priesthood, are endeavoring to teach the half million souls who comprise the population, the principles of the doctrine of Christ. I sometimes wonder how long at the present rate it will be before we get over the "Cities of Israel." One thing is sure, we never quarrel about territory and I would to God five hundred faithful brethren, their hearts filled with the Spirit that actuated the sons of Mosiah, were here to assist!

Hurrying through the spring work fast as possible. I started out the middle of May to Cass county. Found Brn. Derchie, a priest, and Day, a teacher, representing the church wisely and diligently. I felt it safe to leave the work in their hands, especially as it was yet a little too early for week night meetings. However, I spoke a few evenings to small congregations, then struck north to the home of Bro. Crowl in Cavalier county. Held meetings a week; baptized one, a widowed mother, with an industrious family. I hope to see the family brought into the church in due time. Visited Sr. Chidester's neighborhood. A new schoolhouse just finished was speedily swept and cleaned. I visited from house to house on foot inviting, explaning our faith, delivering tracts, etc.

When I say houses I mean sod "shacks" mostly, where they burn straw and hay for fuel. This is on the extreme frontier, thirty miles from a railroad; recently rescued from Uncle Sam's public domain.

Had just got a nice interest started when I was suddenly summoned to Ramsey county, but unfortunately was too late to even conLangton's oldest boy. My heart was stricken at the sight of grief that can only be realized by those who have experienced a similar ordeal. A second child was dangerously ill, at present somewhat better; tonsilitis and pneumonia, the double cause.

Am trying much as possible to follow counsel, viz., open new places. Scattered Saints who are living faithful, godly lives, will be gladly heard from. Will respond to as many as we can. Love to all in Christ Jesus.

WILLIAM SPARLING.

YOUNGSVILLE, Pa., June 9.

Dear Herald:-Although you are not a visitor at our house at present, I will pen a few lines to your most valuable pages to thank those brethren and sisters who sent us HER-ALDS and Ensigns and some other literature, and we hope that we can make them understand just how thankful we were, and how we did enjoy reading them. What was better still, after we had read them a man came and asked if we had any of those papers we gave him to read a long time ago. I said ves. and let him have them. Hope that they will give him the light he seems to want.

We, wife and I, are all the Saints in this place, and there are none nearer than twenty miles that we know of; and they, like ourselves, are alone. We have not heard a Latter Day Saint sermon for nearly three years; nor have we seen an elder, and we are becoming hungry for spiritual food. Yet I am glad my faith in the latter-day work is not one particle less, but stronger. If we are isolated I honestly think we are gaining ground each day, and it is our desire to go till we are as nearly perfect as is possible for mortal man to be; and we ask it not for ourselves alone but for all.

I should like to have some one of the Saints in Sharon, Pennsylvania, send me the names and addresses of some half dozen of the brethren there, so I can write and ask about the place, as I expect to be there some time in the near future. God's blessing rests upon us and may we as individuals and as a body ever live worthy of the blessings we receive. May we also labor and so live that we shall attain the highest glory.

Your brother in the one faith, GEO. H. PARKER.

Editor Saint's Herald:-I am just out of jail. Was "in" for twenty days, and am released pending no new developments. Shall endeavor to keep above suspicion hereafter.

During my incarceration Brn. Burton, Harris, Dana, and Earl have occupied the local pulpit. Brn. Dana and Crumley have been doing good work visiting among the Saints and praying with them in their homes. We hope to fulfill the law in this respect and visit every member of the church at least once in every three months.

Bro. Burton accompanied Metuaore to San Francisco to see him "off" for his island home. Sr. Burton remained here. He will return here and meet Brn. Alexander and Gould, remain for our reunion, and then go north for the reunion there. We are pleased to have these brethren remain with us. We hope to make the reunion a complete success. With the ministry announced how can we help but succeed? We have secured Sycamore Grove and the presence of Bro. Joseph and Alexander will double the attendance.

Bro. Carmichael will enter upon his duties as California missionary about July 1. He will make a formidable accession to the ranks.

The farmers will fare much better than was anticipated two months ago. The late rains and heavy fogs have been very beneficial to beets and all grains.

Would merely say that I was jailed in my own house together with my family. Cause? Smallpox exposure. Thanks to a kind Providence none of us contracted the disease Sr. D. S. Mills, of Garden Grove, also Bro. George Garner and family of this place were under quarantine. We are having lovely weather. It has been so cool that we only took our heating stove down the other day. I suppose that you are commencing to swelter back east. Fraternally yours,

T. W. WILLIAMS.

Editors Herald:—Our district conference passed off nicely at Pleasant View, Kansas. The Saints there have built them a real nice church, finely seated; but all could not get seats during the conference, notwithstanding the church is 28x45 feet. The Spring River district is coming to the front and bids to become one of the foremost districts of the entire church.

These lines leave me at home caring for wife a few days while sick. I came home and found my wife very sick; but our loving Father is not passing her by. She is much better and in a few days I will be out in the field.

Bro. F. C. Keck is now in the field with us feeling fine and joyful. It is very pleasant indeed to labor with such noble men of the Lord. No bossism or self-aggrandizement about him. No man possessed of these sins is fit to preside over missionaries. Until we learn to control ourselves we had better not undertake to control others.

My debate with A. Carlin (Baptist) at Central City is fixed and will begin June 26, at Central, which is on street car line, half way between Joplin, Missouri, and Galena, Kansas. The last word received from A. Carlin was that he would meet me there Wednesday night before fifth Sunday in June, 8 p.m., which will be June 26.

After the debate Bro. F. C. Keck and I will begin tent meetings in Joplin on Main street, to run all July if necessary. I have many calls from different places over the district to come and preach and will gladly do so when I can; but if I can't serve you readily or soon, do not think it my fault. I want to do all I can, and will keep busy if the Master permits.

This is a ripe field and laborers are few. Let us all work and pray until the Savier comes. In bonds,

J. D. ERWIN.

JESMOND, Newcastle on Tyne, England, June 2.

Dear Herald:—You have been a visitor to our home now for over sixteen years, and have come laden with much food for thought. Although not a member of your church (am sorry to say I have been disfellowshipped because of my sins and folly) I still know the work is of God, and trust it will not be long till I shall be in full fellowship once more, as I am satisfied I have not committed the unpardonable sin, and desire to be able to unite my voice in the songs of Zion that I love.

If there are any of the Saints living in or near the above address we should like them to call on us, or elders, as they will find a home as in days past. The elders who have been out in the colonies know my house was always open for all of them, and for many years, and for this I still feel thankful.

I have truly repented and have written the branch to which I belonged and am waiting results. In reading the HERALD for spiritual food, I noticed the article of H. E. Moler, headed, "Destruction of the Wicked: When Shall it be," in which he tries to point out that all the wicked will be destroyed at the coming of the Son of man. I would be thankful for the brother to reconcile that with Revelation 20: 1-9, and other passages of Holy Writ. I am seeking light, and am perfectly satisfied the greatest light and most truth is to be found with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. If any of the elders in England see this, give us a call if possible. I wish to remain,

Your well wisher,

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"Whenever you make the sunlight
On a darkened face to break,
Whenever a self-denial
For another's sake you make,
Whenever for souls of the wandering
In Jesus' name you pray,
You are being a ministering spirit
And making things go God's way."

FAMILY DISCIPLINE IN THE OLD PAR-SONAGE.

"How did your mother, such a frail, delicate-looking little woman, ever bring up a family of eleven children and live to be over eighty years old?" asked a tired mother one day. "What was the secret of her discipline?"

"If discipline means punishment, I am afraid we had very little discipline," I replied. There were almost no punishments as such in that big household. My father used to say: "Never threaten a child." The only time that he ever whipped one of us was in fulfillment of a threat, and he always regretted that, as circumstances so modified the affair that it would not have been necessary but for the threat. Mother never whipped one of us. Her hardest punishments that I remember were separating us from each other for a given time; sending one to the garret and another to her own room, even with her book or work, was usually severe enough.

But there was a safeguard in the surroundings of ministers' families in those olden times that does not enter into the daily life of minister's children now. A farm of thirty acres was connected with the parsonage-a large house-and above all there was a great garret. An attic of a modern house could claim no relationship to the immense garrets of early days. There were four targe windows and it was warmed sufficiently, even in winter, by its huge chimney. That garret was in itself an education. It was a gymnasium, a work shop, a manufactory, a royal playground. Would that every parsonage had its like today! The brothers had their tools in one corner and each made a trunk for himself, almost unaided. In these boxes neatly covered with leather and lettered with brass nails, they proudly carried their worldly provisions of clothing and books when they went away to school.

Almost everything on the farm belonged to some one of us and when it was sold sometimes the owner had the money to lay away toward an education. Every member of the family had an interest in James' lambs, David and Sally, and their numerous progeny. John's steers were the delight of us all and especially when they were yoked to a small sled of the boys' manufacture and drew us girls to "the store" for the family supplies. Sometimes a neighbor gave one of us a pet lamb or a motherless calf to bring up.

We were never at a loss for wholesome, hilarious recreation. If stormy days came and the boys grew too boisterous, a sweet, quiet voice would be heard at the stairs: "Papa, is there anything you would like to have these boys do?" Then father would come down from the study and take in the situation at a glance. He was always very tactful.

"James; if it should be a good day tomorrow we shall want to have some corn taken to mill and perhaps you can wait and bring it back. Can you and John and Percy get enough shelled today for a good grist? You may each lay out a pile by your sheller and I will come up by and by and see how you get along."

"Can I go to the mill with James? Can I go, too?" And soon the hand shellers in the garret were making happy music instead of noisy rainy-day commotion.

For the six girls, besides the allotted household work, there was always the patchwork for our own quilts and the knitting stint and the walks and the drives and the reading aloud that filled our vacation times full. If Satan only found mischief for idle hands to do, he must have looked elsewhere for his helpers.

If things went wrong and clouds arose, "Sing, girls, sing!" mother would say, and her own sweet voice would begin some favorite song till all would join spontaneously.

If the little ones disagreed and one struck another, mother had a novel expedient which did not need frequent repetition. There was a large, red chest in a lower bedroom intended to hold the family bedding. It had become so convenient a receptacle for a variety of articles that father used to call it the "Omnium gatherum et mix up em." Mother would take the offender there and say, "You could not know how it hurt," and the hand would be made to strike the hard surface. "It does not hurt the chest," she would say, "and you can always strike here when you want to strike."

The only other bugbear that I ever knew in the house was a long closet under the stairs where side-saddles were kept. I have heard some of the older members of the family speak of short imprisonments there, but it was never my misfortune to try it. Sabbath a stranger minister exchanged with father. Little Percy happened to have strayed into the room where Mr. Wlocking over his sermon. Evidently little Percy tried to entertain him with some baby gambols not in keeping with the minister's mood. He took him upon his knee and after very solemn admonitions asked him if he knew what became of naughty children who played on God's holy Sabbath day. "Yeth thir, if they are vely, vely naughty they are shut up in the saddle closet." Our parents never believed in dark closets or in putting children to bed without their supper.

The farm in itself was not a paying investment. I have heard my father say it was a bill of expense till his own sons were old enough to act in turn as foreman; but as an educator for his boys and a never-failing employment that was varied and interesting it paid well, and we certainly are the richer for sweet and wholesome memories of busy childhood days.—Sarah F. Abbott, in the Congregationalist.

WHEN GRANDMA SHUTS HER EYES.

Within the chimney corner snug
Dear grandma gently rocks,
And knits her daughter's baby boy
A tiny pair of socks.
But sometimes grandma shuts her eyes
And sings the softest lullables.

Across her face the happy smiles
All play at hide and seek,
And kiss the faint and faded rose
That lingers on her cheek,
While thoughts too sweet for words arise
When dear old grandma shuts her eyes.

Yet, sometimes, pictures in her face
Have just a shade of pain,
As golden April sunshine when
It mingles with the rain;
And then, perchance, she softly sighs,
Does grandma, when she shuts her eyes.

She's growing younger every day,
She's quite a child again;
And those she knew in girlhood's years
She speaks of now and then;
And sweet old love-songs feebly tries,
Does grandma, when she shuts her eyes.

I used to wonder why her eyes
She closed, but not in sleep,
The while the smiles would all about
Her wrinkled visage creep;
But I have guessed the truth at last:
She shuts her eyes to view the past.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

ARCADIA, Neb., June 7.

Editors Herald:—While on a visit to relatives last week I made the acquaintance of a lady not of our faith, that is suffering from what the doctors call nervous prostration. She took a liking to me and seemed to enjoy visiting with me, so I called several times, and in the last conversation I had with her I was led to testify to the benefit I received nearly four years ago when administered to.

I promised to pray for her recovery and send in her name to the Prayer Union. The lady's name is Mrs. Hazard. I make a special request for prayer for her.

The licenses of the ministry in the district were submitted to the conference for indorsement. at last report, 435; number of members pressubmitted to the conference for indorsement. Two recommendations for ordination were presented: Bro. E Harper, of the Burley (Leeds) branch, and Bro. Thomas Adams, of the North Manchester branch, to the office of priest. The Farnworth branch reported having restored Bro. C. H. Hassall to membership, and recommended that he have his elder's license restored to him. These licen-ses and recommendations were by vote referred to a committee to examine and report.

The financial report was also read and referred to a committee to examine and report. The president of the district read his report. Time was asked for the consideration of Sunday school matters, and the hour of three to four on Monday afternoon was set. The district secretary placed his resignation before the body. The matter was considered and he was requested to withdraw the same, which he did. The committee appointed to examine the accounts of the financial secretary reported them correct. The committee on licenses recommended the indorsement of the licenses of the ministry with but few exceptions, and they further recommended that Bro. E. Harper, of the Burley branch, and Bro. Thomas Adams, of the North Manchester branch, be ordained to the office of priest, and that consideration of the application of the Farnworth branch for the restoration of elder's license to Bro. C. H. Hassall be deferred till the next annual district conference. The following was submitted: Resolved, That this conference is of the opinion that the establishment of a district paper under the control of the conference would be of great benefit to the local work. Resolved. That the presidency of the district and the presidents of the branches be appointed a committee to secure the establishment of a district paper and to report to next conference. By amendment the names of Elders E. R. Dewsnup and S. F. Mather were added to the committee. The hour having arrived for the consideration of the Sunday school question, it was resolved, That the rules of the conference be suspended during its consideration so that all present may be allowed to take part therein. Resolved, That the petition of the Manchester and Sheffield district Sunday school association that the Manchester district takes the oversight of the Sabbath school work within its boundary be received and adopted. Carried by unanimous vote. Resolved, That Elder S. F. Mather be appointed superintendent of district Sunday school. The questions of ap-pointment of a secretary and the formulation of rules, etc., were left over for the present. A motion that a district tract society be organized was submitted, but no action was taken thereon. It was then resolved, That we sustain the general and local authorities of the church in every legitimate effort put forth for the advancement of the spiritual and material condition of the work in this country. Resolved, That a rota plan be prepared governing the location and labors of the district ministry. Votes of thanks to the locating and catering committees, deacon and his assistants, choristers, and musicians, members of the South Manchester branch for use of meeting room, and hospitality were unanimously passed, and the conference was brought to a close by a few appropriate remarks from the chair. The Sunday services were of a very high order, said to be the best ever held in the district, and were very largely attended by both Saints and strangers, and we hope much good will result therefrom. There was also a most soul-cheering fellowship meeting held on the Monday evening after the conclusion of the business sessions, and thus ended another of those best conferences ever held. from whom all blessings flow. Praise God

BUSINESS, HONOR-GOD AND GRACELAND.

To the Saints of Little Sioux District Especially:-Not being able to reach you personally we wish to say a word in behalf of Graceland College debt. Good business judgment and honesty demand that it should be paid, and now the Lord in revelation of April, 1901, says the same thing,—could not say anything else, as good business and honor are a part of God's superior judgment, and all Saints will be found walking therein. We want to say to the "chronic objector" or those who now object to subscribe, Do you believe the late revelation to be of God? If so, will you help to pay the debt? Deny yourselves some pleasure, comfort, or needless expenditure? Nay, more, make a sacrifice if need be, to answer God's voice? If you subscribed on former list, and can do more, do it now. If you failed before, please do not fail now. Let every member of families, who are wage earners, or possessed the subscribe. Much or little—come!

Some have "kicked" because the college was built at Lamoni. Glad it was, because the college was built at Lamoni. Glad it was, because the college was built at Lamoni. God has chosen it as a stake. 'Cost too much!" "Mistake made!" "Continued expense!" What of it; business, honor, God, all say "It should be paid."

Personally, I would rather see debt paid today and college closed tomorrow than have a $25,000 debt hanging over us under present conditions.

Glad our General Conference as a representative body did not appeal to Carnegie. A beggar or tramp able to do for himself is a pitiable sight; and as our president suggested,

God helps those who help themselves."

One brother asked, "How do we know God aid it?" Personally I am as sure as I am of anything; first, because we knew if God said anything, hist, decades we know it out said anything about it it would be, "college debt should be paid." Secondly, because while Bro. Joseph may be mortal, I believe he would suffer all else rather than pose as voicing God when it was but his individual

Again, I do not believe Zion's financial assured until we pay our honest progress debts. I believe now, too, every subscriber on former lists should pay up and stop interest, as a good business man will not let money lay idle and thus pay interest.

Again, if we subscribed because we expected or hoped for failure to reach the call of $25,000 we did not subscribe in good faith, if faith at all.

In every branch of your district we have placed lists with requests for announcements from pulpit and fireside, and trust you will be found by the "hunters and fishers." If you are not solicited, will you please turn "hunter" and hunt up a list or send your pledge or cash to us. To the scattered and isolated, work among your fellows and address us as below. No harm to ask those who are not members yet friendly to the Battling against physical odds we hope for aid and your prayers that we may do our part in keeping open house, and count the cash. Once more, "a long, strong pull, and a pull Once more, altogether."

Hoping all Jonahs have been spewn up and learned a lesson of obedience, and we roll up 1,000 strong in "Sioux" style leaving off the little-(ness), I am,

For victory and debt paying, ALMA M. FYRANDO.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

To the Northeastern Illinois district, Greeting:—The following notice of your action regarding the appointment of district president has been received by me and duly considered.

"CHICAGO, Ill., June 9, 1901.

"HEMAN C. SMITH, Lamoni, Iowa,
"Dear Brother:—At the conference of the Northeastern Illinois district, held at Mission branch, June 1, 1901, the advisability of placing a missionary of General Conference appointment in the office of district presi-dent, was discussed, and it was finally moved and carried that the matter be left in your Yours in the work, "JAMES F. KIER, Dist. Sec."

In consideration of the above action I hereby give notice that until other arrangements are made the district will be under the presidency and oversight of Elder John Midgorden, who is vice president elect.

SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA REUNION.

Our reunion this year will be held in Sycamore Grove, Los Angeles, beginning July 19 and continuing over the 29th. Everything is propitious for an excellent reunion.

Brn. Joseph Smith, Alexander Hale Smith, Joseph Luff, Joseph F. Burton, Wilmer J. Gilbert, A. Carmichael, and E. A. Smith, of the general ministry, are expected. It is not often that the Saints of Arizona, New Mexico, and Southern California have an opportunity of meeting so many of the leading ministry of the church.

Arrangements will be made with the various railroads centering in Los Angeles; viz., Southern Pacific, Santa Fe, and the San Pedro, Los Angeles, and Salt Lake, whereby all who attend the reunion will be able to secure one and one third rates for the round trip. Those coming will please secure a certificate that you have paid full fare one way to attend the reunion of the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints at Los Angeles, California. Ask your agent when tickets coming to the reunion are good. Do not forget this. It makes no difference if you have the money to pay full fare both ways, consider others who may come hundreds of miles and that their advantage is abridged because of your negligence. everybody coming to the reunion secure these certificates.

It is proposed now to have some trustworthy brother conduct the dining hall, serving meals to all who may desire at reasonable

Sycamore Grove 15 011 grounds in the country. The facilities are grounds are far anywhere. The grounds are far unexcelled anywhere. The grounds are far enough removed from the city noise so as to give all the pleasure of country seclusion.

Let every Saint that can possibly do so, come and make this the banner reunion of the State. It will be a commendable way to begin the new century. Do not make the mistake and come for only a few days. If there is anything discouraging to a reunion committee it is to have a number of the Saints come in to spend the Sunday, or a few days at most. Come on the 19th and remain until the 29th.

Respectfully submitted, T. W. Williams, Nelson VanFleet, S. Penfold, Reunion Committee.

NOTICE TO SUNDAY SCHOOLS AND OFFICERS.

The following rules applying to the sale and mailing of Quarterlies were agreed upon by the officers of the General Sunday School Association at a meeting held in Independence, Missouri, subsequent to the late General Convention:

1. All subscriptions for Quarterlies will be promptly discontinued at the expiration of the time for which they are ordered, unless the subscription be renewed.

2. No Quarterlies will be mailed at the yearly rate unless a full year's subscription be paid in advance.

3. When necessary, credit for not more than one year will be allowed on Quarterlies, but in such case they will be charged at the single quarter rate.

The above rules will take effect with the mailing of the October-December issue.

We believe the above rules to be absolutely necessary and fair and just to all. And that you may the better see the reasonableness thereof we offer the following explanations.

We discontinue the Quarterly be-Rule 1. We discontinue the Quarterly because: (1) Schools are discontinued and do not need the Quarterlies and no notice is ever given to that effect. (2) Nearly all schools need to often alter their order. They need more of one grade and less of another, and the easiest way is to make an entirely new order. (3) Schools change officers frequently. The new officer orders the Quarterlies but says nothing about any standing order. the old order is continued, you will have two sets of Quarterlies. Schools have received as high as three and four sets by this old method of continuing orders. What should be remembered now is that if you want Quarterlies, you must order them every time your subscription expires, for they will not be sent beyond that time.

Rule 2. If you expect the benefit of the yearly rate, which is about 25 per cent cheaper than the quarterly rate, you must pay for your Quarterlies a full year in advance. Some have written the HERALD Office and insisted on having the benefit of the yearly rate and pay at the expiration of the year. To allow this would do injustice to the school which ordered one quarter at a time and sent the cash with order. It would be "money in their pockets" to hold their cash to the end of the year and pay all at once. It would be selling cheaper on time than for cash in advance, a business principle which every one knows is both wrong and ruinous.

Rule 3. It is not intended to bring the Quarterlies onto a strictly "cash in advance," basis, as that would deprive many of our schools of the Quarterly entirely. But it is necessary to do business on correct business principles. The school that cannot pay in advance for Quarterlies may get them anyway and pay for them sometime during the year,

But do not ask for them at the yearly rate, as that cannot be granted in justice to others.

As stated above, these rules will take effect with the mailing of the last quarter for the year, or about September 1. Sunday school officers would do well to call especial attention to this notice in order that no mistakes be made. We believe that all will be satisfied in this matter at least as soon as they get themselves fully adjusted to the situa-

There were eighteen delegates present. lowing district officers reported: Superintendent, assistant superintendent, secretary, and treasurer. Balance in treasury to date $10 10. Mary Schafer and J. M. Baker were appointed to furnish the General Association with a history of the Galland's Grove district Sunday school association. The district secretary resigned and Floy Holcomb was elected to fill the vacancy. Two thousand dodgers were ordered printed for the use of the literature committees of the district. The superintendent and assistant were empowered to appoint a home class leader or leaders to work up the home class department of the Sunday school. Provisions were made whereby Sunday school literature would be provided for tent and general missionary work. By permission of writers, all papers read at this convention were ordered sent to General Superintendent. Subjects outlined in program were quite thoroughly discussed.

PASTORAL.

To the Ministry of the Pittsburg District Greeting:-Having been placed in charge of the district, I take this method of placing myself in communication with my associate ministers. Contrary to my personal desires, circumstances seem to make it necessary that I devote the greater portion of my time, for the next few months, in Pittsburg and its immediate vicinity. Elder C. E. Miller, immediate vicinity. Elder C. E. Miller, president of the Pittsburg branch, having removed to Independence, and in view of the fact that the branch is about to commence the erection of their new chapel, it was thought best to place me in charge of the branch, for the time being. This local work will now demand a portion of my time, and will doubtless hinder me somewhat from doing work in other portions of the district, which would otherwise be expected of me.
I am consoled, however, in the fact that we have so many able workers, both general and local, who, by the help of the Lord we may expect will occupy where needed, and be prepared to meet every exigency. To this end we need to be very humble, prayerful, and faithful, not allowing ourselves to become too elated when successful, nor discouraged when obstacles seem to obstruct our progress. are in the greatest conflict of the age, and only brave soldiers are in demand. If we can but keep in touch with our great leader, Christ, we have nothing to fear, and our triumph is sure.

I shall be pleased to hear from each of the missionaries laboring in the district, in order that we may keep in touch with each other, and be able to assist one another by counsel or suggestion. The time to report is as near as convenient to the first of the months as follows: June, September, December, and March, so that I may have my report to the general missionary in charge ready by the 15th. I am a little late in thus addressing you owing to my inability to get permanently settled in my new field sooner.

The local workers will feel free to push out and labor as circumstances permit and wisdom directs; and if needing help, let us know, and we shall be glad to render all the assistance in our power.

Ever praying for Zion's weal, I am your Ever praying for Alone week, fellow servant in the cause of Christ, F. G. Pitt.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Southern Wisconsin conference will be held in a grove on the farm of Mr. Henry Chopas, five miles south of Soldier's Grove, Crawford county, Wisconsin, June 29, 30. Those coming on train to Soldier's Grove on Friday will be met. Send branch and official reports to W. A. McDowell, Soldier's Grove, Wisconsin.

REUNION NOTICES.

The Oklahoma reunion will be held August 16-25, 1901, at Dover, on the Rock Island railroad, eight miles north of Kingfisher. Fine large grove and sheds; abundance of good water; only one half mile from depot; plenty of good pasture at fifty cents per month. I have a letter from Boots and Mc-Davitt, of Dover, as emigration agents for the Rock Island railroad, who think they can secure reduced rates at that time. I will endeavor to give notice through the papers of their success. S. J. Hinkle, H. K. Rowland, George M. Hiles, Committee.

The Massachusetts district reunion will convene at Silver Lake (near Plymouth), Massachusetts, Saturday, July 27, 1901, holding over the second Sunday. Due notice will be given as to tents, board, etc. The commissary will be had during the entire session so all attending can be cared for at reasonable rates. We trust all will try to attend and make the affair a success. Committee: H. D. Simpson, chairman, 22 Waverly street, Malden, Massachusetts. F. P. Busiel, treasurer, 24 Melvin street, Somerville. H. W. Howlett, secretary, 45 Kellogg street, Fall River.

The reunion and conference of the Utah district will be held in Provo, beginning August 24, and continue over two Sundays. One day, or more, will be devoted to the convention and work of the Sunday school, as may be arranged by the district superintendent. Saints of Utah, southern Idaho, and all who can possibly attend, please take notice, come, enjoy, and help make this meeting a success. Will branch officers please see that correct reports are made out and sent to secretary of district in good time.

PETER ANDERSON.

The ninth annual reunion of Northern Missouri will be held at Stewertsville, Missouri, August 16 to 25, 1901. We have no inducements to offer in the way of electric lights; no street cars running to and from the grounds; no lake near by for boat riding and fishing. But we have a beautiful grove situated high and dry where you can meet But we have a beautiful grove good Saints, and enjoy an outing for ten days in songs, in preaching of the word, in social meetings, where God can and will bless you if you come with the right motive. The committee has made the date early so our city Saints and those who teach school can attend, as this is the season of the year when business is dull in the cities and the rush of work in the rural districts is over, so all can attend. Brn. C. J. Craven, of Kingston, and David Morgan, of Bevier, Missouri, will act as choristers; Sr. Carrie M Lewis, of Stewartsville, will act as organist at this notable gathering. These brethren and sister will choose their assistants.

Good grounds, ample preparation, eminent speakers. A cordial invitation is extended CHARLES P. FAUL, Sec. to all.

DISTRICT HISTORIAN'S NOTICE.

To the Several Branch Clerks in Southern Indiana District:—As Bro. Heman C. Smith has appointed me historian for this district, I take this means of informing you that in order for me to carry out his instructions it will be necessary for you to give me the date of the organization of each branch, by whom organized, and a complete list of all officers from the date of organization to the present time, with the times and places of their elec-Do any of our former district clerks know the whereabouts of District Minute Books Numbers One and Two? They have never been in my possession, and it will be necessary to have them before I can begin work. Please give me the desired information as soon as possible.

FLATT.-At Thornton, Rhode Island, June 9, 1901, Sr. Ann Platt, aged 90 years, 3 months. Was born at Rehoboth, Massachusetts, March 10, 1811. Was baptized several years ago by Elder Charles Brown. Fun-services conducted by Elder M. H. Bond.

PUTNEY.—Jairus M. Putney quietly passed away after an illness of about two weeks, at his home near Gilroy, California, May 29, 1901. He was nearly 73 years of age, being born July 24, 1828. He obeyed the gospel July 16, 1860, being baptized by Elder E. C. He was married to Elcy M. Campbell, February 9, 1851. Five children were born to them, of whom all are now living. Bro. Putney was possessed of most sterling character; conscientious, charitable, and kind; never wavering from the right, he commanded the respect and esteem of all who knew him. He stood unflinchingly for the gospel and evinced his love for it by an upright life. At the time of his death he was president of the Central California district, and the day before he was taken sick, together with Sr. Putney, he visited the San Jose branch and there addressed the Saints on the "Glorious Latter Day Gospel," commending it to all. He now awaits a glorious resurrection. Funeral services at the grave by Elder J. B. Carmichael.

HALL.-Bro. Blueford Jefferson Hall departed this life April 7, 1900. He was born June 5, 1854; baptized and confirmed into the Reorganized Church by Elder V. D. Baggerly. March 31, 1857, at Limerick, Ohio; baptized 5, 1901, by T. J. Beatty; died June 3, He said before baptism he did not expect to get well, and that was not his object in joining the church. He has long been a believer in the gospel; defended the Saints when persecution was high. He told his mother, just before his death, he knew he would have a better resting place than this. Funeral at Saints' church, Limerick, Ohio; sermon by T. J. Beatty, to a large crowd of attentive listeners.

Much of the early religious history of America is involved in so much conjecture that its interest as real genuine history wanes as we give it close attention. Father De Roo, a priest in Oregon, has recently published two dignified volumes in which he has gathered a number of new and undoubted facts. He has had access to the archives of the Vatican Library, which have been re-cently thrown open to scholars, and he has dug up a number of most interesting details about the Norsemen and the sees that were established on the eastern coast of America in the eleventh century. An article in the Catholic World Magazine for June gives an exhaustive summary of all of Father De Roo's latest researches.

THE CRYING NEED OF THE HOME.

What is the crying need of the home? Not money. Not intellect. Not refinement. Not wisdom. It is love, and warm demonstration of love.

Life is such a little thing, a short space of years at best, and to live it through and to have missed love in childhood from father and mother is the saddest thing in all the universe. Most people love their children. Few fathers and mothers would own to a lack of affection for their offspring.

But in many homes—shall I say in the majority?—there is a lack of the real living love and tenderness that fill the heart full to running over with love-words, kisses, fond caresses. The good-night kiss, the dear hand upon the little one's head and cheek, how these things expand the soul of the child and make it receptive to good influences

To the car-window sociologist to the man who seeks to understand and know the south by devoting the few leisure hours of a holiday by devoting the lew letsure nours of a noticely trip to unraveling the snarl of centuries—to such men very often the whole trouble with the black field-hand may be summed up by Aunt Ophelia's word: "Shiftless!" And yet they are not lazy, these men; they work hard when they do work, and they work willingly. They have no sordid selfish money-getting ways but rather a fine disdain for mere cash. They'll loaf before your face and work behind your back with good-natured honesty. great defect as laborers lies in their lack of incentive to work beyond the mere pleasure of physical exertion. They are careless because they have not found that it pays to be careful; they are improvident because the improvident ones of their acquaintance get on about as well as the provident.

On the other hand, the white land owner shows his Northern visitor the scarred land:

the ruined mansions, the worn-out soil and mortgaged acres and says, "This is Negro freedom!" The Negro dimly personifies in the white man all his ills and misfortunes; if he is poor it is because the white man secures the fruits of his toil; if he is ignorant it is because the white man gives him neither time nor facilities to learn. And, indeed, if any misfortune happens to him it is because of some hidden machinations of "white folks." On the other hand, the masters and the masters' sons have never been able to see why the Negroes, instead of settling down to why the Negroes, instead of settling down to be day laborers for bread and clothes, are infected with a silly desire to "rise" in the world, and are sulky, dissatisfied, and careless where their fathers were happy and dumb and faithful. "Why! these niggers have an easier time than I do," said a puzzled Albany merchant to his black customer. "Yes," he replied, "and so does yo' hogs."—W. E. B. DuBois, in The World's Work.

A NEWS SERVICE WITHOUT PARALLEL.

There is ample justification for the claim made by the Chicago Record-Herald that its readers enjoy every day in the week, Sundays included, a news service that is without parallel in range and completeness. The reason is obvious—the combination of the varied and extensive facilities of the two great dailies, the Chicago Record and the Chicago Times-Herald. In addition to the independent news facilities of both papers, the Record-Herald receives the complete news service of the New York Herald, the New York Tribune, and the Associated Press; and when it is considered that its news columns are supplemented by all the special features so popular in the Chicago Record and the Chicago Times Herald, it will be seen that the Record-Herald holds a unique place among the great newspapers of the United States.

CONSISTENCY IN PRAYER.

Prayer is an expression to God of the desires of the soul. As such it may be either silent or vocal, according to surrounding circumstances, the Lord being able to understand the secret yearnings of the mind as well as their formal expression.

Vocal prayer is appropriate, and becomes a necessity when more than one wish to unite in their supplications, one being selected or privileged to express the desires in which all are to join.

Properly understood, prayer is a serious thing. It should not be indulged in carelessly, and certainly should be governed by wisdom. The sacredness and importance of an address to our heavenly Father are surely of sufficient merit to demand our most earnest consideration, that the spirit of true supplication may not be violated in our efforts to pray.

There is no doubt that the spirit of true prayer is much abused. Especially is this true where a number are met together for worship. While this difficulty may be traceable to various causes, we believe it results in many cases from a lack of wisdom, and a failure to be consistent in the petitions expressed.

In the first place, it seems highly proper that the occasion of the meeting should determine largely the nature of the prayer or prayers. It is natural for people when assembled together to have their minds more or less directed to the object for which the assembly has been called. If the desires expressed by those who pray are irrelevant to the spirit of the meeting the minds of the people are confused, and to some extent diverted into other channels, and if their attention is retained at all, they are apt to become listeners instead of partici-

Suppose, for instance, that a few have been called to the bedside of one who is afflicted, for prayer and administration. The sympathies are naturally stirred with solicitude for the good of the suffering one. Would not consistency suggest that a brief, earnest prayer in behalf of the one desiring administration, followed by prayers of anointing and confirmation alike direct and earnest, be most desirable under the circumstances? Would it not also be wise at such times, when the thoughts are sad, and nerves, especially of the sick one, are tender, to speak in a quiet tone of voice suitable to the surrounding conditions?

Whatever the experience of others may have been, the writer has had the spirit of administration greatly confused by listening, on such occasions, to lengthy prayers concerning the progress of the work at large, the general good of the Saints, and various things foreign to the nature of the occasion, possibly concluding with brief references to the one requesting administration, and who anxiously awaits the blessing of relief. such circumstances it is hardly reasonable to expect that degree of unity, "as touching one thing," so essential to acceptable prayer.

What may be said regarding occasions of this kind is applicable in a general sense to all gatherings where prayer is appropriate. Preaching services, Sunday schools, meetings for baptism, confirmation, ordination, and all the various kinds of religious gatherings, have special objects which demand our attention, and toward the proper accomplishment of which the assistance of the Lord should be importuned.

It is true that some occasions, being more general in their nature than others, allow wider range of thought without violence to the spirit of the meeting. There are some principles, however, that evidently should govern prayer upon all occasions. Among them are earnestness, simplicity, and brevity. We believe these to be the crowning graces of a good prayer. Especially should these characteristics be manifest in Sunday schools, and gatherings where children are more especially expected to unite. Their active, restless little minds will naturally protest against listening to long, tedious petitions, beyond their understanding, and injury instead of good may result.

And then, too, however others may is apparent, the burden of the thoughts expressed being directed to the people rather than to God.

Surely consistency would demand that such be left to the preacher, when the audience can assume a more receptive attitude, and the countenance and gestures of the speaker assist in the elucidation of his thought.

Jesus considered this subject of sufficient importance to give instructions relative to the manner in which our heavenly Father should be anproached. His prayers are beautiful and impressive. They are brief, earnest, and simple. While in this, as in other things some are more gifted than others, study and effort will bring development in all; and we think that a better understanding of the nature of prayer, with earnest effort to learn wisdom in the exercise of so sacred a privilege, will add solemnity to our public worship.

These thoughts are only suggested as the feelings of one. They are not offered by way of faultfinding, but with good intent, and with the desire that whatever of good may be in them may be appropriated in the interests of the work in which we are striving to develop.

BRO. M. F. DERBY, of Selkirk, Ontario, sends us a clipping in which Rev. Dr. Herridge, D. D., in a sermon preached in St. Andrew Presbyterian church, in Ottawa, is made to say in part, as follows:

And when Presbyterianism is accused of being narrow, as it sometimes is by those who do not know it, I wish to say with emphasis that no church in Christendom is broader in its tests for membership. It is true that its ministers and elders are asked to give a general assent to the system of doctrine set forth in the Westminster confession. If anyone understands it to teach that certain helpless infants are damned for all eternity, I suppose he may teach that horrible falsehood, but I never heard of anyone doing so. He may deal with election as a mysterious prob-lem of divine caprice rather than as a palpable fact, which the freewill of man perpetually demonstrates, but he does this on his own responsibility. In my humble judgment it would be wise to remove all doubt as to what our church teaches by such a restatement of the whole question as would make it clear that the love of God is never partial nor arbitrary. I do not think that either piety or the orthodoxy of the church will be injured by a less elaborate and technical creed than that feel, the writer is not as a rule much impressed by prayers of an oratorical nature in which an effort to instruct is the westminster divines, and which revolved round the great central fact that the compassion of the Father in heaven is infinite, and that it covers all men.

THE ETHICS OF THE LABOR UNION. The National Cash Register Company, of Dayton, Ohio, of which J. H. Patterson is the governing agent, has been lately passing through an experience with the labor unions that has been somewhat peculiar and discouraging. It appears that some six or seven years ago Mr. Patterson conceived the idea that it would be a good paying investment to make the lot of his employees as easy and comfortable as was possible, so the company has from time to time added improvements and established rules for the benefit of their working forces until the factory of the National Cash Register Company was the model one of the age. Nine and a half hours of labor for the men and nine for the women, with ten hours pay; free baths to be used on the company's time to a reasonable extent, and open to use on the workman's time, unlimited; good ventilation in all the working rooms; lectures and other entertainments at the company's expense, facilities for washing, soap, towels, and cleanly kept dressing rooms; and a number of other concessions to make the conditions pleasant, including the parking of the grounds and beautifying the surroundings of the factory, the adjacent streets, and the homes of the work-men. The women working force were permitted to come later in the morning and quit earlier than the men to allow them to come and go on the street cars without being in the crowd of men, thus avoiding the rush and crowding incident to the coming in and going out of some twenty-three hundred persons employed in the factory. These girl employees, some three hundred of them, were allowed a ten-minute recess in the forenoon and afternoon, with a half day off on Saturday. In addition to this, instead of stools to sit upon at their work, revolving chairs with high backs were provided them; dressing rooms with all necessary paraphernalia, wash-stands, baths, mirrors, etc., and easy chairs and couches for resting places, and a refreshment room in the building where the girls could obtain lunch at a nominal price only, was provided by the company. Altogether this factory at Dayton was becoming the ideal working place. It was thought Mr. Patterson had solved the question of the unity of capital and labor. But, as suggested by the poet, "The best laid schemes of mice and men gang aft aglee," so in this case. The walking delegates assumed control of the workmen, and soon found things which needed adjustment. One of them discovered that the springs put upon the doors to make them shut without noise had been made in Connecticut by non-union labor. Comthat the springs be taken from the the union men attacked a non-union doors. This was done, and the doors suffered to close without springs. Then it was found that the laundry work of the establishment was done by families outside the factory who were also non-union. After this two men were discharged for cause; the union demanded that the men be reinstated; the company declined to do this, but paid the two men the wages, $15 per week each without work for three months, and then demurred. Then other men were discharged for whom the company had not work, and one for cause; this was resented by the union and the restoration of the men demanded, but the company refused to do it, upon which refusal a part of the men struck, which so crippled the working forces that the company could not proceed and so closed the works.

Workmen in some of the departments of the works had been earning from four to eight dollars per day on piece work. The union ordered that no man should earn more than four dollars and fifty cents per day, and required that more workmen should be put on, though it should require an enlargement of the plant. In order to force the company to employ men whom they had discharged because they did not want them, the moulders and polishers threw down their tools and walked out, thus bringing the work to a stop, and the doors of employment were closed on two thousand five hundred workers, including three hundred women.

The company had submitted to several demands made upon them, but finally stood upon their right to choose whom they would keep in their employ. At this the union ordered a strike to enforce their demands, and thousands were thown out of work; an embargo laid on a pay roll of thirty thousand dollars per week, which had been aiding the business of the city; a force equal to one fortieth of the population made idle, all because the labor union undertook to dictate the affairs of the National Cash Register Company of Dayton, Ohio.

The company stated at the time that the demand to reinstate the men discharged was made that they were willing to arbitrate, but the reply of the men was, We have nothing to arbitrate.

In this case there has been no charge that the wage was insufficient, the conditions bad for the workers, or the employers too exacting or indifferent to the welfare of the employees; only a demand that the company should employ and retain in their employ men whom the union claimed that they should, but whom the company did not want.

In their effort to secure the ends plaint was made and demand made for which they were striving, some of man and his son, knocked them down in the street, and to make sure that the two should be incapacitated for labor stretched their hands out on the road and beat them with stones until they were mutilated.

The ethics of this particular labor union seem to have been such that notwithstanding the peculiarly mollifying conditions brought to pass by the business sagacity of the National Cash Register Company effected in a business way to increase the efficiency of its workmen, these workmen themselves were willing to destroy the intention cordial in order to rule out of its proper domain, by which they defeated themselves and did irreparable injury to men and women willing to work, whom they would not suffer to do so.

Since this article was begun we learn from the daily press that the National Cash Register Company has started its work at the factory, the workmen having gone back to work upon the basis existing before the strike. And it is to be sincerely hoped that Messrs. J. H. Patterson and his fellows of the company will still find it to be to their interest to continue their efforts to make the lot of the toiler pleasant and bearable, "because it pays," as they have persistently declared was their motive in doing what they did in that direction.

TO THE FOLKS AT HOME.

BY ELBERT A. SMITH.

Afar in the land of pepper and palm, Where the grape, and the orange grow, Where mountains ancient and stately and calm

Look down on the vale below,

Where sad winds sigh from the sea in the west.

And the desert lies to the east, There dwell the ones who love you the best, But who see you alas the least.

The mountains are high, the plains so wide, We catch no glimpse of your faces bright, As you talk of us in the eventide, At the solemn dawn of night.

But the night winds list to the words you speak,

And bear them over a sleepy land, Over desert, and plain, and mountain peak, To hearts that will understand.

The future of life no man can tell. It is known to our God alone, May the Father of mercy guard thee well Till we come again to our own.

May the power of darkness bide away And the Spirit of Peace remain, We would find no vacant place that day, Nor one of you vexed with pain. San Bernardino, California, March, 1901.

ADVANCEMENT.

It has been remarked that the revelations received from God are of such a character that each successive communication makes apparent the necessity of further revelation to render plain that already given. To us this seems encouraging, so far as it may be true. In the study of the sciences, the first lessons are quite simple. So it is in the accomplishment of any work. As the rudiments, however, are mastered. more and more difficult problems are presented, comprehending an ever widening circle of truth, and demanding an increased degree of study and investigation. Truth is a composite unit, with its different parts so blended that the explanation of one part necessitates the introduction of other portions of the one great

Thus the developing mind in its endeavors to master the science of Right Doing, moves forward by successive steps to the desired goal. That difficult problems appear before us requiring explanation that makes necessary the presentation of still other closely connected principles, is to the writer an evidence of progress. Happy, indeed, shall we be if the lessons of instruction presented to us from time to time by the Spirit of truth are so well learned and applied that we shall be fully prepared to grapple with the successive problems as they appear before us for solution. Thus developing under the guidance of a perfect teacher, our knowledge of God ever widening as a result of the efforts made, our minds will find constant encouragement in the inspiring thought that ultimately we shall find perfect freedom from sin, and be enabled to comprehend "all truth."

THE Saints at San Antonio, Texas, now numbering some sixty-four, are trying to build a meetinghouse. They are meeting in a store building on South Flores street, and will build on the east side of the same street at the end of the car line.

The Daily Express of May 20 gives a fair notice of the people, their faith, and the effort to build. From the extract sent us by Bro. H. O. Smith, we quote:

J. P. Neal was seen at the church Sunday afternoon.

"We have existed as an organization nearly six years," he said. "At Medina, Oakdale, and Bandera the churches are older. We began with a very small number, but have grown steadily until we now have sixty-four members and we feel that we can afford to build a church of our own. We will begin its erection at once."

It was suggested to Mr. Neal that the existence of the church was not generally known.

"That is true," he replied. "Our people usually work quietly."

The Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints must not be confounded with the Mormon Church which has its headquarters at Salt Lake City. The two organizations are distinct and separate and there is no sympathy between them.

The Reorganized Church claims to be the

The Reorganized Church claims to be the true Mormon Church and regards the Salt Lake City sect as heretical. The members of the former claim to be the true followers of Joseph Smith, the first Mormon prophet. They have their headquarters at Independence, Missouri, where they have in recent years acquired a great deal of property and they are now preparing to build there a magnificent temple. They aim to make Independence distinctly a Mormon city.

The Reorganized Church repudiates the doctrine of polygamy as preached and practiced until recently by the Utah Mormons. They say this doctrine was introduced into the church by Brigham Young, and that there is not one word in the original Book of Mormon that sanctions it. They deny that Joseph Smith ever conceived the idea of teaching polygamy.

BRO. DANIEL MACGREGOR, laboring in British Columbia, gets after the religionists of the region where he is at work about as follows:

HOW CAN WE DETERMINE WHO ARE RIGHT AND WHO ARE WRONG?

I submit a plan. Let the reverend gentlemen representing the various churches of this locality meet together and publicly discuss the differences existing. For my part I am willing. How is this for proposition No. 1: "Is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in harmony with the church of the New Testament in matters of faith, doctrines, organization, blessings, and practices?"

I WILL AFFIRM. WHO WILL DENY? Whether they be Catholic, Presbyterian, Episcopalian, Methodist, or Baptist it mattereth not to me. For proposition No. 2, let my opponent affirm for his church what I am willing to affirm for mine and I assure you that I will hold myself in readiness to negative it. This is not written in a spirit of bravado but only to assist the masses to solve the all-important problem, "Who is right and where is the church?"

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

If a brother should borrow money from another brother, agreeing to pay at a stated time, and should fail to do it, neither say anything about it, is it the duty of the brother so treated (if he is not offended) to call the other in question for it?

No.

And has a brother officer of the branch the right to demand that the brother thus wronged, "though not offended," shall bring charges against said brother thus doing wrong?

No.

Is it my duty when I baptize one that does not live near a branch to send the items to the General Church Recorder, and has it been so practiced?

Yes. Give the baptized one a certificate of baptism and send the items to the Recorder.

By section 17, paragraph 7, of Doctrine and Covenants, must we when we baptize in a branch, first take a vote of the branch? And does "witnessing before the church" necessarily mean that one desiring baptism must get up and speak in meetings?

Not necessarily. The witnessing ing Polyga before the church should be by a consistent walk and conversation, which years ago.

in itself would testify that the party had received the Spirit unto the remission of his sin. It would be additional testimony for the party to make a statement to the branch when making application for baptism. A vote may or may not be taken. If the person is known to the officers of the branch to be well informed and of honest intention, no vote is needed. No one should be baptized in a branch except with the consent and knowledge of the officers.

THE Baptist Flag for June 13 contains the following paragraph:

The Mormons and the Campbellites are spatting at each other pretty sharply. There is but little room for dispute between these two sects, for they were both dug from the same hole, and neither one can be saved by the baptism they preach.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

By note from Bro. John J. Cornish we learn that he is quite busy in his field. He feels well and is trusting in God. He says, writing from Shabbona, Michigan:

We are having a warm time here. Arrangements are being made to commence a debate with the Methodist people at this place tonight. Much excitement prevails among the people, some for the truth, and many opposed to it. Of the outcome we will write you later.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Elder H. O. Smith writes that the Saints in San Antonio, Texas, have secured a lot and are making efforts to put up a church building. San Antonio is the largest city in Texas and it is gratifying to know that the church is to be properly represented in its work in this part of the South. Bro. Smith asks that any who can aid them in this do so and forward same to him, 1217 South Flores street, San Antonio, Texas.

It may be that the saying "Truth is not to be spoken at all times," is true, or partially so, but it is also certain that whenever it is proper for a man to speak what he says should be true, if he knows what the truth is; there is no condition in which a lie is better than the truth, if a man knows the truth.

The Holy Ghost, the Comforter, is the Spirit of Truth, according to the Savior's statement in John's gospel 14th and 15th chapters, verse 26 of each chapter. If then, men would be constantly within the reach of safety, in the power of the Comforter, get into the habit of speaking the truth.

We have received from Mr. A. T. Schroeder, of Salt Lake City, a pamphlet entitled, "Some Facts Concerning Polygamy," which is probably a reprint of one he published some few

AN EXPERIENCE IN UTAH.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 6, 1901. Editors Herald:-I send herewith an article written before I embraced the full latter-day gospel, giving my experience in protecting Elder E. C. Brand in Utah, while I was teaching a Methodist mission school at Nephi. I have a letter from Mrs. Brand expressing her gratitude for (as she says) saving the life of her husband. I was simply trying to protect the elder in his rights, and if I was instrumental in prolonging the usefulness of a worker in God's vineyard, I am thankful.

Do as you think best about publication or Yours in the faith, JOHN J. PHARE. changes.

3620 Thompson Ave.

In 1878-9, several years prior to the so-called abolition of polygamy among the followers of Brigham Young, but subsequent to the death of that wily fanatic, I held a position of doubtful remuneration at an inland settlement in Utah, as master and general factotum of a Methodist mission school.

Being fifteen miles beyond the terminus of the only railway running southward in the territory, our town, the county seat, had only wagon road conveyance to the outer world, so that the through stage to and from the settlements, mining camps, ranches, temples, and prospect holes of the entire south country, was an item of intense moment in the daily routine as it rattled along the principal street 'mid crack of whip and whoop of driver, bearing its motley burden of baggage, mail sacks, treasure box, and sandwiched passengers.

The population of the place, beside about fifty "Gentiles," consisted of some two thousand "Mormons," many rabid and ragged, among whom were a goodly number of a more liberal disposition, grown out of the "gar-ments" and bigotry of Brighamism, but all more or less bound by the sanguinary and consanguineous ties peculiar to Utah history.

The presence of the outsiders and "Liberals," together with a wholesome fear of Uncle Sam's deputy marshals, who often passed through, but not always with badges in sight, served to keep the more turbulent ones in a fair state of subordination, outwardly, but a good "Mormon" could always be relied upon to work some spite on opponents whenever a safe opportunity offered, in destruction of property or interference with business.

In this nest of mixed nationalities. the major part welded together by the bonds common to the lawless, but passing under the guise of a religious sect, no Gentiles were popular save the liquor dealers, whose invigorating measures were often invoked to inspire the devout for religious duties toward apostates and meddlesome outsiders.

Efforts of mission boards to introduce a higher system of life and information were regarded generally with disfavor, though a few of the more liberal polygamous families, with an eye to better ventilation, were well represented in the less crowded institution presided over by the "d-d little Methodist teacher"!

Our buildings, located on the main street, consisted of an "adobe" schoolroom in the rear of a large unfinished frame structure intended for a church audience room, awaiting better days for completion; and as attempts had been made to burn the house, I fitted up a sleeping room in it, for the better protection of the property, and soon afterward came the episode to be related.

About this time traveling elders of the "Josephites," a law abiding and well-meaning people—Book of Mormon believers but aggressively opposed to all the vicious practices of the Brighamites — had made themselves especially obnoxious to the ruling element, and one, Elder Brand, who had reinforced himself with an appointment as deputy United States marshal, had been the object of attempted assassinations for his active opposition to polygamy, and lodging complaints against prominent violators of the law. Notable among these was the case of John W. Miles, who, having one lawful wife, pranced to the "Endowment House" altar one day with a more or less blushing bride at either elbow, and thus became the flushed possessor of three women to beguile his time, take up homestead land severally for him, and provide sustenance for themselves and their dear "Brother John"!

One bright Monday morning a bearded, heavy set, kindly mannered body hailed me in the school yard, introduced himself as Elder E. C. Brand, and asked the use of the schoolhouse for a meeting that night, saying he might not use it, as he wanted to give the "Mormons" a chance to deny him the "Ward meetinghouse," as their common churches are called. The Gentile house was placed at his pleasure, and in an hour he returned -having met with a characteristic refusal from the dignitaries - announced to the school a meeting for that evening and proceeded about town to advertise it.

At this meeting little of consequence occurred beyond the mutterings in various parts of the room at some of the more pointed assertions of the speaker. A meeting was announced for the next evening, and after dismissal I invited the elder to to lodge with me there on the following night.

The second meeting was a crowd, and thoroughly representative. The elder held close and critical attention; had arisen between some of the young was pungent, caustic at times, but ever citing them to the books they all accepted, for proofs of their error and apostasy from the original faith.

About midway in the discourse a stranger abruptly entered, slammed the door behind him, marched heavily half across the room to the front of the speaker, then turning into the middle aisle, continued his march to the rear of the audience. His dress and manner, at such a time and place, drew the attention of all. About the waist of his short hunting jacket a belt of long, ominous looking Winchester and pistol cartridges was strung, and some bulky object within bulged the front of the partly buttoned coat, quite suggestive of a weapon concealed. Seating himself with no little disturbance he glared about at the people, listened to a few words of the elder, then asked "What is hoarsely of a neighbor: - fool talking about?"

Suspecting some culmination of the smouldering hatred of the "Utah Mormons" against the "Josephites," I watched every move of this reckless looking "tough," seated a little forward and about four feet to my left, and held my pistol under the school After some desk for ready use. further demonstration his hand passed to the open coat breast, and at this my weapon, covered by the left hand, was brought with muzzle resting apon the desk, and as his hand was being slowly withdrawn, I was making sure my covered aim at his heart. For some reason his hand was again thrust inward, and when finally withdrawn

I cannot estimate the time these movements occupied, nor have I, even now, excuse to make for what may appear to have been an unwise impulse, in the surroundings. I was alert and determined, but oblivious of all beyond the apparent design of the intruder and the single thought of protection for the speaker in his

After a few minutes our disturber arose, marched out, hands down, as noisily as he came and again shut the We afterwards door with a bang. learned that he told persons at the door, with abundant invective and profanity that the elder had caused his arrest and trouble. He was identified by members of the audience, in spite of his rough unshaven appearance, as the notorious John W. Miles, then on his way to Salt Lake City to surrender to his bondsmen who, becoming uneasy as the time of trial approached, had sent to the south for him, where he had gone on a hunting

After the close of our meeting, when the teacher, still suspicious, had quelled an over-boisterous debate that men, the people dispersed and we were left alone.

Ever ready to discourse upon his all absorbing theme, the elder was busy explaining his creed by voice and blackboard to his solitary auditor when a sharp knock rang at the door. I had told him of my experience with the stranger in the meeting, and so, with pistols in hand we approached the door. Said Brand: "Make them tell who they are," and at the question; "Who's there?" a voice we both recognized caused us to open the door, when two friends entered carrying a Sharp's rifle and a supply of ammunition.

The presence of a group of men at the school yard gate when our friends left the meeting had impressed them with a sense of impending danger, and the thought becoming more intense as they reached home, a mile away, they hastened to provide us with such means as they could for our protection, and on returning found a half dozen men still waiting This circumstance at near the gate. that late hour and the presence of Miles in town appeared rather conclusive of serious evil intent. To say we were by this time thoroughly awake would be no exaggeration.

After giving our friends a signal word and bidding them a thankful good-night we were again alone with Providence, a good rifle, two pistols, some ammunition, and all the possible danger we at that moment desired.

The elder suggested that I take charge of the rifle, while he manned our pistols; then saying he could talk to me well enough in the dark, we "doused the glim," stretched ourselves upon the cot and awaited events, the elder meantime relating other attempts upon him, before and since the arrest of Miles and giving me a brief history of his life.

The quiet of midnight was unbroken save by the clock upon the wall and the low voice of the fearless man of God as he told me how this lawdefier Miles had been upon his track from the far south, but the elder having a day or two before taken the road to the east of our range of mountains, coming into the main trail again by crossing the "divide," Miles had not overtaken him until that night.

Miles had threatened to kill the elder, and, hearing of this meeting, this was his last opportunity before imprisonment, trial, and probable conviction, and now, supposing Brand to be only remaining awhile for a talk with the Gentile teacher, the evident plan was to waylay him as he left, and trusty fellow lawbreakers were ready to assist the duplex bridegroom and triple husband to obtain revenge for his impending punishment, under cover of a cloudy midnight.

For the occasion the couch had been brought out from its usual place to the school platform between two doors leading into the unfinished part of the building. Arising from my resting place and passing into the front portion, my foot touched a loose floor-board. At this a quick footstep without was heard as of one stumbling over a brick in haste to get away from the house wall. Returning, I refrained from disturbing my visitor's mind with what I had heard, but after some minutes he declared that his enemies had gone—he was "impressed that the danger was over." Feeling at the hands of the clock I found the time ten minutes to one. Shortly afterward the elder had fallen into a snoring slumber and awoke not again until daybreak.

Considering a reasonable degree of vigilance necessary I continued my watch, barring occasional "catnaps," until morning with rifle close at hand, and greeted the rising sun with thankful heart.

The elder arose refreshed and jovial, went to the home of a friend for breakfast, and later came to bid adieu to his pedagogic sentinel.

Mounted upon a sturdy mustang, his ministerial coat skirts parted upon either flank, an Oxford Bible with flapping bookmarks in one hand, and guiding the horse with the other, he was a picturesque embodiment of a dauntless pioneer missionary among a dangerous people. No sign of fear crossed his jolly features, and as he jogged away I was filled with a keen admiration of the man, though I could not accept his doctrines. taking his life in his hand for the redemption of Utah; and who indeed can say how much is due to his vigorous appeals to the wavering ones, in finally bringing about the formal renunciation of the "twin relic of bar-barism" by the Brighamite leaders?

It is a well-established fact that persons discarding the Mormon doctrines entire, almost invariably lapse into infidelity or "liberalism," as it is there termed, with no sympathy for any religious creeds. Scarred and seared by the debauching of a formerly earnest faith in the Bible, they will now admit no friendship for it; but to those who still cling to what is good of the peculiar teachings, the strictly one wife "Josephite" branch is proving a haven of refuge. It is safe to say that this must be better than the blankness and cynicism of infidelity, to hearts naturally devout.

To return to the main characters of my sketch, the criminal Miles was convicted and placed in a Michigan penitentiary for eight years. Elder Brand, after more good work in his warm field, was transferred to Iowa, and a few years ago died in the harness in peaceful Kansas.

Since the punishment of Miles many of the most prominent leaders of the Brighamite Church, it is well known, have come to grief, and have suffered the humiliation and penalties they so richly deserved.

EDUCATED MINISTRY.

Shall we have an educated ministry is a question that to my mind is of more than ordinary importance. To educate means to instruct. This being the true meaning of the word educate I am highly in favor of having an educated ministry in the church. Education or instruction is a means to an end, and that end or object is the acquiring of information or knowledge of the law of God by which salvation is to be obtained.

By saying that I believe in having an educated ministry I do not mean to infer that those who have not attended college or even that those who have not attended common schools should be excluded from the ministerial force, because while I do not wish to undervalue the benefit of attending common schools and colleges, yet I certainly believe that a good education may be obtained by those who have attended neither of the above-named institutions. I mean an education such as is necessary to enable a minister of the gospel to be efficient in his work as such. To my mind the essential qualification for men entering the ministry is not necessarily a knowledge of grammar and mathematics but a determination to overcome obstacles and to meekly comply with the requirements of the When one enters the ministry, if he has that energy and push about him that he should possess, although his education may be quite limited he will succeed much better than one having a collegiate education if he lacks the energy and push possessed by the other.

In order for one to be properly educated on any line, whether it be in the science of medicine, of school-teaching, or even in things pertaining to the kingdom of God, he needs not only to study the history of such science, but also a practical application of the principles involved is absolutely necessary to insure complete success.

The means by which an education may be obtained are at hand and are accessible to all Saints, but the price to be paid for such knowledge prevents many from obtaining it. When I speak of the price I do not mean dollars and cents, for it is scarcely to be considered in this investigation. Christ paid a price for the church not in dollars and cents, but he gave his life for it (Eph. 5). So we of the ministry should pay the price to obtain knowledge such as is essential in fitting us for the work of the ministry, and that price is a life of righteousness. Who will pay the price? Can we afford to pay the price?

Another important question, Can we afford to lose that which we may gain by paying the price demanded by Him who is willing to give knowledge to him who lacketh? Certainly we can well afford to pay the price, especially may we believe this to be true when we take into consideration the fact that He who demands such price of us is not a hard master, but his yoke is easy and his burden is light.

In obtaining this education, force is demanded; yea, we are expected to use all the force we can command of both mind and body. But thanks be to him who giveth us the victory, in using all our energies in this work of the Lord it increases our strength instead of weakening us.

To further show that we may do our whole duty in the Lord's work and thus educate ourselves as we ought, and at the same time prosper both spiritually and physically, I quote Doctrine and Covenants 83:13, as follows:

And any man that shall go and preach this gospel of the kingdom, and fail not to continue faithful in all things, shall not be weary in mind, neither darkened, neither in body, limb, or joint, and an hair of his head shall not fall to the ground unnoticed. And they shall not go hungry, neither athirst.

This promise given through the choice seer of this dispensation should be well considered by us, and the conditions on which such blessings are to be obtained should be complied with.

In the Sunday school and the Religio is a good place for the Saints to be instructed in their several duties. The young of the church should avail themselves of the opportunities afforded them in these societies to learn the things pertaining to the kingdom of God. The young person in this church who will not strive to improve himself shall not be counted worthy to stand. As to the middle-aged and old in the church, they know without being told that continued effort on their part is necessary to secure such blessings as our heavenly Father has in store for the faithful. That there is no excellence without great labor is just as true when applied to church work as in anything else. We should not be satisfied with meager attainments in a divine life, but we should do as the book says, "Go on unto perfection."

Lately I have labored in localities where there are many Catholics, and when I see the zeal manifested by them in attending early mass, and how prompt they are to pay in money to support the church, I naturally compare their zeal and efforts in Roman Catholicism with that manifested in the church of Christ. Saints, let us not be slothful, but let us manifest a zeal according to knowledge, that Zion may prosper and we be found worthy to stand in the last day in the congregation of the righteous.

PRECIOUS PEARLS.-NO. 3.

GATHERED FROM THE DEPTHS OF THE BOOK OF MORMON.

BY WILLIAM HAWKINS

My brethren, I have not commanded you to come up hither to trifle with the words which I shall speak, but that you should hearken unto me, and open your ears that ye may hear, and your hearts that ve may understand. and your minds, that the mysteries of God may be unfolded to your view. And this he said being commanded of God. I would that ye should keep the commandments of God, that ye may prosper in the land; therefore if ye do keep the commandments he will bless you, and prosper you. For thus saith the Lord, ye shall not esteem one flesh above another, or one man shall not think himself above another; every man should esteem his neighbor as himself, laboring with their own hands for their support; they should let no pride or haughtiness disturb their peace.

And ye shall also forgive one another your trespasses; for verily I say unto you, he that forgiveth not his neighbor's trespasses, when that he says he repents, the same hath brought himself under condemnation. Do we not all depend upon the same being, even God, for all the substance

And now if God, who has created you, on whom you are dependent, doth grant unto you whatsoever ye ask that is right, in faith, O then how had ye ought to impart of the substance ve have one to another? and also ve yourselves will succor those that stand in need of your succor; and thus they should impart of their substance, of their own free will and good desires before God. Ye cannot say that ye are even as much as the dust of the earth; yet ye were created of the dust of the earth; but behold it belongeth to him who created you. And if ye judge the man who putteth up his petition to you for your substance, that he perish not, and condemneth him, how much more just will be your condemnation for withholding your substance, which doth not belong to you, but to God, to whom also your life belongeth: I say unto you, Wo, wo be unto that man, for his substance shall perish with him: therefore if that man repenteth not, and remaineth and dieth an enemy to God, the demands of divine justice doth awake his immortal soul to a lively sense of his own guilt; and except he repenteth of that which he hath done, he perisheth forever, and hath no interest in the kingdom of God. There are not any among you, except it be your little children, but what knoweth that ye are eternally indebted to your heavenly Father, to render to him all that ye have and are: in the first place he hath created you, and granted unto you your lives, for which ye are indebted unto him; and secondly: He doth require that ye should do as he hath commanded you, for which if ye do, he doth immediately bless you; and therefore, he hath paid you: and ye are still indebted unto him; and are, and will be, for ever and ever; therefore, of what have ye to boast? And behold, I tell you these things that ye may learn wisdom, that when ye are in the service of your fellow beings, ye are only in the service of your God. Therefore, lift up your heads and rejoice, and put your trust in God, in that God who was the God of Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob.

O how marvelous are the works of the Lord, and how long doth he suffer with his people. For behold the time cometh that with power the Lord Omnipotent who reigneth, shall come down from heaven, among the children of men, and shall dwell in a tabernacle of clay. And even all the prophets, have they not said that God himself should come down among the children of men, and take upon him the form of man, and go forth in mighty power upon the face of the earth; and lo he cometh unto his own, that salvation might come unto the children of men; even through faith in his name. And he shall be called Jesus Christ, the Son of God, the Father of heaven and earth, and his mother shall be called Mary. Father because he was conceived by the power of God, and the Son because of the flesh; thus becoming the Father and the Son; and they are one God, yea the very eternal Father of heaven and of earth; and thus the flesh becoming subject to the spirit. or the Son to the Father, being one God, suffereth temptation and yieldeth not to the temptation, but suffereth himself to be mocked, and scourged, and cast out, and disowned by his people.

Yea and I say unto you, that there shall be no other name given, nor any other way nor means whereby salvation can come unto the children of men, only in and through the name of Christ, the Lord Omnipotent. He is the light and the life of the world; yea, a light that is endless, that can never be darkened; yea, and also a life which is endless, that there can be no more death. Yet it pleased the Lord to bruise him, he hath put him to grief. The chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed. And the Lord hath laid on him the iniquities of us all. He is despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrow, and acquainted with grief; and we hid as it were our face from him; he was despised, and we esteemed him not. Surely he has borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows; yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. For behold, blood cometh from every pore, so great shall be his anguish for the wickedness and the abominations of his people. And even after all this, they shall consider him a man, and say that he hath a devil, and shall scourge him and crucify him: yea, even so shall he be led, crucified and slain, the flesh becoming subject even unto death; the will of the Son being swallowed up in the will of the Father; being filled with compassion toward the children of men, standing between them and justice. And he made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death: because he had done no evil. neither was any deceit in his mouth; therefore, will I divide him a portion with the great, and he shall divide the spoil with the strong, because he hath poured out his soul unto death; he shall see the travail of his soul and be satisfied: by his knowledge shall my servant justify many, for he shall bear their iniquities. For behold, and also his blood atoneth for the sins of those who have fallen by the transgression of Adam, who have died not knowing the will of God concerning them, or who have ignorantly sinned: and were it not for the atonement which God himself shall make for the sin and iniquities of his people, that they must unavoidably perish, notwithstanding the law of Moses. And even if it were possible that little children could sin, they could not be saved, but I say unto you, they are blessed; and little children also have eternal life: for behold, as in Adam, or by nature they fall, even so the blood of Christ atoneth for their sins. Thus all mankind were lost; and behold, they would have been endlessly lost, were it not that God redeemed his people from their lost and ruined state: giving the Son power to make intercession for the children of men: having ascended into heaven; having the bowels of mercy; being filled with compassion towards the children of men; and behold he standeth to judge the world. For were it not for the redemption which he hath made for his people, which was prepared from the foundation of the world, all mankind must have perished: but behold, the bands of death shall be broken, and the Son reigneth and hath power over the dead, therefore, he bringeth to pass the resurrection of the dead; even this mortal shall put on immortality, and this corruption shall put on in-corruption. And if Christ had not risen from the dead, or have broken the bands of death that the grave should have no victory, and that death should have no sting, there could have been no resurrection: but there is a resurrection, therefore, the grave hath no victory, and the sting of death is swallowed up in Christ. All the prophets who have prophesied ever since the world began have they not said also, that he should bring to pass the resurrection of the dead, and that he himself should be oppressed and afflicted? That thereby whosoever should believe that Christ should come, the same might receive remission of their sins, and rejoice with exceeding great joy, even as though he had already come among them: And holy prophets spake unto them concerning his coming, and yet they hardened their hearts.

Believe in God, believe that he is, and that he created all things, both in heaven and in earth: believe that men doth not comprehend all things which the Lord can comprehend. And again, believe that ye must repent of your sins and forsake them, and humble yourselves before God; and ask in sincerity of heart that he would forgive you. And ye will not have a mind to injure one another, but to live peaceably, and to render to every man according to that which is his due. And there shall be no contention one with another, having one faith, and one baptism, having their hearts knitted together in unity and in love, one towards another; being commanded of God to pray without ceasing, and to give thanks in all things: has he suffered that ye have begged in vain? Nay he has poured out his Spirit upon you, and has caused that your hearts should be filled with joy: and thus doth the Lord work with his power, extending the arm of mercy toward them that put their trust in him. I say unto you my brethren, that if you should render all the thanks and praise, which your souls have power to possess, to that God who hath created you, yet ye would be unprofitable servants. And again I say unto you, that as ye have come to a knowledge of the glory of God, or if ye have known of his goodness, and have tasted of his love, and have received a remission of your sins, which causeth such exceeding great joy in your souls, even so I would that ye should remember, and always retain in remembrance, the greatness of God, and your own nothingness. and always retain a remission of your sins; and ye shall grow in the knowledge of him that created you. For the sake of retaining a remission of your sins from day to day, that ye may walk guileless before God; I would that ye should impart of your substance to the poor; and ye shall immovable, always abounding in good not suffer that the beggar putteth up his petition to you in vain, and turn him out to perish: and ye will not suffer your children, that they go hungry or naked, and I would that ye should remember, that whosoever among you that borroweth from his neighbor, should return the thing that he borroweth, according as he doth agree, or else thou shalt commit sin, and perhaps thou shalt cause thy neighbor to commit sin also. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife, nor anything that is thy neighbor's; for ye covet that which ye have not received. And he commanded them, that they should observe the Sabbath day, and keep it holy, and also every day they should give thanks to the Lord their God.

I know if ye keep the commandments of God, ye shall be saved; neither are there any conditions whereby man can be saved, except the conditions which I have told you: and under this head ye are made free, and there is no other head, whereby ye can be made free: and now if you believe all these things, see that ye do them. Behold, this is my church; and whosoever is baptized, shall be baptized unto repentance: but remember, that he that persisteth in his own carnal nature, and goes on in the way of sin and rebellion against God, remaineth in his fallen state, and the devil hath power over him: for the natural man is an enemy to God, and has been from the fall of Adam, and will be for ever and ever: and serve the devil, who is the master of sin, he being an enemy to all righteousness; therefore, he listeth to obey the evil spirit, and becometh an enemy to all righteousness; therefore, the Lord hath no place in him, for he dwelleth not in unholy temples: but if he yields to the enticings of the Holy Spirit, and putteth off the natural man, and becometh a saint through the atonement of Christ the Lord; and ask in sincerity of heart that he would forgive, ye remain guiltless, otherwise ye are condemned, and your condemnation is just: but I say unto you, O man, whosever doeth this, the same hath great cause to repent; and except he repenteth of that which he hath done, he persisteth forever, and hath no interest in the kingdom of God. He that will hear my voice, shall be my sheep; and him shall ye receive into my church, and him also will I receive: therefore, I say unto you, that he that will not hear my voice, the same shall ye not receive into my church, for him will I not receive at the last day. Humble yourselves even in the depths of humility, calling upon the Lord daily, and standing steadfastly in the faith of that which is to come; therefore, I would that ye should be steadfast and works, that Christ the Lord Omnipotent, may seal you his: and unless they do this, they can in no wise inherit the kingdom of God. For it is I that hath created them; and it is I that granted unto him that believeth unto the end, a place at my right hand, and they shall know that I am the Lord their God, visiting the iniquities of my people: nevertheless, the Lord seeth fit to chasten his people; yea, he trieth their patience and their faith.

And again he saith, if my people shall sow filthiness, they shall reap the east wind which bringeth immediate destruction: yea, then is the time he will visit you with great destruction, even as he hath hitherto visited this land: for the Lord hath said this is my church and I will establish it; and nothing shall overthrow it, save it is the transgression of my people: and if they be evil, they are consigned to an awful view of their own guilt and abominations, which doth cause them to shrink from the presence of the Lord: they being warned of their iniquities, and yet they would not depart from them; therefore, they have drunk out of the cup of the wrath of God, which justice could no more deny, than it could deny that Adam should fall, because of his partaking of the forbidden fruit: and there is none other salvation, save this which hath been spoken of. Yea, how blind and impenetrable are the understandings of the children of men: for they will not seek wisdom, neither do they desire that she should rule over them: The time shall come, when the knowledge of a Savior shall spread throughout every nation, kindred, tongue, and people; yea, every knee shall bow, and every tongue shall confess before him. The time shall come when all shall see the salvation of the Lord; when every nation, kindred, tongue, and people shall see eye to eye, and shall confess before God, that his judgments are just. He remembereth every creature of his creating, he will make himself manifest unto all

And the Lord said unto me, Marvel not that all mankind, yea, men and women, all nations, kindred, tongues, and people; must be born again, yea, born of God, changed from their carnal and fallen state, to a state of righteousness, being redeemed of God. becoming his sons and daughters; and I give unto them a new name; that never shall be blotted out, except it shall be through transgression. All those that have kept the commandments of God, shall come forth in the first resurrection: therefore, they are the first resurrection: they are raised to dwell with God who has redeemed them; thus they have eternal life through Christ, who has broken the bands of death. For behold, in my name are they shall come forth, and shall have a place eternally at my right, hand. And these are those that have part in the first resurrection; and these are they that have died before Christ came, in their ignorance, not having salvation declared unto them; and thus the Lord bringeth about the restoration of these, and they have a part in the first resurrection, or have eternal life, being redeemed by the Lord. They are heirs of the kingdom of God, for these are they for whom he died to redeem them, and they shall be called by the name of Christ. There is no other name given, whereby salvation cometh, therefore, I would that ye should take upon you the name of Christ: yea, blessed are this people, who are willing to bear my name, for in my name shall they be called; and they are mine; I would that ye should remember to retain the name written always in your hearts; that ye are not found on the left hand of God, but that ye hear and know the voice by which ye shall be called, and also the name by which he shall call you. And whosoever shall not take upon them the name of Christ, must be called by some other name, therefore he findeth himself on the left hand of God.

When his soul has been made an offering for sin he shall see his seed. and now what say ye? and who are his seed? Whosoever has heard the words of the prophets, yea, all those who have hearkened to their words, and believed that the Lord would redeem his people, and have looked forward to that day for a remission of their sins; I say unto you, they are his seed, or they are heirs of the kingdom of God. And moreover, I would desire that ye should consider the blessed and happy state of those that keep the commandments of God. And when the second trump shall sound, then shall they who never knew me come forth, and shall stand before me, and then shall they know that I am the Lord their God, and that I am their Redeemer, but they would not be redeemed. And they shall be brought to stand before the bar of God, to be judged of him according to their works; wherefore, they shall be judged, every man according to his works, whether they be good, or whether they be evil. Yea, even at the last day, when all men stand to be judged of him, then shall they confess that he is God: then shall they confess, who live without God in the world, that the judgment of an everlasting punishment is just upon them: nevertheless whosoever putteth his trust in him, the same shall be lifted up at the last day: if they be good, to the resurrection of endless life and happiness; and if they be evil, to the resurrection of endless they called; and if they know me, damnation. And he never doth vary from that which he hath said. But wo, wo unto him who knoweth that he rebelleth against God; for salvation cometh to none such, except it be through repentance, and faith in the Lord Jesus Christ. Yea, even all those who have perished in their sins ever since the world began, that have wilfully rebelled against God; that have known the commandments of God, and would not keep them: these are they that have no part in the first resurrection. And they shall quake and tremble, and shrink, before the glance of his all searching eye: having never called upon the Lord, while the arms of mercy were extended toward them, and they would not: for he receiveth for his wages an everlasting punishment, having trans-gressed the law of God, contrary to his own knowledge. And now I say that mercy hath no claim upon that man, therefore, his final doom is to endure a never ending torment. And then will I confess unto them, I never knew them; and they shall depart into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels. And then shall the wicked be cast out, and they shall have cause to howl, and this because they would not hearken unto the voice of the Lord: for the Lord redeemeth them not; for they are devilish, and the devil has power over them; therefore, he is as though there was no redemption made; being an enemy to God. And behold, all these things are done, that a righteous judgment might come upon the children of men: O remember, remember that these things are true, for the Lord God hath spoken it: believe that he has all wisdom, and all power both in heaven and in earth. For O how beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good things, that is the founder of peace, yea, even the Lord who hath redeemed his people. And now I say unto you, Who shall declare his generation?

Yea, Lord, thy watchmen shall lift up their voice: with the voice together shall they sing, for they shall see eye to eye, when the Lord shall bring again Zion: these are they who have published peace, who have brought good tidings of good, who have published salvation; and said unto Zion, Thy God reigneth! And O how beautiful upon the mountains were their feet! And again, how beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of those that are still publishing peace! And again, how beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of those who shall hereafter publish peace, yea, from this time henceforth and forever! The Lord hath made bare his holy arm in the eyes of all the nations, and all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of our God. And may the Spirit of the Lord be poured out upon you: and may he grant unto you eternal life, through the redemption of Christ, whom he has prepared from the foundation of the world. That ye may have everlasting salvation, and eternal life through the wisdom, and power, and justice, and mercy of him who created all things, in heaven, and in earth, who is God above all. Amen.

ANNA MARIAH, W. Va., June 6. Editors Herald:-We have just closed our discussion with the Campbellites. Bro. D. L. Shinn was our representative: Mr. A. A. Bunner theirs. The propositions were as follows: Is the church of which the late Alexander Campbell was the founder the Church of Christ, identical in faith, authority, organization, doctrine, worship, and practice with the original church as set forth in the New Testament Scriptures? Our proposition was the same except the late Joseph Smith was the reputed founder, etc. Four sessions were given to each proposition in half hour speeches. A session was two hours. We are well pleased with the result, and we are sure that great good is accomplished in our cause. Bro. Shinn made friends for himself and the cause he so ably represents.

Mr. Bunner is one of their ablest debaters, but he failed to prove his church identical with the original church. He dwelt largely on the definition of the word church, and declared that the words church and kingdom were both translated from the same Greek original. Said that they did not claim a reformation of the church, but a restoration of the primitive Christianity.

Bro. Shinn argued that they were not in the time of prophecy by their restoration, for the prophets say an angel and a prophet will come first, and referred him to Malachi 3:1 and 4:5, to show that the people who had been led astray by the apostasy were to be turned back to God by the angel and the prophet. "Behold I will send my messenger and he shall prepare the way before me," etc. This evidently was the Lord Jesus Christ himself through the Prophet Malachi. The word in the Greek for messenger being Angellos, it is clear that the Lord said, "I will send my angel . . . even the angel of the gospel, behold he shall come, saith the Lord of hosts."

This was too much for Bunner. He did not attempt to answer it, but admitted that it was a true rendering of the prophecy. In support of this Bro. Shinn also referred him to Revelation 14:6.

Bro. Shinn showed that their reformation and restoration was not in harmony with prophecy, and therefore of men. Besides that there was nothing restored. The lost faith was not among them. The power, the ministry, the doctrine, the practice, were all wanting, and therefore they were not identical. This was fully proved.

On the second proposition Bunner relied principally on Bay's book, and Bro. Shinn called it Bunner's Bible. He said the Disciples had nothing restored; all they needed was Bays, Bunner, and the Bible.

Bunner said that he would oppose our work everywhere, turning people away and converting people from us. Bro. Shinn defied him to name one individual they had ever converted from our ranks, and in reply he held up Bay's book, saying, "Here is one." Bro. Shinn said that was the only one and he was a confessed infidel. If he had not been an infidel they would never have gotten him into their company. Bunner could not name another one. Bro. Shinn then named several and said he could count count a hundred that we had converted from Campbellism.

Every one in this country is well pleased with the outcome, only the general opinion is that Campbellism is down and the truth triumphant. A good impression is made for our cause and many are inquiring. A splendid opening is made here for the work of the Lord. We are isolated from the Saints here and do not have the opportunity of hearing the gospel. We feel greatly blessed and benefited by Bro. Shinn's visit. My prayer is that God may abundantly bless him in his efforts for good, and that he may be permitted to visit us again soon.

Your brother in the one faith, WILLIAM COOPER.

RIDGETOWN, Ont., June 15. Editors Herald:-On Monday, May 27, I left Selkirk in company with Bro. Alvin Knisley of that place, who is to be my colaborer for an indefinite period. We boarded the train at Hagersville and made our first stop at Waterford, after less than half an hour's ride. Here we remained five days preaching in the Saints' chapel four times and attending one prayer meeting. We also enjoyed ourselves in a social way. This is where R. C. Evans held a discussion with Rev. T. L. Wilkinson of the M. E. church twelve or more years ago. The latter retired and thus yielded the palm after the third evening, while the former like the proverbial oil, is still on the top.

From here, although loth to leave, we came on to St. Thomas and remained over Sunday, June 2, delivering two sermons and attending all the Sabbath services. This place, I am informed, has the first Latter Day Saint church erected in Canada.

Monday morning we took train for here and were permitted to address a fair sized audience that evening. The next day the Saints moved their place of worship. Meetings were then changed to a private house, where a business, prayer, and preaching service were held. Then we went seventeen miles with a bus load of Saints to conference, which was held near Bothwell, June 8 to 10. Good nature and humor flowed generously all the way. It cannot be otherwise when one is in such congenial company. In explanation I may add that Elder B. St. John was one of the company. I am reminded in this connection of what I heard a lady of Niagara Falls, New York, say. I can say as much; "I stand up for our country, but I can have a better time with the Canadians." I am an American in my national sentiments and always will be, but I am "almost persuaded" that both socially and financially there is less treachery and danger here. Let honor be to whom honor is due.

The conference passed off without any regrets. It was preceded by the Sunday school convention which was interesting and well managed under the superintendency of Sr. Jessie Hackett.

Saturday evening Elder J. H. Tyrrell occupied acceptably on the financial law. The Sunday services were as follows: At eleven a. m., Elder T. A. Phillips preached; 'twas an excellent effort. His subject was the purity of the home. Some one has said, "The art of language is to conceal ideas." If that be true it is a lost art so far as Bro. P. is concerned.

At 2:30 p. m. Bro. Evans occupied. It is needless to say he did well. I never heard him do better. From the way he started out I thought he wasn't going to say anything about "the sheep and goats" but he did before he got through.

At 7:30 p. m. the writer discoursed from Acts 24:24, 25, and came very near pleasing himself, which is an unusual thing.

The conference closed Monday at noon, that forenoon having been devoted to business and prayer, and it may be added that these services were throughout equal to the preaching. We all felt as Peter did when he said to Jesus, "Master, it is good for us to be here."

Monday afternoon we returned to this place and preached that evening with good liberty in the newly located church. The last statement with others in this letter leads me to say a larger per cent of the branches here own their houses of worship than in any mission I have been in so far.

The 11th inst. we came to this locality, which is on the shore of Lake Erie, ten miles from Ridgetown. We preached that night and have held services every evening since. Bro. Knisley made his first effort here. He used to be in the mission field but has been active as a preacher for some time. He is known to the church through his writings and is making fair progress at preaching.

That all may "love mercy, do justly, and walk humbly with God" is the prayer of

Yours in hope, ALMA C. BARMORE.

DENLOW, Mo., June 14.

Dear Herald:—Just returned from a "south Missouri experience," and perhaps you good people who ride in rubber tired buggies on paved streets, would like to know how the folks in this Ozark country travel from place to place. I was born in northern Kansas, but do not think for one moment I am ashamed of these countrymen. The moss in this region grows on the rocks and black jacks. Of course there are exceptions to all rules.

At the present writing Bro. Davis and I are the proud possessors of a "one horse shay." Prior to this green spot in our missionary experience we went on foot. This shows what Saints can and will do for the missionary. "Old Dan," the horse, is blind in one eye and can scarcely see out of the other; but he is faithful in the discharge of duty.

Early this morning we started to find Bro. Lemberg's. We supposed they lived about four miles from where we started, but it was eleven o'clock when we reached our destination. The roads in this country are on the ridges and in the valleys, and sometimes the traveler concludes they are in the skies or in the "nether parts of the earth." Well, we had gone only a short distance until we came to a halt and with a loud halloo brought a young maiden of perhaps sixteen summers to the yard fence. Bro. Davis was spokesman; he does most of the talking to the girls.

"Can you tell us how to go to the old Parminter place?"

"Well, I reckon not: but Mr. Hopper, who lives right down thar, can tell you all about it."

We thanked her kindly and drove on to Mr. Hopper's, whom we had figured out to be a "squire."

Old Dan soon wheeled us around to the front gate, and another "halloo" was given, and this time, who did we see but Mistress Hopper. She was a short chunky woman, who smoked a long stem pipe and wore a pair of spectacles. Mr. Hopper we presumed was not at home. The lady instructed us concerning our route, and we found we were getting further away from Mr. Lemberg's, but still on the right road. We thanked the lady, clucked to old Dan and started. But here came the squire; but we didn't have time to argue politics or discuss the rotundity of the earth: so we greeted him with a good morning and moved up the mountain.

After having traveled what we thought to be the right distance, we met a stranger coming down the rocky trail on horseback. We stopped him, and asked him to tell us where we were. We learned that there were two Parminter places and we were headed for the wrong one. Yet we were only one and a half miles (straight across) to Bro. Lemberg's, but there was no road leading straight across, and to go by the road, it was still about four or five miles. We should have turned around and gone back if Dan had been fed. We turned the old horse and started "straight across." Before we got through we had gone straight up and straight down, and when we had got fastened in the brush, not thinking any one was near we yelled "hello," and about twenty yards away came the answer. "Hello."

"Can you tell us where we are?"

"No, sir," was the reply, and for fear we had met with a wild man of the forest we changed our course a little and found ourselves in a few minutes comfortably located at Bro. and Sr. Lemberg's. They are excellent Saints and we had a splendid visit. They take the church papers.

In going over, one man asked us if we were hunting land? We told him with some emphasis that we were not: that if we were interested in such matters we would go to a different country. It's a shame to advertise this land like some do and get Saints to move in here from a distance.

Well, we finally started back, after being refreshed with a good dinner. On the road kind. But the first chapter of Jacob, fourth we met a young man and inquired how far it was to a certain store?

"Well, sir, I don't know. This is the first time I was ever in this country. I was raised way over yonder about six miles from here."

We drove on, glad in our hearts that we had found our way out of that wilderness.

At present we are preaching at Stony Point schoolhouse. Interest not good. Bro. Sparling gave us a sermon as he passed through. We preached nearly two weeks at the Ava branch, to splendid crowds. They want to see the district president. There are some good Saints over there. Before leaving we organized an "independent Religio" society with a membership of thirty. May it prosper, is my prayer. This is a busy time with the people.

TOPEKA, Kansas, June 15.

Editors Herald:-I arrived at Scranton, Kansas, June 2. Stayed there twelve days, and spoke eleven times. Found the Saints in very good spirits, and very hopeful of the reward in the great beyond. President Wm. Menzies is found at his post. Bro. John Cairns, superintendent of the Sabbath school, is acting well his part, and makes the school lively and interesting. The teachers are caring for their classes nicely, hence they have a flourishing little school. I shall be there on Sunday, the 23d, to baptize an old lady over seventy years old, Mrs. Cook. It may be others will follow.

Two of the Utah elders met us at Scranton; we had it hot and heavy for awhile, when they took their grips and left town. They said the church was never rejected. I asked them why Brigham Young announced to the people on December 25, 1847, (see Millennial Star, vol. 10, p. 86,) that he and others had it in contemplation soon to reorganize the church, according to the original pattern, with a first presidency and patriarch. And why at Winter Quarters he organized as he had given notice.

I said, "I suppose you believe in polygamy?"

"Yes," was the reply.

"Under what law do you claim to believe in such a practice?"

"Why, Abraham had two wives, Sarah and Hagar."

"No, sir," I replied; "Hagar never was his wife. Nothing in Scripture to prove that assertion. And besides, the Book of Mormon condemns the practice of polygamy."

"No it don't," he said, "when it is practiced in the right way."

I called for an explanation of the right way, but I've not learned it from the elder yet. He opened his valise and took out his Book of Mormon and tried to find the word of the Lord to Jacob in favor of polygamy. He could not find it, and Bro. John Cairns showed him the place. I then commenced to read from Jacob 2: 6.

"O," said he, "God gave to David his wives."

"No, sir, God never did anything of the verse, reads: 'And now it came to pass that the people of Nephi, under the reign of the second king, began to grow hard in their hearts, and indulge themselves somewhat in wicked practices, such as like unto David of old, desiring many wives and concubines, and Solomon, his son.' Here the Lord says it was a wicked practice; and now you say God gave that wicked practice! Nonsense, man! God does not act that way!"

"O, well," he said, "let me read a little from Isaiah 3: 27."

"Hold on, my dear man; please read a few verses before that and see what kind of women are going to take hold of that man."

He stopped and looked at me.

"We've got virtuous and honest people in Utah."

"Yes, sir," I replied; "you may be honest, but you are badly deceived."

"Well," he said, "you'll have to answer for what you say."

"I am fully conscious of that fact, and I am ready this very moment to stand before the Judge of us all, and repeat what I say here."

"Well," he said, "Joseph Smith preached and practiced polygamy."

"There is no proof of that, sir. Where are the children begotten by the Prophet if he practiced polygamy?"

"I know," he said, "he had children only by Emma."

"Well, that is very good proof that the man of God had but one wife; and she bore children to him. The oldest one by being honest, and true to his God, and his father having placed the prophetical blessing upon him, stands in his proper place today, at the head of the Church of Jesus Christ; and for many years he has been advising people to repent, and obey the gospel of Christ, and that means give up polygamy and all of its kindred evils."

I find the few Saints in this big city of Topeka alive in the Master's cause. Bro. C. E. Tillinghast and family have been down a few days with what they call smallpox. Up all right now.

I stay here over Sunday, and then return to Scranton for a week. Brn. Twombly, Pierce, and G. W. Beebe are with the tent at Hoyt, fourteen miles north of Topeka.

Yours ever,

J. C. Foss.

BEEVILLE, Texas, June 12.

Editors Herald:-I have not written lately, for which I have several reasons. One is I have not met with much success in gospel work of late, and another is that my right arm is somewhat disabled. After preaching during fall, winter, and spring months in the vicinity of Sweet Water, our present home, without any visible effect except now and then some one being roused up enough to ask a question or two and again fall asleep, we left home (wife and I), enroute for southern Texas. On reaching Fort Worth, we found the residence of Bro. and Sr. Nicoll, and were nicely received and cared for. We felt disappointed when we found there was no opportunity for preaching. In the evening we went to Bro. John McFarlan's and spent the evening in pleasant discussion on the merits of the restored gospel, and the privilege at the family altar of imploring the blessing of heaven upon the family, ourselves, the world at large, and the special favors of the Allwise Creator upon and for the prosperity of his kingdom, the upbuilding of Zion, the scattered ones of Israel, etc.

Next morning we took another short ride of twenty-eight miles to Cleburne, our next stop. Considerable rain had fallen during the night, and was still falling while we were preparing to go to the depot. However, their was no unpleasantness about this, as Sr. McFarlan, of the Baptist persuasion, took us in a carriage to the depot. We were soon on train, and in one hour were in Cleburne.

On arrival we learned that two Utah elders had been there for several days distributing tracts and the epitome of our faith minus some articles such as renounced polygamy, claiming that the epitome was introduced by Joseph Smith. Well, I suppose it was; but why do they not give their entire faith? If it is good let the world know what they believe. There is not an article in the faith of the Reorganized Church that I am ashamed of. If there was I would never raise my voice in defense of any part of the doctrine, that is, for the organization.

Well, I had longed and hoped to see some of those people, and had at last struck their trail. They had called on Sr. Riley in their rounds, who gave them their supper and the best end of her tongue, which is a good one in defense of the Reorganization. I missed the game I was hunting, but had the pleasure of discoursing to some of those people with whom they had conversed upon the difference between them and us.

After spending several pleasant days with our son in this place, we again took train for San Antonio, stopping over night with some friends in Temple, with the privilege of declaring against those fellows. They had been here also.

Arriving in San Antonio we found everything familiar, though we had not been there for several years. Took street car for Bro. Gifford's house, but found only the house, the door locked, and rain falling. Near by we made inquiry for Bro. Jett, and found he was living only a few steps away. So we were soon under shelter of his roof and enjoying his hospitality. We noticed about the time of our arrival that a reporter of the Daily Express had had a long talk with Bro. Neal in regard to our position and relation with the Utah people, and in the paper gave us a very fair notice and distinction. However, some mistakes, but nothing serious. Only a day or two more and we saw by the daily a notice that three Utah elders were in the city, stating at the same time that the Reorganized Latter Day Saints were not in sympathy with them. Good! In company with Bro. Jett we soon found their quarters, and held an interview with them which lasted four hours. They at first denied plural marriage but afterwards admitted they did not put away the woman who was married before the Edmunds-Tucker bill was passed. So we put the question straight: Do you believe polygamy to be ordained of God? They said,

Yes. We told them that settled the matter with us. They then started on a line of evidence that Joseph Smith believed and taught the doctrine. We then told them we would rather they would not prove that, for we had a very good opinion of Bro. Joseph Smith, and preferred not to have our faith shaken.

They said blood atonement and the Adamgod doctrines had never been preached or practiced by their people. I told them I was glad of that.

After holding meetings together with Bro. Jett for several days, with some interest, we came to this place. Soon after our arrival the editor of a weekly gave notice that I was in the city and would like to tell the people the difference in the two parties calling themselves Latter Day Saints. Oh, they have been here, too. So last Sunday I spoke from the Christian pulpit to a real nice congregation. The pastor was present and gave me a very warm shake of the hand at the close, quite a number of the congregation doing likewise.

If I could have been here a little sooner with some one to help me we could have done a good work. It was Bro. H. O. Smith's desire to have met me here on the 1st of this month. Whether he spiritually discerned it or not, there never could have been a better time; but he was detained by sickness, and I delayed some, and we are too late this time. The Christian people are just putting up a tent for a two weeks' meeting. However, when they rest from that I believe will be a good time.

From a letter I read from H. O. Smith before I left San Antonio I suppose he is in San Antonio looking after the interest of the church.

I want to go into the country Saturday and see if I can do anything in a schoolhouse. We expect to attend the Pipe Creek conference and also the Hearne conference.

We are in the work, with confidence of a complete success. How can it be otherwise when it is the sublimest institution that has ever been inaugurated?

Yours forever,

RIVERTON, Iowa, June 19.

Editors Herald:-The inspiration secured from certain features of the General Conference work has qualified me to enjoy greater peace of spirit in my ministrations this year thus far than any previous year that now comes to my remembrance, and with this peace I have enjoyed greater liberty in presenting the word, and greater spiritual power in every duty, both temporal and spiritual. The prospective change of location for my family in September, next necessitated me taking under advisement temporalities for a short time after conference, and with the willing counsel and assistance freely given by Brn. S. B. Kibler and F. C. Oviatt, so far as their counsel was followed, I made satisfactory arrangements without occupying much time.

trations since my late appointment to this mission, many expressions of regret were heard concerning my leaving that mission, which gives me to understand that the years of labor I had performed in behalf of God's work in all its departments there had been truly appreciated, and I hope for those who follow that the same appreciation of efforts made may be shown them. While it caused me many lonely feelings to say "Good-bye" to the many with whom I had labored, suffered, and prayed, yet the Spirit of God gave me evidence by its whisperings that my new field of labor would give to me much of satisfaction in the results to follow my labors, and the presence of God's Spirit to accompany me in labor there: and twice has the heavenly Father caused his voice to be heard through prophecy giving me words of cheer, and promising spiritual and angelic assistance in my labor in this my present field.

Both the conferences and conventions of Fremont and Little Sioux districts were excellent, the good Spirit prevailing in all the deliberations and exercises, and guiding the business done with excellent wisdom. My labor at Glenwood, Henderson, Thurman, and here, at Riverton, though brief, has been enjoyed, though slight indifference is shown in not making the sacrifice necessary to show a full appreciation of the great work of sacrifice done for man's redemption, and the importance of the sacred responsibility of bearing the name of that Christ through whom the great sacrifice has been made.

But with what great pleasure I have noted in my association with the Saints of this mission their willingness to accept of advice or counsel, and the confidence they express for those who have formerly as missionaries sought to assist them in building up this glorious work. I have found in my coworkers willing, energetic, and noble-spirited assistants, and trust I may have the sustaining grace of God, and humility of spirit with strength of body and mind to so minister as to maintain the confidence in me already shown by my brethren, and that we together laboring with God may break the spell of darkness that exists upon the minds of so many, awaken the children of God into increased activity, call back the wandering ones, and assist in establishing peace in the hearts and homes of God's children, and establish there the Zion of God.

With a bright hope for the ultimate triumph, I am, Your brother,

J. F. MINTUN.

HOAG, Neb., June 17.

Editors Herald:—I came to this place on the 13th, and opened meetings on the 14th. On the 15th Bro. Waldsmith came, and on Sunday our meetings were good. We were busy all day. Held four meetings, one at the water's edge, Bro. Waldsmith officiating while the writer led four precious souls into the waters of baptism. It was good to see how glad those who were baptized were, and also those who were witnessing the scene. We returned to Bro. Barger's, where all were confirmed, and after dinner we went to prayer and sacrament meeting where another feast was had. In the evening preaching; a full house and good interest. So the good work goes on in Southern Nebraska district. We hope that more will follow, which I think will be realized in the near future.

We expect to return soon and open the door again. We now go to Beatrice and then to Charleston, a new opening. The calls for preaching are many. Love to all the brethren in Christ.

Editors Herald:-After reading your article in HERALD of May 22, "Our neighbors-the Christians," I sent it to the Rev. W. B. F. Treat, together with some of our tracts, among which was one by J. F. McDowell on "Discipleism." I gave my name and address with them, and soon got a letter from him acknowledging "receipt of Mormon papers," and in a few sentences endeavored to have me believe that his argument crushed the whole superstructure of every phase of Mormonism. But the inclosed letter, an exact copy of the one sent him, will show how nearly he succeeded in convincing me that it did. And in replying to my letter he ignored every question asked him, so I mail him another letter of this date and also inclose you a copy to publish if you desire. Ever anxious for the Your brother. cause of Christ.

WHEELING, W. Va., June 6. REV. W. B. F. TREAT. Indianapolis. Ind..

Dear Sir:-It is with pleasure I acknowledge your communication of the 5th inst., containing comments on article in SAINTS' HERALD of May 22 wherein was an article from your pen originally published in the Christian Standard. To my mind the matter in controversy is a very important one, and should be treated by the honest investigator with a view to get at the truth, and not to sustain the position or theory of any man. The statement of Christ in John 17:17, "Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth," remains today. So that wherever we find the word of God, that is truth, no matter by whom it may be opposed. I am anxious that truth may prevail, and if I am in error I want to find it out in time to be converted from the error.

With my limited powers of comprehension I am not oble to see the logic in your conclusion, that, "The long article in the SAINTS" HERALD . . . is a very lame affair." In what does its lameness consist? It gave the correct quotation from Doctrine and Covenants, which you referred to in your article. and plainly showed up the false construction which your article placed upon it. It is plainly to be seen by anyone whose mind is free from prejudice, that the statement referred to in the revelation, only pronounces condemnation upon those who, when hearing the word of God by his authorized servants would not heed it. The statement in substance is only a reiteration of that found in Mark 16:16. You believe that. Why then do you find fault with the same principle when revealed in another period of the world? Again you say: "For it yet remains that men must accept this added covenant, or be damned!" I cannot understand how you in keeping with your profession as a minister of Christ can object to a commission to men to preach the gospel in the ninteenth century, that is in harmony with the one given in the first century; nor how you can construe the statement referred to in your article to mean an "added covenant." The church you represent often clamors for the old "Jerusalem gospel" while presenting your faith, yet when you find that same gospel taught by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints you ridicule it and cry out, Mormonism! Joe Smith's doctrine! FRAUD! DELUSION!

You say: "We have all the apostles and prophets in the church today. That is all that God ever sent." I would like to know by what rule you determine those who are sent of God.

Christ promised his disciples the Comforter, the Holy Spirit, to lead them into all truth, but if I understand your faith correctly, you deny the office work of the Holy Spirit now as promised by Christ, and you certainly fail to observe the gospel principle taught and practiced anciently, by which it was conferred upon the baptized believers; viz., the laying on of hands. You make no claim to living apostles or prophets now in your church, and you do not claim that God reveals anything to your church only as you have the testimony of men who lived many centuries ago, and whose records you have no means of determining have been preserved just as they were written by the inspired writers. And if their records have been preserved free from error, how in the absence of revelation or the Spirit do you know they wrote truly? Paul was an educated man in his time, but that did not give him a knowledge of the gospel, for he says he neither received it by man, "but by the revelation of Jesus Christ." Peter had been with Christ quite a while, and knew him as a man, and yet he could not say he was the Christ only when it was revealed to him of the Father. I agree with you that Christ would be with the apostles to the end of the world "officially," and if you will read Mark 16:16-18 you will find what a recognition of their official acts would bring to the believers. Do you believe that now? Again, in Matthew 28: 20 you will find the condition named upon which is predicted his being with them unto the end of the world; viz., "Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you."

Again, in your letter you say: "One of the first proofs of a genuine church of Christ is the fact that they still accept the apostles and prophets AS PRESENT in their teachings and do not substitute the Smiths and the Rigdons with power to add to the word of God."

By this you would be understood as meaning that the Latter Day Saints had substituted Smiths and Rigdons with power to add to the word of God. So far as Joseph Smith, Jr., and Sidney Rigdon were concerned, they never made any such claims. The church never made any such claim for them. Is it possible you have been writing for the information of the ignorant regarding the stupendous fraud which you term "Mormonism," and yet you are so ignorant of what it is and the foundation upon which it rests? Do you not know that it is an established principle in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints that no man can add to or change God's word? And that while God can give revelations through whom he chooses, he will not give a revelation that conflicts with his word as previously revealed? It seems to me the best proof of a genuine church of Christ would be in finding an organization after the pattern named by Paul in Ephesians 4 where he says, "There is one body and one spirit," "One Lord, one faith, one baptism." And in the 11th verse we find the officers of that body to be "Apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, and teachers." The 12th verse tells us what they are there for, and the 13th tells how long they are to remain. The 14th assigns a reason why they should remain. You will either have to conclude that is a safe rule to follow or else decide that Paul was not competent authority on that question. For my part I prefer to stand by that than to follow a church whose only claim to authority rests upon, "IF we have authority to preach we have authority to baptize." I would like to know how you find out that, "The first qualification of an apostle was that he should be a WITNESS. Therefore no one who was not a witness to Christ's resurrection from the dead can be an apostle of Christ, Rome and Mormonism to the contrary notwithstanding." Were not the twelve apostles before they were witnesses of Christ's resurrection? Judas Iscariot an apostle? Was he a witness of Christ's resurrection? I am still more surprised that by the rule you thus establish you exclude Paul from the list of apostles! If Joseph Smith had been the great impostor you would have people believe he was, he did not teach anything but what would harmonize with the Bible better than that.

I do not know why you refer to the Rigdons (in the plural).

Sidney Rigdon was the only one that was prominent in church work with Joseph Smith, and prior to his uniting with the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, he was a prominent minister in the church you now claim to represent. And in fact he had as much to do with bringing it into existence as Alexander Campbell. Had he not possessed a love of truth more than worldly prosperity and earthly fame, he doubtless would still be honored by the followers of Alexander Campbell as much as Campbell himself. It is right to respect all good men and give proper credit to all for whatever good they do, but it is not right to follow any man farther than he follows Christ.

Sincerely yours for truth and justice, O. J. TARY.

WHEELING, W. Va., June 19, 1901. REV. W. B. F. TREAT, Indianapolis, Ind.,

Dear Sir:—Your letter of the 11th inst. utterly fails to answer mine of the 8th, notwithstanding you say the answers to my questions are easily given. That is what I want, I desire information that can be supported by the word of God; and when you convince me that way that I am holding on to a false religion, I will discard it at once. writings instead of reasoning along scriptural lines, are nothing but a labored juggling of words, the sole object of which is to throw the casual reader off his guard and divert his mind from the real issue by heaping approbrium on the character of Joseph Smith and the work he accomplished. If that be a proper criterion by which to judge Mormonism, as you call it, then it would also be the proper way to examine early Christianity. I dare say you will not admit the fairness of heathen, infidel, or Jewish writers who seek to overthrow the doctrine of Christ in a similar way. If you do, you may as well give up your profession at once.

You refer me to an article from your pen in the Christian Standard of March 10, 1900, and then say, "It deals principally with questions of FACT underlying the whole superstructure of Mormonism." I have read and reread the the article, and I have no feelings except sympathy for anyone whose craft is in such desperate straits that he must resort to such unfair misrepresentations of plain facts to malign the character of a people (who are teaching only the plain truths of God's revealed word,) for the purpose of preventing some of his flock from being deceived (?) by the teaching of that which is in harmony with God's law. Instead of answering my questions you state, "I believe the article I send you covers the only essential questions of debate between us." That article does not touch upon the questions I asked you. I fail to find in it a single indictment against Mormonism, which, when stripped of the sophistry with which it is clothed, would stand as proven in any court of equity. The whole article would stand impeached upon the face of itself, because of the numerous statements it contains, which may, as you say, deal with facts, but not for them. It deals with them by diametrical opposites. To point out all such statements would require too long a letter, besides it is unnecessary; for anyone who reads it carefully and compares it with the writings from which excerpts are made, can easily discern that truth is made to suffer by exaggeration, misapplication, and false construction. As a specimen I note this quotation from your Christian Standard article under the caption of "Mormonism as a Delusion." "But if stress of circumstances should compel the suppression of polygamy in Utah, as it has already, in fact caused the Josephites to abandon this practice, their great system of fraud and deception in the name of religion will still continue its work, unless it is impeached by its own witnesses." So far as this relates to Utah and the practice of polygamy by the Brighamites, I have nothing to say. I am not going to defend any church or people in this age or any other, in the practice of a crime, both against the law of God and the laws of our land. But by your wording of that sentence you say in substance, that the Josephites, or, properly speaking, the Reorganized Church, has been compelled to abandon polygamy. Now before they could abandon it, they would have to espouse it, and that is something you know, or ought to know, they have never done. If you do not know that they have never taught. practiced, sanctioned, or fostered that crime, you are not as well informed as I give you credit of being. And your ignorance, if such it be, on that line, is inexcusable. If you are in possession of the facts on that case then your statement is inexcusable, and altogether incompatible with your profession. It may serve as a blind to prevent some of your flock from investigating the truth, but it will carry no weight in the minds of well-informed persons, whether they are friends or foes of the Reorganized Church. The doctrine and practice of polygamy has no more aggressive enemy than the Josephites, as you call them, have always been.

Again, in your article I find this: "The apostles of Christ did not testify by faith. They testified in a straightforward manner to what they saw and heard. Not so with the Mormon witnesses. These testified by faith. That is Christ's witnesses testified to what they saw, and the Mormon witnesses testified to what they did not see."

Now you would confer a great favor if you would tell "by what authority" you speak these things in the name of truth. In Paul's letter to the Romans, 8th chapter, he says: "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God." "The Spirit itself beareth witness with our spirit that we are the children of God." Now did he testify by faith, or by what he saw and heard? Or did he testify by the Spirit? And I care not which one of these you take, you will by your own deductions disqualify yourself as a witness on the matter under discussion. You were not present at the giving of the testimony of either the apostles, or the testimony of those whom you term the Mormon witnesses. Hence you are barred out on that score, for you cannot testify what any of them saw or did not see. It will not do for you to testify "by faith" because, for sooth, the Mormon witnesses testified by faith to what they did not see! It will not do for you to claim inspirational power or the Holy Spirit to testify by, for then you would be as much an impostor as those whose characters you are besmirching. So the only thing left you is to resolve something like this: church A. Campbell set up, and which I am trying to perpetuate is right, then Mormonism must be wrong and I'll prove it, if I have to sacrifice every revelation God has given, in order to accomplish this much-to-be-desired result."

Omitting more than two colums of jugglery, we come to the postscript: "It does a Mormon no good to show him that Joseph's teachings contradict the New Testament teachings, for their doctrine is that all old covenants are done away and that the new covenant made with Joe Smith is binding on the world. The only way to meet Mormonism is to understand it." Taking the last sentence in the light of the first part of the postscript, you may as well stop trying to meet Mormonism. For by your own words it is proven you don't understand it. No one that does understand the doctrine of the Latter Day Saints will make such a statement as the above and expect it to be accepted as thief!" in order to divert attention to some one else; and so we see disciples of Alexander Campbell who accept a part of the New Testament and reject many of the essential parts of it, crying out to the world that the Latter Day Saints (who accept all the scriptures) are putting the teachings of Joe Smith ahead of the New Testament. Well indeed did Paul describe such persons in writing to Timothy as, "Having a form of godliness but denying the power thereof. From such turn away."—2 Timothy 3: 5.

I will notice but one more statement of yours in this letter. That is the one in your letter to me in which you say the "Book of Doctrine and Covenants provides for polygamy and the taking of the goods of the Gentiles." I do not know what may be in the Brighamite or Utah edition of Doctrine and Covenants, but no such thing can be found in any revelation given to the church during the lifetime of Joseph Smith, nor has any such thing ever been accepted or published by the true Church of Jesus Christ since its organization. Section 111 Doctrine Covenants gives the position of the church on the marriage question. In the formula used in the marriage ceremony are these words: "You both mutually agree to be each other's companion, husband and wife, observing the legal rights belonging to this condition; that is, keeping yourselves wholly for each other, and from all others during your lives." In paragraph 4 of same section: "Inasmuch as this Church of Christ has been reproached with the crime of fornication, and polygamy: we declare that we believe that one man should have one wife; and one woman but one husband, except in case of death, when either is at liberty to marry again." Does that seem to provide for polygamy? If it does, it must be the same way the Campbellite Church provides for apostles and prophets-all dead ones since 1800 years ago!

As to the taking of the goods of the Gentiles, it is on a par with the above-about as far from the true teachings of the church as it is possible to get. When it is well known that the Latter Day Saints were repeatedly robbed, plundered, driven from their homes, and many of them shot down in cold blood from 1831 to 1844, and that by a class of people destitute of either principle or humanity, and often urged on to their unholy work by professed followers of Christ, it is like adding insult to injury to state that their teachings provided for the taking of the goods of the Gentiles. If they could only have been let alone in peaceful possession of their lawfully acquired property, that was all they ever asked.

In the hope of the ultimate triumph of truth and right, I am, postscript, you may as well stop trying to meet Mormonism. For by your own words it is proven you don't understand it. No one that does understand the doctrine of the Latter Day Saints will make such a statement as the above and expect it to be accepted as truth. ### PREPARED READING FOR JULY MEETINGS OF DAUGHTERS OF ZION LOCALS.

Respectfully yours.

O. J. TARY.

Dear Sister Walker:—I have just read your letter to us in the HERALD of May 29, wherein you ask what we are going to do to aid the work this year. The question came to me with force, doubtless because of my deep appreciation of what I have gained in the meetings of the Daughters of Zion, in listening to the discussion of the timely and important subjects you have provided us.

All that is said in our meetings cannot be retained in the memory, but I find very often in my own experience, that, as circumstances occur, there will come to my mind something helpful that was suggested by the Daughters of Zion.

It is in remembrance of the good I have received and the gratitude I feel that we have such an organization, that I comply with your request; and it is a small request you make of us that we simply write you what subjects we would like treated the coming year. I trust a sufficient number will respond to guarantee a continuance of your assistance in our behalf.

Before I read your letter I had already thought of two of the three subjects you have already mentioned, viz., "Faith" and "Obedience," which were not, in my opinion, sufficiently canvassed in the short hour we are together once a month. I remember distinctly the meeting at which obedience was discussed—the time for closing came all too soon and I went home unsatisfied. It seemed as though there was so much more to be deduced from the subject than was obtained by us. Perhaps I am more particularly interested in the subject of obedience, because at present it is my daily problem, and I doubt not it may be a problem with others.

Some time ago I was handed a book which treated upon topics relative to the government of children. I quote a few statements made by this author, Jacob Abbott. says: "Children have no natural instinct of obedience to their parents, though they have other instincts by means of which the habit of obedience, as an acquisition, can easily be formed." He goes on to say that the responsibility rests with the mother. That in witnessing the disobedience of a child our reflection should be, not, "What a bad boy!" but "What an unfaithful or incompetent mother!" The mother, he says, is to understand that the principle of obedience is not to be expected to come by nature into the heart of her child, but to be implanted by education. She must understand this so fully as to feel that if she finds that her children are disobedient to her commandsleaving out of view cases of peculiar and extraordinary temptation-it is her fault, not theirs. Perhaps I ought not to say her fault, exactly, for she may have done as well as she knows how; but at any rate, her failure. Instead, therefore, of being angry with them, or fretting and complaining about the trouble they give her, she should leave them, as it were, out of the case, and turn her thoughts to herself, and to her own management, with a view to the discovery and the correcting of her own derelictions and errors. In a word, she must set regularly and systematically about the work of teaching her children to subject their wills to hers." Many times, I believe, we have expected too much of the child. We have lost sight of the fact that obedience is to "be implanted by education." Education implies process of time. Even Jesus learned obedience. Then, before we can obtain obedience from our children, we must first know how to teach it, and where shall we mothers turn for instruction; it seems to me to the organization of the Daughters of Zion. There we may have the benefit of the researches of those who make a study of these questions. We may hear the experience of our elder sisters who have had to deal with the very problems we are dealing with today. We may together study the law of the Lord, and unite our prayers for divine assistance in our work.

The subject of obedience is so vast that we could occupy several meetings on this alone. I mean to say the subject itself and the branches thereof. For instance, I would like to hear discussed some of the questions taken up by Mr. Abbott. Such as, Philosophy of punishment. (a) Coöperation of the offender. (b) Corporal punishment. (c) Rewarding obedience. Sympathy: I. The parent with the child. II. The child with the parent.

I believe the other subject, mentioned in the beginning of this letter, "Faith," is of no less importance than obedience. If it be true, that "Faith is the foundation of all righteousness," then we should learn how to lay that foundation and lay it well. In Luke 18:8, Jesus, talking to his disciples, said, "When the Son of Man cometh will he find faith on the earth?" That simple, and yet strong confidence and trust in God, is what we must possess if we would be carried safely through the trying scenes of life.

A little anecdote is related of a mother who gave her two little ones books and toys to amuse them, while she went to attend to some work in an upper room. Half an hour passed quietly, and then a timid voice at the foot of the stairs called out:

"Mamma, are you there?"

"Yes, darling."

"All right, then!" and the child went back to its play. By and by the little voice was heard again, repeating,

"Mamma, are you there?"

"Yes."

"All right, then;" and the little ones returned again, satisfied and reassured, to their toys.

How we mothers enjoy that sweet confidence our children repose in us. How we enjoy being their protectors and assuring them of their safety with us. But what perfect enjoyment it would be when these children are grown, and while treading the slippery and uncertain paths of youth, we could see their faces upturned to the heavenly parent and hear them ask, "Father, are you there?" If our teaching would produce such faith and confidence in God as this, shall we not make every effort in our power to do this duty to our children?

When I think of the great responsibility upon us, the training of immortal souls, I tremble, lest after all I may fail.

Recognizing the need of divine help in this most difficult but sacred task, I too feel like calling upon the heavenly Parent and saying, Father, take my hand.

GRACE KRAHL.

WE are pleased to place before you the above letter of our young sister for consideration and discussion at this meeting, and believing as we do, that no more important subject can engage your thoughts or time, we feel sure that it will most fully occupy the hour of your meeting, and hence will only suggest one or two thoughts in connection therewith. Mr. Abbott, the author from whom Sr. Grace quotes, makes the assertion that if the child, as a rule, is not obedient, it is the fault of the mother. We believe this is true, though not of the mother alone, but of the father as well. Now if our readers agree with us, the question which most naturally arises is, How is this to be remedied? Leaving this question, so far as the fathers are concerned, with them to answer. let us take it up as it relates to the mothers and see if ways and means cannot be found which in the hands of those who are willing to use them, will answer (in a measure at least) this most important question.

"Train up a child in the way he should go" is the very best of advice, but the question most naturally comes, How am I to train even a child, in regard to that of which I myself am ignorant? If upon any one subject I myself have received instruction, especially if I have seen it practically applied and know that it has worked successfully, then if I have even an ordinary capacity for imparting that which I know, I am prepared to train, or help, another; but not until then. It is just here that so much failure has its origin. It is an applied gospel which we need. "How shall they hear without a preacher and how shall one preach except he be sent?" Does not the very fact of sending imply qualification? Here, then, is a theme for discussion, and food for thought may be found in the following:

"The other day an elderly woman was talking to me of the way women were now coming to the fore in all sorts of ways that a few years ago they would not have thought of, and she said one thing which struck her as very odd was that no one seemed to think of motherhood as a profession, which was well worthy of study.

"When one comes to think of it, certainly one cannot help saying what a pity it is that so few young women have the least idea as to the management of children, mentally, morally, or physically. They marry very generally to bring into the world poor little babes which they understand how to rear about as well as they would the rearing of an ostrich chick, or any other strange foreign creature. This is very pitiful, and if only mothers would see that their daughters had some sort of instruction in the management of children it would save an immense amount of suffering to many young mothers and to their hapless offspring."

Sunday School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR. Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa.

IN coming before an audience of Sunday school workers the work of the Sunday school is naturally the theme for thought. And as those assembled here represent the workers of the Fremont district our minds naturally turn to the work of that district. In trying to fill the office of superintendent of this district, it is quite necessary in our efforts to advance the work that we occasionally make a little comparison of the records as the years pass to see if we are making any progress. By referring to the record we find that the organization of the district was effected about 1889 with but three schools. At that time there was no general association but it organized the following year. Our experience at that time was necessarily very limited and the workers, too, were limited to a very few. Our helps were almost a minus quantity. No Quarterly, no department in the HERALD, no general officers to consult. Our conventions were almost at a loss to know what to do with the time when they met. There was generally two sessions held, one was a business session and the other was ample time for all the other work to be done.

But now how different! Instead of three schools we have eight. Our membership is more than three times what it was then. In numbers our workers are many, but the advancement in line of more perfect systems of work and better methods employed cannot be so accurately estimated. One only needs to look around to see that we have indeed made progress in these lines. We are gathering in and holding a greater per cent of the children than ever before. The youth of the various schools are taking an interest in the work and helping roll on this gospel message. We are receiving the approbation of the branch officers and the live Sunday school makes a live branch.

As the

is to make Christians and to so train up the children that they will not depart from virtue's path into the wayside of immorality, we needs must be in earnest and begin at the beginning when the tender life is plastic and impressionable. "As the faint flash of morning light on the eastern horizon heralds the splendor of day, so the incoming of Christ into the life introduces a grander and nobler existence." We must not only teach the loving deeds of the Father and Son, but we must also teach the children how to follow in their footsteps. We must be evangelistic in our work. Hold up the sample in all its beauty and urge the necessity of working the pattern in our own lives.

If we would have the CHILDREN LOVE THE SABBATH SCHOOL, then let us make them feel it is their Sabbath school. It is human nature to take an interest in that which is our own. This is a principle which holds good in the young as well as the old, and in the old as well as in the young. Then make the children feel that the Sunday school is their very own by giving them something to do that will make them feel the importance of their being there every Sunday. You know when we give the children a little corner in the garden to plant some seeds in, it becomes "our garden" and the pride extends from that little corner till it takes in the entire enclosure. Give the children some special thing to do and as they grow older and learn to perform the little duty well, promote to something of greater responsibility, and you will see that his interest will grow as his responsibility increases.

If we would

there is no better way than by giving the little one work as has been suggested, and by continued promotion we will in time have a corps of officers that will be a credit to any organization. We all feel the need of trained officers and none feel this more than a willing worker whose heart is in the work and who is willing to take hold and do whatever he is asked to do the best he can. But he feels his best is very poor. He has the zeal and willingness but he has had no experience and works to such an advantage as no one but himself can realize. Some schools hold normal classes where the young are trained, but when these classes are held during the study hour that class is deprived of the scripture lesson, which is not right. Our Sunday school is for the study of the scripture and not for the training of workers. This must be done outside of the regular Sunday school session except the training we can do by giving as many as possible some task to perform in the regular session.

THE WORK OF THE DISTRICT

is moving onward. A greater feeling of unity exists than heretofore. More uniform methods are employed. We believe we are safe in saving that there is an awakened interest in Bible study such as not been known before. This we believe due to the plan of Bible study now being pursued. Our aim in presenting this Bible study to the workers of the district is to get a better understanding of the Bible and its arrangement and makeup. So many of us content ourselves with getting our Sunday school lesson the best way we can and take no time for further study. A knowledge of the Bible is necessary for the teacher that he may be able to find what he wants at a moment's inotice.

That he may be able to bring in additional scripture for evidence. Although this knowledge is quite necessary it is equally essential that we are in possession of the Spirit that guides into all truth. So much of our work is too mechanical. We lack spirituality. I believe God is just as willing to give his Spirit to the Sunday school teacher when he is in all humility trying to teach his word as he is to aid the preacher in the pulpit. If we would succeed in our effort to advance this work we must have this Spirit. God has promised it to us. Let us study for it, live for it, pray for it and it will surely be ours to enjoy.

That we have succeeded in a measure we feel satisfied. But Edward Bok says, "The easiest part of success is making it, the hardest is maintaining it." To maintain the height of success we have already achieved will not admit of a weakening of our forces. But we must ever be on the lookout for something to block the wheels else when we stop we will run back. The faster we climb the steeper must the ascent be and necessarily the harder to climb. The greater the success achieved the harder will it be to maintain.

To us the knowledge that we have been able at least to hold the work of the district where we took it up brings a feeling of gratification. But the dominant feeling of gratitude is to him who has made it possible for us to accomplish what little we have, and to the faithful workers of the district who have so cheerfully responded to every call made upon them. The measure of our success is always proportionate to the effort put forth. "This effort is of ourselves and comes from within." The most we can do is to do what we can do all we can and do it in the best way we know how. May God help us to do our MRS. T. A. HOUGAS. best.

For the Fremont, Iowa, district convention.

NOTICE TO SUNDAY SCHOOLS AND OFFICERS.

The following rules applying to the sale and mailing of Quarterlies were agreed upon by the officers of the General Sunday School Association at a meeting held in Independence, Missouri, subsequent to the late General Convention:

1. All subscriptions for Quarterlies will be promptly discontinued at the expiration of the time for which they are ordered, unless the subscription be renewed.

2. No Quarterlies will be mailed at the yearly rate unless a full year's subscription be paid in advance.

3. When necessary, credit for not more than one year will be allowed on Quarterlies, but in such case they will be charged at the single quarter rate.

The above rules will take effect with the mailing of the October-December issue.

We believe the above rules to be absolutely necessary and fair and just to all. And that you may the better see the reasonableness thereof we offer the following explanations.

Rule 1. We discontinue the Quarterly because: (1) Schools are discontinued and do not need the Quarterlies and no notice is ever given to that effect. (2) Nearly all schools need to often alter their order. They need more of one grade and less of another, and the easiest way is to make an entirely new order. (3) Schools change officers frequently. The new officer orders the Quarterlies but says nothing about any standing order. If the old order is continued, you will have two sets of Quarterlies. Schools have re-ceived as high as three and four sets by this old method of continuing orders. What should be remembered now is that if you want Quarterlies, you must order them every time your subscription expires, for they will not be sent beyond that time.

Rule 2. If you expect the benefit of the yearly rate, which is about 25 per cent cheaper the quarterly rate, you must pay for your Quarterlies a full year in advance. Some have written the HERALD Office and insisted on having the benefit of the yearly rate and pay at the expiration of the year. To allow this would do injustice to the school which ordered one quarter at a time and sent the cash with order. It would be "money in their pockets" to hold their cash to the end of the year and pay all at once. It would be selling cheaper on time than for cash in advance, a business principle which every one knows is both wrong and ruinous.

Rule 3. It is not intended to bring the Quarterlies onto a strictly "cash in advance," basis, as that would deprive many of our schools of the Quarterly entirely. But it is necessary to do business on correct business The school that cannot pay in advance for Quarterlies may get them anyway and pay for them sometime during the year. But do not ask for them at the yearly rate, as that cannot be granted in justice to others.

As stated above, these rules will take effect with the mailing of the last quarter for the year, or about September 1. Sunday school officers would do well to call especial attention to this notice in order that no mistakes be made. We believe that all will be satisfied in this matter at least as soon as they get themselves fully adjusted to the situation.

Ever hopeful for the prosperity of the work, we are
Your fellow workers,

T. A. HOUGAS, Gen. Supt. DAVID J. KRAHL, Gen. Sec.

DES MOINES.

Convention met at Boonesboro, Iowa, May 31, H. A. McCoy presiding, Orpha Emslie secretary pro tem. Reports were read from Head Grove, Perry Hope, and Boonesboro schools. Superintendents of Eden and Boonesboro schools reported. The secretary's book did not arrive, so reports from other schools were not on hand. The treasurer's and librarian's reports were read. A. McCoy offered his resignation as district superintendent and J. R. Epperson was elected to fill the vacancy. The Des Moines district petitioned the General Association to furnish them quarterlies containing the lesson text. Mattie Hughes was appointed to fill vacancy on the program committee. Some of the subjects discussed in the afternoon were as follows: Should not a good superintendent be placed in district and his traveling expenses paid? What place should works of fiction occupy in our Sunday school libraries? Should one making no profession of religion teach in our schools? All schools visited by the superintendent are to pay as much of his expenses as they can, and the district treasurer is authorized to pay the balance. The papers prepared and read be-fore the convention are to be sent from school to school and read by the superintendents to their respective schools. In the evening an interesting program was rendered by the district. Adjourned to meet at Rhodes, Iowa, August 16.

A rule adopted by a former conference, providing for a semiannual per capita ence, providing for a semiannual per capitatax, was repealed. The time of the next district reunion, to be held at Wheatland, was set for August 23, and it was provided that all reasonable expenses of the reunion in excess of the amount subscribed by the Wheatland branch be defrayed by the district treasury. The district Sunday school association petitioned for one hour each day during the next reunion, and for one whole day with the exception of the evening session for Sunday school work. The petition was indorsed by the conference and referred to those having charge of the reunion. Election of officers resulted in the choice of High Priest James Moler for district president, V. H. Goff clerk, and John Burlington district treasurer. Bishop's agent, G. W. Beebe, was sustained, and the appointment of Vina H. Goff as district historian confirmed. Priest August Deller was granted a license by the district, and the district treasurer was empowered to devise means for a systematic replenishing of the treasury. It was decided to hold the next conference at Nevada, Missouri, September 28, 1901. Thanks were extended to retiring officers and to the hospitable Saints at Veve.

Miscellaneous Department.

AN APPEAL.

To the Saints of the Independence Stake:-In order that we may place before you our views on consecration, surplus, tithings, etc., we present the following:

We indorse the statements made in the HERALD of May 29, 1901, vol. 48, page 433. "Consecration is the act of setting apart what one may have and chooses to spare to the upbuilding of the cause of Christ, as we and the rest of the Saints understand the To consecrate is to put into the Bishop's hands, or into the storehouse, whatever of moneys, or other property, of which a person may be possessed, which that person intends to set apart to be used for the work of the ministry, building a temple, store-houses, meeting houses, the care of the poor, and any and all other uses which the needs of church, in any and all of its business affairs may require, or that may be found advisable or necessary.

"Consecrations are such sums of money, goods, wares, merchandise, houses, lots, and lands, which the members of the church may put into the hands of the Bishop, or his associate bishops, or agents, which such mem-bers may intend shall be used for the purposes referred to, all to be used in legitimate ways for the general good of the body and the necessities of those who may need. .

"All this is favorable to the carrying out of the law of tithing, consecration, and free-will offering, as found set forth in the Doctrine and Covenants, these being but three parts of the one law, providing for three divisions of finance collections; tithing, the tenth, or tithe; freewill offering, a larger giving than a tithe, after the tithe has been paid; and a consecration, of whatever a man may have, more than he may have need, his station, business, family, and his personal needs all being taken account of."

And thus enjoined upon us as the Lord has directed us, we read:

"If thou lovest me, thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments. And, behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support, that which thou hast to impart unto them, with a covenant and a deed which cannot be broken: and inasmuch as ye impart of your substance unto the poor, ye will do it unto me, and they shall be laid before the bishop of my church and his counselors, two of the elders, or high priests, such as he shall or has appointed and set apart for that purpose."—D. C. 42:8.

And also this: "Verily, thus saith the Lord, I require all their surplus property to be put into the hands of the bishop of my church of Zion, for the building of mine house, and for the laying the foundation of Zion, and for the priest-hood, and for the debts of the presidency of my church; and this shall be the beginning of the tithing of my people; and after that, those who have thus been tithed, shall pay one tenth of all their interest annually; and this shall be a standing law unto them for-ever, for my holy priesthood, saith the Lord. "Verily I say unto you, It shall come to pass that all those who gather unto the land of Zion shall be tithed of their surplus propshall not be found worthy to abide among you. And I say unto you, if my people observe not this law, to keep it holy, and by this law sanctify the land of Zion unto me, that my statutes and my judgments may be kept thereon, that it may be most holy, behold, verily I say unto you, it shall not be a land of Zion unto you; and this shall be an ensample unto all the stakes of Zion. Even Amen,"-D. C. 106:1, 2.

Only by these principles can Zion be built up. There is no other way by which the Lord will accept the building up of his king-

"Behold, I say unto you, Were it not for the transgressions of my people, speaking concerning the church and not individuals, they might have been redeemed even now; but, behold, they have not learned to be obedient to the things which I require at their hands, but are full of all manner of evil, and do not impart of their substance, as becometh saints, to the poor and afflicted among them, and are not united according to the union required by the law of the celestial kingdom; and Zion cannot be built up unless it is by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom, otherwise I cannot receive her unto myself; and my people must needs be chastened until they learn obedience, if it must needs be, by the things which they suffer."-Doc. and Cov. 102: 2.

We praise the Lord because he has brought us thus far, and that he has directed the or ganizing of stakes, that the revelations given to the church might be better carried out for the blessing of his people. We long to see the day when all the blessings promised of the Lord will be enjoyed by his people, when we shall see the law of God carried out as it was in the days of Enoch. Consecration, surplus, tithing and offering giving, must be the free act of every individual. In Moses' time when an offering or sacrifice was made, it was a voluntary act as is shown in Leviticus 1:3.

When Ananias, and Sapphira, his wife, sold their possessions, Peter said, "While it re-mained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power?" (Acts 5:4.) He could have done as he pleased with his property, but the awful crime was that they conspired to lie, not only to man, but to the Holy Ghost.

"Behold, the Lord requireth the heart and a willing mind; and the willing and the obedient shall eat the good of the land of Zion in these last days; and the rebellious shall be cut off out of the land of Zion, and shall be sent away, and shall not inherit the land; for, verily I say that the rebellious are not of the blood of Ephraim, wherefore they shall be plucked out. Behold, I, the Lord, have made my church in these last days, like unto a judge sitting on a hill, or in a high place, to judge the nations; for it shall come to pass, that the inhabitants of Zion shall judge all things pertaining to Zion; and liars, and hypocrites shall be proved by them, and they who are not apostles and prophets shall be known."—D. C. 64: 7.

The bishopric of Independence Stake feel it to be their solemn duty to call upon all the Saints in the stake to put forth a special effort to comply with the law as herein set forth. We are all stewards over our own properties, and responsible only to God. Let it not be said of one who now lives in Zion, as it was said of them in former years:

"Now, I, the Lord, am not well pleased with the inhabitants of Zion, for there are idlers among them; and their children are also growing up in wickedness; they also seek not earnestly the riches of eternity, but their eyes are full of greediness. These things ought not to be, and must be done away from among them; wherefore let my servant Oliver Cowdery carry these sayings unto the land of Zion."—D. C. 68: 4.

PASTORAL.

To the Saints of Chatham District, Greeting:-As I am appointed to labor with you for another season, I wish to have your prayers and assistance for the upbuilding of God's work. I shall do the best I can as led by the Spirit of wisdom. I hope God will direct me that I may be a success in his vineyard. I start in at a few miles from Melborne, a new place.

Any of the branches who may see fit or would like to correspond with me, I would be glad to have you do so. You can always find me at Box 625, St. Thomas, Ontario. I would be glad to have any of my brethren or sisters in the district acquaint me of new places to preach, or any other matter that may assist God's work.

I have been with you one year. I hope to see many of your faces again before long to do you good; but in the meantime, be good to one another, and seek to build up God's work in the different faces you are in. Try to be without blame in word and deed.

We are again dismissed from another wellattended conference. Business went off well. Several thought there were from six to seven hundred. The Zone branch is a noted branch; one of the old branches; some of God's noble people there, with Brn. Arthur Leverton, J. Taylor, and Bro. Rancher at the helm. was one of the noted spots of the days of Taylor farm where God gave many blessings to his people. Well, we are dismissed with "God bless you," and "Good-bye till we meet again." May it be sweet to meet at Wabash next Cctober, the second Friday, Saturday, Sunday, and Monday. There will be many scenes to pass through before that time Some of us may not be permitted to in this life, but I hope we will meet in the resurrection of the just is my prayer. I was glad to see Bro G. Green sustained district president and Bro. A. Leverton vice president, Bro. Coburn secretary, and Bro. John Badder treasurer. Brn. Alma Barmore and A. Knisley are using the tent this season. hope God will bless our united efforts this summer. Good-bye.

Yours in hope and love to all,

T. A. PHILLIPS.

To the Officers and Saints of the Southeastern Illinois District, Greeting; Dear Brethren and Sisters:—Having been re-turned to this field by General Conference authorities, and having previously been chosen of you to the presidency of the district, we wish to assume the duties of this responsible position by securing your confidence and cooperation in holding what we have, and securing a condition of healthy growth in the future. We cannot accomplish this alone, but by the aid of all the officials and members of the various branches, we Priesthood meetings in each branch will be a necessity to secure success, and we aim to attend to this in each branch so as to have a mutual understanding and plans of operation in our future work.

And now, one of the first duties, as we can see, is to comply with the word of the Lord, "Let the college debt be paid." We hold a list from the Bishopric to enter and return all names with contributions. We invite the president of each branch to visit and invite all the members to give their names with money or subscriptions immediately, that we may be able to return our list to the Bishop by the 10th of July, as per request in the HERALD. What can you do? Address, Zenith, Wayne county, Illinois. Your brethren and fellow-servants, Ingospel bonds,

J. T. DAVIS, Pres. I. A. MORRIS, Asst. Pres.

To the Ministry, Saints, and Friends of the Eastern Iowa District, Greeting:—Having been placed as submissionary in charge of this field. I take this opportunity to address you. From what experience I have had in missionary work, I have learned that this glorious gospel is to be carried on in a cooperative way, as the Apostle Paul says, "We are laborers together with God: ye are God's husbandry, ye are God's building." If we therefore shall all try and realize the necessity of laboring together with God, the work will move on grandly this conference year.

As a ministry, let us try and master that hydra-headed monster, jealousy, remembering to be meek and lowly and pray without ceasing, is the pattern given us by our Chief Shepherd.

Our field is large, comprising twenty-one counties, and only five missionaries, three only of whom will be actively engaged this summer. Surely we feel to pray, as did Jesus and the disciples of old, "Lord, the harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few." But we are not the only ones, for from every field in the world the same is echoed and reëchoed. So, dear Saints, let every one of us step to the front and pay our tithing, and let us not forget the college, for the Lord has said, "The college debt should be paid." Saints, do you know how I felt about that statement? I felt almost to hang my head in shame. To think the Lord must stand forth and tell us to pay our honest debts! O, may it never occur again to the Israel of these Howard, Chickasaw, Bremer, Blackhawk, Benton, and Iowa are the western border counties of our district. I request that all the Saints and friends in this territory who desire new openings made communicate with me, and we will do our best to supply the de-My address is Box 294, Fairbank, Iowa.

Let us as missionaries push our work into new fields, and if we shall do this the Lord says he who gave the law will be honored and peace come to Israel as a cherishing fountain. May all Israel be ready to witness the coronation of the great King.

J. R. SUTTON.

On arriving in my new, yet old, field, I already discover much to be done, especially in a pastoral way, as many spiritually stupid ones need to be encouraged. The work has been divided into two departments by our missionary in charge, and we have been put in charge of the missionary wing, which we shall try to magnify, expecting to be aided by the local brethren, and sisters too. The world would often rather listen to good singing than preaching, so we shall try to enlist the service of some of the much musical talent, and "sing to them the gospel story" as well as preach it to them. We, as soon as we regain a little more physical strength, shall begin to hold series of meetings at the missions, beginning at the St. George mission, then the Aspey, and then South Park; then elsewhere as doors open. We need to advertise much, and shall ask the Saints for a missionary fund to carry on this work. We shall obtain a list of the willing missionaries and try to systemize the work so each will know his or her task—or pleasure. To the willing it is a pleasure to spread the good news of the kingdom. We are now enjoying the shelter of the rooftree of Bro. and Sr. C. H. Isleib, whose number, 1913 Holman street, will be our address for the present. We are pleased to note the interest taken in our Stewartsville reunion, and hope to see many familiar and more new tooforget date, August 16 to 25.

SPECIAL MISSIONARY APPOINTMENT.

To Those Concerned:-From now until the end of the conference year, Bro. James Huff, of Omaha, will labor in the Northern Nebraska district under the direction of Bro. C. E. Butterworth.

JAMES CAFFALL, Missionary in Charge.

NORTH PLATTE, Neb., June 18.
Duly approved by Bishopric.
E. L. KELLEY, Presiding Bishop.

COLLEGE NOTICE.

Saints of Northern Michigan District, Dear Brethren:-Having received notice from the Bishop, requesting me to solicit aid from the members of this district for the purpose of paying off the college debt at Lamoni, Iowa, and being about to enter into a discussion here at Shabbona, Michigan, I will not have time to visit you in person. I therefore take this method of asking the presidents of branches throughout the district to present the matter before their respective branches, requesting the members to do all they reasonaby can for that purpose. Will the scattered members also do all they can, sending the same to me to Reed City, Michigan, an account of which will be kept, and about the middle of July I will forward the whole to the Bishop, stating the amount given by each branch. I am, Very truly your brother,
J. J. CORNISH.

BISHOP'S AGENTS' NOTICES.

To the Saints in Utah:-This is the first time that I have addressed the Saints in Utah upon the subject of tithing since my appointment as Bishop's agent. I do not appointment as Bishop's agent. know that it would be necessary to do so now, were there not greater demands made upon the treasury this year than ever before. I suppose this is true of most if not all the districts in the church, as more missionaries were sent out by the late General Conference than by any other the Reorganization has ever held.

The families of four missionaries are now depending upon us for support, instead of two as formerly. This will require a little more sacrifice upon the part of us all and give each of us an opportunity to 'Prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."

Send all remittances to the undersigned, and the Lord will bless you as you bless others of the household of faith."

Your sister in Christ, MRS. JANE D. COOPER. 1509 Washington Ave., Ogden, Utah.

NOTICES.

To the Saints in Kewanee District:—At our conference in Millersburg it was voted to purchase a new top for our district tent. Brn. J. W. Bean, O. H. Bailey, and F. A. Russell were chosen as a committee to receive funds for and purchase the same. Saints are responding promptly and cheerfully. Send money to J. W. Bean, Joy, Illinois. Let each do his part in aiding the tent fund. F. A. RUSSELL,

For the Committee.

Saints of Northwest Kansas district, we again appeal to you in behalf of the tent fund. The time for the reunion is rapidly approaching. We must have a tent for the reunion. All who have not responded, please do so by a liberal donation. Send money to me, Box 261, Greenleaf, Kansas. L. G. Gurwell, treasurer.

REUNION NOTICES.

To the Saints of Northeastern Kansas District:—Your committee appointed at last district conference to make necessary arrangements for holding a reunion at Forest Park, Atchison, Kansas, hereby inform you that after having consulted a number of the Saints in different parts of the district, also those whose assistance is desired, we have decided to hold said reunion, commencing September 13, and continuing over two Sundays. T. A. Hougas, superintendent of Sunday School Association, and J. A. Gunsolley, assistant superintendent, who is also president of the Religio, have con-A sufficient number of sented to attend. good preachers will be in attendance. The conveniences of Forest Park are of the best, and are all offered without price. The invitation to come and occupy is cordial. The belief of many who have considered the mat-ter is that great good will result from the holding of this reunion. Full information will be published in the church papers in due time. Also an illustrated program of about 16 pages will be ready for free distribution several weeks before the commencement of the reunion. The committee respectfully the reunion. The committee respectfully ask Elder J. C. Foss, missionary in subcharge, to assist in all the preparatory work.

Committee: I. N. White, Independence, Missouri, missionary in charge; Samuel Twombly, Netawaka, Kansas, district president; James Baillie, Scranton, Kansas; R. Warnock, 717 Y street, Atchison, Kansas.

Dodds.—Sr. Charity A. Dodds, at her home, Pocatello, Idaho, May 18, 1901. She was born at Rhodes Valley, Utah, October 1, 1863; married to James H. Dodds at Corning, Iowa, March 11, 1887; baptized by Elder Heman C. Smith, February 17, 1896. Sr. Dodds was a model Christian, a good wife, and a loving mother. A loving husband, five children, five brothers, a sister, and many friends mourn. Funeral services were held in the Fontanelle, Iowa, M. E. church, May 22, 1901; sermon by Elder D. R. Chambers, assisted by Elder S. Butler and Rev. Harnard.

SHIPPY.—Charles Stuart Shippy, born in Kent county, Ontario, Canada, March 26, 1831; died at Arlington, Iowa, June 6, 1901, at the age of 70 years. He united with the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, October 27, 1889, and remained an earnest and consistent member until the end. He was a veteran of the civil war and was with General Sherman on his famous march to the sea. He leaves nine children, three brothers, and one sister to mourn. Funeral sermon by Elder L. E. Hills, Fairbank, Iowa, June 6.

PRIOR.—The funeral of Mrs. Emma Elizabeth Prior took place near Gladstone, Illinois, June 13, 1901. Elder Arthur Davis, of Atchison, Kansas, preached the sermon, Elder F. M. McDonald, of Mt. Pleasant, in charge. Sr. Prior was born in Aurora, Indiana, October 8, 1857; was married to

Allen Prior, September 8, 1878; united with the church January 8, 1891, and died June 12, 1901. She lived and died in the faith, loved by all, and she will be missed by all who knew her. Husband and three sons

HARDMAN. - Sarah Emeline Kinder was born in Missouri, June 26, 1880. October 3, 1900, became the wife of Lon S. Hardman, who did all in his power to restore her to health, but dread consumption had fastened itself upon her, and on June 12 she peacefully passed to rest. She had been a devoted Saint since childhood. The solemn service was largely attended at the church in St. Joseph, where was her home. Many mourn her, but in hope. Funeral sermon by Elder J. M. Terry, assisted by Bro. Shaw. Good night, Emma, we hope to meet again.

THE BROTHERHOOD OF NATIONS.

How much nearer to each other the nations of the world seem to be today, and really are today, than was the case a few decades ago. When weeks and months were required for communication between the United States and Europe, the countries of the old world appeared to be a long way off. Now the circumference of the earth is belted with telegraph and cable lines in every possible direction. What happens today in Europe, Asia, Africa, Australia, South America, and the great islands of the sea, is made known to us tomorrow by great newspapers like the Chicago Record-Herald, whose foreign news correspondents are located in every important city in the world outside of the United In addition to its own staff correspondents, the Record-Herald enjoys the foreign news service of the New York Herald. famous for many years for the reliability of its foreign news, and also of the New York Tribune, and of that great cooperative newsgathering organization, the Associated Press. No other daily newspaper in America possesses facilities so varied and extensive for covering the news of all nations.

THE RELIGION OF SOCRATES

When the state assigned him a post as a soldier, Socrates considered it his duty to remain at his post unmoved by fear of death or anything else, and the same spirit of steadfast obedience to the higher authority governed his action when he was called upon as senator or as private citizen to do anything contrary to the laws. His duty toward the gods appeared to him in a similar light. The gods, he said, are our masters, to whom we owe obedience. Therefore, when he was convinced that the gods wished him to spend his life in the pursuit of knowledge, nothing could turn him from obedience to their command. Knowledge he regarded as the source of goodness, for he was convinced that no one ever does wrong knowingly, but only because he does not know the right. And the right is always advantageous. It is even better to suffer injustice than to act unjustly. In this life the righteous man is, he thought, re-warded by the improvement of his own character, and in the next world he will have the happiness of intercourse with the good men of past time. For Socrates believed in a future life, though he was unable to prove its existence by reason. When the time came for him to die he looked forward to his end without fear, confident that in the life to come he would be free from the encumbrance of the body and could satisfy his longing for truth by the contemplation of the eternal verities. Even if his belief in a future life should prove to be unfounded, he had, as it seemed to him, no reason to fear death, for in that case death would be as it were a deep and dreamless sleep.

In the Homeric poems the body is spoken of as the real man, but for Socrates the body was an encumbrance which was to be cared for only that it might hinder the freedom of the soul as little as possible. This change of attitude marks the greatest advance in Greek religious thought. The way had no doubt been prepared for this by previous philosophers, but Socrates is the first to make the soul the one great object of human solicitude. -From "The Inner Life of Socrates," by Harold N. Fowler, in the May Chautauquan.

In writing of the boasted progress of the last century "An American Mother" asks in the Ladies' Home Journal for June: "What has the nineteenth century done to the woman herself? Are her school-training, her colleges and her work in art and literature making her a more womanly woman, more fit to be a wife and mother? If not, they are losses to her, not gains. The chief change which the last century made in the American woman was that it tempted her to give up for the new occupations of art, reform, and money-making, her own real work as a home-maker, wife, and mother. The nineteenth century has dragged our women from their natural base. It has given them noble surroundings for their lives: literature, art, roundings for their lives: literature, art, social power. But they are not content. They are nervous and restless beyond any former race of women. The food given them is too light. They look out on the world with starved eyes. The wiser among them are finding out that what they want is not show and public work and applause, but a simple life transport and the betalvest restingtion. simple life, repose, and the homely affections

All stains should be removed before the articles are put in the washtub. The sooner a stain is treated the more readily it will yield to the treatment. Pour boiling water through fruit stains; when obstinate soak in a solution of oxalic acid. Wash vaseline stains in alcohol; paint, in turpentine or alcohol; varnish, in alcohol; grass or other green vegetable stains, in alcohol, kerosene, or molasses; for stains from blood, meat juice, use white of egg in cold water. In the case of milk, cream, sugar, or syrup stains soak in cold water and wash with soap and cold water. Tar, wheel grease, or machine oil stains should be rubbed with lard and allowed to stand a few minutes, then they should be washed with soap and cold water. Tea, coffee, or cocoa stains should be removed with boiling water; if obstinate, with a weak solution of oxalic acid.—Maria Parloa, in The Ladies' Home Journal for June.

The first magazine article written by M. Loubet since he became President of French Republic will appear in the Saturday Evening Post for July 13. This important paper, entitled Young Men and the Republic, after touching upon our pleasant relations with the French Republic, continues with a significant reference to the attitude of France toward the other Powers. The masterly summing up with which the article concludes is'a fine expression of the strong republican spirit which reigns in France today. Young Men and the Republic was written expressly for the Saturday Evening Post, and will appear in no other magazine. The illustrations are reproductions of private photographs taken by President Loubet's son.

WHY NOT A TRIP TO COLORADO NEXT SUMMER?

The price for a round-trip ticket on certain days will be less than half fare. Call and see me about it?

We are doing everything possible this year, by making unusually low ticket rates and running unusually fast and comfortable trains, to make it convenient and not too expensive for people of moderate means to spend their vacation in the Colorado mountains. There is no country in the world like Colorado for invalids and others in search of rest and pleasure. The pure, dry climate has the most astonishing permanent effect on the health and spirits of visitors, and especially is this so in the case of those from that part of the country near to the level of the sea. #### A TRIP TO NAUVOO.

It sometimes happens that events of the past are seen by unbiased minds about as they are in fact. The following is one of these occurrences.

It was fifty seven years after the death of the Prophet Joseph when this Journal man visited the ancient city. A half century is not a great while in the life of a city or country under the ordinary conditions of human life; but in the case at Nauvoo, all the essential features of its founding, its growth, its zenith of greatness, its overthrow and decay and its abandonment by the people who built it all transpired within the period of time elapsing between May, 1839, and May, 1847, though the ragged remnants of the outgoing host did not all get away till after 1851.

What a rebuke to the spirit of mobocracy is the sentiment now expressed by the dwellers at Nauvoo, "The Mormons ought never to have been driven out of this place."

Thank God there will come a time and a place when and where men may worship God without fear of mobbing.

The summer trips by boat out of Burlington are numerous and beautiful, but none so intensely interesting to the person with a modicum of imagination as is the cruise to Nauvoo, the historic city on the bend of the river between Fort Madison and Keokuk, reached every afternoon at supportime by the steamer Eloise on her down-river trip. A Journal man enjoyed it hugely, and came home impressed with two ideasgrandeur and the future possibilities of this remarkable place. Imagine, if you can, the Nauvoo of filty-five years ago, a city larger than the Burlington of today. In 1843, when the city of Chicago boasted of but 12,000 people, and Burlington was a village of a few hundreds, the city of Nauvoo was a hive of industry and wealth, teeming with a population of 28,000 people. They lived in substantial two-story brick houses, some of them palaces, and they followed all imaginable trades, the great center of Mormondom being a complete world in itself. At that time, in the height of the glory of the church, Mormons did not practice nor countenance plural marriages, and a yellow copy of the ancient re-ords of the church now in possession of Landlord Reimbold contains an official proclamation from the rulers of the church declaring that any elder found teaching the accursed doctrine would be expelled from the church. Polygamy was introduced about this time by Brigham Young, who claimed to have had a "revelation." The mass of the Mormon people were law-abiding, good people, and not in sympathy with the polygamous practices that were adopted by the rulers of the church, and although there is not today a Mormon in Nauvoo, the old settlers there will tell you that the Mormons should never have been driven away, and that polygamy should have been suppressed by milder measures. The strange feeling that comes over a man who visits Nauvoo for the first time and drives around through its once busy and now grass-grown avenues, is caused by the evidences on every hand of the great city that died when the Mormons were driven away half a century ago. It is like walking through an ancient cemetery—and in this case it is a place of the burial of the commerce, the affections, the ambitions, the hopes and ties of a band of 28,000 people. Today only 1,500 people are occupying the site of the city where stood the homes and stores and factories of the 28,000. And the only evidences of the past now exist in the broad, beautiful, grass-grown avenues, the ruined and vine-covered foundations of the houses that were, and the ancient architecture of the houses that are. A few modern houses have been built by the latter-day residents, but most of the town now remaining consists of the old Mormon houses-so substantially built.

With all its former greatness and its present possibilities, Nauvoo has remained without a railway or any access to a railway excepting by the ferry at Montrose, a little town on the K-line, lying directly across the river from the magnificent curved headland upon which the ancient city of Nauvoo stands. Should success crown the efforts of the enterprising men who are now trying to build an electric road from Nauvoo to Fort Madison, it seems almost certain that this beautiful old city will regain her former greatness.—Burlington, Iowa, Journal, June

WHAT SHOULD BE DONE WITH THEM?

Dear Sir.—I wish to withdraw from the Church of Latter Day Saints, as I do not believe the doctrine in full. Yours,

Bro. Joseph Smith:—This letter may explain itself. How shall we deal with such a

In answering this question, we do so in the understanding that the reason given, that of not believing the doctrine in full, is the only cause existing for the desire to withdraw from the fellowship of the church, and answer with that in view.

If the person making such a request is known to the officers of the branch to be of average intelligence and has behaved in a creditable way in the community where he lives, so that no charge of overt wrong may be justly made against him, it would seem to be the proper thing to let him go; always provided that he is properly visited and an effort made to explain to his satisfaction those points of doctrine or faith upon which there is doubt or unbelief in the mind of the one asking to be released.

It is doubtful if the charge of apostasy is correct in such a case; it is a matter of unbelief, which may be for the want of a correct understanding of the point in question. This misunderstanding may be removed by a careful inquiry by proper officers, and a clear statement of the faith, at the time; or after a lapse of time, study and inquiry and the intervention of the Spirit may help the person's unbelief and restore his faith.

By granting the request and dropping the name without the formula of labor, a charge of apostasy and a trial, which in nine cases out of ten would be ex parte, the hearing of one side (that of the church) only, a great deal of unfortunate publicity would be avoided, and ill feeling as well.

It seems to be wrong to make a man to do a constructive wrong, in order to obtain a relief from a condition of church relationship which he no longer has a desire to continue.

Apostasy is a constructive crime, and proof of it is hard to find; except in rare cases. To charge apostasy in cases where there was never a conviction nor a true understanding of the faith, would be difficult to maintain; because the answer would ever be, I did not believe, or accept that portion of the faith; or I never heard it taught before I was baptized, and knew nothing of it.

It therefore seems to us that it would be better for both the church and the person asking to be permitted to withdraw, if the branch should by vote suspend the person from fellowship, giving a chance for a further opportunity to such person to secure a better understanding, when the same action by vote would remove the disability and reinstate the name on the records.

If anyone who is not living in propriety and in good conduct in the community, or is under charges for bad conduct, or is subject to be so charged should make a request, or give notice of withdrawal from the church, such request should not be granted; but the officers of the branch or district should proceed to make charges against the offender, and have him properly dealt with for his standing in the church. Such a person ought not to be permitted to escape being called to an account for his wrongdoing by being allowed to withdraw from fellowship.

Members moving away from a branch should take letters of removal properly signed by some officer of the branch. These letters should be held as a certificate that the member was in good standing at the time the letter was issued. If persons neglect to take such letters, it would be well for the clerk of the branch to notify the removing members of the neglect, or send the letters to them, instructing them to join the branch nearest to them in point of convenience, according to conference action.

All members are amenable to the church rules, and to the branch or district in which they may be living for their spiritual conduct and good behavior, whether they have had their names put on the branch record or not. Branch or district authorities may deal with such members as the law directs.

No member can live near a branch or in a district and claim exemption from the rule which requires him to live an upright life or answer to the church for his right to fellowship.

HERE is a sacrifice worthy simulation by older ones:

Union Furnace, Ohio, June 24. Brother Kelley: — As papa and mamma were going to send some for the college, I thought I would like to help. Papa gave me thought I would like to help. Papa gave me a dollar for my last birthday, when I was eleven. I laid it away to buy me a silk umbrella, but I thought you needed it worse for the college than I did for an umbrella. I think we should all try to help some for the college.

THE JEWS AND PALESTINE.

Israel Zangwill, in American, of Chicago, for May 12, 1901, has an article on the Jews. Being asked to express an opinion as to the Jews in the twentieth century, he wrote in

One thing, however, seems increasingly probable—that the Jews will return in increasing numbers to Palestine, their old and never forgotten home. By the year 2,000 A. D., I don't see why there shouldn't be 2,000,-000 Jews inhabiting the land, transforming it into a garden of beauty and fertility and supplying it with harbors and railways, with a government of their own which will be the model government of the world. I am firmly convinced that the mission of the Jews is this: To be a people set on a hill—Zion's Hill—whose social, political, agricultural, and religious condition will be the moral beacon light of the world. From the laws of that community other nations will learn to govern wisely. From her social condition other na-tions will learn the science of sociology. From her spiritual supremacy other nations will learn the real meaning of religion. In short, I believe the hope of humanity lies in the development of the Jewish race after their return to Palestine.

Then, having gained possession of the land, we should not be so foolish as to rush great numbers of uneducated, unskilled Jews into the country, but would use Jewish shrewdness in sending skilled agriculturists, carpenters, merchants, and men and women generally who, under the guidance of prac-tical idealists, would form a sound basis of the model community that is to be.

HARDLY FAIR.

There is a disposition upon the part of some to throw discredit upon the work done by the Reorganization by charging that it has been done dishonestly.

One notable instance of this disposition is in regard to the Holy Scriptures, which was published by the Reorganized Church, from records left by the Seer at his death in the hands of his wife, Emma.

In order to escape the consequences incident to the fact that the Reorgan. ized Church became the custodian of the manuscripts made by the Seer. and was permitted to publish the work done by him, and thus put these scriptures into the hands of the faithful ministry who had been called to the gospel work under the angel's message; and to rid themselves of the censure of the revelations in which promises and commandments concerning these scriptures were made and given to the church, these men charge that the work of the committee was not faithfully done; that changes and corrections were made by this committee by which the text and sense of what the Seer had left on record was changed and vitiated to serve their own views and notions.

The committee appointed to be attendant upon the publication of the manuscripts consisted of Joseph Smith, the son of Joseph, the Seer, the man who did the work, Israel L. Rogers, one of the members of the church in the days of the Seer, and Ebenezer Robinson, also one of the old time Saints and one who was connected with the work of printing both at Kirtland and Nauvoo. The manuscripts were placed in the hands of Wm. Marks, I. L. Rogers, and W. W. Blair, by Emma, the widow of the Prophet Joseph Smith, in trust for the purposes of publication. Israel L. Rogers was a member of both committees, the one to receive the manuscripts, and the one to publish.

Wm. Marks, I. L. Rogers, W. W. Blair, and Ebenezer Robinson are now gone to the other side, but Joseph Smith, son of the Seer, yet remains in the flesh.

In the preface to the Holy Scriptures, the publishing committee made the statement that they had given the work of the Seer to the church as it had been given to them. And now I. the surviving member of the committee, on behalf of myself and those of the committee now dead, and on behalf of the eldership and members of the Reorganized Church, state solemnly, that we did the work faithfully and did not alter, change, nor amend such work; and whoever charges to the contrary grossly misrepresents us and says not the truth.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Levi Gamet writing from Ainsworth, Nebraska, June 20, says:

Bro. Rumel and I are at Ainsworth with tent for gospel work. Had meeting Tuesday and Wednesday nights. A storm coming up just at meeting time prevented having meeting last night. About sixty people in attendance Wednesday night and fair interest. We had a good day at Meadville last Sunday, the last of our stay at that place,—a country place where there are a few Saints.

Under date June 24, Bro. John Shook writes from Buchanan, Michi-

Card from Bro. J. C. Foss, June 25, from Scranton, Kansas:

The work is not dying out in this place. Very full house Sunday night; had the best of liberty. On Sunday 23, I baptized a lady, nearly seventy-six years old, Mrs. Anna Tucker. I go to Topeka on Thursday. Brn. Twombly, Pierce, and Beebe are with the tent at Hoyt. So the good work goes on.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Heavy rains and a cloud burst caused a flood in the Elkhorn Valley, West Virginia, June 24, which resulted in the death of a number of people estimated at from sixty to one hundred.

Dowie has begun the publication of a second paper. Besides the Leaves of Healing he is now editing a paper called The Zion Banner, its motto being, "A Weekly, Semi-secular paper devoted to the Extension of the Kingdom of God and the elevation of man."

GRACELAND COLLEGE NOTES.

The Boston "Mite Society" about a year ago voted a subscription of $25 to Graceland College. This year the society through its secretary and treasurer, Sr. Lillian M. Miller, forwards two full subscriptions with $50 cash to meet same. This is encouraging. The society is small, but there are evidently some Dorcases among its membership.

"IDENTITY OF MAN IN THE RESUR-RECTION."

A REPLY.

In HERALD for January 16 and May 10, the above caption has been written upon by Bro. Upton. With the highest respect for Bro. Upton and all who may differ from me upon the theory advanced, I essay this reply.

I shall here lay down a premise upon which to build my argument; viz., that the conditions which will obtain in the eternal world cannot be measured by the natural conditions which now bear rule, because our environments are so unlike those which will govern our lives hereafter.

Is it absolutely necessary to man's identity in the immortal state to retain every function and organ of his natural body? Would it not be possible for the resurrected body to be organically and functionally changed, in a measure at least, and still retain its identity? The writer is sincerely of the opinion it would, and shall give his reasons.

While it is true that the blood is the life of the body in its present state, nevertheless there is a life entirely independent of the blood, which actuates the immortal bodies. There is a life "hid in Christ;" whatever mysterious virtue that is will never be known until we "know as we are known."

If the blood is to be the life of the resurrected body, to what life did Christ refer when he said, "I came that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly?" This abundance of life will evidently be received in the resurrection, and if the blood is to be the life of the resurrected body, would make Christ to say the equivalent of, I came that they might have blood and have it more abundantly. Ah, nay, there is a hidden virtue preeminently more powerful than any virtue known to man, which God holds in reserve for all who will be so ineffably happy as to rise in the first resurrection.

In order to have perfect happiness there must be a perfect correspondence with our environments and bodily organism, i. e., a fish cannot be comfortable out of its element because removed from the environments corresponding with its organism. inasmuch as we believe all things will be made new, Revelation 21:5, the heavens and the earth, and even the very atmosphere, would it not be essential to our happiness and tranquility to have bodies corresponding therewith, otherwise we will be as "uncomfortable as a fish out of water." Should it seem heterodox, then, that our bodies should be organically changed to correspond with changed environments?

But says one, this change will simply be in condition (spiritually); but I ask, can anyone conceive a change in condition without a corresponding change in the causes producing it? Behind all the grand celestial harmonies there is an eternal correlation.

Some may be led to ask if this would not destroy man's identity. Not in the least. If I should take my gold watch to a jeweler and have the present works replaced by better ones, could I not just as easily identify it afterwards as before the internal change was made? That change would be in the correctness of time indicated.

From that most excellent work, Natural Law in the Spiritual World, by that most excellent philosopher, Prof. Henry Drummond, I copy the following touching the thought advanced. For it I ask a very careful reading. The italics are mine, and indicate passages to which I wish to call special attention.

We are now all but in sight of our scientific definition of Eternal Life. The desideratum is an organism with a correspondence of a very exceptional kind. It must lie beyond the reach of those "mechanical actions" and those "variations of available food," which are "liable to stop the processes going on in the organism." Before we reach an Eternal Life we must pass beyond that point at which all ordinary correspondences inevitably cease. must find an organism so high and complex, that at some point in its development it shall have added a correspondence which organic death is powerless to arrest. We must in death is powerless to arrest. We must in short pass beyond that finite region where the correspondences depend on evanescent and material media, and enter a further region where the environment corresponded with is itself eternal. Such an environment exists. The environment of the spiritual world is outside the influence of these "mechanical actions," which sooner or later interrupt the processes going on in all finite organisms. If then we can find an organism which has established a correspondence with the spiritual world, that correspondence will possess the elements of eternity—provided only one other condition be fulfilled.

That condition is that the environment be perfect. If it is not perfect, if it is not the highest, if it is endowed with the finite quality of change, there can be no guarantee that the life of its correspondents will be eternal. Some change might occur in it which the correspondents had no adaptive changes to meet, and life would cease. But grant a spiritual organism in perfect correspondence with a perfect spiritual environ-ment, and the conditions necessary to eternal life are satisfied.

The exact terms of Mr. Herbert Spencer's definition of eternal life may now be given. And it will be seen that they include essentially the conditions here laid down. "Perfect correspondence would be perfect life. Were there no changes in the environment but such as the organism had adapted changes to meet, and were it never to fail in the efficiency with which it met them, there would be eternal existence and eternal knowledge." Reserving the question as to knowledge." Reserving the question as to the possible fulfillment of these conditions, let us turn for a moment to the definition of eternal life laid down by Christ. Let us place it alongside the definition of science, and mark the points of contact. Uninter-rupted correspondence with a perfect environment is eternal life according to science. "This is life eternal," said Christ, "that they may know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." Life eternal Christ whom thou hast sent." Life eternal is to know God. To know God is to "correspond" with God. To correspond with God is to correspond with a perfect environment. And the organism which attains to this, in the nature of things must live forever. Here is "eternal existence and eternal knowledge." -Pages 213-215.

This opens a vast field of thought, and broadens our conceptions of the mysterious dealings of God.

When I indorse the idea of a "spiritual organism" or a body reconstructed to correspond with its environments, I do not wish to be placed among the immaterialistic class. wish to be understood that ex nihilo nihil fit, nothing produces nothing, is our philosophy. The "spiritual organism" will consist of a material infinitely higher in quality than the material with which we now have to do.

In all the vast domain of nature, all things are made and unmade, shaped and formed perfectly corresponding with and yielding to the forces productive of such, called environments.

That there is to be a change in our resurrected bodies we have only to read the following scriptures:

Behold, I shew you a mystery; We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the trumpet shall sound, and the dead shall be raised incorruptible; and we shall be changed.—1 Cor. 15:51,52.

Paul is speaking of the body; that part which sleeps in the grave. word change here is taken from the Greek work, allatto, meaning, "To make other, alter."

Who shall change our vile body, that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body. -Phil. 3:21.

If our bodies are to be "fashioned." which means formed, molded, there will certainly then be a somewhat different body in the resurrection. If I were to say I was going to fashion or change my house like my neighbor's, and did not make a single alteration after taking it to pieces, and putting it together again, he would either think I had changed my mind or that I had a very poor idea of a change.

Now, if we are to retain every single organ, and these organs are to perform the same function hereafter as they do here, what change will take place, and what meaning is there to the apostle's language? The argument may be made that the change will be from mortality to immortality. True, but what will cause this great Now, since every effect change? must have a corresponding cause, and all physical conditions are contingent upon organic changes, it would not be incompatible that the change referred to in Holy Writ is nothing more than the legitimate outcome of some organic change.

cause will invariably produce the same effect; hence, if we are to have the same causes hereafter that we have here, for all the physical changes we can look for the same effects; consequently I am unable to see any more in the resurrected body than in the present.

The body is nourished, replenished, and perpetuated by food taken into the stomach and converted into chyle, blood, flesh, and bone in regular order. This is God's orbone in regular order. This is G dained plan both for time and eternity.

The above statement is a sweeping one, and I seriously doubt the possibility of proving it, either by reason or revelation.

Our dispositions and temperaments are largely due to the kind of food we eat. A carnivorous animal can never be docile as long as he eats flesh. Then if our resurrected bodies are to subsist on the same diet as they now do, our dispositions and temperaments will be exactly the same.

I confidently believe that the very nature of things upon which the immortal body will subsist will be changed, when the curse shall have been lifted from the earth and returned to its Edenic purity and productiveness.

When Adam fell, not only man but the vegetable and animal creation were cursed as well. And since that awful sentence, mankind, as well as beasts and birds, has been formed and sustained from cursed material. Remove this curse from the elements upon which he subsists and he will be quite a different character, both physically and spiritually.

It may be urged that the better condition will be in the fact that all those organs will be in perfect working order. Exactly, but what will be the cause of these perfect organic actions of the changed and glorified body? And this cannot be until the substance upon which it exists changes; when all that is impure and imperfect will have been supplanted by that which is pure and perfect.

Now since the brother has absolutely no proof that the resurrected body will contain the blood, we take the liberty to presume that the replacing of the blood which is the cause of all desire and mortality, by the pure and wholesome element called the Holy Spirit will constitute, in part at least, the great change brought about by the mysterious process of the resurrection. It may be possible that the new body will contain the same "chemical elements." but could not those elements be organically changed to perform a different function, and still be there? Do not our ingenious sisters often take an old, out-of-style garment, work it over, and change it into a more beautiful one? Because of the change the The same elements are not destroyed.

The statement in Genesis 1: 31, And God saw everything that he made, and, behold, it was very good," argues nothing in favor of our brother's theory. Certainly "everything" was "very good" when fresh from the hands of the Creator, "but man sought out many inventions." When God made use of this language man was yet in his perfect and upright state; before the fall. In Genesis 3: 17, is a sentence placed upon Adam involving the entire human family, and which still remains, and will continue until the glorious change in the resurrection.

At the fall of Adam mankind was cursed physically as well as spiritually, and who can successfully maintain that when the curse is removed mankind will not be physically as well as spiritually or morally changed? When the curse is removed from the sons of Noah their color will be changed from black to white. We look upon our dark-skinned brother with all the African characteristics, and wonder how he will be identified in the resurrection, when his skin becomes fair as the lily, and all African traits lost. From a natural viewpoint we have no solution, but when the mortal bodies are quickened, and God's power reigns supreme within, we shall then be able.

For proof that our bodies are under the curse, as well as our souls, and that there remains a redemption for them, we have only to read Romans 8:23:

Even we ourselves groan within ourselves, waiting for the adoption, to wit, the redemption of our bodies.

Redemption in this text is from the Greek word apolutrosis, meaning "a loosing away." Here again comes cause and effect into bold relief. When Adam fell it entailed upon mankind all the diseases and suffering to which flesh is heir, and final death. And since every condition of the human body is due to some organic change or functional action, the logical conclusion is, those physical conditions are contingent upon some organic change. Now, in order to remove the effects of those changes, products of the fall, the causes producing them shall first have to be removed, thus necessitating reconstruction of the seat of action. So we look forward to the resurrection when our 'vile bodies" will be changed, and thus spend eternity far removed from all causes which now enshroud both soul and body.

We will agree with our brother that the lungs are for the purifying of the blood, but must sincerely part company with him when he takes the position that the same functional process will continue throughout the countless ages of eternity. We are told in Holy Writ that in the resurrection we will have a body immortal, incorruptible, and undefiled, but according to the brother's theory those corruptible germs will always lurk in the human system, which will only be kept from developing disease by the action of the lungs. Did the life which Jesus Christ possessed after he arose from the tomb depend upon the action of the lungs and circulation of the blood? If so he must have been dead longer than the time the Bible records. Because lying "three days and nights" in the cold earth would certainly congeal the blood, and if his life depended upon the "elixir-vitæ" would take some time for it to re-How will you harmonize liquify. this, brother?

Did the immediate life attending the raising of Lazarus, who had been in the grave ninety-six hours, depend upon the circulation of the blood? If so, it must have begun in the grave, which would be utterly impossible, for the lungs cannot act where there is no oxygen to act upon. brother, you see the awkward position in which you place yourself in trying to make the eternal purposes of God conform to and agree with the natural conditions of fallen humanity. We have as much right to demand the proof of the brother for his belief that the blood of Jesus Christ was reoxygenized and at what time, as he has to demand the proof that he was resurrected "bloodless."

It does not necessarily follow that a discontinuing of the present use of certain organs will destroy man's identity in the resurrection. Not any more than the change from the black African color to that of exquisite whiteness, or the copper color of the American Indian to the same condition, will destroy their identity. Does it require a greater stretch of credulity to believe that the organic use of our mortal bodies will be changed to answer to the changed conditions, than to believe the entire covering of over two thirds of the human race will be changed and still be recognized in the resurrection? It is just as natural for the Ethiopian to be born black as it is for the blood to circulate through his veins.

Our good brother seems to find considerable support in the fact "whatsoever God doeth he doeth forever," "God repents not," etc. These prove nothing in favor of the contention. God gave a law to Moses, and in it there were many things which were to last forever, which ended at the coming of Christ. In Genesis 17:7 God made an everlasting covenant with Abraham in circumcision, but that came to an end by the sacrifice of Christ. Paul says circumcision is nothing. God always uses means to certain ends, and they are everlasting (age lasting), and as soon as the ends | that the same flesh and bones which were are reached the means cease. So it is just possible with some of the organs in the human body. It is an inexorable law of nature that when an organ ceases to perform its intended function it ceases to exist. The crustacea that have inhabited the Mammoth Cave of Kentucky for centuries are a When they restriking example. fused to use their eyes for the creative purpose, and to abide in darkness, nature revoked her decree. I believe the argument the brother built upon the reference to those eyeless fish will act as a boomerang.

Certain organs are only intended to be used in this life until the conditions for which they were set in motion are attained. Then, like the eyes of the fish above referred to, they will cease to exist, because the new environments will have no use for them. That there are organs in both sexes, wholly adapted to the environments of this life, limited to the relative demands, cannot be successfully disputed by a believer in the "three books." Will any advocate of the theory we oppose maintain that the generic organs are to perform the same functions, even if residual in the resurrected body, as they now do? By a parity of reasoning we are lead to believe the affirmative. With the same congruity we could say the procreation and the marriage relationship will continue throughout eternity because of certain organs resident within the body conducive of this condition, which is diametrically contrary to the teachings of Jesus Christ. This reasoning will not hold good in the light of revealed facts.

We are existing in this life altogether separate and distinct from certain conditions which will obtain hereafter in the resurrected state. consequently, in our present bodily organization we have organs wholly adapted to the demands of this life, but after the demands shall have been reached there will be no necessity for their operation, hence they will cease to exist.

It has truly been said by an inspired writer that "blood is the life of all flesh." It contains the material for making every organ of the body, and without it man would cease to

This certainly proves too much, hence proves nothing. Some of those "every organ" referred to by the brother, necessarily comprehends the procreative organs. "Now applying the principle" where there is an organ there will be a relative function, and see where it lands you.

For over sixty years the church has been handing to the world the Voice of Warning as an authorized declaration of its belief, and from that we quote the following:

From all these circumstances we discover laid in the tomb were actually reanimated, and did arise and lay aside the linen which was no longer needed; and Jesus Christ came forth triumphant from the mansions of the dead, possessing the same body which had been born of a woman, and which had been crucified. But no blood flowed in his veins, for blood was the natural life in which were the principles of mortality, and a man restored to flesh and blood would be mortal, and consequently again subject to death, which was not the case with our Savior, although he had flesh and bones after he rose; for when he appeared to his disciples, and they were afraid, supposing it was only a spirit, he, in order to show them their mistake, said: "Handle me and see, for a spirit hath not flesh and bones as you see me have."—

Is it possible that all these many years we have been teaching an error in regard to the great principle of the resurrected body? That there will be something more in the resurrected bodies than we now possess we have only to read 1 Corinthians 15:35-38, 42,

But some man will say, How are the dead raised, and with what body do they come? Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die: and that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but bare grain, it may chance of wheat, or of some other grain. But God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him, and to every seed his own body. . . . So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption; it is raised in incorruption: it is sown in dishonor; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power: it it is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritnal body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body. . . . Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; and afterward that which is spirit-The first man is of the earth, earthy: the second man is the Lord from heaven. . . . And as we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly.

According to verse 49, in the resurrection we shall bear a different image They will from the present one. then be spiritual bodies, because the Spirit of God will be the life of them and the propelling power. The quickening referred to by the Apostle Paul in Romans 8: 11 is evidently the relieving the body of all the impediments and shackles which hold it in bondage, and resuscitating it with a more powerful element than is ever experienced in mortal life. By this power we shall be able to transport ourselves through the air. We often use the term electric cars, not because they are constructed from electricity, but because elecricity is the propelling power. So with our spiritual bodies; spiritual because propelled by spiritpower. The same power which kept the bodies of the three Hebrew children from being consumed by the flames will preserve the immortal That the Spirit of God is to bodies. be the life of the resurrected body is plainly held out by the Prophet Ézekiel in 37: 1–15. He mentions flesh, bones, breath, and sinews as coming forth in the resurrection, but not a word about the blood. If the blood is to be such an important element, it seems to me he would have specified it. In the 14th verse:

And shall put my Spirit in you, and ye shall live.

Thus we see the life-power of the resurrected body will be the Spirit and not the blood.

Ever longing for that glorious time to come, I am yours for friendly controversy, PALMER, Pa., June 14, 1901. F. J. EBELING.

THE GOSPEL UNCHANGEABLE.

The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul; the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple.

A perfect law would be one upon which no improvement could be made and would of necessity require a lawgiver being perfect and infinite in every particular; for if he was not, and did not know all the needs and peculiarities of his subjects, he could not make a perfect law for them. We are brought into this world, so far as we know, without any choice on our part or power to choose any other kind of existence. We find ourselves possessed with inherited imperfections both of mind and body. Very few in this generation have been born with bodies and minds free from weakness and disease, the result of the sins and indiscretion of some of their forefathers.

Man was created in the image of God, possessing in a limited sense the same characteristics, able to understand the forces of nature to some extent, and by his ingenuity to invent all those conveniences that make life pleasant and lighten its labors. He has made the power of steam do his will and serve his pleasure. He has tamed the lightnings and of them made an instrument to carry messages to the distant parts of the earth. The force of electricity is now used to drive the cars in the streets and also to furnish light and heat for the benefit of man. But in all this man's imperfections are apparent. Man is able to make civil laws for the government of nations, but the continual need of more legislation, repealing of old laws and formation of new ones. proves that human laws are imperfect.

It is not so with the law of God. Every step of human progress that has been made is simply the result of some one discovering some portion of the law of God and applying it, and so far as he has understood and applied the law the results have been perfect. To illustrate: The power of steam and electricity were just as great in Adam's day as now, and if men had understood it they could have accomplished the same results by its use. The heavenly bodies make their regular orbits independent of the opinion of man, and what is known of the science of astronomy is only what wise men have been able to find out of what had been law for eternities. all nature we see the working of a law that is perfect. The Psalmist says in Psalms 19:

The heavens declare the glory of God; and the firmament showeth his handiwork. Day unto day uttereth speech, and night unto night showeth knowledge. There is no night showeth knowledge. There is no speech nor language, where their voice is not heard.

He recognized that there was no speech nor language where God's works were not bearing their testimony of his infinite wisdom and skill.

The heathen of Athens in the days of Paul recognized there was a God more powerful than all their visible gods of wood and stone, and had an altar dedicated "to the unknown God." (Acts 17: 23.) So it has been with all nations; and as there is implanted in man a consciousness that this life is only a state of probation, and that there is a future life for us, also that the power which rules the universe is interested in us and that if we will do the Father's will he has prepared enjoyments for us beyond our power to comprehend unaided by his Spirit. (1 Cor. 2: 9, 10.) Because of these facts the questions which come to the logical thinking mind are: How can I obtain this greatest of blessings? What provisions have been made for me? How may I know how to do his will? Answers are numerous. As there are quacks advertising their pretended remedies and willing to prey upon the physical health of humanity for money and not regarding the bereaved homes, broken hearts, and intense suffering caused by men and women putting confidence in their pretensions, so it is in spiritual matters. Should the incompetent doctor honestly try to benefit his patients and administer medicine that produces death, the results are equally disastrous. So it is in matters that pertain to our spiritual welfare. If an improper remedy or a law not recognized by our heavenly Father should be applied, no benefits could possibly accrue to us. God is no more responsible for promises by a minister who deviates from his law than an earthly government would be for a self-appointed minister who would go to some foreign nation and effect a treaty disadvantageous to its own interests.

The question now arises, How amid all this confusion that now exists may I know the will of God? I answer by the text. If that portion of the law of the Lord that brings eternal life is perfect I can only conceive of it as being perfect from the beginning; for if God is infinite in knowledge, power, judgment, justice, mercy, truth, and wisdom, and is no respecter of persons, how foolish it is for us to think that he would have need to experiment for a few thousand years and finally hit upon a plan that is an improvement upon his previous ones and establish it as the plan of salvation. Still it seems that many believe this to be true.

I will now make the following argu-The perfect law of ments: First. the Lord that brings eternal life and is referred to in the text is the gospel of Christ. Second. The gospel was revealed as the plan of salvation from the beginning and has never changed. Third. It reaches man and is the only means of making him perfect. I will quote in support of my first argument:

Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved. Acts 4: 12

For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever be-lieveth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.-John 3: 16.

For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith: as it is written, The just shall live by faith.—Rom. 1: 16, 17.

And to you who are troubled rest with us, when the Lord Jesus shall be revealed from heaven with his mighty angels, in flaming fire taking vengeance on them that know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ.—2 Thess. 1: 7-9.

I argue from the above texts that Christ is the only means of salvation and that he is a gift of God's love for all mankind. Also that the gospel is the law or means by which we may obtain the gift of eternal life through Christ, and that nonobedience entails destruction and misery at Christ's appearing.

In support of my second proposition I will state first as a postulate that I believe the gospel of Christ with all its present requirements was in force from the beginning of man's need of salvation, and that in this the perfection of the plan is manifest; for if this be true and we can find in any age what was the plan of salvation and obey the laws requisite thereto in that age we may be assured that an unchangeable God will still honor his own law. But some one asks the question, "Was not the Mosaic law the means by which the Israelites were to obtain eternal life?" I answer. No. We read in Hebrews 7:19:

For the law made nothing perfect, but the bringing in of a better hope did; by the which we draw nigh unto God.

Also in Hebrews 10:1:

For the law having a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things can never with those sacrifices which they offered year by year continually, make the comers thereunto perfect.

Romans 3: 20:

Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in his sight: for by the law is the knowledge of sin.

When the young man came to Jesus and asked him what good thing he must do to inherit eternal life, Jesus told him to keep the commandments. He, evidently thinking that Jesus only referred to the ten commandments, answered:

All of these have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet?

Jesus answers (Matt. 19:21):

If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that which thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come and follow me.

Upon the above quoted scripture we rest the argument that the Mosaic law taken alone was not the perfect law of the Lord that converts the soul. It was a law given to the children of Israel by which they were to be preserved a separate and distinct race of people through which the Messiah should come and fulfill the promise made to Abraham, and the commandments, with the exception of the one requiring them to love and serve God, were only laws for their benefit morally in this life and gave no promise, that I can find, of the life to come.

Now, in support of the assertion that those who were saved were saved by the gospel, I will quote Hebrews 4:29:

For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them: but the word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it.

Galatians 3:8:

And the Scripture, foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed.

In 2 Peter 2: 5 Noah is spoken of as a preacher of righteousness, and in Romans 1: 17 Paul, speaking of the gospel of Christ of which he was not ashamed, says:

For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith.

We read in Matthew 24: 14:

And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come.

I might cite other texts, but I deem these sufficient to establish the position that the law of Moses was not the means of perfecting anyone in the life to come. But, as the gospel was preached to the children of Israel while in the wilderness (Heb. 4:2), as well as to the people in Paul's day, and was not profitable to them because of their lack of faith, and was also preached to Abraham, and as Noah was a preacher of righteousness and the righteousness of God is revealed in the gospel, and Christ says that the gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness to all nations, and with the testimonies we have of the unchangeableness of God, I can only conclude that the gospel of Christ always has been, is. and always will be, the only means of eternal salvation for the human race, and that the law of Moses was an addition made to meet the temporal needs of the people in that day. We read in Galatians 3: 19:

Wherefore then serveth the law? It was added because of transgressions, till the seed should come to whom the promise was made.

Also verse 24:

Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith.

Now for the third and last argument, that the gospel reaches man and is the only means of making him perfect. We find when we trace the history of man from the fall (which entailed death upon the race) until the present time, that by transgressing the laws of nature man has in many respects greatly degenerated, resulting not only in dwarfed and deformed bodies subject to many incurable diseases, but also over-developed passions and propensities to do evil. And since the transgression of the first man. Adam, entails these things upon us as a race and we have no power of ourselves to work our deliverance, it requires some power higher than man, and in answer comes an echo from the Scriptures:

As in Adam all die, so in Christ shall all be made alive.

And as Adam has transgressed and his transgression entails death upon the race, and since none of us who have arrived at mature years have lived without committing sins, and the wages of sin is death. Christ came and took a body like ours and in like manner as we have done (Heb. 2:14), lived amid trials which would have crushed and blasted the life of any other man, and died without sin, and thus satisfied the demands of justice for us, and while the wages of our actions are justly death for us, he gave his life and paid the debt, and in the great resurrection will deliver us from its cold and dreaded grasp, and through the gospel receives us with all our imperfections and unworthiness and offers us the rich enjoyments promised in the word of God.

Not only does the gospel insure to us the blessings referred to in the life to come, but its effects are to ennoble and exalt mankind in this life. furnishes the best possible code of laws for man's development in this life. There is not a condition in life where the gospel of Christ would not be beneficial. It makes those who adhere to it better citizens, better husbands, better wives, better fathers and mothers, better neighbors, better children. Its effects are to keep the body free from many diseases. conduces to health, cleanliness, and upright manliness. It furnishes a mark, a standard of purity and goodness, that ennobles, exalts, and lifts man above the little, mean, groveling things of this life. It is man's best and safest guide in youth, in manhood, or when bending with old age.

It is his highest and best calling in health, his comfort in sickness, and his hope in death. Besides, the wav is made so plain that a wayfaring man, though he be a fool, need not err therein; and still it involves problems of such ponderous magnitude that the philosophers may have an endless field of study and thought to explore. It partakes of the nature of God and becomes endless, unchangeable, and everlasting, so that wherever we have a description of it, or whosoever comes to us ostensibly as a teacher of the will of God for us, we may judge his teachings by the law and the testimony. (Isa. 8:20.)

And what is the most encouraging of all things, it is for us, for the promise is that Whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.

Since the Psalmist David was a man who by inspiration knew all this and much more, and could see that in every age a plan was offered to give all men an equal opportunity to receive such great blessings in this life and inherit eternal life in the world to come, who can wonder that he would say:

The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul: the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple.

WORSHIP AND ITS DELIGHTS.

Man is a worshiping creature. There seems to be in his nature an element which moves him to adore a superior being. The history of the various races of men shows that all, however blindly, are feeling after God. In all ages and in all climes, humanity has been bowing down to something. Heathens worship. Having not the written law, they are a law unto themselves, and worship in proportion to the spirit given. Some have followed the light far enough to worship from choice the true God, though as a being unknown. The Apostle Paul found some such in Athens, and at once declared unto them a knowledge of "the unknown God" they had ignorantly worshiped.

Worship is pure and elevating in proportion to the light the worshipers follow and enjoy. A very little light does not lift man above idolatry. He sees God in stock and stone, in storm and star. In his deepest of darkness he bows down to gods of his own make. In the twilight of a little knowledge, he worships one of God's creatures—the sun, or moon, or planet. In gospel light he advances to the adoration of God himself, and becomes a worshiper in spirit and in truth. The Christian, to the full measure of his light, must worship. God in Christ is the object of his wor-

Christ is God near by, God ship. "manifest in the flesh, justified in the Spirit, seen of angels, preached unto the Gentiles, believed on in the world, received up into glory" (1 Tim. 3:16), and as he said, "Let all the angels of God worship him" (Heb. 1:6), and in the language of the Psalmist, "Exalt ye the Lord our God, and worship at his footstool; for he is holy" (Ps. 99: Christ has ascended on high, but he has given us his Spirit that we should know him.

If our worship is pure we shall offer clean hands and pure hearts.

Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? or who shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands, and a pure heart; who hath not lifted up his soul unto vanity, nor sworn deceitfully.

If our worship is holy we shall keep God's holy law and observe and do his will.

Keep my commandments, and live; and my law as the apple of thine eye.

He that hath my commandments, and keepeth them, he it is that loveth me: and he that loveth me shall be loved of my Father, . . . and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him.

If our worship is humble we shall present our bodies a living sacrifice, which is but our reasonable service. If our worship is from the heart, deep, fervent, spiritual, we shall practically acknowledge that

The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul: the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple. The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart: the commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes. The fear of the Lord is clean, enduring forever: the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether. More to be desired are they than gold, yea, than much fine gold: . . . and in keeping of them there is great reward.

True and acceptable worship will be content and cheerful. It proceeds from the conviction that worship is man's highest duty and that God is worthy.

And the four beasts . . . rest not day and And the four beasts . . . rest not day and night, saying, Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come. . . . The four and twenty elders fall down before him that sat on the throne, and worship him, . . . saying, Thou art worthy, O Lord, to receive glory and honor and power: for thou hast created all things, and for thy pleasure they are and were created.

Divine worship is delightful. There is no pleasure comparable with it. Here the soul feeds itself in its true sphere. It is comforted, uplifted, thrilled, and blessed. Worship allies men with angels. I know of no pleasure so rich, none so pure, none so hallowed in its influences and constant in its supply as which result from true and spiritual worship of God. Pleasant as the cool water brooks are to a thirsty hart, so pleasant will it be to us to approach the living God. Were it not so, true worship would die out, Christian temples would be closed, and the last vestige of Christianity perish from earth. It is because Christian worship exactly comports with the purest and best aspirations of the heart that it has such a hold upon the rational convictions and practical life of man. This is why every man of God can truthfully say with the poet. A. C. Coxe.

> Right glad was I when unto me They said with one accord, O, let us up to Zion's hill, The city of our Lord.

JOHN ROBINSON'S WISE COUNSEL,

Extracts from the farewell sermon of John Robinson, to the Pilgrim Fathers on their embarkation at Delft Haven, a.D. 1620: copied from a card in a case at Pilgrim Hall, Plymouth, Mass.

"Brethren, we are now quickly to part from one another, and whether I may ever live to see your faces on earth any more, the God of heaven only knows; but whether the Lord hath appointed that or not, I charge you before God and his blessed angels that you follow me no further than you have seen me follow the Lord Jesus Christ.

"If God reveal anything to you, by any other instrument of his, be as ready to receive it, as ever you were to receive any truth by my ministry, for I am very persuaded-I am very confident, that the Lord has more truth yet to break forth out of his holy word.

"For my part I cannot sufficiently bewail the condition of the reformed churches, who are come to a period in religion, and will go at present no further than the instruments of their reformation. The Lutherans cannot be drawn to go beyond what Luther saw; whatever part of his will our good God has revealed to Calvin, they will rather die than embrace it. And the Calvinists you see, stick fast where they were left by that great man of God, who yet saw not all things.

"This is a misery much to be lamented: for though they were burning and shining lights in their times, yet they penetrated not into the whole counsel of God; but were they now living, would be as willing to embrace further light, as that which they first received. I beseech you, remember, it is an article of your covenant: 'That you be ready to receive whatever truth shall be made known to you from the written Word of God.' Remember that, and every other article of your sacred covenant.

"But I must here withal exhort you to take heed what you receive as truth. examine it, consider it, and compare it with other scriptures of truth, before you receive it; for it is not possible that the Christian world should come so lately out of such thick Anti-Christian darkness, and that perfection of knowledge should break forth at once."—Selected.

ARTHUR, Ont., June 20.

Herald Readers:-Believing a brief account of the conference just adjourned at Arthur may be of interest, we will give somewhat in detail. Probably the plan we adopted in caring for the conference may help other branches. Our branch is scattered over an area of about eighteen miles, and as there are but four families together here in town, from three to five of the far-away families brought in bedding and provisions and ran a kind of boarding house. We had ninteen families in four houses, so that by this means things were run on the plan of equality. We know of no better plan for caring for district conferences. What do you think?

The conference was generally conceded to be the largest and best spiritual feast ever enjoyed in London district. Many arrived the day before, and we believe all went away happy. On Friday the Sabbath school convention opened. Elder Evans presided; not one jar during the entire business. The evening was spent in five-minute speeches, the church filled with Saints.

Saturday morning all met in prayer, and at ten a. m. Elder R. C. Longhurst, president of district, opened meeting, Elder R. C. Evans chosen to preside. Splendid reports from the elders and missionaries. The work is being well looked after under the hands of our faithful and well-beloved president of the mission. During the entire day a splendid feeling prevailed. There was a warm contest for the next conference. Three branches wanted it, and it fell to the lot of Rostock, to convene September 27 to 30.

Business ended early, and we went to the town hall to hear Elder Evans preach to the Saints on tithing, and as a result several have come to me with tithing. He urged that we do not follow selfish Israel in offering the Lord the blind ram, and horse with the heaves. He made our duty plain, and good was done.

Next morning we met fasting to partake of the Lord's supper, and you may guess at the number of Saints present, when the hall is one hundred feet long by fifty feet wide, and easily two thirds full of Saints. Early in the meeting the gift of tongues was manifest through Sr. Pycock. Shortly after this the gift of tongues and prophecy came through Elder Henley. Again the same gift came through Elder R. C. Evans, calling Priests Russell, Bennett, Cameron, and Overholt to the office of elder. Like the other day of Pentecost, the unbelievers wondered, and the Saints were strengthened and filled with the Holy Ghost. It was a time to be remembered by the Saints.

At 11:00 a. m. Elder R. B. Howlett preached. At 2:30 Elder Evans preached in his usual convincing manner, and at 8:00 p. m. Elder St. John preached.

Next morning at 7:00 a.m. Zion's Religio-Literary met, having organized while here, Sr. Floralice Miller president. Monday was spent in winding up business, prayer meeting, and a lonely good-bye. Over twenty stayed that night with us, and we had a good time. Next day we bade good-bye to Bro. St. John. The last we saw of him, Elder Evans called our attention to him going through town in a kind of gipsy wagon full of bedclothes, ticks, and blankets, till our town wool merchants hailed the outfit and wanted to know if he had wool to sell.

The conference has proved a blessing to our branch. I believe we should have more of these gatherings, for it tends to heal old sores that nothing else can heal.

A brother in bonds. GEORGE BUSCHLEN.

Ponders End, LONDON, England.

Dear Herald:-After many years I again

lift my pen. Since I wrote to you I have passed through many deep troubles, and I am more than grateful to say, not one hair of my head has been harmed. I have seen many changes. Some of my brethren and sisters have passed away and I am left to praise God for his mercy. When I look back and see the narrow escapes of utter ruin I have passed through, it seems more than wonderful. I have had blessings innumerable. My son, David Alma Oakman, has come into the church and is trying to do what he can to warn his neighbors. He has started a Sunday school here and has an average of twentyseven to twenty-eight scholars. He thinks to get at parents through their children. We hold prayer meetings here twice a week.

We have a large upper room shut off entirely from our store where we can hold our little meetings on Sundays and Wednesdays. We cannot close our store all day Sundays, but we close during our school and meeting time.

Our neighbors like to come and sit with us.

Dear HERALD, God does bless us and we feel the warming influence of his Holy Spirit which thrills us through and through. A dear young sister has received the gift of visions. On the evening of our Wednesday meeting about three weeks ago she saw an angel in our midst, holding a pair of balances. There stood a lion by his side watching, and a serpent at his feet; the balances were even. Last Wednesday she again saw an angel and the words were given her, "John the Beloved." Oh! it is good to be a Saint in latter davs.

Some have found fault with me for holding meetings and opening on the Sabbath day: but I am obliged to open, as I keep a refreshment store.

When any have put forward for baptism we have taken them to witness among them as the law provides, and added to us have been three dear souls in two years. We have not sought to take the praise of our labors. Two were baptized by the London brethren and one by our Bro. Bishop. They are in good standing.

My son has had a wonderful dream which he will tell you in his own words. We have opened our house for meetings ever since 1879. God has blessed me. O, it is marvelous! Holy art thou, O God, who looketh on the lowly. How beautiful!

> Sometimes I grieve the friends I love, And they in turn grieve me, But O, my Father, give me grace, That I may not grieve thee.

Blessed art thou, O my Father! My heart swells within me with joy and peace. It seems as if my spirit must expand and mount. O, I trust I may be able to hold on till the end.

I have had the honor to entertain the traveling ministry at my house at times. Asking an interest in the prayers of the Saints, I remain,

> Your sister in Christ, ELLEN E. OAKMAN.

Saints Herald:-On June 16 F. L. Sawley and I held services at the Long branch church, near Bedison, Missouri. We found the Saints feeling well in the work. Bro. D. A. Hutchings had just arrived in his mission field on the 14th, and meeting with us at Bro. E. S. Fannon's on the 17th, we held a short council and agreed that Bro. F. L. Sawley and I would labor together for a short time;

Joseph S. Snively and D. A. Hutchings, Bro. E. S. Fannon and William Ross, just as soon as they can arrange to get out.

On the 19th I made a short visit to Stanberry, Missouri, and called on Bro. Peter Anderson. Found him very busy, trying to provide for his family a little more room by adding to his little two-room shouse. He expects to be out soon in his mission work, and is very anxious that we shall pitch the gospel tent in Stanberry in the latter part of July. I also called on James Schofield, who was lately ordained to the office of priest. He wants to be at work, and no doubt will be a blessing to the few Saints in that section.

On the evening of the 20th we raised the gospel tent here in Darlington. We are having fair crowds, but not as large as we would like; yet we feel good is being done. A number of preachers have been out to hear us, and we always feel well when preachers are around. Elder McClure, of the Christian Church, made us a short call. He was Braden's right hand man in the Kelley and Braden debate at Lamoni.

Bro. Charles Keown and wife, now located at the Albany Junction, and E. A. Bray and wife, of Darlington, are the only Saints in this section; but we believe there is material for others. We shall continue here till sometime in July, and go from here northeast of McFall, where Bro. Joseph Doty lives. We may get on disputed grounds, for I understand he lives just in the edge of Lamoni Stake. If Bro. John says for us to move out we can go out across a ten-acre lot into Daviess county, then we will be in Far West district; or a mile or two west into the Nodaway district, so we shall try to avoid trouble in this line.

Brn. Spively and Hutchings are holding services in the Christian church at Rosendale, not being able to get a suitable place to raisé the tent.

The prospect looks bright before us for some good work being done.

Your brother, D. C. WHITE. CASTLE ROCK, Wash., June 17.

Editors Herald:-I left home May 29 in company with Bro. David E. Powell, my colaborer in this field, with a parting good-bye of wife Elizabeth and John Charles. With all the self-mastery I had, my eyes failed to keep back affectionate tears. With a long lingering look as the train went around the bend. I bade farewell with a wave of the handkerchief. The ride to St. Joseph was anything but pleasant to me. Still I was buoyed up with the thought that the one sent with me was related to me. He has helped me in the long and tedious trip, making lonesome moments pleasant. We stopped over night in St. Joseph. Called on Bro. William Lewis, who said, "Well, your mission is a mission of love." Truly it is! I love the work and all connected with it. We bade him good-bye, then went to see Bro. and Sr. Collins. Spent an hour or so with them, very pleasantly, also Sr. Voorhies, all wishing us success and a pleasant journey.

On the train we got acquainted with some Utah missionaries returning home. They were very willing to talk on the start, but acknowledged that they knew but very little in regard to lineal priesthood. It is their ignorance that keeps them where they are. If they would post themselves a little on this line it would not be long until they could see the beauty of the Reorganization. "You need not talk to me," said one of them; "It is just like pouring water on a goose's back." I partly believe it. Well did Jeremiah say, they "shall be like the heath in the desert, and shall not see when good cometh." All the cultivation that you can put to a "heath" will not help it any, but the suffix en may help it some. David said, "Why do the heath-en rage, and the people imagine a vain thing?" (Polygamy, "Colestial marriage," marrying in time for eternity.) Isaiah has said, "Your covenant with death shall be disannulled.""And she being desolate shall sit upon the ground."

We visited the Temple block, and went into the Tabernacle. In the days of Moses the command was, "Remove thy shoes from thy feet," but we were reminded of the sacredness of the place with the request that we remove our hats. Being subject to "the powers that be," we hastily complied with the request. While in the city we stayed with Bro. and Sr. Ethan Barrows. He was our pilot in the city, a good old soul indeed! Memory shall ever keep alive our brief stay with them. We pray God's blessing to be with them. His journey has been long, tedious, and eventful. May roses and lilies cheer the glad way to life's close.

Brigham City was our next stay. was eventful to Bro. Powell. I was somewhat interested, as it was the birthplace of my companion whom I had just a few days before left in Stewartsville. While in that city I saw the old home of L. Snow, also the old courthouse. While standing by one corner I was told things that wisdom would say, Do not write, so I forbear with this thought: "Justice and judgment are the habitation of thy throne." In this town lives an uncle of Bro. Powell, named John Evans. He did all he could to make our stay pleasant. He with his son-in-law took us to the old homestead Bro. Powell left thirty-four years ago. All that is left to mark the spot is the old stone foundation, the rock fence, the spring, and the mountain side. The mother of those days was laid to rest last March 4. The moment to me was sad, yet joyous. There is such a thing as having joy in sorrow.

We are now in the home of Bro. S. Crum and are preaching every night. The Saints here have erected a nice little building to worship in, and they can be proud of it. They have it seated now. This is the "stronghold" of Brn. Holt and Chase. Bro. Allen also is spoken of kindly.

I should have mentioned that we met Bro. Pender while in the city of Salt Lake. Now, brethren of the Utah mission, will you pardon me if I say something. I believe his method to be a good one. By this you need not call him a Methodist. We can never gain the goodwill or friendship of a family by telling them how bad or mean their father was. A hint to the wise is sufficient. We are to be wise masterbuilders in the house of our God.

We also visited the brother of John R. Evans, of Lucas, Iowa. Of course we started to talk right away on the differences between us. In the heat of the argument he went to milk the cow, and when I left he said, "Well, I don't know." You can just put it down that I had my share of the talk. The strangest point was that he had a dream. (I am glad the Lord is beginning to bless them again with dreams, if nothing else.) The Bible says that God instructs once, yea twice, in a dream, yet man perceiveth it not. Now the dream: He dreamed that Joseph F. Smith went east and talked with young Joseph, and convinced him that he was wrong, and he turned with him, and all of the Reorganization. Wasn't that a mighty turning? "How are the mighty fallen, and the weapons of war perished." There is such a thing as an interpretation of dreams, if they do not come contrary to the way they are dreamed. They have been contrary now for fifty-five years and it is no wonder that God gave him a contrary dream. My, won't it be a turning! It puts me in mind of the battle of Gideon, forty-five thousand to four hundred thousand. Brethren, do not forget your mission is one of love.

We will be in Roslyn the latter part of August, and Spokane in September.

Your brother for truth,

JOHN DAVIS.

ALBION, Idaho, June 19.

Editors Herald:—Since I last wrote for your columns I have been busily engaged in trying to do what I could to assist in this great latter-day work.

On the 27th of March I left my field of labor to attend General Conference, arriving at Independence in time to attend all the sessions of the Religio and Sunday school, which I enjoyed very much. I also attended nearly every meeting held during conference and was much benefited thereby.

I then visited Lamoni, Iowa, for the purpose of ascertaining the truth or falsity of a report which had been put in circulation detrimental to the management of the Saints' Home. For the information of all concerned I will state that I visited the Home unannounced, just as the evening meal was ready, so there would be no chance for extra food to be placed on the tables, as there might have been if visitors had been announced before the meal was served. I am pleased to be able to say that the food was well cooked, well served, plenty of it, and plenty of variety. I also inspected the house from basement to the top of the building, even going out on top, where I had a fine view of Lamoni and the surrounding country. I found all the rooms neat and clean and well-furnished, and the inmates all seemed to be happy and contented. Those with whom I talked expressed themselves as well pleased with their treatment; and if what I saw was a fair sample of the everyday treatment (and I believe it is), I am free to say that I do not see wherein anyone could find anything to complain of against the management of the Home. My stay in Lamoni was necessarily short, for I was anxious to get to my field of labor. So on the second of May at eight p. m. I took train for Omaha, arriving there in the morning early. I had time to visit a number of the Saints who treated me with that brotherly kindness which is so characteristic of true Saints of God. At 4:25 p.m. I took train for Cokeville, Wyoming. Did no preaching there but came home to Raymond, Idaho, where I did some preaching and visiting among Saints and friends to the cause. But a good portion of the month of May was spent in necessary physical labor at home trying to get the work in such shape that we would not suffer loss financially.

On the thirtieth of May I bade home and loved ones good-bye and started with team to travel and labor in the mission assigned me. Visited Montpelier, Wardboro, and Dingle in Idaho, visiting Saints and friends to the cause and tried to do them good. Afterward visited Sister Mabel Jones and her husband at North Eden, Utah. She is a daughter of the late Elder R. J. Anthony. I found her firm in the faith, but her husband is not a member, although he is a fine man and well liked by his neighbors.

From there I went to Round Valley, Utah, and visited friends who seem desirous of knowing the truth. Did no public preaching, but did some fireside talking which I believe will result in good.

From there I came to Logan, Utah, where Elder S. D. Condit lives. Visited among Saints and friends trying to comfort and encourage in the good work those of the household of faith. Preached once.

On the fifth of June Elder Charles Albertson joined us, and on the sixth Brn. Condit, Albertson, and myself started for Malad City to attend the Idaho district conference. Drove to Weston, Idaho, and camped for night. Bro. Condit having sent an appointment ahead to Weston we held preaching services at the "Mormon" church, Elder Albertson doing the preaching. On the seventh we reached Malad City, and on the eighth and ninth we held conference. Here Elder D. W. Wight joined us, and although he was too late for the business session he was not too late to preach some excellent sermons, one of which was preached at the funeral of a young man. Said funeral was in charge of the Utah "Mormons" but courtesy was extended to us and Elder Wight was allowed to occupy as one of the speakers. Preaching services were continued for several nights after conference had adjourned; but on the fourteenth we hitched old Dex and Dan onto the "gospel wagon" and started for Malta. Idaho, our company having increased to four by the accession of Elder D. W. Wight. I very much enjoyed the company of my brethren and the time of travel was spent principally in spiritual conversation or singing praises to God or reading from some good book. After traveling thirty-five or forty miles we camped for night in the mountains, and after a good night's rest and refreshing sleep we all felt that we could enjoy another day's travel, and having only about six miles up hill to travel out of the thirty miles yet to traverse we reached our journey's end about two n. m.

Arriving at Malta we were made welcome by Bro. Leonard Condit and family, and held two preaching services in his hall. Yesterday we hitched up and drove to Bro. Albertson's home near Albion, where I am at present. We expect to be able to do some good by preaching the word in Albion and neighboring towns. From here we expect to go to Hagerman, Idaho, and there separate and labor singly or two by two as we shall determine later on. Bro. Condit and I will probably labor together for awhile visiting the Wood River and Lost River countries, calling at Carrey, Blain county, Idaho, and if possible do some preaching there.

Yours in the true faith,

A. J. LAYLAND.

PLAINVILLE, Ind., June 22.

Editors Herald:—I moved here one year ago last April from Byrneville, in order to be located on a railroad and thus try to plant the word in this part of the district where the gospel had not been extensively preached. This is a fine country; but how hard it is to get places in which to preach and to get the people out to hear.

Last Sunday Bro. Bell and writer tried to get an M. E. church building south of here about five miles. The preacher refused us the use of the house on the plea that we believed in the "old Book of Mormon." We made a short speech in defense of the book, and informed him that he did not know what the book taught, quoting from page 116, the case of David and Solomon, how the book condemned polygamy, and further stated that there never has been any man or set of men that can find that that book teaches anything that is immoral. He said he wanted no debate there: that they (the M. E. Church) had closed all their houses in United States against the Saints. So I thanked him for refusing us the use of the house, and invited the congregation to come out at night to the schoolhouse just across the road and we would talk to them. At night a fair crowd was out, and the Devil met also, but he stayed on the outside causing his subjects to throw rocks against the house and beating it with clubs, using all kinds of profane words. We held our post for about one hour and fifteen minutes on the gospel theme.

From there I went to Einora and got the use of the Advent church. Announced meeting for there on Thursday night. So on Thursday afternoon Bro. Bell and writer mounted the freight train headed for Elnora. Reached there by four p. m., and spent some time going through the town, to let the people know that we were there and ready for business, and thinking we could get up a wee bit of stir, but all in vain. As we moved toward the setting sun we saw that a show was in town. "There," said I to Bro. Bell, "our meeting is a failure, for the show has attracted all the people." So when time came to begin work we had three listeners. Thinking that it was discouraging to Bro. Bell, coming from the west where he had large crowds, to undertake to talk to so few, I occupied the time, thinking it was not my fault that no more were present. So I delivered the message as if the multitude were present, leaving it in the hands of a just God.

In May four churches and one schoolhouse were refused us. This seems a little discouraging; but we will move on and do the best we can under the circumstances in which we are placed. We are not complaining, just giving the facts in the case. We want the prayers of the Saints that God may move upon the hearts of this people that they may become anxious to hear the gospel. From the actions of the people in here the Scriptures ought to read, Seek ye first silver, gold, and all riches and pleasure, then the kingdom of God. There are many good people here, if we could just get them to accept of the gospel and be saved. What Saints are here have the very best respects of all this people, especially the merchants. No one can find any fault with the Saints, they have lived their religion.

Wheat crop is very fine; everybody busy cutting wheat. Plenty of rain. Corn doing splendid since the cool weather has let up. Prospect bids fine for a good crop. Well wishes to all the Saints and friends.

Your humble servant in the cause of Zion, GEORGE JENKINS.

CLARKSDALE, Mo., June 21.

Editors Herald:—In the HERALD of June 19, I saw the letter of R. Wight on tobacco in which he stated he had quit the use of it, and that he thanked God for it. I want to add to his testimony that I thank God, too, that he heard my feeble prayer after four years' praying that I might quit it. If every Saint who uses tobacco would quit using it and put the money in the college they would be blessed.

My heart is in the work, but the evil power has tried to overthrow me, but I have the evidence that God will heal me. I can hear lots of preaching now. May the Spirit help every Saint to study God's word and do it.

Your brother,

F. T. DOBLE.

HOPE, Arkansas.

Editors Saints' Herald:—Since May 16 I have labored at Overturff, Beavertown, Euclid, Grannis, Cove, Wicks, Burlingame, Wynthrop, Pauley, and Hope, Arkansas. In the first seven named places I had for colaborer Bro. John Harp, and in the last named places Bro. D. D. Babcock.

At Overturff, Bro. Harp baptized three. We interested some at Beavertown. We enjoyed ourselves and felt good in our work at Grannis, as also at Cove. Brn. Newton and Bailey have cared for the work well at Cove and Grannis. The Saints are very kind to the elders. Bro. Harp has made for himself and the church many friends. The Saints at Grannis, Cove, Overturff, Euclid, and Burlingame desired that his labors in the gospel should be continued in Arkansas. They did not want to give him up. Success to you, Bro. Harp, in your new field!

We were gladly received at the home of Bro. and Sr. Wilson at Burlingame. We were the first to preach our faith at this place. Bro. Babcock and I had a good hearing at Pauley last Sunday. Bro. J. R. Mc-Kinney is holding forth at this place once each month. We arrived here, Hope, Arkansas, the 18th. Got the use of the Christian church, and held forth last evening. Few in attendance. Do not know what the outcome will be.

Bro. Hugh Sands and family, as also Bro. Bootman and wife, live at this place. They are expecting to move away soon. This is a town of about three thousand inhabitants.

In the work,

J. W. Jackson.

JANESVILLE, Wis., June 22.

Editors Herald:—Since our last General Conference my time has been occupied by traveling and visiting more than with preaching, not because of choice, but conditions and circumstances have forced me to do so.

Leaving conference, I visited Kansas City, Lamoni, and Plano, in all places attending some meetings and taking part as best I could. In Lamoni I attended the weekly prayer meeting, where we enjoyed a good, spiritual time. The prayers offered in behalf of myself and my far off mission shall long be remembered and be a source of comfort when in that field fighting for God's truth. How happy we should be, engaged in such a noble work, where so many thousand earnest hearts are beating for each other, where the old and the young, the rich and the poor. learned and unlearned can all labor together with God and feel that each one's work is equally acceptable with God, if we only strive with the talent and ability intrusted

I was glad to visit Plano,—an historic place to us of the Reorganization. Here I met with the Saints on the Sabbath day, and by request occupied morning and evening, enjoying the Spirit of the Master. The Saints treated me very kindly, and gave me good attention. Bro. C. H. Burr's new home was my place of abode while there. They entertained me most kindly, producing a feeling of sadness when time came for separation.

By the first of May I reached home, where I remained a few weeks to prepare for my new mission. Part of the time I engaged in manual labor, while I tried to do all I could in the way of preaching.

Some special business demanded my presence in the northern part of the state, so had to leave for that part. While there I attended the northern district conference at Valley Junction, which was well attended, and I am sure much enjoyed by all. Our well known "Jotman" was there, and with him I found a more intimate and never-to-beforgotten acquaintance. May God's blessings attend his labor of love and enable him to reflect to the fullest extent the sunshine and glory of the everlasting gospel of peace. How hard we should try at all times to have a cheerful look on our faces and show to those we meet that the despised gospel brings sunshine and gladness to our hearts.

On my way south I visited Madison, Oregon, Adamsville, Argyle, and Monroe, calling on the Saints and trying to encourage them to greater usefulness in the noble work which we all so dearly love. At present I am comfortably domiciled in the peaceful home of Bro. O. N. Dutton, who so kindly has entertained me from time to time while laboring in Wisconsin. This will be my last visit for some time, as I expect in a few weeks to turn my face toward the east where thousands of honest hearts are worshiping God without the knowledge of God's true way. I hope in that country, though thousands of miles away from holy Zion, where hearts yearn to gather in peace, to be able to let my light so shine that some may be induced to investigate and accept the everlasting gospel of peace.

I feel so weak and inferior to the task lying before me; but as in the past I shall strive to put my trust in Him who is able to meet every emergency and who holds the reins in His hand.

I hope that the Saints in America will remember us over there, that God may bless our efforts and crown our work with success to the honor and glory of the everlasting King.

May God in his love bless his church in all its departments, and may we who are colaborers with him strive more earnestly than ever before to separate ourselves from all that is sinful and wrong, that God's Spirit may dwell in us and make us useful in his service.

With firm faith in Zion's triumph and victory over all sins, I remain,

In bonds,

P. MUCEUS.

NEW CANAAN, Conn., June 20.

Editors Herald:—Since the last General Conference appointed Elder U. W. Greene to labor in the New York district considerable work has been done in the way of opening up new places and planting the banner of King Emmanuel upon new soil and sowing the seed of the kingdom. An interesting effort has been put forth to get the gospel before the people in a place called "Scott's Corners" in the eastern part of the district; and while the effort was being made to spread the truth, "preachers" and members of other denominations were equally as hard at work circulating literature and stories trying to throw discredit upon the work. It is strange to see how low men will stoop in order to bring about their designs. But in the face of all opposition God rewarded the faithful effort with six honest souls, which Bro. Greene buried with Christ in baptism on the afternoon of May 26. It is estimated that fully three hundred persons witnessed the ceremony. Scoffers commenced to talk, talebearers heralded the news to the four winds, but the honest in heart, undaunted, still seeking the "kingdom of God," again called Bro. Greene into service, and Thursday evening, about six o'clock he buried four more precious souls in the watery grave, and still there are more to follow.

So the good work goes on in spite of Satan and his forces. God will never permit his designs to be frustrated. We crave an interest in the faith and prayers of the Saints that we may always let our light so shine that the work in these parts may go forward and the honest in heart reached everywhere.

Your brother in hope of eternal life,

A. E. STONE.

CHILLICOTHE, Mo., June 21.

Editor Herald:-Before we entered our field of labor the Lord promised to care for our loved ones at home, and would prepare the way before us and bless us in our efforts. The Lord has verified his promises to us, for which we praise the name of our Redeemer.

Our labor has been principally in new places. The Lord has stood by us in all deliberations. We have gone to places where we knew not a soul, trusting in the Lord, and we have always been cared for. We are glad and willing to work for a Master so good and kind!

We opened up here on last Sunday, and have met with success. Prejudice is fast fleeing; the newspapers have been very lenient with us and the message we have to bear to the world.

We are feeling well in the work, and have been wonderfully blessed this conference year. We hope to be remembered by all.

Yours in bonds,

W. E. HADEN. J. W. Adams.

OSGOOD, Iowa, June 25.

Editors Herald:-I went to my district May 2. I first went to Deloit, where I met Elder C. J. Hunt. I preached there four times, then Bro. Hunt accompanied me to Osburn. where we held several meetings. We then went to Fonda, where we visited Sr. Olison and her noble husband who is not yet in the church. Sr. Olison requested us to go to Lavina and administer to her daughter, Mrs. Cushman, who was not then in the church. We complied, but to our surprise a Christian Science lady had been there and prayed for her, charging her five dollars, and told her

"iust to believe she was not sick and she would be all right." But she was sick, and real sick too. After we read to her and instructed her as to what the Bible taught, she requested us to administer to her. We did so, and she was relieved at once.

From there we went to Marathon, where we held several meetings. There Bro. Hunt and I separated, he going south and I to Mallard. By request I returned and administered to Mrs. Cushman again, and she received a great blessing. I instructed her and her husband all I could regarding the doctrine of our church, and left them a great many scripture quotations to look up. The next week I received a request to come and baptize them both, and complied with their request the following Sunday, and blessed their little girl. Since that time I received a letter saying they were rejoicing in God and that the light and blessing that came to them at their baptism was beyond their power to express.

I then came to the home of Bro. Speers, five miles west of Osgood, by their request, to hold a series of meetings. On the 19th I went to Estherville, and while I was getting on the train at Osgood I was robbed. I had bought my ticket and put it in my pocketbook and put it in my hip pocket, and went I went to get my ticket my pocketbook containing the ticket, my permit, and all my papers were gone. It was a ten dollar loss to me. It was a Woodman's excursion, and a number of thieves were on the train. Many persons were robbed, some losing over one hundred dollars. In bonds,

W. H. KEPHART.

FARNAM, Neb., June 22.

Editors Herald:-I have just read a letter in the HERALD of a sister proposing that each sister or anyone else send one dollar, or we say as much more as possible for the benefit of Graceland college, so I inclose that amount for that purpose, thinking it a good suggestion, and would suggest that the HERALD give the list of names that have contributed, so we may see how many of our noble family have responded.

We were glad to have Bro. Prettyman added to the missionary force here, as the field was far too large for one; but that he will be greatly missed by those of his old mission, we feel sure, as he was there so long Bro. and Sr. Wm. Dodson have left us for Oklahoma, and how we miss them! We had no Saints to spare.

We occasionally read a letter in the HER-ALD that wakes us up to a sense of duty. Sr. Light, your letter was full of good, sound reasoning. If we have not attended strictly to our duty it is not too late to amend. Bro. Briggs' sketches were worthy of more than common notice. We read them as fast as they appeared, and thought what a faithful worker he was. I wonder how many of us would make such sacrifices as that.

Our little band still enjoys our Sunday school very much. We ask the prayers of the Saints that we may overcome every evil.

Your sister in the covenant of peace, . MINERVA JOHNSON. WHEELING, W. Va., June 15.

Editors Herald:-After enjoying one of the best conferences of the Reorganization I started for Hartshorne, Indian Territory, on the 24th of April to look after the estate of a deceased brother. Not wishing to be idle I made a new opening there where the true gospel had never been heard of.

While waiting for trip permit I wended my way over to Wilburton and met with the Saints. Had a very pleasant time while there, and by invitation preached four times. I was kindly cared for at the hospitable home of Bro. and Sr. Adamson, Jr.

On Sunday, June 5, we all drove out to Boiling Springs to meet with the Indians. Arrived about noon, spread our dinners under the shade; and while eating, the Indian preacher came and requested us to preach for them, which fell to my lot. I spoke upon the principle of the two baptisms. How we were entitled to the baptism of the Holy Ghost, and must be administered by one having divine authority. The preacher took notes, and seemed to be well pleased. After I closed Bro. Adamson spoke a short time upon the lost record of their forefathers. By request the Indian preacher gave a short address to them in their own tongue. He invited the Saints to meet with them again on the first Sunday in June. We gather from this that they were well pleased with our

On Monday I returned to Hartshorne expecting to get my permit and leave the next day, but was informed I had to fill out a blank and wait returns which would require ten days. On learning this I immediately began to search for a place to hold meetings. The Holiness people very kindly opened their church house. I preached about one week, and had the pleasure of baptizing four noble souls, Bro. and Sr. Fasieg and Bro. and Sr. White.

I wrote for Bro. Adamson to come and take charge of the work. He sent Bro. Grimes on Thursday and came himself on Saturday. They rendered valuable service, and their efforts were highly appreciated. I feel that if the work be continued there a people will be raised up to the honor of God's cause. Bro. Adamson intended returning the following Saturday and delivering some chart lectures on the street.

As Bishop's agent for the Pittsburg district I wish to say a few words to the Saints in regard to tithing.

In the year over fifteen hundred dollars were paid to the agent in tithes and offerings. This is a great credit to the Saints of this district, and I hope as we are entering in upon a new year and century we shall not fail to continue in the good work to do our whole duty in paying all of our tithes and offerings into the church each month as the Lord prospers each of us. While some have done very well in paying their tithes and offerings, many have not done anything in the way of tithes. It is required of everyone of us by the Lord to pay all our tithes and offerings into the church. This is one way of laying up treasures in heaven where moths corrupt not nor thieves break through and steal.

By reading the word of God we find there was a law given to Abraham and all his posterity to pay their tithes and offerings for the support of the ministry and the poor of the church. The Lord accused ancient Israel of robbing him. But how? "Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation. Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse, that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it."—Mal. 3: 8-10.

This grand promise should be sufficient encouragement for all God's people to willingly pay into God's storehouse his share and avoid being classed among the robbers.

In Doctrine and Covenants, section 64, paragraph 5, the Lord says this is a day of tithing of his people. "Behold, now it is called today (until the coming of the Son of Man), and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned (at his coming)."

Here is the best insurance policy we can hold in that great day of burning. Send all moneys to No. 70 Water street, Wheeling, West Virginia.

Ever praying and laboring for the upbuilding of Zion,

Your brother in gospel bonds, L. D. ULLOM.

HENDERSON, Ill., June 26.

Editors Herald:-I came to this mission the first of May. Canton, a city of about ten thousand inhabitants, was my first point. The branch at this place is one among the oldest of the Reorganized Church and was at one time a large and prosperous one. Moving away, death, and other changes have brought the work down till at present there is only a small number who meet and worship authoritatively. I preached three weeks in and around Canton; on Sundays in the city, weekday evenings out in Canton schoolhouses. Felt well in my work while there. Saints were very good to help me in every way. Bro. Wm. Riley is president. The Spirit of the Lord was with them in their Sunday school and prayer meetings. Bro. Lewis James has poor health, which prevents him being with the Saints as often as he would like to be. Brn. Joseph Jones, John Jones, William Emanuel, E. W. Grim, and others, with their worthy president, are desirous and willing to do all they can to build up the church. They need some one to preach for them on Sundays. The preacher has his part to do, and when not done the result is not the best. See Ephesians 4:11, 12. If we live and labor faithfully till our Master supplies more of these things needful we will reach greater success. The work of the late General Conference shows that if the Saints only do their part and live right the Lord will work with and for his people. Those whose duty it is to preach the gospel should do so for the glory of God and the salvation of humanity. And those whose duty it is to labor with their hands should give as God has prospered them their moneys, with their prayers, and good life to help move the church along. Then it will be a sacrifice all around and great good will be done. I don't believe the good Master demands one to leave home and dear ones year after year to contend with hardships and leave another at home to enjoy the good things of this life, and then reward them alike at the end. We should remember this is "a day of sacrifice," and we should be willing to make some in helping to pay off the college debt, as well as many other things we do to build up the work.

Our district conference at Millersburg on the 8th and 9th was very good and well attended. Business passed off pleasantly. The Sunday school department was splendid. From conference we went to Gladstone. Found Bro. J. L. Rust and family living there; oldest son is operator at depot—not a member of the church but friendly and a good man. Later on we will preach more in that part.

While there I was called upon to preach the funeral of Sr. Emma E. Pryer, who was a good Saint and suffered much. She leaves a husband and two sons.

Dahinda was our next point. Bro. D. C. Smith and family are the only Saints, he is Bishop's agent for this district, a live man in the work. We have a good church building there. Mrs. D. C. Smith is conducting a good little Sunday school, and Bro. Smith preaches every other Sunday at a small town northeast five miles. Bro. James Cook tried to get the use of the M. E. church to preach in, but could not. It is quite difficult at this time of the year to get people out to meetings. Later on there will be plenty of work for the missionaries.

I like the Saints of this mission very much, and trust that the good work may prosper while we are in these parts.

Your brother in the faith,

J. ARTHUR DAVIS.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., June 25.

Editors Herald:—Metuaore and I are nearing the end of our travels together in Joseph's land, as he is now ready to leave here tomorrow for his island home.

In his journeyings here he has visited many places in this state and a few in Missouri and Iowa, and passed through the states of Colorado, Kansas, New Mexico, and Arizona, and has much enjoyed his visit to America. He was kindly received by the Saints everywhere, they certifying to his humility, spirituality, and clearness of ideas of the gospel. He is an honorable man, a good Latter Day Saint. He was first baptized by Elder Paita in 1871, and was again baptized by Elder Glaud Rodger in December, 1873, upon hearing of the Reorganization under Joseph, the son, and has remained a firm, faithful member of the church until this day. And when it became necessary to place the little "Evanelia" under the ownership of one of the membership of the church, the advice of the leading merchants of Papeete was sought concerning the person best qualified to bear faithfully the responsibility of ownership under the French laws. Their reply was that Metuaore could be safely trusted, as he had always proven himself an honorable man among them.

We were made very sad as I read and translated to him the minutes of their conference, and Bro. Peterson's letter. The sickness and deaths at that time must have caused a feeling of gloom and sadness to rest upon the few who were not thus afflicted. It must indeed have been a prevalent sickness when out of the gathering of eight hundred people a session of conference must needs adjourn for lack of attendants to transact business; and when in session, to have the room appear as a hospital, with the brethren too sick to hold their bandaged heads up, was indeed most sad and discouraging; and then to have to bury twenty-two of their number, was most surely a lamentable season for Bro. John and Sr. Lillie, as well as for the islanders, and their hearts could not have been much in accord with the joyfulness of the three thousand people present in house and yard to listen to an entertainment provided for them by the brethren and sisters of conference under such distressing circumstances. And perhaps almost as sad, if not worse, was the condition of the young Religians as reported by him, although I had not learned before that all the missionaries had deemed it unwise to baptize children, or that they were prohibited attendance at conferences.

We also learned by Bro. John's letter that all the names of those islanders appointed by the General Conference in America to the island mission were also presented by him to the conference in Papeete for appointment, but were all rejected but three, although their minutes show that six of them were appointed, and one of these afterwards released by reason of old age. Another one is now acting as Bishop's agent until Metuaore returns, and another one has accepted the appointment of the General Conference, there being no disability upon him. And of the others, Bro. John says: "Gladly would I see them in the field, for they are capable of doing much good." I suppose the General Conference felt the same way, but did not have the same opportunity of learning of their disabilities as he did, but whatever mistakes may have been made in this matter can readily be rectified without loss to the work here or there, we hope.

Metuaore visited the Saints of San Bernardino, Orange, San Diego, Los Angeles, San Benito, Santa Clara, Alameda, Sonoma, and Napa counties, and in the cities of Sacramento and San Francisco, as well as the Independence and Lamoni Stakes, and was much pleased with the friendship and fellowship of the Saints everywhere and with their brotherly kindness towards him, especially so while tarrying at Bro. E. L. Kelley's and at Bro. J. A. Anthony's. All the Saints were very kind to him.

I expect that President A. H. Smith and his secretary, Bro. J. W. Gilbert and wife, and Emma and I will leave here for Tahiti on September 11, on the steamer Australia.

June 26:—At ten a. m. the steamer Australia left for Papeete via the Marquesas, with Metuaore on board. All well. May peace attend him ever. In bonds,
J. F. Burton.

METUAORE.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., June 24.

To the Editor of the Saints' Herald and the Brothers and Sisters:—May you live in the true love of our Lord Jesus Christ, amen.

I hereby express my love to you all in the branches which I visited, as well as those whom I did not meet. As we traveled, our friend Joseph F. Burton was my guide to the branches.

In California we traveled in many roads, and on the mountains, and in the valleys, as we went meeting many of the Saints in our journeys. And such a variety of fruits for food, and the flowers also of this land, I never saw in the islands of the great deep; and there came to me the thought that God only could assist me in all these unaccustomed ways in all my goings to the beloved Saints of this great land of America.

In many branches we preached the gospel, in the valleys, and on the mountains, and in the dwelling places of the Saints in our travelings.

I think it would be a good thing if the Saints of the islands of the great deep were here in California, if God was willing that it should be so.

And O my beloved brothers, I have received very great pleasure indeed in all the good things (spiritually-translated) which have occurred amongst the Saints, and in that way will the work of God become flourishing and the kingdom of God move forward, when we stand upon the unshakable foundation—that is—Christ.

Our brother Joseph F. Burton and I are here now, but on the 26th of June, perhaps, we will separate after our journeyings.

He has administered to my necessities in these travels. And I now say, May you abide in the true love of our Lord Jesus Christ, the only begotten Son of God, our Savior, and we all in the blessing of God now and forevermore. Amen.

Translated by J. F. Burton.

METUAORE.

WASHTA, Iowa, June 28.

Editors Herald:—I arrived here the 15th inst., and found Elders J. M. Baker and N. V. Sheldon had district tent up and ready for operation; but the elements ruled otherwise, for a heavy rain prevented services till the following (Sunday) evening, when the writer presented an outline of the faith of the church to a fair-sized audience. Bro. Sheldon preached the next evening on faith, which was his first effort in a tent. Bro. Baker concluded to leave us with the tent while he would do work at Coalville and Mallard.

As we had no instrumental music and but little singing we advertised for a small folding organ, and soon found a fairly good one which we bought for five dollars. Now we need an organist. Evening services have been held without interruption, with from fair to good audiences till last night, when it seemed that we would be left alone. At the hour appointed for meeting I asked Bro. Sheldon if he would take a seat in the audience (?) and remain there while I occupied the hour, and with a strange, sober look he answered that he would. However, I suggested that we sing another hymn before opening the service, which we did, and to our surprise (?) in came a veteran of the Mexican and Civil wars, who took a seat and listened to the discourse attentively. It might be well to state that my audience was twice as large (in numbers of course) when I closed as it was when I began, and that the speaker enjoyed the hour.

Experience has taught me that great care should be taken in selecting places for a tent; for, as a rule, tent meetings are expensive luxuries.

We have made many friends to the cause of truth, and are not discouraged nor disheartened.

The gospel work is opening up nicely in the district, and we are rejoicing in the prospects. Some have been added by baptism; many both in and out of the church have been greatly blessed in calling for administration when sick.

I hope the Saints of the Galland's Grove district will cheer the hearts of the Bishop's agents in their branches, also the Bishop by being prompt in paying their tithes and offerings, not forgetting Graceland College. Address me at Deloit, Iowa.

Your colaborer,

C. J. HUNT.

NEWARK, W. Va., June 26.

Editor Herald:-I came here on the 22d inst. to fill an appointment, and also to meet "Disciple" Ira C. Moore in debate. He challenged me to meet him here, and of course it was expected that he would be already here and fortified. But he came not. Some say he will come, that he has been waiting for me to come and commence operations, then they could slip in on me, and so secure their game by stratagem; that if I knew they were coming I would take to my heels and depart in haste. I have never feared them. But there is some probability that Evangelist Ira remembers the siege of Roscoe and dreads the idea of hazarding his all in another struggle.

On the 30th of May I met the bold Bunner of Barber county fame, and on the same questions we discussed at Phillipi we again strove with each other "for the faith once for all delivered unto the Saints"; that is, I contended earnestly for the same faith given to the primitive church, while Bunner fought earnestly against it.

We were greeted by large crowds nightly, and a host of the young both of men and maidens, only surpassed in beauty and cheerfulness by the smiling flowers of May bedecking the hills and vales, the meadows, orchards, gardens, and groves along the banks of the placid old Annamoniah.

The people were in a state of expectation, for long beforehand the announcement was made that the learned A. A. Bunner, Evangelist, was coming to "ventilate" and vanquish the "Mormons" and all "Mormonism." Their most confident anticipations were soon gratified by the sudden appearance of Bunner in their midst.

The truth is triumphant in these parts. Many friends to our cause the result. Elders Campbell and McBride of the Utah church were there to hear the debate. Bunner would have made them his witnesses, but their reply was: "The Mormon creed; mind your own business."

They are quiet, gentlemanly, and humble. Visited us at our temporary home the second time. We took up our abode while there at the house of Bro. William Cooper, who, with his kind companion, made us at home and aided us financially, as did also his amiable and intelligent mother, who is nominally a Campbellite. His father also helped us like a brother. Bro. Thomas K. Ferrell came with a blessing for us, and we remember many kind acts by others whom we cannot name May the seed sown bear fruit ere long.

BROOKLYN, N. Y., June 28.

Editors Herald:—Since last writing to you, four more have been added to the church in this district by baptism, and we feel sure that the harvest is not over yet.

Bro. David A. Anderson and wife arrived on the 19th, and today they have, in company with Elder U. W. Greene and family, gone to commence tent work for the summer months. The prospects are bright and we are hopeful.

JOSEPH SQUIRE.

SPRINGFIELD, Mo., June 23.

Editors Herald:—Bro. O. B. Thomas and the writer are holding meetings each night on the city square. There seems to be some interest, and we are in hopes of doing good. But I do not believe that street preaching will prove as successful as tent work. But one thing is sure, we are getting the gospel before many that would not even come out to hear us in the tent.

The people are very anxious to get reading matter, and if there are Saints who have old Ensigns, HERALDS, or Glad Tidings, we can use them; yes, all you send. Bro. Thomas baptized two noble souls, both adults, Tuesday. I think there are more to follow.

We are very well pleased with our missionary force this year. Bro. O. B. is an old war horse, and our little Baker and Davis are turning up new ground in the lead. Words of praise come from every place. May God bless our work, is my prayer. In bonds,

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

"The kiss of dawn is on the sea:
The early matin singers rise,
And send their songs up to the skies,
Reaching the heights where I would be.
My day is like the sea. Its face
Is tranquil as a gray toned lake—
Quiet, eventless, soft with grace.
I know ere night the storms may break,
Yet trustfully I sail away
Toward the east, to meet my day,
And leave the afterward with God."

A TALK WITH MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS.

Dear Sisters:—Seeing the many failings in the rising generation, children seemingly not having affection for their mothers, I will try to suggest a few thoughts and perhaps it may do some one good or be the means of some girl having a mother's care a little longer. I do not think girls are always to blame for their seeming indifference, but think it is mostly the mother's fault in the first place.

There are mothers who will say, "I don't want to have my girls work as I did." That might be very true and reasonable, but if mothers saw a hard time when young, when will rest come in? I think it is every mother's duty to teach her daughters to be industrious, and this can be done at a very early age; they should feel it a pleasure to relieve mother of the cares and responsibilities of the work, and to feel if they would have a mother to counsel them they must help preserve her health; for constant care of a family and hard work will soon wear out even a stout, healthy woman. Many a daughter has looked back and said, "If I only had mother she would be more than all the world to me."

I was one of those weakly mothers and I had to teach my girls to work because I was not able to do it. And I do know if my children had not taken an interest in helping me I would not have been with them long enough to have raised them. I can say it is by their care and help I have lived to pass the sixtieth mile post; and they all have families of their own, yet they often come to my assistance. I often feel to thank God for his goodness and mercies, and many blessings.

Our children are given to us for a blessing, and we should try to raise them so they will be, and not let their minds be taken up with the frivolous things of life; rather teach them that there is a reality in life, and they should feel some responsibility resting on them.

Poverty is not very desirable, yet children who are raised honestly and do not have many leisures are often better children. It causes them to be more strongly attached to each other and they are better able to meet the stern realities of life if they are only taught that truth and honesty are the brightest gems of life. It is not the clothes we wear, but the principles we show in our lives and by living for others as well as ourselves. The first commandment given with promise is, "Children honor your father and mother, that your days may be long upon the land."

May we all strive to live such lives as becometh Saints. This is the desire of your sister,

R. M. BRADLEY.

DISOBEDIENCE AND ITS CAUSES.

This evening while about my work some thoughts suggested themselves to my mind. If we must become as little children we should place ourselves in a child's place as near as we can, and be obedient to our heavenly Father as we think a child ought to be to his parents. We think a child does very wrong if he goes contrary to his parent's wishes when the parent is doing the best he can for the child, but children are like us; sometimes they make mistakes.

I think children will do things that are not right sometimes when they don't mean to do them just to do wrong. They simply don't think anything about it being wrong until afterward.

I heard a mother say to her little boy, "Did you do so and so?"

The little fellow would look as though he expected to be punished but would be truthful and say, "Yes."

The next question would be,"Why did you do so?"

I presume the child did not know why he did so, and the only answer he gave was, "Cause."

Some will think the child ought not have been punished because he told the truth, but I think the right kind of punishment is all right, when a child is punished for its own good. If our heavenly Father did not let us be punished, sometimes we would think we were all right.

We say we believe in the revelations of God to his church or people. Why don't we always obey them? A great many times the answer would be like the little boy's "Cause."

"Let no unnecessary work be done on the Sabbath, and let thy food be prepared with singleness of heart." I well remember the words, "Let thy food be prepared with singleness of heart." One Sunday afternoon I thought I would eat some nuts. I got the nuts and those words came to me, "Let thy food be prepared with singleness of heart." But I believed it was my own thought that brought the words to my mind, so I ate some of the nuts. I thought there could be no harm in eating a few nuts. But after I had eaten them the thought came to me it was the Lord that suggeted those words, and I felt that it was, and that I had disobeyed him, and I felt that he was displeased with me: no earthly being knows how I suffered over it. I did not do that to be disobedient. Like a child, I don't know why I did it, but I was punished for it, and I thank my heavenly Father that I was. It was a lesson to me and I hope in the future to always be able to do the things that will be pleasing to God. and refrain from doing anything that will displease him.

May the Lord bless his people is the prayer of,

A SISTER.

BENEFITS OF SUNDAY SCHOOL.

The Sunday school is an organization whose chief object is the instruction of the people of all ages and classes in the Holy Scriptures which, Timothy tells us, "being given by inspiration of God, are able to make us wise unto salvation," and are "profitable for instruction in righteousness." Is not the Sunday school, then, entitled to not only our serious consideration, but also our hearty support? If we employ our earnest, undivided efforts in the development and advancement of this good work, who can tell how boundless and inestimable may be the result in the minds of our fellow-beings?

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL RANKS second only to the church in the extent of the good influences produced by its moral instruction; and to the church it is a highly valuable and indispensable help in spreading the gospel. Many of the young and thoughtless who cannot be induced to attend the church services are often attracted by the cheerful and home-like atmosphere of the Sunday school; and becoming interested in the lessons learned there, are finally led into the church.

Though the

SUNDAY SCHOOL IS BENEFICIAL to the older ones, it is much more valuable to the young; for it is in youth that the greatest and most lasting impressions are made upon the mind, and the foundation of the character is principally laid. The early training of a child as surely determines his character as a man as does the wind determine the direction the reed shall bend. The truth of this fact was realized by wise King Solomon, who says, in one of his proverbs, "Train up a child in the way he should go. and when he is old he will not depart from it." How important is it, then, that the children should be instructed in this work while they are young, that their minds, naturally active and quick to grasp truths, should be supplied with the best moral food obtainable. And where, better than in the Sunday school, may suitable and nourishing food be found? The principles of the gospel of Christ are there simplified for the youthful mind and instilled in all their beauty and purity into the heart of the child, while the force of example is added to that of precept, making the impression more lasting. are taught by Christ, for instance, to love our enemies and to pray for them which despitefully use us and persecute us, and the force of the lesson is intensified by the example of Christ himself, who while suffering untold agonies upon the cross uttered this beautiful petition in behalf of those who had thus persecuted him: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do." The child sees that Jesus, though the beloved Son of God, suffered, and was "tempted in all points" like as we are, yet without sin; and is led, from studying his life and works, to see the beauty of his character, and to strive to live a purer and better life, that he may receive the rewards promised to the faithful. He may also learn from the beautiful self-denying Spirit of our Master that there is something besides self and self-gratification to live for, and that

The glory of our life
Is not in what we know or what we do,
But dwells forevermore in what we are.

He should be taught that the mere STUDY OF THE SCRIPTURES will do him no good unless he lives up to their teaching and moulds into his character the virtues exemplified in the life of Christ. His is a perfect model for the young who are seeking a pattern—a character in which every stone was so perfectly polished as to reflect the sunlight of God's mercy with a radiance that has lost none of its glory in all the ages past, but will continue to grow brighter until it bursts into the glory of his second coming. Then blessed will they be who have builded in the likeness of his glorious character.

If the Sunday school should be the means of INCITING ONE PERSON to strive to live a better life, it has not existed in vain, and its workers cannot count their labor lost. But let us remember that

"Rome was not built in a day," and be not discouraged if we do not see the good results of our labors, for the seed sown in the youthful mind may lie dormant for years, giving no signs of life; but, as surely as good seeds are sown, so surely will they in some future time grow and blossom into everlasting beauty.

"Let us then be up and doing With a heart for any fate; Still achieving, still pursuing, Learn to labor and to wait."

CONVENTION NOTICES.

To the Saints of Oklahoma who are interested in the work of the Sunday School:—We wish to call your attention to the fact that the work of this department needs the united effort of all to make it accomplish the work designed. We have thought it advisable to have another convention in which we hope to do much practical work to advance its interests. All who are ready to work, we request and urge your cooperation in organizing and perfecting schools. The needs demand new schools in various places, and we earnestly solicit your aid and help in making them. Can you help? The convention will be August 20, at our reunion at Dover, Oklahoma.

LITTLE SIOUX.

Convened at Mondamin, Iowa, June 8; J. A. Donaldson chosen to preside, G. M. Scott and H. N. Hansen to assist, J. F. Mintun and Annie Stuart secretaries. Reports from branches show a membership of 1,403, which includes 6 high priests, 2 seventies, 44 elders, 21 priests, 26 teachers, 18 deacons. A net gain of 2. Reports from five high priests, 2 seventies, 9 elders, 2 priests, 3 teachers, and 2 deacons, show 281 services attended, 255 sermons preached, 378 other services held, 101 sick administered to, 7 children blessed, 1 branch, 1 Religio, 1 Sunday school organized. Many not giving items. Spiritual condition of branches with the exception of Missouri Valley, reported improved. The Bishop's agent's report (as audited) accounted for receipts of $533.25 and expenditures of $523.25. In addition, $56.25 was received for tent fund. Tent committee was authorized to purchase, when necessary funds were in sight. Appointment of Charles Derry as district historian was ratified. C. L. Carstensen, on recommendation of Logan branch, was ordained elder, June 9, under hands of Charles Derry, H. N. Hansen. Request for ordination of John C. Woodruff was considered not properly presented. Elder S. H. McDonald was given a district mission. Bro. Samuel Wood was silenced. District president was instructed to notify Bro. Isaac Hogaboom that his ministerial services were not required in the district. A protest from members of the Missouri Valley branch was referred, on final action, to the district president with power to act. Sunday school and Religio each reported pleasant and profitable sessions. Sr. Lenna Strand's resignation as district clerk was accepted and thanks extended for faithful and efficient services rendered. James D. Stuart was appointed district clerk to fill vacancy. A. M. Fyrando's resignation as assistant district president was accepted with regrets expressed and a resolution of thanks extended for past services rendered. A. M. Fyrando tendered resigna-tion as Bishop's agent. Resignation not accepted, but resolved to sustain him by our faith and prayers. Applications for tent labor were received from Sioux City, Sandy Point, Maple Landing, and Missouri Valley. District president and assistant were authorized to take charge of tent when purchased. Two days' meetings were provided for on July 20, 21, at Sandy Point, in charge of G. M. Scott. Same date at Persia, H. N. Hansen in charge. July 22, 23, at Bigler's Grove, Frank Seeley in charge. Appointment of H. N. Hansen, assistant missionary in charge, ratified. Preaching and prayer service were well attended and the Spirit was present in manifestation of power. Adjourned to meet at Moorhead, Iowa, August 24, 25, 10: 30 a.m.

PASTORAL.

To the Church and the Missionaries in the Kewanee District, Greeting:—As Bro. F. A. Russell has resigned his position as missionary in charge of the work in Kewanee district I have decided to appoint in his place Bro. J. Arthur Davies, but as Bro. Davies expects to be detained from the field soon for a few weeks I hereby request Bro. Russell to continue in charge until his return. It will be understood that when Bro. Davies returns to the field Bro. Russell will be permitted to turn the oversight of the work over to him. It is proper to say here that Bro. Russell's work has been satisfactory to me, and it is not on account of dissatisfaction on my part, or unwillingness upon his to serve the church and the Master that this step has been taken. His letter of resignation was written in a humble and commendable spirit, and I trust that God will continue to bless him in his work, and that he may continue to deserve, as in the past, the confidence of the church and his colaborers. We trust, too, that the blessing of God may be upon Bro. Davies and the work under his charge, and that all may labor together amicably and in peace.

Your brother and coworker for Christ, HEMAN C. SMITH, Missionary in Charge.

To the Saints in the Dominion of Canada, Greeting:—Having been appointed in charge of the misson for this conference year, I again address you briefly. The work lying before us calls for a united effort on the part of every member of the church in this vast field. No one looking over the immense success that has crowned our labors in the past vear can fail to discern the hand of the Masyear can iail to discern the hand of the Master, directing, controlling, sustaining, and giving prestige and victory to our common cause, his great latter-day message. Up, then, dear colaborers, till by voice, pen, and practical illustrations of the Christ life in our life work, we present the gestel to the people life work, we preach the gospel to the people scattered over this great dominion. I congratulate the missionary force and local ministry on the splendid work accomplished in new fields and old branches, and trust that the divine favor of the past will stimulate to prompt and careful action in the future.

The church authorities heard our call for help, and have given us more laborers for the field already white to harvest. This will, no doubt, result in a great increase numerically; but I would impress this fact, that the increase of missionaries means a greater demand upon the financial department. I trust that every member of the church in this great mission will remember his duty and pay into the storehouse, that the work be not hindered by our refusal to keep, or neglect to comply with, the law of the Lord.

After prayerful consideration, we have decided to request the missionaries to labor in the following fields: Elder R. C. Longhurst, high priest and president of the London district, will labor in the London district. Elder George Green, high priest and president of Chatham district, will labor in the Chatham district. Elder A. Leverton, high priest, will labor in Chatham district. Elder A. C. Barmore, seventy, and Priest A. Knisley will conduct tent work in the Chatham district. Elder T. A. Phillips will labor in Chatham district. Elder A. E. Mortimer, high priest, and Elders Walter Bennett and Joseph Blackmore will labor in Niagara Falls district. Elder John Shields, seventy, and Elders J. L. Mortimer and R. C. Russell will labor in the Sauble Falls district. Elders Samuel Tomlinson and George C. Tomlison will labor in the Manitulin Island district. Elder B. St. John, seventy, and Elder Geo. H. Henley will labor in the Cameron district. Toronto district. Elder Daniel MacGregor, and Priest Alex. McMullen will labor in British Columbia district. The brethren will remember the district lines as defined and please labor accordingly; also do not fail to promptly report, as per former instructions, the first day of July, October, January, and March.

Dear brethren, let us be frugal, diligent, and prudent. Remember our mission is to seek the lost, encourage the disconsolate, help the feeble, recall the scattered, and in our holy mission reflect Christ in us the hope of glory.

May sweet peace be with you all. Your colaborer,

R. C. EVANS.

CAMP-MEETINGS.

We take this means of notifying the Saints of Arkansas that the following meetings have been appointed and arranged for. In Ingleside branch, near Saltillo, Faulkner county, August 3 to 10. Bald Knob branch, Bald Knob, White county, August 14 to 25. Martin's Creek branch, wear Martin's Creek, Sharp county, August 28 to September 8.

There are quite a number of scattered Saints in this state who have not the privilege of attending meetings, or meeting with those of like precious faith, therefore we have appointed these meetings for the especial purpose of furnishing an opportunity of meeting and spending a week in sweet com-munion. Brethren and sisters, you cannot afford to miss these meetings. It may be necessary for you to make some sacrifice in order that you may be able to attend. Do not hesitate to make it; the blessing you will receive will far exceed your sacrifice. Begin now to arrange to come to these meet-

We extend a special invitation to the Saints of southern Missouri who are in reach, to attend the meeting at Martin's Creek.

Central Nebraska will convene with Meadow Grove branch, Saturday, August 3, at ten a. m. Sunday school convention on the 2d at two p. m. Branch clerks and Sunday school secretaries, please see that reports fully correct reach their destination in due time. Let as many meet as can, and let us come together praying the Lord of the harvest for his Spirit to be with us.

LEVI GAMET, Pres.

Philadelphia will meet at Baldwin, Marvland, August 3. We desire reports from all officers in the district, and a full attendance; and may the love of God be with us. Geo. W. Robley, president, E. B. Hull, secretary.

NOTICES.

Having been chosen by Galland's Grove and Little Sioux districts to arrange a choral class for the coming annual reunion, to be held at Dow City, Iowa, commencing September 20, 1901, we have selected the following anthems from Winnowed Anthems No. 1: Nos. 9, 18, 43, 57, 71, 78, 97, 113, 119, 122, 137, 145, 166, 170, 177, 184. As it will be impossible in our scattered condition to meet for practice, we urge all who can and will assist with the music at coming reunion to practice the above numbers, and as soon as we meet at reunion we will have by-laws arranged and will ask all who will meet for practice and be present at each session (without reasonable excuse) to sign them, all necessary for good When we come together (if we work at home) will be unifying time, the great essential to good music. Now, dear brothren and sisters, let us fully realize the necessity of "doing our part." Let us go humbly trusting in God to aid us to sing with the Spirit and with the understanding also. May God's Holy Spirit inspire and thrill the hearts of all as it does the writer (S. B. K.) of this appeal. All who have not Winnowed Anthems No. 1 can obtain same by inclosing fifty cents for book and ten cents for postage to Hope Publishing Co., Chicago, Illinois. I have arranged price. We take this opportunity of kindly thanking Bigler's Grove band, for music rendered at last reunion, and take the liberty of asking them if possible to do likewise at coming reunion. The child was named and John Heide. The child was named Estella Gertrude to the mother, as one of old, before it was born.

DIED.

TAYLOR.—Bro. Richard Marshal Taylor, son of Bro. John Taylor, was born September 22, 1855, in Yarmouth township, Elgin county, Canada. Was baptized October 22, 1871, by Bro. Joseph S. Snively; confirmed by Brn. John Shippy and J. S. Snively. Was married to Sr. Fanny Smart, June 26, 1874. Died March 11, 1901. About ten months before his death Bro. Taylor was taken very sick, and there appeared to be no hopes of his recovery; but he appealed unto the Lord to spare his life a little longer, that he might live more devoted to the Lord than he had in the past, and the Lord granted his request. Bro. Taylor went to northern Michigan in 1883 and lived there nine years. Not meeting with financial success, he returned to Canada about ten years ago. Since that time he has provided a little home and appeared to be getting in comfortable circumstances. However, some of the shadows of this life darkened his spirituality and caused him sometimes to neglect his duty as a Saint and Christian, but for all this, he loved the gospel and this great latter-day work, so it can be said truthfully, He died in the faith. He was also a member of the Foresters (Canadian order). Bro. Taylor was sociable, honest, and industrious, and was respected by all who knew him. He leaves a wife (who been a good companion since they plighted hands at the altar), three daughters, and one son to mourn their loss, one daughter having passed on before. May God's protecting grace be over them. Funeral sermon was preached in the Methodist church, Bothwell, to a very large congregation of Saints, neighbors, and friends. The services were conducted by Elder A. Leverton, Elder

St. John assisting.
COOPER.—At Ogden, Utah, June 14, 1901, Bro. Reginald Cooper. The deceased was the only son of Sr. Jane D. Cooper. He was born September 29, 1884; baptized by H. O. Smith, July 5, 1894. Testimony of the esteem in which he was held by the community was manifested by the large attendance at the funeral, the profuse floral offerings, and kindly attentions during his sickness. Serkindly attentions during his sickness. mon by Elder W. S. Pender; music rendered by Latter Day Saints' choir.

Doty.—Bro. John H. Doty was born at Lake, Ohio, July 25, 1849; died at Baldwin, Iowa, June 20, 1901. He was baptized September 11, 1887, and has ever since been a devoted follower of his Master. He was truly a meek and lowly Saint. The funeral sermon was preached by J. S. Roth, assisted by John Heide, at his burial, June 23, in Hickory Grove, near Canton, Iowa, to an immense concourse of very attentive listeners who came from far and near to pay the last tribute of respect to one who was loved and respected by all who knew him.

NEEDHAM.-Nancy Ann (Petro) Needham was born in Franklin county, Ohio, January 8, 1820; died near Carson, Iowa, June 27, 1901. She was baptized by Elder Thomas Nutt at Wheeler's Grove, August 18, 1883. Was twice married, and to these unions were born six boys and six girls, eight of whom survive her. None knew her but to love her. Like a shock of corn fully ripe, she laid off the burdens of life with the assurance that she had fought the fight and finished her course. Funeral service from Saints' church, Carson, Iowa; sermon by Elder R. Wight.

COST OF SEEING THE PAN-AMERICAN.

Extravagant stories as to the cost of board and lodging in Buffalo have been going about the country and may have deterred some of our readers from planning to visit the Pan-

American Exposition.

The only basis for these stories is the fact that a few of the larger and more fashionable hotels are asking, and getting, rates as high as eight to ten dollars a day, which certainly is enough to stagger a man of moderate means. But there are many respectable hotels and countless boarding houses and private homes where one may lodge comfortably for not to exceed one dollar a night, and meals can be procured both within and without the exposition grounds for prices little if any above the normal. We say this after careful investigation, and we have placed millers through our free Accommodation Bureau at rates which fully sustain our statement. Leaving out the cost of railroad fare and sleeping car berth, which varies with the distance, the day's list of expenses in Buffalo for one person may be set down as follows:

Lodging......$1 00 Three meals...... 1 50 Admisson to the grounds..... Incidentals.....

Total for one day and night..$3 50

These figures are neither high nor low. They are moderate, and reliable. By a little effort eating-places can be found that will bring the item of meals considerably nearer one dollar. Under incidentals we include one dollar. such expenditures as street car fare; one or more Midway admissions at ten to twentyfive cents each; light refreshments at five cents and upward, and so forth.—From the Roller Mill.

The whole island of New York was originally bought of the Indians for an equivalent of about twenty-five dollars. Today New York has a population of about 3,500,000, which is exceeded by only one other city—London. Its wealth is enormous; its annual expenditures are more than twice those of the Republic of Mexico, and almost one third as much as those of the German Empire with its population of 52,000,000. And it has become the financial centre of the world.—

CHINESE IDEAS OF FUTURE PUNISHMENT.

Suddenly a prisoner appeared whose hat bore magisterial buttons. His shoes were covered with tape, and a string of beads rat-tled about his neck. This personage was official not only in his rich clothes, but in his firm, fearless manner of walking. Cow's Head threw the mighty man to the ground, and stripped him quickly enough. He started to kick, much to the amusement of Cow's Head, who asked if he were insane.

"Your impudence is big," screamed the official. "Do you know who I am? Are you trying to rob me?"

Cow's Head laughed softly.

"What do you take me for? I am a government official. All the people call me 'Your Majesty.' What law have I offended?"

Cow's Head replied:
"The trial court which convicted you said you offered bribes and sold justice freely-acts worse than robbery. The court commands me to give you eight hundred lashes. I will argue no longer. A bad official ought to be beaten harder than anybody else."

So stout and soft-fleshed was the magistrate that only a few blows caused him to yell like

"I don't want to be an official any longer," he groaned. "I prefer to be known as a common robber, thereby getting less lashes."

At this the other prisoners roared with

Here, there, and everywhere the condemned were suspended five feet from the floor, some quiet, others moaning. To each was fastened a tag on which was written the nature of the offense, and the number of blowsfrom two hundred to a thousand-allotted. A man with a book in his hand was telling off prisoners in the order of their beating. Certain ones were led away to be changed into dogs, cats, and various beasts, others to be thrown into dungeons. On the wall behind the roll-call Officer Ding read:

"Those who do evil must suffer for the evil done."

Ding, wondering, said: "How many sinners there are, above and below!"

The messenger answered: "Within the four oceans, and among the eighteen provinces live many people, good and bad. The bad always mingle with the good. Officers of the upper world can punish only a small number of offenders; the majority live undis-turbed. Crimes committed in the hearts of men cannot be dealt with on earth; therefore punishment down here influences both the wicked heart and the wicked body. Woe to all who cannot face the Justice of the Spirit! Those who sin only in their hearts go forever unpardoned. The tiger in the deep woods of the mountain may not have eaten man's flesh, but we know him to be a wild beast, just the same. The tiger's mouth may be undefiled, but in his heart is the desire for human flesh."

"Well said, well said," commented Ding.— From "A Living Soul Visits Hell," in July Chautauquan.

The essential disadvantages of religious journalism are akin to those attributed to amphibious animals in the school-boy's definition, "creatures that can't live on the land and die in the water." It is not really at home either in the church or in the world. In ecclesiastical circles it is seldom that the editor of a religious paper is thought of as exerting an influence equal to that of the occupant of a leading pulpit, or that his work receives such sympathy and cooperation as are given to a missionary society. On the other hand, a journal of this type, though duly entered in a press directory, differs as widely from an average newspaper in its aims, its methods, and its limitations as a ministers' social union from a club of literary Bohemians. To his clerical brethren the editor of a church paper seems scarcely more than a layman, while secular journalists regard him as very much of an amateur. fact is that his task demands a rare combination of spiritual fervor and professional skill. He must be in close touch with the most significant religious forces of his time, and must also possess a high development of the journalistic instinct. It has been said that if St. Paul returned to the world today, he would become the editor of a religious paper. If so, he would find ample scope for exercising the tact by which he "became all things to all men," and would soon have a new set of perils to add to those which he enumerated in writing to the Corinthians.

To workers who need public applause to give a relish to their labors, and who cannot be content with any service which does not be content with any service which does not bring their own names into prominence and honor, religious journalism has few attrac-tions to offer. After years of earnest effort, the religious editor, whatever place he may visit, will share the depressing experience of the editor of "The Eatanswill Independent" when he alighted wet and weary at Towcester. No enthusiastic crowds press forward to greet him; the church bells are silent; his very name elicits no responsive feeling in the torpid bosoms of the people. But, with all respect to Mr. Slurk, such a reception is not enough to curdle the ink in one's pen, if one's task is undertaken in a healthy spirit. It is true that a little encouragement now and then heartens and cheers; but the greatness of the work is itself a compensation for much that is disagreeable and depressing. that is once understood, is it not as pleasant to labor in the shade as in the glare?-Herbert W. Horwill, in the July Forum.

WHY OUR TREES SHOULD BE SAVED.

It is almost impossible to bring home to the average man the economic importance of this great national resource. The loss to the country by forest fires, largely preventable, has been estimatated at $50,000,000 every In regions where wood and water are abundant the tendency is to take them for granted and forget all about them. But without cheap lumber our industrial develop-ment would have been seriously retarded. agriculture demands water. through great parts of the west the people are coming to see that on forestry and irrigation together depends their future prosperity. Vice President Roosevelt has called this the greatest internal question of the day.—Gifford Pinchot in The World's Work.

The high place milk once held on the dietary list seems to be undermined. We know now that it is too heavy for the stomach when other food is taken; that unless it is sipped it forms a mass that is not easy to be digested; that when taken on an empty stomach bread or crackers should be broken into it to avoid the formation of curd-like matter: but with the addition of lime-water it may be used with impunity. Brought to the scalding point it is most nourishing. Care should be taken that it does not boil, for boiled milk is not to be used except for special needs. Prepared as kumiss milk it is most valuable, but by those to whom it is unpleasant buttermilk is substituted.—Mary Graham, in the July Woman's Home Companion.

"WHAT SHALL WE EAT."

Every day the same old question, What shall we eat for breakfast, for luncheon, for dinner? assails with monotonous regularity the patient housewife who seeks to provide good living for the family in agreeable variety at a moderate cost. There is a daily department in the Chicago Record-Herald, which is intended to answer this question satisfactorily every day in the year. It is entitled "Meals for a Day," and provides menus for the three meals every day, with the necessary receipts. These menus and receipes are carefully selected by the Record-Herald's household editor, and cash prizes are awarded to the best that are received. Housewives everywhere are invited to participate in the competition. For full particulars, see the "Meals for a Day" department in the Chicago Record-Herald.

A curious-looking piece of machinery is the new inspection engine turned out for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy railroad. It is a combination of a locomotive and passenger car, the car being set on and around the engine boiler, so that from the windows at sides and front the roadbed can be inspected by the railroad officials to the greatest advantage. It might appear such near proximity to the boiler would mean uncom-fortable warmth, but this is avoided by an extra thickness of "plastic lagging," as it is called, a non-conductor of heat, in connection with an air chamber between this and the floor of the car. The machine is lighted with electricity, even to an electric headlight, and ten lights distributed under the engine to afford light when oiling. It v be used constantly on all inspection trips.

The Arena for July opens the twenty-sixth volume of that "twentieth century review of vital thought." It contains many up-to-date vital thought." It contains many up-to-date articles from the pens of distinguished writers, the leading place being given to the initial paper of Prof. Frank Parsons's series on "Great Movements of the Nineteenth Century." It is entitled "The Sweep of the Century and its Meaning," and is a striking of the achievements of the last hunepitome of the achievements of the last hundred years. What shall probably be accomplished in the new science of geology during the present century is fascinatingly set forth by C. R. Keyes, Ph. D. Miss Kellor's sixth article on "The Criminal Negro" is devoted to psychological tests of females. Editor McLean announces a symposium on "The Curse of Inebriety" for the August number.

WHY NOT A TRIP TO COLORADO NEXT SUMMER?

The price for a round-trip ticket on certain days will be less than half fare. Call and see me about it?

We are doing everything possible this year, by making unusually low ticket rates and running unusually fast and comfortable trains, to make it convenient and not too expensive for people of moderate means to spend their vacation in the Colorado mountains. tains. There is no country in the world like Colorado for invalids and others in search of rest and pleasure. The pure, dry climate has the most astonishing permanent effect on the health and spirits of visitors, and especially is this so in the case of those from that part of the country near to the level of the sea. #### COMFORT IN THE WORD.

There is such a harmony in the word of God found in the New Testament, and such an agreement between the prophetic declarations of the Old Testament referring to the Christ and the account given of his coming, his life, and his doctrine, that one is led to wonder if it is not the direct result of the prescience of God which has been brought to bear on the affairs of earth.

An instance of this may be found by examining the following passages:

He was led as a sheep to the slaughter; and like a lamb dumb before his shearer, so opened he not his mouth: in his humiliation his judgment was taken away, and who shall declare his generation? for his life is taken from the earth.—Acts 8: 32, 33.

The inquiry of the eunuch was, To whom this language of the prophet should be applied?

There is no mistaking the reply:

Then Philip opened his mouth, and began at the same scripture, and preached unto him Jesus.—Acts 8:35.

See also St. Mark 15:28:

And the Scripture was fulfilled, which saith, and he was numbered with the transgressors.

By turning back to Isaiah 53:12, it is seen as the prophet gave it.

Following the 15th of Mark to its end it is discovered that the body of Jesus was not buried among the poor, or the strangers in the potter's field, but found a resting place in a tomb hewn out of rock, which clearly indicates the fulfillment of the 9th verse of Isaiah 53:

And he made his grave with the wicked, and with the rich in his death.

When arraigned before Caiaphas, and accusation was made against him, he opened not his mouth but was silent, as a lamb to the slaughter, and as a sheep before her shearers is dumb, so he openeth not his mouth, thus fulfilling another part of the prophet's words.

At the time of the agony in the garden, when sleep had overcome those who were to watch with him or till he returned to them, he faced the high priest, who, questioning, said:

Answerest thou nothing? What is it which these witness against thee? But he held his peace, and answered nothing.—Mark 14:60, 61.

Again, in the supreme hour of the trial before Pilate, when asked by this ruler of the Romans:

Art thou the King of the Jews? And he answering said unto him, Thou sayest it.

But when the chief priests accused him of many things: . . . he answered nothing.—Mark 15:2, 3.

So, Pilate assuming the inquisitive said:

Answerest thou nothing? behold how many things they witness against thee. But Jesus yet answered nothing.—Verses 4, 5.

When asked a question which involved his identity he freely replied; but he did not choose to reply to the calumnious charges of his persecutors. He left his vindication to the predictions of the prophets and his works in the mission assigned him.

The fulfillment of the prediction found in the saying, "In his humiliation his judgment was taken away," is acknowledged by Jesus himself in John 12: 47.

And if any man hear my words, and believe not, I judge him not: for I came not to judge the world but to save the world.

This acknowledgement of Jesus that the task of then judging the world had not been assigned to him, will enable one to see more clearly the office work of the Holy Spirit as elsewhere stated:

If ye love me, keep my commandments. And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you forever, even the Spirit of truth; whom the world cannot receive, because he seeth him not, neither knoweth him: but ye know him; for he dwelleth with you, and shall be in you.—John 14:15-17.

And when he is come, he will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment.—John 16: 8.

The presence of the "Spirit of Truth" was to be and now is a reproof to the world of sin, a rebuke to the folly, a reminder of the duty to God and man; and it is well for man to know that Jesus was not sent to assume to do the office work of the Spirit, or to set that Spirit aside. What a condescension! What a tower of strength in humility! What a guarantee of love and mercy to man this teaches!

Peter writing of Jesus recognized the fulfillment of the prophecies, and states his conclusion in his second chapter of his first letter, where in regard to Jesus he wrote:

Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the tree, that we, being dead to our sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose stripes ye were healed.

The prophet wrote:

Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows: yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities: the chastisement of our peace was upon him; and with his stripes we are healed.—Isaiah 53: 4, 5.

If a man is fond of tracing these things, he can find much food for thought in these correspondencies of prophecy and fulfillment; and comfort of spirit as well.

BRO. JOHN J. CORNISH began a debate with Elder R. B. Brown, of the Disciple faith, at Shabbona, Michigan, on the evening of July 1, on the following propositions:

Resolved, That the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, of which J. J. Cornish is a member, is in harmony with the teaching of the New Testament in doctrine and practice. J. J. Cornish affirms, R. B. Brown denies.

Resolved, That the Bible contains all of God's revealed will to man for the past, present, or future; also contains all things needful for man's salvation, and the Book of Mormon is a fraud and a delusion, and the translation of the Bible by Joseph Smith must go with it. R. B. Brown affirms, J. J. Cornish denies.

There are to be four meetings on each proposition.

We presume by the time this reaches our readers the debate will have been closed; with what result remains to be learned.

Mr. Pender says the more acquaintance he has with the Latter Day Saints there, the better he likes them, and manifests the proper spirit when he states that he prefers working with the people and enjoying their friendship to working against them and incurring their enmity.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. John B. Roush writes from Denver, Colorado, July 3:

Our church work is moving quite nicely in this mission. During the quarter ending July first, eighteen baptisms are reported to me in the mission. This I consider a good record for this field. We are expecting Bro. Joseph Luff to be with us for a short time in the near future. The work in this city seems to lag a little in the intense heat; but we do not feel discouraged, and hope to see the religious fervor of our people here increase when the weather cools a little.

Bro. S. G. Cunningham wrote from Mountainville, Maine, June 20:

All is going nice this way. I have baptized fourteen in the last two months. The Lord is truly with us. We expect to water more soon.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Bro. N. C. Enge is actively at work in the Norway mission, and has succeeded in getting space in one of the papers there, in which he gave some of the historical facts of the growth of the church and the apostasy under Brigham Young.

Patriarch A. H. Smith and his secretary left the first part of this week for California, where they will sojourn for some time prior to their departure for the Society Islands and Australia. They will sail sometime about the first of September.

On Monday evening of this week Bishop E. L. Kelley departed for the east, going by the way of Kirtland, his objective point being Boston, from where he will sail in company with Bro. G. T. Griffiths for England. They expect to leave Boston on July 20. Sr. Kelley accompanied her husband.

The Editor in Chief of the HERALD left yesterday for California, going by way of Independence, where he expected to stop for a few days. His first California point will be San Bernardino. He expects also to reach

Los Angeles and Oakland before returning. He will return in time to attend the Dow City reunion, which will be held about September 20.

The Riverton, Iowa, Independent speaks quite highly of the work of Brn. Mintun and Fry at that place. We are always glad to hear the brethren well spoken of.

GRACELAND COLLEGE NOTES.

The catalogues for Graceland have been issued, and are now being sent out. Friends of the college should send for some and place them where they will do good for the college. Inquiries for information concerning the work of Graceland will receive attention if addressed to the secretary, I. W. Allender, Lamoni, Iowa. Let us give our college better support this year than ever before. It is our school, and it is our duty to support it. Let us make it one of the best.

RADCLIFF, Iowa.

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I send you a small gift.
I feel to help if it is only a small amount. It is for the college.

ODIN JACOBS.

[This letter was accompanied by a $10.00 bill. And when it is known that Bro. Jacobs is now an old man (eighty-two years next fall), who says that he feels the need now of what the college can do for our young men and young women, it is pretty safe to say that his example is worthy of being repeated by others. Eighty-two years of life spent under the disability of a lack of education makes the impression upon Bro. Jacobs that the college should be sustained.—ED.]

BEDISON, Mo., June 29.

Bro. E. L. Kelley:—Inclosed find draft for $85 from the Saints of the Bedison branch, Nodaway, Missouri, district, to be used for the benefit of Graceland College. We belong to the "one thousand" who could so easily free our college from debt, and as we have heard no call for the money, we send it any way. We look at the matter in this light; that, since we have built such house no one should say that the debt ought not to be paid, and that at once. We were not in the church when the vote was taken for the establishment of a college, but if such a question were now pending we would vote for it, if it were possible. The Saints of this district belong to the many toiling, laboring poor of the church, but they are in full sympathy with the college, and they will still try to do their part toward helping out the work that will put our boys and girls, our young men and women, on an equal footing with the rest of the world in the arts and sciences. This is the only way by which we can properly fit our young men to meet the intellectual giants of the world with any degree of fairness. The saying of Dr. Hillis, of Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, "The pew of today is wiser than the pulpit of yesterday," seems very true in a certain sense.

we feel that the preaching that might, thirty years ago, have attracted the admiration of the masses, would not now command their attention. If we wish to keep in hailing distance of the world we must try in some degree to keep pace with them.

Now, Saints of this district, and of the whole church, how can we say that we want to do all we can for this work and yet we cannot spare a few dollars for this cause that is doing, and will do, so much for our children. We hope that there will be a hearty amen all along the line, to show that we want, at least, to do the thing that the Lord has said should be done.

With best wishes and prayer for the emancipation of Graceland and the redemption of Zion.

Your brother.

Your brother, E. S. FANNON.

Elder R. C. Evans writes encouragingly of the work in the London, Canada, district. Of the college work he says:

You need not look for many large subscriptions from Canada but hundreds of small ones.

This is right; let us have that general and united help that has been rendered by the Canada Saints in the past, and we shall be content and the Lord's will done as manifest in the late revelation.

We are looking for a report of some Bishop's agent that will contain the name of every brother and sister in the district with a contribution to college debt. Who will it be?

Bro. S. Penfold, of Santa Ana, California, forwards thirty dollars from Bro. George W. Sparks, of Anaheim, California, for college and memorial funds with the encouragement from Bro. Sparks that if he lives and the college debt is not paid sooner he will send some more next year. With men of faith and devotion to the cause of Christ like this it is only a question of time when the work will be accomplished. Elder Sparks is a veteran of great age and experience in the work. The Lord remember the workers!

Bro. A. J. Moore, of the Northeastern Texas district, sends in a fine list of donors for Graceland College. We are glad of this move on the part of the Texas Saints. They are not content to wait to be helped along in the work but move to the help of themselves and others. He says:

Those who have contributed did so cheerfully.

Elbert A. Smith is in with $214.75 from the San Bernardino Saints. This is not only in time but shows that the San Bernardino Saints heed the expressed wish of the Master—"pay the college debt."

Elder Thomas Taylor, of England, reports his interest in carrying out the instruction touching the college debt. Bro. Taylor is an aged veteran in the cause of the Master and will do all he can to fulfill his will.

Elder C. A. Butterworth reports conditions more hopeful in Australia and expresses satisfaction with the work of General Conference in providing for that field.

GEOLOGY AND THE DELUGE.

In Saints' Herald of June 12 I find a selected article under the above caption, giving account of remarkable discoveries which show that the Noachian flood is a scientific possi-The several speculations as to when that flood transpired take nothing away from the evidences adduced in favor of the actual occurrence; neither do the forced meanings endeavored to be placed upon the wording of the scriptural account, "All the mountains and high hills under the whole heavens" being covered, take away any of the force of its language, as we shall endeavor to show.

One of the objects I have in this writing is to produce other evidence which to my mind is calculated still further to bolster up the truth of the record as given in the word of God, as made known to us, not only in the Mosaic record as found in the King James' Translation, but a still more extended account of the conditions leading up to it in the Inspired Translation of the Scriptures given to us of God through his modern prophet, Joseph Smith, the Seer of Palmyra:

In the six hundredth year of Noah's life, in the second month, and the seventeenth day of the month, the same day were all the fountains of the great deep broken up, and the windows of heaven were opened. And the waters prevailed exceedingly upon the face of the earth, and all the high hills under the heavens were covered. Fifteen cubits and upward did the waters prevail, and the mountains were covered.—Gen. 8:36-41.

The evidence I wish now to present makes no mention of the flood, and the possibilities are that the thought never passed the mind, they being fully absorbed in the work they were engaged in. In the issue for January, 1901, of the Patent Record, published in Washington, District of Columbia, is an article entitled, "The bottom of the sea," and is represented as "An authorized account of the researches of Sir John Murray in the science of Oceanography."

In the year 1872 the "Challenger" sailed from Sheerness in England, without a cargo, and without a destination. She was a man-o'-war, a square-rigged three-master, commanded by officers of the Royal Navy, and having on board some of the most eminent scientists of Great Britain. For nearly four years she sailed the seas of both hemispheres, from the Arctic to the Antarctic, infrequently touching land, and yet constantly accumulating her strange cargo. She dragged the ocean with nets, not only for the ordinary fish of the sea, but for the myriad forms of lesser life which feed in its vast blue meadows; she let down dredges and sounding plummets into the deep, mysterious valleys of the sea bottom; she explored all but limitless plains, desert with black darkness, and cold, and never broken silence. . . She dis covered submarine rivers, some of them flowing outward from the land and rising like a fountain from the ocean bottom; she learned of new and mighty ocean currents, not the surface currents known to navigators, but those which creep along the sea bottom, a foot in a century, perhaps, carrying life-giving oxygen to the creatures of the deep sea; she located stupendous mountain ranges and volcances, with precipices and declivities so awful that it is well, perhaps, that they are hidden forever from the eye of man. It is not often that a ship sails away for a brief four years and brings back a new science; but that was the accomplishment of the "Challenger," and the science thus founded is now known as Oceanography.

It was not until 1895 that the final volume of the great report of the expedition was published. I have been thus explicit in order to show the source from whence the following conclusion sprang, which caught my particular attention, and which may possibly be worthy of the space occupied. It appears that the time was when the Jack Tars of the "fo'c'stle" used to be divided upon the question whether their mates who died and were cast overboard in midocean ever reached the bottom or not; and a deputation of tars was once sent to Sir John Murray to ask, What had become of Jim? one of their mates. thing that will sink in a glass of waters," says Sir John, "will practically sink to the bottom of the deepest sea." And now comes the quotation which struck my mind so forcibly as a solution of the quotation, "The same day were all the fountains of the great deep broken up."

Murray points out that water is one of the most incomprehensible of substances. "Water can be compressed only one twenty thousandths of its bulk." That although the pressure may be enormous at the ocean bottom, the water is only a little more dense than at the surface; and yet the compression is sufficient so that if it were suddenly released, say by the suspension of the attraction of gravitation, and all the water over all the globe should expand until it was of the same density as the surface water, the oceans would instantly rise some 500 feet, covering practically all the inhabited land in the world.

"And the fountains of the great deep were broken up." This in conjunction with, "And the windows of heaven were opened," our heaven or firmament, Mars, Jupiter, Venus, Saturn, and all the planetary system existing under the influence of our sun, each supplying their quota of the aquatic fluid, would be abundantly sufficient to bring about a fulfillment of the effects produced as recorded in the sacred writings; and the earth's baptism be effectually performed. The revelations of God inform us that the earth has filled the law of her creation.

There is another feature in this which I desire to prove before concluding. In the HERALD article, the writer objects to the account given in the Bible, and states:

"All the mountains and hills under the whole heavens," means all those within the horizon of the writer's vision, or within reach of his knowledge. When we say, Everybody knows it; or, The whole country turned out to see him; we have no difficulty in explaining that these phrases though absolutely general in their form, are yet much restricted in their meaning. The Biblical account of the flood does not imply, as many seem to assume, that the waters of the earth increased to such a degree that it swelled the circumference of the globe to the extent of the tops of the highest mountains. Nor is it necessary except for the purpose of effecting the destruction of the human race, to suppose that the flood was, in the strict sense of the word, universal. We may well believe that the end in view, namely, the destruction of the human race with the exception of Noah and his family, was accomplished without the destruction of all forms of animal life, whose existence was unconnected with the general moral reasons for the flood.

Who wrote the book of Genesis, as recorded in the King James Translation? I am answered, Moses. Now please tell me, What was the source from whence Moses gathered his information? That translation does not inform us. The Inspired Translation of the Bible, heretofore mentioned in this article, informs us in the following language:

And it came to pass, that the Lord spake unto Moses, saying, Behold, I reveal unto you concerning this heaven and this earth; write the words which I speak. I am the Beginning and the End; the Almighty God. By mine Only Begotten I created these things.—Gen. I: 1, 2, I. T.

Here, then, we discover that God himself was the source from whence Moses derived his information. If, then, Moses received the history of the first ages, including the history of the days of Noah and the flood, can it be possible that the Lord misrepresented facts when he said unto Noah:

And behold, I, even I will bring in a flood of water upon the earth, to destroy all flesh, wherein is the breath of life, from under heaven; every thing that liveth on the earth shall die. For yet seven days, and I will cause it to rain upon the earth forty days, and forty nights; and every living substance that I have made will I destroy from off the face of the earth. And it came to pass, after seven days, that the waters of the flood were upon the earth. And the waters prevailed exceedingly upon the face of the earth, and all the high hills, under the whole heavens were covered. Fifteen cubits and upward did the waters prevail; and the mountains were covered. And all flesh died that moved upon the face of the earth, both of fowl and of cattle, and of beasts, and of every creeping thing that creepeth upon the earth, and every man. All in whose nostrils the Lord had breathed the breath of life, of all that were on the dry land, died. And Noah only remained, and they that were with him in the ark.—Gen. 8: 22, 32, 36, 41-45, I. T.

Did the Lord misrepresent facts on purpose to deceive not only Moses but all who might read the account, all down through the ages? I opine not; I read that God is truth, and this is the record of that affair, as far as it concerns us upon this question. And this man Moses gives us his views as to the truthful character of God who dictated to him this record as he wrote it, Ascribe ye greatness unto our God. He is the Rock, his work is perfect, for all his ways are judgment, a God of truth and without iniquity, just and right is he.—Deut. 32: 3, 4, I. T.

Also the testimony of another who had been highly favored of God:

I will say of the Lord, He is my refuge and my fortress; my God; in him will I trust. . . . His truth shall be thy shield and buckler.—Ps. 91: 2, 4, I. T.

His ways and thoughts are not as man's. He declares.

For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. For as the heavens are higher than the earth, so are my ways higher than your ways, and my thoughts than your thoughts.

—Isa. 55: 8, 9, I. T.

O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God! how unsearchable are his judgments, and his ways past finding out! For who hath known the mind of the Lord? or who hath been his counselor?—Rom. 11: 33, 34, I. T.

For the wisdom of this world is foolishness with God; for it is written, He taketh the wise in their own craftiness. And again, The Lord knoweth the thoughts of the wise, that they are vain. Therefore let no man glory in man.—1 Cor. 3: 19-21, I. T.

The prophet of God looking down into the latter day, when the wisdom of man should be weighed in the balance, declares:

The wisdom of their wise and learned shall perish, and the understanding of the prudent shall be hid. And woe unto them that seek deep to hide their counsel from the Lord. And their works are in the dark; and they say, Who seeth us and who knoweth us? And they also shall say, Surely, your turning of things upside down shall be esteemed as the potter's clay. But behold, I will show unto them, saith the Lord of hosts, that I know all their works. For, shall the work say of him that made it, He made me not? or shall the thing framed say of him that framed it, He had no understanding?—Isa. 29: 26-28, I. T.

The prophet obtained a fine view of the cast of mind of the scientists of the present day. They have worked themselves up upon their line of thought to that stage that they believe so far as the history we possess purporting to be the word of God, the actual creator of this world and its surroundings by the word of his power, when he gave the history of his work to Moses, he deliberately gave it in such a way that mankind would be deceived as to its truth, because for sooth, it does not meet their preconceived ideas, either as to the creation of the earth, or of man; of the former the mass of them would have us believe that what they please to term nature's god is the one who did it, and so far as the creation of man is concerned, he sprang from a tadpole or some other low down germ. and nature developed him during the millions of years, since that germ started upon its course. The trouble is with scientists, they give out to the world that they believe nothing until it is proved; and upon questions like the ones we are now investigating, in which God the great creator is interested, they have never yet been able to get down to the root of the matter, and never will, independently of reve- l lation direct from God the Father, the great creator of all things both in heaven and in earth. Upon this question of faith or belief I quote the words of a prophet of God by the name of Alma, whose teachings are recorded in that much despised book, the Book of Mormon. He says:

There are many who do say, if thou wilt show unto us a sign from heaven, then we shall know of a surety, then we will believe. Now I ask, is this faith? Behold, I say unto you, Nay, for if a man knoweth a thing, he has no cause to believe, for he knoweth it. Now as I said concerning faith: faith is not to have a perfect knowledge of things; therefore if ye have faith, ye hope for things which are not seen.

The author of the HERALD article makes this statement:

It is not necessary to suppose that the date of the flood is correctly given in the margin of the Bible. That date is based on a particular interpretation of genealogical tables which is by no means generally accepted, even by the most conservative critics. On the contrary so learned and conservative a Hebrew scholar as the late Professor William Henry Green, of Princeton, maintains that back of Abraham there are no certain data for chronological calculations; so that any objections to the flood, based on evidence of the great antiquity of man may be set aside as irrelevant.

Of course that is science. Upon the other hand we have a genealogical account of the descendants of Adam, the first of the generations given upon this earth, down to the days of Abraham, giving the time of their birth. and the date of their death. And this given by God to Moses that he might write it for our edification and learning. Here lies the trouble; this table of the births and deaths of those ancient fathers, God is the authority; and it strikes deeply at the root of science which is made up of the wisdom of man, which God has said is foolishness with him, and shall perish. The author upon whose record the article I have referred to in the Patent Record does not mention Noah's flood, but gives us his conclusions based upon practical experience and actual observation, that "by the suspension of the attraction of gravita tion, and all the water over all the globe should expand until it was of the same density as the surface water, the oceans would instantly rise some 500 feet, covering practically all the inhabited land in the world;" this in connection with that which came down, when the heavens were opened, would produce quite a body of water, sufficient to cover what was then considered high hills, and what was then designated by God in his account given to Moses as mountains.

Here I am going to make an assertion; and it is, I believe, backed by the word received of God, science and scientists to the contrary notwithstanding. And I pray that none of my brethren or sisters may entertain the thought of apostasy, in the least devils quaked and obeyed.

degree in consequence. It is this: I do not believe that before the flood, and not even until after the high hills and mountains, so called, then existing, had been submerged beneath the waters, that such warts upon the face of the earth as the Cordilleras, Himalayas, Alps, and other mountain ranges of like character had an existence. And now for a few evidences sufficient in my mind to establish the idea. I read:

I am the Beginning and the End; the Almighty God. By mine Only Begotten I created these things. Yea, in the beginning I created the heaven, and the earth upon which thou standest. And the earth was without form, and void.—Gen. 1:2-4, I. T.

"In the beginning;" this has no reference to God; for we read that he is without beginning of days or end of years. But it has reference entirely to the beginning of his work, in the creation of this earth and its heaven or firmament; gathering together the materials of which they were to be composed; and when they were thus gathered, the earth was without form and void

Here I will throw a crumb of consolation to the scientist, for no time is specified in regard to this part of the work, but let him remember that in the condition here stated, there was no man, beast, fish, or reptile; the earth was void. God then began to set the earth and its firmament in order, created its light, and separated the light from the darkness, established the firmament, and divided the waters, gathered the waters which remained to the earth into one place, and caused the dry land to appear, placed the lights in the firmament to give light by day and night, created the fowls of the air, and the fishes of the sea, created the beasts of the earth, and creeping things, and the cattle, everything according to his kind, and last of all he created man in his own image, and gave him dominion over the whole. And upon an examination of what he had done, he pronounced it all very good. All this part of the work was completed in six days, and upon the seventh day he rested from all his labors. Now whether these seven days were our common days of twenty four hours, or whether each of these days comprised a thousand years, as gathered from a scriptural expression, "One day is as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day with the Lord;" is immaterial to me, for the time being. We will find out all about it by and by. It suffices me at the present to know that he through his Son only had to speak, and Lazarus and others were brought back to life; by his word the blind received their sight, the deaf heard, the lame were made to walk, lepers cleansed, and And God the great Creator had full confidence in himself, so that we read, "By faith the worlds were made, by the word of God." Since that time, however, in consequence of sin, things have become somewhat entangled; the sea is no more in one place, the land of the earth has become split up into fragments, the status of mankind has become terribly diversified, the spirit of hatred and jealousy fills the hearts of man and beast, to that extent that the weakest are forced to the wall, and become the prey of the stronger. But thanks be to God, he has promised it shall not be always so, but has given the assurance that the times of the restitution, or, restoration of all things to their proper order, is near at hand, and Jesus will again be revealed from the heavens, this time in power and great glory; when peace and good will among men will flow as a river, and nothing hurt nor destroy in all his holy mountain.

And his voice shall be heard among all people . . . as the voice of a great thunder, which shall break down the mountains, and the valleys shall not be found; he shall command the great deep and it shall be driven back into the north countries, and the islands shall become one land, and the land of Jerusalem and the land of Zion shall be turned back into their own place, and the earth shall be like as it was in the days before it was divided.—D. C. 108:5.

Which division took place in the days of Peleg, the fifth in descent from Noah, and was born 101 years after the flood, and was 239 years old when he died. This to me is evidence of the fact that notwithstanding the flood it was not until after that event for some years that the earth became broken up into fragments as now. And that the high hills and mountains at the time of the flood were of such dimensions as not to forbid the accomplishment of the word of the Lord given to Moses, that every high hill and mountain under the whole heaven was covered with fifteen cubits and more above them, which would make twenty-two feet and upwards.

Respectfully submitted, WILLIAM HAWKINS.

PRIESTHOOD AUTHORITY.-NO. I. BY FREDERICK GREGORY.

By what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority?-Matt. 21: 23.

Of all questions asked by the chief priests and elders, this is the most sensible, and yet it appears they were not as sincere in motive as one might think from the nature of the question. They evidently inquired out of curiosity and not for any special good that would come to them from any explanation Jesus might give of his work, or authority for teaching the things that he did. Christ saw this lack of interest, and judging they were not in quest of any good, gave them no direct answer; but to expose their hypocrisy and duplicity, told them they must answer a question he had to ask:

The baptism of John, whence was it? from heaven, or of men?-Matt. 21: 25.

This simple query silenced at once the argument of the chief priests and elders, with all their learning and cunning methods. Indeed, they were caught in their own trap, and were too cowardly to make answer. If they should say, Of heaven, then they knew Jesus would follow up with the question, Why did ye not then believe him? and this they were anxious to avoid. To say, Of men, would not meet with the approval of many of their own class, and so they said to Jesus, "We cannot tell;" a deliberate lie, and they knew it. Jesus knew it also, and very meekly replied, "Neither tell I you by what authority I do these things." Having made themselves liars, they said no more, but went their way, conscious of their defeat, and no doubt with less conceit. Christ did not rebuke them for having asked such a question, for he was not ashamed of the authority under which he acted, and had no objection to being questioned concerning it; but he was ever careful to hold sacred the work that God gave him to do. did not believe in giving that which was holy unto dogs, or in casting his pearls before swine for them to trample under feet. He had many times spoken of his authority, and wished the people to investigate his work, knowing if they did so in a proper spirit, they could not help but see his divinity, and know beyond doubt that he had authority from God to speak and do as he did; but as it was, his teaching was so peculiar and so opposite to their tradition that they did not appreciate his work. If he had agreed with them they probably never would have questioned his authority; but when he dared to express opposite ideas of religion, and teach different doctrine, they concluded his work unauthorized and an imposture; but this is where they made a huge mistake, and thousands upon thousands are repeating it today. he did not agree in matters of religion with the learned rabbis, the chief priests, the lawyers, etc., is abundantly proven by the following passages:

And the Father himself, which hath sent me, hath borne witness of me. Ye have neither heard his voice at any time, nor seen his shape. And ye have not his word abiding in you: for whom he hath sent, him ye believe not. . . But I know you, that ye have not the love of God in you.

-John 5: 37, 38, 42. He that is of God heareth God's words: ye therefore hear them not, because ye are not of God.-John 8: 47.

I know that ye are Abraham's seed; but ye seek to kill me, because my word hath no place in you.—John 8: 37.

Ye are of your father the devil, and the lusts of your father ye will do.—John 8: 44.

Verily I say unto you, That the publicans and the harlots go into the kingdom of God before you.—Matt. 21: 31.

Well hath Esaias prophesied of you hypocrites, as it is written, This people honoreth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me. Howbeit in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.—Mark 7:6, 7.

But woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men; for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in. . . . Ye devour widows' houses, and for a pretense make long prayer: therefore ye shall receive the greater damnation. . . . Ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte; and when he is made, ye make him twofold more the child of hell than yourselves.—Matt 23:13-15.

Ye fools and blind.—Verse 19.

Ye blind guides, which strain at a gnat. and swallow a camel.-Verse 24.

Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell?—Verse

These and other scathing remarks were not received with any too good grace, but Jesus had no other apology than.

Ye are from beneath; I am from above. And because I tell you the truth, ye believe me not.—John 8:23, 45, effectively disposing of the much respected religion of the Pharisees; and after showing it had no place in his heart, he said with emphasis:

Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, I am the light of the world.—John 8:12.
I said therefore unto you, that ye shall die in your sins: for if ye believe not that I am he, ye shall die in your sins.—Verse 24.

Verily, verily, I say unto you, If a man keep my saying, he shall never see death.— Verse 51.

Jesus saith unto him, I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me.—John 14:6.

Is it any great wonder that these people should come and ask of Jesus, 'By what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority?" Their faith was assailed and a new one to replace it advocated. By what authority? Was it of God, or of men? If of men, these people need not feel disturbed; but if of God, then they must change their doctrine and manner of worship to suit the mind and will of God as authoritatively revealed, or suffer the consequence of disobedience. How was it? Under what authority did Jesus act? He bears witness as follows:

Believest thou not that I am in the Father, and the Father in me? the words that I speak unto you I speak not of myself: but the Father that dwelleth in me, he doeth the works.—John 14:10.

For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak.—John 12:49.

Then said Jesus unto them. When ye have lifted up the Son of man, then shall ye know that I am he, and that I do nothing of myself; but as my Father hath taught me, I speak these things.-John 8:28.

Jesus answered them, and said, My doctrine is not mine, but his that sent me. If any man will do his will, he shall know of the doctrine, whether it be of God, or whether I speak of myself.-John 7:16, 17.

That it was the duty of Christ to speak as authorized by God is seen in the prophecy found in Deuteronomy 18: 18:

I will raise them up a prophet from among their brethren, like unto thee, and will put my words in his mouth; and he shall speak unto them all that I shall command him.

Christ, as the only begotten Son of God, in his earth life was given the work of revealing to man, and establishing for man's benefit the simple plan arranged by God to bring about the redemption of his creation. And to accomplish this great task Christ was willing, and did suffer humiliation, in that he became in all points like unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people.-Heb. 2: 17.

For him to make "reconciliation for the sins of the people," he was not only to be made like his brethren in all things, but be a merciful and faithful high priest, and as such minister pleasingly to God and beneficially to the people; hence, we have Paul testifying:

And no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God as was Aaron. So also Christ glorified not himself to be made a high priest; but he that said unto him, Thou art my Son, today have I begotten thee. As he saith also in another place, Thou art a priest for ever after the order of Melchisedec. . . . Called of God a high priest after the order of Melchisedec .-Heb. 5: 4, 6, 10.

This high priesthood was a necessity. Christ could not minister in the things of God without it; but for all, he did not covet or assume the sacred office. The God that acknowledged him as his Son called him a high priest, and so the Christ ministered under true priesthood authority. The God that sent him clothed him with authority to officiate in sacred things, and none knew this better than Christ himself. Under this priesthood he preached the gospel, and in other ways blessed the people, building up the kingdom of God as rapidly as circumstances would permit. But he could not personally preach the gospel to every creature; and it was not intended that he should. His work in this regard was to raise, educate. and authorize a ministerial force that would carry the heaven-born message, so precious to mortals, to the ends of the earth, and to this great work he gave his entire thought and life. Paul tells us that "God hath set some in the church, first apostles;" and so we read of Jesus, early in his ministry, choosing and ordaining twelve of his humble following to officiate as "apostles" in his name, representing him and his work, wherever they might go or be sent, having authority its ordinances. Of their calling the scripture speaks plainly:

And he ordained twelve, that they should be with him, and that he might send them forth to preach, and to have power to heal sicknesses, and to cast out devils. - Mark 3: 14,

Then he called his twelve disciples together, and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases. And he sent them to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick.—Luke 9: 1, 2.

For the Son of man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch.—Mark 13: 34.

These twelve were ordained to be "with him, and that he might send them forth to preach." They were chosen and ordained, but not yet fully educated or qualified for the work assigned them. By traveling with Jesus they learned of him, and were considered by our Lord as qualified to correctly represent him and minister the word, by the time his hour had come, when he laid down his life for his friends. They were sent by God divinely called - and authorized to Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world.-Matt. 28:19, 20.

As expressed by Mark:

And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned.-Mark 16: 15, 16.

After appointing, ordaining, instructing, etc., the "twelve" to have "first" place in the church militant. under its visible head, realizing the body was not all one member, but that other members or officers bearing priesthood were a necessity to the proper working of the body, the Master proceeded to call and authorize other men in companies or quorums of seventy, to preach the gospel and assist in building up the kingdom of God under the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, and of this appointment we read:

After these things the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them two and two before his face into every city and place, whither he himself would come. said he unto them, The harvest truly is great; but the laborers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest. Go your ways: behold, I send you forth as lambs among wolves.—Luke 10: 1-3.

The seventeenth verse shows they held the priesthood authority, for we read of them returning with joy, saying: "Lord, even the devils are subject unto us through thy name." The Lord had said, "In my name shall they cast out devils," and it was even as he said. The second verse shows "the laborers are few," notwithstanding the appointment of the "twelve" to preach the gospel and administer and "seventy," and intimates that the church generally.

further appointments would be made in due time by the "Lord of the harvest," which was undoubtedly the case, judging from Paul's statement to the Ephesian brethren. Speaking of the several offices or grades in the priesthood, he writes:

And he gave some, apostles; and some, rophets; and some, evangelists; and some, pastors and teachers; for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, for the edifying of the body of Christ.—Eph. 4:

It would be folly to question the authority of either the 'twelve' or "seventy," for they were called and appointed to their work by Christ, who said:

I have manifested thy name unto the men which thou gavest me out of the world .-John 17: 6, which refers to the ministry, and shows they were "called of God as was Aaron." While on earth the Savior called and ordained these men, and never at any time did he authorize his following, ministry or laity, to call or appoint individuals to the work of the ministry; but to the contrary, reserved the right unto himself. sav-

The Head, from which all the body by joints and bands having nourishment ministered, and knit together, increaseth with the increase of God.-Col. 2: 19.

Though he returned to his Father, he remained the "Head" of the "body." Touching the affairs of his kingdom, the body itself is unintelligent. Wise men after the flesh cannot by their own wisdom build up the church of God, as Christ intimates: "Without me ye can do nothing." The necessary intelligence is resident in the Head only, and must be conveyed to the body and its members, hence the work of the Holy Spirit, so faithfully promised by Christ after his ascension, in revealing to the body such things as the "Lord of the harvest" in his great wisdom deemed a necessity to the effectual working of every part, so that the body might "increase with the increase of God" unto the "edifying of itself in love." The work of the Holy Spirit in this respect is referred to by Luke in Acts 1:2, which reads:

Until the day in which he was taken up, after that he through the Holy Ghost had given commandments unto the apostles whom he had chosen.

Though absent, ways and means were provided of communicating to the following he had left upon earth all that was essential to the preaching of the gospel, the administration of its ordinances, and the building up of Relative to the ordination of men to the ministry. his wisdom and dictation were and are to be sought for, so he counseled:

Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth laborers into his harvest.

Paul understood it in this light, and was governed accordingly. Says he:

But as God hath distributed to every man, as the Lord hath called every one, so let him walk. And so ordain I in all the churches. 1 Cor. 7: 17.

And in Hebrews he speaks more positively on the same lines:

And no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron.-Heb. 5: 4.

No amount of spiritualizing or maneuvering upon the part of professedly wise men can change the plain meaning of these texts. rule obtained, and still obtains, if the written word is to be the guide for the people of the present day, that no man was ordained by the apostles or others having authority, until there was a revelation from God to that effect; nor can any now be scripturally called or ordained outside of this rigid rule. God is unchangeable, and the laws governing the first Christian church govern the present, otherwise Christianity is a farce. If there is no revelation today from the "Lord of the harvest," such as was given by him in the early part of the first century, then there are none legally holding priesthood authority, for "no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron," and there can be no such a "call" without direct revelation from God. Reasoning from this standpoint, Paul argues none can preach except they be sent. He writes to the Romans:

For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach, except they be sent?—Rom. 10: 13-15.

The plain sense of this reasoning is that men have no legal claim to priesthood, or any right to "preach" the gospel, much less administer its ordinances, unless they be "sent," which means divinely commissioned, as seen from the texts.

There was a man sent from God, whose name was John.—John 1:6.

Speaking of the ministry appointed by himself, Christ says:

As thou hast sent me into the world, even so have I also sent them into the world .-John 17:18

And of such as are divinely commissioned, he said: "He that is sent of God, speaketh the words of God," making it certain that none but those "sent" can "preach," or "speak the words of God." The manner in which men were called or sent, after that our Lord ascended into the heavens, and which was to be continued as long as there was need for the ministry to preach the word and beseech the peo-'in Christ's stead, be ye reconciled to God," was by a direct revelation from Christ, the "Lord of the harvest," in every case, for as Paul says, without any exception, "No man taketh this honor unto himself." An instance is on record which can be safely taken as an index to the whole. It is found in Acts 13:1-3, and reads:

Now there were in the church that was at Antioch certain prophets and teachers: . . . As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them. And when they had fasted and prayed, and laid their hands on them, they sent them away.

Here we notice that the principle spoken of by Paul governed; namely,

As the Lord hath called every one, so let him walk. And so ordain I in all the churches.

It was in vogue before his day, as seen in his own ordination, and later in his ministerial career it was his practice. It was the work of the Holy Ghost to reveal to these servants having authority, the ones chosen by the Lord, and after such a revelation of the Master's mind, the ordination was attended to. All who received true priesthood after the Lord's ascension obtained it in this way, hence Paul, when speaking of the elders at Ephesus, says:

Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers.—Acts 20: 28.

The Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them. -Acts 13:2.

Jesus speaking of the Holy Ghost had told them, "He shall not speak of himself; but whatsoever he shall hear, that shall he speak;" but its presence and the will of the Lord was and is yet made manifest in gifts of various kinds, of which Paul writes in the twelfth, thirteenth, and fourteenth chapters of first Corinthians. When one speaketh under the Spirit, in one of these "gifts," it is not the man that speaks, but the Spirit of God using the man as an instrument to convey and make intelligent to man the mind of the Master,—the Lord of the harvest,-and so we read, "As they ministered to the Lord and fasted, the Holy Ghost said," etc. These gifts were the result of the Spirit's operations, and are ordained by Christ to the development of the body in the work of the ministry, etc., which can never attain perfection without them.

We notice also that when men were thus chosen by the Holy Ghost they were generally of humble birth and meager learning, but this was no barrier to their success. They were inspired by the Spirit of God,—the Spirit that knoweth and searcheth all things, yea the deep things of God,- spiritual things, and able to confound the wise doctors of the law. Paul noticing this peculiar feature, re-

For ye see your calling, brethren, how that not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called; but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; and base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are.—1 Cor. 1: 26-28.

How true the word of the Lord spoken by Isaiah,

For my thoughts are not your thoughts, neither are your ways my ways, saith the Lord. Not many wise men after the flesh. not many mighty, nor many noble are called; but the supposed foolish, weak, and actually despised hath God chosen to bring to nought the things that are; and for what purpose?

The 29th verse answers, "That no flesh should glory in his presence." The wisdom of the world is foolishness with God, and vice versa. The great and much learned rabbis were astounded at the presumption of these illiterate men in attempting to minister in sacred things. Upon one occasion we read:

Now when they saw the boldness of Peter and John, and perceived that they were un-learned and ignorant men, they marveled; and they took knowledge of them, that they had been with Jesus.-Acts 4:13.

Jesus had never learned "letters." and yet taught as one having "authority." It was so with his ministry, they were "unlearned and ignorant men," touching the things to which the chief priests were educated unto, but they likewise taught with "authority," for as the chief priests said, "they had been with Jesus" and received true priesthood from him. These "unlearned and ignorant," "foolish," "weak," and "despised" These men were the authorized servants of God, appointed by revelation, and in their work sustained by inspiration; in fact, the only men upon earth having authority to baptize or perform any other rite in the name of God, Son, and Holy Ghost. The rabbis had the learned training, were doctors of the law, etc., but had no authority beyond tradition. We are told in the nineteenth chapter of Acts of seven Jews, exorcists, sons of Sceva, a great priest, who took it upon themselves to cast the evil spirit out of a certain person, saying, "We adjure you by Jesus whom Paul preacheth;" but "the evil spirit answered and said, Jesus I know, and Paul I know; but who are ye?" Here is the question of authority. devils knew Jesus; that he had power to cast them out. They knew also that Paul was an authorized servant of Christ, and as such had authority over unclean spirits; but these sons consequently soon became learned in of the chief priests had no such authority, and the evil spirit knew it and virtually told them of it, to their sorrow.

APPLE.

It was the wise man who wrote: "A word fitly spoken is like apples of gold in pictures of silver."—Prov. 25:11.

There has been much speculation as to the apple being the forbidden fruit, the eating of which caused Mrs. and Mr. Adam to transgress a commandment of God, and thereby lose their beautiful Edenic home. It matters but little to me whether it was apple, peach, or plum they ate, for it was the act of eating (disobedience) that brought upon them the fall from grace, and the mortgage took their home.

But here is a story of a strange phenomenon in the apple family:

Man is about the most discordant, irregular, inconsistent, and cranky of all products of creation. The lower animals can better be counted on, for what they are, than man can. Perhaps it might be said that this whimsicality and heterogeneity of character is the only really regular and uniform thing about him. Here is the description of an apple reported some time ago to the editor of Science: "It originated in Cayuga county, N. Y., and the original tree has been known for many years, but this is the first time it has ever been propagated and put upon the market. The tree bears an apple which is in size and shape similar to the Tallman Sweet; its peculiarity being that every fruit is divided. One-half is sour, like a Greening, and the other half is sweet, like a Tallman. This is one of the most peculiar freaks which has ever been observed in vegetation. Its oddity, as well as its fine bearing qualities, and the excellent quality of the fruit, both the sweet and sour portion, will make it immensely popular." Now there isn't anything strange about a man like that discordant apple—one-half sweet, and the other half sour. The Observatory sees many persons sour. The Observatory sees many persons like this and they are not strongly marked oddities either. Whether this double-faced nature makes them "immensely popular," or not, the Observatory is not sure. If it does it only adds to the evidence that popularity is a very poor thing to run after. Discord has a large following.—The International Evangel, pp. 237, 238.

This pen picture of the sweet-sour apple brings forcibly home my experience of the past year in efforts put forth in behalf of Graceland College, but if we never tasted the bitter, we could not appreciate the sweet.

Whatever of a sour (discordant) element may have existed among the Saints toward this church institution prior to last April, I trust it is now a thing of the past, and this shall prove to be the year of triumph, and that not only shall the college debt be liquidated but a sufficient amount shall be donated for the running expenses as shall make this the most successful year the college has ever experienced.

Now we are not over particular as to whether you shall send us gold, silver, nickel, copper, or paper money, post office, or express order, draft or check, so be it will settle one hundred cent account for each dollar you remit us.

Neither dry, rotten, wormy, nor sour sweet apples needed, unless our Jacob P. can use them in the herbarium, but we need money, and need it now, to make the necessary preparations for the coming college year.

He who yields a cheerful and faithful compliance with late inspirational instructions may not lose their Zionic home,

GATHERED FROM THE DEPTHS OF THE BOOK OF MORMON.

BY WILLIAM HAWKINS.

I, Alma, having been consecrated by my father Alma, to be a high priest over the church of God, he having power and authority from God to do these things. Now behold, I say unto you my brethren, you that belong to this church, have you sufficiently retained in remembrance the captivity of your fathers? And have you sufficiently retained in remembrance his mercy and long-suffering toward them? And now behold, I ask of you, my brethren of the church, have ye spiritually been born of God? Have ye received his image in your countenances? Have ye experienced this mighty change in your hearts? Do ye exercise faith in the redemption of him who created you? look forward with an eye of faith, and view this mortal body raised in immortality, and this corruption raised in incorruption, to stand before God, to be judged according to the deeds which have been done in the mortal body?

Can you imagine to yourselves that ye hear the voice of the Lord, saying unto you, in that day, come unto me ye blessed, for behold, your works have been the works of righteousness upon the face of the earth? Or do ye imagine to yourselves that ye can lie unto the Lord in that day, and say, Lord, our works have been righteous works upon the face of the earth, and that he will save you? Or otherwise, can you imagine yourselves brought before the tribunal of God, with your souls filled with guilt and remorse; having a remembrance of all your guilt: yea, a perfect remembrance of all your wickedness; yea, a remembrance that ye have set at defiance the commandments of God. Can ye look up to God at that day with a pure heart and clean hands? I say unto you, can you think of being saved when you have yielded yourselves to become subjects of the devil? I say unto you, ye will know at that day, that ye cannot be saved: . . . how will any of you feel, if ye shall stand before the bar of God, having your garments stained with blood, and all manner of filthiness? Behold, my brethren, do ye suppose that such an one can have a place to sit down in the kingdom of God, with Abraham, with Isaac, and with Jacob, and also all the holy prophets, whose garments are cleansed, and are spotless pure and white? I say unto you, nay, ye cannot suppose that such can have place in the kingdom of heaven, but they shall be cast out, for they are the children of the kingdom of the devil.

Behold, an awful death cometh upon the wicked, for they die as to things pertaining unto righteousness; for they are unclean, and no unclean thing can inherit the kingdom of God; for has not the Lord expressly promised and firmly decreed, that if ye will rebel against him, that ye shall be utterly destroyed from the face of the earth? I say unto you that whatsoever is good cometh from God, and whatsoever is evil cometh from the devil; and this I know, because the Lord hath said, he dwelleth not in unholy temples, but in the hearts of the righteous doth he dwell. Well doth he cry, by the voice of his angels, that I will come down among my people, with equity and justice in my hands.

And now, behold, my brethren, I would ask, if ye have read the scriptures? If ye have, how can ye disbelieve on the Son of God? Behold if ye do, ye must believe what Zenos said; Thou hast turned away thy judgments because of thy Son. Zenock also spake of these things; for behold he said, Thou art angry, O Lord, with this people, because they will not understand of thy mercies which thou hast bestowed upon them, because of thy Son. Now we see that Adam did fall by the partaking of the forbidden fruit, according to the word of God, and by his fall all mankind became a lost and a fallen people; and we see that death came upon mankind; yea, the death which is the temporal death; nevertheless there was a space granted unto man, in which he might repent; therefore, this life became a probationary state; now if it had not been for the plan of redemption, which was laid from the foundation of the world, there could have been no resurrection of the dead; and since man had fallen, he could not merit anything of himself: but the sufferings and death of Christ atoneth for their sins, through faith and repentance, etc.

For it is expedient that an atonement should be made; for according to the great plan of the eternal God, there must be an atonement made, or else all mankind must unavoidably perish; there is not any man that can sacrifice his own blood, which will atone for the sins of another: there could have been no redemption for mankind save it were through the death and suffering of Christ, and the atonement of his blood.

For it is expedient that there should be a great and last sacrifice, yea, not a sacrifice of man, neither of beast, neither of any manner of fowl, for it shall not be a human sacrifice, but it must be an infinite and eternal sacrifice.

Not many days hence, the Son of God shall come in his glory, and his glory shall be the glory of the Only Begotten of the Father, full of grace, mercy, and truth; behold he is the light and the life of the world; and he shall be born of Mary at Jerusalem, which is the land of our forefathers, she being a virgin, a precious and chosen vessel, who shall be overshad. owed and conceive by the power of the Holy Ghost, and bring forth a son, yea, even the Son of God; and he shall go forth suffering pains and afflictions, and temptations of every kind, and this that the word might be fulfilled which saith, He will take upon him the pains and sicknesses of his people.

Now the Spirit knoweth all things; nevertheless, the Son of God suffereth according to the flesh, that he might take upon him the sins of his people: and behold it is he that cometh to take away the sins of the world, yea, he shall take upon him the transgressions of those who believe on his name. Therefore, there can be nothing which is short of an infinite atonement which will suffice for the sins of the world; therefore it is expedient that there should be a great and last sacrifice; and, then, it is expedient there should be a stop to the shedding of blood; then shall the law of Moses be fulfilled.

And, behold, this is the whole meaning of the law; every whit pointing to that great and last sacrifice; and the great and last sacrifice will be the Son of God; yea, infinite and eternal.

Now they did not suppose that salvation came by the law of Moses; but the law of Moses did serve to strengthen their faith in Christ. Behold, he was spoken of by Moses, yea, and behold a type was raised up in the wilderness, that whosoever would look upon it might live: and many did look and live; but there were many, who were so hardened that they would not look, because they did not believe that it would heal them, therefore they perished.

Behold, the kingdom of heaven is at hand, and the Son of God cometh upon the face of the earth. And say unto you, that I know that Jesus Christ shall come, yea, the Son, the Only Begotten of the Father, full of grace, and mercy, and truth; and he will take upon him death, that he may loose the bands of death which bind his people.

Behold, you marvel why these things should be known so long beforehand; behold I say unto you, is not a soul at this time as precious unto God, as a soul will be at his coming? And I would not that ye think that I know of myself, not of the temporal; not of the carnal mind, but God has, by the mouth of his holy angel, made known these things unto me.

O then is not this real? I say unto you, yea; because it is light; and whatsoever is light, is good, because it is discernible, therefore ye must know that it is good.

And now if it were possible that our first parents could have went forth and partaken of the tree of life, they would have been forever miserable, having no preparatory state; nevertheless there was a space granted unto man, in which he might repent; therefore this life became a probationary state; a time to prepare to meet God: therefore God gave unto them commandments, after having made known unto them the plan of redemption, that they should not do evil, the penalty thereof being a second death, which was an everlasting death as to things pertaining unto righteousness.

And again it is said, that inasmuch as ye will not keep my commandments, ye shall be cut off from the presence of the Lord. For behold, this life is the time for men to prepare to meet God: yea, behold, the day of this life is the day for men to perform their labors; the way is prepared, and if ye will look, ye may live forever. And the Lord God doth work by means to bring about his great and eternal purposes. And now I would that ye should remember that God is merciful unto all who believe in his name: therefore he desireth, in the first place, that ye should believe, yea, even on his word; and now my brethren, I desire that ye shall plant this word in your hearts, and as it beginneth to swell, even so nourish it by your faith. Behold, he sendeth an invitation unto all men; for the arms of mercy are extended toward them, and he saith, repent, and I will receive you; he has all power to save every man that believeth on his name, and bringeth forth fruit meet for repentance; yea, come and go forth, and shew unto your God that ye are willing to repent of your sins, and enter into a covenant with him to keep his commandments, and witness it unto him this day, by going into the waters of baptism; yea come unto me and bring forth works of righteousness, and ye shall not be cut down

Therefore, whosoever repenteth and hardeneth not his heart, he shall have claim on mercy, through mine only begotten Son, unto a remission of his sins; and these shall enter into my rest; therefore come and be baptized unto repentance, that ye may be washed from your sins, that ye may have faith in the Lamb of God, who taketh away the sins of the world: and behold he cometh to redeem those who will be baptized unto repentance, through faith in his name; that he might blot out their transgressions, according to the power of his deliverance: now I say unto you, that ye must repent, and be born again: for the Spirit saith, if ye are not born again, ye cannot inherit the kingdom of heaven.

I know that he granteth unto men according to their desire, whether it be unto death or unto life: the Good Shepherd doth call after you, and if you will hearken unto his voice, he will bring you into his fold, and ye are his sheep: therefore if a man bringeth forth good works, he heark-eneth unto the voice of the Good Shepherd, and he doth follow him who is mighty to save, and to cleanse from all unrighteousness: if ye will nourish the word, yea, nourish the tree as it beginneth to grow, by your faith, with great diligence, and with patience, looking forward to the fruit thereof, it shall take root; and behold it shall be a tree springing up unto everlasting life: and because of your diligence, and your faith, and your patience with the word, in nourishing it, that it may take root in you, behold, by and by, ye shall pluck the fruit thereof, which is most precious, which is sweet above all that is sweet, and which is white above all that is white; yea, pure above all that is pure; and ye shall feast upon this fruit, even until ye are filled, that ye hunger not, neither shall ye thirst.

And he that will not harden his heart, to him is given the greater portion of the word, until it is given unto him to know the mysteries of God, until they know them in full; nevertheless they are laid under a strict command, that they shall not impart only according to the portion of his word, which he doth grant unto the children of men, according to the heed and diligence which they give unto him.

And now he imparteth his word by angels unto men, and not only men, but women also; now this is not all: little children do have words given unto them many times, which confound the wise and the learned. Behold, I say unto you, that by small and simple things, are great things brought to pass, and small means in many instances, doth confound the wise.

Therefore he that will harden his heart, the same receiveth the lesser portion of his word; until they know nothing concerning his mysteries, and then they are taken captive by the devil, and led by his will down to destruction. My brethren, if ye have experienced a change of heart, and ye have felt to sing the song of redeeming love, I would ask, can ye feel so now?

After a people have been once enlightened by the Spirit of God, and have had great knowledge of things pertaining to righteousness, and then have fallen away into sin and transgression, they become more hardened, and thus their state becomes worse than though they had never known these things: for behold, if ye deny the Holy Ghost when it once has had place in you, and ye know that ye deny it, behold, this is a sin which is unpardonable. If we have hardened our hearts against the word, insomuch that it has not been found in us, then will our state be awful, for then shall we be condemned: for after this day of life which is given us to prepare for eternity, behold, if we do not improve our time while in this life, then cometh the night of darkness, wherein there can be no labor performed.

Now this is the state of the wicked, yea, in darkness, and in a state of awful, fearful, looking for, of the fiery indignation of the wrath of God upon them: whosoever will harden his heart, and will do iniquity, behold I swear in my wrath that he shall not enter into my rest.

Yea, I know that he allotteth unto men according to their wills; whether they be unto salvation, or unto destruction: and thus we see how great the inequality of man is because of sin and transgression, and the power of the devil, which comes, by the cunning plans which he has devised to ensnare the hearts of men: according to the spirit which they listed to obey, whether it be a good spirit or a bad one; for every man receiveth wages of him whom he listeth to obey, and this according to the words of the spirit of prophecy; therefore, let it be according to the truth: and we shall be brought to stand before God, knowing as we know now, and have a bright recollection of all our guilt; ye cannot say when ye are brought to that awful crisis, that I will repent, that I will return to my God; for on such the plan of redemption could have no power, for the works of justice could not be destroyed, according to the supreme justice of God.

I say unto you, that this mortal body is raised to an immortal body; their spirits uniting with their bodies, never to be divided, thus the whole becoming spiritual and immortal, that they can no more see corruption: then is a time that whosoever dieth in his sins as to a temporal death, shall also die a spiritual death.

O ye workers of iniquity; ye that are puffed up in the vain things of the world; ye that have professed to have known the ways of righteousness; nevertheless have gone astray, a shepherd hath called after you, but ye will not hearken unto his voice. Thus saith the Lord, except ye repent, I will visit this people in mine anger; yea, and I will not turn my fierce anger away. Therefore, your iniquity provoketh him that he sendeth down his wrath upon you as in the first provocation, yea, according to his word in the last provocation, as well as the first, to the everlasting destruction of your souls; unto the last death, as well as the first. And then is the time that they shall be chained down to an everlasting destruction, according to the power and captivity of Satan, he having subjected them according to his will; that he might encircle you about with his chains, that he might chain you down to everlasting destruction: according to the power of his captivity; now this is what is meant by the chains of hell.

Behold there is a time appointed, that all shall come forth from the dead, now when that time cometh, no one knows; but God knoweth the time which is appointed: but all things shall be restored to its proper frame, as it is now, or in the body, and shall be brought and be arraigned before the bar of Christ the Son, and God the Father, and the Holy Spirit, which is one eternal God, according to their works, whether they be good or evil: we must come and stand before him in his glory, and in his power, and in his might, majesty, and dominion, and acknowledge to our everlasting shame. that all his judgments are just.

Behold it is requisite and just, according to the power and resurrection of Christ, that the soul of man should be restored to its body, and that every part of the body should be restored to itself. Yea, this bringeth about the restoration of those things which have been spoken by the mouth of the prophets. Therefore the wicked remain as though there had been no redemption, except it be the loosing of the bands of death.

I know that good and evil hath come before all men, or he that knoweth not good from evil is blameless; but he that knoweth good and evil, to him it is given according to his desires, whether he desireth good or evil, life or death, joy or remorse of conscience.

Now I would that ye should understand that the word of God was liberal unto all. God is mindful of every people, and his bowels of mercy are over all the earth; for behold the Lord doth grant unto all nations, of their own nation and tongue, to teach his word: yea, in wisdom, all that he fore, we see that the Lord doth counsel in wisdom, according to that which is just and true: He is just in all his works, and he is merciful unto the children of men.

And now if this people, who have received so many blessings from the hand of the Lord, should transgress contrary to the light and knowledge which they do have: it would be more tolerable for the Lamanites, than for them; for behold, the promises of the Lord are extended to the Lamanites, but they are not unto you if ye transgress: and at some period of time they will be brought to believe in his word, and to know of the incorrectness of the traditions of their fathers: and many of them will be saved, for the Lord will be merciful to all that call on his name: this being the intent of this last sacrifice, to bring about the bowels of mercy, which overpowereth justice, and bringeth about means unto men, that they may have faith unto repentance; and thus mercy can satisfy the demands of justice, and encircles them in the arms of safety.

I speak by way of command unto you that belong to the church; and unto those who do not belong to the church I speak by way of invitation, saying, Come and be baptized unto repentance, that ye also may be partakers of the fruit of the tree of life.

There are many who do say, if thou wilt shew unto us a sign from heaven. then we shall know of a surety; then we will believe, now I ask, is this faith? Behold, I say unto you, Nay; for if a man knoweth a thing, he hath no cause to believe, for he knoweth it; now as I said concerning faith: faith is not to have a perfect knowledge of things; therefore if ye have faith, ye hope for things which are not seen, which are true; so it is with my words; ye cannot know of their surety at first, unto perfection, any more than faith is a perfect knowledge: and now after ye have tasted of this light, is your knowledge perfect? behold I say unto you, nay: neither must ye lay aside your faith, for ye have only exercised your faith to plant the seed, that ye might try the experiment to know if the seed was good.

And now how much more cursed is he that knoweth the will of God and doeth it not, than he that only believeth, or only has cause to believe and falleth into transgression? Now of this thing, ye must judge. Do ye not suppose that I know of these things? Behold, I say unto you, they are made known unto me by the Holy Spirit of God. Yea, he that truly humbleth himself, and repenteth of his sins, and endureth to the end, the same shall be blessed; yea, much more than they who are compelled to be humble: and because ye were comseeth fit, that they should have; there- | pelled to be humble, ye were blessed, do ye not suppose that they are more blessed who truly humble themselves because of the word? Therefore, only unto him that has faith unto repentance, is brought about the great and eternal plan of redemption.

Counsel the Lord in all thy doings, and he will direct thee for good; when thou liest down at night, lie down unto the Lord, that he may watch over you in your sleep, and when thou risest in the morning, let thy heart be full of thanks unto God; and if ye do these things ye shall be lifted up at the last day. Yea, thou art merciful unto thy children when they cry unto thee to be heard of thee, and not of man, and thou wilt hear them: Yea, cry unto him for mercy, for he is mighty to save.

And now I say unto you, is there one among you that doth make a mock of his brother, or that heapeth upon him persecution? Wo unto such an one, for he is not prepared, and he must repent, or he cannot be saved: there should not any man, belonging to the church, arise and persecute those that did not belong to the church; there should be no persecutions among themselves: I would exhort you to have patience, and that ye bear all manner of afflictions; that ye do not revile against those who do cast you out because of your exceeding poverty, lest ye become sinners like unto them.

Behold, are ye stripped of pride? I say unto you, if ye are not, ye are not prepared to meet God: see that ye are not lifted up unto pride: yea, see that ye do not boast in your own wisdom, nor of your much strength; use boldness, but not overbearance; and also see that ye bridle all your passions, that ye may be filled with love; see that ye refrain from idleness: behold, I say, is there one among you who is not stripped of envy? I say unto you, that such an one is not prepared, and I would that he should prepare quickly, for such an one is not found guiltless.

And see that ye have faith, hope and charity, and then ye will always abound in good works; therefore, if ye do not remember to be charitable, ye are as dross, which the refiners do cast out, (it being of no worth,) and is trodden under foot of men. And he commandeth you that ye suf-fer no ravenous wolf to enter among you, that ye be not destroyed.

Seek not after riches, nor the vain things of this world, for behold, you cannot carry them with you. Do not suppose that this is all; for after ye have done all these things, if ye turn away the needy, and the naked, and visit not the sick and the afflicted, and impart of your substance if ye have, to those who stand in need; I say unto you, if ye do not any of these and availeth you nothing. Behold, the scriptures are before you; if ye will wrest them, it shall be to your own destruction.

The names of the righteous shall be written in the Lamb's book of life; and unto them will I grant an inheritance at my right hand: then my brethren ye shall reap the reward of your faith, and your diligence, and long-suffering, waiting for the tree to bring forth fruit unto you: then shall the righteous shine forth in the kingdom of God.

The Spirit crieth unto me, with a mighty voice, saying, Go forth and say unto this people, Repent, for except ye repent, ye can in no wise enter the kingdom of heaven; and this that they might look forward to him for a remission of their sins, that they might enter into the rest of the Lord; teach them to humble themselves, and to be meek and lowly in heart, teach them to withstand every temptation of the devil, with their faith in the Lord Jesus Christ.

And I would that ye should remember, that the Lord God ordained priests, after his holy order, which was after the order of his Son, to teach these things unto the people: and thus we see the great call of diligence of men who labor in the vineyard of the Lord; to teach his commandments unto the children of men, that they also might enter into his rest. This holy calling being pre-pared from the foundation of the world, for such as would not harden their hearts, being in and through the atonement of the only begotten Son, who was prepared.

I desire that ye should remember these things, and that ye should work out your salvation with fear before God, and that ye should no more deny the coming of Christ; that ye contend no more against the Holy Ghost, but that ye receive it, and take upon you the name of Christ.

Thus saith the Spirit, repent all ye ends of the earth, for the kingdom of heaven is soon at hand, yea, the Son of God cometh in his glory, in his might, majesty, power, and dominion. Yea, my beloved brethren, I say unto you, that the Spirit saith, Behold the glory of the king of all the earth; and also the king of heaven, shall very soon shine forth among the children of men; behold he is the word of truth and righteousness; neither hath he a shadow of turning from the right to the left, or from that which is right to that which is wrong; therefore his course is one eternal round.

O remember, remember, how strict are the commandments of God. And whosoever doeth this, and keepeth the commandments of God from henceforth, the same will remember that I have said unto him, he shall things, behold your prayer is vain have eternal life, according to the testimony of the Holy Spirit which testifieth in me.

And now, I, Alma, do command you in the language of him who hath commanded me, that ye observe to do the words which I have spoken unto you.

Testimony of Alma.

SACRAMENTO, Cal., June 24.

Editors Herald:-Since being reappointed to the Northern California district I have been laboring in various places for the cause. I have found that the Book of Mormon appeals to thinking people in the places where I have labored, and I have sold eight copies within the past four months. People are eager to purchase them when they know we have them for sale at a reasonable price.

On May 4 I went to El Dorado and preached on Sunday the 5th in the union church there, also held a sacrament service at the home of Bro. Askew, and returned to Sacramento the following day. Bro. Blair arrived here from the east on the 19th, and preached to the Saints at the morning service, which was appreciated by all. In the afternoon I baptized Bro. Abraham in the American River confirming him at the evening service, at which the writer was the speaker, assisted by Bro. C. C. Joehnk, who has since gone to the Central district to labor.

At the Southern Pacific car shops there have been representatives of several faiths holding services at the noon hour, and I visited there with a view to holding services there also on days not occupied by others, but was informed through one who has general charge of the services there that he . would not announce a meeting for a "Mormon." Several of the men there are anxious for me to preach there, and possibly we can do so later. "If at first you don't succeed,"

On June 1 I went to Chico, and the next day called at the "Christian church" for the morning service. The presiding minister called on me to talk to them, which I did; after which he informed the people that I thought I could come there and present my doctrine and no one would dare answer me, but that he had made up his mind that he would show me that he dared to answer me, and had called upon me that morning for that purpose. He then proceeded to misrepresent me in a shameful way, which made some of his people ashamed of him, as they knew I had said nothing at which one could reasonably take offense. After he finished, I asked privilege to give a few words of explanation, at which he replied, "We don't want any of your explanations here." He then came to me as soon as meeting was dismissed and demanded a miracle, saying he knew my work was a fraud, but if I would do a miracle he would be baptized by me that day.

I replied: "Then you are willing to accept what you say you know is a fraud if only I do a miracle. I would not baptize such a charactor; but if you insist upon classing yourself with 'a wicked and adulterous generation which seeketh after a sign,' I will take the position of the one of whom they demanded the sign."

He then told me to look up the statistics and see the many who united with his church. and the few that accepted our faith. I told him I did not doubt it, for Jesus said, "Broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat; because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it." He appeared much grieved because I had some time before baptized two of his members, but I told him they had demanded baptism at my hands and stated that they could never be satisfied with the so-called Christian Church, and furthermore they were not the last ones I expected to baptize. who were members of his church. I offered to publicly discuss our respective faiths with him, but he refused, saying "it would do no good," which from his standpoint was perhans true.

I held meetings for more than a week in Dayton, near Chico, and baptized a lady and her daughter, the former being a trustee of the church there and a member of the "Christian Church," making three from his church I have baptized. One of those previously baptized had a vision, after uniting with us, which brought personal assurance of the divinity of the work. Another also had a remarkable manifestation previous to uniting with our faith, in which she saw a woman clad in beautiful white raiment and around her head a crown of shining stars. while a glorious light shone around her. While gazing upon this scene, the word restoration was repeated to her very distinctly three times, and for three weeks afterward the word still sounded in her ears, so she testifies; during the services held there, a bright light was seen around the speaker, upon two different occasions, by some in the audience.

A number are very favorable, but more were much opposed to our work. Of the latter several, including a Methodist minister, tried to close the church against me, but two of the three trustees were favorable to us, hence the effort failed, which of course angered them considerably. They then held a meeting and concluded to adopt the ways of Modoc county north of here, where they hanged five men, one of whom it is most certain was innocent of any crime. I heard of their intentions through one favorable to our work, and the result was that when the mob came to the church on Saturday night they saw a number of men there waiting to see that the affair was not altogether one-sided. This caused the affair to "fall through," and they went away muttering and talking to themselves. One was heard to say he would have nothing more to do with it, that "the Mormons can take the town if they want to." There were about a dozen in the mob. I continued to preach there until the following Monday, then returned to Sacramento.

High Priest G. W. Harlow, of this city, one of the first to join the Reorganization, died here June 20. The funeral services on the 21st at his home and at the grave; sermon by the writer, with quite a large attendance. May the Lord comfort the bereaved ones. Rev. Wishard, a Presbyterian, made an attack on us recently in this city. I succeeded in having a reply inserted in the leading paper here, which I trust may do some good.

MANITOWANING, Ontario, June 27. Editors Herald:—Please notify the readers of the HERALD that the writer and his brother, G. C., are appointed as missionaries in charge of Manitoulin Island and Algoma district, and wish all Saints living on this island or having friends living here would inform us as to their whereabouts and the prospects of mission work in their locality, as we are strangers in a strange land. We wish your cooperation and prayers that we may carry on the work successfully and accomplish a good work.

We arrived at this place yesterday, on the "City of Windsor," from Owen Sound. Were met by our worthy brother, Alfred Ravill, late of Trowbridge, Ontario, and after a four-mile drive we landed at his new home, where we were made welcome by his amiable wife. Although not yet a member of the church, she loves to make the elders happy.

There are few Saints here; Bro. Alfred and his parents and two brothers. We fired the first volley ever fired by "long Tom" on this island last night in a shoolhouse, secured by Bro. Ravill. We heard no reply from the enemy, so took it for granted that there were none near, so we pitched our tent in peace and quietness, and laid our weary heads down to rest, feeling all was well, and that our Captain was pleased with out first effort. We go out scouting today and will report prospects later on.

Yours for truth and victory, S. W. TomLinson.

P. S.—We wish to say to the Saints living at the Soo', or Sault Ste. Marie that we will reach there as soon as possible. Hope they will write me as early as possible of prospects there.

RIVERTON, Iowa, June 29.

Editors Herald:—Inclosed find clipping from Riverton Independent which bespeaks the fair-mindedness of the editor, Mr. Louie, who is an old time acquaintance of Father Jonas Chatburn, and of whom he speaks in the highest terms.

Our meetings have been well attended during the week till last night, when the storm and threatening clouds kept the many away, but the few who attended enjoyed the presence of God's Spirit, as we sought him for his blessings upon our efforts, and sung the praise of him who doeth all things well.

Hail has done much damage near this place, the storm of last evening just passing north a short distance of the town, a few hail falling here. Hot winds yesterday were quite severe.

Meetings will be continued over another week, nothing preventing.

VALLEY, Nebraska, June 29.

Editors Herald:—Continuously since the first of May last we have been holding religious services every evening at the schoolhouse close by, or at Waterloo about three miles away, Brn. Butterworth and Oscar Case preaching alternately. Our hearts were light with cheer and hope of the gospel, as night after night we made ready and hurried to Waterloo where our gospel tent was erected, and where we listened to the inspiring words of truth as they flowed from the lips of those earnest workers in the church.

As we wended our way to meeting on last Wednesday evening, little did we think of the awful sorrow that was even then in our midst. A goodly number of Saints and friends was present, as we were whiling away the time awaiting the opening of the services and singing songs of Zion. We became as dumb when we heard Bro. Fetter, cry so distressingly, "Oh! Lee is drowned! Lee is drowned!" How those tented walls rang with that pitiful cry! A messenger on a swift horse had brought the news. Lee was the seventeen-year-old son of Bro. and Sister Fetter. Oh! who can describe that scene, the distress of the parents. And friends, every one who had conveyances there sprang toward them and in, and with word and lash the horses sped away homeward, their feet keeping time to our wildly palpatating hearts. Oh! that wild race across that level valley, from one river to another, the Elkhorn to the sandbarred Platte-three miles apart. Was it true? Would we be in time to save? No! No! it was not to be: for not only was Bro. Lee's young life gone, but another's.

This is the sad story! After Sister Annie Fetter started for church, the two brothers went to a small lake to bathe. It was not far from the house and it has been their custom to bathe there these hot, sultry days. Said Lee, "Ernie, show me how you dive." Twelveyear-old Ernest readily complied. Lee imitated him successfully once, and then thoroughly aroused to the enjoyment of sporting in those cool, innocent looking waters he stepped backwards, preparatory for a long run and plunge, he took a long breath, and as Ernie expressed it. "ran so hard that his hair blew off his forehead." He again made the leap, this time beyond his depth. Then the struggle for life began; he could not swim. Poor little Ernie! he screamed for help for his brother as only a child can when threatened with danger. Men ran to their assistance, and brave Walter Evans, accounted a good swimmer, without any hesitancy at all jumped to what proved his death. He sank immediately, crying for help, which was answered by Bro. Archie Brown, fearlessly leaping into those cruel waters. He went down once, twice! The suspense was awful! Was he dying with them? No! he brought up Mr. Evans, but the brave spirit had taken its flight. Heart disease, some thought.

Oh! the pity of it all. Mr. Evans had not lived long amongst us, settling last winter on a small farm he had purchased. He was liked and respected much by his neighbors.

Brave, noble Walter Evans! his name will ever be cherished by the Saints of Valley as one of the honorable men of earth. He leaves a young wife who keenly feels her loss. May God comfort her!

Bro. Lee was a Sunday school boy, a true Latter Day Saint, often discoursing the gospel among his young friends and companions. His father and mother and grandfather are bearing up bravely under the strain of their affliction. They say it is the knowledge they have that this gospel is true that supports them in their trial. Remember her, Saints, she is so frail and in delicate health.

Our departed brother's funeral service was preached by Bro. Butterworth to a large congregation at Waterloo. The casket was almost wholly covered with flowers.

This letter is written partly as a warning to be careful when we bathe in rivers or lakes. It is the heated season of the year, and may we be consistent and careful not to endanger our lives, even if we do pant for our beautiful sheets of water as the thirsty hart on the mountains. In the hope of everlasting life,

Editors Herald:—I was baptized into the kingdom at twenty years of age by Elder William Sparling. I am now more convinced that this is the work of God. I hold the office of deacon, and have moved down from Clifford to this place in Cass county, a distance of about twenty-five miles, and have preached every Sunday except two since the 17th of March. I organized a Sunday school the last Sunday in March. We have prayer meeting every Wednesday night.

There are nine Saints around here and the most of us are trying to live our religion. We have been holding meetings in the schoolhouse until last Sunday, when a few neighbors got together and concluded we had the schoolhouse long enough, and after the school election was over they waited till Bro. Bodkins went home, and then they had the house all to themselves and voted to have the schoolhouse closed against us. But Sr. Bodkins kindly offered us her house to worship the God of Saints. I was talking with one of the school directors a few days afterwards on religion. He was the same man that locked the schoolhouse against Bro. George W. Thorburn last summer. He said to me: "I hear that you are preaching that Jesus married the Virgin Mary, and Mary and Martha, in order to show that Latter Day Saints have a right to have more than one wife." So with this kind of a story, and perhaps others that are just as bad, they thought they had a good excuse to lock the door against us.

Dear Saints, we intend to go on with our meetings, with the help of the good Master, and show the people around here, by our godly walk and conversation that we are what we profess to be, the Saints of God.

There are some here who seem to enjoy the meetings and seem interested at times, and I believe by careful labor with them they will in time see we have the truth. One lady told me if I could prove that this church is right she will join it. She is not a member of any church yet, but is seeking for the right church as she believes there is only one such.

Bro. Sparling came down here from Clifford the latter part of May and delivered three very instructive sermons, which we enjoyed very much. We hope he will give us another call soon.

Dear Saints, let us heed the command that has been given unto us in these the last days. Come up higher, and be like the wise virgins, so we can enter into that haven of rest, and dwell with the Father and his Son and all the holy angels, throughout the duration of eternity. May the Lord bless his people everywhere, and his kingdom continue to grow, is my prayer.

Yours in the everlasting kingdom, GEORGE W. DAY.

EAGLE GROVE, Iowa, July 3. Editors Herald:-After leaving Burlington the next stop was Marion; thence, after dinner and a short visit with Sr. Powers, now bedridden but firm in the faith, and her daughters, to Lost Nation, Bro. L. E. Hills accompanying. The latter had aroused a fine interest here, and some are to be baptized. A celebration meeting in the opera house had been announced, so we thought it better not to announce any meeting in the Union church-open to our elders. Old Mr. Comstock, for years a Methodist but now withdrawn, went over the town inviting attendance at his home for a parlor conversational meeting. A few responded and we fully enjoyed talking to the earnest inquirers.

Up at three next morning and away to Pleasant Valley Junction to take breakfast with Bro. Thomas and his daughter and son-in-law. Then away for a thirty-mile drive to Fulton, Bro. Thomas taking us in his carriage. We remained over night with Bro. J. B. Heide and family, and returned home next day, stopping for a sermon at Green Valley church on our way, and reaching Bro. Thomas' at midnight. Up and away next morning for Viola, where we preached that night in the schoolhouse. Next day we took a run to Arlington, where we found the tent up, and the writer spoke three times. Bro. Sutton was ordained a seventy, and by Monday morning we were ready to start for Minnesota. Bro. Hills had thus given me an opportunity to see as much of the district as was possible in the time allotted. He and Bro. Sutton remained with Arriving at Minneapolis at 6:15 p.m., Bro. T. C. Kelley's tall stature loomed up among the multitude of strangers as a pleasant sight. The writer spoke both nights while in the city in a hall the Saints have hired.

On Tuesday and Wednesday mornings we visited the railway officials of Northern Pacific and Great Northern, they extending clergy courtesies without a murmur. At 10:23 p.m., we landed in Clitherall, Minnesota, where upon alighting we were greeted with a warm handshake of our extensive (in size) Bro. I. N. Roberts. Here for ten days we had the privilege of enjoying a splendid reunion. Nine were baptized, several of them being from the Cutlerites. Others are to follow.

One of the elders preached from the Word of Wisdom, and while discoursing on the evils of tobacco so strong a man as Bro. Roberts had to leave the tent long enough to pronounce Europe, giving it the accent so well learned by most ocean voyagers! Next morning a young sister refused her coffee, avowing she would never touch it again. I am satisfied she will keep that yow. She told the preacher after the sermon she would be glad to have him preach that way at her home branch. Bro. Hilliard gave the Saints an excellent, practical talk. One good, aged sister-but a year old in the gospel-publicly declared her intention to discard the pipe even if it took her life to do it. An aged brother with tears streaming down his cheeks declared his desire to become a physically clean man. If that desire is lived up to he will become fully qualified for an added responsibility in church work.

By special request one of the speakers discoursed on the "Successor," several of the Cutlerites afterward declaring that we had the law. I believe that with proper efforts most of this faction will yet be with us. Was sorry to have to leave.

Riding all night and till four p. m. Monday I reached this place, tired! Next day Bro. C. F. Hayer drove me some nine miles into the country to get the address of Elder Ellmore, and I have submitted to him propositions for, and rules to govern, a discussion. Will await developments, preaching in the meantime. I have enjoyed my visit with, and talking to, the Saints very well.

Lamoni, Iowa, will always reach me.

Hopefully, J. W. WIGHT.

PALERMO, New York, July 3.

Editors Herald:-In company with Bro. S. W. L. Scott, we came to this point June 29. We are at present engaged in a friendly discussion with a man something of the "Free Baptist" order, as we understand he is representing no particular church at present. He is quite friendly and sociable, and seems fair and mild in his manners and we hope for good to result. The proposition under consideration now is, Resolved, That the doctrine of a future state of probation is Biblical and therefore ought to be preached. Bro. Scott affirms, Rev. Wayman denies. We began last eve with a fair-sized audience. Our side came out O. K., as we think. We hope to be able to get him to meet other propositions

This point was first opened by Bro. Sheehy, we believe. We expect to go from here to Greenwood, New York, to attend another debate between Bro. Sheldon and a Baptist man, we believe. From there I expect to go at once to my objective point, Philadelphia. Still trying to be faithful we are yet

ANTONITO, Colo., July 2.

Editors Herald:-Immediately after General Conference I hastened home to Perry, Iowa, to make the necessary arrangements to move my family to Colorado Springs for our future home. About two months previous to conference I by advice from several of the brethren took a trial trip to Colorado, Rocky Ford being the objective point, in quest of better health. From there I went to Colorado Springs, and by a few weeks' experience there was convinced that this was far the better place for me to live, and also my family. So on to Colorado Springs I came after a hurrah time at home for about three weeks in which I was busy settling affairs preparatory to our exodus. I arrived about three weeks ahead of the family to arrange for their reception, and then there was another hurrah time. Houses were scarce and rent high. About this time, however, there were about five hundred houses under construction, but all spoken for nearby except those that rented very high. Finally I succeeded in buying a place, and about the first of June my family arrived and was fairly well pleased with the place.

Just before their arrival Bro. Curtis and I took a trip up to Cripple Creek to preach the gospel there. The trip with the grand mountain scenery and the streams of gushing water plunging down their rugged sides was one to be long remembered and appreciated. Here nature seemed to have lavished her omnipotent creative skill and causes one to silently say, as he beholds her in great majesty, O the works of God! how grand and wonderful! We arrived after due time only to find an extension of nature's wonders and a radical change in the atmosphere. It was a change from shirtsleeves manner of dress at Colorado Springs to the overcoat at Cripple Creek. And a great change in the moral atmosphere was apparent also. But we put forth our best efforts and tried in our weak way to call sinners to repentance.

We found a few Saints in the Cripple Creek mining district who were earnestly and faithfully holding on to the rod of iron. At this place I left Bro Curtis, who baptized a daughter of Sister Chambers on the following Sunday.

On the 12th day of June Bro. J. F. Curtis and I boarded the D & R. G. train for this place. I had but little time to introduce my family to the Saints and arrange for their living in a new place and among strange people when this separation took place. Here in the extreme southern part of the San Louis Valley there is quite a mixture of race. Some of the old Spanish blood and a mixture of Mexican and Lamanite, and the American, present a very queer looking set to one not used to it.

The religious atmosphere here is of the Brigham Young type. They obey counsel and keep clear of us so far. We held services in two places where the majority of the settlers were Mormons, and but a very few of them came out. I asked one to come out and he replied: "I quit coming because I knew what was coming. I knew you fellows would have to jump on Brigham Young and polygamy, and I am tired of that. I don't want to hear it any more." I do not blame them. If I had to listen to that corrupting and souldestroying doctrine, I should get tired of it, too; but he had only come out twice and nothing about differences had been said. But he knew the tactics of the Josephites, and just stopped in time.

We were invited home one night with a member of the Brighamites, and the next morning after breakfast he notified us that he had a message directed by the Spirit to deliver. So the family was called into a room selected, and here we listened for one hour to a speech in favor of Brigham Young and polygamy, seasoned with a prophecy of a startling declaration. He declared, in the name of Jesus Christ and by the Spirit, that we were deceived and that the present Joseph rebelled against his father. But the prophesy! Here it is: "I declare that you brethren will yet come to me and say Bro. ---, your words were true," But the time of our confession was quite indefinite, for it was to be either in this world or the one to come. He admonished us by the Spirit, so he said, to repent and come to the true church and God would make us Gods, -send us like Adam to people some of the countless worlds to come. Said we would become the father of a million children! Ah, but that is too many for me! He also said that if we had seen what he did out in the temple we would then know that the Brighamites were the true church. He knew that Brigham Young, Joseph Smith, angels, and Jesus Christ, walk and sit in the temple. And it was then he received the knowledge that he was right.

After this speech of testimony, exhortation, and prophecy, all in favor of Brigham Young's polygamy and authority, he sat down quite exhausted and said: "If either of you brethren have anything to say I will listen." By the spirit of the man manifested before us from the first, I think he believed he had so smitten and confused us by his testimony that we could say nothing. If such were his conclusions he must have been disappointed, for I felt well in reply to him, and I called his attention to the fact that I did not have to go through a temple in Salt Lake to know the true church; that when I received the Holy Spirit by the laying on of hands, true to the promise, it directed me in the way of truth; and that I was entitled to its blessings without temple experiences. I hinted at the fact that Satan could impersonate the persons referred to as having been seen, and the way for us to do was to try the spirits. I called his attention to the revelations in both the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants opposed to polygamy, and said I did not believe Jesus Christ and the angels would appear in that Utah temple in confirmation of polygamy and other false doctrines as taught by them. Well, this man is a seventy, and filled nearly a two years' mission for the Brighamites. From here we went over to one of the stakes of Zion and procured the use of the stake house for services in a town called Manasseh; but we were informed by the presiding elder that as there was to be a dance on the Fourth of July we had better defer our beginning until after the ball. The young of the church are to have their dance in the afternoon and the older ones in the evening. We were invited to be present and announce our meetings—nothing said about taking part in the frolic.

Editors Herald:—Bro. A. M. Baker and I have been shaking Satan's morals a wee mite at different points in our field. Falsehoods and misleading articles are going the rounds of the press, yet we are battling for the right. We are sometimes made to remember the scriptures where it says, "Vessels of wrath."

I believe if all concerned would heed the word of the Lord, "Thrust in thy sickle and reap," the word of God would move to the front in this district. I find the greatest evil to this work is neglect, not altogether on the part of lay members, but those holding the priesthood of the Lord. I sometimes ask myself the question. Are the officers in this church of Christ blameless for child's play in the kingdom of God? and the answer comes, Nay; men shall give an account of their stewardship in the house of the Lord. I find in some places like Paul, when he asked, "Are all apostles? are all prophets?" and, "Covet earnestly the best gifts," etc., but not always for the worst purposes, as is sometimes demonstrated by imagining a dark future.

Saints, let us not be weary as to the things pertaining to the work we should be concerned in. Do not think the enemy can hold the fort. God can use us all to his name's honor and glory if we only keep the covenant we made at the waters of baptism. His call we should honor, like Abraham of old. I am encouraged in this conflict of right and wrong, because I am on the side of right, which will and must prevail.

Since Bro. Baker and I have been together we have labored in the following places: McHaffil schoolhouse, Bruner, John's Mills, Beaver, Ava (on the streets and Saints' church), Stony Point, Green schoolhouse, Oak Grove, and will preach here tonight. We can safely say that in all these places friends were made, Saints cheered, etc. I dreamed last Saturday night, that I was fishing, and catching some fine fish, but soon found myself in a piece of dead timber which some one was endeavoring to clear up. While walking along I came to a blind hog which seemed to be quite contrary. I tried to drive him out of the way, and in turn he opened his mouth and spoke as a man and lodged objections to this latter-day gospel. I took a little horn and sounded it, as a foxhunter for his hounds. I saw the hounds coming, and all was cleared away, and I awoke. Next day, Sunday, a man invited us home with him for dinner. We went. He made all kinds of objections to the work, and wound up with telling me of a big fox hunt, and showing me his hounds. I thought of the blind hog, etc. God speed the right.

Editors Herald:-The efforts of Bro. Oscar Case and the writer at Waterloo, Nebraska, have been well received by the people, if one may safely judge from the attendance at our meetings and the attention given to the preached word. The good seed of the gospel has been sown liberally, and we believe it will bring forth fruit in due time, though no additions to the church may be had at present. The accidental drowning of young Bro. Lee Fetter and the sudden death of a Mr. Evans who made a noble effort to rescue the boy has cast a gloom over the entire community. Such things would be almost beyond endurance were it not for the hope of the gospel. When we fully realize that for the righteous to die is to better their condition and enter into rest with Jesus; when we understand that we shall meet again when the family of God in heaven and earth shall meet and be joined in one to enjoy eternal life in the presence of the Holy One, we look up and thank God that our redemption is near. To succeed in our work, as Saints of the Most High, we need to be courageous, persevering, pure, good, true, holy, and punctual. The Saints cannot even neglect the latter in their worship and prosper, or enjoy the Spirit as they should do. Let us, one and all, keep our lamps trimmed and burning, and be ready to receive the plaudit: "Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy Lord." Yours in gospel bonds,

C. E BUTTERWORTH.

CLAVERING, Ont., June 29.

Editors Herald:-The London district conference which convened with Arthur branch on the 15th to 17th inst. will be remembered by many as one of the best conferences of the district. The attendance was large and the weather all that could be desired. The services on Sunday, as also the preaching service of Saturday evening, were held in the town hall. Many outsiders were present at the Sunday preaching services at eleven a. m. R. B. Howlett was the speaker; at 2:30 p. m. R. C. Evans, and 7:30 p. m. B. St. John. The prayer and testimony service which convened at 8:00 a.m. was good and spiritual throughout. A young sister was blessed with the gift of tongues, and two of the brethren were blessed with tongues and interpretation. The following brethren were called to the eldership: Nathan Overholt, of Selkirk; Walter Bennett, of Wallaceburg; Clark Russell, of Arthur; and Douglas Cameron, of Holstein. Brn. Bennett and Russell were already under missionary appointment as priests. Bro. Cameron was also formerly a priest, and Bro. Overholt a teacher. Brn. Overholt, Russell, and Bennett were ordained at the Monday forenoon session. Bro. Cameron being obliged to return home on Sunday evening we understand his ordination was provided for in the resolution.

I have been requested by the conference to perform the following unpleasant duty: Michael Muthart (sometimes known as Will or William), who has been a member of Oliphant branch, but has been for the past year residing in Owen Sound, for good and sufficient reason has been expelled from the church about May 14, 1901; and whereas he has visited Niagara Falls branch, borne testimony, and partaken of sacrament with them, this is to warn all Saints that he is not a member of the church, and to beware of him. Yours in gospel bonds,

JOHN SHIELDS.

MAPLE CITY, Kansas, June 29. Editors Herald:—There are no Saints here but us, and none anywhere near that we can hear of. We came here last fall from Cedarville, Missouri, where a lady friend of mine resides. If some of the elders would go there and inquire for Flory Bolbey, they can find an opportunity to preach the gospel. I pray that God will send some one there, also some one here. We can get a place for them to preach, and if they will let us know, we will meet them at Dexter, Kansas, our nearest station.

I ask the Saints to pray for me that I may ever be faithful. Your sister in faith.

STOCKTON, Cal., July 1.

Editors Herald:—You will see by my address that I have moved from San Francisco to Stockton, and by the assistance and permission of those in charge I, in connection with the Stockton Saints, have rented a large room for the purpose of a mission, free reading room, free employment office, and lecture and debating, if we can get them started aright. Try is the word.

The work here has run down to a very low condition, and it will take time and careful work to revive it. But the Lord so willing, and health given, and Saints assisting, I hope to bring about better conditions in the course of a year. And while so doing our place will be an everyday advertisement of the great latter-day work, as I believe in keeping it before the people. So I want all of the dear good Saints who frequently say in their testimonies at the prayer meetings that they want to do all they can, especially those of California, to just do a little by sending to my address all the Zion's Ensigns and other tracts and books and church literature that they are willing to sacrifice, and I will try to keep somebody reading them. I do not want you to send old, wornout books, as I am too proud to loan such. I think the California Saints can supply enough good books to run this little mission. Try it, brethren and sisters. I am thankful that my health permits me to do something locally if I cannot go into the field as formerly. My address is 807 East Main street, Stockton, California. Your brother in the one faith,

A. HAWS.

CLOSE AT HAND.

The day is long and the day is hard, We are tired of the march and of keeping guard,

Tired of the sense of a fight to be won,
Of days to live through and of work to be done.

Tired of ourselves and of being alone.

And all the while, did we only see, We walk in the Lord's own company; We fight, but 'tis he who nerves our arm, He turns the arrows which else might harm, And out of the storm he brings a calm.

The work which we count so hard to do, He makes it easy, for he works too; The days that are long to live are his, A bit of his bright eternities, And close to our need his helping is.

O eyes that were holden and blinded quite,
And caught no glimpse of the guiding light!
O deaf, deaf ears which did not hear
The heavenly garment trailing near!
O faithless heart, which dared to fear!
—Susan Coolidge.

Dear Sisters:-I had hoped to see Sr. Walker's request more fully responded to, and that we might hear from many who are interested in the Daughters of Zion readings as to their views concerning what subjects should be considered during the coming year. I had not thought it necessary for me to write because of being so near to Sr. Walker that I could talk to her. But now I feel like making a suggestion to all, which may perhaps call out some opposition. Since noticing the reference in our July reading to the work by Jacob Abbott, "Gentle Measures in the Management of the Young," I have thought that it would be profitable to have our readings taken directly from this book, and I suggest that this be done.

It is not to be expected that we shall fully agree with any one author whose writings we discuss. The chief object is to arouse thought and to stimulate each one to arrive at conclusions for herself.

However, I believe there is as much that we could approve in this book as in any we might find. It is very practical, and is full of plain, simple illustrations. And while the author advocates gentle measures, he still states that even harsh methods, if they secure obedience, are better than a failure to do this, and he places great emphasis upon the necessity of authority, and upon persistent insistence upon obedience. It is no doubt thought by some that there are other matters of equal importance with the training of children, which ought to be considered in our meetings. There may be other matters equal, but I am led to conclude that none are of greater importance, and it seems to me that the underlying principles shown forth in these questions of child-training are profitable for old and young alike; for those who have the care of children and for those who have not.

But why may we not divide the time between these and other questions? What are the other questions you would like to have considered? This is the request Sr. Walker has made of you—that you let her know what are your wishes in the matter. Perhaps in reading, this may have been overlooked by you, and that when you read this you may yet come to her help with your suggestions. With an earnest desire to see this part of the Lord's work prosper, I am, Your sister,

CALLIE B. STEBBINS.

A GLANCE AT OUR DAY'S MAIL.

It is fully time for Home Column copy to be at the office, and yet it is not there—worse than this, it is not prepared. Of course we are thinking about it, but thoughts to be of value must materialize. A chubby little pair of feet comes tripping up the stairs and two fat little hands deposit their burden on our table.

"Thank you, blue eyes," says grandma.

"You'se welcome," says blue eyes, and hurries away to his interrupted play. We take up first The Lookout, and read:

"The first essential of civilization is law, conformed to justice, uttered with authority, and enforced with power. Without law and obedience to law there can be no civilization. This is the first lesson to be taught the child; it is the first lesson to be taught the community. The babe is lawless. If he is what his mother calls him, an angel, he is a lawless angel. The first lesson he must be taught is that he is in subjection to a stronger will. The first duty of father or mother to the babe is to compel obedience to 'Thou shalt'; the first function of the paternal prophet is to be a Moses coming down from the mountain with a ten commandments to the little child below. And what is true of the child is true of the childrace. It must learn obedience. There is no road to liberty except the road that leads through obedience to law. is no liberty which is not founded on justice, and no justice which is not formulated and regulated by law. Law, with force behind it to compel obedience to it, is the sine qua non of a civilized condition."

Next I opened a letter from a dear, aged friend, and among other things she wrote, "I just laid this care-worn body down to rest for a few moments, took up the HERALD for June 22 and read, 'The prepared readings for Daughters of Zion Locals,' and I say, What good advice! I am very weak but I feel that with God's help I could say before any congregation in the world that the mother who teaches her child obedience will be blessed of God in ways she has never even thought of, and her child when grown to manhood or womanhood will 'rise up and call her blessed.' Children so taught may at times turn aside from the straight and narrow way, yet the counsel of their mother, given in childhood, will finally prevail and lead them back. Today God wants a pure and an obedient people upon those sacred spots of land dedicated especially to him. A willing and obedient people, whom he will delight to own and bless. I recall the time in the early days of the church when my children were young; my husband was sent on a mission and my sole reliance was upon God. Though my children were small, I taught them the efficacy of prayer-would gather them around my fireside (their little playmates with them), and try to teach them everything which would make them men and women of God. I shall never forget the effect this had. Some have gone before me to their rest, some are still spared to me. But in trouble or sorrow they have always blessed the hand which chastened, and said to me, 'Mother, all is right.' What confidence a mother can implant in her child-of God's goodness and greatness!"

And now, sisters, the question is before you to discuss. We believe the book suggested by Srs. Krahl and Stebbins is a good one and could be studied with profit by any mother. Shall we use it?

A BEAUTIFUL CUSTOM.

A private letter from a lady who is spending a year among the peasants of Tyrol says:
"The morning of our arrival we were awakened by the sound of a violin and flutes under the window and, hurrying down, we found the little house adorned as for a feast—garlands over the door and wreathing a high chair which was set in state.

"The table was already covered with gifts brought by the young people, whose music we had heard. The whole neighborhood were kinsfolk and these gifts came from uncles and cousins in every far-off degree. They were very simple, for the donors are poor—knitted gloves, a shawl, a basket of flowers, jars of fruit, loaves of bread; but upon all some little message of love was pinned.

"'Is there a bride in this house?' I asked of my landlord.

"'Ach, nein!' he said. 'We do not make such a pother about our young people. It is our grandmother's birthday.'

"The grandmother, in her spectacles, white apron and high velvet cap, was a heroine all day, sitting in state to receive visits and dealing out slices from a sweet loaf to each who came. I could not but remember certain grandmothers at home, just as much loved as she, probably, but whose dull, sad lives were never brightened by any such pleasure as this, and I thought we could learn much from these poor mountaineers."—Sel.

PRAYER UNION.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

I have been called to the bedside of my mother at my old home in Pacific Junction. Mother is very low, and I ask the united prayers of the Saints in her behalf, that if it be the Father's will she may be spared us. She has been faithful and has great faith in the promise of God to heal, and in the prayers of the Saints.

Yours in Christ.

Sunday School Department.

ELDER T. A. HOUGAS, EDITOR. Henderson, Mills Co., Iowa,

(Send communications for this department to the Editor, Address minutes and notices of conventions, etc., to "Editors Herald, Lamoni, Iowa.")

PRIME OBJECT OF SUNDAY SCHOOL.

Various objects at different times have actuated Sunday school workers. Robert Raikes, the noble Englishman who is said to be the first founder of the Sabbath school, possessing a great heart filled with philanthropy, gathered in the little waifs from the thronged streets of London on the Sabbath day, and taught them to read and write, as in a day school. The prime object of that Sunday school certainly was

EDUCATION.

One branch after another was added until Sunday schools became grand resorts for instruction, and soon in Protestant schools children were taught to commit to memory as much of the Bible as possible. Premiums were offered and prizes awarded those who recited the most verses, and whole chapters were repeated, parrot like, by some retentive minded children every Sunday. No doctrine was supposed to be taught, no creed discussed.

Two prime objects (and very laudable ones they seem to me) were apparent in the Sunday schools of those days. One was the cultivation of the memory, and the other was to become familiar with the Scriptures just as they are written.

Afterwards strenuous efforts were made by officers and teachers in Sabbath schools to induce pupils to attend the annual religious revivals. Indeed, the prime object then seemed to be to excel (when reporting to conference) in the number of

CONVERSIONS IN THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

In more modern schools, especially in rural districts, the banner class was the one that had given the most liberally during the year. Surely the prime object of that school

MONEY.

But probably when I was requested to state the prime object of the Sunday school I was expected to declare and not what had been, the chief motive and aim of Sunday schools in general. But before speaking of the principal object allow me to mention a few of the secondary ones.

WHAT SHOULD BE

By getting ready and going to Sabbath school every Sunday the little ones learn that there is one especial day in the week, otherwise all days are nearly alike to them. One object, then, of the Sunday school is to teach children to keep the fourth commandment, "Remember the Sabbath day to keep it holy."

ORDER

is said to be heaven's first law, and children should be taught early to submit thereto. That they may become subject to law seems to have been the object of their creation. By being properly classified and kept in place in their classes they learn to be controlled, and the law of order and obedience should be properly enforced in all Sunday schools.

Another especial aim in Sabbath school work should be to impress upon young minds the given at home. Thereby children are assisted in keeping the fifth commandment, "Honor thy father and thy mother."

These are a few of the many desirable objects to be attained and benefits to be derived by the primary classes.

THE INTERMEDIATE PUPILS

if their exercises are properly conducted grow to be not only good scriptorians, but deep, quick thinkers and reasoners, able to express well their ideas and grandly able to defend their faith. As Paul said, "Able to give a reason for the hope that is within them."

THE BIBLE CLASSES

also are here assisted to a better understanding of the scriptures, and with that knowledge comes a more earnest desire to follow out its precepts. They hear the gospel law expounded, see its deep significance, and feel its sacred influence. They are delighted with its simplicity and awed by its divinity.

These classes, especially the Senior, are made up of members slowly plodding "from the cradle to the grave" or as another has said, "This organization has

A PLACE FOR EVERY ONE all the time, from the little one in the infant class to the great-grandfather and grandmother in the Bible class." The Sabbath school tends to develop the mental, moral, and spiritual faculties in both teachers and pupils, and this is decidedly one object of the institution.

But I remember that the PRIME OBJECT of the Sunday school was the theme given me for discussion. Well, to learn, obey, and promulgate the principles of the doctrine of Christ is, and should be, the chief aim of every true Christian. And when this class of people become associated in Sabbath school capacity their real, true, genuine object will remain unchanged. Their whole intent and purpose will be to first learn and then teach others the way to obtain eternal life. Christ says, Strait is the gate and narrow is the way that leads to life eternal. and few there be that find it. Then those who have found the way should make it their first and sole object to point it out to others. This leading and showing the narrow way to those who have not found it must be the most important object and main incentive to workers in the Sunday school. For there collected, members can discuss, explain, and simplify the plan of salvation, condensing, combining, connecting its principles and merging them into one path or way, which though it be indeed a narrow one, seems plain and pleasant, and the gate, though "strait," can be shown to be standing wide open and easily entered.

On the other hand instructions are needed in regard to the wide gate and the broad way wherein so many of our fellow travelers are walking today. This way is broad because the gospel principles are made to diverge instead of unite. Many winding, crisscross, zigzag paths make up the broad way, and many zealous, clamorous guides are pointing out the direction that the dazed, bewildered wayfarer should take. Atheists cry: "No God! Come right along this way!" Agnostics: "No Devil! This is the path to take!" Universalists: "No hell! Go any way you please!" Some: "No baptism! This is a very easy way!" Many: "No laying on of hands! A new way!" And yet others: "No resurrection! So there need be no particular course!"

No wonder that confusion reigns! So many paths make indeed a broad way! and how truly spoke the Master when he said that "many go in thereat." Then to turn back the surging multitude, close the wide gate and show the narrow way is the principal design, the great and grand aim, the prime object of every Latter Day Saint Sunday school. Then let us lift higher the gospel banner, plant deeper the guide posts, print plainer the finger boards, and make easier and brighter the way to poor, benighted travelers. With this glorious object in view may God in his infinite mercy and wisdom assist every Sunday school in bringing about the intended result!

MRS. A. E. COBB.

BE PROMPT.

Promptness is one of the main features in the Sunday school. No school can be a success without it. If the hour for Sunday school is ten o'clock, try and get there a little before ten. Avoid coming in late if possible, for it causes confusion.

The superintendent should not be late, as he is the head of the school and should set the example. If he is not prompt to attend, the school will not be. They will think if the superintendent is late it will not make any difference if they are not there at the time appointed. So, Superintendent, be on time, and open your school promptly. Do not wait for those who are late. If you do the little ones who came early will become restless and noisy and require some time and patience before the teacher can get them settled for class work.

Teachers must not think all

rests on the superintendent. He may do his part but he cannot do yours, for there is a greater responsibility resting upon the teacher than any other member of the school. You should understand the disposition of your pupils. You know best how to manage them. You know best how to present lesson to them so they can comprehend it. teacher be at your post early Sunday morning. Get to Sabbath school in time for the opening hymn and prayer so you can work in harmony with the rest of the school. Be with your class and keep them in order. See that they are not scattered around over the church. Have them in time for marching. Lead them to their places of recitation. Teach the precious truths of the gospel in an earnest, simple way. Teach them to have respect for the house of God, and give them to understand that it is a place for worship and not the place to play.

Teachers have a great influence over their class, and the lessons that are impressed upon their minds while small will always stay with them. So, teachers, be careful to teach them habits of promptness as well as the laws of God.

PARENTS

should bear in mind that the superintendent and teachers cannot do all. There is a very important part for you to do, a part which should not be neglected. Take your children to Sunday school every Sunday if possible. Do not allow them to romp and play all day but see that they devote a part of the time to the study of God's word. We have six days to work and play but the seventh day God calls his. So do not rob him of all of it. Spare a little time for him. Do not only go to Sunday school but be sure you are there on time. It disturbs the school for any one to come in late. Their minds are distracted from the lesson and they do not get as much good out of it, and the parties that come in late do not get full benefit of it either. So let each one make an effort to be in time for the opening hymn. There is work for each and every one.

Christ says, Feed my lambs; and as the Sunday school is the only place outside the home this work can be accomplished, let each one do their part; be prompt to attend and prompt to act and God will bless you.

NAUVOO.

Superintendent George P. Lambert in charge, Mark H. Seigfreid secretary protem. A motion was carried to suspend the rules and allow all present voice and vote in the meeting. Reports of the Rock Creek, Burlington, and Ft. Madison schools were read and approved. The report of the superintendent was also received. Voted that we hold our next convention one day previous to, and at the same place as, the next conference. Remarks were made by James McKiernan, Superintendent Lambert, Sr. Morton, and Solomon Tripp. They all spoke of the work as advancing. In the afternoon, usual rules were suspended and business of the morning was finished. Montrose school reported. An auditing committee was appointed consisting of James McKiernan, D. Tripp, and Mark Seigfried. Program committee for next convention: Lottic Tripp, Carrie Stevenson, and Sr. Wooding. The remainder of the afternoon was devoted to a regular Sunday school session. The evening session was devoted to a literary program of high merit. Some very pleasing anthems were given by a few young ladies of the north hill part of the Burlington branch, which spoke very highly for the young ladies and their chorister, C. N. Craig. Adjourned until next convention.

CHATHAM.

Convention met in Zone town hall, June 7 and 8. Jessie A. Hackett superintendent, J. H. Tyrrell assistant, Mary M. Green secretary, Maggie Burr assistant. Afternoon session: Visiting brothers and sisters were granted all the rights and privileges of the convention. Reports from the various schools in the district were then read. Three new schools were added to our number, one school discontinued, two school reports did not arrive. Some schools have done well, others need encouragement. Several of our officers and superintendents sent in written reports, which helps ever so much to make a convention a success. The report of treasurer, George A. McFadden, was read and accepted. The librarian reported: Received, $18.75, expended for books, $12.59; balance, $6.16, to be handed to district treasurer. Rules and regulations governing the library were corrected and afterwards accepted. It was voted that the librarian, superintendent. and secretary form a committee, and they decide which route the books shall take. It was resolved that the officers remain as elected till next October convention. evening was devoted to entertainment, the program consisting of music, singing, recita-tions, speeches, and drafting. Those taking tions, speeches, and drafting. Those taking part did well. Saturday morning was devoted to a model Sunday school in charge of Jessie A. Hackett and J. H. Tyrrell. Some good instructions were given by Elders R. C. Evans and J. H. Tyrrell. All committee reports were accepted and committees released. A vote of thanks was tendered the Zone Saints for their hospitality. Adjourned to meet at two p. m. the Friday prior to convening of fall conference.

NOTICE TO SUNDAY SCHOOLS AND OFFICERS.

The following rules applying to the sale and mailing of Quarterlies were agreed upon by the officers of the General Sunday School Association at a meeting held in Independence, Missouri, subsequent to the late General Convention:

1. All subscriptions for Quarterlies will be promptly discontinued at the expiration of the time for which they are ordered, unless the subscription be renewed.

2. No Quarterlies will be mailed at the yearly rate unless a full year's subscription be paid in advance.

3. When necessary, credit for not more than one year will be allowed on Quarterlies, but in such case they will be charged at the single quarter rate.

The above rules will take effect with the mailing of the October-December issue.

We believe the above rules to be absolutely necessary and fair and just to all. And that you may the better see the reasonableness thereof we offer the following explanations.

Rule 1. We discontinue the Quarterly because: (1) Schools are discontinued and do not need the Quarterlies and no notice is ever given to that effect. (2) Nearly all schools need to often alter their order. They need more of one grade and less of another, and the easiest way is to make an entirely new order. (3) Schools change officers frequently. The new officer orders the Quarterlies but says nothing about any standing order. If the old order is continued, you will have two sets of Quarterlies. Schools have received as high as three and four sets by this old method of continuing orders. What should be reof continuing orders. What should be remembered now is that if you want Quarterlies, you must order them every time your subscription expires, for they will not be sent beyond that time.

Rule 2. If you expect the benefit of the yearly rate, which is about 25 per cent cheaper than the quarterly rate, you must pay for your Quarterlies a full year in advance. Some have written the HERALD Office and insisted on having the benefit of the yearly rate and pay at the expiration of the year. To allow this would do injustice to the school which ordered one quarter at a time and sent the cash with order. It would be "money in their pockets" to hold their cash to the end of the year and pay all at once. It would be selling cheaper on time than for cash in advance, a business principle which every one knows is both wrong and ruinous.

Rule 3. It is not intended to bring the Quarterlies onto a strictly "cash in advance," basis, as that would deprive many of our schools of the Quarterly entirely. But it is necessary to do business on correct business principles. The school that cannot pay in advance for Quarterlies may get them anyway and pay for them sometime during the year. But do not ask for them at the yearly rate, as that cannot be granted in justice to others.

As stated above, these rules will take effect with the mailing of the last quarter for the year, or about September 1. Sunday school officers would do well to call especial attention to this notice in order that no mistakes be made. We believe that all will be satis-fied in this matter at least as soon as they get themselves fully adjusted to the situation.

DON'T READ THIS!

Unless you want to! but if you do read it, please HEED it. Iowa and Minnesota contain at least six thousand Saints. How much money do you expect to spend next Thursday —the Fourth? If one dollar each for pleasure, -the Fourth? Hone dollar each for pleasure, six thousand dollars are gone! half that sum would help the college. "Ye are my disciples if ye do whatsoever I command you." The Lord said, Pay that "great debt." I propose to deprive myself of fifty cents worth of my necessities as a minister that I may have the right to hand, what would otherwise belong to the church, to the college that amount. How many others will do likewise? A little deprivation, a little saving, and the thing is done! How glad I'll be to see this mission pay six thousand dollars to the college. Try and forget this appeal just as soon as you have read it. The easiest way to do it will be to send what you can five cents up to twenty-five or more dollars! I know this mission can pay its share of the debt. I believe it will. Fraternally J. W. WIGHT.

REUNION NOTICES.

Reunion of Clinton, Missouri, district will convene at the Paxton grove, three and one half miles north of Wheatland, August 23, holding over two Sundays. Those wishing tents must notify secretary of committee by August 1, or not depend upon them, as they will be ordered from Kansas City by that date. The rent will be no more than what will cover expenses. State what size tent will be wanted; 10 x 12 and 8 x 10 can be furnished with price according to size. Wood and with price according to size. Wood and straw will be furnished on the ground free, also water, which will be on the ground or near by. Hay and corn at same place at reasonable prices. W. H. Mannering president, Joshua Sandage secretary of committee. Address, Wheatland, Missouri.

The time for the Massachusetts district reunion is nearing and we want it to be a grand success. The brothers and sisters are planning to have their summer vacation at this time as far as possible, and as the saying is, "kill two birds with one stone." While we are building up the physical system by rest we are also laying by strength and re-serve force spiritually. And surely Silver Lake is a lovely spot, surrounded by a grove of tall pines whose needles make a natural carpet and also furnish filling for our beds. The prices of tents are the same as last year, $3 for large and $2 50 for the smaller ones; the rent for cots is 25 cents each, cheaper than last year. These are of woven wire, very cool and comfortable. Those desiring either should notify one of the committee at

NOTICE TO OREGON.

Bandon branch, which includes the Saints of southwestern Oregon, will hold a reunion from August 16 to 25 inclusive, at Bandon. All Saints and friends are invited. Bring your tents. For information address Bro. David E. Stitt, Bandon. Notice of Oregon conference will be given hereafter.

Will those who can give me information concerning the old branches of Sweet Home,

Linn, Myrtle Creek, Drift Creek, and Mount Vernon, please write to me. Will they who were members of Hope branch, of Drain, now disorganized, please send their addresses to the district secretary, R. A. Cribbins, Bridge, Coos county. In harmony with our district conference resolution we wish to issue letters of removal to those members of that branch who reside in western Oregon, to Bandon. Those who have moved away from Oregon can get letters now to their nearest branch. Please do not neglect this. I would like to have the names and addresses of all Saints in Oregon who are not identified with any branch. You can send your baptism certificates to the clerks of to your location. Those in eastern Oregon can unite with Condon branch, Wm. H. Livingstone, of Condon, secretary. Saints in western Oregon can unite with Bandon branch, Amos Corson, of Bandon, secretary. Saints living in Oregon who are members of branches outside of Oregon are requested to get letters to the above branches. We desire to have as many as possible on Bandon record at time of reunion, so please respond.

As Bro. Joseph Luff has placed me in sub-charge of the missionary work in western Oregon, I would be pleased to hear from Saints or friends concerning openings for work. I may not be able to answer all calls, as I have but one associate, Bro. Alma Upton, but we will do what we can.

TENT NOTICE.

I understand that a resolution adopted by the late conference of the Des Moines district held at Boonesboro was not submitted in my report. The resolution was:

Resolved that this conference request the presiding officers of the various branches to take up a collection on the second Sunday in each month for the tent fund.

If the Saints wish to have the tent work in this district, funds will be necessary, and would suggest that we need not wait for the second Sunday, as the others might come sooner. Collections will be received by the district president, H. A. McCoy, Perry, Iowa. Yours in Christ,

GEORGE E. DAVIS.

A brilliant array of noted experts and specialists contribute to the Current Topics Club department of the Chicago Record-Herald, including among many others, such well-known names as A. S. Draper, LL. D., President of the University of Illinois, Hon. Geo. F. Hoar, United States Senator from Massachusetts, Professor John H. Finley of Princeton University, Ex President of Knox College; Rev. Dr. Newell Dwight Hillis, Car-roll D. Wright, United States Commissioner of Labor, Mrs. Ellen M. Henrotin, Ex-Presi-dent of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, Mrs. May Wright Sewall and the well-known popular women writers, Alice Morse Earle and Mary Hartwell Catherwood. Entertaining and instructive articles appear in this department of the Record-Herald on a variety of present-day topics of the greatest interest, including "The Women's Club movement," "The Art of Living a Hundred movement," "The Art of Living a Hundred Years," "What the Government Does for the People," "Colonial Governments of Today," "Contemporary Literatures of the World," "American Life a Century Ago," and "The Opportunity and the Man"—a series of unique biographies of remarkable men of today. A new assortment of topics will be taken up beginning about the middle of June.

Twenty-five years ago, when "Elbow Room" and "Out of the Hurly-Burly" were the successes of the day, Max Adeler successes of the day, Max Adeler such denly ceased writing. For a quarter of a century he was proof against the blandishments of editors, but within a few weeks he has completed a new series of humorous stories which show him at his best. Tales of Old Turley, which will appear in early numbers of the Saturday Evening Post, are wonderfully droll stories of the quaint characters in an old-fashioned country town before the war. Local politics, school committee fights, church squabbles and women's clubs lend themselves admirably to Max Adeler's humorous touch, and form the basis of some of the cleverest stories that have been written for many a day.

WHY NOT A TRIP TO COLORADO NEXT SUMMER?

The price for a round-trip ticket on certain days will be less than half fare. Call and see me about it?

We are doing everything possible this year, by making unusually low ticket rates and running unusually fast and comfortable trains, to make it convenient and not too expensive for people of moderate means to spend their vacation in the Colorado mountains. There is no country in the world like Colorado for invalida and others in search of rest and pleasure. The pure, dry climate has the most astonishing permanent effect on the health and spirits of visitors, and especially is this so in the case of those from that part of the country near to the level of the sea. ## MOBOCRACY.

For some time there have been cases of lynching men for alleged criminal acts all more or less outrageous violations of law. Some of these exhibitions of lawless infliction of punishment have been made against the negro wrongdoer in the Southern states. Lately a brother writing from a place way down south in Alabama says:

Recently there have been two negroes hung near here by mobs for attempted rape. In both cases there were some present who used their influence to that end who profess to be

We regret to see lawlessness occurring anywhere. There ought to be sufficient power in the executive officers, township, county, and state, to enforce the laws prohibiting and punishing crime. No matter what the transgression of the statute enactment may be, the criminal should be given the trial by his peers.

It is unnecessary to say that the criminal cannot be found by the officers, for if he can be found by those who would inflict punishment upon him unlawfully, it is certain that he could be found by those whose duty it is to punish lawfully.

It is damaging to the reputation of a state to suffer its laws to be violated without a proper effort to enforce them by constituted authorities, until citizens are seemingly compelled to take the punishment of evil doers into private hands. But no such condition of things should be possible.

Mississippi, Tennessee, Alabama are noted for the frequent recurrence of scenes of unlawful lynching of men charged with criminal assault. Some of these lynchings have resulted in the killing of innocent persons; done through senseless fury, and hatred exercised against the alleged crime; which is indeed beinous and revolting. But where laws exist providing suitable punishment, these laws should be enforced without recourse to Judge Lynch or his imitators. And where no sufficient punishment has been pro- the tenth out of a family of twelve to of faith in God and prayer.

vided, legislatures should at once rectify the mistake, and pass such acts as would at least be an open warning to wrongdoers.

But it is not the severity of prescribed punishment for crime that deters men from its commission. The certainty of being punished has far more to do with controlling contemplated wrong than does the severity of the proposed punishment where the wrongdoer is caught. The Southern states are not the only ones in which lynching (unlawful punishment for wrongdoing) has been resorted to. Indiana, Colorado. Kansas, have had abhorrent cases of such violence. Burning at the stake of a supposed evil doer, without even a pretense to a legal inquiry as to guilt; a hasty hunt for the supposed criminal, a defiance of local officers and an open disregard for laws by a hastily improvised mob, and a victim dead by cruel methods and the thing was done.

It is a shame upon our boasted advancement, and the safety of person which is the right of all before the law; and no denouncement of such unlawful methods is too strong against them.

See where such a habit, or rule, or riotous temper is leading to. Mansfield, Ohio, has by absolutely lawless force driven out the followers of John Alexander Dowie, of Chicago, who after some years presenting himself to the public as "God's overseer," now claims to be the reincarnated Elijah, or Elijah come again in the flesh, and has maintained so sturdy an opposition of the same lawless sort, that now elders of the Christian Catholic Church may not, must not, hold meeting in that one time strong hold of Spiritism.

Nor is this the only spot where the methods of Mr. Dowie's faith are meeting with lawless opposition. The newspapers of Chicago are making cause against him and his Zion. Nearly every issue of the Tribune has the names of some who have died while being treated under the ministration of Dr. Dowie or his elders. woman was Mrs. Florence Cameron, of Newark, Delaware; the other a Mrs. Julia Thomas, colored. Both had been sick for years. The disease of Mrs. Cameron has been stated to be incurable; and Mrs. Thomas was die of consumption in ten years. These after failing to be cured by medical practice under care of physicians sought the offices of Mr. Dowie and his methods as a last resort. Both have died while under his treatment.

Evanston, one of the fashionable suburbs of Chicago, has now twice been the scene of an unlawful interruption of meetings held by some of Dr. Dowie's followers. In both of these instances the elders have been assaulted by persons throwing eggs and rotten lemons and cast off vegetables at them, and their services stopped by rough and boisterous interruptions, and such threatening of personal violence that it was only by the intervention of the police that the elders escaped. And this in Illinois.

At Waterloo, Iowa, a similar stop was put to the assembling of a number of believers in Dr. Dowie Elijah. So that it is easily seen that a sort of epidemic of lawlessness of this sort is following in the wake of the methods of Judge Lynch.

What is Mr. Dowie's crime? He claims to believe that God is not only a spiritual helper but is a healer of the ills of the flesh as well; and that the aid of the Lord may be invoked by prayer, and the exercise of faith. He also takes the ground that physicians are more or less humbugs, and needless as helpers to health. presume that he does not claim that all who are sick and who apply to him for help and enter into his Zion are helped or healed by or through his means.

We have nothing to say of the right or wrong involved in the claims of Dr. He is certainly correct in Dowie. holding that God is a helper in both the spiritual and temporal spheres of man's existence. And we believe that before the community or its officers lay hands on Dr. Dowie and his followers to punish them because people who are sick and seek them for help die on their hands, as it is expressed, a proper inquiry should be made as to whether all who submit to medical treatment under the average or the skillful physician meet with success in their search for health. The question should be first settled whether the doctor is able to stand off the dread rider of the pale horse more successfully than the invisible powers

If none died under the hands of the doctors, there would be much more consistency in this war upon Dr. Dowie.

Be it understood that we do not offer a defense of Mr. Dowie, or accept his theories or his claim to be Elijah; but we do protest, now and always, against any and all forms of mob violence. We have always been opposed to it and shall continue to be until all violence shall cease in the loving reign of the living Lord.

HUMILITY.

Humility is a condition of mind essential to true greatness. Men are powerful in proportion to the degree of humility they possess. So indispensable is this rare virtue that it is repeatedly enjoined upon us in holy writ, and in the conduct of our Master and his servants it has ever been manifest as their chief characteristic. It is a marked trait of character in all the best men and women of the world.

Pride, vanity, undue self-esteem, and arrogance of disposition are among the best evidences of weakness.

But humility is not self-degradation. It is a mistake to suppose we must belittle the mind and its powers in order to be humble. It is necessary and right that we should place, as nearly as possible, a proper estimate upon our capabilities. It is not right to disparage the talents with which we are endowed and which God desires us to use in a proper way.

The ability to place a correct estimate upon our own powers, to see ourselves as we are, will in itself bring a sense of weakness. At the same time it will bring a realization of power. Of power, in the thought of what man and his destinies really are, that which God designs him to be. Of weakness, in contemplating the ideal so far above our present standing.

Real humility, after all, finds its source in high ideals. Looking up and contrasting what we are with what we may be, and wish to be, brings a realizing sense of our present condition. On the other hand, vain pride results from fixing our minds on low ideals; and in our resultant feelings of superiority, we lose our proper standing. It is on this simple principle that "pride goes before a fall," while humility precedes exaltation.

We gravitate inevitably to the level of our ideals. We should not, then, under a false sense of humility, show disrespect to the powers we have by seeking to degrade them in our own eyes or in the eyes of others. Neither should we make effort to exalt self by attempting to make apparent to others the virtues we possess, without reference to those we imagine we possess but do not. Both courses are wrong, and either will cause us to descend.

A proper conception of our present condition, and a pure, clear ideal of what we may be—this is humility. And herein is resident the power to exalt man to the full measure of his destiny.

Every one that exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.—Luke 18:14.

TRACTS WANTED.

In a recent letter to President Joseph Smith, Bro. G. J. Waller writes as follows from Honolulu:

From what has appeared in the HERALD of late touching the question of the publication of tracts by the church, I understand that it is expected that those in charge of missions will provide, if necessary, tracts suited to the requirements of the work before them. As pointed out in a letter I wrote to you some months ago, tracts in the Chinese, Japanese, and Portuguese languages are needed in this mission; and as I am anxious to open up the work among some of these people, I shall be glad if any who are desirous of assisting in this work will write short tracts suitable for distribution among people who know nothing about our work, and who, many of them (especially among the Chinese and Japanese), know very little about Christor the Bible. From the copies received I can select those that I consider adapted for the work to be accomplished. I will arrange for the translation and orinting in the different languages.

and printing in the different languages.

As Hawaii is now a territory of the United States, any letter or package sent will require only the same postage as to points in the United States.

I have nothing new to report in the work. My little Japanese Sunday school class near my home at Waikiki is growing, and I think when I get the tracts I can do something among the older people of this race, who seem to be anxious for their little ones to be taught.

We trust that the brethren will not be slow in complying with Bro. Waller's request, and that they will supply him with an abundance of material from which to make selections for his mission. Who will help him?

FUTURE LIFE.

The following appeared in the Scientific American in its issue of July 6:

The American branch of the Society of Psychical Research of Boston has issued a circular for the sentiment of people regarding a future life. They are desirous of obtaining statistics on this subject. The questions which they ask are, first, would you prefer to live after death or not; second, do you desire future life whatever its conditions may be. If you do not prefer to live after death, what would the character of the future life be to make the prospect seem tolerable? Would you, for example, be content with a life more or less like your present life? Can you state what elements in life were felt by you to call for its perpetuity? Third, can you state why you feel this way, as regards questions one and two? Fourth, do you now feel the question of a future life to be of urgent importance to your mental comfort? Have your feelings on questions one, two and four undergone change? If so, when, and in what way? Sixth, would you like to know for certain about the future life, or would you prefer to leave it a matter of faith?

The answers which will be received as a result of the circular will undoubtedly be an interesting collection to religionists as well as to psychologists. It is probably the intention of the Boston society to analyze the results and publish same.

The questions asked in the circular are pertinent ones to anyone who thinks on religious lines.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. Jacob E. Swegart writes from Beaver, Missouri, July 3:

The Saints are moving in, and the work moving onward and upward. But notwith-standing that we have not yet been organized into a branch. We have been holding our regular meetings and Sunday school, which was organized over a year ago by Elder J. C. Chrestensen. About six months ago we sent a petition to our quarterly conference asking that a branch be organized here. We understand the request was granted and the matter left in the charge of Bro. I. N. White, missionary in charge. We shall hope to see him here in the near future. We expect to build a church house with an open Bible and a free pulpit to all denominations when not in use by the Saints. But for the breaking of the sawmill we should have had the frame ready by this The sacrifice on our part will be great, as the Saints here are poor, generally speaking. We hope the Saints will give us a helping. We ling hand. ing hand. Donations will be received by myself or Bro. J. C. Chrestensen, Beaver, Missouri. We have been chosen as a building committee. As this is the center of the Southern Missouri district, we wish to put up a good house. Some have already contributed, and we trust that many more will help us. We have great need for the house. Recently we have been holding meetings in a grove, and have had some good preaching by Elders Chrestensen, A. M. Baker, J. T. Davis, who have all departed for other parts of their fields. Come again, brethren. Much good has been done. Many are interested in the gospel, and if the Saints will live true and honest lives the harvest will be abundant, as we have a noble class of neighbors, and God forbid that any of us should become stumblingblocks to any.

Bro. H. F. Durfey writes from Seiling, Oklahoma:

Bro. D. S. Crawley and Rev. Ray, of the Baptist Church have just closed the first proposition of their debate, in which Rev. Ray affirmed his church possessed all the characteristics entitling it to be the church of Christ. Bro. Crawley did well, and the Saints feel encouraged. To God be all the praise. Now the Reorganized Church comes in for a test. We trust God for the victory, and shall go into the contest leaning on his mighty arm. The writer acts as moderator for Bro. Crawley.

Bro. N. C. Enge in a letter to Bishop Kelley, writing from Grimstad, Norway, June 28, states:

I just received news from Aalborg to come immediately as the brethren I ordained have created a good interest. I intend to go next week. I expect to baptize a couple before I go. Our pioneer Saints are steadfast.

Sr. J. A. Taylor, under date of July 11, writes from Rogers, Texas.

After traveling around from place to place in western and northwestern Texas, I have returned to Rogers. My health is improved some. I am sixty-eight years old, and I cannot expect to become very strong. I enjoy reading the HERALD so much!

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

Elders U. W. Greene and D. A. Anderson have been doing tent work in New York and Connecticut. At Norwalk, Connecticut, they were annoyed considerably by mischievous boys bothering the tent. One of the offending boys was caught, arrested, and fined by the civil authorities for disturbing a religious meeting. trust the lesson learned by the boy will be remembered.

GRACELAND COLLEGE NOTES.

Bro. F. M. Slover returns his college subscription lists and writes:

I have been blessed in working in this department of the Lord's work, and I desire to continue until the college is free from debt. If you do not get enough subscribed please send me a few more of the subscription lists and I will continue to do what I can for the college.

Bro. Alma M. Fyrando, in sending in lists of Graceland college subscription, writes in a letter of the 10th inst.:

I am highly pleased so far; and if all districts are as thoroughly worked as "Soo," I believe Graceland is graced and free.

In a letter of the 11th, he states:

Moorhead is to have a supper tonight to swell the list. I shall encourage suppers and socials in each branch in district, as they will be cash in hand. I look for $700 00 to $1,000.00 from our district. Good, I think.

PRIESTHOOD AUTHORITY.-NO. 2. BY FREDERICK GREGORY.

In the nineteenth of Acts, verses one to five, we have an account of twelve men whom Paul met at Ephesus, and of them he asks, "Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed?" They had never heard of such a power. Then says Paul, "Unto what then were ye baptized?" and they made answer as best they knew, by saying, "Unto John's baptism;" but Paul knew better, and explained matters, showing that John in his baptism instructed the people to believe on Christ, who was greater than he, and who would baptize them with the Holy Ghost. When they heard this they saw their first bap-tism was not John's baptism, and consented to being rebaptized by Paul. Their baptism may be and undoubtedly was an immersion, which made them think it John's; but the one officiating had never received authority from the Lord of the harvest to so act, and consequently they must be rebaptized by one having authority. "By what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority?" is a question forming the basis of all legal transactions in temporal as well as spiritual matters, and when we come to consider all that is involved respecting the spiritual the glory provided by the law, reside, it becomes every man and woman to wake up to the danger, and know by what authority the several ministers of the present day preach, baptize, and otherwise officiate. The true servant is called by revelation, and educated by inspiration, and as he teaches the people "to observe all things whatsoever I [the Lord] have commanded you," the Lord will work with him, confirming the word with indubitable signs. He will speak "the words of God," advocate the "doctrine of Christ," and no one servant will contradict the other in point of doctrinal teaching,—one beautiful feature of being "called of God, as was Aaron," which is most beautifully portrayed in the written word-the New Testament. We return to the authority of the first Christian ministry and read:

And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost: whosesoever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whosesoever sins ye retain, they are retained.—John 20:22, 23

We notice also:

Verily I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven. - Matt. 18:18.

Priesthood (not priestcraft, reader) means authority that the heavens recognize, and when committed to men on earth, and they use it in keeping with the mind and will of God. it becomes a very serious matter. We emphasize:

Whosesoever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whosesoever sins ye retain, they are retained.

Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven; and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.

This God-sent ministry are the sole executors or administrators of a divine law-the law of the Lord-and when that law or any part of it is administered by them, the benefits accrue to the party submitting to that law or part thereof, as the law of life to them. The gospel,—which is the law of the Lord, converting the soul, -provides for the remission of sins, as also does it provide for the freedom and glory of the creature in eternity, and the servants of Christ are authorized to preach, baptize, etc., in his name, so that people who are willing to believe and obey may have their sins remitted under this holy priesthood authority, while those who refuse, their sins are retained and can be loosed only by the authorized administration of the gospel law. The law is not honored unless executed, and souls are saved only as they obey it; hence the necessity of authority to honor the gospel law, which to perfect the glory of the creature in the eternal world (to which end the law was designed) and elevate him to conditions favorable to his obtaining quired the blood of the Son. agents they are authorized to do business in the name of the Lord, and all doing business with the Lord must recognize his agents, as we understand from his words:

He that receiveth you receiveth me .-Matt. 10:40.

When Paul, blinded by priestcraft and tradition, was in need of light and instruction in the truth, the Lord sent him to Ananias, an authorized agent located in Damascus, and when the worshipful Cornelius of Cesarea sought the Lord in his home, he was directed by an angel to send for Peter, another agent traveling the most of his time. The angel located Peter, and told Cornelius that Peter would tell him what he ought to do. It required considerable time and effort in both cases, but the agent must be recognized and his services employed. Their official acts were a necessity to the individual complying with the law of righteousness.

We pass to another interesting phase of the subject. Many are anxious to hold the priesthood and bear gospel tidings, but are unwilling to submit to such a rigid rule as, "No man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron." A little story is told in second Samuel, eighteenth chapter, that nicely illustrates the thought. and without comment the writer gives it place. Joab, the captain of one third of the Israelitish army, had killed Absalom, the son of David, and a runner was to be sent with the news to the king. The story is as follows:

Ahimaaz-Let me now run, and bear the king tidings, how that the Lord hath avenged him of his enemies.

Joab—Thou shalt not bear tidings this day, but thou shalt bear tidings another day. [To Cushi] Cushi, go tell the king what thou

Cushi-Cushi bowed himself to Joab, and Ahimaaz-Then said Ahimaaz the son of Zadok yet again to Joab, But howsoever, let me, I pray thee, also run after Cushi. Joab-Whererefore wilt thou run, my son, seeing that thou hast no tidings ready? Ahimaaz-Howsoever, said he, let me run.

Joab-And he said unto him, Run. (Ahimaaz goes by a shorter route and reaches the king first, but before this he is seen in the distance, by the watchman, who tells the king.)

King-If he be alone, there is tidings in his mouth.

Watchman-Behold another man running alone.

King-He also bringeth tidings.

Watchman.-Methinketh the running of the foremost is like the running of Ahimaaz the son of Zadok.

King-He is a good man and cometh with good tidings.

Ahimaaz [in presence of king]-All is Blessed be the Lord thy God, which hath delivered up the men that lifted up their hand against the lord my king.

King—Is the young man Absalom safe? Ahimaaz—When Joab sent the king's servant, and me thy servant, I saw a great tumult but I knew not what it was.

King-Turn aside, and stand here.

Cushi (just arrived)-Tidings, my lord the king: for the Lord hath avenged thee this day of all them that rose up against thee.

King—Is the young man Absalom safe? Cushi—The enemies of my lord the king, and all that rise against thee to do thee hurt, be as that young man is.

King—O, my son Absalom! my son, my son Absalom! would God I had died for thee.

The reader is left to make the aplication and draw conclusions. In support of the statement that the rigid rule of Scripture, governing the calling and ordination of men to the ministry of the word would be disregarded and laid aside, we read from the sacred testimony:

For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears; and they shall turn away their ears from the truth, and shall be turned unto fables.—2 Tim. 4:3, 4.

Under "sound doctrine" the good Lord provided teachers of the divine law, but people became tired of sound doctrine and the Lord's methods, evidently because the Lord's ideas and ways differ from man's, for when we come to consider the class of men called to the ministry according to "sound doctrine" we see the Lord choosing the "weak things of the world," the "foolish" and "despised;" whereas, the people in "heaping to themselves teachers" choose highly educated, wise men of the world, mighty men of influence, noble, etc. Not being sent of God they cannot speak the words of God, but turn their hearers' ears away from the "truth" unto "fables" by their good words and fair speeches. Well might we ask, as did Paul, "How can they preach except they be sent?" Like Ahimaaz, they may run in their blind zeal, but bear no definite tidings, and give as little satisfaction. teachers which the people would "heap to themselves" have no authority to minister in the kingdom of God, or to preach the gospel of Christ, baptize into Christ, or otherwise officiate in the name of the Father, Son, or Holy Ghost; and any who are baptized under their calling and ministry need rebaptism before becoming heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ.

Only those "called of God as was Aaron" have power and authority to transplant from the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of light. These are definite and a unit in point of teaching, inasmuch as they "cannot go beyond the word of the Lord" "to do less or more," while those called by their own feelings, or the persuasion of friends, notwithstanding the many initials signifying titles of worldly honor, such as Rev., D. D., LL. D., B. A., M. A., Ph. B., etc., are only adding to the confusion already in the world, and as Paul says, "ever learning and never able to come to a knowledge of the truth," turning the ears of the people away from the truth unto fables. As the Lord said of the prophets living in the days of Jeremiah:

Behold, I am against them that prophesy false dreams, saith the Lord, and do tell them, and cause my people to err by their lies, and by their lightness; yet I sent them not, nor commanded them: therefore they shall not profit this people at all, saith the Lord.—Jer. 23: 32.

So can it be said of all "teachers" living at the present time who minister under a self-conceived call. Immediate revelation to the church as a body, God using an authorized agent as mouthpiece, separating one or more persons to either of the many offices in the priesthood is not now the belief or practice of the professing Christian church, consequently their ministry cannot be scripturally called or hold true priesthood, inasmuch as it comes through the very channel they deny and claim closed since the dawn of the second century. kind of revelation many profess a call under, is an inexplainable, incomprehensible something that kindles or encourages the feeling entertained for holy orders, attested later by the number of souls converted, etc.; but what a ghostly substitute for N w Testament species of revelation, through which men were called to the ministry, and to say they derive authority to preach, baptize, etc., from the commission given the twelve, "Go ye, therefore, and preach the gospel to every creature," is but a confession that God has not commissioned them directly, and to justify themselves in acting for Christ are forced to act on the commission of another, an illegitimate practice in any kind of a kingdom. The written word outlines God's dealings with men in successive ages, and is useful to us as an instructor in spiritual matters. It explains authority, where it comes from and how, etc.; but in no sense are we authorized to do any particular work God required of others, only as we are included, and I think, from the little I know of the sacred book, that it would puzzle the several grades of reverends, doctors, and bachelors of divinity, et al., to find where they are referred to as the servants of God to this age of the world.

Reader, there is great need for ministers of the holy word, but they need to be "called of God as was Aaron," otherwise they are a sham. God can speak today as readily as he did at any time in the past, and since our infallible instructor says none can "take the honor unto himself," he must speak to us as he did to the New Testament church, or else there are none to preach the gospel or baptize us into Christ and the promises. God has not refused to direct the affairs of the kingdom in our day, but if the professed divines would rather that he would not dictate, preferring to arrange matters to their own taste, and so allow them to heap up as many teachers as there are companies of people having the itching ears, willing to receive the "fables" instead of the "truth." If at any time the heavens became closed so that God no more revealed his mind and holy will, then from that very hour God ceased to authorize men as preachers of his word, or administrators of his law, and as soon as those previously authorized died off, the world would be without true priesthood; and that revelation from God did cease, is an admitted fact. On this account, in looking back a few decades, we see what has passed into history as dark ages, and of those ministering in spiritual blindness and wickedness, but professedly in the name of the Lord.

I ask, "By what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority?"

What shall be the response?

Will any Protestant ask me to believe the Roman Church had true priesthood? Our instructor reads, "He that is sent of God speaketh the words of God." Did the clergy of Rome, prior to the Reformation, "speak the words of God"? and I hear the whole Protestant world unhesitatingly answer, No. Then her ministry was not sent of God, and did not hold true priesthood, and as a church she had no authority to officiate in the name of Christ. The calling of men into the ministry necessarily ceased when revelation ceased, and as long as the heavens remained closed, there could not possibly be any God sent ministry; and if the heavens have not been opened, but remain closed to this day, as asserted by Catholic and Protestant, then I inquire of the Protestant clergy, "By what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority?" What authority has the Protestant ministry, above the priests of Catholicism, to preach the gospel and baptize? Will anyone ask me to believe that the Protestant church has true priesthood authority? If so, I would ask, Where and when did they get such priesthood? Were the heavens opened again, and men at that time and since "called of God as was Aaron?" If not, and I have yet to hear an intelligent supporter of the Reformation claim it, who gave them the authority they profess to have? It did not come from God; it could not without an immediate revelation of the New Testament kind, and the first reformers never received a communication of this character. Again, Did the first reformers receive any other ordination than the one that made them priests of the Romish Church? to the contrary; however, it seems as If not, they have no other authority.

and when we come to think Rome had no true priesthood to confer upon these men by the laying on of hands in ordination, but for the moment allow that she had, when they proved incorrigible, the Catholic Church withdrew all she ever conferred, and pronounced an anathema upon them, which would divest them of Romish authority, even. The Protestant church has blessed the world in some respects, granting liberty of conscience, etc.; but in other respects is working to obliterate the little light reflected from Catholicism. So far as the question of authority is concerned, one has as much right as the other, but to speak truthfully and to the point, neither one has true priesthood authority, and therefore no right whatever to preach the blessed gospel, baptize, or in any way officiate in the sacred name of Jesus Christ. What they have is priestcraft, and as a result, both are priestridden; one having to support a ministry that fares sumptuously every day, the other an enormous horde of greedy hirelings, who, for filthy lucre's sake (of which they seemingly never get enough), interpret the holy word to suit the "itching ears" of the people.

I am aware that I speak plainly, but for all, I have no smooth apology to offer, believing myself and all others are justified in sounding the tocsin of alarm, warning the people of imminent danger from priestly hands; not, however, with the intentions of wounding the feelings of the tender and upright, but with a view to "render unto Cæsar the the things that are Cæsar's, and unto God the things that are God's," and at the same time believing it improper and unbecoming a servant of Christ to cry, Peace, when there is no peace. This brief exegesis of so important a topic is concluded with the following recount:

1. Authority, or legality of administration, is the true basis of all action, civil or religious.

2. True priesthood authority is necessary to the preaching of the gospel of Christ, baptizing, and otherwise administering its holy ordinances.

3. This authority or call to officiate in the ministry of Jesus Christ is not within the power of man to grant, but is exclusively reserved unto the Lord, he to call whomsoever he will.

4. This authority cannot be legally assumed only by revelation through another. "No man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron."

5. All who held priesthood in the Christian church of the first few centuries were scripturally authorized; the "twelve" and "seventy," by the Lord in person; the ones holding priesthood after our Lord's ascension being called by open revelation—not a silent whispering.

6. The men holding this true priest-hood were as a rule illiterate, "unlearned and ignorant men," poor but humble, "despised" by the people generally; counted as "weak" and "foolish."

7. In process of time the heavens where shut up and revelation ceased, which necessarily shut off the scriptural call of men into the ministry.

8. Some time previous to this, people refused to "endure sound doctrine," which was the cause of the heavens closing, and from that time on heaped to themselves teachers having itching ears who turned away from the truth unto fables.

9. The world became emptied of the God sent ministry, and filled with a manmade, or self appointed clergy; in consequence of which, darkness covered the earth and gross darkness the minds of the people—the condition of the world in the Dark Ages and at the time of the Reformation.

10. The Catholic clergy had no true priesthood at the time the reformers broke faith with the mother church, consequently could not confer any.

consequently could not confer any.
11. The first reformers received ordination in the Romish Church, but were excommunicated and anathematized, hence lost whatever that ordination conferred.

12. The heavens being closed, and remaining so till this day, as asserted by Catholic and Protestant, these first reformers could not possibly be "called of God, as was Aaron." Their following at no time since have claimed a call by revelation for these men. They believe God moved upon them to better the condition of things (which is the duty of all men at any time or place, outside of priesthood); but this was no authority for the organization and setting up of different churches, or the promulgation of contrary teaching.

13. The Protestant clergy have no more authority to preach or baptize than the Catholic, and the Catholic has none at all. No one for a moment would recognize a heathen (or tramp for that matter), making no profession of religion whatever, if he should offer his services as a preacher of the gospel, or as an administrator of the ordinance of water baptism, yet he has as much authority to say, "I baptize thee in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost," as any Archbishop, Protestant, or Catholic, and would be as much baptized into Christ.

14. Men may, and have, subjected themselves to educational institutions, and by laborous effort proved worthy of all honors such institutions give; but though they merit the title of reverend, doctor, or bachelor of divinity, doctor of laws, doctor of philosophy, master or bachelor of arts, etc., yet these honors are the endowments of an earthly institution, humanly conceived, organized, and conducted, and of themselves confer no authority to officiate in the name of Christ in any capacity. The right or authority to officiate in the sacred name of Jesus Christ is in the "call" which exists independent of all worldly scholastic attainments, being an open revelation from the God of heaven; moreover, these titles so much coveted are not scriptural in any sense.

15. Our world today is filled with a false ministry; men who preach "for hire" and "divine for money," teaching things which they ought not for filthy lucre's sake, at the same time believing, "Is not the Lord among us? none evil can come upon us." (Micah 3:11).

Those that have light should not hide it under a bushel, but let it shine clear and bright as a beacon light to some poor wandering soul struggling to escape the darkness that has come upon the world because of our forefathers, so long ago, having turned away from the truth unto fables. Let us press the questions: "by what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority?" until the cunning work of the adversary in this respect has been fully exposed. Our mission as the ministry of the Reorganized Church will then be one of honor to us and acceptable to God. CARBERRY, Manitoba, January 10.

WITHDRAWING FROM THE CHURCH.

Whether any "person's name should be stricken from the church records until specific charges have been preferred, . . . and lawful action had in the case," is not now my privilege or purpose to discuss. This matter was decided by the church in General Conference capacity, at Stewartsville, Missouri, in April, 1884, in the following resolution:

"Resolved, That in the opinion of this council, no person's name should be stricken from the church records until specific charges have been preferred against them, and lawful action had in the case, and that the cause or causes of action and expulsion should be stated upon the church record."—HERALD for May 10, 1884, page 299.

As I understand it, this resolution is binding until repealed, or until a later and contrary action is had by the same body.

It will be seen that the resolution does not necessarily require that the charge of apostasy be made. The charges, in every case, should represent the exact truth, as nearly as possible, and the reasons for such method of dealing by the church should be carefully and kindly explained. There is not one thing in the resolution which requires hasty action, or prevents all the time and leniency that each case may demand. Indeed one purpose of the resolution as I understood it at the time it was presented to the Quorum of Twelve was to prevent hasty and rash action. I think when the body adopted the resolution it so understood it. However, the material question is this: If the body will not change this rule of action, has anyone else the right to do so?

Whatever you set about, be in earnest. If you are making your toilet, be intent upon the matter, and think of it as the important event of the day until it is completed.

Then turn your forces in other directions, just as a ship turns its searchlight first here, then there, illuminating the course it pursues.

So many of us are shilly shallying along life in these days.

We do nothing seriously.

We are in earnest about nothing. We all want to be multi-millionaries, and we are looking for sudden and quick methods of success.

By success we mean accumulating a

THE ZIONIST MOVEMENT.

Los Angeles, Cal., June 29, 1901.

Editors Herald:—I went to the Temple B'nai B'rith last night. The attraction was a lecture by Rabbi Voorsanger of San Francisco. His theme, "Zionism." The Rabbi is an elequent, well-informed man, and presented his subject admirably. I did not agree with all he said, however.

While calling himself a Zionist and expressing a desire to see the Jewish people realize their every hope he showed the utter impossibility under ordinary and natural conditions of ever making the Zionist dream a reality, and in this I quite agree with him.

The Rabbi very feelingly portrayed the suffering and injustice heaped upon the Jew throughout the civilized world in the past centuries. He arraigned the governments of Germany, Russia, and France and showed the utter hopelessness of the Jewish people ever coming to the front in the countries named. He stated that in order for a Jew to become anybody in Germany he would have to become a rascal and traitor to everything he holds dear; his God, his mother, and his religion; whilst a few drops of holy water sprinkled upon his head would change the whole situation. A rascally, traitorous Jew with a few drops of water on his head was valued more than an honest and conscientious one in Germany. This is in harmony with a recent article which appeared in the Preussische Jahrbucher (Berlin) as follows:

"Political equality is granted to the Jew in theory, but in practice it is not fully given. Social equality is often denied, and it must be admitted that only a fraction of the Jews are ripe for a perfect union with the rest of the people. Not at all fit for such a union are the mass of orthodox Jews. Our cause has retrogressed of late. We are no longer permitted to become army officers in Prussia. A few of the smaller states deny government positions to Jews altogether. This sort of thing embitters, but it is a situation that cannot last. More important is the social boycott. Very many clubs and associations nowadays refuse us membership. Among the upper classes good manners forbid such rough denials, but even here we do not get beyond commonplace civilities. In such circles marriage with Jews is counted impossible; even wealth can not overcome the obstacles to it. But all this feeling changes when the Jew is baptized. The state drops its objections, and society willingly opens its doors to the convert. Now as the baptism is generally sought for reasons other than those due to religious conviction, one would say that the Jew, in order to become an equal, must show himself to be a rascal without character; and his explanation is preposterous."

This writer then asks: "But what shall we do? Are we to found a new Jewish-Christian sect in which Christ is recognized as man only? That would only separate us again, and we are tired, so very tired, of separation. Back into Jewdom we will not go; into the German nation we cannot go. The terrible cry of our forefathers is still fulfilled in us, 'His blood be upon us and our children.'

"Our children: Why should we transmit the curse to them? Why should they suffer for a cause which is no longer anything to us? I have it: If we find in Christianity the true religion with the exception of a single doctrine that has lost its force, then we must not educate our children as Jews. The piece of paper which hinders us does not exist for our children. Let them take part in the great spiritual battle which is being fought out in the ranks of Christianity. Ours was the prophet who destroyed the law and taught eternal love. Let the wandering Jew die. Let our children become Christians."

This writer does not agree with Rabbi Voorsanger as to the correction of the evils which harass the Jews, but he represents their conditions similar.

The Rabbi spoke in commendable terms of the laudable, self-sacrificing efforts of benevolent Jews to establish an ideal commonwealth in Palestine where they would be free from interference and protected by the governments of Europe and the United States. His objections were:

First, Palestine is only about one sixteenth the area of California and not so large as some of our counties. Under the most favorable conditions it was not capable of supporting more than three million inhabitants. There are eleven million Jews in the world today. How are you going to transport them over there and give them a livelihood in a country only capable of supporting less than a third thereof?

Again, the fertile lands of Palestine are largely covered with desert sands accumulating during the past 1900 years to the depth in some places of over forty feet.

Then again he stated that the water was growing scarce; that several rivers have already disappeared, and that the Jordan for the most part of the year was like our Los Angeles river—a river only in name.

From a conservative estimate it will cost two hundred billions of dollars to make Palestine a fruit bearing country. Where is the money to come from? The Jews do not have it as they are largely a poor people. How can you transport five million Russian Jews? Say you take five hundred thousand a year. and this would cost millions of dollars, what effect would it have on the Jews in Russia? The increase by births would more than offset the number transported. Palestine today is no country for an enterprising man. It is no country for our children. It is no country for an unhappy man. The Zionist movement is broken up into camps. The Jews always are that way. One part is called Political Zionism and the other Spiritual Zionism.

A government of Jews by Jews for Jews, and with Jews would be a very dangerous institution. The Jew never has been able to govern himself. We hear a great deal about Solomon but there was very little in his reign that was commendable. The Jew is no statesman. He is a poet, a musician, an artist, a merchant, anything but a statesman.

He could not go back to Palestine and govern himself. We never want to go back. We must be scattered among the nations and be their heart, pumping our heart's blood into theirs.

I do not wish to see the "Lion of the tribe of Judah" run off to some remote country like a whipped cur. We do not want the Christian to pat us on the back and say, "Go, good fellow, to your own country and we will help you off." Let us remain where we are. I talked to an enthusiastic Zionist and asked him if he believed in religious liberty. He answered me, yes. Then I asked him if we were to go back to Palestine and establish an independent government and a Christian would keep his shop open on Saturday would you permit it, and he answered, no. I asked him if a Jew would refuse to close his shop on Saturday would you compel him to do so? His answer was yes. So you see there would be no religious liberty there.

Thus reasoned this learned Rabbi. I could not help but think of some old Jewish prophecies and their relation to this question.

Isaiah said: "And there shall come forth a rod out of the stem of Jesse, and a branch shall grow out of his roots: and the Spirit of the Lord shall rest upon him, the spirit of wisdom and understanding, the spirit of counsel and might, the spirit of knowledge and of the fear of the Lord; and shall make him of quick understanding in the fear of the Lord: and he shall not judge after the sight of his eyes, neither reprove after the hearing of his ears: but with righteousness shall he judge the poor, and reprove with equity for the meek of the earth: and he shall smite the earth with the rod of his mouth, and with the breath of his lips shall he slay the wicked. And righteousness shall be the girdle of his loins, and faithfulness the girdle of his reins. The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. And the cow and the bear shall feed; their young ones shall lie down together: and the lion shall eat straw like the ox. And the sucking child shall play on the hole of the asp, and the weaned child shall put his hand on the cockatrice' den. They shall not hurt nor destory in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea. And in that day there shall be a root of Jesse, which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek: and his rest shall be glorious. And it shall come to pass in that day, that the Lord shall set his hand again the second time to recover the remnant of his people, which shall be left, from Assyria, and from Egypt, and from Pathros, and from Cush, and from Elam, and from Shinar, and from Hamath, and from the islands of the sea. And he shall set up an ensign for the nations, and shall assemble the outcasts of Israel, and gather together the dispersed of Judah from the four corners of the earth."-Isaiah 11: 1-12.

He tells us how this is to be done: "And the sons of strangers shall build up thy walls, and their kings shall minister unto thee: for in my wrath I smote thee, but in my favor have I had mercy on thee. Therefore thy gates shall be open continually; they shall not be shut day nor night; that men may bring unto thee the forces of the Gentiles, and that their kings may be brought.... The glory of Lebanon shall come unto thee, the fir tree, the pine tree, and the box together, to beautify the place of my sanctuary; and I will make the place of my feet glorious.—Isaiah 60:10-13.

Again: "And they shall build the old wastes, they shall raise up the former desolations, and they shall repair the waste cities, the desolation of many generations."—Isaiah 61:4.

Jeremiah speaking of this matter said, "At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord; and all the nations shall be gathered unto it, to the name of the Lord, to Jerusalem: neither shall they walk any more after the imagination of their evil heart. In those days the house of Judah shall walk with the house of Israel."—Jeremiah 3:17, 18.

Also, "Thus saith the Lord; Behold, I will bring again the captivity of Jacob's tents, and have mercy on his dwelling places; and the city shall be builded upon her own heap, and the palace shall remain after the manner thereof."—Jeremiah 30: 18.

Ezekiel forecasting this event said: "Thus saith the Lord God; Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land: and I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king to them all: and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all."—Ezekiel 37: 21, 22.

Joel says: "The Lord also shall roar out of Zion, and utter his voice from Jerusalem; and the heavens and the earth shall shake: but the Lord will be the hope of his people, and the strength of the children of Israel. So shall ye know that I am the Lord your God dwelling in Zion, my holy mountain: then shall Jerusalem be holy, and there shall be no strangers pass through her any more."—Joel 3:16, 17.

And as to the sands of the desert destroying the land, Ezekiel says: "And they shall say, This land that was desolate is become like the garden of Eden; and the waste and desolate and ruined cities are become fenced, and are inhabited."—Ezekiel 36:35.

The Prophet Amos has this contribution: "Behold, the days come, saith the Lord, that the plowman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth the seed: and the mountains shall drop sweet wine, and all the hills shall melt. And I will bring again the captivity of my people of Israel, and they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens, and eat the fruit of them."—Amos 9: 13, 14.

If the learned Rabbi would study the twenty-ninth chapter of Isaiah wherein is clearly outlined the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, he would discover that shortly after the coming forth of this book, "Is it not yet a very little while, and Lebanon shall be turned into a fruitful field, and the fruitful field shall be esteemed as a forest?"

This restoration of the land of Israel and the associate events connected therewith are not the machinations of men but the inexorable workings of a divine purpose; and, though it may seem unnatural and impossible to the human mind, God in his own way and time can easily effect his purpose. Let us as modern Israel see to it that we keep step with the procession so we can fill the mission assigned to us in this great divine drama.

Yours with faith in the gathering of Israel, T. W. WILLIAMS.

Editors Herald:-While many thousands in different parts of our country spend the day midst the noise and roar of cannon and speech, no such sounds greet the ear of the writer here on the broad, dry plains of the Pan Handle of Texas. But while others rejoice in the celebration of our country's independence, the writer passes the day under the friendly shade and roof of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Ewing, our cheeks fanned by the hot winds from the southwest, burning and scorching as they pass, till the cool shades of evening begin to close around us. Then in company with only a brother and son to witness the beautiful likeness of the burial and resurrection of our Lord we wend our way to a lonely pool, and on its grassy banks bow and ask God to witness and recognize the administration and induction of two honest souls into his kingdom, Bro. and Sr. J. A. Ewing. We confirm them and leave them in God's hands to lead and guide by his Holy Spirit, praying that peace and success may attend them in all righteousness. We leave them to go to other points, hoping to find other sheep who will hear his voice and obey.

Praying God's blessing upon all the builders of Zion, I am, Yours in bonds,

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 8.

Dear Saints:—I wish to speak to and for that corps of very faithful and diligent church workers, the branch and district clerks. As one of them for the past two years I feel that I am in a position to defend them and to suggest means whereby their burdens may be made lighter and their work made more convenient for them

As all doubtless know that this office is one of the most important in the church, the members holding the office of clerk should be honored in that position and should be made to feel that their work at all times is appreciated.

While there may be many ways by which we could assist our clerks and secretaries, there are some that are so very simple and common that most people fail to see them and therefore do not take advantage of them. And in my work I have found that it is usually the ministers who overlook the chances to help the clerks.

In almost all our districts those holding the priesthood are expected to make a written report of their labors to the district conference, and of course it is the district clerk's duty to read these reports to the conference: and if they are handed to him on the day the conference convenes, or, as has often been the case, while conference is in session, it is then unfair to expect the clerk to be able to get up and read these reports just as readily and as clearly as if he had received them a few days before. Strange writing is always more or less difficult to read at first sight; and when we consider that a large number of our ministers are not well-educated men and consequently are not very good writers we can readily see that this task is a very trying one for even the most experienced clerk.

This difficulty can be remedied very easily by those who report to conference mailing their reports to the district secretary about a week ahead of time. By doing this the clerk would have time to familiarize himself with the different reports and he would also have an opportunity to arrange the reports in a systematic and consecutive manner, so that he could read those of the higher priesthood first and so on down. This may seem a very small matter to all who do the reporting, but to the secretaries it is very annoying to say the least, and if the measure suggested here be followed I am sure a large number of clerks will appreciate it.

Another matter is the introduction of long motions into the conference. The secretary is always very busy, and when some one arises and presents a long motion to the conference, before the secretary can get one half of it written it is seconded and perhaps an amendment is added to it and a substitute offered when the clerk is called upon to read the motion, amendment, and substitute; and if he should fail to get these three resolutions exactly as they are given he is then censured by some who seem to think he ought to be a model of speed and accuracy. All of this trouble could be avoided if the presiding officer would announce that all lengthy motion should be written.

I am not complaining, but am simply stating facts as I have found them, and I believe that business is conducted in our stake as well as it is anywhere else in the church and in about the same manner.

Now a word to branch clerks about their reports to conference. In making out your statistical reports, always do so with pen and ink. Write clearly and distinctly and make all of your letters plain. This should be observed especially in making the letters u and n and n and n as they are made almost exactly alike by some people. Be careful in copying the record matter and always give the full name of the individual if possible. Never give the initials to all given names.

I would also suggest that you use no ditto marks when writing dates, as it is much better for the district clerks when the date is written out, and it does not take the branch clerk much longer to do it.

I wish the readers to understand that I am not taking these means to indirectly find fault with the branch clerks in the Independence Stake, for such is not the case; because all of our branch clerks that I have communicated with at any time have always been very kind and willing to do what they could to assist me, and we have a very faithful and efficient corps of branch clerks in this stake.

Hoping that these lines will offend no one. and that all who may be interested in assisting their clerks and secretaries will heed some of the things contained herein, I remain, Yours for the good of the cause, D. Rob't. Winn.

CALDWELL, Idaho, July 5.

Saints' Herald:-I was at Langworthy, Iowa, when I last wrote to the HERALD. After a pleasant and profitable season among relatives and Saints in those parts, I found myself at Ogden, Utah, again early in the morning of the 1st of June. Called at Bro. Wells Chase's, 1509 Washington avenue, and after breakfast and pleasant chat with them, a look through the new chapel built last summer and for which, with them, I feel thankful to the Master, not forgetting the tireless staying qualities of Sr. J. D. Cooper and others who have so nobly worked together till we can well say, What hath God and the Saints wrought for the upbuilding of the Lord's work in Ogden! Persistence in well-doing is well pleasing to the Lord, and without this diligence and zeal little is accomplished in either temporal or spiritual things. I do earnestly pray the Lord to send more earnest laborers in his vineyard, who will loyally heed the injunction to "seek first to build up the kingdom of God and establish his righteousness," with perfect assurance that all things shall work together for good to those who truly love God and his work, or who will show their faith by their works. "By their fruits ye shall know them," who "are my disciples indeed." How long will we be in learning that all who have entered into covenant with the Lord are expected to be bright and shining lights to the world, to be the salt of the world, as a dew from the Lord, and have an errand from the Lord, and that he looks on all we do with sleepless eyes.

Well, about two p. m., June 1, I went down to my son's home, Salt Lake City, meeting with the Saints in their services on Sunday the 2d. On the eve of the 4th left for Logan, Utah, where I met Bro. S. D. Condit and family, also Bro. A. J. Layland with his team and mountain spring wagon preparing to go over to Malad City, Idaho, to the Idaho district conference on the 8th and 9th. Leaving Logan on the 6th together we came through Smithfield, where Sr. Pettit lives; and as she was quite ill, we administered to her, and offered what encouragement words of kindness conveyed.

Going on westerly to Weston, we stayed over night and held meeting provided for by Bro. Condit. Quite a congregation listened very attentively to what was said, and after meeting was dismissed we listened, and tried to get them to listen to us; but from appearances they had the floor, for a goodly number of them wanted to be heard at the same time. However, all passed off pleasantly, or at least on our part.

After conference, which passed pleasantly, by persuasion, or by pressing, Bro. Layland was induced to take a trip west as far as Hagerman, Idaho,-Brn. D. W. Wight, S. D. Condit and I going via Malta, Albion, Shoshone Falls, and Perine's Blue Lake fruit farm. Stopping at Malta on Saturday, 15th, we learned our approach had been heralded in advance as a segment of Coxie's army. Held two meetings here next day, Sunday. On the 17th Bro. Layland drove over to Albion, leaving Bro. Condit on Cannon creek, where Bro. Layland joined him next day, to remind them and the Elba brethren and sisters that the Josephites were still agitating. Bro. D. W. Wight and I occupied in the M. E. church at night, and Sunday eve Bro. Wight gave the Rocky Mountain Saints a few wholesome thoughts in their church house, three miles southwest of Albion. They came out nicely and by request furnished the choir and opened the meeting. All passed very pleasantly. May the Lord move for the "binding up of the breach of his people," then there shall soon be one fold, and one shepherd, and his name one in all the earth.

We did not have a good turnout of Albion people, for some cause,—the poorest I ever saw. The time did not seem propitious. I had the pleasure, though, of baptizing two of my children, and hearing others say, "Pa, I am going to be baptized, too." This was very sweet to my ears.

A week passed here all too quickly. Tuesday, 25th, we left Albion, again westward bound. About ten a. m. Wednesday we came in sight of Shoshone Falls. Bro. Wight, I dare say, will give his opinion of this wonder of Idaho. However, we put in two or three hours here very pleasantly, then exchanged $1.50 with the ferryman for passage for our party over to the north side of the Snake. We wended our way downward to Blue Lake fruit farm. Found Mr. Perine at home and kindly he showed us around among his trees. and to his sweet cherries under which we loitered and sampled as we pleased. All agreed the cherries were good; and they were, indeed. Had a look at the prune tree from which was gathered the fruit that took first prize at the Paris Exposition. After an invitation to call again, we started on down toward Hagerman, which we reached next day at noon. Here we stopped over the Lord's day, holding several meetings; but the time seemed not opportune for our message, judging from appearances. The Saints were hospitable, and seem to feel the need of the refreshing from the presence of the Lord, which can only be realized by a closer walk with God. May we who profess to be Saints cast off all the fetters, break every bond and be free indeed in the light and liberty of the Spirit of Christ; for "as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God," -an all-important lesson for would-be Saints to learn, even if it be learned by the things we suffer. The sooner we learn it the better for us, and the world to whom we are to be examples, or lights. Holy in all manner of conversation. "There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh but after the Spirit."

way as far as Bliss, on the O. & L., on the morning of the 2d inst. where D. W. Wight and I said good-bye to our companions and team, when they started eastward via Wood river, Lost river, and Blackfoot, Idaho. Caldwell is one hundred and seventeen miles west of Bliss. We expect to do what we can here, holding meetings in Armory hall, and go on to Wiser and Middle Valley, Washington county, after Sunday the 7th.

The Fourth was not celebrated here, except by the fire cracker style, as Nampa and Boise City rather took precedence yesterday. When we think of this our own native land, "the land of the free, and the home of the brave," I think many do not realize how truly free we are. A land of liberty, indeed! I often look up and bless the Lord of all the earth for the liberty and freedom I can see under our laws, and the gospel law of perfect liberty. If we are free to keep the laws which God has given to us whereby we may be perfected in holiness, and walk with God without hindrance, what greater freedom or liberty can we have, or what more do we want? Can there be greater freedom or liberty than the Spirit of Christ gives, and as set forth in the law of Christ? Is there a law on the statutes of our land which will har us from being sanctified by the law of Christ? (D. C. 85: 5.) Not that I know of. Then if we as individuals wish to enjoy the fullest freedom, the door is wide open before us,-all of us. It is only when we are not able, because bound by the fetters of sin, to step up with each privilege granted by that same law of Christ that we run against the snags and thorns. "The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance; against such there is no law." What but our own lusts prevent us all from bearing this fruit in its beauty? This is the freedom we enjoy in Christ and which is guaranteed by the law of our land. Saints of the Lord, I am only an integer in the army of the Lord; but as the Lord liveth, who has shown me the way of life, and directed my steps "out of darkness into light," I can only say there is far more liberty and freedom before our eyes than very many seem able to see. Blindness in part is affecting latter-day Israel. Christ turns on the X-rays for us to see the beauties along the way of holiness; but if we see more pleasure and beauty in the lowlands of folly, and we look with longing eyes for the leeks and onions of Egypt, we become a source of weakness to those who are weak, instead of a tower of strength. To every man or woman who is merging out of their childhood's sphere in the gospel school, though all the world called them cranks or mad, what they hear, see, or feel in every fiber of their being to be the power and virtue of the Spirit of Christ, is to them no longer a dream of that longed for, but a bright, precious reality-a fountain of life to them. They can well afford to laugh with delight at the success their own earnest, faithful, perseverance in love, which heed not all the opposing powers or persuasions of carnality. Those who study well what is noted in the Scriptures of truth, with the fixed reliance on God for wisdom Brn. Layland and Condit brought us on our ' and strength if they keep faithfully at it, will sooner or later touch the secret spring which reveals the secret of the Lord. Then no more doubts exist as to the existence of the Tree of Life, and the sweetness of its fruit.

The words of our Master tell unwittingly where our grade is in the gospel school, and those of the same grade are best fitted for association with each other. As Paul says, consider what I say, and the Lord give thee understanding. Whatever others may do, I have set my heart to prove the possibilities of man for myself, and to learn for myself what it is that bespeaks the power of God. What the Father of light reserved for those who by patience in well doing, seek the capital prize, for those who strive lawfully or in spirit and in truth.

In this, the land of the free, politically, morally, and spiritually, well might the Spirit say, "Come up higher." "The Spirit and the bride say, Come, and let him that heareth say, Come, and let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely." Blessed freedom.

Yours for Zion's weal,

CHARLES ALBERTSON.

SAN BENITO, Cal., July 3.

Editors Herald:-We are nearing the end not only of our natural lives, but also the end of the world's history. Yes, we are at the outer door of our eternal home, soon to enter and be forever with the Lord. Soon we shall see the King in his beauty. Blessed thought! Let us keep this truth ever before our minds, and do all we can to hasten in the glorious event, by living individually with an eye single to the glory of God. This is only possible to those who are really consecrated to Christ. In this matter there is no halfway work. St. Paul exhorts us to present our bodies a living sacrifice to God, which is but reasonable service. I believe God cares very little for anything we may do for him if we have not first obeyed the gospel and made a full surrender of our hearts to him. Of course he will reward even a cup of cold water given in his name.

It is often much easier to do some helpful and pleasant church work for the Master than to break our stubborn wills and bow our hearts to him, but he requires us to lay all upon the sacrificial altar; then just as soon as we yield ourselves to the influences of the Holy Spirit and do his heavenly will he gives us the sweet assurance that we are accepted of him, and we are filled with a peace and joy the world knows not of, the beacon light of faith and hope illuminating our hearts and guiding us through the storms and darkness of life. Then let us walk in the light, not turning aside like children to play by the wayside; but with an eye fixed on the prize before us, press on. Let us not be given to unkind criticism of our neighbor's shortcomings, but in love and Christian charity bear with one another. There are slanders and backbiting in our midst, on every hand, even among those who call themselves Christians. Let it not be the same with the Saints who have put on the whole armor of Christ, for if our hearts are filled with his love there will be no room for selfish or evil nations coming to keep him company, was thoughts. We are not our own, but have been bought by the precious blood of Christ.

It is not always easy to love our enemies, I will admit; but it is godlike to do so, it is the love that our Lord showed towards us; for while we were yet sinners Christ died for us that he might bring us to God. How often we hear it said of some one speaking of another. Well, if he is a Christian I do not want to be one; and in that way they are driven from God. Not that it is an excuse for their not being Christians, for one is our pattern even Christ, but as "we are his epistles known and read of all men" our conduct will either retard or advance his kingdom on the earth; therefore we should rightly measure our influence upon others, and strive to live with a conscience void of offense toward all, and thus be ready for the sound of the trump of God and the glorious appearing of the heavenly host.

How much his coming means to us waiting souls! It means immortality and life, instead of sickness, sorrow, and death. It means reunion with loved ones gone before. It means hearing for the deaf, speech for the dumb. It means sweet rest for the burdened ones. Yea, it means peace and joy for the redeemed for evermore. Then we shall enter into our everlasting inheritance and be like our Lord, for we shall see him as he is. Then, dear Saints, struggle on in hope a little longer, for behold he comes in clouds, and every eye shall see him. Even so; come, Lord Jesus! Amen.

IANTHA B. STILLWAGON.

PALERMO, New York, July 9.

Editors Herald:-We extended the parting hand to loved ones at home on June 26, and joined Bro. Wm. H. Kelley at Toledo, Ohio, from whence we came to Cleveland. While there we occupied one evening in the tent on Euclid avenue. In company with Elder La Rue we came into this part of the Lord's vineyard, where we have occupied for ten days, to very fair audiences. The busy haying season doesn't lend much vim to the rural population to attend services at night. Yet we cannot complain, for attendance has been fair in the main. Engaging a Baptist representative in debate, he was willing (?) to ventilate the issues "as long as interest demanded," when on the close of first evening he informed me he could not debate longer than the following evening. This was disappointing to all. We continued right along, however, airing the themes couched in the propositions. Some evenings the reverend gentleman was an auditor. He publicly admitted I was called of God to preach. Maybe his conscience forbids him to oppose the message. "Peradventure God will give him repentance to the acknowledging of the truth," for he recognizes the divinity of a great portion of the latter-day work. The application of one portion of Scripture by him is somewhat novel. The location of "hell," "pit," or "prison," by Ezekiel in the 32d chapter, in the "nether parts of the earth," where Pharaoh was to be "comforted," at the prospect of other "wicked" interpreted by this Baptist man to mean the preaching, the rise, and progress of religion in the Netherlands. He did not inform us whether it was the New Netherlands (New York) or the United Netherlands (Republic of Holland). But in either place, of course, old Pharaoh was not there, and other religious nations were there, "brought down to the sides of the pit" in the Netherlands! A wise man has said, "There's nothing new under the sun." Doubtiess this application was not known in his day. It is new to us. "The strong among the mighty shall speak to him out of the midst of hell," not the Neth-Jesus "descended below," and erlands. "preached to spirits in prison," not the Netherlands. "For this cause was the gospel preached to them that are dead," not alive in New York, or the Republic composed of Denmark, Holland, and Belgium.

The Saints at this point are anxious for the success of the work. They are kind and good. Worthy are they of more attention in a gospel sense than they receive. Unsavory leaven at work here causes them to be sad and somewhat discouraged. But a brighter day will dawn for them. The cloud is silver lined. Light after darkness. Blessing after tribulation. Somehow it requires trials to properly value our faith and appreciate its divinity to brighten, purify, and save.

We have been cared for by Bro. and Sr. Loomis, who reflect, indeed, the true and good. Sermons they preach, by life work, louder than thunder, that will tell for triumph "when the mists have cleared away."

The Brethren Whitehead and companions, with the Sisters Hills, Marshall, Furney, and others stand to push on the work. Sr. Trimble manifests interest, and she and Sr. Loomis fill the atmosphere with sacred song.

Bro. La Rue is rising, possesses the elements of safe representation. Is cautious and devoted to the Lord's work. He goes to Greenwood this week.

An intense interest prevails among a few here. I trust the hearts of our brethren and sisters will be caused to rejoice by the increase of members and the lifting high the cause. But God works with his people only to that extent they are willing to permit him, by faithfulness and devotion to duty.

> Hopefully yours, S. W. L. SCOTT.

FOREST, Ontario, July 8.

Editors Herald:-Forest is a place of about two thousand population, and is situated about four miles from the foot of Lake Huron on the main line of the Grand Trunk railroad, which runs from Chicago to the Atlantic ocean. Elder Barmore and the writer having been appointed to labor together in the tent in this western district, are about to pitch it in this place. The writer came here last Saturday and Elder Barmore is expected in less than two hours, from Wallaceburg, where he remained over Sunday enroute.

There are only four Saints here, who seem devoted and rejoiced exceedingly at the prospect of an opening. They seem willing to sustain us and to do what they can to encourage accessions and further the interests of the work while we remain. We look forward to a prosperous campaign. Considering the amount of preaching that has been done here and the length of time that has elapsed since there has been any preaching, it is practically new ground. Judging from observation we have no doubt but what there will be considerable opposition, in which case you will be likely to hear from us later on.

At the Rou Dean we made a reasonable effort to plant the good seed of the kingdom, which has not as yet manifested itself in the form we sought.

I am glad to be settled again and to get down to business. Traveling is a cause of agitation and does not afford me enough solitude to keep within the limits of where I am wont to go.

Opposition or otherwise we are resolved upon doing the best we can while here. For my part I have an undying fondness of the controversial aspect of our work, and my studies are largely along that line.

ALVIN KNISLEY.

JOPLIN, Mo., July 9.

Editors Herald:-My debate at Central City closed with good effects upon the people. A. Corlin, my opponent, quit one night short of the time agreed on. The debate was to last ten sessions, but the Missionary Baptist seemed to want the debate to close, and it did on the ninth session. Our people are feeling well over it, and say much good was done.

Bro. F. C. Keck is with me. We are holding tent meetings in Joplin. on Third street. Opened up last night. We have a nice large tent which is well seated and furnished, but we can only try.

The Saints at Joplin (Blendsville) are doing all they can to assist in the work here, and are anxious to see the great work move forward.

We are having very dry and extremely hot weather. Everything is in a suffering condition for rain.

We are anticipating a good reunion at Berry's Ferry, near Fairland, Indian Territory, August 16 to 26. We aim to do all the preaching we can until the reunion.

In bonds,

GRANADA, Colo., July 10.

Editors Herald:-I entered the missionary field again shortly after General Conference, and have been very busy. I remained at Denver a week and then went to Cheyenne, Wyoming, and tried to tell the people the gospel story. I got permission to preach in the courthouse, but the people were all willing to let me have my own way by staying at home. Something else had to be done. I was alone and by nature somewhat timid. I finally mustered up enough courage to go out on a street corner and try to preach. I am not a singer, hence to try to sing on the streets alone was in my mind quite a task. I made the effort, and now, after forty-five sermons on the streets of Cheyenne, I can say, as did the prophets of old, "Lord, who hath believed our report." I had large love ourselves with all our hearts and the crowds and good attention, but so far as I am able to discern, it was like pouring water on a duck's back; yet I hope it may be as seed sown in the sand of time.

July 3, I went to Niwot and there met a small isolated band of Saints. (Brn. A. A. Hutchins and John Boyd and their families.) I assisted Bro. Hutchins to pitch hay a few days, for exercise. I also got permission to preach in the Niwot Grange hall Sunday eve. I was happily disappointed by having a large crowd; and best of all, the United Brethren minister, who had taken the pains in the past to lecture on Mormonism and Joseph Smith, rang his church bell three times and succeeded in getting one man to come and hear him, so he dismissed his congregation and came and heard me preach. It is a farming country there, and the people are so busy that it would be inconsistent to ask them to come to church on other days than

About this time I received a card from Bro. Roush asking me to join Bro. Hanson at Granada. I arrived at Denver the 8th inst., and during my stay made a few short calls among the Saints, and at three o'clock and twenty minutes a. m., I started to join Bro. Hanson. I found him alone with the tent, doing all he could to get the gospel message before the people. We are having small audiences, and what the results may be I am not prepared to say. We will sow the seed and trust to "Him that doeth all things well" for the results. We expect to move our tent to Holly in a few days, and perhaps on down the line to another town or two, and then to Colorado Springs for conference, August 17 and 18. Your colaborer,

J. B. WILDERMUTH.

OAKLAND, Cal., July 8.

Editors Herald:-The scattered membership in this district are likely anxious to know of the progress of the work in their district, hence this letter. Bro. Keeler and wife are operating one tent at East Berkeley and Brn. Phillips and Schmidt are in charge of the other one, in the vicinity of Sacramento. We had so many calls for the tent that we thought it best to put a second one in the field, which we did at an expense of about $25.00. Bro. Keeler has baptized eight in his work lately, and others are interested and investigating. The Saints have been very kind and thoughtful, not forgetting that there is a physical as well as spiritual man in the makeup of a preacher. Bro. Ed Schmidt was associated with Bro. Keeler until lately. Sr. Bertha Peat has shown her interest in the cause of the Lord by being present every night to preside at the organ. Surely our young sisters can do much good by assisting the missionary in this way. Sr. Keeler is proving a good missionary and is an able helper in tent work. She makes her home in the tent with Bro. Keeler, thus manifesting that her love for the Lord's work is sufficient to enable her to put up with the inconveniences of such a life.

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart." How many of us do? Or do we Lord and his work as a secondary consideration? We ought to think of these things, because they will have a great bearing when the rewards are passed around.

Bro. Thomas Daley is still "out of the harness" because of sickness. In fact he seems to be growing weaker. The Saints should all pray for him that if it is the Lord's will be may speedily recover.

The writer has been very busy since coming to this field, and there is no resting place in sight. Two very worthy people were added to our number by baptism a few days ago. Put in ten days at Walnut Creek; and though there were no baptisms, yet we are sure that good was done. While there I was abundantly cared for by Bro. James Smith and his wife Betty.

Bro. A. Haws has opened a mission at 807 East Main street, Stockton, and we confidently expect some good results to follow. Bro. Haws' health is of such a character that by doing his own cooking he can get along very comfortably, and he has a great desire to be busy in the Lord's work, which will explain this new move.

Remember Saints, that our reunion to be held in Oakland is drawing near. Due notice will be given. We expect Brn. Joseph and Alexander Smith and Bro. Joseph Luff in addition to many of our missionaries. You ought to begin now to prepare yourselves spiritually for the feast. Your brother in Christ, F. B. BLAIR.

GRIMSTAD, Norway, June 18.

Pres. Joseph Smith:-I have just closed a series of meetings at this place. We held eight services in a grove outside of city limits; and being near the main road, it was accessible from both city and country. From thirty-six to one hundred and fifty from all points of the compass listened attentively. I had translated some of our beautiful hymns, and with the accompaniment of the guitar and violin our song worked like magic. And while we cannot say we noticed any special outpouring of the Spirit in delivery, yet expressions of astonishment were heard from some, and words of gratitude from others. The man who owned the grove gave us permission to occupy again when Bro. Muceus arrives.

Two have confessed their sins, and wish to receive a remission. I have no doubt of their sincerity, but I think best to wait awhile. While I am busily engaged in the work of the Master, I shall not be in a hurry to baptize. Though I have not received any instructions of procedure since the change of the 'charge de affair" at the late conference, I still continue operations within the twenty-five mile radius, as before mentioned by me, and am wearing out the slanderers.

Since my challenge in the local paper, to which no response came, a young man has in the same paper dared the hiding man, as well as the free church authorities, to meet me, and last week I succeeded in getting in a mixed history of the rise, apostasy, and reorganization of the church, which I had translated from the corrected history mentioned in the HERALD some time ago; and also from the extract in the HERALD under the caption of "The Temple and its Builders." This was not inserted in full according to the manuscript; but I am thankful for what came. I inclose the clipping from two issues.

So I think we can safely say we are gaining ground. My intentions are, unless otherwise ordered, to continue here until Bro. Muceus arrives, then repeat the effort in the places already opened with the new speaker, that by the two witnesses every word may be established. If my wife and family were here it would help the cause a great deal, as it is hard to make the people believe we are not polygamists. But I expect my brother down from Alaska, and he has promised if he lives that he will take my wife and children over the ocean. Am waiting patiently for that event. It would be grand if she could cross in company with the brethren and Sr. Muceus, who are coming. However, the Lord's will be done; by it I hope to abide. Praying for the progress of the church at large, and the continued favor of the Lord, I

Your brother and colaborer in the Lord, N. C. ENGE.

MANCHESTER, Texas, July 1. Dear Saints and Readers of the Herald:-The greatest desire of my heart is to do God's will, and has been for fourteen years; and so I have endeavored to live, walking in the light as he let it upon me. I have enjoyed great blessings of God and much of his presence. I also have been sorely chastised. I thank Him for it all now, although the chastisements were grievous indeed for a time, but now have yielded the peaceful fruits of righteousness. Now I see as never before. Fourteen years ago I came out from sectism; saw it was not of God; sought a clean and pure heart of God. And how he has blessed me! Consecrated to him for time and eternity I have kept vow only in this one instance, when I heard the doctrine of the Latter Day Saints I felt a fellowship with them, but I was so slow to see that they were not a sect but God's own church reorganized.

My son-in-law and daughter are Saints. He is a preacher, and they have been very anxious for me to obey the gospel. After hearing much preaching on the line, this summer I have been reading and investigating for myself; prayerfully, too. And what once seemed like a fable now seems real truth. The Bible surely is plain truth, and tells of the Book of Mormon. If not what on earth does Isaiah 29 and other points mean, I ask the objector. The way is so plain, indeed. But few are looking for the old paths. I am holding fast to God and all his blessing bestowed in days gone by.

I had always been taught that Joseph Smith the Prophet was only a deceiver and a polygamist; and when the truth began to dawn upon me, and God began to let the light on me, I almost trembled with fear. I cannot describe my feelings! And sorely he chastised me. I never was stiff-necked about it, only I feared and trembled, and held aloof, half believing, half doubting. I once thought my son-in-law exalted the name of Joseph Smith the Prophet too highly. But O how little I knew! I am sorry I ever thought it! Had I known his power, his love, his zeal, and his nearness to our blessed Savior I never would have thought it. His treatment received is certainly a blot on fair America. But, dear Saints, the same spirit that murdered that man of God still exists, and very strong.

Some have told me: "Why, if you join the Saints you will be denying all the Lord has done for you." Let others think as they may, I will obey God and his gospel. I intend to be baptized at the next opportunity. I love God and his word, and believe it all, and that he is the same today and forever, and what he has done for his people in one age he will continue to do if we will let him. Surely his word is not cut off, nor has he hidden himself from his church. If Joseph Smith was an impostor, and the Reorganized Church of Latter Day Saints is false, it must come yet, for it is God's word. But I lay aside the if, accept the truth, and live. I bid you God speed.

Your sister in the work,

MRS. ELLA J. SKIDMORE.

DUNSEITH, N. Dak., July 6.

Editors Herald:—I am in the battlefield, struggling to plant the Master's truth in this frontier field. While I may not be able to report any great success, yet we are encouraged by the fact that some are obeying and others investigating.

Last Sunday three excellent young men were born of water into the Master's kingdom. We look for them to be earnest members in the Master's service. Others would like to have accepted, but were hindered by circumstances.

Saints have regular service in the new schoolhouse near Keivin in the midst of the Turtle mountains; Sunday school at one p. m., and preaching at 2:30 p. m. every Sunday except the first Sunday of each month, when sacrament meeting is had instead of preaching. There seems to be good interest and attendance.

Bro. Will Oakes and family, who came here from Minnesota last fall, are doing an excellent work in helping to build up the cause. They are indeed Saints. Bro. Will has been doing some preaching which has resulted in good, and has been well received by all.

There are many scattered Saints in this region, and there is opportunity for much local work.

I have been holding meetings in surrounding localities Sundays, and have usually had good attendance, though we have been having excessively wet weather and very bad roads.

We are to have a three days' meeting July 26 to 28 in a very pretty little grove near Bro. J. Spaulding's home, near Dunseith. Bro. John is just as genial and cheerful as ever, and wants to do what he can for the gospel cause. We hope all the Saints who can will attend. Lay aside your work for a few days, just previous to the busy time of harvest, and come and join us in singing, praying, testifying, and preaching of the beauties of this great latter-day work. We anticipate having a splendid time. Come all ye scattered Saints!

We also earnestly invite any of the ministry who can to attend. There is a school-house near at hand, and should the weather be unpleasant we can occupy. There is also abundance of hay and pasture near at hand free to all; also wood. So fill your lunch baskets, bring your blankets and the spirit of humility, and we shall have a good time. We hope to have several speakers. We must be in the spirit and life of this latter-day work, or it will profit us but little when the Master comes to save his own from the wrath to follow.

Ever praying for strength and grace to be given all the Saints, I am,

Yours in Christ, LEONARD HOUGHTON.

Editors Herald:—The facilities for circu-

Editors Herald:—The facilities for circulating news is one of the most attractive features of the times in which we live, for good or evil.

Glancing over a newspaper for June 30, two rather exciting events attracted my attention. One was a lengthy article under the caption. "Society flocks to Astors." Some conception of the costliness in dollars and cents may be gathered from a statement as to the cost of music, which, as the writer asserts, cost Mr. Astor $15,000, which as I suppose was an insignificant sum compared with the entire cost of this great fashion gathering. As the writer states, there was some hesitancy as to rightness or wrongness in the acceptation of the invitation until it became known that one or two of the leading social lights had accepted, when, to use the language of the writer, "the rest like sheep followed in their train." The result was that the entertainment was one of the successes of the season. That there is much evidence of benevolence, or charity, I believe; but a practical observance of Christ's teachings in reference to calling the poor, lame, etc., in the event of making a feast, as they could not recompense, etc., would appear to be not the rule, but the exception.

It seems pleasing, and, by the way, a little popular, to talk of following Jesus; but in a practical way we are apt to cling tenaciously to our own way, evincing antipathy to any kind of restraint, unless it is in harmony with our whims or caprices, and will augment present convenience, etc. Yet at some time or place every knee is to bow, and every tongue confess that Jesus is the Christ, to the glory of the Father.

Then, as if to keep alive the wonderment, excited by strange developments, my eye caught the following caption: "Legation of the Holy See. Cardinal Gibbon will urge President McKinley to establish one." A legation. The reason assigned for the establishment of a diplomatic relation between the United States and the vatican is said to be the enormous increase of Catholics in the United States. The Pope attaches great importance to these negotiations, which, as it would appear, Cardinal Gibbon is authorized to see to, and doubtless the cultured Cardinal will attend to it. Will the Pope be accommodated? We shall see. The gold, precious stones, and pearls, are most attractive. The contents of the golden cup, with its deadly contents, was effective in spreading abroad a deadly, spiritual drunkenness (Revelation 18: 3): "And the woman which thou sawest is that great city, which reigneth over the kings of the earth."—Rev. 17:18,

The above referred to items were found in Omaha Bee, June 30. The development of events is appalling. Are we evincing a spiritual growth commensurate with the rapid development of demoralization with its blighting effects? Glowing reports may be stimulating, but practical evidence of godly zeal, etc., will bring the victory. But the exhibition of a zeal not according to knowledge is among the possibilities which were worse than no zeal, or so I believe. And I think with the exhibition of common courtesy, I may always express a belief.

I may inform the body that it was far in May when I was at my post, since which time no startling events have confronted me. I visited the Southern and Northern Nebraska district conferences. To the latter the visitation was necessary in order to attend to an ordination imposed by action of General Conference.

At each gathering I suggested the abandoning of old gospel beaten tracks where little or no interest was evidenced, penetrating into new localities. I think our young stalwart elders should be diligent in trying to turn something up, instead of waiting too long for something to turn up. Can't discharge the duties incumbent on a traveling elder and spend considerable time in picnicing. Then, too, young elders spending time for study, which to be successful they must do, should not lose sight of the fact that walking is a most healthful exercise. That over taxation is injurious and it is just possible that under taxation may prove injurious too; not that I pose as a hygienist, a logician, theologian, collegiate graduate, expert, reverend, naturalist, far-seeing, astute sensationalist, fascinator, sentimentalist; cultured, refined, or educated paraphraser, commentator; or having sufficient skill or deceptiveness, with ability to palm upon intelligent or upright people feigned, for unfeigned piety, or anything of that sort; but have gained a bit of gospel experience, with which I would not part for a Pope's applausiveness, and am confirmed in the belief that an occasional walk from a railroad depot to a contemplated resting place, of three-fourths or a whole mile with a grip weighing twenty pounds, or two of twentyfive pounds might be better, would greatly tend to develop one's muscles, causing a perspiration from which might flow a healthful reaction; with such effect upon one's physical organism, with a full stomach, an easy conscience, and a walk of a mile or two and preaching a gospel sermon of fifty or sixty minutes duration, and return to the lodging place on the evening of the same day, walking a mile with grips in hand, might bring on a night of sweet repose, bring a satisfaction on the succeeding morning arising from a consciousness of spending the past day in the performance of gospel work. The satisfaction arising from a consciousness of a proper utilization of time, and an economic use of the bit of lucre that comes into the hands of a traveling elder by the liberality of some soul or souls, attributable to their observance of what is found in section 83:16, Doctrine and Covenants is very stimulating. For if unfaithful in the mammon of unrighteousness, who will trust us with the true riches? Luke 16:11.

Among other labors I visited Maxwell, adjacent to the place formerly known as Cottonwood where a branch was organized in 1893, since which time, however, many removed to other points, leaving very few, yet enough to continue meeting; but indifference or some other factor has prevented this. Weather, during my stay there, together with a manifest indifference, contributed to prevent save a very meagre attendance.

Halting at North Platte I held a few meetings at Bro. Joseph Richards's private residence. Sr. Richards and her daughter furnishing vocal and instrumental music, on June 26 I commenced a series of meetings at Hershey, which terminated on the 3d instant. This is the dwelling place of Sr. M. E. and Bro. Frank Limpus, both of whom took an active part; and Miss M. Limpus, though indisposed, gave valuable help with the organ. It is quite stimulating to an elder to offer the gospel where church members reside, and by upright and godly conduct have honored and lived their religion. There exists a church building in this little town which a Baptist and a Methodist Episcopal preacher use every alternate Sunday. We sought its use, but the powers that be said. No, and but for the efforts of a lady resident of Hershey we should have been shut out of the schoolhouse. But her advocacy of liberalism turned the scale, and we occupied with a congregation of no more than thirty-eight and not less than fifteen. The heat was oppressive and everyhody busy.

I am waiting here to be carried northward forty miles across the country through the sandhills.

In bonds,

JAMES CAFFALL.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., July 6.

Editors Herald:-That little black devil! He is an unclean spirit! Last year he robbed God of over four hundred millions of dollars in this country alone. In our meeting last Thursday evening one man out of whom he had been cast said that he had ruined his teeth, injured his lungs, and robbed him of over five hundred dollars besides the interest. Through his diabolical agency he dims the eyes, injures the throat, poisons the blood, sows the seeds of dyspepsia, heart disease, consumption, and cancer in the human system, and then laughs as his victim tries to escape from his clutches. Selfishness, stinginess, peevishness, slavishness, filthiness all delight to call him father. Drunkenness is his own pet nephew, strong drink is his twin brother, and they are often seen together. spirit manifest.

Inconsistent as it may seem he sometimes comes to church, and has often persuaded professed Christians to pay more for his support than for all benevolent purposes combined. His friends usually feel too poor to take a religious paper. Like all wicked men and other devils he is to be annihilated at the coming of Christ. He can never enter heaven, for it is written that no unclean thing can enter there. His name is Tobacco. Christ can cast him out if you will let him.

Well, dear brethren, we are still trying to get the gospel before the people of this great and wicked city. There is a good interest manifest. Yours in bonds.

J. W. METCALF.

GLADSTONE, Ill., July 5.

Editors Herald:-We have had with us Elders J. A. Davis and O. H. Bailey. I rented the Woodman hall and they preached three evenings to small audiences. It is the first preaching that has been done in Gladstone that I know of, and the people did not turn out well. But I will give them credit for being peaceable and friendly towards the elders. But they do not seem to know or care to know if the executive, judiciary, and legislative departments of our civil government were destroyed it would be necessary to reorganize in order to perpetuate the government. And what is so with the civil government is so with the church. When disordered it must be reorganized with apostles, prophets, etc. But, says one, we do not need them nowadays. Why? Because you have only societies must be the reason, because wherever the church of Jesus Christ. existed the apostles existed in it, and prophets, teachers, and so on.

But these people are my neighbors, and how can I blame them when they have never been taught differently. I well remember my own zealous ignorance, and I thought I understood the Scriptures well enough to preach. But I was blinded by a popular spirit and prejudice, so I shall try to have all the charity possible. I would like for the elders to come and try it again this fall with their tent. Bro. Allen Price, four and one half miles south of here, and his sons, two or three, and my wife and I are all that hold to the faith once delivered to the Saints.

I had a very enjoyable time with the elders and my home is the home of any that may call on me. Hoping the truth may yet prevail in this place and finally triumph, and yearning and petitioning for a final deliverance for all from sin and death, I am,

Your brother,

JACOB L. RUST.

DELTA, Colorado.

Editors Herald:—I left home May 21 and made my first stop at Denver; where, at the request of Bro. J. B. Roush, submissionary in charge, I remained over the following Sunday. I found the Saints very kind and zealous in good works. While the membership there is somewhat scattered, and the meetings are not largely attended, there is a good spirit manifest.

My next stop was at Provo, Utah, where I spent one day visiting the Saints, while waiting for a train for Deseret. The Saints at Provo were desirous to have me preach for them, but I am sorry to say time and opportunity did not permit.

On May 29, I arrived at Deseret, Utah, where my mother lives. I found her well and remarkably hardy for a lady of seventyeight years of age. She is a widow and is trying to care for seven quarter sections of land there with little help. The men who might be hired were all off working on the railroad that is being extended through to Los Angeles, California, or were off to the mines. So I went to work to help her what I could. I remained with her about a week. In that time I visited several Mormon families and found them very friendly, and they greeted me as a brother of another branch of the same family, as they expressed it. They entertain strong hopes that the time will soon come when we shall all be one. One Joseph Dameron, who had been on a mission to the Society Islands while Bro. Gilbert was there, expressed great friendship and esteem for Bro. Gilbert. He is a fine man and it is a pity he cannot see the delusion in Utah Mormonism.

My mother is a Utah Mormon and holds tenaciously to that church. Once I had her almost persuaded to join us; but when she found we did not baptize for the dead she decided that she had better stay where she was and work for her dead relatives and save them, as she was not able to do much toward saving the living.

From there I went to Sandy, Utah, to visit a half sister, and look after some land my mother gave me six years ago. While there I met Bro. Wardell, a faithful defender of the faith. Here, also, I met Bro. Pender and assisted him in a meeting at the home of a Utah Mormon. At the close quite an opposition was raised by the bishop's counselor.

During my stay in the valley, I went to Logan to look after some land my mother owns there, and spent a pleasant time with Bro. Condit's family and the Saints, and preached for them on Sunday, June 16.

I spent two Sundays with the Saints in Salt Lake City, and preached twice. There are some excellent Saints there. I met Bro. R. Etzenhouser there Sunday, June 23, and heard him preach. He gave some good instructions.

My stay in Utah was made pleasant both by the Saints and by the Mormons. And I trust it will result in some good. I explained our views to several Mormons, and they received my explanations in seemingly good spirit, and some promised to attend our meetings when opportunity offered. I did not succeed in accomplishing all I desired to by my visit, but believe that good will result in a temporal way in the end, as well as what good may result in a spiritual way.

I came to Fruita, Colorado, June 24, where I met my colaborer, Bro. James Kemp, at Bro. D.B. Tomlinson's. He had been preaching in the schoolhouse near by. We continued services there a couple of evenings, and then came here. We held services at Delta, Sunday, in the Advent church, and last evening at Bro. Wm. Park's. So far our meetings have not been very well attended; but we find some excellent Saints here, and we trust that good may be accomplished.

Bro. Kemp baptized three at Fruita before I arrived, and there are prospects that some will be baptized here ere long.

The days have been very hot of late, but the nights cool and pleasant. One day the wind was so hot that it scorched vegetation some. Kansas and Nebraska are not the only places where the wind gets hot. This is a terrible desert country with here and there an oasis. I have seen some fine large orchards with an abundant prospect for fruit. Have not enjoyed the eating of any here, except sour cherries.

Yours in hopes of triumph,

J. M. STUBBART.

HELENA, Montana, July 10.

Editors Herald:—It is not often that Montana's capital city has an opportunity to furnish any news that would be of general interest to the church; but the monotony was broken during the latter part of April by Bro. George Daley appearing on the scene while on his way home from General Conference.

As far as I know, Sisters Smith and Stranahan and myself are the only Latter Day Saints in Helena. Sister Raymond lives at East Helena, five miles away, and it is needless to say we four sisters enjoyed Bro. Daley's visit and felt strengthened by the words of cheer and counsel he gave us. One evening he delivered a fine sermon to about twenty of my neighbors whom I had invited to our home to meet and hear him. He made a very good impression and paved the way for Bro. Gomer R. Wells, who came to Helena, June 29, and stayed with us four days. I secured the use of two large rooms (with an archway between) in a large, vacant brick house only three doors from our home. We put down a carpet and a rug and seated it with chairs. A neighbor kindly loaned us an organ. With lamps, tables, and flowers added we had a unique place of worship where we met four times. I invited my neighbors to "come and bring a chair." We had from twenty to thirty-five present at each service, and I feel that good was done. at least that people in our neighborhood now know our position as a church and do not confound us with the Utah people.

Although my husband is not a member of the church, he did all he could to make the visits of both the elders pleasant and helped me make a success of our meetings. He also arranged to have Bro. Wells interviewed by reporters from two of our leading papers. I send you copies of each of the papers containing the interviews and their corrections that you may see the result.

The editor of the Daily Herald attended our Sunday afternoon meeting and gave us a friendly article on the editorial page of his paper. He is a theosophist, but is familiar with our work, as his father (now deceased) was a local Latter Day Saint elder near Denison, Iowa, some years ago. Mr. Keith's mother and other members of the family are in the church.

I believe the seed has been sown, a start made to get the restored gospel before the people of Helena, and I trust the elders of the Rocky Mountain mission will not pass us by this year. If Bro. D. W. Wight sees this I would be glad to have him let me know his address. I would like to be advised in advance if any elder can arrange to come to Helena, so I can make the necessary arrangements for his entertainment and a place to speak. I have lately donated a copy of the Book of Mormon to the public library. That with the efforts of Brn. Daley and Wells, and the mention we have received through the public press, should bring our work favorably before the people.

Ever interested in the good cause, I am, Your sister,

MRS. EFFIE ADAMS BENEDICT.

FARNAM, Neb., July 8.

Dear Saints:—I see so many encouraging letters concerning Graceland College that I feel there is hope of the debt being paid. I have not waited to send help because I desired to see if this would be, but because I had no way before of helping. I would sooner have been the first to send than the way it is, but send a dollar now, praying that many will thus respond and the debt be paid.

We enjoy ourselves here very well as a little band of Saints. We have a nice little Sunday school, with Sr. Minerva Johnson as superintendent. She is a worker in the church, and has the love and confidence of the Saints. We are a part of the Eustis branch, and are so far away that we miss the sacrament, as the officers of the branch reside there. After the busy season they come and administer the sacrament to us, for which we are grateful. The Saints here will all be glad to see Bro. Caffall again. May God bless and help each one to do his duty, is the prayer of

Your sister in the one faith, EMMA PAYNE.

Bank, Md., July 9.

Editors Herald:-Since General Conference I have been laboring in the Philadelphia district as best I could under the circumstances. Being alone up to the present time it has been a little difficult to do very much, as most all of our work in this field is new work, as there are only two branches in the district. After leaving General Conference I went to St. Louis in company with Bro. St. John. We were met at the station by our genial little Sr. Etta, and after partaking of a substantial repast we took the car for Bro. John Billinsky's where the writer was made welcome. I enjoyed my short stay in St. Louis very much, and was glad to meet the Saints there. Sunday, April 28, found me in Philadelphia, where I preached morning and evening and attended the Mormon mission conference in the afternoon. There were seventeen or eighteen elders present, representing, I believe, one half of the state of Pennsylvania. O, if we only had the money and men that they have! But we must labor and wait.

The Sunday school convention was held in Baldwin, Maryland, on May 4 and 5. All seemed to enjoy the sessions, and the city Saints went back refreshed. After the convention I went home for a few days, and then back to duty. I was at Nottingham, Pennsylvania, for a few days, where three of our sisters live, and held two services; but the people were too busy with other things to turn out very well to the services, so I did not continue them. However, I was glad I went and enjoyed the time.

Marshalltown, Delaware, was the next place where we tried to do the people good, but they seemed to have religion enough and were rather emphatic in saying that they did not care for anything but Methodist doctrine. I held a few services, the first, I believe, in Delaware, and let the matter rest with them for the present. Then I went back to the city; and, O my! but it was hot! 1192 prostrations during a few days. Philadelphia is a nice city, but it is certainly hot in summer. I heard a story about a wicked man who lived in Philadelphia that went to a very hot country and nearly froze and had to come back to Philadelphia to get warm.

Last Saturday I preached the funeral sermon of Bro. John Stone, who met with a sad accident a few days before his death. As he was about to cross the street he was knocked down by a bicycle and sustained a fracture of the skull. He was a young man, esteemed by his brethren and friends. It is a hard blow for his wife, who is left with three little ones to care for. But God doeth all things well, and although sometimes it is hard to recognize his hand in the trials and perplexities of life, he knows best, and sometime it will all be made plain.

I came here last night and intend to start grove meetings near this place as soon as possible. In the conflict,

SAN BERNARDINO, Cal., July 9.

Editors Herald:—The inclosed clipping is from the San Bernardino Daily Sun for July 7. It is not a pleasant incident to read of, but if we are to trust modern revelation, more of the kind are to follow. (See Doctrine and Covenants 28:5.) "Wherefore, I, the Lord God, will send forth flies upon the face of the earth, which shall take hold of the inhabitants thereof, and shall eat their flesh, and shall cause maggots to come in upon them, and their tongues shall be stayed that they shall not utter against me."

"CICAHELZERZER'S HORRIBLE DEATH.

"W. A. Cicahelzerzer died yesterday afternoon at the county hospital from a horrible and loathsome disease. A few days ago while the unfortunate man was asleep at his home at Manvel a maggot fly entered his wide open mouth and laid eggs in his throat. The eggs hatched and in the course of a few hours the man's throat was covered with live, crawling maggots. He was sent to the county hospital and died an agonizing death.

"The deceased was sixty-two years of age and a native of Virginia. He was well known in Manvel.

"The death is peculiar and has attracted considerable attention among the local medical fraternity. Immediately the maggots commenced their work, blood poisoning set in and nothing could be done to save the man's life."

As you will see, the death of this man has caused much comment.

Sincerely yours, ELBERT A. SMITH.

ACORN RIDGE, Mo., July 10.

Editors Herald:—I left May 7 and arrived at my mission field the following day at New Florence. Found Bro and Sr. Bass well, and strong in the faith considering they do not have the church privileges many have.

Bro. Spurlock met me here, feeling quite well and cheerful. We held three services at the home of Bro. Bass. Several of the neighbors came out to hear the old gospel story and appeared to be somewhat interested. We endeavored to encourage and instruct the Saints as best we could.

Tuesday, the 14th, we were ready to start on our journey. As we travel with horse and buggy we stop at many towns and try to procure their churches, but only a few can be had. However, we distribute tracts, HERALDS, and Ensigns, and converse with them on the principles of the gospel, giving them a chance to learn concerning the truth of heaven if they so desire. We meet with some opposition.

There is one good feature about our mission field, and that is we are not crowded for the want of territory, for we have some thirty counties included in our field. and only three missionaries for the work, Brn. Allen and Spurlock and myself. But we feel encouraged to do our part, and feel confident the Lord will do his. Being among strangers not of the faith it causes us to place our trust more implicitly in the Lord. By reason of this we enjoy many blessings. The Lord has promised to stand by his ministry, that they should not go hungry, neither athirst; and those who labor among strangers will find that the Lord is true to his word. Often we do not know where we will get our next meal. At Oleny, Missouri, where we held a few services, there were no Saints, and the first night no one invited us home. This seemed somewhat discouraging, but we went to the hotel and got lodging and breakfast free of charge. This made us feel thankful. We went back to the church, as they gave us the privilege of stopping there while we continued meetings. Just before noon we sought the Lord in supplication for his divine favor and to provide for our wants. We went down town, and as we were standing on the sidewalk a gentleman came to us and invited us to his home. This seemed like a Godsend to me. It made tears come to my eyes. I trust the Lord will bless such people for their kind acts, and that they might be brought into the light.

Bro. Spurlock and myself labored in the western part of the St. Louis district. We met some Saints at Moscow and St. Charles. We were kindly received by them all.

We came to St. Louis, June 11. Met Bro. Fred Smith holding the fort in the city. We found him to be a very earnest and energetic worker. He was very kind to us in escorting us to different places of note in the city, which we enjoyed very much. The Saints were kind to us in contributing to our wants. May God bless them, is our prayer, for the Lord loveth a cheerful giver. We remained over conference. It was very spiritual and edifying to all. I trust.

Left St. Louis on the 25th for Southeastern Missouri. Traveled 175 miles before reaching any Saints. The roads were very dusty, and in some counties very hilly and rocky. We could make but slow progress, up one hill and down the other. It was jolt! jolt! over the rocks continually. I had almost concluded that there was no end to it. But we finally found a smoother road. We cannot expect to float on flowery beds of ease at all times; we must have the unpleasant scenes as well at the sunshine, that we may appreciate it when it greets us. At present we are stopping with Bro. Rister and family. holding meetings at his home as we failed to get the church at Acorn Ridge. Good interest and fair attendance. This is a very busy time of the year, and it is difficult to get the people out. I trust the Lord will prosper the work in this part of the vineyard, that many precious souls may be brought into his kingdom.

Your brother in gospel bonds,
HARRY THOMAS.

TO MY DARLING MOTHER.

WHO DIED MARCH 5, 1901.

Mother, oh, my tender mother, How I miss you from my side; You who smiled at my rejoicing And with me in sorrow cried.

Oh, dear voice of kind advising,
Gentle hands that toiled for me,
Friends may come, but in this wide world
None my mother e'er can be.

I have stretched my hands to heaven, Called your name in accent wild; But, dear one, you cannot bear me; Cannot hear your weeping child.

Through the world I wander, sadly, Craving but my mother's voice; Just to see her, mild and lovely, How 'twould make my heart rejoice.

Oh, she faded as a flower
Fades and droops upon its tree—
So my gentle little mother
Passed away from life and me.

Oh! the world's all dark, and sadness Weights my tired spirit down; Naught of life, it seems, can cheer me, Nor my awful sorrow drown.

Now a star of hope appearing, Gives some comfort to my soul; Can it be that she has sent it My heart-breaking to control?

As a voice were softly speaking
Come the words to me so sweet,
"Here I am, dear child, I'm waiting Till you come and we shall meet

"Once again, to part no never, Ne'er to know death's awful pain, Ne'er to know earth's grief or sorrow, Ne'er to part; no ne'er again."

"THE RIVER OF LIFE." Rev. 22: 1.

There is a River of Life that flows
From the throne of God, so fair.
O'er its crystal tide the angels guide
The life boats sailing there.

On the shores of this life-giving river Celestial flowerets play And bend to meet with kisses sweet It's silver, shining spray.

Ho! all ye thirsting sons of earth!
Why linger now or falter?
This fount is near, so sweet and clear!
Come, taste the living water!

And all ye weary, sin-sick souls, Who fear and tremble ever, Come draw ye near, and do not fear; Oh, drink, and live forever.

A TALK TO FATHERS.

A gentleman met a friend near his own home and they joined company on their way to business. Before they had gone far they met a trim nurse-maid wheeling a baby-carriage, in which was a fine six-months'-old baby.

"That's a jolly-looking little chap," said the gentleman.

He hastily glanced at his watch, and finding that he had a moment to spare, stopped the carriage and chirruped to the baby, who smiled genially in response.

"I have a little one at home about this one's age," observed the gentleman to his friend. "By the way," he continued to the maid, "whose baby is this?"

"Yours, sir," responded the nurse in much astonishment.

Of course, the story was too good to keep, and the faithless friend put it at once into circulation. The hero of this anecdote is not, however, the only father in the world who is unacquainted with his own children. In the hurry and drive of life, many a father feels that his duty is well done if he earns the food to put into the children's mouths and the garments wherewith to clothe them. He has no knowledge of the needs or characteristics of his own children; he is absorbed in other things.

How often are men heard to say: "I leave the training of my children entirely to my wife;" or, "I never interfere with the discipline; my wife attends to all that." Another type of father still, assumes in his family the role of lord high executioner.

"If you don't stop that," says the fond foolish mother, "I will tell your father on you."

In some families there is no threat so dreadful, and I have known a father to tell laughingly, as if it were a good joke, of the poor scared little faces which were lifted to his when he appeared suddenly among them with a rattan in hand, inquiring whether there were "any whippings to be dealt out that afternoon."

Alas, how far away these poor earthly fathers are from the fatherly ideal which is set forth in the Bible! And how can they illustrate to a child anything of the fatherhood of God?

A father ought to be friendly with his children; he ought to be interested in every interest of theirs, right down to their dollies and their bats and their balls. Nothing which concerns them should be too trivial for his notice. A father ought not only to love his children, but he should show that he loves them. He ought to prove this so convincingly that, whatever happens, they can never doubt their father's affection for them.

I was waiting at a railway station for a friend one Christmas eve, when I noticed a tall, fine-looking man of perhaps fifty years, who was pacing up and down the platform, evidently waiting for the same train that I was. As the train glided into the station, his eyes scanned the cars till they alighted upon a handsome lad of about eighteen, who also was gazing eagerly at the crowd.

"Here I am, Tom," cried the gentleman joyously.

The boy's face glowed and he sprang from the platform almost before the cars had stopped moving.

"Father!" said he; and in an instant he had the gray-bearded man by the shoulders and kissed him. Then he pushed him away a little and looked him lovingly in the eyes. "I'm awfully glad to see you," said he; "how's mother?"

I looked at them wistfully as they walked away together. Oh, I thought to myself, if there were more fathers like that, there would be fewer young lives wrecked upon the treacherous rock of sin, for a father's love will hold a boy when the sternest commands and the most rigid training would be of no avail.

Said a middle-aged woman to me: "I have known what the text, 'Like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him,' meant ever since I was ten years old. At that time I had a kitten, a pretty little creature, which I loved as a little girl with all my heart. But, alas, one spring morning Sprite stole a young chicken belonging to a neighbor and ate it before the man could rescue it. He came to our house at once, very angry, and demanded that the cat should be killed; but I begged for Sprite's life so pathetically that he promised to spare him, if he sinned no more. In a few days, however, the cat was seen lurking near the coop, and soon made off with another chicken. The neighbor gave chase, of course, but the cat hid. So he came over and demanded the cat's life as soon as it should appear. My mother felt that it was just and promised that I should bring Sprite over as soon as he came home. In a short time he came purring up to me and I had to take the dear little fellow up in my arms and carry him to his doom. The neighbor drowned him forthwith. I did not complain before anyone, but my little pillow was wet with tears every night for my lost comrade. My father was from home at the time and I carried my trouble alone until his return. After he had kissed us all around and heard various items of interest, he turned to me and said, 'How is Sprite?' and I told him what had happened. I shall never forget how he caught me in his arms and placed me on his knee, as he said, 'Poor child! That was too bad! If I had been here, it never should have happened;' and I sobbed out my grief on his breast and was comforted. It was a little thing, a mere trifle compared to the sorrows of my life, but perhaps some of the things which we grieve over now seem quite as trivial to the eyes of Omnipotence, yet none the less our heavenly Father is quick to comfort us."

A father cannot shirk the responsibility of his children. God will hold him equally accountable with the mother for them and if they go astray through any lack of fatherly care or affection, he will one day find himself terribly to blame.—The Presbyterian.

HOW I USE MY QUARTERLY IN MY CLASS.

This is a question upon which Sunday school teachers seem to have vastly different opinions. It is one that requires considerable thought by anyone before he can decide for himself just how far to trust himself in the use of the Quarterly during class time.

As I understand the PURPOSE OF THE QUARTERLY with its references and suggestions, it is designed as an aid to teachers and pupils more in preparing the lesson than during class time. But in many instances is this use fearfully abused and the Quarterly becomes more of a hindrance than a help. The teacher who never dares take his eyes from his Quarterly for fear of losing his place among the questions or who has constantly to be looking up answers from it had far better give up his place as instructor and take one as student. In this instance we see the Quarterly mentally crippling the teacher by stamping out any originality he might have had, and becoming to him a prop which were it taken away leaves him helpless. No one can be a successful teacher unless he has some original thought and some little devices of his own in teaching.

Many persons are opposed to the use of the quarterly in any way because they say we ought to think out the meaning of things by our own effort alone. But I think many of us who have to take the positions of teachers are hardly capable of penetrating the deeper passages of the Scriptures without the aid of some one making them a special study. We need the help and guidance which our lesson sheets are supposed to contain.

As my class is the youngest in the primary grade, I cannot make such a of my Quarterly as a teacher of another grade might do. If I used it as I have seen some teachers do I am afraid I might find most of my pupils asleep, that is if I should get time to look at them at all during class.

A primary teacher must bring in so

MANY OTHER THINGS

besides what is contained in the lesson leaf. Many things that at first seem ridiculous and far-fetched may help to bring pupils' attention to something in the lesson. None of my children can read, so I have to think of many little devices and stories of my own to illustrate the lesson. Most of them have been taught the lesson before coming and then it is not such a task to make them understand.

I TRY TO PREPARE MY LESSON so that I shall not have to refer to the Quarterly very often, as I can better keep their attention. The pupils then tell the lesson story as they understand it. Sometimes each one tells the whole story as nearly as possible, but often one tells one part of it then another finishes. If the pupils do not have their lessons, I tell or read to them the story, then have them tell it to me and to one another.

AS FOR THE QUESTIONS

contained in the Quarterly, I use them in review work when the lesson is ended, as they may bring up something upon which we have not touched. But just taking those questions and answers as a lesson without any comment or thought, I do not consider a lesson at all.

ANOTHER USE

I make of the Quarterly if I have time, and I think it should be taken, is to turn to the coming lesson and read or talk about it a little, pointing out the connection, if any, with the one of today. We have already done this with our last Sunday's lesson by a slight review. I think connecting the lessons in this way interests the pupils more. There is not so much of a blank between them.

I USE THE MAP

to a very limited extent with my class as I think they are too small to understand much about it, or perhaps I do not understand using it correctly.

THE MAIN THING

in teaching is to keep the attention of the class regardless of outside influences, and this the teacher cannot do who has not his lesson prepared so he can give undivided attention to his pupils.

More and more each year Americans are finding out the attractions of our own country, and as they grow to realize the charm of life among the Colorado mountains or in the Yellowstone Park the tendency is toward greater travel West instead of East for health and recreation. The railroads, too, are alive to the new conditions and have made lower to the new conditions and have made lower tourist rates this year than ever before. And then the train time has been vastly improved, so that now it takes only one night on the road between the Atlantic Coast and Denver, that is, by using the Burlington's fast train from Chicago.

Four photographers have spent weeks and taken hundreds of pictures at the Pan-American for The World's Work. Ninety-three have been chosen from this mass and engraved, including many large full pages and several double pages. The publication of so many beautiful illustrations has never before been brought together in a magazine. The articles will give a bird's-eye view of the progress of the country in all phases of its life since the Chicago Fair. Every American consul in the world will receive a copy. The success of recent numbers of The World's Work has been remarkable. The publishers are buying back the July number to supply subscribers wherever they can find them.

INFORMATION ON WEEDS-DESIRED.

The writer has under preparation a bulletin on the noxious weeds of Iowa. It is my intention to record some experiments on the extermination of the same as well as notes on distribution. In order to get as much information as possible on the subject of weeds, I desire to have the farmers send to me the worst weeds in their neighborhood with comments on their experience in destroying them. Also give me information on the following points:

1. How long have the weeds been in your neighborhood?

2. How were these weeds introduced?
3. Do special crops favor certain weeds?

4. Does mustard accompany the growth of flax and in this way make its appearance in grain fields? 5. What proportion of the grain fields consist of mustard? What can you say concerning the vitality of mustard seed? What would you suggest in regard to the eradication of mustard?

6. Does the Canada thistle occur in your county? If so, send specimen.
7. Does the Bull thistle occur in your

8. What can you say of the large rag weed? How abundant? The vitality of the seed? 9. Is the law with reference to weeds on roadsides enforced?

10. Does the Russian thistle occur in your county? If so, send specimens.

11. Is the law enforced with reference to the destruction of the Russian thistles and other weeds?

Are weeds largely introduced with seeds?

13. Name the weeds largely so introduced?14. Name the worst weeds of pastures. Address L. H. Pammel, Ames, Iowa.

Creed, in fact, plays an ever-lessening part oreed, in fact, plays an ever-lessening part in the life of the American people, and conduct plays an ever-increasing part. Their religion, whatever the theologians may say, is a religion of conduct, which, instead of being three fourths of life, as Matthew Arnold measured it, has come to be nine tenths of the life of the classes of good people in the United States.

But with the waning of faith and with the increasing emphasis on conduct has come an ever-growing toleration of one another's opinions. Toleration is, indeed, the crowning distinction of a non-theological era toleration of any sane opinion and even of many insane ones, but not of conduct that denies the primary obligations or disorganizes an orderly social life. Impossible as it is to arouse any interest in a discussion of infant baptism, for instance, public opinion wholesomely inflicts its severest punishment on a man who deserts his own children, whether his creed be orthodox or be some wretched patchwork of "social reform" and irresponsible "love."— From the World's

In the editorial department of the Review of Reviews for July Dr. Shaw discusses the prospects of the wheat and corn crops, the conditions of our export trade, and the recent growth of American capital; on the political side, the decisions of the Supreme Court in the insular cases are reviewed and summarized, together with Cuba's acceptance of the Platt amendment and the outlook for Porto Rico and the Philippines; Mr. Carnegie's gift to the Scotch universities, the choice of Dr. Remsen as the new president of the Johns Hopkins University, and the launch-ing of the Washington Memorial Institution are among the educational topics treated in

People who formerly considered the Chicago Record to be America's model daily or who believed the Chicago Times-Herald to be premier among American newspapers now have an opportunity of judging every day how remarkably complete and excellent in every department is that great metropolitan daily, the Chicago Record-Herald, which combines "the two best in one." All the popular features of both the Chicago Record and the Chicago Times-Herald are included in the Chicago Record-Herald. In the Sunday issues especially the great advantages of the combination of all the resources and world-wide facilities of the two papers united in the combination are made manifest. The world's news is covered with unexampled fullness, due to the fact that never before in the history of journalism did an American newspaper possess news facilities so varied and extensive.

Professor Ellen H. Richards of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, who has been contributing a series of articles of a practical character to the Delineator, in the August number utters some very plain truths regarding the difficulties that the women of several families would probably have in learning to get along with one another. The conclusion of the article, although not so stated by Professor Richards, is rather to suggest that successful coöperative house-keeping is a long way off yet. The article is worth reading because of its frank statement of the difficulties that people find in subordinating their own wills to the wills of others.

AS TO THE SUCCESSOR.

The letters following will be of great interest to many of the readers of the HERALD, and we gladly give them space.

Bro. Lewis asks concerning the difference between "an anointing" and "an ordination." Webster's International Dictionary defines the word Anoint.-1. To smear or rub over with oil or an unctuous substance; also to spread over, as oil.

2. To apply oil to or to pour oil upon, etc., as a sacred rite, especially for consecration.

The word ordain is thus defined by the same authority:

Ordain.-1. To set in order; to arrange according to rule; to regulate; to set; to estab-

To regulate, or establish, by appointment, decree, or law; to constitute; to decree; to appoint; to institute.

3. To set apart for an office; to appoint.

4. (Eccl.) To invest with ministerial or sacerdotal functions; to introduce into the office of the Christian ministry, by the laying on of hands, or other forms; to set apart by the ceremony of ordination.

We would understand from Bro. Whitehead's letter that Hyrum first anointed the head of young Joseph with oil, as did Samuel anoint the head of Saul by pouring oil upon him. (See 1 Samuel 10:1.) After Hyrum had anointed with oil then the lad was "ordained" by his father. As to the office, Bro. Whitehead plainly states that he was "ordained to be his father's successor in office, holding all the gifts and blessings belonging to said office."

Concerning this matter of ordination President Joseph Smith is on record as follows, as found in the Church History, volume 3, page 506, where The Saints' Herald, vol. 14, pp. 104-106 is quoted from:

"In Liberty jail the promise and blessing of a life of usefulness to the cause of truth was pronounced upon our head by lips tainted by dungeon damps, and by the Spirit confirmed through attesting witnesses.

"This blessing has by some been called an ordination, from the usual predilection to confound names and terms.

"The blessing which marked Moses as the deliverer from Egyptian bondage was not that which Jethro pronounced upon his head.

"Subsequent to our baptism in 1843, upon two occasions was the same blessing confirmed by Joseph Smith, once in the council room in the brick store on the banks of the Mississippi, of which we have not a doubt there are witnesses who would confirm the present testimony; once, in the last interview Joseph Smith held with his family before he left Nauvoo to his death. A public attestation of the same blessing was made from the stand in the grove in Nauvoo, some time prior to the murder in Carthage.'

Undoubtedly Bro. Whitehead was present at one of the occasions referred to by President Smith, and what one calls a "blessing" the other calls an ordination. Webster's definition for ordination, that is, the ecclesiastical definition, is:

The act of setting apart to an office in the Christian ministry; the conferring of holy

Joseph the Seer, in thus blessing his son as successor, undoubtedly did set him apart by the blessing, and hence Bro. Whitehead is not entirely wrong in speaking of it as an ordination. At least it is easy to see how the terms could be confounded here.

Concerning this setting apart of Joseph the son of the Seer to succeed his father, the testimony of Lyman Wight is as follows, as found on page 789 of the second volume of the Church History:

"Now, Mr. Editor, if you had been present when Joseph called on me shortly after we came out of jail [Liberty jail, Missouri. Eb.] to lay hands with him on the head of a youth, and heard him cry aloud, 'You are my successor when I depart,' and heard the blessings poured on his head,—I say had you heard all this, and seen the tears streaming from his eyes-you would not have been led by blind fanaticism, or a zeal without knowledge. . . . While in jail there were many things spoken by the mouth of our martyred Prophet and Patriarch, and when I see these things taking place just as they were spoken, it cheers my heart and that of the brothren and sisters in this branch also."

Lest anyone should doubt who the youth referred to was, we here insert an extract from an address of Lyman Wight, written in December, 1851. We quote from the manu-December, 1851. script:

"The church mostly went from there [Kirtland, Ohio] to Missouri, where they commenced another house from which they were driven to the State of Illinois, where we were commanded to build a house or temple to the Most High God. We were to have a sufficient time to build that house, during which time our baptisms for our dead should be acceptable in the river. If we did not build within this time we were to be rejected as a church, we and our dead together. Both the temple and baptizing went very leisurely, till the temple was somewhere in building the second story, when Bro. Joseph from the stand announced the alarming declaration that baptism for our dead was no longer acceptable in the river. As much to say the time for building the temple had passed by, and both we and our dead were rejected together. Bro. Joseph then called all the councils together, and chose what he called a grand council of fifty persons, himself and counselors among the rest, as also the Tweive. More than once did he exclaim after this organization that if he should be taken out of the way the church would remain organized.

"We remained in a gloomy fearful situation for a short time when the death of Bro. Joseph took place by the hands of the mob, . . showing to us much plainer than language could tell that the church was rejected if the head was taken from it.

"The church now stands rejected together with their dead. The church being rejected now stands alienated from her God in every sense of the word.

"This being the case, what should now be one? I will here state the first thing to done? have been done would have been to have called the fifties together from the four quarters of the earth, which contained all the highest authorities of the church. As you will readily see, that had not the fifty constituted the highest authorities, it would have been a species of weakness to have ordained all the highest authorities into that number. The fifties assembled should have called on all the authorities of the church down to the lay members from all the face of the earth, as much as was convenient, and after having taken sweet council together, in prayer and supplication before God, acknowledged our sins and transgressions which had caused our head to be taken from our midst; and then have called on young Joseph, and held him up before the congregation of Israel to take his father's place in the flesh! Then should he have received intelligence of our forgiveness of our sins and transgressions, and we had then went on and finished the temple according to revelations of God, and the words of his servants." -Church History, vol. 3, 789-91.

We now give the letters of Brn. Lewis, Whitehead, and Landers.

BOYNE, Mich., July 16, 1901. EDITORS OF HERALD, Lamoni, Iowa.

Dear Brethren:-I inclose you two letters I received before my uniting with the church in 1892 that it might be well to put on record. Bro. Landers' letter in particular to me is of importance as one of the many witnesses of the divine calling of Bro. Joseph.

In Bro. Whitehead's letter he says Hyrum anointed him, Joseph, his father, ordained and set him apart for said office, etc. Will you please explain in the HERALD the difference between an anointing and an ordination, and also tell us what he was ordained to, or Yours in bonds, C. G. LEWIS. to be.

LAMONI, Iowa, September 25, 1891. Dear Brother and Friend:-Your favor just received. Your question is fully answered in the discourses printed in "Food for Thought," I heard them delivered myself, and hundreds besides me. I also know that his son Joseph, our present prophet and president, was anointed, blessed, and ordained to be his successor in office, holding all the gifts and blessings belonging to said office as the first elder of the Church of Ieoffice as the first elder of the Church of Jesus Christ. I am a living witness to his being so set apart by direct commandment from heaven. I was in Joseph's office as his secretary at the time Hyrum anointed him; Joseph, his father, ordained and set him apart for said office and labor of love. I am a living witness to these things. With direspect, etc. Yours in bonds,

JAMES WHITEHEAD. With due

Lamoni, Iowa, the 19th of June, 1890. Beloved Friend:—You do not address me as a brother, and I suppose your intention is honest in the inquiries you make, and I will give you a truthful and honest reply. I was Saints on October the 7th day, 1836, by Elder John E. Page, and was confirmed and or-dained by him and James Blakeslee to the office of an elder, and immediately began to preach. The same fall, after preaching in a private house, a man came to me and inquired of me if I could tell him how that Book of Mormon came into the world. I said, No, and immediately a young man arose to his feet and began to speak in tongues, in which he described the form and shape of the Hill Cumorah. Immediately in vision I was on the hill and standing at the southeast corner of the stone box, in which the plates were deposited. The top stone was moved to the north from the northwest to the southeast corner of the box, so as to expose to me the whole inside of the box. And while I gazed with wonder at the contents the Lord commanded me to bear my testimony to the truth of the Book of Mormon so long as I lived. did not record the time, but it was in the fall of 'thirty-six.

All I have written above transpired in anada. We came to Illinois in thirty-eight. Canada. On the sixth day of April, in the year 1839, was the first time that I saw Joseph Smith. the Lord's seer and prophet to this genera-tion. From that time till the death of Joseph there was nothing transpired relating to your next question. And after his death many false leaders arose striving to take his place, which caused great confusion. I ceased to preach, but did not cease to pray. One of our neighbors had dug a stock well in a remote place, and had drawn out the earth with a scraper, so that I could walk down into the well; and on passing the well I went down into it to pray. While there the Lord talked to me as a man would talk to his friend, and forbade me to follow any of them, saying that in his own time he would call Joseph, the oldest son of the Seer, to fill his father's place; and also bade me commence preaching. This that I now write transpired in the summer of 1846, and is the first indication that I had of Joseph's call to preside over the church.

In obedience to the command I commenced to preach. The scattered Saints continued to meet in conference on the sixth day of April in each year, until the year 1860. That year we met at Amboy; and on my way to conference, when about twenty miles distant from the place, the Lord said to me: you get to Amboy you will see Joseph there, and he will take the lead of the church; and all honest souls out of all the factions of the several parties will merge into this church, and there shall never more be an entire rejection of the church. When I got to Amboy I found Joseph there, and all things transpired as had been told me. And he has continued to preside over the church till now, to the honor of God and the good of the

I want two months of being ninety-six years old, and this letter is my own penmanship.

JOHN LANDERS.

The testimonies of Lyman Wight, Bro. Whitehead, Father Landers, and of President Smith himself agree nicely, and together form a strong chain of evidence concerning a matter F. M. S. of great importance.

MOVING TO ZION.

Many letters have been published in the HERALD which have been written in praise of certain parts of the country, and in which the writers hold out inducements for Saints to This matter move to such places. has been mentioned editorially, but we again desire to call attention to the fact that Saints should be very careful how they do this. As is well known to many in the church, there are many who are waiting for a chance to move into the "regions round about." These people in reading the glowing accounts some of the brethren write of certain parts of the country are liable to make choice of location which shall prove to be different than they desired. This, of course, is not so likely to happen where one follows the plan of "looking before he leaps." But if one depends entirely upon accounts written by others he is likely to be disappointed.

God has said that we should do all things in order, and he has given us some instructions concerning this very matter:

And again, inasmuch as there is land obtained, let there be workmen sent forth, of all kinds, unto this land, to labor for the saints of God. Let all these things be done And let the privileges of the lands be made known, from time to time, by the bishop or agent of the church; and let the work of the gathering be not in haste, nor by flight, but let it be done as shall be counseled by the elders of the church at the conferences, according to the knowledge which they receive from time to time. - Doctrine and Covenants, sec. 58, par. 12.

See also section 117, paragraph 11. At a joint council of the Presidency, Twelve, and Bishopric, held at Lamoni, Iowa, April 20, 1894, in accordance with instructions given in section 122, paragraph 13, among other resolutions adopted we find the following:

Resolved that all parties wishing to change their location be recommended to correspond with the bishopric for information.

The general bishopric and the bishops in the stakes of Lamoni and Independence are quite well acquainted with the lands in Zion and the regions round about, and the wisdom of the resolution adopted by the joint council is evident to any who will give it a moment's thought. Hence as has been before advised through the columns of the HERALD, persons who contemplate moving into the regions round about, or who even contemplate changing location, should communicate with the bishopric for information regarding localities to which they desire to move. If the members of the bishopric addressed are not thoroughly familiar with that part of the country about which information is desired, it will be easy for them to seek that information in places where the real situation will be learned.

We are confident that if Saints contemplating changing location will do as the above-quoted resolution advises, good will result both to the individuals and to the church. have now a number of bishops in various parts of the land, whose business relations with the Saints throughout their districts make them quite thoroughly acquainted with the general conditions existing in those regions and hence they are well qualified to render good advice.

Since, then, there has been instructions given whereby persons moving into the regions round about are expected to deport themselves, we deem it unwise, to say the least, for persons to write to the HERALD, or other church papers, sounding the praises of any one particular part of the country with the view to influencing Saints to settle there. Leave this matter of influencing or advising to the authorities in the church who are supposed, by reason of their office, to be in position to give unbiased and wholesome advice. We have received such letters of late which have not been printed, and it is not at all improbable that fewer of them will appear in the future than in the past.

A MONTANA EDITOR ON THE BOOK OF MORMON.

Bro. Gomer R. Wells has sent us a number of clippings from various papers of Helena, Montana, indicating that he has been active in getting our faith before the people. Most of the articles represent us quite fairly, and in some instances where there was any great misrepresentation Bro. Wells succeeded in making corrections.

One of the papers comments editorily as follows:

THE BOOK OF MORMON.

With one of the prominent lights of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints in this city, interest attaches to the origin of this somewhat remarkable organization of Christian worshipers.

The elder Joseph smith, father of the present head of the church, was regarded as a prophet by his followers, having claimed that he found in a hill in the state of New York certain plates purporting to have been a history of the people who lived on the American continent before the days of the modern Indian.

He was directed to the hiding place of these plates by an angel, and though the writing upon them was in an ancient language he was given the power to read them.

The "Book of Mormon" is the translation of these metallic relics of ye olden time, the man Mormon having been the last scribe of his race, who deposited the history of his people where it could subsequently be found.

Though it has been claimed that one Solomon Spalding wrote the book, as a novel, and that Smith and a fellow conspirator stole the manuscripts, there is no substantial proof of this accusation.

The writer read the book years ago and found it to be of a high moral type, covering what purported to be the sacred history of early America, as the Old Testament covers that of ancient Asia and a part of Africa. There is nothing of an internal character to justify the belief that it was written as a romance by a skillful novelist, but rather that it may have been prepared for the purpose realized—the organization of a new sect.

There is nothing in the book inconsistent with the highest type of a Christian life, and though it gave its name to the "Mormon" Church, the Brighamites—or followers of Brigham Young—broke away from its teachings and adopted polygamy.

The Book of Mormon expressly declares that "no man shall have save it be one wife and concubines he shall have none," while the Utah offshoot from the original faith made plurality of wives a religious ordinance.

The Latter Day Saints believe in taking the scriptures literally as they read, instead of allegorically, and in bringing them down to date, thus proving, in many respects, the inapplicability of the literal text of the sacred word.

Their lines of thought make them a devout and righteous people, intent upon obedience to the divine will, as they understand it, despite the peculiarities of their tenets and the romantic conditions of their origin as a church.—Helena (Mont.) Herald, July 3, 1901.

THE Historical department has been at work on the matter of getting corrections in histories and encyclopedias, and is meeting with success in some places, as the following letter will show:

Editors' Rooms, American Book Company, Washington Square,

NEW YORK July 13, 1901. MR HEMAN C SMITH Lamoni, Iowa

Dear Sir:-We have your favor of the 11th inst., and will make the change you indicate for paragraph 468 of Shinn's History of the United States with the exception of a slight modification in the last sentence. write this sentence it reads: "In 1852 the doctrine of polygamy was introduced into their (the Utah Mormons) belief, which made them still more objectionable to men who loved the Bible and the old English law." We believe that the Utah Mormons claim that the doctrine of polygamy was really introduced into the Mormon belief much earlier, but was not publicly preached and practiced until 1852. We have therefore modified your last sentence so that it now reads: "In 1852 the doctrine of polygamy was publicly preached in Utah, which made the sect still more objectionable to men who loved the Bible and the old English law." With this slight change in phraseology the sentence will probably be as acceptable to you and more acceptable to the Utah Mormons than the phraseology you use.

Very respectfully,
AMERICAN BOOK COMPANY.
Russell Hinman.

Many of the Saints will be pleased to learn that Shinn's History has thus been corrected.

A COPY of the Augusta Methodist for July, 1901, published at Annex, Virginia, has been sent us, and in it we note the following paragraph:

Mormonism is one of the live questions of the religious world. It is sending its missionaries far and near. They have a regular conference in Virginia, with about seventy preachers, and they are starting two missionaries to Japan. It is time Christian people were combating its errors.

If being fought by the Christian people would kill "Mormonism," it would have died long ago, for "Mormonism" from its inception has been vigorously fought by Christian people. The editor of the Methodist undoubtedly has reference to the Utah church, and he probably has not yet learned that there is a people generally classed among the "Mormons" who have fought the errors of the Utah church for many years, and who stand squarely on the teachings of the Bible, making them the standard by which all religious teachings are measured. He probably does not know that there is a people who claim that the teachings of Joseph Smith were in harmony with the Bible, and who also claim that the abominations which have characterized the Utah church were introduced after the death of Joseph Smith by usurpers of position and authority.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

Bro. W. C. Cummings, of Chicago, July 14, writes:

I derive a great deal of benefit from reading the church papers. I am trying to do what I can for the advancement of the work. I was out over one hundred dollars by sickness in early spring; but I am thankful I am spared to still help in this great latter-day work. We are at considerable expense here in Chicago to keep the work up, and there is so much sickness, and we have to look after them and help them with our means. At present our beloved Bro. Sheehy, in charge, is not with us, and we miss his genial presence among us. We are making preparations for quarterly conference in September, when we expect to have a tent and take care of all who come. We expect to give Chicago a latter-day shaking up then.

Under date of July 17, Bro. William Hawkins writes from Voris, Missouri:

Still very hot and dry here. Everything parched, and late crops will soon be past redemption unless we get rain. We have not been used to seasons of this kind here, and we feel it keenly; but strange things are developing at present, and stranger coming. The "cleaning up" time is near at hand.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

We have received a number of copies of various hand bills from different parts of the country, which indicate that the brethren of the ministry are alive to the work of getting our faith before the people, and also that it is sometimes necessary to advertise in this way to acquaint the people with the fact that our elders are in town. Among those received lately are those by Brn. Barmore and Knisley, who are at Forest, Canada; Bro. R. C. Evans, at Hillsburg, Canada; and Bro. D. C. White, at Darlington, Missouri. Brn. Evans and White saw fit to issue challenges for debate.

The Mississippi Valley has been afflicted with a season of some of the hottest weather experienced in many years. Sunday and Monday were extremely hot days, the thermometer at Lamoni registering from 106 to 112 degrees in the shade on the street, and some thermometers even registering higher. The drought covers a district which is circular in form, and comprises the eastern part of Nebraska, all of Kansas, Iowa, and Missouri, and parts of Illinois, Arkansas, Indian Territory, and Oklahoma. The Governor of Missouri, in response to petitions, set apart Sunday, the 21st of July as a day of fasting and prayer, that God might relieve the country from the severe dry weather. Crops are already damaged considerably, and if the dry weather continues much longer the damage will be excessive.

GRACELAND COLLEGE NOTES.

LAMONI, Iowa, July 17.

E. L. KELLEY, Lamoni, Iowa;

Dear Brother:—Inclosed find one dollar to

Dear Brother:—Inclosed find one dollar to be applied on the college debt. For several years I have been waiting and hoping for the time when I could express my convictions on this matter, accompanied by a donation of not less than five dollars. But as the hopedfor time has not come, and the prospect does not improve, I send all that I consistently can, hoping that the debt will soon be paid. I am one of the number who did not need the commandment of the late revelation to convince me that the debt should be paid, and that the debt was a "great" one for this people. I have held both in private and in public, when I had occasion to speak of the matter, that "this great debt" should be paid, and paid promptly; that every unnecessary delay was injurious to the work, and sinful. Furthermore, I have believed, and do now believe, that in this, as in other matters, the utmost candor and frankness should be manifested toward the people. A righteous cause does not need any degree of sharp practice or deception to insure its success.

does not need any degree of starp practice of deception to insure its success.

The Lord said, "The college debt should be paid." Let us pay it, promptly and cheerfully; but let us not be guilty of the folly of trying to commit him to that which he has not spoken. However, I am glad that the Lord did see fit to say (when speaking of the ministers of the church): "Their right to free speech, their right to liberty of conscience, does not permit them as individuals to frustrate the commands of the body in conference assembly. They are sent out as ministers to preach the gospel, and their voices if opposed to what may be presented to the conference should be heard in the conferences, and not in the mission fields, to prevent the accomplishment of the object with which the officers of the church have been intrusted."—D and C. 125:16. Revelation of April 15, 1901. Your brother, Bro. Edward Williams sends in a good list from Wales, and expected to do more, but did not have sufficient time to see all desired.

A brother sends in one dollar "to be used for paying Graceland College debt, sent by a poor girl that works for her living for less than $1.00 a week most of the time."

Sr. Susan J. Turner, of Marshall, Oklahoma Territory, writes:

Inclosed please find money order for Graceland. I only wish I had a great deal more to send, as I am very desirous of seeing Graceland prosper as I have two little girls I hope to see educated there some day.

"CHRIST IS."

From the idea to be gleaned by the language of St. John as found in the eighth verse of chapter 4, book of Revelation, we would understand that Christ was, that Christ is, that Christ is to come,

Holy, holy, holy, Lord God Almighty, which was, and is, and is to come.

But the idea that Christ really is, is the particular point we have before us. Paul in reasoning with the people of Athens concerning the Godhead told them he hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and that they should seek the Lord, that he was not far from every one of us, for in him we live and move and have our being. And to impress the idea of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man more forcibly upon them, he quoted from the language of certain of their own poets:

For we are also his offspring.—Acts 17:28.

As we read the record given us of the wonderful works of God in the past, and learn the lessons of life which were learned by others after a dear experience, we certainly realize we are enjoying a great privilege. We are told by the Apostle Paul:

Now all these things happened unto them [Israel] for ensamples: and they are written for our admonition.—1 Cor. 10:11.

Evidently this is referred to by the apostle to the end that we should profit by the experience of others and not "lust after evil and sinful things," as some of them did. The proposition that God did, for the purpose of destroying the works of the Devil, send Christ into the world to redeem and save the world from sin, involves the idea that Christ would ever and continually be the Savior of men; but his especial care would of course be directed "to those who believe."

It is this class who profess to believe that we notice more particularly and in this I do not mean to include what is known as the Christian world, but those who are in fact of the household of faith. In the writings of St. Paul, in speaking of the failures and disappointments and overthrow at different times of the work of God, he assigns as the principal reason, the cause of unbelief; and if we trace the thought out to a practical demonstration with ourselves, we may sometimes learn the cause of our slothfulness, sinfulness, and evil-doings to be either directly or indirectly traced to unbelief. We have before us, to battle against, the triune evils; the world, the flesh, and the Devil. Christ evidently knew something of what the conflict would be, for he prayed:

I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou shouldest keep them from the evil.—John 17:15.

Christ knew the importance and value of a well-lived life. He tried to impress upon the minds of his followers that they stood in a responsible position before the world, when he said:

Ye are the light of the world.

He knew also that the best way to exemplify the divine life, and most effectually impress the minds of the people of the world, was that we should

Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven.—Matt. 5:16

The thought suggests itself to me that since we have confidence and belief in Christ sufficient to cause us to accept and obey the initiatory ordinances of the gospel covenant, and thus put ourselves in the way of eternal life, we ought also to make it a study that we may learn to what extent we may be helped out of and over the ills and evils of life, that our salvation from sin may be secured.

The ancient prophets and patriarchs and men of God fondly awaited the presence of the Man of men, to whom they all gave witness.

They are of that spiritual meat, they drank of the same spiritual drink, for they drank of that spiritual rock that followed them, and that rock was Christ, as is stated in 1 Corinthians 10:1-3. Like us of this modern time, Christ was in prospect, not a divine reality, away off in the future, to be revealed in time to come. They could tell of his great preëminence, his marvelous work, but they forgot that he then stood ready to help them conquer their own wicked lusts; and so it is said:

But with many of them God was not well pleased—1 Cor. 10:5.

Shall history repeat itself in latterday Israel? We fondly anticipate and look for the coming King, the wonderful Savior, the mighty God, the immaculate, everliving Christ; but will we, like Israel of old, forget that Christ is now not only willing, but anxious, to help us out of all our trials? He can sympathize with us in our afflictions as no one else can. He can and will assist us in bearing the burdens of this inconstant, uncertain life. He is the great Shepherd and Bishop of our souls; the Apostle and merciful High Priest of our profession. He asks the world to follow him and he wishes his disciples to allow him the privilege of leading them.

By still waters? No, not always so; Ofttimes the heavy tempests round me blow And o'er my soul the waves and billows go.

But when the storm beats loudest and I cry Aloud for help, the Master standeth by And whispereth to my soul: "Lo, it is L."

Oh, for a greater confidence in Christ! If we could all possess it! if we could all but realize the efficacy of his power to save and protect the soul.

And more than this, where'er the pathway lead,

He gives to me no helpless, broken reed, But his own hand, sufficient for my need.

As a church we are assuming the position of the children of God, and representing the highest standard of moral excellence in the world. Our constant prayer and desire should be that we bring our lives personally and collectively up to a condition that would be at par with our claim to the spiritual leadership of Jesus Christ. Our work is founded on eternal principles, and we are told in the Book of Mormon, by Mosiah, that there is nothing that can overthrow it, save it be our transgressions and wickedness.

What has hindered the progress of this latter-day message most? Persecution from without? Never! indeed no! It has been wickedness, unrighteousness, ungodliness, and such like, that has grieved the Holy Spirit. stayed the all-powerful hand of God. and Israel of latter days has at times been left to walk in the dark, because they did not walk in the light; they forgot that "Christ is." When we break off our sins by works of righteousness, when we return unto the Lord, when we are prepared, then the times of refreshing will come from the presence of the Lord, and he will work in us, by us, and with us, for our own salvation and the salvation of others. The heathen may rage, people imagine vain things, but good works will put to silence the ignorance of foolish men.

When we surrender to the Devil it is only his opportunity for getting in his best work, and any way is fair with him. Our own actions shall determine almost exclusively what our success shall be. Paul says if we walk in the Spirit we will not fulfill the lusts of the flesh. And who has not felt the force of the words:

I need thee every hour, Stay thou near by; Temptations lose their power When thou art nigh.

And the way to have Christ near us is to live near to him. Paul says that which separates us from Christ, and also others, among whom we shine as lights in the world, is the lusts of the flesh, which are these: adultery, fornication, uncleanness, wrath, envyings, drunkenness, etc.

As this world grows older the more wicked will it become. The Devil is now come down in great power upon the sons of men, until but few will be saved out of the world. The righteous will scarcely be saved, so Paul says. As a church we want to be upon the watchtower, guarding our souls and the souls of others; and the best way we can do this is to exemplify the divine life always ourselves, and thus fulfill the royal law of Christ. If we do these things we shall never fail. If we ever remember at all times that Christ is, and look to him continually to help us, he will save to the uttermost. Above all, my brethren, remember the injunction of the apostle, "Put on the whole armor of God that you may be able to withstand the wiles of the Devil."

ON REASON.

To reason is to explain to the understanding all things that may need to be explained. Many men claim to reason who do not even understand that they do not reason, for they have gathered some facts and opinions which they believe to be right, and all that agrees with them they say is right, while all that disagrees they declare to be wrong.

Then, too, reason is distinct from debate, from the fact that it asks what is truth in all things, that a knowledge of all truth may be obtained for the truth's sake, and not to establish men in their opinions and beliefs, for many men argue or debate only for the sake of their beliefs and opinions, who care but little as to what is truth, if they can only gain the mastery in a war of words. These are they of whom it may truly be said they are forever learning, but never come to a knowledge of the truth, having not a love of the truth, but of their own selves, as men who are so wise and learned that what they do not know is not worth knowing.

It is reason that makes men distinct from the brutes. There is no greater gift known to natural man than the gift of reason; but before men can truly reason for good to themselves they must set aside their opinions and beliefs, and set up as their standard the word of God, and reason therefrom; then they will become truly wise in all things, for they shall be wise unto their own salvation. Now if we truly believe the Bible to be God's word, or even believe that it contains God's word, then wherever we find it written that word is supreme, for God is the highest of all; therefore his word is a sure guide to truth, for it is truth.

The young man said he believed the Yes. Well, what do you understand this means: The earth was without form, and void. Now the scientists say the earth was not formed, but has always been in existence. Oh, well, yes, the earth always was. Nay, how could a thing be always in existence that is described as being at one time without form, and void. Oh, surely you do not believe the Lord fuse to reason, and deny the power of God made the earth out of nothing? Nay, young man, out of nothing nothing can come. I was not saying what I believed, but seeking to understand what is written in God's word.

Oh, well, that is one of the mistakes of Moses; you know men have made many discoveries since the time of Moses. Yes, men say that Moses wrote the story of Creation from the mythology of Egypt, but Moses does not so state in any of his writings, but that the Lord God appeared unto him in a burning bush, and instructed him. Who is right, Moses or those men who give us no proof but their own word and suppositions?

John Brown has built a fine brick cottage, this cottage has form, and is built on a lot of land; but there was a time when it was without form, and void, in fact was not there; but when he concluded to build that cottage he brought together all things needful for its construction, and the brick was made out of clay that the brickmakers use to make brick. So, then, out of the great mass of clay was formed the brick of which the cottage was built. Thus, then, out of the great mass at his command did the Lord create the earth, when he said, Let the dry land appear, and it was so. Is not this the true way to reason on the story of creation?

Supposing there was no clay, then men could not make brick. What is clay? A substance God has created for the use of man. Of what did he make clay? Man cannot tell. Nay, as to how came all the rocks, shales, coals, and other materials that make up this wonderful mother earth, man cannot tell, or in any way explain. So we have to be content with the revealed word of God, that he did create the earth for the abode of man, and by his power was it formed, and all the beautiful things that are thereon, made he for the use and benefit of man; and if we but think of the many wonderful things that are given us to enjoy, has not man much cause to rejoice, and be thankful to know of such a bountiful provider as that almighty power, that supreme intelligence we know as God, whom our fathers called the Great Good, which he really is.

Who can explain his power, who shall declare his glory? Surely not feeble, helpless men, who cannot even command the life in their own bodies! Should they not in all good reason bow before him in humble thanks and adoration for the wonderful gifts of his love?

The creeds of men have darkened their minds, as far as reason on the word of God is concerned, for it is only in the traditions of their fathers and the creeds of long ago that they worship God. And because of this there is much contention, for they re-

God as revealed in the gospel and teachings of Jesus Christ. Hence how true it is, Darkness covers the earth, and gross darkness the minds of the people. And who can aid or assist them unless they are willing to acknowledge the word of God as supreme in all things: for the key of wisdom is reason, and the only knowledge of real worth is the word of God, and he who has these has the keys to joy, happiness, and peace.

WILLIAM PENMAN CAIRNS.

SLANDERERS UNMASKED.

Sometime during the early part of last spring, while Elder R. C. Evans was in the Western States, in consequence of some of the leading and wealthy people of the community having been baptized into the Latter Day Saint Church the sleeping malice and hatred of the Baptist and Campbellite Churches were aroused in the persons of their respective ministers, the Rev. William R. Burrell and Rev. T. Alfred Flemming, both of whom broke out in violent tirades of abuse, and all the old slanders of the dead past were retold, such as "Spalding Romance," "Polygamy," etc. The brethren wrote to Elder R. C. Evans, requesting him to take action in the matter. He replied, through the Hillsburg Beaver, that upon his return to Canada he would call upon the gentlemen and request them to retract their slanderous statements, or affirm them in public debate.

Several letters passed through the Beaver, on both sides. The Baptist minister most peremptorily refused to debate under any consideration whatever, stating to Bro. Evans personally, in the presence of witnesses, that he had neither the time, inclination, nor ability to meet him on the platform.

Not so with the Rev. T. Alfred Flemming. This noisy young man and famous Ohio debater, who had "probed Mormonism to the bottom," was ready to debate, but made so many foolish conditions that a discerning public readily discovered that he was working a bluff game, and had no intention of debating.

Here is a specimen of his conditions: The Latter Day Saints must pay him thirty dollars per night, and it must be paid him six nights in advance. In event of the town hall not being large enough to hold the crowd, the Saints must provide a tent with a seating capacity of one thousand. This is but a sample of the conditions imposed.

Bro. Evans then formulated three propositions for each preacher, requesting them to affirm the statements made in their lectures. Upon a point blank refusal on their part to affirm anything in debate, Bro. Evans at once wrote a two column article in the local paper, exposing their dishonorable methods, riddling their cowardice, advertising the propositions they refused to discuss, announcing that he would unmask the preachers by exposing their methods, and examining their so-called evidence.

He requested me to accompany him to Hillsburg, and in event of debate to act as his moderator; or, if otherwise, as chairman of his meetings. We left London on Tuesday forenoon, the 2d inst., for Rockwood, Ontario, where we were met by Bro. Edwin Awry, who drove us to his beautiful residence. That same evening, notwithstanding the sweltering heat, a large audience greeted Bro. Evans, and numbers stood outside, attentive listeners for over two hours.

He treated on the proposition, as publicly affirmed by them, but which they refused to stand by, viz.: "Resolved, That Joseph Smith professed to receive a revelation from God, au thorizing the practice of polygamy, and that he taught and practiced polygamy." The speaker first paid his compliments to the encyclopedias, showing their general unreliability, and that they contradicted each other. and, very frequently, themselves. He then produced the evidence in the "Temple Lot suit;" Nauvoo testimonies of 1843; "Smucker;" Emma Smith, the Prophet's wife; Mrs. White; Bancroft; Bidamon; Governor Ford: Fanny Stenhouse: George Q. Cannon; Clawson; Brigham Young, and others, showing conclusively that Joseph Smith was innocent of the above allegation.

He then showed, clearly, that these preachers had done violence to the known rule of evidence by accepting the self-contradictory testimony of the infamous Brigham Young as against the combined testimony on the other side.

Elder Evans was at his best and waxed brilliantly eloquent in his exposure of the contemptible methods employed by those preachers in slandering the name of a dead man, and an innocent people; but the climax was not reached till he showed, by conference records, that polygamy was indorsed in foreign countries by Episcopalians, Presbyterians, Baptists, Congregationalists, and others. This revelation caused considerable sensation in that large and intelligent audience, and was as a bolt out of a clear sky.

He then closed by hurling a defiant challenge to the world to produce one clause in favor of polygamy, from the records of the General Conference, over which Joseph Smith presided, or that presided over by his legal successor and son, the present president of the church.

The second evening, Wednesday, July 3, another large audience greeted our brother. He took up the following proposition, as publicly asserted by the preachers.

"Resolved, That the Book of Mormon is a fraud, taken from Rev. Manuscript Solomon Spalding's Found, and arranged by Joseph Smith and Sydney Rigdon to deceive the people." After examining the encyclopedias on the matter, he read Pratt's reply to Sutherland, in 1842, wherein he shows that Rigdon did not see the Book of Mormon till late in 1830, when he, (Pratt) and O. Cowdery presented it to him, and that he never saw Joseph Smith till 1831. Also, Rigdon's letter of May 27, 1839, showing he had nothing whatever to do with the "Manuscript Found." Also Sydney Rigdon's daughter's testimony, wherein she gives the statement of her father, made to clergymen around him, "At a time," as she said, "when he had but little hope of living from one day to another." We here append the dying man's statement:

As I expect to die, and meet my Maker, I know nothing about where the manuscript of the Mormon Bible came from.

Also another statement was presented where Rigdon said:

I know nothing of its origin, [he Bok of Mormon] only what Joseph Smith, David Whitmer, and Martin Harris stated in regard to it. I believe that the Book of Mormon was found just as Joseph Smith stated. Joseph Smith was a prophet, and this world will find it out some day.

Also Wm. Small's testimony, given in 1876, containing the statement of Patterson, the Pittsburg publisher, in which he declares that Sydney Rigdon did not obtain the Spalding story at his office, nor did Rigdon work for him when the Spalding story was in the office, as alleged.

Bro. Evans then gave a history, locating Rigdon, and giving an account of his work from 1822 to 1830, showing clearly that he had nothing whatever to do with the Spalding Romance, the Book of Mormon, or Joseph Smith during those years. He then took up D. H. Bays' work, one of the latest publications of Campbellism on Mormonism, in which he says:

The Spalding story is a failure; do not attempt to rely upon it—it will let you down.

He next turned his attention to the Spalding story as told by the Rev. Tyron Edwards, Green and others. He gave an exposure of their nonsensical and contradictory stories, in which they try to connect Joseph Smith with the Spalding Romance, in this way: Solomon Spalding began to write his Romance in 1809. Joseph Smith, at this time, was a neighbor of Spalding's, and used to spend his evenings listening to Spalding read his Manuscript. Smith borrowed this Manuscript to read to his family at home.

In the refutation of this, Bro. Evans showed that Joseph Smith was born December 23, 1805. If the above statement of the reverend gentleman be true, Joseph Smith was a neighbor of Spalding's, listened to him read his manuscript, and borrowed the same to read to his family at home, and all this when he was but three or four years of age.

To prove that Joseph borrowed this manuscript, Green testifies that he heard Smith tell Spalding that he had made a Mormon Bible out of it. He testified to having a conversation with Spalding as late as 1827, and that he has a letter from Mr. Jenkins, who testified that he saw and conversed with Spalding in 1829.

In refutation of the above Bro. Evans showed by the encyclopedias and other histories, including the testimony of Spalding's widow, that he (Spalding) still held his manuscript complete in 1812; that he or his wife took it away with them when they left Ohio, presented it to Patterson, the Pittsburg publisher, for publication, he returning it safely to Spalding, and that he (Spalding) held it in his possession till his death in 1816.

Queries: Did Green and Jenkins, et al., talk to Solomon Spalding in 1827 or 1829, if he (Spalding) died in 1816? Did Smith borrow the manuscript, refuse to return it, and make a Mormon Bible out of it, if the story be true, as told by Mrs. Spalding and others, that the manuscript was in their (Spalding's) possession where it remained till the time of his death?

Bro. Evans then showed from the histories that the "Manuscript Found" remained in the possession of Spalding's widow from the time of her husband's death in 1816, till 1834. The Book of Mormon was in print, and thousands of copies in circulation throughout the world in 1830.

In 1834, one D. P. Hurlbut, who was excommunicated from the Latter Day Saints' Church for bad conduct, swore vengeance. He made friends with one E. D. Howe, who was an infidel, and wrote a book against the Bible. Howe was angry because his wife had joined the church. Now these two men, full of spite and unbelief, decided to write a book against the church. D. P. Hurlbut went to Spalding's widow, procured the "Manuscript Found," promised to return it, gave it to Howe; then to spite Joseph Smith, and make money by the sale of their book, they got Wright, Miller, Lake, and others, with the Book of Mormon in their hands, to make up statements, that the Book of Mormon and "Manuscript Found" were similar, and contained same names, etc. Howe fills his book with these statements, which were false, and manufactured to deceive. Hence we have, "Mormonism Unveiled," by E. D. Howe.

In order to cover the trick, they refused to return the "Manuscript Found" to Spalding's widow.

Howe hides it among other manuscripts in his printing office; he forgets where, tells Spalding's widow and others that manuscript was burned.

In 1839 and '40 he sells his printing office to L. L. Rice. The transfer of the printing department was accompanied by a large collection old manuscripts. Years passed away. L. L. Rice removed to Honolulu, Sandwich Islands. In 1884-85, President Fairchilds, of Oberlin College, Ohio, visited Mr. Rice. Looking over old manuscripts, they discover the long lost "Manuscript Found," written by Solomon Spalding. It had been in Mr. Rice's possession for over forty years, and is now on exhibition at the college in Oberlin, Ohio, with the following indorsement on the manuscript:

The writings of Solomon Spalding, proved by Aaron Wright, Oliver Smith, John N. Miller, and others. The testimony of the above-named gentlemen are now in my possession. Signed, D. P. HURLBUT.

Bro. Evans closed by placing before the audience the testimony of L. L. Rice, which says:

Two things are true; first, it is the genuine writing of Solomon Spalding; and second, it is not the original of the Book of Mormon. There is no identity of names, or of persons, or places, and there is no similarity of style between them.

Thus closed one of the most masterly efforts, in refutation of the Spalding Romance theory.

On Thursday evening, the 4th inst., and third of the series of discourses, Bro. Evans sprang a rich treat upon the large audience assembled, taking for his text the following: "Resolved, That the Disciple, Christian, or Campbellite Church is the most egotistical, deceptive, hypocritical, noisy, and vacillating sect in all the civilized world." In proof of this allegation, he quoted copiously from the works of Alexander Campbell, and other leading authors of the Disciple Church, up to date. Also from leading authors of the Baptists, and other denominations. Some of the points were as follows:

He showed that in their sermons and public documents they denounced all reformers as mere pigmies compared to Thomas and Alexander Campbell. Second, they denounce all other churches, both Protestant and Catholic, as being the mother of harlots, and the abominations of the earth; a mess. Third, there is no conversion, regeneration, or salvation to be found in any of the churches outside of the Fourth, that the clergy Disciples. are stigmatized as "textuaries," "scrap doctors," "theoretic doctors," are stigmatized as "hirelings," and "goat milkers." Mr. Flemming was followed right Yet, not with standing all this, in order into the hall by a crowd of young to curry favor and ingratiate them- men and women, who, although they selves into the good graces of the other churches, they ostensibly indorse "these legitimate daughters of the mother of harlots, the Church of Rome" (Mill. Har., vol. 3, p. 362) in their communion, baptisms, revival services, etc.

We would gladly give your readers a full and complete account of this very interesting lecture, but time and space forbid. Suffice it to say, Elder Evans closed by stating that the Disciple Church owes an apology to the Christian world for their indiscriminate, violent, and bitter attack on all other denominations, and that nothing short of a fair, open retraction and apology on the part of that church can ever beget confidence in, and respect for, them.

It is but fair to say that we believe that the double dealing characteristics of that church has been so faithfully exposed by the Saints and others, that except they speedily repent and reform, the time is not far distant when the Disciple Church in Canada will be remembered only as a thing of the past, with pity and contempt.

To show that we have some good and substantial foundation for this thought, we submit the figures as given by the census, and read by Bro. Evans before the audience, showing that in ten years they have lost in membership, seven thousand four hundred and thirty, dropping from 20,193 to 12,763.

On Friday night, the fourth lecture, a somewhat larger crowd than before greeted Bro. Evans. This was owing to the fact that it was whispered that as a result of the pressure brought to bear by the parson's followers, the Rev. T. Alfred Flemming intended to risk his reputation by being present and try to prove himself a man of The meeting was well uncourage. der way before he arrived. Bro. Evans subject was, "The persecution of God's people in all ages," proving the words of Christ, as to both prior to and after his day, "Ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake;" and also, "The time cometh, that whosoever killeth you will think that he doeth God service. And these things will they do unto you, because they have not known the Father, nor That persecuting mobs were frequently led by hireling priests. He was just getting well warmed up to his subject when in walked Mr. Flemming. Bro. Evans had seen that gentleman's picture but once, but his sharp eye recognized the original standing inside the door.

He at once gave Mr. Flemming an invitation to come forward to the platform, promising him half the time for the presentation of his views.

were dressed in respectable looking garb, manifested some symptoms of rowdyism. One lady (save the mark!) threatened to slap a young man's mouth because he asked her to please not make so much noise.

The invitation to Mr. Flemming was as follows: "Mr. Flemming, I have been exposing your methods, both in your unwarranted and unfair attack upon us, and your refusal to affirm the assertions you made against us. If you have any statement to make with regard to the same, consider yourself at perfect liberty; come forward and occupy the platform." After some hesitancy, being urged by his friends, he came forward, but refused to come on the platform. He began by saying he had heard of these meetings, but had heard nothing of what was said. He admitted that he had made assertions as to Joseph Smith being the author of polygamy, professing to have received a revelation authorizing the practice of the same. Also that he had said that the Book of Mormon was a fraud, taken from the "Spalding Romance," etc. That the Latter Day Saint Church is a system of blasphemy, but did not practice polygamy openly. Elder Evans' reply to him was so effective as to convince the people of intellect that Mr. Flemming's allegations were false.

Upon Mr. Flemming interjecting some expressions of dissent, the aforesaid crowd of irrepressible young men and women broke forth into yells of encouragement, realizing that their man needed such. Rendered brave by this backing, he offered to prove every assertion he had made, if Bro. Evans would only affirm they were not true. Fancy such a situation! Just imagine the famous Ohio debater, who only asks thirty dollars a night, and we to pay him, for the especial privilege of being treated to a lot of worn out, and stale old yarns that have been met and refuted years before this rising star of polemics was born. And he did really challenge Elder R. C. Evans to take the affirmative in debate, and prove the old thread-bare yarns, or "assertions," were not true; while he, Mr. Flemming, would take the negative side, and produce the proof, and substantiate every "assertion" he had made. Was it not the very ne plus ultra of profundity?

Bro. Evans then gave an exposition of his opponent's attempt to evade the real question, in such a clear and concise manner that people could and did see the foolish spectacle Mr. Flemming had made of himself.

Finding the situation too hot for him, Mr. Flemming left the hall, followed by his body guard (?) yelling and cheering and waving of handkerchiefs to their heart's content.

On Saturday, the 6th inst., in the fifth lecture Elder Evans again faced a good-sized audience. This was an extended review of the general methods as employed by Mr. Flemming, and there is no need for me to go over the different points as advanced. Bro. Evans was in good form, and his exposition was full, complete, and convincing.

On Sunday, at ten a. m., we had a very pleasant prayer and testimony meeting in our own little chapel in Cedar Valley, Bro. Evans, by request, presiding. At three p. m., he again addressed a large audience in the town hall, Hillsburg, taking for his subject, "Identity," showing the perfect agreement between the Latter Day Saints' Church, and that of the New Testament. Also showing the discrepancy between the Disciple, Christian, or Campbellite Church, and same standard. He took the pet words of Discipleism from 1827 down. "Where the Bible speaks, we speak, and when the Bible is silent, we are This he characterized as "the most misleading statement ever coined by any human sect to deceive."

Thus closed Bro. Evans' defense of our work, and splendid exhibition of the Campbellite fraud.

On Sunday night, at 7:30, he addressed a good turnout of Saints and friends in the Saints' chapel, Cedar Valley, on "the restitution of all things."

On the next day I drove him to Rockwood station, where I saw him off on the train, parting from him with regret, as our little association here was a very pleasant one; but this life is made up of meetings and partings, to fit us for that life where parting will be no more. He was called home, and farther, to preach a funeral sermon, and unite a happy couple in the bonds of "holy matrimony."

Instead of going at once to the field to which I was appointed for this summer, viz., the Lake Erie counties east from Waterford to Niagara Falls, Elder Evans has decided to leave me here. I am now with the Cedar Valley branch. I expect to visit in turn the Garafraxa branch; Masonville and north at Maple Valley; the Proton branch, Egremont and Listowel. Will the brethren kindly accept this notice, but I cannot give dates. Please think over, and, if possible, arrange for any openings that may possibly be made.

All honor to Elder R. W. Tarzwell, president of Cedar Valley branch, and Priest King Cooper, with the Saints, for their noble stand against the slanders that were hurled against them.

Ever yours for the truth,

A. E. MORTIMER.

HILLSBURG, Ont., July 9.

ARE WE DRIFTING?

Two by two let them be sent.

Is the church justified in not complying with the above commandment? Or in other words, Is the present system of appointing missionaries, sending them individually to specified limited fields, a breach of the law of God?

These questions have long troubled the mind of the writer, and he has been prompted to write and elicit, if possible, the judgment of the better minds of the priesthood upon the matter. He has no desire to antagonize and cause friction, but simply to examine and see if we may not be departing so far from the letter of the law as to lose, to a certain extent at least, a portion of the spirit of the law.

In section 41, Doctrine and Covenants, paragraph 1, we find this:

Hearken, O ye elders of my church whom I have called: behold, I give unto you a commandment, that ye shall assemble yourselves together, to agree upon my word, and by the prayer of your faith ye shall receive my law, that ye may know how to govern my church, and have all things right before me.

This commandment presumes that up to this present date the church was either without the law, or, having an imperfect understanding of the necessary rules found in the law. was in need of the Lord speaking and making plain the obscure parts, and revealing his law so plainly that there should be no confusion, nor condemnation resulting from a failure to understand; but if there should be condemnation it would be from a neglect to do rather than from a want of knowledge of the law. I gather that God had in mind to give in a condensed form his law for the government of the church, and that when given it should be strictly complied with, and that it would be so plain that controversy ought to cease in regard to the law or its application.

I believe it is admitted without controversy that we had the principles of the law in the Bible and Book of Mormon ere this command to get together was given; but a unity of understanding as to detail and application in church government, was lacking, and God designed to give explicit law in detail, and expected a full and complete adherence and execution when received, as is evidenced in paragraph 2 of same section:

Ye shall see that my law is kept. Also paragraph 1, section 42:

Again I say unto you, Hearken and hear and obey the law which I shall give unto you.

There can be no mistake in this. I believe all will admit the above without controversy. And in the same month and year, we learn the Saints did gather for the purpose expressed. See section 42, paragraph 1 and in paragraph 2 we read:

Behold, verily I say unto you, this first commandment, that ye shall go forth in my name every one of you excepting my servants Joseph Smith, Jr., and Sidney Rigdon. . . . And ye shall go forth in the power of my Spirit, preaching my gospel, two by two, in my name.

In this first commandment we learn the primitive object of the revealment of the law, that the gospel might be preached. And the first prescribed rule of action is, "Two by two," let them go. Are we not justified in thinking this to be a fundamental rule of action in sending out missionaries? In June of the same year, section 52, paragraph 3, when the ministry were commanded to take their journey up to the land of Missouri, they were paired off two by two, by the Lord himself, who says:

And let them journey from thence, preaching the word by the way, saying none other things than that which the prophets and apostles have written, and that which is taught them by the Comforter through the prayer of faith. Let them go two by two, and thus let them preach by the way in every congregation, baptizing by water, and the laying on of the hands by the water's side.

And again, in August of the same year, when the elders were returning to Ohio, they were once more commanded to go two by two, "And to preach the word." We might possibly think these were special occasions and the rule a special one to meet existing circumstances were it not for the fact that in section 42 the rule is the beginning of the general law to the church, that the church "might have all things right before me." Now it seems plain that God so wrought and commanded the church to so do; but have the conditions changed, so that the church may safely abandon the rule or comply with it only in part? Then the church was in its infancy, with no bounded missions nor districts; no missions organized with a missionary in charge; and under those conditions was the rule to be observed, and when the conditions would admit then might the rule be changed? This is the question which puzzles some of the simple ones.

There may be some who so look upon the matter, and it is possible they may urge a parallel is manifest because, in the work of the Reorganization, as early as March, 1863, the Lord again commanded the church,

And moreover it is expedient in me that my elders in going to declare my gospel to the nations shall observe the pattern which I have given. Two by two let them be sent, that they may be a help and support to each other in their ministry.

Here it is said is the parallel; the church in the infancy of the Reorganization, like the early organization, did not have the means to support the ministry, nor was the work divided, limitations set, and districts organized, etc., etc.; but so soon as the conditions justified, necessity being the law, the rule may safely be changed or moderated, the rule holding good when sending elders to foreign missions, but after the division of the United States into mission fields and districts, it is considered, these missions being in charge of a specially appointed minister, there is no actual necessity for sending them two by two, in what is called these home missions. This is the reasoning of some to meet the charge made that the church has departed from the law in sending out missionaries, one here and one there, ignoring the specific command made in 1831 and reaffirmed in 1863:

Two and two let them be sent, that they may be a help and support to each other.

While there may be some weight in this argument, does it meet or do away with the reason why they should be sent two by two, i. e., that they may be a help and a support to each other? your writer thinks not; and his experience has taught him that much of the trouble and distress which has come upon the church in the early days as well as in the days of the Reorganization might have been prevented if the rule had been strictly adhered to; for, where two are traveling and laboring together, they are a help to each other in case of controversy and discussion, and there is not the opportunity for the adversary to tempt and lead astray that there is when the minister is They are a support to each alone. When temptation is strong upon the servants of God, being but human, they act as a guard upon, and for each other, and to your writer it reflects the wisdom of God that they should be sent two by two. Can some one give good and sufficient reasons why the church should depart from the rule, or ignore it? FELIX.

PRECIOUS PEARLS .- NO. 5. GATHERED FROM THE DEPTHS OF THE BOOK OF MORMON. BY WILLIAM HAWKINS.

Behold, my sons, I desire that ye should remember to keep the commandments of God; and I would that ye should declare unto the people these words; behold I have given unto you the names of our first parents, who came out of the land of Jerusalem; and this I have done, that when ye remember your names, that ye may remember them; and may remember their works; and when ye remember their works, ye may know how that it is said, and also written, that they were good: therefore, my sons, I would that ye should do that which is good, that it may be said of you, and also written, even as it has now, my sons, I have somewhat more to desire of you, which desire is, that ye may not do these things that ye may boast, but that ye may do these things to lay up for yourselves a treasure in heaven, yea, which is eternal, and which fadeth not away; yea, that ye may have that precious gift of eternal life.

O remember, remember, my sons, the words which king Benjamin spake unto his people; yea, remember that there is no other way nor means whereby men can be saved, only through the atoning blood of Jesus Christ, who shall come; yea, remember that he cometh to redeem the world. And remember also the words which Amulek spake unto Zeezrom, in the city of Ammonihah; for he said unto him, that the Lord surely should come to redeem his people: but that he should not come to redeem them in their sins, but to redeem them from their sins.

Yea, and behold, Abraham saw of his coming, and was filled with gladness, and did rejoice. Abraham not only knew of these things, but there were many before the days of Abraham who were called by the order of God; yea, even after the order of his Son; and this that it should be shown unto the people many thousand years before his coming, that even redemption should come unto them.

And now my sons, remember, remember that it is upon the rock of our Redeemer, who is Christ, the Son of God, that ye must build your founda-tion. And he hath power given unto him from the Father, to redeem them from their sins, because of repentance, which is a sure foundation, a foundation whereon if men build, they cannot fall. Whosoever will lay hold upon the word of God which is quick and powerful, which shall divide as under all the cunning, and the snares, and the wiles of the devil, and lead the man of Christ in a straight and narrow course across that everlasting gulf of misery which is prepared to engulf the wicked, and land their souls, yea, their immortal souls, at the right hand of God, in the kingdom of heaven.

O ye people of the land, that ye would hear my words. And I pray that the anger of the Lord be turned away from you, and that ye would repent and be saved. God hath given unto you a knowledge, and he hath made you free; he hath given unto you that ye might know good from evil, and he hath given unto you that ye might choose life or death. O how foolish, vain, evil, and devilish, add how quick to do iniquity, and how slow to do good, are the children of men; behold, ye not only deny my words, but ye also deny all the words which have been spoken by our been said and written of them; and fathers, and also the words which were spoken by Moses concerning the coming of the Messiah: yea, did he not bear record, that the Son of God should come? And as he lifted up the brazen serpent in the wilderness, even so shall he be lifted up who should come; and as many as should look upon that serpent should live, even so as many as should look upon the Son of God, with faith, having a contrite spirit, might live, even unto that life which is eternal.

And now behold, Moses did not only testify of these things, but also all the holy prophets, from his days even to the days of Abraham. And behold, he is God, and he is with them, and he did manifest himself unto them, that they were redeemed by him; and they gave unto him glory, because of that which is to For behold, he surely must come. die, that salvation may come; yea, it behooveth him, and becometh expedient that he dieth, to bring to pass the resurrection of the dead, that thereby men may be brought into the presence of the Lord; yea, behold this death bringeth to pass the resurrection, and redeemeth all mankind from the first death; that spiritual death for all mankind, by the fall of Adam, being cut off from the presence of the Lord, or considered as dead, both as to the things temporal and to things spiritual: but behold, the resurrection of Christ redeemeth all mankind, and bringeth them back into the presence of the Lord; yea, it bringeth to pass the condition of repentance, that whosoever repenteth, the same is not hewn down and cast into the fire; but whosoever repenteth not, is hewn down and cast into the fire; and there cometh upon them again a spiritual death, yea, a second death, for they are cut off again as to things pertaining to righteousness; therefore repent ye, repent ye, lest by knowing these things and not doing them, ye shall suffer yourselves to come under condemnation, and ye are brought down unto this second death. O repent ye, repent ye, why will ye die? Turn ye, turn ye unto the Lord your God: and may God grant, in his great fullness, that men might be brought unto repentance and good works, that they might be restored unto grace according to their works.

If ye will repent and return unto the Lord your God, I will turn away mine anger, saith the Lord; yea, thus saith the Lord, blessed are they who will repent and turn unto me: and now I declare unto you, that except ye shall repent, your house shall be left unto you desolate; yea, except ye repent, your women will have great cause to mourn, for ye shall attempt to flee, and there shall be no place for refuge; for if ye will not repent, behold this great city, and also all those great cities round about, which are in the land of our possession, shall be taken away, that ye shall have no place in them. Ye do not remember the Lord your God in the things which he hath blessed you, but ye do always remember your riches, not to thank the Lord for them. Yea, your hearts are not drawn out unto the Lord, but they do swell with great pride unto boasting, and unto swelling, envyings, strifes, malice, persecutions, and murders and all manner of iniquities; and ye had ought to marvel, because ye are given away, that the devil has got so great hold upon your hearts, yea how could ye have given away to the enticings of him who is seeking to hurl away your souls down to everlasting misery and wo? O how could ye have forgotten your God the very day that he has delivered you? But behold it is to get gain, to be praised of men, and that ye might get gold and silver; and we may see at the very time when he doth prosper his people; yea, in the increase of their fields, flocks, herds, gold, silver, and in all manner of precious things, then is the time that they do harden their hearts, and do forget the Lord their God; and do trample under their feet the Holy One. Why has he forsaken you? It is because you have hardened your hearts; yea, ye have provoked him to anger against you: yea, even at this time ye are ripening, because of your murders, and your fornication, and wickedness, for everlasting destruction; and except ye repent, it will come unto you soon: therefore, thus saith the Lord, because of the hardness of the hearts of the people of the Nephites, except they repent, I will take away my word from them, and I will withdraw my Spirit from them, and I will suffer them no longer, and I will turn the hearts of their brethren against them; and four hundred years shall not pass away, before I will cause that they shall be smitten; yea, I will visit them with the sword, and with famine, and with pestilence, yea, I will visit them in my fierce anger, and there shall be those of the fourth generation, who shall live, of your enemies, to behold your destruction: and this shall surely come except ye repent, saith the Lord: and those of the fourth generation shall visit your destruction: and behold a curse shall come upon the land, saith the Lord of Hosts, because of the people's sake who are upon the land; yea, because of their wickedness and their abominations.

And now because I am a Lamanite, and have spoken unto you the words which the Lord hath commanded me, and because it was hard against you, ye are angry with me, and do seek to destroy me, and have cast me out from among you: woe unto this people, because of this time which has arrived, that ye do cast out the prophets, and do mock them, and cast stones at them, and do slay them, and do all manner of iniquity unto them, even as they did of old time. Wo unto this people who are called the people of Nephi, except they shall repent, for behold they have been a chosen people of the Lord; yea, the people of Nephi hath he loved, and also hath he chastened them; yea, in the days of their iniquities hath he chastened them, because he loved them: but behold my brethren, the Lamanites hath he hated, because their deeds have been evil continually: and this because of the tradition of their fathers: but behold, salvation hath come unto them, through the preaching of the Nephites: and for this intent hath the Lord prolonged their days. I would that ye should behold, my brethren, that it shall be better for the Lamanites than for you except ye shall repent, for behold they are more righteous than you; for they have not sinned against that great knowledge which ye have received; therefore the Lord will be merciful unto them: therefore I say unto you, it shall be better for them than for you, except ye repent; for behold, had the mighty works been shewn unto them, which have been shewn unto you, yea, unto them who have dwindled in unbelief, they never would again have dwindled in unbelief; therefore, saith the Lord, I will not utterly destroy them, but I will cause that in the day of my wisdom, they shall return again unto me, saith the Lord. Yea he will lengthen out their days, and increase their seed, even when thou shalt be utterly destroyed, except thou shalt repent: and notwithstanding they shall be driven to and fro upon the face of the earth, and be hunted, and shall be smitten and scattered abroad, having no place for refuge, the Lord shall be merciful unto them; yea, I say unto you, that in the latter times, the promises of the Lord hath been extended to our brethren the Lamanites; and this is according to the prophecy, that they shall be brought to the true knowledge of their Redeemer, and their great and true Shepherd, and be numbered among his sheep; and are led to believe the holy scriptures, yea, the prophecies of the holy prophets which are written, which leadeth them to faith on the Lord, and unto repentance, which faith and repentance bringeth a change of heart unto them; and behold ye do know of yourselves, for ye have witnessed it, that as many of them as are brought to a knowledge of the truth, and to know of the wicked and abominable traditions of their fathers, are firm and steadfast in the faith, and in the things wherewith they have been made free. Therefore blessed are they who will repent and hearken unto the voice of the Lord their God; for these are they that shall be saved. Thus we see that the gate of heaven is open unto all those who will believe on the name of Jesus Christ, who is the Son of God: that when the devil shall send forth his mighty winds: yea, his shafts in the whirlwind, yea, when all his hail and his mighty storm shall beat upon you, it shall have no power over you, to drag you down to the gulf of misery and endless woe, because of the rock upon which ye are built, is a sure foundation. And if ye believe on his name, ye will repent of all your sins, that thereby ve may have a remission of them through his merits: and it shall come to pass that whosoever shall believe on the Son of God, the same shall have everlasting

And now remember, remember my brethren, that whosoever perisheth, perisheth unto himself; and whosoever doeth iniquity, doeth it unto himself, for behold ye are free; ye are permitted to act for yourselves; ye can do good, and be restored to that which is good; or ye can do evil, and have that which is evil restored unto you. O how great is the nothingness of the children of men; yea, they are less than the dust of the earth, for behold, the dust of the earth moveth hither and thither, to the dividing asunder, at the command of our great and everlasting God. I would that all men might be saved, but we read, that in the great and last day, there are some who shall be cast out, yea, who shall be cast off from the presence of the Lord. How slow are they to remember the Lord their God, and to give ear unto his counsels, yea, how slow to walk in wisdom's paths. Behold now I do not say that these things shall be, of myself, because it is not of myself that I know these things, but behold, I know these things are true, because the Lord God has made them known unto me; therefore, I testify that they shall be.

A complicated bit of machinery might be described for an hour, and nothing like the clear knowledge would be gained by the listener that he would get by watching the machinery work in a mutoscope. A man cannot purchase a locomotive or a derrick or a road-roller without seeing it in action. Here is a method which can save much time. A mutoscope made for this use can be carried with as much ease as a camera, and the man for whom it is intended can make the pictures fly as fast or as slowly as he wishes. He sees the prospective purchase in action just as well as if he takes a three or four hundred mile trip and watches the original do its work.—Arthur Goodrich in the World's Work.

Editors Saints' Herald:—Native Califorfornians are not in a position to appreciate the terrible humidity of your eastern climate and its fearful effects on human life. It is so much in contrast with the climate here.
Thus far we have not suffered at all with the heat. Some of the inland towns have not fared so well. I have been where it was a hundred and twelve in the shade, but one would not suffer as much as in your country when the thermometer registered only 85 or 90 degrees.

We are getting along nicely in church work. Everything moving along without friction, and all cooperating to make our work a success. There are so many attractions at this time of the year, however, that it is difficult to enlist the interest of the masses. California is being favored in the presence of a number of men of national repute this year. We have had Dr. J. H. Kellogg, of the Battle Creek, Michigan, Sanitarium, and he gave an excellent lecture on diet, exercise, medicine, etc. I wish every Latter Day Saint could have heard it and then possessed enough moral courage to carry out the good advice. This is the trouble though; most people will listen to sound advice, concede its value, and then go on in their old foolish way. O, if men would only do half as well as they know! Last week we had with us Rev. J. Stitt Wilson, of Chicago, a Christian-Socialist Evangelist. He was original in his arraignment of the present social system, and without a mineing of words showed the duty of Christians in the present competitive struggle. Though he looked for redress in national enactment and along political lines, I see a more sure relief in the enforcement of the infinite schedule. Would that all the nations had the power of self-purification, but God has foreasted otherwise and development to date has not invalidated his position.

This week we have with us Rev. J. M. Buckley, the author of the famous Ingersoll "boycott," which gave Ingersoll more fame in certain quarters than ever before. This man is considered the brainiest man in the Methodist Church. He is the leader against woman representation in the general conferences, and a powerful writer in his particular line. He was not sparing in his public criticism of all things Methodist. I will send you later a synopsis of his concessions.

Booker T. Washington will be with us next month. We will have Brn. Joseph, Alexander, and Luff to represent us. We are preparing for a good spiritual time at the reunion.

Sr. Jeanette Phillips, formerly of Cleveland, Iowa, and Ladd, Illinois, is sojourning in the city. She is still interested in church work. She came to California for her health, which is only slightly improved. This sister has been quite liberal in helping the work financially in the above mentioned places. She is the granddaughter of Bro. John T. Phillips, who figured quite prominently in the early church history.

I delivered a Fourth of July address at Ventura. Was at San Bernardino the Sunday before.

Bro. Burton was at San Bernardino last Sunday and will worship with the Garden Grove Saints next Sunday. With regards to all. Yours in Christ.

BOZEMAN, Montana, July 12.

Editors Herald:- Have just returned from labor in various parts of the state, and now nearly ready to take the steamer. Please announce that we have postponed the time of leaving from July to August. We leave Bozeman August 19, and take steamer "Moana" August 23, at Vancouver, British Columbia, arriving at Sidney twenty-three days later. Letter from Bro. Ellis, of Sydney, says the branch there will have the mission cottage furnished and ready for us to move in at once, which is a pleasant surprise. Bro. Ellis informs us that the Wallsend branch is beginning the erection of a neat chapel. It was for the swelling of this chapel fund that we have been selling Elder Haworth's pamphlet. This is to announce that my supply is exhausted, but orders will be filled when I get there.

Subscriptions for the Australian mission paper continue to arrive slowly. If the stream continues to swell, we shall be able to buy a small press and be on a better basis than we at first hoped for. Remember we will continue to receive help up to the 19th of August.

In the hurry of breaking up housekeeping and travel, I have lost a memorandum containing several subscriptions and donations received during June at Deer Lodge. I remember one from Ogden (Sr. Hawes), two from a brother in Texas. I would esteem it a favor if all who sent me subscriptions to Deer Lodge during May and June would drop me a card giving me the amount and their address. If anyone who sent aid has not received a receipt please notify me. If anyone who has contemplated sending subscription or donation will notify me shall also be pleased, as we still lack about fifteen subscriptions-if I have not counted some twice. That is, there may be several who sent me money for the subscription pledged formerly and sent to Bro. Haworth. I am not certain what percentage of letters received by me were new subscriptions.

Desirous of seeing the Deer Lodge chapel free from debt before I leave, I am circulating a subscription to pay the whole amount ($150 00), and as over $100 is already promised, we believe we will reach our mark without straining. As the branch at Deer Lodge is small, I was compelled to appeal to members outside of Deer Lodge. So far, brethren in Butte, Anaconda, Stuart, and Avon have responded heartily and Bitter Boot and Gallatin are yet to hear from.

Our visit and labors in the capital city, Helena, will be one long remembered. Through the efforts of Sr. Effie Adams-Benedict and her estimable husband we were privileged to speak to quite a number, in a vacant residence fitted for the occasion, mostly their neighbors and friends, who because of their esteem for Mr. and Mrs. Benedict attended regularly and gave us assistance in every possible way. It is due to the friendly manner and neighborly, godlike character of both of them that prejudice seemed nil. Mr. Benedict, though not a member, took a lively interest in our meetings and did all he could to make our stay pleasant. He even gave two reporters "a tip" which resulted in the "elder" being interviewed and the church getting advertised in column articles with big headlines. I regard our effort in Helena as the strongest piece of work it has been my privilege to make in this state during the twelve months I have labored here. Our work received prominent notice in three daily papers, and all mistakes were corrected fully in one, the other, the Record, did not print correction. One mistake was quite material, too, that we have "seventy divine apostles, who have charge of the properties." Apostles, seventies, and bishops are badly mixed here.

While in that city I had a pleasant visit with a few members other than those mentioned, among them a sister of Elder J. C. Clapp. All of them administered to my necessities. One aged sister and her daughter, not a member, came quite a distance to every service, and manifested a zeal that did the preacher good.

Since arriving here we learn that Elder Gomer Reese has been having some good meetings in this valley and baptized one.

GOMER R. WELLS.

CANTON, Ill., July 14.

Editors Herald:—Notwithstanding the intense heat, thermometer registering 102 and 103 degrees in the shade some days, our worthy missionaries, Eiders J. Arthur Davis and O. H. Bailey have been battling hard for the cause we all love so well, though they are only two out of the many that are doing likewise. As we listened to these elders with eager ears and anxious hearts, the hour came when word was sent to Eider Davis from home, stating that his son was quite ill, for which place he immediately started. May the all-wise One, if he so deems it best, restore this dear one to perfect health, we pray.

Elder Bailey was left to fill the remaining appointments, which he has done and is doing very successfully. Though young in years he surely is a valiant soldier in the army of the Lord. As the gospel trumpet is sounded from time to time at this place, but few outsiders will venture out to hear. Prejudice ranks high in this vicinity; and why it should I cannot see, if not for the evil deeds that are done: but just the name "Latter Day Saint" seems to be a stigma. It often amuses me to hear the remarks made. A young lady not of our faith was heard to say that she would rather drop dead than enter our church. Not a great while after this Elder J. S. Roth was holding forth at our place of worship, and this same young lady was asked by one of our sisters if she would not come out one eve, and hear for herself and not listen to the sayings of others, which she consented to do. And the thought came to my mind, How merciful the heavenly Parent was to her that death did not press its cold hand upon her.

While we as a people, seemingly, are looked down upon by the other religious denominations, let us not be discouraged, but let us strive to live lives that will be worthy of imitation; for our lives will be just what we have a mind to make them, either good or evil.

Whittier, in one of his writings, says:

Our lives are albums written through
With good or ill, with false or true;
And as the blessed angels turn
The pages of our years,
God grant they read the good with smiles
And blot the ill with tears.

Ever wanting to remain a true sister in this great work, I am,

AKRON, Iowa, July 14.

Dear Saints:-I am wondering why there has not been a notice or request for the Saints of various drouth stricken districts to fast and pray the God who hears and answers prayer to send rain. I have heard and do know of instances that God in his great mercy has answered prayers just about as soon as they were uttered. About six years ago I met in fasting and prayer with the sisters of the Prayer Union in St. Joseph, Missouri, for a much needed rain. We met under as clear and hot a sun as I most ever experienced. We met at two p. m. and held our meeting about two hours, I think, and with a very great degree of God's Holy Spirit to the blessing of every one present. We were pleading for the cooling rain, with other petitions we were in need of, and clouds gathered thick and fast. We began to hear thunder, and saw the lightning. We closed our meeting with a prayer, and hurried to our homes, and the glorious rain came in torrents. Every heart was glad, and the sisters were filled with rejoicing and kept on praising God. I hope all that are yet living of that band of sisters are still praising God for all blessings bestowed from then until now.

At another time while I was uttering the prayer God answered it. This time my youngest daughter and I were in a buggy with the horse running down a long, steep hill. It was kicking and plunging. At the foot of the hill he left the road, and I prayed God to save us. The horse ran to the very brink of a precipice fifty or sixty feet high and had his feet gathered up for another plunge when, quicker than it takes me to write, he stopped with head and shoulders hanging over the precipice. I never think of it but in my mind's eye I see an angel step in front of that horse and assist him in backing up out of that dangerous place. I said to my daughter: "My dear, nothing but God saved us." She said, "No, nothing else." And some gypsies that were camped near and who saw us said, "No, dear ladies, nothing but God saved you." So you see God got the

I have been so earnestly praying now for rain; and how I have wished fasting and prayer would be ordered by some one. I have great faith in prayer, and think it is not observed enough. I am still holding Bro. A. J. Myers up to our merciful Father that God will say his afflictions are enough. I mean Bro. A. J. Myers, of Fairbury, Nebraska, where I live when at home. I have learned he is still failing fast, yet hoping for recovery. His whole desire is to serve God. He is an elder and could do good. Pray for him, Saints; pray earnestly for him. I am alone. No Saints nearer than Sioux City. I am in the work for life. Pray for me.

Your sister,

M. A. CHRISTY.

YOUNG, N. Dak., July 12.

Editors Herald:—I am one of your interested readers, and have long felt it a duty to bear my testimony to the Herald readers, as few have received greater blessings through the church than my unworthy self. But with every undertaking would come a feeling of incompetency and a tendency to put off.

A recent visit from Bro. Sparling has given me fresh courage, and a resolve to make an effort, however feeble it may be. This glorious work was presented to us in July, 1896, by Elders Sparling and Swenson. They met with the usual prejudice. However, they baptized six at that time, among them my husband, our two children, and myself. My life at that time was far from pleasant. As one wave of trouble after another broke over me I was many times discouraged and ready to say life was not worth living: but, thanks to our acquaintance with this latter-day work. all is now changed and we are a united and happy family. Although for a long time my mind was filled with doubts and misgivings, things seemed too good to be true and I could not believe this or that. It took two or three visits from the elders to explain things to my satisfaction; but all is clear now. Elder Sparling visits us twice a year. Bro. Swenson only coming a few times. We miss him sadly, and would like to hear his "gentle voice" again. Methinks I can hear his "Well, I declare," when he reads this.

One day's ride on the cars will bring Bro. Sparling to us. A year ago last December we called upon him to officiate at the marriage of a son. Shortly after I was taken suddenly and dangerously sick. Feeling it would be asking too much of him to come back so soon I said nothing of my desire to be administered to. The best physician in the country was called. He deemed it necessary, after a few days' attendance, that I should be moved to town, a distance of fifteen miles, as nothing but a dangerous operation could save my life. In the meantime Bro. Sparling had been telegraphed for unknown to me. To say that he was gladly welcomed does not express it at all. He found the home filled with friends and neighbors, among them Bro. and Sr. Langton, and in the presence of all he administered to me. The first hymn, "Nearer, my God, to thee," seemed to thrill my very soul. Then the earnest prayer in my behalf, so full of the Spirit, seemed to bring God's very presence into the room. When he laid his hands on my head I seemed to be raised up in mid air, nothing mortal about me; myself and surroundings seemed to be of a gauzy transparency, the sublime beauty of which no words can describe.

When I was assured that all would be well, not a doubt or fear remained. But I had the idea that all foreign growths must be removed with the knife. Don't know where I got it, but supposed it belonged to the church, and was more anxious than ever to have the operation performed, not dreading it in the least. The next day I was taken to town at my own request. Some remarked that I would not live to get there, but I had a pleasant and comfortable journey. They were preparing me for the terrible ordeal as fast as prudence would allow when God saw fit to remove my trouble with no disturbance except a frustration of their plans which was joyfully received by my kind doctor and nurse. I continued to improve, and find myself at present healed not only of that trouble, but also of a bad sick headache, which had bothered me most of my life. Truly, God has done wonders for me, and I feel so unworthy. I often think how sad they must have felt to see me leave home; but it only helped to strengthen my faith, and I believe it was God's will. If this feeble effort of mine may encourage some suffering, doubting soul to obey God's will, I shall feel it is not written in vain. May his blessing go with it! Rosa B. Davis.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., July 15.

Editors Herald:-The Kansas City missionaries, Elders John D. White and William Pease, obtained the privilege and made arrangements for a union missionary service at Chelsea Park pavilion last Sunday, July 14. Following the announcement, about three hundred Saints and their friends heard Apostle I. N. White present God's plan for their salvation, at eleven a, m., and Elder John White hammered on the same nail and a few others at 2:30 p. m. Both efforts were educational and interesting to outsiders who are investigating our peculiar faith. One man and his wife heard a few remarks of Bro. I. N. White and then got up and left the audience; but hundreds heard it all and wanted more. There were several Saints from outside the city present.

At 4:30 p. m. Bro. John White tapped the bell on the organ and about a hundred and fifty children and adults came to order for a union Sunday school, which was profitable to all concerned, and the review by Bro. I. N. White was delightful to the children, young and old. Quite a number of strangers present.

Many of the Saints took lunches in baskets and boxes so they could stay in the park all day and for the evening sermon, which was delivered by President Hulmes, of Independence Stake. Under the influence of the Holy Ghost he spoke impressively and with much assurance, using as a text the third chapter of John, verses 1 to 4, about Nicodemus, who came to Jesus by night. Bro. Hulmes urged the necessity of water baptism together with spirit baptism. The fruitage will be everlasting life to some.

Bro. John White is making a success in his mission in Kansas City, and he always has a Sunday school in the tent when practicable in the afternoon. He is a gospel hustler and an earnest pleader with Jehovah. Bro. Wm. Pease has been a well-qualified yokefellow for Bro. White in this mission since last spring conference at Independence. The grove was shady, and cool breezes swept through the trees and pavilion, making a contrast with the hot pavements and smoke-laden atmosphere of the city. Bro. John says he is well pleased with the day's work; that the Spirit was good in all the meetings, and the undertaking is a grand success. I hope it will be repeated.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., July 14.

Editors Herald:—The local Religio elected the following officers at its session July 9: John D. Suttill, president; Fred Roberts, vice president; Mabel Gondolf, secretary; Adolf Leckney, treasurer; Fred Roberts, critic. Before the election there was an interesting discussion of the parliamentary features in the Book of Rules, led by Elder M. H. Bond, the local pastor. The paper read by Sr. Mabel Gondolf on "What is a Good Religian," deserves special mention.

We learn that the Plainville, Massachusetts, Religio celebrated its first anniversary by holding a lawn party on the premises of Mr. and Sr. H. E. Coombs, on Tuesday evening, July 9. Ice cream and refreshments were had, with interesting games by the young people. It was well attended and was a success. At their regular sessions, which are held alternately at Plainville and Attleboro, the regular attendance is over twenty.

On Monday evening, July 8, at the regular Providence branch business meeting, M. H. Bond was reëlected president; Elder George H. Gates, first priest; Elder Wm. Bradbury, second priest; John D. Suttill, Henry Arnold, and James T. Mackinnon, teachers; M. Gondolf, deacon; Priestly Suttill, clerk; Daniel Joy, treasurer; Adolf Leckney, organist, with full charge of vocal and instrumental music.

The work in the Providence branch is on better footing for permanent progress than ever before.

UNCLE BURNSIDE.

Editors Herald:—This July 16th finds all the quarterly reports of missionaries in from my field, except those working in the Independence Stake. Whether they are too busy, or may have forgotten, or think it is not of sufficient importance, will have to be explained by themselves. However, they have been very busy men, and their works do follow them. It will be sufficient to know that the Twelve have published time and again that all missionaries should report to those in charge of fields, on the first of July, October, January, and March.

This report includes the work of forty-six missionaries. They report preaching 1,324 times; baptizing 87; blessing 67 children, and administering to 667 sick; besides doing much other church work.

The ministers have had some serious obstacles to encounter. The smallpox closed many doors against them, and it still prevails to some extent. The drought has almost turned into a famine. People in a great measure have lost the energy that usually characterizes them. Men and beasts have felt the blighting influence that the heated atmosphere and severe drought has brought. The Spirit has told our people to use more economy in their homes; both as to what they eat and wear. Also, to get out of debt and keep out. Just how many of us will observe this timely warning is a question not easily answered. The Spirit has predicted war, famine, and pestilences, etc., for the "last days." Shall we now faint by the way when we see some of these things at our door? I hope not. Our ministers should stand at the front to cheer and comfort the tried and tempted. They should never be found murmuring and complaining. Better remember the admonition of our Savior, "In patience possess ye your souls." Also, "And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh." This is not always the easiest thing to do when we are right in the midst of the thing itself. Knowing what the reward will be, we should ask God for patience to endure the trials that must be met. It is the testimony of a "cloud of witnesses" that he will not turn us away, if we ask not amiss.

I ask a favor of some good brother or sister who may have one of my sermons, No. 2, on "What we believe and why we believe it." Will they send to me the tract, I will either return it or remunerate them for it, as I expect to have a few thousand copies printed.

Yours in the faith,

I. N. WHITE.

Editors Herald:—It has been some time since I penned a line for the HERALD; and some may think that old N. Stamm has gone to sleep; but I see nothing is going on. My ears are poor, but God has blessed me with good eyes.

I have been preaching west of Des Moines from time to time. This is my old field of labor. I have baptized a few in that vicinity. Some of them have gone beyond the vail; some of them are growing stale. But I baptized one on the twelfth of May last who I think will shine brighter and brighter until the perfect day. I came here on the fourth of May.

Well, I have had an experience. I got caught in the rope unawares; but did not use a potsherd like Job of old, but used mecca compound which is excellent for healing. I was imprisoned for about fifteen days, but not below, but in the upper story. Had good care. Sr. Harding is good to take care of the sick. I was allowed to come down once or twice a day, and thus sit down in the shade for an hour or so. I could have no elders, so I took hold of the rope and anointed myself with consecrated oil, and my heavenly Father heard my supplication. I am well and sound at this writing.

I have learned one thing; that is an elder who is often called on to administer to the sick should keep the Word of Wisdom. I have quit drinking coffee; drink water, and I feel well.

Thanks be to God for the restored gospel, which is the power of God unto salvation. It is as much superior to sectarianism as the fine Arabian horse is to the donkey. O, some will say, the donkey looks some like the horse. Yes, but he betrays himself when he opens his mouth. In gospel bonds,

Bro. Joseph Smith:—I am afflicted with cancers, and have been under the care of a physician for two months; and I have to go now and have one cut out of my throat. So I desire the prayers of the church in my behalf, that I may be healed. I was seventy years of age on the 7th of July; have lived as near to Christ as my situation would permit. Editors Herald:-Our debate ended last: Saturday evening, and we all feel it was a grand success for the truth. It was several days from the start until the end, as we put: in three evenings before the fourth, and other things hindered: but in the meantime we put. in a few discourses on the gospel, and kept. the matter before the people. Then afterthe Fourth we put in five more nights, which, ended the debate on Latter Day Saintism. This was the first debate Mr. Brown everheld with the Latter Day Saints, and I am of the opinion it will be the last, although he is: hired for five years to "fight the false and corrupt doctrine of the Latter Day Saints," as he stated during the discussion. Elder-Brown is not a very fluent talker, and the gift for expressing what he has to say is not: good. At the close of our last speech on the last proposition, I informed Mr. Brown I was ready to go on with the discussion, taking up the question of the Disciple or Christian faith; but before the congregation he stated he would not just now, but might do so in some future time; yet at the commencement of the debate he stated that he could "spend all summer" with me, "debating the two churches," and agreed to discuss his church. We saw all along that the people were coming our way, as the debate went on; and Mr. Brown saw that he was trapped so often in his quotations and interpretations of the same that he seemed afraid to read or quote a verse out of any of the books.

Five persons were baptized the next day after the close of the discussion, two of whom were opposed to our work before the debate began, and who for years might have had a privilege to know what our faith was, but because of a little prejudice and so many terrible stories he had heard, neither he nor his lady would go to our meetings; but when one reverend gave a lecture against us, much of which was false, and some ridiculous in the extreme, he made up his mind to hear what we could offer in rebuttal, after which he went to parties with whom he had been in conversation, and told them that those things which he had heard, and which he had related to them were not true, that his informants had misrepresented matters to him, and by such he was deceived, and he wished to take it back, etc. He and his lady were ready at all times from that on to defend all they knew about the work, and they could reach some who would not converse with us on the subject. The gentleman also replied through the press to a column of false statements written by the Rev. C. W. Seelhoff, of this place, of the M. E. Church, which article was grand, and well received by right-minded people. He and his wife were among the number baptized.

From present indications we expect several will be added to our number before long. Bro. Wm. Davis was with me most of the time during the debate, and assisted me in the same. He and F. C. Smith and perhaps others will look after the interest here. Arrangements have been made to have regular appointments on Sunday for a few months.

I must add, to the glory of God, I was blessed much by the Holy Spirit of God all through the discussion, for which I thank him. May his blessings be upon us all, is my prayer.

J. J. CORNISH.

NOBLE, Ill., July 18.

Editors Herald:-We feel it is our duty to write to your columns once in awhile, that your readers may know that we are still in the faith and working for the onward march of the kingdom of heaven. Just at this season of the year, while the nights are short, the days long, and the people busy toiling for that which sustains the outward man, we have not been permitted to do as much as we desired in presenting the word,-that part which makes alive and sustains the inward man. However, we are not discouraged, by any means, but we are determined to press forward in the work and do all we can in order to gain admission with the pure and the good into that land of peace and rest.

We are doing what we can under the circumstances to advance the work, and we have not forgotten the word of the Lord in the late revelation, namely, "The college debt should be paid," and ministers "going out from the conferences" held by the "elders of my church" are not expected or authorized to throw obstacles in the way of the accomplishment of that which has been intrusted to the bishopric to pay this great debt." While the revelation says that the elders are not authorized to throw obstacles in the way of the accomplishment of this part of the work, we take it for granted that the membership has not that right, and are required to aid in this matter with their means and influence as well. Many of the Saints in this district are not rich in this world's goods. yet some of them have responded nobly to this cause, while others have not given anything. In looking over our lists we see that we have over seventy dollars subscribed already: and as this amount has been contributed by a few individuals only, I am glad to say, dear brethren and sisters, that you have done well. But I am informed in a letter from the Bishop that the debt is not nearly paid yet, and hence it is our duty to use our influence in this direction until we are relieved from this great burden. Now as we have about eight hundred members in our district, I should be glad to hear from each at his earliest convenience and receive a contribution from every one to be applied in this direction. All the officers in the district are requested to take an interest in this matter and teach the membership in their respective branches that it is their duty to help pay the college debt. Less than a dollar from each member in the church would more than liquidate the debt, and while some are able to give much more than others, I sincerely trust that the Saints in Southern Illinois, will all become interested and come forward with their portion of the amount required in order for us to be guided by a prophet in these latter days as we often sing, it is absolutely necessary that we comply with the word already given. I had not thought until I began this letter to make an appeal to the Saints through the paper; but realizing the great importance of the work I thought it best to assist you with my counsel and advice so far as possible, and I trust it may be received in the same spirit in which it has been written.

This is a town of about six hundred inhabitants, and we have been using the Baptist church and the town park for the purpose of holding meetings. And first and last we have had quite a number out to hear the word; but we cannot say that great numbers are interested in the work, as there has been but very little preaching here, and it takes time and a great deal of preaching sometimes before the people are properly educated and prepared to enter into the church.

Let all remember the statement in the late revelation concerning the college debt, and contribute of their means in order that the matter may be settled. May all respond cheerfully and assist in this work, and secure a right to the blessings promised to the obedient. Your brother,

F. M. SLOVER.

TWINING, Mich., July 19.

Editors Herald:—It having been so long since I contributed anything to the columns of your paper, I shall make no pretense whatever to relate incidents, which have occurred in the time elapsed. Will say, however, that all has not been sunshine and flowers; yet there have been many things to encourage. As we view matters at present, both from the standpoint of evangelistic and pastoral work, everything looks bright in this part of the Lord's great harvest field. It seems that new spiritual life is being infused in the hearts of the Saints, while there is a marked interest manifest on the part of others to hear the beautiful gospel.

At our late district conference Elder E. A. Goodwin and the writer were appointed to operate one of the district tents. Accordingly we reared it in the little town of Turner, where we held forth for about three weeks. As a visible result of our labors much prejudice was removed. We made many friends from among the better class. The few Saints living there were strengthened and encouraged. Three were baptized and confirmed in the church, while others are believing, who, we hope, ere long may embrace the gospel. I think if Bro. J. J. Cornish could follow in the wake of the tent efforts he would water more of the seed sown, as inquiry regarding him is made along the line.

We moved here one week ago. Prejudice ran very high, and especially on the part of the Baptist pastor and his flock, which, by the way is the only church in the town. Our audiences for the first few evenings were small, and prospects for even presenting the gospel to the people looked rather discouraging. But matters have seemingly taken a change so that at last evening's service the seats were nearly all occupied by attentive listeners. Thus far we have been treated with the utmost kindness, both by Saints and others, for which we feel to express our gratitude to Him who has promised to prepare the hearts of the people, and provide for his servants.

On the 17th inst. we were called back to Turner to deliver the funeral discourse of Sister Rathell. The M. E church was procured for the occasion, and we spoke to a large and attentive gathering, notwithstanding it was very warm—one hundred and ten in the shade, so we were informed. While some mourned, we feel that others were comforted by the blessed promises of God.

We feel happy and blessed with the thought that we are associated with Christ and his servants, battling for the right.

Bro. Goodwin's artistic taste and talent cause us to present somewhat of the appearance of Buffalo Bill's wild west show (only not nearly so large), as manifested by the four different colored flags which wave from the top of the centre poles of the tent, with the stars and stripes in the front.

Through the kindness of Bro. John Hodgins we have a nice little tent for our sleeping apartment, which we enjoy very much. So take it all together, Bro. Editor, and fellow laborers, we feel happy and hopeful, and shall, "His grace assisting us," ever pray for the redemption of Zich, and shall strive to be loyal to our King, whose bounteous love is manifest to us in so many ways.

J. A. GRANT.

WHAT CHEER, Iowa, July 20.

Saints' Herald:—I don't know but what some apology is due from the writer for the long delay in writing for your valuable columns; but can only offer the following, viz., lack of meeting with the great success and splendid interest spoken of by some of your correspondents. And not feeling it best to write anything of a discouraging nature, thought best to keep still. However, have not been idle nor lacking in interest in this great latter-day work; but have all faith and confidence in its final triumph over all opposition.

Have thought for some years that tent or street preaching in summer time is the only way to reach the people, or any considerable number of them. Have had some experience in tent work, but could never, before coming to this place, get anyone to help me on the street. And being of a timid nature, could not think of trying it alone.

The two brothers, Parley and Dan Batten, together with Bro. Rowley and Sister Jones, are located here. The city hall was procured and an effort was made on Sunday evening last, with but one out beside our own folks. By the consent of the mayor (a Christian Scientist in belief) we got permission to occupy on the street. We stood directly in front of two saloons on the one side of the street, and two saloons directly opposite on the other side: and better order and attention by those who stopped to hear could not be asked for. We began last Monday night on the street, and will close Sunday night, on account of the brethren having to work at night the coming week.

Our audience, as to numbers, could not well be estimated, as there were parties all up and down the street in front of the stores, and the "still small voice" of the speaker might have been heard for some distance. But those who listened near the speaker were not less than fifty in number.

I am aware that street preaching by our ministry in the old countries was practiced long ago; and to some extent is in this country, and is therefore nothing new. Yet some of the Saints with whom I have conversed have thought it disgraceful, and a lowering of the standard of the gospel. But when I read in Luke 13:26, "Thou hast taught in our streets," and know the teacher referred to is our Savior, I stop long enough to consider, What better am I than he? Again, I read: "Then the master of the house being angry said to his servants, Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poor and the maimed, and the halt, and the blind, and the servant said, Lord, it is done as thou hast commanded, and yet there is room." And as my heart burns with the thought that the above has especial reference to our day-to our mission, I am led to conclude that while man may think street preaching disgraceful, yet God will be bound to honor his own appointing. Who knows but what the "poor" referred to are barred from going to church, in church buildings, or even in halls, for the lack of proper clothing to appear in public? Who knows but what the "maimed" are among those who have been crippled in their religious investigations through the hypocrisy of some, and being given the "go by" when in public assemblies, have therefore concluded to sit on the street corners, in preference to attending churches? So that we, like Mahomet, if we cannot get the mountain to come to us, had best go to the mountain. Who knows but what the "halt" are those who are halting between two opinions, whether to continue investigating until they find the right way, or to give the whole thing up and meantime they are occupying the streets of evenings? Who knows, but what the "blind" are those who have been blinded by the "craftiness" of men, and are about to give up in dispair, and choose to loaf on the streets in order to get a little fresh air, and talk with their fellows, who have met with similar disappointments? When we get the gospel before men on the main streets, then we can go out in the resident parts and preach, so that the women may have opportunity to sit on their front steps and hear what the "babbler" has to say.

So amen to the proclamation of the gospel, for that is what will bring to pass the coming of the Master.

If a man the size of Bro. Wildermuth is made to tremble, or in anywise manifest timidity, what may he think of smaller men? But I read somewhere, "Blessed are they who tremble under my power," or something to that effect. So that trembling does not always manifest weakness, but rather a preparing for a grand leap, under the power of God. May the gospel be preached!

SHABBONA, Mich., July 19.

Editor Saints' Herald:—The debate between Elder J. J. Cornish and B. B. Brown is a thing of the past. It was a great victory for us. Large crowds in attendance, and many interested. Seven have been baptized since the close of the debate, and many more are convinced of the truth and will obey soon.

We are thankful for the light of the gospel. The Lord stood by us and blessed his servant in defending the work. The Saints are rejoicing in the work, having been strengthened and confirmed in the faith.

Methodism received a severe blow here, as they were the ones that started the debate, and then were afraid to meet it themselves, so got a Disciple to take it up for them.

Bro. Cornish has just left for other parts, and I stay to continue the work.

In the conflict,
WILLIAM DAVIS.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

There is no mystery whatever about happiness. Put in the right ingredients, and it must come out. "He that abideth in me... bringeth forth much fruit;" and bringing forth much fruit is happiness. The infallible recipe for happiness, then, is to do good; and the infallible recipe for doing good is to abide in Christ.—Drummond.

PREPARED READING FOR AUGUST MEET-INGS OF DAUGHTERS OF ZION LOCALS. WATCH AS WELL AS PRAY.

In a letter recently received from one whom we know to be a wise and faithful mother, she says that she would like to see the above question discussed. She also gives expression to the great difficulty under which she labors in finding time (even one hour a month) in which to meet with the sisters for discussion of topics lying very near to her heart. Like many of the rest of us, this sister has only limited means at her command, hence has not even money to help her in providing a substitute to take her place in her absence, and in common with you and I she realizes the little dependence which is often to be placed upon a hired substitute, especially when it is a substitute for mother. This is one of the elements of danger which environ the rich, and while it may have been exaggerated by those who oppose woman's work, it is none the less a real danger, and one which every true mother who having once recognized it as such, will seek to avoid. Hence we suggest that this question be thoroughly discussed in all its bearings. The mother to whom we have referred says:

"Of course I can pray God to take care of my children, and I have great faith in his loving watchcare, but it is a question with me whether God will, himself, do the work he has given us as mothers to do. Please do not think me irreverent for saying that, I hope I am not, but you know we are enjoined to watch as well as pray, and inasmuch as the powers of evil are continually on the alert to lead the young astray, the mother must be as constantly on guard over her little ones to prevent it, until they are old enough, and have been sufficiently instructed to resist evil, and even then, when it will be necessary for their proper development, to teach them that they must depend upon themselves more. it must be done with great care all the time. If mothers as a rule, realized the great danger of allowing little children to play together alone undisturbed for hours. even at home, I do not think we would have so much of this evil to contend with. But some say: 'Cannot you trust your own children? Why if I could not trust mine, I would not know what to do.' Of course, in common with almost every mother, I think that my children would not do such things, and this very fact makes me more careful, for I have personally known of children being guilty, whose mother had as much confidence in them as I have in mine; so, as we know we have an enemy who is no respecter of persons (or if he have a preference, it is to destroy the children of the church), why should we not be on the lookout for the first appearance of evil in our own, that we may promptly go to work to fortify those in our care against it? Certainly it must be easier to prevent it than to stop it after it has once gained a foothold. I will not say that I am, myself, able to do all this. Alas! more and more every day I realize my own weakness, but when I do my best, then I can feel that our Father is ready and all powerful to help and guide, but as he has given so much instruction to parents relative to the training of their children, I think we should be careful how we discharge that duty.

"Perhaps I am overfearful. Indeed, I would be glad to be convinced that I am, but it seems to me impossible for a mother, or anyone with little ones in charge, to be too careful."

Now, sisters, this question, as many of you are aware, is no new one. It is a perplexity which has confronted—yes, we might say barred the advancement of—our work from its first inception. Mothers could not attend our meetings because they had no one in whose care to intrust their children. At one time we looked hopefully to the establishment of kindergartens (and we do yet), but in the meantime is there not something which can be done?

Have any of you heard of, or, better yet, have any of you seen any of the work introduced into many of our schools by Miss Emily Huntington, who is the originator of the system, and which is called "The Kitchen Garden"? We are hoping to find in it that which we have so long been looking for in vain; namely, the amusement and instruction of children while mothers counsel together in their best interest. At this writing we are not in possession of information enabling us to say more, but we expect to be before our next monthly meeting.

At the last meeting of the Lamoni local the question of future readings was quite fully discussed, and all present were very decided in their testimonies as to the good, the benefit received from these meetings in the past. The decision arrived at was, that "Line upon line and precept upon precept" was needed by mothers and all others having the care of children, hence it was deemed advisable to use the book by Jacob Abbott, "Gentle Measures in the Management and Training of the Young." This book is published by Harper Brothers, and may be obtained at any good book store. We trust other locals have also discussed this question and they that will be heard from.

We here insert as supplementary reading an article from the American Mother, of which Mary Wood Allen, M. D, is editor. This magazine is published at Ann Arbor, Michigan, and is one of the best periodicals for mothers of which we know.

"WHATSOEVER.

"You can make whatever you will of life, you can have the thing that you desire." The words fell from the lips of a public speaker. To some they carried little or no meaning. To the young they may have opened broad vistas of hope and promise; to the old they spoke of the life to come. But on the ears of one woman they fell like the call of a far distant bell, like the echo of some dead forgotten past. Her youth and its promise, its hopes and ambitions arose out of the past and confronted her. She saw the girl she had been, and the woman she had desired to be, and beside this ideal woman, she saw the woman that she was, faded and worn, tired. and, as she had often expressed it, "literally a bundle of nerves."

Those few words did not pass as did the other words of the discourse to which she was listening. "I can make what I will of my life, I can have what I desire." These were the words that had arrested her attention, had fixed and held her thought. "Can I do this?" she questioned. "Has each individual within himself the power and force to shape his own life? Stronger than all outward conditions or environment must this inner life force be." Something of the infinite grandeur and largeness of life, its nobility and sacredness dawned upon her, and the love of the Creator for the children of his greation came to her, and wrapped her from the cares and perplexities of life, soothed her, and uplifted her.

It was an experience that left its impress. She had for a time, risen above her cares and trials and a vision of grand possibilities met her eyes. This ideal life might never be hers; she might never be able to arise to it, but she had seen it, had felt it, and its impress would last. When she reached home she repeated the words again. "You can make what you will of your life." She felt that perhaps she had indulged in a delusion. "How could she make anything bright or beautiful of her life? And as for the thing that she desired, why, desiring it would never bring it about. I desire a life of harmony and quiet and peace, but the desire does not influence the reality." Yet she was honest with herself. "I desired to hear the address that I have just heard," she thought; "I should not perhaps have heard it unless I had first desired to do so. And yet if I had stopped with the desire, I should not have heard it. It is plain that the desire is the force that causes the action."

Then she considered her home life and the different members of her family, and her desires in regard to them. There was the daughter emerging into womanhood, there was the irritable temper, the tendency toward willfulness, and the insubordination that threatened if she opposed her in anything on which she had set her heart, and yet these were so often the ones in which she dare not let the girl have her way. She had not for months been free from care and anxious thought. This child in the flower of her girlhood was treading on the very brink of a precipice. Would she be able to save her? "You can have the thing that you desire."

How the words rang and echoed in her ears! How from the depths of her womanhood, from the very depths of her motherheart she wished that they were true, that she dared believe them.

"Where had the speaker gotten those words? Were they a creation of his own brain? Had he stood before an audience and made the assertion, so sweeping, so masterful, so fraught with possibilities, without good authority for so doing?"

From away back in the past there arose before her a vision of a sweet-faced pious mother, and the little girl who used to listen as she read from the Sacred Book, "What things soever ye desire when ye pray, believe that ye receive them and ye shall have them." A feeling of wonder and awe crept over her. And yet, "Did she believe?"

There was her son, her reckless, turbulent, noisy boy, just at the age when a boy's manners for life are forming. And did not the rough companions he met at school and on the street have more control over him than she, his mother, had? Was not her influence overruled by outside influences? She had believed this,—she had dared to believe it.

Was it the voice that had been for so long a time silent, speaking to her now in the silence? "Oh," she thought, "what have I been believing,—what do I believe?"

The younger children who were still under her control, who had not rebelled at her rule or defied her authority were dear, so dear, to her heart, but how many times had she told herself of late "that it was only for a few years that she could hold and keep them; that they, too, would rise up against her in time; that a mother had no chance against outside influences and the natural perverseness of her children." These were the conditions that prevailed in her home, these were the things that she had, and yet it was in her power, within her province, to have the things that she desired.

"Could she believe? Dare she doubt?"

There was not a sweet expression on her daughter's face when she came in from school. It was as if the conflicting forces of the girl's life were at war, and she was irritable and unsettled. The inner life was not quiet and the outer life reflected the disturbances within. It is not a surprising thing to find the surface of the waters somewhat ruffled "where the brook and river meet."

The mother's eyes rested upon her daughter and she remembered how many times that show of irritability had aroused her own spirit and how she had blamed the girl and chided her, and the unkind and unloving words that had passed between them.

"I am going over to Julia's after supper, mamma, and a few of us are going to a musical show over on Lake street and then to the restaurant for a lunch."

There was no doubt that the girl expected her mother to promptly refuse her consent to this plan, and her face showed that she was ready for a battle.

When the mother spoke her voice was low and kind, her face calm and strong. "There is to be a really fine musical entertainment at the opera house on the twelfth," she said; "I do not like to have you out often in the evening when you are in school, but this will be on Friday evening and I think your father will take us, you and me, if we ask him."

Whatever degree of belief this mother had she now threw on the side of the thing that she desired. Julia was disappointed, and the daughter was not radiant, but she remained under the home roof that night, safe in the shelter that should be folded about every young girl, when darkness envelopes the land. The mother had been kind but firm, she had shown strength and force, and the daughter had yielded to her superior, and the mother followed up her victory. She did not spend the evening infretful complaining, nor did she once speak of her nerves. She learned from her daughter what her studies had been about that day, and manifested an interest in them, and related a little incident in her own school life. This interested the other children as well as the daughter, and the noisy boy related a school experience, to which the mother gave close attention and then commented pleasantly upon it. Afterwards she called the daughter's attention to what she considered an unusually good story in a new periodical. It was a simple story of sweet and quiet home life where love ruled. The daughter read it through to the end.

It was a good evening's work. It influenced the whole of the girl's future life. And this was only the beginning.

The mother did some quiet thinking, while the daughter read and the son amused himself making quite an unearthly noise on an old violin which was very much out of tune, and minus one string—she remembered that when he had called her attention to the missing string she had replied with some irritation that she wished they were all gone!

Heretofore she had told her children "that their school work ought to take up all their spare time." But how unreasonable and inconsistent she had been. A child could not study all the time; he must have some pleasures and amusements.

Home life should afford some entertainment and pleasant pastime, something of a social nature. There is an element in child life which demands this, and if not provided in the home a child will, as he grows toward maturity, seek it elsewhere.

How incapable this mother felt of deciding what would be the best thing to do now. How little she knew about her children's studies and their school work, and how forcibly it came to her now that her children's teachers were strangers to her. She sent her young people out from their home day after day fed and clothed—and this was all.

She knew nothing about the teachers with whom they spent nearly half their time, but allowing that the teachers were moral and irreproachable as they are supposed to be, she knew nothing of her children's associates, nor of the friendships they were forming; and she knew nothing of the progress they were making in their studies nor of the difficulties with which they met.

"What did she know about her children?" she asked herself in self-reproach. She knew that they were growing unlovely, willful, and rude. But this self-catechism brought results. The mother learned that her son was taking his school course readily and easily and still had some time to spare. The missing string was replaced on the old violin and a master employed to teach the boy how to make a noise scientifically. The daughter whose studies were more difficult. was encouraged to bring her books home and study in the evening, and the mother lived again many memories of her own school days. and incidents and anecdotes were often related as she endeavored to help the girl over the hard places. It was not long before a feeling of comradeship sprang up between the mother and the daughter who was almost a woman, and the mother rejoiced that her daughter's feet were planted in the way that leads out into the light. Virtue and a noble womanhood would be hers. And in regard to her son, she became firm in the conviction that there is no power on earth that can carry a boy to his destruction, if he has a good, clean home, a careful, loving mother, and the right kind of training.

And why should not every child have these? Is there any good reason why our American mothers cannot rise to the demands made upon them, and bring up their children in the way that they should go?

We have the choice of a great many things in this world of ours. We may turn one way or the other; devote ourselves to one thing or another. Let us look deep into our own hearts and learn what it is that we desire. We have good reason to believe that we may have the thing that we desire.—Christine Beals, in the American Mother.

THE TEACHER.

One has said, "The noblest work on earth is to act with an elevating influence on the human soul." And another, "The highest art is the art of teaching: the highest phase of that art is the teaching of the word of God." Then, being engaged in the "noblest work" and "highest art," ought not the teacher to enter upon it with as thorough and systematic effort as he would give to other vocations? Of all branches of Christian activity, there is none more encouraging, none more fruitful and inspiring than work for and among the young. Their hearts are open to impressions and ideas. They are easily influenced and guided. They are sympathetic, loving, and tender. They are to the teacher as clay in the hands of the molder. Early impressions received and ideas formed never leave them, and the man becomes oftentimes what we make the hov The Sunday school teacher has in his class the boys and girls who are to hold in their hands, through God's guidance, the explaining of the principles of the gospel to the world, and the teacher is responsible in a great measure for these young lives which are entrusted to him for religious training. And perhaps there are few Sunday schools in which there is not room for increased efficiency in teaching. It is no unfavorable criticism of a good teacher to say that he may become a better teacher.

ONE WHO IS SATISFIED

with his work as a teacher needs waking up. A great many teachers seem to think that after they have brought their classes up to a certain standard, they have made a success of their teaching, and that they have done all that any teacher could expect to accomplish. It is this kind that needs a little waking up. They should make "progress" their watch-word. They should remember that a slight advance, one point gained each week, brings a good degree of advancement in a year.

his lessons with great care. It will not do to sit down with a lesson leaf in the hand and ask the class the printed questions and then permit the scholars to read the answers from the lesson leaves. This is not teaching, and the teacher who has prepared his lesson and who is fully equipped to take charge of his class will not do this. He will ask such questions as lead the scholars into the meaning of the words of God which they are studying, and then lead them to tell in their own language what this meaning is. The teacher must help his pupils to find the divine truth in the lesson. That is one part of his work. Then he must help them to see the bearing of that truth on their own life.

All teaching of the Bible is designed to AFFECT THE CONDUCT

and the character of those in the classes. The teacher should teach not merely to impart knowledge, but to change life, to build up character, to inspire to duty, to impel to nobleness in service. The teacher who would come up to the measure of his responsibility in such work must make most careful and diligent preparation of every lesson—as careful and diligent a preparation as it is possible for him to make. Nothing less than the best he can do will please God or made his work effective. And we would think that the

for this preparation. If all the teachers could spend an hour together each week, studying the lesson, talking about it verse by verse, searching out all the thoughts, and giving each other suggestions as to the application of these thoughts, we would think that the work in the class would be far better done than it would without such help. Then there is that is necessary—the preparation of the teacher. The teacher may have the lesson well prepared and yet himself be not ready to teach effectively. There must be a preparation of the heart. The teacher must think of his work and pray over it until he understands its nature and its importance. Teaching the word of God to a class of children and young people is different from teaching a lesson in arithmetic, grammar, or geography. The object of our Sunday school teaching is to show the scholars their need of God, and then declare to them the divine love in such a way that the knowledge will transform their lives and character. The teacher should make them see how to live so as to please God and gain eternal life. Hence the teacher must ever keep in mind that they require spiritual preparation before they can teach successfully. That this spiritual preparation can be gotten only by continual prayer and personal communion with God. The teacher who goes to his class with a cold heart, however well he may have his lesson prepared, will fail to do the great vital work which is required of him. The nearer the teacher is to God the nearer he is to the class and the greater his power is with the scholars.

ALL TEACHERS ARE EXAMPLES, whether they think so or not. They will be taken as examples by their scholars and others will unconsciously follow in their footsteps. "You lead, we will follow" is what the scholar mentally says to the teacher even though his lips be silent. Then let your scholars see that you are not one of those persons whose rule of life for others is, "Do as I say and not as I do."

These are all

PLAIN SUGGESTIONS.

commonplace, perhaps familiar, yet they are no less important because they have been made so often. The Sunday school teachers are a noble army of workers. Tremendous interests are in their hands. And this work is worthy of the best service they can render. They should be content with doing nothing less than the best in their power, for they are working for God and for eternity.

BISHOP'S AGENTS' NOTICES.

To the Clinton District Saints, Greeting:—With Bro. E. L. Kelley's consent, I have arranged with Sr. Iva Keck, of 700 North Ash street, Nevada, Missouri, to serve as Bishop's agent from August 1 until I return from Nebraska and notice of return is given. Those depending on her for their allowances surely need it, so don't live in luxury and let the missionaries' families and the poor suffer. You have done nobly; continue the good work. We are in a severe drouth and will have to deprive ourselves of many luxuries. I am, Your brother and coworker, G. W. BEEBE, Sr., Bishop's Agent.

REUNION NOTICES.

Reunion of Southeastern Illinois district will be held at Zenith, Wayne county, Illinois, beginning October 5 and lasting until the 13th. We sincerely trust that the Saints throughout this district will all help to make this meeting a success. All are invited to come, and those who desire tents will please inform Bro. I. A. Morris, Zenith, Illinois. F. M. Slover, David Hoover, F. M. Davis, committee.

On account of smallpox quarantine, the Nodaway, Missouri, district reunion will not convene this year. It was to be held at Barnard, August 9 to 19. All parties take notice to this effect. E. S. Fannon, Wm. Woodhead, T. A. Ivie, committee.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

West Virginia will convene on Saturday, the last day of August, with the Centerville branch, Wayne county, West Virginia, at nine o'clock. Those coming will get tickets to Kenove Junction and there change cars and take the N. and W. railroad to Wayne, where they will be met by the brethren with conveyance. We hope the Saints of the district will turn out, and especially the priesthood, and bring the Spirit with them, that we may have a feast of good things and be strengthened for the great work that lies before us.

G. H. GODBEY, Pres.

Stour's Mills, West Virginia.

Northwestern Kansas will convene on reunion grounds at Blue Rapids, August 24, ten a.m. There will be election of district officers, and division of district will again be discussed. Bro. I. N. White has proposed

NOTICES.

As has been already announced, Elder Barmore and the writer are holding a serial effort at this place, which has already been in progress for about a week. Our stay is in-definite, but it is probable that we will be through in the course of two or three weeks. Now if there are any of the Saints in Chatham district, residing in either the country or town, who would like the tent in their neighhood, will they please correspond with A. C. Barmore to that effect. There are already one or more invitations extended, and since we are not able to comply with them all, we would like to move to the best place and where good is most likely to accrue. ALVIN KNISLEY.

MARRIED.

HOLMES—COLE—A pretty affair was the wedding of Sr. Aimee D. Cole, of Orting, to Bro. John W. Holmes, of Roslyn, at Dr. McDonald's home, Puyallup, Washington, June 24, 1901, at two p.m. The rooms were a perfect bower of vines and roses. Keeping step to the wedding march, accompanied by two little white-robed flower girls strewing their path with flowers, the bride and groom marched through the arch into the parlor and stood under a large bell of white roses, while the ceremony was performed by Elder John Davis, assisted by Dr. McDonald. Many beautiful and costly presents were received.

YEAGER—BROWN—At the home of the bride's mother, Sr. Annie Brown, near Valley, Nebraska, at noon, Sunday, July 21, 1901, Mr. Lewis R. Yeager, of Valley, to Sr. Myrtle R. Brown, in the presence of about sixty relatives, Saints, and friends, Elder C. E. Butterworth officiating. Mr. Walter Payne acted as bridesman, and Sr. Mildred Black as bridesmaid. At the close of the ceremony the guests partook of a bountiful and rich repast. Many useful presents showed the good wishes of those present. The happy young couple took the 3:40 train for Omaha amid a shower of rice. for Omaha amid a shower of rice.

The Chicago Record-Herald is a conspicuous example of the success with which the public rewards fearless nonpartisanship in the columns of a great metropolitan daily paper. It is an independent newspaper in which men and measures are invariably viewed wholly from the standpoint of the public good and not from that of the interests of any particular political party. It is the very reverse of neutral—fearless and outspoken on all the great questions of the day, but presenting its editorial opinion upon independent judgment and entirely regardless of political affilia-tions. Partisanship is barred as strictly from the news columns as from the editorial page. All political news is given without partisan coloring, thus enabling the reader to form correct conclusions for himself. In the ordinary partisan newspaper political news is ordinarily colored to such an extent as to make it difficult if not impossible for the reader to secure a sound basis for intelligent judgment.

A WORD FOR THE SMALL COLLEGE.

This is a season of the year when students are making their calculations as to where they shall attend college. and they are often confused by the number of inducements which are held out to them by the various colleges. It is very often the case that a student debates the question whether or not he shall attend a college which is extensively attended or one which is smaller. This question is likely to arise when one is so situated that he is near a small college and hence could attend it with less expense. The tendency seems to be for the student to favor the larger college, and hence a large roll of students is one of the best advertisements which a college can offer. But in thus looking at the large roll of students one is liable to overlook a very important feature, and that is the ratio of instructors to students. As a rule the larger number of students means very large classes, and hence a great division of the instructor's attention, so that the student in the large class gets less of the instructor's personal attention than he would in smaller classes.

Of course the larger schools offer the better advantages for original research; but it is questionable whether original research in colleges is of as much consequence as other work which is done. To the ordinary college student the four year course is as long as he can go to school, and hence the amount of work in original research besides attending to other necessary college work does not count for much. Hence the smaller colleges have good chance to compete with the larger and richer schools as mental discipliners. The St. Joseph Daily News in commenting on this, remarks editorially:

The small college with from one to two hundred students, with a faculty of hardworking, and too often underpaid, professors, offering a substantial training in the fundamental subjects of a liberal education, and making no pretensions to completeness in original research in all possible sciences, professions, and fads, has a perfectly legiti-mate and very necessary work to perform. They are needed in our system of education, and have done, and are doing, the best of work for American boys and girls.

President Garfield used to say that a log in the woods was good enough college for him, provided he could but sit on one end of it and Mark Hopkins on the other. What he meant was that the personality of the teacher counts for far more than all endowments, buildings, apparatus and courses. And this is the very thing that is lost or dissipated in the large institution. The average boy needs to come into close personal contact with a man of master mind and strong personality, and the best place to do this is in an institution that has few students.

Pertaining to the matter of small colleges, the following appeared in a recent issue of the Cedar Rapids Republican:

Although Dr. Gunsaulus is at the head of an educational institution that has already been endowed by millions, and which is evidently near to the heart of one of the richest families of America, he is an elequent advo-cate of smaller colleges. "It is nonsense," he declared, "to say that the day of the small college is over. To get a great inspirsmall college is over. To get a great inspiration, one must come in contact with a great life 'Speak thou unto me.' In the great universities it is impossible for the professors to know their students. The time will never come when the work of the small college will be ended. It will continue to do in the future what it has done in the past, that is to say, it will continue to produce the men who do the great work of the world in its supreme crises. Look at the record, and judge for yourself," said Dr. Gunsaulus. "Take the civil war period. Gambler college, a little institution in Ohio, almost unknown to the country at large, gave to the nation Henry Winter Davis, Edwin M. Stanton, Chief Justice Waite and Rutherford B. Hayes. The man who gave voice to the sentiment that inspired the soldiers of the Union was Daniel Webster, who recieved his degree at Dartmouth, for we fought from '61 to '65 in defense of 'Liberty and Union, now and forever, one and inseparable.' The supreme poem of that period," said he, "was Longfellow's Excelsior; it is the expression of the determination never to submit or yield; the de-termination that put aside all the allurements of ease, spurned the advice of timorous old age, and amorous youth. Longfellow came from a little college down in Maine, Bowdoin. The four Field brothers graduated at Williams college. Beecher came from Amherst, and Harvard, when it was still a small college, gave us Lowell and Holmes, Emerson, Phelps

Of course no one will deny that the universities and the richly endowed institutions have a great work to perform in our educational system,—a work that the smaller schools cannot perform; there should be no clash; for the work of the smaller colleges should be supplementary to that of the universities, so that those who desire and have the means can, after having had the discipline of the college, take up the work of the university in an understanding and appreciating manner, and go on with their work of original research or whatever they may wish to specialize in.

We are of the opinion that the differentiation of the university and the college will become more marked in a few years, and that it will be more fully recognized than now that the work of the college should be preparatory to that of the university, and the university can take up and finish what the college has begun, just as the college takes up and completes the work of the high school.

Mr. Herbert W. Horwill, writing in the June Atlantic Monthly, says:

Its clear aim must be to cultivate the intellect and character, rather than to enlarge the bounds of knowledge respecting the crustacea or the Greek particles or to make the graduation of its students synchronize with their qualification as lawyers or physicians. Accordingly, it will not endeavor to transform itself into either a miniature university or a miniature polytechnic. It will meet the demands of the new century, not by extending its curriculum, but by compressing it. It will increase by decreasing. It will not need to wait for a richer endowment that it may continue and heighten its patriotic service, but it will turn its present revenues to more concentrated and efficient uses. Unless it is exceptionally wealthy it will not spend much money upon buildings; it will put every available dollar into the quality of its teaching. It will be content with a much shorter list of names on its register than is now commonly considered necessary for a respectable institution, but it will employ such matriculation test as will insure that its energies will not be wasted in the attempt to give a higher education to men who are lacking either in the capacity or in the preparation required to profit by it. It will have the courage to reduce by one half the number of its courses and to abolish several of its chairs, giving more adequate remuneration to the professors that remain. It will thus make the work of its staff more thorough and more permanent. Teachers of the highest quality will then find within its walls ample scope for a life career. In a word, what is needed that the tree may bear richer fruit is not the outgrowth of more branches, but the application of the pruning

The News closes its editorial on "The Small College," thus:

Parents with sons or daughters ready to send away from home for their first taste of a liberal education should take heed to these things. The tendency of the times is to sacrifice thoroughness to show, character to pretensions, and education to fads. The small college that is satisfied to confess frankly what it is, and makes no pretense to university methods and university results, is not only the safer school for the boy; it is likewise the only place in which there is any assurance of his receiving a well-rounded intellectual manhood.

A LIFE FOR FORTY-EIGHT CENTS.

Saturday's Chicago Tribune contains an account of a tragedy at Alpena, Michigan, which if true reveals a sad condition of humanity. According to the report, an eight-year-old boy was murdered by several companions of his own age because he had forty-eight cents which they wanted. The lad disappeared for several days, and diligent search was made for him, but to no avail. On the 26th, however, one of the youngsters who had witnessed the tragedy confessed. The murdered boy's name was Cyrus Larke, and the lad making the confession is Harvey Nelson, also eight years of age. The account as recorded by the Tribune is as follows:

According to the Nelson boy young Larke, in the company of the nine-year-old son of Prosecuting Attorney Reed, Nelson, and several other boys about the same age, were playing near the Hoeft Schoer mill boom on Tuesday afternoon. Reed seemed to be the leader among the boys. Young Larke was urged to climb down to the water and go out on a pier. He objected, saying his parents had ordered him never to venture on the piers or go near the booms. He was finally persuaded and accompanied the boys.

Young Nelson says he remained behind, but watched the boys. He says Reed and his companions led young Larke out from the pier on to one of the boom sticks, and, after forcing him to give them forty-eight cents which he had in his pocket, they pushed him off the boom into the water. The boy could not swim, and when he tried to catch on the boom stick one of the boys would push him off. This was repeated once or twice, after which the body did not come up.

The boys then came ashore, and, after telling Nelson, who witnessed the tragedy, that if he ever told anyone about the matter they would serve him as they had served Larke, they went to a candy store and spent the money. When asked where he got the money Reed explained that he had found it.

Young Nelson was so overcome by fear of the threat against his life if he told the story and apparently, from what he had seen, what his own fate might be, he kept his secret until this morning, when he told the story to the officers and asked for protection.

The boom was dragged at once and the body was recovered at the place where young Nelson said the tragedy occurred. An inquest was held on the body, but no word can be received from there tonight.

It is almost too horrible to believe it true; but in the light of the many other crimes which are committed in this age of the world for almost as trivial amounts, we fear that it is too true. It might be urged that the boys did not and do not understand or appreciate the enormity of their wrong-doing. But the fact that they were careful to warn the Nelson lad not to reveal the crime, accompanying the warning with a threat to deal to him the same treatment they had accorded Larke, shows that they were aware to a considerable extent that they had committed murder. Boys eight years old are usually well aware of the danger of drowning, and it is likely that the youngsters knew they had committed murder though they may indeed be ignorant of the heinousness ten days, or both.

of their act. The picture of boys eight years of age pushing one of their companions into the water and then keeping him there by pushing him away whenever he attempted to save himself by catching hold of the boom is too horrible to contemplate!

THE DROUGHT BROKEN.

The long drought has been broken by some splendid rains which have fallen in the last few days. Saturday, Sunday, and Monday brought good rains, and the extreme heat has given place to a moderate temperature. Prospects for crops are much brighter, and people are correspondingly happier.

The rains have been quite general in Missouri, Iowa, Kansas, and Oklahoma. Even the pessimistically inclined are becoming hopeful. Gardens promise little, but corn has stood the dry weather remarkably well.

WISCONSIN WILL PROTECT THE BIRDS.

Before now the HERALD has called attention to the wholesale slaughter of song birds and birds of gay plumage for the purpose of supplying thoughtless or indifferent women with stuffed bird skins to wear on their hats. Many people interested in these songsters have endeavored to have laws passed prohibiting the killing of such birds, and many states have on their statute books laws which have been intended to protect the birds. But there are always found persons who are ready to break those laws when they are paid well for the birds they secure. Attempts have been made in some states to have laws passed which would prohibit the wearing of bird skins or plumage; but in the majority of such instances the attempts have been foiled by the dealers in millinery sup-

The Audubon Society has been an aggessive and tireless worker in defense of the birds, and that society of the state of Wisconsin has succeeded in having a law passed which will be of much worth in protecting the songsters. As given by the Chicago Tribune, the law reads: "No person shall kill or catch or have in possession living or dead any wild bird other than a game bird. No part of the plumage, skin, or body of any bird protected by this section shall be sold or had in possession for sale." The law gives the game warden power to seize any bird skins or parts of bird skins that are intended for decorative purposes. The penalty for selling any part of the bird for millinery purposes is a fine of $5 for each part, or imprisonment for

It is to be hoped that Wisconsin will so successfully enforce this law that other states will fall in line in the effort to stop the awful slaughter of our birds for such purposes. Of course it depends upon the demands of "Dame Fashion" whether the women of Wisconsin will try to wear birds on their hats or not. If they do there will be a demand which the dealers in millinery supplies will undoubtedly endeavor to supply, and then the fun will begin, if the state rigorously enforces the law. And it is to be hoped it will.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS.

On July 20 Bro. George Buschlen wrote from Arthur, Ontario, Canada: We had the pleasure of baptizing Sr. Hathway's husband and two of her splendid relatives at the new opening eleven miles from here, a week ago. Her relatives were devoted Baptists There are three more of them nearly ready. I expect to have to meet the Baptist preacher in a private debate over meddling with his flock.

Louise Palfrey writes from Macon, Missouri, July 20:

Tent meetings began here on the 18th; W. W. Smith and Earle Corthell in charge. Too soon to tell yet what the interest will be.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

A person who signs himself a "Brother in Pittsburg" sends fifteen dollars with instructions to send certain books and tracts to the Llanelly branch, Wales. Thanks, brother. No doubt the Llanelly Saints will be glad to know they have such practical sympathizers in this country.

We desire to call attention to the letter of Bishop E. L. Kelley in this issue of the Herald. The Saints who have so long been praying for the time of hastening to come can now realize that that time is here, and with it the time for making great sacrifice for the work of redeeming Zion. Bro. Kelley in his letter says the time has come for the Saints to consecrate of their surplus properties, and this means that the work of redeeming Zion must shortly be begun. Let us all be alive to the demands of the times, and be ready to consecrate of our wealth, time, and strength. Are we ready to respond to the call of the Bishop?

The Gazette Herald, of St. Joseph, Missouri, in its issue of July 24, gave quite a little space to telling of the work of Bro. J. M. Terry in that city, and pointing out the difference between our beliefs and those of the Utah church. The epitome of our faith is given also.

We have received complimentary tickets from George VanHouten, secretary of the Iowa State Fair, for 1901. The Fair will be held from August 23 to 31. It promises to be one of the best yet held in Iowa.

REMISSION OF SINS.

Of all the subjects that have been presented to mankind we believe this one to be the most important, for we are taught in the revealed word that sin separates man from God. The scriptures say, "The soul that sinneth shall die." As death is passed upon all men, the conclusion is that all have sinned and come short of the glory of God.

Then, a reconciliation to God, or a removal of the cause that brings about this death or spiritual separation, should interest mankind. If it is a fact that the soul that sins shall die, it is also a fact that the soul that receives a remission of sins shall live. or be made alive.

What is remission of sins, and how may we obtain it? Webster says that remission is pardon, a giving up of the punishment due a crime. Remission of sins, then, is God's giving up the punishment due us for our transgressions.

We should, too, while we investigate this subject, keep in mind the difference between remission and forgiveness of sins. While both words have a common meaning they also have a specific definition. Remission means pardon, and also a giving up of the punishment due a crime. Forgiveness means pardon, and also the overlooking of a sin. An offender is considered and treated as not guilty. In the first place he is a sinner saved; in the second place he has not sinned. In other words, his sins are not imputed to him.

It is generally admitted that the world was reconciled to God through Christ was once offered to bear the sins of many.—Hebrews 9:28

Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God.-Rom. 3:25

Yes, reader, through the forbearance of God his Son was sacrificed on the cross that our sins might be remitted. "Without the shedding of blood there is no remission." Yes, the chastisement of our peace was upon him; that is, the punishment due us was placed upon him, and that is what remission means.

But how do we get the benefit of this remission by the shedding of blood? Is it universal, or is it conditional? We believe it to be conditional. Why? Because it is a part of the gospel. Christ said to his disciples when he sent them to all the world to preach the gospel to every creature. "he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned." Therefore it is conditional, and requires obedience to the law that was ordained for that purpose, which law is the gospel law, the law of faith, the faith of which James speaks when he says, "Faith without works is dead, being alone." In other words, it is a law that requires faith to obey.

What is this law? Or rather, what part of this law that we obey through faith is it that insures remission of sins to the obedient? So far as I know, there are but two ways mentioned in the Scriptures by which sins are remitted. One is that which I have already mentioned, namely, by the shedding of blood. The other is by the authority Christ gave to his disciples when he said unto them:

As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you. Whoseseever sins ye remit they are remitted, and whoseseever sins ye retain they are retained.

Reader, do not become alarmed and think we are putting it too strong, for we are told.

For I have not spoken of myself; but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak.—John 12:49.

My doctrine is not mine but his that sent me.—John 7:16.

Whosesoever sins ye remit shall be remitted.-John 20:23

You ask, Do you mean to say that you believe that man had authority to remit sins? I do: and he now has if we have a valid commission from God as man formerly had. John the Baptist understood it that way, for he preached the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins.

The commission teaches this when we study it as recorded in the four Matthew gospels taken together. puts it this way:

Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost, teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world.

He says nothing of remission of sins; but Peter. who received the command, said to the people who wanted to know what to do:

Repent and be baptized every one of you for the remission of sins.

According to Mark:

Go ve into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature; he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned.

Luke savs:

Repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name.

He says nothing of baptism for the remission of sins; but Peter said to the people under the influence of the Spirit:

Repent and be baptized for the remission of sins.

John puts it still stronger:

Whosesoever sins ye remit they are remitted, and whosesoever sins ye retain they are retained.

John says nothing of baptism here.

Peter understood not only that remission of sins came through baptism, but, also that it had to be done in His name; that is, by the persons authorixed to act for him. He says,

Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of Reader, we do not believe in absolution, in a Roman Catholic way, but I do verily believe that when a sinner comes with true faith and repentance, and receives baptism at the hands of one of God's divinely called and commissioned ministers, he receives a remission of his past sins. He then is translated out of the kingdom of darkness into the kingdom of light. If he does not hear and obey the gospel at their hands, his sins are retained, for the gospel is to be preached to all the world for a witness.

Under this light we can understand why Jesus said to his disciples:

Whosesoever sins ye remit they are remitted, and whosesoever sins ye retain they are retained.

In obedience to the gospel of Jesus Christ we get the benefit of his blood which was shed for many, "for as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ." In other words, we put on the work Christ has done for us.

Then we are ready to press on in the conflict that exists between the flesh and the Spirit. If we sin, we have an advocate with the Father. If we are faithful to acknowledge our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins. So, when we have put on Christ by obeying the gospel, we can go to God in Christ's name, and obtain a forgiveness of our sins. Christ savs:

No man cometh to the Father but by me. W. R. STANDEFER.

DO READ THIS.

Have mailed Graceland catalogues for college year 1901-2, and where the same were sent to home address of missionaries, will the family please forward and oblige.

To the missionaries: Will you aid us by presenting the claims and advantages of this church institution of learning. Having made contract with professors (the majority being members of the church,) to teach during the ensuing year, we now are desirous of obtaining students; and we know of none who are so well calculated to furnish us valuable aid in this work as our missionaries. Shall we receive your cooperation in this work of God? Blessed are those who are at a oneness with the Allwise.

To one and all who may wish additional information, we urge that you do not hesitate to acquaint us with your wants.

And to all those who favor this church undertaking — God-acknowledged work—Graceland College—if you be so interested, will you cheerfully contribute help in making it a success.

The payment of the debt is all important, and God commanded; but if the Saints stop there, then is the whole work of the church a failure, and the College building would only be a monument of folly and unbelief. I do not understand that God directed the payment of the debt and intended then for the church to abandon the purpose of that for which this institution was brought into existence. Nay! The direction to lift this debt, in my understanding, is to give new life and force to the original creation of the institution; and to that end the present Board of Trustees are actively working, and we are seeking to economize, and to use to the best advantage every dollar intrusted to us.

Now dear Saints, as we have been and will be to considerable expense in preparing for the opening on September 10, will you kindly aid as you feel able. Do not hide your talent (dollar) in a napkin, but freely put it into the Master's use, and in the end it will bring you a sure return. Money will not purchase a corner lot in heaven, or a crown of immortal glory; but a true sacrifice, with love to God, made for the uplifting of a fellow creature, will prove a stepping stone that is sure and steadfast; so that the poor among men may rejoice in the Holy One of Israel, for the saying of old is as true now as when uttered:

There is a sore evil which I have seen under the sun, namely, riches kept for the owners thereof to their hurt.—Eccl. 5:13.

We await the contributions of the faithful. For Graceland,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

THE UNITED STATES IN PROPHECY.

And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and these kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever.—Daniel 2: 44.

The prophecy of which this quotation is a part has been literally fulfilled, as to the formation represented by the image. The kingdoms which are to be broken and consumed are found to be the ten powers of Europe. They were in existence before the establishment of the United States. So this Republic was set up in their day by the God of heaven. In Book of Mormon 3:35 we find that a man (Columbus) was inspired by the Spirit, and he crossed the waters to this land of America. Again we find in Book of Mormon 7:1, 2, that after a while a mighty nation should be raised up, and that in this nation a marvelous work, such as Isaiah predicted, should be performed. See Isaiah chapter 29. Turn now to Doctrine and Covenants, section 98, page 261, and you find that the constitution was formed by wise men whom the Lord raised up. By reading the foregoing references it is found that the Lord, the Father of all, was the founder of this government. Some say a republic is not a kingdom. In many instances the prophets used words for an object or thing which now in our day has a new name. They also called an object of today which is put to the same use as an object of their time by the same name, although the appearance may be altogether unlike. Nahum 2:4, for example. Thus Daniel, not knowing the words president and republic in place of king and kingdoms, although their office and formation is to the same purpose and end, used the term he did, kingdom. Remember, both kingdoms and republics are governments having a head. The power and office of the King of England and our President is about the same, except for the title and term of office.

The word forever may now be dealt with. We read in the scriptures that "what the Lord doeth, he doeth forever." There is no absolute proof, but rather to the contrary, that this word forever means all time and eternity. Now if the Lord established this Republic, it will last forever; that is, until its purpose be fulfilled, its work accomplished. The Lord established the law of Moses, which was to last forever. It was done away with when the purpose was fulfilled and accomplished. Thus we see many things are done by our Father which have a purpose, and when that purpose is accomplished there is an end of that promoter.

Again, many of the "forevers" of the Bible mean all time and eternity, because their purpose will occupy both stages for their fulfillment. think the term which is used, "never be destroyed," can be put under the same analysis as the word forever. The United States will probably just drop out of existence, leaving its principles "freedom" and "liberty" with the kingdom which the Saints then take, as all earthly governments will cease when the kingdom of heaven is come, as a final kingdom to be situated in eternity. The expression, "it shall not be left to other people," means the kingdom or government shall not be overpowered and ruled by another nation.

Let us turn now to Isaiah 2: 2, and we find that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains. Analysis and comparison prove this to be Zion established in the United States. As the top mountain towers over its companions, so the republic exceeds all other nations. The Book of Mormon says it should be a mighty nation. So the United States is not likely to be overpowered, and the Lord has set it up for a purpose which will occupy time in its accomplishment.

The form of government of this Republic is of the kind always intended for man. For example, the Nephites under the Judges and the Israelites from Moses until Saul was made a king over them. This king was raised up by the Lord as a temporal punishment for their disapproval of his form of rule. were forewarned by Samuel as to the treatment a king would give unto them. But what is the purpose of this kingdom? It shall break in pieces and consume all these nations. I believe this is a spiritual breaking. Who will say that the United States has not to a certain extent broken the ignorance, slavery, baseness, and other degradations of the powers. Their people and the powers themselves are patterning after this republic. But at any rate this part of the prophecy has not been as yet fulfilled.

We find also another purpose. As the Old World was in toils of darkness, persecution and evil prevailed, and nowhere could this latter-day truth have come forth unless the Father had caused a change to take place. But instead of this he unveiled this land and set up a nation with divine principles, in which the work came forth. In the dream which Daniel interpreted the kingdom is represented by a stone. Now turn to Doctrine and Covenants, section 65:

The gospel shall roll unto the ends of the earth as the stone which is cut out of the mountain without hands shall roll forth.

Now can you connect these two and make them one? No! because there is a comparison, and that calls for at least two to be compared. So as the principles of the United States go through the earth amongst all nations, gates are opened, ignorance dissolved, minds prepared for something greater. The gospel then follows or goes hand in hand with the stone. Thus we see the United States with its power and divine principles is a blazer of ways, an opener of the wilderness, and a preparer for the gospel.

Dear reader, this is a question on which some of us do not agree. It is food for thought. If you understand the prophecy better, let us hear from you. Seek all truth.

GEORGE E. DAVIS.

Mr. W. J. Ghent, in the August Forum, inquires into the historical basis of the popular conviction that there was a "golden age" for the American workman in the early days of the Republic. His conclusion is that the contemporary evidence of competent observers does not warrant any such belief.

THINK NO EVIL.

While I read the strong, well-set words of "Earnest" in HERALD for April 24 under the caption of "Speak no Evil," I am vividly reminded that the source of evil speaking is evil thinking; and that the Saints who desire to cast from their midst this frightful habit of evil speaking and tale-bearing will do well to cut off the source. Truly "the tongue is an unruly member," kindling the fires of hell in whole communities; but we may as well undertake to compress the atmosphere of the universe into a toy balloon, and not let it burst, as to prevent a continuous influx of evil thoughts forming themselves into evil words. They must have vent, and "from the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh."

It is always best to cut off the source of whatever is troubling us. The industrious housewife has long since learned how much easier it is to prevent the bugs breeding in her bed than to prevent them from biting when allowed to accumulate. It is easier to repair the fence and prevent the stock entering our fields than to fight them from the grain and fruit after they have entered.

Many desire to cast evil speaking from their midst, who have not discovered that the real kindling wood and in fact the entire fuel supply lies far back in the interior. There are many still tongued hounds that deal out death, terror, and destruction to more victims than any loud-mouthed dog that barks.

We have flattered ourselves hitherto, that there is no harm in a thought unexpressed; but when we face the fact that all force, all power, all life, is silent and unseen, we are led to ask. What force is more potent than thought? Who has at any time tested the quality and strength of positive thought? What is it that is not governed by thought? What is thought but "life set in motion"? Who has ever separated thought from intelligence? Was it not executive thought that caused God to speak when the worlds were framed? And is it not an evil thought that starts the slanderous tongue to wagging? Ah, it is the still tongued hounds that kill the sheep; the blab mouthed only help to eat and shoulder the blame. When a shepherd hears a blab-mouthed dog among his flock he quickly clutches his Winchester, downs the miscreant, and saves his tender ones. And so it is when the spiritual shepherd hears a slanderous report; he can promptly shoulder his gospel gun and properly adjust mat-The still tongued hounds are ters. hard to detect.

Evil thoughts are contagious; it often occurs that the ones who first speak them are by far more functions, it is only necessary for me since known that they are the 'little innocent than the ones who first think them. The father of a thought is he who formulates it, or originates If he be a person of influence and hold the thought in a positive manner, it goes from him into the world, although his tongue may be held as silent as death. It is now public property; a seed in the great, universal hotbed, springing up to influence those who vibrate in congeniality with it. Be cautious, therefore, ye elders, lest you become the fathers of thoughts you do not like to own; and be ye slow to adjudge one guilty of wicked language who is forced to live in an atmosphere pregnant with the thoughts uttered.

It is a great thing to be able to control the tongue, a greater work than controlling a city, especially if the mental atmosphere is befogged with thoughts not lawful to be uttered. Do you know why it is so great a task to control the tongue? Were you ever acquainted with children who come home from sight seeing and did not tell what they saw? When we have educated our children not to tell their experiences, and the cattle and swine to eat the weeds from the field and not injure the corn, and when we have convinced the hungry bugs that it is not the proper thing for them to bite our persons, then we shall be qualified to teach our members how to keep silent the evil thoughts entertained. Our Savior said, "Whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart." This with kindred passages shows clearly that in the thought lies the real sin.

To become passive is to throw open wide the doors and windows of our souls; it is a receptive mood, a condition to attract, to receive, to be acted upon. When a sensitive person becomes passive to one who is influential and positive, the former is acted upon by the latter, receives of his thoughts, and is influenced by them. To entertain evil thoughts is to enter into affinity and become passive to Satan. We should not deny the existence of a devil but obstinately refuse to open the doors of our souls for his thoughts to flow through them. We should not deny the existence of sin and evil, but refuse to entertain them in mind and thus be influenced by them.

It is not policy to entertain evil thoughts; for "as a man thinketh in his heart so is he," or so will he become if he continue. It is not charitable, for "Charity thinketh no evil."

PHYSICAL RESULTS.

Evil thinking not only degenerates us spiritually, mentally, and morally, but the habit is responsible for much of our physical ills. As an evidence that thought affects our physical

My son has a picture of a yawning person on his wall, and it is amusing to see how many who look at it begin involuntarily to open their mouths, throw back their heads, extend their arms, and take a genuine, hearty gape. How many of you readers are beginning to feel yawny while thinking of it?

Did you ever see a man or an awkward boy feed a baby and at the same time hold his own mouth still? Does the thought of luscious fruit cause your mouth to water?

of evil thoughts?

How many can testify to pain having been kissed away by strong, loving parents? Surely you have not witnessed such occurrences without recognizing the power of thought in its control of bodily functions.

Evil thoughts bring forth after their own kind; as acids they poison the blood; corrosive in their nature they obstruct the channels of peaceful life and hoist the turbulent flood gates of misery in a thousand forms. Who have read the beautiful parables in the Book of Mormon and Bible of the germination of seeds sown in the heart and thoughts planted in the mind, without witnessing the danger

Have you noticed the distinctive characteristics of love and rage? Let us take, for example, two lovers of one beautiful maid. One, whose love is reciprocated, sits enjoying her sunny presence, peacefully contemplating a lovely future, his eyes sparking with hope, countenance serene, respiration deep, heart action normal, digestion perfect; in a word, a picture of health. The other, who is rejected, is nervously pacing the floor of his office, eyes glittering with rage, short, uneven, costal breath, temperature fever heat, face flushed, heart shaking him at every throb, fists clinched, teeth tightly shut; he seems to have summoned all the ire of seven preceding generations and to be holding it condensed in his own heaving breast. Curses proceed from livid lips! Terrible threats break forth like muttering thunders! If he does not seize a gun and commit a triple murder there must be a terrible reaction, his life forces must fall as far below par as his foolish rage has lifted them above. Who can see the

You are more interested in the ways and means to be employed in shutting out evil thoughts, for you have long foxes which destroy the vines." The shortest statement that covers the whole ground was from Him that knoweth the end and the beginning:

Love the Lord thy God with all thy might, mind, and strength, and thy neighbor as thyself.

Whosoever is that full of love cannot contain or entertain an evil thought. But a patient, persistent development of our powers of mind is necessary before we stand on that lofty elevation. Therefore let me introduce you to yourself by giving you a

BRIEF ANALYSIS OF MAN.

From a scriptural and scientific standpoint we are found to be triune beings, spirit, mind, and matter. In our dual nature, matter counts only as a house wherein spirit and what seems to be an incorporate body called conscious mind, reside. Spirit evidently takes possession of his private office, known as the "solar plexus" or "abdominal brain," located back of the stomach on either side of the spine, at twenty weeks from conception, the time of quickening, when independent heart action sets up. His work is to keep the physical machinery running and channels clear, repair damages, give timely warning of danger, read the messages or thoughts that float in ethereal space and dispatch them to Mind. Messages thus communicated are called inspiration, intuition, and instinct. The wonderful body called Conscious Mind holds "cerebrum," the superior brain, as a general office. The chief executive is Will. It is believed that Mind with its aids and machinery formulates the great drift of idle and evil thoughts without consulting Spirit. It is a fatal mistake for Mind to ignore Spirit. They should always be on speaking terms. The lesson we want to learn is that our wills have power to direct or hold in check "The spirit of the our thoughts. prophet is subject to the prophet." and the spirit of the lay man is subject to the lay man, as soon as he has developed his will power as the prophet has done. Let us set our faces zionward and accomplish this work of development. We can do it.

To farther illustrate: Put water in the boiler, build a good fire in the furnace; the steam raises, the engine begins to tremble. Something is going to happen—she must have vent. Pull the cord; oh my, how she screams! All Aboard! Ring the bell. Pull the throttle. Did you ever hear such hissing? She fills the air with a dense fog. What a mighty power to move such a train.

Kindle the fires of life in a human engine, and the result is similar. The engineer's name is Will,—that's a common name—Will Power. There are millions of will powers on earth—too many of them with no definite aim, no purpose in life; their engines are jostled and shoved over the yards, they are lost, stragglers, out of joint, buffeted, cuffed, and beaten about, cursed by their brother wills who are set and determined to reach various points on time. Poor fellows, they are not to be blamed; they have had accidents, are out of time, out of repair, off their division, but there is a place for them somewhere in the great system. Will they not appreciate it when they again fall in line? Yet who knows how many of them will lose their jobs? When a human Will wrecks and loses his job we call it death. Our object is to hold our jobs. We want to live until we establish a character; that is what we are here for, and our most efficient method is to learn to hold our thoughts and not waste them. The leaky old engine that wastes her steam can do nothing but fizz; she can not raise steam enough to run anything but herself; the fuel and time are wasted: she should be repaired or abandoned.

So, if we cannot hold our thoughts until we have power to do something more than fizz, our spirits will soon ditch our old bodies and go home to God. Learn to hold your thoughts and your tongue will hold itself. The mute can waste his thoughts as readily as the glib. To think everything in general and nothing in particular is to throw away our most potent force. Our will power should be developed and our faculties trained until we can focus the entire forces of our mind and spirit on any given subject, and then at any time hold our thoughts, stop thinking, and rest the brain, then pick up the thread just where we laid it down and again concentrate.

Whenever evil thoughts are presented to a passive individual he should be able to politely close the doors of his soul against them by becoming positive. You can acquire the ability to "keep the doors of thy mouth from her that lieth in thy bosom," but it is far better to keep the doors of thy soul from the adversary.

Learn to throw yourself into a positive, defensive, electric attitude when in bad company, or when evil thoughts press you, and into a passive, receptive, magnetic, attractive attitude when in the presence of anything good.

This lesson well learned will do away with more physical suffering than all the physics, nostrums, tonics, and so-called specifics, in the universe, and forestall more evil speaking and talebearing than all the doors, and bars, and bolts, and keys, and guards, and gags that can be applied to the tongue and mouth.

If evil reports, physical pains, accidents, disasters, contagion, and death are evils, then as Saints we should neither think nor talk of them; i. e., they should neither form a topic of conversation nor a subject for meditation, for the first commandment is love; love is charity, and "charity thinketh no evil." But,

Whatsoever things are honest, ... just, ... pure, ... lovely, ... of good report; if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things.

praise, think on these things.

And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.

As he thinketh in his heart so is he.

DECLINE OF THE RELIGIOUS PRESS.

Comment has been provoked about the decline in influence and in circulation of the religious press in the United States during the last decade or two-a decline that has shown itself in two ways. Such of the journals of the several Protestant sects as have not suffered a positive falling off have failed to grow in proportion to the growth of population, and several important journals that were once distinctly religious have become secular. Most of them indeed have religious have become become more secular than they once were. The change is an interesting one, but it is not a change that shows any important facts except the liberalization of religious thought and a great advance in the development of periodical literature in general. The secular journals now report and interpret more religious news than the church papers did in the time of their greatest influence. On the other hand, there is a strong and necessary tendency in the conduct of the church papers to make and to keep them organs of their particular sects. This is a necessary and useful service. but the general liberalization of thought has made it impossible for a journal that is the organ of anything, religious or secular, to exert a strong or general influence. The decline of strictly religious journalism, as far as it has declined, measures the advance of reverent secular journalism in its treatment of religious subjects.

Such decline as has taken place may easily be exaggerated, and easily misinterpreted. There has been a falling away of popular interest in ecclesiastical doctrines, but there surely was never a time in our history when the literature of good conduct was either so excellent or so widely diffused. The broad abyss between the Christian church and "the world" is being bridged, and increased strength and efficiency to both is the result. Meanwhile the stronger religious papers emancipate themselves from sectarianism and attain a general interest, while the weaker decline into the newspapers of church organizations, reporting conventions, dedications, and the like. -The World's Work, May, 1901.

THE EXCAVATOR'S SPADE AND THE BIBLE.

No book has been so often attacked as the Bible. And in the Bible, it is the Old Testament particularly that has been assailed. To follow and repel all these assaults would not be possible in a brief article like this. But it may be helpful to look at some of the charges that have been made by skeptics against the biblical narrative and see how excavations in Bible lands have shown that the Bible is right and the skeptics wrong.

For example, it has been said that the whole story of the fight of the kings with each other, as told in the fourteenth chapter of Genesis, could not be true, for "there was no such communication between the far East and Palestine" as that chapter sets forth. At the time that this affirmation was made we had no means of controverting it. But now we have discovered that, long before Abraham's day, Sargon of Accad, from the far East, marched three times to Palestine, and actually left there an inscription stating this fact. So, as in so many other cases, the biblical record proves to be true and its critics to be mistaken.

Again, the story of Israel's oppression in Egypt has been denied as unhistorical. There was no such op-pression, said some skeptics. Now this criticism, too, has been shown to be false. If you turn to Exodus 1:11. you read: "Therefore did they set over them [the Israelites] taskmas. ters, to afflict them with their burdens; and they built for Pharaoh treasure cities, Pithom and Raamses." As this did not accomplish what the Egyptians desired, we read in Exodus 5:7,6: "Ye shall no more give the people straw to make brick, and the tale of bricks which they did make heretofore ye shall lay upon them." And later on we read that the taskmasters said to the people: "Go therefore now and work, for there shall no straw be given unto you, yet shall ye deliver the tale of bricks." So far the record of the word. Now in these later years, thirty-two centuries after these events, what do we find on making excavations in Egypt? At Pithom they have excavated these "treasure cities," and have found the lower layers of bricks to be well made with straw. Then come layers of bricks that have poorer straw, which points to the time when own straw as best they could. come other layers of bricks that have no straw at all, which we may well suppose to have been made when even what straw the slaves could gather gave out. We read of sermons in stones: but here we have sermons in bricks, and they preach to us this truth, that the word of God is true. and that the history that it records is reliable. Never again will it be said that the story of the oppression of Israel in Egypt is a figment of the writer's imagination.

It used to be said that the patriarchs were ignorant men and that in all probability they could not read even. It was also at one time claimed that Moses could not have written what the Bible says he did write, because he did not know how. Now no one would any longer make such a statement. We know that long before Abram ever left Ur of the Chaldees, they knew well how to read and write and we have very many clay tablets from before his time in our own hands. Indeed, the writer himself owns a tablet from Chaldea, which. when Abram left Ur, was already 1,000 years old and is therefore to day 5,000 years old. These results of the excavator's spade have again put to shame the assertions of many skeptical critics.

The most telling arguments made of late against the radical biblical critics have been based on the archæological finds, especially those made in the Nile and the Euphrates valleys. The use made of these discoveries by Hommel of Germany, Sayce of England and Halevy of France has done much to strengthen belief in the historical reliability that formerly, by general consent, was accorded the scriptures. From the pen of the famous Arabian traveler, Dr. Edouard Glaser, in the "Beilage" of the Munich Allgemeine Zeitung (No. 213), I glean the following:

One of the perplexing problems of Egyptian chronology has been the date of the opening of the era generally known as the "Middle Kingdom," which included the famous eighteenth dynasty and covered the period which runs parallel with the begin-nings of the Israelitish people, especially the times of the patriarchs. As Egyptian research had all along maintained that this period antedated the events described in the chapter in Genesis referring to these times, a conflict has been supposed to exist between Egyptian and biblical chronology. The new papyrus find shows that the trouble all along has been an incorrect computation on the part of the Egyptologists with reference to this historic period. Professor Meyer has maintained that it began in 2130 B C., Brugsch in 2466, Petrie in 2778 and Unger in 3315, so that the difference between the highest and the lowest was about 1,200 years; yet not one could be brought into agreement with the biblical records. The new papyrus shows that the beginning of this period is to be placed between 1996 and 1993 B. C., and its close between 1783 and 1780, or fully 150 straw, which points to the time when years later than even the low computation of the poor Israelites had to collect their Meyer puts it; and a space of less than fifty years now exists between the current biblical chronology and that of the Egyptologists, where formerly there was a difference of centuries and a reconciliation seemed impossible. The near approach of the two chronological systems has been caused entirely by the discovery of errors in Egyptian calculations and not in the biblical.

Once more we find that skeptics have affirmed that the Bible has erred in its accounts of the Hittites as a great people. As lately as in the last edition of the British Encyclopedia, Professor Cheyne has affirmed that the story of the Hittites, as given in the book of Kings, where the story of the siege of Samaria is told, "does not exhibit the writer's acquaintance with the times in a very favorable light." But all the most recent excavations now show that the Hittites were just such a people as the biblical writers depict them. They were one of the "great" peoples of that day, and from the time of Abraham down through many years they were the terror of the Egyptians, as well as of the Israelites. So, again, the biblical record seems to be far nearer the truth than were those who criticised it and affirmed that it was unreliable.

There is yet much more to be dug out of the bowels of the earth that will bear witness to ancient history, and we believe that it will all tend to confirm and not to overthrow the biblical narrative.

As Professor Sayce says in the Homiletic Review, when he speaks of certain recent discoveries in Egypt: "Once more, therefore, the light that has come from the monuments of the past has been fatal to the pretensions of critical skepticism. . . . It is not the discoveries of the higher criticism but the old traditions that have been confirmed by archæological research." -A. F. Schauffler, D. D., in Northwestern Christian Advocate for July 3, 1901.

BARTLETT, Iowa, July 25.

Herald Readers:-From Riverton, where I last wrote, I came to Hamburg, where I found a little band of Saints who have had a struggle for existence, and where the Sunday school is the life of the branch. Prospects, however, are brighter for the branch, do they heed the teachings of the Spirit and word, which teacheth that we must forgive from the heart, and show forth faith in God, not to try to do things in any other spirit than the Spirit of the Christ, bearing and forbearing with each other, and not be discouraged, knowing that the work is the Lord's. Left quite an interest at Riverton, and a pressing invitation to return.

Six were baptized while at Hamburg, three of whom were from Riverton, and while they were young in years, yet such it is that if faithful will make the most efficient laborers for our God.

At McPaul, meetings were held from Thursday till Sunday, Saturday and Sunday being a two-days' meeting, consisting of meetings for two days, and not a day and half, as sometimes occurs. The heat melted the ambition of some, so they were not present, as previously arranged, but God blessed the services.

Came here on Monday and arranged for tent work, a new tent having been furnished by the liberality of the Saints of this district. Found upon arrival here a meeting conducted by "Bob" Norval, under the auspices of the Christian Church, and while they had stated that the meetings would close, and that we might occupy where they were occupying, yet for some cause best known to somebody else the meetings continue, but with increasing attendance at our services, and decreasing attendance at theirs.

On Monday eve, having no service, I attended theirs and listened to a Latter Day Saint sermon, Holy Ghost and all, from Mr. Norval. At the close I asked the privilege of making an explanation. It was freely granted. I told the people that I could approve of the many truths uttered by the speaker, and expressed regret that I appeared among them a stranger among strangers under the peculiar circumstances that might make it appear to some that I was intruding, but the facts were, I did not know of the meetings they were conducting, when I cirulated notice that the tent would be located here or in the vicinity so as to begin meetings on Tuesday night and such notice had been so publicly given that I could not withdraw it, and hence would occupy without any desire to intrude on the rights of any. When I closed my brief explanation Mr. Norval arose and said: "I know these Latter Day Saints, and know that they are not an aggressive people, and will not intrude on the rights of any, and I wish the people before me would learn a lesson from this. I know a great many of their ministers," he said, "and know them to be fine men, and I know they preach the gospel, and by them I have been treated as kindly as by any people in the world. Why," says he, "This people has appeared in a false light to many. They are not Utah Mormons, and do not believe in the Adam-God theory or polygamy, as some have supposed, but oppose these doctrines. The Utah Mormons believe in these things, but the Latter Day Saints do not. No, Bro. Mintun I will not think you are intruding, for the notice of your tent meetings was published before the people here knew I was within 500 miles." And you, dear readers, will not be surprised if I say that I again and again expressed myself while he was speaking with, "Thank you, Bro. Norval, Thank you." While he appreciated it, yet some of those present did not relish it well, and I heard yesterday, that they were calling him an "old Mormon." One thing is quite peculiar, that while he does not claim to represent any church, yet he assisted in the ordaining of an elder in the "Christian Church" night before last.

At the meeting Monday night three questions were read from the question box, one whether Jews wrote on brass plates, one on the Jews writing in Egyptian, and one on Luke 13:23, asking if that did not prove the claims of Joseph Smith false. The latter he deferred. The two former were answered, "If so, I don't know it." Good was done by what Mr. Norval said.

The reunion of this district convenes August 24, near Tabor, Iowa, and the committee is now making active preparations, to have all things arranged in time, and satisfactorily. It is fondly expected that this will be the best gathering that has ever been held in southwestern Iowa. It is expected that Elders J. W. Wight and F. M. Cooper will assist, and this assures us of profitable instruction being given, and the body of Christ edified. Dear Saints of this mission, don't fail to come, even if it may appear to be a little or great sacrifice on your part, for these temporal sacrifices are more in the appearance than in reality.

Hot and dry weather still continues, but the Saints still express themselves cheerfully, with a confidence expressed by their actions that they are willing to stand still and see the salvation of God. We anticipate good results from our efforts here. Brn. H. Kemp and Charles Fry are assisting, and I am pleased to say that they are very pleasant associates, and earnest ministers.

Tent will be dedicated next Sunday at 2:30 p. m.

Yours in hopes of final victory, J. F. MINTUN.

BOSTON, Mass., July 20.

Editors Herald: — Just upon the eve of departure for special work in a foreign field, I desire to thank the Saints for the special encouragement given in the work of the Bishopric by the general response to the appeal for means to liquidate the college indebtedness and maintain the work outlined by the last General Conference.

The increased missionary force; the heavy expense necessary to sending so many to the islands, to Australia, and to Europe, make it important that every member of the household of faith perform his or her duty in the work and manifest a valiant spirit in occupying in the extended church service even by sacrifice and patient and zealous work.

Reports of college work to the 17th inst. indicated a total list of cash and good subscriptions of $14,156.43. This is indeed moving upward in this particular work, but to reach the goal we must not stop. Neither wait to see if the work will not be accomplished without our aid. Let us rather each feel and resolve that it shall not be done without our help. Our kind Master spoke to the entire household when he said, Pay the college debt, and every member of this house of hope ought to move at once in response to the direction of him who is just and holy and our final Judge.

Let no one feel that my absence from the office for a few months will cripple the work there. Good and faithful men are in charge there and they are in easy communication with Counsellors George H. Hilliard and E. A. Blakeslee, and by just a short delay I shall have ready communication with the office on all important matters also.

It is important that the law of Christ be fulfilled in all particulars if we would reap according to his promises. The minister must not only work but he must be very diligent and sacrifice in that work. The member must be equally diligent in his duties and faithful in his sacrifices. Our work is one and its responsibilities binding and fairly imposed upon all. In this grave hour no man or woman should fail of duty. The question of tithes and offerings as set forth in the article of the Bishopric in March. 1884, and applicable to the church conditions outside of Zion and her stakes, as suggested by the revelation of 1838, has been sufficient to bring us to where it was possible to take a further move forward. This new condition has been readily outlined by the Master in the late communication to his people. No strange thing has happened, but a further order of preparation and duty has been given, and as obedient children, as courageous soldiers enlisted in the work of saving and building places of safety with our great Captain, we must cheerfully and courageously answer to every command.

Stakes have been appointed, and all the work required of the Master under the condition of occupancy under this situation of the church, must be carried out in its time and place. The Bishopric will strive to meet every condition in its time; but do not think you will help up by pushing matters before the time. A few good souls in the past eighteen years thought we were too slow, but time has proven that our work has been ample for every emergency. We did not do some things that we were urged to do, but the law was fulfilled without it, and it is plain now to see had we launched out according to some of the views expressed we would have been as a ship upon the great ocean without sails or rudder. The church must move wisely always, and it can only do this as it keeps close to the orders given by Christ who is the head.

Under the law of stake organization there is to be fulfilled the further law of special consecrations of surplus properties. Every man, woman, and child should step forward to fulfill this, then. One, two, or a few dozen will not suffice. The application is general and it will require a general compliance. Are we ready and willing to occupy in this? It may be asked, What is the church going to do? Are you going to open storehouses: set apart inheritances; have all things common, or what? My answer is, We shall fulfill the law as the Lord directs. We are not testing him, but he is testing us. The first step is to arrange with the bishops this "first consecration;" each to arrange with the bishop or agent in his own stake or district. or with the bishop of the church, and all under one rule and one system. This rule or system is that outlined in the revelation and directly outlined by the Bishopric and First Presidency of the Church with the counsel and advice of the Twelve and all other officers of the Church where it is practicable to get their advice and counsel. If these first officers who are made responsible fail to give the proper direction and counsel, then the Lord will place others in their places who will.

It occurs to me that there is perfect safety in such an order as this; responsibility of action must rest somewhere, and what place is better than upon those who will suffer if they do not move rightly.

We go to our present work confident and trustful that the Lord will look after his own. We also trust the Saints and believe they will accomplish finally their part of the work, and with this confidence we may fully trust that the blessings of the Lord will continue with all. Faithfully yours,

E. L. KELLEY.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., July 23. Editors Herald:-On the 18th I visited Joplin and spoke two nights in their big sixty foot tent. Brn. Keck and Erwin had been interesting the people of Joplin with a series of tent meetings. I got a peep at the place where the late Corlin-Erwin debate was held. From all sides I heard from, good to excellent reports; how ably Bro. Erwin defended the truth, and how Rev. Corlin was completely put to sea-even so much so that his brethren claimed the use of the house for a prayer meeting on the last night of the debate, while Corlin's church was under examination. Bro. Erwin urged that the debate be not interrupted; but no, the prayer meeting was of great importance, and it must go on. The Baptists ruled, and the prayer meeting declared the debate off one night sooner than articles of agreement specified. I was made happy to know that there was another victory won for the message the angel brought to Joseph the Seer. Corlin quoted from Baptist history to prove his church "from John the Baptist;" but when Bro. Erwin turned his own guns on him, then none of these Baptist histories are indorsed by the Baptist Church! I learned it was amusing to see how fast this "Mormon eater" went down before the people. One good Baptist sister was heard to score him in these words: "I believe this thing is a judgment sent upon Bro. Corlin from God." How much more of such might have been said, had not one of our sisters stepped in at the time, is hard to conjecture. It was said that Corlin had "sized up" Bro. Erwin as being of little note when considering that cyclone he met once at Blendville. But Corlin had failed in his measurement, and that young "Southern Jeff," was more than equal to every emergency; and while Corlin showed bad temper, our young Jeff was as cool and pleasant as the zephyrs of a pleasant summer morning. We are proud of his effort by reports from every quarter. I hope the brother will not fail to live humble and keep his life pure so as to be of great worth to the church, both in preaching the word and defending the church from the attack of enemies.

Saturday evening, 20th, Bro. Keck and I left for Miami. Indian Territory, where I preached the dedicatory sermon at eleven o'clock Sunday at our new church, which had been erected by our aged Bro. R. M.

Peck. It is a well-built house, 20x30, and finished in good style. The cost was $621.62. Four hundred dollars of this amount was turned over to the church as tithing from Bro. Peck, and the remaining $221.62 donated to the church as freewill offering. We sang hymns 720 and 1115 in Harp, and the prayer was offered by Bro. F. C. Keck, after which he made some appropriate remarks, in which he stated that Bro. Peck, the donor of this church house, had not yet been in the church one year; but had felt the need of a house here and felt moved upon to build it and donate it to the church he had learned to love. I had freedom of thought in dedicating the chapel to the use of God's people, where they could enjoy an "open Bible and a free pulpit." The deed was presented to me, which will be recorded and sent to Bishop Kellev.

I am now delivering a few lectures in the chapel from my large pictorial chart. People seem to be interested, and no doubt good will be done. Last night my meeting was opened by a full-blooded Indian-Lamanite, if you please. I am pleased to see so many of these people becoming interested in the gospel. I have met many bright and intelligent Indians since coming here who will be an honor to the church when once truly converted to the faith.

The terrible drought is getting in its work here; but not yet so bad as in Missouri. The Seneca tribe of Indians have been meeting of nights, and participating in what they call the "Rain dance." They commence to gather around a fire in the woods or elsewhere, and beat a drum, which sounds the alarm; then when the crowd is gathered they put in an hour or two of downright dancing around the fire. When tired they amuse themselves in playing what they call the "Mogison game." When well rested the dance is repeated, and this is kept up till a late hour. Several nights have been spent in this manner, and yet the "Great Spirit" has not been prevailed upon to send the rain. This dancing for rain by these people may be just as acceptable as are some of the churches' prayers that have hitherto denied to God his right to give any further revelations to his children. Should the Christian churches pray for rain, and rain come, would not that be a revelation of rain received from God? Certainly. If a revelation of rain, why not a revelation of word? Before the Governor of Missouri sent out his proclamation to the citizens of Missouri to assemble at their places of worship on Sunday, July 21, and pray to God for rain, I had been peculiarly moved upon, and was impressed to write the Governor in regard to the practicability of asking the good people of the state to petition God to break the drought. This petition to the Governor was in behalf of our people who lived in the state. I felt sure, and do now, would the governors of the several states that are so terribly afflicted with the present drought, appoint in unison a day of fasting and solemn prayer to God for rain, that petition would be answered. I doubt the practicability and wisdom of our people gathering together and making intercessions to God for him to remove this scourge that is sent upon the people on purpose to give them an opportunity to prove to God that they are worshiping him from the heart, and not alone from the lips. Was the drought sent to humble the Saints alone, then there would be wisdom in the leading officers of stakes, districts, and missions, in calling for a day of fasting and prayer-where these Saints could humble themselves in sackcloth and ashes, and implore God to forgive their sins, and remove the afflicting drought sent upon them to that end. In our zeal we must not overreach the end that God contemplates to make in sending the drought. If we do, we will only be denied the answer to our prayers, and the Saints will become discouraged and God's purposes be mocked at. If a branch alone has its trials, let that branch call its solemn assembly and ask God to assist them in moving the difficulty. If a stake or district alone has its drought, afflictions, and trials, let the officers of that stake or district appoint a day of fasting and prayer when God can be importuned to come to their special relief. But if the trouble is more far reaching, and covers a mission comprising one, two, or three states, more or less, let the minister in general charge take into consideration the practicability of ordering a day of fasting and prayer. The wisdom of such order can be determined through revelation and wisdom of the Spirit. The minister in charge, when such a vital thing as a drought, plague, and the like, that has become general and of note, should seek to be in close touch with the heads of the church, and with sub-missionaries, presidents of stakes and districts that are embraced in his mission. This will insure confidence and unity, which thing is absolutely necessary upon all such occasions. Should the plague, drought, or difficulty cover a larger field than an ordinary mission, touching the interest of the whole church, then the First Presidency should look after the matter similarly as is noted for the missionary. To do otherwise will certainly bring this great work we love, and try to represent, into reproach, unwisely before the people.

We have now, I trust, learned wisdom in regard to some things, by what we have suffered. God is moving all along the line, and none are so blind as not to see it, only those who will not see, by reason of prejudice, pride, and popularity. These are trying times; indeed they are; but let us not faint by the way.

Ministers of the mission are doing well to excellent. This is praiseworthy, and needs noting in these hot, sweltering, droughty Yours yet in the faith, times.

I. N. WHITE.

CHILLICOTHE, Mo., July 21.

Editors Herald:-I am at this place battling for the truth, and trying to hold the gospel before the people. W. E. Haden was with me awhile, and C. P. Faul is here now. He is a good helper, as he can take charge of the singing, which is a great help. He has a good choir now, and we use our own books. Have preached twenty-five times; five have been baptized, and will baptize some more today. Have had more than we could seat in the tent nearly every night. I have had splendid liberty in preaching, and quite a number seem interested; but it seems very hard for them to loose themselves from fetters that bind. They have been taught the commandments of men so long that it is hard for them to see the light of the gospel. They will say, "You preach the truth, and we never heard such good preaching; but at the same time it is hard for them to see that they have been going wrong or following the teachings of men. I will close here soon and hope to return later. There are several that desire to unite with us, but circumstances will not permit it now.

The drouth is still unbroken here, and people are feeling the effect of hard times. Trees are dying, and the leaves are falling. Rain has fallen on all sides of us, but none here.

The work of the Master seems to be onward in this district. We have many calls for preaching. Will get around as fast as we can. My voice is in bad condition now. Speaking in the open air almost every night is more than my voice will stand; but I am willing to do the best I can, and I hope that I may be able to bear the strain, for there is so much to do.

July 23.-Two were baptized Sunday, one Monday, and two more were to have been this morning, but one was taken sick last night, and was not able to go to the river. Had two hundred out Sunday night, and interest was splendid, and order good. Many on the outside of the tent in carriages. I have decided to stay here some time yet, as I feel that many will accept the gospel. When I told them Sunday night that I would close for this time, many came and begged me to stay; so I promised to continue. I have written for help, as Bro. Faul was called home. I do not think I have seen such an interest since I have been preaching. Some, however, are doing what they can against us. I have been using charts, with telling effect.

My prayer is that I may keep humble and still labor on, and when crowned with success give God the glory.

Your brother in bonds,

J. W. Adams.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, June 21.

Dear Herald:-As I feel in a writing mood this morning, I follow the inclination. It has been some time since I have written to your dear pages; but as the desire to do something for the cause of Christ influences me and as the only means that seems to be presented to me is to write, I cheerfully submit. Many times the thought occurs to the writer, and perhaps to others, that I ought to be a great worker; and realizing our inability to do a great work, we fail to do that which is required at our hands. The thought may occur to some that the Lord has not dealt justly by his creatures here below, and to some he has given many talents, while others seemingly have none; but we are not accountable for the talents which we receive, but are accountable for the way we improve our talents; and if we have but a small talent there is just as much responsibility resting upon us to improve as one who has received many talents.

My heart is in this great work, and the desire to see the work move out at San Antonio has caused me at times to become impatient and over zealous. I fully realize this morning my dependence on the Lord, and my determination is to do the work he has assigned me and leave the result with him "who doeth all things well." A little band of Saints have been meeting from Sunday to Sunday trying to keep the spark from going out; and we have been looking forward to the time when we will have a building of our own to worship in; and at times I think we get impatient at what seems to us slow progress. But I feel this morning to do my very best and to leave the result with God. As our missionary, Bro. H. O. Smith, will leave us in a few days, it makes us feel sad. He has been a great help to us by exhortations and words of encouragement, and also in soliciting means to build a church. I hope we will not be discouraged because we are left alone, but put our shoulders to the wheel and work as true soldiers ought to work.

I rejoice that the work is progressing in other parts of the Lord's vineyard. May the Lord bless his Saints everywhere, is my humble prayer in Jesus' name.

BUTH GIFFORD.

HARDINSBURG, Ind., July 23.

Editors Herald:-I received notice the first of May of my General Conference appointment, and made arrangements at once to enter the work. I was apprised by G. A. Smith, submissionary in charge of Indiana, that I would labor under M. R. Scott, Jr., in the Southern district of Indiana. My first labor was in Rush, Decatur, and Jefferson counties, in new places principally. By proper counsel we concluded best to leave those new openings until the busy work was over, and answer some calls that had been made to the district president by scattered members. Accordingly I went to Husstown in June, and held forth there over a week, with good interest. From there I went near Corydon, and sojourned with Bro. James M. Wynn, and preached at Walnut Valley schoolhouse: also in Bro. Wynn's house, and at the courthouse in Corydon. Judging from the interest manifested a good work can be accomplished if this work can be followed up.

From Corydon I went to Leavenworth, and joined Bro. P. A. Flinn, and held forth at that place for about a week. Having previously arranged for a meeting at Middlefork, Bro. Flinn and I went there the first of July and held forth a week. While there we attended the regular preaching day at Union Church, and by invitation preached morning and evening; also attended baptism services, and assisted in confirmation. Three were baptized by Bro. W. C. Marshall.

From this place I went home to look after temporal interests. Was there two days.

Bro. Flinn and I were appointed as a court of elders to adjust difficulties in the Rego branch. We have visited among the members and did what we could for the elevation of the work. Some members against whom charges have been prefered have made satisfactory restitution, and others will be cut off.

We are now having good interest; much more so than was manifested in the beginning. One has requested baptism, and we trust that others will follow. Bro. M. R. Scott, Jr., joined us Saturday. We go the 27th to a two days' meeting at Leavenworth; then Bro. Scott will go to Derby, and Bro. Flinn and I will go to Husstown, to the two days' meeting the third.

The work is in a prosperous condition throughout Southern Indiana. May the Lord bless all of the laborers in the vineyard, and help us to work faithfully and build up the kingdom. May many be gathered into the fold is the prayer of

Your humble servant,

JAMES D PORTER.

LEBECK, Mo., July 20.

Saints' Herald:-Perhaps a few lines from this locality may not be out of place, although we have nothing very flattering to write about. This part of the country looks quite desolate in consequence of the severe drouth prevailing here. With some of the Saints it will almost be counted a famine, as nearly all are poor. The wheat was a very good yield: but as not much is sown in this county it is going to be a hard matter for many to obtain bread. This is not a productive country; and for this reason it is continually hard times here. If it were a productive country the poor Saints could not obtain homes as they have, as the more well to do would have it fenced up. Sometimes elders visiting us from other parts hold this country up to ridicule and hoot at the idea of it being the will of the Lord for Saints to locate in such a country. There are exceptions to this, however; for some of us remember the last sermon preached here in Lebeck by Bro. I. N. White when he said by way of encouragement to the Saints: "Beautify your homes; be contented; be industrious; be honest in your dealings with the world." Truly we would like very much to hear his voice among us once more.

There is one thing certain, the Saints of Clinton district have a crisis to meet. Many will be obliged to leave to find employment to obtain the bare necessities of life. The question arises, Will there be any better prospects other places than here? But we hope there is a brighter day coming in the glad new time. Now, I expect up will go some hands in horror at what I am going to suggest: Our bishop's agent is G. W. Beebe; his nearest railroad station is Eldorado Springs, Missouri. Now let other districts where the drouth has effected them so severely send in names of their agents to the HERALD, and then let the Saints in the more favored districts save the clothing that they have lain aside and box it up and send to the agents. Much old clothing can be made over into children's clothing, and be made to look well. A pair of shoes that Johnny Smith in the city would not want to wear can be worn by Johnny Smith in the country, and be considered good enough to wear to Sunday school And so with different garments. I hope that Saints will look at these things as they are. By using care and common sense many a little boy can be fixed up quite comfortably for the winter, and no one will be made the poorer, as only those things that would not be longer used, need be given away. May the time soon come when the Saints will be in a condition to reap the benefits of cooperation. Then each member that is able-bodied can supply himself and yield an income to the church. I know there are those who will undertake to disprove this assertion. If this is not the case, the Saints will be no better off in a gathered condition than scattered. In our present condition there is a waste of productive force that could be utilized, and will be under cooperation.

Yours for a cooperative commonwealth, F. T. BAKER.

LOST RIVER, Idaho, July 17.

ing as opportunity offered. Leaving Brn. D. Wight and Charles Albertson at Albion, June 18, in company with Bro. S. D. Condit I visited Conor and preached at night. Next day we drove to Elba, and the two following nights we preached in the tabernacle to fair sized audiences, and the next night occupied the schoolhouse at Conor again. June 22 we drove to Malta, and preached in Bro. Leonard Condit's hall. But having heard that the Mormon people were going to review our efforts made at Elba, we thought it best that one of us should be present. So Elder Condit.

one of us should be present. So Elder Condit went to Elba, while I continued the work at Malta, preaching twice on Sunday and assisting in the Union Sunday school. The next day I drove to Albion, picking up Bro. Condit on the way. He had been present at the meeting at Elba, when the claims of the Reorganized Church were reviewed, and was given twenty minutes in which to reply. From remarks made by a number present, we conclude that our cause did not suffer loss. Upon our arrival at Albion we found Elders Wight and Albertson had been busily engaged in sowing the good seed, preaching every night, closing their labors on the night of the 24th. Elder D. W. Wight delivered a grand sermon on the Book of Mormon, which was listened to by a small but interested audience.

From Albion all four journeyed westward to the great Shoshone Falls of the Snake River, where we stopped for two or three hours viewing the grand sights presented from various points. We crossed the river above the falls on a ferry boat. This cost us only $1.50, when we would have had to pay fifty cents at points further down the river. Your readers can see at a glance how the missionaries are sometimes favored. But I am pleased to say that they are not always favored in above manner.

We continued our journey to Hagerman, passing by the Blue Lakes, a great curiosity of themselves, aside from their being located six or seven hundred feet below the level of the surrounding country, walled in on three sides by perpendicular piles of lava rock six hundred feet high. We came to the Devil's Washboard, where Bro. Wight and I each succeeded in getting a piece of the washboard, but not without getting well wetted by the rushing, foaming torrent that came pouring over it.

Reaching Hagerman the 27th, we were kindly cared for by Brn. Durfee and Sherman. Our stay of four days was much enenjoyed by the writer in visiting and communing with the dear Saints. It was hard to give the parting hand to those whom we believe to be true Saints of God. We preached twice and held one Saints' meeting, administering the sacrament. May God bless them with all that is needful.

July 1 we drove to Bro. Irving Condit's ranch, and stopped over night with him. Were made welcome, and were aided financially. May God bless him! From there we drove to Bliss, where Brn. Wight and Albertson continued their journey westward by rail, while Bro. S. D. Condit and I turned our faces to the northeast, traveling through the Big Wood River and Silver Creek country, and finally arrived at Sr. A. W. Ward's ranch, in the Little Wood River Valley the 3d of July. Here we spent the glorious Fourth, also: and on the evenings of the fifth and sixth we were kindly permitted to occupy the Mormon meetinghouse at Carey, the Bishop and choir doing the singing. On Sunday, the 7th, Bro. Condit went over to Silver Creek to attend services held by the followers of Brigham. He was given a few minutes to defend our position which had been assailed. The writer held preaching services in the Ward schoolhouse and also taught the Bible class in the Baptist Sunday school. Our stay at Sr. Ward's was made pleasant by herself and children, and we were loathe to say good-bye to them; but duty called to other points, so on the 8th we pulled out for the Lost River county, and arrived there the evening of the 9th, and were made welcome at the home of Bro. H. R. Jones, four miles above Arco. Here we preached three sermons: two at Bro. Jones' and one at his son Daniel's home, resulting in the baptism of two sons of Bro. H. R. Jones, and also the wife of Daniel Jones. All of which are excellent young people. The baptism took place Sunday, July 14, and in the p. m. held confirmation meeting and administered the sacrament. In so doing we were all made to feel the blessed influence of the Holv Spirit. May the Spirit of the divine Master attend those beloved Saints at Arco.

On the evenings of the 13th and 14th we preached in the Mormon hall or meeting-house at Lost River. Bishop King and his people kindly assisted us in the singing.

Monday, the 15th, we drove up the big Lost River to the Thousand Springs Valley, where we were made welcome by Bro. Wm. Bradshaw and family, who have been isolated from all church privileges for twenty-one years. But I am pleased to say they have been kept in the true faith by keeping in touch with church work through reading the church publications, they being subscribers to both the HERALD and Ensign. Bro. Bradshaw is known far and near in this the Lost River country as a "Josephite Mormon," and is respected by all who have mentioned his name to us. We preached once at his house.

The work is onward, and there is much to encourage where we have been; and we shall endeavor to revisit the part of the mission we have just gone over, and try to do more preaching than we have been able to do in the past. We start tomorrow for Blackfoot, and other points in the Snake River country, where we will labor together for a short time only, and then I will have to go into the Bear Lake country or into Wyoming to labor.

In gospel bonds,

A. J. LAYLAND.

BOSTON, Mass., July 25.

Editors Herald:—Thinking that the Saints and friends of Bro. and Sr. E. L. Kelley and Bro. and Sr. Muceus would like to know of their embarking for their foreign fields, I take this opportunity of writing.

Just a word first as to how I happened to be with them. I was with my husband and Bro. and Sr. U. W. Greene at Scott Corners, New York. They are there engaged in tent work, which has been under way now for some weeks. Bro. and Sr. Kelley stopped off one day on their way east, and the Bishop addressed the Saints and friends who were met together to hear. All seemed pleased to meet with and listen to him and expressed themselves as favorably impressed with his evening's sermon.

Wanting to visit farther east before returning to my home I accompanied Bro and Sr. Kelley to Boston, going first to New York City, only a short distance from our camp, then sailing from there to Providence. Bro. Kelley addressed the Saints in their chapel there, through it was their regular Wednesday evening prayer service.

We spent part of a day at Newport, the leading watering place of America; and on our way from Providence to Boston stopped off for a visit in old historic Plymouth. We also got a view of Silver Lake and the beautiful, pine grove where the Massachusetts district will hold its reunion this month. All were disappointed that Bro. Kelley could not be with them at the reunion, but his work called him on to England. They sailed from Boston Saturday, July 20, at one p. m., on the great ocean liner Saxonia. On the steamer we met Bro. and Sr. Muceus, but were a little too far from them to shake their hands. However, they with Bro. and Sr. Kelley seemed cheerful and courageous as they started across the mighty deep. They were much disappointed that Bro. Griffith could not sail with them.

There were four of us, Brn. R. Bullard, M. H. Bond, and Busiel, and myself who were permitted, through the influence of Bro. Busiel, to go on board one of the tugs to help the great steamer out to sea. This was an enjoyable experience, and we waved our good-byes all the way. Our tug stayed with them longest, and we sailed as far as Boston Light, where we took the pilot and left them.

As we looked at the great Saxonia and thought for a moment of the dangers always attending such a voyage, our hearts were stirred with emotion; but just then we noted the name of the tug on which we were sailing. It was "Confidence," and we thought: Yes, we take you out on the deep with full confidence, and trust that the Father who watches over the sea as well as the land will give to the Saxonia a safe voyage; and an earnest prayer from our hearts went up in silence for our two missionaries and their companions as we waved them our last goodbye and turned our way into Boston Harbor. I can never forget the experiences of the day, and shall ever cherish and hold dear in memory thoughts and feelings stirred within us on the occasion.

On Sunday we met with the Boston Saints; enjoyed meeting them and attending their services, which were indeed spiritual. They are alive in the work, and my prayer is for them and for all to be very faithful.

I soon return to be with my husband in the tent work. It is encouragingly going on, and much interest is manifest on the part of outside people. I will not tell you much about the summer's work, however, but will leave that for Bro. U. W. or Bro. D. A. to do.

I expect to return to Lamoni in time for my school work in September.

Ever trustful for the success and final triumph of the gospel work, I am,

Your sister,

ROXANNA E. ANDERSON.

FAYETTE CITY, July 15.

Editors Herald:—Our "children's day" is over, and we are alive to the work in Fayette City. Have not many members in our Sunday school; but we are doing what we can to teach the little ones the true gospel. The largest part of our school is composed of outsiders, as not many Saints' children here go, as the most of them are all little ones. It is very small compared to some schools; but the little ones love to be taught, and we love to teach them the truths as taught by Christ our Master.

We had "children's day" exercises last evening, and the hall was packed. All seemed to enjoy the exercises and donated freely to the offering collected. We have a children's building fund, which this collection swelled to the delight of the little ones.

The Saints are looking forward to the time for the convention and conference, which will be held here the last of August and first of September. We anticipate a good time and a large crowd of Saints, for which each and all are preparing. All will be welcomed. If we all come with the Spirit of the Master we shall not be disappointed in receiving the blessings God has in store for them that love and serve him. Let us be faithful to the covenant which we have made!

It is just four years on the fourth of this month since Bro. Shinn baptized me, and I have never regretted the step. I have received many blessings since, and have had many battles to fight also; but it only convinces me of the truthfulness of the work of latter-days. I was a Bickertonite for twenty-two years, and thought I was a Latter Day Saint; but now I know that I was only partly such, having obeyed the first principles of the gospel but not baptized by one having authority. I am glad I heard the gospel preached in its purity; and hearing, obeyed. And as I have come in I am determined by God's help to be faithful to the end. My heart was made to rejoice last conference when my daughter Lydia surprised me by being baptized while at Wheeling conference. Let the good work go on. Ever hoping for Zion's weal,

Your sister in the gospel,
ANNIE ASHTON.

MACON, Mo., July 27.

Editor Herald:—The last days of June I made a flying trip to the Far West district, going by way of Cameron and old Far West (Cheer post office) to Kingston, where the district conventions of Sunday school and Religio convened, also conference. On the 27th I visited friends and preached at Far West. My soul was made glad to see the progress the work is making there. They have regular preaching twice a month, and a Latter Day Saint Sunday school. Surely the waste places are being built up.

On the 28th I attended the conventions named above, and presided over the Religio. I was glad to see the progress and interest manifested in this line of work, and feel confident that under the directions of the new officers much good will be accomplished.

On the 18th of July Bro. Earl Corthell and the writer opened up the work in Macon, with the new district tent (Northeast Missouri district). But owing to the intense heat and dust caused by the drought our crowds have been small, but we have had good attention and excellent liberty in presenting the gospel.

Last Sunday we visited all the churches in the city and asked them to announce our meetings, giving them written announcements. At most of the churches we were received well, but at others the old spirit of persecution seems to reign. We have issued an invitation to hear the Angel's Message, and are billing the town again, hoping to arouse some interest, at least to let the honest in heart know that we are here.

Yours in gospel bonds, Walter W. Smith.

ADAMSTOWN, N. S. W., June 19.

Editors Saints' Herald:—This is my first attempt to write to the HERALD to let the Saints know how we are progressing along gospel lines in sunny New South Wales. The work does not move along so speedily as I should like to see it; yet I know by the witness of the Holy Spirit that this work is of God and not of man. It shall roll on until it fills the whole earth.

I realize that the touchstone to the grand secret of success is humility, with the eye single to the honor and glory of God; and the promise to us is that we shall be full of spiritual light. I am filled with gratitude to God when I read of the spiritual condition of the Saints in other parts of God's vineyard. How you are enjoying the spiritual and the temporal gifts and blessings of this marvelous work of the Almighty! The same has been our experience here. We have cottage prayer and testimony meetings every week in our homes by turns, and we receive a blessing every night we meet. I can assure you it is good to serve the Lord and be a Saint in latter days.

I am pleased to say our branch is on the advance. I am also pleased to see by conference minutes appointments that our much esteemed Bro. G. R. Wells is returning to Australia; also that Bro. Alexander H. Smith, the Patriarch, is coming to visit Australia. I am sure a hearty welcome awaits them both on their arrival here.

The branch at Wallsend is going to erect a new church about September.

Our anniversary "children's day" passed off very well. Children recited well, and singing was very nice. The event was postponed a fortnight on account of the death of a daughter of Bro. Jones, of Charleston. She was burned to death; aged five years. Little Topsy is now in the paradise of God. A very large cortege followed the remains to Duelley cemetery.

Elder W. J. Haworth has again left on a mission to Lismore; will probably return by December conference. May his efforts be crowned with many sheaves for the Master.

I have just returned from a fortnight visit among the Saints in Victoria,—Hastings branch. While there I was called to the office of an elder by Bro. Baxter.

Your brother in Christ, JOSEPH THOMPSON.

REDMOON, O. T., July 23.

Editors Herald:—Western Oklahoma has been blessed with fine rains of late, and the corn crop is almost made. We had about four inches of rain last Friday.

The gospel work is onward, and many calls for preaching on every hand. Many are believing the message we present, and comments are numerous, both favorable and unfavorable; and while I have no baptisms to report as yet, we have made many grand and good friends to our cause. Some of the people are talking of mobbing us, and are trying to shut us out of the schoolhouse.

Oklahoma this year seems no less than a battlefield. We now have three prospective debates, and one debate between Bro. D. S. Crawley and D. B. Ray of the Baptist persuasion took place at Seiling, Oklahoma. Saints say it was a victory for our cause.

Some of the missionaries are out and preaching in earnest, making new openings; and I bid them godspeed. I am with you, brethren, and the conflict is on in earnest.

We hope for a goodly attendance at our reunion at Dover, August 16 to 25. Come prepared to enjoy the meetings. The cooperative boarding tent will be in operation again, and board will be very cheap.

In my experience in the ministry I never have enjoyed such liberty, for which I truly thank our Father in heaven.

Our little colony of Saints here are getting along finely, and they like the country.

In the faith, and happy in the Master's work, Your brother,

HUBERT CASE.

GREENWOOD, New York, July 27.

Editors Herald:—Inclosed find my last speech in "Copeland-Sheldon debate." It will show about what we have had to meet. I do not believe Clark Braden can give Copeland pointers on using coarse or abusive language. I believe he leads. The people are discussing the debate, and most outsiders and some of the church members say "we are ahead;" while all, with one or two exceptions, concede we have held our own. My opponent did not refer to his misrepresentations after I exposed them.

Am feeling well, and ready for what may turn up; and there is some hard fighting ahead in the surrounding country I believe. Sectarian ministers act as though they think "their craft is in danger."

> Yours in the one hope, T. J. SHELDON. RECAPITULATION.

The question that has been before the congregation is this: Is the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints the true church of Jesus Christ, in doctrine and organization, according to the teachings of the Bible? Our opponent has not confined himself to the question, but has persistently attacked the character of Joseph Smith at a time when we were not at liberty to defend him. Joseph Smith has nothing to do with this question, and we ought not to have been called upon to defend him, as we had enough to do with the proposition we were under agreement to discuss. I read historical statements showing apostasy and scriptural statements showing apostasy, supporting statements by Matthew 21:43 and Daniel 2:44, which shows a restoration was to be expected in the latter days. Attention was called to the doctrine and organization of the church in times past, showing the organization of the church in the time of the Israelites as follows: First Presidency (Exodus 17:11, 12), the Twelve (Joshua 4:4, 5), High Priests (Leviticus 21:10), Seventies (Numbers 11:16, 17), Elders (Deuteronomy 32:7), Priests (Exodus 29:8, 9), Teachers (Psalms 119:99, Proverbs 5:13), Pastors or Deacons (2 Chronicles 35:14, 15). The same organization obtained in the church of Christ in the time of the apostles, as the following scriptures indicate: First Presidency (Matthew 17: 1-4, 26: 36-38, 16: 18, 19, Galatians 2: 9), the Twelve (Matthew 10:1-4), High Priests (Hebrews 5:5), Seventies (Luke 10:1, 2), Elders (Acts 14:23, Titus 1:5), Priests (Luke 1:5, John 1:6-8, Acts 6:7), Teachers (Acts 13:1, 1 Corinthians 12:28), Deacons (Philippians 1:1, 1 Timothy 3:8-10). Also that there were bishops in the church of Christ, and evangelists, as the following texts declare: Bishops (Philippians 1:1, 1 Timothy 3:1-4), Evangelists (Acts 21:8, Ephesians 4:11, 2 Timothy 4:5). Also prophets were in the church, as follows: Prophets (Ephesians 4:11, Acts 13:1, 1 Corinthians 12:28). There were patriarchs in the time of the Israelitish church; and history shows there were patriarchs in Christ's church. The organization of the church as it existed in Israelitish and Apostolic times may be stated as follows: The First Presidency, the Patriarchate, the Twelve, High Priests, Seventies, Evangelists, Elders, Bishops, Priests, Teachers, Deacons.

My opponent ridiculed the thought of high priests being in the church, which I sustained by Hebrews 5:5; also by St. Theodoret, "That Ignatius received the gift of the 'high priesthood' from the hand of the great Peter." Also produced Zechariah 3: 7, 8, to show that there would be a quorum of high priests in the church. To this my opponent has not replied.

The contention was raised that the Aaronic priesthood was done away with; but the contention was overthrown by the following texts: Exodus 40:13-15; Numbers 18:6-8; Mark 1:4; the latter text showing that Christ acknowledged the ministrations of John, who was an "Aaronic priest." Also the following from St. Jerome: "What Aaron and his sons were among the Jews, the Bishop and his presbyters were among the Christians." It was also shown that the offices in the church were perpetual, and supported by Ephesians 4:11.

My opponent asked whether there were twelve apostles besides the three in the "First Presidency." After showing that there were twenty-one who held the "apostolic office" besides Christ, my opponent kept quiet on that point.

The Reorganized Church agrees perfectly with the organization of the apostolic church, and my opponent has failed to show one point of disagreement. He sought to overthrow these positions by ridicule, and also by attacking the character of Joseph Smith. He tried to prove all this untrue by saying that Joseph Smith stole his wife.

The Book of Mormon was attacked. We came to its rescue by quoting and expounding the following scriptures: Revelation 14: 6, 7, Zechariah 2: 1-4, Isaiah 32: 13-15, Psalms 85: 10-12, Psalms 119: 142, Hosea 8: 11-12, Hosea 11: 7-10, Isaiah 18: 1-3, Ezekiel 37: 15-22, Jeremiah 31: 6-12. All that my opponent said was that Jesus Christ was the unlearned man of Isaiah 29th chapter; that he opened the book as found in Revelation 5: 5. We showed this reasoning to be wrong; for the ears of the deaf were to hear the words of the book, and we asked our opponent to read to us out of the book, but he did not. We showed that according to Isaiah 29 and Psalms 85 the book was to come forth before Palestine was restored to its fruitfulness, which occurred in 1840 to 1860, and that the book was to teach doctrine. We read from the Book of Mormon, pages 444, 493, 533, 541, 458 (small edition), showing the book teaches faith, repentance, baptism (immersion), the laying on of hands, resurrection, and judgment-defying our opponent to point out one word out of harmony with the Bible. He called the Book of Mormon a blasphemous fraud; and when asked to show from where the blasphemy came he said: "No, I would pollute my lips by doing so." Yet at the same time he would use language which we think is unbecoming a gentlemen, and unfit to be used in the presence of ladies.

He tried to show that the priesthood was democratic in its character, which we disproved by several texts, among them being Numbers 16: 28-33, showing that democratic ideas of priesthood was wrong, and that some who held that idea went to hell because of their transgression.

Our opponent ridiculed the idea of others beside Jesus and Melchisedec holding the high priesthood and failed to answer the question as to "What priesthood did Moses hold;" and completely ignored the statement by Theordoret to the effect that he, Ignatius, "received the gift of the high priesthood from the hand of the great Peter."

The doctrine of the early church was outlined and supported by passages of scripture as follows: Faith (Hebrews 11: 6, Mark. 1: 15, 16), Repentance (Mark 6: 12, Matthew 4: 17), Baptism (Mark 16: 15, 16, Peter 3: 21, Acts 2: 38, 39, Acts 22: 12-16, Titus 3:5), the Laying on of Hands (Acts 8:14-19, Acts 19:1-7, Deuteronomy 34: 9), Resurrection of the Dead (1 Thessalonians 4: 14-18, Revelation 20: 4-6), Eternal Judgment (Revelation 20: 12, 13, Revelation 22: 12. Matthew 16: 27. Romans 2: 5, 6, 2 Corinthians 5: 10). Many other passages were used in proof of these principles, and Hebrews 6: 1, 2 was used to show that all these principles were part of the doctrine of Christ. 2 John 9 was quoted to show how necessary these principles are, and my opponent, instead of trying to answer, attempted to blacken the character of Joseph Smith and those associated with him in his work. Our opponent tried to show that some had been saved without obedience to these principles; but we quoted the words of Christ: "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God."-John 3: 5. We said that we believe that Jesus Christ could not and would not go contrary to his own law, to save anyone; that if any are saved it must be in harmony with "God's law."

All this was met by the statement that Joseph stole horses and sheep, dug for money, had a peepstone; was a lazy, drinking, covetous man. That he was a polygamist, etc. We read statements of Brigham Young, Cannon, and others showing Joseph was not a polygamist; also court decisions on this point. But our opponent ignored all these. We have met him on every point in all these slanders, as time allowed, and driven him from one story to another, until he has convinced this congregation that he is utterly incompetent to discuss this question from a scriptural standpoint. He has been guilty of the following contradictions and misrepresentations, to which we now call your respectful attention: He misrepresented me by saying that I called all other churches apostates, when I only read the writings of the founders of other churches. He misrepresented facts as follows: That only one having the blood of Joseph Smith in his veins can preside over the church, when the book teaches that under emergency three high priest may be chosen to preside (D. C. 104: 11.) That the Saints here have lost interest in this church, and can only use it when someone holding the Melchisedec priesthood comes along. That Joseph Smith made money out of the Book of Mormon. That Joseph Smith was responsible for the Kirtland Bank failure. That Joseph stole a sheep. That he was a polygamist. That Joseph Smith taught Martin Harris he would go to hell if he did not give his money to Joseph. Thirty-five lines of printing occur between the mention of "eternal judgment" and that Harris was to give his money. Doctrine and Covenants, page 175; Doctrine and Covenants. pages 47 and 48, section 18. That William Smith did not have power to ordain elders. That he did not advocate young Joseph's claims. That the Saints teach it is right to lie against other organizations. That the Book of Mormon is a history of the ten lost tribes. That Joseph Smith told Harris it was death to see the plates. That the "Mormon" Church is built on the Book of Mormon. That Joseph Smith claimed that the covenant was broken one hundred years after Christ's ascension. That we claim that the Indians are descended from Ephraim (Book of Mormon 231). That Catholics, Episcopalians, and Methodists all agree upon the gospel. That Joseph and Hyrum organized the "Danite Band" That we say if people do not follow us they will go to hell. That we claim Joseph had power to pardon and condemn. That Joseph Smith resisted state authorities.

Copeland contradicts himself: That the Mormon church is built upon the Book of Mormon; that it is built upon Joseph Smith. That Christ did away with the priesthood; and that all Americans are "kings and priests unto God." That Jesus Christ fulfilled all prophecy; and last night he said that Joseph Smith fulfilled 2 Peter 2: 1. That Joseph Smith dug for money, and at the same time he was a lazy boy. That Wm. Smith originated polygamy; and that Joseph Smith originated it.

Copeland contradicts the Bible: That a man must have Jewish blood in him to be an Aaronic priest (Gal. 3: 29.) That sins can be remitted without baptism. That the Laying on of Hands is unnecessary, and that I could not prove it by the Bible, and I gave four passages of scripture proving it. He denied the second coming of Christ to reign in person on the earth, which is taught in Hebrews 9:28, Jude 14, Acts 1: 10, and many other places. That nobody but Christ held the keys, and the Bible says Christ gave them to Peter (Matt. 16: 18, 19). That Christ fulfilled all prophecy; and yet two prophets are to come in the latter days (Revelations 11).

He has misrepresented my statements once. Misrepresented facts twenty times; contradicted himself five times; contradicted the Bible six times; making in all thirty-two misrepresentations and contradictions.

Now we are told that the Book of Mormon is the rankest blasphemy; that we will be damned if we believe in it. We turn to the Bible and find that it teaches certain principles; that if men obey them they will be saved. We are told by these popular churches that when Jesus taught these principles in Palestine it was inspiration. But when I turn to the Book of Mormon and find that the same principles were taught to the people who lived here in ancient times, I am told that I cannot be saved through these principles, because they are contained in the Book of Mormon. Now the Devil testified that Jesus was the Son of God; did that make it untrue because the Devil testified to it? When the angels testified of Jesus, it was no more true than when the Devil testified it. The fact remains that Jesus is the Son of God, no matter who has, or has not testified to it. If we understand the position rightly our opponent has yet to learn an important truth, and it is that Truth is truth, wherever found, On Christian or on heathen ground.

No matter where the truth is found, or who teaches it, it must stand upon its merits alone. Your scientists tell you that people inhabited this continent thousands of years ago; that the cliff dwellers and mound builders were ancient races. I asked the question. Did God leave himself without a witness among the people for all those years? Or did, he like the loving Father he is, teach them the gospel "which is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth?" The Bible affirms that "God is no respecter of persons, but that in every nation he that feareth God and worketh righteousness is accepted with him." The Book of Mormon comes forth and says that God spoke to the people who lived here, that he established his gospel among them; that men believed and obeyed it; and we believe that they were saved as a consequence. Our opponent says no, "that unless we learn those principles out of the Bible we are lost." We accept the Bible and believe in it as much as anyone: and if faith and repentance will save anyone in any church, it will save them in our church. If it takes baptism also, and the laying on of hands, we are on the right side of the question, for we believe that also. If I have faith in Christ and repent of my sins, and live a consistent life, I think I shall stand as good a chance as any other man; and if believing in the Book of Mormon, and the gospel as I find it contained therein will damn me, I am afraid I will be damned. I believe the principles Jesus taught will save mankind, no matter in what land they are taught, or in what book you read of them. The power is in those principles, not in the book containing them. And why it is, that these principles are the height of inspiration when taught in the Bible, and the rankest blasphemy when taught in the Book of Mormon and latterday revelations, we are not informed. And why I will be damned for believing these same principles when I find them in another book, besides the Bible, I cannot understand. It challenges the power of my comprehension to do so.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, July 26.

Editors Herald:—Not seeing anything from the Forest City of Lake Erie for awhile, I thought a line or two would interest old time laborers of this place, and stir up others. The Saints of Cleveland have been fortunate; so much so that the hall was abandoned and services began in a new tent. We first opened up on the world-famed Euclid Avenue; and after a sojourn of two weeks there the fact was again proven that the rich do not want the gospel of the lowly Nazarene.

Bright and early, as the sun was shedding forth her rays, betokening that the heat was not to be withheld, Brn. Parsons, Allen, and I arose at four a. m. and had the tent and all equipments ready for the mover, who failed to appear, but was found after due search. The tent was moved to another locality among the working classes; but, alas, they seem to have been all branded with that searing iron so deep that it will necessitate the prison house and the penalty attached to efface. This life will not do it.

Another trial, and then methinks the city will have had her share.

We could have more support from the Saints; but God and them for that. Bro. Parsons truly has the patience required for a tent manipulator, ably assisted by Bro. Allen.

The query has arrived from another point, Where did you get the tent? Did Carnegie or Rockefeller donate? No, but one with nerve started the movement. We tried for three years in a half-hearted way to realize enough for a tent and failed. But we have one now; and in order to keep it in the Kirtland district we will have to wake up and come to the next district conference in Kirtland, October 5 and 6, prepared to purchase the tent with all its attachments. Now awake, ye Saints of God, awake! Any who have means that they cannot keep that long. let them send to the Bishop's agent, who will use same to the purchasing of tent. During the last two and a half years the Saints in this district have done nobly; and to all that I cannot visit I extend my sincere thanks. To you I owe the thanks for ably supporting me and enabling me to discharge the duty imposed upon me; and now that the treasury is nearly depleted and the elders' families yet to have supplies, let us all take a long and steady pull, and all pull together, and make a greater sacrifice for Zion's weal, so that when the edict goes forth, Gather my Saints together who have made a covenant with sacrifice, we may be among that happy number and go in and find pasture to our soul's welfare. Who will be the first of forty in our district to contribute five dollars towards purchasing the tent. Send me your name. Your brother and servant of the Bishop.

THIS SUN-KISSED EARTH.

It is sweet to live on this sun-kissed earth; Even the heart's deep sigh has its note of mirth

If we pause but to gaze on earth's grand scene

All sad tears will vanish and life's one sweet dream.

It is rest for the tired heart out in the night Watching the silvery moon, so silent and bright

To earth's sweet, silent sympathy the weary heart yields

Until softly o'er your aching breast a sweet calm gently steals.

It is sweet to linger in solitude
In some grass grown nook untrod,
And gaze on the silent nodding flowers,
Emblems of purity, love and God.

There is a soothing balm to the care worn heart

In each note of the songster wild.

Memory flings back the veil from our teardimmed eyes,

And again in our dreams we're a child.

If we gather the scattered sunbeams

That peep here and there through life's gloom

They will brighten our way through life's winding path,

Even down to the deep, dark tomb.

It will kiss the tears of mother earth,

As she clasps your still, cold form.

And will play round your grave while you sweetly sleep,

Secure from life's cold storm.

There is a sweet, sweet peace steals o'er our breasts.

As we gaze on the blue sky above,
For each bright twinkling star, though silent as death,

Softly whispers "God is love."

THE INDEPENDENCE DAUGHTERS OF ZION. ABBIE A HORTON

Read at Mite Social of Daughters of Zion, at Independence, Missouri, July 11, 1901.

This society with its laws, its monthly readings, programs, and work of officers and committees, was organized on the 30th April, 1893, Mrs. J. A. Robinson having been elected president, succeeded by Mrs. B. C. Smith, with Mrs. A. A. Horton as secretary, who with the exception of a very short interim, has occupied the position ever since above date.

As we have met together with our friends this evening, we take occasion to appeal to you, as members of "the flock" here, to cooperate with us that we may more satisfactorily accomplish the work we have set out to do; namely, to increase love for home, to promote social purity, to teach the great reresponsibility of motherhood, and to assist in all good work.

We need to cultivate unity of purpose, for there is no hope for us without it.

There are some, perhaps, who look with exceeding apprehension upon our efforts which we think may be misunderstood, and we believe one of the remedies available is to effect a widespread circulation of such literature as may not only set forth our work but also be instructive to all. In the meanwhile, we will labor on and pray that the sunshine of hope, faith, and love may chase away fear from every doubting mind among

In looking abroad we see much that is interesting, and inspiring in an educational way, and much that denotes with what rapid strides knowledge is increasing all around us; for instance: At Detroit only a day or two ago fourteen thousand people were assembled in the interests of the National Educational Association with its Indian department. They have met as delegates to discuss great and important questions relating to the diffusion of knowledge, such as the recent growth of public high schools, education in both rural and urban districts, importance of nature study and especially agriculture, necessity of pure literature and literature-loving teachers, and of proper story-telling and oral reading in the home.

Another effort now being put forth by the educators worthy of our consideration is what is called "the summer school." This kind of institution is for the benefit of the children under school age. The little toddlers on first entering this junior manual training school or kindergarten show their surprise, it is said, in various ways.

Some of them take it very seriously, in a tearful manner, while others, sucking their tiny fingers, are apt to stare with wide-open eyes at visitors as well as at instructors and their assistants. Here the little boys may learn something about carpentry and the girls to sew and sweep and do other simple useful things, and all can join the nature study class, and also learn somewhat of physical culture.

The summer school in Kansas City to which we refer was opened last Monday morning with an enrollment of over three hundred little children. Just to think of it! What a noble work begun! Here is an object lesson for you young daughters of the center stake, you who have considerable time at your disposal, who might do well perhaps to think about a similar work right here where exists such a fine opportunity to make better the condition of our little folks in the center of Zion.

We hear the query, "Is the work of the Daughters of Zion a purely educational one?" We answer, Yes, and more than that; and for the benefit of those unacquainted with us, we will give an outline of our work by reading a few lines. . . . While reading these articles of our constitution and by-laws, there appear to our minds the very unfavorable environments that surround the youth of this enlightened yet wicked age. We view the scenes of vice and crime and the ruined lives of the despairing, misguided ones as pictured forth in the daily records of our larger cities.

We begin to be conscious of great responsibilities resting upon us, more fully realizing the impending dangers that result from an ill-spent life; but though appalled at the sight, some are comforted with the thought that these dark scenes are far away from our quiet homes; they lie in the great world,—afar off. But alas! as we draw aside the curtain from where are enfolded our own loved ones, we find that the temptations of the world with all their subtle allurements have begun to taint the pure lives of our own tenderly nurtured children in the home and school, and we begin to see why this timeworn subject of child-training, this crying need of purity in the home circle, and this scoffed-at social question are everywhere talked about and are discussed, especially in all the mothers' meetings.

Our local has realized that these are important problems to solve, and they have elicited, during the last year especially, deep thought and most earnest endeavor. If it be true, as one mother gave us to understand a day or two ago, that our work is all comprised in a few worn-out theories, we invite you, in behalf of this noble work, to come and make more practical the work of the Daughters of Zion; you young mothers with little children, you maturer mothers who have borne most heavy burdens, come and assist us by bringing still greater honor to the cause of truth.

As a society we feel that every member of the church should be interested in our work.

Should there exist with us an internal ambition solely for its own interest and welfare, we concede that it could never find safety only in a close relationship to the church.

The disturbing elements of the world must surround us all, and we are sure that there is no hope for spiritual advancement and temporal prosperity disassociated from the obligations that bind us together as children of one common Father, members of the heavenly household.

FAITH.

Read at Mite Social of Daughters of Zion, at Independence, Missouri, July 11, 1901, by Sr. S. H. Dake.

O, precious Faith, thou greatest friend, to thee I'd closer cling,

My wayward steps in nearer paths to Him I'd gladly bring:

If thou wouldst gently guide me thy promptings to obey,

And help me to resist the power that'd turn my heart away.

When clouds o'erhang our thorny paths, thou'rt ever there to help,

And when unwelcome death doth come, its fair reward to reap,

'Tis thou, O Faith, who brings sweet peace, if we accept thy gift,

'Tis thou and only thou who can our burdens from us lift.

In darkest hours I've clung to thee, and found thee ever true.

And sweet relief has always come when close I've held to you;

And when my pleadings are not heard, though sad it seems to me.

I've always found it for the best, if I but cling to thee.

When Joseph on his bended knee inquired which way was right,

Thou wast his guide, his hope, his shield; by thee he saw the light;

'Twas then the blind began to see, the midnight hour had flown,

True saints arose to sing God's praise, as day began to dawn.

Though grief untold it brought to him, yet thou wast ever dear.

And when his life was sought for, in thee he knew no fear:

And when a cruel, lawless mob, went forth to take his life.

To thee he clung until he died, a hero in the strife.

And many hearts rejoice today because they know the truth

Which was found in Hill Cumorah by Joseph in his youth,

That precious book which cost the blood of martyrs bold and brave.

O give us faith that we, like them, may fill a hero's grave.

Then might we with that blessed faith be firm to bear the cross,

Unfaltering soldiers for the truth, if we're brave there'll be no loss.

The Father's there to help us if we but do our part,

Pressing onward to the battle with a true and steady heart.

Our Father is the same today as in the days of vore.

If we but have unfailing faith his blessings to implore;

And let Truth be our armor, as the prophets did of old,

Then by our godly walk through life bring many to the fold.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

1. When local Sunday schools are organized with a Latter Day Saint of good repute as superintendent, does that make them necessarily members of the association?

Ans.-It does not.

2. How may local schools become members of the Association?

Ans.—By adopting by vote the "Constitution and By- Laws" provided by the General Sunday School Association, and reporting the action to the district association secretary, if in a district; otherwise, to the secretary of the General Association.

District Sunday school associations may unite with the General Sunday School Association in the same way; i. e., by adopting the "Constitution and By-Laws" and reporting said action to the General Secretary.

3. How often does the district treasurer levy the "per capita tax"?

Ans.—There is nothing in the constitution giving him authority to levy a "per capita tax" or any other kind of tax, or to make any assessment. The last paragraph of section 4 of article 4 of the "Constitution for District Associations" reads as follows: "Upon receipt of notice from the General Treasurer of a need of funds, or when funds are needed for district expenses, he shall, by the advice and consent of the district officers, notify the schools of his district accordingly." There is in this paragraph no authority for anything but a notice that funds are needed and a request for the same. Then it remains with the schools to respond as they may be able, they to be their own judges as to their ability. The section authorizing a "pro rata" assessment was amended in April, 1900, and the section given above inserted instead. The contributions are now purely voluntary as they should be.

WORD FROM THE SOUTH SEA ISLANDS.

[The following from the work in the Society Islands by Sr. J. W. Peterson will be read with considerable interest by all interested in the general welfare of the work. We may at times fancy we have to contend against many odds; but read this article, then reflect, then take hold anew.—ED]

Thinking it might be interesting to the Sunday school workers in general to hear from these far off islands, we write something of what we are doing in the work here.

We did not labor to any extent last year. One reason was we could not speak the language, another was we desired to see the working of the schools and learn their ways and needs. We could not tell much of their regular work by what we saw at the convention last April, for they had on their Sunday dress. We preferred to see them in their working clothes at home. We saw that there must be a change in the method of studying and reciting the lessons. observed that each person committed to memory but a part of the lesson, managing thus: Some one in class number one would learn answer number one; and some one in class number two would learn answer number two, and so on throughout the lesson. If there were five classes in the school, class number one would learn answers number one, six, eleven, and so on. And the most of the learning was done by the few bright ones. Further we found that in the review of the month the one who held up his hand to answer was the same one who had previously answered the same question in class. In visiting the classes we would find the teacher counting the questions to see how many turns the class would get, telling one or more to learn the answers corresponding to their class number. In class time while those who had been appointed to learn the answers were reciting, the others could amuse themselves as best they could or as they pleased. Most of the learning was done after coming to the church, many of them reading their answers from the book. Thus the work of the school was practically a failure and the expense of the books almost thrown away. At least it was largely lost as far as the Sunday schools were concerned.

Before leaving Papeete in April we had decided to try the marking system as nearly like it is used in America as we could. In organization the schools are about the same as at home, except that they have but a few officers as many are not needed. The order of exercises is about the same as outlined in the Quarterly, hence no changes in this line became necessary. The secretary's report made all present as in classes. Now they report the number in each class, as also of officers and teachers and visitors present.

For the class work we adopted the following plan: After the regular opening exercises and responsive reading, all books are closed except those in the hands of the teachers. This does away with the reading and studying in time of church and Sunday school, requiring that such work be done at another time. All that have committed the golden text to memory stand and repeat it in concert. This is to encourage them to learn it. The teachers then proceed with the lesson in the classes much as at home. They have twenty minutes for class work at the close of which the superintendent reviews the school, being very careful not to ask the question of the same number of the class, and varying the order so that no class can know what question it is to answer or when its turn will come. They then complained that they must commit many answers to memory while the president had nothing of that kind to do. To make all study alike we have the president close his book when done reading the questions, and ask some questions upon the lesson from memory, thus teaching him to commit the lesson to memory too. It is a short review, occupying only about ten minutes, and all like it better because the questions are original, and can be answered in the scholar's own words. At the close of the review all knowing the memory verse stand and recite it. Those remaining in their seats and who do not know the memory verse usually feel ashamed, and the next time try to do as well as the others, often trying to outdo some one. The report of the day and the usual closing exercises conclude the session.

We have suggested and given but one lesson in a month, that being as much as they can learn in that length of time. In traveling among the islands we find some who have since April finished three lessons in the old book and on the ninth in the new. We knew they could not have done their work thoroughly, so we reviewed each school on some lesson and started them again on lesson one. All schools so far as we know have finished last year's book and started on the new.

We have abandoned the monthly review, as there is a review each session. But at the conventions we teach the plan of the quarterly review, which would be three lessons here. They like the plan, and think it will stamp the lessons so deeply upon their memories that they will never forget them; but, of course, like us, they cannot retain it all, even though they would wish to.

THE MARKING SYSTEM

to which we referred is this: The last Sunday of the month the teacher is to write the date, number of lesson, number of class, her name with the names of all in the class who have memorized the answers to the amount of half thereof, giving the number of answers committed. These are taken to the convention, where the totals for all the classes for all the months are taken. The name of the school having the highest number and also the class having the highest total are placed first on the blackboard, with other schools and classes in their order of merit. The school highest gets a banner which it holds for the year or till it is shown that some other school has won it at a later convention. All schools are making an extra effort for the highest number and consequent first place on the board and the banner. We know from experience that we all want something to cheer us on and reward us for our work. I fear we would not attempt to keep the gospel law if there were no reward promised. God cheers us on in our work by giving us blessings each day. Is there an act in life that we are not rewarded for at some time? Why not encourage those in the Sabbath school by rewarding them? We are going to try the above plan and are now making the banner for the purpose. It will be made of black and red velvet, and will have painted on it in gilt a star and the words "Haapii Raa Tabati" (Sunday School).

As we have not been able to reach all the islands at or near the same time, it will be impossible to make it just and count the full year this first time. We will count for only the three months that all have used it. This makes us considerable work, but that is what we are here for and not for pleasure.

To illustrate how they desire to be first we will relate one instance that took place while we were in one branch. Class number one was composed mostly of elders, as that class usually is. They asked if they were to be put below the classes of women and children if they did not get the most questions committed. On being informed they would they said that it would not do for them to fall below. It would not be a good example for them to set in their office and calling. They said, "We will be first." Competition works well here.

DOW CITY ANNUAL REUNION.

REDUCED RAILWAY RATES.

Rates have been procured over the lines of the Western Passenger Association in Iowa, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Nebraska, and Missouri on the certificate plan. The reunion will commence September 20 and continue over the 30th. Certificates can be procured as early as September 20 and will hold good for return trip until October 3. But to receive the benefit of the proposed rates, we must have one hundred certificates in by the 26th of September. Procure a certificate for each individual purchasing a ticket that costs more than fifty cents. Be sure to get a certificate for each ticket purchased, and do not permit any agent to give you only one certificate for two, three, or more persons, as such certificates will not count in making up the number required. If in going to reunion you pass over more than one line of road, be sure and procure a certificate from the agent of each line. Do not be discouraged because we failed to get enough certificates last year to secure return tickets for one third fare, but "Try, try again." We have reason to believe that had all procured certificates last year, requested by the committee, we would have had no trouble in securing rates, as we lacked only a few certificates when our time limit expired.

A number of able ministers have promised to be in attendance to help make the reunion a success. We want you to come early and save money for yourself and others. There save money for yourself and others. is no reason why the meetings should not be as well attended and as spiritual and instructive in the fore part of the session as in the C. E. BUTTERWORTH, closing days.

REUNION OFF.

The committee of the North Missouri Reunion-to convene at Stewartsville, Missouri, Aug. 16-26, held a meeting yester day and in consideration of the continued day and in consideration of the continued drouth and heat, and the strong probability of these conditions interfering with the success of our meeting, deemed it wise to abandon the meeting entirely for this year. So all interested will please take notice of this information. No North Missouri Rennion this year. Regretfully, J. M. Terry.

In Behalf of Committee. ST. JOSEPH, Mo., July 25.

AUSTRALIA.

AN APPEAL TO ALL SAINTS.

At the last annual conference of the church in New South Wales it was decided to make an effort to raise money to buy a printing press and type to print a small monthly paper for the Australian mission. The writer was appointed treasurer and was authorized by the conference to appeal to the Saints in all the world to assist us a little. Australia is one of the best (if not the very best) foreign field for the latter-day work to thrive in. The Lord has told us that there are thousands to be gathered to Zion from Missionary work has been going on here for over twenty years, and only a few hundred have been gathered into the fold. Other sects who introduced their faiths here about the same time have made much better headway because they saw that most of the work must be done by printed literature; therefore they established an Australian publishing house as the first and most necessary thing to successful missionary work. Openings for preaching are very hard to get, and when you do find a place to preach in it is very hard (in most places) to get people out to hear. That's why the Adventists and others have mission publishing houses in Australia and their missionaries spend most of their time going from house to house selling and giving away small, neatly printed church papers that contain short articles explaining their faith, and these papers are printed here to suit Australian conditions. Thousands of people buy their papers at a penny each when brought to their doors, and these many pennies help to pay the expense We have zealous workers here of printing. who will go out and sell papers when they are printed, and distribute those that are to the given to the poor. Shall we give them the opportunity to work and do a greater work in this way than the sects are doing, so that the children of this world be not wiser than the children of light? (See Luke 16:8)

Who will help us to buy a printing press?

It will be the property of the church and not of any one person. Australian Saints are satisfied with the HERALD, Ensign, and Autumn Leaves, but these will not do to distrib-Australian Saints are ute and sell among outsiders. a purely Australian paper for that special purpose, and thus we can reach thousands that cannot be reached any other way with the restored gospel.

The church college must be paid for, and we do not want to hinder, but Australia needs a little help, and as a child who cannot yet walk alone turns to mother for help, so do we turn to the church in America to assist us. We want one thousand American Saints to give us twenty-five cents each. A dollar bill can be sent in a letter, or twenty-five cents can be sent in one or two-cent stamps, but we could not use many stamps. Most money should be collected in branches and districts into one sum and sent by post office money order, made payable to John Kaler, at Rozelle, New South Wales, Australia. Bro. Peter Moldrup in Oklahoma sent me a dollar. This is all I have received from America, but I hope to hear from many more. Will branch presidents and district and general workers assist by collecting small donations and see that they reach us? A letter to reach Australia must have a five cent stamp on it. not delay, but help us now. Make a sacrifice for the cause of truth and God will reward you many fold, and you will not miss the little you gave half as much as you thought ou would.

G. Pitt.

MODERNIZING THE HOLY LAND.

The modernizing of the Holy Land continues at so rapid a pace that we are told it will not be many years before, in some sections at least, the country will have lost its ancient oriental aspect. This transformation is due largely to American ingenuity and commercial activity. Somebody has said that if one of the prophets had returned to Palestine a few years ago he could have looked upon the scenes of his earthly career and would have been able to recognize them.

The railroad from Joppa to Jerusalem was the entering wedge in the modernizing process, and now other lines running up and down the valley of the Jordan are to be connected with this road. Jerusalem is becoming in many respects a modern city. Electric lights, telephones, phonographs, sanitary plumbing, modern stores, and many of the comforts of civilized life are now found there. It will not be long before one will be able to ride from Jerusalem to Bethany, Bethlehem, the Sea of Galilee, Samaria, Jericho, Naza-reth, and many other historic places by trolley. One of the United States consuls states that over two hundred phonographs were recently sent into the Holy Land, half of them going to Damascus and the rest to Jerusalem and other places. One wonders why phonographs should go in such quantities to these places, and the wonder increases when we are informed that the best customers for these machines are the Moslems of Beyrut, Jerusalem, and Damascus, who pur-chase them for their harems. A large num-ber of American windmills have gone into Palestine, as well as irrigating machinery of various sorts. A large assortment of articles of American manufacture are steadily pouring into the Holy Land, among them being cotton fabrics, bicycles, rope, shoes, clocks, wire nails, paints, hardware, well-drilling and agricultural machinery, mechanics' tools, canned meat, and corn meal. There seems to be a movement on foot to secure control of the once fertile valleys of the country and to transform them once more into a land flowing with milk and honey. The people connected with this movement are said to be Zionists, whose supreme purpose in life seems to be the reëstablishment of the Jews in their ancient heritage.—From "Highways and Byways," in the August Chautauquan.

RECENT WORK OF THE DIVISION OF FORESTRY.

The result of the work of the Division has been to turn practical forestry in the United States from a doubtful experiment into an assured success. Special studies of some of the most important trees, commercially, have been made, from which can be calculated their probable future yield. Cheap methods of harvesting the present lumber crop without injuring the productivity of the forest have been put in operation. Such concerns as The Great Northern Paper Company and The Deering Harvester Company pany and The Deering Harvester Company have been led to undertake conservative management of their forest properties. Meanwhile, the work of tree-planting, particularly in the almost treeless Western States of the plains, has been furthered; the relation of the forest to the volume of streams, erosion, evaporation, and irrigation have been studied; matters connected with irrigation and water supply have been investigated; hopeful progress has been made in the direction of regulating grazing in the Western reserves in a manner fair both to the important interests of cattle and sheep owners and to those who look to the reserves as a source of continuous supply of wood and water; and studies of forest fires were conducted with a view of reducing the great yearly loss from this source, a loss which has been estimated at $50,000,000.

Field work is to go on this summer in 17 States. There are in all 179 persons engaged in the work of the Bureau. Of this number 81 are student assistants—young men, largely college students, who expect to enter forestry as a profession, and who serve during the summer on small pay for the sake of the experience gained.

IRRIGATION MEANS POPULATION.

The steady, persistent demand for government aid to make possible the extension of irrigating systems in the arid West is yearly becoming more and more universal. It is not a subterfuge of politics, but a real economic necessity. Nothing is more clearly brought out in the figures of the population of the various states, which the census bureau has just published, than the disparity in numbers of the population of the eastern and western states. Some of the comparatively western states. Some of the comparatively small eastern states far outstrip their west Some of the comparatively ern sisters, which have room enough and to spare for half a dozen of them. Idaho, Colorado, Nevada, with only one or two persons, or in case of Idaho only a fraction of a person, to each square mile of territory, is not a strong showing. To be sure these states have much land unsuited to the life of large populations, but there are millions of acres scattered along the river valleys, which could easily be made habitable and excould easily be made habitable and extremely productive by the introduction of water to the dry lands. From all sides rises the cry for action. Nebraska has just had an enthusiastic irrigation congress; reports come from Texas and New Mexico of a scheme to use the waters of the Rio Grande; Colorado has an established example of the baselits of such work; and California owes benefits of such work; and California owes much of her agricultural prestige to the reclaiming of her great central valley by irrigation. The western states are enthusiastic; the United States Geological Survey is help-ing; and there are sure to be beneficial results of a widespread national character.

The Chicago Record-Herald enjoys the enviable distinction of having the largest twocent newspaper circulation in the United States. The circulation of the Chicago Record exceeded that of any other two-cent newspaper in the country, and with the addi-tion of that of the Chicago Times Herald it is easily seen that the Chicago Record-Herald is very far in advance of any other two-cent paper in point of circulation, not to mention the extensive combination news facilities which have made this great metropolitan daily premier among the newspapers of America. The facts concerning newspaper circulation can be looked up in any reliable newspaper directory.

The leading article in the Arena for august is from the pen of the Hon. Frank S. Monnett, the Ohio Attorney-General who became famous not long ago for his vigorous fight against the Standard Oil Company. It bears the title, "Transportation Franchises Always the Property of Sovereignty," and is a powerful plea for the recovery of their own by the people from the grabbers of public utilities D. R Osgood Mason, A. M., and Robert Morris Rabb, B. A. join in a symposium on "The Curse of Inebriety" that contains many appalling and significant truths. Part II, of 'Great Movements of the Nineteenth Century" is contributed by Prof. Frank Parsons. of Boston University, who discusses this month "the great conflict" between democracy and plutocracy. An admirable sketch of the life and work of this economist is given by Elitor Flower, who has an instructive article a'so on "Physical Science in the Nineteenth Century," in addition to his usual "Topics of the Times" and reviews of new books. "Women and the Wage System," by Mrs W. L. Bonney, and an interview with Sam Walter Foss, on "The Promise of the Twentieth Century for the Artisans," are other interesting features. Editor McL-an announces "The Recovery of Jesus from Christianity," by Prof. George D. Herron, as the leading article of the September issue. ($2 50 a year: 25 cents, at newsstands. The Alliance Pub. Co., 569 Fifth avenue, New York.)

WHY NOT A TRIP TO COLORADO NEXT SUMMER?

The price for a round-trip ticket on certain days will be less than half fare. Call and see me about it?

We are doing everything possible this year, by making unusually low ticket rates and running unusually fast and comfortable trains, to make it convenient and not too expensive for people of moderate means to spend their vacation in the Colorado moun-tains. There is no country in the world like Colorado for invalids and others in search of rest and pleasure. The pure, dry climate has the most astonishing permanent effect on the health and spirits of visitors, and especially is this so in the case of those from that part of the country near to the level of the sea. ## BRO, ROTH REPLIES TO POOL,

In the Journal of Muscatine, Iowa in the issue for May 24, there appeared an article over the signature of T. S. Pool, a Methodist minister of Letts, Iowa, under the caption of "The Mormon Problem," in which he takes exception to an elder of the Reorganized Church [Elder J. S. Roth] objecting to being called a "Mormon elder." He gives the Reorganization credit for being radical in its opposition to polygamy; and though he admits that the opposition may be prompted by conscience, he asks if the main reason is not because we are compelled to do so to protect ourselves from the stigma of "Mormonism in general." He gives his view of the origin of Mormonism, introducing the exploded theory of the Spalding Romance being the origin of the Book of Mormon, and telling tales of "St. John's rods," and such trash, to account for "Joe Smith's" acquisition of power.

He admits that the Book of Mormon 'originally condemned polygamy," but says that "this fundamental law of the church has frequently been modified, by special revelations which the head of the church has claimed to receive." He says that in 1843 Joseph Smith received one such revelation "authorizing him to adopt" polygamy as a "tenet of Mormon faith."

In the issue of the Journal for June 6, Bro. Roth proceeds to show up the errors and ignorance of Rev. Pool concerning "Mormonism." At the end of his article Bro. Roth presents the epitome of faith, and then asks Rev. Pool if there is anything in that which "is not consistent with the word of God." Bro. Roth's reply will do good.

THE following was sent us by Bro. C. J. Hunt. It is from the World-Herald, of Omaha, for July 22:

FIND PREHISTORIC CITY.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 21.—A prehistoric city of immense proportions is said to have just been unearthed on the Navajo reservation between Durango, Colorado, and Farmington, New Mexico, the particulars of the find having been reported to the land department of the Santa Fe system in this city. A palace has been found containing, it is said, about one thousand separate apartments, some of them in an excellent state of preservation. Another stone castle contained one hundred separate apartments. In some of the remains inspected were found the finest of woods and relics of a valuable character, specimens of which have been gathered and sent to the Smithsonian institution.

SCATTERED MEMBERS.

In Herald for July 31 appeared a notice over the signature of the clerk of the Chatham, Ontario, branch, in which certain members are requested to report to the clerk before a certain time or their names would be dropped from the record and reported as scattered members. Bro. H. A. Stebbins, Church Recorder, calls our attention to the fact that such action is contrary to rules of General Conference which forbid such dropping "from the record." The action of General Conference on this matter was taken April 10, 1880, as follows:

Whereas, We believe that the practice of dropping the names of absent members from the branch rolls works injury to the cause and confusion to the Church Record, therefore be it

Resolved, That this conference instruct that the names of all scattered members be retained on the branch rolls; and that branch clerks hereafter be required to report the number of resident and the number of scattered members; until such scattered members be removed from the rolls according to law concerning the granting of letters of removal.

That hereafter blank reports for branches be so changed by adding blank space providing for so reporting.

Let branch clerks who may not be aware of this action take notice, that their actions may be in accord with the will of conference.

A NEW CHURCH.

In this day of creed revision and church making, it is without surprise that one reads of the launching of a new religion, though considerable interest may attach thereto by reason of its bearing upon the general aspect of the religious world.

In Cincinnati, Ohio, July 28, the first services of the "Church of the World" were held. The Church of the World is the idea of John W. Bell, a Cincinnati lawyer, who bases the new religion on "new principles." He urges the senility of the church as it exists, and believes in Christ and the Bible, claiming the Church of the World is not antagonistic to others.

He is reported as saying at the first services:

I am not more religious than the ordinary business man. I have been a student and given this belief of mine twenty years of my life. To my view everything in life has in it one of the two underlying principles, negative or affirmative. I believe by laying stress on the affirmative the world will be improved. Thus, the heart lays stress on the affirmative when it loves, on the negative when it hates.

There are things in the Bible which all of us are unable to believe, but we should pass them over and lay stress on the affirmative side, on what we can believe.

The man who in his pulpit hates disbelievers, works against anything, is wrong even if he attacks evil. What appears an evil to me may not be evil.

BRO. CAMPBELL HURT.

Bro. Duncan Campbell, late of the Presidents of Seventy, but now a member of the Lamoni Stake high council, met with an accident, which is described by the Inter State Index, of August 1, of Pleasanton, Iowa, as follows:

Last Sunday evening Elder Duncan Campbell was making preparations to come to preaching at the L. D. S. church here, he went to the barn to get his team. One of the horses which was tied to the manger was a little hard to untie and in some way got one of his thumbs between the rope and wood; the horse pulled back, cutting the thumb completely off between the first and second joints, leaving nothing holding it but the tendons. Being a man not to easily give up he summoned help and hitched up the team and came to town and got Drs. Macy and Son to dress the injury. Upon examination it was found necessary to perform an amputation at the joint. Mr. Campbell's many friends will be pained to learn of this and hope that he will have a speedy recovery. His advanced age may have a tendency to retard the uniting of the tissues, but at this writing the doctors say he is doing well.

We trust Bro. Campbell's injury will soon heal, and can assure him that he has the sympathy of the hundreds of Saints who know him.

WE have received a copy of the Paradise of the Pacific, a neat magazine published at Honolulu, Hawaii. The issue we received was for July, 1901, and in it we were pleased to see the following item concerning our Bro. Waller:

The Metropolitan Meat Co. have absorbed the Honolulu Market Co. Incompetency is the rock on which many well-meaning mercantile enthusiasts go to pieces. A business like the purveying of meats and provisions to the public requires the closest economy in buying and a watchful care of the demand. Mr. G. J. Waller, manager of the Metropolitan Meat Co, has been confronted with trying problems at times, when meat of all kinds was scarce, but he never disappointed a customer.

The foregoing is high praise, and we are indeed glad to read it of one of our brethren.

PROF. KOCH ON TUBERCULOSIS.

Within the past few years there has been a vast amount of study devoted by scientists to the disease consump. The discovery of bacilli has enabled scientists quite successfully to combat some diseases which formerly baffled all attempts to control. Methods have been introduced in some places which have materially reduced the mortality of consumption; and a closer study of the bacilli of that disease will no doubt enable scientists still farther to reduce the ravages of the dread disease.

For some time past human and bovine tuberculosis have been considered identical; that is; that the same bacilli produce tuberculosis in men and cattle. This led to the theory that consumption could be propagated through the medium of milk and meat from tuberculosis-infected cattle.

Prof. Koch, a noted scientist of Berlin, who discovered the bacilli of phthisis, recently read a paper in London, before the Tuberculosis Congress, in which he claimed that the bacilli of bovine tuberculosis are totally different from those of human tuberculosis, and that meat and milk from tuberculosis infected cattle can be consumed with absolute impunity. He arrived at this conclusion after a series of practical tests.

His paper caused considerable excitement, and has been the means of arousing medical men over all the world into a warm discussion of his views. His discovery is of great importance, and may be the means of making radical changes in the treatment of consumption; and we hope such changes will be for the better.

Some time ago Bro. W. H. Kelley handed us the following clipping, which we put in a note book in our pocket, and found it recently. the clipping, written in pencil, is the date, "Feb., 1883." Where the clipping is from, and what the date means, we do not know. Possibly Bro. Kelley can tell us.

Capt. Solomon Mack of Gilsum, N. H., who died recently at the age of 77 years, was formerly president of the Mormon society at Gilsum and was a relative of old Joseph Smith, the founder of the Latter Day religion. Capt. Mack died true to the doctrines of his youth.

THOMAS H. BURTON, writing in the Deseret News of July 30, in describing a visit to Nauvoo, when eral Bishopric.

speaking of the old "Mormon" cemetery and its condition, says:

A forest of trees has grown up among the graves since the Saints left, and cattle, no doubt, have been running among the headstones, knocking them down and breaking them up until very few stand erect. Some trees over two feet in diameter have grown on some of the graves. Of late years Joseph Smith, president of the Reorganized Church, has done a very good and thoughtful act by placing a wire fence around the graveyard, thus preventing it from further damage by

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

We have received from E. O. Mc-Cormick, General Traffic manager of the Southern Pacific, a pamphlet entitled "California Prune Primer," in which the prune industry is described, as well as a number of good methods for cooking prunes.

The impression seems to be somewhat prevalent that the Pan-American Exposition is not complete. This is a mistake, as it is finished "to the last detail," as expressed by Mr. Mark Bennitt, of the Press Department. The grandeur of the Exposition is more than meeting the anticipations of the thousands of visitors, and is generally pronounced to be one of the finest of its kind yet produced. Its illumination by electric lights surpasses anything ever attempted in that line, -Niagara is most successfully harnessed and is faithful in its work.

By letter dated August 2, we learn that the Senior Editor was at that time in San Bernardino, California. He expresses himself as feeling well, and reports the weather very hot.

We presume Bishop E. L. Kelley and his traveling companions reached Europe without mishap, as the newspapers report that the Saxonia reached Queenstown on schedule We have not as yet heard from him directly. Will probably hear before our next issue.

The weather since the rains which broke the long drought has been very pleasant, the evenings being quite cool, and the days not excessively hot.

GRACELAND COLLEGE NOTES.

Bro. Herbert S. Salisbury, who will teach in Graceland College the coming school year, is at present doing special work in Illinois. The following from the Nauvoo Rustler for July 30, will indicate somewhat of the work he is doing.

NO ENCOURAGEMENT.

Prof. H. S. Salisbury, under direction of the University of Illinois, has made a survey of the Keokuk geode bed, and made some interesting discoveries. In the north part of Hancock county he found a considerable percentage of zinc blende in the geodes, similar to the zinc ore taken from the noted Missouri mines. Some geodes from Chandler Creek, near Nauvoo, yielded crystal forms of zinc blende. Zinc blende, or black jack, is about one third sulphur and two thirds zinc. Some of the geodes were also rich in the variety of ore called limanite. Between Nauvoo and Niota lie the famous outcrops of petroleum geodes which are such a puzzle to geologists. These form an almost continuous stratum, and since many of them leak, they are black ened inside and out with petroleum and asphalt. He says that no commercially paying deposits of zinc, iron, or petroleum, will ever be found in Hancock county. Her wealth is in her soil.

CAINSVILLE, Mo., July 30.

E. L. KELLEY,

Dear Bro:—Inclosed please find an order for $2, to apply on the Graceland College debt. I hope and pray that the debt will soon be paid. Let us one and all, dear Saints, sacrifice all our means will permit. God will put the means in our hands if we will only trust him. I had been wondering how could get some money to help pay off the debt; but thank the Lord he has put the means in my hand to do good. My dear old mother gave me this money to buy me some books that I very much need, but I can do without them for a while, and help what littie I can to obey the command of the Lord, "The college debt should be paid."

CONVERSION OF THE WORLD .- NO. 1. DO LAITY AND MINISTRY SHARE RESPONSIBILITY IN CONVER-SION?

BY JAMES W. BURNS.

To answer the above question we must canvass a broad field. For us to comprehend the answer, we must review some of our duties and show the effects upon us and the world and see if we faithfully or unfaithfully discharge them. The first question that might be asked to show or reveal to us the great responsibility that is resting upon each, laity and ministry, would be, What is the object of this church? Answer, The conversion and saving of the world.

And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned. - Mark 16: 15, 16.

This shows the object of the ministry of the church to be to make believers and then save them. Again we are told:

And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins. - Matt. 1:21.

The work of Jesus, then, was to save; and he, after becoming a man and entering on his ministry, said:

For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me. And this is the Father's will which hath sent me, that of all which he hath given me I should lose nothing, but should raise it up again at the last day. And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life; and I will raise him up at the last day.—John 6:38-40.

The foregoing plainly shows what is the object of God himself; and Jesus came to do God's will, -to convert and purify those of the world who would believe and obey.

The twelve and seventy are sent to preach and teach the gospel to the world. The laity and branch officers may not see the responsibility that rests upon them in converting the world; and this we wish to consider our individual duties, and the effects we produce in faithfully or unfaithfully discharging them.

The elders go, or are sent, to teach the world to have faith in God and Jesus Christ his Son, and to repent of sins and be baptized for the remission of sins, and accept the imposition of hands for the blessings of the Holy Spirit; and this that we might be saved. This is just. But are you and I conducting ourselves so that we are fulfilling the scriptures?

Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.—Matt 5:16.

God in the gospel has made provision for every necessity of man. We are commanded to-

Search the Scriptures: for in them ve think ye have eternal life: and they are they which testify of me.-John 5: 39, or reveal what we should do under all conditions.

And ve shall remember the church articles and covenants to keep them. . . . And the Book of Mormon, and the Holy Scriptures, are given of me for your instruction. - D. C.

And again, the elders, priests, and teachers of this church shall teach the principles of my gospel which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, in the which is the fullness of the gospel; and they shall observe the covenants and church articles to do them, and these shall be their teachings. . . Thou shalt take the things which thou hast received, which have been given unto thee in my scriptures for a law, to be my law, to govern my church -D C. 42:5, 16.

These quotations plainly teach that each individual shall be governed by what is written in the Doctrine and Covenants, Book of Mormon, and the Bible. Suppose we should neglect to search the scriptures; we should be unqualified to discharge our duties to each other and the world. It is possible we can search, and not search in the way that brings the blessings of God to us. Suppose I read or studied a great deal, but desired that what was revealed should not conflict with my preconceived ideas; or suppose I have a difficulty or a misunderstanding with some of the brethren and want them to do all the confessing or endure all the humiliation. Paul says:

Ever learning, and never able to come to the knowledge of the truth.—2 Tim. 3:7 Why were they ever learning and never able to attain to the knowledge of the truth? Let Paul answer:

For the time will come when they will not endure sound doctrine; but after their own lusts shall they heap to themselves teachers, having itching ears.-2 Tim. 4: 3.

You can see by this why they could not understand the things of God. It was that they would not obey him if he had revealed his will. A man may read and not understand. It is recorded in Mark 13:14:

Let him that readeth understand.

This shows some would read and not understand; so be careful how you read, and not read to be able to avoid your duties; and always be ready and willing to do what God may reveal to you. Be willing to do anything whatsoever the Lord shall reveal to you, and then when you read you shall understand.

To impress the necessity of knowledge we quote:

Therefore my people are gone into captivity, because they have no knowledge.— Isaiah 5:13.

My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge.-Hosea 4:6.

This is why our Savior said to search the scriptures. This is not the only way to gain knowledge. There are the preaching meetings. Through the preaching of the word God designs to teach and instruct his people.

Paul, in Romans 10:14, asks the question:

How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? And we might add, How can they hear except they go and listen to the preacher?

God has not placed anything in the gospel that is not essential to the conversion and saving of the human family. The elders not only teach the first principles of the gospel, but teach, as they are led by the Holy Spirit, the duties of the members of his church; their duties to God and their fellow men. Then if we should be negligent in searching the scriptures and fail to hear the word spoken through the Lord's servants, we should not be blessed with knowledge, which is of great necessity to the salvation of ourselves and others. Hosea says:

My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge. -4:6.

The testimony of John the Revelator will come in here nicely:

He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the churches. -2:17.

God demands all to hear, that they may learn what God wants each to do. The Lord said:

Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.—John 8: 31, 32.

Here Jesus plainly states that through the continuation in the truth, or God's commandments, we shall know the truth. And we find the definition of "truth," as spoken by our Savior in his prayer to his Father in heaven for his disciples, thus:

Sanctify them through thy truth: thy word is truth.—John 17:17.

We also find the following instruction:

Add to your faith, virtue; and to virtue, knowledge.—2 Peter 1:5.

We are here commanded to add knowledge to our fruits of righteousness. We at the present time have an organization known as the Sunday School Association, through which knowledge is taught by the help of Holy Spirit and Quarterlies. So if we desire to increase in knowledge, we can study the scriptures at home and in the Sunday school, and by going to hear the servants of the living God, when they are preaching near where we abide, for nineteen hundred years ago, Jesus Christ said:

I came not to do my will, but the will of him who sent me.

That was God's will; and Christ said to his apostles and servants:

Then said Jesus to them again, Peace be unto you: as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you.—John 20: 21.

Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven -Matt. 5: 16. Jesus says that he is the light of the world:

Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, I am the light of the world.—John 8:12.

How was Jesus Christ the light of the world? There was darkness, or there could not be light. Darkness is the opposite of truth, God's word; then light is God's word or truth. For us to let our light shine before men. we must have a light, or it will be like the ten virgins (Matt. 25); five were foolish and five were wise. To let our light shine we must have the word of God, or understand And knowledge is obtained through studying the commandments of God, or hearing them preached through his servants by his Spirit. So the effects of keeping the command to search the Scriptures, and to use our ears to hear his servants preach, would create in each a light or faith that would shine brighter, and give light to all around. But if we fail to comply with the command, we would not have very much light, and then could not let our light shine before men, because we would not know darkness from light. So when any of God's servants come to where we are located, let us take our ears to where they may hear the word of God spoken by his Holy Spirit; then we shall be able to know how Christ would act, and can imitate his example, and the world will see and believe; or at least some will.

WISDOM.

After we have attained the knowledge of our duties, and to some extent the plan of salvation, we should have wisdom, that we may know how to apply the knowledge.

If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him.—James 1:5.

The wise man, Solomon, said in Proverbs 4:5-9.

Get wisdom, get understanding; forget it not; neither decline from the words of my mouth. Forsake her not, and she shall preserve thee: love her, and she shall keep thee. Wisdom is the principal thing; therefore get wisdom; and with all thy getting get understanding. Exalt her, and she shall promote thee: she shall bring thee to honor, when thou dost embrace her. She shall give to thine head an ornament of grace: a crown of glory shall she deliver to thee.

In the Doctrine and Covenants we find the following:

Now, as you have asked, behold, I say unto you, Keep my commandments, and seek to bring forth and establish the cause of Zion: seek not for riches but for wisdom; and, behold, the mysteries of God shall be unfolded unto you, and then shall you be made rich. Behold, he that hath eternal life is rich.—6:3.

The Lord commands us to seek not for riches, but for wisdom,—that is by studying all good books, and by the prayer of faith according to James 1:5.

Seek ye diligently and teach one another words of wisdom; yea, seek ye out of the best books words of wisdom; seek learning even by study, and also by faith.—D. C. 85:36.

Paul says:

For to one is given by the Spirit the word of wisdom; to another the word of knowledge by the same Spirit.—1 Cor. 12:8.

Showing that wisdom and knowledge are not altogether the same thing. While the Lord bestows upon one the gift of wisdom, all may obtain a portion by studying the best books, being taught privately or from the stand, or asking, as James says, "If any man lack wisdom, let him ask [or seek] of God," "and it shall be given him," providing that we seek or ask aright. Jesus is recorded in Matthew 7:7, 8, as saying:

Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you: for every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened.

James in writing of the man or woman that asketh God for wisdom, says:

But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering; for he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed. For let not that man think that he shall receive any thing of the Lord.—1: 6, 7.

We must go to God for wisdom, nothing doubting, believing the Lord can and will give us such portion of wisdom as he knows is needful to us and his work. In the Word of Wisdom, which God has given in these last days, as recorded in Doctrine and Covenants, section 86, in the headlines, we find that this is not given as a command, or that each is compelled to obey it. "To be sent greeting, not by commandment or constraint." But O, hear the promise that revelation contains to those who will obey it!

And all saints who remember to keep and do these sayings, walking in obedience to the commandments, shall receive health in their navel, and marrow to their bones, and shall find wisdom and great treasures of knowledge, even hidden treasures; and shall run and not be weary, and shall walk and not faint.

I can bear my testimony as to the wearying and fainting of the physical body. I know that is true, and as far as finding great treasures of wisdom and knowledge, I may possess those gifts only in a limited degree; but I am very certain that the promise is sure and steadfast, and will be given to those that are obedient to all the commandments and to the Word of Wisdom.

Again we find in the Doctrine and Covenants:

And at that day when I shall come in my glory, shall the parable be fulfilled which I spake concerning the ten virgins; for they that are wise and have received the truth, and have taken the Holy Spirit for their guide, and have not been deceived, verily I say unto you, They shall not be hewn down and cast into the fire, but shall abide the day.—45: 10.

Wisdom consists in knowing how to use knowledge.

Some may ask, What has wisdom in the laity and ministry to do in the conversion of the world? All will agree that the ministry must use wisdom in presenting the word of life to the world. Would we think it wisdom, if the ministry should preach to a newly opened place in the world that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, and that if the world did not obey what he taught and believe the Book of Mormon to be of divine they would not be saved? No. I do not believe you would. No one in the church would question but what they had the knowledge that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God, and that the Book of Mormon was divine, yet they would not succeed in converting the world if they proceeded in that way. Paul says to Timothy, a minister of Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth.—2 Tim. 2: 15.

Would the ministry in preaching first to the world, as stated above, about Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon, be using wisdom and rightly dividing the word? No; unless they were especially led to do so by the Holy Spirit. Would we as Saints believe the ministry was using wisdom if they preached one thing and practiced another? No; I think not. So the ministry of Jesus Christ should be very cautious, or use prudence and wisdom in their everyday life, to be as a workman that needeth not to be ashamed. The Lord said in latterday revelations:

Remember that that which cometh from above is sacred, and must be spoken with care, and by constraint of the Spirit, and in this there is no condemnation; and ye receive the Spirit through prayer; wherefore, without this there remaineth condemnation.—D. C. 63:16.

The Lord says, "That which cometh from above is sacred and must be spoken with care," or wisdom. We agree that the preacher should be careful how he preaches and lives, if he is to be a profitable servant in the kingdom of God.

Often the lay member is so enthused with the knowledge he has of the gospel that he wants to tell everyone what great blessings are to be enjoyed by the obedience to the same; and no doubt the Lord has marvelously blessed and shown him many things which the world cannot receive, because the world knows not God; and he wants believers to follow the signs, in place of the signs following the believers. That is unwise, and will not have a good effect in converting the world.

The Lord in instructing his ministry as to what to preach to the world, says in Doctrine and Covenants: "I command you that you preach nought but repentance;" that is, we should give them milk and not strong meat, as they cannot bear meat now. We can and do preach to the world by our everyday lives. They come and hear and understand some of our duties. and they watch us to see if we are really converted, or if we have more than other churches have. Paul says in Romans, "Owe no man anything."

Pay the debt thou hast contracted with the printer.-D C. 18:5

Thou shalt not take thy brother's garment; thou shalt pay for that which thou shalt receive of thy brother.-D C. 42:14.

The first quotation plainly teaches us to pay debts that we contract, and if we do not, are we and the ministry using wisdom? and will the world look upon it with favor? and would the world not ask, Does your church teach its members to be honest?

In that memorable sermon on the mount Jesus taught:

It hath been said, Whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement: but I say unto you, That whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery: and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced committeth adultery. - Matt. 5:31, 32.

Now Jesus our Lord teaches that there is only one thing for which a wife or husband may put away or divorce a companion, and that is for adultery.

The wife is bound by the law as long as her husband liveth; but if her husband be dead, she is at liberty to be married to whom she will.—1 Cor. 7:39.

Jesus at the well of Samaria said to the Samaritan woman, as recorded in John:

Go call thy husband, and come hither. The woman answered and said, I have no husband. Jesus said unto her, Thou hast well said, I have no husband: For thou hast had five husbands; and he whom thou now hast is not thy husband: in that saidst thou truly.-John

This woman had been married to five husbands, and she realized the one that she had at that time was not legally her husband. If my wife and I should part, not because one had committed adultery, and I should marry another, and the Lord would come to my well for water, and ask me to go and call my wife, I think I would hang my head in shame and confess that the last woman was not my wife. What would the world say about it? Why, they would be asking the members of this branch this question, "Does your church teach and allow your members to get divorcements and marry while your first husband or wife is living?" Would it have a good effect or a bad one on the world? and would it retard the conversion of the world or not? If any should do this, are they using wisdom? and are they letting their light shine? or have they any light to shine?

I am afraid that any who will do that will find they will have to trim their lamps and buy oil, that they may have a light to shine. The Savior is quoted in Matthew 5:16, as saying:

Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven. Could not the Saints of God wield a greater power for good if they would come up higher, as the Lord has admonished us from time to time?

There is the tobacco habit, of which the Lord has expressed disapproval in these the latter days:

And again, tobacco is not for the body, neither for the belly, and is not good for man, but is an herb for bruises, and all sick cattle, to be used with judgment and skill. -D. C. 86:1.

I am sorry to say that the lay members are not the only ones afflicted with this bad habit, but some of the ministry are also. There is not one who uses the weed but will acknowledge that it is a filthy habit. A man who does not profess religion was once in my shop, and was chewing tobacco and spitting, and he voluntarily said that he wished he could quit the filthy habit. The Lord is recorded as saying:

And again I say unto you, I give unto you a commandment, that every man, both elder, priest, teacher, and also member, go to with his might, with the labor of his hands, to prepare and accomplish the things which I have commanded. And let your preaching be the warning voice, every man to his neighbor, in mildness and in meekness. And go ye out from among the wicked. Save go ye out from among the wicked. Save yourselves. Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord. Even so. Amen.-D. C.

The Lord has said, as quoted above, that all, both ministry and members, are to work with their might to accomplish—what? It was to fulfill or obey all his commandments which have one object in view-that is, to convert and save all mankind. So we see the ministry and lay members have a work to do along that line.

If we let our light shine we must have a light. What is the light the Lord wants to shine through us? I will let the Lord answer that question:

Then spake Jesus again unto them, saving. I am the light of the world; he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.-John 8: 12.

Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights.—James 1:12.

This then is the message which we have heard of him, and declare unto you, that God is light, and in him is no darkness at all.—1 John 1:5.

The great center of light is God himself, and to show how Jesus was the light of the world we only have to quote his testimony:

For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me.-John 6: 38.

And he that sent me is with me; the Father hath not left me alone; for I do always those things that please him.—John 8: 29.

For I have not snoken of myself: but the Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment what I should say, and what I should speak. And I know that his commandment is life everlasting; whatsoever I speak even as therefore, the Father said unto me o I speak.—John 12: 49, 50.

As God is light, and in him is no darkness at all, then whatever he spoke or commanded would be light. and as Jesus Christ came down from heaven to do the Father's will, and as the Father gave him a commandment what he should speak and preach, and those commandments were life everlasting and as Jesus did keep all of his Father's commandments, then we can see how he was the light of the world. John says:

But if we walk in the light, as he [Jesus] is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin.—1 John 1:7.

If we walk in the light as Jesus was in the light, or if we keep the commandments as he kept them. then we will have our lights trimmed and burning: then we will be the light of the world; then our lights will shine before men, and they will see our good works and glorify our Father who is in heaven.

A Quaker was approached by a bootblack to shine his shoes thus, "Shine?" The Quaker, not accustomed to the use of words and phrases as some used them, replied: "Nay, I'll not shine, except with inward grace!" That is how the Lord wants us to shine.

For instance, the diamond as it comes from the mines has the qualities within it to shine, if it is properly worked, ground to shape, and polished, by a proficient workman. After the workman has put the finishing touch upon the gem, it will then be in a condition to reflect in beautiful colors, the light that falls upon it. It makes no difference how you turn the finished stone, or in what position it is held, it will sparkle and throw out beautiful rays of light of many colors. But if the workman only partly finished the stone, it would shine only when the finished portion was brought in proper position. That is the way with us. If we only allow the Lord to grind off a part of our rough places, we will not shine very much.

I believe the first thing we ought to do before, and especially after, entering the church, is to quit lying, beating debts, getting divorces, and using tobacco, for these are some of the rough places that must be ground off before we can be polished, so that we can reflect or let the true light of heaven shine through us; for those rough places will not let the light shine through. If we do not, we will be in the same condition as the unfinished diamond, only shine now and then when we are turned in such a position that the small polished places may reflect the light.

The question may be asked, Can all men and women shine? Yes, if they

If have the proper qualifications. they are converted to God's law. The Psalmist David says:

The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul: the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple.-19:7.

Job says:

But there is a spirit in man: and the inspiration of the Almighty giveth them understanding.—32: 8.

Paul says:

For this is the covenant that I will make with the house of Israel after those days, saith the Lord; I will put my laws into their mind, and write them in their hearts.—Heb. 8: 10.

Jesus, in the parable of the sower,

Now the parable is this: The seed is the word of God. But that on the good ground are they, which in an honest and good heart, having heard the word, keep it, and bring forth fruit with patience.—Luke 8: 11, 15.

Those passages plainly teach that man has a spirit in him, and that spirit is enlightened by the inspiration of the Almighty, and that the law of God is perfect; and if received in an honest heart, does convert the soul; and if applied to our everyday lives, does make us "shine," as the Quaker said, "with inward grace."

The Lord and Savior Jesus Christ is recorded as saying:

If ye love me, keep my commandments. If ye love me, keep my commandments. And I will pray the Father, and he shall give you another Comforter, that he may abide with you for ever. But the Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and bring all things to your remembers a market every here a said unto your , whatsoever I have said unto you.-John 14: 15, 16, 26

This teaches that if we keep God's commandments he will send us his Holy Spirit, that will teach us all that we should do to be saved. Of course we all believe that we must repent, be baptized, and have hands laid on us by one who has authority of God for the reception of the Holy Spirit. Then there is a way to retain it, that our lights might shine unto the world.

DISTRIBUTION OF GOD'S WORD,

I feel impelled to write, and try in the sincerity of my heart to express thoughts that seem oft to burden the mind when in deep solitary musings upon the importance of the "angelic message." The question purporting to be discussed is the distribution of the truth aside from preaching. One very wise method is the old English and Welsh system of "tracting." First, laying out of the city, town, or village in districts or wards No. 1. 2. 3. 4, and so forth. Then the appointing of one faithful, interested brother or sister as president over each allotted department; after which comes the call for volunteers, and the pro-curing by the branch general the issued by the Board of Publication, pamphlets or tracts that wisdom might dictate for circulation. volunteers with the president start out in the interest of the work understandingly from house to house, leaving a tract in each dwelling with those that make a promise to read and keep clean the tract, until exchanged for another in a week or so, as circumstances may admit. By so doing, if done in a meek, loving, unmastering spirit, if a debate should ensue, the truth will gain an entrance among families that never would, by reason of prejudice, enter our church edifices to hear the word.

Monthly meetings should be appointed by this class of willing workers to give in their reports, as well as deliberate with each other or how to proceed wisely as these things may open, etc.

Having said so much upon the system of tracting, the writer would call the attention of the brethren, yea the church general, to the sale and final distribution of the record of the seed of Joseph, named the Book of Mormon. And if properly informed from the perusing of its sacred pages, it is to couple itself in this dispensation with the record of the Jews, Holy Bible. First, to convince, or try to convince the Gentile world fully of the divine mission of Christ in all of its merciful bearings upon sin-stricken humanity. Then after having accomplished its object lesson among the Gentiles, it must be carried by way of Gentile to the "seed" of those holy men who inspiringly wrote it, meaning the aborigines of America, and afterwards to "all" the literal descendants of the house of Israel. Let me quote. The Lord is speaking:

For behold, I shall speak unto the Jews, and they shall write it [the Bible]; and I shall also speak unto the Nephites, and they shall write it [Book of Mormon]; and I shall also speak unto the other tribes of the house of Israel, which I have led away, and they shall write it [we may expect it soon]; and I shall also speak unto all the nations of the earth, and they shall write it. And it shall come to pass that the Jews shall have the words of the Nephites, and the Nephites shall have the words of the Jews; and the Nephites and the Jews shall have the words of the lost tribes of Israel; and the lost tribes of Israel shall have the words of the Nephites and the Jews .- Book of Mormon, 2 Nephi 12:51, 52.

Hence the chief duty of the angelic message before us in that line as the favored Gentile portion of the Gentile race, adopted or grafted into the tame olive tree, becoming the Israel of God, so to speak, is the final distribution of the words of the Nephitesthe Book of Mormon—among the tens of thousands of our brother Gentiles. And how shall we make it a success. aside from our former manner of doing?

giving an intelligent understanding of what the book purports to be, its message entire, quality of binding, print, paper, price, with size and number of pages; agents appointed everywhere they may be found, becoming wisely skilled in its merits, so enabling them from among the millions of humanity to procure subscribers, and so deliver the peerless treasure at or near a given time, advising them to be ready with the price of the book to prevent delay.

Writing upon this topic, I profess being a little posted, and know by experience of having ofttimes a grand success in the book canvassing field: so I meekly ask, Why cannot we make it a success in that line of distributing the words of the ever living and true God among his creature, man?

Very true, the agent may expect a little up-hill business at times, and especially when he comes in contact with those the Prophet Nephi refers to. who will say: A Bible, a Bible, we have a Bible, and we want no more Bible! But this success is sure and certain, as there are to be found tens of thousands of honest hearts that will in the fear of God investigate our claims. I will repeat, I have had experience in this honorable business for years; and believe there is no business among mortals more honorable and grand than the circulating of good literature among the people. Very true. It is expected that the agent shall have a fair commission, so that he may be self-supporting, as well as encouraged in such labors of love. Indeed, I venture to say, in the fear of God, that if your writer, aged as he is, should engage himself in the line of canvassing the Book of Mormon, more souls would be brought to a knowledge of the truth, eventually, than in any other way. Some may say, Why not take a copy of the book around and canvass? I have found that the prospectus plan is the best, creating a desire, especially in the curious, not only to possess but to see the book, hence subscribe, while some upon seeing a copy of the book, lose their interest.

I wish some of our wiser heads would take this matter up and give it a good sifting in HERALD or Ensign, so that under the blessing of the Master good may be done in giving the world to understand that that blessed book is no Spalding Romance, but a message direct from God to Gentile, Jew, and all Israel, scattered in this eventful hour.

To convince those, if there be any, that suppose that the canvassing of good books from house to house is not a praiseworthy avocation,-let me kindly note. George Washington, while surveying Fairfax county, in his youth, prior to the fatal Braddock expedition, was a book agent. The works he canvassed for was, "The American Savage; how he may be tamed by the weapons of civilization." He sold over two hundred copies in and around Alexandria, Virginia. Daniel Webster paid his second term of tuition at Dartmouth College by acting as local agent for De Tocqueville's "America." Grant. subsequent to his resignation from the army, before his venture on the Dent farm, took part of the territory of a general agent of Putnams, to sell "Irving's Columbus." Ex-president Hayes footed all over southern Ohio, when a lad, getting subscriptions for "Baxter's Lives of the Saints," I might mention others; but enough to prove that good book canvassers are in rank and file with good company.

Book of Mormon, hid for ages 'Neath Cumorah's sacred sod, Brought to light it sacred pages, By that angel sent of God, To make known to Gentile nation, And the poor wandering Jew, That the Christian published mission Of the Lamb of God is true.

> Yours lovingly, JOHN JONES.

WHO CHANGED THE SABBATH?

Mrs. E. G. White, prophetess of the Seventh day Adventists, says:

The Pope has changed the rest day from the seventh to the first day. - Early Writings, page 26.

Here we find the mark of the beast, etc. (Revelation 14: 9-12) -Mark of the Beast,

Sunday keeping must be the mark of the beast.—Marvel of Nations, page 183

The keeping of the counterfeit sabbath is the reception of the mark.-Great Controversy, page 281.

And so in most of their writings. This theory makes them more converts than any other. Convince people that "Sunday keeping is only a Catholic institution," "a rival of the Lord's sabbath," and "hateful to God;" and no one, if they have any conscience, will keep it any longer: It is the main pillar in their whole system; they all accept it as a historical fact, in fulfillment of Daniel 7: 25. Destroy their faith in this, and their whole system totters.

If, as they claim, they are raised up specially to preach against this Pope's sabbath, they should be able to prove the time and place of the change very plainly. If, as they say, "the unmingled wrath of an offended God is soon to be poured out upon all Sunday keepers," they should be able to give us the name of the Pope, and the time and place, when and where he made the change, and the reasons whv.

Produce your cause, saith the Lord; bring forth your strong reasons, saith the King of Jacob.—Isa. 41: 21.

In more than a dozen debates with them in the last thirty years, never have I had them present even a scrap of authentic history claiming that any

Pope even tried to change the sab-Jesus savs

Men loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil. For every one that doeth evil [teacheth error] hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds should be reproved [or his error be exposed] -John 3: 19, 20.

Why shun investigation if they teach the truth?

I have a debate on hand soon, in which I must affirm that Sunday is the rest day, and nothing but King James' version of the Bible is to be allowed in evidence; yet I have abundant evidence that over half my opponent's preaching was from historv.

Mr. Andrews' book on "The Sabbath," of 512 pages, has only 192 from the Bible, and 320 from history. Why exclude history? Because it is against them. When they have no opposition, they invariably use it; otherwise they cry out against it. The only direct proof they offer from history about the change of the sabbath is from Catholic catechisms, and these they explain so as to teach that hundreds of years after Christ the Pope by his own authority changed the sabbath from Saturday to Sunday, when they teach no such thing; but they all state distinctly that the change in the sabbath was made by the church, not by the Pope, in the days of Christ and the apostles, not hundreds of years afterward. Thus:

Question, "What are the days which the church commands to be kept holy?"

Answer, 1. "The Sunday, or our Lord's day, which we observe by apostolic tradition, instead of the sabbath."—Catholic Christian Instructed, page 209.

Question, "What warrant have you for keeping the Sunday, preferable to the ancient sabbath, which was the Saturday?"

Answer, "We have for it the authority of the Catholic Church, and apostolic tradi-

Catholics claim that their church originated in the days of the apostles; hence any change made by the church in the days of the apostles, was made by the Catholic Church. And thus they claim that the sabbath was changed by the Catholic Church in the days of the apostles. Hence we see that even the catechisms, when properly read, teach that Sunday keeping originated with the church of Christ in the days of the apostles, which we shall otherwise prove to be the truth.

That Adventists do misrepresent the teachings of the Catholics, I will show by the testimony of a Catholic priest:

Having lived for years among the Seventh Day Adventists, I am familiar with their claims that the Pope of Rome changed the sabbath from the seventh to the first day of the week. Such assertions are wholly unfounded. Catholics claim no such thing; but maintain that the apostles themselves established the observance of Sunday, and that we received it by tradition from them. The councils and Popes afterwards simply confirmed the keeping of the day as received from the apostles.—John Meiler, Rector of St. John's Church, Healdsburg, California.

John Ankotell, A. M., priest of the diocese of New York, in the Outlook of July, 1889, says of Sunday, the Lord's day:

We think it was given by our Lord, to the apostles, during the great forty days, after his resurrection. But we cannot prove this.

The Catholic Dictionary, by Addis and Arnold, after quoting Revelation 1:10; Acts 20:7, etc., says:

These texts seem to prove that Sunday was already a sacred day.

Hebrews 10:25 shows that Christians, when the epistle was written, held regular days of assembly. The scriptural references given above show that the observance of Sunday had begun in the apostolic days; but even were the Scriptures silent, tradition would put this matter beyond all doubt.

These eminent Catholics state their church doctrine exactly; namely, that the change was made by Christ and his apostles; but that the Scriptures are not plain enough on this point to prove it; hence we have to rely on apostolic tradition. All their writings teach the same; why pervert them? Adventists denounce Catholics as cheats, forgers, liars, deceivers, etc.; but when it suits their purpose, turn right around and quote their catechisms about changing the sabbath, as unquestionable truth; and why? Because they have nothing else to base their argument upon. And then instead of teaching it as the catechisms read, that the change was made by the church, and apostolic tradition in the first century, have it that it was changed by the Pope, hundreds of years after, without a shadow of evidence to prove it. If they persist in the claim that some Catholics say the Pope changed the sabbath, why not state their entire claim, that Peter the apostle was their first Pope; and that he changed the sabbath from Saturday to Sunday by commandment of Jesus Christ? Because this makes their witness prove too much to suit them. Too near the truth, in respect to the change of the sabbath.

I will now give the testimony of some few of the multitude of witnesses to the truth of the Catholic testimony already given that Sunday was kept as a rest day by, and in the days of, the apostles.

Eusebius, called the father of church history, says, speaking of the patriarchs before the flood:

They did not, therefore, regard circumcision, nor observe the sabbath, neither do we; . . . because such things as these do not belong to Christians.—Eccl. History, book 1, chapter 4.

Speaking of the Jewish Christians in the first century he says:

They also observe the sabbath, and other discipline of the Jews, just like them, but on the other hand they also celebrate the Lord's days, very much like us, in commemoration of his resurrection.—Page 112.

Even these Jewish Christians kept Sunday. He calls Sunday the loving Lord's day. . . . On this day we assemble and celebrate holy and spiritual sabbaths, even all nations redeemed by him throughout the world.

Again,

And all things whatsoever it was the duty to do on the sabbath, these we have transferred to the Lord's day, as more honorable than the Jewish sabbath.

Eusebius was born in Palestine, in the very cradle of the early church; was bishop of Cesarea, where Paul lived two years; was one of the most noted men of his age. Lived in A. D. 324. Of him Horne's Introduction says:

A man of extraordinary learning, diligence, and judgment. He delivered the sum of what he found in the writings of the primitive Christians.—Vol. 1, page 42.

Of him Justin Edwards, D. D., says:

He lived in the third century, was a man of vast reading, and was as well acquainted with the history of the church, from the days of the apostles, as any man of his day.

That at Cesarea was

A very extensive library to which Eusebius had constant access. He was a learned and accurate historian, and had the aid of the best helps for acquiring information upon all subjects connected with the Christian Church.—Sabbath Manual, page 124.

He lived right there, knew just what the church did, and wrote the first church history. The epistle of Barnabas, reverenced in the chuch as next to the gospels, written as early as A. D. 80 to 120, shows conclusively what was believed and practiced in the church immediately after the apostles. The Encyclopedia Britannica says:

This work is unanimously ascribed to Barnabas, the companion of St. Paul, by early Christian writers.

In it he says:

Wherefore, also we keep the eighth day, the day also on which Jesus rose again from the dead.—Page 15.

Chapter 14 of the "Teachings of the Apostles," written somewhere from A. D. 80 to 120, says:

But every Lord's day do ye gather yourselves together, and break bread, and give thanksgiving.

This is decisive, that at this early day they met on the first day. Justin Martyr lived A. D. 140. Elder Andrews, Adventist, says:

Justin's apology was written at Rome, about the year 140... And this at only forty-four years after John's vision on Patmos. It does not appear that Justin and those at Rome who held with him in doctrine, paid the slightest regard to the ancient sabbath. He speaks of it as abolished, and treats it with contempt.—Complete Testimony of the Father, page 33.

This is the confession the greatest Advent historian is compelled to make. Proven by Justin Martyr, who lived right there, that the Jewish sabbath was wholly disregarded at Rome only forty years after the death of the apostles. Hear Elder Andrews further:

We must therefore pronounce Justin a man that held to the abrogation of the ten commandments; and that the sabbath was a Jewish institution, which was unknown before Moses, and of no authority since Christ. We held Sunday to be the most suitable day for public worship.—Page 44.

This is the doctrine that the fathers and early church held. Justin in his apology to the emperor, for them, fairly and truly represented the Christians. What was the character of Justin who thus testified? He was a Greek, born in Palestine, and held his debate with Trypho in the church at Ephesus, where St. John lived, in the very center of the eastern church. The American Encyclopedia says of him:

One of the earliest and most learned writers of the Christian church.

Schaff Herzog Encyclopedia says:

In these works Justin presents the system of faith held by all Christians. The only difference he knows exists among Christians concerning the millennium. Thus Justin is an incontrovertible witness of the unity of the church in his day.

Eusebius says he overshadowed all the great men who illuminated the second century by the splendor of his name. His writings are the most important that have come to us from the second century.

Dr. Schaff says of him:

After his conversion, Justin devoted himself wholly to the vindication of the Christian religion, as an itinerant evangelist with no fixed abode.—Church History, vol. 1, page 482.

Not only were his books accepted without dispute, as showing the practice of the church, but his itinerant life, now in Palestine, next in Greece, Rome, Ephesus, and everywhere enabled him to know the faith and practice of the church, and stamps his testimony with force equal to demonstration. An unimpeachable witness of the faith and practice of the saints a few years after the death of the apostles.

Justin says of the first day:

And on the day called Sunday, all who live in cities or in the country gather together to one place, and the memoirs of the apostles or the writings of the prophets are read, . . . then the president verbally instructs, and exhorts to the imitation of these good things.

He then describes "the breaking of bread," thanksgiving, collections, providing for the poor, etc. And further:

But Sunday is the day on which we all hold our common assembly, because it is the first day on which God, having wrought a change in the darkness and matter, made the world; and Jesus Christ our Savior on the same day rose from the dead. . . Having appeared to his apostles and disciples, he taught them these things, which we have submitted to you also for your consideration.—Justin's First Apology, chap. 67.

Dyonysius, Bishop of Corinth, in

A. D. 170, a church that Paul raised up, and to which he gave the command about collections on Sunday, 1 Corinthians 16: 1, 2, says, speaking of Sunday:

We have passed the Lord's holy day, in which we read your epistle. In reading which we shall always have our minds stored with admonition.—Eusebius, book 4, chapter 23.

Bardesanes, of Edessa, Syria, 180, says:

On one day, the first day of the week, we assembled ourselves together, etc.—Elder Andrews' book, page 53.

Clement, of Egypt, A. D. 194, says: We in fulfillment of the precept keep the Tertullian, of Africa, wrote in A. D. 200

Lord's day, etc.—Book 7, chapter 12

He left the Roman Church because of false doctrines taught by them, and bitterly opposed them.

Johnson's Encyclopedia says of him:

One of the greatest men of the early church.

Schaff Herzog Encyclopedia:

One of the greatest characters of the ancient church.

Of his great book they say:

One of the magnificent monuments of the ancient church. . . He informs us more correctly than any other writer respecting the Christian doctrines of his time.

Of the abolition of the sabbath, he says:

The old law is demonstrated to have been consummated at its specific time, so also the observance of the sabbath is demonstrated to have been temporary. . . We solemnize the day after Saturday, etc. Do not observe the days held sacred by the Jews, etc.

Origen, of Egypt, A. D. 225, Mc-Clintock and Strong's Cyclopedia says of him:

Origen may well be pronounced one of the ablest and worthiest of the church fathers.

He also teaches that the church kept the "Lord's day" resurrection day. (Book 8, chapter 22.)

The Apostolic Constitutions, Elder Andrews, Adventist, admits were written in the third century. Mosheim also indorses this work. It was written about A. D. 250. They teach:

On the day of the Lord's resurrection, assemble yourselves without fail, etc.

Anotolius, Bishop of Laodicea, A. D. 270. A church raised up by Paul himself, says:

The solemn festival of the resurrection of the Lord can be celebrated only on the Lord's day.

Also Victorinus, Bishop of Petabium, A. D. 300, and Peter, Bishop of Alexandria, 306, and many others, all testify to Sunday, the Lord's day, the resurrection day, being observed by the early church.

What answer do Adventists make to all these positive testimonies corroborating the truth of the Catholic catechisms, etc., that they obtained Sunday keeping from the early church and apostolic tradition? something like Elder Andrews, their great historian. He says:

If Justin Martin had called Sunday the sabbath, or the Lord's day, it would have been different.

Justin was writing to a heathen emperor, who was perhaps wholly ignorant of the meaning of either of these terms—sabbath, or Lord's day—but was familiar with the term Sunday; so Justin of necessity used that term in order to be understood. Elder Andrews, throughout his great book, is constantly combatting the testimony of those early Christian fathers. The reason is so clear that none need be deceived. They taught one doctrine; he, another. Some of them no doubt talked with the apostles them selves; he lives 1800 years after. Who would be apt to know the best? On page 308 of his book he says:

The reasons offered by the early fathers for neglecting the observance of the sabbath show conclusively that they had no special light on the subject, by living in the first centuries, which we in this latter age do not possess.

What a confession from their greatest historian; admits that the early fathers, and church in the first centuries, "neglected the observance of the sabbath-kept the first day; but notwithstanding all this, the Pope, several hundred years after this, had to, and did change the sabbath from the seventh to the first day. How do the two statements harmonize? If these early Christian fathers were not as able reasoners, as good theologians as Elder Andrews and his colaborers, could they not state whether they did or did not keep Saturday? Surely they knew enough for that, and he admits they kept Sunday.

We do not quote them to prove a doctrine, for that we appeal only to the Bible. We quote them to prove a plain historical fact, that the early Christians did keep Sunday, hence it could not have been started by the Popes centuries afterwards. Encyclopedias summing up all the evidence of all these Christian fathers are well qualified to form correct conclusions. Smith's Bible Dictionary says:

The results of our examination of the prinpal writers of the two centuries after the death of St. John are as follows: "The Lord's day existed during these two centuries as a part and parcel of the apostolical, and so of scriptural, christianity." It was never defended, because it was never impugned; or at least only impugned as other things received from the apostles. Religiously regarded it was a day of solemn meeting for the holy eucharist, for united prayer, etc.

So Johnson's Universal Cyclopædia says:

For a time the Jewish converts observed both the seventh day and the first day, which came to be called the Lord's day. Within a century after the death of the apostles, we find the observance of the first day of the week under the name of the Lord's day established as a universal custom of the church.

Its observance was based upon the resurrection of Christ.

Schaff-Herzog, Encyclopedia, says of Sunday:

In the second century its observance was universal. The Jewish Christians ceased to observe the sabbath after the destruction of Jerusalem.

Dr. Schaff says:

The universal and uncontradicted observance of the first day of the week in the second century can only be explained by the fact that it has its root in apostolic practice.

—Vol. 1, page 478.

The Apostle John, in Revelation 1:10 "was in the Spirit on the Lord's day." Jesus is Lord over all things under the new covenant. The term is applied to him about four hundred and fifty times in the New Testament. All things are commonly spoken of as belonging to him, as 'the disciples of the Lord," "the Lord's body," "this cup of the Lord," "blood of the Lord," "Lord's death," "the Lord's table," "the Lord's supper," "the Lord's day." Do not all these refer to Christ? Who will deny it? Under his official jurisdiction all institutions under the gospel become obligatory. "the Lord's day," is Christ's day; and that is the way it is always used by the Christian fathers. Then in Acts 20:7:

On the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, etc.

Who can deny this being by previous appointment, to commemorate the Lord's death and resurrection by "breaking bread," and preaching on the resurrection day—the "Lord's day." God the Father is never mentioned as Lord after the resurrection of Jesus. But made Jesus "both Lord and Christ" (Acts 2:36). Having commanded, "Hear ye him" (Matt. 17:5). "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth" (Matt. 28:18). Hence "Lord's day" is Christ's day. Adventists tells us the seventh day is called the "Sabbath of the Lord" Exodus 20:10. "My holy day" in Isaiah 58:13, and Jesus said he was "Lord of the sabbath day." Is not that therefore the Lord's day? By no means; for it was God the Father speaking in Exodus 20:10: "The seventh day is the sabbath of the Lord thy God." Why leave out the two words? So all through the Old Testament. Jesus was never made Lord until after his resurrection. Not as God, or the Lord, but as the "Son of man," he was "Lord of the sabbath;" and this was said in defending his disciples against the charge of breaking the sabbath; as it was "made for man," hence he, a Son of man, was superior to the sabbath. Notice his illustrations in Matthew 12:3-12. David went into the temple and ate the holy bread, which the law forbade to any but the priests. His needs were superior to that law. "The priests in the temple profane the sabbath, and are blameless." Slay cattle all day the sabbath. Their service was superior to the sabbath day. This lesson Jesus, as Lord even of the sabbath, plainly taught, condemning those who make the sabbath of more importance than man for whom "the sabbath was made." Jesus, as its Lord, had a right to dispose of it as he saw proper, which he did by fulfilling all the requirements of that law, including the "sabbath of the Lord thy God," and as Lord of heaven and earth, "spoke of another day," of rest.

There remaine the therefore a rest to the people of God.—Heb. 4:8, 9.

The Lord's day. Hence he said:

Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfill.—Matt. 5: 17.

All Adventists admit, nay more, persist that this included the Sabbath law. Correct. But were they to stand forever, as they claim? Listen!

The law and the prophets were until John; since that time the kingdom of God is preached, and every man presseth into it.—Luke 16:16.

Or as a better translation has it:

Every man seeking truth pressing into it.

Under the old covenant, the law and the prophets, or the kingdom of Israel organized under the ten commandments as its constitutional law, and administered by the prophets as God gave command, as Moses, Joshua, etc., had proven a failure, because they had broken that covenant. as stated in Jeremiah 31:31; therefore, a new covenant was promised, and Jesus as mediator of that new covenant had chosen twelve apostles, and restored the prophets again, and presented for their consideration the "gospel of the kingdom," "built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets, Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone" (Eph. 2:20); telling them that old form under the "law and prophets" "was until John." Then, as Paul says, referring to this same matter, quoting Jeremiah 31: 31-35; and says:

In that he saith, A new covenant, he hath made the first old. Now that which decayeth and waxeth old is ready to vanish away.

—Heb. 8: 6-13.

Hence Jesus said it "was until John." Then it "waxed old ready to vanish away," and be superseded by a "better covenant, which was established upon better promises." Temporal blessings, only, were promised under the old. Eternal life, under the new. Jesus, "finding fault with them," "old time sayings," the ten commandments included (see Matt. 5:21-48), began at once to teach the better law of the kingdom of God, changing those old time sayings, "Thou shalt not kill" "Thou shalt not commit adultery," etc.; also the sabbath law, as apparent from Hebrews

4, where Paul, speaking of the seventh day rest, refers to a certain day being limited, and "if Jesus had given them [the Jews] rest," or recognized the continuation of the law and the prophets, "then would he not afterwards have spoken of another day." That this was another day of rest, spoken of or appointed, is evident from the next verse: "There remaineth therefore [because of Jesus "speaking" of, or appointing it] a rest to the people of God." But I was only aiming to give historical evidence, so will refer to some of the Reformers and close.

Mrs. E. G. White, prophetess of the Advent friends, says of Luther:

Zealous, ardent, and devoted, knowing no fear but the fear of God, and acknowledging no foundation for religious faith but the Holy Scriptures. Angels of heaven were by his side, and rays of light from the throne of God revealed treasures of truth to his understanding.—Great Gontroversy, pages 94-97.

Let us hear this truth regarding Carlstadt's Sabbatarian arguments:

Indeed if Carlstadt were to write further about the sabbath, Sunday would have to give way; and the sabbath, that is to say Saturday, must be kept holy. He would truly make us Jews in all things, and we should come to be circumcised; for that is true and cannot be denied, that he who deems it necessary to keep one law of Moses, and keeps it as the law of Moses, must deem all necessary, and keep them all.—History Sabbath, page 447.

Of Bunyan she said:

John Bunyan breathed the very atmosphere of heaven.-Great Controversy, page 174.

Bunyan says:

As for the seventh day sabbath, that, as we see, is gone to its grave, with the signs and shadows of the Old Testament; yea, and it has such a dart left upon it by the apostolical authority, that it is enough to make a Christian fly from it forever. 2 Corinthians Again, the apostles smite the teachers of the law upon the mouth, saying they understand neither what they say nor whereof they affirm.—Complete Works, page 915.

If Mrs. White was right about these men, why not receive their testimony? Jesus refers the Jews to their "own law, that the witness of two men was true." Paul says in the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established;" and by this law we should judge these things in regard to which we have such a cloud of witnesses, and not insist without a shadow of evidence, that Sunday keeping is only an institution of the Popes, determined at all hazards to maintain this delusive theory. And although using over half their time. in preaching, trying to establish it from history, absolutely refuse to hold an investigation of doctrine, allowing anything but King James' translation of the Scriptures to be introduced; other translations, as they know, as well as authentic history, mass of Adventists never read them, or only in their own books, where they are explained away by those who will by no means defend their theories in public investigation, thus placing themselves in the list of those whom Jesus said loved darkness rather than light, because their deeds were evil. For every one that doeth evil hateth the light, neither cometh to the light, lest his deeds [teaching error] should be reproved. But he that doeth [teacheth] truth cometh to the light [seeks investigation], that his deeds may be made manifest, that they are wrought in God .-John 3:19-21.

The fact is, they quote history in all their works and in their preaching, but cry out against it when we follow them there, because it is against them. They call the early Christian fathers "unreliable fools, frauds." apostates, forgers, and Elder Smith says of one:

A fraud, an impostor, a forger-an old forger of the second century, who wrote things too silly to be repeated, and too shameful to quote.—Page 39

Elder Waggoner says:

Surely insanity could not produce any more driveling nonsense than this—such childish nonsense is seldom seen under the heading of reason. It would have been a blessing to the world if they had all been lost.-Fathers of the Church, pages 206 to 217.

Thus they dispose of the early Christian fathers who said a word, as they all did, in favor of Sunday. Far better for those who advocate the keeping of the old covenant sabbath if those testimonies had been lost, and better still if the New Testament Scriptures also had been lost, for they are both alike against them. One thing we know, that however foolish notions some of those fathers might have held regarding some things, they could state the simple fact whether they kept Saturday or Sunday as the rest, or Lord's day; and they all agree that Sunday was so "observed universally," and their testimony is decisive, being strictly in harmony with all the Holy Scrip-

That our kind Father in heaven may inspire all hearts to see the necessity of heeding the injunction given through his servant Paul, to "Prove all things, and hold fast that which is good," and that what few testimonies I have herein presented may create a desire in honest hearts to search further, and above all, ask of God for wisdom, "who giveth to all men liberally, and it shall be given him." D. S. CRAWLEY.

"In filling places in my corps of teachers," writes Mary Louise Graham concerning "My Boarding-School for Girls," in the Ladies' Home Journal for August, "I considered per sonal attractiveness as well as intellectual throwing great light upon the subject.

I have quoted from those histories because I feel assured that the great I held out for a simple, natural manner."

THE COMING ZIONIST CONGRESS.

The fourth annual Convention of the Federation of American Zionists recently held in Philadelphia, revived public interest in the problem of Hebrew Colonization of Palestine, and fixed popular regard on a number of facts which show that the Zionist cause has made notable progress. Coming immediately after the Zionist night at the Maccabæans in London, where Dr. Herzl, the father of the Zionist movement, was greeted with such applause; where Zangwill made his wonderful speech, and Sir Francis Montefiore and other distinguished Hebrews testified to their faith that the Zionist plan was practical as well as righteous, the Philadelphia Convention had strong stimulus for enthusiastic discussions and hopeful outlook. Dr. Herzl's letter of greeting, which was read, directed attention to the growth of the organization as shown in the calling of the several international congresses; the creation in different countries of Zionist societies, and their consolidation into national organizations; the introduction of the shekel tax, followed by the establishment of the Jewish Colonial Bank; and then he spoke of the ground gained in the attitude of the Turkish Government towards Zionist representatives. His utterances in the last respect were the more significant in that Dr. Herzl was was one of a deputation which, on May 17, had an audience with the Sultan, which, it has been said, gave encouragement to the belief that the Zionists can secure of the Porte the guarantees for concessions they have been seeking. In the address of Prof. Richard Gottheil, President of the Federation, note was taken of the fact that Zionist societies in South America have asked affiliation; and that work is being extended to the Philippines, a society having been lately established in Manila. Delegates to the International Convention which meets in London next fall, will be appointed later. A minor resolution, but one of most interesting promise, was that to arrange for an exhibit of farm products of Palestine at future meetings.

The American Federation of Zionists numbers more than one hundred and twenty five societies, where, in 1897, there were merely a handful. In its development, it but repeats the story of the international organization. Before the Congress at Basle, in 1897, there were in the world something over one hundred societies whose aims were more or less Zionistic; at the second Congress, in 1898, there were more than eight hundred.

Our photograph reproduces the Congress of 1899, one which excited great public interest, because of the dignity of its personnel, the quality of its discussions, and the showing for progress which was made. Here and abroad, a great number of Jewish women are now working to further the movement. Mrs. Richard Got theil is their recognized leader in this country. It is hardly necessary to remind readers of this journal, who are well posted on the meaning and history of Zionism, that wholesale emigration of the Jews to Palestine has never been contemplated, nor the establishment of a political State there. The purpose is rather to provide a 'legally secured home' in the land of their forefathers for Jews living in countries where they are not happy. To this end, the idea has been to obtain guarantees and commercial concessions from the Sultan. securing the future of the Colonies, while promising in return good citizens, who will reclaim the waste places of Palestine; next, to buy lands, and to subsidize poor immigrants in establishing agricultural colonies or factories, At the Maccabæan meeting in London—following the Constantinople interview-it was as good as said that the only thing needed to put this plan under way was two million pounds, a half million of which was already in the Jewish Colonial Trust in London. "What is one and a half million to the Jews?" asked Zangwill. But the millionaires have not yet lent aid to this movement. It is the poor children of Israel who, from the four quarters of the globe, have sent in their shekels.

There are now thirty or more Jewish colonies in Palestine, where, twenty years ago, there were but two. In Judea, Samaria, Galilee, and across the Jordan, we find them. Close to the Mediterranean, and not far from Haifa, is Zikron Yaakob, the largest and finest of them all with about 1,000 people, chiefly engaged in wheat growing, breeding silkworms and bees, and raising vegetables. Near Joppa is Rishon le Zion, the first Russian Jewish Colony, established 1882, now a most prosperous community. And so in various places in Palestine, Jewish refugees, driven from Russia. Roumania, and elsewhere by persecution, have made the desert to blossom like the rose. They had a hard strug-gle to do this. In some instances they worked the ground with their fingers, because they had no implements. By their industry and peaceableness they have commended themselves to neighbors and rulers. None of these colonies were established by the Zionists. The international association will not plant colonies until their future can be assured.

The coming Zionist Congress will doubtless be the most interesting ever held, and perhaps may inaugurate more active operations in the East than have been undertaken heretofore. It is not out of the range of possibilities that there may be laid before that body a colonization charter, together with guarantees from the Turkish government, and certified articles from all Christian powers, permitting Zionists to make settlements in Palestine according to plans they have laid down. Certain it is that there will be an influential representation of American Hebrews at the international deliberations. Prof. Gottheil will, of course, be present. Dr. Wise, the able Oregonian, who was prominent in the Philadelphia convention, may be a delegate for the West.

Many prominent Hebrews are opposed to Zionism, but intense antagonism seems on the wane. "Had you told me ten years ago," says Rabbi Gottheil, "that today I would be an ardent Zionist, I would not have believed you." But he is such, and it is his son, a professor in Columbia college, who leads Zionism here.

At the 1898 Congress, the souvenir medal struck bore on one side a symbolic figure, recalling wandering Jews to Palestine; on the other was this in Hebrew: "Behold, I will take the children of Israel from the nations and will bring them into their own land." That is the watchword of Zionism.—Christian Herald, July 10.

TOBACCO IN EUROPE.

Three hundred and fifty years ago, according to the allegations, Jean Nicot introduced tobacco into Europe. It was from his name that the word "nicotine" was derived. The French government has just made an appropriation for the erection of a bronze statue to Nicot. It is to be set up in front of the main government tobacco factory in Paris. This French claim to the introduction of tobacco into Europe is somewhat at variance with the general supposition that Sir Walter Raleigh first carried the fragrant weed across the water to the old country. Raleigh smoked his Virginia tobacco in the presence of Queen Elizabeth in or about the year 1585. Thirty-four years earlier, however Jean Nicot, while French ambassador to Portugal, purchased some tobacco seeds that had been brought over from Florida and sent some of them to France. A year later he presented some of the plants to Catherine de Medici, and together they smoked the dried leaves in pipes.

It is interesting in this connection to recall that when tobacco smoking was first introduced into Europe, first by Nicot and later by Raleigh, it was | cross the Skaggarak, I shall leave this week, extremely unpopular. It was called '

"the stinking habit," and at least two popes, Urban VIII. and Innocent XI., issued decrees against it. A sultan of Turkey - in which country smoking is now almost universal - made it a crime punishable by the offenders having their pipes thrust through their noses. In Russia the noses of the smokers were cut off. James I. of England characterized smoking as "a custom loathsome to to the eye, hateful to the nose, harmful to the brain, dangerous to the lungs, and in the black, stinking fume thereof nearest resembling the horrible Stygian smoke of the pit that is bottomless."—National Glass Budget, March 30, 1901.

Letter Department.

AALBORG, Denmark, July 15.

President Joseph Smith:-I stated in my last letter that I intended to remain in Norway and continue operations within the twenty-five mile radius, according to the plan adopted at my first advent in that country, last fall; but I was unexpectedly called to this place, where I arrived two weeks ago. The brother whom I ordained this spring had created quite an interest here, and as many as seventeen had attended meeting. Among the number was a minister (ordained) connected with the Free Mission here in Denmark. He had attended the Mormon Church meeting for some time; but seeing Bro. Anderson's advertisement in the city paper, he came to investigate. He is a regular Apollos; and after hearing my second discourse he acknowledged the superiority of our claims, and at a prayer meeting Tuesday, last week, he demanded baptism. He was made acquainted with the prerequisites of this holy act. He spoke with feeling his determination to live a faithful life, and the next evening we troubled the Sea of the Lumpjord. His noble wife who was a devout Methodist was taken real sick the same morning as a result of his brave resolution; but she attended meeting next day, and the ice was broken. A private conversation next day cleared the mist away, and late Saturday evening she walked into the sea. We had confirmation Sunday; and Axel and self making up the required number, we administered the sacrament to those present, which was a source of joy to those old, noble Saints, Bro. and Sr. Anderson, who have lived exemplary lives and stood firm all these years. Dear Saints, when you live alone, live aright; and in the Lord's own time the fruit will appear.

I have been ill for two weeks with climate

I visited our Bro. Borlin, in Malmi, Sweden, last week; but he is now cold, and will have nothing more to do with the church. It seems that few who have been connected with the Utah faction will stand firm. However, "he that stands, let him take heed lest he fall." If I receive strength enough to and continue to operate in the old field until the arrival of the brethren in England. Please remember my son, Bro. Axel, and self to the Saints in general. Trusting that every letter I write in the future may bring news of worthy addition to the church, I am, as ever, your brother and colaborer,

N. C. ENGE.

INDEPENDENCE, Mo., July 29.

Editors Herald:—After such a rain we cannot complain.

The water flowed in streams this morning, after everyone has been praying and panting for a cool breath of air for weeks, and weeks, and weeks.

The circle of bean vines which we tried to train up around a big tree in the church yard was drenched by the rain last night; the dry cask at the house corner got brim full, and as we arose the rain was drip, dripping off the roof of the porch over the shriveled, yellow vines that still clung to their wires. Oh how precious were the sweet, cooling drops to our thirsty, famished souls!

But, friends, you have read the papers and know just how the corn leaves, sunburnt and stunted, quivered in the burning air, how the potato vines look as though they had been visited by the all-devouring potato bug, and how the strawberry, raspberry, and blackberry vines all in a few short weeks turned sere and brown as though burned in an oven.

Not much in the way of vegetables and fruits appear on the market, either. Potatoes from this "neck o' the woods" look a little smaller than usual; the few small onions are tough and strong. Now and then you may see a little bunch of beets, and once in a great while you can view a few cucumbers peeping out of a half-peck basket at the store door. They are very pale in color and queer in price,—only one or two for a nickle.

So you see, dear Saints, we are not in your town, enjoying low prices; but lest we have to r flect upon the danger of saying too much we will take leave of these perishable matters. We can say this, however, that the rains will bring gratitude to thousands in the ending of a drouth of unprecedented severity; and no doubt in many sections verdure and renewed vegetation will repay our thankfulness for kindly providence, when we most needed it. There is still time for replanting; so the hopeful farmer says.

Although discouragements seem to meet us at many a turn, sad news from abroad, friends, brothers, and sisters under affliction at home, dust and heat to contend with, housework waiting for the "move" of that all-around accessory to the housekeeper's department,-the good housewife who keeps things in place, -all these things and scores of others to attend to, troubles and crosses everywhere; yet we can always see that to every cloud "there is a silver lining." We hear at the close of day a little cheery music, and it is welcome, though it be of the ragtime sort; or perhaps the night breezes bring us snatches of some classic "jubilate" sung by melodious voices of "singing women" practicing their scores for next Sunday's choir work. And then there are the occassonal social functions, luncheons, and lawn parties to relieve the hot afternoons and evenings.

There are the chatting, tittering, fluffy-gowned young sisters, and the laughing, polite young brethren as they gather around the cool church cistern before and after meetings; and there are the happy-faced older saints, coming and going to and from the church services. They all greet us with a smile, on Sunday, and Tuesday, and Wednesday, and Thursday, and Friday.

On Mondays and Saturdays we miss all this source of happiness; and did it not conflict with the "silver-lining" thought, and the warm-hearted janitor, we would suggest that these nights also be occupied.

The brighter glint appears in the thought that although many have complained, others have pooh-poohed at the people who "couldn't stand a little sunshine," and in their comfortable summer garb have bravely walked "through the furnace, through the heat," to church or Sunday school, prayer or society meeting, feeling sure that there they would be refreshed and recuperated. Brightest of all, to know that since Independence Stake has been organized we have been permitted to realize that the inspiration that comes from a "sincere and consecrated service" of those who are in charge, has been the Saints' to enjoy and profit by; that they have had the best of instruction, as also the younger ones of the flock, all of whom seem to have shared in the general impulse to heed the word, "Go forward!"

The brethren in their ministry who have lately come among us, have been well appreclated. Bro. C. Ed Miller occupied vesterday morning, to our edification, and in the evening Bro. W. A. Smith regaled us with an excellent sermon on "the kingdom." We also rejoiced to see two precious ones enter the baptismal font, the service being in charge of Bishop May. They were Miss Pearl Carpenter, of this place, and Mrs. Hattie M. Vernon from Australia. She will soon return to her home by way of London, England, and seems to be delighted with the thought that she has found the true way, and will, if permitted, rejoice to be the means of pointing it out to her friends at home. We hope the wise and comforting words of Brn. R. May and I. N. White, who confirmed the sisters, will prove to be to them a great bless-Your sister in the faith, ABBIE A. HORTON.

Editors Herald:—I am thankful for the pleasant and constant visits of the HERALD to us for thirty-four years, since we have been acquainted with the latter-day work which has been a great joy to us many times. Though not being able to live as we should, still we hope to endure with the help of God until we shall be called hence to give an account of our stewardship. When we first heard the gospel in '77 or '78 there were many Saints in Nevada, but now nearly all have passed over to the other side. And when thinking it over, comrades, brothers, and sisters, how we rejoiced together at the beginning of the Reorganization, and what a blessing we enjoyed in our meetings when God confirmed and gave us an assurance by many infallible proofs of the gospel of Jesus Christ restored again. We witnessed the death of many of these, and can testify that their faith and hope was firm and immovable, which gave us great comfort for which we thank God.

The church in Nevada is not gaining rapidly, only one here and one there. On the 9th of June we had our conference at Carson City, and had the assurance of God that he was pleased with our work, which has renewed our courage to battle on in the army of the Lord.

The Saints are much scattered. We go twenty miles north and fifteen or twenty south at times and have pleasant chats with the members to encourage each other in the work of the Lord. Bro. Thomas Daley labored faithfully in Nevada until his health failed him. We shall wait with patience for another missionary to come and shall do what we can ourselves. May our heavenly Father bless his people, is my prayer.

D. R. JONES.

KEWANEE, Ill., July 29.

Editors Herald:-It would seem that some of the Kewanee folks should write once in a while at least, as surely all your friendly readers would be pleased to hear how we with others fare in spiritual character building, as well as increase in numbers. Yet we are fully aware that your pearly space is very limited to accommodate all who are anxious to have a dip in the HERALD'S precious dish. First then as to character: it may be hard to determine truthfully; but we are inclined to think we might pass muster as medium, some, if not all, ever keeping room for amends. One thing is certain, and perhaps praiseworthy; if names are not of late increasing upon our branch records, preparations are constantly being made in our little chapel, not only for our convenience, cheer, and comfort in divine worship, but for others that may in future be induced to enter Christ's fold, and take part with us in the great enterprise, for life and salvation, as well as having our sweet little brick church, if possible not only free again from all indebtedness, but free from tainting spots and blemishes, to offer as a pure gift to our heavenly Master at a very near eventual period-dedication. And Providence continuing to favor, we expect a greeting by Bro. Joseph and others of Christ's servants to help as well as witness in the dedicatory services. This will be made known to all interested, I expect, as we hope and pray for a Christ-imbued gathering.

Speaking of our ever gospel exercises in their marching order, we are glad to say our services are held wisely and continually. No lack whatever upon part of branch ruling officials in the performance of those heaven-taught duties — social, prayer, testimony, sacrament, and preaching meetings. These are conducted seemingly to the blessed Master's glory. But the writer is inclined to believe that our most gracious and merciful Redeemer will not be pleased with us long, unless we make a united effort, not only to herald the angel's message from the sacred stand, but in our streets, thoroughfares, suburbs, avenues, and parks, laying aside all pomp, pride, show, and useless formalities, and with our sweet singers, and able, enterprising young men tell it, yes, tell it over and over again, "The wonderful words of life," that our ten thousand inhabitants may be privileged to hear the Christ-revealed truths for themselves, and that fearless of molestation and nothing appearingly would be amiss, if the grave, flower-headed elders continue to give vent, adding their pure testimony in the spirit? God said, Christ said, angels, and the spirits of just men made perfect chime in the oft-repeated tale, "He that is warned, let him warn his neighbor." The writer acquiesces with the street-preaching sentiments of Bro. J. C. Crabb.

Toucking our Sabbath school, aside from counting the little noses, I think we stand at par with any of the schools in the church. Brn. Alma and Norrises, with others of note and great service, make things move in that line.

And so may the most merciful God by his unerring Spirit continue to rule and order all things for his glory, not only here in Kewanee, but everywhere, is the wish and prayer of all good-hearted men and women.

Yours, aged, and still in the siege,

JOHN D. JONES.

WHITE ROCK, S. Dak., July 29. Editors Herald:-Perhaps some of your readers would like to hear from this part.

Bro. G. W. Thorburn and myself arrived here the 26th, on our way to some of the South Dakota Saints, about sixty miles west of here at a place called Britton. Of late we have been to the Minnesota reunion, at Clitherall, where we had a very enjoyable time meeting with those of like faith. The Spirit of the Master was there to cheer and comfort us all. The meetings were excellent throughout. Twelve were baptized.

From there we went to Bro. John Gibbons' place, about fifty miles northwest, to enjoy the Fourth with him and family. Secured a schoolhouse and held eleven meetings there. and nine in another five miles farther north, near Pelican Lake, with good interest and attention, and request for us to return as soon as convenient. Some expressed themselves as being satisfied with our claims as a church, and will soon obey, we have reason to believe. We were invited to call on both those in and out of the church. One lady, an outsider, after we had spoken on the subject of the laying on of hands, had her baby blessed. A school-teacher there spoke favorably of the same effort. In all we felt the good Lord was there to cheer and comfort us all. The wayward ones seemed encouraged. Bro. Thorburn preached a funeral sermon of a Mr. South, who had died suddenly. The effort was well received, we learn. We believe there can be much good done in Ottertail county if prayerful and humble efforts are made. We hope to return there in the fall or winter, so we take this way of informing the Saints of that county, where we promised to come, and could not. We shall try in the winter, if the Lord wills it so.

We are staying at the present time with Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Prall; he is a brother of Bro. Oscar Prall, of Lamoni. They seem very much interested in this great latter-day work. We had an appointment out for last night, but had to be subject to the weather. A big rain storm raged until after meeting time. We shall try to be contented, notwithstanding the disappointment to us all, and try to make an effort to open the work here some other time.

Bro. Ellis Comstock resides in this vicinity, as well as his daughter-in-law, Sr. James Comstock. They were both pleased to see us. when we informed them we were elders of their church

We are traveling with horse and buggy this summer, in Minnesota and the Dakotas. Have traveled about 650 miles thus far. Our bronco is quite tired at times, and if we had our way we should like more speed. But patience is one of the requirements of the law: so we must learn to practice what we preach. Bro. Thorburn thinks our broken whip is rather detrimental to us as preachers.

We may go to Minneapolis during the busy times among farmers, as the Saints there have a tent which might be used to good advantage this time of the year. Crops in the Dakotas and Minnesota are very good this year, and it will require a great deal of time and labor to gather all. So if we continue to labor among farmers we expect to move along slowly, for a while at least.

Trusting all will be well in the end; and that we may all stand justified before the Yours for the truth, Lord.

ELI HAYER.

NEBRASKA CITY, Neb., Aug. 1. Editors Herald:-We are busy in this part of the Lord's vineyard, regardless of the hot weather. The work of the Lord moves along nicely. Six have been buried beneath the waves of the old Missouri river of late. One was Sr. May Smonk, who lives in close to Hanford, Kings county, California. She will return in a few days. Her mother also belongs to the church. The missionaries of California might remember their address.

Brn. Waldsmith and R. O. Self were at Union last Sunday, breaking the bread of life. Uncle Mark Forscutt has been sick for some time, but is better now. Was able to preach Sunday evening. How glad we all were to see and hear him. He gave us such good advice and counsel; we all were strengthened.

We have a very nice Sunday school, presided over by Bro. E. D. Briggs and Herman Higgins, who try to make all feel

The work in Southern Nebraska district is looking up this conference year, and we hope it may continue to thrive. We look for quite an increase to the church in this district this year; at least we are hopeful. Bro. E. C. Briggs was with us, and preached some very good sermons, and told his experiences in church work and the growth of the church, which gave much joy and comfort in the truth. We were glad he gave us such a visit. Come again, Bro. Briggs.

The Saints at Nebraska City are all well, with one exception, Sr. Perrion, who is very poorly, and this hot weather is very trying. Pray for her that her burdens may be light. In bonds, PERRY, Iowa, August 1.

Editors Herald:-Since General Conference I have labored at the following places: May 11 to 30, in Madison county, in company with Bro. C. J. Peters. We preached at his home schoolhouse; at Hanley, where we secured the Friends' church; at the Union Chapel, five miles west of Hanley; and at a schoolhouse twelve miles west of Winterset. Hanlev and that west of Winterset were new

The 30th found me enroute to Boonesboro. to attend the district conference, which convened June 1. It was very well attended, and passed off very pleasantly, and we believe with profit to all attending. Bro. J. C. Crabb and self continued the meetings: there until the 10th when we went north of Boonesboro to Mineral Ridge, where a Mr. Walters had secured the schoolbouse for Saturday and Monday nights, and the schoolhouse two miles south of there for Sunday night. Sunday at eleven Bro. Crabb occupied at Fraser, a mining town near by, where we were on Monday night. The schoolhouse at Mineral Ridge was denied us, so we occupied until Friday night at the other schoolhouse south.

On June 12 we sought the rippling waters of the Des Moines River, when Mr. Walters became Bro. Walters.

Returned Saturday to Boonesboro, holding meetings over Sunday; thence went to Rhodes, to examine the tent. Found it too large to handle for district work, so concluded to leave the tent at Rhodes until after the reunion. Held a few services at Rhodes. Bro. William Pyle, of Rhodes, secured us the Christian church at Melbourn; also a place for us to board. We held forth there until Saturday night, when we went to Vancleve, where Bro. Earhart had secured the M. E. church. We occupied here until July 3, when other things seemed to occupy the attention of the people, so we closed for want of interest.

I forgot to say that we went south of Rhodes six miles and held over one Sunday with the Clear Creek branch, when the interest was such as to warrant a return, so left word we would be back in two weeks.

From Vancleve Bro. Crabb went to Grinnell and the writer to Rhodes, where we spent the glorious Fourth in the usual way. On the fifth returned to Clear Creek; held over Sunday, interest being very good. Made arrangements to have some one occupy there again in two weeks. Thence went to Des Moines and preached once there in the open air chapel. That had been arranged by taking the seats out of the church and putting them in a yard. Had good attention.

Saturday Bro. M. H. Cook and I went to Runnells, where the writer remained over two Sundays. Weather too hot for week-day services. At Des Moines I received the welcome news that Bro. George Shimel had been appointed to labor in the Des Moines district, so notified him to fill the appointment at Clear Creek.

July 22, returned to Clear Creek. Met Bro. Shimel, who had held services there Saturday night and Sunday. The interest was enough to warrant him in announcing service for the next Saturday night and Sunday, which he did. A large crowd greeted us on Sunday, and at night or evening, after the close of the meeting, what we were looking for took place. Two ladies expressed a desire to be baptized; so at two o'clock Monday afternoon we met on the banks of Clear Creek, when Bro. Shimel led five precious souls into the water,—all heads of families, and representing five families, among the number being Sr. Elliot's husband.

We are now at Perry and will remain over Sunday, when we shall in all probability go to Rhodes to prepare for reunion.

Your brother,

H. A. McCoy.

CARIBOU, Maine, July 30.

Editors Herald:—I am now in the land of potatoes and buckwheat. It is by far the finest and best part of the state of Maine for potato growing. More than five thousand barrels of the tubers were raised here last season. So large a crop is not expected this season, owing to frost in the early part of June, and the very hot weather later. Farmers here have from ten to one hundred acres planted. They have learned it is not safe to depend upon this one article altogether; therefore many of them raise wheat, buckwheat, and oats. Some very fine large fields of the yellow wheat can now be seen growing.

I reached this place three weeks ago, and at once went to work preaching and visiting the Saints, trying to strengthen their faith and have them unified. Am now holding meetings on Sundays in a fine grove in or near Washburn village; and during the week the most of my time is occupied in Woodland and Caribou. At Woodland I have the use of a fine little church, quite a few regularly attending in each place. At Caribou thus far have been obliged to occupy in the house of Bro. Philbrick. There has been thus far but one dissenting voice to what has been said, so far as I can learn. That was by a lady that chooses to live upon the husks of the ten commandments; or rather upon the fourth commandment (which they do not keep) rather than walk by faith, or live by Christ's law of grace and truth, to which that rigid law was added for a season; and served as a schoolmaster until Christ should come, as seen in Galatians 3: 19-25. It was not sufficient of itself to make the comers thereunto perfect. (Hebrews 10: 1.) And as the Apostle Paul said, we have become dead to the law by the body of Christ that we should be married to another, even to him who is raised from the dead, to whom all power was given in heaven and on earth; who, it is said, is the end of the law. He had the undoubted right to reëstablish that better covenant given to Abraham to which the law was added because of transgressions. Hoping to benefit the lady by turning her feet into the right path, which could best be done by changing the mind and heart, I passed her one of Bro. Haws' little books, asking her to carefully peruse it. It is to be hoped she will derive some light therefrom.

There are now living in this section fifteen members, with no one to lead except as one of the elders comes along; yet so far as I can see they with some exceptions are quite united, and are trying to live their religion.

Am comfortably cared for at the home of Bro. and Sr. Philbrick, in Caribou. At East Washburn with Sr. and Mr. Foote; and while in Washburn village I make my stay with the Sisters Murrey. The young man Charles being at home makes it very pleasant, he having a fine talent for singing. Beside, we make frequent visits to others of the Saints living near and far.

In the faith,

S. O. Foss.

TITUSVILLE Pa., July 31.

Editors Herald:-Bro. Baldwin and myself have been sounding the gospel on the streets of this city. For a long time Bro. Childs has been trying to secure a place in which to preach; but being unsuccessful, and determined not to be outdone by those modern Pharisees, got permission to occupy the public square. This being our first attempt at street preaching, at first we felt a little timid; but our adventuresome spirit overruled, and we felt just as bold as at any time in the pulpit. Most the time had large crowds, and all the time had the best of attention. People heard the gospel there who never would have heard in any of the buildings. Our congregations were composed of doctors, lawyers, merchants, preachers, infidels, policemen, Italians, Africans, Jews, Swedes, women, urchins, and street loungers. Amid the rushing of chariots, the clashing of street cars, the yells of the newsboys, the drums and horns of the Salvation Army, we had, at times, to increase our vocal powers to be heard; but being a taxpayer of the county, thought we had as much right to be heard on the street as thev.

I am a new convert to street preaching, and believe by it we can reach many whom we could not otherwise. Most street preachers are put down as cranks or fanatics, but a few sound gospel sermons attended by the Spirit of God will soon change their opinion.

We know we interested some, for they came to where we were stopping to inquire further into the strange things they heard. Among them was a very intelligent young Swede, who wants the good news to be taken to his parents across the briny deep. He gave me their names and addresses, and desires our missionaries to call on them. He says they will be well received. His father is a "hemmansegarn" (you brethren over there will know just what this means,—I don't), and through his influence thinks you can get a place to preach. He says the Utah Mormons have preached in his father's house. Has one aunt a member of that church, through whom he became acquainted with the doctrine he heard us preach. He accepted everything but polygamy. Thus he was almost ready for the truth. He goes by the name of A. P. Fredin. When they enter the army in Sweden they are allowed to assume a different name. He chose the above. This will explain why his name is not Peter-This is his father's address. Herr Peter Nilson, Karshalm, railroad station, Perstarp. Call on him, Brn. Enge and Muceus, and acquaint us with the results. We shall watch it with a degree of interest. It's just possible that through the humble efforts of our preaching on the streets of Titusville some honest soul in far off Sweden may hear and obev.

Bro. Baldwin, as district president, goes on a scavenger errand, and I open up in a new place. We are longing for the day to come when the elders who are sent out to preach the gospel to dying humanity will be freed from such sweet (?) work.

I am domiciled at the pleasant home of Mr. and Sr. Reed, who with her nice family of girls, and good kind husband makes things agreeable for the missionary. I hope to see them join her, ere long, in the good cause, and be received when Christ comes to accept Zion Brn. Smith, Robley, and Etzenhouser are still kindly remembered by the good people here.

We are expecting some more additions to be made on our return next month. How the leaven does work! From the little home of Bro. Parker's, where the brethren first began to sound the gospel tocsin, the echo has gone for twenty miles, and scores have praised the God of Israel. At the present time no less than five churches are open for us to occupy as soon as opportunity permits, in respectable communities where the true gospel has never been preached. Our fame has gone abroad, and they have sent for us that they may learn more about the strange things of which they have heard so much.

On August 18 we begin a grove meeting at the place where I held the debate last March. The interest the people have manifested ever since it has been announced gives us much hope for success.

I spent the entire day Monday, and part of the night, discussing the issues with an inveterate Spiritualist. Surely the time has come when God has sent them strange delusions, that they may believe a lie and be damned who will not seek after the truth.

I truly believe David Smith was divinely inspired when he said the time would come when there would be but two classes, Spiritualists and Latter Day Saints. Some of the brightest minds of the world are wrapped in Spiritualism. The churches are too dead and formal. The world is demanding something more attractive, and the Devil is abundantly meeting the demand. A few miles from here, at Lilly Dale, some of the most wonderful spirit manifestations the world has ever witnessed are going on, inducing thousands to swell their ranks, already numbering twelve millions in this country alone. Eminent scholars go there as bitter opponents, to expose, and return confirmed Spiritualists. They see something beyond the explanation of mortals and accept their necromancy as divine tokens. At this rapid rate how long will it take the Devil to conquer the world? In 1840 it began with the innocent rappings of two sisters in New York. Ten years earlier the Church of Jesus Christ began with six fearless defenders of the ancient faith. At the present we number less than fifty thousand. It it any wonder Christ asked the question, "When I come shall I find faith on earth?"

Again: "For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders, insomuch that, if it were possible they shall deceive the very elect."—Matthew 24: 24.

During the busy haying season, when it is simply a killing of time in these parts to try to do missionary work, I went to work in the hay field at $1.50 a day, and did as much preaching as if otherwise engaged; for it is impossible to get a congregation during the week.

If any of the good Saints should feel disposed to criticise the elder for being at home a month, I wish to say, Rest easy, for I do not take anything from the church while thus engaged at home.

Three more have recently been added to our branch by baptism.

Will Bro. R. M. Maloney, of Oklahoma, please send me his address, as I desire to correspond with him. Address me, at Palmer, Crawford county, Pennsylvania.

Hopefully yours, F. J. EBELING.

Editors Herald:-I presume some would like to know how the Tolerant mission at this place is getting along. I commenced paying rent on June 27; but were not ready to receive company until after July 4. From that time to the 30th have given tracts to and talked with 181 visitors. Quite a number of those who have received tracts have come back three and four times, and talked for hours. A few seem a little interested. I also put into people's dooryards 530 Ensigns, 95 Heralds, and 90 Autumn Leaves. We have held meetings every Sunday with from eight to fourteen in attendance; and had my health permitted I could have done more. But I am thankful that I am able to do a little, and feel so much better not to be eating the bread of idleness. The Lord so willing, and health permitting, I hope to build up the work here again; but it may take some time. I shall soon be out of tracts. Who will send some? I am out of Autumn Leaves and sermons. Any one wishing to send tracts had best consult me as to what kind I need. California Saints, who will be the first to donate "Presidency and Priesthood," by W. H. Kelly; copies of Voice of Warning, and other church literature that I can loan? Send them right along; now is the time.

My health is about as usual. Brethren and sisters, remember this mission with your books, tracts, papers, and means, first; then pray earnestly for me and for the work here; for the effectual, fervent prayer of the right-eous man availeth much, provided he has done all he can himself. Then his prayers are a mighty power for good.

Editors Herald:—As I write this morning the rain for which we have so long prayed is falling. The corn is badly damaged, and it will be very hard for poor people to live; but if they live according to God's word they will be rich in the next world. For, "Blessed are the poor" (D. C. 56:6); "Woe unto you rich men" (D. C. 56:5). We find that for many years the crops have been decreasing. That fulfills prophecy. We ought to live as we sing, "Nearer, my God, to Thee," and to do that we must study his word and lay up for ourselves treasures in heaven. O how I do wish that I could do something more than I do to spread the truth.

I thank the Father that I can hear some better than I could some time ago. When I am afraid I will fall I call on the Lord and it seems that he puts forth his hand to help me as he did Peter. Sometimes trials nearly overthrow me, then I cast all my care on Jesus and do not forget to pray. We are told to seek the kingdom of God and establish his righteousness and all things will be added. How many believe that it ought to be as it was when King Benjamin asked how many served God, and it was all but the little children? Think how that people was blessed and was later destroyed for wickedness. The Lord said if the light becomes darkness, how great is the darkness. If we want to be gathered to Zion we must keep the law and let our light shine so others seeing our good works may glorify the Father in heaven. They sing, "Send the sound the world around." How much have we given to send it around if we have slumbered and slept? Let us wake up now and trim our lamps and fill them with oil so they may burn brightly enough to guide our way. May God bless all

Dear Saints:—It was eight years ago last May since I embraced this glorious gospel. I have never regretted the step taken, and can say that I know this to be the true gospel of Christ.

Dear Saints, I am afficted with consumption. I have received relief through prayer and administration, but am again failing, and I ask the united prayers of the Saints that if it is God's will I may be restored to health, and may live to raise the three little children intrusted to my care. It is my greatest desire to do God's will; and I know that he does hear and answer prayer. I love to read the Home Column, and have received much instruction. I have been so auxious to bring up my children aright, that as they grow older they may not go astray; but since I have been so afflicted, at times I get discouraged and down-hearted, but put my trust in God and pray that I may be privileged to raise my precious little ones. My heart almost breaks when I study and worry about them; for, dear sisters, I am alone, as my husband does not belong to the church. Once more I ask to be remembered in your prayers.

Your sister.

Editors Herald:—July 30 Elder Sawley and I closed a very interesting meeting four miles from McFall, Missouri. We put the tent up there July 9, and held just three weeks to a day. Good crowds from the first, sometimes reaching near to three or four hundred. We came here yesterday and have secured the public park, and shall put up the gospel tent this evening. Brn. Peter Anderson and James Schofield will assist us some. We may continue two weeks. We feel well in the work.

DOUBT.

AN ALLEGORY

A Satyr lurked by the "Wicket gate"

Through which all had to pass who were trying

To reach the goal of "Eternal Bliss;" And him there was no denying.

He came by stealth and whispered his tale Right into the hearts of all comers: *"'Tis no use to go on, you are certain to fail:

I'd cease to be one of the runners."

"The way is rough and stony and hard; There are many thorns and briars, And holes, and bogs, and sloughs, and traps, And a number of deep quagmires.

"Your flesh will be torn, you will stumble and fall,

You are sure to grow sad and weary; Your cup of sweetness be turned into gall, And all will become dark and dreary.

"And what is there then, should you struggle quite through?

Naught but a dark stagnant river; The 'River of Death,' with its fathomless depth,

Where you must lie dormant forever.

"For the story that's told of the streets of pure gold,—

Of a beautiful, heavenly city,
Is a myth and a phanthom for naught such exist,

Ah! poor deceived ones, how I pity."

I saw with sadness that many gave heed
And ceased "revealed truth" to rely on;
Lost faith and lost hope in the promises sure,
And thus missed their portion in Zion.

But some there were who bravely toiled on, In spite of "Demonic persuasion,"
And reached the "Courts of Celestial joy,"
Bore the cross, won the crown of salvation.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

Pray when and where you will, but pray as a habit. The heavenly eye must be kept trained and adjusted to heavenly visions if it would gain anything from them.—Bishop Lawrence.

Dear Readers of the Home Column:-I have not been able to write so much for our periodicals during the last year as formerly; circumstances would not possibly admit it. but O how gladly I would if I could! The last article was "A Boy's Plea," written for the Hope. I was pleased to see it again. For more than twenty years I have made it a practice to write, when sight and circumstances would possibly admit, and send my feeble efforts to "Frances," our beloved sister and able worker. I have always felt to submit my work wholly to her judgment, knowing that she fully understands her business, and firmly believing that her thoughts are guided by Him who holds the vast universe in his hand, and folds all of his submissive children in his love. Some of my articles have been gone three years, others longer, before they were ushered into the literary world. No doubt they appeared in the right time, as the works of those who have wished to work for good have done in all ages of the world, not infrequently for six months or so I could not write, and when I could I tried to get all done in my power, then my work could be going on.

Last winter I had some thoughts of going out to the Saints' Home in the spring, but a severe attack of "grip" gripped my hopes and scattered them to the winds of misfortune—with many others. I would be pleased to have a letter from some of the inmates of that beautiful home. 'Tis sweet to know that the church has provided such a place for the unfortunate ones, and best of all are the church privileges. O how gladly would I embrace such a privilege! Food, shelter, and care are all very desirable in our old age, but best of all is sweet communion with Saints.

I have suffered much since the first of February, both in mind and body. Was administered to by Bro. J. Billings, Little Deer Isle, in May, and seemed to gain for a few weeks. The la grippe wore off, then an old trouble, dyspepsia, set me back. It seems as if Satan takes us on the right hand and on the left, and not us only, but many others. "My grace is sufficient for thee," was spoken to Paul, and sometimes to us, yet sometimes during our illness everything in life seemed to be a chaos, a confused mass, and our spiritual progress was no more rapid and successful than a man's race in a crocus-bag. It has been said that we shall be a tried people, and truly the Saints of God are being tried in all manner of ways, and especially those who wish to live godly lives in Christ Jesus. Dear brothers and sisters, how I wish for your society, but circumstances render it impossible. When Bro. J. Billings called on us, his every word seemed sweeter than a honeycomb. He is truly a servant of the living God, and is carrying precious food to every hungry soul he meets. He, too, has had his trials, but has grown more polished by his firm reliance on the Father's love.

If we could tell one another our individual experiences in the buffetings of Satan, it would be a waste of time and a reviving of our trials, which tends to shut out good, pure, heavenly thoughts.

Last fall when terribly hemmed in by perplexing circumstances, I opened an Ensign that Sr. Pearce, of Little Compton, sent me, and the following stanza met my eye and strengthened my heart:

> "Be firm and fixed in me your Lord; I'll bless you.if you keep my word. Trials shall all your dross remove, Temptations shall love to me prove."

What a world of meaning was opened to my soul! It must have been inspired. God bless the writer. I memorized it, and it does me good every time I repeat it. I have not been so firm as I ought to have been in the love and the promises of the Lord, so have come short of the fullest blessing. Dear Saints, pray that I may be, and that I may have grace and patience to bear all things that may come into my experience. The gospel and the books were never more plain or more precious to me than of late, only when the dark days come to me. I do want to dwell with the redeemed on the purified earth! O how it gladdens my heart to see a Saint! If one comes this way, do call. It has gladdened me to receive letters from some of the dear sisters; hope to receive more. May we all meet where pain, sorrow, and parting can never come.

WOMAN'S TRUST.

"Good wife, what are you singing for? You know we've lost the hay,

And what we'll do with horse and kye is more than I can say;

While like as not, with storm and rain, we'll lose both corn and wheat."

She looked up with a pleasant face, and answered low and sweet:

"There is a Heart, there is a Hand, we feel, we cannot see;

We've always been provided for, and we shall always be!"

He turned around with sullen gloom. She said: "Love, be at rest;

You cut the grass, worked soon and late, you did your very best.

That was your work; you've naught to do with wind and rain,

And do not doubt but you will reap rich fields of golden grain;

For there's a Heart, and there's a Hand, we feel, we cannot see!

We've always been provided for, and we shall always be!"

"That's like a woman's reasoning—we must because we must."

She softly said: "I reason not; I only work and trust:

The harvest may redeem the hay; keep heart whate'er betide;

When one door's shut I've always found another open wide,

There is a Heart, there is a Hand, we feel, but cannot see:

We've always been provided for, and we shall always be!"

He kissed the calm and trustful face; gone was his restless pain:

She heard him, with a cheerful step, go whistling down the lane,

And went about her household tasks, full of glad content,

Singing to time her busy hands as to and fro she went:

"There is a Heart, there is a Hand, we feel, but cannot see;

We've always been provided for, and we shall always be!"

Days come and go—'twas Christmas-tide, and the great fire burned clear.

The farmer said: "Dear wife, it's been a good and happy year;

The fruit was gain; the surplus corn has bought the hay, you know."

She lifted then a smiling face and said: "I told you so:

For there's a Heart, and there's a Hand, we feel, but cannot see:

We've always been provided for, and we shall always be!" -Pioneer.

SPECIAL REQUESTS FOR PRAYER.

A sister who is greatly distressed by circumstances calculated to destroy both her happiness and usefulness, earnestly asks your faith and prayers that she may receive such strength, relief, and help as is needful for her.

HAMILTON, Scotland, July 16.

Sister Frances:—I have a sister who is joined to the Roman Catholic faith, and is also a sister in one of their schools. She is now visiting England, and I am leaving to see her. So I write to ask the faith and prayers of the Prayer Union, on her behalf, that she may be led to see the truth and liberty of the gospel.

WORD FROM THE SOUTH SEA ISLANDS.

As we pass from island to island we find but few children in the Sunday schools. In some there are none, in others a very few, perhaps one or two, or three. We desired to know the reason for this lack of attendance of the children, and were informed that few of them could read, and that the questions and answers arranged for the adults were too deep for them. They could not understand them, and as a result were not interested in them. We thought of the plan of having the teacher commit the lesson so well that she could recast the questions in language that the children could understand and use their own words and simple thoughts in teaching the lesson. We tried the plan for a month; and by the time we left, the teacher was able to do likewise. The girl that lives with us understands the plan and instructs the primary teachers. About the next work of the mission will be to prepare questions and answers for the children to add to the question books. I hope it may be done at the next conference.

To encourage the children to come we have offered them a reward, and have been telling them of the Christmas tree plan. They are pleased with the thought and desire to have one in each school. We hope to thus draw the children into the school and from the streets. We think this will be the first time the tree has been planted in the islands, although Bro. William Newton had a Christmas arch while he was here on the island of Manihi.

Wishing not to be behind America, they desire to have a tree and the exercises by the children on Christmas eve, and the older ones to have their "oaoa" on Christmas day, as is their usual custom. We cannot, of course, have an evergreen tree, Santa Claus, or popcorn, for none of them grow in this warm climate, especially the Santa Claus. But we have plenty trees, and we shall choose a nice one and decorate it with candles, flowers, and red berries, gifts from the school for the children, and gifts for the officers and teachers from the contents of our own purses, for it is more blessed to give than to receive. Each school has agreed to take up a collection each Sunday from the first of October to defray the expenses of the entertainment, gifts, etc. We expect to oversee the one at Arutua, as a number of the branches are gathered there diving for shells. We have prepared a short program consisting of dislogues on the birth of Christ, songs, and one tableau, "Christ and the Shepherds." Have also prepared programs with instructions for each school that is not on this island.

We were asked by the schools who should bring Christmas offerings saying that at first all gave but they had been told that it was for the children only. We corrected this impression, and they seemed very well pleased, saying they all desired to give. They will bring their offerings and present them at the entertainment with appropriate exercises. We showed them the Hope, wherein the names of old and young who gave were printed, and they seemed delighted with the thought that it was open to all. We expect there will be an increase in the offerings for this year from the Islands. We do not know what the success of the entertainment will be, but we are hopeful. If we fail once we will try again, profiting by our mistakes. We have good young talent here, which only needs developing.

We are also preparing exercises for the "Mahana oaoa," writing dialogues on the gospel for a class of older ones in each school, also for the children. We are teaching them songs, drills, etc. We shall write it up for the "department," so you may read and see that those whom some think are capable of doing but very little are able to do about as well as their white brethren in America.

We find that a great many who take part in the "oaoa" are not members of the schools. To make this the work of the school we have adopted the rule to allow no one to take part whose name is not on the roll of the Sunday school. And they must attend at least twelve of the sessions of the last six months before convention to entitle them to a voice and vote in the convention. This shuts out many who never take any interest in the work except at convention time.

Many are joining the schools who were not members before, because they wish to be in the "oaoa," for that is their great day of rejoing.

We have been considering the advisability of presenting a resolution at our next conference to the effect that we ask for admission into the General Association in America. They desire to enter, but say they would like support and encouragement from there. They desire letters to be written them from the officers of the General Association, which could be interpreted and read to them at their conferences and conventions. They wish to not be behind, but as far ahead as talent and circumstances will admit.

[It is not necessary to "apply" to the General Association for admittance. All that is necessary to be done is to adopt the Constitution and By-Laws as provided by the General Sunday School Association and report said action, together with the names of the district officers to the secretary of the General Association. See Constitution and By-Laws, Article VIII., Section 1.—ED]

We are preparing a tabulated report of the schools, members, sessions, etc., to send to HERALD with the report of our convention.

We have made some changes in the methods of work in the Sabbath school here, because we thought that the welfare of the school demanded it. It is one thing to start a school and get members; but it is only a part of the work. They must be put into ways of progress. They must get something from their work that will benefit them, that they will retain. And to accomplish these ends we have made the changes we have.

We would like to write you of the good and noble work of Sr. Ella Devore in the islands here; but our pen is not able to even touch its vastness and magnitude. human hand can do that, for God only knows it all. We do not believe that Sr. Ella herself can nearly realize the good that was done by her faithful and tireless efforts. seeds dropped here and there are now bringing their fruits. We can see them every day. How she must have toiled to do what she has done! How well she laid the foundation for others to build upon later! How her heart must have ached when it seemed to her that her work was not a success! No one unacquainted with the place and the people can realize what it means to start a work here. We who have come after Bro. and Sr. Devore cannot fully realize what it took to open the way, to lay the foundation for "Uncle Mark," the carpenter of Sunday school building, to build upon. He had a social foundation to build upon, and he builded well and strong. What a beautiful structure to stand there as long as the gospel remains in the islands! But He who guided them in their work there knoweth all these things, and his it is to reward them for all that they have endured and done.

We often think of the remark of Sr. Alice Case: "If I should tell of the one fourth of the writing I have done, my people would not believe me." Though we do not, like she, have the lessons to write, yet we are busy writing every day. People of America do not understand the work of this mission. There are dialogues on the gospel to think up, songs to select and teach, drills to arrange, etc. And all must be different, for no school will use any matter that any other school has ever used, though it be years ago. They must be written for hundreds, must contain directions in detail,-yes, we must be both work and brains for the whole. This too, in a strange land, with strange people, and in a strange tongue. It taxes our nerves and strength to the uttermost. We are in a very hot climate, lack nourishing food, are often exposed to the sea and storm in passing from island to island in small boats, and are subjected to the awful sea sickness while therein. One soon fails in health and ambition; but we must all work, for we are workers in a common cause, working in the sun and rain of this world for the glories of the next.

We should like to present you with the account of a month's work here, but space will not permit.

We hope while here to keep up the building, repair it or add to it as may be possible. Wishing for the success and advancement of the work, we remain,

A colaborer in the cause,

MRS J. W. PETERSON.

BISHOPS' NOTICES.

To the Saints in the District of Northern California, Greeting:—I present this to you that you may know the needs of the church. Inasmuch as there are quite a number to be sent to the islands of the sea on the Master's work, it will require quite a sum of money to take them there. I make this appeal to you to aid me in the discharge of my duty and to ask you if any expect to pay tithing or make offerings in the near future, to do it now.

Also to ask you to pay your share of the Graceland debt. You may be surprised when I say "your share," but I think you will see that it is correct if you consider the matter. Some say, "Let those who contracted the debt pay it." Well, you had your part in it as a part of the church of God. When you as a part of the church of God. When you entered the church by the door, you became a part of it and assumed your part of the responsibility, just as much as to share the benefits that are to come to all who abide the conditions upon which benefits are to come. All of us would feel badly if we thought we would fail in obtaining the blessed conditions of the redeemed. The members are a part of the body,—of course they are, not the head,—nevertheless, must abide the decisions of the head. As an integral part, each must aid in the work according to its ability to continue a faithful steward in the house of "If we suffer, we shall also reign with him; if we deny him [by becoming unfaithful to our trust], he also will deny us." we enter the church, we are merged into its interests.

If those in charge should err in any way we are not responsible for that, but we must keep from error too. "If a man therefore purge himself from these, he shall be a vessel unto honor, sanctified and meet for the Master's use." ter's use." Let us perform our duty well and cheerfully. The Lord has spoken, "The college debt should be paid."

Yours in hope of eternal life, CHAS. A PARKIN. Bishop for Northern California.
3010 Sixteenth St., San Francisco.

APPOINTMENT OF LOCAL HISTORIANS.

Since our last published notice we have issued letters of appointment to the following persons, subject to the ratification of the conferences:

O. J. Tary, Wheeling, West Virginia; for Pittsburg district. Peter Muceus, V. Porsgrund, Norway; for Norway, Sweden, and Denmark.

George A. Smith, Fremont, Indiana; for Southern Michigan and Northern Indiana district.

All local historians will please take notice that it has been decided that reports made to us by them touching branches and districts need not include any other officers than presidents and secretaries. This change is made to lessen the labor of our local assistants, and for the sake of necessary brevity;

as it has been found since entering upon the work that there is much difficulty encountered in finding the necessary particulars to enable the local historians to report other officers; and that were they more easily found and included in the reports they would be too voluminous for the practical purposes for which they are intended.

We wish to request all who write for the church publications to be much more particular about giving dates of important events; as without them it is impossible to make an intelligent record. It would facilitate mat-ters a great deal if those making such re-ports to the church publications would also report to the local historians in their fields, or directly to us if such local historians are not yet appointed. HEMAN C. SMITH,

Church Historian.

REUNION NOTICES.

SOUTHERN WISCONSIN.

Five miles north of the city of Janesville, Wisconsin, on the farm of Bro. O. N. Dutton, the Latter Day Saints will hold a reunion, beginning September 21, lasting until the 30th. District conference the 28th and 29th. We hope the Saints will make an effort to attend, and come prepared to care for your-selves, and not be a burden to others. Tents can be rented cheap. All wanting tents, and all coming on the cars must drop a card to J. O. Dutton, Milton Junction, Wisconsin, R. F. D. No. 1, and you will be met with a team at Janesville. All the missionaries of Wisconsin are invited to attend, and all others who can.

W. A. McDowell, Dist. Pres.

Tents for the annual western Iowa reunion, which convenes at Dow City, Iowa, September 20, 1901, can be had at the following prices: 10 x 12, $1 60; 12 x 14, $1 85, and 14 x 16, $2 10, delivered on the ground. Twentyfive cents extra will be charged for setting Send all orders early to A. H. Rudd, Dow City, Iowa.

Important to those attending reunion of Northern California, which convenes at Oakland, August 30, and lasts ten days. The Southern Pacific railroad company has discontinued printing rebate certificates for distribution to attendants of conventions. Instead, the attendant must make application to agent at time and place of buying ticket, for rebate return certificate. If fifty are used, one-third will be accepted as fare on return trip. C. A. PARKIN.

NOTICES.

In reading over the report of this mission, I find that the report of money on hand does not give the balance as stated, which is correct by adding the following, which I forgot to put in the report: Sisters' money, $88 90 received; freewill offering received, Christmas offering, $77.10 received; paid out, Christmas offering, $11.10 received; paid out, $36; on hand, $41.10. These added to the report in Herald of money on hand will give the correct balance, $1,212 60. I am sorry the oversight occurred.

MRS J. W. PETERSON, Sec. Papelle, Tahiti, July 17.

CONFERENCE NOTICES.

Pottawattamie will convene at Hazel Dell, at ten a. m., Saturday, August 31. It is requested that all reports, and other business, be sent to the address of the secretary on or before August 26. If any of the priesthood fail to receive blank reports, and will notify the secretary at once, they will be supplied. J. Chas. Jensen, secretary, 102 Broadway, Council Bluffs.

Eastern Maine will convene at Jonesboro, August 31 and September I. Come all, and let us have a season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. J. N. AMES, Pres.

REUNION POSTPONED.

Notice is hereby given that the reunion of St. Louis district has been postponed for this year on account of the extreme heat and drought, with other good and sufficient reasons. It has been deemed best for the work to dispense with the reunion for this year.

In bonds,

THE METRIC SYSTEM AND INTERNATIONAL COMMERCE.

In the report made by a committee of the British House of Commons upon the advisability of adopting the metric system, extracts are given from letters received from eighteen different and important consulates. Every writer stated that in his opinion the adoption of the metric system by Great Britain would greatly promote her commerce with those greatly promote her commerce with those countries, and that the fact of her not having that system was exercising a repressing effect on her commercial intercourse with them. There can be no possible doubt of these facts, and the United States, in its commerce, is today suffering from the same cause. We are out of touch commercially with all the nations of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the world except Russians of the w with all the nations of the world except Russia, with which our commerce is small, and England, with which our trade is not growing. The articles we sell England are mainly grain, sold by the bushel, which differs from the English bushel; petroleum, sold by the gallon, which differs from the English gallon; and cotton, sold by the pound, which fortunately corresponds with the English

At the present time we are seeking to enlarge our trade with nations that use the metric system, or in countries where our strongest competitors are nations using that system. The disadvantages in both cases are identical so far as concerns the use of a system of weights and measures differing from that employed by our customers or by our competitors. The American price-lists are unfamiliar, and the amiability of the prospective buyer must be drawn upon before attention can be paid to our goods. Then, too, there is no easy standard of comparison with the products offered by foreign competitors. The difference of monetary systems alone is a source of sufficient trouble. When it is increased by the unlikeness of the units of weight and measure, the problem of making a double conversion possesses difficulties for the would-be buyer equalled only by our youthful perplexities in dealing with the "double rule of three." Owing to the likelihood of making errors as well as the trouble of making such conversions, our price-lists and quotations make but little headway in the introduction of our manufactures into foreign lands.

The adoption of the metric system by this The adoption of the metric system by oncountry would undoubtedly aid us in trading with nations that already use it. And if it would aid us in selling, it would also help us to buy, by placing larger means at our disposal. Then our increased prosperity would be accompanied by greater presperity for the be accompanied by greater prosperity for the other members in the family of nations, and the circle of exchange would be enlarged.— By Prof. J. Howard Gore, in the August Forum

A NEW USE OF COLOR.

We are timid novices in the use of color for exterior effects. We have had white houses and houses in colonial yellow; we have had brown houses, and we have had green blinds all these years of our lives. We have had inharmonious novelties of many kinds. But few men have considered the effects that may be produced by exterior colors when studied with reference to the surroundingsthe natural scenery and adjacent buildings. Who paints his house with reference to the color of his neighbor's house or to its natural surroundings? — Walter H. Page, in the World's Work.

MID-AUGUST.

August, Sweetheart of the Sun, Summer work is nearly done. While the idle days are going List thy ardent lover's wooing.

Now the year is in its prime Take thy brief vacation time. Stubbly fields are brown and yellow, Pippins ripe are growing mellow.

Ranks on ranks of shining corn, Jeweled by the dew of morn, Whisper in the evening airs Like a legion saying prayers.

Farmer-boys on loaded wains, Harvest moons on gathered grains; Tender hearts a bit forlorner, Summer's turned another corner!

E. C. Tompkins, in Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for August.

RELIGION IN INDIA.

The Catholic World Magazine for August has a beautifully illustrated article descriptive of some of the religious temples in India. The little revelation this article gives us makes us comprehend what a wealth of endeavor and an amount of riches have been expended on religion in a country that is still pagan. There are hundreds of temples whose magnificence and wealth of adornment simply astound the eyes of one from the Occident.

THE AMERICAN YOUTH'S LOVE OF ACTION.

To the American youth the greatest attraction is a life of action and to him the comparatively stagnant life which, in these modern times, the army officer or the university professor must live is not especially attractive. The very essence of the American is his love of action and his dissatisfaction in a life of stagnation. A life of action may take a score of different directions to the young man in our republic who has high ambitions and high intelligence; it is the demands of commerce and industry which offer the greatest attractiveness. These promise to give the greatest power and honor, and these lines of industry have in the recent years been drawing toward themselves more and more the whole energies of the best minds, the most ambitious natures of the youth of the American republic. As a result, the bright American youths are drawn to the lines of intense activity involved in the general term Industrial. It is these active men engaged in affairs that advance the world and make a rising generation. Do we not see here a great reason for the rapid growth of our country?—The National Magazine for July.

The Chicago Record-Herald makes it a special point to carer to the interests of the younger members of the family, printing every week in its Saturday issue a page entitled "Talks with our Boys and Girls"—a page that is always bright with the sort of entertaining illustrated stories that boys and girls enjoy, curious facts and fancies that appeal to the imagination of young people, condensed items from the world's important news, etc., and also the "Open Window Club" department, which has been instrumental in the organizations of thousands of club "chapters" for mutual improvement and entertainment. Every issue of the Sunday edition contains also a young people's page full of all that is brightest and most attractive to the boys and girls.

THE EDITOR ABROAD.

Upon an urgent request made by the officers of the California districts, north and south, the Editor left his desk on July 9 for the "Land of Sunshine and Flowers," via Independence, Missouri.

At the above named place the Editor was joined by Bro. Joseph Luff, of the Twelve, and on the 12th the two took train for the far west. The weather was extremely hot. The drought was in the land, but men The came and went, as if the seed time must be followed by the harvest in spite of the unpitying burning of the sun's rays, the absence of rain, or the shriveling up of the planted and growing crops.

The Sante Fe route of railway lies through the arid regions of the Republic, and a part of the way gave rise to unpleasant thoughts upon the necessities of men, their helplessness, their dependence upon resources the control of which lie beyond them and out of their reach.

The ride for the first twenty-four hours was dry, dusty, and wearying. The second twenty-four were much pleasanter, and the next bearable, but tiring. A three hours' delay at Williams station, on Sunday, the 14th, lengthened the stay on board, so that our destination, Los Angeles, was reached at 11:30 on the morning of the 15th, instead of 8:30, thus covering a ride of three full days from Kansas City, Missouri, to the City of the Angels, the picturesque name of

By dint of inquiry and the kindly offices of a billboard we reached the then residence of Bro. T. W. Williams, whence we followed Bro. An excellent dinner gotten up by Sr. Schade was very welcome to men who for three days had foraged from the lunch baskets provided by Srs. Luff and McCallum; the water urn of the railroad company furnishing the equivalent of drink qualified by the juice of the lemon secured by the thoughtfulness of Bro. Luff, an adept at getting the best out of a situation. But there's a limit to appetite, so in this case. It took but a little while and the heat and the dust, the rush of the engine, the swing of the car, and the weariness were merged in the welcome of Saints and the sight of new things accessory to human habitations in a region of almost perpetual summer.

A visit to the bedside of Sr. Howland, at the home of her son Joseph where the rite of administration to the sick claimed our attention, and was performed; and a run down to the sea coast to witness a phenomenon of the ocean, the display of phosphorescent fire by which the waves were lighted and rolled to the shore a never ending procession of fiery cohorts making the shore a scenic display of beauty beyond any fireworks ever made by man on the land. It was beyond description after the sun went down and the darkness deepened. One long continued sweep of fire-tipped waves ending in fiery foam on the wet sands upon which even the footsteps were illumined as one walked on them. It was hard to quit the shore; but, after walking the distance of the long wharf or quay reaching out over the water, the posts of which seemed to be planted in settings of liquid fire, under the motion of the waters caused by the breeze blowing in from the far out deep sea, the little party composed of Brn. T. W. Williams, Schade, Luff, C. E. Howland, the Editor, and Sisters Schade, McMullen, and Philips separated, Bro. Luff and the Editor to stay the night guests of Bro. Howland who occupied a "cottage by the sea," the rest to return to the city, some eighteen miles inland from Santa Monica the particular spot aptly advertised as the "finest watering place in the world."

The phosphorescent condition of the water is attributed to quantities of minute animal organisms which have been driven into the shore waters with immense drifts of sea weed, loosed from its anchorage to seaward by a late earthquake shock.

were agitated by motion gave out the light. This lasted but a few days, and then these tiny firemakers died and their remains together with the decaying of the seaweed thrown ashore made the seaside dwellings unpleasant places to stay because of the stench arising therefrom. What was at first a "thing of beauty" became a reminder of "change and decay." On Tuesday, the 14th, Bro. Luff and the Editor, intent on recuperating before engaging in the labors of the reunion to begin the 19th, sought the ever hospitable home of Bro. and Sr. Nelson VanFleet, at Downey, some thirteen miles down the coast from Los Angeles. We were fortunate enough to find Sr. Cora Garner. a daughter of Bro. VanFleet, at the station, and so secured a ride over the dusty mile from the village to the home, the coming of Sr. Garner being anticipated.

What a significance there is in the word home. And what a wide difference in homes, and the qualities of those who occupy them to make the sojourner for the day or night feel at. home. Those who enter the home circle of the VanFleet residence are welcome. The atmosphere is homelike, compelling the home feeling to rest a benison of peace upon the visitor. So at least we found it, when tired, dusty, and worn with travel we were met by these old-time Saints.

A stay of two days on the farm of Bro. VanFleet, where we ate oranges and figs direct from the trees, breathed the summer air in the shade of the pepper, the eucalyptus, the palm, the magnolia, the fig, the orange, the lemon, the apple, and the plum trees, and noted the ways of culture so divergent from our Iowa and Missouri homes, gave rest and toned up the body and spirit making ready for after labors.

The farm is of forty acres in area, and was once watered by a flowing well, now by the same well enforced by a gasoline engine. Bro. VanFleet has a herd of twenty nine cows of the Jersey stock. These are fed the year round, the nature of the soil forbidding pasturing. But the alfalfa clover, a wonderfully productive plant, giving from three to seven crops per year of excellent fodder, makes feeding practicable. A cooperative creamery plant gives a market These organisms when the waters for milk, and gives an equivalent to the raising of corn and wheat and oats of the east. Necessary horses are kept for the work. And a hutch of Belgian hares, and a yard of chickens supply delicacies when needed. Potatoes are not grown but bought, the product of other more suitable for the city at noon.

On Thursday, Bro. and Sr. Van-Fleet sent their camping outfit to the grounds selected by wagon, under convey of their son Nelson, and daughter Roberta, the youngest of the flock; and they with us took train

Bro. Luff and the Editor by appointment went to the home of Sr. Slotterbeck, for supper, and thence to Sycamore Grove, located in one of the mountain glens east of the city, where we arrived after nine o'clock at night, expecting to find the grounds in possession of the reunion committee; but how fleeting and disappointing the plans of men—but, the rest in our next.

SAN BARNARDINO, Cal., August 1, 1901.

In camp at Sycamore Grove, near

Los Angeles, California.

When Bro. Luff and the Editor reached the grove where the reunion was to be held, on the evening of July 18, in company of Bro. Schade, who convoyed us to camp, we expected to find the committee, Brn. Williams, Penfold, and Van-Fleet in full charge and occupation. We had made an arrangement with Bro. VanFleet and wife to provide a room for us in the cottage, a large, roomy frame near the pavilion. It was dark when we reached the grounds; the pavilion and vicinity were lighted up by a number of large coal oil lamps, and a crowd of negroes were holding a picnic, with its concommitants, something to eat, beer, lemonade, fruits, cake, etc., and jolly good fellowship prevailed. Some two hundred or more of God's images done in the various shades of black prevalent on the coast had held high carnival since early morn, and were at the hour we reached the place in full possession, and enjoying the passing time as it pleased them. In the pavilion, a music stand where a piano stood, the musicians with violin and guitar played the inspiring strains of the quadrille and the waltz while the dusky beauties and their gallants whirled in the dance, keeping time with their feet. It was a strange welcome to the men who came to preach "Jesus and him crucified."

Bro. Schade succeeded at length in finding and rousing Bro. VanFleet's folks, and we went to our room, but the glare of the lights, the strains of music, the rush of the dancers' feet, rustle of their clothing and the hum of conversation accented now and then by titters and guffaws of laughter did not induce sleep; and it was not till the park was deserted by the merry-makers and the lights turned out that we slumbered.

Queer thoughts pursued each other through our restless minds, one of them being like this: Here were two men, leading minds in a restoration of the gospel economy, who had traversed two thousand miles of mountain, plain, and desert land, by invitation of a committee of associate laborers to witness the revelry of a "Coon Dance," by an assemblage of "Coons" collected from the confines of the pleasure-loving, pleasure-seeking, modern Babel, the City of the Angels. Would it be worth while to stay for developments? Or would it be justifiable for these two men from the east to give way to the calls of dignity, offended by the incongruity of conditions, and pass on to other places seeking other more appropriate surroundings? It was a question for the morrow. we slept.

When the morrow came it was, like all its predecessors had been, the today of action. The colored man's committee took away the lamps, piano, and other accessories to the yesterday's revelry; and the white man's committee took up its work-"the white man's burden." things of the day and night of yesterday were a dream of the past, "like a watch in the night when it is past."

It took all day of the 19th, the day for convening, to locate the camp and get the grounds cleaned and in order; and it was not until late afternoon that the call to come to order was made, and an organization effected. Brn. Joseph Luff, Albert Carmichael, and T. W. Williams were put in charge to preside, and the Southern California Reunion was on and in full swing. President Joseph Smith was on the bills as the principal speaker, and he began the role by occupying the first evening.

The band of ministers was a strong By fortuituous circumstances Bro. A. H. Smith and his scribe, Leon Gould; Joseph Luff, in charge of mission; Joseph F. Burton; Albert Carmichael, president of district; T. W. Williams, of the Los Angeles mission; R. R. Dana, C. W. Earl, Elbert A. Smith, in the field; Nelson VanFleet, of Downey; A. E. Jones, of San Bernardino; and a goodly sprinkling of brethren and sisters from "all the country round about," formed a phalanx worthy of note.

One circumstance added to the prestige of the occasion: Brn. A. H. Smith and Leon Gould, Bro. Joseph Burton and wife, were en route for the islands of the sea. Their presence was grateful to the Saints because of their own merit, but the fact that they were on their way to the far off islands gave piquant zest to the enjoyment of their company.

The round of meetings beginning at 9:00 o'clock in the morning with prayer and testimony; preaching at 10:30, and at night; afterwards changed to an all-the-forenoon Saints meeting, and preaching at 2:30 and 7:45 p. m., and the usual all day Sunday services for the two Lord's days, occupied the time fully, and we think to good results.

The grove is a pleasant spot of ground lying in a nook between the Salt Lake and Los Angeles road on the one side and the Santa Fe railway and the electric road and the common highway between Los Angeles and Pasadena on the other. The site is a pleasant one, and was once fitted out as a sort of beer garden resort, which has fallen into disuse and consequent decay because the city will not grant further license to sell liquors for reasons unknown to us, but easily guessed at. It is now in litigation with little prospect of early settlement. It is now at the disposal of any company or association that may choose to occupy. Sunday school, and school and class picnics, religious associations, public parties, dancing parties, the "Mormons," as the papers call them, the Spiritualists, or anybody else, who may wish to occupy may for a consideration hire the grounds and possess them for a specified time. The Reorganized Church occupied from July 19 to 29, inclusive. These will be followed by the Spiritualists from August 11 to September 11. They were preceded by the colored company before referred to; which was evidently gathered from the better portion of the colored people, who, to give them the credit due, were orderly and decently behaved, aside from the hilarity of the dance and its surroundings. We saw no drunkenness nor disorderly conduct, heard no profanity or We have boisterous conversation. seen worse conduct in a gathering of white men of equal number and on similar occasions.

We left the grounds on the 29th, satisfied with the efforts made, trusting in God for success.

CONSIDERATION POSTPONED.

Somebody once wrote that one part of true knowledge consisted in remaining ignorant of such things as were not worth knowing; and perhaps all of us have found that the struggle to unlearn or forget unworthy things is at least as hard as that in which we engage to acquire good.

In the days of our early and comparatively careless life, much time is frequently spent in the indulgence or pursuit of that which affords only a temporary gratification—provokes a laugh or feeds the morbid fancy and enables us to "hold our own" with the company we keep. The choice of company is usually made, too, with but little regard for substantial or permanent moral and intellectual ad-

The best rooms in our mental house, furnished with all the youthful elements which make them plastic and receptive, are turned over to the occupancy of what afterwards proves to have been vain, frivolous, profitless, and unworthy tenants. Too often, also, the tracings if not the actual parade of vulgar, obscene, and demoralizing features are evident.

Later on, when life's responsibilities begin to weigh upon us, and as moral agents we rise to face the obligations which awakened sense and the divine Spirit reveal, we determine upon a change. As disciples we have a place to fill and a work to perform. essay to assume and maintain in holiness the role of sainthood. Before us rise the counsels, admonitions, and restrictions of "the law and the testimony." We must think and act and speak under the new regime. In our zeal, begotten by some gracious manifestation of divine goodness-some miracle of grace or outpouring of the spirit, we pledge all that we have and are upon the altar. Our fealty to God and truth is the one great consideration with us now. We find that we have been "bought with a price," and belong to God. This holds us morally to service of head and heart and tongue according to his rule, and we proceed to make a cheerful assignment.

Right here we are confronted with a protest from the former occupants of our being. They refuse to vacate and we are compelled to invoke the aid of the "law of the Spirit" to eject them. Were it not for the readiness with which the Master responds to our appeals for aid, the struggle to evict would be an uneven one, and as it is we are frequently surprised after believing ourselves to be in undisturbed possession, to find the old tenants intruding upon our privacy of thought and our sacredness of intercourse with God and with Saints. The grovelling thought, the vulgar joke, the vile illustration, and the unseemly habit, will crowd themselves upon us in our unwary moments, and how they do blur the character picture we are trying to exhibit. How they pursue us and dispute every inch of the ground we are trying to reclaim.

Like the vermin in the walls and seams of an old and formerly unkempt house, they resist all efforts at their extermination when the day of reformation and cleansing comes. The crevices of memory are infested with them, and the waters of baptism do not dislodge them always. The fire of the Spirit baptism seems slow in consuming them, and they appear to our mortification, at times and in places when we are trying hardest to enjoy seasons of holy consecration and communion. How often we wish we had never learned them or could at once and forever forget them. To dislodge them and instantly replace with pure, elevating, and ennobling recollections would be a most glorious and desirable change; but they entered by invitation, when access to the choice and roomy places was easy, and have entrenched themselves till they have become almost a perpetual menace. Spasmodic efforts toward their extermination will prove fruitless. Only a steady, watchful, persistent, prayerful application will lead to their final expulsion.

Our new relation binds us to God and Christ, and it is enjoined that we love with all our soul, heart, might, mind, and strength. How readily we might meet this requirement if all our former years had been spent in acquiring only that kind of material which might now be utilized unto rapid advancement and achievement; but alas! too much of the present time and incoming grace must be applied to remove the effects and erase the scars produced by the mistakes of earlier years.

If it is not too late to profit by this discovery and retrospect what practical lesson may we learn and apply? The Psalmist prayed: "So teach us to number our days that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom." We may not be in danger of repeating the exact follies of our earlier days; but have we learned the value of time sufficiently well to economize its passing moments by the study of only that which is profitable for the present and future? Has our present use of time and opportunity a relation to character building within ourselves and others? Or are we frittering away hours each day and months each year in speculating upon abstract questions which can never be settled here, and would confer no practical benefit if they could? Would not better results accrue to us and others from efforts to acquaint ourselves with present duty and a publication of the plain and easily understood principles of life and salvation?

What matters it whether we shall know each other and bear the same relations to one another in the future world? What bearing on our present growth and future glorification has a settlement of the question whether infants who die shall come forth in the resurrection as infants or adults? How far will our salvation work be enhanced by arguing somebody into the belief that revelation, knowledge, Christ, or Peter, or neither is the "rock" spoken of in Matthew 16:18? Is a decision as to who the "man of sin" of 2 Thessalonians 2:3 is, going to make sinners love God and obey commandments? How much spiritual fatness will the church individually or collectively acquire from discussing the purposes of the millenium, and whether the descent of the city from heaven will occur at its beginning or ending? If all of these and a hundred other similar questions could be answered to our satisfaction, how much nearer to God would the settlement place us or those we have been sent to minister to? Is there not enough in the simple gospel story and the law given to govern our lives within the church to occupy our time, and is not the obscurity that veils the rest suggestive that they belong to the realm of the Infinite alone? Is it not probable that if ever an understanding of them becomes a necessity to our growth in grace, they will be revealed by our heavenly Father? Faith answers in the affirmative, and wisdom advises that we trouble not ourselves about them, but rather give ourselves to the more practical concerns of life.

We have been besieged with questions along the line indicated in the foregoing, and have found ourselves without ability or even inclination to answer. To us it has seemed the better plan to stretch our laboring thought after those things which divine wisdom has placed within our reach and the possession of which means a gain in godliness. Those who prefer some other course have the "right of way" so far as we are concerned; but time is precious and with some unlearning to do and much that is so profitable to learn and do, we find permanent employment of a safe and substantial character without turning our mind open to the invasion of speculative theories which may all have to be unloaded and unlearned when the "sun of righteousness" chases away the mists of obscurity at the dawn of the coming day of bliss and hope's fruition.

If this is the decision of weakness and folly, those who are strong and wise will please extend commiseration to us.

THE editor of the Biblical World in issue for July discusses the question of "Bible Study and Religious Interest." After speaking of the influence upon college students and business men of Bible study without the religious spirit, the editor says:

The Sunday school finds here a peculiar opportunity. It is, indeed, its very function to arouse, develop, and make intelligent the religious life of young and old by the study of the Bible, but too often it fails to appreciate this. The prevailing temptation for its teachers, as well as for the preacher, is exhortation. Instead of bringing to his pupils the real thought of the biblical writer, the teacher uses the various verses or words of the lesson as so many suggestions for "applications." It is inevitable that too little of scriptural truth is sown. Teachers are often too eager to reap to care to sow. And yet we venture to say—though statistics are hard to obtain—that the great majority of those persons who will become active members of the Christian churches will come from the Sunday school, and the ground upon which to base the appeal that will lead to their taking any decisive step will be the Bible itself. Appeal there must be; searching questioning of the pupil's heart; every legitimate pressure brought to bear upon the wills of the young; but back of it all there must be the element of religious teaching to be gained only from the Bible. Will anecdotes, or entertaining exercises, or organizations, or "hustle" take the place of this? Once bring the pupils to study the Bible itself—not what men have said about the Bible, even in the lesson-helps—and it is certain that they will respond to spiritual impulses. At least, this is what is true in cases reported to us. In one church, for instance, out of sixty-six new additions, forty-four were the immediate result of a new Bible-study club.

This is something for our Sunday school workers to think about, and perchance we may profit by the experiences of others.

LET US NOT CAVIL.

In our letter department this week is a letter from Bro. Frank Russell, in which he takes Bro. Elvin to task for language used in speaking of the work of the college. Had Bro. Russell read the appeal carefully, and without a disposition to cavil and find fault, we do not see how he could have found occasion to make so much talk about a little matter; for we think Bro. Elvin's meaning is clear when the letter or appeal is considered as a whole. When he speaks of the "whole work of the church" he of course means the whole work of the church as concerns the establishment of the college. Bro. Russell evidently knew this, for he asks questions and answers them himself in a manner to indicate that he was aware of what Bro. Elvin did really mean.

We deplore the tendency of some of our brethren to cavil through the columns of the HERALD. We do not see why they cannot present their opinions on any subject that may be under discussion without making thrusts at some one else who may have preceded them in the HERALD. Sarcasm, irony, and ridicule, though they may be useful in some places and at some times, are not arguments, and should not be used in discussions among brethren and especially so in the church papers.

There are, and always have been, differences of opinion among the brethren concerning many questions, and we believe that the HERALD is a medium through which these differences should be discussed, so that by a general exchange of thought we might come nearer to a unity. But the way to bring about unity on mooted questions is not by antagonistic measures, nor by cavilling. We are always glad to have the brethren send us their opinions on various questions connected with the subject of religion; but we have been obliged to withhold some otherwise very good articles because they were aimed in a contentious way at some other brother who had taken a position.

When there appears anything in the HERALD with which you cannot agree, and you wish to present your ideas thereon, it is not necessary that you "review" the writer in the same way you would some one with whom you were holding a debate. Present your ideas in a quiet way, and avoid giving thrusts and undercuts. Contention settles few questions, while exchange of thought is a power in bringing about unity. Pointing out weaknesses in some one else's house does not strengthen your own. There is a vast difference between a friendly exchange of thought and a contention of words.

Brethren, let us not be harsh one with another, but let us have free exchange of thought without a clash of swords.

THE following will interest HERALD readers:

THE MONEY IN CHRISTIAN SCIENCE.

Mr. William G. Nixon of Boston, a back-slider from Mother Eddy's fold, gives some interesting estimates of the profits of the Christian Science business. Mr. Nixon used to be a bank cashier in South Dakota. He went to Boston and paid Mrs. Eddy $300 for-a course of lessons in Christian Science. Subsequently he settled in Boston, and, at Mrs Eddy's request, became her publisher. He asserts that her "Science and Health With Key to the Scriptures," cost 47 cents a copy to produce, and was sold for from $3 to $6 seays that she has sold more than 200,000 copies. Mr. Nixon estimates that she "must have cleared from $300,000 to $400,000 net on the sale of 'Science and Health' alone;" and still the sales go bravely on. Not merely the faithful, but the unbelievers buy the book. It owes its success to curiosity, as well as credulity; and it is tremendously advertised Every death due to the rejection of medical or surgical care and to blind belief in the Eddyite hocus-pocus helps the book in which the Eddyite creed is set down. It is possible that Mrs. Eddy is the best paid author in America, the drawer of the largest royalties.

that Mrs. Eddy is the best paid author in America, the drawer of the largest royalties. She has other means of income. She charges $300 for initiating novices into the mysteries of her "science." Doubtless many well-to-do or rich persons have paid her much more in the transports of their absolute faith. She says that she has taught personally more than 4,000 persons. Four thousand pupils at $300 a head. There is a snug little fund of $1.200,000. If her figures and Mr. Nixon's figures are correct she must have made at least from $1,500,000 to $1,600,000, and probably much more, out of her books and her lessons. According to Mr. Nixon, she is "a very matter-of-fact woman in all material matters except her theory that there is no matter, and has invested in land extensively; she can easily be rated now as a very substantial millionaire." Mr. Nixon's knowledge of Mrs. Eddy's publishing business brought him to the conviction that "the whole thing was but one gigantic money-making scheme."

There is no doubt that teaching Christian Science is profitable to the teacher; but certain persons and their money are soon parted and the learners don't complain. Mrs. Eddy doesn't wish to "pauperize" her devotees by giving the Christian Science free of charge.

EDITORIAL ITEMS.

From Wisconsin we receive a copy of The Madison Democrat, of July 4, in which we find a communication from Bro. T. W. Chatburn. He briefly and plainly corrects a Journal writer and gives a short history of the original and reorganized churches, and invites the "Journal quill driver" to attend the gospel tent meetings at Greenbush where erroneous ideas will be corrected and where opportunity will be given to all to ask questions or to offer remarks.

In another column we give space to an article over the signature of "I. A. S.," to which we wish to call attention. Many of our writers can help us materially by observing Mr. Hale's rules; and in helping us they will be helping themselves more, by reason of the increased power it will give them as writers.

A letter dated at Manchester, England, August 1, written to his son Winfred by Bro. E. L. Kelley, indicates that he and his wife were well, and that they had been benefited in health by their voyage.

GRACELAND COLLEGE NOTES.

SPOKANE, Wash., Aug. 6.

E L Kelley, Lamoni, Iowa,

Dear Brother:—Having a desire to be free, and as Paul the beloved apostle, said, "Owe no man anything," I feel that as long as the college debt is unpaid I owe not only man, but God who will hold every member in his church to an account for that which is not paid. I have no child to educate; but some one else has, and then I have done what is required of me in that line. Please find enclosed $10 00 which you will please receipt for as follows: $5 00 to J. M. Hooker and wife, and $5 00 to Sr. Lettic Clearey.

Your brother in Christ,
J. MONROE HOOKER.

A TOUCHNIG POEM ABOUT A REAL INCIDENT.

Among the "Fresh-Air" children who arrived at a farm near Pittsfield, in the Berkshire hills of Massachusetts, one day last summer, was a poor little tot who, as she was lifted from the wagon, caught sight of a field of daisies. With a cry of delight she darted to the rail fence the moment she was set down, and, scrambling under it, threw herself, face downward, among the beautiful white and gold blossoms, clasping them in her arms and sobbing as if her heart were breaking. She had never before seen flowers growing. During her stay she spent all her time among them, and when the moment came to pack her shabby little bag it was found to be filled with flowers. A touching poem about this pathetic incident. "The Fresh-Air Child," by Elliot Walker, is published in the August number of the Ladies' Home Journal.

CONVERSION OF THE WORLD .- NO. 2.

BY JAMES W. BURNS.

THE SACRAMENT.

The Lord has instituted the sacrament, that all may eat and be made whole, or be given light from heaven. Jesus is recorded as saying in John:

Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man, and drink his blood, ye have no life in you. Whose eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, hath eternal life... He that eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him.—John 6:53,54,56.

In what sense do we abide in the Lord? Jesus says:

If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free.—John 8:31,32

And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day.—D. C. 59: 2.

If we want to keep ourselves unspotted from the world, or to keep from doing those things that the world does which is sin, we must offer our sacraments upon the appointed day—that is, a certain appointed time, and it is a commandment of God that we partake of the sacrament. God never commanded us to do anything that did not mean something, or that would not be effectual for good to those who would be obedient thereto. Now listen why the Lord says we should partake of the sacrament, in the prayer used to bless the bread and wine, as recorded in the Doctrine and Covenants:-

O God, the eternal Father, we ask thee in the name of thy Son Jesus Christ, to bless and sanctify this bread to the souls of all those who partake of it, that they may eat in remembrance of the body of thy Son, and witness unto thee, O God, the eternal Father, that they are willing to take upon them the name of thy Son, and always remember him and keep his commandments which he has given them, that they may always have his Spirit to be with them. Amen.—17: 22

And the last part of the prayer to bless the wine reads thus:

That they may witness unto thee, O God, the eternal Father, that they do always remember him, that they may have his Spirit to be with them. Amen.—17:23.

If the partaking of the sacrament is to witness unto God that we do always remember his Son and keep his commandments, and wish to always have his Spirit to be with us, how can we remember his Son and commandments, and always have his Spirit to be with us, if we do not partake of it, and partake of it worthily?

Again the Doctrine and Covenants says:

The elders or priests are to have a sufficient time to expound all things concerning the Church of Christ to their understanding, previous to their partaking of the sacrament, and being confirmed by the laying on of the hands of the elders; so that all things may be done in order. And the members shall manifest before the church, and also before the elders, by a godly walk and conversation, that they are worthy of it, that there may be works and faith agreeable to the Holy Scriptures.—17:18.

Jesus says:

Therefore if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath aught against thee; leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift.—Matt. 5: 23, 24.

Paul says:

Wherefore whosoever shall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord, unworthily, shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord. But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup. For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body.—1 Cor. 11: 27-29.

I do not understand that if we have done anything that is wrong we are not worthy to partake of the sacrament, but only where or when we have injured others and will not make it right, and also when we have sinned against God and do not desire to confess to him or repent of the same.

I believe the evil one can score a point here, if we are not very careful. He may try to make us believe that because of our having done wrong we are not worthy to partake; while in our hearts we know of ourselves that we are sorry, and ashamed, and are willing and probably have done all that the law of God requires to make the wrong right. We should partake and not judge ourselves unworthy of it. So then it is necessary to partake of the sacrament, and that worthily, that we may have the light of heaven.

By this ye may know if a man repenth of his sins. Behold, he will confess them and forsake them.—D. C. 58: 9.

That is, leave them, and do them no more. Again:

But remember that on this, the Lord's day, thou shalt offer thine oblations, and thy sacraments, unto the Most High, confessing thy sins unto thy brethren, and before the Lord. —D. C. 59: 2.

The question may be asked, "What effect does it have upon the world whether the members partake or not of the sacrament? If in partaking of the sacrament we have life, or obtain a portion of the Holy Spirit, and the Spirit is light, then if we do not partake, or if we partake unworthily, we allow our light to go out, and we become as the five foolish virgins. But if we partake of it and are worthy, then we obtain more light, and our light will shine the brighter, and the world will see our good works and glorify our Father which is in heaven.

PRAYER AND THANKSGIVING.

We are commanded also to pray both secretly and publicly. In a revelation given to Martin Harris, as recorded in Doctrine and Covenants the Lord says:

And again, I command thee that thou shalt pray vocally as well as in thy heart; yea, before the world as well as in secret; in public as well as in private.—18: 4.

Remember (if any should take exceptions to applying this passage to us now) that Paul says:

All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness; that the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works.—2 Tim. 3: 16, 17.

Why should we pray? Let Jesus answer:

Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation —Matt. 26:41.

And again in latter day revelations, as recorded in Doctrine and Covenants, Jesus says:

And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day; for verily this is a day appointed unto you to rest from your labors, and to pay thy devotions unto the Most High; nevertheless thy vows shall be offered up in righteousness on all days, and at all times; but remember that on this, the Lord's day, thou shalt offer thine oblations, and thy sacraments.—59: 2.

The foregoing quotations show the necessity of prayer, and if we neglect our prayers in the season thereof, then we fall into temptation, and are not able to keep ourselves unspotted from the world, nor able to resist the wicked influences that are at work in the world.

And on this day thou shalt do none other thing, only let thy food be prepared with singleness of heart, that thy fasting may be perfect; or in other words, that thy joy may be full. Verily this is fasting and prayer; or, in other words, rejoicing and prayer.—59:3.

The Savior says in Matthew:

Again I say unto you, that if two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven. For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them.—18: 19.20.

The Lord means everything he says, and will fulfill all promises, if we comply with his commandments, thus convening ourselves to offer our prayers and supplications to our heavenly Father. The Lord says that if we meet and agree, and ask in faith, he will grant our requests. Of course if we ask in righteousness.

I believe we should pray at home in the family worship, and also in secret, for Jesus says in Matthew:

But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly.—6:6.

Then when we convene in prayer services we would be blessed with the spirit of supplication, and be able to edify others who might feel weak.

Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much.—James 5:16.

John the Revelator says:-

And when he [Jesus Christ] had taken the book, the four beasts and four and twenty elders fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them harps, and golden vials full of odors, which are the prayers of saints.—Rev. 5:8.

And another angel came and stood at the altar, having a golden censer; and there was given unto him much incense, that he should offer it with the prayers of all saints upon the golden altar which was before the throne. And the smoke of the incense, which came with the prayers of the saints, ascended up before God out of the angel's hand.—Rev. 8:3, 4.

We might ask or pray to God in a way that is not pleasing to him, therefore he would not answer us; and if we did not ask or pray to him, we would not receive. Let James 4:2, 3, speak:

Yet ye have not, because ye ask [or pray] not. Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts.

This shows that if we do not pray or ask God, we shall not receive; and if we ask amiss, neither shall we receive. The question may be asked, How, then, shall we ask and receive? Let Jesus answer:

If ye shall ask anything in my name, I will do it.

Some may say, I have asked in the name of Jesus and have not received. Well, we quote farther:

If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you.—John 15:7.

This shows that if we keep all God's commandments, we may ask what we will and it shall be done unto us, for we shall be asking the things that are the will of God the Father. To prove this point farther we quote from the writings of John:

And this is the confidence that we have in him, that, if we ask any thing according to his will, he heareth us; and if we know that hear us, whatsoever we ask, we know that we have the petitions that we desire of him.

—1 John 5: 14, 15.

Jesus says in Matthew:

And all things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive.—21:22.

If we abide in Christ's words, and ask according to his will and in his name, believing we shall receive, then we shall be blessed. We shall be able to keep ourselves unspotted from the world, and have our lights trimmed and burning, that they may give light to all around us, and the world will see the heavenly light that we reflect.

We will try to show further the effect that the prayers of the ministry and members have in the conversion of the world. Those of the ministry are sent to teach the Saints and the world what they must do to be saved, and they shall teach as they are led by the Spirit; and if they receive not the Spirit they shall not teach, and the Spirit is given in answer to the prayer of faith:

And again, the elders, priests, and teachers of this church shall teach the principles of my gospel which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, in the which is the fullness of the gospel; . . . as they shall be directed by the Spirit; and the Spirit shall be given unto you by the prayer of faith, and if ye receive not the Spirit ye shall not teach.—D. C. 42:5

At first glance it may seem that the laity have no responsibility whether the ministry do or do not receive the Spirit, but we quote Paul:

Praying always with all prayer and supplication in the Spirit, and watching thereunto with all perseverance and supplication for all saints; and for me, that utterance may be given unto me, and that I may open my mouth boldly, to make known the mystery of the gospel.—Eph. 6: 18, 19.

Paul here asks that prayer may be made that he may have sufficient of God's Spirit to enable him to preach the gospel with liberty and in boldness. He would not ask the saints to do something that there was no virtue in. He recognized there was virtue and power in the prayers of the saints, and that is the reason he made the request of them.

Withal praying also for us, that God would open unto us a door of utterance, to speak the mysteries of Christ, for which I am also in bonds—Col. 4: 3.

Paul shows that he not only asked the favor for himself, but for some one else, and the favor was asked of the Colossian saints, laity, as well as the ministry.

Paul, . . . and Timotheus our brother, to the saints and faithful brethren in Christ which are at Colosse.—Col. 1: 1, 2.

Therefore he requested that that branch petition the God of heaven that they might have liberty by the Spirit. Did the prayer of faith ever set at liberty the captive? Yes. For proof we cite you to the case of Peter. Herod the king was stretching forth his hand and vexing certain of the church; some he killed and others he imprisoned,—Peter and others. The church made supplication for him without ceasing, and he was released, or set free by the hand of an angel, and that because of the prayers of faith that were offered up to God for him. See Acts 12: 5-11:

Peter therefore was kept in prison: but prayer was made without ceasing of the church unto God for him. And when Herod would have brought him forth, the same night Peter was sleeping between two soldiers, bound with two chains: and the keepers before the door kept the prison. And, behold, the angel of the Lord came upon him, and a light shined in the prison: and he smote Peter on the side, and raised him up, saying, Arise up quickly. And his chains fell off from his hands. And the angel said unto him, Gird thyself, and bind on thy sandals: and so he did. And he saith unto him, Cast thy garment about thee, and follow And he went out, and followed him; and wist not that it was true which was done by the angel; but thought he saw a vision. When they were past the first and the second ward, they came unto the iron gate that leadeth unto the city; which opened to them of its own accord: and they went out, and passed on through one street; and forthwith the angel departed from him. And when Peter was come to himself, he said, Now I know of a surety, that the Lord hath sent his angel, and hath delivered me out of the hand of Herod, and from all the expectation of the people of the Jews.

As the work of God is and always has been, and always will be, to save all those who will believe and obey, we quote our Savior in John 17: 3:

And this is life eternal, that they might know thee the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent.

If it is eternal life, as Jesus says, to know God, How can we know him? Let Jesus answer:

And no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him.

If knowing God is eternal life, and the knowledge is obtained or revealed through Jesus Christ, How is it done? First, we ask, What was the mission of Jesus Christ to the world? Answer, To save men from their sins.

And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins.—Matt. 1: 21.

Philip on one occasion requested the Savior to show him the Father, and he said unto him, as recorded in John 14: 8. 9:

Philip saith unto him, Lord, show us the Father, and it sufficeth us. Jesus saith unto him, Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me. Philip? he that hath seen me hath seen the Father.

As Jesus came to save men from their sins, and that he was like God, as he told Philip, and that he came to do the will of God, he says:

For I came down from heaven, not to do mine own will, but the will of him that sent me. . . And this is the will of him that sent me, that every one which seeth the Son, and believeth on him, may have everlasting life.—John 6: 38 40.

John 8: 29 tells us that Jesus did always the will of God:

The Father hath not left me alone; for I do always those things that please him.

If Jesus always did those things that pleased the Father, then in that sense he was like the Father, as he told Philip; and that God had given him commandments, and those commandments were life.

The Father which sent me, he gave me a commandment, what I should say, and what I should speak. And I know that his commandment is life everlasting.—John 12: 49, 50.

Then it is life everlasting to know God, and as Jesus says his commandments are life everlasting, and what Jesus preached was called the gospel.

And he said unto them, Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth [the gospel or the commandments of God] and is baptized, shall be saved —Mark 16: 15, 16.

A saved being is one who is in possession of eternal life, or obedient in all things that God commanded his Son. Then it is through the gospel that eternal life is obtained. Jesus told his disciples to be perfect, as their Father in heaven was perfect.

Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect.—Matt. 5: 48.

That is, be righteous as the heavenly Father is righteous. That would make us like God; and if we know just what God wants us to do and do it, then we shall be righteous as God is righteous.

The question may be asked, How are we to know the righteousness of God? Paul tells how to obtain the knowledge of the righteousness of God, which would make us like God:

For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith; as it is written, the just shall live by faith.—Romans 1: 16, 17.

We have shown that the righteousness of God is revealed to the world through the preaching of the gospel. We will now show that the prayers of the Saints—members and ministry—do have an effect in the conversion of the world.

For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved. How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they [the world] believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? and how shall they preach except they be sent?—Rom. 10:13-15.

And we might add, How can the minister preach without the Spirit? and how can he receive the Spirit without the prayer of faith by himself and the Saints? Paul asked the saints of Colosse to pay that he might have liberty in preaching, and "where the Spirit of God is there is liberty;" and the Lord has the power to open the understanding of each individual so that he may understand the plan of redemption.

Then he openeth the ears of men.—Job 33:16.

And the Lord has said in latter day revelations to his church, about the wrongs that the Saints had to endure:

That they should continue to importune for redress, and redemption, by the hands of those who are placed as rulers, and are in authority over you.—D. C. 98: 10.

And that the ears of those in authority might be opened to their cries, he commands the Saints to—

Pray ye, therefore, that their ears may be opened unto your cries, that I may be merciful unto them, that these things [the punishments; see first part of this paragraph] may not come upon them.—D. C. 98: 12.

If God demands his people to pray that the ears of those in authority,—as to the dealing out of justice according to the laws of our land,—may be opened to the cries of his Saints and escape the punishment that was pronounced upon them if they did not hear, then why not the same command be binding, that we pray that the ears of the world be opened that they might hear the message from heaven, and escape the dreadful anathema that is pronounced upon those who will not hear and obey the gospel?

Wherefore the voice of the Lord is unto the ends of the earth; that all that will hear may hear; prepare ye, prepare ye for that which is to come, for the Lord is nigh; and the anger of the Lord is kindled, and his sword is bathed in heaven, and it shall fall upon the inhabitants of the earth.—D. C. 1:3.

Seeing there is a blessing for those who hear and obey, and a punishment for those who will not hear and obey, then I think the command is to pray that their ears may be opened, so that hearing they may understand and obey, and be blessed and escape those punishments.

We sum up: First, we must go to the house of prayer, that we may keep ourselves unspotted from the world, and be in such a condition that when we ask in the name of Jesus Christ we may ask according to his will, and have our prayers answered by our heavenly Father, for the prayer of a righteous man availeth much.

Second, we may pray the Father that he would send men and give them his Spirit, that they may preach the gospel to the world.

Third, that God would open the hearts and minds of the honest that they may hear and understand, and obey the commands of eternal life.

We see the laity does share part of the responsibility in the conversion of the world, especially in prayer.

LUTHER AS A REFORMER.

As one who has been brought up under the instruction and taught in the wisdom and learning of those who profess to believe in the teaching of Luther and his colaborers, I think I have the right to speak or write in reference to the things of which I have thus obtained a knowledge, for the benefit of others, who may have been brought up and instructed along the same line and received the same religious training.

It is claimed by the Lutherans that the Catholic Church is an apostate church and the members thereof heretics, teaching doctrines contrary to the scriptures. Having been taught thus from childhood, I accepted that statement as true and still believe it to be true.

Soon after my education according to Lutheran theology was completed, I was led to wonder how it was that Luther, who was a Catholic priest and the product of an apostate church, could reproduce, the old apostolic church in its completeness, in view of the statement of Christ; that a corrupt tree cannot bring forth good fruit. And as this language will apply as well to the church as to individuals, I was as a natural result led to ask myself the question, If Luther was a product (or fruit) of a corrupt church, how in view of the statement of Christ could he produce sound doctrine? In order to answer the query I consulted the standard of evidence, the Bible, which I considered sufficient to determine whether the fruit or doctrine Luther produced was good or evil, by a comparison between the teachings of Christ and his apostles, and the teachings of Luther.

Inasmuch as they claim that the Catholic Church is corrupt and its teaching contrary to the word of God, it may be necessary at this juncture to inquire what the doctrine of the church was at that time. But as space will not permit a lengthy presentation thereof I will simply present the fundamental principles in contradistinction to the principles of the gospel as laid down by the Apostle Paul in Hebrews 6:1, 2. Catholic principles are as follows: Infant Baptism, Confirmation, Holy Eucharist, Penance, Extreme Unction, Holy Order, and Matrimony. While other things were taught contrary to the words of God, it is not necessary to mention them. The principles of the gospel were as follows: Faith, Repentance, Baptisms, Laying on of Hands. Resurrection of the Dead, and Eternal Judgment. These together with the Lord's Supper, were the doctrines taught by Christ and his apostles, and must forever be the model of the teachings of the servants of God in all the world. They are not subject to change or modification. And as we notice that the teaching of the Catholic Church is out of harmony with these fundamental principles set forth by Paul, we conclude that it has departed from the faith. Paul says:

But though we, or an angel from heaven, teach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed.

It might be well here to notice in what position Luther stood to this church, which his followers brand as an apostate church. And in doing so will quote from D' Aubigné's History of the Reformation, one of the best and most reliable histories we have, if not the best. On page 159 is a letter written by Luther to the Pope, dated March 3, 1519, in which he says:

Most Holy Father! I declare in the presence of God and all his creatures, that I have never desired, and that I shall never desire, to weaken, either by force or stratagem, the power of the Roman Church or of your holiness. I confess that nothing on earth or in heaven should be preferred above that church, except Jesus Christ alone the Lord of all.

Continuing Luther says, on the next page:

Although every thing is now in a very wretched state there, this is not sufficient reason for separating from it. On the contrary the worse things are going on within it, the more should we cling to it; for it is not by separation that we shall make it better.

On page 252 Luther says:

I desire and have ever desired but one thing, a reformation of the church according to Holy Scripture.

Having quoted Luther sufficiently to show his aim and object, namely, to remain with the church and reform it, I shall now quote from his colaborer, Melancthon, what he says as late as 1530:

There is no doctrine in which we differ from the Roman Church; we venerate the universal authority of the Roman pontiff, and are ready to obey him provided he does not reject us. Alas! nothing draws upon us so much hatred as the unshaken firmness with which we maintain the doctrine of the Roman Church. But with the aid of God we will remain faithful, even unto death, to Christ and to the Roman Church, although you should reject us.

While much more of a similar character could be adduced, if space permitted, this is sufficient to show that these two leaders of the Reformation were in touch with and believed in the Catholic Church until they were excommunicated.

The historian says on page 160:

It was not Luther who separated from Rome, it was Rome that separated from Luther.

Thus we are forced to admit and believe, whether we are willing to or not, that the Lutheran Church is built upon the outcast and rejected material from the Catholic Church. But while we are forced to the conclusion that Luther was honest in his efforts to reform the church of which he was a member, namely, the Catholic Church, and admitting this, the thought is equally enforced upon our mind, that that church which he considered was the Church of Christ, was not the Church of Christ; for the reason that had it been Christ's Church it would have needed no reform. Christ organized a perfect church, perfect in organization, perfect in doctrine. James terms the gospel the perfect law of liberty, and how can puny, mortal humanity reform that which the Lord has made perfect? Christ had placed in his church apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, and teachers for the work of the ministry, for the perfecting of the saints, until we come to a unity of the faith. Now if the Catholic or Lutheran or any other church is not in harmony with this model, it is not the Church of Christ, neither can it be.

We have already briefly noted that the Catholic Church is not in harmony with the doctrine of Christ, so far as doctrine is concerned, neither in organization; for instead of having apostles and prophets, etc., it has first a pope, then cardinals, bishops, archbishops, etc.

But what about the Lutheran Church? Does it in organization and doctrine come up to the pattern given by Christ? If so, I have failed so far to see it and challenge any one to prove it. If I am wrong in the course

I am pursuing I want to know it; but if others are wrong and misled in the course they are pursuing it is my desire to so inform them, for if the Bible is the standard of evidence from which there is no appeal, I contend that it should be the model and pattern by which our religious institutions should be shaped, both in organization and doctrine; if they are not, it is evidence that they are not the Church of Christ, for wherever that is found, if found at all. it will have to answer to the pattern.

While I admire the courage which Luther exibited and the work he did, yet I am forced to the conclusion, in view of profane as well as ecclesias. tical history, that Luther did not reëstablish the Church of Christ according to its ancient pattern, for the reasons given and others. I have repudiated and disavowed all allegiance to the Lutheran Church; and as it is my desire and always has been to be right, my desire is equally great that my fellow travelers to eternity may also be right.

RULES FOR WRITING.

Recently there came to our attention some rules for writing as given by Edward Everett Hale, critic and scholar. They are as follows:

1. Know what you want to say.

Say it.

3. Use your own language. 4. Leave out all fine passages.

A short work is better than a long one. 6 The fewer words, other things being equal, the better.

7. Cut to pieces.

A little consideration of the above would aid many writers who really have ability but not the system necessary to its proper cultivation. lack of system often means the waste basket and always the editor's blue pencil.

No. 1, at first thought, seems to be To the novice, quite unnecessary. however, it is very important. I have seen communications wherein the writer has started out aimlessly, like a ship with no particular destination, without compass or rudder.

Perhaps the letter begins and nearly ends in an apology and acknowledgment of the valuable space which it is to occupy. Yet, he feels led to write certain things upon certain subjects which have come to him. The writer who comes at once to the subject upon which he has something to say, will have made his argument and presented his conclusions before the unsystematic writer has finished his apology. The first has made his hay and in other fields of labor while the second is getting ready his sickles.

The second rule admonishes action without digression.

"Use your own language."

giarism is the greatest crime outside of falsehood and anachronism. you cannot express an idea in words your own, the idea is not yours and should be further studied.

The fourth rule is one which does not at first appeal to reason; but the "proof of the pudding is the eating," and if you will give your writing the advantage of age you will find what seems very proper and "happy" one day will fall flat the next.

"A short work is better than a long one." The truth of this is evident. No one would prefer the tome to the short work the essential ideas being the same in both; and the fifth rule is but carried further in number six. Too many words spoil meaning and are a waste of energy.

"Cut it to pieces." Many a sentence and many a paragraph are not necessary to the communication and the latter is enhanced by the expunging of the former. When you have finished your article or letter, go carefully over the same and if there is anything you can cut out without injury to thought or its expression, confer a blessing on "ye editor" by doing so, and your communications will be welcomed because "editing" them will have lost its terrors, and publishing them will be a pleasure.

WHO SHALL BE SAVED?

Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in beaven.

We have here a very particular part of the sermon of Jesus Christ on the Mount of Olives As far as the Christian world is concerned, there are many calling upon the name of the Lord. There are hundreds of different religions each claiming to be of right and divine doctrine. A great many Christian friends have the idea that to believe and call upon the name of the Lord is sufficient to be saved. But such is not the case. The devils believe and tremble. The Lord Jesus knew that there would be different opinions and ways of serving him. therefore the necessity of his speaking the above text.

We are now living in a day of freedom, therefore, we have the more to consider. In Matthew 7th chapter, 22d and 23d verses, Christ says:

Many will say unto me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity.

There was a time when Christian people could not serve God at their own pleasure, but in this age and dispensation we have our freedom. The Lord knew that the time of freedom would come and that people would have free agency. But people go on in their own ways thinking that they do not need apostles, prophets, evangelists, pastors, and teachers. They have the name of deacons and them without any authority. Therefore, the Lord said that they would, in the last or judgment day, say, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and how can they have prophesied when the majority of the world do not believe in prophets? Some are of the idea that the preachers are prophets, but very funny ones. The Lord will profess unto them, "Depart from me, ye that work iniquity, I never knew you." But the most particular part is to draw our attention to the will of the Father. There is something, then, to do. Some Christians say that belief is sufficient, but here it states that there is a will to be performed and the problem is to find or to seek for that will. In the first place we require faith in God and in his Son Jesus Christ. Secondly, repentance, being sorry for our sins and leaving them. Thirdly, baptism by immersion for the remission of sins. Fourthly, laying on of hands to receive the Holy Ghost. Jesus also taught Nicodemus in John 3:5.

Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.

Therefore, we can see that it is necessary for every man and woman to be baptized for the remission of sins. We can see that there is a special way and that any way will not do. In Paul's epistle to Timothy, 3d chapter, he said that in the last days perilous times would come, when men would be self-boasters, high-minded, lovers of pleasures more than lovers of God, having a form of godliness, but denying the power thereof; from such turn away.

The Church of God is likened unto a government with authorities and great authorities, too. A government without authority is of no good, there is no power. Therefore a church without authority is of no good. The gospel is to be preached in power. We know that the laws of the land have policemen with power to do that which is in their calling. But supposing if a man without authority puts on a policeman's clothes, he would be acting contrary to law. He must be called by the law of the land. The same it is with God's law, we must be called to do his will and to preach his word. When our Savior was on earth, he had authority from the Father, because he was doing the will of the Father. Therefore, every servant or officer of the Church of God must have authority from God likewise and be called to perform the different offices that are in his church.

God's ways are not ours. His ways things be received, that the heart and are much higher than ours. In Ephesoul of the saint should not be solely sians 4: 11-14, we find the will of employed with earthly affairs that we

Father is to have apostles in his church; secondly, prophets; thirdly, evangelists and some pastors; fourthly, teachers. What are all these good for in his church? To edify his saints till we all come in the unity of the faith unto the measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ: that we henceforth be no more children. tossed to and fro, and carried about with every wind of doctrine, by the slight of men, and cunning craftiness, whereby they lie in wait to deceive. Unless these officers or authorities are in the church it is not the Church of God. The Lord spoke through the Prophet Amos:

Surely the Lord God will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets.—Amos 3: 7.

Therefore if there are no prophets, there is no Church of God. Therefore let us seek for the right and honorable will and way of the Father and let us treasure in our minds that,

Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven.—Matt 7: 21.

HOWELL JONES. ABERAMAN, Wales, 144 Brook St.

THE PEARL.

Without controversy or long drawn out argument, it seems self-evident that the moving mainspring of the age—of the world—is the spirit and the aspiration to seek wealth, hence the parable which reads:

Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant man, seeking goodly pearls: who, when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had, and bought it.

—Matt. 13:45, 46.

In the time of Christ men were engaged in the hunt after earthly possessions, and would give their all for one precious gem. The Master evidently attempted to impress upon the mind of the people of his time that the salvation promised in the gospel was the "great pearl"—the gift of eternal life. And as the worldly minded would part with all they possessed that they might obtain the one earthly object of their life, so likewise the gospel minded in the integrity and harmony of their profession would yield up their claim and hold upon all earthly possessions rather than forfeit the priceless pearl—the hope of eternal life. And this view seems to be reinforced by the following:

If ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things which are above, where Christ sitteth on the right hand of God. Set your affection on things above, not on things on the earth.—Col. 3:1, 2.

Let no one misunderstand me as advocating a habit of idleness or laziness as to the work a day necessities of life; but in this light should these things be received, that the heart and soul of the saint should not be solely employed with earthly affairs that we rob ourselves here and hereafter of the atonement and glory of eternal life purchased by the Lord of life, and offered to us in the gospel. Paul, a wise counsellor in spiritual concerns, advised:

For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit the things of the Spirit. For to be carnally minded is death; but to be spiritually minded is life and peace. Because the carnal mind is enmity against God: for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be. So then they that are after the flesh cannot please God.—Rom. 8:5–8.

Question: Saints, which rule predominates the action of our life, or every day work—to what end are we striving, the accomplishing of the carnal desire, the gratification of the fleshly aspirations? Or do we crucify the carnal and base uprisings of nature, and adopt the divine counsel:

Wherefore, seek not the things of this world; but seek ye first to build up the kingdom of God, and to establish his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you.—Matt. 6: 38.

The plain meaning of the foregoing is this: Instead of our being narrow and selfish, we should be faithful in service, and have as the chief object of life the uplifting of our fellow creatures, and the upbuilding of God's work, that in lieu of a burning thirst to own government bonds, or the holding of a mortgage on our brother's property, with a secret hope that he shall never be able to redeem it, and thereby we may realize an hundred per cent upon our fortunate investment, and his misfortune in not being able to meet his obligations; but the rather that all our gains in worldly things shall be upon the altar, for the increase and exaltation of God's work among men, so that when God shall bring again the ecstatic condition as described:

And the Lord called his people Zion, because they were of one heart and one mind, and dwelt in righteousness; and there was no poor among them.—D. C. 36: 2.

Those who arrive to a state of purity of heart, will be weaned from the cold, cruel, grasping spirit of the world, and prepared in mind to aid in bringing about that condition when there shall be "no poor."

The promises made to this church unless a failure, or prove abortive through our unfaithfulness, are to provide and bring about a condition of greater equality for the household of faith than now prevails, for we read:

And again I say unto you, Let every man esteem his brother as himself: for what man among you having twelve sons, and is no respecter to them, and they serve him obediently, and he saith unto the one, Be thou clothed in robes and sit thou here; and to the other, Be thou clothed in rags and sit thou there, and looketh upon his sons and saith, I am just. Behold, this I have given unto you a parable, and it is even as I am: I say unto you, Be one; and if ye are not one, ye are not mine.—D. C. 38: 5, 6.

Those who labor with undivided purpose of heart in the service of God can certainly be one. The time will come, and the omens are aglow with a premonition of the official fulfillment: "Appoint unto this people their portion, every man equal according to their families, according to their circumstances, and their wants and needs." (D. C. 51: 1.)

The rule of righteousness is as follows; who can abide it?

Behold, this is what the Lord requires of every man in his stewardship, even as I, the Lord, have appointed, or shall hereafter appoint unto any man. And, behold, none are exempt from this law who belong to the church of the living God; yea, neither the bishop, neither the agent, who keepeth the Lord's storehouse; neither he who is appointed in a stewardship over temporal things, he who is appointed to administer spiritual things, the same is worthy of his hire, even as those who are appointed a stewardship, to administer in temporal things; yea, even more abundantly, which abundance is multiplied unto them through the manifestations of the Spirit; nevertheless, in your temporal things you shall be equal, and this not grudgingly, otherwise the abundance of the manifestations of the Spirit shall be withheld.—D. C. 70:3.

To obtain this equality in the church, there of necessity must be a unity of action in spirit and labor, it will not be possible for the doubtful hearted, the unbelieving minded, the fault finder, the cavilous, or the constitutional grunter to be at a oneness with those who receive the word of God with a ready and cheerful heart, and will immediately move forward in obedience thereto.

Most poignant and trope was the interogation of the prophet:

Can two walk together, except they be agreed?—Amos 3: 3.

It was no idle tale when the Savior said:

Agree with thine adversary quickly, while thou art in the way with him; lest at any time thine adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison.—Matt. 5:27.

We have thus employed these texts of scripture to point out the importance of acquiring the pearl that shall be unfading in the crown of eternal life, and in our mutual work for the good of the church, and especially in that which has been entrusted to my watchcare — Graceland College — the church institution of learning, let there be a united and an earnest early effort to comply with God's instructions. We fasted and prayed for direction in the duties and labor required at our hands, and in this thing let it not be said of us:

For the children of this world are wiser in their generation than the children of light.

The wisdom of this world in business acts, would be to shut off interest, for every day that $25,000 college debt, or any part thereof bearing interest, stands unpaid, it only increases the burden the Saints will have to meet, and proves that as a church we are not equal in business to the men of the world. God understood this, and has made a test of our fealty to him, by telling us to "pay the debt." Some may err and thereby lose the "great pearl" by refusing to bear their portion, and comply with this instruction. Be not oversure of your estimate of this revelation.

A year ago it was stated that it would require about $3,500 to run the college for the year, and we did not run over the amount named. Another college year is just about to begin, and unless unforeseen expense be required we shall be able to reduce the expense once more; however, we shall need help, and we are wholly dependent upon the donation of Saints and friends to meet the deficit between the receipts and expenses.

Here is an invitation for your furnishing the needed aid. And may grace and peace be yours to win the pearl. Faithfully yours,

ROBT. M. ELVIN.

THOUGHTS FOR THOSE WHO THINK.

Generally speaking, the gospel has been viewed, reviewed, written upon, and preached almost exclusively from its redemptive powers here and hereafter. This is right and good and of great importance to the race, but let us view its deep underlying side in its power to prevent sin; for unless the gospel which "is the power of God unto salvation" can reach, arrest, prevent, and remove the lusts of the flesh, which are the causes of sin, before they take root and become a part of our very being, so much so that the Apostle Paul calls these lusts the carnal mind, through which the very thoughts are made impure, then it is a failure and leaves man no better off than the beasts, for, the dog is turned to his own vomit again; and the sow that was washed to her wallowing in the mire.—2 Peter 2: 22.

The gospel is not a failure, but this statement of the Apostle is verified in those who make great outward signs of having been washed and converted, but who really never were pricked to the heart by preventive power which purifies the inmost recesses of the soul. This is also beautifully illustrated in the following:

Doth a fountain send forth at the same place sweet water and bitter?—James 3: 11.

No, it cannot do so; neither can a man or woman continue to return to their old sins when the power of the gospel has done its perfect preventive work.

So, my beloved brethren and sisters, let us stand up by this basic law of prevention as follows:

Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.—Matt. 5:8.

And every man that hath this hope in him [of becoming like Christ in heirship and character] purifieth himself even as he is pure.—1 John 3: 3.

The Prophet Jeremiah speaks of a law that was to be written in the mind and in the heart: and our Lord most beautifully portrays this law which should be so forcibly stamped upon the mind that it would not only redeem but also prevent the recurrence of willful sin in thought, word, or deed.

For from within, out of the heart of man, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness: all these evil things come from within and defile the man.—Mark 7:21-23

Ye have heard that it bath been said by them of old time that. Thou shalt not kill; and whosoever shall kill, shall be in danger of the judgment of God. But I say unto you, that whosoever is angry with his brother shall be in danger of his judgment; and whosoever shall say to his brother, Raca, or Rabcah, shall be in danger of the council; and whosoever shall say to his brother, Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell fire. Therefore, if ye shall come unto me, or shall desire to come unto me, or if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath aught against thee, leave thou thy gift before the altar, and go thy way unto thy brother, and first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift.—Matt. 5: 23-26.

This last quotation is of the utmost importance and should be carefully meditated upon and put into practice by all saints. They should remember that neither their sacrament nor their oblations are acceptable to God unless these commands are complied with beforehand. Also the following which humbles and prepares the soul to discern the Lord's body, that it was pierced and broken for sin:

Agree with thine adversary quickly, while thou art in the way with him; lest at any time thine adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison. Verily I say unto thee, thou shalt by no means come out thence, until thou hast paid the uttermost farthing. Behold, it is written by them of old time, that thou shalt not commit adultery. But I say unto you, that whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her, hath committed adultery with her in his heart already. Behold I give unto you a commandment, that ye suffer none of these things to enter into your heart, for it is better that ye should deny yourselves of these things, wherein ye will take up your cross, than that ye should be cast into hell.

Then is given the parable of plucking out the eye, and cutting off the hand, and casting them away, rather than that the whole body be cast into hell.

And now this I speak, a parable concerning your sins; wherefore, east them from you, that you may not be hewn down and east into the fire.—Matt. 5:27-34.

Read the whole Sermon on the Mount, commencing at fifth chapter of Matthew, Inspired Translation, in which much of this basic law of prevention is given. The law of repentance also centers in this law of prevention which the Apostle so forcibly describes in 2 Corinthians 7:9-11.

Now I rejoice, not that ye were made sorry, but that ye sorrowed to repentance; for ye were made sorry after a godly manner. . . . For godly sorrow worketh repentance to salvation not to be repented of: but the sorrow of the world worketh death. For behold this selfsame thing, that ye sorrowed after a godly sort, what carefulness it wrought in you, yea, what clearing of yourselves, yea, what indignation, yea, what fear, yea, what vehement desire, yea, what zeal! In all things ye have approved yourselves to be clear in this matter.

Two kinds of sorrow are here illustrated. The godly sorrow repents and prevents sin and therefore brings salvation, while old fashioned worldly sorrow cries very loud and long over past offenses and as far as feelings and outward appearances go such a one is really sorry. But in a few hours or days let such a one enter into a most thorough and critical research of the inmost recesses of the soul, the mind, the thoughts, the heart, and see if the sins so long and loudly mourned over are not still there and reinforced by self-deception and hypocrisy. This is the worldly sorrow which the Apostle says must be repented of or it will bring death.

Now let us carefully examine just what saint or sinner should really do when he is overtaken in sin. Should they begin to shed tears and cry aloud acording to education and fashion? Will crying over spilled milk or past sins be of any benefit? Would not a single ounce of real godly preventive repentance weigh more in the balance at the great jugment day than a thousand pounds of ungodly and worldly sorrow?

There is only one true way to get rid of our sins, and that is through a godly sorrow that repents, forsakes, and prevents the doing over and over the same sins. So, my beloved brethren and sisters, instead of crying over past willful derelictions of duty, just look deeply into yourselves and all around you for the stumbling-block or blocks over which you fell, then be sure to put them where it will be impossible for you to fall over them again,

A. HAWS.

"UPON THIS ROCK."

Touching the above subject, I wish to introduce a few scriptural evidences, in support of the fact that the church was not built upon "revelation," but upon the "Christ revealed." "Whom do men say that I, the Son of man, am?" was the question propounded by the Master to the disciples. They answered that some said that he was "John the Baptist, some Elias, and others Jeremias or one of the prophets." Here are the opinions of men concerning Christ.

But now comes the question direct to the disciples: "Whom say ye that I am?" And Simon Peter answered and said:

Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God

And Jesus called him blessed, saying that flesh and blood had not revealed it, but the Father in heaven. Then he said:

And I say unto thee that thou art Peter. And upon this rock I will build my church: and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

The question was, Who do men say that I am? We see that men could not come to any definite conclusion unaided, as to who he was; but Peter came in possession of the fact by revelation. What was the thing re-That Jesus is the Christ, vealed? the son of the living God. It was his divinity or his divine personage that was revealed to the Apostle Peter. That was the rock upon which the Master said he would build his church. Not on "revelation," but the Christ revealed. This personification of the divine personage of Christ seems to have been understood throughout the Scriptures. He was a rock. See 1 Corinthians 10:4:

And did all drink the same spiritual drink; for they drank of that spiritual Rock that followed them: and that Rock was Christ.

Behold. I lay in Sion a stumblingstone and rock of offense: and whosoever believeth on him [Christ] shall not be ashamed.—Rom. 9:33.

There is none holy as the Lord, for there is none besides thee, neither is there any Rock like our God.—1 Samuel 2: 2.

See also Deuteronomy 32:4; Numbers 20:11; Psalms 18:15; Isaiah 17:10. I believe in the divine principle of revelation as a true one, and indispensable as a conductor of intelligence, as a revelator; as the current of electricity conveys our thoughts on wires, so revelation is the conductor of intelligence to fallen man. But the electricity is not the message; neither is revelation the rock; therefore the church was not built on revelation, but on the Christ revealed. Christ the Rock. Yours in Christ, GALENA, Indiana, August 7. M. R. SCOTT, Sen.

Letter Department.

HAMILTON, Scotland.

Editors Herald:—I herewith forward you verbatim copies of correspondence between Mr. Platte D. Lyman of the Utah Church, president of the European mission, and myself. This gentleman and some of his colaborers have been publicly claiming that Joseph Smith taught and practiced the doctrine of polygamy and that the mother of the above-named gentleman had been one of Joseph Smith's polygamous consorts. One of the elders of this Utah church told me if I wrote to Mr. Lyman he would tell me so, etc. So, as will be seen, I wrote to Mr. P. D. Lyman on September 14, 1900, and patiently waited for a reply. Up to November 26, 1900, I had received none, so I wrote again enclosing stamped envelope for a reply.

I waited until December 5, 1900, but in vain. Again I wrote and this time my importunities produced a reply which is characteristic. I replied again asking for a reply to my queries, but up to date have not received any.

There cannot be the slightest doubt that this very mean attempt to traduce the dead prophet's character is but a fabrication of Utah Mormonism that was so characteristic (and still seems to be) that Brigham used to boast his elders were so adept in. What a pity these men cannot learn to tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

Yours in bonds, J. W. RUSHTON.

September 14, 1900.

MR. PLATTE D. LYMAN.

Dear Sir.—I trust you will pardon my intrusion upon your time, also my apparent presumption in addressing you, seeing I am an entire stranger to you; but being informed you are an authority in that society known as the church of Latter Day Saints, I hope the importance of my inquiries will be ample apology (if any is needed) for my course of procedure.

Will you kindly answer me the following questions?

I had better premise my questions, however, by a short explanation. A short time ago (probably three months) I met a gentleman who claimed to be an elder in your church who stated he had recently come over from Utah, and in our conversation he informed me that the church of Latter Day Saints believed in polygamy. Will you please tell me if this is true?

He also informed me that Joseph Smith was a polygamist. Will you please favor me with particulars so that I can be assured on this point?

He further stated that Mr. Platte D. Lyman, the president of the European mission, his (your I presume) mother was a wife of Joseph Smith. Is this true, that Mrs. Lyman, your mother, was married to Joseph Smith? If so, at what date did the ceremony take place? Can you supply me with the name of the officiating minister and the name of the place or town where the ceremony transpired?

I also was privileged to meet another of your elders who had come from America, and he stated to me that the book called the Book of Mormon taught the practice of polygamy, and he was prepared to prove it. I asked him for some quotations that would prove this, but he did not give me any.

Can I ask you to send me a list of quotations out of the Book of Mormon, which in the opinion of your church, are recognized as being proofs?

Will you also give me the exact date that can be authenticated by the facts of history, when polygamy was first taught in the church of Latter Day Saints?

Further; during a walk I was taking one day

I had occasion to go into a secondhand book store, and while there I purchased a comparatively good copy of the Book of Mormon. It is the fifth electrotyped edition, printed and published by George Teasdale, 42 Islington, Liverpool, dated 1889. Will this be an authorized edition of the Book of Mormon and endorsed by your church? The reason I ask this question is because I find in this Book of Mormon in my possession these passages, in Book of Jacob, chapter 2, verses 22 to 28, which read thus:

"And now I make an end of speaking unto you concerning this pride. And were it not that I must speak unto you concerning a grosser crime, my heart would rejoice exceedingly because of you. But the word of God burthens me because of your grosser crimes. For behold, thus saith the Lord, This people begin to wax in iniquity; and they understand not the scriptures; for they seek to excuse themselves in committing whoredoms, because of the things which were written concerning David, and Solomon his son. Behold, David and Solomon truly had many wives and concubines, which thing was abominable before me, saith the Lord; wherefore, thus saith the Lord, I have led this people forth out of the land of Jerusalem, by the power of mine arm, that I might raise up unto me a righteous branch from the fruit of the loins of Joseph. Wherefore, I, the Lord God, will not suffer that this people shall do like unto them of old. Wherefore, my brethren, hear me and hearken to the word of the Lord; for there shall not any man among you have save it be one wife; and concubines he shall have none: for I. the Lord God, delighteth in the chastity of women. And whoredoms are an abomination before me; thus saith the Lord of hosts."

Will you please inform me if I am correct in taking that quotation coming from what your people claim is equally as inspired as the Bible to be condemnatory of polygamy? If not, will you please tell me how to reconcile it with your belief?

Lastly; is a belief in the doctrine of polygamy necessary to salvation? If so, how do you account for Jesus Christ not having taught or practiced it, also the Apostle Paul? So far as history will permit us to draw conclusions neither our Lord nor the valiant apostle to the Gentiles were ever married at all?

Dear sir, will you kindly pardon my lengthy inquiry and endeavor by as complete a reply as possible to relieve my doubts and anxieties on these points. Thanking you in anticipation, I am, Yours respectfully,

J. W. RUSHTON.

November 26, 1900.

Mr. P. D. LYMAN.

Dear Sir:—Under date of September 14, 1900, I wrote you, making some inquiries which were of great importance to me. Up to date I have not had any response from you. I enclose stamped envelope. If you failed to receive my letter, kindly inform me and I will forward you a copy. Please note change of address.

Very respectfully,

J. W. RUSHTON.

December 5, 1900.

MR. PLATTE D. LYMAN.

Dear Sir:—I have not heard from you yet respecting my two letters, one of September 14, 1900, and one of November 26, 1900, which contained stamped envelope. Kindly give these your earliest consideration and oblige, Yours respectfully,

J. W. Rushton.

On December 7 the following reply reached

December 7, 1900.

MR. J. W. RUSHTON, Hamilton, N. B.

Sir:-Your various communications reached me in due time, but I have not felt myself under any obligation to reply to them, because you have approached me under false pretenses; and have sought to appear in a character that however congenial its impersonation may be, is entirely foreign to the position you occupy. In the first place your recent interview with two Mormon elders, from America, from whom you learned that the "Church of Latter Day Saints believed in polygamy" and your incidental purchase of a Book of Mormon, in a secondhand book store, are narrated with an evident intention to create the impression that these events constituted your introduction to the "Mormons" and their belief.

Other parts of your letter also plainly manifest the insincerety of your claim to having "doubts and anxiety on these points," for which you desire relief. It is very apparent that you hoped, by deceiving me as to your true position, to draw forth some statements or claims that might not be made if your actual standing was known.

However, as a regular reader of the SAINTS' HERALD, of Lamoni, I have known of you for some months, as a missionary of the Reorganized Church. Therefore your attempt to pose as a casual investigator of the "Mormon" faith, only caused me to feel contempt for your dishonest and unmanly course; and I cannot but consider your effort at deception, a clumsy insult to my intelligence.

I have no doubt there are honest people in the Reorganized Church who earnestly desire to know the truth concerning the points of difference between their own organization and the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, and to such I would be glad to render any assistance possible, towards leading them to an understanding of the truth, as it is established by a cloud of unimpeachable witnesses; but I am free to admit that in your communication you have not impressed me as being of that class.

Yours respectfully,

PLATTE D. LYMAN.

To this I replied as follows:

December 8, 1900. Mr FLATTE D. LYMAN.

Dear Sir:—Your reply to my three letters is before me. Please observe I have not any answers to my questions. I pass by your unwarranted insinuations and covert insults, deeming them unworthy of notice, save to remark that such a course appears to me to be an unkind, ungentlemanly evasion of the points at issue.

For the sake of truth, I appealed to you for evidence (which you boast of possessing) on this matter which is so interesting and important, not only to myself but to the public at large. In my judgment your position as a professing minister of Christ, makes it obligatory upon you to give the evidence at your disposal, for the vindication of truth. And here permit me to suggest that truth is impervious to the attacks of foe or critic, and hence I ask, why do you condescend to such undignified cavil, when I but ask you for the evidence of your public statement.

Again, I insist that you should supply me with proof irrespective of who or what I am, and so relieve my doubts and anxieties of such grave importance.

Very respectfully,

J. W. RUSHTON.

I have not had any reply from Mr. Platte D. Lyman, nor do I now expect any. Therefore, I have concluded Mr. P. D. Lyman has no reply to make and so do not believe that his mother was a wife of Joseph Smith.

AUBURN, Iowa, August 6.

Editors Herald:—At the Orr schoolhouse I preached one week, staying with Bro. and Sr. Christianson, the only Saints there. Stayed one night with Mr. Phillips and family. Was treated nicely. Though it was so hot, the people attended well, and gave the best of attention. It was in the midst of corn plowing and harvest. Preached for a time at Head Grove church, but the heat and harvest militated against our attendance. Stayed with Bro. C. F. Hayer and family, and was made to feel "at home." The Saints at Head Grove remember that it requires money for a preacher to travel.

It was at the Orr schoolhouse where Bro. D. M. Rudd was challenged to discuss church differences, and after so long a time arrangements have been made to commence such discussion October 1, to last four nights to each proposition. The first four nights the writer affirms our church to be in harmony with the church established by Christ and his apostles, in organization, faith, and practice. The last four nights Elder Will Ellmore, of the Christian Church, affirms same proposition for his church. He claims to have met Bro. Evans of Canada.

At Coalville seven sermons were preached, three on the hottest day of my experience,—110° in the shade! The Saints and friends seemed to vie with each other in kindness to the sojourner, and young Bro. John Jordison saw to it that the preacher visited all the Saints, and after working till three a. m. in the coal pit was up again at five the last night of our stay to get up to Ft. Dodge in time for the train. One day of the stay he conveyed me to a stucco mill, where we saw the manufacture of this useful article of commerce. The Saints and friends here also remembered the preacher with the needful.

Bro. D. M. Rudd would receive a royal welcome at Eagle Grove and vicinity, as would H. O. Smith and George Thorburn at Coalville. It does me good to follow where my brethren are held in such high esteem. May the ministry in general be so loyal to the trust imposed as to merit such confidence!

Let both ministry and laity preach deed sermons and get rid of every semblance of jealousy, and this church will arise and "shine."

Tomorrow night will conclude a nearly two weeks' stay here, with preaching every night and three times each Sunday, save a call to Boone for a funeral. The Sunday night services were largely attended; the others not so good. The Saints have done remarkably well in attending. Bro. and Sr. Carroll's generosity is already known as far as the HERALD reaches. It would be pleasing to see some additions as a reward of their zeal. Anabel's baby girl was dedicated to the service of the Lord last Sunday.

The drought has cast its withering blight and sent gloom into the homes of the tillers of the soil. Yet wickedness seems to flourish while sackcloth and ashes remain undonned.

Hopefully,

J. W. Wight.

ELGIN, Ill., August 2.

Dear Herald:—We are trying to get the message of the gospel before the people of Elgin; but like other large cities we find the people seemingly too busy to listen. So we have tried to preach to them on the move.

Bro. J. T. Hackett came here about July 10, and began to preach on the street. A few days later I joined him. We kept on speaking on the street the balance of the week. Our audience would vary from a few to several hundred. In the meantime we sent for our gospel tent which we set up on Douglass Avenue, near the Northwestern R R. depot. Our audiences in the tent so far have been rather small, but what few have attended are intelligent, thinking men and women. Bro. J. T. has succeeded in getting an article of a half a column length in one of the leading daily papers, setting forth our views in a brief but very concise way, so that by the time we will have finished our tent work here the citizens of Elgin will have a greater knowledge of the latter-day work than they had when we came in their midst.

So far as we know there never had been a sermon preached in this city by one of our faith till we came here three weeks ago. We expect to continue here for some time yet. The brethren here are supporting our efforts by faith and by means. May their noble efforts be not in vain!

In gospel bonds, E. M. WILDERMUTH.

LINCOLN, Neb., August 3.

Dear Herald:—I have never written you before; not because I have not felt that I wanted to, but, like many others felt my weakness and inability to interest the better writers. I have just finished reading, in the HERALD of July 31, the article "Remission of Sins" written by W. R. Standefer, and it has spoken so much to my heart. I was baptized when I was quite young, and before serious thought had ever come to me, and what sins I have committed have been done since that time, though I hope they are not so bad as I have felt them to be; but had I to live my life over there are some things I should leave undone that I have done, and I have felt very badly, and have asked God many times to forgive my sins, and I have received comfort from him. The article mentioned has also brought comfort, and I see things plainer after having read it. I am in a sense "standing alone" in this work; there is no church here, and but few members, and my family are not members of the church. But I was raised in the church, and have been taught its truths always, and have no inclination to depart from them. The Latter Day Saint work is everything to me, and from now on I want to do my best, though it seems to me very few opportunities present themselves. So I felt that if I wrote to the HERALD it would be one opportunity met that had presented itself.

It has been a long time since I have heard any of our own ministers preach, and I get "hungry" for the truth presented in its fullness. I presume I have said very little of interest to the readers of the HERALD, but my heart feels lighter, just the same, because I have made a start, and I am happy so to do. I ask an interest in the prayers of the Saints, that I may be blessed, and that I may stand ready and willing to serve God in any way he may deem it best. With prayers for the welfare of the Saints, I am,

Sincerely,

SR. PEARLE SWAIN SCOFIELD. 1627 Sycamore Street.

HAMLET, Ky., August 2.

Editors Herald:—As it has been some time since I wrote your valuable paper, and not seeing much from these parts, I thought it not out of order for me to pen a few lines to let all know that I am still among the living and enjoying reasonably good health.

I have been laboring in Kentucky and Tennessee since the 14th of June. Have had fair liberty most of the time.

Our conference at Eagle Creek branch passed off without a jar. Our worthy missionary in charge, Bro. I. N. Roberts, was with us and presided over the conference. All seemed to enjoy the meetings, and I hope that good will reach all parts of the district, as representatives were from every branch in the district. Bro. Roberts continued the meetings another week. I came to this place expecting to hold meetings in this vicinity, but on arriving here found the Campbellites in full blast in a protracted effort. On our way to Bro. Hamilton's we passed where some of the neighbors had met and were raising a barn. After we passed by the burning of the secoolhouse (Davis' chapel) was discussed, and that night it was consigned to the flames. So not willing to be beaten out of a meeting, we decided to build an arbor and try it anyway; so I sent some tracts to the Campbellite meeting and had them distributed, announcing that our meeting would begin August 10. The next day the following notice was tacked up, which will speak for itself:

"Any Mormon elder that is caught at Davis' chapel, or in the neighborhood, or about Briensburg, preaching their infamous doctrine, will be dealt with, as we see people from ambush. We aim to have no Mormon preaching in this county; and if you value your lives anything, stay away.

"KENTUCKY REGULATORS."

So if you hear of us being shot in the back from ambush, please don't think that we are on the run. We are here to stand by the work, let it cost what it may. Although I do not feel anyways uneasy about it, yet we cannot tell what people will do when they are stirred up by the hireling shepherds. If all passes off all right here, we will try and be at Fulton, Kentucky, sometime in August, to hold a meeting there. Let the Saints pray for our protection.

Ever trusting in the living God, I am, Your colaborer,

W. R. SMITH.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., August 5.

Editors Herald:—I am pushing the work here, and have considerable opposition, because some of the heads of the man-made orders of worship are getting their eyes open. I baptized four yesterday, and one of them was a young man of good talent. He was president of the Epworth League. Another very good exhorter in the Methodist Church has confessed that he cannot find a flaw in the doctrine we preach, and said he could not approve of the Methodist doctrine any more, and that he was going to get out of it. I have loaned him my Book of Mormon to read.

A Brighamite and his wife were at the meeting yesterday, and he got up and said he was sorry that he was not at the water's edge and baptized with the four that were, and said he wanted to come in the church, for he was convinced we are right in every particular. I think I will have to go to the river again about next Sunday.

I am sorry to say that my colaborer, Elder J. M. Scott, lost his daughter Clara, and was called home, and has not been able to be with me since. We miss him him in the work, for he is a power in God's hands, and a true child of God. May God bless him in his afflictions, and enable him to soon return to his field of labor. Your brother,

J. W. METCALF.

1819 Ninth Street.

LEAF RIVER, Ill., Aug. 6.

Editors Herald:—It has not been because of a lack of interest in the work that I have not written to you for so long, but because I had nothing of especial importance to write. I have been trying to labor where good could be accomplished and think some good has been done although I have done no baptizing.

On June 21 Bro. Jerome Wildermuth baptized five at Dekalb, and I confirmed them. From there we came here on the 22d, and on the 25th began meetings in a United Brethren church at Lightsville, a mile and a half from here, and have continued each evening since, with generally increasing attendance. It seems that our preaching is having some effect, as the M. E. preacher has announced that upon next Sunday night he will grapple with the Mormon problem. I believe his subject is "The Mormon Problem." I met him this morning, and asked him if he would tell his hearers the difference between us and the Utah church; but he would not promise to do so. I then asked him if he would permit me to reply to him when he had finished his discourse if he presented anything that did not do us justice. To this his answer was a positive "No."

This is a new opening and prejudice runs high; but we are making friends. A number of men heard my conversation with the M. E. preacher today, and I overheard one of them say to another that the Methodist preacher got caught and contradicted himself. I think I will stay and hear him lecture, then move on to Lee, Lee county, which is another new place.

Bro. and Sr. Robinson live here. They are young people, but alive in the work.

For truth.

Editors Herald:—Having recently passed throught a very severe trial, my heart is filled with a greater desire to help others who may suffer as I have done. I have been in the church over twenty years, and not until recently have I been impressed to write of a dream that I had just before I was baptized.

My dear son died last January, and since that time I have suffered more than I believed it possible for me to suffer and live. During this trial the tempter has tried hard to destroy my hope and faith in a life after death.

Since I was baptized I have tried to live the life of a Saint, and in so doing have been much blessed by God's Spirit. During the darkest moments of my recent trial the memory of this dream has cheered and strengthened me, and others may be strengthened when their faith is weak.

Before my husband and I joined the church some elders came to our home and talked with us about the gospel. They told us to pray earn stly that God might give us a knowledge of the truthfulness of the gospel. That night I prayed, but with very little hope of receiving an answer.

THE DREAM

That night I dreamed I was walking through a commons, when I saw my husband's brother baptizing some people in a font. Steps cut in the earth led down to the water. When my brother-in-law saw me, he said, "Come and be baptized:" but I said "No, I have already been baptized." (I had been sprinkled when an infant.) But he argued with me saying, "But that was muddy water." After talking a little while, I went down into the water and was baptized. After coming up out of the water I went westward a little way till I came to a road that went directly north. It seemed to be composed of white gravel, was higher than the ground on either side, and was perfectly straight.

When I started to walk along this road I was joined by a spirit guide; the guide seemed to be a man, but was like a vapor, or a shadow. The road was called the "King's Highway," and led to heaven.

After we had walked several miles we came to the gates of heaven, which were like two high, wide, folding doors. In front of the gates was assembled a great multitude of people. Everything seemed to be of a worldly character. Some of the people were seated around tables drinking liquor, while others were playing cards. The same brother that had baptized me was in a booth, and selling something to eat. He said to me, "Don't go in there, that is hell, not heaven. There is thunder and lightning in there."

I felt very sad to think that after walking so far expecting to find heaven I had been disappointed. But I halted for only a few moments, then clasping my hands and looking upward I said, "Hitherto the Lord hath led me, and I will go in." I spoke the word will in a determined tone, and hardly had the words left my lips when the gates opened wide, and as soon as I entered they closed again, and without the aid of hands.

On looking around I saw a sister-in-law of mine, who seemed to have entered at the same time although not with me. We heard the rumbling of thunder and saw what appeared to be a quivering, red fog. Filled with a joy I cannot express, and singing hymns of praise to God, we walked westward.

When we had gone a little way, a beautiful angel went swiftly past us and spoke to a monk who was standing by the gate, his head bowed, and muttering prayers. The angel said, "That is not the way to serve the Lord our God, with a hanging head and a drooping countenance. Lift up your head, and, with a joyful countenance serve the Lord your God." Then he returned as swiftly as he came.

I said to my sister, "Oh, how I would like to go out and tell them to come in, that this is heaven after all."

She said, "Yes, but you know that you cannot go out to tell them; those who come in here can never go out again."

So we walked on, rejoicing; and as we walked the red mist receded before us and the thunder grew fainter and fainter, until we saw through the mist a beautiful city. At this point I awoke.

EAST SAN JOSE, Cal., Aug. 3.

Dear Editors:—I will write you some incidents of one rainy day in New York which are strictly true. One dull cold morning in November I left my pleasant home in Flushing, Long Island, and took an early train for New York City, a distance of about eight miles. My object in going was to meet a friend from Boston who intended coming that morning on the steamboat from Newport, Rhode Island. After crossing East River I wended my way across the city to the North River, and arrived at the wharf just as the boat was coming in, but was disappointed to learn that my friend had not come.

Not wishing to return directly home I decided to go up to Grand street and do some shopping. On reaching that locality I soon became absorbed in the fascinating display of millinery that delights the hearts of weak women. All the morning the sky had been gray and lowering, and a disagreeable southeast wind was blowing, which betokened a coming storm. Still I did not think it would rain before night. But I had not been on the avenue long till I discovered to my dismay that it was raining. So, reluctantly yet resolutely, I turned my face towards home, and ascended the stairs to the Second avenue elevated cars, bought my ticket, and passed out to the track. Chancing to glance across to the station for the down town trains, I saw my son who had left home soon after I did. He was dressed in hunting outfit. and was on his way to join a party of friends in Brooklyn who were to accompany him on gunning expedition to the south side of Long Island. But as he needed some extra articles for the occasion he had stopped in New York to procure them. The party was to be gone a week, and I wished to say good-bye to him again, as he was so near. I did my best to attract his attention, but he was looking up the track and did not see me. So thinking I would have time to go to him I went down the stairs, crossed the street, and up the stairs on the other side. At the ticket window were a party of women and children who delayed me some, but I bought a ticket and hurried out to the track just as my son had boarded his car, and the train was moving off from the station without his even seeing me. For a moment I stood in silence, feeling completely disgusted with the ill luck that had attended ever since morning. I then retraced my steps to the street; and not wishing to ascend the stairs again I took a Fourth Avenue surface car for Thirty-fourth street ferry, East River, and arrived there a few seconds after the boat had left her slip for Long Island City. There were others as well as myself that seemed greatly annoyed at missing the boat, probably because they might miss a train on the other side of the river. One excited and grim visaged man rushed down from the elevated train at break-neck speed and down the pier. and tried to jump on the boat after she was several feet from the wharf, but was prevented by a policeman, who caught and held him back. But instead of being thankful that a disaster had been averted, the man snarled his displeasure in a very disagreea-

As it was then raining very hard we all went into the ferry house to wait for the next boat, which was done in about fifteen minutes. Soon after being seated I was made aware of a struggling, resisting sound from the opposite side of the room. It was a young mother trying to keep a little atom of humanity from getting off the seat. But the baby won the battle, and soon he was running around the room. First he went to the sour-faced man who was standing by a window looking at the falling rain; and, catching him by the skirt of his coat, called out, "You one." The man did not deign him even a turn of his head; but, nothing daunted, the little fellow passed on to the next, saying, "You is two;" then to the next, "Fre, fo, fi." Five seemed to be as high as he could count, for when he got that far he would commence again. He went from one to another, never missing any. To a boy he said: "You are—how many are you?" The boy answered, "Fourteen," probably referring to his own age. The child looked into his face with a grieved, reproving look and said: "No, you only fo'; you know you is only fo'."

But he soon grew tired of that amusement, and commenced whirling around on his heels, and singing, "I dot fiftea dollos in my inside pottet. I dot fiftea stitches in my outside tippet." And in five minutes after the disappointed crowd had entered the room, all faces were wreathed in smiles. Even the grim man by the window turned and laughed with the rest as he watched the antics of the child. I thought, Truly, "a little child shall lead them." What was rain and disappointment to the child? His sunshine was from within, and he scattered it broadcast all around him.

Then our boat arrived, and we all made a rush for it.

Just then I met a friend, Mrs. E, from Flushing; and together we went on board. As soon as the boat had reached the other side there was the same hurrying to get off. The men did not wait for her to be made fast to the pier, but jumped over the chain before it was let down. Decorum restrained the ladies from doing likewise; but as soon as possible we hurried off, and across to the railroad station near by. As we entered we glanced at the indicator to see how soon the train would leave for Flushing, and found we had ten minutes to wait. When we were seated we recognized several acquaintances. One lady, whom I will call Mrs. H., smiled and bowed cordially to me. Her companion. whom I will call Mrs. C., noticed it and said: "That, I think, is Mrs. S. of Bagside Avenue. I have known her by sight for some time and would like to be introduced to her. I believe she is a member of my own church."

Mrs. H. replied, "She used to be a Methodist, but she withdrew from them recently, and has joined the Latter Day Saints." This remark was like a slap in the face to Mrs. C. She actually sprang to her feet, and her face assuming an expression of horror; but gradually settling back in her seat she exclaimed in a surprised and contemptuous tone of voice: "And you speak to her!"

Then the station master came through with his keys and unlocked the door leading to the cars, and called out, "Show your tickets," at the same time taking his stand just outside the brass railing. And as we passed through the narrow passage, in single file, he clipped our tickets. Then we went on out, and selected our especial car. We all took the Flushing train, but different cars. Mrs. H. took the car for Murrey Hill; Mrs. C.'s destination is Main Street, Mrs. S. leaves the car at Bridge street; Mrs. E. goes on to College Point. Perhaps I ought to explain that before reaching Flushing the train divides, part of it going to the north side of the town, the rest of it keeping on towards the east, but all arrived safely there. And I wondered if it would be the same at the end of life's journey, whether we shall all reach the desired haven of rest; Mrs. H. as a Baptist, Mrs. C. as a Methodist, Mrs. E. as an Episcopalian, and Mrs. S. as a Latter Day I. DAVENPORT, Iowa, August 9.

Editors Herald:—Our silence regarding the tent and its whereabouts may have caused some to wonder. Well, we, ourselves, began to wonder whether we would get our new top this summer in time to do any work. To be brief, we are located on corner of Locust and Main streets in this city, having begun July 31. Our attendance is good, and some seem interested, while others "know it all" and seem almost proof against the truth. From some of the arguments produced we are of the opinion that Babylon's children are in a serious condition. One old gentleman told me last night that "it was impossible for a man not to believe in God and the Bible." "The Bible is God's word, written entirely by inspiration, and we cannot avoid believing it." If reading the Bible will convert everybody to it, then there is nothing for the ministry to do. But he convinced me, by his own argument, that at least some preaching might be beneficial to some.

The Saints are doing well in supporting the meetings. A movement was inaugurated a short time ago for the purpose of buying a small tent to go with the large one. And for the past week Bro. Bailey and the writer have been domiciled in a 10x12 tent furnished by the Saints of the "tri-cities." Part of the time we have been "batching;" but as my wife seemed to think a taste of missionary fare would be appreciated, she is now with us, and we are only too glad to place the cooking department in her charge. She will also afford material aid in the line of music, and good music is a very necessary feature in tent work.

Just prior to coming to this place we held a series of meetings at Carbon Cliff, Illinois, in the school yard. Here, also, we had good attendance; but if any were specially interested they succeeded well in keeping that fact hidden. We sowed the seed as best we knew, and trust and pray that others may reap. We were kindly cared for while here, at the home of Bro and Sr. I. C. Willis. Just at the close of this series Bro. Bailey was called to DeWitt on account of sickness of relatives, but, returned in a few days. Bro. E. A. Stedman labored with us for some time, but the extreme heat was almost too much for him.

Our tent had been stored in the barn belonging to Mr. Sam'l Suman, of Moline. Though not a member of the church yet he seems to understand something regarding the brotherhood of man and is willing to help a friend in need. The remainder of the family know how to care for the missionary, and they do not hesitate in doing it. Yet we would not mention one family to the exclusion of others; for wherever we have gone we have been welcomed. Bro Stedman is home for a short visit with his family, but expects to return soon. Bro. Davis was also called home some time ago owing to sickness of one of his children.

We have been made to wonder not a little, in reading some of the many urgent appeals "for Graceland" which have appeared in the HERALD. And whether it be possible to obtain space for a friendly criticism we will not know till we try. The climax came a few days ago when we read an "appeal" in which were some words addressed to the missionary. As we happen to be one of them, may we speak?

We have not access to the copy now, but as we remember the statement, it was like this: "That unless that college debt is paid the whole work of the church is lost and the college will stand as a monument of folly and unbelief." [Bro. Elvin's language is as follows: "The payment of the debt is all-important, and God commanded; but if the Saints stop there, then is the whole work of the church a failure, and the college building would only be a monument of folly and unbelief."-ED | Now, brother, please tell us what the "work" of the church is? Is the "whole work" of this church of Jesus Christto build colleges? I have never preached nor do I yet believe the church has quit the soul-saving work and gone into the college business exclusively. Nor do I think the author of the statement believes it! Then why this argument, please? I have never refused to take whatever has been offered for Graceland and I have no desire to keep anyone from assisting. But as one I do protest against such statements going to the world. Why, it makes my salvation depend upon Graceland! Some of the work of the church in the past was to initiate me into the kingdom. If the "college debt" is not paid then I get no salvation, is that it? Surely not. Well, then, brother, tell us what you do mean.

I understand the ministry of this church are commissioned to preach the gospel! And for one I cannot yet see that the gospel of Christ needs any appendages. So, according as I may be able I expect to continue to preach the gospel; but these side issues will have to take a back seat with me. We need more missionaries! The families of those already now at work could be far more comfortable! We have many, very many poor amongst us. And so long as these three conditions exist, brethren, you may expect my appeals to be in that direction.

Lest we be condemned by some for what we have written we will close. We expect to continue here for ten days or two weeks yet.

In the work.

F. A. RUSSELL.

BELLEVILLE, Kan., Aug. 7.

Editors Herald:—Only three missionaries for this large field, more than one third of the state! We sometimes think we have all we can do to convert them all, or even gather the few.

While at Concordia an aged man talking to us claimed to have had the Spalding Story Manuscript. He knew all about the Book of Mormon. He, however, changed his mind. I talked very plainly to him, and I feel he will not be so free to attack the Book of Mormon and "old Joe Smith" when talking to strangers. After I had preached on the street one man wanted to know if we really believed in Jesus Christ. He thought we had passed that stage. Said we were a back number. He knew we had recently received a revelation, he said. Then stated there is to be a much greater revelation given to the world in a short time through the spiritualists; and also that Robert Ingersoll, Brigham Young, Henry Ward Beecher, and others are now forming an association with power enough to change the atmospheric conditions and send the heat six hundred miles farther north than it has heretofore been. I thought, Is not Satan preparing to deceive many men, when the time arrives for the fulfillment of God's word, "And they who are in the north countries shall come in remembrance before the Lord, and their prophets shall hear his voice, and shall no longer stay themselves, and they shall smite the rocks, and the ice shall flow down at their presence."-D. C. 108:6. No doubt Satan will have many minds prepared to believe it was departed ones, such as Mr. Ingersoll, who manifested the power. "If it were possible" he will "deceive the very elect."

We just closed an interesting meeting east of here. Four were baptized, and we hope "such as shall be saved." Are now opening the work at this place, a schoolhouse northwest of Belleville.

We are glad that our reunion committee did not call off the reunion. Though the weather has been dry in Kansas, yet with a good crop of wheat, alfalfa, considerable of corn, and plenty of corn fodder for stock, the state is far from suffering, and I see no need to make great complaint. If the Saints are faithful, God will bless them with sufficient; and those who do not live faithful will soon realize the chastening of the Lord is upon them causing "shame and repreach." The priesthood who are active and humble will realize theirs is "glory and honor." We labor for God's glory,—the rebuilding of the "old waste places."

In bonds,

L. G. GURWELL.

MANCHESTER, Eng., July 29.

Dear Saints: — At last we are in the "mother country"—England—having been on the ocean eight and one half days. Bro. and Sr. E. L. Kelley, husband and I started on the Saxonia from Boston Harbor at one o'clock, Saturday, July 20. Some of the dear Saints were at the wharf to see us off, and even came a little way out on one of the tugboats. We were loth to see them go back to the shore again, and were sad indeed when we could no longer see the flutter of a hand-kerchief indicating their presence.

The day was beautiful, and the ocean seemed perfect, being so smooth and placid. Before evening we saw land fade away, and ere nightfall we were on the "trackless deep."

That evening we saw the whales as they spouted, some distance from us. They made me think of huge fountains of our own land.

That first half day was to me by far the most pleasant of all succeeding days. The others of the party remarked that the next day was indeed grand; but as for me—I cared not for the day—I was "feeding fishes" ere nightfall, and continued to do so intermittently during the entire journey. Let it be said, though, that I was not alone in this, for even "the brethren" participated. Sunday morning, being persuaded to go on deck, I was amply repaid for the effort it cost by seeing the rocky shores of Ireland. I was indeed glad to see land again, and equally glad to see the large flocks of gulls which followed us. They are beautiful birds, with their plump, white bodies, large gray wings lined with the snowy white, yellow beaks and feet and their ever bright, watchful eyes. They followed us constantly for the remainder of our journey, and were a source of enjoyment.

We passed many points of interest on the Irish coast, and I gradually began to feel as if life were really worth living; though meals were hardly worth eating, though ever so tempting.

Monday morning we steamed into the harbor of Liverpool, and were all quite anxious to be on English soil. God had indeed blessed us with a beautiful voyage, and we are grateful to him for his loving kindness unto us.

Arriving at L'verpool we soon made our way to Manchester on the "express." We passed many cozy, quaint English homes in coming here, and enjoyed the ride very much.

We are now all comfortably settled at the home of Bro. Clark, where we are being nicely entertained. We are looking forward with anticipation to the conference which convenes here shortly, and hope for a feast of "good things."

To the dear Saints of Wisconsin, my love and greetings to you all.

Your sister in His cause,
EMMA MUCEUS

LONDON, Ont., Aug. 9.

Editors Herald:—Our branch and Sunday school and Religio meetings are all regularly attended by the Saints, and once in a while some not of the faith. Our Sunday evening services find some outsiders; but as I read the letters of the missionaries I think they are more successful in the country than the city, for London has been well covered by some of our missionary force, especially Bro. Evans.

We all enjoyed a visit from Bro. Geo. Harrington two Sundays ago. He was returning from a visit to the Pan-American. He preached for us twice, -very able sermons. Bro. George was baptized at the early experiences of the London branch. He regretted very much at not seeing Sr. Quick, who has recently died, July 3. Sr. Quick was a member of the church for twenty-five years, being baptized by Bro. Newton, and was a faithful, good member but for the last two and one half years was a great sufferer. Towards the last she was administered to again and again, and would receive ease for a time; but, surrounded by her children and some of the Saints, she quietly and peacefully passed away-a good mother and a good Saint. Elder Howlett conducted the funeral services at the house, with good effect. She leaves three daughters, Sr. Lurcot of New York, Sr. J. W. Logan of Detroit, and Sr. Wm. Fligg of this city.

I was very much encouraged with my visit to the General Conference. Bro. Evans told me if I would keep my eyes and ears open I would learn lots; and I can say that verily was true, for my thoughts of it now are even pleasant. I was somewhat disappointed but not discouraged at not receiving my blessing; but I guess Bro. A. Smith was too busy, and being of a hopeful disposition I await the next time.

We receive a visit from Bro. Evans once in awhile; but at present he is away north of here, and I guess will not strike London for some time. When he is here he is so full of fresh victories that he encourages us all. He has appointed me here to collect money for the college debt. I have obtained some names, and some have promised; but hope to see London help in the great debt. With prayers and good wishes for all the brethren and sisters, Your brother,

Out in Mid Ocean, on board Steamer "Lucania" July 31.

Editors Herald:-The serious illness of my aged mother hindered me from sailing in company with Bishop Kelley from Boston on the 20th inst., hence I was transferred to the "Lucania," which sailed on the 27th, at one o'clock p. m., with about one thousand passengers on board. It was a sight that one seldom sees, as the grand old ship moved out in the harbor. Hundreds of people had gathered on the piers to wave good-bye to their friends, and it seemed that nearly every one, both on the piers and the vessel, was in tears. I could not keep the tears back from my own eyes as I thought of loved ones whom I was leaving so far behind, and my aged mother who was so very ill. However, I sincerely pray that our heavenly Father will prolong her life a few years and bless the dear ones at home. Of all the people on the piers and the ship, there was not one that the writer knew; hence it was that I felt very lonely for a short time, but rejoiced in the fact that I had a Friend who was ever near to those who put their entire trust in him. perchance they be upon land or the deep blue

We are now four days and nights out from port, and as yet not one of the passengers has been seasick. This a. m. the sea is as smooth as glass; and our magnificent, floating palace is speeding along as grandly and as dignified as our beautiful swans move on the waters of the ponds and lakes in the parks of our great cities.

Perhaps a few details concerning the "Lucania" will be read with interest by some of the readers of the Herald. She is a twin-screw steamer; length 625 feet; breadth 65.3; depth 41; gross tonnage 12,950; while the displacement is 20,000; horse power 26,000; speed about twenty-five miles an hour in fair weather. Can carry from 1,800 to 2,000 passengers, and a crew of 432 men. Consumes between four and five hundred tons of coal a day. She is lighted by electricity. There are about 1,350 lights, and these require an output on the part of dynamos of 42,000 watts. The current is distributed throughout the ship by about fifty miles of wire. All the lamps together would give a light equal to about 22,000 candles, absorbing 135 horse power.

The accommodations are very good, especially the first class. The officers and men are very cheerful and considerate of the wants of the passengers. The state rooms are fine, but the finest are found on the promenade and upper decks. The dining saloon on the main deck is very handsome, with rich, dark mahogany paneling, mouldings, and grand furniture to match, finely carved and finished, and with a high and beautiful dome.

I wish to impress upon the minds of those who write me the fact that if you only put a two cent stamp on your letter it will cost me six cents in Europe. Also letters over weight will cost me six cents.

August 2.-We are nearing Queenstown, where they will put off mail and passengers for old Ireland; and there are quite a number of Irish on board. We have had four entertainments so far. Ministers and sinners join hands to amuse the people until late in the night. The ship has been rocking quite considerably the last day and night; but the people got their sea legs on during the four days of smooth sailing, hence none of the passengers have paid tribute to the mother of waters as yet. The officers say that we have had a remarkable voyage this trip, and that it has been a long time since they crossed the ocean with such ease and comfort. We will arrive in Liverpool early Saturday forenoon in time for me to be present at the opening session of the mission conference, which is to be held at Manchester, August 3 to 5. Love to all. G. T. GRIFFITHS.

WELLSTON, O., August 9.

Editors Herald:—On June 1 I left home as a missionary, and for a time I labored with Bro. H. E. Moler,—a worthy companion.

Little did I think six years ago when I obeyed the gospel at the hands of Bro. Moler that I would ever preach the faith that was "everywhere spoken against." The very idea of preaching was so repulsive that I would not allow it to enter my mind. But time brings many changes for which we are not responsible.

Since entering the active ministry I have learned a few things that I never expected to know, and the old axiom "we are never too old to learn" had been more strongly impressed upon my mind than ever. Among other things, I have learned that a Latter Day Saint can exist without taking the church papers or having the Book of Mormon or Doctrine and Covenants, a thing I had always thought to be impossible. I can now begin to realize why the Savior said the kingdom of heaven is like ten virgins, five of whom are wise and five of whom were foolish. Some seem to be sitting still while others have "forsaken the right way" and have set about to establish their own righteousness. We feel for them, but they seem to be beyond our reach Were it not for the "sure word of prophecy" and a knowledge of the truth, we might be caused to waver; but we read that the faithful unto death will be crowned. So we take courage and press on, leaving the results with Him who doeth all things well.

Since July 10 I have been laboring in company with Bro. L. R. Devore. On the 27th we began a series of meetings at the Union schoolhouse, near Dounardsville, with the Saints of the Milton branch. Attendance small, but interest fairly good.

Sunday, the 4th, Bro. A. B. Kirkendall, of Creola, came down and gave us a soulstirring sermon on the different dispensations, with a warning to the Saints to be up and doing.

At present writing we are domiciled with Bro. Williams and family, where we will hold meeting this evening. From here we will go to Gallia county, till the reunion at Columbus, which we wish to attend. We anticipate a good time provided we go for that purpose.

Yours in hope of final triumph, ELMER E. LONG.

Mothers' Home Column.

EDITED BY FRANCES.

SELECT READING FOR SEPTEMBER MEET-INGS OF DAUGHTERS OF ZION LOCALS.

In our last, the question of our future readings was discussed, and pending the results of that discussion, we take up the question which ought to be near the heart of every mother, namely, Our Boys. It is a question which is forcing itself upon many thoughtful minds and one which must sooner or later be met, if we are not willing to allow the adversary of all righteousness to make of our homes his most prolific recruiting grounds. We trust that the mothers will supplement these readings with the discussion of many vital points not touched upon in them, and that thought may be awakened and good be accomplished.

We had hoped to be able at this time to report in regard to the feasibility of "Kitchen Garden" work, but will be compelled to defer it until our next meetings.

"'Oh my head! I am so nervous, it seems as though I should fly! And Sammy acts so; I can't make him mind or do anything with him. Just you wait till your father gets home, young man. You'll mind him, I guess?

"The author of the above complaint was one of my dearest friends, yet, strange to say, I felt very little sympathy for her, notwithstanding the 'headache' and the 'nerves,' therefore I attempted no consoling remarks but sat quietly by and allowed matters to take their own course.

"The 'young man' in question had just passed his fifth birthday and his mother declares (much to his delight no doubt) that she cannot make him mind,—can do nothing with him.

"What child, or even grown person, would not insist on following his own sweet will, after being deliberately and emphatically informed that the one in authority has no power to enforce that authority?

"Children, even those of tender years, understand and realize much more than most people suppose, and many a busy mother entails upon herself many a needless step, many a nervous headache, yes and many a future heartache also, by just such thoughtless, ill-chosen remarks as I have quoted.

"The 'Sammy' above mentioned is a smart, bright, sturdy little fellow who is being rapidly spoiled by his mother's lack of government. Of course, after being told that he must 'wait until his father came,' before he would be expected to obey, he took the reins in his own hands for the remainder of the afternoon, and between the pandemonium which he raised and the semi-occasional fretful ejaculations and complaints from the poor weak-willed mother my visit was far from pleasant. Now to all such mothers I wish to say a few words.

"Home is, or should be, the pleasantest place on earth, but do you find it so? Does your husband find it so? Haven't you noticed that when Sunday comes, he generally manages to get away from the house for some hours on one excuse or another? How you used to enjoy those quiet Sundays together,—so did he, but now all is changed. There are no quiet Sundays, there is a constant turmoil and confusion: 'Sammy, let that alone,' 'Sammy, get down from there,' 'Don't you go out doors; oh dear, now I've got to go out in the hot sun after him,' etc., etc.

"What shall you do? Let him go on and never say a word to him? Oh no, but your ceasless nagging at him does no good whatever. You must have learned that long ago. He knows you don't mean anything by it, so he pays no more attention to it than he does to the ticking of the kitchen clock.

"Don't issue a command unless you mean to enforce it! Keep this one idea firmly fixed in your mind every time you speak to him. If you tell him not to touch a certain article see that he obeys you, even though you are obliged to let your pan of biscuits burn in the oven while you attend to him. Your child comes first, and he must be taught that in all households there must be some one in authority and that such authority is absolute. You can do this without being 'cross,' or even stern; you can accomplish it without whipping or otherwise inflicting injury on the tender little flesh, but-you must begin in the cradle; when your baby is old enough to understand if you say 'No, no,'-then is the time to begin, and I am quite sure you will never in that case be obliged to go through the heartrending ordeal known as 'breaking' his will.'

"A child with a broken will is of no earthly account. Either his self-respect is gone forever, or his temper is liable to sudden fluctuations which render him anything but agreeable to those around him.

"There are many ways of letting a child learn from sad experience that 'Mamma knows best,' and after he has once learned that when you have issued a command or announced a decision, there can be no other way,—no possible retraction, or deviation, then will your child have learned the most valuable lesson of his life,—then will you have done much towards solving the problem of 'how to make home happy,' and, believe me when I assure you that your child will respect you far more and love you with a greater and more abiding love than if conditions were reversed, and he were the ruler of the household, as was the young autocrat who inspired the writing of this article."—Adella F. Veozie, in the American Mother, by Kind Permission of its Editor.

"KEEPING HOLD OF THE BOYS.

"There were once two boys in a home I know, and after a few happy years one was taken into the Shepherd's arms.

"The two boys and their mother had always knelt together for the bedtime prayer, and each had offered a simple petition. The first night there were only two to kneel, the sobbing voice of the lonely brother uttered but one sentence: 'Dear Lord, keep mother and me intimate.'

"Said the mother, years after: 'I consecrated my life to answer that prayer.'

"Did she have to give up anything? Yes, receptions and calls were secondary matters when the boy's friends needed entertaining.

"Embroidered doilies and hand-painted screens were of no account whatever beside the cultivation of intimacy with her boy and the answering of his prayer. 'Always give me the first chance to help you, dear,' she would say; and he did. Whatever was dear to his boyish heart found glad sympathy in her.

"Perhaps mothers do not always realize how soon a boy begins to think toward manhood, and so they treat him like a child to be watched and scolded instead of helped and trusted.

"This mother's boy was just as active and self-willed as you often find. But she had a few rules that helped wonderfully. Shall I copy them for you?

"1. I shall pray and work to be patient.

"2. I will strive to 'grow in grace and in the knowledge of God.'

"3. No matter what happens, I will try to hold my temper and my tongue.

"4. I will try never to scold and never to reprove or punish in anger.

"5. I will listen patiently and tenderly to my boy's side of a grievance.

"You will notice that these rules are to govern the mother instead of the boy; and is not that the secret of success? Mother, do you want to keep your boy? Then control yourself. Not the fashionable attempt at stoicism that says it is not 'good form' to display emotion, but the real holding of one's self in hand.

"Fashion would tie the mettlesome steed fast. Control harnesses him to life and lets Christ hold the reins.

"This mother's boy made many a blunder; he had his days of waywardness and times of unreasonableness, but never a time when he was not sure that his mother was ready to listen, advise, and help. There were times when his impulsiveness made him sore trouble, but the first place he turned for help was to the tender, loyal 'mother-friend,' and he was sure of comfort.

"Do you think it paid? When she reads in the papers the theories on 'How to get hold of the boys' she thanks God she has never lost her hold on hers. And in the answering of the boyish prayer the mother has not only grown more and more intimate with him, but both have grown intimate with Christ. Mother, you have no 'charge to keep' half so sacred as the heart of your boy. Are you true to your trust?"—Christian Work.

Palfrey, F. T. Mussell, J. F. Petre, R. R. Jones; Priests E. Corthell, G. Essig, T. Broad, D. L. Morgan, R. Thrutchley; Teacher E. E. Petre. Bishop's agent's report was read, audited, found correct, report was read, audited, found correct, and approved, as follows: Receipts since last conference, $276.48; on hand last report, $112.76; expenditures, $292.09; balance due church, $97.15. Also treasurer's report, as follows: Balance last report, $5.39; receipts to date, $9.71; expenditures, $14.07; balance follows: June 6, $1.03 Bills of expense allowed of president, $2.78, and secretary, $1.68 The appointment of Bro. Joseph A. Tanner as district historian was ratified. The request of Higbee branch for ordination of Bro. Thomas Broad to the office of elder granted and ordination provided for. Chairman of tent committee reported: "We have now $120 50 on hand. We shall need about $30 more than we have to buy the tent, seat and light it. I will therefore suggest that the conference make and adopt such measures as will enable us to procure the balance needed of not less than $30. As soon as this is done we are ready to purchase the tent and equip it with seats and lights. F. Palfrey." The report was approved and the tent committee dissolved and a vote of thanks tendered the committee for past labor done. A new committee was chosen of F. Palfrey, Walter W. Smith, and Earle Corthell. The following resolution was passed: Be it resolved, That this district authorize and instruct the tent committee to purchase and equip a tent during the next ten or fif-teen days; for the use of this district, and if there is not enough tent funds to meet the expense of the purchase, to borrow the balance necessary of Elder John T. Williams, Bishop's agent, the amount not to exceed $30. And we as a conference obligate this district to refund to Bro. J. T. Williams, the Bishop's agent, the amount so borrowed as soon as is practical after being notified of same by the president of tent committee and Bishop's agent. And be it further resolved, That after the tent is purchased and equipped, it be under the supervision, management, and watchcare of the aforesaid tent committee and the missionary in charge, or their successors. A request was read from the Huntsville branch asking for the rescinding of certain motions on the district record, and the following preamble and resolution was adopted. Whereas, The necessity for issuing letters of removal to members of the Huntsville branch by the district officers no longer exists, therefore be it resolved, That the resolution authorizing said officers to issue such letters be hereby rescinded. A report of the district delegation to General Conference was read. The election of district officers resulted in the choice of Bro. Joseph A. Tanner as president, F. T. Mussell vice president, George A. Tyron secretary and treasurer, Bro. John T. Williams sustained Bishop's agent. Preaching by Brn. Frank J. Chatburn, Earle Corthell, and I. N. White. At the social and sacrament services, Bro. Thomas Broad was ordained an elder. Adjourned to meet at Bevier, October 5 and 6.

met at McPaul by notifying J. F. Greene, Tabor, Iowa, a week ahead. In view of the many temporal blessings received by us above many other parts of the country, the Saints should not be slow to acknowledge God's hand, and should make a special effort to come and devote the week to the special service of him who has not forgotten them. Tents may be rented from $1.35 up, according to size by notifying J. F. Greene at above address before August 20. Reunion begins August 24. CHARLES FRY.

Dear Saints and Readers of the HERALD in Oklahoma:—As you have placed upon us the duty of locating time and place of reunion, we feel to urge upon you the necessity of cooperating with us, by your attendance, to make this reunion a success. Remember time and place, August 16 to 26, at Dover. Those who were in attendance last year were more than pleased with the results of our cooperative boarding tent. You as a people have voted for this, and it is your duty to help support it. Arrangements are being made to carry out instructions of conference at last reunion. As this latter-day work is progressive and we need teaching, come and take lessons. Geo. M. Hiles, H. K. Rowland, committee.
